Lexington—Maxwell Street Church—The members of the Maxwell Street Church, Lexington, were hosts at a beautiful reception on Thursday evening, March 8th, from 8:00 to 10 o'clock, at the church, in honor of their new pastor, Rev. Johnson A. Gray, D.D., and Mrs. Gray. Palms, ferns and potted spring plants were used effectively in the decorations, and an orchestra furnished music throughout the evening. Receiving with the guests of honor were the elders of the church and their wives, also the other Presbyterian pastors of Lexington. Mr. E. D. Veach, one of the elders of this church, was master of ceremonies, and greetings from the church members were gracefully expressed by Mr. J. Morton Davis, and a welcome was extended by Dr. D. Clay Lilly, Dr. Benjamin J. Bush, and Dr. Thomas Settle, rector of the Good Shepherd Episcopal Church, and by Mr. Thomas B. Talbot, with a happy response from Dr. Gray. The occasion was a delightful one. Dainty refreshments were served and more than 250 guests were present. Dr. Gray starts his new pastorate with every prospect of great success. The congregations have grown from the first Sunday he took charge, and the night audiences have filled the church.

Educational

Mitchell College—We recently had Miss Stella Scurlock as house guest for several days. She is the field representative of the Y. W. C. A. for the Southern States, and visits the colleges for women. She was here for conference with the "Y" cabinet, and to help reorganize the work, but she held many conferences with the girls, gave one interesting lecture, and left a very pleasant impression upon all.

Mitchell was fortunate also in being one of the few colleges in the state visited by Dr. Valeria Parker, of the American Social Hygiene Association of New York City. She gave a very instructive lecture to the women and students of the college and community on The Story of Life.

Special services were held in the college twice per day from the 21st through the 24th preparatory to and connected with the observance of the fourth Sabbath in February as a Day of Special Prayer for the youth in Schools and Colleges. Pastors of the local churches conducted these services and gave us some inspiring addresses.

The Senior class recently gave their annual dinner, at which time they raised about $100 toward their Senior gift to the college. But the greatest of recent events was the Mitchell Rally given on the evening of the 26th. Invitations were sent to all who participated in the special drive three years ago for $50,000, as a part of the million dollar campaign for education. In spite of a very rainy night, quite a large number were present. During and after the serving of a delightful supper a short program of music, interspersed with college yells, was followed by quite a number of enthusiastic speeches. The rally was intended to promote closer relations between the college and the city and the key-note of the speeches was "A Bigger and Better Mitchell."

CHILDREN

HOPES TO GET CERTIFICATE

Dear Standard:

I am a boy 14 years old, and I go to the Presbyterian Church at Nahalia, near Scotland Neck, and I go to Sunday school. I like to go very much. I am a member of the church at Nahalia. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Foster. I like her fine and she teaches the first and second grades in Roseneath School. I am in the 7th grade at school. My teacher is Mr. E. M. Neel. I like him fine and I like to go to school all the time. I haven't missed a day this year. I am going to get me a big honor certificate at the end of the year if I don't miss a day, and won't I be glad of it? My mother has been sick for about two weeks, but she is a little better now. I have three brothers and three sisters. My oldest brother is going to Farm Life School. My oldest sister is a teacher at Edenton, with one other girl besides her. One of my brothers and two sisters besides myself had our tonsils and adenoids all taken out at the same time. Doctor Rabby did the work. My little baby sister has a cow and a little calf. My papa has eight little pigs that are red and black. I raised all of the chickens and ducks and turkeys and guineas and I have 15 chickens about big enough to eat and I have eight little baby chickens and one hen setting. I am reading my testament that Rev. Lewis Collins gave me. I think of him every day of my life because he was just fine to me when he was at my house.

Your unknown friend,
A. J. Vanlandingham.
Scotland Neck, N. C.

IN THE FOURTH GRADE

Dear Standard:

I am a boy eleven years old, and am in the fourth grade and am getting along fine. I have a sister in the second and a brother that does not go to school. I do not have a pet now. I did have a horse but my father sold him. My brother has a bantam and my sister has a doll and doll carriage and doll trunk. We take your paper and it sure is good. I enjoy reading the letters and stories. I always enjoy the jokes. I must close for fear of the wastebasket.

Yours truly,
Albert Lentz.

Albemarle, N. C.

THE RIGHT DOG FOR THE "MAC" COUNTRY

Dear Standard:

This is my second letter to you. I am a little boy ten years old. I am in the third grade. I go to school at Maxton. My teacher is Miss Sykes; I like her fine. I have two brothers and four sisters. I have a Scotch Collie dog; his name is Bumpie. I will close for fear of the waskebasket.

Your little friend,
Lacy McRae.

Maxton, N. C.

A CATECHISM PARTY

Dear Standard:

Our pastor, Rev. R. A. McLeod and Mrs. McLeod gave those who recited the catechism a party at the manse; there were 36 present. We played different games and Mr. and Mrs. McLeod served candy, apples, and oranges. We sure did enjoy it. It was my first catechism party, but I hope it won't be my last. My age is 11 years. I go to school, have not missed a day yet; I am in the fifth grade. My teacher is Miss Fowler; I like her fine. I go to Sunday School; my teacher is Aunt Mary Wood. Our superintendent is Mr. Dan Ray; we all like him fine. I have one sister older than myself. I will stop for fear of the wastebasket.

Your unknown friend,
Mamie Wood.
Hope Mills, N. C., R. 1.

A PUP AND A CALF

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eight years old. I enjoy reading your letters and stories. I like to go to Sunday School and school at Robinson. Rev. J. C. Hardin is our pastor. I have a little pup and a little calf; the pup is black. I like my school teacher. Our principal is Mr. H. E. McComb.

Your friend,
Rosa G. Lemmond,
Charlotte, N. C., R.F.D., 9.

BRIN

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell tells the story of the instinct for following the trail of one of the Northern dogs. Dr. Grenfell is the wonderful doctor-missionary and leader of the people on the Labrador coast. He tells this story in St. Nicholas:

One evening, as he was feeding his dogs, there came upon them suddenly another team driven by Joe, who had come to call the doctor to Island Harbor, where there was a case of sickness, and "they doesn't know what t' sickness be." It was sixty miles across the country, and twice that distance around the shore, but there was no trail over the cross-country route.

Around the fire that night they were discussing the cross-country trip, when Harry, an old acquaintance, came in, beating the snow off himself as he entered. Harry, who was familiar with the route, had an errand over part of the route to bring in two stags that he had killed, and so it was agreed to make the attempt to go that way.

Dr. Grenfell and his fellow-doctor had left their experienced dogs at the hospital, and were breaking in a new team. The only dog of their last year's team was a yellowish-brown animal, with black-striped markings somewhat like a tiger. These lent to his face the suggestion that he was eternally grinning—an impression intensified by an odd way he had of turning up the corners of his mouth when he caught one's eye. The dog was named "Brin."

Long before daylight the next morning, they were astir, for it would require all the day to drive the sixty or seventy miles. Harry, with his good team and knowing the route well, led the way until about ten o'clock, when he had to turn aside to bring in his game. Before they parted, all halted under some spruce trees to boil "a mug of tea."

Then the doctor and his companion set out on an unmarked trail. Their only assets were their pocket compass, giving the general direction; their axes to clear a path when they should get stogged; a hopeful disposition which never spoiled for troubles until they should come along; and—Brin. A trackless marsh lay before them. Dr. Grenfell's companion said: "Don't say a word. Let's see if Brin will head right—across the marsh, anyhow." "All right," replied the doctor. "Mum is the word. Go!" Brin, with his good team, led off in a gallop in the direction the compass indicated should be the course.

Their friend Harry had told them of certain landmarks—a tall, lone spruce at one place; at another, a forked juniper tree from which the top-boughs had been stripped, and the skull and antlers of an old caribou placed in the forks. As the galloping dogs ran on, Brin led them by the lone spruce. Some ten miles farther, the doctor's companion shouted, "There she is!" "There is what?" exclaimed the doctor. "Why, the skull in the tree," he responded. As they passed this they both thought that Brin looked around and grinned, but if the dog did not the doctors did, for their spirits were high that another ten miles lay behind them.

The shadows of evening were now falling, and between them and their goal were miles of rolling forest. How much longer could they trust Brin? At one point he swung off, almost at right angles from the direction they had been traveling. Passing down a long slope, they came to a long lake onto which they ran at right angles. Facing them was a steep bluff, and the lake seemed to end in a narrow defile, through which they supposed the river had escaped, and toward which they expected to turn, but no such notion entered Brin's head. He made exactly for the opposite direction, and then, crossing a narrow portion of the lake, he started to climb the hill in front of them. The travelers had hoped before this to come upon the snow-tracks of hunters, but nothing of the kind could be seen.

As they swung around a big drift of snow, a fresh fox-track ran directly down a bluff. Without looking back, Brin jumped right into the track and followed it. The men found it hard not to "butt in" and tell a mere dog that he was probably foolish in following a fox track, but the men did not know just which way they did want to go, and on they went.

It was now almost dark, and if they meant to make a camp for the night it had to be done. The team was stopped, and they were about to gather wood for a fire when the doctor's companion said: "I am for giving Brin another chance." "All right," replied Grenfell, and Brin was given the signal to go. It was now dark. Running into a tree, they were compelled to stop. Getting out of the sledge, Dr. Grenfell found they were in a well-cut path. Taking his trail, they were soon at the Gray Cove, and by eight o'clock had reached the patient's house.

Before turning in that night, Dr. Grenfell went out to see if the dogs were all safe, and as he was about to re-enter the cottage door, something warm and furry rubbed against his leg. By the light that streamed from the open door, he found himself looking into Brin's eyes. They were asking, "How did I please you today, master?"

"I could not help putting my arms around his neck and hugging him," says Dr. Grenfell. "Then we both went off to our beds the happier for it."

TOM AND THE CLOCK

Winnie and Tom were spending a delightful three weeks with grandma. They had never been in the country in the winter time before; and everything was new to them. Such fun as they did have! and how fine it was to go sleighing and coasting with Uncle Jack, who lived just a mile away!

"There isn't a single thing I don't like," confided Winnie to Tom as they sat talking one day. "Only just one. I do hate having to go to bed at eight o'clock."

"So do I, and I think it's mean to make us when we're visiting," declared Tom.

The two children stood looking out of the dining-room window. They were all alone, for grandma was upstairs taking a nap.

"Oh," said Tom, presently, "I know just how. I see grandma wind it up every night. Watch." Pulling out a chair, he climbed on it and reached the clock, which stood on a high shelf. Carefully he moved the hand. When he climbed down again and pushed back the chair, it was two o'clock instead of three. He looked at Winnie triumphantly. "What did I tell you?" he exclaimed.

But Winnie was frightened. "I wish you hadn't," she said, her blue eyes full of trouble.

"Pshaw, who's a 'fraid cat now?" cried Tom. "I can fix it back when ever I like."

Just then there was a ring at the front door. Grandma had finished her nap and immediately came down the steps to receive the note which the messenger handed her. "Why, children," she said, smiling, "this is from Aunt Mary. She wants you to come over at four o'clock. There's something jolly going on, but I'm not to tell. Why, what are you looking so sober about? Don't you want to go?"

"Yes," said the children, faintly.

Grandma looked puzzled, but she did not say anything more. She glanced at the clock. "Dear me, I thought it was later. Well, you've plenty of time. I'll get you to wind a ball of yarn for me until it's time to get ready."

Winnie looked ready to cry, and Tom glanced despairingly at the clock. Oh, how much easier it was to do a wrong thing than to undo it! Mamma had always told him that, but then it had not seemed such a real thing; while now—oh, how dreadfully loud that clock did tick!

Presently grandma spoke: "It's time for you to go now, dearies, and—dear me, how dark it is for the time of day! Well, run along and have a good time. I guess Jack will bring you home."

The two children fairly raced all the way. At the kitchen door Aunt Mary met them. "Why, children," she said, "what makes you so late? I thought you weren't coming. You see, I invited the minister's children to come over, and I made some candy for you to pull; but I had to let them go all the pulling, as you didn't come. Then Uncle Jack happened in and took them for a little run in his new sleigh. I do wish you had been here. Why didn't you come?"

The children did not know what to say. They ate a few of the doughnuts which Aunt Mary provided, but somehow they did not taste good. Aunt Mary was puzzled. Pretty soon the children said good-bye.

"I hope grandma hasn't found out about the clock," said Winnie, as they went slowly over the hard, frozen fields, "because I want to tell her."

"No, let me," cried Tom, "because I'm never, never going to do a thing like that again."

But grandma knew, and she had known all the time.—Ex.

A man called at a village postoffice for a registered letter which he knew would be awaiting him. The letter was there, but the clerk demurred at handing it over, as he had no means of identifying the caller. The caller took a photograph of himself from his pocket, remarking:

"I think that ought to satisfy you as to who I am."

The clerk looked long and earnestly at the portrait and then said:

"Yes, that's you right enough. Here's your letter."—Kansas City Star.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Purnell-Tant—On March 3d, at the manse of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbus, Ga., by Dr. T. M. McConnell, Sergeant Guy Purnell, of Fort Benning, Ga., and Mrs. Vivian Tant, of Columbus, Ga.

Aldridge-Frazier—March 7th, at the home of the bride's uncle, Dr. W. L. Cooke, Columbus, Ga., by Dr. T. M. McConnell, Mr. Joseph H. Aldridge, of Leland, Miss., and Miss Helen Frazier, of Hazelhurst, Ga.

DEATHS

Mills—William E. Mills, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Mills, Sumter, S. C., called to the Heavenly home at the age of 10 years, two months. United with the Presbyterian Church five months before his death. An earnest little Christian of winning personality and great promise.

Pastor.

McCallum—Mr. William H. McCallum, Rowland, N. C., died at his home in Rowland, N. C., January 16, 1923, at the age of 79 years. At the time of his death, Mr. McCallum was engaged in farming in that section and had large interests in that business and was very successful.

He entered the Confederate Army in his boyhood at the young age of 17 and joined Company E., 40th Regiment and was at Fort Fisher till its capture and was taken to Old Point and put in prison along with many others who were captured. He was a most valiant soldier and always spoke with much pride of the brave defence which the Confederates made against such odds.

He married Miss Matilda Carmichael and to this union were born six children, three of whom survive him.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and was one of Robeson County's most respected citizens and will be greatly missed, not only by his own family, but by his friends of which he had many.

JAMES ALEXANDER McKEITHEN

James A. McKeithen, was born in Cumberland County (now Hoke), N. C., June 10, 1859, and died at Aberdeen, N. C., September 19, 1922. He was the son of A. A. McKeithen and Catherine (McLeod) McKeithen. He was reared on a farm in the old Cypress community by Godly parents and joined old Cypress Presbyterian Church when about 17 years of age. Mr. McKeithen was of pure Scotch descent, his grandparents having come directly from Scotland. He was a loyal and devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, and served Bethesda Church, Aberdeen, N. C., as a deacon for 30 years. He came to Aberdeen about 35 years ago and engaged extensively in the lumber and turpentine business, and also, in farming. He was successful in his enterprise and accumulated a competency for his family. He married Miss Mary Fowler, of Wake County. She died January 26, 1909. The following children survive: James McKeithen, Miss Margaret McKeithen, William McKeithen, Fred McKeithen and Miss Mary McKeithen, all of Aberdeen, N. C. Also, the following brothers: N. A. McKeithen, Carthage, N. C., M. McL. McKeithen, Cameron, N. C., A. A. McKeithen, of Aberdeen, N. C., and one sister, Miss Mary A. McKeithen, Aberdeen, N. C.

Mr. McKeithen was possessed of splendid mental ability and a well-balanced judgment. His word was always as good as his bond. As he journeyed through life he made many strong friends. He was a devoted husband and father, a loyal friend, and a Christian gentleman of the best school.

MRS. MARY SUE NESBITT

Mrs. Mary Sue Blakely Nesbitt passed to her heavenly home on November 29, 1922, in her 82d year. She was the last charter member of the Piedmont Presbyterian Church. She was the widow of the late C. D. Nesbitt, of near Piedmont. She was a most lovable woman; a staunch Christian, admired over the entire section.

Born December 15, 1840. Married July 27, 1865, she lived the greater part of her life near Piedmont.

Like Dorcas, "this woman was full of good works and alms-deeds which she did."

"She's gone—to stand when Christ appears—

In spotless raiment dressed;
Numbered among His chosen ones,
His holiest and best."

The above resolution was passed by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Piedmont Presbyterian Church, in session February 14, 1923.

Mrs. J. Blanton Belk.
Mrs. Sallie Duncan, Committee.

A DORMITORY FOR CROSSNORE

By Mrs. Mary Martin Sloop

Crossnore must build a Girls' Dormitory and have it finished by the 1st of August. If we do not, we will lose $2,400 a year in Federal Aid that is available. Can you afford to let us do that?

Uncle Sam is very generous to schools in his help for Vocational Education, and Crossnore is just the kind of place that he thinks vocational work is needed and pays. But Uncle Sam requires a certain standard of space and equipment that we must meet. The Girls' Dormitory will contain this space and equipment for teaching Home Economics. For the number of girls we have, we are entitled to two Home Economics teachers, who will also be housekeepers in the teacherage and the dormitory. If we fail to meet Uncle Sam's requirements, we must pay the salaries of two housekeepers and do without the Home Economics teaching. So the building must be built. And old clothes must help do it. That means that more old clothes must come, for we are not getting enough for running expenses now.

Crossnore hopes to have a graduate of the Assembly Training School as teacher of Bible and community worker. With the help of our pastor, this will enable us to teach Bible to every grade separately—and it is all the Bible some of these children ever have. If each circle in each Auxiliary would put $5.00 into its next year's budget—just $5.00 a year—for the salary of the Crossnore Bible teacher—then we would not have to draw on the sales money for this salary and the building would go up by leaps and bounds. This check can be sent through the Atlanta office and credit will be given the circle. And then if each circle in each Auxiliary will take a Crossnore bag and try to fill it and send it to us each month in the year, the building would be helped along tremendously. Try appointing a Crossnore representative in every circle and see if this result cannot be easily reached.

Our goal is not to bring boarders a long distance, but to be able to go into every little home in every cove in a radius of 10 miles of Crossnore, and find every boy and girl that has "quit school" and bring them into our school where the vocational work interests them and the trade work makes it possible for them to earn their living while they learn a trade. State and Federal money provide the means for this—but the Church must help us to give these potential citizens the Christian education that they surely ought to have. So many of our big pupils are among our most ambitious pupils, those who had been out of school for years—till we enticed them back.

Our high school is just two years old. That is, we have graduated just two classes. The first class contained one boy and one girl. The boy has been studying agriculture in State College ever since. The girl has taught to help her father build a better house. But she will go to N. C. C. W. this summer to do dining room work and start her college course to become a Home Economics teacher. Think of that. Last year we graduated five girls and five boys. Seven of them went to college. One will go next year. One was a married woman and could not leave home, but has studied this year in school and worked in the dressmaking department. The other one works in the dressmaking department. Not one is loafing and 7-10 in college. Eight college students to whom up to date I have loaned the aggregate amount of $245.00. They and their parents have done the rest. This year we will graduate nine—six boys and three girls. Seven are going to college this fall, one is to marry—and what a splendid preacher's wife she is going to make. The other is already married. She is going to take a special course in trade dressmaking and become our assistant teacher. She has two fine little boys, both in school, and they have been tardy just once this year. Yesterday our juniors in high school were classified for next year. They are all planning to go to college after they finish here.

A few years ago our principal—in his repeated effort to interest the children in a college course, took a census of our high school pupils and found so many of them looking forward to college, that he asked them to tell him what plans they had for financing the college course. A boy spoke up promptly and said, "We don't know about that, but we reckon Mrs. Sloop does." If this responsibility is mine, isn't the opportunity yours—to give these boys and girls "a chance."

A NON-MILLENNIALIST BOOK

By Rev. C. O'N. Martindale

In a recent issue of your paper, Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, in describing Dr. R. C. Reed's little book, "What Is the Kingdom of God?" says, "It is of especial interest to those who desire to know what premillennialism is."

We desire to register a most decided dissent from Dr. Vander Meulen on this matter. If anyone desires to "know what premillennialism is," he certainly will not find it in Dr. Reed's non-millennial book; there he will find but a caricature of premillennialism, much being read into partial statements from Dr. Scofield's writings that the distinguished author and others like-minded would smile at for its misconstruction. We regret the publication of a work so short-sighted and ill-advised and prejudicial to fact and truth as held by a large body of earnest and scholarly and consecrated servants of God.

Let anyone interested get Dr. C. I. Scofield's "Correspondence Bible Course" and "Address on Prophecy," Dr. James H. Brookes' works, Dr. Wm. E. Blackstone's writings, Dr. J. M. Gray's works, Dr. Ford C. Ottman's "The Unfolding of the Ages" (on Revelation), Dr. Clarence Larkin's "Dispensational Truth" and "Studies in Revelation," Dr. J. F. Silver's "The Lord's Return," et al., and one will see how far short of premillennial truth and statement Dr. Reed comes in his unveiled attack on premillennialism. In our judgment, also, he does not show the real difference Scripture shows between "The Kingdom of God," "The Kingdom of (the) Heaven(s)," and "The Church"; he merely reiterates some ecclesiastical traditional interpretations, and fails to recognize distinctions any ordinary reader of God's Word may arrive at from study.

Why cannot Christians learn to deal fairly by those who differ from them? Nowadays, as of yore, too many are more prone to teach what has been handed down to them, than to seek to get at the actual statements and meanings of the Word, and abide by them at any cost.

"To the Word and to the testimony" for finality! This is the only safe ground on which to erect a life or a system.

We are voicing our honest convictions, without any intention of hurting anyone's feelings; and mean all we say in good faith.

Reidville, S. C.

Time was, is past, thou can't not it recall;
Time is, thou hast, improve the portions small;
Time future is not and may not be;
Time present is the only time for thee.

I have not seen him face to face; what need?

When day by day, his tender love and care,
Wrapt me around; when I can with him plead
My heart's desires, and know he answers prayer.

Our early prayers will help to shed an odor of piety through the whole life. God, having first occupied, will more easily recur to our mind. Our first step will be in the right path, and we may hope a happy issue.—W. H. Channing.

The best dates are said to be gathered when the tree has reached a hundred years. So is it with eminent Christians; the older the better; the older the more beautiful; nay, the older the more useful; and different from worldlings, the older the happier.

It takes a consistent life to witness in the home circle. Sometimes we are dumb there because they know us—the more's the pity!

A man's conversation usually reveals the principles in which he is most interested.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

To the Canvasser and the Canvassed

NEXT SUNDAY, MARCH 18th Is a Crucial Day in Our Church

The Every Member Canvass for Current Expenses and for $4,750,000 for Benevolences will be made.

The Day is Crucial because it will decide whether our people, in the face of increasing business activity, and improved economic conditions, are going Forward or Backward, in the support of their Church.

Our total Goal for Benevolences last year was $4,500,000. We failed to reach this by $835,595 for Assembly Causes. It is impossible to tell just how far short we came for Local Causes.

Our Goal for the year beginning April 1, 1923, is:

Foreign Missions	$1,581,750
Assembly's Home Missions	760,000
Christian Education and Ministerial Relief.....	365,250
Publication and S. S. Work	95,000
Assembly's Training School	28,500
Bible Cause	28,500
<hr/>
Total Assembly Causes (60%).....	$2,850,000
Synods', Presbyteries' Causes, including Educational Institutions, Orphan's Homes, etc. (40%)	$1,900,000
<hr/>
TOTAL BENEVOLENT BUDGET.....	$4,750,000

IF WE ARE CONTENT WITH OUR RECORD OF LAST YEAR THEN OUR CHURCH IS FACE TO FACE WITH A RETRENCHING PROCESS THAT WILL CRIPPLE US FOR YEARS.

NO MAN CAN MAINTAIN THAT THE PRESBYTERIAN PEOPLE OF THE SOUTH ARE UNABLE TO SUPPORT A PROGRAM OF BENEVOLENCES THAT CALLS FOR $4,750,000. THEY CERTAINLY HAVE THE MONEY. COMPARATIVELY FEW ARE GIVING IN A SACRIFICIAL WAY.

Let us pray and work that on next Sunday our people will give a response that will excell any effort they have ever made. This is really a testing time for our Church and its plan of finance. The Apportionments for all causes represent the minimum and not the maximum needs.

"All things whatsoever ye shall ask, believing, ye shall receive."

.....
 Let us pay up all past due subscriptions this month, and increase them some, to round our budget, and provide a just proportion for all approved causes.
HAS YOUR CHURCH A DEFINITE AMOUNT IN ITS BUDGET FOR EACH APPROVED CAUSE?

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection. Dr. Crosby writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder Troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter." Dr. Avant writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began to use Shivar Spring Water and in a short time was entirely relieved." Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain." Mr. McClain of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease." Mr. Carter, of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs,

Box 3D, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____
Address _____
Shipping Point _____
(Please write distinctly.)

PANSY PLANTS

Pure White, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Pure Black, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Royal Mixture, 40c doz., $2.75 per 100.
Plant out any time between now and May 1st, but the sooner the better. We specialize on the pansy and our mode of packing will carry it any distance in good condition.
All Postpaid.

BLANDING'S DRUG STORE
FOUNTAIN INN, S. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.
Raleigh and intermediate points.
Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.
For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

Story and Incident

CHRISTIAN (?) SCIENCE

Versus COMMON SENSE

He was a Christian Scientist with a mild, benignant air,
And for unwary victims he set a cunning snare.
From out the "rural districk" an old backwoodsman came,
His steps were slow and feeble, for he was old and lame.
He heard of Christian Science, and, as he thought it o'er
He said, "I guess I'll get some, my joints is stiff and sore."
So, to the portly healer, who sat in self-content
With plump hands idly folded, the good old farmer went—
Said he, "This way of healin' is quare. I swan it is,
'N' I want a dose of science to cure my rheumatiz."
The great man eyed his caller, and sat in thought awhile,
Then leaned back in his arm-chair and said with placid smile—
"My friend, there is no suffering—to think so is to sin,
Remember you are God's child, and let His presence in.
Since God is All, forever, what is there then to heal?
God surely cannot suffer, and matter cannot feel.
With truth and goodness present, how then can sickness stay?
For good is never evil, as night is never day.
So, when you think you're suffering (which really you are not),
The cure is very simple—just change your sinful thought,
And if you should be tempted to have a pain some day,
Let good o'ercome the evil, and drive such thoughts away.
Now this belief of lameness, good thoughts will soon dispel,
And when friends ask 'How are you?' just answer, 'I am well.'
And mind shall conquer matter, and thought shall reign supreme,
These bodies are but shadows, this world is but a dream.
Then live in perfect harmony and discord quickly flees;
Consider yourself painless—five dollars if you please."
The farmer stared in silence and slowly scratched his head;
"So this is Christian Science! Wall, I'll be blest!" he said.
"Perhaps you call this healin', but I don't just the same;
My back is jes as ericky, my legs is jes as lame.
Your lingo may be Science, it kinder sounds that way,
But where the Christian part is, I swow, it's hard to say.
It sorter riles my temper and makes my sperit rise
To hear you mixin' sermons with scientific lies,
It's lueky I ain't chipper, or you might have to hop;
I'd turn things topsy-turvey in this old science shop.
A sin to suffer, is it? (Of all the cranky stuff)
Wall, then, you'd be a sinner if I was strong enough!
I'd give ye a temptation to ache in many a spot,
'N' then I'd set and tell you to change your sinful thought.
You say that good ain't evil—wall, I don't say it is,
'N' I don't say the Almighty has got my rheumatiz.

It is in my old body—and gives me many a jar!
'N' taint no make b'leve nuther, for when it's thar, it's thiar!
I never had much larnin', but still I got a brain,
'N' eal'e'late I know enough to ache when I'm in pain.
I may not be an angel, I guess we all have sin,
But I get an honest livin', and don't take poor folks in.
'N' I don't tell a feller his pain is in his mind,
'N' gobble onto money for saying suthin kind.
Now if my plaguey lameness should disappear some day,
Ef it was God as done it why should you want the pay?
'N' I should say five dollars was a little dear for sand,
So I'm obliged to tell you your little bill must stand.
'N' if your thought's so mighty, just think you've got your pay,
I don't pay cash to shadders—so I'll jes say good-day."

A SUGGESTION

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says: "If the eighteen thousand ministers of our church would devote one week to a tactful, pushful canvass for our church papers, and do nothing else during that time, it would be the best investment of seven days which the denomination ever made."

The man who lives only to please himself will soon find out that he has a hard master.

CHURCH WANTS LOAN

Would you help do great work? Is your money now bringing you only 3 or 4 per cent? Church in very heart of great city needs six months or longer, will pay legal rate in this state—10 per cent interest payable quarterly. For particulars write:

L. L. S., 1406 Park Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

ART GLASS
for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs free on request
F. J. COOLEGE & SONS
ATLANTA, Ga.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write
JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

WANTED—For returned missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Gillis, a cottage at Montreat. Address, Oakland Heights, Statesville, N. C.

ORDER ONE

of the few remaining copies of that most excellent book of sermons

By Rev. H. J. Mills

CONTRARY WINDS

A lady says: "His keen and sympathetic insight into human nature enabled him to present the lessons to be learned from God's Word in a most practical and attractive form."

Rev. John McSween says: "The freshness of thought, the originality of the themes, the deeply spiritual and evangelistic tone of the sermons make them delightful and inspiring reading.

The price of the book is $1.00

Order from Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va. - Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager

410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

6% No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.

Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Piles are usually due to straining when constipated. Nujol being a lubricant keeps the food waste soft and therefore prevents straining. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it not only soothes the suffering of piles but relieves the irritation, brings comfort and helps to remove them. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative — so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

The Kitchenette And—

By Arthur H. Folwell

A kitchenette is where we cook

Our meals from day to day;

In bedroomette, a tiny nook,

We sleep the nights away.

A picturette adorns our walls,

A carpette, our floor;

A bathroomette is off our hall,

Exactly three by four.

Within, our bathtubette behold,

With showerette on high.

We've waterette, both hot and cold,

Our flesh to purify.

When winter makes its icy threat

And round our window drums,

We seek our radiorette,

And up the heatette comes.

Abbreviated lives we live;

But time is passing fast:

We have this promise positive—

A roomy tomb at last.

—Leslie's Weekly.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY YOUR PIANO

The Standard is Now Starting Its First 1923 Piano Club, and You Are Invited to Become a Member and Share in the Benefits and Privileges

Arrangements have been perfected between the advertising managers of the Standard and Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, to continue the Piano Club because it has been found so satisfactory. Every member of the Club is positively protected and the saving that can be made is large. Many people buy pianos every year on the ordinary installment plan, only to find that in a few years their instrument is tin-panny and they feel like apologizing for it instead of feeling proud of it.

The Standard Piano Club protects you against this outrage. Your instrument is guaranteed by Ludden & Bates, who have been selling Pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. Their guarantee means something, because they are not in business today and out tomorrow. They are always anxious to see that you are entirely satisfied.

Why You Should Join the Club

Each Club consists of 100 members, who by buying together get their instruments at wholesale price. Understand, you are only responsible for your own purchase, but you make this big saving.

You are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This means a big saving over the ordinary installment prices, which are usually much higher than cash prices.

These are just some of the attractive features of the Club. There are many others which will be gladly furnished if you will write Ludden & Bates, Standard Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Ask for their beautiful catalogue. (adv.)

OUR GREAT EXPORT

Says an explorer: "The United States is known in Africa for its windmills and its sewing machines, by its Standard oil, its Virginia tobacco and its mining machinery; but mainly by its school houses and dispensaries. The American missionary is the widest and most favorably known of all our exports."

"I really dislike to talk to her; she has such a habit of finishing one's sentences for one. You know the kind?" "Yes, they listen faster than you can talk to them."—Boston Transcript.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6¼ per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President.

207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DUPLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included

White Envelopes—Size 2½x4¼ in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets.....	19	cents per set
50 to 109 sets.....	17	cents per set
110 to 209 sets.....	16½	cents per set
210 to 309 sets.....	16	cents per set
310 to 409 sets.....	14½	cents per set
410 or more sets.....	14	cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. 20 per cent discount on cash orders.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelope System

200 names or less	$1.50
300 names	1.75
500 names	2.25
1,000 names	3.25
Subscription cards, per 10050
Information Blanks, per 100	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 10050
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 10040

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM

PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Standard College Courses

Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds

Ideal Surroundings

Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address

Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D.

Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Ar. Aberdeen	Ar.	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am	45	19	15
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	43	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am	43	15	15
s 7:28 pm	f 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	f 8:02 am	36	14	14
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am	35	11	11
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am	32	9	9
s 8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	s 9:53 am	19	Rae ford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	s 7:30 am	26	21	21
s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	f 10:15 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	f 1:25 pm	f 7:15 am	21	19	19
f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	f 10:29 am	26	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm	f 7:05 am	19	15	15
s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	s 10:31 am	30	Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	s 12:55 pm	s 6:55 am	15	14	14
f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	f 10:40 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm	f 6:50 am	14	9	9
s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	s 10:56 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm	f 6:40 am	11	9	9
f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	f 11:02 am	40	Clifton	9	s 5:05 pm	s 12:33 pm	s 6:30 am	9	3	3
f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	f 11:15 am	42	Skibo	5	s 5:00 pm	s 12:18 pm	s 6:20 am	5	3	3
s 11:30 am	s 11:15 am	s 11:30 am	45	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm	f 6:10 am	3	0	0
				Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	s 4:45 pm	s 12:00 pm	s 6:00 am	0

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

TEACHERS WANTED
Positions to offer in grades, High School subjects; Principals and Superintendents of High Schools; also in Colleges. Correspond with us at once.
SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY
419 Wesley Memorial Bldg. Atlanta, Ga.

BOILS Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Church Furniture
WORK OF THE HIGHEST QUALITY
AT REASONABLE PRICES
Write for Catalogue
BUDDE & WEIS MFG. CO.
JACKSON, TENNESSEE

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions.

Won't you be one to enroll? A postal addressed to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

Carolina School Supply Co.

119 Brevard Court, Charlotte, N. C.

Distributors for the American Seating Company in the Carolinas. High Grade School Desks and Auditorium Chairs. Desks, Blackboards, Crayon, Erasers, Etc., carried in stock in our Charlotte Warehouse.

Catalogue Upon Request

George W. Hart—W. C. Arial—John L. Harris

NEW CHURCH DESIGNS
"HIGHEST EFFICIENCY YET ATTAINED"
INDORSED BY CHURCH AUTHORITIES
WRITE US YOUR NEEDS

R. H. HUNT CO. ARCHITECTS
CHATTANOOGA TENN DALLAS TEX

Sparkles

Queer

She could swing a six-pound dumb-bell,

She could fence and she could box;
She could row upon the river,

She could clamber 'mong the rocks;
She could golf from morn till evening,

And play tennis all day long;
But she couldn't help mother.

'Cause she wasn't very strong.
London Opinion.

Some Definitions

"Two or three" always means at least three, or three and upward. "One or two" seldom if ever means one. "In a minute" means anywhere from five to fifty minutes. "That reminds me of a story" means, "Now you keep quiet while I tell my joke." "I hold no brief for" means: "I am now going to defend —" "While I do not wish to appear critical" means, "But I am going to have my say out anyhow." "Of course it's no business of mine," means, "I am simply devoured with curiosity." "My conduct calls for no apology and needs no explanation" is the usual introduction for an apology or an explanation. "No one could possibly have mistaken my meaning" is what we say when some one has mistaken it.—The Independent.

An Arkansas Nature Student

What a wonderful bird the frog are! When he stand he sit, almost. When he hop he fly, almost. He ain't got no sense, hardly. He ain't got no tail, hardly, either. When he sit he sit on what he ain't got, almost.—McRae Enterprise.

Mistress—"Bridget, I told you twice to have muffins for breakfast. Have you no intellect?"

Bridget—"No, mum; there's none in the house."—Selected.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Five Makes of Pianos Comprise THE STIEFF LINE:

- Stieff
- Shaw
- Bennett-Bretz
- Davies & Sons
- Leslie Bros.

There is a piano to fit every purse. $340.00 up. Payments surprisingly small. Write for catalogue.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

WE HANDLE

- HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
- PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Another New and Exceptional Value in a Cane and Mahogany Living-Room Suit

Full size suit—chair, rocker and sofa—in pretty combination blue, mulberry or taupe velour at the special price of $160.00.

We are headquarters for good living-room furniture.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

W. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

LXIV CHARLOTTE, N. C., MARCH 21, 1923 No. 12

Subscription Price, $3.00 per year, in advance
Rev. W. L. Boggs, Circulation Manager

Published every Wednesday at Charlotte, N. C.
Presbyterian Standard Publishing Company,
A. M. Gray, Treasurer.

Established January 1, 1858.

Carried at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Send all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT
Label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is good. When change of address is desired, give the old and new addresses. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue the label is a reminder that the subscription is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription.

DISCONTINUANCE
In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. Charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to send the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent. Items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS
Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to the office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a late date. Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its advertising agency. For reputable advertising there is no better place in North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—

Card-Playing, Dancing, Theatre-Going 1

Future Ministry 1

Home Mission Program 1

Announcement, Church Treasurers! 2

Working On the Finishing Touches 2

Crossnore School 2

Assured Prayer 2

DISTRIBUTED—

What That Works—By James Trimble 3

Women's Missionary Convention at Huntington, W. Va. 3

Student Fellowship for Christian Life Service 3

Christian Endeavor Suggestion—By Mrs. Andrew J. Howell 4

Be Inappreciative Missionaries—By Rev. V. Tadlock 4

Be-Made Stewards 5

Virgin Birth—By Rev. Wm. H. Richardson, D.D. 5

Scientists Defend the Theory of Evolution 5

DEPARTMENTS—

National 2

Woman's Auxiliary 6

Day School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D. 7

Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth 7

Church News 8, 9, 10

Of the Week 10

Children 12

Advertisements, Etc. 12, 16

MANAGERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

Home Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., Nashville, Tenn.

Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Home Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Amund, Va., Union Bank.

Home—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.

Home Education and Ministerial Relief—John Es, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.

Home and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.

Home General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Ston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

CARD-PLAYING, DANCING, THEATRE-GOING

WE have been asked to state the position of the Presbyterian Church in reference to the above mentioned amusements. This is easy, if we mean by the position of the Presbyterian Church the official deliverance of the courts of the Church. These deliverances have been uniform and abundant. With iteration and reiteration they have condemned these worldly amusements. Their condemnation has included all three, but has been especially explicit and emphatic in reference to "the modern dance in all its forms, as tending to evil whether practiced in public halls or private parlors." Our highest church court says that "some forms of this amusement are worse than others; the round dance than the square; the public ball than the private parlor; but all are evil and should be discountenanced."

Our church courts have made their position so clear that "he may run who reads," and the "way-faring man though a fool, need not err therein." But when we speak of the position defined by our church courts as the position of the Presbyterian Church, it is assumed that our Church is representative in its government, and that our church officials are authorized to speak for the whole membership of the Church. This is theory, and a very beautiful theory it is. It is the business of the elders, teaching and ruling, to interpret and apply the law of Christ as found in the Bible. The people elect them for this purpose. As a matter of fact the officials represent nobody but themselves. They interpret Christ's law, and are expected to conform to it, especially the preachers. The people would be shocked if they caught a preacher taking part in a modern dance, or attending a card party, and in some sections of the country, they would be at least mildly astonished if they saw him in a theatre. But the people treat it as a matter of course that they are not to make the preacher's standard their standard. Why should they be as good, or try to be as good as the preacher? As for the ruling elders, it has come to be quite common for them and their wives to chaperon dances.

What is the position of the Presbyterian Church on the subject of worldly amusement? Practically it is to let the young people have a wide range. If there are any young people in our churches who do not go to dances, card-parties and theatres, they are probably in a slim minority. We are speaking without accurate data, but we think most of the parents go. Furthermore, if we mistake not, the pulpit has almost ceased to fulminate against worldly amusements. The preachers have not changed their minds as to the evil of these things, but they have grown "weary in well-doing." They have become convinced that preaching against worldly amusements has no other effect than to produce irritation, and they fight a little shy of applying poultices of that kind.

The condemnation of these popular amusements is left largely to strolling evangelists. For example, Billy Sunday goes for the dance with gloves off. He paints the evils of indecent dress and the intimate embrace of the sexes in glaring colors. Everybody knows just what he means, and everybody knows that what he means is true. Nobody dares to take issue with him. The fathers and mothers know it is true, the boys and girls know it is true. The pastors who hear him, say amen in their hearts, and pray that his burning message may do something to clear the social atmosphere. But when the sound of his voice dies away, the dog returns to his vomit and the pigs that were washed to their wallowing in the mire.

Obviously the official position of the Presbyterian Church is the right one. It commends itself to the enlightened conscience. It is a position that is always respected in a time of revival. Should it not have the positive endorsement of all Christian parents? They have taken solemn vows to rear their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Are they doing this when they turn them loose to revel in forms of amusement that a decent worldly sentiment condemns?

What a fine field is open to the Christian Endeavor Societies. Members of these societies take a pledge to be loyal to Christ and to their church. Would it not be in a line with that pledge if they would set a high standard of modest Christian propriety, and endeavor to win all the young people of the church away from associations that are hurtful to the Christian life? This would be true of Christian Endeavor. There is no strenuous endeavor in our boys and girls meeting together for a pleasant hour of social enjoyment with a few simple forms of worship thrown in. But if they would put a restraint on the natural gaiety of youthful spirits, and resolve that for Christ's sake and the Church's sake, they would refrain from participating in any amusements that are hurtful to the highest type of piety, or that bring reproach on the Christian profession, they would deserve to be called Christian Endeavorers.

OUR FUTURE MINISTRY

It does not require a very thoughtful mind to see that if our Church grows in number of members and congregations, soon we shall have more churches than ministers, as it is evident that the supply of young men entering the ministry is not keeping pace with our growth in membership. This is not due to any falling off in educated young men, because the schools and colleges are better attended than ever before within our knowledge. This is a commercial age, and the thoughts of our young are occupied with the great question of earning a support.

Dr. James I. Vance delivered the James Sprunt Lectures at the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, and they have been published in book form. Those who have heard Dr. Vance and have read his books, well know what a crisp style he has, and how it grips the attention of all readers.

Dr. H. H. Sweets, of our Louisville, Ky., Committee on Christian Education is raising a fund to put this book, "Being a Preacher," in the hands of every minister of our Church, not only to help him, but also through him to reach our young men.

We do not know any investment where a few dollars will yield more.

THE HOME MISSION PROGRAM

(To be Used by the Sunday Schools, March 25, 1923)

Our Atlanta Committee has prepared a program, entitled "Heart Throbs From the Hills," to be used Sunday, March 25th, by the Sunday Schools. Besides the appropriate Scripture to be repeated, there is to be testimony given by the Home Office, by the workers in the field, and by the different classes who have been benefited.

These testimonies are in the nature of a recital of their past life and the great change wrought by the Home Missions schools.

To those who have seen these mountain homes and who know the poverty of the people, there is something very appealing in these stories. They are by no means overdrawn, but have the true ring about them.

We feel sure that if rightly used they will make an indelible impression upon youthful minds that will bring forth fruit even in old age.

These programs can be procured from our Home Mission office, Atlanta, Ga.

ATTENTION, CHURCH TREASURERS!

We have always had great respect for the church treasurer. He has a great amount of detail work and much responsibility; yet there are seldom any perquisites to his office. His pastor appreciates his labor of love, but the rank and file seem to imagine that the honor of the office ought to pay for its worry.

Remembering then his trials, we always hesitate to write anything that savors in the least of criticism. We preface what we have to say by assuring all treasurers that we have in mind only the one who has the contributed money in hand, but has delayed sending it to its destined place. Then we are writing at the request of the Executive Committees, who are forced to close their books by March 31st.

At a conference held in January they unanimously agreed that they would not keep their books open for receipt of funds after banking hours on March 31st.

In many cities banks close at noon on Saturdays, and as March 31st comes on Saturday, all funds must pass through the banks before noon on the 31st of March in order to be credited on the books of the banks to the Executive Committees.

Should any treasurer fail to have his remittance in the hands of the Executive Committees by the morning of the 31st, he should authorize a draft by telegram so that the said draft will pass through the banks during the banking hours on the 31st. Unless this be done, the remittance cannot be counted in the present church year.

This co-operation on the part of the treasurers will be greatly appreciated by the Executive Committees.

PUTTING ON THE FINISHING TOUCHES

While the "Every Member Canvass" is a very important part of the Progressive Campaign or of the Stewardship Committee, it is by no means the only part. Of course the money must be raised, because money furnishes the sinews of war, and without it the work would necessarily stop.

There are, however, other objectives, which are apt to be neglected, unless our Church will make a point of rounding off the whole program.

As money is so essential to the continuance of the work, the officers should as soon as the canvass is over, furnish the people with a statement of the result, and if the Church has fallen short of her quota, to take steps at once to make up the deficit. Then proceed to carry out all the objectives of the Stewardship Committee, and as soon as possible report to the Stewardship Secretary of Presbytery.

The next most important step is to see that every cent collected is at once sent to the treasurers of the various Executive Committees of the General Assembly, not only to help them make their report, but to save the Church interest charges.

All money should reach them by March 31st, not later than mid-day. Thousands of dollars in interest are paid by these Committees each year, because some church treasurers delay in sending in what has been given.

THE CROSSNORE SCHOOL

We do not know any cause that should appeal more persistently to the Presbyterians of the State than our mountain schools. It would be almost impossible to set down in figures the amount of good done by them. You would have to begin with each pupil entered and trace the effect not only upon him, but upon his family and connections, and through them upon the community at large. You would have to do this, not for a year, but for a life-time, and even then you would not be able to realize all that had come from the contact of ignorance with intelligence.

Your wonder over the result would grow greater as you realized at what small expense this was done, and also that it was done by men and women with no hope of reward except that reward that comes from the consciousness of duty done for Christ's sake.

Among the several schools that we have in the mountains, the one at Crossnore, under the management of Mrs. Mary Martin Sloop, is among the most worthy.

The United States Government is giving aid to such schools when they are vocational in character.

They need a dormitory for girls by August 1, 1923, and if they succeed in building this dormitory, they will get from the Government $2,400 for the support of their teachers. If, on the other hand, they fail, they will also lose the $2,400.

Mrs. Sloop is a past-master in selling old clothes. A visit to this school will show wonders already done by old clothes. She is again asking her friends to ransack their garrets and closets, and send her whatever they can find. She will soon build the dormitory and secure the money from the Government, if you will do your part.

Send the bundles by freight to Crossnore, N. C.

A CENSURED PRAYER

It is seldom that a prayer is censured, though there are few that cannot be improved by judicious censoring. Of course the prayers in book form do not ordinarily need such oversight, because they are censured as they are written, and this fact is one of the strongest arguments in favor of prepared prayers.

The average extemporaneous prayer is a strange combination of heterogeneous elements, a mixture of petitions and information. Of course prayer is intended to be praise and petition. As it is addressed to an omniscient God, He needs no information from man. Whatever else is found in prayer is extraneous matter.

We have often heard prayers that were nothing

ONE OR THE OTHER

"It must have been for ONE of us, my own,
To drink this cup, and eat this bitter bread.
Had not my tears upon thy face been shed
Thy tears had dropped on mine. If I alone
Did not walk now thy spirit would have known
My loneliness; and did my feet not tread
This weary path and steep, thy feet had bled
For mine, and thy lips had for mine made moan.
And so it comforts me, yea, not in vain,
To think of thy eternity of rest—
To know thine eyes are tearless, tho' mine weep.
And when this cup's last bitterness I drain,
One thought shall still its primal sweetness keep—
THOU had'st the PEACE, and I the undying PAIN."

(This poem, the one last week and the one for next week were sent to Dr. R. C. Reed by friends on the occasion of his recent bereavement. He is having them published here for the comfort they may carry to some other troubled heart.—Ed.)

ing else than an argument to prove some disputed point in theology, and others that were an effort to refute some idea advanced in a sermon just concluded.

We have often longed to censor such prayers, but the public opportunity never came.

Recently, according to the secular press, the Legislature of Colorado placed on its records a resolution of censure, expressing displeasure and disagreement with the prayer of their chaplain. This good brother in his prayer had this bit of information for the Almighty:

"Our courts are corrupt; God has been expelled from our churches; our pulpits are filled with essayists; our boys and girls are going to the dogs; our laboring men are going to work with empty pails, while our farmers starve, and the middle man wax fat on exorbitant prices; our banks are bursting with money."

In the debate which took place in executive session, one representative, who had been a minister, after expressing surprise at the wording, said: "I do not believe that the Almighty is especially concerned about these little verbal wireless bulletins which our chaplain is annoying Him."

Without attempting to analyze the motives of this legislative protest, whether due to the fact that they feared that some votes might be alienated from the party, or whether it was due to a conception of what true prayer ought to be, we subscribe to the protest, and would like to amend it by embracing many of the prayers that are offered to the congregation rather than the Lord.

Devotional

THE PURPOSE OF CHRIST'S INCARNATION

By Rev. Daniel J. Currie

Jesus took our nature and lived and died to break power of Satan and to save souls from sin. Satan victor over the first Adam in Eden, but the second Adam was victor over Satan at Calvary. The devil and emissaries are making a hard fight, and it may look times as if they are going to win in the conflict; the day will come when he will be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, there to be tormented forever. Jesus in His sinless life and in His vicarious death the full demands of the law, and thus saves from sin who will trust Him as Saviour.

Only as Christ remained God and became man could He do all this. But as true God He could rightly represent God and as true man He could truly represent man. Thus in His human-divine or divine-human nature Jesus conquered Satan and saves sinners. We know of no other way in which this could be done. "For as men then as children are partakers of flesh and blood, also Himself likewise took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that hath the power of death; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." (Heb. 2:14). And then in one of the grandest sentences of all literature Paul says, "When the fulness of the time was come, sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under law, to redeem them that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons."

When Louis Agassiz was a boy in Switzerland, he and a little brother were crossing the lake to their father's home on the other side. By and by they came to a crack in the ice. The mother, eagerly watching them, feared that the little son would fall in. Then she saw Louis get down and stretch himself across the crack; and so on this, the beautiful of all natural bridges, the little brother crossed over safely and both were soon with their father. Louis did for his little brother, that and more, for our great loving brother did for us. In His divine nature He spanned the gap between God and man.

HIS MOTHER'S SERMON

The Scottish mother is dying and she calls to her side her son, her only son, who hopes one day to minister.

"I canna see ye noo, John," she said, feebly, as she reached for his hand and stroked his hair, "but I know yir tae an' I've just one other wish. If God calls ye to the ministry ye'll no refuse, an' the first day ye preach I'll be a' kin, speak a good word for Jesus Christ, an' I'll hear ye that day, though ye'll no see me, and I'll be satisfied!"

They buried her, and the years slipped away. He passed through a brilliant course at the university; taken the Mac Khammel scholarship and had accepted call to his first church. His aunt—his mother's sister—went with him to keep house, and he settled down to prepare his first sermon. He felt that, in view of his distinguished academic career, something particularly stirring would be expected of him, and he tried to rise to the occasion. His aunt looked dubiously at the forlorn manuscript and catching sight of her clouded face pressed her for an explanation.

"It's no for me tae advise ye, laddie," she said, only a simple old woman, but I'm just anxious about flock o' sheep the Lord has given ye tae feed for. They're no clever or learned like what we are, but plain country folk, ilka ane wi' his ain temptation a sair trackled wi' money cares o' this world. They'll need a clear word to comfort their hearts and show their way everlasting. Ye'll say what's richt, nae doot o' it, and a'body'll be pleased wi' ye, but, oh, laddie, be ye say a guid word for Jesus Christ!"

The clever manuscript went into the fire that night next day a sermon was preached in Drumtochty which brought tears to the eyes of old and young.

His aunt met him in the study and when he looked at her lips quivered, for his heart was wrung with wistful regret.

"Oh, Auntie, if she had only been spared to see this and her prayers answered!"

But his aunt flung her arms around his neck.

"Dinna be cast down, laddie, nor be unbelievin' ye did it in remembrance of her and you was yir minister's sermon!"

Yes, partly! Partly his mother's and partly his own. The mother's sermon would never have been preached for the aunt's gentle reproof and tactful reminder. I could add all they who carry to the perfect consummation of life's broken ministries!—Ian Maclaren.

A PLAN THAT WORKS

By James Trimble

Throughout the bounds of our whole General Assembly there are being held during the months of February and March meetings and conventions, the primary object of which is to arouse the interest of the men of our church and congregations to a deeper interest in Spiritual matters and in the building up of the Kingdom.

The wonderful progress made and success attained by the Women's Auxiliary in enlisting the whole-hearted consecrated work of the women of the church in this noble enterprise has been an incentive to the men to emulate their splendid example.

Many new organizations seeking to enlist a more active interest among the men have, in the past few years, been proposed, a few have been tried and all have failed to accomplish the desired end.

In August of last year, a much advertised convention of the men of the Synod of Virginia was called to meet at Massanetta Springs and although the place was centrally located, the surroundings delightful and those in charge of the conference were indefatigable in their systematic efforts to secure a representative attendance, there were only seven laymen present, two of this number were from the church and only three Presbyteries were represented. This fact alone is sufficient proof of the need of an awakened interest and that the men of the Church as a whole are not really taking any active part in its work and are missing the blessed privilege of service.

At the Massanetta conference, various plans were discussed, and although there were so few present these men laymen agreed among themselves that the plan best adapted to both city and country congregations would be to waste no more effort on new organizations or machinery, but to utilize those already in existence in the various churches.

It was stated by the leader of this conference that every organized church must of necessity have an organized Sabbath School and that every Sabbath School had or should have an organized Men's Bible Class and that no other vehicle than the Men's Bible Class, under the guidance and direction of the pastor and session, could be depended on to carry on the Christian activities of any congregation.

It was shown that the method tends to exalt the Church of the Living God and the results obtained are attributed to outside organizations. There is of late a strong tendency on the part of many people to depend too much upon the machinery and to lose sight of the Spiritual power, ordained at the beginning as the divine force competent to win the world for Christ.

This plan has been successfully tried in the Central Church of this city and in smaller churches in this and in the adjoining Presbyteries. The best proof of its feasibility is that it works.

There are in Central Church 280 men in the congregation and these men were divided into 14 groups of 20 men each. The chairman of each group keeps a card index of the men in his group and in a measure assumes responsibility for the work his group is designated to perform.

The first Sabbath in each month is devoted to mission work under a teacher of remarkable ability and for the next two months more than 50 per cent of all the men in the congregation have been using that splendid book, "Unfinished Tasks" as a text-book. As a result of this study more of our men are now better informed in regard to the crying need than ever before. With increased information there is added inspiration and a greater willingness to undertake definite work.

We have a lecture once each month on some phase of Christian work. One group of men conducts the Gospel service at Central Union Mission regularly, another will welcome visitors at the church and look up absentees from the Sabbath School, another group will visit nearby churches and conduct evangelistic services or help in any way where help is needed.

Our Bible Classes are supporting two boys in a mission school and are assisting in the support of one of our young men who is preparing for the ministry.

These are mentioned as some of the things we are doing and the group plan is in a large measure responsible for the active interest of our men in this work.

This plan will work as well in a small church as in a large one and since every man when he becomes a member of the congregation is automatically assigned to a group, he immediately becomes an active worker.

Washington, D. C.

Contributed

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION AT HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA

The Laymen's Missionary Movement in its convention held at Huntington, W. Va., March 1st and 2d, exhibited all its old-time power to stir the hearts of men and women with love for their great Leader, joy in His service, and an intense desire to further the extension of the Kingdom of God.

The convention opened at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, with a large and enthusiastic attendance, singing that grand old hymn of the Church, "Crown Him Lord of All."

Mr. Harry S. Irons, chairman of the local committee, gave the address of welcome and expressed the need felt by all the churches to "get out of ruts" and find our places in the great world program of the Christian religion. Secretary Slaymaker thanked Mr. Irons and announced the theme of the convention as "World Evangelization" and not merely "Foreign Missions." He declared, "This convention will show what are the essential things for us in Christ's Kingdom."

One of the very attractive features of the convention was the Louisville Seminary Quartet, which brought the Gospel message in song several times throughout the meeting.

The first great message of the convention was Dr. Morris' address on "The Central Task of the Church." He defined it simply as "The Great Commission." In describing the magnitude of the task of World Evangelization, he painted a gloomy picture, of heathenism growing more rapidly than Christianity. "Every time one heathen is brought to Christ, five heathen are born," he said. "Are we able to accomplish the task?" He answered, "Yes, but not with our present methods. We can win when we shoulder the world's great burdens, by putting our whole souls in the task. It cannot be accomplished by 'Being at ease in Zion.'" He quoted Jno. R. Mott as saying, "The key to success for World Evangelization is not on the Foreign Field but at the Home Base."

Dr. Wm. Evans, the great Bible teacher, followed this stirring speech by what, in the opinion of the writer, was the most powerful address of the convention, on "The Message of the Missionary." He declared that to be the emphasizing of the deity of Christ.

Dr. Melvin gave some very interesting facts in regard to the Progressive Program, demonstrating its value in money, souls, and inspirational power to the Church.

Rev. Porter Smith, of Brazil, gave us a description of the appalling need and awful degradation of South America due to that travesty of Christianity "Roman Catholicism."

Mr. H. D. McCallie, of Mokpo, Korea, giving an account of the great need of laborers in that field, drew also a most inspiring picture of the exceptional opportunities for educational and evangelistic work.

Dr. Nelson Bell, in his bright, cherry, yet graphic way described the splendid work of our medical missionaries, healing the bodies so as to heal the souls of heathen with the Gospel.

Dr. J. Campbell White spoke of Christ as the only hope of the world. Alluding to his own missionary experience in the Far East, he told of the pathetic sight of the fruits of false religions. The great tragedy of the earth, he said, was in seeing earth's suffering millions seeking peace in false religions and not finding it. Only Christ can satisfy the soul of man. God waits on man to spread the message of salvation—the world waits on us. If we go on as we have in the past, we will never reach the goal. To adequately meet our needs to evangelize the world, the foreign field and our home needs must be put on a fifty-fifty basis.

Dr. Wm. Ray Dobyns, as chairman of the permanent committee of men's work, made a strong appeal to men to go and live the Gospel.

Thursday night Dr. Williams gave a short stereopticon lecture, and as a climax had two of the 32 missionaries who have been so long waiting to go to the foreign field, give short addresses. These fine looking and well prepared young men made a great impression upon every one of that vast throng of over 1,000 people who crowded the church to the doors.

Dr. W. Evans followed with a powerful appeal to shoulder the burden of foreign missions in his "Cross of Gold."

The closing address of the evening was made by Mr. Frederick Sullens, editor of the Jackson Daily News, on "What Christ Means to Me." It was a wonderful testimony to the mighty power of Christ to save "even a newspaper man." A brief description of his life following his conversion, which so plainly revealed his great love for his Saviour, and zeal in His service, made his appeal especially effective, when in closing he held out his arms to the great audience and cried, "What are you doing for Him?"

Friday's session opened with a talk on "Personal Work," by Mr. C. R. Caldwell, of Staunton, Va. As he told of his experience in winning men for Christ, the joy of Christian service fairly shone in his happy face. It made us all happy just to look at him. Surely such are the kind of soul winners God needs today. As I listened to him, I could not help but think of those words of the great apostle, "Rejoice in the Lord."

Mr. Alf. D. Mason gave a splendid example of how to put men to work by describing the Men's Red Blooded Bible Class of his Sunday School. He surely must be the man who put "pep in pepper," for he made us all feel like being up and doing.

Rev. Motte Martin gave a very vivid description of the perils of the missionary in Africa, of the power of the Gospel to lift a people out of savagery and cannibalism and demon worship, to the glorious life and liberty of the children of God.

But the man of all that convention who came closest to us all, who literally opened the doors of our hearts and came in and made us love him and love his Master as he loved Him, was that great big loving, sympathetic soul winner, Mr. Fred McMillan. God bless him, say we all, and make us more like him. Oh that we had more personal workers like him.

It was a wonderful convention—wonderful in its attendance, 648 registered, over 1,000 present each night. Wonderful in its stirring appeals to men to live nobler, stronger for Jesus Christ; wonderful in its results.

One lady gave a diamond ring to help support one of the missionaries who spoke the night before. She had no money, she said; but she joyfully gave her ring. A man of the First Presbyterian Church, Huntington, hearing of it, offered to buy the ring and support one of those two foreign missionaries who spoke before the convention.

Dr. Thompson, of Charleston, announced the gift of money from a member of his church to support another of those missionaries.

Last and most precious of all the glorious results of that meeting were that two splendid men, men of influence and power with their fellow men in the city of Huntington, surrendered their lives to the Lord Jesus Christ, and have asked for admission into the church.

The beautiful hallelujah chorus was sung by the Huntington chorus as a fitting close to this wonderful meeting.

Dr. Thompson, of Charleston, said: "It is the greatest convention of its kind I ever attended." Let us say to that Amen and Amen. C. R. G.

STUDENT FELLOWSHIP FOR CHRISTIAN LIFE-SERVICE Atlanta Conference

Many people of the South have been hoping and praying for a movement among students which would unite those who are planning Christian service in America. Life-service groups all over the country are rapidly becoming united in the Student Fellowship Movement which is promoted and controlled by an executive committee of students from every part of the country.

Students from Agnes Scott College, Oglethorpe University, and Georgia Tech and other institutions in Atlanta, Ga., are entertaining the Southern Regional Student Fellowship Conference which is to be held in Atlanta, Friday, April 6th, through Sunday, April 8th.

This will be a conference of students from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia, and already there has been an enthusiastic response on the part of the students.

Dr. Morris, Dr. McMillan, Miss Haley, Miss Nancy White, and Dr. Henry H. Sweets are all being helpful in the preliminary plans for the conference.

Mr. Nat McConaughy, of Princeton Seminary, chairman of the executive committee; Miss Jessie D. White, the general secretary; Mr. O. T. Gilmore, Southern representative of the executive committee, will be in attendance, besides a number of foreign students from different parts of the world who will take part in the discussion. Board secretaries and other friends will be welcome as guests of this conference.

The local arrangements committee, of which Mr. Miller Hamrick, of Oglethorpe University, is chairman; Miss Frances Amis, of Agnes Scott College, is secretary, and Dr. J. R. McCain, of Agnes Scott College, an advisory member, has appointed three sub-committees: (1) on attendance and publicity, (2) on local entertainment, (3) on program.

The major objectives of the conference will be:

1. To realize the necessity for making America Christian for the sake of the world, by: (a) Addresses which should provide trustworthy background for (b) Open forums.
2. Promotion of the student fellowship by: (a) Circation of national fellowship consciousness and by (b) Inspiration and education for the spreading of the student fellowship spirit and (c) To express fellowship in prayer.

Dr. Ashby Jones, of Atlanta, is to address the conference on the first evening.

We trust that the people of the South will be praying that this conference may mark an epoch in the history of our church work, as these choice students from various institutions meet in conference for considering life-service in the interests of making America Christian.

A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SUGGESTION

By Mrs. Andrew J. Howell

I believe in Christian Endeavor. I believe it is the most satisfactory young people's organization which we have today; and the only real criticism which I have ever heard against it can be eliminated, if the pastor and the Secretary of Young People's Work in the Woman's Auxiliary will assist the C. E.'s to mould their work along denominational lines. Do not blame Christian Endeavor if this is not done. Our young people are not likely to think deeply into the history or doctrine of their church unless these things are presented to their view by more experienced people.

Therefore, I read with interest the Standard's recent editorial regarding Christian Endeavor, also Mrs. Murray's fine article on the same subject. Knowing Dr. and Mrs. Murray as I do, I can well understand that in their Christian Endeavor societies the young folks would naturally stay to the evening service; but I believe that Dr. Reed sounded a needed note of warning in his kindly editorial regarding the practice which some C. E.'s thoughtlessly follow when, after their Sunday evening prayer meeting, they stroll away, somewhere, often meeting the adult congregation on its way to church, which is an extremely demoralizing situation, to say the least.

I do not believe this condition of affairs occurs often, but it is a pity to have it happen at all; and so I should like very much to suggest to the occasional church which has this problem to contend with, a plan which we are using, but for entirely different reasons.

In our Vineland Church we have a wonderfully fine percentage of young people in our large evening congregations; but, alas! we have no place for the C. E.'s to hold their meetings except the main auditorium, and they found it so difficult to carry out their programs with the evening congregation filtering in all the time, that they decided to try the plan of having their meetings follow the Wednesday night prayer meeting.

"Two long meetings on Wednesday night!" you exclaim. Not at all. Two bright, attractive meetings merging one into the other, and the whole time is usually within the hour. We have the gain for the prayer meeting of more young people making an effort to be present—and I have heard of churches in which that was "a consummation devoutly to be wished"—and we have the gain for the C. E. meeting of having some of the older friends ready to stay to the after-meeting and assist if they are desired to do so.

So if your Sunday night C. E. meeting is not satisfactory for any reason, ask your pastor how he would like to join forces with you on Wednesday evening, and see what he will say. I think I know what his answer will be.

THOSE INAPPRECIATIVE MISSIONARIES

By Rev. E. V. Tadlock

Doubtless donors to mission stations and institutions often wonder why their contributions fail of acknowledgement. "Those missionaries," they think, "must be unappreciative."

Not so! There is usually a sufficient reason.

On the writer's desk is a letter thanking Circle No. 1, of a church whose name does not appear in the Assembly's list of churches, for a check for $25.00. The letter was first addressed to the lady who wrote the letter which inclosed the check. It was again addressed to the lady who as treasurer signed the check. In both instances the letter was returned by the postal authorities marked: "Not in the directory." If the name of the church appeared in the Assembly's records its objective could be reached via the pastor. As it is, the writer is at his wit's end, simply because the person sending the check failed to give a street address.

This is not an exceptional instance. Not infrequently boxes and bundles arrive without a line to identify their source, and no letters are received regarding them. Again, it is astonishing how many people cannot write their names legibly.

Sometimes checks are received from church treasurers. It is rarely that such checks reveal the church organization that authorizes them.

Missionaries have character defects, but it is seldom that inappreciation is one of them.

JEWISH RELIGIOUS CEREMONIES

By Paul L. Berman

Modern Judaism is to a great extent not the religion of Moses and the Prophets. It contains the shell but not the kernel. Many laws found in the books of Moses cannot be held, and many laws, not emanating from Moses or any inspired teacher, have superseded them, and are held with a tenacity and zeal worthy of a better cause.

One of the greatest features of Modern Judaism is a curious admixture of superstition on the one hand, and a loose teaching on the other hand, on many subjects of vital importance, such as the Inspiration of God's Holy Word, the Doctrine of the Atonement, Sacrifices, and the Messiah. Many of these superstitions are very ancient, and were already in existence in our Lord's day.

No Jew will say his daily prayers without wearing the Phylacteries. They are small square boxes covered over with leather, in which are contained the four passages which command the Jews to bind the law "as frontlets between their eyes, and upon their arms" (Ex. 13:2-10, 13:11-16; Deut. 6:4-9, 11:13-21). One is worn on the forehead and the other on the left arm. The Jews took those passages in their strictly literal sense, whereas God meant them to be taken figuratively; a mistake which others besides Jews have made, not only in the interpretation of the Old but of the New Testament.

By "binding them upon the forehead" God wanted them to have the whole law in their heads—they were to know it; and by "binding it upon the arm" God wanted them to do it, i. e., to obey the law.

They have to be prepared most carefully, otherwise they are useless. The Talmud says that even God wears Phylacteries, though with what object we are not told. They are various sizes, the largest being worn by the strict Jews, the modern Pharisees. "They make broad their Phylacteries" (Matt. 23:5) meant wearing the largest size so as to appear very pious before men.

The preparing of the Phylacteries is most minutely described in the Talmud, and the slightest infringement of these rules would render them unfit for use. Special reed pens have to be used, special leather only may be employed, even the writing has to be on a certain number of lines; the length and width of the straps with which they are fastened to the forehead and arm—even the shape of the knots—all follows most carefully prescribed Rabbinic rules; and the verses written by a great Rabbi would enhance their value. Thus have Jews made the Word of God of none effect through their traditions (Mark 7:13).

The Jewish boy begins to wear the Phylacteries at the age of 12 or 13, when he goes through the ceremony of Bar-mitzoah—confirmation. On that day he has to stand up in the synagogue and read the portion of the law. It is very possible that our Lord was taken up from Nazareth to Jerusalem at the age of 12 with the object of being confirmed. (Luke 2:42).

Talith—Another thing a Jew has to put on during prayers is a Talith. This is the praying robe worn over the head. It contains the Zizith or fringes, which they reverently touch and kiss.

This was commanded: "Thou shalt wear the fringes to the borders of thy garments" (Numb. 15:38-39; and Deut. 22:12). This fringe was intended as a mark of distinction between God's people and the surrounding nations on the principle of "Be ye separate" (II Cor. 6:17), a law which many Christians break today by conforming to worldly practices. God's people of old were not ever to dress like the heathen nations around them. There is every reason to believe that this law was kept for many centuries. But during the Maccabean persecution, the fact that Jews could so easily be distinguished by their dress, exposed them to great persecution, and the Jewish leaders, as a matter of expediency, allowed Jews to wear the fringe in an inner robe, and only use the fringe on an outer robe during the hour of prayer. This they have continued to do to this day. Please remember, our Lord's "hem of His garment" was the Zizith-fringe (Luke 8:44; Matt. 9:22). And just as the Pharisees "made broad their Phylacteries," so they "enlarged the borders of their garments" (Matt. 23:5). Women never wear the Talith or Phylacteries, they are not obliged to pray.

Mezizah—Fixed to the right-hand door-post of every Jewish house is the Mezuzah, or door-post. The idea is taken from Deut. 6:9. A piece of parchment upon which are written in Hebrew the following verses: Deut. 6:4-9 and 11:13-21, rolled up and put in a case made of wood, tin or glass. The case contains a small opening showing the Hebrew word "Shaddai," which means Almighty. The case is nailed in the right-hand door-post of every Jewish home, and every pious Jew passing by, reverently touches and kisses it. The Jews consider the Mezuzah a charm, keeping away the evil spirits. They flee away whenever they see the Great Name. Hence the Jews apply Psalm 121:5, "the Lord is thy keeper," to the Mezuzah.

The Sabbath is still most rigidly kept by the Jews, particularly in Eastern countries. A Jew will not even open a letter on the Sabbath day. Many Christians may "take hold of the skirts of him that is a Jew" and learn from the Jews how "to keep the Lord's Day holy." It is a day he is bound to honor in every way. He must always have a good meal and put on his best clothes—all in honor of the Sabbath. It is a comely Bride welcomed to the house each week with a beautiful Hebrew Psalm beginning with the words, "Enter in my beloved one," reminding one of the Canticles. Those who ignorantly think King Solomon held no lofty ideas when writing his spiritual love song should go any Friday evening and hear the Jews welcoming their Bride, their love, the Sabbath! And if such endearing terms could be used of the approaching day of rest, what words would sufficiently express one's love and devotion for the approaching Saviour!

Manora—Every Friday evening the wife lights the Sabbath light, called Manora. This is her very special privilege for which she thanks God in the words, "I thank Thee, O God, that thou hast commanded me to light the Sabbath light." This is not commanded anywhere in Scripture, it is enjoyed by the Talmud, which the Jews consider to be equal in importance to the Law of Moses.

The Havdallah Taper is a wax taper used at the close of each Sabbath. It is lighted, and the youngest person in the house holds it, while the head of the house takes a glass of wine and a box of spices called Haddas. He then pronounces a blessing while looking at the light, tastes the wine, and smells the spices. With this ceremony the Sabbath ends.

Chanukah Lights are used during the Feast of the Dedication (John 10:22), in commemoration of the cleansing of the temple by Judas Maccabaens. There is a tradition that then God worked a miracle in allowing a little oil in the sacred Lamp of the Temple to last eight days, thus enabling the priests to obtain a fresh supply. Hence the feast also lasts for eight days. On the first night one lamp is lighted, on the second two, and so on, until on the eighth day all lights are burning. Each candlestick has a ninth light, from this one the others are lighted. The feast is also called the "Feast of Lights." The feast generally falls in December, hence the expression in John 10:22, "It was winter."

Lelith Charms are connected with a very peculiar superstition. Lelith was the first wife of Adam, but as they did not live happily together (in Paradise!) he drove her out and married Eve. Lelith determined in bitter hatred to revenge herself, so to this day she seeks to destroy every new-born descendant of Eve. To prevent her evil designs, these charms hang up in the room. This is still done by all strict Talmudic Jews. Lelith is mentioned in Isa. 34:14, and is translated "screech-owl." The Revised Version translates it "night monster," but in the margin gives the original.

Nazoth or unleavened bread is eaten by Jews during the Feast of the Passover. Unleavened cake is still eaten by the Bedonins, especially when on a march, or when food has to be hurriedly prepared for a feast (Ex. 12:39; Josh 5:11, and Judges 6:19). The bread which Sarah prepared for the three angels was also unleavened (Gen. 18:6).

Rolls of the Law written on parchment or on the skins of animals. No printed books are used in the reading of the law in synagogues today. These are "the books" so frequently mentioned in the Bible. Such a roll our Lord unrolled in the synagogue in Nazareth (Luke 4:17).

Skins or pieces of parchment are cut into squares and stitched together, and when completely unrolled are very long indeed. The rolling up of a scroll is referred to in Isa. 34:4, and Rev. 6:14, (Jeremiah writes his denunciation in a roll, Jer. 36:2). They are written in parallel columns, the word "leaves" in Jer. 36:23, which King Jehoiakim cut with a knife and threw into the fire, were not leaves or pages, but columns (see margin in Revised Version). They are written on one side only, the back of the scroll being left blank. Hence when written on both sides the fact would deserve to be mentioned (Ezek. 2:10, and Zech. 5:3) written within and without with threatenings meant that God's judgments were very full and would be very severe.

On the Feast of Purim the whole book of Esther is read in the synagogue. Whenever the word "Haman" occurs, the Jews have to shout and repeat the words, "May his name be blotted out."

The Misrach, which means East, is a picture hung on an Eastern wall of the room, so that when praying, the Jew has his face turned toward Jerusalem (Daniel 6:10). Jews have an undying love for the Holy Land. They greet one another on their great feast days with the touching words, "This year in captivity, next year in Jerusalem."

Many educated Jews have given up most of their religious observances. They cannot see the reasonableness of modern Judaism. Many have drifted into Agnosticism or open infidelity. They have never been taught to make a difference between Bible and Talmud. When, therefore, they give up the latter, they throw overboard the former as well. Such is the sad condition of Jews today; and how this must appeal to the heart of all true Christians. Shall we not do all we can to give them the true light—the Light of the World?

HOME-MADE STEWARDS

An Authorized Interview With John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Showing How He Trains His Children in the Handling of Money.

When the heir to the world's greatest fortune opens his heart and frankly tells how he is bringing up his own six children, ranging from five to 18 years of age—five of them boys—to master their money, so that it shall not master them, young folks, especially, may well prick up their ears and give heed. It is with the personal permission of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and by the courtesy of the N. E. A. Service that the following intimate personal interview is shared with a multitude of boys and girls. It is the only interview Mr. Rockefeller has ever given out on what he regards as one of the most important and engrossing duties. He does not attempt to tell what other people should do with their children, but simply indicates the principles which he feels in duty bound to apply to his own, the result of which abundantly confirms the wisdom of his course.

"I regret," said Mr. Rockefeller, "the passing of the old-fashioned woodpile. I have failed to find a modern equivalent of the woodpile of my father's boyhood.

"Wealth," he said, "hurts children when they get too much of it. Just because a man can afford to hire people to wait on his children, is no reason why he should do it. I don't.

"They ought to be helped to form the habit of doing things for themselves—things that need to be done—whether they like to do them or not. I think many modern children are not developing the will power and self mastery that are essential to the solution of life's problems.

"That's what I mean about the woodpile. My father had to chop wood and do the milking. He probably didn't like doing the chores any better than most boys, but he acquired the habit of doing things he didn't like to do; his will was trained, and it helped him cope with other difficulties.

"Everybody knows that one of the things which is wrong with the world is extravagance. Extravagance hurts character. It is a man's duty to civilization to be thrifty. Whether a man can afford lavish spending isn't the point; it is wrong not to spend wisely, whatever is spent, whether a man can spare the money or not."

Families and individuals—children, too—should keep accounts of the money they receive and spend, says Mr. Rockefeller. His father kept accounts of his personal expenditures until he was past 50. And he himself, did so until a few years ago; Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., is 48.

"Commencing at the age of seven or eight, each of my children received an allowance of 30 cents a week," he explained. "The understanding was that out of it they were TO SAVE, AND TO GIVE, AS WELL AS TO SPEND.

"Ten cents was to be saved, 10 was to be given for church and Sunday School—for benevolence—and 10 for spending.

"I explained to them the importance of keeping accounts. At the end of the week I audited the accounts. A few years later they were getting a dollar a week; and, to teach accuracy in keeping accounts, rewards and demerits were given. If the account book was correct, the child got $1.05 the following week, $1.10 the next, and so on; if incorrect, only 95 cents, then 90, then 85."

These allowances never exceed a dollar or two dollars a week at the most, until the age of 15. By then, Mr. Rockefeller considers, a child that has been properly trained ought to be able to handle his own finances. So the allowance is increased to cover all expenses outside of living, education and medical service. It includes clothes, fares—if traveling alone—entertainment, candy, sodas, and the like.

"I believe that children should know what to spend, how to spend, what things cost, whether a thing is worth buying—in short, the value of money.

"This, and keeping accounts, is important because of the principle underlying. It is of value to my children—to any child—to hold to the rigid fundamental principle of economics."

Mr. Rockefeller smiled over an experiment he tried. "I was brought up to do things that needed to be done, whether I liked them or not," he said. "At seven years of age I began playing the violin, and I used to get five cents an hour for practicing. But that sort of thing doesn't work these days—or at least the standards are higher! Even with children, five cents an hour isn't an inducement any more!

"But I do pay wages for errands and chores. If a child honestly works, he earns such pay. It stimulates the desire to work. I used to get 15 cents an hour for sawing wood. But these days it's different. Down in the country we have wood hauled to the house. My boys and I load and unload it, and I pay them for the job. Yes, the scale is higher than 15 cents!"

Schools do not teach thrift and habits of work, Mr. Rockefeller finds.

"Education used to mean cramming the mind," he said. "Education really is learning how to use the mind. The tendency with many children of today is to follow the easiest way, the line of least resistance. You see it reflected in studies, in social life and in business.

"The modern theory of many people seems to be to let a child decide what he wants to do and then let him do it. Of course, we all do best the things we like doing. But life cannot be lived wholly that way. How can a child later learn how to avoid the things he should not do? A disorderly mind is an untrained one."

Mr. Rockefeller hasn't much sympathy with parents who, having acquired means, say they hope their boys will never have to work as hard as they did. "It is a false idea to change standards that way and go with the tide," he said.

"A boy should do the wholesome things his father had to do in so far as is possible. It will teach him what qualities made his father successful. I am sorry I did not have that sort of chance in some ways. I want my boys to start work at the bottom."

"THE VIRGIN BIRTH"

By Wm. H. Richardson, D.D.

"The Virgin Birth," a sermon preached by John M. Vander Meulen, in the First Presbyterian Church, Oak Park, Ill., January 27, 1918, has been received by myself and other ministers. It seems to have been "broadcast." I have read it with care. I thoroughly disagree with one of the statements he makes, and believe the statement to be unscriptural, unorthodox. On pages four and five he says, "A couple of years ago I was in a company of ministers to whom a theological professor read a paper on the topic, 'The Essential Doctrine of the Virgin Birth.' In the discussion and criticism of the paper, three other ministers and myself took the ground that, while we agreed with the professor in believing in the truth and actuality of the Virgin Birth, we did not agree with him in regarding it as essential, if by that he meant essential to salvation; that if a man believe in the deity and atonement and resurrection of Jesus, he had hold of the greatest essentials of the Christian faith." Now I agree with the theological professor, that the Virgin Birth is an "essential doctrine," fundamental to a true Christian faith. How can one believe in the "deity, atonement and resurrection" of Jesus Christ who does not believe in His sinless birth? How can one believe in the deity of Jesus Christ, yet believe that His father was a man of sin? "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, therefore, that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Luke 1:35. "Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost." Matt. 1:20. The conception and birth of Jesus Christ was a miracle of God. The Scriptures teach that no man ever could claim paternal connection with Jesus. As Kuyper says in his book, "The Work of the Holy Spirit," page 82, "Excluding the man, the Scripture thrice puts the Holy Spirit in the foreground as the Author of the conception." "Therefore the Lord Himself shall give you a sign, behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel." Isa. 7:16. I agree with Dr. Robert Alexander Webb, the late professor of Apologetics and Systematic Theology in the Presbyterian Seminary of Louisville, Ky., who says in his book on "Christian Salvation, Its Doctrines and Experience," page 62, "The prophecy has defined the mother of Jesus Christ to be a virgin who was impregnated only by supernatural power." I subscribe also to another statement made by Kuyper, page 82, "In the conception of Christ not a new being was called into life as in all other cases, but One who had existed from eternity, and who then entered into vital relation with the human nature. The Scripture clearly reveals this. Christ existed from before the foundation of the world. His goings forth were of old, from the days of eternity. He took upon Himself the form of a servant. Even though the biologist should discover the mystery of the human birth, it could not reveal anything regarding the conception of the mediator. It is not the conception of a human person, but of a human nature. Where a new being is conceived, a human person comes into existence. But when the Person of the Son, who was with the Father from eternity, partakes of our flesh and blood, He adopts our human nature in the unity of His Person, thus becoming a true man; but it is not the creation of a new person. The Scriptures clearly show this. In Christ appears one ego, being in the same Person at once the Son of God and the Son of man."

Is this doctrine of the virgin birth fundamental and essential to the Christian faith, or is it non-essential?

As it was through the Christian papers the ministers of our Church were requested to preach on this subject; might it not be well and for the edification of our people, if you would permit its discussion in your columns?

Nashville, Tenn.

SCIENTISTS DEFEND THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION

Editorial from The Herald, Farmville, Va., Jan. 12, 1923.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent meeting appointed a committee to formulate its pronouncement on the theory of evolution. The committee was composed of Dr. Edwin Grant Conklin, of Princeton; Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, and Dr. Charles B. Davenport, of the Carnegie Institute. This committee, which everyone will acknowledge to be an able and representative one, reported the following resolution: "So far as the scientific evidences of the evolution of plants, animals and man are concerned, there is no ground whatever for the assertion that these evidences constitute a mere guess. No scientific generalization is more strongly supported by thoroughly tested evidences than is that of organic evolution. The evidences in favor of the evolution of man are sufficient to convince every scientist of note in the world. These evidences are increasing in number and importance every year." The meaning of this resolution is clear, and no doubt it accurately expresses the unanimous opinion of the 1,100 scientists, who are members of the association. To charge these scientists with either dishonesty or incompetency would be folly. Yet to accept their conclusions as infallible would be worse than folly, for scholars of specialized learning often go off on a tangent. They base their conclusions many times on insufficient data. They often fly higher than they can roost. A brief survey of some of their conclusions justifies our reluctance to accept their latest dictum on evolution.

Not many years ago scholars and scientists emphatically asserted that Moses—granting he ever did live—could not have written the Pentateuch for the simple reason that the art of writing was not known in his day. But presently there came along a man with a pick and a spade, who, digging along the Nile, uncovered a library of letters written by the Kings of Babylon to the Pharaohs of Egypt many years before the birth of Moses. Later these scholars confessed that their declaration was an unfortunate hypothesis which was no longer tenable.

Again, other eminent scholars said that the Exodus was a myth, because historically it was impossible. Besides, the fact that no other records mention it branded it with the certitude of legendary origin. Soon after came another man with a spade, and unearthed a burial crypt from which was taken a mummy wrapped with bands of fine linen on which was written a description of the Hebrew Exodus. The scholars quietly said, when this fact was discovered, "We guessed wrong."

Once more, eminent scholars told us that the Bible was wrong because no such people as the Hittites ever lived. They never lived because there is no record of them, apart from the Bible; therefore it was a thoroughly tested scientific fact that the Bible was mistaken. Just then the man with the pick came to the valley of the Euphrates, and dug up seals, cylinders and the ruins of cities which conclusively showed that the Hittites not only lived at the time the Bible says they did, but also they were a great and warlike people. Again the scholars acknowledged that their conclusion was based on insufficient evidence. They did not have enough data. That is their failing.

So when scientists and scholars of any department of learning announce that their opinions are "supported by thoroughly tested evidence," we are tempted to smile at their complacent cock-sureness because we remember the man with a pick. We want the truth, and are anxious to follow it, but feel that scholarship alone cannot disclose the truth so long as it uses the imagination rather than reason. If scientists can prove that man came from an animal ancestry we will accept the fact. But the burden of proof is not on us, and until the proof is produced we are not to be considered either ignorant or stubborn simply because we refuse to be gullible.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Auxiliary Training Course—At the Second Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, N. C., a most interesting and worth-while training course for all the women in the Woman's Auxiliary was held for one hour a day for five days, March 12-17, 1923. This course was really one in informal parliamentary practice, and was designed to teach the necessary procedure in conducting circle meetings, executive board, and Auxiliary. The class was exceedingly fortunate in having Mrs. J. B. Spillman as leader. Mrs. Spillman is a gifted instructor, and in this class she showed her ability to bring out even timid women. There was nothing pedantic about the teaching; humorous motions were made in the practice work, so there was no stiffness or dullness. The average daily attendance was 75. The following plan was carried out: For the first 15 minutes of each hour, a model meeting was put on (Circle, Board, Auxiliary); the remaining 45 minutes were given to practicing the making and amending of motions, order of procedure in motions, holding of elections, etc. Various women were called to the chair each day, and so great was the enthusiasm that all self-consciousness was lost. The women of this church recommend that such a training course be offered in all Auxiliaries where it is possible. F. T.

(It is a very great pleasure to be able, through the kindness of Mrs. French, to give to the women of the North Carolina Synodical this Historical Address which Mrs. French was asked to deliver at the dedication of the Woman's building at Barium Springs last October. We would suggest that you file carefully copies of this issue of the Standard.—Ed.)

Historical

It was in the year 1883 that the Synod of North Carolina took the first active steps toward founding what is now known as the Presbyterian Orphans' Home, located here at Barium Springs.

With the aid of a few godly women of Charlotte, seconded by Mr. Geo. E. Wilson and Mr. R. B. Alexander, a building was secured and a beginning was made under the matronage of Mrs. P. T. Penick.

In January of 1881 the Home was removed to Barium and the Synod took charge of it, placing Rev. R. W. Boyd in the superintendency.

At that time an old hotel building, standing where Rumble Hall now stands, was put in repair, and Mr. Boyd moved into it with his own family and 25 orphan children.

In November of the same year the building was burned to the ground. Nothing daunted, Mr. Boyd gathered his little flock and sheltered them in Statesville until the regents could determine what was best to be done.

This condition appealed to the hearts of our church people, and money was soon secured and it was decided to erect a suitable group of buildings, adopting the cottage plan.

The first building erected was the "Annie Louise" cottage, the gift of Mr. George Watts, of Durham, who also built the old infirmary, to which Mr. H. H. Orr, of Charlotte, added a ward and called it the "Lewis Orr" ward, for his son.

About this time Synod erected another building, and it is now known as "Synod Cottage."

Thus equipped, Mr. Boyd again gathered his family at Barium and the Home took on new life. Applications began to pour in and it was found necessary to lodge 15 girls in the infirmary building.

The next building was our central building, known as Rumble Hall, named after our much beloved president, Dr. Jethro Rumble, of Salisbury.

With these three buildings there still was not room enough and many an applicant had to be turned away.

Just then Dr. Rumble came in touch with Mrs. S. P. Lee, a godly woman of wealth, who realized that her money had been given her for God's service, and her heart responded to the call of the orphan child, and Lee's cottage was built to house the larger boys.

The next building was the Superintendent's cottage, so much needed by Mr. Boyd, who had been obliged to live with his family crowded into one of the cottages. When the money for this building seemed to come too slowly, Mr. George Watts again came to the rescue and promised to give a dollar for each dollar the Church raised, and it did not take long to house Mr. Boyd and his family.

In 1902 Mr. Burroughs, of Charlotte, being left childless by the death of his beloved and accomplished daughter, Mrs. Carrie Burroughs Dula, determined to build to her memory at Barium, and the building stands today with art room and offices as a memorial to this lovely and gifted woman.

The next building in order was the Alexander building, sometimes called the Technical building. It houses the printing press, workshop and other mechanical work. It was built by Mr. S. P. Alexander, of Charlotte.

Howard cottage was built in 1903 by Mr. George Howard, of Tarboro, as a memorial to his noble wife, Mrs. Anna Stamps Howard, who was born and reared in the quaint old town of Milton, in Caswell county.

"Little Joe's Church" was an inspiration from the heart of little Joe Gilland, who died at eight years of age, and now lies in the little cemetery near the Home.

This dear little boy used to say, "When I get to be a man, I am going to build a church with a porch to it here," and to this end he saved all his pennies and nickles, and when he died his little purse contained $1.25, and Mr. Boyd took that little purse and wherever he went he told the story of Little Joe, and the money began to pour in from young and old, and now we have "Little's Joe's Church," where service is held every Sunday, and it has two porches to it!

Mr. Boyd was elected superintendent of the Home in December, 1890, and served in that capacity for 17 years. These were years of trials and discouragement, and while they must have seemed hard at the time, Mr. Boyd had already begun to receive his reward in seeing the changed lives of those who were in the Home under his care, and his greater reward will come when in heaven he meets and welcomes those whom he has taught the way of salvation and helped to know and love the Saviour.

He was succeeded by Rev. John Wakefield, February 4, 1908. There was a heavy debt resting on the Home when he came into office, and his efforts to liquidate this were untiring.

After two years of service he was called to his reward, January 11, 1910.

Rev. W. T. Walker was elected by the regents to take up the work, and after receiving the second call, he accepted and entered on his work, February 15, 1910. He entered on his duties handicapped by a debt of $4,500, which he felt must be removed before any progress could be expected. This he accomplished by a few months of hard and unremitting work, and he began to feel free to undertake what he felt to be the most pressing needs of the Home.

At this time the cottages were lighted by kerosene lamps and very inadequately heated by small stoves, the sewerage was poor and insufficient, and all this received his first attention.

Rev. R. M. Williams was asked by Synod to undertake a campaign to raise funds for these improvements, which he successfully carried out, and the sum of $60,000 was secured, which under Mr. Walker's direction was used to make these and many other improvements.

During Mr. Walker's administration and through his efforts many additions were made to the comforts and needs of the Home.

The modern and up-to-date infirmary was erected by the brothers, J. S. and W. H. Sprunt, of Wilmington, in memory of their parents.

The fine McNair building for school purposes was given by Mr. J. F. McNair, and these, with the electric light plant and modern sewerage system, the new barns and up-to-date dairy, all stand with other work as a testimony to this Christian man who so faithfully carried out the work he knew God had given him to do.

By reason of failing health, Mr. Walker resigned in 1921, and was succeeded by Mr. E. McS. Hyde, the present superintendent.

It would seem to me unjust here not to mention Miss Janie McEachin, who for a little over 10 years held the position of lady manager in the Home, and whose influence has helped to mold many lives and the extent of whose service will never be wholly revealed until the time when we shall all meet to testify before the Great White Throne.

About seven years ago the women of the Presbyterians felt it would advance the interests of the Home if they were given a part in the management. Accordingly Synod appointed a visiting board composed of the secretaries of Orphanage work in each Presbyterial. They met at Barium and after looking over the situation decided that the most pressing need was a new dining room and kitchen. The matter was brought before the Synodical and they unanimously voted to undertake the erection of such a building at a cost of $25,000. The war coming on, the high cost of material and labor caused the amount called for to be raised to $75,000, but the women stood by their pledge and raised the needed amount.

In 1920 Synod was urged to place women on the board of regents, and after much discussion it was decided so to do. An entirely new board was elected, consisting of one man from each Presbytery and one from Synod, and also one woman from each Presbyterial and one from Synodical.

Later the building plans were changed and the Synod agreed to build the dining room and kitchen and the women agreed to put their money into a much-needed dormitory for the girls. This has been completed and named the "Lottie Walker" building, in memory of Mrs. Walker, wife of Rev. W. T. Walker.

In the past year several additions have been made to the buildings at the Home, among them being a fine laundry and equipment and in the same building a sewing room furnished with machines and all modern conveniences. This was the gift of Mr. Charles Johnson, of Charlotte.

Mr. J. C. Crowell, of Charlotte, has financed the gift of a fine swimming pool, by the Men's Club of the Second Church, of Charlotte.

All these and many other gifts attest the interest which our Church is taking in the welfare of the orphans.

In 1922 Mr. Joseph Johnston, of Lincoln, was appointed as general manager of the Home. He entered on his duties in October of that year, and his work promises to be even more extended than what has been accomplished in the past.

New work is constantly being inaugurated and the regents' program for the ensuing year when fully carried out will show a great improvement and many additions to the Home.

A Catholic Miracle—June 13th is St. Anthony's day and we have a Catholic celebration in our neighborhood in a chapel dedicated to this saint.

This chapel was built by thieves, or rather by smugglers, so the legend has it. A band of smugglers lived in a hut on the site of the chapel. One night when they had the hut full of smuggled goods the band got word that the government officers were coming to arrest them. They were fairly caught and had no escape but through some higher power, so they all knelt down and prayed to San Antonio, and made a vow that if the saint came to their assistance they would build a church on the spot in his honor. When the officers arrived their goods had become invisible, so the smugglers escaped arrest and the chapel was duly built, for is there no honor even among thieves?—Alice J. McClelland.

A Mexican Scene—There is a picture of Mexico that stands out most clearly in my mind of all things I have seen. This is a picture of the things I saw when we visited the cathedral in Mexico City, where the old Aztec stone stood, and the one at Guadalupe, the scene of the so-called miracle of Guadalupe. Both cathedrals are magnificently furnished, with many images and pictures on the walls. The priests within some kind of sanctuary were droning out incantations in a tone that it was absolutely impossible to understand, even if one knew the language, and we could not decide whether it was Spanish or Latin. The people crawling up the aisle on their knees were worshipping the images as truly as ever heathen in India, China, or Africa worshipped his idols. The most striking thing about it all was the look of hunger and longing on the faces of the people there. I watched the faces of some as they prayed over and over a short sentence and my heart was touched at the look of hopeless longing and almost of despair written on their faces. As we passed from the doors of both cathedrals we saw many beggars lying on the steps of each, begging at the doors of a church, that so far as I can find out, is doing absolutely nothing for the betterment of the physical, moral and spiritual condition of the people, and care only for their money, nothing for their souls. "Oh Religion, what crimes are wrought in thy name." I have been in Mexico only a short while, but I am convinced that right there I got the key to the situation here in Mexico; the blame for the condition of the people of Mexico, educationally, morally, and spiritually, like the beggars on the steps of the cathedrals, lies at the doors of the Catholic Church.—O. C. Williamson.

Charleston, S. C. Presbyterian Auxiliary will hold its annual meeting April 3d and 4th at Crockettville, Hampton, P. O. An interesting program is planned. We are glad to announce that we will have with us Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, Synodical president, and chairman of Woman's Advisory Committee of the Southern Presbyterian Church. We are also looking forward with pleasure to an address on Mission work in Brazil by Miss Ruth See. Sarah Gray, community worker, will tell us of work among the colored people on the Sea-Islands. Full attendance is desired.

Officers are: President, Miss Amey N. Allen, Charleston; secretary, Mrs. Parker E. Connor, Edisto Island; treasurer, Mrs. O. H. Bissell, Charleston; historian, Mrs. S. G. Stoney, Charleston.

Departmental secretaries: Spiritual Life—Mrs. W. S. Hay, Inman; Foreign Missions—Mrs. C. B. Jenkins, Charleston; Home Missions—Mrs. F. Y. Legare, Charleston; S. P. and C. Missions—Miss T. C. Hutson, McPhersonville; C. E. and M. R.—Mrs. J. S. Wertz, Estill; S. S. Ext. and Y. P.—Mrs. G. L. Mikell, Edisto Island; Literature—Mrs. E. H. Wyman, Estill.

Presidents of Local Auxiliaries—Reports! Is your report blank properly filled in and ready to be mailed to your Presbyterial Secretary? If so, mail it. See to it that your Synodical secretary will not be under the necessity of frantically using the telegraph, and the phone, and the wireless and anything else that she can get hold of to induce the Presbyterial secretary to send in the report that you have not sent to her—and Mrs. Winsborough—well, you should hear Mrs. Winsborough tell of what happens in her office when the clerk, or whoever handles the reports of our General Assembly, calls on her for the reports that the Synodical secretary has not sent to her. Reason? Because the Presbyterial secretary had not sent to her. Reason? Because you, president of the local Auxiliary, had failed to send your report to your Presbyterial secretary on time.

Sounds rather complicated, doesn't it? Well, you do not have to bother about that. Just mail your report blank properly filled out, and on time to the Recording Secretary of your Presbyterial and she will attend to the rest. Simple, your part of it, isn't it? Let's see that we do it.—Ed.

P.S.—Some of these years we may not have to talk so much about reports.

Steele Creek—The Woman's Auxiliary of Steele Creek Church met Thursday afternoon at the Shop-ton community house. Miss Ona Spratt presided, conducting an interesting program. Miss Macie McGinn conducted the prayer program and afterwards Mrs. Price Berryhill gave a reading.

During the business part of the session an election of officers was held, resulting in the re-election of president, Miss Ona Spratt; vice-president, Mrs. Wert Pegram; secretary, Mrs. Lee Sloan; treasurer, Miss Alice Whitesides.

Miss Macie McGinn was appointed delegate to Presbyterial to be held in Philadelphia Church.

Ten Commandments—For Secretaries of Literature:

Thou shalt order thy "Duties" from the Woman's Auxiliary.

Thou shalt go to the four Executive Committees and ask for a catalog of their "wares," and samples of same.

Thou shalt take a Church paper.

Thou shalt take the Survey and a Prayer Calendar.

Thou shalt know the current Mission Study Books.

Thou Shalt Read all these Things.

Thou shalt have a literature table at each meeting of your Auxiliary.

Thou shalt scatter leaflets, charts and posters through your local church.

Thou shalt make scrap-books in line with current study, home or foreign.

Thou shalt have no waste-basket.

(For needed addresses, see inside cover of Survey.)

—From Survey, given by request.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The Endeavorers of South Carolina and North Carolina, together with those of the other Southern States, observed on March 18th "Dixie Endeavor Day" when the Endeavorers and their friends were asked to contribute to the Southern Endeavor campaign. This is the only general appeal of the year for this work, the other funds coming through the State unions. The All-South Committee furnishes field workers and up-to-date plans for the local societies, and keeps the work hustling along. The Dixie leaders are doing a fine work and we trust the final reports will encourage them. Recently one of the secretaries in apologizing to the editor for a delayed answer to a letter, said modestly that due to a heavy speaking tour his correspondence had piled up so that he had spent twenty of the past twenty-four hours at the typewriter. Anyone who has listened to the tap, tap, tap, of typewriter keys knows what such a season of letter writing means. Such efforts for our young people, far and above what could be demanded, challenge the support of our Presbyterian young people and of our Church at large, and we know that many will join us in prayer and good wishes for the leaders who are spending themselves so largely for our Church of the morrow.

The C. E. Monthly Service Program theme for April is "Comrades of the Quiet Hour." This is a splendid activity. Fine plans, attractive programs, advertising, are all helpful, but until our young people become regular and earnest in Bible reading, meditation and prayer, the work will not move toward definite, worthwhile results. Let us give earnest attention to our devotional life, Carolina young people!

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MARCH 25, 1923

REVIEW

JESUS THE WORLD'S SAVIOUR

Rev. 7:9-17

GOLDEN TEXT—"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Tim. 1:15.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb. And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen. And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said unto me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

SHORTER CATECHISM

29. How are we made partakers of the redemption purchased by Christ?
A. We are made partakers of the redemption purchased by Christ by the effectual application of it to us by his Holy Spirit.

I. Luke 13:10-17—January 7, 1923—Jesus Healing on Sabbath. Golden Text: Matt. 12:12, "It is lawful to do all on the Sabbath day." Time: A.D. 29. Place: Perea. Persons: Jesus, Infirm Woman, Rulers. Topics: (1) The Roman's Condition; (2) Christ's Love and Sympathy; (3) The Rulers' Hypocrisy; (4) The Healing Results.

II. Luke 14:1-14—January 14, 1923—Jesus Teaching Humility. Golden Text: I Pet. 5:5, "God resisteth the proud but giveth grace unto the humble." Time: Dec. D. 29. Place: Perea. Persons: Christ, Patient, Disciples, Pharisee. Topics: (1) The Patient Healed; (2) The Lesson Taught; (3) The Two Guests at Wedding; (4) Entertaining the Poor.

III. Luke 15:11-29—January 21, 1923—The Prodigal Son. Golden Text: Luke 15:10, "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." Time: Dec. A.D. 29. Place: Perea. Persons: Jesus, Disciples. Topics: (1) The Prodigal's Departure; (2) His Degredation; (3) His Repentance; (4) His Reception by His Father.

IV. Luke 16:19-31—January 28, 1923—The Rich Man and Lazarus. Golden Text: I Tim. 6:17, "Charge them that are rich in this present world that they be not high-minded nor have their hope set on the uncertainty of riches but on the God who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." Time: Dec. A.D. 29. Place: Perea. Persons: Christ, Dives, Lazarus, Abraham. Topics: (1) Dives and Lazarus' Earthly Condition; (2) Their Life After Departure From Earth; (3) Dives' Appeal to Abraham; (4) His Request for His Brethren.

V. Luke 17:11-19—February 4, 1923—The Grace of Attitude—Golden Text: Ps. 100:4, "Enter into His courts with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise. Give thanks unto Him and bless His name." Time: A.D. 30. Place: Border of Samaria and Galilee. Persons: Christ, Disciples, Lepers. Topics: (1) Opportunities Embraced; (2) Faith Prompts Prayer; (3) Faith Tested and Rewarded; (4) Gratitude Shown.

VI. Luke 18:1-14—February 11, 1923—The Spirit of Prayer—Golden Text: Ps. 51:17, "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit, a broken and contrite heart thou wilt not despise." Time: A.D. 30. Place: On way to Jerusalem. Persons: Christ, Disciples. Topics: (1) Unjust Judge Moved by Persistent Prayer; (2) The Righteous God Hears Such Prayer; (3) The Pharisee's Prayer; (4) The Publican's Prayer.

VII. Luke 9:1-10—February 18, 1923—Jesus and Zaccheus—Golden Text: Luke 19:10, "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Time: A.D. 33. Place: Jericho. Persons: Christ, Zaccheus. Topics: (1) Zaccheus Seeking Jesus; (2) Jesus Seeking Zaccheus; (3) Zaccheus' Conversion; (4) Proofs of His Discipleship.

VIII. Luke 19:11-26—February 25, 1923—The Parable of the Pounds—Golden Text: Luke 16:10, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." Time: A.D. 33. Place: Jerusalem. Persons: Christ, Disciples, Rulers. Topics: (1) Christ Committing His Property to Disciples to be Used for Him; (2) He Returns to Call Them to Account; (3) The Faithful Servants and Their Reward; (4) The Wicked Servant and His Doom.

IX. Luke 20:19-26, 21:14—March 4, 1923—Jesus Teaching in the Temple—Golden Text: Luke 20:26, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that be God's." Time: A.D. 33. Place: Jerusalem. Persons: Jesus, Scribes, Pharisees. Topics: (1) The Rulers' Question; (2) Jesus' Answer; (3) The Rich's Gift to the Treasury; (4) The Poor Widow's Mite.

X. Luke 22:39-48, 54—March 11, 1923—Jesus in Gethsemane—Golden Text: I Pet. 3:18, "Christ also suffered for sins, once the righteous for the unrighteous to bring us to God." Time: April 5 A.D. 30. Places: Jerusalem, Gethsemane. Persons: Jesus, Disciples, Officers, Soldiers. Topics: (1) Christ's Prayer in Gethsemane; (2) The Answer Given; (3) The Disciples Sleeping Urged to Pray; (4) The Events Following.

XI. Luke 23:33-48—March 18, 1923—Jesus Crucified—Golden Text: Is. 53:5, "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed." Time: Wednesday, April 5 A. D. 30. Place: Calvary. Persons: Christ, Jews, Soldiers. Topics: (1) Jesus' Prayer for His Murderers; (2) The Mockery of Men; (3) The Events Marking His Death; (4) The Appeal and Conversion of the Penitent Thief.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

(By some misunderstanding the C. E. Topic was not discussed in last week's Standard, and so I am giving two discussions below.—J. G. G.)

Sunday, March 25—Topic: Educational Missions at Home and Abroad. Acts 19:8-20.

Paul was at Ephesus, then one of the educational centers of the world. The world had had some great teachers like Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Zeno, Epicurus, and other renowned men who had talked about life, God, science and morals. Paul goes into a school at Ephesus to tell them about the Gospel, and we read of the great influence his teaching exerted, so that large numbers of evil books on magic were burnt.

One of the principal methods of spreading the Gospel is by schools and education. The Southern Presbyterian Church believes in the education of boys and girls, so that their minds as well as their hearts will grow, and they will know the way of truth and love to do it. We have many church schools and colleges, and our young people should attend them instead of going to other schools. But our topic is about mission schools, and we shall talk of what our Church is doing to educate the boys and girls of heathen lands and destitute sections of our own country.

Presbyterian Mission Schools in Heathen Countries

In Africa, our Church has 599 day schools, with 21,346 students, in which the common branches of education are taught, but the main stress is laid on the Bible. A special school is conducted to teach men to be preachers. In Brazil, we have nine schools, with 328 students, including a school for preachers. In Mexico there are 25 schools, with 810 students. Cuba has one school conducted by our Church, with 609 students. We have in China 243 schools, and 5,190 students. In Japan there are 10 schools, with 590 students, while in Korea there are 195 schools and 7,771 students. These are the seven countries we do missionary work in, and there are in all 1,082 schools and 36,644 students.

Just imagine what it will mean when these boys and girls come out of these schools, with the love of the Bible in a well-educated mind.

Presbyterian Mission Schools in the Homeland

The work of our Church in supporting schools for classes of people in the South who cannot keep up schools for themselves is in charge of our Home Mission Committee at Atlanta. These schools are conducted for our mountain people, Indians, negroes, and foreigners, such as Italians, Bohemians, etc. There are 47 of these schools, and they have 125 teachers, and 2,500 students. These schools own buildings worth $400,000, and it costs about $100,000 a year to keep the schools up. Besides these, there is a preachers' school for negroes, called Stillman Institute, and a college for Indian girls, in Oklahoma.

We might mention just a few of these schools by name. There is Woodrow Wilson College, at Banner Elk, a monument to Edgar Tufts, who recently died after a wonderful work done in the mountains. There are Stuart Robinson School, Highland School, and Beechwood Seminary, all in the Kentucky mountains. The last one, Beechwood Seminary, is the Christian Endeavorers' special object for gifts. Goodland School for Indians, and Tex-Mex School for Mexicans are doing great service.

Let us remember that when we give to Assembly's Home Missions, we are contributing to all these schools, and doing something toward the uplift of many people, and especially the young folks. Let us also remember to pray for all these schools, both in the homeland and in the foreign countries.

Sunday, April 1—Topic: Lessons from the Psalms. The Easter Psalm. Ps. 16 and Acts 2:22-28. (Consecration meeting.)

Today is Easter, and all over the Christian world, the thought has been turned to the great truth of the resurrection of Jesus. We Presbyterians have never observed Easter as a day appointed for special recognition, because Christ never ordered the Church to so observe it, any more than He did Christmas. Every Sunday is a celebration of Christ's resurrection. But since so many are thinking of the resurrection today, it is valuable to take advantage of it.

The Resurrection of Christ Was Foretold

Peter quotes the 16th Psalm as a prophecy of Christ's resurrection. Note this very carefully. Of course, it was impossible for death to hold the Son of God, and Christ rose from the grave on the third day. The story of Jonah, three days in the whale, was also an acted prophecy of Christ's resurrection, as Jesus Himself says. Christ told His disciples He would rise from the dead.

The Resurrection is the Great Proof of Christianity

The resurrection was the crowning act of the Gospel. It proved that Jesus was able to save all who believe in Him; for if He Himself rose from the dead, He is able to raise those who trust in Him. There were plenty of witnesses to His resurrection, for He appeared to His disciples for 40 days after He rose, and many hundreds saw Him, and His disciples even ate with Him, and saw Him many times.

The Resurrection is Our Sweetest Hope

While we love life, yet we know we have all got to die, and leave this world. But God has implanted in us a desire to live again after death, and the resurrection of Jesus was a pledge that He will raise up all who love and trust in Him. Indeed, we are told that the true joys are those at God's right hand in heaven. We shall not really live until we live in eternity without sin, and in the company of Jesus, and all those we love in this world. May God help us to put our affections on things above and not on things in the earth.

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

- Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
- Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
- Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.*
- Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.*
- Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.*
- Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
- Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
- Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
- Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville.
- Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton.
- Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville.
- Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington.*
- Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell.
- Eugene Brown Morgan, Concord.
- Miss Rachel Beall, Durham.
- Miss Anne Sample, Hendersonville.
- J. M. Carr, Davidson College.
- Miss Ruth Beard, Cornelius.
- Miss Lillie Gilleland, Greensboro.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK IN SECOND CHURCH GREENVILLE, S. C.

This work is very promising. It is well organized and has Senior, Intermediate and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies and Sunbeams. Seventy-six young people attended the meeting of these societies on the first Sabbath in March and there was nothing special on that day. The leaders provide interesting programs. Mr. C. M. Ware is president of the Senior society; Mrs. H. W. Allen, superintendent of the Intermediates; Mrs. C. R. Babb, of the Juniors, and Miss Eleanor West, of the Sunbeams. The Seniors have an enjoyable social every month.

Five Juniors of the First Church C. E. of Wilmington have completed the first year of Junior memory work: Marie Benton, Chloris Kellum, Marian Bodine, Lucile Mullinnix, and Helen Goodwin. Lucile Mullinnix has also completed the second year's work. This society is conducting a Home Mission Study class and a Foreign Mission Study class, giving two Sunday afternoons a month to the classes.

At the Florence District C. E. Convention, one little Junior, Elizabeth Ross, of Florence, S. C., reported that she had visited the county jail several days, and had done other things to help those who needed her.

Another report comes from Florence, S. C., that the Senior C. E. society there sends out engraved invitations to all who are interested in C. E. work, and to others who might become interested. They report excellent results.

Have you made your plans to attend the Young People's Conference at Davidson, June 12-19? If you are not already planning to attend you will do so, when full details are announced. Watch for them!

FINDING ONE'S LIFE

And then, "I'm lost!" I heard my dead self cry!
I saved my treasure, put it safe away
In such a secret place that lo! one day
I sought but could not find it anywhere
And so I lost it through my selfish care!

I lost my treasure, dropped it on the road
Where I had stopped to lift another's load,
But in that very place another day
I found my treasure, gleaming where it lay!

I saved my life and lived it my own way
In self-consideration, till one day
I sought in vain for what had once been I,
And then, "I'm lost!" I heard my dead self cry!

I lost my life and walked along God's way,
Serving for His dear sake, 'till lo! one day
I found my life—a wondrous thing to see,
For it was not myself—but Christ in me.
—Dorothea Day Watkins.

Church News

NEAR EAST RELIEF

Received for this cause, Fountain Inn Church, $16.68.

THE SUCCESS OF THE FLYING SQUADRONS

By J. B. Spillman, Secretary of Stewardship, Synod of North Carolina

The first comment some men make on an untried plan is: "It can't be done," so we have prepared to hear some men say, "The people won't come to week-day services," "The weather is too bad at this time of year," "The roads are impassable," "You can't get the pastors of city churches to go out to small churches where they have only a dozen to speak to." One preacher going to an appointment on a cold rainy day said, "I noticed that the train this morning was filled with drummers with their sample cases. It looks like they do not stop for cold or rain. Why should the Lord's work stop?" Some of the returns are beginning to come in. They show that where difficulties were brushed aside and the men appointed filled their engagements and where the pastors of the churches made a real effort to get their members out, that God blessed the work done.

Below is given in detail the report of 18 churches in Mecklenburg Presbytery of the presentation of the family altar. These squadrons were composed of four men who spoke on the following subjects: "Spiritual Life," "Christian Training," "Evangelism and Missions," and "Stewardship of Possessions." The men speaking on family altar and stewardship distributed family altar and tithing cards to be signed. These 18 churches reported last year 86 family altars. Ninety-five new ones were established in churches with a membership of 2,105. Counting four church members to the family, this means 526 families. The family altars in these churches were doubled, giving them one out of every three families who are now having family worship.

Some teams fail to function, some pastors failed to get his members out and the rain interfered with some meetings, yet in spite of all these difficulties the work done more than justifies the expense of time and labor of putting on these conferences, and no pastor was taken out of his pulpit on Sunday, for the work was done Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Mecklenburg Presbytery

		Family Altar Cards Signed.		Reported Last Yr.
Members.	Church	Old	New
125	Badin	2	-	-
183	Bethel	7	4	6
56	Cameronian	0	2	0
57	Cornelius	1	0	5
84	C. Steele Creek	6	5	6
284	Ellerbe Springs	4	11	0
244	Monroe	-	2	0
291	Huntersville	-	8	0
120	Mulberry	11	4	17
59	Mt. Carmel	2	6	0
127	McGee	2	5	17
22	Norman	-	12	0
30	Palestine	-	1	0
137	Pleasant Hill	1	5	10
310	Paw Creek	2	10	15
50	Roberdell	-	9	0
134	Rockingham	-	3	0
92	Thomasboro	5	8	10
2,105		43	95	86

NOTES ON THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

Rev. S. A. Ewart reported, Mulberry and McGee both subscribed more than their budget for both Benevolences and Current Expenses on Sunday afternoon. Mulberry reported, Membership, 120; Family Altars, 21; Tithers, 27. McGee: Membership, 127; Family Altars, 23, and Tithers, 31. There is no trouble getting a church to do its part if the people have family worship and are practicing the tithe.

Charlotte Second Church reported early Monday morning $7,000 more subscribed to Benevolences than at the final count last year. They expect to exceed the budget of $60,000.

Charlotte First Church reports that a larger number subscribed than ever before and they felt sure that the subscription would exceed their budget.

Rev. J. M. Walker, pastor Steele Creek Church, the Assembly's largest country church, reports Sunday's afternoon's subscriptions as having exceeded the Current Expense and Benevolent budgets, with some of their largest subscribers not yet having been seen.

A unique feature of the canvass of the Steele Creek congregation is the way that the report of the returns is made. The canvass is made immediately after the morning service with enough canvassers employed to cover the large territory in a reasonable time. By 6:00 o'clock the canvass is completed and the canvassers gather at the church, all armed with the signed cards. Here the ladies of the congregation come in for their part of the day's program, for they spread a fine supper for the canvassers, where under the happiest circumstances the reports can be heard. And that the reports were well worth hearing the above paragraph proves. This plan has been tried out two years in this congregation and it works so well other congregations might find it a good one to try.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Spartanburg—The second quarterly meeting of Home Missions Committee of Enoree Presbytery will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, S. C., Monday afternoon, April 2d at 6 o'clock.

Enoree Presbytery, Notice! Ministers and elders attending the meeting of Presbytery at Licksville, Tuesday, April 3d, will be served supper on church grounds the opening night at 6 o'clock. Entertainment Committee will meet the representatives at the church from five to six o'clock. Those coming by train should notify the committee who train to meet. Lickville Church is 17 miles south Greenville on the Augusta highway.
C. L. Woodside, A. W. McDarid, committee, Route 3, Pelzer, S. C.

NORTH CAROLINA

Greenville—Rev. W. S. Harden, of Columbia, S. C. has accepted a call to the church at Greenville, N. C., will begin his work April 1st.

Charlotte—Pegram Street Church has secured lot on which to locate a church and manse, corner the Plaza and Mecklenburg Avenue. Meanwhile the work continues at the old stand. Rev. H. M. Pressly is supplying this church while they are looking for a pastor.

Fayetteville Presbytery meets in regular session in the Highland Church, Fayetteville, N. C., Tuesday, April 17, 1923, at 8:00 o'clock p. m. All sessional reports should be sent to the stated clerk as soon after April 1st as possible, certainly by the 1st of April.
E. L. Siler, S. C.

The Regular Spring Session of Albemarle Presbytery will be held in Kinston, N. C., April 10th, 7 p. m. Blanks for reports have been carefully mailed all ministers and churches. If your set did not reach you let me know at once.
J. N. H. Summerell, S. C.
New Bern, N. C., March 17, 1923.

Lenoir-Concord Presbytery meets in regular session with this church, April 10th, at 7:30 p. m. Those coming on trains 15 and 21 can secure bus accommodations to Lenoir from Hickory. Trains 15 and 21 will be met at Morganton by jitney. The trains arriving at Hickory about noon make connection with the C. N. W. for Lenoir.
A. A. McLearn

Winston-Salem—It is learned that Dr. D. C. Lilly has been or will be extended a call to the pastorate of the Reynolda Presbyterian Church, in Winston-Salem a few miles west of the city, and that assurance has been given that he will accept. Dr. Lilly is now pastor of church at Lexington, Ky. He served the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church here as pastor twice and was universally popular with all denominations. He is generally regarded as one of the strongest pulpits of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Statesville—The congregation of the First Presbyterian Church will erect a new house of worship in near future. This was decided when a committee was authorized to proceed with securing subscriptions. The new edifice, which will include a Sunday School department, is estimated to cost from $150,000 to $200,000.

In the discussion of the proposed improvements, N. Mills, chairman of the finance committee, reported to the committee favored going ahead with the construction of the church at once, and that they considered the present a favorable time for the canvass. F. A. Sherrill, clerk of the session, offered a favorable report for officers.

Notice of Kings Mountain Presbytery We are making plans to entertain the Presbytery at Cherryville which meets Tuesday evening at 7:30, April 10th. Those who expect to attend are hereby requested to give notice to Mr. W. D. Browne, Cherryville, N. C. Do not fail to do that as we will have to provide homes for you. We will be glad to have you visit us during the Presbytery and will provide for you the best we have. Let us know whether you will come on train or automobile, we can provide for you accordingly.
A. T. Banks, Pastor

First Church, Charlotte—In the recent Missionary convention which brought a great blessing to the city of Charlotte, out of the 755 paid registered delegates, First Church had 128, 53 of which were women and men. This was brought about by the splendid work of the Men's Club and the Woman's Auxiliary.

The men of the church, under the guidance of the pastor, are actively preparing for the Every Member Canvass. A large number of men have met twice for support to go over the details of the canvass. At one of the meetings in a report made it was brought out that week-day activities of the church are becoming increasingly important. There were 126 meetings of various kinds in the church buildings during the months of November and December.

This church has a large and enthusiastic prayer meeting, at which prayer is continuously offered and the pastor teaches the Word of God.

Clarkton—This Church was fortunate in having an even dozen men attend the Laymen's Convention

Charlotte. Themes were assigned previous to their going. So great was the impression that the blessing reached not only those attending, but these in their reports occupied practically the hours for three preaching services, this to the edification and inspiration of the whole church.

We have just completed a Junior Training School, under the direction of our Synodical superintendent, Mr. C. T. Carr. The attendance was good and the interest splendid, and a good number took the examination looking to a certificate. This is a valuable piece of constructive work and Mr. Carr has proven himself the man for the work. We heartily commend this course to the churches.
W. H. G.

Mebane—The Young Men's Bible class recently presented to the church an individual communion service. The gift was greatly appreciated by the congregation. Among the other work of the class was beautifying the church yard which gives it a very attractive appearance.

The Woman's Auxiliary is closing a very successful year's work, having advanced along all lines of activities, one of the outstanding features being that all the members have taken some part in the work of the Auxiliary. During the Week of Prayer and Self-denial for Foreign Missions the women met each afternoon in the church parlor for the study of the suggested book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land." Each circle was responsible for a certain section of the book and the friendly rivalry made the study interesting, instructive and profitable as well as greatly enjoyed. Notwithstanding the inclement weather and sickness in the congregation, the faithful women of the church practised the spirit of self-denial, not for just one day but for each afternoon of the week by their regular attendance. The offering for foreign missions amounted to $209.

FLORIDA

DeFuniak Springs—On March 11th the session had the pleasure of receiving 31 new members. Of these one was on certificate, one on restatement of faith, and 29 were on profession of faith. Thirteen of these new members came from three of five afternoon Sunday Schools and 26 were baptized.

This goodly ingathering was largely the direct result of an excellent series of services conducted by Rev. J. McD. Lacy who for 15 days preached the pure Gospel most acceptably to our own people and to many others of the other churches in town. It was also the indirect result of the faithful seed-sowing of our Sunday School workers in the home church and in the mission points.

Brother Lacy will have a hearty welcome when he comes again into our community, and also at Palmer College where he also labored most faithfully morning after morning, speaking to the students who heard him gladly.

Daniel J. Currie.

LOUISIANA

New Orleans—The Napolean Avenue Church observed during the week beginning February 25th, the tenth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. Dr. U. D. Mooney.

The observance was in many ways noteworthy; the services not only appropriate but marked by such a pervading spirit of happiness and of sweet friendliness that made it seem like a real "homecoming week."

On Sunday morning a special sermon to the congregation was preached by the pastor not only the congregation being present but many friends from other churches. Sunday night there was another sermon by the pastor and a very lovely musical service. On Wednesday night was held a devotional and consecration service, the very appropriate sermon being preached by Rev. Dr. George Cornelison, of the First Church.

On Friday night there was a reception for the members of the congregation and their friends. This was largely an evening of reminiscence, of turning back the pages of Church history, with many beautiful tributes paid to those who labored in the Church's early days and whose lives are an inspiration to those who carry on their work for the Master. As a means of bringing the past more vividly before those of the present a radioticon was employed and very youthful portraits of the officers of the Church and of many members were shown. The pulpit Bible, the hymn book and a chair used when the church was organized were displayed and used this night. A sketch, and such a remarkable one—had been prepared by Elder E. S. Upton and was read by Deacon W. B. Terhune. It told of the establishment of the Church and of many things dear in its history. Organized in 1861, in the 62 years of its life there have only been four pastors besides Dr. Mooney. The first two, Rev. B. Wayne and Rev. R. Q. Mallard serving until their death. Mr. Upton who prepared the sketch has been an elder in the Church and clerk of the session for 41 years. In his sketch he paid tribute to the pastors and their wives, all of whom he had known. The two former pastors who are living sent letters of good wishes to both pastor and people. These are Rev. H. W. Burwell, of Dallas, Texas, and Rev. G. D. Booth, of Natches, Miss.

The first marriage in the former church building on Napolean Avenue took place in 1873. The bride of 50 years ago is Mrs. Charles Weiss, who has been for those years deeply interested in the women's work in the Church. Her son, Mr. Charles Weiss is treasurer of the Church and Dr. Mooney asked him to escort his mother to the platform. Alluding to her as the first bride of the Church he presented her with a beautiful bouquet of bride's roses. He spoke of how happy it was to have as a guest at such a time the daughter of the first pastor of the Church, Miss Mary Wayne, now of California, and to her he presented flowers. Mrs. W. K. Seago, president of the Woman's Auxiliary and teacher of the Woman's Bible class is a daughter of Rev. Dr. Mallard, second pastor of the Church, and to her he presented flowers from the Auxiliary and from the Bible class. On behalf of the congregation, he thanked Mr. Upton for his service for all these years and spoke of the affection in which he is held by all. To Mr. Upton too was given flowers.

Mr. George Frierson then presented Dr. Mooney with a purse of gold pieces, "giving," as he said "Gold to Gold." This gift was from all the men of the congregation. A Boy Scout Troop recently organized, yet with a membership of almost 35, has Dr. Mooney for chaplain, and has its meetings in the Sunday School room or on the Church lawn. Though numbering in its membership, boys of many faiths, the troop was present and under the direction of Scout Master Conrad Wehnes, who gave a drill.

The week was a happy one in the life of the Church and marks the beginning of a new year full of promise. A meeting with services twice a day begins on Sunday, March 11th. The preaching will be done by Dr. J. A. McSparran, pastor of the First Church of Birmingham, Ala.
F. G. S.

MISSISSIPPI

Jackson, Central Church—The pastor, session and members of the various organizations of Central Presbyterian Church recently assembled in joint session and formulated a council for the promotion of the work of the church. The activities of the various organizations of the church are to be correlated for the work of the entire church. The newly formed council is to be composed of the heads of the organizations of the church, viz: the Board of Deacons, the Sunday School, Auxiliary, Bible classes, Christian Endeavor, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Business Women's circles. The council is at all times to be subject to and work under the direction of the church session.

Council members are assisted by special committees selected from the membership of the Church at large.

Five committees have been appointed, designated: "Enlistment and training," "Spiritual Life," "Fellowship," "Stewardship," "Evangelism."

Some years ago Central Church was a mission of the First Presbyterian Church of Jackson, Miss.

Dr. R. E. Hough, the present pastor, is serving this church his seventh year, full time service. The membership is now more than 300. About 70 members have been added during the present church year. The eldership consists of nine members, the board of deacons of 11. Two of the elders are engaged in full time Christian work, one as Synodical superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's work, the other in evangelistic work.

The Sunday School is a good one, the Auxiliary and the various Young People's Societies are actively engaged.

The congregation has outgrown the building and expects to enter a splendid, new and larger building the first Sunday in April.

MISSOURI

First Church, St. Charles—A little more than two years ago H. L. Snead became pastor of this Church, these have been years in which the blessings of the Lord have been clearly manifested. The following are some of the visible results: 45 additions to the Church, about half of them on profession of their faith in Christ; the purchase of a splendid manse at a cost of more than $6000; Tuck pointing and re-finishing of the exterior of the church at a cost of $2,500; adding $600 to the pastor's salary, which was formerly paid by the Home Missions Committee and best of all a spirit of unity without which no Church can go forward.

For the past two weeks we had special services with Rev. William Colby as evangelist. Mr. Colby was received into the Presbytery of St. Louis two months ago, he has been preaching for eight years as an independent preacher. He is a man with a wonderful personality and his love for the Lord and experience as lawyer and supreme judge of the Cape Colony of South Africa fit him in a remarkable degree to make the Gospel real. At the same time Mr. Colby was received into the Presbytery a petition was presented to Presbytery to organize his congregation into a Presbyterian Church which was done about one month ago. The new Church is The Church of the Open Door, they have no building but rent a hall and pay all their expenses. Mr. Colby gave as his reason for coming into the Presbyterian Church, South, that it was the most Orthodox body of the Presbyterian Church.

VIRGINIA

Potomac Presbytery meets in the Central Church, Washington, D. C., April 17th next, at 8 p. m. Write Dr. Taylor if you are coming. Presbyterial Assessment, 22 1-2 cents per member.
Wm. H. Woods, S. C.

The Presbytery of Winchester will meet in the Presbyterian Church, Keyser, W. Va., on Tuesday, April 10, 1923, at 7:30 p. m.
Jos. A. McMurray, S. C.

Danville—The First Church, whose pulpit has been vacant since Dr. DuBose left recently has extended a call to Rev. Joseph Dunglinson, D.D., of Selma, Alabama.

Central Church, Bristol—At the congregational meeting held March 4, 1923, the following were elected elders: Mr. Frank Winston, Mr. R. W. Kelly, Mr. King Hagy, Mr. W. H. Robertson. At the same meeting the following were elected deacons: Mr. J. D. Ingham, Mr. D. W. Wagner, Mr. J. R. Neal, Mr. J. W. Saunders, Mr. H. N. Broyles, Mr. T. J. Burrow.
Cor.

Southwestern Presbyterian University—The first semester of the session 1922-23, which closed last month, has been, perhaps, the most successful in the history of the institution. The academic work of the students has been of the highest grade, and a splendid spirit obtains on the campus.

The Y. M. C. A. always an active and prominent institution here, is just closing a most successful year's work, under the leadership of Mr. D. L. O'Neal, president, T. B. West, vice-president, and N. S. McLean, secretary. The Y. M. C. A. has introduced the innovation of having on the campus each month some distinguished minister for two or more addresses. The visitor for January was Rev. H. H. Thompson, D.D., of Baton Rouge, La., a graduate of Southwestern of the class of 1909. Dr. Thompson delivered two splendid sermons in the college chapel.

Rev. John M. Vander Meulen, D.D., L.L.D., and the quartette of Louisville Theological Seminary were here for Sunday, March 4th; Dr. Vander Meulen remaining over for conferences all of March 5th. Dr. Vander Meulen spoke in the chapel on Sunday afternoon and again on Monday morning, and occupied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church both morning and evening on Sunday. He was heard at all services by large audiences. The singing of the seminary quartette was greatly enjoyed.

One of the most interesting services held here in years was the one held by the Y. M. C. A. on February 26th as a part of the observance of the day for schools and colleges. The sermon was preached by President Diehl, and a special feature was the large number of students taking an active part in conducting the worship and leading in prayer. The attendance on the part of members of the Y. M. C. A. was almost 100 per cent perfect.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Church of the Pilgrims—The fourth of March this year did not mark the inauguration of a President in Washington, but it was a day long to be remembered at the Church of the Pilgrims. Mr. Alfred D. Mason, of the Second Church, Memphis, Tenn., beloved leader among the men of the Southern Presbyterian Church, spent the day with us. He told fascinating missionary stories in the morning to the Sunday School and the Christian Endeavor Societies in the afternoon. He spoke at the morning service on Stewardship and in the evening on conditions in the Foreign Mission field.

On Saturday night he met the men of the Church in conference and pictured a meeting of the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions at Nashville.

On the same Sunday Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, beloved leader of the Auxiliary, was with us. In the afternoon she told in heart-stirring words of her visit to the mission stations in Mexico. We also had the happiness of having ladies from all our Churches for many miles around at this service.
Cor.

Central Church of Washington—At the night service, March 11th, Rev. Jas. P. Smith, of our Brazil mission made the address at the missionary praise service, giving a clear and forceful showing of the need of the Gospel in that land of benighted papists, in which this Church is supporting as missionary, Mrs. D. G. Armstrong. In spite of a dripping rain a good audience greeted him.

This Church had four representatives at the Laymen's Convention in Richmond. Our pastor, Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, was in Alexandria Sunday night, March 4th, assisting in the installation of Rev. E. M. Delaney; and his pulpit was supplied by Rev. T. B. Anderson, of Laurel, Md., who spoke on the text, "Speak to the children of Israel, that they go forward."
A. H.

PERSONALS

The Standard editor enjoyed a very pleasant chat, last week, with Dr. Melton Clark, of the Columbia Seminary. He was on his way to Davidson College to speak to the students on the Problem of the Life Work. He remained at Davidson from Wednesday to Sunday. He set an example which we hope other wandering ministers will follow. When you pass through Charlotte and have a few minutes to spare, pass the courtesies of the season with the Standard editor. His lathstring works from the outside.

We have read the history of the Presbyterian Church, Hickory, N. C., as set forth in a neat pamphlet, commemorating their semi-centennial. It shows a wonderful growth and indicates self-denial of a high order. At present it is enjoying great prosperity under Rev. E. M. Craig, D.D. It has been blessed with active, consecrated pastors—G. M. Gibbs, T. G. Thurston, C. A. Monroe, J. A. Ramsay, W. T. Matthews, C. W. Trawick, J. G. Garth, E. M. Craig.

The Every Member Canvass began last Sunday, March 18th. Reports are as yet incomplete, yet all report a great advance.

(Continued on page 10)

Educational

Davidson—The Queens College choral club gave an entertainment here in Shearer Hall Monday evening that is worthy of warm praise. It was a presentation of "Martha," an operetta arranged from the opera; Miss Elizabeth Starr, director and Miss Flora D. Brasington, piano. The costumes were rich and beautiful, the curtains and drapery of the stage were artistic to a degree. The very first notes that were sung by the young musical artists and their graceful movements upon the stage in acting the roles assumed evidenced careful and intelligent training and a capacity on the part of the actors to profit thereby. The choral club appeared here under the auspices of the Editorial staff and Business management of Quips and Cranks, the College Annual.

The Y. M. C. A. counts itself fortunate in having secured for its Life-Work Conference, being held here this week, Rev. Dr. Melton Clark, a member of the faculty of Columbia Theological Seminary, well known in North Carolina for his highly successful pastorate in Greensboro First Church some years ago and equally well known in South Carolina for his work in the pastorate in Charleston and recently in Columbia Seminary.

Dr. Clark, as is well known is a man of most pleasing presence and attractive manner, both in and out of the pulpit. His sermonic work is of a high order. In content and in delivery it appeals to any auditory and enlists attention. He speaks with fluency, rapidity and with force. Direct, pointed, gripping utterance, freedom of movement and action on the platform and driving power are all elements that enter in to make him a speaker of power.

The music is under the leadership of Mr. C. T. Carr, superintendent of Young People's Work in the Synod of North Carolina. As is known to all Mr. Carr has had much experience as a choir leader and as a singer in evangelistic and similar meetings, and is proving here at Davidson again a most useful factor in making the conference attractive and of real interest to the students.

Flora Macdonald College—Mr. C. J. Bosh, a student at Davidson College, spoke to the Y. W. C. A. on Sunday night, February 25th, and described in interesting manner conditions in his native country, Cuba.

Dr. J. Campbell White, noted layman and now connected with the White Bible School of New York, addressed the students and townspeople on Monday, February 26th in the college auditorium. Dr. White emphasized the place that religion occupies in the life of the individual and graphically described conditions as they now exist in non-Christian nations.

A students recital was held on last Friday with the following taking part. Misses Sara Jenkins, Georgia; Verna McQueen, South Carolina; Janie Buchanan, Japan; Sara Kay, Sara Hamilton, Mary Lane Brewer, Louise Bennett, Isabel Buie, Margaret Hansel, Murphy Hall, Harriett Ella McPhail, and Amanda Brown, North Carolina.

Dean C. G. Vardell, Jr., gave an organ recital at the Methodist Church in Hamlet on Monday, March 5th.

On March 16th, members of the faculty gave an informal concert together with a one-act play in the Antioch school auditorium. This was the first of a series of similar entertainments to be given under the direction of the Extension Committee of the College.

Flora Macdonald College entertained a distinguished visitor on March 15th in the person of the Very Reverend Albert Victor Baillie, Dean of Windsor, chaplain to the King of England. Dean Baillie, addressed the students and friends of the college at 8 p. m., in the auditorium. He paid a high tribute to the Scotch heroine, Flora Macdonald, emphasizing the splendid traits of character which she possessed. Speaking directly to the students, he stated that the greatest problem before the young womanhood of the western world was how to use the new freedom and independence and urged them to use it wisely and well. The theme of his address was the necessity for all nations to have a new understanding of the law of love. States and unions have got to recognize the same law of love and understanding, and this said the dean, is slowly coming to pass. America and England both with the same common language have got to know each other better than ever before—to understand each other and to work together in common co-operation to solve the great problems confronting the two nations. The dean of Windsor comes to America under the auspices of the English Speaking Union, its purpose being to weld together in closer relations the English speaking people. The distinguished churchman will visit Charleston, Charlotte, and Rock Hill before returning to England.

Dean Vardell will give an organ recital at Dunn on April 23d under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliaries of the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches.

The Y cabinet for 1923-24 is now training, and with the recently elected officers will be installed March 18th.

The Anna McQueen fund being raised under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. now amounts to $200. One of the biggest attractions secured in recent years by Flora Macdonald College is "The Chastening"—a modern miracle play in five acts, which is to appear here in the college auditorium on Monday, March 26th. It will be presented by an all-star cast consisting of Charles Rann Kennedy, Edith Wynne Mathison, and Margaret Gage.

News of the Week

With a new order for locomotives and cars costing $17,000,000 the expenditures of the Southern Railway Company for new equipment during the past two years total $30,000,000, the company having purchased $13,000,000 new equipment in 1922, according to an official announcement.

The windstorms of last week were very destructive in the West. Ohio, Tennessee and Kentucky suffered greatly. Two towns in Tennessee were completely wrecked and 30 lives lost. Twenty-five persons were reported killed at Pinson, Tenn., and five at Dyersburg.

A severe blizzard swept over eastern Nebraska and western Iowa. Omaha had the worst snowstorm in its history.

The Highway Commission proposes to construct 800 miles of roads in North Carolina during the year, of which 400 miles will be hard-surfaced road.

The wet element of the State find little comfort in the new liquor law. According to Section 10 the stuff can be legally kept in the house, but Sections 2 and 25 make the purchaser as guilty as the seller of whiskey.

The Turlington prohibition act, or so-called State Volstead act, "is an amendment of existing laws by way of revision thereof," and does not repeal the old quart law, the State contended in argument before the supreme court in the first test of the validity of indictments, prosecutions or judgments pending in the State courts under the old quart law upon the enactment of the Turlington law.

The suggestion that alcohol might eventually be utilized as a substitute for gasoline was characterized in a statement by Senator LaFollette, chairman of the Senate oil investigating committee, as bringing no comfort to motorists, unless there also is assurance that the "Standard Oil will not monopolize the patents and processes for the manufacture of alcohol for motor purposes."

Names of American railway systems will hereafter appear in the military designations of battalions of railway engineers now being recruited as a part of the organized reserves. Under the new plan employees of the various systems who join the battalions would answer a call to the colors under the command of men who directed their work in peace times, and the units would carry with them into the active army the teamwork developed during years of association and the names of the railways from which they came.

Holding that the J. Francois Kaufman painting, "Father Forgive Them for They Know Not What They Do," now hanging in the Society of Independence Artist's exhibition, outrages public decency, Magistrate Ryttenburg held Abraham Baylinson, secretary of the society, in $25 bail for trial. The painting depicts William Jennings Bryan spilling wine which Christ has just changed from water, while Andrew J. Volstead, author of the federal prohibition enforcement act, and William H. Anderson, New York superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, look on.

The North Carolina State Convention of the League of Women voters met last week in Charlotte, it being the largest gathering yet held. Hundreds of the most prominent women of the State were in attendance. Miss Louise Alexander, the retiring president, is a graduate of the old Presbyterian College for Women of this city.

The suicide of Charles F. Cramer, who resigned as general counsel of the veterans' bureau at the height of congressional attacks on that organization, is attributed by his associates to worry over criticism aimed at him, accentuated by the ill health of his father and by financial reverses.

Serious deficiencies of the United States Navy under the 5-5-3 ratio adopted by the Washington arms conference will be called to the attention of the Sixty-eighth Congress as soon as it convenes, it was learned officially at the navy department.

The Fordney-McCumber tariff act, described by Senator Simmons as the profiteers' own, has already commenced to reach into the pockets of the masses. Great quantities of sugar are coming in, and everybody must pay either $1.80 (the rate on Cuban sugar) or $2.25 per hundred pounds, the rate on all other. The duties on toys, cutlery, and other things that people must have are raking in the dough.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

VIRGINIA

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond—Rev. R. L. Kelly, D.D., of New York, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education, preached a suggestive sermon on the educational implications in the statement of Luke that Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man—intellectual, physical, religious and social development. Dr. Kelly, who makes official visits to all the theological schools in the United States, was warm in his praise of the unique site and outfit of our seminary, with its beautiful campus and its spacious athletic grounds and its substantial buildings.

Dr. Nelson M. Bell, of Tsing-Kiang-Pu, China, whose address at the Laymen's Convention recently held in Richmond was one of the outstanding features of that great gathering, was the speaker at the monthly public meeting of the Society of Missionary Inquiry last week and spoke interestingly on some practical features of a missionary's life.

Among the speakers to the Laymen's Convention were several of the alumni of the seminary, such as Rev. Dr. Layton Mauze, of Huntington; Rev. Motte Martin, of the Congo; Rev. J. W. Hassell, of Japan; Rev. James Porter Smith, of Brazil, and others. Mr. Smith, who is a professor in our theological seminary in Southern Brazil, and who was brought up in that country and is therefore thoroughly familiar with the dominant type of religion there, is now, by invitation of the faculty, giving our students a series of lectures on Romanism. They are so interesting and instructive that it is hoped he can be prevailed on to publish them.

Mr. William R. Miller, executive officer of the seminary, who, through the courtesy of Rear-Admiral Bristol, High Commissioner of the United States in Constantinople, and Commander-in-Chief of the United States Naval Forces in Near Eastern waters, was accorded last summer the privilege of going the round of the Black Sea on United States destroyers, and particularly of spending nine days in the port of Odessa, has a very interesting article in The Forum for March entitled, "A Paralyzed City." The article is short, readable and timely. It gives a vivid impression of the devastation wrought by Sovietism.

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond—The seminary takes pleasure in announcing that the James Sprunt lectures for the year 1923-24 will be given by Rev. James Black, pastor of Free St. George's, Edinburgh, Scotland. This famous church, which has had a unique succession of great preachers, including Candlish, Oswald Dykes, Alexander Whyte, Hugh Black and John Kelman, now has again the most brilliant preacher in Scotland. Union Seminary, which has been spoken of as the principal link between our Southern Presbyterian Church and the Churches of Europe and which has, in former years, brought to its service from abroad lecturers of extraordinary distinction, such as Prof. James Stalker, Sir Wm. Ramsay, Dr. James Orr, Dr. Chas. D'Aubigne, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, Principal Lang, father of the Archbishop of York, and others, is again peculiarly fortunate in securing the outstanding British preacher of the time for the next series of lectures on this noted foundation.

Mr. Black will give his lectures next October. There will be a great many ministers in Richmond at that time to hear him. The seminary is overflowing with students this year and has at present no space to offer ministerial visitors on special occasions, but it is hoped that some arrangements can be made by that time for the accommodation of all the ministers who will wish to be here. More specific announcements will be made later.

The catalog of the seminary for the current session has just appeared, and shows an enrollment for the year of 128 students. There has been an increase of 48 per cent in the attendance in the last three years. It is believed that nothing like this growth has ever been known in our Church before. Our people will be glad to hear of this great increase in the numbers of our candidates for the ministry.

CONCERNING DIMMERS

Some people let a little cloud put a dimmer on all their sunshine. But when those old Puritans exchanged their homes overseas for the poor comfort rocky New England had to offer them, they proved that they had another way of looking at things. Every now and then they had public thanksgivings to God for their blessings. They did more than count their blessings. They counted all the dangers and the troubles and the sickness that might have come to them, and did not. A year when disease swept their ranks, when Indians and mosquitoes and a plague of rattlesnakes had visited them, and a fine cargo had gone down at sea, they still were thankful for what was left to them, and they said so. They did not sit up nights to count the good things that passed them by, or to mourn over the easy times some other folks were having. Are you like the Pilgrims?—Kings' Treasuries.

March 21, 1923

CHILDREN

TWINS

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy 11 years old. I go to school at Kenly High School; I am in the sixth grade, and my teacher's name is Miss Frances Hales. I have four pets which are bantam chickens. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School every Sunday, my teacher's name is Miss Wyatt. I have two twin brothers and two twin sisters, a boy and a girl in each pair. I will close for this time in fear of the wastebasket. I am your friend,

Charles Alford,

Kenly, N. C.

WE ARE SORRY ABOUT THIS

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years of age. I go to school and am in the third grade. My teacher's name is Miss Bettie D. Kernodle, I like her fine. I've just lost my brother Ben. Influenza and pneumonia carried him away. He was six years old. I just have one sister now, her name is Ruth. My papa takes the Standard, and I enjoy reading the little letters. This is my fourth letter to you. I hope to see it in print soon. Your little friend,

Edith Wilson Walker,

Union Ridge, N. C.

BROTHER AT COLLEGE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl seven years old, and am in the second grade at school. My teacher's name is Miss Louise Garris and I like her fine. I go to Sunday School at Providence Church, and my Sunday School teacher's name is Miss Mamie Yandel. I have four brothers. My oldest brother is going to school at Chapel Hill, N. C. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your little friend,

Annie Dixon Caldwell,

Matthews, N. C.

MISSES HIS PLAYMATE

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy ten years old. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School. My teacher is Mrs. Hobgood; I like her very much. Rev. Charles a Lawrence is our pastor. He has a little boy just my size, but he is visiting his grandma up-North now. I will be glad when he comes home. I have three rabbits. They crawl up on my lap and eat from my hand. I think I will raise rabbits to sell.

Hoping that my letter will escape the wastebasket. Your friend,

Ivey Moore.

Farmville, N. C.

THREE LITTLE MAIDS

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl ten years old. I go to school at Grove Institute. My teacher's name is Mrs. G. T. Pace, I like her just fine. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School every Sunday I can. My Sunday School teacher's name is Mr. Nicholson. I like him fine. I joined the Presbyterian Church sometime ago. Our pastor is Rev. G. W. Oldham. We all like him very much. I have two little sisters, Reba and Eleanor. We all enjoy reading the letters. I hope my letter will not reach the wastebasket as this is my first attempt.

Your little friend,

Martha Pickett.

Kenansville, N. C.

MR. TUMBLE BUG'S HOUSE

There was a great excitement at the shore of a meadow pond one evening as the shadows began to creep and creep. A tumble bug who had been out at work all day returned to his home just in time to see it disappear in the hungry mouth of a crane!

"Hey, my house!" screamed the bug as loud as he was able. "You ate my house, you miserable thing!"

For answer the crane stared at the tumble bug, raised his wings and flew away. As he soared over the middle of the pond, however, he opened his wide mouth, snapped two jaws together hard and dropped the bug's house into the water.

"You mean thing!" Mr. Bug shouted, standing on his hind legs and waving his front ones at the long-legged bird soaring away.

Mr. Tumble Bug ran this way and that along the little beach, crying as he did so, that he was homeless. "A big crane picked up my house, then dropped it into the pond!" he said.

A knee-deep paused in his running along in the sand in search of food, to ask, "What kind of a house was yours, friend?"

"It was a shell house, Knee-deep. It was one I moved into about a month ago. Nobody owned it, I am sure, for nobody ever before tried to take it away from me."

"Well," thoughtfully answered the knee-deep, "you stick around somewhere, dear sir, and I'll see what can be done about this matter. Perhaps we can help you out."

"I am out now. I want to be in!" innocently cried the bug.

"All right. Stick around and listen for my call." With those words Mr. Knee-deep began running again and was soon out of sight and hearing.

"My nice house!" wailed the tumble bug.

The shadows grew longer and longer. Mr. Bug feared if he did not get some kind of shelter soon a night bird would get him for supper, so a great fear came to him. "I should have sought shelter and not have paid any attention to that snipe," the poor fellow muttered, his teeth chattering.

Just as the moon peeped up Mr. Knee-deep's voice was heard down the shore-line of the pond and Mr. Bug hurried thither to find the bird standing at the side of what appeared to be the very house that the crane ate, then dropped out of his mouth in the pond.

"Oh, you dear, good kind bird!" gleefully shouted Mr. Tumble Bug. "This is my house, but how you got it back out of the water is more than I know. Goody!"

Well, the happy bug started to crawl in, then he turned right back and crawled out again, an angry face following him out and an angry voice crying at him:

Bug—intruder—why is it that you walk into my home without so much as knocking? Get out of this!"

"I live in there!" Mr. Tumble Bug shouted excitedly as he ran a short distance to one side.

"You will live nowhere, if I ever catch you trying to sneak into my house again!" the voice of the occupant of the shell cried.

Mr. Knee-deep stood looking on. A smile spread over his face and then, speaking to Mr. Tumble Bug, he said: "Friend, I guess I made a mistake. I thought the shell house was vacant. I will hunt more and perhaps next time I'll be more successful!"

Now it happened that the house the bug claimed as his own in the first place was an empty snail shell. The crane started to eat it, thinking he was getting a live snail. Finding his mistake he spat it out and the shell dropped into the water of the pond. The other happened to be occupied by a snail who objected to the intruder and rightfully, too.

"Knee-deep!" chirped the long-legged bird running back and forth in the shallow water of the pond's shore. He was searching for a house for Mr. Bug and once he stepped into a hole in the bottom and fell clear to his neck, whereupon a frog seated on a chip floating on the water, cried, "That was more than knee-deep, fellow! Look out. I warn you there are a lot of holes in this pond."

"I seek a shell with a hole in it, to give to a bug friend of mine who is houseless this night," the bird said.

"If I may with courtesy ask, where is this bug?" the frog inquired.

"Show me an empty shell, that I may provide him a home, and I'll tell you he is in the shell," Mr. Knee-deep replied.

Mr. Frog blinked, seized a passing gnat with his long tongue and lunged off the chip. He was gone quite a while, so long that the bird was about to turn away from the spot, when he finally showed up bearing in his mouth a snail shell.

Said Mr. Frog, "This, I am sure, will fill the bill."

"It will!" a voice hoarsely cried from above and the same Mr. Crane who got the empty shell, swooped down, seized the one the frog held and was soon gone.

"It filled his bill, it seems!" the knee-deep remarked. "If we do not get a move on, somebody will fill another bill and Mr. Tumble Bug will not need any house at all"

Well, the shell was occupied, but with mud and sand, so that Mr. Crane did not want it. He was not a bad bird at heart and to make amends for losing the bug's former home, Mr. Crane dropped the shell the frog provided and with the help of Mr. Knee-deep cleaned it out, invited Mr. Tumble Bug to step inside and then rolled the object to a secure spot under some tree roots.

"That is a fine fellow—the frog," remarked the crane as he took leave of the knee-deep.

"Yes," was the answer, "I never had a very good opinion of greenbacks before, but it seems this one is really good at heart and is willing to help a fellow in distress."

"So long!" Mr. Crane piped, departing.

Mr. Knee-deep did not say, "So long," but muttered, "How long" and ran to hide behind some grass near the tree where the bug's house was placed.

He soon discovered how long it would take a frog to begin a search, for no sooner was the long-legged bird hidden than the greenback hopped to the shore and began a search for the bug's house, with the intention, of course, of gobbling up the occupant.

Mr. Knee-deep, when the frog approached the tuft of grass which hid him from view, shot out his beak, grabbed Mr. Frog by a leg and in an instant the woodland rang with the cries of the greenback who thought a snake had him.

"Help! Help!" shrieked the frog.

"I come!" the bird answered, flapping his wings hard and releasing the hold on the frog's leg.

"Snake!" gasped the hopper.

"Listen," Mr. Knee-deep solemnly said, "no snake had you, Frog. There is no snake hereabouts and, so far as you know, it was the tumble bug that pinched you. Will you hurt the frog, if he returns to the water?" the bird inquired, shouting under the tree roots at the bug.

"Oh, no; I will not!" readily came the answer.

"See?" Mr. Knee-deep asked.

"Good-night—farewell—adieu—ta, ta—so long—everything!" croaked Mr. Frog and soon he was out in the pond seated upon his chip. Blinking at the pale moon he muttered many a time, "No more house business for me. There was some trick about that affair, but I can't figure it out. If the tumble bug pinched my leg what would he have done, had I eaten him? Ouch!—Frank A. Second, in United Presbyterian.

THE FINDERS

"Thimble! Thimble! Who's got the thimble?" laughed grandmother. "That used to be a game when I was a girl. And now that I'm old I have to play it once more!"

Both of the children knew what that meant—grandmother's thimble was lost again!

"We'll look for it, grandmother," promised Frank.

"We'll find it for you," said Louise.

Then the search began. Frank went round with his hands in his pockets, looking for the thimble in a half-hearted way, but Louise got down on her knees and peered around the floor, she looked in the sewing basket on top of the dresser. Presently she arose with a pleased little cry, and hurried down stairs.

"Grandmother," she announced, "we've found your thimble again!"

Grandmother put it on her finger.

"Thank you, dears," she said. "Who found it this time?"

"Louise, of course," answered Frank. "She finds it every time. I don't see why. I looked for it too. It isn't fair."

"Frank," said grandmother, "are you sure that you looked for it as eagerly as Louise did? Are you sure?"

"I went in every room."

"Well, I'm going to hide a dime, and the one who finds it may keep it."

Grandmother called them when the coin was hidden. Frank took his hands out of his pockets and went down on all fours. Louise looked, too, but she did not look any more faithfully than Frank did. Finally he lifted up a vase and the shining dime was there.

"Thank you, grandmother!" he cried. "I found it this time."

He looked triumphantly over at Louise and held up the new dime.

"I found it! See?" he said.

"Why do you suppose it was?" asked grandmother.

"Why, I was lucky this time."

"No, indeed. Luck had nothing to do with it. You found it this time, Frank, because you had eyes to see."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean, dear, that you looked faithfully, with a resolve to find the dime, as Louise had looked each time for the thimble. That was how it was."

Frank looked down. Then he raised his eyes ashamed, but honest.

"This dime goes to Louise," he said—"I'll try to earn one next time."

"I have a dime for Louise, said grandmother. "That is yours. You looked faithfully for it."

"Just as I am going to look for the thimble next time," said Frank.—Herald and Presbyter.

"Why did they select the stork to couple with the doctor? Why not the eagle or the owl?"

"The stork is the bird with the biggest bill."—Kansas City Journal.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Bolton-Autry—Mr. H. M. Bolton and Miss Grace Autry, both of Fayetteville, N. C., were united in marriage at Godwin Presbyterian Church on March 11, 1923; Rev. T. C. Croker, officiating.

MRS. NETTIE McBRYDE McDIARMID

Resolutions of respect from the Ladies Auxiliary of Antioch Church.

Our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom and love has seen fit to call from this earthly life a faithful and beloved member of our society, Mrs. Nettie McBryde McDiarmid.

By her quiet, loving disposition, and gentle manner, ever willing to help in any work for the interest of her Church, she revealed a true Christian character. Be it resolved:

1st. That while we bow in humble submission to God's will, we express in these resolutions our sense of loss, both to the Church and community in the death of Mrs. McDiarmid.

2d. That we assure the bereaved family of our sincere sympathy and earnest prayers that the God of peace and comfort may be very near to them in their sorrow.

3d. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of the society as a memorial to our departed member; that a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be sent to the Presbyterian Standard for publication.

Mrs. M. B. McBryde.
Mrs. J. D. McLeod.
Mrs. Will Hair.

MRS. SARAH M. McNEILL

We, the members of the Ladies Auxiliary of Antioch Church do lovingly pay this tribute of respect to the memory of our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Sarah M. McNeill, who passed away December 25, 1922. Be it resolved:

1st. While the Auxiliary has suffered a great loss, and we miss her interest in our work, yet, we bow in submission to Him, who doeth all things well.

2d. That we assure the bereaved family that we share with them the sorrow of her death.

3d. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes to her memory, that a copy be sent to the family, and a copy to the Presbyterian Standard for publication.

Mrs. M. B. McBryde.
Mrs. J. D. McLeod.
Mrs. W. A. Hair.

THOMAS B. BARKER

Resolutions

Whereas, God has removed from our midst Mr. Thomas B. Barker bringing sadness to our neighborhood and grief to his family; therefore be it resolved:

1st. That the members of Stony Creek Church have lost a faithful member, who loved its cause and was ever ready to promote its works.

2d. That it was largely due to his active energy as treasurer that the Church met all its obligations and to his help and encouragement that we have been able to be of help to the Churches in their benevolent work.

3d. That in the various walks of life, as a neighbor, as a friend, in the Church, in the home he will be sadly missed by all those whose hearts he enriched and gladdened by his never failing interest and fidelity.

4th. That while we will miss his help and advise, that we bow, to the will of Him who does all things well, knowing that our loss is his gain; that our sympathy goes out to his wife, two sons and daughter; that a copy of these resolutions be sent them, and also that a copy be sent to the Presbyterian Standard and the Burlington News for publication.

N. C. Garrison.
J. T. Bowles.
R. L. Walker.
(Fellow Deacons.)

MISS LOULA CURRIE

On Saturday evening, March 10, 1923, as the shadows of night began to gather, God sent His death messenger and removed from our midst Miss Loula Currie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Currie. She was in her 37th year of age. Was a member of Antioch Presbyterian Church, a faithful member of the Woman's Auxiliary.

The funeral services were held at Antioch Sunday afternoon, conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. W. Goodman, assisted by her former pastor, Rev. V. R. Gaston, of Aberdeen. Her remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. She had been sick for many months and though a great sufferer she was always patient and cheerful in her disposition, her open face always greeted you with a smile, her life was not less beautiful than the abundance of rare flowers that covered the grave. As her pastor said, "she was truly the sunshine of her home," and no one will miss her so much as her aged parents, who with one brother and five sisters are left to mourn her death. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Antioch Church, cherish her memory and extend to the bereaved ones our deepest sympathy, assuring them that we are partakers with them in their sorrow.

2. That we shall miss not only her sunny presence and sweet companionship but the inspiration of her great faith.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be kept by the Auxiliary, a copy be sent the family, one to the Presbyterian Standard and Hoke County Journal.

Mrs. D. A. McGoogan,
Mrs. J. W. Hasty,
Miss Maggie McNeill, Committee.

EDWARD MONROE CORRELL

Born November 21, 1826, Rowan County, N. C.

Died February 21, 1923, Edna, Tex. A life of 96 years and three months of service—service of his country, his home and his Master. His grandfather served in the Revolutionary War, his father served in the War of 1812, and when his country called in '61, he was one of the first to volunteer, serving in Co. I, 7th N. C. Regiment, being placed under Stonewall Jackson's foot-cavalry."

Was a devout member of the Presbyterian faith, joining the Church in '46.

A just man, temperate, gentle, brave and absolutely refused to compromise with evil. A man who dared to do right.

GORDON WADDELL RAYNAL

Gordon Waddell Raynal, of Statesville, N. C., aged two years, five months, 21 days, died on February 19th 1923.

God gave a precious gift to us,
Two years, five months ago;
We called the babe Gordon Waddell,
and Oh, we loved him so!

He was a gentle quiet chap,
whose winsome sunny smile
And lisping words drew us to him,
And won us with sweet guile.

God took away the precious gift,
Ah! how could we foresee;
That one so lovely and so loved,
Must die?—Ah, me!—Ah, me!

Yet what God took was but His own,
Lent to us for a time;
And now our babe is safe with Christ,
At rest mid scenes sublime.

Sweet child we too will follow soon,
When we our tasks complete;—
And thy dear little hands shall guide
Us to the Saviour's feet!
—Addison.

THE POOR SLEEPER

One sign that a man has had insufficient sleep is to find himself drowsy at odd hours during the day. There are many simple precautions that a man so affected can practice. He will often find it a waste of time to lie in bed obstinately trying to get to sleep. The wise course for him is to rise, put on warm slippers and a dressing gown and read until his brain grows quiet. He may find that eating a light luncheon will help; one physician used to advise his patients either to heat a cup of milk and sip it slowly or to eat an apple slowly, skin and all.

Anyone who is subject to insomnia should make sure that when in bed his head shall be cool and his feet warm; he should use a hot-water bottle or a light pillow at the foot of the bed if he cannot keep his feet warm otherwise.

He should always make his evening meal nutritious but light, and if it proves to have been too light, supplement it with a little more light food at the end of the evening.

Much sleeplessness is only a form of indigestion. When a person falls asleep quickly, but wakes in an hour or so unmistakably suffering from undigested food, he should rise and slowly drink a cup of hot water in which a quarter of a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved.

Most poor sleepers are of nervous temperament and should practice self-control. They should not take frets and annoyances of the day to bed with them. To go to bed angry is the worst of all.—Youth's Companion.

NAMING A BABY IN BURMA

Fathers and mothers in Burma, says Mrs. O. W. Scott in an article "Child Life in Burma," brought out in pamphlet form by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, are fond of their children, and "baby" has a cradle of wood of wicker-work suspended from the ceiling. Sometimes a wide strip of cloth is hung up like a hammock, making a soft swing. Pretty soon "baby" must have a name and what it depends on the day of week in which he was born. Certain letters of the alphabet belong to each day, and his name must begin with one of the letters connected with his birthday.

When he is a month old a messenger bearing a cup of pickled tea is sent out to invite the friends to come to the "naming party." If one accepts, one eats a pinch of tea from the cup. Those who come bring presents of money, precious stones or jewels which are cast into a jar of water. Sometimes presents are only lent "to make a show." When the guests have enjoyed eating together, the baby is bathed in the jar containing the presents. Then one of the elders repeats a sort of blessing over him, asking for one hundred years of happiness. A circle of coins is arranged on a dish of rice, from which a cotton string extends to the baby's wrist and is tied around it. Then the name chosen by the parents is announced. If a boy it may be Ning Krang; if a girl, her name may be Mei Lone. There is no "family name" such as you have.

"That land is great which knows the Lord Whose songs are guided by His Word; Where justice rules twixt man and man, Where love controls in act and plan, Where, breathing in his native air, Each soul finds joy in praise and prayer, Thus may our country, good and great, Be God's delight—man's best estate."

STANDARD PIANO CLUB PROTECTS YOU

Thousands of people have pianos in their homes of which they are proud, and which are a source of pleasure for years, while many others buy guaranteed pianos on the installment plan only to find that in a year or two the tone is harsh and tin-panny, and the cabinet is cracked to pieces. When they try to get protection on their guarantee they find that the company has gone out of business. Then what good is the guarantee?

The Standard Piano Club absolutely protects you against this outrage. Arrangements have been made with Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, which makes piano buying safe and easy. Ludden & Bates have been selling pianos and player-pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. It is a reliable house whose guarantee means exactly what it says.

Why the Club Protects You

Each Club consists of 100 members who by buying together gain a much better price than any one purchaser can procure. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but by joining the Club you gain the benefit of car-load prices.

You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable Music House; a guarantee that covers the life of your piano against defective labor and material.

By joining the club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a big saving as compared with the ordinary installment prices which are much higher than cash prices.

You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation, for a new one or a player-piano.

Investigate this safe and easy way to buy your instrument. Address Ludden & Bates, Standard Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. They will send you the Club's Catalogue and furnish full particulars. (adv.)

Make the Canvass Complete

Many Fragments Remain—Many members have not been Canvassed—Many Churches have not completed the Canvass of March 18th.

It is important that every Church make a thorough job of it. If your Church could not make the Canvass at the fixed time DO SO AT THE EARLIEST POSSIBLE DATE. Announce results to the Congregation. If they fall short of the apportionment let them know it. Many will increase their pledges.

Conserve results by projecting the work of the Progressive Program on through the entire calendar year. Do not let the Canvass for Money be the stopping place.

LET THE SECRETARY OF STEWARDSHIP OF YOUR PRESBYTERY KNOW BY APRIL FIRST IF YOU HAVE MADE THE CANVASS AND WITH WHAT RESULTS. WE HAVE NEVER YET BEEN ABLE TO GO UP TO THE ASSEMBLY WITH A REPORT THAT WAS APPROXIMATELY CORRECT BECAUSE SO MANY CHURCHES WILL MAKE NO REPORT ON THEIR CANVASS.

Tell Your Church Treasurer

The Treasurers of all our Four Executive Committees instruct us to say to the Treasurers of all Churches that money to be counted in the Church year ending March 31st must be in the hands of the Treasurers of our Executive Committees by the close of the banking hours at NOON, MARCH 31st. The only possible exception that will be made whatever will be the use of a draft on a local Church Treasurer, authorized by him by telegram, but this telegram must be in the hands of Committee Treasurers by noon of the 31st so that the draft may clear through the bank of that day. In spite of this definite announcement many church treasurers will wait. Why?

Pay Up! Pay Up! Pay Up!

We urge all Church officers to make a diligent effort to collect all outstanding pledges for the year ending March 31st and close their records with everything mailed to the proper Beneficiaries promptly. Our Committees have spent thousands of dollars in interest on borrowed money because people have not paid their pledges and because church treasurers have held back funds that ought to have been remitted regularly and promptly. We can correct this evil. Let's do it!

Order Your Duplex Envelopes Now

Our Committee of Publication, Box 1176, Richmond, Va., is prepared to furnish stock form envelopes, like the cut herewith given, at the very low rate of 12 cents per package. They never get out of date. Good any time. If your church does not use them try them this year. You will need one package for each subscriber.

EXACT SIZE AND COPY OF STOCK FORM DUPLEX ENVELOPES

134	Jan 1st Sun	Jan 1st Sun	134
CURRENT EXPENSES Amt. _____ <small>Including Pastor's Salary</small>		BENEVOLENCES Amt. _____
Presbyterian Church NAME _____		Foreign Missions _____ Assembly's Home Missions (including Colored Evangelization) _____ Synodical Home Missions _____ Presbyterian Home Missions _____ Christian Education and Ministerial Relief _____ Assembly's Training School _____ S. S. Extension and Publication _____ Bible Cause _____
		NAME _____ <small>If your contribution is for a special cause, place a X mark in front of cause for which offering is made. In absence of other instructions the offering made in this envelope for Benevolences will be distributed on a percentage basis fixed by the Session.</small> THIS SIDE FOR OTHERS
THIS SIDE FOR OURSELVES

"GATHER UP THE FRAGMENTS THAT NOTHING BE WASTED"

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

• 410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

HOW SHIVAR MINERAL WATER RELIEVES RHEUMATISM

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 3B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____
Address _____
Shipping Point _____
(Please write distinctly.)

PREACHERS AND TEACHERS

To aid the dissemination of useful knowledge, I supply books, postpaid, to Clergymen and School Teachers at 10 per cent less than publishers' prices. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

BIBLE STUDENTS AND READERS

You will find "Dummelow's Bible Commentary" satisfyingly beneficial. It is authoritative, comprehensive, usable, both for the clergyman and lay reader. Sent postpaid on receipt of price, $3.00. Money refunded if you are not satisfied. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C. I promptly supply Any Book, postpaid at publishers price.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

6%

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.

P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

Story and Incident

THE MAGIC DOLL

By H. G. Duryee

It was true. Miss Wheeler was going home. Miss Wheeler with the happy eyes that made you less afraid, and the tender hands that held you without hurting no matter how thin you were, and the sweet voice that sounded so cheerful you just had to smile.

Yes, the dearest beloved of all the dearly loved teachers in Orphanage No. 3, Near East Relief was going home—back to America—and the word spread as wind runs through the grass.

In the bare whitewashed work-room where the older girls sat cross-legged on the floor making lace or doing pieces of drawn work, along the benches of the school-room where thin shoulders and dark heads clustered over a few books, in the courtyard where eager hands drew up pails of water from the stone-curbed well to feed the one languishing fig tree and the scrap of grass surrounding it, the news spread.

But especially at the end of the day, when court yard and school room were deserted and the outside gates were locked and on the flat roofed buildings the deep stars of the East looked down—especially then did the whispers run, before sleep overtook the whisperers. The land to which this dear teacher was going—to wonder about it, thrilled them as the telling of a tale.

"I have heard," murmured Nazira, who had come from a hill farm in Syria, "All are rich in that country, they have four wheels to their carts, and drive not oxen at all, but the swift horse."

"Or the darting wagon with neither oxen or horses," supplemented Marta, whose mother had been an Armenian of wealth, "I have seen."

"And they count not the raisins nor measure the bread."

"It has been told us none starve even if the maize fail!" "None sleep beside stone walls from which they may be driven and beaten."

"They may be Christians without fear."

There fell a silence after this so incredible fact, and then Repega, who had been in the orphanage long enough to have had the two grim spectres hunger and cruelty somewhat dimmed, renewed the speculations on a more cheerful note.

"We have seen from pictures in our books that they sit not on the floor but high up, with something for their backs as for those who are weak."

"'Tis a strange land," this from a voice that was growing drowsy, "but all there are kind. We have seen and we know."

That was how the whispered wonder always ended. No matter how wide the range of speculation, it always ended on that comforting statement—America was kind. Did not the piles of clothes in the store room from which were made warm coats and dresses tell them this, and the books where marvelous tales might be found when the strange words were made clear, and the bread and raisins and the shoes America sent them. Yes, America was kind.

And then one night Marta added an unexpected thrill.

"Listen," she whispered to those nearest her, I have a thought. I will send a gift to America. Our teacher will take it."

"A gift" incredulous voices whispered back. "What hast thou to give?"

"Doubters!" replied Marta scornfully, "I will find a gift. Wait and see."

Marta was a person of resource, they all knew. Had she not brought five of them over stony hills and dry river beds and past cruel enemies to this orphanage? If she said she would do it, she would.

And it was not long before she did. She had unravelled the cap which had been put on her cropped head in those first days when sick and sore and but a shadow of her sturdy self she had been taken care of in this refuge, and out of it had knit a square of lace. The cotton was coarse, but she had washed it snow white and fastened upon one corner a pink bow, her most valued possession.

"I go to give it," she said to the admiring group before whom she displayed it, and when she reached Miss Wheeler's desk she said proudly, "For America."

Miss Wheeler, looking at the flushed face and the square of lace needed no explanation. She understood. Her trunk was over full now, and upon what infinitesimal corner of America this offering could be bestowed she knew not. But take it she would, and, with a tug at the heart she did.

The next week saw a veritable epidemic of gifts. Caps disappeared wholesale and lace squares appeared as if by magic. Kindly Ankeen besieged in her store room at first for white pieces at last was besought for any kind of pieces. And in corners of school room and court yard and dormitory the moments that had been given to play saw brown fingers flying with knitting needles and tense faces bent eagerly over likely and unlikely pieces of work.

On the outskirts of all this activity hovered one little figure with sombre eyes and unsmiling face. She had been in the orphanage longer than many of the children but for a time it had seemed as if she never would

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Everlasting Memorials

The Pyramids and Sphinx of Egypt were old when Solomon brought the daughter of Pharaoh into the City of David. They stand today, as they have stood for 5000 years, silent but eloquent tributes to the strength of the material from which they were constructed—GRANITE. This is the most enduring stone known to man and is always used where lasting, weather-resisting qualities are required. Therefore it is the part of wisdom to specify

Blue OGLESBY Granite

TRADE MARK
The Standard Monumental Stone

Memorials cut from this everlasting stone are as perfect in later years as they were when first erected. Oglesby Granite is the stone of strength, durability and exquisite beauty.

Monumental Art—An artistic booklet illustrated with photographs of famous memorials cut in Oglesby Granite mailed free on request. It gives many splendid examples and suggestions for monumental designs and will solve the problem of stone selection. Write for your copy today.

Oglesby Granite Sales Company
Sales Division Oglesby Granite Enterprises

Elberton

Georgia

OUR LAST CALL

What We Had March 1 - - - - $ 699,126.00
 What We Must Have March 31 - - - - 1,362,488.00

IT DEPENDS ON YOU!

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

Nashville, Tennessee

respond to its life and kindness. With her face turned to the wall or hidden by her arm she had lived thru weeks of all kinds of effort to rouse her. At last there had been unpacked from some box or barrel a doll, and someone had thought to bring it to the child they called Mariam. It was a rag doll with one leg somewhat battered but comfortably large and with a painted face that had been smoothed into a most companionable smile. Whether it was that smile or whether something else about it touched a deep memory no one could say, but Mariam had reached out and taken the rag doll to her heart. It had been the beginning, and little by little she was learning to join in the play, the beloved and inevitable doll held close to her shoulder.

The other children were always kind to Mariam and now as they worked importantly, they showed her the result of their labors. For even a silent little one may admire.

One would say proudly, "See I give this."

And another, "My gift America will like I know."

And Mariam watched, none knowing if she really understood.

As each gift found its way to Miss Wheeler she reopened her trunk until with a sigh of mingled joy and weariness she wondered if it wouldn't be the part of wisdom to leave it open until the very last hour when it must be finally closed.

That last hour was drawing rapidly near, and one play-time as the girls, looking wistfully at her, were filing out she realized afresh how she should miss them all, how often her thoughts would turn toward them and she would wonder what life was giving them, what was their fate—for she wasn't coming back. She had volunteered for a year in that terrible war-time need and she had stayed five. She was very tired and there were the home folks.

She became aware of a break in the line and saw a small figure detach itself and with drooping head and reluctant feet come toward her. It was Mariam and when she was quite close to the platform on which Miss Wheeler stood, she raised an arm as if against her will. From the gripping hand dragged the rag doll.

"Mariam give, she whispered and stood a rigid picture of woe.

For a moment Miss Wheeler herself stood rigid in a pitiful silence. Another gift and such a one!

The marching girls had stopped. Murmured reproofs agitated them, and two or three started forth as if to draw Mariam back.

But Miss Wheeler held up an arresting hand. She didn't speak. She couldn't. She was asking herself a question—could she take this child's all—could she even for America? And then as she stood there the school room seemed to melt away and in its place she saw tree-shaded streets and white-spired churches and going happily along in chattering groups, children—children safe and unafraid. It was as if she asked her question of them, and then suddenly a light fell across her face. The answer had come.

She stooped down and took the rag doll gently from the sagging hold.

"Listen, dear," she said, turning Mariam's face so that she could look into the sombre eyes, "It will be a magic doll. It will go to America and it will tell the story of one little girl who gave the dearest thing she had and it will send bread and raisins and dresses and shoes and then—then it will come back! Do you understand, Mariam, it will come back!"

The tragic look in the dark eyes lighted. "It would come back!" Yes, she understood that, and the lips that had been quivering opened with what was almost a smile.

"She will come back," she whispered, "Mariam will wait" and there was, yes, there was a tiny smile of hope.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.

Salisbury, N. C.

Anything in...
CEMETERY WORK

Satisfaction our Motto
A card will bring full information.

SORES

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds Ideal Surroundings
Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address

Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D. Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad

BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen	Ar.	45	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	49	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	s 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	s 3:05 pm	s 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
8:00 pm	9:55 am	9:53 am	19	Rae ford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	s 1:25 pm
f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	25	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	s 12:55 pm
f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	s 12:33 pm
f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
11:30 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	f 4:45 pm	f 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

Influenza

Physicians advise keeping the bowels open as a safeguard against Grippe or Influenza.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

When the last girl had filed out Miss Wheeler looked down on the rag doll's smiling countenance.

"You will work magic," she told her severely, "or I'll know the reason why. And when you come back," she hesitated a moment and then concluded softly, "When you come back I'm coming with you."

Foote's Sketches of North Carolina

Published 1848. Second edition exact reprint of the first. Thoroughly reliable. Invaluable to those interested in early history of Presbyterian Church and older families of the State. $2.25—Postpaid. REPRINT COMPANY, DUNN, N.C.

Sparkles

Seven-year-old Mary had been repeatedly cautioned against handling any object that might contain germs.

"Mother," she said, "I shall never play with my puppy any more, because he has germs on him."

"Oh no!" replied the mother. "There are no germs on your puppy."

"Yes, there are," insisted the child "I saw one hop."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Willing Helper

Michigan exchange—A man near here never allows his wife to do more than half the work. She puts up all the canned fruit in the summer and he puts it down in the winter.

"Mamma, why has papa no hair?" "Because he thinks so much, my dear."

"But why have you so much?" "Because—Oh, go away, and do your lessons, you naughty boy."—Southern California Trojan.

In New York a man unmistakably of country origin was knocked down in the street by an automobile. A crowd instantly surrounded him.

"Are you hurt, my friend?" asked a kindly man who assisted the stranger to arise.

"Well," came the cautious reply, "it ain't done me no good."

An eminent Scottish preacher was trying to explain to an old lady the meaning of the Scriptural expression, "Take up thy bed and walk." He informed her that the bed was simply a mat or rug easily taken up and carried away.

"Na, na," was her reply; "I canna believe that. The bed was a regular four-poster. There would be no miracle in walking away wi' a bit o' mat or rug on your back."—Presbyterian Witness.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Five Makes of Pianos Comprise THE STIEFF LINE:

- Stieff
- Shaw
- Bennett-Bretz
- Davies & Sons
- Leslie Bros.

There is a piano to fit every purse. $340.00 up. Payments surprisingly small. Write for catalogue.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

GARDEN BOUNTIFUL
Collection $1.00 PREPAID

- 1 pkt. Beans, Stringless, Green Pod
- 1 pkt. Beet, Detroit Dark Red
- 1 pkt. Beans, Williams' Stringless Wax
- 1 pkt. Carrot, Danvers' Half Long
- 1 pkt. Corn, Country Gentleman
- 1 pkt. Cucumber, Peerless
- 1 pkt. Hanover Salad
- 1 pkt. Lettuce, Big Boston
- 1 pkt. Parsley, Curled
- 1 pkt. Peas, Early
- 1 pkt. Medium Radish, Scarlet Turnip, White Top
- 1 oz. Spinach, Savoy
- 1 pkt. Turnip, White Globa
- 1 pkt. Tomato, Earliana

Our "GARDEN GUIDE" will be included with above collection or mailed free on request.

WILLIAMS SEED CO.
DEPT M NORFOLK, VA.

NEW CHURCH DESIGNS
"HIGHEST EFFICIENCY YET ATTAINED"
INDORSED BY CHURCH AUTHORITIES

WRITE US YOUR NEEDS

R. H. HUNT CO. ARCHITECTS
CHATTANOOGA TENN DALLAS TEX

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

WE HANDLE

- HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
- PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS
IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES 14 - 16 - 18 years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres. E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

SANITARY FOOD AND MILK

MEANS HEALTHY HAPPY CHILDREN

Two car loads of Refrigerators—“Leonard Cleanable” and “White Mountain”—have just arrived. Prices from $18.50 to $200. We cannot fail to please you in a Refrigerator. Write us for a “Leonard Booklet.”

We operate our own out-of-town delivery truck service.

W. T. McCoy & CO.
211 South Tryon St. Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representative of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., MARCH 28, 1923

No. 13

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid. When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent. News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date. Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
The Non de Plume	1
Home Work in Arkansas	1
A Wise Law	1
The Bible Schools	2
The Evolution of a College	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Salvation by Faith or "Slavation" by Works —By Wm. C. Robinson, A.M., B.D., Th.M.	3
Mission Court	3
Keeping the Records Straight—By Rev. Albert S. Johnson, D.D.	3
The National Christian Council—By Rev. J. Mercer Blain, D.D.	4, 5
An Error in Math—By Rev. Walter L. Lingle, D.D.	5
Dr. Robert Dick Wilson to Visit the Orient	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth ...	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

THE NON DE PLUME

WE can think of several reasons why a writer might use a non de plume. The first reason that occurs is modesty. It is altogether conceivable that a writer might be so shy and reserved, so modest and self-distrustful as to shrink from having his name appear in print. He might say to himself, "Who am I to be thrusting myself before the public. While few would recognize my name, those who did would laugh at my presumption?" We can conceive of such modesty, but we do not often meet with it in real life. Most writers, especially young writers, love to see their name in print. They watch with eager impatience to see their article appear. It is the first thing they read when the paper appears. They are apt to think pretty well of it, for it looks better in print than it did in manuscript. As a rule, a writer is rather proud of the child of his brain, and is perfectly willing for it to be known as his child. He often sees more to admire than any one else sees. Like the mother of a little tow-headed, pewter-eyed, freckle-faced child. You are tempted to feel sorry for her. But she will take the little lump of ugliness in her arms, hug it, and kiss it, and insist that it is the dearest, sweetest and prettiest child in the world.

Another reason for the non de plume is to excite curiosity. The writer will set people to guessing. This will give an added zest. If he has done something real clever, the readers will wonder who the author can be. They will create something of a sensation by mentioning the names of different men of distinction who might have written. It is easy to believe that the unknown author, veiled behind his non de plume, would derive peculiar pleasure from the discussion which he had started. Think of what it meant to Walter Scott to have all the literary lights of Great Britain racking their brains to discover the author of the Waverly Novels. He kept them guessing as long as he could. The sensation grew with the appearance of each new novel. They were read with the greater avidity because of the mystery shrouding their authorship. They got more advertising than they otherwise would have gotten. Everybody who felt capable of forming an opinion ventured into print with a guess. Sir Walter was having the time of his life keeping the public curiosity excited, and all the literary wits keyed to the highest tension in trying to uncover his secret. Of course, the writing must have decided merit if the non de plume is to arouse curiosity. Otherwise, the readers will not pause to inquire who is behind the mask.

Another reason, and perhaps the most common one, is cowardice. The writer is not willing to face the responsibility of his words. Sometimes he is not sure of his ground. He makes statements that he cannot verify. "He that pleadeth his cause first seemeth just. But his neighbor cometh and searcheth him out." The non de plume is used to avoid any possible embarrassment which might arise from this searching process. More often when a writer wishes to shirk responsibility, it is not for what he says but for the way he says it. He injects a venom in his words that he knows would do him no credit if the authorship were known. He relieves his system of bile, and he is not anxious that the public should know whose bile it is. Bile is never admirable, and while one may find relief in voiding it, he does not care to be caught in the act. The most famous instance of the use of a non de plume to escape the consequence of scurrilous abuse is the Letters of Junius. It is a century and a half since that remarkable genius dipped his pen in gall to torture the king and ministry of England. For three years he continued his cruel work. All the officials of the government suffered, some of them excruciatingly. They were like men exposed to poisoned arrows fired from ambush. They never knew when the next volley would be discharged. They could not escape beyond the range of these dreadful weapons nor was there any coat of mail that could afford protection. They writhed under their wrangling wounds, and poured forth their bitter complaints, but they were helpless. They were never able to uncover their tormenter. To this day the veil has never been lifted. Junius is still a name of mystery, and the synonym of all that is most fiendish in the way of concealed assaults on character.

When a writer deliberately puts a sting in his words with the sole design of irritating or wounding some one whose only offense is difference of opinion, and then hides behind a non de plume, he does it because he knows that he is earning the scorn of good men. It is no sin for persons to differ in opinions, to cherish and express opposing convictions. To punish one for such difference, by the use of intemperate or vituperative language, is to put a blot on one's own character. To do this from ambush is to aggravate the sin; it is to be guilty of moral cowardice.

We conclude that a non de plume may be an innocent disguise, but it is like the hooded robes of the Ku Klux Klan, it is liable to great abuse.

HOME WORK IN ARKANSAS

There is no state in the South that has greater promise of development than Arkansas. For years the state was only associated with malaria and swamps, and few knew of its real attractions.

During the Chicago Exposition, back in the nineties, the Arkansas exhibit of grain and fruits was a revelation to the country, and since then her material development has been wonderful.

Rev. Dr. W. Moore Scott is Superintendent of Home Missions for the Synod, and he seems to be doing his work with the same energy and ability that ever characterizes his efforts. He reports that for the last 20 years the state has gained 34 per cent in population, while our Church has gained in the same time 140 per cent. Of the 22,000 Presbyterians in Arkansas, 60 per cent belong to our Church, 30 per cent to the Northern Presbyterian Church, and 10 per cent to the Associate Reformed, Cumberland, and United Presbyterians.

In analyzing the contributions to Home Missions from the various churches, we find that the largest church in the Synod, which has a total membership of 1,017, gave only $77.26 to this cause. It is evident from a study of the amounts given per capita that the churches have not yet grasped the wonderful field opened to them. A study of Dr. J. C. Williams' annual report shows, however, that they are making progress, and that the real awakening will soon come. He and Dr. Scott are evidently planning in a systematic way that is bound to tell upon the future growth of this promising Home Mission field.

A state, as rich in soil and minerals as Arkansas, is bound to be crowded some day with an enterprising population. The church that is ready to receive them will be the church that will secure them.

A WISE LAW

The recent Legislature of this State added to our laws many thousand new ones, according to the secular press. As law-abiding citizens, the multiplicity of law does not directly concern us. We only fear lest the number of them and the carelessness with which they are made and executed, may take from them the respect that should be attached to all laws.

There was one, however, that deserves the special commendation of all who desire the welfare of our State. Mr. Z. V. Turlington, an elder of the Presbyterian Church of Mooresville, N. C., and one of the most useful men in our Synod, is the author of the addition to the State prohibition law, by which the buyer of whiskey is deemed equally criminal with the seller.

Under the law as it stood the rich man could tempt the poor white man or negro to sell him whiskey; yet when the sale was found out, the rich buyer went free, while the seller could be sent to the roads.

We have in mind one of many instances in this and other cities, where a poor man in his desire for gain brought whiskey to the home of one of the leading business men of the city. The seller was caught, the liquor was supposed to be poured out, though oftentimes such is a rash supposition, but the rich man's name was suppressed by the daily papers, and even his street name was mentioned only by one paper, and that only once.

It is such discrimination in favor of the rich that is embittering the poor, and making the ground ready for a harvest of socialism and revolution.

Under the new law, both are to be treated alike, and the seller can be forced to tell to whom he has sold.

THE BIBLE SCHOOLS

They are springing up, North and South. There is the Moody Bible School, that is conducted by Rev. W. W. White in New York City, the School in Richmond, Va., and the one in Louisville, Ky. There are others in connection with other denominations.

There was a time when such schools were unknown, but their existence at the present time is a symptom of some great need among Christians.

Another noteworthy fact is that these schools are growing larger each year.

The question that arises in the minds of observing Christians is what does this state of affairs indicate?

He has been a poor student of Church and Christian life who does not see in this innovation a symptom of some disorder in the religious life of the Church. The great majority of professing Christians love the old Book as God's Word, and have no difficulty in accepting it as inspired by the Holy Spirit. They do not bother themselves over the criticisms that those who are wise above what is written make. When they find that the influence of such critics has affected so many of our seminaries, they call for teachers who still believe in the old doctrines and revere the old Book in its entirety.

It is a comfort to us of the Southern Church that thus far no such charges have been brought against any of our seminaries.

Unfortunately those outside of our bounds and those of other denominations know little of our seminaries, and because they seek soundness in doctrinal views are crowding to the Bible schools.

Of course we know that such is not the reason why many do attend. There are many, we acknowledge, who, by reason of age and also of early training, cannot spare the time to fit themselves to meet the requirements of the regular theological seminary. They therefore seek schools where the Bible only is taught.

After allowing for all this, we are confident that the crowded Bible schools owe their present popularity to the conviction on the part of believers that only at such schools can they find sound doctrine taught.

THE EVOLUTION OF A COLLEGE

For years the Mary Baldwin Seminary, of Staunton, Va., has been the pride of the Old Dominion. From its walls many generations of women have gone to carry its high ideals into the home life of the South.

Recently it has been placed under the control of the Synod of Virginia, and plans have been formulated to change it into a college. On January 16th the board in charge of the work held a long session. The new charter, received a few weeks ago, was read and accepted and by the terms of the charter the Mary Baldwin Seminary property passes to the board appointed by the Synod of Virginia. Dr. A. M. Frazer was elected president of the new board and Judge J. M. Quarles was made its secretary.

The principal, business manager and treasurer of the seminary each made a full report. These showed the condition of the academic work and social life of the school, business methods, and the condition of finances.

Dr. Fraser was then elected president pro-tem of the college, with Miss Marianna P. Higgins as principal; W. W. King, as business manager, and Hon. W. H. Landes as treasurer. An executive committee was appointed to conduct the school during the intervals between meetings of the board. Committees were also appointed on the framing of by-laws, the form of the future catalog, on curriculum, and on a site for the college plant.

The charter provides not only that there be a Mary Baldwin College but also a Mary Baldwin Seminary, these two institutions to be in separate plants as soon as possible.

The existing scholarships will be continued in the college. The college next session will have a full college course and college faculty.

The Synod of North Carolina wishes this new college God-speed.

Devotional

"THE MOST BEAUTIFUL VERSE IN THE NEW TESTAMENT"

What is it? Dr. John A. Hutton, of Glasgow, whose writings have attracted wide attention, makes answer in an article in the British Weekly, as follows: "If I were asked to quote the most beautiful short saying in Holy Scripture, I should hesitate between two—one in the New Testament and one in the Old. In the Old Testament, my choice would be: 'The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms.' In the New Testament I should offer I John 4:16, not as translated in the Authorized Version indeed, but as it is translated in Weymouth, and as it always should have been translated: 'As for us, we know the love which God has for us, and we confide in it.' There you have the substance of all Christian theology, and the substance in the same breath of all Christian ethics. It is a saying compact of thought and philosophy and faith, all cast in a form of beauty so that the very sound of it augments the sense."

RESTING-PLACE FOR THE SOUL

Years ago there came to the late Canon Hoare, of Tunbridge Wells, a rich man, then in his old age, to arrange with him about his burial place, and after they had gone carefully over the church-yard, and had chosen the spot where he was to lie, Canon Hoare turned to him and said, "You have chosen a resting-place for your body, but have you yet found a resting-place for your soul?" Turning around and looking him full in the face, the old man answered: "You are the first clergyman who ever asked me that question." He went with Canon Hoare into his study, and, to make a long story short, he gave his heart to Christ, and found his resting-place, and in Canon Hoare's study to the day of his death hung a well-known picture representing the saving of a life from a wreck. It was the gift of the grateful man, who had found a resting-place not only for his body but for his soul. Ask yourself the question now, before you turn to another page, "Have I found a resting-place for my soul?"

TREMBLING SAINTS

In the early days of emigration to the West a traveler once came, for the first time in his life, to the banks of the mighty Mississippi. There was no bridge. He must cross. It was early winter, and the surface of the mighty river was sheeted with ice. He knew nothing of its thickness, however, and feared to trust himself to it. He hesitated long, but night was coming on, and he must reach the other shore. At length, with many fears, and infinite caution, he crept out on his hands and knees, thinking thus to distribute his weight as much as possible, and trembling with every sound. When he had gone in this way painfully half way over he heard a sound of singing behind him. There in the dusk was a colored man driving a four-horse load of coal across upon the ice and singing as he went! Many a Christian creeps tremblingly out upon God's promises where another, stronger in faith, goes singing through life upheld by the same word. "Have faith in God." "Whoso putteth his trust in Jehovah shall be saved."—The Expositor.

"THE DESIRE OF THINE EYES"

Ezekiel 24:15-18

(This poem was sent Dr. R. C. Reed in his recent bereavement.—Ed.)

"But God who willed
That I should tarry here a little while
In the dim outer courts, and speak His word
To many people, sent me that one star
Of earthly love, that I might be content
To stay awhile; that I might have one sweet
Tie to earth, to hold my eager soul
A little from the heavenly things which wooed
With burning glances, till they well-nigh drew
My spirit through the Gates.

And she was my delight
And comfort for a while, a little while,
Until God called her. He met me in the way,
And thus He smote me: "Son of man, behold,
I take from thee this day thine only one,
Thine heart's desire."

I knew that He Would do as He had said, and take from me
My joy that day. And every pleasant look
Of earth and sky did smite me; ah! how soon
That gentle face would lie close hid from me
By the soft smiling earth, and her fair soul
Walk forth in white beyond that smiling sky
Where I could never see her:—Gentle face
And gentle soul both hidden, and my life
Made desolate.

And She had sung to me
Her last sweet song,—for she was strangely calm
And lifted up. She did not weep, nor lean
On me, as she had done at other times,
For strength to bear His will; she seemed to lean
Immediately upon the arm of God,
And need no other aid. But in that Hour
MY strength gave way; the gentle voice that sang
Its last, last song so sweetly, seemed to steal
My manhood from me; and the wistful smile
That strove to comfort me,—the smile so soon
To be eclipsed in death,—did pierce my soul
As with a sword.

"It is not hard to die,"
She said, with that fair smile, "for God's sweet will
Makes bitter things most sweet. In my bright youth
He calls me to His side. It is not hard
To go to Him," But in my haste I said,
With aching heart,— THEE—
I know it well. The captive-exile hastes
To leave the exile land. But it is hard
To stay behind alone, when our one star
Is quenched forever. Morn or eve shall bring
No word of thee to me, and days and nights
Shall make one empty night."
By my ruined home
I stand to speak for God, and stretch my hands,
Emptied of their treasure, in God's name
To all the people. And the Lord alone
Himself doth comfort me.

And when at length
The evening-time of my long day shall come,
And God shall give me leave to lay aside
The Prophet's mournful mantle, for the robe
Of joy and light,—when at His Gate I find
An everlasting entrance, there my love
Shall meet me smiling. After my long day
Of storm and conflict, I shall feel once more
The joy of finding her awaiting me
At eventide, and drawing me to rest
With her in God. Then shall I hear at length
Her sweet voice singing to the harps of gold,
And see her crowned with joy. And He 'of whom
She spake to me that night, the Son of God,
The saving King of Israel, shall dwell
With us, and be our God."

SALVATION BY FAITH OR "SLAVATION" BY WORKS

By Wm. C. Robinson, A.M., B.D., Th.M.

After turning over for some time and with some care the message of Dr. H. E. Fosdick's "Shall the Fundamentals Win" and the discussion that has arisen concerning it, I believe that the key to the matter is the old contest between two diametrically opposed plans of salvation. In his concluding remarks Dr. Fosdick first, negatively, defines the way of salvation by saying that the points at issue, to-wit, certain special miracles, the trustworthiness of Scripture, the atonement, the second coming of Christ, are not points upon which depends the salvation of human souls; and then positively he defines the way of salvation, "the one thing that does matter," as "that men in their personal lives and social relationships should know Jesus Christ." These statements together furnish a specific, dogmatic assertion of the way of salvation. An analysis of that plan of salvation shows that it removes from things needful for salvation two of the greatest proofs given to rational human beings for believing in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of sinners, i. e., special miracles and true Scripture. Dr. Patton used to narrow down the evidences of Christianity to these outstanding proofs, the resurrection of Christ, the conversion of Paul, and the Old Testament picture of the Messiah. The first two are special miracles; the three depend on the truth of Scripture. The great doctrine of the Person of Christ is ratified to us by two special miracles—the Virgin Birth evidences the Incarnation of God; the Resurrection marks out the Son of Man as God. Jesus constantly referred to the works which the Father had given Him to do—special miracles—as His credentials. Both Luke and John testify that their gospels are written to assure readers of trustworthy matters; while John in his epistle makes the acceptance of the truth of what he writes essential for entrance into fellowship with Christians, with God and with Christ. Dr. Fosdick, then, in brushing aside miracles and the truth of Scripture the strongest, the most clear-cut, and pragmatically, the most useful evidences which lead men to trust in Jesus Christ must esteem it a matter of little moment whether men think aught of the Person of Christ or whether they see in Him enough to cause them to entrust themselves to Him.

Examining the other matters, on which he says the salvation of human souls does not depend, we find that they are presented in the New Testament as the climax of Christ's saving work. The work of Christ in satisfying the law in its penalty and precept must be reckoned as covering His whole earthly life. But from both the active and passive standpoints the atoning death is the climax—He was obedient as far as death, and by that one act of obedience the many are made righteous; and He redeemed us from the curse of the law by being made a curse for us when He hung on the accursed tree. The New Testament writers—Matthew, Paul, John, Peter, author of Hebrews—and the Church holds that our salvation does depend on what Christ has done for us by His life and, particularly, by His atoning death. Christ's work in us begins with regeneration, continues through sanctification and glorification; but the end and climax of that work is found in the coming of Christ a second time apart from sin unto salvation. Then we are to be delivered from the bondage of corruption, our bodies redeemed and made like unto His glorious body, and we, ourselves, are to be like Him when we see Him as He is. By this blessed hope we are saved and in it we purify ourselves. Thus as to the last two matters we see that Dr. Fosdick denies as essential to the saving of human souls those things in which the saving work of Christ is found for us—the vicarious atonement—and in us—the second coming—reach their climax. The summation of the way of salvation as Dr. Fosdick treats it, negatively is that those things which furnish evidence to rational beings of the true nature and glory of the Person of Christ, and those things in which His saving work centers are not essential to salvation. The obvious inference from this negative treatment of the way of salvation is that faith in the Person and Work of Christ is not necessary for salvation—that we are not saved by faith in Him, in what He has done, and in what He is doing.

Looking at what Dr. Fosdick finds does matter more than anything else in the world, we find the essential for salvation transferred from Christ to us. The essential is in us. It is not a question of who He is or what He has done, but of what we are, of our personal lives and of our social relationships. It is not accepting Christ and His work, it is not God's accepting us for Christ's sake, it is not His imputing the righteousness and satisfaction of Christ to us, it is not our receiving and resting on Him and His righteousness by faith; it is our characters (compare Grant's "Perfected Personality"), our service, our knowing (having fellowship with and likeness to) Jesus Christ in our personal lives and social relationships. Thus our souls are made to depend for their salvation on ourselves—we rest on ourselves to save ourselves—we lift ourselves by our boot-straps to heaven.

Contributed

Now the obvious question arises why call this liberalism when it is the putting of that yoke on our shoulders which Peter affirmed "neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?" Why call it modernism when Paul met it—salvation by works—in the Galatian Church before the first century had half closed? Let us see the issue squarely. To accept Dr. Fosdick's way of salvation means to give up justification by faith, to forsake the heritage of the Protestant Reformation, to surrender that principle for which and in which the Waldenses, the Hussites, the Lutherans, the Huguenots, the Dutch "Beggars," the Scotch Covenanters, lived and suffered and endured and fought and died. It means the definite rejection of the Protestant confessions. It means Fosdick and Grant are leaders and teachers to be preferred to Paul and John. Paul reiterates that by works we are not and cannot be saved; John offers life everlasting only upon faith. It means that any doctrines which are tied up with salvation by grace through faith must go—for instance John and Paul affirm that we know the love of God by the atonement (or propitiation—John) of Christ. Let every man who accepts Dr. Fosdick's plan of salvation know that he is tying himself to what the New Testament writers unequivocally call a counsel of despair. Let the Church know that her pulpit is being used for the dissemination of a plan of salvation which is opposite to that plan which her Confession teaches.

I believe that this is a square presentation of what Dr. Fosdick's sermon involves. May God give His Church grace to heed the exhortation of His Apostles, "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." No! not even if you call that bondage "Liberalism."

Gettysburg, Va.

MISSION COURT

Every church that is doing work in foreign lands ought to have a home for its missionaries on furlough. On their return to this country they often find the homes of their parents broken up. Other relatives and friends are generally so situated that, much as they would like to have these devoted workers as their guests for a year, it is impossible. What are the missionaries to do? Without houses, without furniture, and with meagre salaries, how are they to provide for their year of "rest?" Various attempts have been made in the past to solve this problem, but always without success, because the method was wrong. It was reserved for the good women of the Church to devise the right plan and carry it out. They saw that what was needed was a rent-free building divided into a number of self-contained apartments, each comfortably furnished and conveniently arranged for house-keeping, where each family could make its own arrangements and live its own life at a minimum cost—a quiet, wholesome place, at some great center of the Church's life, with a pleasant social environment, where the children could have the benefit of the best day schools and Sunday Schools, where the missionary himself could have the assistance of some of the Church's great educational institutions in solving the problems of his own field and in freshening up on current theological thought and methods of work, where he could come into daily contact with large bodies of young men and young women who are preparing to work in foreign fields, and from which he could go easily as occasion demanded to visit and address the churches.

Such a place they found at Ginter Park, in the immediate vicinity of Union Seminary and the Assembly's Training School, and there they built Mission Court. Their interpretation of the need and their judgment as to the right plan were instantly and fully justified by the experience of the missionary families who first occupied it and by their spontaneous and hearty expressions of appreciation. The leading spirits in working out this act of justice to our honored and beloved missionaries are Mrs. J. C. Stewart and Mrs. George R. Cannon. To them and their zealous associates in all the Synodicals the whole Church is indebted for the successful solution of a long standing and difficult problem. Mission Court has not only lifted a load from the hearts of our missionaries, it has lifted a reproach from the good name of the Church.

The arrangement has proved to be so successful and so popular that there is need for an additional building. The building already in use furnishes accommodations for four families. There ought to be an additional building of the same capacity, and it would be a great relief and help to our missionaries if this could be erected within the next year. It is hoped that the Synodicals may take this on in addition to their other useful enterprises and provide the necessary means.

KEEPING THE RECORDS STRAIGHT

By Rev. Albert S. Johnson, D.D.

In the Earnest Worker of April, 1923, the following statement is made, speaking of the enlargements, etc., in Sabbath School Work:

"In a special report to the Assembly of 1922 we announced that we were moving in this direction as rapidly as financial conditions would permit. Several overtures to the Assembly asking for inclusion of catechism questions and additional Scripture texts were answered by referring to this special report as promising the needed features as soon as the departmental publications were taken into our own hands.

"This special report was not brought before the Assembly by the standing committee and the body was left in the dark as to our plans for improving all publications."

The facts in the case, which will be borne out by any member of the standing committee, are as follows:

A paper said to be the action of the Editorial Advisory Committee of the Committee of Publication and Sabbath School work was, at the last Assembly, at Charleston, W. Va., put in the hands of the writer as chairman of the standing committee, and by him, read to the full committee. Inasmuch as the matters involved were not familiar to the standing committee, Mr. Magill, Dr. Glass, Dr. R. A. Lapsley, and Dr. Theron H. Rice, were asked to speak on the paper. After hearing all these gentlemen, the chairman asked Dr. Rice, who was a member of the Executive Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work, to formulate an answer to the above paper, which he kindly consented to do, and the following was his work, which was unanimously adopted by the committee (it being stated before the adoption that the paper had been written by Dr. Rice, and submitted without the change of a word). This paper was adopted by the Assembly without change, except that instead of an ad-interim committee, as advised by the paper submitted by Dr. Rice, the Executive Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work was instructed by the Assembly to withhold action, and in the meantime to study thoroughly the whole question of lesson systems and lesson helps, and report its findings and any recommendations to the next General Assembly. The whole item adopted is as follows:

"In answer to the Editorial Advisory Committee of the Committee of Publication and Sabbath Schools relative to Uniform and Departmental (or Group) lesson and lesson helps to suggested changes, additions, and enlargements to our literature.

"We recommend the following: In view of certain serious consequences likely to be involved in any attempt to bring our Church to the adoption of Departmental Graded Lessons instead of the Uniform Lesson Helps at present almost universally in use among us, the Assembly instruct the Executive Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work to adhere to the preparation and publication of the lesson helps at present being furnished the church, and that the Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work be instructed by this Assembly to study thoroughly the whole question of lesson systems and lesson helps and report its findings and any recommendations which may seem wise to the next Assembly."

In reading this report before the Assembly, the chairman stated that the report of the Editorial Advisory Committee was in his hand, and that he would read it if the Assembly desired to hear it. No one called for this reading. The committee was represented at the Assembly by the Executive Secretary, and he could easily have had the paper read had he so desired.

The Minutes of the Assembly show that this "special report" was brought before the Assembly in the following words: "In answer to the Editorial Advisory Committee of Publication and Sabbath Schools relating to Uniform and Departmental (or Group) lesson and lesson helps, to suggested changes, additions, and enlargements to our literature, we recommend the following, etc."

The Assembly was not "left in the dark" as to plans for improving the publications, but specific directions were given as to study and recommendations, and the next Assembly will be abundantly able to know as to whether these instructions were carried out.

Charlotte, N. C.

By Rev. J. Mercer Blain, D.D.

A great deal of publicity has been given in our Church papers during the last few months to the establishment by the National Christian Conference last May of the National Christian Council. Much of this comment has been adverse to such an organization. I am one of those who are trying to keep an open mind as to the need of such a piece of machinery in our church work in China. So far as I have gotten in making up my mind I believe that it would be better to go in than to stay out. I would like to tell your readers something of the status of the question at present.

At the Charleston Assembly I was one of the missionaries who opposed the recommendation of the standing committee on Foreign Missions instructing the executive committee of Foreign Missions not to support such a council. Dr. Fraser is right when he says, in his article in the Christian Observer of November 15th, that one ground of opposition was that we did not know that such a council had been formed. When he read his cable this point was put out of court as no one questioned the fact stated in the cable, namely, that the National Christian Council had been formed. Dr. Fraser then goes on to say that in view of the subsequent action of the North Kiangsu Mission against the council it is evident that "the advocates of that recommendation in the Assembly were not so ill-informed" as some imagined. When the standing committee drew up this recommendation, however, they did not know of the formation of the council and could not have known it because the action of the National Christian Conference, at that very time in session in Shanghai, had not been reported. They were no better informed than the rest of us. What they knew about the council was the opinion of an individual or individuals as to what the Council would be if it were formed. Dr. Fraser will likely not remember that my speech followed Dr. Richardson's and that what I insisted on was that the Assembly should not go on record either approving or disapproving the council, about which none of us knew anything, and that no action should be taken on information from any one individual or group except the official Missions of the Church. This was and is the only safe course and the Assembly took it and cut out the proposed recommendation.

What now is this council, the formation of which is stirring up so much discussion? The council was appointed under the following resolution in the National Christian Conference: "The conference, with a view to carrying forward its work, making provision for dealing with matters which concern the Christian movement throughout China, and promoting co-operation, resolves to appoint a National Christian Council. It is understood that matters of doctrine and ecclesiastical polity lie outside the province of the N. C. C. In regard to other matters the functions of the council shall be advisory, but it is intended that the council should act on behalf of the co-operating churches and missions in matters which concern their common interest, when it has been ascertained that the action taken will be in accordance with the wishes of the co-operating bodies." The council is to have certain functions, among others: "(1) To foster and express the fellowship and unity of the Christian Church in China and the realization of its oneness with the Church throughout the world, and to provide opportunity for united prayer and corporate thought toward this end; (2) To help make the central position of the Church in the Christian movement more generally recognized and accepted."

At the annual meeting of the North Kiangsu Mission, in August, 1922, a resolution strongly condemning the council was adopted and sent to the meeting of the Mid-China Mission, in October. The latter failed to concur in this resolution of its sister Mission, but after full discussion decided to postpone the vote on the question until the next annual meeting. Those in favor of trying the council moved to postpone especially because it gives a year in which to observe the working of the new organization and to find out what the Chinese brethren think of it, for after all this is the Chinese Church, which we are helping to build.

One reason that has been emphasized against the council is that, should we approve it, we would be helping to put the church into the hands of the "Modernists." Indeed one of our church papers has gone to the extent of remarking that the Church would like to know the names of missionaries who refuse to join in a resolution against the council, at least hinting at the opening of a black list. I agree heartily with the opinion expressed in the January number of the Missionary Survey that the approval or disapproval of the council is a question, not of theology or views of the Bible, but solely of mission or church policy. There has been much criticism because the conference did not adopt a credal statement as a basis on which the council was to be formed. I suppose that by that was meant, did not adopt a creed to which each member elected to the council should subscribe. The author of the motion for such a statement was Mr. D. E. Hoste, the director of the China Inland Mission, who is recognized as one of the leading conservatives in China and is prominent in the Bible Union. The statement adopted by the conference in lieu of Mr. Hoste's motion has been quoted a number of times, but it is well to quote it yet once again: "We, the members of the conference, joyfully confess our faith in, and renew our allegiance to God, the Father Almighty, Jesus Christ, His Son, our Lord and Saviour, who loved us and gave Himself for our sins, and the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of Life; and acknowledge our loyalty to the Holy Scriptures as the supreme guide of faith and conduct, and to the fundamental Christian beliefs held by the churches to which we severally belong. The conference, however, is not constituted as a church council with an authority to pass upon questions of doctrine and of church polity or to draw up a credal or doctrinal statement of any kind. While the conference believes it to be a matter of vital importance that the Church of Christ in China should be established on a basis of true faith and sound doctrine, it recognizes that the authority to determine what are the essential affirmations of the Christian faith lies with the several churches of which those attending this conference are members. Any National Christian Council which may be appointed by this conference will not in any sense be a church council, and therefore not competent to exercise ecclesiastical functions. It will be an advisory body which will seek to carry forward the work of the conference and to bring the representatives of the different churches and missions in China together, in order that they may mutually enrich one another through common counsel, and will take action in matters of common interest only when it has reason to believe that the action will be in accordance with the wishes of the co-operating bodies." It is interesting to note that Mr. Hoste speaks of this statement as follows: "As I have read and considered the wording of this statement I am bound to confess that in some important respects it is superior to the suggestions that I proposed. * * * It stands to reason that if we are going to wait until we can get a statement which will meet the exact and particular opinions, views and judgment of every member of this conference, we shall never get it and in the end we shall get nothing." In concluding his address Mr. Hoste said that he hoped that all in the conference would see their way clear "in the presence of God to rise and unanimously record our beliefs as set forth in this resolution."

The council is composed of 100 members, more than half of whom are Chinese. It is safe to estimate that an overwhelming majority of these are conservative in theology and in their views of the Bible. Of the 40 odd foreign missionary members there are probably some who are decided modernists and perhaps others who would not agree with us on every point, but is that a reason for our staying out of the council? At least eight of the missionaries are members of the Bible Union, yet they are willing to work with those who disagree with them on theological points. Up to date, as reported from the office of the National Council, 23 organizations have formally approved the council. Others have reported that they have referred the matter home, some have said frankly that they approve, but are unable to assist financially at this time, many have not yet acted. So far as reported, the North Kiangsu Mission is the only one that has acted adversely. Among those approving are the China Council, which represents all the Northern Presbyterian Missions in China; the China Inland Mission, which is the largest mission in China; the American Baptists, North; the American Board; the M. E. Church, North; the Protestant Episcopal Church; the London Mission, and the Southern Methodist Conference, which includes both Chinese and missionaries.

It seems to the writer that the council is very similar to the Federal Council of Churches at home. There must be many in it that are far from agreeing with us in all our views of the Bible, yet that does not constitute a reason for keeping out. Of the 37 overtures sent up to the Charleston Assembly concerning the Federal Council, only nine asked that the Church withdraw from the council. The Pan-Presbyterian Alliance, both the American and European sections, must have not a few who disagree with us on Biblical interpretation and theological questions, yet our Church has always been prominent in the Alliance, and rightly so. No doubt there are those in the new federal union into which the last Assembly entered that are also at variance with us on these points, yet we rightly consented to the union. The names of the overwhelming number of commissioners who voted to remain in the Federal Council have not been called for, that they may be branded as heretics.

Objection has been made to the council on the ground that many Chinese leaders, both pastors and laymen, oppose it. It is not easy to find out just what the Chinese do think of it because the Chinese bodies that have acted have not reported to the office of the council. It is said that what is known as the Independent Church is decidedly contra, but it is a fact that the founder of that organization and also one of its other preachers are members of the council. It is claimed that the Chinese who favor it have been influenced by foreign propaganda and that they are not men of long religious experience, nor are they the ones who have built up the church, but mainly young men educated abroad in "liberal" institutions and holding radical views. On the other hand it is said that active pastors are against the council. I can speak of only what I have myself seen and heard, namely, the action of Hangchow Presbytery. This is one of the older Presbyteries and has in it several of our oldest and most experienced ministers, men who have preached the Gospel for 30 years or more, with a sprinkling of younger men many of them well educated and progressive. We have three men who were educated in part in America, one is a graduate of Dr. White's Bible School, in New York and two are graduates of Princeton Seminary. If any of these hold radical views, we have not yet found it out. The question of the National Christian Council came before the Presbytery in the reports of its delegates to the conference. Not a missionary made a speech. The Chinese not only approved the plan, but one of its senior members moved, and it was carried, that the churches be asked as far as practicable to make some contribution to the expenses of the council.

The question of the amount of money it will take to run the council is set forth as a strong reason against it. The budget for 1923-24, as printed in their Bulletin, is less than $61,000 silver, or about $31,000 U. S. currency. They say frankly that it will probably run up to as much as $90,000 silver in three years, but this depends on their future plans. They report that they already have contributions amounting to $7,000, and that the salaries of the two foreign secretaries are provided for at least for the present. It is possible to lend our moral support to the council and make no contribution in money, if we really cannot afford the latter. The Southern Presbyterian Church does not usually do things in this way, however, the Federal Council being a notable and regrettable exception to the rule for this year. If all the Protestant bodies or even a large majority of them go into the council, the share of each will not be much. Indeed, if the council is a really valuable asset in the establishment of the church and in bringing it to a position of influence in this great country, the price paid will not be considered large. Should it prove to be a useless organization in these respects, it would be high at any price. Taking the church as a whole throughout China, the growth has been very slow and it has not reached the place of influence that we should have expected it to attain. Any new plan that promises help should be very seriously considered.

The National Christian Council seems to be an established fact. At present the two Chinese secretaries are beginning the work of organization, and it is expected that the two foreign secretaries will enter upon their duties in the early spring. Definite plans for the work of the council will be considered at the full meeting in May. The question is, Is the strong body of Southern Presbyterians, thoroughly conservative in theology, accepting and teaching a whole Bible, progressive and up-to-date in policy and method, justified in staying out and withholding its influence? That is our problem. The objections offered do not seem to the writer to justify it. I confess that I shall watch with deep interest the practical workings of the council and trust that by the next annual meeting of our Mid-China Mission we shall have enough light to show plainly the will of God in the matter. In the meantime I hope that the Assembly will refrain from expressing an opinion until it has before it the actions of both Missions.

Hangchow, China, January 29, 1923.

Suchowful, Kiangsu, China, January 4, 1923.

To the Editor of the Presbyterian Standard, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Dear Brother:

In your issue of September 27, 1922, I note your request that the Church would like the names of those who voted in the minority at the North Kiangsu Mission meeting, on the question of our Mission co-operating with the National Christian Council. I wish to send you my name. I am one of them.

The debate was a very friendly one on the floor of the Mission. Our Mission, like others, differs at times on questions of policy, but the minority has the grace to abide by majority rule. It is with no thought of protesting against the action of the Mission that I write to you but solely because your question would seem to imply

... a stigma rests upon those who voted in the minority ... the seven dissenting brethren"—as you call them.

... ere are some of the reasons that made me hesitate to ... the only visible tie that binds us to the 350,000 ... testant Christians in China. The Council was chosen ... ollows: Seventy-five of the members were nominated ... he delegates in attendance upon the National Confer- ... e, meeting in denominational groups last May. Prac- ... ally all of these delegates had been chosen by their ... ective Missions and Churches. The whole assembly ... rwards ratified these nominations, and these 75 mem- ... then nominated 25 others, who were also elected by ... h whole body. With such a vast constituency in 18 ... ovinces, speaking different dialects, and the mission- ... ars representing different nationalities from Europe and ... erica, it is no easy task to find a good basis of repre- ... entation. Whether this is the best basis that could be ... oved, I do not know. It certainly seems to have ... en a fair basis. So, one reason I believe that we should ... ooperate is that this China Christian Council has been ... esentatively chosen.

... ow, as to the personnel of these 100 members. They ... ude many missionaries and Chinese Christian leaders ... gnized for their conservatism, and who are well ... wn in China. What proportion should be classified as ... servative, and as liberal as to their doctrinal views, I ... ot know, but I think that it could be shown that the ... rnal complexion of the missionary part of the ... ouncil is similar to that of the missionary body as a ... ole.

... s to what the Council will do, of course, no one can ... definitely. The general purpose of the organization is ... o-ordinate some of the activities of the missionaries ... he churches. Some problems can only be solved by ... king together, such as: the white slave trade; opium ... other social evils; illiteracy; the preparation of many ... ds of literature; the survey of unoccupied territory; ... idance of over-lapping on the part of new Missions ... to enter China. Occasionally there arises a great need ... some such agency to voice the Christian conscious- ... of the great body of believers, as when some years ... ome prominent Confucian leaders tried to make ... fucianism the state religion. Should any one wish ... tudy this question dispassionately, literature is avail- ... e, covering much of the above program.

... veryone admits that there is no more conservative ... rd in China than the China Inland Mission, with ... ut 1,000 missionaries, by far the largest Mission in ... na. Eight members of this 100 now serving on the ... ional Christian Council, are from this conservative ... ion and their Chinese constituency. Marshall Broom- ... a missionary author of note, attended the National ... vention as a representative of their home Board. He ... ritten his impressions in their publication, "China's ... lions," August, 1922. The following is one paragraph ... is report which refers to the Council:

As some may desire to know more specifically what ... functions of this new National Christian Council will ... we may say that it is to provide a bureau of infor- ... ion, to conduct and publish surveys of the field, to ar- ... ge for special seasons of prayer, to plan for subse- ... nt conferences or conventions, to serve as a central ... y whereby all the Christian forces in China may ex- ... se themselves unitedly upon great moral questions, ... h as the opium and morphia curses, etc. No one so- ... y can do these things adequately, for no one body has ... erto been authorized to speak for the whole. It ... also be noted that it can only take action in matters ... mmon interest when it has ascertained that such ... on is approved by the co-operating bodies."

The Bible Union of China is an organization where ... line-up is distinctly on doctrinal grounds. I have ... n a member from the beginning, and believe in it with ... y heart. It is needed as a protest against modernist ... ence in China, and also for constructive work. About ... per cent of the missionary body have enrolled as mem- ... s. In the Bible Union we have an organization for ... ing together all those who think alike on the great ... ammentals. In the National Christian Council we ... e another great organization for getting together all ... se who think alike as to the methods of working, in ... ing done the things that the Church as a whole wants ... e. It is quite true that the doctrinal statement adopt- ... y the National Conference, which elected the National ... istian Council, does not go as far as most of us who ... members of the Bible Union would like to see. On ... other hand, most, if not all of the activities that come ... er the scope of this co-operative effort, do not depend ... the doctrinal views held. Again, such a body could ... dly go farther than reaffirming the doctrinal stand- ... s held by their respective churches. The following is ... doctrinal statement adopted, practically unanimously— ... re were less than a dozen of the thousand present who ... ot vote in the affirmative.

We, the members of the Conference, joyfully confess our faith in and renew our allegiance to, GOD the Father Almighty, JESUS CHRIST His Son, our LORD and Saviour, who loved us and gave Himself for our sins, and the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life; and acknowledge our loyalty to the Holy Scriptures as the supreme guide of faith and conduct, and to the fundamental Christian beliefs held by the churches to which we severally belong. . . . While the Conference believes it to be a matter of vital importance that the Church of CHRIST in China should be established on a basis of true faith lies with the several churches of which those attending this conference are members. Any National Christian Council which may be appointed by this conference will not in any sense be a Church Council, and therefore not competent to exercise ecclesiastical functions. It will be an advisory body which will seek to carry forward the work of this conference. . . and will take action in matters of common interest only when it has ascertained that the action taken will be in accordance with the wishes of the co-operating bodies."

There is plenty of room for Christian brethren to differ on this question. There are certainly some good reasons for not being represented in the council, and there are also good reasons for being represented. It is a question to be studied and decided on its merits. Certainly the Council will not do everything in the way we would like to have it done. That is obviously impossible in any concerted action.

Now, if our two Missions refuse to co-operate, just where does it leave the Southern Presbyterian Church in China? There are more than 50 Protestant Boards and agencies at work in China. Some of these boards have as many as eight Missions. To date, December 21st, the North Kiangsu Mission is the only Mission of these 200 Missions that has refused to co-operate. Some Missions have not yet taken definite action, our own Mid-China being one of these. Several have decided to co-operate, but have notified the Council that they cannot assist in financing to any great extent. Only one member of the National Christian Council has declined to serve. The above information was given me by the office of the National Christian Council, at my request. This Council, whether we join it or not, is a going concern. Our decision to stay out means shutting ourselves off from fellowship with 7,000 missionaries, and 350,000 fellow Christians. Shall we do this for no other reason than that we fear some one at some time will put something over on us? This decision does not seem to me to be the wise one, nor the courageous course. Fifty-one members will certainly hold the balance of power and not one clique.

The best possible place to let our light shine—to bear witness to the truth as we see it—is in this lineup of the Christian forces now working in China. The great conservative element in this committee of 100, and in the constituency which they represent, need us, and we need them. I think no one questions that the rank and file of the Church of Christ in China is overwhelmingly conservative, and these 100 are their accredited representatives; besides we can certainly withdraw at any time. We owe a duty, not only in regard to what we can get, but in regard to what we can give to all that love our Lord in sincerity and in truth; without compromising the truth. We need to present a united front in opposing this terrible heathenism, for the forces of evil are surely united. Are we willing to go before the whole world and say that we are not willing to even try to co-operate with our Christian brethren?

I quote in this connection the closing paragraph of a report issued by Rev. Chas. R. Erdman, D.D., of Princeton Theological Seminary, who was a delegate to the Missionary Convention. This report was published in the Missionary Review of the World, August, 1922. Dr. Erdman's strong conservative stand is too well known to need any comment. I wish there was room to publish his whole article. Dr. Erdman appeared before our Bible Union and delighted us all with his spiritual and conservative messages.

"On the adjournment of the National Conference, this new National Christian Council was at once organized. Obviously its work is experimental and no one can predict exactly the form which Christian co-operation in China will assume in the future; but in case this Council realizes the hopes with which it has come into being, it will surely receive the cordial support of the missionary societies of the churches. All who are laboring for the evangelization of the Chinese will eagerly further the work of any agency which proves effective in uniting the Christian forces, in developing a self-supporting and self-propagating church, and in hastening the proclamation of the Gospel of Christ to all the unreached millions of China."

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed) F. A. Brown.

AN ERROR IN MATH

My Dear Standard:

In an editorial in your issue of March 14th you say that since the Progressive Program was instituted in our Church our gifts have increased from four million to nearly twelve million dollars, but that in the meantime the increase in professions of faith has dropped from 42 per cent to 14 per cent. There must be something wrong somewhere. I believe that it is in your arithmetic. I have been making a few computations and the results have been very different. Our Church adopted the Every Member Canvass at the Assembly of 1910. I suppose it would be fair to say that the Progressive Program dates from that time, though it has not always borne that name. I have taken the past three years and the three years prior to the Assembly of 1910 and have found that the percentage of additions to our Church on profession as related to the total membership of the Church is as follows:

1908—5.4 per cent.	1920—5.5 per cent.
1909—5.7 per cent.	1921—6.6 per cent.
1910—4.7 per cent.	1922—5.8 per cent.

Average for the three years, 1908-1910—5.26 per cent.

Average for the three years, 1920-1922—5.96 per cent.

I think you will find these figures correct and they are not quite as discouraging as the figures you give. In fact I think they are fairly encouraging when we remember that as a church grows larger it is increasingly difficult to maintain its percentage of growth, and when we remember that we have been living in a demoralized world. Besides the figures do not include the foreign mission work and the reports seem to indicate that the foreign mission work is growing more encouraging each year.

With hearty good wishes, I am,
Very cordially yours,
Walter L. Lingle.

(The editor has always been weak in Math. These figures, however, he took from the Stewardship Committee, believing that figures are always truthful).

DR. ROBERT DICK WILSON TO VISIT THE ORIENT

The readers of this paper will be interested to know that plans have been matured to send Rev. Robt. Dick Wilson, Ph.D., D.D., Professor of Semitic Languages at Princeton Theological Seminary, to the Far East.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilson will sail from San Francisco, March 22nd, arriving in Yokohama about April 15th. Dr. Wilson will probably speak first in Tokyo, and then journey to Kobe, where he will deliver a series of lectures under the auspices of our own Theological Seminary, of which Dr. S. P. Fulton is president.

Going to Korea, lectures will be given in Seoul and in Pyeng Yang, at the Union Methodist and Union Presbyterian Theological Seminaries, respectively, and from thence Dr. and Mrs. Wilson will go to China and Dr. Wilson will lecture in a number of institutions and later at summer conferences. The general subject of his lectures will be: "The Trustworthiness of the Bible," considered philosophically and historically in the light of Dr. Wilson's own research in the field of the Semitic languages. Those who heard him at Montreat last summer know how powerful are the sledge hammer blows that Dr. Wilson strikes for the authenticity, historicity and general trustworthiness of the Bible. His blows are powerful because they are simple facts that cannot be disputed that go to prove that the old views of the Bible are based on truth and that the arrogance of many radical critics is ill-advised and not based on facts. Dr. and Mrs. Wilson will be gone about six months. The prayers of the Church will doubtless follow them in this great work, that the native Christian students may be helped and that those missionaries who, unfortunately, have come to feel that the Bible cannot be defended by any adequate scholarship, may be reassured and be brought back to a belief that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are God's own revealed Word of Life!

NO SPECIALS NEEDED

"I don't seem to have a single thing to be specially thankful for this year," said Monica, but she looked cheerful nevertheless.

"Isn't that fact, itself, something to be thankful for?" asked Uncle Kenneth. "I take it that you haven't been cured of any serious illness, you haven't been rescued from any special danger, you haven't had any loved one given back to you from the verge of death. But isn't that something to be thankful for? Not any of these dreadful things have happened to you, you haven't needed any of these special deliverances?"

Yes, that surely is one of the great blessings of life that we often lose sight of—to journey pleasantly through a fruitful land where sun and showers fall evenly.—Queens' Gardens.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Mrs. F. Louise Mayes—To Synodical Presidents—It is with deepest feeling of sadness and personal loss that I write to tell you of the home-going of our dear friend and co-worker, Mrs. F. L. Mayes, who departed this life on the morning of March 16th. A telegram from her son has just reached this office, saying that interment will be in Mayesville on Sunday morning.

Mrs. Mayes contracted a heavy cold on her way to Houston Convention. She was fairly well at the meeting, but at Little Rock was compelled to take to her bed for the last day, and have the attendance of a physician. He assured her that she did not have influenza but was simply suffering from a severe cold, and she went on to the Jacksonville Convention, feeling better.

She was able to make her address at Jacksonville, but upon reaching Charlotte, was able to attend only the first session of the convention, leaving for her home the afternoon of the first day.

The strenuous round of the convention was too much for her frail strength, and this, coupled with the cold she had contracted, doubtless led to her last illness.

I need not tell you what a charming companion and sweet friend Mrs. Mayes was during those active days of the conventions, and I find myself filled with regret that we did not realize how frail she was, and prevent her attempting to carry out so taxing an itinerary.

Mrs. Mayes was a woman of rare intellect and of great sweetness of spirit, and in her home-going, our Auxiliary has sustained a great loss.

Hallie P. Winsborough.

Three Bees—Are You to Fly in April—Ready to gather the golden honey will be the Three B's—BLUE BLESSING BOXES—sometime this month. Let your Auxiliary have them early, that no sweetness of the first springtime flowers of your new year may be lost. Price 2c each, 20c a dozen, $1.50 a hundred, from The Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S., 256-259 Field Building, St. Louis, Mo.

"That Little Gray Book"—In a demure dress of gray, an attractive little book is giving a beautiful new vision of the Bible principle of Stewardship to many women who had no conception of its deep significance before.

"Christian Stewardship"—Six Bible studies written especially for women by Mrs. S. H. Askew, shows how God is the owner of all, and how the possession of life should be the Administration of all for God.

The book is an excellent guide for a Woman's Bible Class or for a devotional at any woman's meeting. Price 15 cents. Order from General Assembly's Stewardship Committee, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. or the Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church, 256-259 Field Building, St. Louis, Missouri.

A Gold Circle Auxiliary in Indian Presbytery (Old Goodland Church in Oklahoma)—The Auxiliary office has just received the following touching letter which will be of interest to all:

Yesterday was our last meeting for present church year. A grand-niece of Mrs. Mary Sample Hotchin was allowed the privilege of pasting, rather affixing, the Gold Seal on our Chart, which has met the requirements for the Standard of Excellence.

It was a touching meeting. One of our older members, who is also the only charter member of the old Aid and Missionary Society organized by Mrs. E. R. Allison, St. Charles, Mo., 1894, still living, tried to express her joy in seeing the Gold Seal put on, but could not say much, just wept for joy.

We of the Auxiliary are sending it to you to keep, of course we love it. The little red seals—if they could only tell you of the struggles, heart-throbs and prayers of our members to reach this goal. We know it is the first of its kind to reach the Standard in Indian Presbytery, and some of our members say it is the first in Oklahoma.

We send it to you with our love, and we are trusting to keep our Auxiliary up to same Standard another year.

We thank you for so much of real help and encouragement and we do love the Auxiliary plan, its work and all departments of it. Each year our women are becoming more and more interested in the work of our whole Church.

Very sincerely, in His name,
(Signed) Mrs. J. P. Gibbons.

Goodland, Okla.

P. S. This Auxiliary was organized April, 1921.

Birmingham, Ala.—The regular annual luncheon of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Southern Highland Presbyterian Church was held on March 19th in the Sunday School building. One hundred and twenty women assembled for a buffet luncheon and the hearing of the year's reports. The pastor, Dr. William Ray Dobyns, presented prizes of $25 and $15 to the two circles averaging the highest percentage in attendance at all regular Auxiliary meetings during the year, attendance on the Foreign Mission Study Class, which was held in each circle, and the reading of the book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land." The prizes were offered only a few weeks before this meeting and much interest was shown by all circles. The treasurer's report showed that $5,000 had been received during the year, all of which came from free will offerings. The six regular circles, girls' circle, and business women's circle all made splendid reports. The girls' circle is the most recently formed in the Auxiliary. Their activities were varied and a great interest was manifested. The new year will open with two girls' circles, a senior circle composed of the girls in college and out of school, and the junior circle made up of girls in high school. The business women close the second successful year of organization. They met once each month during the year and were served with a delightful dinner each time by different circles. The secretaries of causes each reported their activities during the year, notably among which were: the holding of the Foreign Mission Study Classes in February by the Foreign Mission Secretary. The sending of several boxes of clothing to Mrs. Sloop at the Crossnore School; and the holding of Home Mission Study Classes in November by the Secretary of Assembly's Home Missions. The giving of $103 toward the furnishing of the new dormitory at the Orphan's Home in Talladega by the secretary of S. P. and C. Missions. The holding of a beautiful Christmas program by the secretary of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. The sending of delegates to the Synodical and Montreat Young People's Conference by the Secretary of Young People's Work. The distribution of 84 prayer calendars by the Secretary of Literature. The holding of a prayer meeting each week, and a regular Bible Class taught by the pastor, by the Secretary of Spiritual Life.

The president gave a most interesting resume of the work of the year. "The Pageant of Progress" was most effectively presented in May and an offering of $118 for Miss Dowd's School in Japan was received. The women assisted in the Educational Campaign securing about one-third of the pledges obtained in the church. Dinners were served twice to the officers of the church, once each month to the Men's Fellowship Club and the Business Women's Circle, and two receptions for the congregation were given. In January the Auxiliary was greatly blessed by the coming of Mrs. Margaret T. Russell from the Assembly's Training School in Richmond, for a series of Bible studies to which the members of every woman's organization in the churches of Birmingham were invited.

Thus closes the year of work which each member feels has been a great blessing to her as she has taken her part in the work. The ever-present interest and inspiration of the pastor served to inspire all to reach forth to higher things and the splendid leadership of the president, Mrs. Edwin Sellers, has enabled the Auxiliary to reach each the goal that was set for them.

The new year opens with equally bright prospects as the new officers are about to take their place.

The Executive Committee of King's Mountain Presbyterian Auxiliary met in all-day session with the president, Mrs. R. S. Abernethy, Lincolnton, N. C., on March 10th, with 15 ladies present.

The object of the meeting was to arrange a program for the approaching Presbyterial to be held in Olney Church, Gastonia, April 24 and 25, beginning Tuesday evening with adjournment Wednesday evening. Delegates expecting to attend kindly confer with Mrs. T. G. Tate, Gastonia, R. F. D.

Mrs. R. A. Ramsauer, Secretary.

"A Golden Jubilee"—Those who have a weakness for the antique will be interested in learning that there is a woman's society in this Synod that claims 100 years to its credit, and that they propose to celebrate their "Golden Jubilee" on April 18th and 19th of this year.

This society was organized in Alamance Church, Guilford County, N. C., in the year 1823 during the pastorate of Rev. Eli W. Caruthers. What the Woman's Auxiliaries are doing now this society at that distant day did in a most efficient way.

During the War between the States it had to suspend temporarily, but in 1873 it was revived by Mrs. W. J. Tidball, the wife of the pastor, Rev. W. J. Tidball. It has continued ever since.

On April 18th and 19th, 1923, they propose to celebrate their Golden Jubilee in a two days celebration. All the friends and former residents and members are cordially invited to attend.

Rev. Wade Smith, of the Church by the Side of the Road will be the principal speaker on the 18th.

Those expecting to attend will notify Mrs. W. A. Sharp, the president, 328 Gorrell St., Greensboro, N. C., in order that accommodations may be provided for them.

Harmony Presbyterian Auxiliary will hold its 17th annual meeting, April 12-13, at Bishopville, S. C.

Mrs. T. C. Peden, Synodical secretary of Young People's Work is to be one of the speakers and if possible the local Auxiliaries are asked to send the secretary of this cause to the Presbyterial.

An interesting program has been planned and a full representation is desired.

The representatives are expected to arrive on the evening of the 11th as the first session will be held at 10 a. m., April 12th.

Names of representatives should be sent at once to Mrs. J. F. Stuckey, Bishopville, S. C.

Miss Bettie Aycock, Rec. Sec.

Meetings of Presbyterial Auxiliaries of Tennessee: Columbia, April 25-26, at Mt. Pleasant, Tenn. Nashville, April 27-28, Nashville, First Church. Memphis, May 1-2, at Jackson, Tenn.

Margaret McNeilly,
Sec. Synodical Auxiliary of Tenn.

Order of Business for Amending and Adopting, Auxiliary Constitution and By-Laws—

(Note: Mrs. Shawhan, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, of the Government Street Church, Mobile, past president of the Alabama Federation of Women's Bible Classes, author of a series of parliamentary helps, and for four years a member of the faculty of the Woman's School of Missions at Montreat, N. C., her lectures on correct parliamentary procedure have had an enthusiastic reception.)

(Note: The Chair should stand while introducing and disposing of each item of business but always resumes her seat after assigning the floor to any one else. During debate she should be seated and give close attention to the speaker on the floor.)

Chair, rising, says: "The next business in order is hearing reports of special committees. You will please listen to a report of the committee on constitution and by-laws."

Committee Chairman, rising, says: "Madam President (await recognition), as chairman of the committee on constitution and by-laws I beg leave to submit its report:

The committee appointed to revise the constitution and by-laws, has agreed upon the following revision which conforms with the established standards. The committee has directed me to report the same and move its adoption."

Chair, rising, says: "It is customary to have two readings, one as a whole by the reporting chairman, and another seriatim, but with the consent of the assembly (Pause), the reading of the constitution and by-laws as a whole, will be dispensed with and the articles will be taken seriatim. (Pause). If no one objects, the chair says, you will please listen to the reading of Article I of the Constitution."

(Committee Chairman, rising, reads first article.)

Chair, rising, says: "Are there any amendments proposed to this article? (Pause). If not, the next will be read. You will please listen to the reading of Article II."

(Committee Chairman, rising, reads second article.)

Chair, rising, says: "Are there any amendments to this article? (Pause). If not, the next will be read. You will please listen to the reading of Article III."

(Committee Chairman, rising, reads third article.)

(Note: No vote is taken on adopting the separate articles, the Chair putting to vote ONLY the proposed amendments offered to the articles or sections. When all seven articles have been thus read and amended, the whole constitution is still open to further amendment.)

Committee Chairman, at close of reading, "Madam President (await recognition), I move the adoption of the constitution" (in case of amendment, say, "As amended").

Member, sitting, says: "Madam President (without recognition), I second the motion."

Chair, rising, says: "It has been moved and seconded to adopt the constitution. Are there any amendments to any part of the constitution? (Pause). If not, all in favor say Aye, opposed No. The Ayes have it and the constitution is adopted. You will please listen to the reading of Article I of the By-Laws."

(Committee Chairman, rising, reads first article.)

Chair, rising, says: "Are there any amendments to this article? (Pause). If not, the next will be read. You will please listen to the reading of Article II."

(Committee Chairman, rising, reads second article.)

Chair, rising, says: "Are there any amendments to this article? (Pause). If not, the next will be read. You will please listen to the reading of Article III."

(Committee Chairman, rising, reads third article.)

(Note: When all the articles have been thus read and amended, the whole by-laws are open to further amendment. The by-laws are read, amended and adopted as a whole, exactly like the constitution.)

Committee Chairman, at close of reading, says: "Madam President (await recognition), I move the adoption of the by-laws" (in case of amendment, say, "As amended.")

Member, sitting, says: "Madam President (without recognition), I second the motion."

Chair, rising, says: "It has been moved and seconded to adopt the by-laws. Are there any amendments to any part of the by-laws? (Pause). All in favor say Aye, opposed No. The Ayes have it and the by-laws (in case of amendment, say, as amended) are adopted."

When amendments are proposed use this form.

Member, rising, says: "Madam President (await recognition), I move to amend Article II by adding the words," (mention words in amending.)

Member, sitting, says: "Madam President (without recognition), I second the motion."

Chair, rising, says: "It has been moved and seconded to amend by adding the words (mentioning words in the amendment). Are you ready for the question? (Pause). All in favor say Aye, opposed No. The Ayes have it and the amendment is adopted. You will please listen to the reading of Article III."

(Note: Amendments to Articles and sections are treated in just this way.)

Mecklenburg Presbyterial meets April 11-13, beginning with the evening session, at Philadelphia Church. It is earnestly requested that the names of the delegates from each society be sent as soon as possible to Mrs. L. W. Brown, Matthews, N. C., R. F. D., stating when they will arrive and by what train. This will be of great convenience to the hostess church and will shorten the registration period. Recording Secretary.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

Here it is! The advance news about the North Carolina Young People's Conference, for which we have been looking for some time, has been furnished. Mr. Garth, chairman of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, moves along quietly and then "all of a sudden" he gives out some interesting information. Now, just listen to what he says about the plans for the conference at Davidson, June 12th-19th. To begin with, Rev. R. C. Long, of Gastonia, will be the program manager. All who know of his fine work at West Avenue know that he will keep the program moving briskly. Dr. Samuel Glasgow, of Knoxville, will have charge of the vesper services and personal conferences just as last summer. This means that we will have some splendid talks and leadership, and some of his good humor mixed in at other times. Dr. Robert Yost, of King's College, will have the Senior Bible study, and Mrs. S. H. Askew, Decatur, Ga., who writes part of our Sunday School literature, will have the Junior Bible study. Other study leaders will be announced later. Among those who will give special addresses will be Dr.

Homer McMillan, of our Home Mission Committee in Atlanta; Dr. Flournoy Shepperson, Chester, S. C.; Dr. H. G. Hill, of Maxton, N. C., who edits the Sunday School comments on our page, and Dr. C. M. Richards, of the Davidson Church. Local arrangements will be handled by the same local secretary as last summer, assisted again by a corps of Davidson students. The forecast indicates a splendid conference. A larger attendance than last year is being arranged for, and the conference will be well worth attending. Watch for further news!

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

APRIL 1, 1923

THE WALK TO EMMAUS

Lesson: Luke 24. Printed Text: Luke 24:13-31

GOLDEN TEXT—"Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen."—Luke 24:5, 6.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

1. And behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about three-score and fourscore furlongs.
2. And they talked together of all these things which had happened.
3. And it came to pass, that while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.
4. But their eyes were holden, that they should not know him.
5. And he said unto them, What manner of communications have ye these, that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are talking together?
6. And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there these days?
7. And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: who was condemned to death, and have crucified him.
8. But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to day is the third day since these things were done.
9. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;
10. And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.
11. And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but they saw not.
12. Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken:
13. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?
14. And beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.
15. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went; and he made as though he would have gone further.
16. But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us; for it toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.
17. And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.
18. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and vanished out of their sight.

SHORTER CATECHISM

- Q. 30. How doth the Spirit apply to us the redemption purchased by Christ?
- A. The Spirit applyeth to us the redemption purchased by Christ by working faith in us, and thereby uniting us to Him in our effectual calling.

After His resurrection Jesus revealed Himself only to His disciples. To the unbelieving Rulers, Jews or Gentiles He did not manifest Himself at all. They had condemned, rejected and crucified Him and He left them to themselves. He had warned them, "While ye have not believed in the light that ye may be the children of light." He showed Himself to His real disciples, individually and in companies. He appeared first to the loving Mary Magdalene and secondly to the repentant Peter. He manifested Himself to the apostles assembled separately. In our lesson He is revealed to the two disciples going to Emmaus, a village some 7½ miles from Jerusalem. We will consider Jesus Seeking Disciples in Trouble; His Inquiring as to Their Causes of Sadness; Their Report of Events at Jerusalem; He Rebukes Their Unbelief and Expounds the Scriptures; He is Revealed to Them in the Breaking of Bread.

I. Jesus Seeking Disciples in Trouble

He joins them on the way as "they communed one with another and were sad." Their hopes had been crushed, their Master had been cruelly slain, and they were in the most dismay and distress. This breathes in the words, "But we trusted that it had been He who would have redeemed Israel." Jesus is wont to visit His people when in affliction. The loving Mary Magdalene was in stress, saying, "They have taken away my Lord and I know not where they have laid Him." Therefore the risen Saviour first appeared unto her. The penitent, denying Peter was in great grief of soul. Therefore the Lord gave him an early interview. Christ went to the house of Jairus, the ruler, because the shadow of sorrow and death rested upon it. He came to the home of the sisters of Bethany when Lazarus died that He might bring sympathy and efficient consolation and help. He habitually seeks His disciples in distress, and says, "Call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver thee."

II. Jesus Inquires into the Cause of Their Sadness

He shows an interest in their troubles and invites them to tell their griefs. We have a High Priest that can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, having been tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. When John the Baptist was slain "His disciples went and told Jesus." The telling relieves the burdened heart, and we are charged, "Cast thy burden on the Lord and He shall sustain thee."

III. They Report Events at Jerusalem

They do not recognize Him and deem Him a stranger in the city if He has not heard of the remarkable facts known there. They describe Jesus as "a Prophet mighty in word and deed before God and all the people." They represent their rulers as arresting, condemning and causing Him to be crucified. They sadly refer to Him as He whom they hoped would have redeemed Israel. They declare that certain women of their company had been to the sepulchre that morning and found it empty and had been told by an angel that "He was not there but had risen." They affirm that some of their own number had gone to the grave and found even as the woman had said, "but Him they saw not." Such was the perplexing and saddening report made by these two disciples.

IV. Jesus Reproves Their Unbelief and Expounds the Scriptures

He had told the apostles repeatedly beforehand that He would die and how He would die, and described in detail the shameful treatment He would receive. He also had predicted that "On the third day He would rise from the dead." But while profoundly conscious of His death they entirely overlooked the joyful part of His prophecy, His resurrection. The fulfillment of the prediction respecting His death should have assured them that His resurrection was equally certain. The same Divine power that could lay down His human life at pleasure could assume it when He pleased. They needed therefore stern rebuke for unbelief. Unbelief is a heinous sin because it charges God with falsehood. Jesus then in "Moses and all the prophets expounded to them the things concerning Himself." It must have been a sublime, comforting and satisfying discourse.

V. He is Revealed to Them in the Breaking of Bread

It was late in the evening and He appeared about to continue His journey. They courteously invited Him to spend the night with them. He consents and at the table when He blesses and breaks the bread, their eyes are opened and they recognize the Lord. The blessing and breaking would naturally remind them of the Lord's Supper, intended to symbolize and predict His crucifixion. But the death made visible in symbol and fact was not more foretold than His third day resurrection. It was not surprising that they knew Him before He vanished from sight.

In times of controversy it is well for the friends of faith and freedom to keep cool. It is not the warlike and strident virtues that we need to emphasize, but the deeper, elemental, Christian factors of openness of mind, humility in the quest of truth, brotherly love and mutual sympathy.

You can move a pebble with your toe, but try it with a rock. Gladstone called the Bible "the impregnable rock of the Holy Scriptures."

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

THE LORD'S DAY

- M., Apr. 2—Wise to Rest: Exod. 20:8-11; 23:12.
- T., Apr. 3—Wise to Worship: Ezek. 46:1-3.
- W., Apr. 4—Sabbath Blessing: Isa. 56:1-7.
- T., Apr. 5—Unwise to Traduce: Neh. 13:15-22.
- F., Apr. 6—Unwise to Criticise Good: John 9:1-14.
- S., Apr. 7—Unwise Superstition: Col. 2:16-23.

Sun., Apr. 8—Topic: What Are Wise and Unwise Uses of the Lord's Day? Isa. 58:8-14; Ps. 118:24.

What is the value of the Sabbath?
What is your idea of a well-spent Sabbath?
What is your idea of an ill-spent Sabbath?

The Sabbath is the pearl of days. It is like a beautiful gem in a gold ring. God gives us six days for work and play, but He reserves one day, a whole day, for Himself. He called it the Sabbath day, for Sabbath means rest.

The fourth commandment says, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, and it declares that God made the world in six days, and rested on the seventh, and for that reason, He hallowed the day, and commanded man, His creature, to rest that day also.

The Lord created man so that a rest of one day in seven is required by man's body and soul. Unceasing work, day in and day out, week in and week out, never ending for months and years, will finally wear out the human body. It is better to rest one day in seven, than work for a long period seven days of each week, without stopping, and then take a long rest. The frequent rest is better for man than long rests.

The Sabbath is good for man's mind. The constant employment of our mental powers without a weekly rest will tire and dull the brain, and bring weariness and unhappiness to the mind. The Sabbath introduces new thoughts and new feelings, and the mind rejoices in the change.

But most of all, the Sabbath is necessary to man's spiritual nature. Without question, the highest employment for the human soul is to engage in the worship of God. Praise to God for His great power and gratitude for His great goodness, in song and prayer, brings the most exalting feelings to the soul. It was especially for this reason that God appointed the Sabbath. The best and most useful people in the world are those who turn aside to the worship of God on the Sabbath, and useful people are the happiest.

Unwise Uses of the Sabbath

Since the Sabbath is so useful for our physical, mental, and spiritual nature, it is very unwise to do anything that will hinder our body and soul in the needs, which the Sabbath can alone supply. Let us speak of some ways of using the Sabbath that are unwise.

It is unwise to take the Sabbath for idle sleeping, and lounging. It is unwise to stock our minds with funny papers and secular news, and crowd out the Bible and spiritual thoughts. It is unwise to loaf at drug stores, and street corners, and hear unclean and useless talk, or engage in it. It is unwise to spend the hour of worship riding around in automobiles, and going from one town to another when we should be at God's house on His day. It is unwise to travel on railroads on Sabbath, for we not only waste God's time, but we compel others to do so. It is unwise to use the Sabbath afternoons to go to parks, or to the woods, or play golf, or to use the Sabbath for our own amusement. Isaiah said we are to turn our feet away from doing our own pleasure on God's holy day.

Why is it unwise to do all these things? Because God claims the Sabbath as His own, and to take it for our own pleasure is like robbing God, and God will certainly punish the man, or the woman, the boy or the girl, and the nation that robs him of His day.

Wise Uses of the Sabbath

It is wise to use the Sabbath for rest from worldly employments and recreations. We need the rest for body, mind, and soul. It is wise to worship God on the Sabbath, to go to Sunday School, church, and young people's meeting, and mingle our voices in song and prayer, and to study the Bible with our fellow men. It is wise to keep at home for the most part of the day, for the Sabbath is the great cement for home ties and home affection. It is wise to read religious papers, religious books, and the Bible on the Sabbath. It is wise to listen only to music that fits in with the day, and to cut out noise, and jazz. It is good to use the Sabbath for visiting the sick, and carrying the Gospel to prisoners. It is wise to spend much of our time in thinking about our sins, and praying that God may help us overcome them.

Why is it wise to use the Sabbath day in such good employments? Because, to use it so will surely bring God's blessing on our own hearts and on others. It will reap a reward of honor and usefulness, for God has always honored every man and every nation that kept His Sabbath day holy.

BANNER POINTS

NORTH CAROLINA CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION

June 1, 1922 to June 1, 1923

- 1. Monthly Service Program24
2 credits for each report received on time, or
2. Efficiency Chart 6
2 credits for each 100 points attained on chart.
3. Four Square Chart 8
2 credits for becoming a One Square Society.
4 credits for becoming a Two Square Society.
6 credits for becoming a Three Square Society.
8 credits for becoming a Four Square Society.
4. Denominational Chart 5
1 credit for each 20 per cent attained on the chart. (Societies in denominations which do not have a denominational chart may claim these credits after making a canvass for subscriptions to their denominational papers).
5. Missionary Giving10
Minimum requirement for these credits is $1.00 per year per active member. To denominational missions in addition to contributions directly to the church.
6. Support of the State Union 5
5 credits when a society pledge has been paid to the state treasurer.
7. Personal Stewardship13
1 credit for each 20 per cent of the active members enrolled as Comrades of the Quiet Hour...2
1 credit for each 20 per cent of the active members enrolled in the Tenth Legion5
3 credits for each Life Work Recruit3
8. Leadership Training Courses 4
2 credits for each course completed.
9. Representation at the State and District Conventions 5
10. Organizing a new society 5
5 credits may be claimed when the new society has been organized three months.
11. New Members 5
5 credits for enrolling new members equaling 25 per cent of the number on roll June 1, 1922.
12. Subscriptions to papers10
1 credit for every two subscriptions to the Christian Endeavor World5
1 credit for every five subscriptions to the Dixie Endeavorer5

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

- Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.*
Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.*
Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.*
Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville.
Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton.
Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville.
Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington.*
Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell.
Eugene Brown Morgan, Concord.
Miss Rachel Beall, Durham.
Miss Anne Sample, Hendersonville.
J. M. Carr, Davidson College.
Miss Ruth Beard, Cornelius.
Miss Lillie Gilcland, Greensboro.

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause: Nut Bush Church, $5.00.

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

The conditions at the Sprunt infirmary are very much improved. We have had no new cases of measles during the past week, so are hopeful that we are to escape from further trouble along this line.

Miss May Self, the trained nurse who has been with us since Christmas, left for her home in Lincolnton more than a week ago.

Mrs. John Q. Holton's many friends throughout the State will be sorry to know that she was called to Bedford, Va., Monday, on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. Anspaugh. Mrs. Anspaugh was only sick a very short time, so her death came as a great shock to Mrs. Holton. Mrs. Holton has the sincere sympathy of her many friends at Barium.

Mrs. S. A. Grier spent the week end in Hickory, the guest of Mrs. W. B. Ramsay. The occasion of the visit just at this time was the 50th anniversary of the Hickory Church. Mr. Grier was an elder in the Hickory Church before coming to Barium, and was also invited to attend, but was prevented by his duties here. Mrs. Grier was enthusiastic over the delightful time.

Mr. Johnston is on a business trip to Tarboro. He expects to visit the Masonic Orphanage at Oxford on his way home.

We had quite a touch of Winter this week, and are very much afraid it has cut our peach crop short.

Miss Chambers and her family of boys are happy to be back in their new old home after being housed in Howard cottage for quite a while. As you know Synod cottage has been in the hands of the workmen; hence the term "new old home."

The clothing boxes are beginning to come in, and every week some of the children are made happy.

FORECAST OF E. M. C. IN NORTH CAROLINA

Judging from the reports which are being received daily at the office of the Synod's Secretary of Stewardship, the Every Member Canvass in the Synod of North Carolina the present year was decidedly the most successful in the history of the Synod, from the viewpoint of both current expense and benevolent fund pledges. Almost without exception those who have sent reports of the canvass to this office have accompanied the same with statements regarding increased interest in the canvass upon the part of the congregations in the objectives of the campaign and increased amount in the pledges made.

Among the most encouraging features of the reports received are those touching the large increase in the number of tithers secured in the synod during the past year, the large increase in the number of family altars reported, and the increased interest in evangelism which is evidenced in all sections of the Synod. Since the first of January reports have been received which show the addition of more than 700 tithers to those already recorded in the office of the secretary. Many of the tithers' cards which had been signed and returned to this office show that those who signed them are members of other than the Presbyterian Church, this fact showing that the seed thus sown is bearing fruit not only in the Presbyterian Church but in others, as well.

Included among the reports of distinct interest regarding the Every Member Canvass is that from the West Avenue Church, Gastonia, of which Rev. R. C. Long is pastor, the membership of this church is 220 and the report of the canvass shows that 210 of these members made pledges during the canvass. The quota for current expenses for this church was $2,980 and the amount pledged was $3,700, which was $14.09 per capita. The quota for benevolences was $1,320 and the amount pledged was $1,400, or $6.36 per capita. There are 74 tithers in this church.

The reports received from the First Church, Winston-Salem, the First Church, Wilmington, and the First Church, Salisbury, all indicate the canvass of this year the best of any yet taken, with decidedly increased interest upon the part of the membership. The same facts are true of the reports received from Greensboro, Statesville, and other places in the Synod. The reports which are being received from the church in the rural sections of the Synod show also that the canvass of this year was attended with larger and deeper interest upon the part of both canvassers and the other members of the churches than has been evidenced previously, and that larger and more liberal pledges were made. The reports from the rural churches constitute a feature of more than usual interest regarding the canvass and they have brought distinct encouragement regarding the pledges to all of the causes included in the same.

PERSONAL

A postal card, dated February 27, 1923, from Cairo, Egypt, brings the information that Rev. M. B. Lambdin, former pastor at Montgomery, W. Va., now on a tour of the Holy Land was at that city, at that date, and that he would leave the next day for Jerusalem. There are few men who will get more out of such a trip than our brother Lambdin.

NORTH CAROLINA

Winston-Salem—Last Sunday, March 18th, by unanimous vote Reynolda Presbyterian Church extended a call to Dr. D. Clay Lilly, of Lexington, Ky., to become its pastor. For several years Dr. Lilly was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here. He is chairman of the Stewardship Committee of the Presbyterian Church in the South.

Fourth Creek Chapel—There was a congregational meeting of Concord (Loray) Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon, March 18th, at Fourth Creek chapel for the purpose of organizing a branch congregation. Messrs. J. Watt Summers and June Stevenson were elected elders and Messrs. W. C. Wooten and J. P. Gray deacons. Rev. S. L. Cathey is the pastor.

Charlotte—Rev. W. H. Frazer, D.D., assisted Rev. J. G. Garth at Seversville last week in a meeting, preaching each night to excellent crowds. Mr. Garth preached at 3 p. m. on Prayer, and conducted several services for children. The church was greatly revived. Ten persons were added to the church by letter with others to follow. This church has been holding six cottage prayer meetings each week for over two months, preparing for the meeting.

Charlotte—On last Sabbath the cause of Near East Relief was presented in practically all the churches of this city regardless of denomination. Very able and moving addresses were made and the people responded to the appeal with liberal offerings. In some cases the speakers were natives of the persecuted countries, in other cases they were secretaries of the National Relief Committee; in nearly every case they were men who had visited the stricken region in question and knew whereof they spoke. Congressman Will D. Upshaw, of Georgia was one of the speakers. Dr. Voris, of the Northern Presbyterian Church, one of the secretaries of this cause, was another distinguished speaker who made a wonderful appeal for the cause. Over $12,000 was raised in cash and pledges in the Charlotte churches with other contributors to be heard from later. The treasurer of this cause for North Carolina is Robt. A. Brown, 901 Citizens National Bank Building, Raleigh, N. C. A minimum amount of the money contributed goes to administration expenses as many of the men who are serving on the committee give their services free of charge, practically all of it therefore goes direct to the support of the orphaned children of the Near East.

Statesville, First Church—Mr. F. A. Sherrill announced at the Sunday morning service at the First Presbyterian Church that $65,000 was in hand and that $10,000 additional had been subscribed toward the building fund of the new church. The $65,000 represents the donations of 13 members of the church, each giving $5,000. Mr. N. B. Mills, chairman of the finance committee, states today that the committee has the promise of several other donations of like amount. The purpose is to raise $200,000.

Greensboro, First Church—The members of our Church will be interested to know that the treasurer of our Building Fund has in bank over $72,000 towards the new church building. We think this is a fine start and when we remember the good pledges that have been made and are ready to be paid, our treasurer, Mr. Thacker, is to be congratulated on his fine work, and all the members of our Church will be delighted to know that we have this amount as a good start towards our new building.—Bulletin, First Church.

Gastonia, West Avenue Church—This church on March 18th from one to three p. m. over-subscribed by six per cent its quota for both current expenses and benevolences for the coming year. It is interesting to note also, that this church has overpaid by ten per cent all of its benevolent apportionments for the year 1922-23. The report to the spring meeting of Presbytery indicates an addition of 28 members by profession and 25 by letter. Other items of interest are: 45 family altars, 75 tithers, a church paper and "Survey" in every home and "every member of the church at work." Two additional deacons and one elder have recently been ordained and installed. Rev. Roswell C. Long is pastor of this church, which has 220 resident and 20 non-resident members.

The Clinchfield Presbyterian Church has just closed one of the most successful revivals ever conducted in this field.

Rev. Leonard Gill, Synodical evangelist led our forces in the campaign and rendered a fine service. Mr. Gill knows how to hit sin from every angle, and he strikes direct with tremendous blows. But while he is unsparing and uncompromising with sin anywhere, he is very sympathetic with the sinner, and knows how to apply the healing remedy to the open wound with fine effect. The good work was interrupted just at the high-tide of interest and enthusiasm because of previous engagements that required Mr. Gill to hasten on, but in spite of interruptions and the short time there were nearly 50 professions and reconsecrations. Twenty-six of these were received into the church last Sunday and others are expected to follow. The climax of interest was reached on Sunday afternoon, when, with the assistance of Rev. J. C. Story, of Marion, we installed three elders and two deacons, with very impressive services.

This provides a working organization that will be able to plan for a worthy and definite objective for the future. This is a promising field for the Presbyterian Church and with the splendid support of the Synod and Presbytery continued we all hope to report progress that will fully justify our faith and the larger investments needed for the kingdom of our Lord in this place.

Thos. L. Klutz, S. C.

Davidson—The Every Member Canvass is not complete to date, but the indications are that the congregation will subscribe the full amount called for by the local church budget, i. e. $4,200 for current expenses and $5,000 for benevolences. This of course is exclusive of large subscriptions yet payable to a fund needed in building the annex to the church and in large subscriptions to the $600,000 campaign for the rebuilding of Chambers and for an increase in the endowment fund.

The annex occupied for the first time last Sunday is a seating capacity of between 250 and 300, the new opera chairs leaving space for others number 9. The new section has been neatly carpeted and a whole fits in well with the other sections of the building, now having a seating capacity of about 60. The lower floor, a semi-basement, serves the main purpose of supplying additional Sunday School class rooms and of providing a place for social and social gatherings as occasion demands. The entire cost of the annex is not far from $10,000. Thus enlarged the church should meet all demands upon it for some years to come, when some generous munus or other well-wisher may have it in his heart to erect a $50,000 or $75,000 building as a memorial to a loved one or as a testimony to his affection for the college and his zeal for the greater glory of God.

On Sunday Rev. Dr. Melton Clark closed his series of Life Work services with three excellent sermons, notably the one at the 11 o'clock service, which delighted everybody with its earnest message, its simplicity of statement, its beauty and aptness of illustration and its timely pronouncements as to what is involved in a truly consecrated life. The series of services were by no means without fruit,—quite a number of the young men expressed for the first time their purpose to devote their lives to religious work, missionaries of one type or another in the home or in the foreign field.

Gastonia Co-operative Standard Sunday School Training School—The Presbyterians and Methodists of Gastonia completed on March 24th their first Co-operative Standard Training School for S. S. teachers and workers. The fact that more than 250 from the two churches were enrolled in the school and that the majority of these took the examination for a certificate leading to a diploma, indicates the success of the school. The school was a real school of methods under the joint direction of Prof. T. Carr, Synodical Superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's Work in North Carolina and Rev. O. V. Woolsey who occupies a similar position in the Methodist conference. The school began on Sunday, March 18th and concluded on the 23d. Twelve sessions for each of the six courses were held.

The faculty of this school was the best that could be secured in the State. "Sunday School Organization and Administration" was taught by Prof. H. E. Pence, of Trinity College. Prof. C. T. Carr, one of the school's directors taught a large class in "The Principles of Teaching." The following specialization courses each had a good enrollment: (1) Intermediate and Senior Organization and Administration," by Mrs. B. H. Bunch, of Raleigh; (2) Junior Lesson Material and Teaching," by Miss Virginia Jenkins; (3) "Primary Lesson Material and Teaching," by Mrs. G. W. Green, and (4) "Beginner Lesson Material and Teaching," by Mrs. C. L. Van Loppin.

The school motto: "Training Takes Time, Take Time for Training," was well carried out. It was an inspiration to see the leading business men and women of the city diligently at work night after night to grasp the essentials of Sunday School work. In the opening afternoon there were workers present from 24 churches in the county. The churches co-operating in the school from the city of Gastonia were the Main Street Methodist, First Presbyterian, West Avenue Presbyterian, East End, West End, Franklin Avenue, Ranlo and Trinity Methodist, and Armstrong Memorial and Olney Presbyterian.

By a unanimous vote of all who attended the school, the same plan will be used again next year. In addition to the fine training for those who attended, and the tremendous impetus that the school gave for better work in the local Sunday Schools, one of the by-products was the fine feeling of interdenominational fellowship that was fostered which will make for the betterment of the city in the days to come. The school met in the new Young People's building of the Main Street Methodist Church, which is perhaps the most complete plant in the State for Sunday School work. Under the leadership of their genial and high-souled pastor, Rev. W. A. Lambeth, the school had everything in the way of comfort and encouragement that could be asked. Rev. G. R. Gillespie, of the Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian Church, secretary of the school, directed the publicity in a most efficient manner. On Thursday night following the class sessions, the entire school was pleasantly entertained in the social rooms of the First Presbyterian Church by the Business Women's Bible Class, assisted by Dr. J. H. Henderlite, who at all times was one of the most enthusiastic workers in the school.

Roswell C. Long.

Gastonia, Armstrong Memorial Church—Kings Mountain Presbytery, in session at Gastonia, March 15th, granted the request of the Armstrong Memorial Chapel to be organized as a church. Time will be March 25th, at 3:00 p. m. Commission: Rev. J. H. Henderlite, Rev. R. C. Long, and G. R. Gillespie; Elder J. F. Jackson.

This church is a development of the aggressive congregational work of the First Presbyterian Church. A number of years ago, under the direction of the First Church session, afternoon Sunday School work, with Dr. C. E. Adams as leader, Miss Lois Freeman and Bertha McLean and other faithful members of the congregation as helpers, was begun in a small way in what was then known as the Clara Mill community. For eight or nine years this work was carried on by the faithful workers who refused to become discouraged in the face of hard work and shifting numbers, until the fall of 1918, when the present pastor of the First Church, Dr. J. H. Henderlite, had a vision of the possibilities of the field and led the way into a more aggressive work.

The pastor was supported by his people, and in 1918 Rev. G. R. Gillespie became congregational evangelist, working in this and other parts of the city with consecrated wisdom. At the death of Col. C. B. Armstrong his family paid the cost of the new building, and it was named "The Armstrong Memorial Church." It is a memorial also of a wise pastor, a loyal congregation, an earnest assistant pastor, and a devoted elder.

It is seldom that one sees such unselfishness on the part of pastor and people as has been shown in this instance.

Gastonia, First Church—The Men's Bible class had their annual dinner on the night of February 27th, when 250 men of the church sat down to an elegant dinner served by the ladies, in the social room of the Sunday School building. Dr. Henderlite, the class teacher, acted as toast-master. Rev. Wade C. Smith, pastor of the Church by the Side of the Road, Greensboro, made the principal address. Mr. Smith is at his best at such a gathering. For more than an hour he held the undivided attention of the men, and his address made a deep and lasting impression. Altogether this was the best event of the kind in the history of the class.

The recently organized Men's Club of the church is starting off in fine fashion and bids fair to prove a very strong factor in the life and work of our church. The purpose of the club is practical close-at-hand service. Although no pressure has been brought to bear to swell the membership and Dr. Henderlite stated plainly that the club was formed for real work, nearly a hundred men have asked to be enrolled and all seem genuinely interested. Already they have set to work in carrying out plans for reaching the men of the city who are not Christians or church-goers.

Interest in Christian Endeavor is growing among our young people. The attendance upon all three societies has been good throughout the winter. Mr. Gamble and Mr. Barr, of the Davidson student body, spent Sunday, March 11th, here, and made some very helpful talks to the Endeavorers, and their visit will do real good.

The Presbytery of Kings Mountain met in the Gastonia First Church, March 15th, and appointed a commission for the organization of the Armstrong Memorial Church on the afternoon of March 25th. This is a mission of the Gastonia church which already has handsome brick building and has prospered greatly under the care of the assistant pastor of the First Church, Rev. G. R. Gillespie. It will begin with more than 150 members and has prospects of rapid growth. Mr. Gillespie will serve the new church as pastor and will also continue as assistant at the First Church, with special care of the out-stations in the industrial sections of the city, where he has during the past four years or more done a work of remarkable influence and success.

At this meeting Presbytery also granted the church at Kings Mountain permission to prosecute a call for the pastoral services of Rev. Dr. I. S. McElroy, of Columbus, Ga. The Presbytery will heartily welcome Dr. McElroy as a most valuable accession to its membership.

According to the schedule made out by Mr. J. B. Spillman, Synod's secretary of stewardship, practically all the churches of the Presbytery have in the past three weeks been visited by "flying squadrons," consisting of four ministers each, in the interests of the Progressive Program and the Every Member Canvass.

Fiftieth Anniversary of Hickory Church—On Sunday, April 18th the First Presbyterian Church of Hickory, N. C., celebrated its Golden Anniversary with appropriate services, the entire day being given up to observation of the founding of this church. Cards of invitation had been sent out to every member of the former years, and special invitations to the members of the immediate families of the charter members as well as to those of former pastors, so that a home-coming occasion was combined with the birthday of the church.

At the morning service, the sermon was delivered by Rev. W. W. Moore, D.D., LL.D., president of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va. It is of interest to note that Dr. Moore preached the sermon at the dedication exercises of the present church on December 2, 1906. Upon the occasion of the 50th anniversary, Dr. Moore delivered a splendid sermon of the kind for which his scholarly equipment is noted. Dr. Moore chose for his text the 13th verse of the 4th chapter of II Timothy, "The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments." Following the life and training of Paul, Dr. Moore told of his habits and of his learning, and carried his discourse up to the time of Paul's prison life, at the time of the epistle having been written to Timothy. He showed that Paul being an old man, felt the need of his heavy cloak, as winter was coming on, and he desired the books for his companionship, but most of all he wanted "the parchments" for the comfort of his soul. So in this letter he asked for comfort for body, for mental food, and for spiritual needs. Dr. Moore urged his hearers to read only the clean books, such as those of Sir Walter Scott, and begged that "the one Book" be kept in the home and be given the supreme place in the life of the people.

The sermon of the evening service was delivered by Rev. John G. Garth, of Charlotte, N. C., the only living ex-pastor of the church. Mr. Garth was for more than ten years active in the pastorate of the Hickory church, resigning this pulpit to enter overseas work with the Y. M. C. A. at the time of the war. An accident in Charlotte, while he was attached to Camp Greene, made it necessary for him to spend many months in the hospital, and prevented his going abroad. Mr. Garth is greatly beloved by the Hickory congregation and it was a pleasure to have him back on this occasion. In his sermon, Mr. Garth, like Dr. Moore, drew his subject from the life of Paul and spoke in a forceful manner of the evidences of Paul's conversion and religion. Just as Paul felt that Jesus Christ had been crucified for him, so must we, said Mr. Garth, accept the faith that Christ died for us and should make our lives serviceable in the cause of Christ.

Especially fine music was rendered at both the morning and evening services, a male quartette having been selected for the day, and solo being offered by Mrs. John Geitner at the morning service, and a duet by Miss Mary Ramsay, a daughter of a former pastor, and Mr. Connolly Gamble. The congregational music was exceptionally good.

During the afternoon the regular annual every member canvass of the church was not crowded out, but was entered into with even more enthusiasm than ever, about 30 men going out into the different parts of the city and suburbs, calling at the homes of the members of the church. The result was that the budget for current expenses and the quota for church benevolences for the coming year have been taken care of, and it is expected that a substantial increase will be shown when all the reports are in.

One of the most interesting parts of the program of the day was the church history, written by Dr. W. B. Ramsay, clerk of the session, and a sketch of the Woman's Auxiliary by Miss Amelia McComb, Auxiliary Historian, which was read at the morning service by Dr. Ramsay. This was later presented to the congregation in printed form, so that a permanent souvenir of the day is in the hands of the members and friends of the church. This booklet contained complete records of all pastors, supplies, elders, deacons, and other officers of the church, as well as the present organization. The present pastor of the Hickory Church is Rev. Edward M. Craig, D.D., who was called to the church as successor to Rev. J. G. Garth, and became its pastor on May 25, 1919. Dr. Craig has accomplished a wonderful work in the Hickory congregation, and during this pastorate 186 new members have been received into the church. The membership now numbers 355, with 326 enrolled in the Sunday School. The total gifts of the year are estimated to reach $8,500. The church has no debts of any kind. It now owns one of the most valuable pieces of property in the city and is in every way regarded as in a healthy condition, and as Dr. Ramsay said in his history, "Today we are better prepared for a forward work than ever before, and we pray for God's continued blessing upon us."

SOUTH CAROLINA

Harmony Presbytery will meet in stated session at Salem (B.R.) Church, April 10th (Tuesday), at 11 a. m. W. H. Workman, S. C.

Chester—On Sunday, March 25th, the following were elected to the eldership of Purity Church. Dr. W. R. Wallace, H. R. Woods, S. M. Jones, A. L. Gaston.

Chester—The nice new manse of Purity Presbyterian Church is now occupied by the pastor, Rev. Flournoy Shepperson, D.D., and his family on York Street. The new property represents an outlay of $20,000, and the manse is complete in every detail. The church is now closing the best year it has ever had, and large plans are made for next year.

Latta—Rev. E. C. Bailey has resigned as pastor of the Latta Church to take effect May 1st, at which time he goes to Accomac, Va. Several months ago he announced his intention to either rest from work this summer or to go elsewhere. His relationship both to the community and church has been of a most fortunate character. It is with regret that we receive his decision to go elsewhere; and we predict that his place will be hard to fill. His sermons have been of the very highest order and all of his work has been of a constructive nature. He has an interesting family and their life to the community has stood for something "worth while."

M. M. M.

Piedmont—The Presbyterian Church closed its church year with a gracious revival led by Rev. W. H. Miley, Synodical evangelist. For two weeks Dr. Miley preached earnestly and with the manifestation of God's Spirit. His chorus director, Mr. Furman Betts, completely won the confidence and cooperation of the community. Besides being a splendid director he is a fine soloist. Their presence was wonderfully appreciated. Some of the visible results of this meeting are 19 professions of faith, over 100 reconsecrations, and two life-service re-

(Continued on page 10)

News of the Week

The Council of State, of North Carolina, will soon inaugurate the new building programs of State institutions. The contracts will be awarded.

According to a recent decision of the Supreme Court of this State, the Turlington Act does not repeal the old quart law. The new act makes prohibition more drastic instead of less.

Asserting that the controversy between girl and boy students at the University of North Carolina over the construction of a girls' dormitory apparently has been settled, W. N. Everett, secretary of state, and a member of the building committee of the institution, stated a special committee has been appointed to consider plans for the proposed building.

A possible disagreement in the N. C. Highway Commission has developed. Charges of discrimination against W. S. Fallis, purchasing agent, were made, but he was exonerated by the commission. Then W. C. Wilkinson, of Charlotte, announced that the matter was not settled, while Chairman Page says that it is. The following appeared recently: W. S. Fallis, who, as purchasing agent for the state highway commission, was given a clean bill of health by the commission last week in a resolution declaring that investigation of charges brought by Charlotte automobile dealers had developed nothing reflecting on the integrity of Mr. Fallis, resigned as purchasing agent.

Income tax collections, in spite of a slow climb daily, seem certain to fall a half million dollars below the $3,500,000 estimated by the state budget commission. The state department of revenue reported total collections of $2,662,000, and that most elaborate of responsible estimates at this time does not place the ultimate total at more than $3,500,000. Some 3,000 returns are yet to be filed under extension.

Confronted with a cement famine which, it is stated, may seriously handicap road construction in the state during the next year, the state highway commission is now considering the establishment of a cement factory somewhere in western North Carolina.

Three new state parks will be sought by the North Carolina geological and economic survey as the result of its semi-annual meeting. Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, director, was authorized to enter negotiations for the procurement for use as parks of Grandfather mountain, Linville Gorge in Burke county, and Fort Macon, in Beaufort inlet. The state's only park at this time is situated on Mt. Mitchell. A state inn is also proposed to be built on Mt. Mitchell.

Connection of America and Asia by a tunnel across Behring Strait was suggested by Prof. William Hung, of the history department, Peking University, in a luncheon address at the City Business Club.

The stockholders of Lowell Cotton Mills charge the officers of the company with malfeasance of office and diverting of funds. The suit involves $792,869.39.

Galli Curci, renowned colatura soprano, will sing at the Charlotte auditorium on Wednesday evening, May 2nd, according to the announcement made by officials of a Charlotte organization who have made arrangements for her appearance here.

Peach growers in Georgia suffered heavy losses by the freeze of Monday night, but there will be a good sized crop of fruit in the belt, federal and state crop officials stated.

Public statements made by officials of the United States government to the effect that substantial alterations had been effected in British capital ships to increase their battle range, and defensive armaments, were formally corrected by both the state and navy departments.

Prediction that President Harding will be a candidate for re-nomination, will be selected as the republican standard bearer and will be re-elected, was made by Attorney General Daugherty, pre-convention campaign manager for Mr. Harding in 1920 and since then his chief political adviser.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

cruits. These men left a host of new friends who will always cherish the memory of their visit. This has closed a year of active evangelistic effort. Near 70 additions to the local church have resulted from the year's work. This represents a year's gain of 65 per cent in membership.

The every member canvass was made March 18th, and the budget subscribed in two hours.

J. Blanton Belk, Pastor.

Chester—Addressing a large gathering of the men of Purity Church, Thursday evening, March 15th, at their annual banquet and meeting Rev. M. E. Melvin, D.D., of Chattanooga, Tenn., secretary of the Stewardship committee of the Southern Presbyterian Church, emphasized man's relationship to property, showing that instead of owing we owe. Dr. Melvin is one of the foremost speakers of the Southern Presbyterian Church and his eloquent message on Stewardship brought out many new and interesting ideas. Mr. A. M. Aiken was toastmaster. Toasts were responded to by Rev. Flournoy Shepperson, D.D., pastor of Purity Presbyterian Church; John A. Hafner, a Field Secretary of the Stewardship Committee of the Southern Presbyterian Church; and Dr. W. R. Wallace.

In addition to the flow of oratory a splendid musical program was rendered. The quartet from the Columbia Theological Seminary of Columbia, Miss Essie Orr, and Mr. Henry W. Sanderson, organist of the church, rendered a number of selections.

The banquet was served by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church. Following the banquet and speeches men of the church were organized into a body, conforming with the plans of the General Assembly. Dr. W. R. Wallace was elected president; Mr. J. Boyce Bankhead, secretary, and Mr. William McKinnell, treasurer.

Forward Step by South Carolina Presbytery—Mr. J. J. Adams, Laurens, S. C., has been elected treasurer of South Carolina Presbytery to receive and disburse all money given to benevolent causes by the churches of the Presbytery. He begins his work on April 1st.

Church treasurers are expected to remit by check so that no receipt will be necessary.

They are requested to send all money contributed for benevolent causes on the day following the last Sunday of the month.

While the treasurer will keep a special record for gifts to special objects which will be forwarded as the donor directs, it is the earnest desire of Presbytery that no church or individual make such gifts until the church has given its full quota. After a church has paid its full quota to all benevolent causes it is hoped that many will make large gifts and if they so desire, may specify these for special objects.

It is the hope of the Presbytery that by having a central treasurer money that is often kept in hand by a church treasurer for a long time with the expectation of forwarding it when it reaches a considerable sum, will be remitted at the end of each month, no matter how small the amount may be. Almost half of the amount contributed to each benevolent cause reaches the treasurer of that cause during the month of March. Many thousands of dollars in interest could be saved if treasurers of congregations sent what is on hand at the end of each month and the Presbyterial central treasurer may be the solution of this problem.

H. Waddell Pratt, S. C.

Box 331, Columbia, S. C., Mar. 24, 1923.

APPALACHIA

Asheville Presbytery meets in regular spring session, West Asheville, N. C., May 1st, 8 p. m.

W. S. Hutchison, S. C.

Horse Shoe, N. C., March 22, 1923.

KENTUCKY

Louisville, Woodland Avenue—The new auditorium of the Woodland Presbyterian Church was dedicated Sunday, March 11th, at 3 p. m. The sermon was preached by Rev. Henry H. Sweets, D.D. A former elder, Mr. T. B. Talbot, and three former deacons, Rev. S. W. McGill, Rev. C. A. Ray, and Rev. W. T. McElroy, assisted in the services of the day. Mr. Ray and Mr. McElroy preached at the morning and evening services, at which 26 persons united with the church. Nine of these were by letter, and the others were by re-affirmation and profession.

The seating capacity of the church is 500, and the cost $50,000. With the Sunday School buildings, which were erected ten years ago, this church is now well-equipped for its growing work.

On Tuesday evening, March 13th, a musicale and social were given, to which all the Presbyterian churches of the city were invited. On Wednesday evening, March 14th, about 500 people of Parkland gathered for a union prayer meeting, which was followed by an enjoyable social.

WEST VIRGINIA

The Presbytery of Kanawha will meet Tuesday, April 24th, 1923, at 8 p. m., in the Ruffner Memorial Presbyterian Church, Charleston, W. Va. Rev. L. E. McElDowney is pastor of this church. His address is 1700 Quarrier St., Charleston, W. Va.

J. B. Morton, S. C.

Clifftop—The evangelist of Greenbrier Presbytery, Rev. J. E. Flow, D.D., has recently closed a two weeks' meeting at Clifftop, W. Va., a mining town in Fayette County. Many Christian people re-consecrated themselves and there were 26 professions of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. One lady united with the Baptist Church and 13 united with the Presbyterian Church and others will follow. Since Dr. Flow began last October to devote all his time to evangelistic work there have been 181 conversions and a large proportion of them have been grown men and women. Commissions have been appointed to organize two churches in fields where he has held meetings. The Presbytery of Greenbrier is vigorously pushing its evangelistic and home mission work.

Educational

Flora Macdonald College—Miss Mamie McElwee, of Statesville, N. C., supervisor of young people's work of the Synod of North Carolina, and Miss Sadie Buckland, missionary from Chunju, Korea, visited the college last Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday night, Miss Buckland addressed the student body, telling of her experience in Korea and giving vivid descriptions of country-life scenes there.

The question selected for the inter-society debate on Saturday night, March 24th is, Resolved: That the United States should cancel all Allied War Debts. Speakers for affirmative, Misses Annie Lee Funk, Epsilon Chi; and Annie Mae Campbell, Zetesian. For the negative, Misses Elizabeth Brannen, Zetesian; Mary McCulloch, Epsilon Chi.

The basketball championship games are now in progress, and the results thus far are, Freshmen winners over Juniors and Seniors; Sophomores winners over Juniors and Seniors. The last two match games are scheduled for Friday, March 23d when Freshmen will play Sophomores, and Juniors and Seniors will match each other.

On Monday night, March 26th, Flora Macdonald was very fortunate to have for the evening's entertainment, "The Chastening," a play by Charles Rann Kennedy, featuring Mr. Kennedy, Edith Wynne Matheson (Mrs. Kennedy), and Margaret Gage. This is one of the biggest things of its kind that the college has ever secured, and a capacity house is expected for this event.

The Dramatic Club is having daily rehearsals in preparation for a play which they expect to give in the near future for the entertainment of the student body and faculty.

A fortnightly recital will take place Friday, March 20th in the college auditorium with music pupils of the various departments taking part.

A six-weeks course of study of the little booklet, "The Vanguard of a Race" has been substituted for that length of time in place of the Wednesday evening prayer services. The student body is divided into bands of 12 to 14 girls, each with a leader, while this is in progress. The course is intended to help broaden the outlook on the racial questions.

Oglethorpe University—This week has seen the consummation on the campus of Oglethorpe University of what is perhaps one of the most beautiful acts of pure sentiment in the annals of American educational institutions. Oglethorpe as planned and founded has been the work of a group of individuals, having had no State legislature or Church court or millionaire or large body of wealthy alumni to whom appeal could be made. It was realized from the beginning that in many instances the founding of the institution would mean real sacrifice, and in the building plans a most beautiful location was set aside for the Founder's Tower wherein was to be a specially beautiful Founder's Room, and in this room on a suitable lectern was to be a Founder's Book containing the names of the men, women and children who founded Oglethorpe University. In the course of time, Mr. J. T. Lupton gave the Founder's Tower which is commonly regarded as the most exquisite bit of college architecture in the Southern states, and in it is the Founder's Memorial Room, a room 20 feet square with a granite floor and limestone walls and Gothic windows, and now the lectern—or reading table—which is the gift of the Peter and Burghard Company, of Louisville, Ky., has arrived and has just been set up by Gus Straub, that staunch old master mason who has aided in the construction of all of the buildings on the Oglethorpe campus.

The lectern is a beautiful piece of workmanship, being of gracefully carved limestone. It is set in the center of the room and on it shortly will be placed the Founder's Book in which, alphabetically arranged under states and towns, will be forever kept the names of those who are building the institution. Students and visitors already know this room as a sacred memorial chamber, the students having adopted as a tradition the removal of their hats when they enter it.

In pure sentiment, this act of gratitude on the part of the authorities of Oglethorpe and of appreciation of the sacrifice of their friends has been rarely, if ever, equalled in the history of universities and colleges anywhere. It is proposed to keep this book, renewing the pages from time to time, forever as an undying memorial to the generosity of those who have aided and are still aiding the institution. The buildings of Oglethorpe University are built so as to endure indefinitely into the ages, and doubtless when it shall have been forgotten where Atlanta's present sky-scrapers were located, this memorial, more imperishable than bronze or marble slab, will bear witness to the love and generosity of the founders of Oglethorpe University. In the front of the book will be the members of the Board of Founders and following them will be the names of the women on the Woman's Board, followed in turn by the donors from all over the world. There are something like 5,000 of these names and they have subscribed over $1,000,000 to the University.

.....
CHILDREN

"NEBRASKA"?

Dear Standard:
 I am a little boy nine years of age. I go to school; I am in the fourth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Julia McClock. I like her fine. I have a pet puppy, his name is Neb, and when he is asleep if I take a straw and tickle him on the nose he will jump up and bark and growl. I will close now.
 Your friend,
 Clarence Holland.
 St. Paul, N. C., R.F.D., 4.

A NEW CHURCH

Dear Standard:
 I am a little girl 13 years of age. I am in the eighth grade at school. My teachers are Misses Hackett, Bradley, and Tarpley. I like them fine. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Betty Tarpley. I have recited both the child's and the shorter catechism and have received my Testament and Bible. Our pastor is Rev. W. C. Brown. We all like him fine. We are building a new Presbyterian church. It is not yet completed but we hope to be in it soon. I have two brothers and one sister. Please do not let my letter reach the wastebasket as I want to surprise my family.
 Your friend,
 Kathleen Dew.
 Raeford, N. C.

HAS A LITTLE AUNT

Dear Standard:
 I am a little girl nine years old. My birthday was last Monday. I go to church at White Plain Presbyterian Church. I like to go to school. I am in the third grade. I have another little brother and a sister. I am the oldest. I like to go to my grandmother's at Laurinburg. My little aunt, Evelyn Jackson, has written lots of letters to the Standard. I will close by asking a question: "Who was the oldest man in the Bible?"
 Your unknown friend,
 Annie M. Warner.
 Council, N. C.

STAYING WITH GRANDMA

Dear Standard:
 This is the first time I ever sent a letter to a paper, and I do hope you will print this one for me. I can't write myself, as I am just four years old, but I love to have the stories and letters in the Standard read to me. I don't live in Marion, but in Winnsboro. I am staying with my grandfather and grandmother here because my mother is sick in a hospital in Charlotte. My grandfather preaches in the Presbyterian Church here, and I go to Sunday School every Sunday. Miss Sophie Richards teaches me.
 Your little friend,
 Catherine Mobley Caldwell.
 Marion, S. C.

ATTENTION, MR. McLEAN!

Dear Standard:
 I am a little girl 11 years old. I am in the fourth grade at school. My teachers are Miss Sue Tate and Miss Ophelia Carter. I like them fine. We have Sunday School every day in our school and are going to have school all summer because we live on Burkemont. Please put my letter in your paper because I want Mr. MacLean in Greenwood, S. C., to see it. He was my pastor. I am going to say the Catechism Easter for a prize, so I had better close and study it.

Your little friend,
 Mullie Walker.
 Burkemont, N. C.

LOVES "UNCLE BOGGS"

My dear Standard:
 I have a doll that can talk and one that can sleep too. Their names are Johnnie Martha Marshall and Frances Elliott Springs. I go to Sunday School every Sunday and hear my papa preach. "Uncle Boggs" has just been to see us and I showed him all my playthings. I love him. I am six years old and my mama is writing for me. I can write a little bit.
 Sue Tylor Jopling.
 Lancaster, S. C.

THE M. T. I. SECRET SOCIETY

"Free at last," yelled Sid as he rushed madly out of the big school door on the last day of school. "Come on, let's whoop it up. Let's crowd six months of fun into two. Let's make things interesting."

And that very day in the hut we had built in the corner of Drew Atterbury's back yard, us four boys started the "Make Things Interesting" club, the M. T. I. First we thought we'd name it the "Whoop It Up" club, but the initials, W. I. U., didn't sound so good as M. T. I. Later, though, we thought any letters would have been better than the ones we chose. People began guessing what they meant. Jack's big sister said we certainly had chosen the right name. We really were the most terrible imps in town. Drew's big brother called us mysterious talking ignoramuses, and Aunt Sophia said of course we called it the Empty I club, because we each brought an empty I to each club meeting—judging from the amount of eats we got away with anyhow.

Naturally this joshing bothered us some, specially as we were feeling so set up and important. But we didn't let on we were bothered. Not us. We just smiled in a dignified and pitying way and went right on making things interesting.

First we set down the things that we usually do in the summer—swimming, tennis, fudge-making and hiking. Then regretfully we added to this list grass-cutting and store-going. Six things to make interesting—the last two almost impossible. That's what we thought then.

* * *

Well, we decided to keep our eyes and ears open and learn all we could about these things—even look 'em up in newspapers or magazines or the encyclopedia if necessary. Any one who brought in anything interesting that we could use would be president of the club next month. For the first month we didn't have a president, none of us naturally having any credit marks to begin with.

As it turned out we didn't have any president the second month either. So many marks were crowded onto the piece of paper, they were in such a jumble you couldn't tell which belonged to whom. Anyhow we didn't need a president. The club was getting on great without one—better'n with one, probably, no one being jealous that way. Our six things we'd started out to make interesting were getting there all right. Instead of just splashing around in the river or paddling dog-fashion or maybe ducking and coming up choking and sputtering with the insides of our noses and throats smarting like sandpaper, we were really learning to swim. Starting at the beginning, we learned to breathe rhythmically like it told in a magazine. We all took hold of hands and stood up in the water with just our heads out. Opening our mouths, we took deep breaths of air. Closing our mouths, we squatted down in the water all together and breathed the air out of our noses until little bubbles came in the water. Then up we came for more air. Then we learned to keep our eyes open all the time except just the second they strike the water. I'd never even thought of opening my eyes under water before, and it feels great, the cool water against your eyeballs. Now we're learning the crawl stroke and the flutter kick. We're going to have races across the river soon.

With tennis and fudge-making and hiking, we improved just the same, and it was heaps more fun. It's wonderful when you're really interested in anything, how news about it just comes flocking to your ears or comes springing out at your eyes from a newspaper or magazine. Even grass-cutting got quite exciting. By the time we got our lawn mowers sharpened and fastened on attachments we read about in the Scientific Weekly and tried speeding instead of loafing, it really was interesting. So interesting that we got excited trying to beat each other's records. To do this we had to have more grass to cut. So we cut the neighbor's—getting paid for it, of course. And doing it so quickly, we made such a lot of money that my dad called us the "Money Trust Incorporated." We sort of liked that, though, and decided to use the money for new bathing suits. Our old ones were awful shrunk and faded and all spotted over with little white moth-holes.

And store-going—we changed that, too. We took turns, one of us doing it each day for all four families. With the help of two wire baskets fastened on Jack's wheel, all the things could be carried at once. And say, we learned how and where to pick out the best fruits and vegetables. The neighbors began giving us their orders, too. And we made more money that way.

But on the fifth of September our flourishing young club had a setback. School started. The club went into mourning. We tied a black ribbon to the baseball club. We hung the flag at half-mast. Us boys were dressed in our old bathing suits with stripes painted on them round and round, black stripes. We were just wallowing in gloom.

"We should have worn them to school today," Sid said real spunky. "And tramped in lockstep like a chain gang. It's a prison right enough. Hard labor six hours a day for ten months, to say nothin' of home-work. For no crime neither, 'cept bein' a boy," ended Sid bitterly.

"Yep," Jack put in miserably; "but so long as we got to do it, couldn't we try to make even arithmetic and geography and all the rest interesting, like we did grass-cutting and store-going?"

"Fat chance," muttered Sid. Then followed a dismal silence. But before the meeting was done we decided to give Jack's suggestion a month's trial.

An we honestly did try. And we discovered some really passable reasons for almost every study. Writing, for instance, when you come to think of it, is mighty important. You need it all your life. And nothing looks greener than an ugly, wobbly kind of a handwriting. Specially your signature. You can't type-write that. Then geography, the study of the earth and its inhabitants. We never thought before that it was all discovered little by little and slapped onto the map. It must have been fun hunting out a little piece more to stick into the geographies. I bet Columbus had a thrill when he opened the new geography fresh from the press and found his America on the map.

* * *

Then we decided knowing something about the earth might come in handy to us when we became champions in swimming or tennis. Knowing something about the countries where the tournaments were to be held. Knowing enough to find them anyhow. And arithmetic, if we'd know more about that. And say, it was more fun when the teacher gave a hard question expecting you to drawl out, "I don't know," to not only answer her question but add something to it we'd read in some other book or magazine. I surprised Miss Baker once or twice that way myself.

A month went by in just no time at all, and our report cards were handed out. That night we were to have a meeting of the club. But before we could even start the club meeting Sid climbed up and ripped the black ribbon off the baseball club and tied the red and yellow bow back in place. After that he raised the flag from half-mast. After that he dragged out the striped bathing suits, and said coolly: "I move we make a bonfire of these."

We were so surprised we could do nothing but stare at Sid—Sid who had always hated school the worst of all and who was our leader.

"Sure," replied Sid in answer to our stares. "When I took home my report card my father nearly fainted with surprise. And you know how husky he is. Then mother, she was so tickled she got rattled and made both apple pie and chocolate cake for desert. And my little sister, she kept looking at me as if I was the tower of Pisa. Gee! This club ain't in mourning. No, sirree! This club's going to celebrate."—Dora Dexter, in The Continent.

THE SHINIEST DIME

One little girl had five little dimes;
 She had counted them over a good many times,
 And again and again she had left her play
 To plan how to spend them for Christmas Day.

For papa and mamma and baby boy
 And grandpa and grandma would all enjoy
 Her little gifts as much as a score
 Of other presents that cost far more.

Four of the dimes were dull and old,
 But one that was shining and new,
 I'm told;
 And once the little girl said to a friend,
 "This new one is almost too pretty to spend."

At last the Christmas shopping was done;
 The dimes were spent—yes, every one;—
 And Annette seemed the happiest girl alive
 As she hurried home with her parcels five.

She had a secret for mother's ear.
 "I bought a nice present for papa dear,
 And for grandpa and grandma and baby, too!
 But I spent the shiniest dime for you!"
 —Jessie L. Dritton, in St. Nicholas.

Lady (purchasing thermometer)—
 "And would you be so kind as to set it at 65, because that's what the doctor says I'm to keep the room at."— London Opinion.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Sykes-Holland—At the residence of the bride's father on the 22d day of March, Mr. Hasel Sykes and Miss Vannie Holland, both of Godwin, N. C., were united in matrimony, Rev. T. C. Croker officiating.

DEATHS

MISS JANE CAMPBELL

Inasmuch as our Heavenly Father has called from our midst our friend and fellow-worker, Miss Jane Campbell, we, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Pauls Presbyterian Church, wish to express our appreciation of her life and work among us.

The spirit of her service was that of an humble Christian, and though quiet and unassuming in manner, her cheerful disposition and gracious spirit won many friends.

The necessity of others made a strong appeal to her heart, and she was ever a friend to the poor.

She loved her church, and until her condition became too feeble, was a faithful attendant upon its services. Through a long, useful life, she was honored and loved by all who knew her, for her strong Christian character.

We miss her, and deeply sympathize with loved ones who miss her so sorely.

Mrs. A. R. McEachern.
Mrs. L. A. McGeachy.
Mrs. L. L. McGoogan.

MARGARET ELLA THROWER

In the silent watches of early morn, March 12, 1923, the Death Angel gently bore the spirit of Miss Margaret Ella Thrower from earth to Heaven.

For thirty-seven years, though frail in health, Margaret lived to cheer and bless the home. Her very frailty sweetened and purified her refined soul, keeping her "unspotted from the world," and endearing her not only to her family circle, but to all who knew her. Little children particularly were drawn by her patience with, kindness toward, and interest in them. Her home was often the scene of happy gatherings when Margaret was a child with children of the neighborhood, giving them her interest in play and sympathy in in trouble.

Since the death of their mother, four years ago, she and two sisters had lived alone, and it was Margaret who kept the home fires burning, and who with her gentle Christ-like life filled that home with a sweet peace and radiance, the memory of which will go with the now lonely sisters down through the years,—a blessed heritage of countless value and sacredness.

Never was she heard to murmur, always appreciative of and made happy by the smallest kindness; her life was an example of Christian cheerfulness and sunshine. Her faithfulness, toward her church and missionary circle was constant; her heart was always present, although her body might be absent, kept away by its frailty. The Christ whom she professed at an early age and acknowledged by uniting with the Presbyterian Church, was her pattern, her all in all until

God called her to be forever with Him where,

"We know He will but keep
Our own and His until we fall asleep."

For the bruised and broken hearts we pray the comfort of God's Holy Spirit; to Him who doeth all things well we give thanks for the beautiful life of this loved one, and thanks for the gift of His Son which enables us to say "Margaret,

'Thou, in the likeness of thy Lord shall shine,
And He shall bring the golden crown of thine—
Good-Night.'"

M. McG.

DR. GEORGE ALEXANDER GRAHAM

Dr. George Alexander Graham, son of Dr. Neill and Elizabeth (Cromartie) Graham, was born at Elizabethtown, Bladen County, N. C., February 28, 1852. During his childhood his parents moved to the old Whitehall community on Cape Fear river, where he attended the local schools and later went to Clinton High School. After studying medicine under his father he took one year in the Medical College at Louisville, Ky., then completed his course at the University of New York, where he graduated in 1875 with the degree of M.D. After his graduation he located at Cedar Creek, in Cumberland County where he practiced his profession until 1878 when he returned to his old home at Whitehall and took charge of his father's practice. Here, for eighteen years, as a beloved physician, he ministered to the people, his practice extending over a large portion of Bladen County. In 1896 he moved to Warsaw, in Duplin County, where he labored until he came to Raeford in 1900 and was associated with the late Dr. A. P. Dickson in the practice of medicine and in the drug business. In 1912 he decided to retire from the practice of medicine, and accepted the position of secretary and treasurer of the Hoke Realty Loan and Trust Company, which he handled with splendid success until he was forced by failing health to retire from active service about eight years later. During the last three years there was a gradual decline in his health until the end came and he passed to his eternal reward February 1, 1923. On January 4, 1877, Dr. Graham married Miss Cora James Cromartie, daughter of P. L. and E. J. (Faison) Cromartie, of Bladen County, who was his constant companion and helper, never being separated as long as one week at a time, during the forty-six years of their married life. Her devotion and faithful ministrations to him during his last sickness were the subject of comment by many admiring friends. Besides his widow he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Mary A. Stevens, of Councils, N. C., and Mrs. Janie Russ, of Wilmington, N. C., with other relatives and a host of friends to mourn their loss. Dr. Graham inherited and perpetuated in his life the high ideals of a noble ancestry. On both sides his ancestors were of the pure Scotch origin, running back through James Graham, Marquis of Montrose. He was a second cousin of the late Dr. Kidder Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and of Miss Mary Owen Graham, president of Peace Institute in Raleigh. He was recognized in the community as a man of fine judgment, good common sense and high ideals of justice and truth between man and man. His advice was often sought on business, political and religious matters.

He took a lively interest in civic affairs and was interested in every cause that was for the good of his State and community, but was too modest to even consider accepting any political office. He had a prominent part in the movement which led to setting off the new county of Hoke from parts of Cumberland and Robeson counties in 1911, and was a member of the committee that decided on the name for this county.

By the kindness of heart, his sense of humor, his integrity of character and his clean, pure life, Dr. Graham drew to himself many warm friends. During his last long illness he said it was worth all of the suffering he endured to see that he had so many faithful friends.

In religion Dr. Graham was a Presbyterian of the strictest sort. While generous and respectful toward the views of others he believed firmly in the truth of the scriptures as interpreted by the standards of his own Church. He was a ruling elder, and served as clerk of the session in the Raeford Church about 20 years. He also served many years as superintendent of the Junior and Primary department so the Sunday School, in which he was deeply interested. He was well posted on the Bible and religious literature and kept in touch with the various activities of the church to which he was a liberal contributor. A valuable citizen, a beloved physician, a noble Christian man has gone from us. Who can measure his influence for good?

Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ:
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.

The session of Raeford Presbyterian Church, bowing in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, hereby records its deep sense of loss and sorrow at the death of our beloved friend and co-laborer. He served well both God and his fellowmen, and his works do follow him.

We shall miss his kindly greeting, his wise counsel and his faithful service. To Mrs. Graham and the relatives we extend our heartfelt sympathy and prayers. It is ordered that this sketch be recorded in the minute book, that it be published in the Presbyterian Standard and a copy sent to Mrs. Graham.

Signed:
J. W. McLaughlin,
D. S. Poole,
McLean Campbell,
Committee of Session.

Build on resolve, and not upon regret,
The structure of thy future. Do not gripe

Among the shadows of old sins, but let Thine own soul's light shine on the path of hope

And dissipate the darkness. Waste no tears

Upon the blotted record of lost years,
But turn the leaf, and smile, or, smile, to see

The fair white pages that remain to thee.

It is a gracious form of speech that puts the means of grace and the hope of glory together as matters for thanksgiving. The right use of the means of grace keeps bright that hope always.

HAVE YOU?

By Emilie H. Caldwell

Have you ever noticed, sonny, when the robin builds his nest,
Collecting straws and feathers, work-
at his very best,
That when his bill's not occupied, as
on his way he wings,
Every little bit, dear heart, he stops awhile and sings?

Have you thought about it, sonny, how when Jackson comes to hoe
The garden, and the lot besides, just one row after row,
If you stop right near the garden gate, hidden from his view,
You'll hear a wordless, wierd old tune?
That's Jackson singing too.

Have you thought about your woodpile, dear,—a countless lot of sticks,
That seems to be quite mountain high
—and the boy who stamps and kicks
When daddy wants a load of wood?
Or, if instead of this he'd do
Just a little bit of whistling,—and yes,—some singing tool

You must try to learn this, sonny boy,—and some "grown-ups"
must too:
When your task is hard, the day so long, and the work is yours to do,
You'll help yourself,—and others,— and true happiness you'll bring,
If with the job, you'll whistle some,
And really, truly sing.

BRIGHTEN YOUR HOME WITH A PIANO

Did you ever notice the difference between a home that is filled with music and one that has no music to drive away dull care and bring that feeling of contentment and joy? You realize what it means to your wife and daughters to have a piano and to be able to render beautiful music therefrom, don't you? You know that music is one of the greatest gifts to mankind, and that it means culture, refinement and better homes.

Have you a piano or player-piano in your home? If not, do you think you can't afford one? Why, you don't know just how easy and safe it is to own a high grade instrument by buying through the Standard Piano Club.

Read What It Means to You and Others

It means that you are buying at wholesale prices instead of retail prices. Each club consists of 100 members who by buying together gain a much better price than any one purchaser can procure. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but you get wholesale prices.

By joining the club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a tremendous saving as compared with the customary installment prices which are usually much higher than cash prices.

You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation for a new one or a player-piano.

Don't delay longer. Get the Club's beautiful illustrated catalogue showing the many designs from which to choose and giving full particulars. Address Ludden & Bates, Standard Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Story and Incident

HIS DAY

By Mildred Welch

"Come Stokes," said the judge to his friend, "come on in to the parson's study; he'll be kept talking out there quite a while yet. It's a pleasant kind of place with books and a comfortable chair or two. I have something on my mind and I want to get it off."

The banker followed the speaker into the minister's study. A fire burned in the grate and both men drew up their chairs. "Great things aren't they, these 'Fathers and Sons' banquets?" said Stokes, a small, slenderly built man with grizzled hair and keen blue eyes. "Queer, isn't it, you think you know your own boy, seeing him as you do every day for twelve or fifteen years and then comes along an affair like this and my son gets up to respond to a toast and tells how he thinks fathers could help their sons along and I sit and stare at him. He isn't the boy who slams the doors and dog-ears the books and wears out endless shoes. He is a person with a will, a mind and a character of his own, and yet he is alarmingly like me."

"That's it," assented Arnold, one of the city's ablest lawyers and for some years a judge, "we can even see it ourselves, they are so like us—and how about the model? Say, old man"—he put his hand on his friend's knee—"would you say that this affair this evening, its spirit of fellowship, its success was due to any one man more than another?"

"Why of course," came the quick decisive answer, "we wouldn't have been here at all if it hadn't been for the parson. Brainerd was the whole thing."

"And such a thing as three hundred fathers and boys of every class and position sitting down to supper together, couldn't have been seen in our church before he came here," said Arnold. "You have brought up the very point I'm after, the reason for my bringing you here."

"Let's have it," said the other, "or Brainerd may interrupt us."

"Well, it is just this business of appreciation, the people we show it to and the ways we express it. Why, you see it in the very days we keep. There is Mother's Day—our mothers, God bless them. And Children's Day with its sunshine and songs and flowery symbolic gates through which the little ones pass. Then Memorial Day with its dim and dear memories and now Armistice Day with its two-minute's poignant silence in which we hear the world's heart beat. Birthdays and wedding days and a lot of others, all in memory of something infinitely dear and precious to the human spirit. And now here is a new one, a 'Fathers and Sons' annual banquet, the main purpose of which, I take it, is the developing of mutual appreciation between fathers and their boys. But, as far as I know, no one has even thought of finding a day when we may express appreciation of what any true minister of God means to his church, his community, to his State and country."

"No," said the banker, "we just accept it as we do the rain from heaven and fruitful seasons that fill our hearts with food and gladness—as a matter of course."

"Yes," Arnold went on, "The men with whom everything that is dear and tender and beautiful in life from infancy to the grave, is most closely associated—their service we take as merely our right and go our road."

"Do you know, Stokes, just as a lawyer, I used to wonder why Paul in his great arraignment of that hard old Roman world, included in his summing up as one of their great sins, this charge — 'neither were thankful.' But I think I understand now. When we do not appreciate the true and eternal values of life and do not even see why we should, it is because we have become spiritually blind and deaf—a more terrible catastrophe than physical loss of sight and hearing because we need not have it unless we choose."

"Go ahead," said the banker, "I imagine it is not just increasing Brainerd's salary you are driving at. I like to see you worked up, Arnold. It is not exactly the judicial spirit but—"

"But," retorted Arnold, "you will remember that I am Judge of the Juvenile Court where a man's human sympathies have a chance to deepen and grow. I don't have to preside over any of your miserable civil money cases."

"You look like the parson himself when you are roused, Arnold—fire in your eyes and a swell in your voice. But here I am waiting. Tell me about it." And he slipped farther down into the big chair and settled himself to listen.

"Well, here's a bit of my life I've never told you, though you know I had known Brainerd before he became the pastor of this church."

"Yes, I've always wondered what lay behind that speech of yours when you seemed to suggest that if we didn't try to get him here this church would have sinned away her day of grace."

"She would have, too," smiled Arnold. "Twelve years ago, I had finished by law course and after a hard struggle was getting a start, when I had a breakdown and the doctor ordered me to a farm and out of door life for six months. I went to a big blue-grass farm in Kentucky and through the long summer days and the glorious autumn weather, I was quite content to ride over the broad spreading fields, herding sheep, driving stock and caring for the blooded horses. But when the winter came the family moved to town. I boarded with the tenant, caught a heavy cold and by and by pneumonia set in. I had weathered the crisis but was not getting better when the doctor came in one day. "It's no go, young man," he said. It's a home and a woman's hand you are needing and I have brought my prescription with me." He opened the door and called. Brainerd came in. Weak, as I was, I noticed that he was a man about my age and he had that still shining kind of look in his eyes you know as well as I do. He came directly to the bed and said in his easy friendly way. "Dr. Matthews is one of my members. I am pastor of the church in town. We think you need a change so we have come after you." I was too sick to have protested and they did not wait. They wrapped me in blankets, rugs and robes, put me on a stretcher and carried me out to the waiting Ford and drove me to the manse. Brainerd, his wife and doctor put me to bed and the doctor left.

I was quite ill for awhile but when I grew stronger I asked the doctor to find me some place to stay for I did not want to be a burden on these kind people any longer. But the doctor positively refused to let me be moved and Brainerd and his wife insisted on my staying on: And I was glad, Stokes. You can't imagine what the warm, friendly atmosphere of that little white manse meant to a young fellow with no near kinsfolk, sick, lonely and in debt for his education. So I stayed on and when I was stronger, spent my days in the little living room downstairs and slowly my eyes began to see. I think I must have had a kind of half-baked idea that a preacher's job was an easy one. I thought of it in terms of two sermons a week and a prayer-meeting talk, a funeral now and then and weddings, the fees of which bought the wife's bonnets; other odds and ends like Sunday School and visiting sick people and opening the woman's missionary society with prayer. A nice, easy, safe respectable job, but not anything could demand and take a red-blooded man's whole life and interest, everything he has and is, as law and medicine do—if a man succeeds.

"And I thought I was a Christian too, but I know now I was not what my little girl calls 'a real Christian.' One day I asked the doctor what salary the church paid their minister."

"$1,000 and the manse," he said. "A few of us," (I had already seen that he had a warm friendship for the preacher and his wife), "I'm glad it is only a few, think $1,000 is a munificent salary and that with it we are fully paying for all Brainerd's time, his long and expensive education, the books he must have if he is to grow, his devotion and consecration, his prayers at the bedside of the sick and the dying and his spiritual power won through much wrestling in the dark

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway
 Oldest Largest Best Phone 281

The CALL FOR SERVICE

God is answering the prayers of His people. Hundreds of the youth of the Church are volunteering for Christian Service.

Some of these are ready to enter service now. Do you need workers in your Church, Sunday School or Community? Teacher, nurse, secretary, pastor's assistant, visitor, worker with boys or girls, stenographer, etc., of high Christian character and ability may be supplied.

Others are now in training in colleges, seminary or training school—they want work for the summer months. Some have completed the high school work, others the full college work, others a year or two of the theological seminary or training school.

We are prepared to serve church and public schools, high schools and colleges in securing high grade, experienced, Christian presidents, principals, teachers, housekeepers, secretaries, nurses, stenographers and all kinds of helpers.

We are helping teachers of character, ability and training into the broadest fields of service.

Write at once, enclosing stamp for reply, to The Westminster Teachers' Bureau, Henry H. Sweets, Manager, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

RHEUMATISM AND INDIGESTION

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection. Dr. Crosby writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder Troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began to use Shivar Spring Water and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClain of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter, of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs,

Box 3D, Shelton, S. C. Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____ Address _____ Shipping Point _____ (Please write distinctly.)

BIBLE STUDENTS AND READERS

You will find "Dummelow's Bible Commentary" satisfyingly beneficial. It is authoritative, comprehensive, useable, both for the clergyman and lay reader. Sent postpaid on receipt of price, $3.00. Money refunded if you are not satisfied. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C. I promptly supply Any Book, postpaid at publishers price.

ORDER ONE

of the few remaining copies of that most excellent book of sermons

By Rev. H. J. Mills

CONTRARY WINDS

A lady says: "His keen and sympathetic insight into human nature enabled him to present the lessons to be learned from God's Word in a most practical and attractive form."

Rev. John McSween says: "The freshness of thought, the originality of the themes, the deeply spiritual and evangelistic tone of the sermons make them delightful and inspiring reading."

The price of the book is $1.00

Order from Presbyterian Committee of Publication Richmond, Va. - Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

hours. There are even a few who think it entitles us besides to the service of his wife, the free right to criticize everything she says, does and wears, to know exactly what goes on inside the manse, what wages the cook gets, how the $1,000 is spent, if the minister and his wife ever fall out and if the children are properly disciplined. You see I am often questioned on my visits," there was a twinkle in his eye. "But there are a great many of us," he went on, "who know that no amount of salary could ever pay for the service of a man like Brainerd. How can money pay a man who on Sundays brings the living Christ before his people in such a simple, human way that we see and hear and touch Him and then goes out to live the pattern of that Life before our eyes along all the common ways of men?"

"The very books I saw on Brainerd's study shelves opened my eyes, Stokes. There were, of course, the minister's usual tools; commentaries and books of reference, church histories and lives of missionaries, the Old Testament in Hebrew, the New Testament in Greek and versions in modern speech. But there were other books, books of travel and biography, the great books of the ancients and new books on science and philosophy, some of the very ones I had hoped to buy, books that widen the horizons of a man's mind and heighten and deepen his hunger for knowledge and his passion for truth. 'How do you do it?' I asked one day, picking up a magazine read perhaps only by the inner circle of the thinkers, 'the quiet ones in the land.' Brainerd replied: 'I am a minister's son and Marian is a minister's daughter. We grew up with books. She went to college too—and well, plain clothes, simple furniture, plated silverware—one arranges those things, as the French say, but books, one cannot live and grow without books!'"

"And so, Stokes, I began to see the inside of the real minister's life. The congregation only sees the outside as it touches them personally, they do not know its inner and secret springs. Brainerd's study had an outer door besides the one opening on the living-room. My room was directly over it and sometimes I heard till long past midnight not words but the low murmur of voices. But one night, there came the sound of hard, dry sobs tearing themselves out of a man's heart and another night it was a woman's voice I heard—weeping. One morning at breakfast, seeing Brainerd looking pale and worn, I burst out (we were warm friends by this time) 'See here, Brainerd, you can't keep this up, you know. Do your people think you can run the church, study, preach, visit the sick, bury the dead, be the leading spirit of every forward movement in the town, answer a dozen outside calls a day and sit up half the night besides listening to their troubles?'"

"Someone else seems to have been sitting up half the night," Brainerd answered. "Sometimes, Arnold, I think perhaps that outer door is the symbol of a minister's best work, an unseen and an unknown ministry to wounded souls who come for comfort in the friendly dark, knowing they are safe from curious eyes and tongues. Marian knows they come and go, but she is never curious, she asks no questions." And a look of perfect understanding passed between the husband and wife. "Wounded souls," I said it over to myself, "so this is a part of every true minister's life, this unseen ministry to men and women who come to the servant, as long ago under other skies than ours a teacher in Israel, troubled in spirit, once came to the Master when the night was dark and the spring winds were blowing about the streets. I couldn't tell you, Stokes, what there was about life in that little manse that made such an impression on me. John Brainerd and his wife, the two children, a boy of five and a girl of three, seemed to me the most human, normal people I had ever known. You never thought of them as 'good'—you only knew they were lovely and wished you did not have to go away. But I learned there, Stokes, how fine a thing a home may be when the human elements in it are harmonized with the will of God that outer and material things seem in some strange way to become attuned to it too, so that the prayer of the old Greek philosopher—'O God make me beautiful within and that which is without to conform to the inner man'—is made possible in Christian experience and becomes true not only of the spirit and body but of a home and those who live there."

Arnold rose and leaned his tall form against the mantel. "It was twelve years ago, Stokes. I was on the threshold of life then and my assets

BOILS Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Foote's Sketches of North Carolina

Published 1848. Second edition exact reprint of the first. Thoroughly reliable. Invaluable to those interested in early history of Presbyterian Church and older families of the State. $2.25—Postpaid. REPRINT COMPANY, DUNN, N. C.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware Write JAMES ALLAN & CO. THE JEWELERS 185 King St. Charleston, S. C. 67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references We prepay charges on all purchases

TEACHERS WANTED Positions to offer in grades, High School subjects; Principals and Superintendents of H Schools; also in Colleges. Correspond with us at once. SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY 410 Wesley Memorial Bldg. Atlanta,

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete commercial and stenographic courses. Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions. Won't you be one to enroll? A postal address to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

DRAGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE Knoxville, Tenn.

ART GLASS for Churches and Residences Memorial Window Catalog and Special Design free on request F. J. COOLEGGE & SON ATLANTA, Ga.

NEW CHURCH DESIGNS "HIGHEST EFFICIENCY YET ATTAINED" ENDORSED BY CHURCH AUTHORITIES WRITE US YOUR NEEDS R. H. HUNT CO. ARCHITECTS CHATTANOOGA TENN DALLAS TEX

The Family Memorial

GOLDSMITH The selection of the proper stone for a family memorial calls for refined taste and mature judgment. OGLESBY GRANITE Monuments stand the test of time. They are known and admired throughout the land. MONUMENTAL ART—A beautifully illustrated booklet, showing famous memorials cut in Oglesby Granite mailed free on request. It gives many splendid examples and suggestions for the family memorial and will solve the problem of stone selection. Write for your copy today. OGLESBY GRANITE SALES CO. Sales Division Oglesby Granite Enterprises, ELBERTON, GA.

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

ere; a good education, my profes- sion which I had nearly wrecked my health in getting, and the years be- fore. I had no money, I did have debts. I had no family or influential friends to push me and—"And after twelve years," his friend interrupted, "you stand at the head of your profession and you are the beloved Judge of the Juvenile Court."

"If I am, it was because of something that Brainerd and his wife passed on to me in those weeks I was with them. I can't express what it was in words but it was a living, vital thing. They had it and they handed it on to me." He paused.

"I have been thinking for some time that we owe it to ourselves to increase our pastor's salary," said the banker. "Just one more thing, Stokes. A few days ago I suggested it to a wealthy woman of our church and she said: 'Of course he ought to have a living salary, but don't you think, Mr. Arnold, that a minister's spiritual power is heightened by the discipline of doing without luxuries, that sacrifice is a divinely ordained part of a minister's life.'" "What did you say?" "I did not say anything," answered the Judge. "I only looked at her a long minute and changed the subject. Now listen. A lady sum- mering in that small town with three children was taken suddenly ill. She was a stranger and when she died Brainerd took charge of everything, brought the little ones to his wife, made all the funeral arrangements and was the sole stay and solace of the grief-stricken children until their father could come from Oregon. I had fallen asleep on the couch in the living room one day and roused to erves Christian teachers by secur- ing for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational insti- tutions as president, principal, secre- tary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational rector, Sunday School worker, pas- tor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
100 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Why Take Laxatives?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature's itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

hear voices in the study. Brainerd was saying: 'Here is a letter, Marian, from our Oregon friend. He writes very gratefully and he sends a check for $50 begging me to use it for some comfort or pleasure—says he just had to express his gratitude in some way.' There was a moment's silence,—she was reading the letter. Then she said: 'We couldn't spend it on ourselves, could we? It is the price of grief—but, oh John, we can give it in her name to ease some old minister's last days.' My eyes were closed but I knew he smiled. 'Trust you for that, Marian—No, we could not use it for ourselves.'

There was a silence in the little study and then the business man said: "I wonder if your wealthy friend or you or I could have been trusted with—the price of grief?" "Not I," said Arnold, "but here is what I have been coming to all this long while. That you and I and other men and women whom we can associate with us, shall undertake to see that not only Brainerd but any other minister who serves this church, shall have his day. By 'his day,' I do not mean one day in the year when we will have speeches and toasts and give him a purse and then go our old way forgetting. But that we shall make actual and real the thing we promise when we call a minister—and that you may be free—and all the rest of it."

"When my boy, my only child, was ill with scarlet fever some years ago," said Stokes, "Brainerd sat with me in my den all through the long night until the child came back to us at dawn—It is not only the salary, is it Arnold?" "No, the salary seems to me to be only the outward and visible sign of the amount of our inward and invisible grace. It will mean for us a steadily growing and deepening appreciation of all that the true minister of God means to us, to our homes, our town and State and country, a warm friendly sympathy that backs him up all along the line—so that he may be free. Free from care and worry, free from anxiety about his children's education, about the future, about an old age and illness. Free to grow, free to pray with and for us, to comfort us, to guide us in all the lovely paths of peace, free to light the lamps in our own and our children's hearts—free to be all that God meant when He sent our minister to us."

Both men gazed into the embers of the dying fire. Then came the sound of footsteps along the passage. "There he is," said Arnold, but the banker said: "There was a man sent from God whose name was John."

* * *

(This story may be had in leaflet form by sending your name and postage to the Executive Committee, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.)

CHRISTIANITY A PRACTICAL THING

Religion takes a drunkard and makes him sober, a thief and makes him honest, a wicked man and makes him good. This it is that counts most in the extension of the kingdom of God among men. We are living in an age when all theories must be severely tested. So it must be with our religion. It must stand the test in the laboratory of the world. In the life that it produces does it proclaim its worth. It is good to realize that it thus meets the requirements of the age.—Philippine Observer.

No man has a right to do as he pleases unless he pleases to do right.

A SIMPLE MAN'S SIMPLE CREED

Elisher—he's our hired man— Allows there ain't no better plan Of circumventin' woes an' cares Than smilin' when y' come down-stairs.

Elisher smiles an' fore you know The rest of us is smilin', so Ketchin'-like it is! My law, It flits from him to me an' maw, An' then across to Uncle Dri Or Mary Ellen mebbe; why, I've seen it set the pup A-waggin' fore the sun was up! Then bimeby, as like as not, Some man will pass that's mebbe got A mortgage that his crops can't fetch, But like enough the man will ketch Elisher's smile an' drop his frown, An' tote the smile away to town. An' peddle it where, bein' wuss, The people need it more than us! The feller at the griss-mill gits The spirit of the smile—it flits Across and through the blacksmith's door, An' breezes through the general store. Because Elisher's smile is jis' As ketchin' as the pink-eye is! An' then the feller brings it back At night along the back-urds track; An' scatters it on either side The Country Road, both far an' wide, Until, by the time when we get in From work, the smile is back agin! Back home again!—an' seems t' bless, Elisher for his cheerfulness. "Because you smiled," it seems to say, "The world has had a holiday!"

—John D. Wells, in Ex.

Clergyman—"I brought back the secondhand car I bought from you last week. It is too obstreperous."

Dealer—"What's wrong? Can't you run it?"

Clergyman—"Not and stay in the ministry."—Motor Life.

PREACHERS AND TEACHERS

To aid the dissemination of useful knowledge, I supply books, postpaid, to Clergymen and School Teachers at 10 per cent less than publishers' prices. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. Assets $1,011,288.30 F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules Effective January 28, 1923 Charlotte, N. C. Daily Except Sunday as Shown Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points. For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to J. K. POWELL, D. T. A. P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN! There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes. Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity. NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN The Presbyterian College of South Carolina Standard College Courses Large and Strong Faculty Beautiful Grounds Healthful Climate Ideal Surroundings For Catalogue and Information, address Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D. Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

Table with columns for EAST BOUND, WEST BOUND, STATIONS, and DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN/FAYETTEVILLE. Includes train times for various stations like Aberdeen, Ashley Heights, Sanitorium, etc.

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

Sparkles

It Broke his Fall

Mose Lightfoot, one of the best hod carriers on the job, lost his footing and fell to the street, four stories below.

Mose lit on his head, struck the cement pavement and went through to the basement.

When the foreman went to the basement, expecting to find Mose cold and stiff, he met Mose coming up the steps.

"Great Scott, man, aren't you killed?" he cried.

"No," Mose replied, dusting off his clothes, "I guess dat concrete pavement musta broke mah fall."—Youngstown Telegram.

Poetry Isn't Golden

Poet—Would that my muse might soar aloft and, cleaving the empyrean blue, find words to sing the glorious glory of your hair of burnished gold. Maiden (titan-haired, but prosaic)—That sounds very pretty, Mr. Scribbers, but do you know the difference between your poems and my hair?

Poet—Ah, a conundrum. I give it up. What is the difference, O fairest of your sex?

Maiden—Well, my hair's red.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

"Yes, sir, I always goes to church when you preaches."

"I am glad to hear that, but why when I preach? Why not every Sunday?"

"Because I'm always sure of getting a good seat when you preaches, sir!"—The Passing Show (London).

FOR SALE—Drug Store in town in Piedmont section of South Carolina for sale. The owner wants to retire from business and will sell reasonable. Address, Druggist, care Standard.

A Budding Romance

There was hardly even standing-room in the crowded train, but a young woman wedged her way just inside the door.

Each time the car made a sudden forward lurch she fell back, and three times she landed in the arms of a portly man who was standing on the platform. The third time it happened, he said quietly,

"Excuse me; but hadn't you better stay here?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Agent—When are you going to pay for that sewing machine I sold you?

Mrs. Deerie—Pay for it? Why, you said that in a short time it would pay for itself!—Kansas City Star.

Some School Answers

Some amusing examples of American school children's "Howlers" are provided by recent examination papers in New York. Here are a few choice specimens:

"A vacuum is a large empty space where the Pope lives."

"In India a man out of a cask may not marry a woman out of another cask."

"Elaine gave Lancelot an omelet before he departed for the tournament."

"Parallel lines are the same distance all the way and do not meet unless you bend them."

"An angle is a triangle with only two sides."

"The qualifications for citizenship are that you must be neutral born or made."

"Gravitation is that which if there were none we should all fly away."

"Louis XVI was gelatined during the French Revolution."

"Horse power is the distance one horse can carry a pound of water in an hour."

"Guerilla warefare is where men ride on guerillas."

"Tennyson wrote 'In Memorandum.'" —Selected.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Five Makes of Pianos Comprise THE STIEFF LINE:
Stieff
Shaw
Bennett-Bretz
Davies & Sons
Leslie Bros.

There is a piano to fit every purse. $340.00 up. Payments surprisingly small. Write for catalogue.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

Those Super "WAITE" GRASS RUGS Have Arrived

These are the market's highest type of grass rugs—appropriate for every room in the home. The new patterns and color combinations are especially attractive. Pay a visit to our floor covering department.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N.

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES 14 - 16 - 18 years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

N. C. Library Dept.

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., APRIL 4, 1923

No. 14

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
Uniformity of Worship	1
Our Missionaries and "The National Christian Council"	1, 2
"Peregrine Papers"	2
The Development of the Spiritual Life	2
The Moral Responsibility of the Secular Press	2
CONTRIBUTED—
The Footnote to John 9:38—By Prof. Addison Hogue	3
The American Revision	3
"Christos Anesti"—By William A. Lloyd	3
The Seven Black Sheep—By Rev. T. B. Gratton	4
"Except They Be Sent"—By Nelson Bell, M.D.	4
How Can It Be Done	4
The Bible in the Schools of Chattanooga, Tenn.—By C. F. Evans	4
Virginia Synodical Conferences at Massanetta Springs	4
Report of the Assembly's Ad Interim Committee on Vacancy and Supply	5
"Faithful Unto Death"—By Rev. A. H. Mellen	5
Who Wants to Help?—By Rev. H. H. Sweets, D.D.	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
Relief Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

UNIFORMITY OF WORSHIP

WE recall that when Elizabeth came to the throne the English Prayer Book was revised and put into the shape in which it has come down to us. Then Parliament passed an Act of Uniformity, which required that all worship should be conducted according to the Prayer Book. The imperious young queen was inflexible in her demand that the Act should be strictly enforced. Many of the Bishops did not wish to comply with it. They had spent a season of exile on the continent and had come under the influence of the Reformed Churches of Switzerland, where the worship of the church had been reduced to Apostolic simplicity. They had come to like this manner of worship. When they went back to England, and were told that they could not preach unless they would put on the gown and surplice; that they could not baptize a baby unless they would make the sign of the cross on its forehead and breast; that they could not celebrate the Lord's Supper unless they would partake of the elements kneeling, some of them rebelled. One or two went to prison rather than wear the gown and conduct the service after the manner prescribed. But the Queen was head of the Church, and she was like her old daddy, Henry VIII, a hard and unyielding head. The Parliament had created a Court of High Commissioners to be her agent or instrument in enforcing her will. It was near akin to the Spanish Inquisition. It made life very wretched for those who refused to conform to the Prayer Book. By this means the worship of the English became stereotyped and so remains to this day. The Episcopal Church in this country has inherited its form of worship from the mother church in England. Consequently there is great uniformity of worship in the Episcopal Church. The Prayer Book, which contains the order and forms of worship, is an official book, and all the preachers are expected to confine their ministrations to the prescribed rules.

We have grown up with a prejudice to that manner of worship. We have sympathized with those Bishops of the English Church who contended for liberty. We have been disposed to say hard things against the stubborn queen who made them all wear the same clothes that the Catholic Bishops and Priests had previously worn, and to conduct the worship substantially after the same pattern that had been in use for a thousand years under the rule of the Pope. We still object to this particular pattern of worship. But as to the matter of uniformity, our feelings have undergone some change in these latter days. There has come to be too much latitude in our Presbyterian churches. Liberty has degenerated into license. All of our Presbyterian churches, North and South, have Directories of Worship. The general plan of these Directories has come down to us from the Westminster Assembly. That original Directory of Worship was adopted to take the place of the prescribed ritual in the Episcopal Church. While it allowed the minister more liberty than was permitted by the English Prayer Book, it was meant not only to be a guide, but also to secure uniformity of worship in the Presbyterian Church. In all Presbyterian churches, the Directory of Worship is a part of the constitution of the church. It has been passed upon by the Presbyteries and adopted precisely in the same way in which the Form of Government and the Rules of Discipline have been adopted. The design has been not merely to help the preacher by furnishing him guidance, but to set limits and bounds to his public ministrations. The Directory is a covenant between all who are ordained to preach in the Presbyterian Church, in which they agree to conduct the worship after this fashion.

Do our preachers regard the Directory of Worship as having any binding force? Do they all read it? We raise this question because we hear it said sometimes that in some sections of the country when one goes to the Presbyterian Church to worship he is tempted to believe that he has made a mistake and has entered an Episcopal church. In our own church perhaps innovations have not gone so far, but there are considerable variations. When we go to some of our city churches to preach, we are furnished with the order of service. It is very properly taken for granted that without such special coaching we shall lose our way. In addition to the doxology at the beginning there is the gloria, and the choir will come in at the close of the invocation with the chant of the Lord's Prayer. Then perhaps there is responsive reading, and it may be that the Apostles' Creed will have to be recited. The collection, or offering, is another thing to be considered. It may come before or after the sermon. It may or it may not be prayed over. When no instructions have been given in advance, we have thought best, in order to avoid the possibility of an awkward blunder, to beckon to one of the officials and have him come to the pulpit during the singing to furnish needed information. We grew up at a time when it was not deemed necessary to consecrate the offering by a special prayer. We have thought that there might be equal propriety in offering a dedicatory prayer over some of the other acts of worship. For example, when a soloist has entertained the congregation with an artistic performance, not a word of which has been understood, it might be as well to tell the Lord that the performance was meant as an act of worship, and we hope He will accept it and bless it.

We think our Directory of Worship is entitled to more consideration. We ought to have such measure of uniformity as that we shall always feel at home when we go to a Presbyterian church to worship.

OUR MISSIONARIES AND "THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN COUNCIL"

Last week we devoted much space to two letters from our missionaries in China, who evidently feel that they have been wronged by a remark of the editor. In giving an account some time ago of the refusal of the North Kiangsu Mission to cooperate with "The National Christian Council" of China, we mentioned the vote, twenty against the step and seven in favor of it; and then we added that the Church at home would like to know the names of the seven.

Three of them have written, and our curiosity is satisfied, and contrary to what they apparently expect, we do not propose to hold them up as heretics, or to put them on a black-list.

Our confidence in their piety and soundness has not been impaired. We believe that they were sincere and conscientious in what they did. They have done good work and by their self-devotion they have earned the confidence of the Church at home, and we would say nothing to destroy that confidence.

We realize that men, separated by land and sea, must be unable to view any question alike. What we wish is that they will try to regard this question as we see it on this side of the water. We realize that when men are fighting heathenism in all of its horrors, they will welcome any ally that comes to their help, and that when they are facing such a danger, the fact that the man whose elbow touches their's and whose help brings them relief, does not believe in every respect as they do, is a matter of less importance than it would be if their surroundings were different.

Over here we face another danger. We see rationalism creeping into the churches of the land, and seminaries teaching heresy, and denying the divinity of Christ. The faithful in every denomination are realizing the need of separation from these men, and of the danger of any compromise with evil.

When we see our missionaries, for the sake of a doubtful advantage, willing to have fellowship with the same school of doubt, we feel aggrieved.

Such is the feeling, not only among our ministry, but among the rank and file, with the result that the contributions to the cause are falling off. We have heard of more than one liberal giver who has declared that he will give no more, as long as he sees this tendency to compromise with error.

Knowing, as we do, this general and growing feeling, and seeing the deficit increasing each year, we are compelled to utter a word of warning to these brethren.

While we can see the advantage to the missionaries of a united body all working to the same end, we believe that ultimately our men would fare better by presenting a compact front against the claims of rationalism. Think what an impressive witness it would be to say to men, that though we may be helped by compromising with error, or even by associating with those holding it, we intend to obey the great Apostle, when he says, "Come out and be ye separate."

Polycarp relates that when the Apostle John was entering a public bath in Ephesus, he learned that Cerinthus, who denied the divinity of Christ, was present, and that John cried out, "Let me escape at once, lest the roof fall upon us."

When we learned that some of our missionaries were associating in a union with men who denied the divinity of Christ and doubted the resurrection of Christ, we too were anxious lest the roof fall upon them.

The Southern Church was born in a desire to witness for the spiritual character of the Church of Christ, and we have ever been a witness-bearing Church. Let us, whether at home or abroad, continue to witness for the great fundamentals of our faith, even though we be in an apparently hopeless minority.

"PEREGRINE PAPERS"

There is in all books of travel a certain sameness, which inclines most readers to pass by on the other side. The Guide Books generally furnish the material of such books, which accounts for their proverbial dryness.

These papers of travel are in a class to themselves. As far as we have had experience along this line, they are unlike anything on land or sea.

The author is Rev. Dr. W. H. T. Squires, of Norfolk, Va., the pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church. It is printed in attractive style, on the best grade of paper, from clear type, with wide margins and a complete index. There are more than 30 illustrations, some of real merit. So much for the mechanical work of the book, but what shall one say about the contents.

Dr. Squires in this book of travels, does not try to link his chapters, but he visits each place on his journey and weaves around it every-day stories, giving it a local flavor and seasoning his story with enough gossip to give it a piquant flavor, which adds much to one's enjoyment.

We opened the book with that feeling so common to reviewers, "Here is a job I must get through." We had not read many pages before we realized that it was a book out of the ordinary, full of seasoning, the Attic salt predominating. Bible lands become more real, and our Lord Himself in His human nature is nearer to us than ever.

The price is $1.50 postpaid, and it can be ordered from our Richmond Committee of Publication.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE SPIRITUAL LIFE

The most serious criticism of the Salvation Army that we have ever heard, was they did nothing to develop the spiritual life of their converts. They gathered them from the slums and from among the outcasts of men, and in that respect they excelled the churches. They, however, did nothing to develop the new life implanted, so that too many of the converts are like the seed that fell among thorns, but failed to be nourished.

Dr. James H. Taylor, of the Central Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., is one pastor who fully realizes the need of deepening the spiritual life of the Christian. In a pastoral letter sent to his people he lays special emphasis upon the cultivation of spiritual life. To this end he lays emphasis upon Bible reading, family worship, religious instruction of the children of the family, personal prayer, church attendance, reading of church papers and missionary literature, the keeping of the Sabbath, and greater liberality in supporting the Lord's work.

It is true that the Great Commission laid upon the Church the duty of evangelizing the world, and under that commission the Church is seeking at home and abroad to bring men to Christ.

However, during the same period, between His Resurrection and Ascension, He reminded Peter, and through him the other disciples, that he must feed His lambs and His sheep.

After men are brought into the church they

THE BURNING BUSH

By C. J. McCombs

The burning bush doesn't mean anything
Unto any man, be he peasant or king,
Unless he has a mind and a will
To turn aside, and just be still,
And listen to God.

The world is full of many a burning bush,
If we would turn aside, and look, and hush
All our foolish fears and complaining,
Look around and see the bushes remaining,
Sent down from God.

We pass many blessings all unseen;
We do not mean to, but we're between
The forces of good, and the forces of evil,
With a personal God and a personal devil
Pulling to and from God.

So the only way for us to rise
From this sinful world to our home in the skies
Is to turn aside and not repine,
But take time to consider things divine;
Ordained of God.

The way to receive the blessing of the Lord,
Is to put our trust not in Jonah's gourd;
But to search His word, try His plan to meet,
Turn aside and take our shoes from off our feet
And listen to God.

Yes, the burning bushes are all around,
But to see them look up, not down on the ground;
Just turn your eyes heavenward, and inspiration get;
Then you can work in contentment, you won't have to fret:
Just work with God.

If we didn't consider these bushes commonplace,
As is so apt with our frail human race;
If fewer were Marthas, and more were Marys,
And not seek these bushes to find only berries,
But to find God's truth.

Be still then my soul, and listen to your God,
For it is a long, rugged path over which you've trod;
But through the rest of the way talk to Him about it,
First learn His will, then to others shout it;
Then tell them of God.

must not be left without food, else they will be dwarfed in their spiritual life. One of the most encouraging signs of our times is the manifest awakening even among business men, to the need of old-fashioned family religion, which manifests itself in Bible reading and family prayers.

THE MORAL RESPONSIBILITY OF THE SECULAR PRESS

There is a prevalent idea among the people that the religious press is alone in its responsibility for the morality of the people. When you remember how limited is the circulation of the religious press, as compared with that of the secular paper, you can easily see how much more important it is that one should inculcate morality as much as the other. One comes once a week, and is read by only a few in a family, while the other comes daily, and is read by nearly every one in the home.

When the church paper preaches morality, it is too often regarded as "shop talk," a matter of course; but when a secular paper preaches the same, the readers conclude that it is sincere, and the effect is all the greater.

We are proud of the secular press of our State, in this respect. While now and then some would-be cynic who imagines that a slur on religion is a short road to a reputation for independent thinking, tries to pose as a critic of religion, in the main our editors are God-fearing men who use their great influence for the advancement of the religious life of the State.

The press of this city is showing this spirit to an increasing extent. The cause of prohibition has a great defender in the two papers of Charlotte. Then we have been struck with the changed tone of the Observer's editorials. In the past its support was rather neutral—that is, it kept hands off never defending the wrong, it is true, yet never actively fighting for the right. Now it is quite emphatic in the expression of opinion and thus it deals some heavy blows for the right.

A recent editorial on Prayer would have done credit to any church paper.

What we say of the Charlotte papers could probably be said of all. However, since the war, the secular papers demand cash instead of trading with the result that we have only a short exchange list, as cash is never too abundant in our money till.

Devotional

THREE KINDS OF JOY

There is, first, the joy of acquisition, whether of postage stamps or old china or more money. There is, second, the sleek, substantial joy of possession. But we never master the first letters of the alphabet of joy until we have bled into the veins of others some part of our selves. This is the joy of redemption. One of the quaint legends come down to us from Palestine says that in heaven the first notes heard at dawn are trumpet-tones of joy. Heaven is glad because the language its inhabitants speak is unselfishness. When Lucifer became self-seeking, he fell. And when that fallen son of the morning was asked what he missed most in his exile, he replied: "I miss most the sounds of the trumpets in the morning." Selfishness poisons its own cup; commi-hari-kari; kills the joy it seeks.—George Clarke Peck.

And the Christ of history, the exalted Son of God, a living Presence with us today. Not remote but ever near, He walks by our side in all life's experiences. Not only enthroned in heavenly glory

"But warm, sweet, tender, even yet
A present help is He,
And faith has still its Olivet
And love its Galilee."

Such is our wonderful Saviour, a Friend with human heart of sympathy who has trod our pathway and touched with the feeling of our infirmities; a Shepherd who gave His life for the sheep in an all-atoning sacrifice; an Advocate who represents us with all-prevailing power before the throne of the Judge Eternal; a Champion who can break the power of cancelled sin and the prisoner free; a Victor who can smite death's threatening wave before us; a Lord in which we see the beauty and glory of the face of God. We are called upon to confess Him with lip and life. To us to live is Christ. Knowing Him, we have eternal life. We have all our soul needs in Jesus. There is no substitute for Him. None can share His throne in our hearts. The King is His who is the Christ—the anointed King. Our joy is in Him, where all fullness dwells. We can say with Charles Wesley, "Thou, O Christ, art all I want," our daily life should be one of close, constant communion with Christ.—R. Ditterich, in N. Y. Advocate.

For a traffic caution or a general admonition against thoughtlessness, "Safety first" is eminently useful. As a life maxim it may be altogether pernicious. "Safety first" would have negated the challenge of Luther, voyage of Columbus, and the Wesleyan revival. It would have palsied all the great adventurers of the ages. O program of "Safety first" there would be no Cromwell, no Lincoln, no Roosevelt to remember with pride and emulate with joy. Nay, no Cross for the lifting of mankind. When life's sublime voices summon, and its lines are drawn, one may need to fling caution to the winds, for the saving of his own soul, to say naught of humanity's stake in his adventure. "He that findeth life shall lose it, but he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it unto life eternal."—George Clarke Peck.

THE FOOTNOTE TO JOHN 9:38

By Prof. Addison Hogue

A recent editorial in this paper (October 11th) called renewed attention to the astounding foot-note to the above passage as found in the American Revised Version. Our blessed Lord had just declared Himself as the Son of God; making the statement to the man to whom He had restored sight. The man "worshiped Him," and (as so often in the Revised Version) a foot-note explains that "the Greek word denotes an act of reverence, whether paid to a creature or to the Creator." But—distressing to relate—in this place the note reads "Whether paid to a creature (as here) or to the Creator." Bad enough, in all conscience, even if it was an unintentional error for: ". . . to a creature or (as here) to the Creator."

But taking it at its very worst and assuming that some person with Unitarian beliefs slipped the words "(as here)" into this foot-note, it strikes me as a gross injustice for anyone to argue on so slender a basis that "the American Revision was prepared under the unconscious influence of Unitarians;" for there are other places where the same statement could have been made, but was not, e. g., in Matt. 2:11, the wise men "Saw the young child and Mary his mother, and they fell down and worshipped him." The foot-note is given as it was first quoted above (no "as here"), though this would have been a capital opportunity for the Unitarian influence to inject its poison, because here was the little baby recently born into the world, and apparently a "creature" as much as any other infant.

Another unexcelled opportunity presented itself in Heb. 1:6: And when he again bringeth in the first-born into the world he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him. Here the foot-note is entirely lacking, leaving readers to the natural association we have of "worship" as being an act of homage rendered to the Deity; and the absence of the foot-note carries with it the assurance that the first-born was very God. Why did Unitarian influence overlook such a passage as this? You will find steadily that the explanation (in the foot-note) of "worship" is omitted when God is the object of worship. A Unitarian would accord with us in that, but to let the author of Hebrews teach that the Son was to receive the same worship was a remarkable oversight indeed.

I wonder how many readers of the New Testament ever noticed that place in John 9:3 until someone called attention to it. I had owned my present copy for 12 years, and had (as I thought) passed every word in careful review, comparing the two versions with one another and with the Greek text; but I never noticed it until a minister of unusual scholarship in the New Testament showed it to me, and he himself had never seen it till someone showed it to him. Those of my readers who use the American Revised Version—may their number increase!—can easily erase the obnoxious words; and as they do it they can ask themselves why that Unitarian was so cowardly as to tuck his reprehensible statement away in a fine-print foot-note? Why didn't he find some place in the body of the text where it would be seen and read of all who should use this version? This one unadmittable instance is just about the slenderest basis I ever knew of, on which to condemn a great and noble work.

Let me make a comparison between the obscurity of his foot-note and a passage in Exodus, in which the old version flagrantly dishonors God by making Him tell the Israelites to "borrow" jewels of gold and jewels of silver from the Egyptians before their flight from Egypt. Of course there was no intention of returning what was thus borrowed, and in the 37th Psalm we are told "The wicked borroweth and payeth not again." How shall we explain the glaring discrepancy? Simply thus: The old version had there a Hebrew word shaal, which means ask or ask for, and in 82 places (see Young's Concordance) it is so translated; but in five places they rendered by our word "borrow;" and of all the 87 places to choose from, what must they do but take a place like that in Exodus, and make God seem to connive at dishonesty! Is it fair, then, to say that the old version was made under the unconscious influence of dishonest men? Away with such a thought. The Revisers, of course, removed this gross blunder and thereby have removed a difficulty that has greatly disturbed many a loyal and loving heart. This principle that guided the old translators, viz: to use different English words for the same Hebrew or Greek word when the meaning remained the same, has been a serious impediment in comparing Scripture with Scripture. The great Dr. Broadus in his matchless commentary on Matthew says (p. 512): "The careful student of the English Bible . . . has been misled a thousand times, either imagining two passages to contain the same Hebrew or Greek word when they do not, because the English has the same word, or failing to learn, in highly important cases, that two passages do contain the same word in the original, because the English has rendered differently. It is of course impossible to translate the same Hebrew or Greek word in every case by the same English word; but wherever this can be done with due regard to the meaning, it is a grave fault to neglect it merely for the sake of gratifying a certain fastidious taste in English style." But precisely this "grave fault" was made a regular principle by the old translators, and in countless instances they have thereby obscured the real meaning, sometimes seriously so; the worst of all being "borrow" for "ask for" in Exodus.

Contributed

Mr. Editor—or Messrs. Editors—we are not old enough to be unwilling to surrender former beliefs when better ones are clearly revealed to us; and we know perfectly well that in the lapse of more than three centuries a vast amount has been learned by diligent and reverent study, research, explorations, excavations, discoveries, etc. The opposers of the Revised Version seem to base their opposition almost entirely on "the majesty of the style" of the old version, and on their unwillingness to change from phraseology endeared to them by familiar and tender associations. These reasons might avail and prevail in the case of hymns; but in the case of God's inspired Word—never!

Washington, D. C.

THE AMERICAN REVISION

The first formal meeting of the American scholars who constituted the American Revision Committee, took place on October 4, 1872, and the General Assembly of 1922 recommended the celebration of the semi-centennial of this interesting occasion. Many such celebrations have been held in various places, in which emphasis has been placed upon the value of the work of the scholars who composed this committee.

As a student under Dr. Philip Schaff, and at his invitation, it was the privilege of the writer to attend a meeting of most of these American revisers, and a number of the most eminent of the English members, and to hear addresses from most of them as they were introduced by Dr. Schaff. At that time, and on many preceding occasions, we heard glowingly presented expressions of hope that the projected revision might be of great value to the Bible-loving world.

We can sympathize with Dr. William Elliot Griffis, an article from whom appears in another page, in the interest and regard he manifests for Dr. Philip Schaff. Our seminary life was brighter and more profitable by reason of the exhilarating and scholarly instruction received from him. All who received his instruction are sure to remember him with great affection and regard.

We can also agree with Dr. Griffis in what he says of the value of the reverent students of the Bible to be found in the Revised Version. It would have been the marvel of the century if those men had not been able to add something to the accuracy of the translation. They had the advantage of some additional manuscripts of importance. They had the advantage of three additional centuries of comment and study by scholarly and faithful students of the Scriptures. Above all, they had the advantage of the Authorized Version itself, which for three centuries has been the most illustrious example and fountain of pure and beautiful and exact English in the world. In some ways they took advantage of the helps that came to them. That they did not rise to their full opportunity must not be laid to the charge of any unwillingness on their part. They were scholars, but they evidently did not have the touch which made them able to produce the best and most acceptable English.

As one who sat during a whole year in Dr. Schaff's class-room and listened to his charming efforts, it has always been our profound impression that he would undoubtedly have been very helpful in revising Martin Luther's German version of the Scriptures. And so we agree with Dr. Griffis in his estimate that this latest version "can not hope to compete, in music to the ear when read, with the charmed spell of the three centuries' use of the Version of 1611."

As a help to students, in the library and class-room, this recent version has acknowledged value, but for use in the pulpit, the family, and for personal delight in devotion, it is largely a lost opportunity, and no force or authority can make it displace, in the popular heart and in the service of the sanctuary, the beloved Authorized Version.—Herald and Presbyterian.

The wealth of a Rockefeller can not heal a broken heart and the wisdom of all our universities can not turn into the paths of righteousness a wayward soul. Men can be born again only through religion. To make men over is the real purpose and function of the churches.

"CHRISTOS ANESTI"

By William A. Lloyd, of Sydney, Australia

Knight of the Order of the Holy Sepulchre, ex-Australian forces in the Near East during the Great War, Representative in Turkey of the Liverpool "Courier," Correspondent with the Greek Army in Asia Minor and Thrace—1919-1922, Member of the Constantinople Committee for the Liberation of the Pontus, etc.

At the close of 1921 in the course of my work it became necessary for me to visit certain parts of Asia Minor situated in the war zone. There were no boats running on account of the danger. The Greek authorities in Constantinople very kindly placed a destroyer at my disposal, the "Nike" ("Victory"). Before leaving Constantinople the American Near East Relief representatives there asked the Greek authorities if the "Nike" might call at Derindje, in the gulf of Ismid, and load some relief stores for distribution to the Christian refugees in the Broussa district. The Greeks gladly gave the required permission.

We reached Derindje without mishap. While the "Nike" was loading I went ashore, and was courteously conducted over to the Near East Relief depot by the local representative. While talking to some of the refugees—men, women, and little children, I was surprised and delighted to meet an old friend—a Greek priest whom I had known many years previously.

He was just a typical Greek priest, like one meets everywhere in the Near East. His coat, once black, was now green with the rays of many summers, his hands were hard with toil, as were the hands of the Galilean fisherman, for his little flock were poor, and he shared their poverty. In imagination I can see him now, as I have so often seen him in reality, his kindly old wrinkled face eloquent testimony of a life of devotion and self-denial in the service of the little flock which Christ had committed to his care. My memory went back many years, and I could still see him holding aloft the Sacred Host, his face beaming with an heavenly radiance, still see him at the Horea Pyle—the Beautiful Gate of the Altar—imparting his blessing to his spiritual children. And as I recalled the beatific vision, I clasped both his hands. Reversing the usual process, for, in the East, it is customary to kiss the hand of the stewards of the Holy Mysteries, he would have kissed my hand. But I would not allow that, and when we had both mastered our emotion, he told me the story of the long years since we had met.

And this is the wonderful story the old priest told me. A band of Turks had one day descended on his village. There was the usual scene of murder and outrage. The Turks forcibly abducted many of the young women, and even little girls of tender years. Better, far better, had they shared the fate of their parents. Together with a remnant of his little flock, he had managed to escape. For days they had wandered foot-sore and weary, living on herbs and the leaves of trees. Some of them died by the way, and were laid to rest with the rites of the church they had loved so well in life, and for which they had suffered so cruelly during the long Turkish night. At last some of them refused to go any further. The old priest reasoned with them, and told them of the sufferings of the Man of Sorrows. But they would not listen to him. "There is no Christ," they said, "He is dead, and it is better that we die, too, and end all our misery."

Then, shortly afterwards, by accident the little band stumbled on the tracks of some American Near East Relief workers. When the old priest saw the American flag, he pointed to it, and with the tears streaming down his face, cried, "See, my children, it is not true, He is not dead—Christos Anesti! Christ is risen." When the weary wanderers understood what had happened, they fell on each others' necks and sobbed, "Alithos Anesti! He is risen indeed."

And the story of the old priest is by no means exceptional, as all who are familiar with the work of the Near East Relief in these stricken lands will tell you.

It is customary in all countries to associate the flag with military and naval victories. We decorate those who have shown valor on the field of battle, and raise monuments to the fallen. This is good, and it is only natural that we should honor those to whom we owe so much. But there is other glory than military or naval glory, and we sometimes forget this fact. There is the glory of the little mother who stays at home, patiently awaiting the return of the loved one. All the glory and the sacrifice is not confined to the field of battle. But in all my experience, in all my reading, I have never heard of a greater tribute being paid to any flag than that of my old Greek priest. I shall never see him again, but I shall never forget him.

Providence willed that I should owe allegiance to another flag, but every time I see the Stars and Stripes I raise my hat to his memory, and to the honor of the Flag that symbolized to him, and to that little band of martyrs, the Risen Christ—Christos Anesti!

THE SEVEN BLACK SHEEP

A public demand has been made for the names of the seven men in the North Kiangsu Mission, that voted in favor of the National Christian Conference for China. These names are open to the world and are to be found on page 17 of the minutes of the North Kiangsu Mission for 1922. They are "Sydenstricker, Morgan, Armstrong, Brown, McFadyen, Crenshaw, Lancaster." These minutes can be obtained and it would not be a bad plan for those who want to comment on our affairs to procure a copy and acquire some information before they resort to public excoriation.

The writer was detained by sickness in his family from attending the last mission meeting, else he would have voted with the Seven and made it Eight Black Sheep—and proud would he have been of his company.

What is going to happen to these Seven is not yet clear, but now that their names are published, they are evidently in for some sort of castigation. Perhaps they will be recalled and disciplined by their respective Presbyteries. Of what have they been guilty?

The National Christian Conference of China, last May, to which let us remember that the North Kiangsu Mission itself sent delegates, representing 7,000 Protestant missionaries and more than 350,000 Chinese Christians, voted by an overwhelming majority for the establishment of a Christian Council. The North Kiangsu delegates did not approve of this action and presented a report disfavoring the same which was adopted by a vote of 20 to 7. Are these Seven who voted for a visible link between themselves and the great army of missionaries and Chinese Christians to be held up as objects of public condemnation?

One thing is certain: no matter how worthy of blame and contempt they may seem to the brethren who are on the other side of the Pacific, their stand in no wise prejudiced them in the eyes of the Twenty who outvoted them. Yet the slur cast against them would lead the uninformed reader to infer that they were dangerous characters, unworthy of the confidence of the Twenty, and only worthy of being kept by them under the closest surveillance. And if it can be shown that the Twenty have put the Seven into positions of high importance, then the Twenty are more to be assailed than the Seven. Examine these same minutes and see how the Seven are regarded:

First is Dr. Sydenstricker, the senior member of this mission, who has just been transferred to Nanking, where he will work in connection with the seminary. Would the Twenty have sent a dangerous heretic to teach their students?

Second is Dr. L. S. Morgan: and on page 26 we read, "Dr. Morgan was elected by a rising vote to be chairman of the mission meeting next year." The Twenty are evidently not much afraid of him, either.

Thirdly, Rev. O. V. Armstrong is made chairman of the examining committee and a member of the ad interim committee for another year, in which offices he would have ample chance for mischief.

The fourth, Rev. F. A. Brown, was appointed by this same meeting as a member of the committee to investigate Nanking Seminary for heresy. If he is unsafe, the Twenty are simpletons. Mr. Brown is also made chairman of another Union School board.

The remaining three, Messrs. McFadyen, Crenshaw and Lancaster, have been made the sole members of the mission's most important committee, the extension committee, into whose hands the plans for all purchases of land and the erection of buildings must be put. It is a horrible thought that not one of the Twenty is on that committee to watch these three against whom all honest people are warned!

The last mentioned, Mr. Lancaster, is also a professor in Nanking Theological Seminary.

It will also be seen on page 17 that the mission courteously allowed the Seven, if they desired, to write letters expressing their disapproval. So far as I know the Seven accepted the will of the majority without protest. They did their best and were willing to let it go at that. But it is hardly to be expected that they will submit tamely to being held up to public condemnation. And if long association with the Twenty permits a guess at their feelings, I venture that they will unanimously resent any slurs cast upon their Seven brethren.

On page 14 of these same minutes the Seven appear again as a solid phalanx and this time it is on the question of the women of the mission being allowed to vote. The stand of the Seven on this great question is exactly what would be expected of them. They are not afraid of the 7,000 missionaries and the 350,000 Chinese Christians, nor are they afraid to admit to the counsels of the mission those splendid Presbyterian women whom the Church has sent out to this great work, a finer, nobler, more efficient company than whom exists nowhere on earth.

And this time the Seven are not alone. Six of the Twenty joined their ranks and the vote was a tie—13 to 13. As a tie vote is a lost one, it might have been expected that these 13 would have appealed from it—but No! They are content to bide their time, assured that the next time we get a vote on the matter we will go over the top with a cheer!

Likewise the Seven have a firm hope that on the question of the National Council more of the Twenty will gradually see the light and will be glad in time to join hands visibly with that noble army of missionaries and Christians, close association with whom is our glory and our joy.

Finally, the missionary body is, and cannot be anything else than, a faithful reflection of the home church. Its members are drawn from the same sources, educated at the same colleges, graduated from the same seminaries and ordained by the same Presbyteries that select ministers for the home pulpits. There are certain timorous brethren who because of an unsound man here and there are afraid that the very foundations of the righteous are being destroyed. The writer is glad to express his calm, serene and ever-deepening confidence in this magnificent army of missionaries, and the praying, giving Church at home, who together are carrying out the greatest missionary program ever installed since the deliverance of the Great Commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature."

(Signed) T. B. Grafton.

Haichow, China, January 30, 1923.

"EXCEPT THEY BE SENT"

By Nelson Bell, M.D.

Wont you "listen in" and hear the appeal coming to you from all of our mission fields for reinforcements? The call is insistent, it is urgent, it is piteous in its earnestness. From whom does it come? From the missionaries who see the need, who are working in the harvest field, so white to the harvest. From the men and women representing you who are breaking under the strain. The call comes even more urgently from the natives themselves. Men and women of our Church, you have the knowledge of God's love in your heart, you have been saved by Jesus, will you not share that knowledge and that salvation with a lost and ruined world?

Here is the appeal: There are now thirty-two (32) of the choicest young men and women of our home church who are ready to go. Nor does their willingness to go consist simply in a realization of the need. They are trained men and women who have taken the courses prescribed, to fit themselves for the highest type of service in their respective fields. And best of all, they are men and women who believe in and are going out to preach and teach the fundamentals of the faith. In this day of unbelief and infidelity, at home and abroad, our Church has a peculiar witness to bear and a wonderful opportunity.

Now friends, what are you going to do about it? The solution lies with you. If you will agree to pray earnestly, to pray daily, to pray definitely for this object, it will be accomplished. Money is needed to send out these men and women. Millions of dollars are being wasted by the members of our church. Let us all covenant together to pray the Lord of the harvest, that He will arouse us, and others, and that the means necessary may be given, so that these new workers, so urgently needed, may be sent out this summer.

"How shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?"

HOW CAN IT BE DONE

We imagine it would be hard to find a teacher anywhere who is not familiar with the phrase attributed to the Roman Catholic Church: "Give us a child until he is seven and we care not who has him afterwards."

In her articles, "Juniors and Life Service," printed in leaflet form by the Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Mrs. Askew reminds us of Barrie's saying: "Nothing that happens after one is 12 matters very much," and the child psychologists are writing it down in tons of books that the trend the young life takes is generally settled by the sixteenth year. We have heard it and read it and know it, but we have been very slow to do anything about it, but now at last we are ready, at least seriously to try, to do something.

The Department of Christian Education has a detailed and comprehensive plan through which it hopes to include every one from the baby sleeping in his cradle to the grandmother knitting by the fireside, in its far-reaching campaign for Life Enlistment.

The first step the Department of Christian Education would suggest is that each church appoint a permanent Life Enlistment Committee, choosing for it its finest, most gifted and spiritual leaders. The next step would be to send to the office (410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.)

for the literature explaining the plan and giving suggestions for carrying it out.

THE BIBLE IN THE SCHOOLS OF CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

By C. F. Evans, Southern Secretary United Society of Christian Endeavor

The Bible has been taught in the Chattanooga, Tenn., High School, the two Junior Highs, and the eleven Grammar Schools, since last September, and in each school the Bible course is very popular.

This work is being done by Miss Rachel McAllister, a Christian Endeavorer of the First Christian Church of Chattanooga, under the direction of the Pastors' Association of the city.

Much emphasis is being placed on the Bible stories, and on memory work, but above all a wholesome reverence for the Book is being instilled in the minds of these young people, and as a result the Bible is no longer looked upon as simply for old people, but the student proudly brings his Bible to school, the same as any other school book would be brought.

In a recent session, which was opened by prayer, a young chap said the Lord had certainly answered a prayer for him, as when his mother was quite ill he asked the Lord to make her well, and she fully recovered.

A little girl in the second grade said her Jewish playmate said she did not believe in Jesus Christ, because her mother had told her not to. This little girl replied, "Your mother is wrong about it, and Jesus is the Son of God because it says so in John 3:16."

Many of the children have learned to ask a blessing at the table, and in many instances the practice is being carried into their homes. One boy said he guessed he could ask a blessing at his home, as his grandpa used to do it, but the practice had been stopped since his grandpa's death, and asked the prayers of the pupils, and later reported he was asking the blessing at every meal.

Miss McAllister reports that hardly a day passes but what some student reports having accepted Christ and becoming a member of some church.

In one school a "Sunshine Club" has been formed, and several visits have been made to an Orphans' Home.

The placing of the Bible in the day schools is a great forward step, and the work of Miss McAllister is yielding splendid returns.

VIRGINIA'S SYNODICAL CONFERENCES AT MASSANETTA SPRINGS

The Young People's Conference

The summer conference season will open at Massanetta Springs with the Synodical Young People's Conference, July 16th to 22d.

Where in the Synod of Virginia is there a more ideal place for conference work than at Massanetta Springs? It is located in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley, four miles east of Harrisonburg, on the famous Valley pike. Its climate, its beautiful mountain scenery, its close proximity to the famous Natural Bridge, the Luray Caverns, and Virginia's historic battlefields makes it an ideal place for our people to go.

The Young People's Conference program should appeal strongly to the leaders of young people in our Church, as well as to the young people themselves.

Bible study will be an outstanding feature of the Massanetta Young People's Conference. There will be possibly 15 classes conducted by trained teachers who are experienced leaders in young people's work. The organized clans or groups around which center the social and spiritual life of the conference will be again emphasized.

Choice should be made by those who attend, from the following text-book classes: Foreign Missions; Home Missions; Sunday School; the Young People's Department; Auxiliary Organization and Administration; Christian Endeavor and Methods with Young People.

A series of evening addresses will be given by Rev. J. G. Venable, D.D., of Norfolk, Va.

The devotional service each morning will be conducted by Rev. W. L. Carson. The conference music will be led by Rev. S. K. Emurian. Those who attended last summer will remember with pleasure this feature of the conference program.

The recreational life of the conference is one of its most helpful features. An attractive program of recreation will be under the direction of Mr. C. R. Warthen. Swimming, mountain climbing, tennis, basketball, volleyball, baseball and competitive games, as will best promote the aim of the conference, will be arranged.

The Standard Training School

The Standard Training School for Church and Sunday School workers will follow the Young People's Conference, with only one day's intermission. This school will open on July 24th, and close on July 30th. There will be classes under skilled instructors covering the different departments of the Sunday School. Several general and special units will be taught, taken from the Standard Diploma Course.

Rev. W. H. T. Squires, D.D., of Norfolk, Va., will conduct the Bible Hour during this school.

Rev. Henry Edward Tralle, D.D., New York, N. Y., has been secured for a series of addresses on the Sunday School. He is a teacher of wide experience, and editor of national reputation.

Mr. Marion Lawrence says of him: "I thank God for Dr. Henry Edward Tralle. He is one of the safest and sanest and best Sunday School leaders in all the country."

Pastors and church leaders should begin now to plan to attend these conferences and to have their churches well represented.

Rev. T. K. Currie,

Supt. of S. S. and Y. P. Work, Synod of Virginia.

REPORT OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S AD INTERIM COMMITTEE ON VACANCY AND SUPPLY

The special attention of ministers and elders is called to the Report of the General Assembly's Ad Interim Committee on Vacancy and Supply. The plan recommended is substantially the one that has been in operation in the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., for about ten years.

It is the testimony of the Assembly's Committee of our Sister Church that the Presbytery that adopts and works the plan finds a very large number of its troubles disappearing. The number of vacant churches and ministers without charge has been greatly reduced since the plan was put into operation, and hundreds of thousands of dollars have been saved to the benevolent causes; for vacant churches always fall behind in their contributions. This fact justifies the additional expense incurred and the assignment of this expense to the budget of the benevolent causes.

This report is published subject to revision, and criticism and suggestions are invited and will be carefully considered by the Committee.

R. F. CAMPBELL, Chairman.

1. Your committee would recommend the creation by the General Assembly of an Executive Committee of Vacancy and Supply with a paid secretary, who shall give his whole time to the prosecution of the work. The election of this committee and secretary, and the rules governing their work shall be according to those governing other executive committees.

2. That the salary of the secretary and necessary expenses of the committee shall be provided for in the budget for benevolences.

3. That the General Assembly approve the following plan for Synods, Presbyteries and Sessions:

A Definite Plan for Handling Vacancy and Supply Under the Presbyterian Form of Government

There shall be an Executive Committee of Vacancy and Supply composed of three members who shall be elected by the Presbytery for terms of three years each, except that in the initial election one member shall be chosen for a term of three years; one member for a term of two years; and one member for a term of one year.

Time of Election

After the inauguration of the plan, the election of members of this committee shall annually be the fixed order of business for the hour of 10:30 a. m. on the second day of the regular spring meeting of Presbytery (or other definitely appointed hour), except that in case of the removal or resignation of a member of the committee, Presbytery may take immediate steps to fill the vacancy thus created by electing a member to serve for the unexpired term.

Manner of Election

Nominations shall be made only by ballot, each member of Presbytery voting for three persons regarded by him as specially fitted for membership on this committee, and the six persons who on this initial ballot receive the highest number of votes (if so many receive votes), shall by the moderator be declared to have been duly placed in nomination by the direct vote of the Presbytery.

Election shall be by ballot. On the first electing ballot the nominee who receives the highest number of votes, providing that he has received a majority of all votes cast, shall be declared elected a member of the committee to serve for three years. In like manner the nominee receiving the second highest number of votes shall be declared elected for two years, and the nominee receiving the third highest number of votes shall be declared elected for one year. However, should it be found that any of these three persons failed to receive a majority of all votes cast, then the name of the nominee who on the same ballot received the lowest number of votes shall be dropped and a second ballot taken, and this course shall be followed until three persons are duly elected.

Vacancies in the membership of the committee shall be filled in the same manner. On the initial ballot each member of the Presbytery shall vote his choice of persons to fill the vacancies on the committee, and from those receiving the highest number of votes the moderator shall declare duly nominated a number of persons equal to twice the number to be elected (if so many receive votes), and no ballot shall at any time be counted which does not contain a number of names equal to the number of members of the committee to be elected at that particular time.

Election of Chairman

From the members of the committee thus chosen, Presbytery shall without nominations and by ballot elect one person to serve as chairman of the committee for a period of one year, or until the next spring meeting of Presbytery. If after the vote is taken it shall be found that no member of the committee received a majority of all votes cast, then the name of the member receiving the lowest number of votes shall be dropped from further consideration in connection with the chairmanship and another ballot taken. A chairman shall be regularly elected at each spring meeting of Presbytery.

Duty of Church Sessions

Wherever the session of any church in the Presbytery shall have knowledge that a vacancy in the pastorate of that church is soon to occur, it shall be the duty of the session to promptly convey this information to the chairman of the Presbyterial Committee of Vacancy and Supply and the committee shall take immediate steps to adequately provide for the supply of the pulpit and the proper care of the work of the Church when it shall have become vacant. (See also Article 5 of the following section).

Status of the Vacant Church

Any church of the Presbytery becoming vacant shall by virtue of that vacancy be under the care and direction of the Committee of Vacancy and Supply of the Presbytery. If the church or group of churches is under the supervision of the Home Mission Committee, it shall be the duty of the Committee of Vacancy and Supply to call into consultation the Superintendent of Home Missions of the Presbytery, or, if there be none, the chairman of the Committee of Home Missions.

(1) The Committee of Vacancy and Supply shall nominate to Presbytery a minister to serve as moderator of the session of the church during its period of vacancy.

(2) It shall be the duty of the Committee of Vacancy and Supply to see that the pulpit is properly supplied until a pastor is chosen, and remuneration of such supply shall be at a rate approved by the said committee.

(3) If the Presbyterial committee does not have knowledge of a suitable minister who is available for immediate consideration for the pastorate, then the committee shall promptly report this fact to the office of the Executive Committee of Vacancy and Supply of the General Assembly, in order to secure therefrom information as to men located elsewhere who may be available and adapted to the needs of the vacant field.

(4) All correspondence in regard to the vacant churches of the Presbytery shall go to the Presbyterial Committee of Vacancy and Supply, which committee shall make all appointments of ministers to preach in the vacant pulpits of the Presbytery, whether as temporary supplies or as being under consideration for pastorates.

(5) Each vacant church shall at all times have the right through its session or committee regularly appointed, to be heard before the Committee of Vacancy and Supply in regard to any matter related either to the temporary supply of its pulpit or to the location of a pastor and suggestions or recommendations thus presented by the church shall always be given first consideration by the committee.

(6) The Presbyterial Committee shall seek to avoid all "candidating" in the sense of putting one minister against another in competition for a vacant church. When a minister apparently suited to the needs of the field has been appointed to visit and preach before the congregation, he shall be regarded as the only man then under definite consideration by the vacant church. The committee may arrange for him to return and fill the pulpit on additional Sabbaths, but when heard as often as the situation seems to demand, the matter shall then promptly be disposed of by the congregation, either by the issue of a call, or if there is not sufficient unanimity to make this advisable, then by definite elimination.

Duties of the Chairman

In addition to the duties ordinarily attached to this office and those growing out of the foregoing provisions, the chairman of the Presbyterial Committee shall render service as follows:

(1) He shall promptly report vacancy conditions in the Presbytery to the office of the Executive Committee of Vacancy and Supply of the General Assembly, these reports to be of such character and furnished at such intervals as the Assembly's committee may desire.

(2) He shall report fully on the work of the committee at each regular meeting of the Presbytery and at such other times as Presbytery may determine.

Expenses

Presbytery shall provide for the ordinary expenses incurred by this committee by annually including in its financial budget an amount equal to the estimated expense of the committee in the proper prosecution of its work.

Amendments and Suspensions

This plan may be amended by a two-thirds vote of the members of Presbytery enrolled at any regular meeting, said amendment having been proposed in writing at a previous regular meeting.

The operation of this plan or any part of it, may in any specific case be suspended only by the vote of two-thirds of the members of Presbytery enrolled at a regular meeting.

Synod's Committee of Vacancy and Supply

In addition to the Assembly's Executive Committee, the Presbytery's Committee and the Committee in the Vacant Church, the General Assembly suggests to the Synods the establishment in each of a Committee of Vacancy and Supply, which shall be composed of the chairmen of the committees of the Presbyteries in the Synod, with one of their number, appointed by the Synod as chairman of its committee. This committee shall meet at least once a year at the meeting of the Synod for conference on matters that come under their purview as chairmen in their respective Presbyteries.

It was further decided by the committee to publish in the Church papers this report and invite comment and criticism thereon.

(Signed) R. F. Campbell, Chairman.
P. C. Clark, Clerk.

"FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH"
The story of a Mexican Colporteur

By Rev. A. H. Mellen, Secretary American Bible Society Mexico Agency

It happened in the year of our Lord 1923. He lived in his own little home in a village in the mountains in southern Mexico, and he was killed by a mob of wild fanatics on the night of January 31st. A letter from a missionary in the same district says: "His activities had aroused the ire of the fanatics for some time, and his unwise denunciation of the Romanists for having parades in the streets brought matters to a head." Of course we will not forget another man named Stephen who was also unwise. He took the consequences of his deeds and his words, and now we call him a martyr.

On January 30th a priest came from another place and preached on some saint who would deprive the Protestants of all power to resist if they were attacked. Two nuns had also come to stir up the women. On Wednesday night a secret meeting was held, and at 11 o'clock they surrounded the house of the man who had been selling Bibles. When the doors were forced, this man was very calm, and said to his wife: "If they want to kill me, I am ready to die for Christ; I will wait for you in heaven." One of his brave friends came to help him, and was also taken off by the mob. Both men were shot at the edge of the village and the bodies terribly mutilated. Neither the head nor the heart of the colporteur could be found by faithful friends who went to bury the remains, and the supposition is that they were carried off as trophies. Such a thing does not seem possible. All the people in the village who are known to be in sympathy with the Bible have fled from the place. Eye witnesses of the incident have found their way to the city of Mexico and have visited the office of the American Bible Society and reported the tragedy. The spirit of the native Christians is very fine.

(Issued by American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor Place, New York City).

WHO WANTS TO HELP?

By Henry H. Sweets

In recent years the Southern Presbyterian Church has been thinking and praying more constantly and earnestly concerning its ministry.

There is a great need for a large increase in the number of trained, capable preachers, pastors and missionaries. Each year as high school, college and university training develops and extends to an ever-increasing number of young men and young women a higher type of intellectual and spiritual leadership is needed.

There has just come from the press one of the most stimulating and helpful books of recent years, "Being a Preacher," by our own versatile and gifted preacher, Rev. James I. Vance, D.D., which is a publication of the Sprunt lectures delivered by him at our own theological seminary.

The reading of this book will tone up our ministers, help them more faithfully to present the joys and opportunities of this great and happy work and to lead young men and the parents of our boys to a clear conception of the Gospel Ministry.

We are exceedingly anxious to see that this book is in the hands of everyone of our ministers and of all of our candidates for the ministry. One minister on a very modest salary has written: "If you are to get up a fund, put me down for $5 of the amount. You must devise some way of putting this message in the hands of every minister of our Church." We like the suggestion. We believe there are many men and women in the Southern Presbyterian Church who would like to have some part in this work. If so, write to the Department of Education for the Ministry and Mission Service, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

"A Golden Jubilee"—In our last issue we had a notice of the celebration that Alamance Church is to hold this month in honor of the founding of their women's society one hundred years ago. To that notice we would add the following information sent us by Mrs. W. A. Sharpe, of Greensboro, the president:

Orange Presbyterial and the Centennial of Woman's Work will have a joint meeting in Alamance Church on April 18-19. The 18th will be taken up with the exercises of the Presbyterial and the 19th will be the day of the Centennial exercises. Dr. Wade Smith will make his address on the 19th.

Schedule of North Carolina Presbyterial Meetings

—Presbyterial, Time, and Place of Meeting:
 Albemarle, April 5-6, Farmville.
 Fayetteville, April 10-11, Sanford.
 Mecklenburg, April 12-13, Philadelphia Church.
 Orange, April 17-18, Alamance Church.
 Concord, April 19-20, Statesville.
 King's Mountain, April 24-25, Olney Church.
 Wilmington, April 26-27, Mt. Olive.
 Miss Corine Puett, Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, Committee.

Fayetteville Presbyterial delegates arriving in Sanford after 1 p. m. on April 10th, will go directly to the church. The opening session will be at 3 p. m. The program for the Presbyterial bids fair to be a very full and attractive one. Miss Clarabel Williams will conduct the Bible hour and the Presbyterial speakers will be Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, of Crossnore; Jos. B. Johnston, of Barium Springs; Mrs. R. L. Ryburn, of Shelby; J. B. Spillman, of Charlotte; Rev. J. Hoyt Miller, of Africa. Fayetteville Presbyterial will be glad to welcome Dr. Gilmore, formerly of Virginia, now pastor of the Sanford Church. The closing services of the sessions will be at noon, April 12th.

(Signed) Mrs. W. A. West.

Notice! Women of Presbyterial. If any one has a Home or Foreign Mission study book they do not care to use any more, won't they bring or send to the spring meeting of the Presbyterial so they may be passed on to those who have not had a chance to read them.

Secretary of Literature,
 Mecklenburg Presbyterial.

Chapel Hill, N. C. Auxiliary—This Auxiliary has grown in numbers and interest so that they have recently adopted the circle plan. In the last few weeks they have used the Mission study book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," with Mrs. M. H. Van Hecke as a most efficient and inspiring leader. The class was conducted on four successive Mondays, being divided into periods, though important points being assigned to and emphasized by members to whom they had been assigned. Being so thoroughly presented the study period was exceedingly interesting and valuable. The society is to meet all its obligations to the various causes, and its work therefore is constantly developing.

Concord Presbyterial will meet at Statesville, N. C., at 2:30 p. m., April 19th, following a meeting of the Executive Committee at 11 a. m., of the same date. Sessions will be held through the evening of April 20th.

The program promises to be helpful and interesting. It includes evening addresses from Rev. J. Hoyt Miller, of our Congo Mission, Mr. J. B. Spillman, of Charlotte, and Mr. Jos. B. Johnston, of Barium Springs. Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, of Hickory will have the Bible hour of each day, and Mrs. Archibald Currie, of Davidson will teach methods of mission study in Auxiliaries and Sunday Schools. The day sessions will be devoted largely to business, conferences, and reports from the Auxiliaries, and it is hoped that each Auxiliary and Society in the Presbyterial will be represented. Names of delegates and hour of arrival should be sent to Miss Margaret Turner, Statesville, N. C., chairman of the Committee on Hospitality.

Cornelia Shaw, Secretary.

Y. P. Reports! Leaders of Y. P. Societies and Secretaries of Y. P. W., please take notice! Has the Young People's Society in your church sent in its report? If not, you can help by seeing that it goes in right now, today, to the secretary of Y. P. W. of your Presbyterial. This is your opportunity to be of service to the young people under your leadership. Why today? Because all reports must be in the secretary's hands before Presbyterial meets and Albemarle (the first) meets this week. So please hurry up those reports.

It is not too late to send in the money for the Y. P. specials.—$1.50 for S. S. Missionary Fund and $2.00 for the College Fund for Barium Home. Giving to these special funds counts 25 per cent in the Merit Cup Contest. Send this and your report to secretary of Y. P. W. in your Presbyterial as follows:

In Albemarle, Mrs. Walter G. Sheppard, Farmville.
 In Concord, Miss Bessie Arrowood, Morganton.
 In Fayetteville, Mrs. Charles Rose, Fayetteville.
 In King's Mountain, Miss Mary Ragan, Gastonia.
 In Mecklenburg, Mrs. J. H. Suttonfield, Box 124, Pine Bluff.
 In Orange, Mrs. Alma Hcadcn, 500 Jones St., High Point.
 In Wilmington, Mrs. J. M. Harvey, 19 N. 7th St., Wilmington.
 The contingent fee of five cents per member is past due. Send to the secretary of Presbyterial Y. P. League.

In Concord, Miss Lena Salvagest, Valdese.
 In Fayetteville, Miss Bonnie Bulla, Sunnyside.
 In Kings Mountain, Mrs. Dave Hall, Belmont.
 In Mecklenburg, Miss Marguerite Cashion, Charlotte.
 In Orange, Miss Rachel Beall, 619 Morehead Ave., Durham.
 In Albemarle, Mrs. Walter G. Sheppard, Farmville.
 In Wilmington, Mrs. J. M. Harvey, 19 N. and 7th Sts., Wilmington.

Let us see that reports, contingent fee, and Y. P. specials are sent in promptly and then let us begin planning for the Y. P. Conference. The dates are June 12th-18th; the place Davidson College.

Yours in His service,
 (Mrs. D. H.) Eliza Patterson Shaw.

Presidents of Local Auxiliaries, Fayetteville Presbyterial—My dear friend:

As we are nearing the close of another church year, I want to thank you for your co-operation with me in the Orphanage work. Through the efforts of our faithful women we have accomplished much for this cause, but there are still many more things to be done. We hope next year to bring all the cottage up to the standard set by the beautiful new building made possible by our women.

Will you not impress upon your women and upon your entire church membership the very great need for a splendid collection each month for the support fund? One Sunday in each month set aside for this collection will help greatly in the maintenance of the orphanage.

I hope that you have elected an orphanage secretary in your Auxiliary. If you have not, please do so at once and send her name to Miss Barnett at Barium Springs.

May God bless your Auxiliary in all its efforts for good.

Sincerely in His name,
 Myrtle Page,

(Mrs. J. R. Page, Orphanage Secretary, Fayetteville Presbyterial.)

The Albemarle Presbyterial will meet at Farmville, N. C., April 5th-6th.

Mrs. Goode Cheatham,
 Sec.-Treas., Albemarle Presbyterial.

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of Bethel Presbyterial Auxiliary will be held in Oakland Avenue Church, Rock Hill, S. C., April 12-13. Mrs. J. B. Gaston, 320 Oakland Ave., Rock Hill, S. C., is chairman of the Hospitality Committee.

Mrs. Jno. T. Stevens,
 Corresponding Secretary.

Mrs. Mayes—(We extend deepest sympathy to the women of the South Carolina Synodical in the passing of their beloved president and to Mrs. Winsborough with whom, as chairman of the Woman's Advisory Committee Mrs. Mayes was so intimately associated. To her son and daughter may the Master Himself speak the "Peace be still," and comfort them as one "whom his mother comforteth."—Ed.)

Mrs. Fannie Louise Mayes, former state regent of South Carolina Daughters of the American Revolution, and one of the best known women of the state, died at her home here on Manly Street yesterday morning about 9:45 o'clock following an illness of pneumonia which she contracted about three weeks ago.

Mrs. Mayes was the daughter of the late William Hudson, a well known railroad engineer of the lower section of the state. She was reared in Sumter County and was married in early life to Dr. C. F. Mayes, of Mayesville, where they made their home for some years prior to Dr. Mayes' death about 30 years ago. About 25 years ago she moved to Greenville and made her home with her brother, R. C. Hudson, well-known business man of this city. Besides her brother, she is survived by two children, Charles F. Mayes and Miss Mary Mayes, both of Greenville.

In addition to her prominence in the work of the Daughters of the American Revolution, both in Greenville and throughout the state, Mrs. Mayes, throughout her life took an active interest in the work of the Presbyterial Church of which she was a devout member since childhood. At the time of her death she was a member of the Fourth Presbyterial Church of this city, and was teacher of the woman's Bible class there.

"She was chairman of the advisory board of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Southern Presbyterial Church, and just prior to her illness she attended meetings of the Auxiliary in Little Rock, Charlotte, Jacksonville, and other places. Upon her return from this trip she became ill. During the past 10 days her illness became critical and though every possible service was rendered by physicians and nurses, the end came yesterday morning.

"Mrs. Mayes was president of the South Carolina Synodical of the Presbyterial Church, and in addition to her church work took an active part in various community and civic affairs. Her death yesterday is a source of deep regret to her numerous friends throughout Greenville and South Carolina.

"The Nathaniel Greene chapter of the D. A. R., of which Mrs. Mayes was regent for several years, will attend in a body the services at the home this morning."—Notice from Local Paper.

Only 25 Cents! If you want to get 12 installments of enthusiasm, information, fun and real "get up and get," just send 25 cents for a year's subscription to Tex-Mex Reflector, Kingsville, Texas. You'll never regret it. Do it now!

Mrs. Winsborough.

"Our Trip to Chilpancingo"—Seven o'clock on a January morning in Mexico City is a chilly hour! One can scarcely believe their eyes when they see the flowers blooming, the trees and grass green, when one is perfectly willing to wager that the mercury is far below the freezing point. It was on such a morning that Mrs. William Wallace, a missionary of the Presbyterial Church, U. S. A., and I, wended our way to the Union Station of that great city, and boarded a train on our way to the remote town of Chilpancingo, one station of our Church that is 75 miles off the railroad.

Our train was a local, with the ordinary day-coaches seen on such trains in the United States. The people, of course, were most interesting, being of all varieties, complexions and stations in life. Everybody was wrapped up to their eyes, shivering and cold. No sooner, however, had the sun got well above the horizon than the air began to warm up, and by the middle of the day, our wraps became uncomfortably heavy.

No more charming companion than Mrs. Wallace could have been found. She has been a missionary for 27 years in Mexico. Her first mission station was at Chilpancingo, and the trip to her was a romantic pilgrimage back to the place where she came as a bride more than a quarter of a century before, and which she had not visited in many years. She was cheery and bright, ready for any emergency and splendid company.

The scenery between the city of Mexico and Iguala is the most beautiful anywhere in that section of Mexico. The wonderful snow-capped mountains, "Ixta" and "Poco," as they are called in short (for which the foreigner is deeply grateful), towering in all their magnificence first on one side of the train and then on the other, as we wound our way in and out round the base of the mountains towering on each side. Picturesque villages were at frequent intervals while often only a station marked the railway connection with the large city which would be perhaps a mile or even two back toward the mountain. Towns do not move to the railway stations in Mexico!

Groups of women were at the car windows, offering all sorts of tempting viands for the consumption of the hungry travelers, and as there was no diner, these edibles were quickly sold. Many carried pitchers of pulque which the men drank eagerly, even some women not disdaining a mug full. A sip of this stuff disclosed a flavor very much like liquid yeast and created wonder that anybody could enjoy such a beverage.

Most picturesque were the large fields of maguey, a century plant from which the pulque is made. It grows to a stately height, and in symmetrical rows acre by acre on each side of the road, and is, of course, a source of valuable income to the owner of the land. When the plant is ripe for drawing the pulque, the heart of the plant is scooped out, leaving a large bowl which rapidly fills with juice. This is gathered by men who make a business of gathering pulque. Their method of procedure is more interesting than sanitary! A tube is inserted in each end of an inflated pig's bladder, one tube is put into the pool of pulque in the heart of the plant and the other into the gatherer's mouth. He draws in his breath and with it the pulque, until the bladder is full, when both ends are tied up and it is ready to carry away to be seasoned and allowed to ferment, when it is ready to be enjoyed!

Mrs. Wallace soon discovered a friend of a friend among the passengers, in the person of a tall and muscular Englishman, a mining expert, who was on his way to a remote mine, and who was to go part of the journey with us over land toward Chilpancingo. He added very much to our enjoyment being a unique and interesting character, a man of education, who had spent many years in Mexico. He entertained us by legends and stories, by song and jokes, and finally escorted us to the rear platform of the coach to witness the wonderful canyon through which we passed for an hour or longer. No chairs being available, we seated ourselves flat up on the train platform and from that vantage point viewed one of the most magnificent scenes to be witnessed anywhere. Mountains towered on each side so high that it was impossible to see their top without peering out under the roof of the car. Trees of strange foliage grew up the sides of the mountains and the railroad tracks formed simply a thread at the bottom between two mountains. The conductor of the train obligingly joined us to point out in a small cavern at the side of the track the "finger of God," an odd formation of stalactite in the shape of a huge hand.

Mrs. Wallace had her handsatchel well stocked with tracts and passages of Scripture, which she distributed to the wondering natives at the station through which we passed.

The afternoon passed quickly, and at six o'clock we found ourselves approaching the town of Iguala where we were to spend the night, before taking the jitney early in the morning for Chilpancingo. The platform at Iguala was crowded with the waiting population of that town, and a brass band was doing its best to drown all conversation as the train pulled in. We soon learned that the honored guest for whom the band was playing were two negro—a man black as one of ours from the Delta and a young woman so white that it was difficult at first to see any traces of negro blood. These two seemed theatrical attractions who were to appear at the opera house that night, and an especial automobile was waiting for them and preceded by the band they made their triumphal entry into the city. Our automobile followed closely behind, so we had the pleasure of seeing almost the entire population of Iguala before we had reached the hotel!

(To be continued.)

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

We are glad to have this week a letter from Mr. J. M. Harvey, who is doing a fine work down in Wilmington Presbytery. Ten new Sunday Schools and more than 400 new Sunday School scholars is news that is very encouraging.

We made a mistake last week in giving information about the speakers for the North Carolina Young People's Conference. Instead of Dr. H. G. Hill, of Maxton, we will have Dr. W. E. Hill, of Fayetteville, who is recognized as a facile and informing speaker.

Now, just listen! We have secured a dandy big dining hall for the conference. The Davidson College authorities have granted us the use of the college gymnasium. A covering will be put over the valuable gym floor and we will have plenty of room to have an enjoyable time while we are at meals. A kitchen will be provided in the basement and plenty of good things will be served, including ice cream every day, 'n everything (almost). Kings Mountain, Concord, and all the other Presbyteries can sing and yell all they want to, and we won't have to take turns with the Presbyteries in the "big dining room" or the "little dining rooms." Hurrah! Now you just arrange to come along and enjoy the inspiration and fellowship, June 12-19.

The ladies inform us that report blanks have been sent to the North Carolina young people's societies and these are requested sent to the Secretary of Young People's Work in each Presbytery, as follows: Albemarle Presbytery, Mrs. Walter Sheppard, Farmville; Concord, Miss Bessie Arrowood, Morganton; Fayetteville, Mrs. Chas. Rose, Fayetteville; Kings Mountain, Miss Mary Ragan, Gastonia; Mecklenburg, Mrs. J. H. Suttonfield, Box 124, Pinebluff; Orange, Miss Alma Headen, 500 Jones St., High Point; Wilmington, Mrs. J. M. Harvey, 19 N. Seventh St., Wilmington.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

APRIL 8, 1923.

ABRAHAM, THE HERO OF FAITH

Lesson: Genesis 12:1-25:8; Hebrews 11:8-19. (A Survey of Abraham's Life.) Printed Text: Gen. 12:1-5; Heb. 11:8-10, 17-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness."—Rom. 4:3.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

Gen. 12:1. Now the LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee:

2. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

3. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4. So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.

5. And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came.

Heb. 11:8. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10. For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

17. By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac; and he that had received the promises, offered up his only begotten son,

18. Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

19. Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 31. What is effectual calling?

A. Effectual calling is the work of God's Spirit, whereby, convincing us of our sin and misery, enlightening our minds in the knowledge of Christ, and renewing our wills, He doth persuade and enable us to embrace Jesus Christ freely offered to us in the gospel.

Abraham is termed in the Scriptures "The Faithful and the Friend of God." He exercised a faith in God's character, word, promises and power, that was remarkable in its strength, constancy and influence. He walked with God and communed with Him as friend with friend. Yet Abraham's faith was not absolutely perfect and failed to operate sometimes under severe trial. But faith in God and His Word was the dominating principle of His life, and our lesson mentions some illustrations of its controlling power. We will consider Abraham's Call; The Promises Enforcing It; Some Manifestations of His Faith; Faith Produced Obedience.

I. Abraham's Call

He was called of God to a complete separation from an idolatrous country, citizenship, kindred and friends. This was needful for God to carry out His intentions as to him and his descendants. The same is true as to pious people now. The Divine command is "Come out from among them and be ye separate and I will receive you and be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord of hosts." For Abraham to leave his native land, his home, his friends and his relatives permanently and to carry with him all that were specially dear to him to a strange land of which he knew nothing, was undoubtedly a severe test of his faith and obedience. How God called Abraham, whether by an audible voice or by a vision, we are not informed, but He made His meaning clear. The Lord still calls men by His providences, His Word and His Spirit, to separate from the ungodly in heart and life and to engage in His worship and service.

II. The Promises Enforcing His Call

Jehovah stimulates Abraham to obey by "exceeding great and precious promises." He promises to "make of him a great nation." The Israelites have been a great nation, have furnished some of the noblest men known to the race, have rendered some of the greatest services to mankind found in the annals of time. Not merely his natural descendants, but his spiritual seed, those trusting the Christ in whom he believed constitute a great multitude that no man can number. God promises to "make Abraham's name great." His name is known and revered among the Arabs of the desert, by the Israelites, the chosen nation scattered throughout the world, and amid all the Christian nations of the earth. The Lord promised to "bless them that blessed Abraham, and to curse those that cursed him." This He did during the lifetime of the patriarch and afterward among his descendants in Egypt. The Lord promised that "In Abraham and his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed." His chosen people, Israel, gave to mankind the inspired Scriptures, the promised Christ, Gospel tidings, Divine law, and all the blessings of the religion of Jesus.

III. The Manifestations of Abraham's Faith

It was first shown in his departure from his native land and all that it contained, carrying with him all that he could influence. He took with him his wife, Sarah; Lot, his nephew; and all their substance and household adherents. His father, Terah, started with him for Canaan, but died in Haran. But Abraham and his company finally reached Canaan, the land chosen of Jehovah. Abraham here revealed his faith by remaining as a sojourner in this land of promise. He made no attempt to provide a permanent home, but he and his immediate descendants abode in tents and owned no part of the land, save a purchased burying place. Though the land was promised as a heritage for his seed, he made no attempt to take possession till the time appointed of God. A third revelation of his faith was that he "looked beyond the present life to a city that hath foundations whose Builder and Maker is God." The final trial of Abraham and proof of his faith was the offering of his beloved son, Isaac, as a burnt offering, to be slain by his own hand and laid upon the altar.

IV. Abraham's Faith Produced Obedience

The first command given him to leave his native country and all that it contained, involved serious sacrifices, yet he promptly obeyed because he trusted Jehovah. The requirement that he abide in Canaan as a sojourner was attended by some deprivations because he had no permanent home. But he obeyed the Divine will because he trusted Jehovah's assurance that he had an abiding and resplendent home in a better world. The command to offer Isaac as a burnt sacrifice on the altar was the sternest test of his trust, love and loyalty to Jehovah to which he had been subjected. Yet faith and love triumphed.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

BECOMING EDUCATED

- M., Apr. 9—Study Nature: Job. 26:1-14.
- T., Apr. 10—Study the Bible: Acts 17:10-15.
- W., Apr. 11—Study Yourself: Heb. 3:12-19.
- T., Apr. 12—Practice What You Know: Luke 11:46-54.
- F., Apr. 13—Read: Eph. 3:1-7.
- S., Apr. 14—Meditate: Ps. 77:10-20.

Sun., Apr. 15—Topic: How Can We Become Truly Educated? Prov. 4:1-9.

Why should we seek education? What part has religion in education? To what uses should we put education?

A child's education begins at home. A right thinking father and mother will give much time to teach their children. Little minds begin to grow in infancy, and parents can teach small children valuable information, and train their minds to start aright in thinking, in self-control and in noble ideas, so that wise heads may sit on young shoulders. And as they come to school age, they will encourage them to take all the schooling they can get, learning not only to read, write and figure, but to pass the high school, and if possible to go to college.

Every day a child stays in school is worth money. The United States government says, each school day is worth $9.02. A child that stays out of school is losing money, unless he makes $9 a day. A high school graduate will earn twice as much as an uneducated-day laborer. A college graduate will earn much more than a high school graduate. A child with no education has one chance in 150,000 of becoming distinguished. With an elementary education he has four times the chance to become distinguished; with a high school education, has 87 times the chance of a day laborer; with a college education he has 800 times the chance.

What is an education? It is the training of the whole man or woman so that they may become informed, skillful, wise, noble, true, and good. Solomon calls it getting wisdom, and declares that wisdom will bring honor, and long life, and happiness. Solomon had in mind what he says in Prov. 1:7, The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. For reverence and faith in God are the true foundations of all education.

The Object of an Education

What do we go to school for? To train the mind and body so that they will perform the tasks of duty, and make the pleasures of life a real joy to us. The mind has the faculties of reason, memory, imagination, consecration, and conscience. All these are capable of development. The reason can be trained to penetrate and understand problems and weigh conclusions. The memory collects, retains, and delivers the facts we learn. The imagination combines facts, and pictures new and interesting things to our minds. The power of concentration enables us to keep our minds centered on facts, till the reason can understand them, and the memory can impress them. Our conscience enables us to see that there is a right and wrong phase to all knowledge. It is God's monitor, He has left in the soul, to keep us from sin, and help us to love the truth and holiness, though we need the aid of God's Spirit for the conscience, because we are limited by our sinful natures.

Education Is Not Complete Without Morals and Religion

The great facts of education are drawn from nature, man, and the Bible. Nature teaches us science, such as mathematics, geography, chemistry, astronomy, geology, and so on. The facts we learn from man are grammar, language, civics, psychology, and philosophy. The facts we learn from the Bible are about God, His creation, providence, government, and about sin, and redemption through Jesus Christ. Our education is not complete without the great truths the Bible brings to us. For it tells us the facts necessary for this life and the life to come. It teaches us honesty, purity, faithfulness, kindness, sympathy and love, and inspires us to live for a high and holy purpose. All knowledge of science, literature, and art, are worth little, if our hearts and consciences are not properly trained.

Education Is the Training of All Our Powers

Learning the facts of science, literature and art must be coupled with the training of our physical powers, or they will be worth little to us in life. We must train the eye to observe all the details we see, the ear to hear, and listen carefully to all that is said, the hand to guide the pen, or the brush, or the tool, and to be quick in action. We must cultivate the memory to be accurate and retentive. We must compel ourselves to read worthwhile books, and not indulge our imaginations too much with fiction and stories. We should talk with intelligent people whenever we have the opportunity, and listen to their advice and experience, for we may learn much from them. We must be industrious and faithful, and employ our time well. We should preserve our health with great care, for a weak body is a poor companion to a trained mind. We should early choose a noble calling for our life, and train ourselves carefully for it, keeping it steadily before our minds and watching lest we be wishawashy, changing from one thing to another, which is certain to destroy our preparation, and defeat our object to be useful and happy.

Let us remember, as boys and girls, that our education begins with our A B Cs. As Samuel Johnson says, "Much may be made of a Scotchman if he be caught young," and if it is true of a young Scotchman, it is true of young Americans too.

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS AT HICKORY

The Methodists and Presbyterians are combining their forces at Hickory for the week of April 8-13 and will put on a Co-operative Standard Training School for the Sunday School workers of both denominations.

Mr. O. V. Woosley, conference superintendent for the Methodists, and Claude T. Carr, Synodical superintendent of N. C. Synod, will be joint educational directors. They will have a course of five units consisting of "The Teacher," "The School," "The Life of Christ," "Primary Organization and Administration," and "Junior Organization and Administration."

The first session will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock and during the rest of the week will be held at 7:30 in the evening, the classes meeting for two 50-minute periods broken by a 20-minute intermission, during which time a worship program, and various departmental activities will be demonstrated.

The enrollment will consist not only of the Hickory workers, but will include those of the near-by towns and surrounding communities. C. T. C.

MR. HARVEY, OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY WRITES OF HIS WORK

As a Sunday School Missionary in Wilmington Presbytery, I am glad to report that the work is on the upgrade in our eastern North Carolina section.

The great cry for efficiency today has brought to us from the General Assembly a chart for Sunday School workers, called the "Standard of Efficiency." We are trying to bring before our schools by this chart their weakness and their strength, and help them to measure up to the 100 per cent of the standard. We have at present only two schools reported as having accomplished this aim, though it is within the reach of both large and small schools if they are willing and eager workers in the Master's service. Immanuel and the First Church of Wilmington are the two Gold Seal schools.

We held a Standard Training School in Wilmington during February in conjunction with the Methodist schools of the city, six units being taught. About 250 attended and 63 Presbyterians and 52 Methodists did the required work through the whole week of instruction, and received certificates.

Ten Sunday Schools have been organized in our Presbytery the past year, totaling about 430 scholars.

Search and teach the Scriptures, from the cradle to the grave, is our cry, and we are praying for a great harvest. Wilmington, N. C. J. M. Harvey.

A CARR-LOAD OF SUGGESTIONS FOR ENDEAVORERS

Commenting on an article by Mrs. A. J. Howell in a recent number of the Standard on Endeavorers and the church services, we have the following letter from Mr. Chalmers Carr, son of Mr. C. T. Carr, our Superintendent of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work:

Dear Editor: In our Mooresville Senior C. E. Society we have tried with a great deal of success a plan somewhat similar to the one Mrs. Howell tells about. Our society, like the one at Vineland, is compelled to use the main auditorium for its meetings. Instead of having them before the church service we have them immediately following. The meetings are bright and snappy and we never have any trouble holding the crowd. We also find that by using this plan more of the members have started coming to the evening worship. In fact by far the greater number are regular attendants at this service.

Very often we have special programs and the whole congregation remains, thus greatly encouraging us in our work.

If the young people's societies are looking for better results at their weekly prayer meetings I think that this plan will help them.

Sincerely,
Chalmers R. Carr.

The Christian Endeavor Society at Cornelius, N. C., held its Dixie Endeavor Day pageant on Sunday, the 25th. A score of Davidson College students were present, including a quartette. An audience that packed the church contributed a splendid sum for the advancement of Southern Christian Endeavor work.

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:
A Friend ----- $ 1.00
Tenth Avenue Church ----- 30.71
Mr. and Mrs. Wilson ----- 10.00

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

The catalogue of the school is now on the press, and will shortly appear. It discloses the fact that 120 students have been enrolled from 15 states and District of Columbia and Korea. Senior class has 43, Junior class 65, and Specials 12. They came from the following: Alabama, 3; Arkansas, 1; D. C., 1; Florida, 6; Georgia, 12; Kentucky, 6; Korea, 1; Louisiana, 4; Mississippi, 4; Missouri, 1; North Carolina, 12; South Carolina, 13; Texas, 12; Tennessee, 8; Virginia, 34; and West Virginia, 2. Commencement exercises will be held in Schaeffler Hall on the evening of May 7th.

THE DEATH OF MRS. F. L. MAYES

When the North Carolina Synodical met in Charlotte, one of the most striking addresses was made by Mrs. F. L. Mayes, of South Carolina. Again she appeared during the Laymen's Convention when it met in Charlotte, and each appearance deepened the impression already made.

The sad news of her death will bring sorrow to her many friends and admirers among the women of the Synodical.

She was a most charming woman of the old type, famous in the South, and withal she was a consecrated Christian.

The Woman's Auxiliary will feel her loss the more as the years go by.

The Lord's workers may die, but His work goes on.

THE N. C. STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Sunday School workers, from Murphy to Manteo, will gather at the First Presbyterian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., on April 10-12, 1923.

An attractive program has been prepared:

1. Song Festival—A "Song Festival of the Twelve Months" will be presented on Thursday night, April 12th, by the Sunday Schools of Winston-Salem.

2. Parade—Members of Men's Bible Classes and other Sunday School men of Winston-Salem, and all men who attend the convention, will march in a Sunday School parade at 7:15 o'clock, Thursday night, April 12th.

3. County Officers' Fellowship Meeting—There will be a "Supper and Fellowship Meeting" from 6:00 to 7:30 o'clock, Tuesday night, April 10th, for all county and township officers.

4. Separate Division Conferences—Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, April 11th and 12th, will be devoted to special conferences for Children's, Young People's, Adult, and Administrative Division workers.

Delegates to the convention will be entertained free in private homes for lodging and breakfast. They must provide themselves dinner and supper.

For further information write to Chas. M. Norfleet, Winston-Salem, N. C., or to D. W. Sims, 304 Masonic Temple, Raleigh, N. C.

THE DEATH OF REV. JOHN F. MCKINNON

As we go to press we learn that Rev. John F. McKinnon died March 30th, at the Rutherfordton, N. C., hospital, after a week's illness.

He was buried at the Brittain Church, of which, in connection with Union Mills and Duncan's Creek Churches, he was pastor. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. C. Grier, of Rutherfordton, and Rev. W. A. Murray, of Shelby, N. C.

He was born in Jefferson County, Fla., and educated at Davidson College, N. C. He was licensed in 1894 by Enoree Presbytery, and ordained the same year by the same Presbytery.

He was engaged in educational work for part of his ministry, but also he was stated supply, Second Church, Augusta, Ga., and pastor of Long Cane and Little Mountain Churches, in South Carolina. He worked in Florida, and then came to this Synod, where he engaged in educational work at Westminster School.

When he died he was pastor of Brittain, Union Mills, and Duncan Creek Churches.

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

The manager of the Broadway Theatre of Statesville brought the play, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," out here Monday morning and showed it in the auditorium. The children and workers enjoyed it very much indeed.

Little Joe's Church has had a new coat of paint on the inside. We will have preaching in it next Sunday. The services have been held in the school auditorium while the church was in the hands of the painters.

The Grier house was so badly damaged while being moved that it will be necessary to do quite a bit of work on it. The Griers have moved into Howard Cottage to live while the work is being done.

Our walks are being improved. The campus and walks have suffered very much on account of the great amount of hauling that has been necessary on account of the building that has been done.

Mrs. John O. Holton, who was called home last week on account of the death of her mother, returned to her work Monday.

The ladies of the First Church, Charlotte, sent a bookcase and a nice lot of books for the first floor sitting room in the Woman's Building. The girls on this floor are very much pleased with this splendid gift.

NORTH CAROLINA

Winston-Salem—Rev. D. Clay Lilly, D.D., has accepted the call to the Reynolda Presbyterian Church of this city, which was extended him some time ago.

Salisbury, Church Street Church—This congregation of colored people is erecting a new brick edifice. The congregation is composed of some of the most worthy colored people in this city.

Salisbury, Second Church—Rev. Eugene Alexander, of Raeford, has moved to Salisbury and has taken up his work as pastor of this church. Mr. Alexander begins his pastorate under favorable auspices. The Second Church is located in one of the most desirable residential sections of Salisbury and it is believed that it has a great opportunity for expansion, as scores of new homes are being erected in that vicinity.

Salisbury, First Church—As the church year closes, there is probably more activity in this church than at any previous period in its history. Thirty-eight new members have been received in the last few weeks. The every member canvass was a spiritual blessing and the amount of money pledged was far larger than in any previous canvass. About 125 men and women are in the adult Bible classes. A new building for a young men's class is nearing completion. The Foster-Vance evangelistic services begin April 2nd and much interest is already in evidence. Much personal work is being done. Dr. J. S. Foster, of Winston-Salem, will assist Dr. Clark during the first week of the services, and Dr. James I. Vance, of Nashville, will assist during the second week. Careful preparation has been made for these services, and the church is at work.

Shearer—This little church, whose Sunday School is much bigger than the church, has just added two Sunday school rooms to its building. Much of the lumber and nearly all the labor was contributed by members of the church and friends in the community. The ladies followed the carpenters and gave the church a good cleaning. The addition and a coat of paint greatly help the looks of the building.

The church has subscribed its full quota to benevolences. F. A. Barnes, Pastor.

Charlotte—Westminster Church departed from its usual order of services on last Sabbath by holding a beautiful afternoon song and devotional service in place of the usual evening service. The church at the appointed hour, 5:00 p. m., was filled to capacity with members and friends of the congregation. The pastor, Rev. W. B. McIlwaine, Jr., made an appropriate and beautiful address, directing the thoughts of all to the Risen Christ. Beautiful music rendered by the splendid choir of the church, led by Mrs. Lilian Holmesly Bott, soprano, and with organ, flute and violin accompaniment, was rendered. The entire service was full of a devotional and spiritual fervor in keeping with the spirit of the day.

Charlotte—In the Second Presbyterian Church on Sunday, March 25, 1923, and in connection with the graduating exercises of the Sunday School, the pastor, in behalf of the Session and the Sunday School, presented a gift to Miss Margaret Rankin in the following words:

"I am charged with a pleasant responsibility. I hold in my hand a beautiful platinum bar pin set with diamonds which the Session and Sunday School have asked me to present to one whom they delight to honor.

"If any one connected with this school has been of more service to it than another it is the one who is to receive this pin. She is directly responsible for the foundation of our Primary department, and presided over it for many years. Under her experienced management it has grown to great importance. Hundreds of children love her and have been taught by her and when she goes to heaven—which I hope may not be for a long time yet—the joy of it will be increased many fold by the welcome she will receive from multitudes of little ones who will put their warm arms around her neck and their wet kisses upon her cheek.

"Miss Margaret, in behalf of the Session and Sunday School I give you this pin. May you live long, longer than I have time to tell in number of your years, ever beloved and loving may you be. And when at last old time shall lead you to your grave, goodness and you fill up one monument."

Charlotte, Caldwell Memorial Church—On last Sunday afternoon the Sunday School of this church observed its annual commencement and promotion day with a very attractive program with a large congregation that filled the main auditorium and overflowed into the Sunday School room. A feature of the program was the splendid response of graduates in the primary department to questions on the catechism propounded by the audience. The graduates of the junior department sang a part of the catechism which has been set to music. Written review work and maps of Palestine drawn by members of the Young People's League were displayed. The rewards for the best map work were given to Janice Bierman, first; Elizabeth Alexander, second, and John Barrier, third. Members of the beginners department were dressed for the occasion in white caps and gowns, those of the primary department in green caps and gowns, and the juniors in black caps and gowns.

This church, with its beautiful new plant, and its zealous and popular pastor, Rev. G. F. Bell, is growing rapidly in numbers and in useful service to the part of the city in which it is located, and in nothing is this growth more evident than in the Sunday School of the church. Over 50 officers and teachers, with Elder W. E.

Price, as superintendent, were installed on last Sabbath, and the records of the school show an enrollment in all departments, from cradle roll to home department, of 583 members.

Gastonia, Olney Church—This church has recently subscribed in full its benevolent and increased its current expense budget so as to come full support. It is also interesting to note that during the year it has overpaid its apportionment to every cause, built a new manse, and raised its full quota to the Davidson College fund. The church will report 210 members to Presbytery; Sunday School enrollment, 223; added by profession and letter, 66; total contributions to all causes, $5,000. The Kings Mountain Presbyterian Auxiliary will meet with this church April 24-25.

Bluff-Godwin-Fayetteville Presbytery—We have been on this charge about nine months and feel that we are pleasantly situated. We are now occupying the new manse which has been built in the last four months. On moving in this week we found that somebody had been inside before turning the keys over to us and had literally stocked the pantry with just what we needed to begin housekeeping in our new home. This was the work of the Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1 and No. 2 of the Bluff Church. This makes the third pounding we have received since coming here.

It is a pleasure to serve such kind-hearted and thoughtful people. About a month ago we went out and found a number of ladies too far from Wade to do much in the Auxiliary. We got them together and organized them into Circle No. 2, and this circle is partly responsible for the good pounding we got this week. This new circle is beginning work in earnest and we hope their influence in the church will be felt in the new year now coming in. May God bless both circles and make them prosperous in their work. T. C. Croker.

Mount Airy—Beginning Sunday March 4th and continuing through March 12th, Rev. William Black, D.D., and his singer, Mr. Andrew Burr, conducted special evangelistic services in our Flat Rock chapel. The meeting was a marked success in every way. One especially pleasing feature of the meeting was that the Tesh school nearby attended each morning service in a body. During the meeting there were 30 additions to the church in profession of faith and three by certificate. On the last night of the meeting a commission of Orange Presbytery was present and organized the chapel into the Flat Rock Presbyterian Church. The new church started with 63 charter members. Mr. H. D. Monroe was elected the first ruling elder, and the deacons elected were Mr. James Thompson, Mr. John McKenzie, and Mr. D. J. Midkiff. The every member canvass has been made with splendid results, and a pulpit committee has been elected to have charge of supplying the church with services of worship until a pastor can be secured. With the assistance of the Home Mission Committee it is hoped that a pastor can soon be located in this community, which is largely composed of families connected with the granite industry of Mount Airy.

Announcement is made from the office of the North Carolina Sunday School Association that four of America's most noted Sunday School specialists have been secured to take part in the program of the State Sunday School Convention, in Winston-Salem, April 10-11-12.

Dr. LeRoy Dakin, Brooklyn, N. Y., pastor of the Baptist Temple, and chairman of the adult committee of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, is an authority on the work of the organized adult Bible class, and will do special work along that line.

The services of Mr. E. R. Stanford, Nashville, Tenn., an expert in work with teen-age boys and girls in the Sunday School, have been secured. Mr. Stanford is superintendent of the Intermediate-Senior department of the Sunday School Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Miss Wilhelmina Stoker, Auburn, N. Y., professor of religious education in Auburn School of Religious Education, Auburn Theological Seminary, will be the specialist for the work in the children's division. Miss Stoker will also give lectures on "The Daily Vacation Bible School," and the "Week-day School of Religious Education."

As previously announced, Dr. Marion Lawrence, consulting general secretary, International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, will be one of the convention speakers. Dr. Lawrence needs no introduction to Sunday School workers, as his name is a household word throughout the Sunday School world.

State Sunday School Convention—"We want you and expect you to come, and you will receive a real Winston-Salem welcome to the State Sunday School Convention, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 10-11-12," is the announcement being sent to Sunday School workers over the state by the Winston-Salem committee on arrangements. This committee is composed of 12 of Winston-Salem's prominent Christian business men, with Mr. Jas. M. Norfleet as chairman.

Plans are being completed and programs are being sent out for the convention, and according to the report of D. W. Sims, general superintendent of the State Sunday School Association, a large and representative attendance of Sunday School workers from many parts of the state is expected.

"In arranging the program for the convention," said Dr. Sims, "the committee kept in mind Sunday Schools of every class and condition. Workers from all Sunday schools, city, town, village and country; and from schools of all sizes, large, medium, small; and from schools with good buildings and equipment, and the one-room school with no equipment at all, will find something helpful at the convention."

Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, April 11th and 12th, will be given over to conferences on different departments of the Sunday School. Conferences for workers with children under 12 years of age will be in charge of Miss Wilhelmina Stoker, professor in the School of Religious Education, Auburn Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y.; conferences for workers with young people between 12 and 24 years, will be under the direction of Mr. E. R. Stanford, Nashville, Tenn., superintendent of Intermediate-Senior work for the Southern Methodist Sunday School Board; adult Bible class workers will be led in two conferences by Dr. E. LeRoy Dakin, Brooklyn, N. Y., pastor of the Baptist Temple, and chairman adult committee, International Sunday School Council of Religious Education; superintendents, pastors, and other general Sunday School officers, will have the privilege of being in two conferences with Dr. Marion Lawrence, Chicago, consulting general secretary of the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education.

On Thursday afternoon, April 12th, it has been planned to have a "one-room school" session, in which all subjects discussed will deal with the problems of the one-room Sunday School. Some of the most capable Sunday School workers of the state will help with this session.

Plans are being completed for a parade of members of Men's Bible classes and other Sunday School men of Winston-Salem, and all men delegates to the state convention on Thursday night, April 12th, at 7:15 o'clock. It is expected that about 2,000 men will be in the parade.

A special feature of the closing session of the convention on Thursday night, April 12th, will be a "Song Festival of the Twelve Months," given by about 200 children from various Sunday Schools in Winston-Salem.

Each Sunday School in the state is requested to send three delegates, besides pastor and superintendent, to the convention. However, the delegation is not strictly limited, and it has been announced that as many as go will be welcome. All pastors, Sunday School superintendents, and officers of county and township Sunday School Associations, are delegates by virtue of office. Delegates will have free entertainment for lodging and breakfast in private homes in Winston-Salem.

The railroads have granted a round trip rate of one and one-half fares, certificate plan, for the convention, provided as many as 250 people travel to the convention over the railroads, and present certificates for validation in Winston-Salem.

State Superintendent D. W. Sims reports that a number of counties are endeavoring to work up large delegations to the convention. It is expected that this will be the largest and most representative Sunday School convention held in North Carolina in recent years.

St. Andrew's Church, Wilmington—Early in March Dr. J. Ernest Thacker and his evangelistic singer, Mr. Thos. B. Roddy, of Chattanooga, Tenn., came to St. Andrew's Church for a two weeks' meeting. It was Dr. Thacker's first visit to us, although he held a meeting in Wilmington in one of the other churches several years ago. St. Andrew's Church has not had an evangelistic service of this type for a long time, and with the months of preparation which preceded this meeting, the ground was thoroughly prepared for just the kind of work Dr. Thacker did. The church used all legitimate means of advertising the meeting, including paid space in the newspapers, slides in the moving picture shows, large placards placed all over the city, besides several thousand cards printed, carrying an invitation to the meeting. These were given out by the members and personal workers. The result of this work was that from the start large numbers of people gathered to hear Dr. Thacker each day and night.

The meeting was primarily for St. Andrew's membership, and a splendid work was done by these two consecrated leaders, Dr. Thacker and Mr. Roddy. The church was thoroughly revived, its membership interested as never before, and the spiritual life of the entire membership deepened. However, in addition to this the meeting extended beyond the bounds of our membership, and practically every protestant church in Wilmington was touched through this meeting. Dr. Thacker emphasized that while it was a meeting under the auspices of a Presbyterian church and intended primarily for the membership of that particular church, still the meetings were inter-denominational in character. Ministers and members of the various denominations attended in large numbers.

Dr. Thacker needs no word of commendation to Southern Presbyterians, but we feel that we can bear this word of testimony, that he, in spirit, message, manner and method, is an evangelist who, under God, will do the largest possible amount of good in the church, with the least possible offense to anyone concerned. He is ideal in his relationship with the pastor and with the people. His preaching is sane, spiritual, and absolutely scriptural. Mr. Thos. B. Roddy sings the Gospel with unusual power. He is a man of deep consecration and a personal worker who, in season and out of season, endeavors to lead people to accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour. Under his leadership two choirs, one of young people and one of children, added greatly to the interest of the meeting. The first Sunday afternoon of the meeting a large mass meeting was held in St. Andrew's Church for young people. The second Sunday afternoon Dr. Thacker held a meeting for men and boys. At this meeting the largest number of men and boys ever assembled in St. Andrew's Church came together to hear Dr. Thacker speak on "What Constitutes a Fool." There were fine results from this meeting.

In addition to these meetings led by Dr. Thacker and Mr. Roddy, Mrs. May Dixon Thacker, the consecrated and gifted wife of Dr. Thacker, spoke twice. On Sunday afternoon she spoke to all the women and girls of the city, delivering her famous lecture, "The Human Touch." This meeting was held in the Grace Methodist Church, and a large congregation heard her speak. Every available seat was taken. Women of the different denominations of the city were asked to take part in the exercises. Mrs. Thacker spoke with great power and effect. Her message is one greatly needed in this day and time by everyone, and especially by that class of women who are restless and who feel that their sphere lies outside of the home. Mrs. Thacker herself is in every sense of the word a modern woman, but she understands thoroughly just what relationship women should sustain to the best things of the old order and the best things of this new day. On the following Monday morning she spoke to a large congregation at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on "God's Creation and Christian Science." Mrs. Thacker has spent years in thoroughly surveying the field of Christian Science and digesting its teaching. She speaks with authority on the subject. She admits once having been very much attracted by the system, and therefore can lay bare its falsity with far more sympathy than one who has always been antagonistic to it. As you listen to her in this great lecture you are compelled to feel that here is one who, though dealing in love, lays bare this entire pernicious system of teaching. Many of the prominent Christian Scientists of the city came to hear her, among them one of the leading Christian Science healers. Mrs. Thacker's contribution to the entire series of services had no small part in the great success of this meeting.

The late Dr. A. D. McClure, so well known throughout the Southern Presbyterian Church, was pastor of St. Andrew's for 29 years, and we feel that in this meeting we could truthfully say that "he being dead yet speaketh." The blessing extending to all the churches of the city through this meeting is strong evidence of the personal touch which he maintained with the city of Wilmington. J. E. Purcell.

SOUTH CAROLINA

South Carolina Presbytery will meet in the Abbeville Church, Monday, April 23d, at 8:00 p. m. H. W. Pratt, S. C.

Spartanburg First Church, under the leadership of its new pastor, Dr. Henry Wade DuBose, is developing commendable liberality in supporting the benevolences of our church. Recently Secretary Egbert W. Smith spent a Sabbath with us and very interestingly and forcibly presented what he saw of our missions in Africa and in Japan. The "Self-denial week" following, our people, as a free-will offering outside of their regular weekly offerings, contributed over $1,100 for foreign missions.

The Sunday morning after the Laymen's Convention at Charlotte, which the pastor and many members attended, the Men's Bible Class promptly pledged $2,700 to send out one of the waiting missionaries to the foreign field. And in the every member canvass, on the 18th of March, although the budget fixed by the officers of the church was $35,000, much larger than ever before, the canvassers in one or two hours secured pledges for about $33,000, the remaining $2,000 it is expected to obtain from members who could not be reached that afternoon.

At Columbia, the capital of the State, Billy Sunday is now conducting one of his famous revival campaigns, marked by the usual profound and widespread interest. The huge tabernacle, holding 8,000, is constantly crowded to overflowing, and people from all the surrounding country as well as the city are flocking thither to hear the great evangelist preach the plain Gospel of Christ. Some pleasing features of the campaign are that the Columbia newspapers, circulating all over the state, publish his sermons every day and make prominent reports of all the services. The new governor of the state, Hon. Thos. G. McLeod, has taken public part in the exercises, welcoming the evangelist at the first service, joining the "trail-hitters" in consecrating his life anew to the Saviour, and making the opening prayer at one of the great assemblies; the president of the State University, Dr. W. D. Melton, is the chairman of the executive committee, and the student of our Theological Seminary, the University, and the Female Colleges, frequently attend.

Charleston Presbytery will meet in Summerville, S. C., April 24, 1923, at 8:00 p. m. Alexander Sprunt, S. C.

Columbia Theological Seminary—The Program for the commencement exercises at Columbia Theological Seminary has been completed.

The Baccalaureate Sermon will be preached on the morning of Sunday, May 6th, by Rev. Alexander Martin, D.D., pastor of the Oakland Street Presbyterian Church, of Rock Hill, S. C.

The Sermon before the Society of Missionary Inquiry will be preached by Rev. Walter L. Caldwell, D.D., pastor of the Woodland Street Presbyterian Church, of Nashville, Tenn.

The Board of Directors will meet on Tuesday, May 8th, at noon.

The Inaugural Address of Rev. James B. Green, D.D., as Professor of Theology will be delivered on Tuesday evening, at 8:00 p. m.

The Graduating Exercises will be held on Wednesday at 11 a. m. Hon. John T. Brantley, President of the Board, will preside. The diplomas will be presented and the address to the graduating class will be made by President Wells.

Kentyre Church, Pee Dee Presbytery—A series of services were conducted in this church during the week preceding the every member canvass, by the pastor, Dr. A. H. Atkins. While the weather was threatening the congregations were large. Many expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the sermons. They were on such subjects as kept the mind of God's people on the every member canvass. Some of the subjects were the following: The Bible, Consecration, Obedience, Neglect. A debt of $1,000 had rested on the manse for several years. The officers determined to take steps at once to pay the debt.

Preceding the meeting held at Kentyre Church, a meeting of a week was held at the Hamer Mill Chapel. There were some additions to the Hamer Church and 25 or 30 of the mill people promised to have family worship. The mill chapel is proving to be quite a feeder of the Hamer Church.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Kentyre Church has about 50 members; most of the members are young people. Four of the boys have decided to study for the ministry.

News of the Week

The condition of Lenine, the Russian premier, is again causing anxiety, says a Riga dispatch to The Times. It is reported that he lay for nearly a week motionless, during which time his temperature and pulse were almost normal. But on Monday a change for the worse occurred; his temperature rose and his pulse became accelerated, and breathing difficult.

Smuggling aliens into the United States in air planes has become a serious problem to the immigration authorities, according to the second assistant secretary of labor, Robert Carl White, who has been visiting the Mexican border from Tiajuna east to El Paso. Chinese especially are being brought in air plines from Mexico into this country.

The democratic national committee agrees with Senator Simmons that the tariff duty on sugar is responsible for the increase in price to the American consumer. The rate as 1.7648 cents a pound has enabled cane and beet sugar people to exploit the consumer. The beet people charge the cane people and the cane people charge the beet people.

The sudden rise in the price of sugar is worrying the republicans. Everybody has to have a little sugar. All Americans are aroused over the boost.

Investigation by the United States tariff commission into the relation of the tariff rates on sugar to the present increased sugar prices was ordered by President Harding.

The question of the reimbursement of the United States government for the cost of the maintenance of the American army on the Rhine, was brought somewhat nearer settlement at a long conference between Elliott Wadsworth, the American representative, and the financial representative of the allied powers. Big differences, however, are still preventing complete agreement.

Wholesale erection of new railway crossing signs will be required of the railroads prior to July 1st, the date on which the new "Stop, Look and Listen" law, enacted by the late General Assembly, becomes effective. The law directs every motor vehicle to stop before proceeding over a grade crossing, and it directs the railroads to erect signs "40 by 50 inches," painted red and calling attention to the "North Carolina Stop law," these to be placed 100 feet from each crossing.

The longest session of the South Carolina Legislature since reconstruction times came to an end shortly after 7:00 o'clock, March 24th, when both houses of the General Assembly adjourned sine die after a session of 75 days. The appropriation bill for 1923, carrying $7,279,000, was ratified at 4:20 o'clock, and was immediately sent to the governor.

Samuel D. Nicholson, United States Senator from Colorado, died in Denver, March 24th. Carcinoma, or cancer of the liver, caused his death. He had been ill for nearly a month.

Northern negroes are up in arms and threaten to bolt the republican party. Certain of their organizations have sent saucy letters to Senators Lodge, Curtis and other senate leaders, charging them with half-hearted support of the Dyer anti-lynching bill.

Senator-elect Earl B. Mayfield, of Texas, is going to give the democrats some unhappy hours. He is called the Newberry of the democratic party. The republicans are getting ready to make a big-to-do over the Mayfield contest. They expect to make it a stand-off for Newberry.

The state ship and water transportation commission, holding its initial meeting, set sail upon the program of investigation into Governor Morrison's proposal for state owned ship lines and adequate terminal facilities. Meeting for the first time also was the new and enlarged state fisheries commission board, which will have control over the expenditure of a half million dollars in the rehabilitation of the fish and oyster industries.

R. M. Miller, Jr., Charlotte capitalist, was elected chairman of the ship commission, with Dr. D. D. Carroll, of the university, as secretary.

The North Carolina College Conference has concluded its fourth annual meeting. President W. J. Martin, of Davidson College, was elected chairman of the conference for the ensuing year, succeeding Dr. Howard B. Rondthaler, Salem College. N. W. Walker, of the university faculty, was re-elected secretary.

Atlantic Coast Line announces an improvement program involving the expenditure of $26,000,000, a large part of it to be spent at and in the vicinity of Savannah. R. A. McCranie, general superintendent, said.

Radio broadcasting from the Brazilian Centennial exposition at Rio de Janeiro, was heard by one of the United States government stations at Honolulu, 8,000 miles away, establishing a new distance record, it was announced at the Western Electric Company's offices.

In New York, four bandits hurled a cobble stone through the double window put up by David Gumbiner after his Broadway jewelry store had been robbed of $20,000 three years ago, and, amid a spray of bullets, fled in a bright yellow taxicab with $25,000 worth of gems.

Governor McLeod signed the appropriation act of the Legislature of South Carolina, passed as the closing work of the session which ended Saturday. The governor approved all items of the measure except the famous Todd claim, an item of $15,811, to pay Senator A. W. Todd, an architect, for a replica and plans of an enlarged capitol proposed by him in 1912.

The acquisition of the Morris and company packing interest by Armour and company, through a subsidiary has been completed, according to an announcement by J. Ogden Armour, chairman of the board of Armour and company. The North American Provision company, subsidiary of Armour and company of Delaware, was named as the firm acquiring Morris and company's business.

Sensational advances in potato prices took place in Greenville, Mich., March 24th, when local buyers advanced their bids from 75 cents to $1.00 and $1.10 a hundredweight. These were the highest prices of the season. The Greenville market is one of the largest in Michigan.

TIME AND PLACE OF MEETINGS OF PRESBYTERIES

The General Assembly will meet at Montreat, N. C., Thursday, May 17, 1923, at 11 a. m.

The churches should send to the spring meetings of Presbyteries the following: (1) Sessional Records; (2) Statistical Reports; (3) Sabbath School Reports; (4) Narrative; (5) Presbyterial Assessment (or Commissioners' Fund); (6) Report on Systematic Beneficence; (7) Reports from all Societies.

SYNOD OF ALABAMA

Presbytery	Place of Meeting	Time, 1923	Stated Clerk
East Alabama	Prattville	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	W. S. Patterson.
Mobile
North Alabama	Fifth Ave. Ch., Birmingham	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	W. C. Clark.
Tuscaloosa	Uniontown	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	R. E. Fulton.

SYNOD OF APPALACHIA

Abingdon	Rock Spring Ch., Lodi, Va.	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	C. R. Lacy.
Asheville	W. Asheville Church, Asheville, N. C.	Tu., May 1, 8:00 p. m.	W. S. Hutchison.
Holston	Rogersville, Tenn.	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	L. McF. Courtney.
Knoxville

SYNOD OF ARKANSAS

Arkansas	Jonesboro	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	D. A. McNeill.
Ouachita	Malvern	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	John T. Barr.
*Pine Bluff	Star City	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	J. H. Morrison.
Washburn	1st Ch., Fayetteville	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	F. A. Bradshaw.

SYNOD OF FLORIDA

Florida	Milton	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	D. J. Currie.
St. Johns	1st Ch., Arcadia	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	J. H. Davis.
*Suwanee	Westminster Ch., Jacksonville	Tu., Apr. 10, 2:00 p. m.	E. W. Waysonville.

SYNOD OF GEORGIA

Athens	Hartwell	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	S. J. Kirtledge.
Atlanta	Gordon St Ch., Atlanta	Tu., Apr. 24, 2:30 p. m.	L. D. King.
Augusta	Penfield	Tu., Apr. 10, 9:15 p. m.	James Thomas.
Cherokee	Lafayette	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	F. K. Sims.
Macon	Fort Valley	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	Carl Barth.
Savannah	Brunswick	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	A. L. Patterson.
Southwest Georgia	Climax	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	E. P. Mickel.

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY

Ebenezer	Madison Ave. Ch., Covington	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	W. W. Morton.
Louisville	Bardstown	M., Apr. 9, 7:30 p. m.	W. H. Hopper.
Muhlenburg
Paducah
Transylvania	1st Ch., Lawrenceburg	M., Apr. 9, 7:30 p. m.	P. L. Bruce.
West Lexington	Maxwell St. Church, Lexington	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	S. M. Logan.

SYNOD OF LOUISIANA

Louisiana	Norwood	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	D. F. Wilkinson.
New Orleans	Bogalusa	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	Louis Voss.
Red River	Natchitoches	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:15 p. m.	J. F. Naylor.

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI

Central Mississippi	Canton	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	E. W. Foxd.
East Mississippi	Ripley	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	W. A. Downing.
Meridian	Leaksville	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	H. M. Jenkins.
Mississippi	Brookhaven	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	S. C. Caldwell.
North Mississippi	Cleveland	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	F. R. Graves.

SYNOD OF MISSOURI

Lafayette	Pleasant Hill	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	R. L. Cowan.
Missouri	Fulton	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	A. A. Wallace.
Palmyra	LaBelle	Tu., Apr. 3, 7:30 p. m.	R. M. Firebaugh.
Potosi	Chaffee	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	J. E. Kerr.
St. Louis	1st Ch., St. Charles	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	W. M. Langtry.
*Upper Missouri	Liberty	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	C. P. Browning.

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA

Albemarle
Concord	Lenoir	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	E. D. Brown.
Fayetteville	Highland Ch., Fayetteville	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	E. L. Siler.
Kings Mountain

Presbytery	Place of Meeting	Time, 1923	Stated Clerk
Mecklenburg	Caldwell Mem., Charlotte	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	C. C. Anderson.
Orange	Church by the Side of the Road, Greensboro	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	D. I. Craig.
Wilmington	Elkton	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	W. P. M. Currie.

SYNOD OF OKLAHOMA

Durant	Caddo	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	E. H. Moseley.
Indian	Sandy Creek Church, Filmore	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	B. Columbus.
Mangum	1st Ch., Cheyenne	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	J. W. Moseley.

SYNOD OF SNEDECOR MEMORIAL

Colored

Central Alabama	Ann St. Ch., Mobile, Ala.	Th., Apr. 12, 7:30 p. m.	I. C. H. Champney.
Central Louisiana	Ethel
N. & S. Carolina	Mt. Pelier Church, Rowland, N. C.	Th., Apr. 5, 2:30 p. m.	G. S. Alford.

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Bethel	Blacksburg	W., Apr. 18, 8:00 p. m.	F. H. Wardlaw.
Charleston	Summerville	Tu., Apr. 24, 8:00 p. m.	Alex. Sprunt.
Congaree
Enoree	Lickville Ch., Pelzer	Tu., Apr. 3, 8:00 p. m.	E. P. Davis.
Harmony	R. F. D. 3
Peo Dee	Bennettsville	W., Apr. 11, 3:00 p. m.	A. H. McArn.
Piedmont	Seneca	M., Apr. 16, 8:00 p. m.	Robert Adams.
South Carolina	Abbeville	M., Apr. 23, 8:00 p. m.	H. W. Pratt.

SYNOD OF TENNESSEE

Columbia	Pulaski	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	Clyde Johnson.
Memphis	Purdy School Church, Purdy	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:00 p. m.	J. H. Lumpkin.
Nashville	Gallatin	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	W. C. Alexander.

SYNOD OF TEXAS

Brazos	Bryan	Tu., Apr. 17, 2:00 p. m.	C. S. Ramsay.
Brownwood	Proctor	Tu., Apr. 24, 11 a. m.	Malcolm Black.
Central Texas	1st Ch., Waco	Tu., Apr. 17, 7:30 p. m.	S. J. McMurry.
Dallas	1st Ch., Dallas	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	J. G. Varner.
Eastern Texas	1st Ch., Orange	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	S. M. Tenney.
El Paso
Fort Worth	Itasca	Tu., Apr. 10, 7:30 p. m.	J. M. Sedgwick.
Paris
Texas-Mexican Western Texas

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA

East Hanover	Tabb St. Ch., Petersburg	M., Apr. 16, 8:00 p. m.	W. S. Campbell.
Lexington	Waynesboro	Tu., Apr. 17, 3:00 p. m.	W. C. White.
Montgomery	Westminster Church, Lynchburg	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	L. W. Irwin.
Norfolk	Lafayette Ch., Norfolk	Tu., Apr. 10, 2:00 p. m.	R. B. Grinnan.
Potomac	Central Ch., Washington, D. C.	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	Wm. H. Woods.
Roanoke	Spring Garden Ch., Chatham, R. F. D.	Tu., Apr. 10, 8:00 p. m.	F. M. Allen.
West Hanover	Amherst	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	C. F. Rankin.
Winchester

SYNOD OF WEST VIRGINIA

Greenbrier	Ronceverte	M., Apr. 9, 8:00 p. m.	J. B. Flow.
Kanawha	Ruffner Memorial Ch., Charleston	Tu., Apr. 24, 8:00 p. m.	J. B. Morton.
Tygart's Valley	Phillippi	Tu., Apr. 17, 8:00 p. m.	L. B. Hensley.

*Pine Bluff—Reports by chairman on: Arkansas College, Presbyterial and Assemblage Missions; Sunday School Extension; Bible Cause; Laymen's Movement; Systematic Beneficence, etc.

*Suwanee—The afternoon will be occupied with a conference on Evangelism.

*Upper Missouri—Meals served on "Harvard Plan," i. e.: Bed and breakfast; meals served noon and evening by Christian Endeavor Society.

CHILDREN

THREE MORE WEEKS OF SCHOOL

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl 12 years old and going to school. I am in the fifth grade. The name of my school is Bain Academy. My studies are history, spelling, English, reading and geography. My teacher's name is Miss McPherson, she is a good teacher. Our school goes out in three weeks. Hoping to see my letter in print. With good wishes to all of the little folks, I am, your friend,
Sarah Louise Ashcraft.
Matthews, N. C.

A NICE TEACHER

Dear Standard:
I am in the fifth grade and I am studying hard. I have a good teacher, her name is Miss McPherson. My studies are reading and primary geography and spelling and history.
From your unknown friend,
Alice Costner.
Matthews, N. C.

MISSES LITTLE BROTHER

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl seven years old, I go to Sunday School every Sunday. My teacher is Mrs. Sanderson. I go to school every day. I am in the second grade. My teacher's name is Miss Baker. I haven't any brothers or sisters. My little brother died on January 8, 1922, he was three years and four months old, oh, I miss him so much, his name was Martin Van, Jr. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.
Your little friend,
Janie Kathleen Hardie,
Vineland, N. C.

A BABY BROTHER

Dear Standard:
This is my second letter to you, I am a little girl 12 years old, I go to school at Springfield, my principal's name is Mr. Ira Turnley. I like him very much. I go to Sunday School at Union Church, my Sunday School teacher's name is Miss Cassie McLaughlin. About three weeks ago Mr. Lassiter came over to Union Church and reached one night for us. My baby brother has been sick, but he is some better now. I will close, hoping to see my letter printed very soon.
From your friend,
Lillie Muse.
Cameron, N. C.

SEVEN YEARS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl 12 years old and go to the First Presbyterian Church here. I am in the Intermediate Department of the Sunday School and my teacher is Mrs. A. L. Cromartie. The Sunday School superintendent is Mr. Chas. J. Rose. Our pastor is Rev. W. E. Hill. I am a member of the Church and go every Sunday morning and night. I have recited the child's catechism and I received my testament as well as my Bible by the time I was seven years old. I have been going to Sunday School seven years without missing a Sunday and I have won prizes for reciting the most hymns one year and the most Bible verses another year. I am in the eighth grade, or first year of High School at school and I study Latin, algebra, spelling, civics, English, and Irving's Sketch Book. I hope you will print this letter because I want to surprise some of my friends and relatives.

Your new friend,
Vera Buckingham.
Fayetteville, N. C.

THE STORY THE PENCIL TOLD

By Madge Bartlett, Age 11

One day as I sat alone in the school room, I heard a voice speaking, "Would you like to hear my story?" I looked around and saw only a stubby little pencil lying on a little girl's desk.

This is the story the pencil told me: One time the wood in me was growing in a beautiful dark forest. Some men came and searched about and selected the best trees. These were cut and sent to the river. There a great many of them were floated down the river together to a large mill. They were sawed and planed and shaped.

The lead in me came from a mine far under the earth. Men brought me up to the daylight and I was sent to a factory and shaped and placed inside of the wood for a pencil.

The tin about my eraser also came from a mine; and the rubber in me came from a rubber tree in far off Africa.

All of these things it takes to make a pencil. Then when I was made into a pencil and painted a bright yellow I was shipped to a store in Mint Hill.

One morning I was lying in the show-case longing to get out into the world when I tripped a little girl with bobbed hair and bought me for a nickel.

"At last I'll be happy," I thought. But it was far from true, for the little girl cut me with her knife, and then she made me work hard on her tablet all the day. She often bit me, and once she lost me for awhile.

The worst thing of all happened today though, for she brought home another new pencil and I am "deserted."

"Alas" sighed the worn-out pencil, "How sad it is to be old and forgotten."

Matthews, N. C., R. D

LITTLE DOG THAT SANG IN THE CHOIR

Long, long ago in our own country, there lived a little skye terrier that had been taught to do tricks. His funniest trick was to stand on his hind legs and sing. His family were musicians. He was the particular pet of Natalie's grandmother. Natalie as you may know, is a big girl now and goes to college. When she and her brother were little, they loved to hear this story about their skye terrier that learned to sing.

You see, Natalie's grandmother, to whom the dog belonged, sang in the church choir. Her mother, who was Natalie's great-grandmother, not only sang in the choir, but was the choir leader.

In those days there were many, many churches without organs. There were many good ministers who thought it was wrong to have organs in churches. The choir leaders then used what were called pitch-pipes to pitch the tunes with. Before the choir began to sing, the choir leader would sound the proper note on the pitch-pipe so the choir would begin to sing on the right key.

Great-grandmother used to sound the note on her pitch-pipe in her church because she was the leader of the choir. It seems that the choir often had rehearsals at great-grandmother's house. Grandmother, who was a school-girl then, without dreaming of being anybody's grandmother, sang soprano in the choir. There was always so much music in their home, with rehearsals and all, that she thought the little skye terrier should learn to sing too.

So she taught him to stand on his hind feet and sing, "Ow-oo-oo-oo wow-ow-ow oo-oo-oo," dog fashion. It was the best he could do.

The dear little old-fashioned children of long ago used to laugh until they almost cried sometimes when they listened to grandmother's little dog sing like that, up and down the scale. It was great fun for every one to see the little dog stand on his hind feet and sing with his little fore paws waving in the air as if he were trying to beat the time.

At home, whenever great-grandmother lifted the pitch-pipe just for fun to sound a note, the little skye terrier was ready to sing and the children were always more than ready to laugh.

In those long ago days all good folks went to church every Sunday morning rain or shine. Then, as now, small dogs stayed at home. No one dreamed that grandmother's little skye terrier would ever think of such a thing as going to church to sing in the choir. The family of course knew that he would trot along to church if he had a chance because he never liked to be left at home alone. Some one always tried to be sure to shut the little dog in his house when it was church time.

One Sunday morning the family were late in starting for church. Great-grandmother knew that she simply must not be late for services because she was leader of the choir; so she walked ahead with the others, fast as she could travel, leaving grandmother to lock the doors, shut her pet in his little house and come later, when she was ready.

Grandmother hurried, but best she could do, she was late that morning. She was so late she would not walk down the long aisle to sit with the choir. Instead, she slid into a pew near the door and was glad she could do it so quietly.

The choir sat on a long wide platform back of the pulpit, facing the congregation in that old time church. They were about to begin the singing of a hymn when grandmother entered. Perhaps if it had been prayer time or sermon time or during any other part of the church services, Natalie's pretty grandmother might have noticed her little dog had followed her. She didn't know it though, and was thankful as she could be that she hadn't disturbed the minister and the congregation by coming in so late.

Grandmother had no more than seated herself before the choir rose to sing. It was perfectly still in the church when great-grandmother, dignified as she could be in her Sunday silk and best bonnet, lifted the pitch-pipe and sounded the note so the choir could begin singing the hymn in the right key.

The very second that note sounded, some one who shouldn't have been singing in the choir that morning, piped in with a shrill little song, the only song he knew:

Ow-oo-oo-oo — wow-oo-oo-wow-wow-oo!"

And there was grandmother's little skye terrier, standing on his hind legs on the platform, in front of great-grandmother, waving his fore paws and singing in church!

The children tittered. Little girls and boys immediately had to put their faces in their mother's laps to keep from laughing aloud. Grown folks tried not to even smile, but some of them turned as red in the face as pretty young grandmother herself, because they tried so hard to keep from bursting with laughter.

Great-grandmother had to pipe two or three times more on the pitch-pipe before the choir could straighten their faces, steady their voices and sing. The good minister, the only one who could not see the little dog, was shocked; but poor great-grandmother was so mortified she longed to sink through the floor.

Now it happens that Natalie's great-grandmother was a gentle woman with perfect manners. She never lost her temper and she never scolded her children as some old-fashioned mothers did, and she had never been the spanking kind. She could spank a child if it were necessary, but usually she just didn't.

Great-grandmother said that at first when the little dog piped in like that, she felt like sinking through to China. The next minute though, when the choir behaved so badly, and nobody looked solemn except probably the minister, and when an usher picked up the little dog and put him out, great-grandmother said afterwards, that then and there, right in church, she felt exactly like SPANKING somebody—HARD.

By the time services were over, great-grandmother felt better and didn't even scold grandmother for unintentionally disgracing the family.

You may be sure though, that the little dog never again had a chance to sing in a church choir—Frances M. Fox, in Presbyterian Banner.

TRUE STORY OF JENNY WREN

It was a long time ago, as you will know when I tell you that William III was then King of England.

There was war during that summer of 1690, and the poor soldiers suffered very much. Upon the eve of one great battle they were so tired after one of their marches that they lay down for a short sleep, when it would have been much better and wiser had they remained on the watch for the enemy.

Among the men was a little drummer boy, whose eyes, like those of his elders, were fast shut; who knows that he might not have been dreaming of his mother, his home his brothers and sisters?

Just before he fell asleep he had been eating his rations, and some crumbs of bread had dropped on the head of his drum. A little wren, perching in one of the trees beneath which the soldiers were reposing, espied these crumbs and flew down to secure them.

As she hopped about on the parchment of the drum, the tapping of her beak awakened the lad. He opened his eyes, and was startled by the sight of the enemy advancing. He had just time to beat the signal of alarm, which awoke his comrades and put them on their defense.

The skill of King William won him that battle of the Boyne on July 1, 1690; but it the "Jenny Wren" had not chanced to rouse the little drummer boy, the fortunes of that day would have been quite altered.—Ex.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Thornton-Gillespie—At the manse of the First Presbyterian Church, Huntsville, Ala., on February 22, 1923, by Rev. Neill G. Stevens, Mr. Kirby Thornton, of Huntsville, Ala., and Miss Ethel Gillespie, of Madison, Ala.

Hundley-Stewart—At the manse of the First Presbyterian Church, Huntsville, Ala., on March 4, 1923, by Rev. Neill G. Stevens, Mr. William May Hundley and Miss Annie Lee Ellen Stewart, both of Belle Mina, Ala.

Carmichael-Gressette—At the manse of the Kentyre Church, Hamer, S. C., March 7, 1923, by Rev. A. H. Atkins, Mr. Hubert L. Carmichael, of Dillon, S. C., and Miss Zynetta Gressette, of St. George, S. C.

Atkins-McEachern—In the Beulah Presbyterian Church, Hamer, S. C., February 23, 1923, by Rev. A. H. Atkins, father of the groom, Mr. William Robinson Atkins and Miss Ethel McEachern, both of Hamer, S. C.

DEATHS

Fleming—Renwick Woodrow Fleming passed away Feb. 4, 1923, at his home in Number 3 Township, Cabarrus Co., N. C. Born February 20, 1859, he was married October 29, 1907 to Miss Laura May Morrison, of New Brunswick, Canada. He was a prominent and esteemed citizen and a member formerly of Bethpage Church and more recently of Gilwood. His wife and one sister, Mrs. C. O. Gillon, of Concord, N. C., survive.

MRS. SALLIE KNOX CRAVEN

Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Auxiliary of Back Creek Church:

Whereas, it pleased our Heavenly Father, in the loving counsel of His Holy Will, to call from her earthly labors to eternal rest our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Sallie Knox Craven therefore be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to His Holy Will.

2. That her loving face and sweet smile will be missed in our Auxiliary, especially in the circle of which she was a member.

3. That as a testimony of our affection and appreciation of her, this memorial notice be inscribed in our minutes, and a copy sent to the church papers for publication.

Mrs. S. E. Sloop.

Mrs. S. B. Hart.

Mrs. G. A. Brown.

MRS. EMMA SOUTHERLAND

We, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Grove Presbyterian Church, Kenansville, N. C., do lovingly pay this tribute of respect to the memory of our co-worker, Mrs. Emma Southerland, whom God called to heaven on December 3, 1922.

Be it resolved:

First: That we point with pride to her record as a member of this organization; her hearty co-operation, her devotion to her church.

Second: That we call on each member of this Auxiliary to emulate the humbleness of her spirit; the cleanliness of her speech; the purity of her thoughts; the Christlikeness of her character.

Third: That we extend our deepest sympathy to the son, daughter, and little granddaughter, and assure them of our sense of grievousness in their bereavement.

We will miss the sunshine and kindly ways she possessed.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our minutes, and a copy be sent to the members of the family and a copy be sent to the Presbyterian Standard.

Mrs. R. V. Wells.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oldham.

Miss Daisy Jones.

REV. M. McG. SHIELDS

One of the most cherished memories of my life is the fact that Rev. Malcolm McGilvary Shields, the prince of preachers, was my friend,—close, intimate and loyal. Words fail me in expressing some appreciation of his character and his life's work.

Although cut off in his prime, he rendered more service to the Master in the energy and enthusiasm of his intensely useful career than the average man who lives three score years and ten.

Malcolm McGilvary, the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Shields, was born near Priest Hill, two miles east of Carthage, Moore County, N. C., October 9, 1865.

He grew to manhood in those days following the Civil War. He learned the values of life in the hard school of necessity. While doing his share of the farm work he dreamed of a useful life in the great outside world. He prepared himself for college in the local schools and at Union School.

After graduating from the University of North Carolina, he was associated, for two years, with his brother-in-law, Rev. W. F. Watson and Mr. J. F. Cole, in the Carthage school. He was eminently successful as a teacher. During this time, he also served as the successor of Prof. W. J. Stuart, as superintendent of Public Instruction of Moore County. Failing health compelled him to give up school work.

Following his school work, he studied law for a while with the law firm of Black and Adams; but the call to the ministry becoming so insistent, Mr. Shields took up the study of theology under Rev. Angus R. Shaw, D.D., who was at that time pastor of the Carthage Presbyterian Church. While engaged in this study he preached occasionally at Culdee Presbyterian Church. Later he took theological training at Union Theological Seminary.

Mr. Shields first accepted the call to the pastorate of Union, Cameron, and White Hill churches. One year later he accepted the work as evangelist of Person County. After two years of diligent work in this field, he accepted a call to the Burlington Church, which he served acceptably for five years. His largest pastorate was the First Presbyterian Church, Gastonia, N. C. He served this church with success for seven years. Mr. Shields resigned this pastorate to accept the position as evangelist and superintendent of Home Missions in Albemarle Presbytery. He did a great constructive work in this Presbytery. Feeling, however, a desire to re-enter the pastorate, two years later he accepted a call to the Park Avenue Presbyterian Church, Norfolk, Va. This church grew rapidly under his earnest leadership.

In 1908 he became evangelist and superintendent of Home Missions for the Synod of North Carolina where for five years he labored to put the work of the Synod upon a business basis. He met the difficulties and problems of this work with wisdom and prudence, infusing into the work his abounding energy and enthusiasm; and now, ten years after he gave up the work, it has enlarged amazingly along the lines he laid down.

After three insistent calls, Mr. Shields accepted a similar position with the Synod of Georgia. In eight and one-half years he did a wonderful work in this Synod in laying foundations for the future growth of our beloved Church through the length and breadth of the State in developing the weak churches; in occupying and organizing new churches at strategic points, in securing pastors for vacant churches; in the many successful evangelistic meetings he held; and in unifying the work of all the Presbyteries into a State-Wide effort.

Mr. Shields was the fine product of what has made so many matchless men of God in the past, that is, Presbyterian training in a Godly Scotch home. Burns in the "Cotter's Saturday Night" pictures such a home:

"Then kneeling down to Heaven's Eternal King,

The saint, the father, and the husband prays."

"From scenes like these Old Scotia's grandeur springs,

That makes her loved at home, rev'd abroad."

As a preacher Mr. Shields had a rare gift of expression in that he spoke fluently, clearly and distinctly with the force of profound conviction and a sublime faith in God. He was a painstaking and a careful student of the Holy Scriptures. He had the natural gifts of an evangelist in his earnestness as a preacher,—burning with the fiery zeal of Paul (II Cor. 5:20), "Now then are we ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God,"—he brought conviction to his hearers.

Mr. Shields' preaching was characterized by sound doctrine. He had no sympathy with clap-trap methods, or temporizing with sin. With him sin was sin, be it among the rich or poor, the learned or ignorant, a deadly poison that kills the soul. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." He preached Christ and Him crucified without the fear or favor of man.

Mr. Shields was a man of unusually fine executive ability. He was a good organizer in all lines of church work; having the happy faculty of choosing the right ones for the right places and getting them to work. His organizing ability is seen in his results of his work both as pastor and as superintendent of Home Missions in Presbytery and Synod.

Mr. Shields had a pleasing, gentlemanly manner, and an attractive personality. Kind-hearted and of tender sensibilities; he was a wonderful pastor; for the heavy-hearted, the sorrowing and the troubled ever found him ready to listen in warmest sympathy; and the help he has given by sympathy of heart and hand can never be recounted in this world.

As a man Mr. Shields upheld the right and eschewed the evil. His contempt for the little, the low and the mean together with his stern denunciation of wrong-doing in all places both high and low; his uncompromising attitude towards sin in every form marked his preaching and the life he lived among his fellow men.

Possibly the nobility of his life never shown brighter than in his home. Mr. Shields was a loving and thoughtful husband, a devoted father, honored and revered by his children. His fatherly care extended to the orphaned children of his sister whose death together with that of her husband, Rev. J. L. Wicker, 1899 left their children to the tender care of this man of God. Loving and thoughtfully he provided for them and their education as he did for his own. They now join with his own children in calling him blessed.

On December 29, 1887, Mr. Shields married Miss Hattie Shaw, the daughter of the saintly Dr. John Shaw, an elder for years in the Carthage Presbyterian Church.

To this union were born five children, three of whom survive their beloved father: Rev. Harold McQueen Shields, pastor of the Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church, Norfolk, Va.; Mr. Ernest Shields, of Decatur, Ga. and Miss Catherine Shields a senior in Agnes Scott College. He also leaves three brothers: Mr. D. R. Shields and Mr. Benjamin Shields, of Carthage, N. C., and Mr. D. R. Shields of Gastonia, N. C., and two sisters, Mrs. John P. Sinclair, Carthage, N. C. and Mrs. R. J. McIlwaine, of Monroe, N. C.

Mrs. Shields with her three children and widowed sister, Mrs. Mamie Wicker, are left saddened in the home in Decatur, Ga. May the God of the fatherless and of the widow overshadow this home with His loving presence.

Though dying in the prime of life Mr. Shields had become one of the most prominent ministers in the Southern Presbyterian Church. Strong in the pulpit, strong in the parlor, strong in the courts of the church, his influence will continue to grow as the years go by upon the foundation which he laid in two Synods for the future development of our beloved Church.

On September 8, 1922, the tender hands of loving friends gently laid him to rest in the family plot under the shadow of the Carthage Presbyterian Church, his home church, there to await the hour when he will come forth clothed in matchless immortality to be forever with the Lord.

"How blest the righteous when he dies!"

When sinks a weary soul to rest;
How mildly beam the closing eyes,
How gently heaves th' expiring breast.

"Life's duty done, as sinks the clay
Light from the load the spirit flies
While heaven and earth combine to say,

"How blest the righteous when he dies!"

J. K. Roberts

"Look not mournfully into the past
It comes not back again. Wisely improve the present. It is thine. God forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and with a manly heart—Inscription in an old German church.

A sound ideal for the Church's practical activity is that doing nothing out of harmony with its own foundations, it shall do all that is possible to adapt itself to the conditions under which it labors.

FOR SALE—Drug Store in town in Piedmont section of South Carolina for sale. The owner wants to retire from business and will sell reasonable. Address, Druggist, care Standard.

Story and Incident

THE MYSTERIOUS WAY

Was Not an Easy Way, but the End was Glorious

Through the open window in the doctor's waiting-room Helen Gale heard the impatient honk of her husband's automobile horn; yet it caught to her ears none of the usual use of hurry. Indeed, the sound seemed almost of another world, a world where she had rushed nervously from task to task, that she might never keep her husband waiting or bring down upon his head one of his bursts of impatience.

All that was over now. She seemed to have entered a new life in which things like Richard's temper made no difference. With intention-deliberation she fastened her eyes carefully before opening the outside door. The act was symbolic, though she hardly realized it herself.

Richard Gale, his fingers drumming senseless upon the wheel, started the car before she was fairly seated. "You've been long enough," he said lightly.

No longer than necessary. I had waited.

Well, our ride is spoiled. Do you know you've been in there an hour and ten minutes? You could have gotten some cough-drops at the drug-store anyhow, and saved a fee. What did I say?"

Helen looked up, but her husband's eyes were on the road. Her lips were set quite steady.

"He gives me—two years."

"What do you mean?"

He looked at her now, and the car merely escaped the curb. Then he turned abruptly into a side street, and closed the throttle. "Two years?" he questioned.

"Unless I go to different climate," he answered quietly.

"Why didn't you say that in the first place?"

His voice was irritable, and Helen smiled tiredly. They were going slowly aimlessly she thought, used to her husband's rapid driving.

"Since I can't go," she said, "it makes no difference, does it?"

"Who says you can't go?"

Despite his gruff tone she saw that he spoke with difficulty, and tears sprang to her eyes.

"Do you know what it would cost? There's no chance in the world that we can do it. No, Dick, I made up my mind at once. I'll take my two years and make the best of them rather than be a burden."

Richard did not answer. Their road led again into the highway, and if from habit he opened the throttle; and they sped on too rapidly.

Once, when they passed close to another car, Helen winced, but stifled the protest on her lips; and after a while Dick went more slowly. It he did not speak, and it was not natural for Richard to be dumb. His wife wondered dully just what was passing through his mind. Used as she was to his impatient outbursts when anything disturbed him, his silence frightened her, and at last from pure nervousness she spoke.

"Dick—"

He turned quickly, as one roughly awakened. Even his eyes looked zed.

"We must go home," she said gently. "It's time for supper."

"Supper?"

"Yes. You—you don't like it to be late, and I was going to make a salad."

"Never mind the salad, but we'll go back now if you're tired."

This thought for her comfort brought a lump into her throat. She laid her hand on his, which grasped the steering-wheel.

"Let's forget it, Dick," she said bravely. "We'll go on as if nothing had happened as—as long as we can. When I give out, I'll go to a hospital. I know you don't like sickness in the house."

He turned then, and gave her a long, long look; but his expression never changed.

"Doctors are not infallible," he said.

Helen sighed. This was the Dick she knew. No opinion counted save his own. With a sense of despair she visioned the months ahead, heard her husband's impatient voice urging her to do things for which she had no strength. If she could get away from it, even for a few weeks. Her hand, which had been clasping his, dropped limply to her knee.

Two hours later Richard went out. Lying on her bed in the darkness, she remembered with something of a shock that it was he who had got the supper and washed the dishes. Such a thing had never happened in the ten years of their married life. During the simple meal he had made a rather pitiful attempt at conversation, though he had not mentioned the subject that was in their minds. He had been relieved when the meal was over,—that was plain to her,—and had insisted that she go to bed at once. Later he had stood at her bedside, hat in hand.

"Are you afraid to be left alone?"

Helen smiled. She was afraid, but in the many evenings he had left her he had never asked the question. Now she evaded it. "Shall you be gone long?"

"Not longer than I must. I shouldn't go if it wasn't necessary."

He bent awkwardly, and kissed her cheek, while she clung for a minute to his hand. Somehow the mute caress had told her more than words.

As for Richard Gale, after an hour with the doctor he went to see his half-sister, Sarah Flint. Sarah was a gaunt New England spinster, 15 years older than himself; and Richard had often wondered why Helen liked her. He went to her now as a sort of refuge.

"You mean," she said as he finished speaking, "that she'll die if she doesn't get away?"

He winced at her blunt stating of the case, but nodded.

"Then she must go at once. I've saved a little."

"I don't want your savings!" burst from him almost angrily. "I guess I can take care of my own wife."

Sarah looked at him, and her lip curled. If you'd taken any care of her at all," she replied cruelly, "she'd not be where she is now."

He started up as if to leave her, but she forced him to sit down.

"You might as well know the truth, Richard," she said grimly. "I've often wondered how the poor girl stood it."

"Stood what?" The words came against his will.

"Your impatience, your hurry, your unreasonable disposition and demands, your temper. For years she's lived over a volcano, hurrying, hurrying all the time, that you might never be kept waiting. I've pitied her always, but—if I'd guessed how things were going—"

She turned away, but not before her astonished brother had seen the tears. He had not supposed there were any tears in his sister's heart. The sight surprised him to the point of obliterating the anger that had risen at her words.

"I must get back now," he said dully. "I was going to ask you to come tomorrow and help her. It won't pay to find a housekeeper when she'll go so soon. I'll see to the breakfast, but if you'll come later—"

"I'll come," said Sarah.

* * *

Helen Gale lay on her little balcony in Colorado, looking off at a scene that had grown dearly familiar with the passing months. Plains led to rolling mesa; the mesa lead to hills. Pike's Peak, snow-crowned by a September storm, towered above them against a background of clear blue sky.

Helen drew a deep breath of contentment. She never tired of the outlook from this balcony where she had spent her days and nights for 19 months. She would miss it sadly; yet for weeks the thought of what it was all costing had subtly troubled her, since she no longer needed the care of nurse and doctor.

At first she had not cared. It had seemed so unbelievably good to be where there was no rush and hurry, no possible demands upon her strength. For months she had been content to lie there watching the shadows on the mesa, the snowcapped peaks, the birds that fluttered to the feeding-board beside her bed. Such tame, friendly little birds! And for the first time, in years she had a chance to read to catch up with all the things she longed to know about.

Then there had been Dick's letters. They made her laugh, even when the tears weren't far away. She hadn't dreamed that he could write such letters. They told minutely of the doings of the neighborhood—described Mrs. McCarty's Easter hat, and mentioned carefully what the Hale twins weighed. No funny detail, however unimportant, seemed to escape him. This was a Dick she had never known. In all the months no word of complaint had edged its way into his closely written pages. He even refrained from disagreeable comment upon Sarah, with whom he was living; and Dick had never been able to endure his sister's company.

It was all a part of the miracle that had given her these months of peaceful rest, months that had turned her, face about, on the road to health. They called her the prize patient of the sanitarium. No disheartening setbacks had barred her way, perhaps because she had obeyed orders like a

OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE OAK RIDGE, NORTH CAROLINA

T. E. Whitaker, President

Founded in 1882. Military. Courses thoroughly covering Literature, Science, Book-keeping, Short-hand, Typewriting, and Music. Eight buildings; electric lights, steam heat and shower baths. 350 acres in campus, athletic grounds, orchards, and farms. Beautiful lake nestling between hills covered with virgin forests. Healthful—1040 feet above sea level; accessible location near Greensboro. Same moral influence. Cost reasonable. $125 for the year. Fall session opens first Thursday in September each year. Write for illustrated catalogue. Address OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE, Oak Ridge, N. C.

Everlasting Memorials

The Pyramids and Sphinx of Egypt were old when Solomon brought the daughter of Pharaoh into the City of David. They stand today, as they have stood for 5000 years, silent but eloquent tributes to the strength of the material from which they were constructed—GRANITE. This is the most enduring stone known to man and is always used where lasting, weather-resisting qualities are required. Therefore it is the part of wisdom to specify

Blue OGLESBY Granite

MARK

The Standard Monumental Stone

Memorials cut from this everlasting stone are as perfect in later years as they were when first erected. Oglesby Granite is the stone of strength, durability and exquisite beauty.

Monumental Art—An artistic booklet illustrated with photographs of famous memorials cut in Oglesby Granite mailed free on request. It gives many splendid examples and suggestions for monumental designs and will solve the problem of stone selection. Write for your copy today.

Oglesby Granite Sales Company
Sales Division Oglesby Granite Enterprises

Elberton

Georgia

soldier. For it was natural for Helen to obey orders. She had obeyed them doggedly for years, in order to keep the peace. She smiled at the thought that her husband's dictatorial ways had been a help to her recovery. Another year under these blue skies, and she might within reason lead a normal life. The doctor had told her so that morning. He heartily approved her plan of hiring a room and porch in some suitable locality. It would be better for her now to have more do do.

For with new strength had come homesickness. In the first months of weakness and fatigue she had not felt her exile. Now she longed for familiar faces. She ached for the touch of her husband's hand. She did not believe that his temper would ever hurt again after these months alone. His expenses would be lighter from now on. Perhaps he could come to see her. She would write at once, would tell him all the good things the doctor said about her, and—

"Ready for a caller, Mrs. Gale?"

The nurse's voice broke in on Helen's reverie, and she turned with a smile. A caller meant one of the other patients. They had a way of flocking to Helen's balcony.

SORES

BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.

Salisbury, N. C.

Anything in... CEMETERY WORK

Satisfaction our Motto

A card will bring full information.

Foote's Sketches of North Carolina

Published 1848. Second edition exact reprint of the first. Thoroughly reliable. Invaluable to those interested in early history of Presbyterian Church and older families of the State. $2.25—Postpaid. REPRINT COMPANY, DUNN, N. C.

World's Best Roofing at Factory Prices

"Reo" Chustor Metal Shingles, V-Crimp, Corrugated, Standing Seam, Painted or Galvanized Roofings, Sidings, Wallboard, Paints, etc., direct to you at Rock-Bottom Factory Prices. Positively greatest offer ever made.

Edwards "Reo" Metal Shingles cost less; outlast three ordinary roofs. No painting or repairs. Guaranteed rot, fire, rust, lightning proof. Send for samples and free roofing book.

Edwards Ready Made Buildings Send for the Edwards Catalog of "Superior" Ready-Made Buildings, showing a complete line of houses, bungalows, barns, wood garages, poultry houses, etc., all at money-saving factory prices. These buildings are not merely "ready-cut" but actually ready built, and represent a wonderful money-saving.

Let Edwards Save You Money

Be Sure to State Which Books You Want—Roofing and Free Samples; Ready-Made Buildings; or Metal Garages. Postal or letter brings one or more of them FREE.

LOW PRICED GARAGES

Lowest prices on Ready-Made Fire-Proof Steel Garages. Set up any place. Send postal for Garage Book showing styles.

THE EDWARDS MFG. CO., 2323-2373 Pike St. Cincinnati, O.

FREE Samples & Roofing Book Get our wonderfully low priced and free samples. We sell direct to you and save you all in-between roofing profits. Ask for Book No. 2373

"I was going to write a letter, but it's too late for today's mail. Send 'em along."

The nurse departed. Helen heard her door open and a hesitating step within. "Come out," she called. "The mountains are wonderful today. If you'll bring a chair— Why, who —"

Richard was standing in the doorway! He stood quite still, as if he dared not touch her, as if the months that they had spent apart had built a wall between them which he could not scale. But Helen was on her feet; and at her outstretched arms the wall crumbled, was down, and his lips were on her cheek.

She moved away after a moment to look at him, but it was Dick who spoke.

"How different, how well, you look! I thought for a moment that I'd got into the wrong room. "You're rested, aren't you?"

She drew him down beside her, where she sat on the edge of the bed.

"When did you come?"

"Just now. We're going for a ride. Where'll I find your things?"

She laughed at his hurry. It all seemed dearly natural.

"Can't you wait, Richard? I—I haven't got my breath yet. And I can't wear this negligee—"

"Yes, you can. Put on a coat or something. I like you in that pink thing, but—if you're tired—"

He sat back resignedly, and she laughed as she slipped an arm across his shoulders and pressed her cheek against his sleeve.

"Oh, but it's good to see you! I even like your being in a hurry. It seems like home. Well, I'll go, if you're crazy for a ride; but I'd rather be alone with you. I—"

"That's why I'm hurrying," he interrupted. "I want to get where I can look at you without the fear that some nurse or doctor or patient will butt in and see how silly I've become. Can't I help you dress, if you insist on dressing?"

"But if there's a chauffeur to hear every word we say—"

She arose, hesitating; and he said quickly, "I'm my own chauffeur, and if you could hurry just this once—"

Helen laughed, but noticed that he waited patiently while she slipped into the gown in which she had parted from him so long ago.

"At least, I haven't sent you any dressmaker's bills," she said laughingly, then sobered, noticing how shiny was his old serge suit.

Later, seated beside him in the car, she protested that he was going toward the town. "If you turn to the right—"

Dick smiled. "I know where I'm going. I'm quick at learning landmarks. It's a great country, isn't it?"

He made a gesture that included hills, plains, and crags; and she answered tenderly, "It is now that you're here, too."

"You've missed me—a little?"

Something in his voice made her choke. She could not speak; and he lifted her hand, and held it close beneath his own upon the wheel. They skirted some bluffs, and turned into a grove of willows, beyond which stood a small white bungalow facing the hills. Helen gave a cry of pleasure.

"What a darling place! I've never come this way before. And the view —"

She was looking back at the vista of snow-capped hills. When she turned, her husband had stopped the car before the little house.

"You like it?" he asked gently.

"Who wouldn't? It makes me want to go to housekeeping. I wish we could look inside."

"No special reason why you shouldn't," he answered smiling. "It's yours, Helen."

"Mine!"

For just a moment she thought it was a joke; then, as she stared at him, understanding came, and with it sudden tears.

"Steady, old girl," said Dick quietly. "It's only a house."

But Helen knew as she went to her new domain—as she laughed and cried at sight of her own books, a picture, and shabby old loved furniture—that it was much, much more than just "a house." She sat down

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA SUMMER SCHOOL

Thirty-Sixth Session : : : June 18-September 7, 1923

First Term, June 18-July 28—Second Term, July 27-September 7

Standard Courses in the Regular Departments of the University. Cultural and Professional Courses leading to the A. B. and A.M. Degrees. High Class Recreational Features and Entertainments of an educational character. Able Faculty of Trained Specialists. Spacious campus, modern library and laboratory facilities, delightful climate, highest service. Low cost. Write for complete announcement.

N. W. WALKER, Director : : : : : Chapel Hill, N. C.

WHERE TO GO TO COLLEGE?

There are three major considerations that determine the greatness, or the potential greatness, of an educational institution.

1. The Plant, including grounds, library, classrooms, laboratories, and apparatus.
2. The Faculty.
3. The Student body and its democratic standards.

In addition to the thirty-four buildings already on the campus, the State of North Carolina is this year putting $1,650,000 into new buildings and equipment. The library of 150,000 volumes is spending $24,000 annually for books and periodicals. Eight thousand volumes were received in 1922-1923, and one thousand and five magazines and learned journals were received on subscription.

The Faculty numbers 128 of the country's best scholars.

Speaking of the student body of the University, Mr. Sherwood Eddy, of Yale University, who has spent the major portion of his life studying in four continents, said, that with one exception, it was the most seriously thoughtful and democratic group of students he had ever known.

Registration for fall quarter, September 25, 26, 1923.

For further information address

The Secretary to the President
UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C.

A COLLEGE THAT DEVELOPS

Morals and Christian Character

As Well as Mind and Body

An A grade college, co-educational, of highest standards and scholarship.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Thorough instruction, excellent equipment, under Christian environment. Courses leading to A.B., and B.S. Degrees. Excellent Musical training and Home Economics. Able faculty. Fine athletic record. 10 modern buildings. Large campus. Healthful climate. Rates reasonable. Six miles west of Greensboro. For literature and other information, write—

THE PRESIDENT, GUILFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

ly on her husband's knee. Now tell me, tell me everything. I'm dazed. How could you do it all in just a day? It isn't possible." Dick laughed. "Who's impatient now? Well, dear, I may as well confess. I've been here—all the time." Her eyes were big.

"What do you mean?" "For a moment he gazed thoughtfully into space. Then: "Just that. I found I couldn't have you so far away. I pulled up stakes, and followed you after a few months. That's all." "But—your letters!" Helen was crying a little wildly. "And if you were here, and—and never came to me—"

He saw her agitation, and, arising, carried her to the couch, and laid her down. "You mustn't let me tire you the next thing. Lie still, and I'll explain." He sat beside her, his hands clasped around his knee, brows knit, as if he were trying to think just what to say. It was Sarah who made me see provides Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
10 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

NEW CHURCH DESIGNS

"HIGHEST EFFICIENCY YET ATTAINED"
ENDORSED BY CHURCH AUTHORITIES

WRITE US YOUR NEEDS
R. H. HUNT CO. ARCHITECTS
CHATTANOOGA TENN DALLAS TEX

Not a Laxative

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative — so cannot gripe.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method — lubrication.

Try it today.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

myself," he began slowly. "You know"—he smiled grimly—"Sarah doesn't handle folks with gloves. That night, Helen, the night you found what the trouble was, I went to her. She told me a few things then."

"What things?" "Just that your whole condition was due to—me. That's all."

"I—I don't quite understand."

"Gee! You ought to! I see it now myself, how I've nagged and hurried you till you hadn't time to breathe. Even that last day, when you were at the doctor's hearing that awful thing, I sat there in the car cussing because—because—"

"Let's—forget it," said Helen gently.

He sprang up, pacing up and down the little room.

"No, I shan't forget it—ever. I don't want to. If I did, I might slip back. And Sarah wouldn't let me forget it. She ground it in day and night till I thought I'd go crazy. And all the time I knew it was true as truth, and it hurt—hurt even more than did your absence. But I couldn't stand having you so far away. I decided to leave, to take a chance. I had bonds I could sell, which would keep you going for a year or two. But Sarah—"

He sat down again, covering his eyes as if to shut out some memory.

"She said I was a coward, that, if I bothered you, I'd spoil everything. She said—terrible things. I can't forgive all of them. But in the main they were true. I saw that, if I did see you, and—and got impatient at your progress, or urged you to do things you ought not to do, it wouldn't be playing the game.

"So I've kept away; but it was something, Helen, to know that—that, if you should get worse, I could be with you. I saw the doctor, of course. He"—Dick flushed—"he knew why I kept away, and—"

"But—the letters," gasped Helen, still unbelieving. "You told me everything. All about the neighbors, and—"

Richard laughed. "Oh, that was easy. Sarah sent on the news, and what she didn't send I invented. Those letters were all the fun I had. I dated them ahead, and sent them to her to mail, and she sent on yours. You didn't know I had such an imagination, did you?"

"And—and you never caught even a glimpse of me all this time?"

Her voice was breathless, and Dick reached for her hand.

"That was my job, wasn't it? to learn patience? It wasn't easy, Helen; but I needed the discipline, I suppose. And, when I got discouraged, I tried to remember that I was really fighting for you, not myself. I don't say I'm cured. I suppose there are storms ahead of us even now; but—but things won't be as they were before, dear; I promise that."

And Helen knew, with a glad lifting of her heart that he spoke the truth. Storms there might be, and disappointments; but her husband was no longer the impatient boy whom she had married. Her eyes swept round the little room, which meant, she knew, self-sacrifice on his part and thought of her. Those words of Cowper's,

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," were on her lips, but she said only,

"I think we both needed to learn patience, Richard."

He did not speak; and, though he recognized the words for what they were, the fabrication of her generous heart, they healed his hurt. Words would not come; but, as his eyes met hers, she read in their earnest depths the promise of better things.—Christine Whiting Parmenter, in C. E. World.

WHY DRUGS FAIL

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from drinking Shivar, America's best stomach, liver and kidney Water. If you suffer with chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept the Spring's liberal offer as printed below. Their records

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

show that only two in a hundred, on the average, have reported "no benefit." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful Spring. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Springs,
Box 3H, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____
Address _____
Shipping Point _____
(Please write distinctly.)

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina
Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds Ideal Surroundings
Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address

Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D. Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen, Ar.	45	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	49	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	f 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	f 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
s 8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	s 9:53 am	19	Rae ford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
	s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	s 1:25 pm
	f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
	s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	f 12:55 pm
	f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	14	s 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
	f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
	s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	s 12:33 pm
	f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
	f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
	s 11:30 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville	0	s 4:45 pm	12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

SAVE THIS MONEY ON YOUR PIANO

What the Standard Piano Club Means to You

If you intend to provide your home, church or school with a Piano, the chance is offered through The Standard Piano Club not only to save a large per cent of the cost of the instrument, but you can pay for it on such easy terms that you will hardly miss the money.

The Standard Piano Club consists of 100 members, all buying from the same source of supply, and this makes it possible for the manufacturers to sell them at greatly reduced prices. It is the same principle as that of buying groceries or any other commodity at wholesale prices instead of retail prices.

By joining the Club, you are also entitled to the following benefits and privileges:

You receive your instrument by pre-paid freight.

You pay on the most convenient monthly, quarterly or yearly terms.

You are assured of receiving an instrument of the highest quality fully guaranteed.

If you want to exchange your old piano or player-piano for a new one, you can easily arrange it through the Club on a basis that will please you.

Write today for the Club's catalog showing the various styles and full particulars as to terms of payment, guarantee and the insurance feature. Also ask for the Club's booklet showing dozens of letters from enthusiastic Club members. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Standard Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

Sparkles

Dangerous If Catching

"So your father is ill. I hope it is nothing contagious."

"So do I. The doctor says he is suffering from over work."—The Christian Register.

The difference is that a statesman thinks he belongs to the State, and a politician thinks the State belongs to him.—Duluth Herald.

An authority on the fuel situation declares that we must "learn to eke out by burning oil, gas, electricity, and what not." We are glad he mentioned the what-not. Mary, hand us the axe."—Boston Transcript.

Dutch girls dress like their mothers; but it is just the other way around in America.—San Diego Sun.

"Maud tells everything she knows."
"Yes, it wouldn't be so bad if she would stop there."—Judge.

A couple of city men were playing golf when they saw an old gentleman looking at them wistfully. They asked him to join the game, which he did with alacrity. He was mild in speech and manner and played well. But once when he had made a fozzle he ejaculated vehemently the word: "Assouan!"

A few moments later, when he had made another bad play, he repeated: "Assouan!"

The fourth time he said this one of his new-made friends said:

"I do not want to be inquisitive, but will you tell me why you say 'Assouan' so often?"

"Well," said the old gentleman, "isn't that the biggest dam in the world?"

He was a Presbyterian clergyman.—Pick Me Up.

WE HANDLE
HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Five Makes of Pianos Comprise THE STIEFF LINE:

Stieff
Shaw
Bennett-Bretz
Davies & Sons
Leslie Bros.

There is a piano to fit every purse. $340.00 up. Payments surprisingly small. Write for catalogue.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

The Rare Beauty, Exquisite Patterns and Superb Quality of the Anglo Persian Rugs

Have Never Been Surpassed

We have just received a number of wonderful designs in these celebrated rugs.

Our display of fine Wilton rugs is one of the largest in this section of the South.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

N. C. Library Dept.

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U. S.

Ev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., APRIL 11, 1923

No. 15

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent. News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
An Infallible Bible	1
Crying Peace, When There Is No Peace	1
The Modernists on the Defensive	2
A Correction	2
A New Tract on Baptism	2
Summer Conferences	2
CONTRIBUTED—
The Value of Difficulties—By Rev. Carl B. Craig	3
The Only Book Never Off the Press—By Fränk H. Mann	3
Concerning Laymen's Association—By R. D. Haislip	4
Birmingham Theological Seminary—By Rev. O. G. Jones, D.D.	4
On the Attendance of Ministers and Ruling Elders Upon the Meetings of Presbyteries	4
Another Instance of "Keeping the Records Straight"	4
Should the Next Assembly Erect an Executive Committee on Vacancy and Supply? —By Chas. D. Gilkeson	5
A Progressive Program	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
 Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
 General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
 Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
 Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
 Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
 General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

AN INFALLIBLE BIBLE

THERE is a very close connection between one's views of evolution, and his views of the Bible. When a man becomes a pronounced evolutionist, he is very apt to begin to pick flaws in the Bible. Dr. James Woodrow was a notable exception. He accepted the theory of evolution with the one saving and significant qualification—it must not conflict with the Bible. He stood for the inerrancy of the Bible. In his famous address which got him into trouble he said: "I have found nothing in my study of the Holy Bible and of natural science that shakes my firm belief in the divine inspiration of every word of the Bible, and in the consequent absolute truth, the absolute inerrancy, of every expression which it contains from beginning to end." How very different is this language from the utterances of many of those who occupy high places in the Church, and who pose as champions of evolution and of the "Higher Criticism." These never tire of telling us how the dogma of verbal inspiration, and the consequent dogma of the infallible truth and divine authority of the whole Bible, are a millstone about the neck of the Church, and are repelling the young men and women who have been educated in the science of the day and trained to scientific habits of thought. As Dr. Fosdick puts it, "The New Knowledge and the Old Faith cannot dwell together in the same mind." Yet we hazard nothing in saying that Dr. Woodrow was a far more patient, painstaking and profound student of both the Bible and Science than nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of those who so persistently insist that great harm is being done by efforts to propagate the old-time faith in an inerrant Bible. Dr. Woodrow's presentation of the theory of evolution is the clearest and most plausible we have ever seen. On the other hand, more than one of his most capable pupils told us that he did more than any one else to confirm them in their belief in the plenary verbal inspiration of the Bible.

We are not concerned, however, just now with the truth or falsehood of the theory of inerrancy. We are thinking of whether it is desirable to have a Bible which should be absolutely inerrant. One of our friends, who has given up his childhood faith in a Bible that was free from errors, told us recently that the Bible was much more precious and useful to him since he had found that he was under no obligation to believe all that it teaches. It is such a comfort to throw overboard much of the Old Testament that sorely vexed his conscience and taxed his faith. Genesis is so much better as a store-house of myth and folk-lore and the traditions of primitive man for which God is not responsible, than as a historical narrative in which one must believe or impute mistakes and falsehoods to God. What a relief to free God from all responsibility for the flood, and from ordering Abraham to sacrifice Isaac, and from ordering Joshua to exterminate the Canaanites. You see the Bible was given only for religious purposes, and it answers this end all the better when you acquit God of all those things charged up against Him which are hurtful to His character. So they argue. They have a much better Bible when they have one whose teachings they feel at liberty to accept or reject as suits their taste. Their attitude toward the Old Testament is like that of some of Christ's hearers. When they run up against something which they do not like, they say: "This is a hard saying; who can bear it?" Overboard it goes.

Is such a Bible better than an infallible Bible?

We are prepared to say that it is better than no Bible; but is it better than a Bible to which we could give our absolute confidence, believing everything it says? We think not. Grant that the Bible was not given to teach science, or history, or geography. Would it not be great, if it always told precisely the truth when it had occasion to mention matters lying in these realms? Religion has to do with the invisible world. We have to receive all that is said about God and the world to come by faith. We have no way of putting what is said to the test of our senses. Would it not be fine if those on whom we are dependent for religious knowledge would prove themselves absolutely trustworthy by telling the truth and nothing but the truth when telling us about matters of history and geography? We can check them up here, and if we always found them accurate, it would help our faith to rest in their words when they soar entirely beyond our reach? "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe when I tell you heavenly things?" He who said this was a great reasoner. There seems to be much force in His logic. Applying this logic to the Old Testament, are we not found to say that its religious value is weakened just to the extent that it tells us earthly things which are not true? If the Bible is not inerrant, it is not as good a book as we had supposed it to be. We are not ready to assent to our brethren who have outgrown the old Faith, when they tell us that they are offering us in their amended and reconstructed Bible a better book than the one we have.

CRYING PEACE, WHEN THERE IS NO PEACE

Our blessed Lord is the Prince of Peace, and at His coming the angels sang of peace and good will to men. Yet this same Lord told His followers that He came not to send peace, but a sword. The promised peace will come hereafter. The Church has never had peace, because her great work is to destroy the works of the devil, and that cannot be done by soft words.

All over the Christian Church in this land today men are dividing into two bands—one for peace, and the other for war. One is temporizing with evil, lest it become worse, while the other is fighting it on all occasions. They see that the foundations are being destroyed, and the devil, by means of rationalism, is undermining the Church and destroying the faith of many.

We have been warned that the agitation of such questions will react upon our benevolences, and that we should keep silence. We feel that the reaction is due to the conviction upon the part of our people that our leaders are disposed to temporize with this evil for the sake of peace, with the result that the deficit in one branch of our work is steadily growing in its indebtedness.

A lesson can be learned from our Methodist brethren. Some time ago Dr. Rankin, of the Methodist Church, went out to China as a lay worker, but after a short stay, he discovered that many of their missionaries were tainted with rationalism, which found expression in the denial of the Virgin Birth, of the miraculous in the Bible, and of the bodily resurrection of Christ. He called attention of the Bishop to this condition, but received no encouragement. He returned to this country and made complaint before their Mission Board, but was rebuked. He then toured the Southern States, but found that a large number of the ministers were tainted with the same heresy, and that the editor of the Methodist Quarterly was among them. Interest in the Centenary and Educational program has waned to such an extent that their leaders are seriously alarmed over their financial outlook. The Southern Methodist, published at Memphis, Tenn., is boldly calling upon the orthodox to band together and save the church.

Our own Church is by no means as deep in the mire as this, but our missionaries, who are really sound in their faith, and against whom, with one exception, no charges have ever been brought, are disposed to make light of any danger that may arise by entering a council that is composed of men holding almost every form of unbelief. They feel that the danger arising from such union is trifling compared with the advantages to be derived by a united front against the enemy.

Without, in the least, impugning their orthodoxy, we, in common with a large number in the Church at home, believe that they are mistaken, and that they will, in the end, help their cause more by remembering that there can be no concord between Christ and Belial.

THE MODERNISTS ON THE DEFENSIVE

That the charge of being false to their acceptance of the Confession of Faith, brought against those accepting and teaching the Modernist views of the Bible, is touching the quick is seen in their attempts at defense. The issue has been squarely put, "You accepted the Confession of Faith and the Catechisms of this Church as containing the system of doctrine taught in the Holy Scriptures," yet you are preaching that which is in plain contradiction and therefore you are false to your vows.

A man may know that this charge is true, yet he is unwilling to be held up before the public as a liar, so he naturally seeks some defense.

According to that most excellent journal, "The Presbyterian," of Philadelphia, Dr. W. P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, of New York, who is also the teacher of the Confession of Faith in the Union Theological Seminary, New York, has recently made a great discovery in the Confession of Faith.

Paul spoke of "the mystery which had been hid from ages and from generations, but was now made manifest to his saints."

This discovery of Dr. Merrill's is a mystery that is more mysterious than any Paul found—that truth which has been hid in the Confession since the Westminster Assembly, but recently made manifest to this particular saint, who solemnly vows one thing and teaches another.

It seems that in his effort to preserve his consistency, Dr. Merrill has found a hidden truth in the Confession, one that has escaped the eyes of all who have studied it since 1643. He has found that the Confession, instead of being a compact system of truth, is composite, teaching two creeds, one external and legal, and the other spiritual and vital. One regards the Bible as a law-book infallible in its authority, while the other recognizes its authority as resting ultimately in the soul of man, as led and illumined by the Spirit of God.

According to this discovery, a man who subscribes to the Confession can subscribe to either creed. "You pay your money. You take your choice."

Such shifty dodging of responsibility may not appeal to a deadened conscience, but to men who seek the truth, no matter where it leads, it is shocking.

Intellectual honesty may be a rare gift in these progressive days. It is certainly a gift to be cultivated by all men, especially by those who are of the household of faith.

A CORRECTION

It is never pleasant to call attention to an error, especially one that would indicate that the editor knew nothing of what he was writing, yet in order to keep facts correct, it is often necessary to confess that an editor, like Homer, sometimes nods, and writes that which is an error.

In our issue of March 28th, in writing about the Bible Schools, we located the Moody Bible School in New York, and we also stated that it was conducted by Dr. W. W. White. How such a statement was penned we cannot explain. We, in common with nearly all Presbyterians, know that the Moody School is in Chicago, and the White Bible School is in New York. It was written when the pen was doing one thing and the mind was absorbed in something else, and it proves that every man should follow the example of the Apostle who wrote, "This one thing I do."

Lots of people make a good living who make a very poor life.

A NEW TRACT ON BAPTISM

Dr. E. C. Murray, of St. Pauls, N. C., has published a tract on Baptism that our people will find enlightening. It covers twelve pages, yet is rich in clear argument. He proves conclusively that baptism was an old rite among the Jews, and that Christian baptism was no new form to the church. Those who live in a community where this is a live subject will find this tract invaluable for meeting all gainsayers. It costs only three cents and can be ordered from our Richmond Committee. He has tried to develop the one essential idea in a clear line of thought. It is logical enough for the student, yet simple enough for the common reader. Buy it and try it.

SUMMER CONFERENCES

It does not seem very long ago when the idea of a summer gathering place was suggested by Dr. Howerton and others of this Synod. The idea rapidly took root with the result that the Mountain Retreat Association was organized, and such has been its popularity that today it is known all over our Church and has become the clearing house for all plans of church growth.

Texas Synod next organized an encampment at Kerrville, which also has passed the experimental stage.

The next in order was the Massanetta Springs Conference of the Synod of Virginia.

I FOLLOW A FAMOUS FATHER

I follow a famous father,
His honor is mine to wear;
He gave me a name that was free from shame,
A name he was proud to bear.
He lived in the morning sunlight,
And marched in the ranks of right.
He was always true to the best he knew,
And the shield that he wore was bright.

I follow a famous father,
And never a day goes by
But I feel that he looks down to me
To carry his standard high.
He stood to the sternest trials
As only a brave man can;
Though the way be long, I must never wrong
The name of so good a man.

I follow a famous father,
And him I must keep in mind;
Though his form is gone, I must carry on
The name that he left behind.
It was mine on the day he gave it,
It shone as a monarch's crown,
And as fair to see as it came to me
It must be when I pass it down.

—Edgar A. Guest.

Now the "Ozark Assembly" makes its claim upon the ministers of the Southwest, having already one year to its credit.

We are glad to see this idea of a Summer Conference growing, just as we welcome the fact that whereas, a few years ago, a summer vacation for a country preacher was considered an unnecessary indulgence, and was grudgingly granted only in exceptional cases, but now no church is so poor as to refuse to grant it. The truth is, it is assumed in a call, though no mention is ever made of it. They have found that it pays. It gives the pastor and people each a rest, and they come together in the fall refreshed and ready for work.

For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friends?
For so the whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

To know thy bent and then pursue,
Why, this is genius—nothing less.
But he who knows what not to do
Holds half the secret of success.

Devotional

THE WORLD-TRANSFORMING LIFE

A young Japanese, admitted to the study of Dr. Parks of St. Bartholomew's Church, New York City, asked abruptly, "Sir, can you help me to find the beautiful life?" Dr. Parks answered:

"Do you wish to talk with me about religion?"
"Sir, sir. I want merely to find out about the beautiful life."

"Have you read the Bible?"
"Yes, sir, I have read some, but I don't like the Bible."
"Have you ever been to church?"

"Yes, I have been twice, but I don't like the church. I am trying to find the beautiful life. Many of you people do just as our Japanese people do; they are bad, they cheat and tell lies, yet they are all Christians. That is not what I want; I do not want your religion. But there is something I want. I cannot tell what it is; I call it the beautiful life, and they told me perhaps you could tell me about it."

"Where did you hear about it?"

"I never heard about it, but I saw a man in a boarding house in San Francisco, soon after I landed—a poor old man, not an educated man like myself, who had studied in the University of Japan, and now am studying in one of your great universities; a poor man he was, a carpenter, but he had what all my life I have wanted. I thought it might be in the world, but I never saw it in my own country; I call it the beautiful life. How can I find it? This old man went about helping everybody; he was always happy, he never thought about himself. I knew him three weeks, and watched him all the time, and felt that I must have what he had. I have seen some other people who have had it. I do not know what it is. It cannot be your religion because you do not all have it."

Dr. Parks read to him the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, that beautiful "love chapter" that means so much to us, and asked, "Is that it?"

"Yes, perhaps; it sounds like it. But how can I get it?"

Then Dr. Parks told him very simply the story of the perfectly beautiful life, and said, "Now you have just to follow that life."

As his visitor left, he gave him a copy of the New Testament.

"Can you not give me a more modern book? You know Japanese are very up-to-date."

"No, it is not in any other book. This is the one Book you need. Study it, and pray that light may be given you to live this beautiful life."

Two years later the young man again visited Dr. Parks hurriedly just before leaving for San Francisco called to an important position in his native land. His message was already written on his radiant face. "Sir I have found the beautiful life; I have found Jesus." Then he went back to Japan to tell his own people of that life.—Wilbur F. Crafts, in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A GOOD MOTTO

We saw this motto in a Sabbath School room: "In Life it is just as important to forget some things as it is to remember others. So don't Forget to Remember and also Remember to Forget." Of that babyish brooding over slights even the common-sense worldling says: "Oh forget it." And Christ says, "If ye do not forgive, God will not forgive you!" So forget wrongs done to you great or small; want of appreciation of you, whether by friends or foes! Turn your memory inside out and empty into oblivion, grudges, sore toes, thin-skin, pin-pricks or sword thrusts. Cultivate the forgiveness that fully forgets. That is Christ's.—Eastern Methodist.

We are all approaching that dread tribunal. However diversified our paths, they all converge toward that common centre. The young, with their elastic tread, are striding to the judgment; the old, with their tottering limbs, are creeping to the judgment; the rich, in their splendid equipages, are driving to the judgment; the poor in rags and barefooted, are walking to the judgment. The Christian making God's statutes his song, is a pilgrim to the judgment; the sinner, treading upon the mercy of Jesus, and trampling upon His blood, is hastening to the judgment. "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ."—Richard Fuller.

THE VALUE OF DIFFICULTIES

By Rev. Carl B. Craig

mentations 3:27: "It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth." Hebrews 12:11: "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." The complain of difficulties and adversities. Nobody shun them; we all shun them. We groan and sweat and pity ourselves because of them. But when we think it through, are not our trials and difficulties our greatest blessings—the emery wheels of life that grind our dull souls and make of them something fine and useful? When we examine God's Word, we find the philosophy underlying all the teaching concerning trials of His children.

The Testimony of History

Character and achievement are born of effort, and are usually begotten of difficulty. If there were no obstacles to be overcome, no privations to be endured, no obstacles to be surmounted, what incentive would be to strive? or what school of preparation would be for further advancement? We need not be surprised to find that the great souls and great accomplishments in history almost invariably have been those who in life had a handicap. I do not mean that achievement is the special prerogative of the poor and afflicted, certainly a reasonable success is possible for anyone who has a grain of talent and is willing to work. But I assert that history conclusively proves that nearly all the greatest men rose, through privation, hardship, and adversity by effort. Luther, a miner's son, had to fight through tremendous difficulty and opposition all his life. Erasmus, contemporary and scholar with Luther, sold the plates off his back to buy Greek books. Lincoln split and did any sort of honest work to prepare himself for the time when his opportunity should come. Roosevelt, handicapped by a weak body, developed a robust physique and strong traits by vigorous exercise. Think of the prominent men of your acquaintance and see if there was not some handicap in early life as to lack of money, educational advantages, or health, which they had to overcome. Was it in spite of these difficulties or because of them that these became great? Was it through suffering and discipline in meeting these very difficulties that they developed the resources of character to do greater things later? Therefore I assert that it is the apparent disadvantages, rather than many so-called advantages, that develop real manhood and womanhood.

How Earthly Parents Regard this Principle

Do you agree that this principle is a true one. Now you will point out a strange condition. Countless American parents recognize the truth of this principle in the abstract, but when it comes to applying it to their own flesh and blood, they absolutely disregard it and then wonder why the results. They say, "We had a hard struggle when we were young, and now that we are able, we will shield our children from hardship and the difficulties we encountered, and give them every advantage." It sounds noble and unselfish. In fact, it is brainless policy. Beginning with infancy, they load their children with too many play-things, later with every sort of pleasure and luxury that their consciences and pocket-books will permit. They give them clothing and pleasures which they really cannot afford but are necessary, they say, because other children have them; and all the time shield them from responsibility worthy of the name. After a few years, when selfishness, willfulness, and moodiness begin to appear in their children, these parents wail, "We can't stand it. We scrimped and sacrificed and did without for our children might have the very best, and they don't turned out as we wished. They don't seem to be responsible or willing to take or feel any responsibility, everything done for them is merely a matter of course with them, they are self-centered, and not even considerate. They just can't understand it." "Whose fault is it, the child's? To some extent, yes, but more these parents'. True, some of them were really unselfish, or meant to be, in making this colossal error. In fact, they were too short-sighted, too proud, or too selfish to be willing to take the trouble to shield their children things. Selfishly, it was so much easier and more pleasant to let the children have their way than to exercise a bit of firmness and deny them. Selfishly, it was so much easier to do for them, to teach or coerce them to do for themselves. Again, it is such a pleasurable feeling to think of themselves as unselfish in denying themselves money for the children's pleasure. On the other hand, it was really selfishness or selfishness that made them do this very thing. In any case, it is a sadly mistaken policy. To indulge or spoil a person in youth is one of the worst and most detrimental things that one mortal can do for another. It is the privations, the denials, the difficulties met, overcome, or endured, that develop character, not the lavishing of gifts. The very finest training that it is possible to give is the discipline of restraint and denial. To do otherwise is to allow a softer, less self-reliant, less happy, and more self-centered child to develop.

.....
Contributed
.....

The Yoke in Youth

"It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth." Would Joseph ever have been the man he was, but for the discipline of Egyptian captivity in youth? Would David have been the character he was, except for his early shepherd experiences and his exile career in Philistia and at the Cave of Adullam? In spite of his own experience, we see David make the very same mistake of which we have been speaking. He gave Absolam every advantage, except that finest advantage of the discipline of restraint and denial. He gave Soloman every advantage in training that unlimited wealth could purchase. Soloman was wise, but none too strong. He was cultured, but lacked the virility of his father's character. Take down your history books and search for the names of sons of great men. They are not there. Is it not because all too often they are denied the blessed discipline and hard knocks that did so much toward developing their fathers?

How our Heavenly Father Carries out this Principle

This principle is plainly enunciated in scripture. We are told that the afflictions and trials of the godly, sent or permitted of God, are for our discipline and development. If we had our way, we'd choose the smooth and even path, but God, in His love and wisdom, is too merciful to let us walk always that way. It is too dangerous to us spiritually. There is a "destruction that wasteth at noon-day," when our sky is bright and all seems prosperous. Sometimes it is the destruction of our sense of dependence upon God, with the centering of our affections upon other objects. Again, it is so easy in prosperity to be selfish, to pass the unfortunate by on the other side with only a casual glance. So God permits pain and difficulty to bring and keep us close to Him. Some suffering is punitive, as when we suffer the rewards of our own misdeeds. "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." But the afflictions of God's children are corrective and disciplinary rather than punitive and serve to make us purer, holier, and stronger. They are but a phase of God's love to us. "Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Parents, please notice the next verse. Here God gives us the proof of His Fatherhood and as the proof of our relation as children to Him, the very fact that He does chasten us, that He denies us things we want, and gives us things we do not want. "If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons." How far the practice and philosophy of many earthly parents differ from that of our Heavenly Father with His children! We learn here that lack of restraint and discipline of us would mean lack of love and lack of recognition by our Heavenly Father; while chastening is in reality God's love shining on us, a part of the "All things that work together for good to them that love God."

The Chastening Rod

"Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward, it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." No one need say that affliction is pleasant to bear; it isn't. Nevertheless afterward, the child of God does recognize that it was for his good. David testified, "Before I was afflicted, I went astray, but now will I keep thy word." Voicing the experience of thousands, he says, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted." The grain of sand cutting into the raw flesh of the oyster is the nucleus of the costly pearl. Paul's thorn in the flesh was very painful, but he came to see that God permitted it for his good. Rising to still greater heights of faith, he says, "Our light affliction, which is but for the moment, worketh out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Even the Son of God was made perfect through suffering, and the law of His Kingdom is "No cross, no crown."

Peaceable Fruits

What are some of the peaceable fruits of righteousness that God's chastening worketh in us? One is patience. It is by submitting, yielding, bearing, that we learn this grace. Sympathy is another. It is the grafted tree that bears the best fruit. It is the soul that has felt the pruning hooks of adversity, that really feels another's woe. But above all, faith in God. Chastening trial and adversity tighten our trust in God. As a little child, stumbling in the darkness, grasps more firmly the hand of his parent, so we grasp the hand of our Father as we pass through the dark places.

Wrong Effects

Would that it were always true that trial makes better. Sometimes it makes better, and sometimes people permit it to harden their hearts. We hear it said that some persons must be very good because they have had so much sorrow. It does not necessarily follow. Peaceable fruits from chastening come only to those "which are exercised thereby." Under adversity, some complain and question the goodness of God. To such, suffering brings little profit. Some nurse their sorrows and shut out from their view all the varied blessings that God is pouring down upon them so lavishly. And some are rebellious and bitter under affliction, harden their hearts against God, and lose all spiritual blessing. Others, under chastening, trust God. Though they may not always be able to see His purpose, they draw near unto Him and learn of Him, and God embles these. These are the pure gold that have come through the Refiner's oven.

Behind a Frowning Providence

Then is it not plain that even our difficulties and chastening are permitted for our development? They are to the Christian what the whetstone is to the razor, the pruning hook to the fruit tree, the furnace to the crude ore. Then blessed be God, all merciful, who in His wisdom and love, does not withhold from us our share of the discipline of difficulty, sorrow, and adversity, but who sustains us in it, that we may make of these very trials, mounting stairs to still higher planes of living.

Laurinburg, N. C.

THE ONLY BOOK NEVER OFF THE PRESS

By Frank H. Mann, General Secretary, American Bible Society

Four hundred and sixty-seven years ago the first book was printed from movable type. That book was the Bible, and it took five years to complete the task. One of these books sold recently for $50,000. Today great presses printing for the American Bible Society are turning off copies of the Gospels at the rate of 10,000 an hour to be sold anywhere in the whole world for one cent each. In the intervening years the Bible has never been off the press. It has had a steady run for more than four centuries. Yet if all the Bibles printed in all the years since printing was invented were available today, there would not be enough to supply the world's present population. The present rate of production of Bibles is not as great as the birth rate. Large portions of the population of the world are still unable to get the whole Bible or even a main part in their native tongue.

It must be said to the credit of the Church that a vast work has been done in giving the Bible to the world. In whole or in part the Bible has been translated into 770 languages or dialects. During the past decade the Bible has appeared in a new language on an average of every six weeks. In the past century some 550,000,000 copies of the Scriptures have been prepared by the Bible Societies. Millions of dollars have been given by the Church for this great task. Thousands of consecrated men have given themselves in sacrificial service.

But still the fact remains that the Book is undelivered. When the Bible Societies are asked for an explanation, their answer is immediate, direct and simple: "It could be delivered in hundreds of languages to millions of people if paid for." It is merely a matter of dollars and cents. The scholarship of the Church is equal to the gigantic task of translation if it can only be made available. The mills are equipped to furnish the paper and the presses to print the sacred words if only funds are at hand to meet the expenses. The man power and woman power of the Church are adequate for the task of distribution. In the most literal sense all that is wanting is money to finance the venture.

No phase of the Church's task is so basic as that of giving the Bible to all men everywhere. It is probable that no other phase of the Church's work produces so large a return for the same amount of money and service. And yet the Church has never given as generously to this part of its work as it has to other branches of its missionary program. The percentage devoted to Bible work in the benevolent program of the Church as a whole is not something of which the Church may boast. If a great wave of generosity were to sweep the Church in behalf of the Bible Cause, it would bring a revival of spiritual life to her membership. This thing is fundamental to the Church's success as a spiritual force in the world.

Nor have the stewards of great wealth seemed to realize the unlimited opportunity for far-reaching service presented by the Bible program. The really conspicuous gifts made during the first hundred years of this work could be counted in the proverbial way on the fingers of one hand. No one has come forward to create a foundation for Bible circulation as has been done in behalf of other worthy enterprises such as public health, education, music, literature and art. After a century of operation, the total endowment of the American Bible Society, which is second in importance to no other American institution, is less than two millions of dollars, yielding an income of less than $100,000. May God stir the hearts of those whom He has richly endowed with material things to see this work as an opportunity fraught with vast possibility for human betterment and spiritual advancement.

CONCERNING LAYMEN'S ASSOCIATION

By R. D. Haislip

The Layman's Association is a recent institution in the Presbyterian Church. It has been formed by the voluntary association of church members and members of congregations not members of the church, to give scope for the activities of Christian laymen in promoting the interests of the church. The constitution of the Presbyterian Church does not provide for such organizations; nowhere in it is there suggestion of such, and to give such organizations authority to do specific acts, it will be necessary to amend the constitution, certainly as to the powers of Presbytery, Synod and General Assembly. No doubt the session, under its general powers by which it exercises supervision over the spiritual conduct of the individual member, may consent to the organization of such a body to operate within the bounds of the individual church, and may exercise supervision over the association when formed.

Notwithstanding this limitation of authority on the part of church courts, laymen's associations to operate within Presbyteries have been recognized, and these associations have assumed various functions through the use of which they have ventured to exercise authority not exercised by the Presbyteries themselves. The whole thing is an exotic growth on the church, and if it is encouraged to extend its authority and its operations, it may become a serious problem within a few years to determine where the actual authority in the Presbyterian Church resides.

No doubt the laymen's associations have at times materially aided in efforts to promote the church's interests, especially when the efforts of these laymen were wisely directed. There can be no question that at times the activities of such associations have interfered with the orderly progress of the churches, depending somewhat on the discretion and modesty of the laymen, and the forbearance of pastors and church sessions.

It is conceivable that the ambition and aggressiveness of laymen clothed with authority granted or assumed, may lead them so to encroach on the field of labor of the pastors and sessions as to cheapen these, and to render them incapable of exercising that control and supervision over the individual flocks which the constitution of the church contemplates they shall have and exercise. It is submitted that this tendency in places has already been quite apparent, causing no little anxiety to those who have watched with concern the progress of the movement.

The object of this paper is to express the view that if laymen's associations are to have the wide sweep of authority and action which they have been exercising, it ought to be brought about by regularly adopted amendments to the constitution, carefully setting out their functions, and correlating them to the functions performed or to be performed by those bodies already constitutionally existing.

The writer of this, who is a layman himself, if you call a ruling elder a layman, believes that great good may come of a layman's association organized and operating strictly within a congregation, and under the guidance of pastor and session, but beyond that he doubts whether there is a proper field for such a body of men. If it is insisted that a wider field must be found for the activities of laymen, there might be an arrangement made whereby Presbytery shall name a committee to organize a body of laymen within the Presbytery to visit vacant churches and to hold meetings, and if need be conduct Sunday Schools, especially in new territory. It might select these men by taking them from among volunteers for the work. In this way no church would be responsible for what was done, as the men were not representing the individual church. It would relieve churches of responsibility for the laymen's associations that now unite to form a layman's association of a Presbytery. The movement as it stands today is in fact a revolutionary movement, which ought not to be extended until the subject shall have been fully considered by the whole church, and the constitution of the church changed to fit the changed state of affairs.

Staunton, Va.

BIRMINGHAM THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

By Rev. O. G. Jones, D.D.

The Southern Presbyterian Church has three theological seminaries—Union, Columbia, and Austin; also a joint ownership in Louisville.

All these seminaries are on the border of our church territory.

The Texas seminary is in the extreme West; Union and Columbia on the Atlantic border, and Louisville is near the Indiana line.

This leaves the great center of our Church, comprising the states of Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Louisiana, and Florida, with no seminary within its bounds.

If Birmingham should be taken as the center of a circle with a radius of 325 miles, the circumference of which would include these states, the great bulk of the population of the South would be within this circle. There would be 16,000,000 people, 165,000 of whom are Presbyterians.

The circle would include the greatest home mission territory of our Church. It would include the largest cities of the Southland—Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Atlanta, Savannah, Augusta, New Orleans, Macon, Mobile, Little Rock.

One who travels over these states is impressed with the wonderful progress that has been made, also with the untold possibilities which yet lie dormant.

With a vision of what may be accomplished in this section in the next few years along material lines, one who looks to the future in spiritual things must realize that it is possible to make this the strongest and most influential section of our Church.

Our people come largely from the Carolinas and Virginia. They are of the same Scotch and Scotch-Irish Presbyterian stock.

While in some sections there is refinement and culture of the highest type, yet it is true that great sections of the circle are undeveloped. They have been neglected and passed by in religious and intellectual development.

In the establishment of our colleges and seminaries this section has not been considered.

Before the Civil war conditions were such as to necessitate the establishing of our colleges as they are today.

Dr. Hezekiah Balch and Dr. Samuel Doak established Tusculum and Washington Colleges in east Tennessee; King College was established later at Bristol. Hampden-Sidney, Davidson and Clinton were located in what is now the eastern part of the territory occupied by our Church.

Southwestern University, at Clarksville, is the only college that has been located so as to effectively reach the large territory within this circle.

Because Louisville Seminary is closer to this section than any other seminary, Louisville is filling most of the pulpits of our churches. Although the Louisville Seminary is located on the border, and is largely controlled by our brethren of the North, it is doing a wonderful work. When Southwestern is opened up at Memphis, I believe Louisville Seminary will have a still greater part in forming the religious status of this large proportion of our Southern Church.

But Louisville, even if we had control, is too far removed to do work effectively.

We need to lay aside local preferences and prejudices, and as wise statesmen in the Kingdom of God, establish a seminary in the heart of the great Church we love!

If one doubts the need of a central location for a seminary, let him try to get a supply for the summer from Union or Columbia; or let him try to get members of the faculty as speakers at conferences. The distance to be traveled and the cost of the trip usually prohibit it.

Very few of the choice young men from Union have come into this territory the last few years.

The Carolinas and Virginia gain where we lose.

If the Church is wise she will place in the center of this territory a theological seminary second to none in America. She can never adequately develop these states until she does.

Some one will be sure to say, "We have too many seminaries already." That may be true, but they are all on the border. It will take money, of course it will, and hard work too.

The only questions we should consider in deciding a matter of this kind, are: Is it right? Is it needed? Should it be done, to promote the growth and development of our Church and the advancement of His Kingdom in the world?

If these questions can be answered in the affirmative, then the call will appeal to every loyal Presbyterian and consecrated child of God.

The fact that a task is hard has always been an incentive to action to those who delight in doing valiant service.

If some wise, forward-looking man of God, to whom He has given money, and a vision, would make an offer to establish a theological seminary in the heart of the Southern Presbyterian Church, we believe it would be the greatest step toward the evangelization of the Southland our Church has ever made.

Pontotoc, Miss.

ON THE ATTENDANCE OF MINISTERS AND RULING ELDERS UPON THE MEETINGS OF PRESBYTERY

(At the Fall meeting of our Presbytery it adopted the report of a committee appointed at the Spring meeting "On the Attendance of Ministers and Ruling Elders upon the meetings of Presbytery." I inclose a copy of this report, thinking that it will be of general interest and hoping that, should you see fit to publish it, it may be used to encourage sessions and Presbyteries to be faithful to their duty as the time for Spring meetings approaches.—Geo. R. Faw.)

1. To the Sessions of the Churches of Wilmington Presbytery:

Dear Brethren: We, your brethren, have been appointed a committee to address this serious message to you. The attendance of ruling elders from our churches is so often small and so many of our churches are so often not represented at the meetings of Presbytery, that Presbytery feels called upon to raise a note of solemn admonition that this is the neglect of a solemn duty and the occasion of serious loss to our elders and churches. The very soul of our Presbyterian polity is the parity of the teaching and ruling elders and their joint responsibility for Presbyterian counsel and conclusion. Presbytery solemnly enjoins on its churches to have elders capable of discharging the duties of their office, and upon the sessions to elect representatives to each meeting of Presbytery and see that these representatives attend the meetings for which they were chosen. It is earnestly hoped that this letter will stir you to do your duty in selecting and sending ruling elders as representatives to each meeting of Presbytery."

2. That the attention of the churches be called to the fact that the expenses of representatives to Presbytery are to be paid by the churches they represent. See Paragraph 58, Book of Church Order.

3. That the Presbytery suggest that the ruling elders of a church be elected in rotation to represent it in Presbytery.

4. That all representatives take it as a matter of solemn duty to attend the entire session of Presbytery.

5. That the stated clerk be requested to write ten days before the regular meetings of Presbytery urging every session to advise its pastor and elder to attend Presbytery and remain to the end of the session.

6. That all the ministers try to show a personal interest in the ruling elders and give them a larger part in the counsels of Presbytery.

ANOTHER INSTANCE OF "KEEPING THE RECORDS STRAIGHT"

In the Standard of March 28th there appeared the following statement: "There is Moody Bible School, that is conducted by Rev. W. W. White, in New York City, etc." In some way there has been a bad mixing of facts in the case. Moody Bible School is in Chicago, and not in New York, and Dr. W. W. White is not connected with it. Dr. White is president of "The Biblical Seminary in New York," an interdenominational seminary founded in 1900 as a demonstration of the fact that in the training of Christian leaders it is necessary to combine with the highest theological attainments a first-hand comprehensive knowledge of the Bible itself. If the article meant to imply, in its first paragraph, as it seemed to do, that the Biblical Seminary, or the school of which Dr. White is president, is Presbyterian, there is again a mistake. It is an international, interdenominational seminary, the students last year coming from 28 states and 21 countries, representing 35 denominations.

This school could certainly not owe its popularity to the fact that students who lack early training can enter and complete the course. The scholarship of the school has always been high and according to a recent ruling, the student body of next year can have only 15 per cent who are not college graduates, and these must have the equivalent in some form. The department of theology, with highest academic standing, offers courses approved by the regents of the university of the state of New York as leading up to the degrees of S.T.B., S.T.M., and S.T.D.

In the thought of the article that there is a greater desire for the study of the Bible itself, there is, it seems to me, at least one secret of the growth in the student body and the popularity of the Biblical Seminary. The curriculum there is Bible-centric, having the direct intensive study of the English Bible as the organizing principle of the curriculum, both contributing to the material for the other subjects as well as drawing upon them for its own use. Direct study of the Bible together will remove many denominational differences, strengthen Christian fellowship, and help greatly in the advancement of the Kingdom.—Marion Wilcox, graduate of the School of Missions, Biblical Seminary in New York, 1922.

SHOULD THE NEXT ASSEMBLY ERECT AN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ON VACANCY AND SUPPLY?

By Chas. D. Gilkeson

I notice in a recent issue of the Standard the tentative report of the Assembly's ad-interim committee on Vacancy and Supply and the action of the committee inviting comment and criticism.

In the fall of 1902, to go back no farther for a recognition of this problem that has long confronted our Church, there appeared in one of the issues of the Seminary Magazine a strong article, from the pen of the late Dr. M. L. Lacy, of Greenbrier Presbytery, on "The Evil of Vacancies." Largely as the outcome of that article, the Presbytery of Greenbrier overtured the Assembly of 1903 to appoint an ad-interim committee to study the matter and report to the Mobile Assembly. The overture was granted but the committee appointed made no report. The Mobile Assembly appointed a new committee, with Dr. J. D. Leslie as chairman. This committee recommended in substance (the Minutes of 1905, containing this report, are not at hand) that the Assembly's Committee of Home Missions should gather the facts as to vacancies and available men, function as a bureau of information and act as an intermediary. This action is, I suppose, still in force, but if so it's a dead letter.

In 1911 the Synod of Virginia erected a "Bureau of Ministerial Supply" to deal with the question of vacancies within its own bounds. This bureau, composed of the superintendents of Home Missions in each Presbytery (or the Presbyterian chairmen, where there was no superintendent) was directed to study the questions involved and formulate its own methods of work. This bureau, with an ever changing membership, continues in existence, and, by holding together for 12 years, under many disadvantages, has justified its right either to live or to be displayed by some broader and more efficient agency. From the first the members of this bureau recognized that the Synod is too small a unit in which to operate with success and that it was impossible for a man, with his hands full of other work, either to develop or work a broader plan. Some time ago the bureau began to inquire into plans in use in other churches holding the Presbyterian form of government. Of all the plans investigated, that in use for a number of years in the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., seemed to offer most in the way of relief.

On recommendation of the bureau, the Synod of Virginia overtured the Assembly of 1922 to erect a committee on Vacancy and Supply, and at the same time directed the bureau to accompany this overture with the plan it had in mind, though the plan itself formed no part of the Synod's overture. The ad-interim committee that makes the tentative report appearing in the Church papers of February 21st is the outcome of this overture, and it appears from this report that the plan that this committee tentatively recommends is "substantially the one that has been in operation in the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., for about ten years."

The recommendation of this paper to place this matter in the hands of an executive committee with a paid secretary appeals to the writer as not only wise but, in the light of past experiences, the only thing worth trying. If we are to get anywhere with any plan to improve conditions it must be by turning this matter over to some one who can give his undivided time and attention to it, supported by a committee to which has been assigned this specific service. If the plan accomplishes anything at all in lessening the number and shortening the length of vacancies, the returns in contributions to the benevolent causes alone will more than pay the expenses of the office.

Surely there is no need to discuss the evils of vacancies—they are in evidence on every side—or the inefficiency of the present methods of meeting them—illustrations of this might be given by the score—some stupid, some painful, some disreputable. Some writer has characterized our present method of finding pastors for vacancies as "the happy-go-lucky" method, which is too near the truth to be amusing.

Many of the practices of our Church courts are Congregational, not Presbyterian, and the present policy of the Presbytery to "keep hands off" until a church has called a minister and the mischief, if mischief has been done, has passed beyond remedy, or of "standing by" and watching a church flounder in the seas without offering any concerted aid, or of letting a church drift without proffering any help, is certainly not good for the church—and is not Presbyterian.

A careful study of the paper will reveal, I think, that the plan does not contemplate that the Presbytery's committee will dictate to the churches as to whom they shall call, but guide them, will not forestall them in their choice of a pastor, but keep them from lagging, will not relieve the churches of their privileges or responsibilities, but will help them.

It is too much to expect of any plan that it will solve the whole problem, but if this plan promises to help solve it, it is worthy of our most careful consideration. This is a most important matter, worthy of the best thought of our strongest ecclesiastics, for anything that will help solve this question of supplying vacancies or shortening them will help to solve every other problem that confronts the Church.

The committee has invited comment and criticism. If you know anything of the workings of the plan in our sister church, give the committee the benefit of your knowledge. If the plan commends itself to you as wise and workable or if it appears to you to be useless, or revolutionary, or dangerous, speak out and give your reasons.

Do we need or do we want an executive committee on Vacancy and Supply? Let us have an open discussion on this paper between this and the time for the meeting of the Assembly, when it will come before the Assembly. This, I understand, is what the committee asks for right now—before it makes up its final report.

Winchester, Va.

A PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

(From a Winston-Salem newspaper we take the following article on the coming of Dr. Lilly to that city and the progressive program he has outlined for the church he is to serve. We feel this will be of interest to our readers.—Ed.)

Friends of Dr. D. Clay Lilly in this city and throughout the state will be interested to learn that he has determined to return to North Carolina to lend his effort for the advancement of the cause of the Church and the community and state in general. At a recent session of the Reynolda Presbyterian congregation a call was unanimously extended to Dr. Lilly to become pastor of that church. After deliberation the session of the church has been notified that the call has been favorably considered and Dr. Lilly has asked that the communication following below be presented to the congregation as expressing his decision and desires in accepting the call. It is also understood that conditions at his present charge at Lexington, Ky., and at the local church will be so shaped as to permit his coming to take up his residence at Reynolda about July 1st.

The message from Dr. Lilly which will be communicated to the Reynolda congregation and friends tomorrow is addressed to the congregation, and reads as follows: My Dear Friends:

My heart has been much moved by your cordial action in calling me unanimously to become your pastor. I have for some weeks given serious and prayerful attention to this call, and have been led to accept it. I hereby convey this decision to you, subject to the authority of the West Lexington Presbytery, to whose jurisdiction I am subject.

I should like to put before you the reasons which have led me to this decision.

The pastorate of your church is a most inviting one. The congregation is made up of young and progressive people. You have a vision of a large service to be rendered and you are willing to labor zealously in the work of the Master. It will be a pleasure to work with you as preacher and pastor.

You are located adjacent to a most attractive Home Mission field, and one in which, for many reasons, you have a very deep personal and abiding interest. The western part of Orange Presbytery, embracing the counties of Forsyth, Rockingham, Surry, Stokes, Wilkes, Ashe, offers one of the finest opportunities for a high type of Home Mission work of which I have any knowledge. I know that you are ready to undertake an important ministry to these fine people and it will be a joy to lead you in such a service.

There is yet another great department of church work in which we can labor together. I hope to see the Reynolda Church become a most important conference center.

There is a much needed service for the church which, at present, is not being undertaken by any one. It is that of gathering together and organizing for effective service, a group of representative scholars from colleges, universities, theological seminaries and the pastorates, who will concertedly study the present-day problems of Christianity.

Christian faith today is assailed from two important centers of intellectual power, viz: The radical criticism on one hand and the materialistic theories in the realm of science and philosophy on the other. The church must not fail to make an adequate intellectual defense against these attacks. The intellect must always have a large place in religion. With this in mind we shall invite representative scholars from the fields of modern scientific theory and others who are at home in modern critical methods and results. More particularly these men will be chosen from the departments which are most closely related to the religious problems of the day, viz: Biology, Sociology, Education, Psychology, Archaeology, Biblical Criticism and Apologetics. They would meet here in a conference as our guests once a year, and would continue their special and individual work from one conference to another. They would have as their purpose and spirit an honest and courageous approach to the present-day problems of Christianity.

By way of illustrating the vital importance of such a conference I will say that I conceive that some of the first tasks which they would undertake could be along these lines:

(a) To find the weak places in our defensive literature and to take steps to strengthen these at once. To discover what subjects should be written of in a defensive way and to encourage the writing of these books. To suggest to universities and theological seminaries that they make arrangement by which it will be possible for their men to write such books. To increase the number and value of Apologetic Articles in magazines and papers.

(b) To examine with thoroughness the whole series of text-books of our entire American educational system to discover any unwarranted statements and assumptions which are damaging to the faith of immature students. To call attention to these that they may be corrected.

(c) To make careful survey and study of the plan of giving thorough religious instruction to the children in our public schools, as an accredited part of their school work, and to encourage this in so far as is seen to be fruitful and sound.

This plan proposes that the churches at their own expense shall provide suitable teachers of religion for those children whose parents desire it, and that this teaching shall be done so thorough that the school authorities will accept it as a part of the work required to complete the school course.

This seems to promise a way out of our present difficulty arising from the American plan of entirely separating the work of the Church from the State, with its disastrous consequences, the separation of education and religion. This proposed plan is worthy of the best thought of the Church today.

These and other important matters will engage the attention of these men of the conference from year to year.

The Reynolda Church will be proud and happy to render this unique service to the Church by making possible such conference.

It is because of these visions of progressive service which you have in mind that I am looking forward with real joy to fellowship with you in such work as your helper and pastor.

Cordially yours,
D. Clay Lilly.

The congregation to which Dr. Lilly is coming is located on the splendid estate, Reynolda, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Johnston. Mrs. Johnston has for several years been planning this far-reaching program, which not only contemplates a progressive program for the Reynolda congregation which will touch the people throughout the northwestern section of North Carolina, but will also be a power throughout the state and develop an influence for effectual Christian work that will be felt throughout the South.

With the coming of Dr. Lilly it is expected to begin immediately the development of these plans, initial steps for which have already been taken. The program was discussed in detail upon a recent visit to this city by Dr. Lilly and he comes with an enthusiasm which bespeaks steady progress in maturing the plans upon which Mr. and Mrs. Johnston and members of the congregation have definitely determined.

I am determined, God helping me, that no man shall rob me of my faith. I won't hide it away. I'll keep it right around with me, if I can. I will see that it gets exercise. I will feed it all I can, so that it shall not starve. I won't force it if I can avoid it, and make it weedy and weakling. It shall say no things it does not believe. When in real danger, if I can, I will go to some one stronger than I to help to keep it safe. But when that necessity arises to whom shall I look for help? Surely, directly to him who I believe gave it to me. For I know whom I have trusted, and I am persuaded that he is able to keep it against that day.—W. T. Grenfell.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

To the Presidents of the Local Auxiliaries—Dear Friends: This time last year we were looking forward with interest to the "Birthday Party." What a wonderful success that was! The plans made at the very beginning were fully carried out, and Miss Dowd's School in Japan has a new building under construction, and a beautiful gateway and lodge marks the birthplace of the Auxiliary at Montreat, both the gifts of the Auxiliary to the Equipment Fund.

This year the call has come for another celebration, and the Auxiliary has accepted the challenge of the Synodical of Texas to raise $25,000, to match an equal sum from them, for the erection of a School for Mexican Girls in Texas. This gift will be brought to the May meeting of the Auxiliary and will be over and above our regular gifts to Assembly's Home Missions. We want to make it at least equal to the Birthday gift sent to Japan.

We will have a charming program, a "Mexican Fiesta" at every Auxiliary in May. Advance sample program and invitation card have been sent out. The regular programs which will soon be ready also contain music and words for the songs. Programs are free.

Start right now to get ready for it! Order invitation cards for every woman in the congregation, price 50 cents per 100. Put the program in the hands of a committee or circle that will make a success of it. Appoint a committee on decorations and one on social hour.

Let's get joyfully to work to make the May meeting the best of the year. Announce the Fiesta at the April Auxiliary meeting, and talk it up. Tell of the appalling need of the School for Mexican girls.

Don't wait until the last moment to prepare. Get ready now. Let's give the Mexican girls of Texas as good a chance as we gave the girls of Japan last year. Let's do it.

Faithfully yours, H. P. Winsborough.

"The Essential Truths of Christian Faith and Practice"—A small volume of Bible Studies has just been issued by Mrs. Albert L. Berry, of Chicago, called "The Essential Truths of Christian Faith and Practice." To the author the world seems "cumbered with much serving" and social service the order of the day everywhere, to the detriment of the "one thing needful."

In these studies Mrs. Berry endeavors to influence the reader to choose the better part, and presents briefly yet forcefully the foundations of our faith and suggestions for the practice of it.

The first four studies deal entirely with fundamentals. First, the Bible itself, the authority for the story of the plan of salvation; second, God the Father and Creator, and God the Son; third, God the Holy Spirit; and fourth, Salvation, man's need of it and God's plan.

The remaining six studies deal with man's acceptance of this plan, his response in faith to the revelation of God, his practice of prayer, his service to God and its rewards.

The studies are brief and easily understood and make an admirable text-book for a Bible class. Each chapter is followed by a set of questions on its context.

The book is priced at 50 cents a copy and may be had from The Woman's Auxiliary, 256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo. M. I. S.

Bible Studies—Very attractive in its title and general contents is the booklet of Mrs. E. L. Russell, entitled "Bible Studies of Business Women for Business Women." Mrs. Russell is a Bible teacher and the field secretary of the Assembly's Training School at Richmond, Va. Her long familiarity with the stories of Bible women has enabled her to present them concisely and sympathetically.

In the 12 lessons many types of women are studied, and as many varying occupations, from the woman of despised Samaria drawing water at the well, to Esther, queen of rich and powerful Persia.

The story of Ruth the gleaner is given in three studies; Mary and Martha the home-makers are considered in two studies; Esther, queen and diplomat, in two. The other characters are Rahab of Jericho, Priscilla the tent-maker in business with her husband, Phoebe the messenger, and Lydia the seller of purple.

This little book is excellent material for devotionals or for Bible study at any woman's meeting, but is of especial interest to circles of business women or young girls. It may be had for 25 cents from The Woman's Auxiliary, 256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo. M. I. S.

Standard of Excellence for Presbyterials—The Standard of Excellence for the Presbyterials will be determined this year by adding the percentages of the local Auxiliaries and striking an average. For instance:

A Presbyterian having 25 Auxiliaries, of which
10 reach 50% =	500
5 reach 60% =	300
10 reach 80% =	800

25 reach 1600

Therefore, 1600 divided by 25 = 64, and the average percentage for the Presbyterian is 64%, making it a Blue Circle Presbyterian.

Mission Methods or The Little Blue Book—Do you want the children of your Sunday School to look forward eagerly to the "Five Minutes for Missions" every Sunday?

Send for Mission Methods and read of novel and appealing ways of teaching Missions to children!

Is your Junior Christian Endeavor Society growing stale and uninteresting? Just try the "Little Blue Book" for remedies!

Do you want a novel way to illustrate missionary needs to your Auxiliary? You will find it in "Mission Methods." This attractive little volume by Miss Carrie Lee Campbell is just off the press and will prove a veritable mine of gold to wide-awake workers.

You cannot afford to be without it! Order now from The Presbyterian of the South, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

Charlotte, N. C.—Caldwell Memorial Church is located in the Elizabeth section of Charlotte, being accessible for the Piedmont, Plaza, Elizabeth, The Pines, Colonial Heights and Myers Park sections. Its aim is to become the home church of these and other nearby neighborhoods.

With its new church edifice, remodeled Sunday School room and annex completing the church buildings, it is to be splendidly equipped.

The Woman's Auxiliary is the women's organization of the church and all ladies of the congregation are urgently asked to become affiliated with it.

On March 8th, at a meeting of the Auxiliary, the installation of officers was conducted, the pastor, Rev. G. F. Bell, officiating.

Charlotte, N. C.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Tenth Avenue Presbyterian Church held the first meeting of the new year Monday afternoon in the Sunday School room of the church. Mrs. R. W. Mitchell conducted devotional exercises, using as her theme "Putting First Things First." Rev. J. F. Ligon, the pastor, installed the new officers and circle leaders, and also delivered the charge to the general membership, after which he made a most earnest address on effective team work.

The women of Tenth Avenue Church raised over $2,000 last year by their own efforts.

Charlotte, N. C.—The initial meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church was held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the church parlor, Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick, the newly-elected president, presiding. Mrs. E. M. Cole led the devotional, selecting several key verses of Scripture of benefit and help to all.

The newly proposed budget for the year 1923-1924 was presented in an original manner. A large pie cut in proportionate slices and labeled with the cause which it represented was brought in by the treasurer, Mrs. George Hanna. Then the several secretaries of the causes claimed their respective slices, explaining in a few words the needs and work of their departments. Mrs. E. M. Cole represented the budget party; Mrs. H. H. Orr the foreign missionary sect; Mrs. Rankin, assistant home missions; Mrs. W. B. Taylor, S. and P. home missions; Mrs. A. S. Johnson, Southern extension missionary work; Miss Ward, Bible cause and miscellaneous; Mrs. Alston Morrison, specials; Christian education and ministerial relief, Mrs. F. Fowler. This gave a very entertaining description of the proposed work of the year.

Miss Abernethy, of Dillingham, N. C., gave a short talk on the work with which she is associated in the mountains, emphasizing the characteristics and sterling qualities of the mountaineers.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Rev. M. F. Daniels, with a few appropriate remarks. Mr. Daniels' address on "Courage, Co-operation and Enthusiasm," was one which held his hearers intensely interested throughout. He is a speaker of much force and earnestness.

The Auxiliary begins the new year with great hopes for a strong and fruitful organization under the leadership of the following officers. President, Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick; vice-president, Mrs. E. M. Cole; treasurer, Mrs. George Hanna; secretary, Mrs. James P. Stowe.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church is in the ninth year of its existence, and has grown from year to year in membership. During the past two years, especially has it made progress, under the leadership of Miss Annie Wilson.

Charlotte, N. C.—With nearly 300 women present, the Woman's Auxiliary of the Second Presbyterian Church held its annual meeting in the Sunday School building immediately in the rear of the church, the women assembling in the Men's club room.

The retiring president, Mrs. W. R. Wearn, presided. Dr. McGeachy conducted the devotional service with which the meeting was opened, and installed the new officers, secretaries and circle leaders. He also delivered the charge to them and to the general membership of the club, after which he made a short, but most earnest and impressive talk to the women, his subject, "The Winning of Souls This Year." "The Lord's work," he said, "must be put first by the members of the Auxiliary."

J. B. Spillman, secretary of stewardship for the Synod of North Carolina, followed Dr. McGeachy. He spoke on "Stewardship in the Home," laying the burden of this stewardship upon the women in the home.

The Woman's Auxiliary was established by Mrs. Edmund Bullard, and her committee. She is secretary of social activities in the Auxiliary.

"Our Trip to Chilpancingo"—(Continued from last issue.)

The innkeeper and his wife met us graciously, and showed us to a very comfortable room on the first floor, with a long French window opening out on to the street, having iron bars reaching from the floor to the ceiling. A good Mexican supper was heartily enjoyed and plans formulated for the start next morning at five o'clock. Before going to our room, however, the innkeeper warned us to close our windows tightly. We protested that the window had iron bars, but he replied that the hotel had been robbed three times in the previous two weeks, that the iron bars made no difference whatever, as the robbers pried them apart, sprayed chloroform into the room to put the occupants soundly to sleep, and then with a pole on the end of which was a hook, proceeded to draw out between the bars every article of clothing, bedclothing, rugs, etc., which the room contained. It seemed this was the usual procedure of the robbers in that section! You may imagine we closed the windows without further discussion! We slept all night with the doors and windows both closed and arising at four-thirty next morning, we vowed with fervor that the next time we would take the fresh air and robbers!

Promptly at five a. m., the five-passenger car came to the hotel, and into it were packed eight grown people, four suit-cases, five large bundles while one man stood on the running board all the 75 miles! It was not so uncomfortable as it sounds, because ten miles of our road led us up the bed of a dry river and as we bumped over the mountainous stones, we could not jostle because we were packed in so tightly. On our return trip in the same fashion, a young Mexican bride and her husband sat on the front seat with the driver and the girl passed the hours singing Mexican songs in a very sweet voice, to the great delight of everyone in the machine.

Eight o'clock found us on the banks of the Balsas river. Here we found an Indian hut made of palm stalks and thatched with palm leaves. This was our breakfast room. Two Indian women and an Indian man were busily engaged in cooking eggs, tortillas and beans and frijoles, and brewing an abominable concoction which they called coffee. A wooden box which was suspended from the roof-pole held a brown-faced baby and a dear little black-eyed girl about five years old stood looking with wide eyes at the intruders! After breakfast all of the baggage, numerous burros and many bundles were loaded with the passengers on to a flat bottom boat which was poled across the river to the opposite side, where another Dodge car was waiting for us. The journey was delightful, the scenery most beautiful and the road very good except for the ten miles where it had not been completed. Two o'clock found us at the door of our mission in Chilpancingo.

The people of this town are almost all pure blood Indians and the town is clean and has about thirty thousand inhabitants. It has an interesting history, as in Chilpancingo the first constitution for the Republic of Mexico was adopted. It is also the capitol of the great state of Guerrero. The mission work there was under the charge of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., for a quarter of a century, but ten years ago, they were compelled to give it up and since that time, there has been no missionary there until Mr. and Mrs. Williamson and our Mexican minister, Mr. Rudolpho Torres, went there a year ago. Our building is a good substantial stone building, but was in a dreadful state of despair when our missionaries arrived. It was used as barracks by the revolutionary soldiers, and almost every bit of interior woodwork of any kind had been used for fuel.

With the courage characteristic of our missionaries, Mr. Williamson set to work to make the building habitable. He repaired the chapel and made it most attractive for public worship, and had men working on the rooms for the proposed school when we were there. As in all Mexican buildings, the house is built round an open patio, in which we found growing oranges, lemons, pomegranates and a beautiful poinsettia plant, while in the center was an attractive basin and fountain. Mr. Williamson and Mr. Torres proved royal hosts in the absence of Mrs. Williamson who was at the hospital at Puebla for an operation. They have in Chilpancingo a group of Christians which form the foundation for what will in time be a strong church. They had a good Sunday School, attended by many bright-faced, clean little children, and as soon as the building is repaired, the day and boarding school is to be opened, under the direction of Miss Katherine Gray, of Texas.

The cordial and kindly welcome given to the visitors was characteristic of these people and greatly appreciated. There were many who remembered Mrs. Wallace, although even after the lapse of so many years, and welcomed her back with cordial greetings.

Mr. Williamson has a field here that is larger than one-fourth of all the state of North Carolina. Although Chilpancingo is his headquarters, he will be riding over the mountains to many stations in his territory, and will, in the course of time, establish outposts that will be independent churches. He selected this remote field voluntarily and is devoting his splendid talents to building up the Kingdom in that part of Mexico.

Provision has been made in the building for the opening of a clinic for Mrs. Williamson who is a trained nurse, and thus Chilpancingo, the most remote station in our Mexican missions, will have educational, medical and evangelistic work at once.

Rev. Rudolpho Torres, pastor of the Mexican Church, was formerly a student at our Texas-Mexican Institute, and of our Theological Seminary at Austin. He is a man of attractive personality and deep consecration, and will do an outstanding service for the Master in this Indian town, where the people are less priest ridden and more open minded than in less remote cities.

H. P. Winsborough.

FREE LEAFLETS

We have leaflets bearing on the subjects treated in the Year Book of Programs.

They are for free distribution from your literature table at Auxiliary meetings.

Tell us the average number in attendance and we will send these leaflets each month for fifty cents a year to cover postage.

Write to

The Woman's Auxiliary
256-259 Field Building
St. Louis, Mo.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

Your editor and another of the Davidson College students have worked today at Woodleaf and Cooleemee and have had a real big, busy day. Besides teaching a Sunday School class at Woodleaf, we have made two Christian Endeavor talks and conducted two workers' conferences on methods of work. The Woodleaf Society has been running for some time but the work is new at Cooleemee. It is encouraging to see new societies being started and the older societies striving to build up their work. Both these societies are planning to send delegates to the District Convention at Concord, April 14-15.

We have some interesting reports this week from the young people. We are glad to include the report from the organized Sunday School class at Durham. More reports from such organizations are desired for our page.

That is a remarkable list of activities reported by the Church of the Covenant young people of Greensboro. We could give only a bare outline of the fine work they tell of. Won't some of the other societies join our growing band of reporters? There is a nice certificate offered for those who report.

Mr. Frank P. Wilson, North Carolina Endeavor Secretary, has been busy around Mecklenburg County the past week. Beginning on Easter Sunday at Sugar Creek with a joint meeting of the Sugar Creek, Mallard Creek, and Newell Societies, the second largest of such meetings Mr. Wilson said he had addressed, he covered also St. Paul, Bethel and other points. Come again, Friend Wilson!

The leaflet for the North Carolina Young People's Conference has been issued, and tells about the good things offered the young people as "seven days of rare privilege." We believe it and hope you will, and will plan to come.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

APRIL 15, 1923

JOSEPH, THE PRESERVER OF HIS PEOPLE

Lesson: Gen. 30:22-24; 37:2-50:26. (A Survey of Joseph's Life.)
Printed Text: Gen. 45:3-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."—Exodus 20:12.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

3 And Joseph said unto his brethren, I am Joseph: doth my father yet live? And his brethren could not answer him; for they were troubled at his presence.

4 And Joseph said unto his brethren, Come near to me, I pray you. And they came near. And he said, I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt.

5 Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you, to preserve life.

6 For these two years hath the famine been in the land; and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be eating nor harvest.

7 And God sent me before you, to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

8 So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and he hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.

9 Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, tarry not.

10 And thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast.

11 And there will I nourish thee, for yet there are five years of famine, lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty.

12 And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you.

13 And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen, and ye shall haste, and bring down my father hither.

14 And he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck, and wept; and Benjamin wept upon his neck.

15 Moreover, he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them: and after that, his brethren talked with him.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 32. What benefits do they that are effectually called partake of in this life?

A. They that are effectually called do in this life partake of justification, adoption and sanctification, and the several benefits which in this life do either accompany or flow from them.

Our lesson enables us to contemplate one of the most admirable characters of Old Testament story. Joseph, the oldest son of Jacob and Rachel, had fine intellectual gifts, attractive physical qualities, excellent moral graces, and a most useful earthly career. His life of 90 years on the earth was marked by trial and triumph, by adversity and prosperity, and in every condition he manifested a fidelity to God and man, to truth and duty rarely equalled. Indeed, Joseph and Daniel are two of the noblest and most winsome characters described in the sacred Scriptures. In many points of resemblance Joseph is an impressive type of Christ. We will consider, Joseph Revealed and Reconciled to His Brethren; His Sending Into Egypt; Why His Father's Family Must Remove There; Joseph's Message to His Father.

I. Joseph Revealed and Reconciled to Brethren

Judah had made a touching appeal for the release of Benjamin, and Joseph, melted down, could no longer control himself. He commands all strangers to depart and leave him alone with his brothers. Then he says, "I am Joseph; doth my father yet live?" He desires to be again assured as to his father's life and welfare. His brethren are amazed and rendered speechless by finding in this ruler of Egypt their wronged brother Joseph. They do not know how he may use his power to visit penalties for gross injuries inflicted on him in his tender youth. But Joseph has a nobler nature than they supposed, and intended to use his power not to punish but to save and bless. He invites his brethren near and says, "Come near unto me, and they came near. And he said I am Joseph, your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt." "Now be not grieved nor angry with yourselves that ye sold me hither, for God did send me before you to preserve life." He does not mitigate their crime, but would not have them despair. He afterwards gave all his brethren a kiss of peace and reconciliation and wept upon them. Then they talked with him.

II. Why Joseph Was Sent Into Egypt

His brethren sold him into slavery into Egypt to rid them of his presence, pious example and reproofs, as well as from greed of gain. But God had His own higher and more gracious purposes to subservise by Joseph's going to Egypt, and he had the grace and vision to discern this. He says, "God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth and to save your lives by a great deliverance." Joseph had been sent not only to minister to the needs of the Egyptians and to preserve his own father's family, but to accomplish other designs of Jehovah respecting Israel. These had been revealed by God years before to Abraham, the founder of their nation. The Lord told him that "His seed should be strangers in a strange land," that they should be grievously afflicted "and should finally come forth with great substance." In Egypt Jacob's family and Abraham's seed was greatly favored, wonderfully developed, and largely prospered. After Joseph's death they were enslaved, persecuted and subjected to cruel toil. They were delivered by Moses with marvelous judgments, and spoiling the Egyptians, they departed with enlarged possessions. In the land of Egypt, where Jacob's seed were carried by Joseph, the Lord by prosperity and adversity, by promises and almighty power, prepared Israel to be the custodians of the sacred Scriptures and the channel for imparting Messiah and salvation to mankind.

III. Why Jacob's Family Must Remove to Egypt

Joseph tells that "There shall be five more years of famine, during which there should be neither plowing nor harvest." They must therefore come not only to gratify and comfort their aged father, but for the preservation of the lives of themselves and their children. They must also remove for the development of their nation and for fulfilling the gracious designs of Jehovah concerning themselves and mankind. "Known unto God are all His works from the foundation of the world." By the agency of all creatures, good and bad, and by all actions, evil or excellent, He accomplishes His grand and gracious designs.

IV. Joseph's Message to His Father

To comfort and encourage Jacob, Joseph sends him by his brethren a varied and loving message. He charges them to tell him that "He is the ruler of Egypt," that he shall be settled near him, that the best of the land shall be his, and adapted to the wants of his flocks and herds." He directs them to tell him of "all my glory in Egypt," and of all that ye have seen and "ye shall haste and bring down my father hither." He tells them to assure his father that "he speaks to them in their own tongue" and therefore he is his long lost son, Joseph. He speaks of his social position and his glory in the land, not in a boastful spirit, but to assure his father of his ability to perform his promises and to cherish his family in his father's declining years. Faithful all his life, in every station, Joseph fully verified these generous assurances.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

TRAIN FOR LEADERSHIP

M., April 16—Moses' Training: Acts 7:30-36.
T., April 17—Abraham Trained: Heb. 11:8-10, 17-19.
W., April 18—Joshua: Exod. 24:12-18.
T., April 19—Paul: Gal. 1:11-23.
F., April 20—Jeremiah: Jer. 1:1-10.
S., April 21—The Apostles: Matt. 4:18-25.

Sun., Apr. 22—Topic: Train for Leadership. Exod. 3:7-12; 4:10-12.

When God has a work to do, He always prepares a man or a woman to do it. Here we have Moses, God's great leader of his people to the promised land. Later, He raised up Deborah, who led the Children of Israel to victory. God is still needing leaders for His work, the redemption of the world from sin. He needs ministers to lead the church as preachers and pastors; He needs leaders in Sunday School work; He needs leaders in young people's work, in laymen's work, in woman's work; He needs missionaries in home and foreign lands, and social welfare workers.

Where is God going to get these leaders? As the older leaders pass away, who are going to take their places? Of course, God expects the young people who are just coming into manhood and womanhood to say, Here am I; send me. And if you are willing, God will give you work to do, and He will give you strength to do it.

Schools of Leadership

If we recognize God's call to us, then the days of our youth are but days of preparation for answering that call. Thus Moses was prepared in Egypt and Midian for his work. Our homes, our schools, our young people's societies, our clubs, are all schools to prepare us for leadership. There we learn the great principles of character, which is the basis for leadership. Without good, true, strong characters, our leadership will be constantly under suspicion, or weakened by lack of confidence in us on the part of those whom we shall lead. Here in these schools for leadership, we constantly learn the details of our future task. The playground is a fine school for leadership, and all love to follow the boy or girl who knows the game, plays it fairly, puts enthusiasm or "pep" into it, and is willing to share the honors with their playmates. Wellington, the conqueror of Napoleon, was once a high school boy at Eton, in England, and after the battle of Waterloo, he was at a cricket match, and as he watched the game, he remarked to a friend, "The battle of Waterloo was won here." All school boys and girls should realize that their school days are a preparation for life and leadership.

How to Train for Leadership

Most men and women are willing to belong to the common herd, because they do not wish to pay the price of leadership. They let others do their thinking, while they follow meekly behind. Perhaps some one will say, Everybody can't be leaders. But don't worry. The vast majority of people are too lazy and selfish to undertake leadership, and especially is this true of Christian leadership. Let our boys and girls resolve to be leaders, and good leaders, at that. Now, let us put down some rules for making a good leader.

1. Learn to do the actual work you will lead in, so you will know how to show others, or know if the work is being done well or not. Many a preacher who succeeds, used to sweep the church, ring the bell, do Sunday School work, lead in boys' prayer meetings, and so on. Some people envy the railroad president, but 30 years ago he was probably a section hand. He knows what work is.

2. Stand ready to take orders. The general of an army didn't put on his epaulets the first day he spent in service. No; he shouldered a rifle, and obeyed commands. Before one can command, he must obey.

3. In Christian work, be willing to do what you can. Make a start at something. Stonewall Jackson's first public prayer was, O Lord. But he started, and became gifted in prayer. You will never be a leader unless you do what you can. Moses almost lost his leadership because he at first refused to start.

3. And don't get discouraged. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again. You will make mistakes, but study the mistakes, so you may avoid them the second time. Persevere, be determined, ask God for help, and you will grow in the power to do what you wish.

4. Be studious of your work. A leader must always stay ahead of those he leads. Think up new ways of doing the same thing. Watch others at work, and observe how they do it. Imitate them, and improve on the way they do it. A leader must not get in a rut, and be satisfied to stay in it. Change things, have some variety in meetings, social games. If life gets monotonous, we tire of it. Nature is beautiful because it brings in so many changes in scenes and seasons. So a leader must study and learn more and more. It is hard work, but it pays in success and happiness. Ellice Hopkins says, Genius is the capacity for taking pains. John Elliott, the missionary to the Indians, said, Prayer and pains, with faith in Jesus Christ, will do anything. Let us then combine study with prayer.

5. Be sympathetic with the people you lead. Don't be stuck up, and impatient. Teach them, encourage them, comfort them, and put yourself in their place, so you may feel as they do. They will respond to your sympathy and will follow you with all the greater joy to meet your approval.

Nearly anyone can be a good leader if he or she will only be willing to try hard enough.

FAYETTEVILLE ENDEAVORERS OBSERVE DIXIE ENDEAVOR DAY

Mr. Garton Pearce, of the Highland Presbyterian Church, Fayetteville, N. C., sends us the following from the Fayetteville Observer, with request that it be printed:

"Did you see the kite that flew from the top of the Huske Building at 5:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon? If so, did you know what the words 'Dixie Endeavor Day, March 18th,' meant on the kite? All over the South, March 18th, was set aside as 'Dixie Endeavor Day,' and it was duly observed by the Senior C. E. Society of Highland Presbyterian Church. Promptly at 7:00 o'clock Sunday evening the pageant 'Thelma' was presented to a large audience. Thelma is a young girl who is not interested in C. E. and its work. Two girls on their way to the C. E. meeting stop in and invite her to go along, but she scornfully refuses. The girls leave her and she falls asleep and dreams of the great work that is being done through the different departments of C. E. She awakes just as the girls return and relates her dream. She becomes thoroughly interested and they tell her something of the C. E. work in Dixie.

"One of the most enjoyable features of the evening was the music furnished by Miss Frances Green at the organ, Misses Louise Steele and Louise Williams as violinists. Miss Nannie Morse sang 'Have Thine Own Way,' and Mr. Shubert, accompanied by Mr. Long, played a very beautiful violin solo.

"The Junior Endeavorers were well represented and took part in the meeting by a recitation and song. Those taking part in the pageant were Misses Emma Hutaff, De Luke Pinkston, Helen West, Elizabeth Clark, Elizabeth Pearce, and Annie Clark, and Messrs. Duncan Shaw, Jim Clark, Garton Pearce, and Hugh Pinkston.

"An offering of $15.00 to help carry on the work in Dixie was taken up."

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Church of the Covenant Endeavorers, of Greensboro, N. C., gave the Dixie Endeavor Day pageant at the evening church service. Four Endeavor boys served as ushers and several Endeavorers were in the choir. Posters, newspaper notices, and the church bulletin had been used in advertising the meeting and an audience that crowded the church and made a liberal contribution to Dixie C. E. work.

The afternoon of the same day these Endeavorers had held a service at the county work house, taking with them the wife of one of the prisoners. The young people also took with them magazines, gospels, and flowers, the flowers given by the State C. E. Union's superintendent of prison work, Miss Annie Wilson Mebane.

This society uses the missionary programs sent out by Mr. Edward Grant, of Nashville. During the month of March the members contributed to the State and Dixie C. E. work, to the Presbyterian C. E. Home Mission work at Beechwood Seminary, and to the support of the C. E. foreign missionaries. Also, by request of Rev. Paul Berman, of the Jewish Mission at Baltimore, they donated $35.00 toward the cost of an organ for his evangelistic street meetings.

Miss Rachel Bcall, of Durham, tells us some interesting things about her Sunday School class of 16 young men in a mill district. These members are supporting a native evangelist in Africa, a real sacrifice on their part. The class has taken provisions and supplies to needy families in the community.

During the revival services in the church several of the class members brought their girl friends to Christ, and one boy brought his father. The class is reading "David Livingstone, the Pathfinder," and several members are attending a night school and making progress along many lines.

Church News

DEATH OF REV. J. ANDREW SMITH

Rev. J. Andrew Smith died in Statesville, N. C., on April 5th, and funeral services were held on the 6th. Mr. Smith was originally a minister of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church and about 15 years ago he was pastor of the A. R. P. Tabernacle in this city.

After he entered our Church he was engaged in evangelistic work, but after a severe stroke of paralysis he could only fill vacant pulpits when called upon. He was a devoted servant of his Lord, and success attended his preaching.

Attention!

Will the stated clerks of all our Presbyteries send the numerous overtures which they will be sending up to the approaching General Assembly to Rev. R. C. Reed, 1419 Richmond St., Columbia, S. C. He expects to sustain a very intimate relation to these overtures, and desires to avail himself of the earliest possible opportunity to get acquainted with them.

THE PRE-ASSEMBLY EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCE

For several years our Atlanta Committee has arranged to devote Wednesday, before the opening of the General Assembly, to an Evangelistic Conference.

This year, owing to the fact that the members of the Assembly cannot reach Montreat till Wednesday afternoon, it has been decided to devote Wednesday evening to this cause, instead of the entire day.

The Hon. William Jennings Bryan has accepted an invitation to speak at this meeting.

HOME MISSION RECEIPTS

Statement

The books which closed on March 31st indicate a remarkable year for Assembly's Home Missions in various respects.

1. For the first time in 22 years there has been a decrease in receipts, compared with the previous year, of $20,030.20.

2. It has been a year of large increase in gifts from Progressive Program sources amounting to $13,688.10. Churches, Women's Auxiliaries, Sabbath Schools, all creditably exceeded the previous year—even legacies were larger. The decrease is entirely accounted for by a few large individual gifts of the former year unbalanced by similar amounts this year.

3. For the first time in ten years we closed the year with a deficit amounting to $35,000. This was not due to any change of policy in our avowed determination to live within our income. It was not the result of any miscalculation of the cost of the work. It was not caused by any inefficiency in management. It was due solely to the necessity of larger expenditures to save our investments in unfinished buildings. If there had not been this decrease in receipts, notwithstanding this large outlay for equipment, there would have been practically no deficit. In view of our past record in financing successfully the work, we are confident the Church will not regard even this as a violation of its injunction to limit our operations to our income.

4. It has been another year of remarkable gatherings. The number of additions on profession of faith through our Home Missions agencies total 9,211, about the same as last year. As the additions five years ago from the same sources were but little over half that number the increase is equivalent to nearly 100 per cent.

5. The only disconcerting feature of the year is the fact that the amounts coming through the Progressive Program are about $270,000 less than the apportionment approved by the Assembly for the Cause. This is due largely to the lack of sympathetic attitude on the part of some pastors and churches, and consequently a proportion of its 16 per cent was diverted to other causes. Our chief complaint is that this small percentage is still further reduced by some sessions to Presbyteries and Synods—doing great injustice to Home Missions and greater damage to denominational growth. If the same consideration and sympathy were given Assembly's Home Missions as to the other benevolent agencies of the church, we could have equipped our missions, largely increased our activities, and the whole Church would have received the benefit in large denominational gains.

In conclusion we thank the Church for its confidence and our generous constituency for their substantial support, and we enter the new church year with courage, faith and renewed effort in the service of Christ and the Church.

S. L. Morris, Secretary.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Bethel Presbytery meets in Blacksburg, S. C., Wednesday, April 18th, 8 p. m.

F. H. Wardlaw, S. C.

Nazareth—The membership of this church for the last year reports five elders, six deacons, 156 communicants, six additions, raised $4,687 for all purposes, and has 114 Sunday School enrollment; and faces the new church year with implicit confidence in the leadings of our Unfailing Lord. Rev. C. O'N. Martindale is the pastor; and there is much to encourage us to press forward.

Reidville—The year just closing shows that the church has seven elders, six deacons, 186 communicants, 11 additions, 144 Sunday School enrollment, raised $4,300 for all purposes; and with cheerful heart looks to the Giver of every good gift for all needed guidance and blessing for the year ahead. The pastor is Rev. C. O'N. Martindale; and our joint yearning is to win more lives to Christ and the Church.

Antioch—Another year's work finds us with four elders, four deacons, five additions, $899 raised for all purposes, and 113 Sunday School enrollment. Rev. C. O'N. Martindale, preaches for us two Sunday afternoons out of every month. As our Lord has helped us, so will He, we are sure, as we look to the days to come. We have much to spur us on to new ventures for Christ.

Chester—In the absence of Dr. Shepperson, pastor of Purity Presbyterian Church, Rev. J. R. Bridges filled his pulpit, Sunday, April 1st. He found one of the best organized churches and Sunday Schools that he has seen for a long time. Mr. A. M. Aiken is the superintendent of the school, and to it he is giving his best efforts. The congregation was representative of the Chester people, which is only another way of saying that it was composed of some of the finest people of South Carolina. The editor fully enjoyed his visit.

Greenwood—Last Sunday's bulletin contained the names of 51 new members, received since the last communion. During the past four months, we have had the pleasure of receiving into the membership of this church 76 new members.

The services of Mr. M. C. Dendy, a senior at the Presbyterian College, at Clinton, and a candidate for the ministry, have been procured for the coming summer. Mr. Dendy will assist with the Young People's Work of this church.

Reidville—On the afternoon of March 21st, Rev. W. M. Clark, of Chunju, Korea, gave us an interesting slide lecture on the people and work in the land where he labors, which was greatly appreciated. On the night of March 28th a most graphic and informing and spiritually quickening lecture on "The Great Pyramid" was given us by that good and able brother, Rev. Geo. F. Robertson, D.D., of Bristol, Tenn. Any church would profit by securing his services.

Clinton—The baccalaureate sermon will be preached at the Presbyterian College of South Carolina, Sunday morning, May 27th, by Dr. John W. Douglas, of Baltimore. The sermon before the Y. M. C. A. will be preached that evening by Rev. J. A. MacLean of Greenwood.

The new catalog has been received. It shows an enrollment for the year of 188. It is going to be impossible for the college to accommodate next year all students applying for admission. The college expects to build a handsome new dormitory, but it cannot be ready for use by September. Students desiring to enter college next fall should apply at once.

Anderson, First Church—The pastor and session of the church had the pleasure of publicly welcoming 24 into the membership of the church, in the presence of a congregation that completely filled the house. All of these except one, united on profession of faith, and nine received the sacrament of baptism also. There was also one infant baptism. This was followed by the regular communion service.

At the evening hour, the choir presented an unusually attractive program of Easter music before an audience that packed the church to its utmost capacity.

The church has enjoyed a very successful year, and is making large plans for the future. Five Endeavorers, accompanied by the pastor, attended the State Christian Endeavor Convention at Florence, April 6th to 8th.

R. F. Kirkpatrick, Pastor.

Columbia—Through the thoughtfulness of the First and the Arsenal Hill Presbyterian churches and the faculty of Columbia Theological Seminary, all the ministers of the Synod of South Carolina were invited to attend the Billy Sunday meetings in Columbia, March 26-30, and to hear lectures from Professors W. M. McPheeters, R. C. Reed, J. M. Wells and H. R. Murchison, with the expense of entertainment provided for in a large measure by the above mentioned churches.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the occasion was greatly enjoyed and much benefit was received from the soul-stirring sermons of Dr. Sunday, the splendid music, the instructive lectures of the Sunday party and especially the lectures of the faculty of the seminary, the meeting of the ministers together, and by no means least, the delightful hospitality and Christian fellowship of our hosts. While no formal meeting of the ministers was held to tender thanks for benefits received, privately I was asked to express our gratitude for the kindness shown by our Christian brethren to the members of the Synod, which I now do in this public manner.

W. I. Sinnott.

Enoree Presbytery met at Lickville Church, near Pelzer, S. C., on April 3, 1923, and was opened with a sermon by Rev. R. M. Phillips, the retiring moderator. Nineteen ministers and 21 ruling elders were present.

Organization—Rev. F. B. Estes was elected moderator and Rev. R. M. Phillips, temporary clerk.

Commissions—Commissions reported the organization of a church of our faith and order at Simpsonville and the installation of Rev. J. S. Lyons, Jr., as pastor of Greenville Fourth Church and of Rev. H. W. Dubose, D.D., of Spartanburg First.

Educational Institutions—Favorable reports were made from Chicora College for Women, Thornwell Orphanage, Presbyterian College of South Carolina, and Columbia Seminary.

Local Home Missions—Increasing interest is being manifested in the work of Home Missions in Enoree Presbytery. Nearly all its churches are supplied and special attention is being paid to the weak and destitute places. Rev. J. F. Matheson, Union, S. C., is chairman of the committee and Rev. J. K. Roberts, Conestee, S. C., superintendent.

Sermon—The Presbyterian sermon was preached by Rev. J. G. Walker on "The Atonement," after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated.

Assembly Causes—Presbytery heard and considered interesting reports on Home and Foreign Missions, Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Publication, Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, Sabbath and Family Religion, Church Societies and the Narrative.

Foreign Missionary—Rev. George A. Hudson was recommended to the General Assembly's Committee as an evangelist in China.

Commissioners—The following commissioners were elected to the General Assembly, to wit: Rev. J. G. Walker, Greenville, S. C., and Rev. F. B. Estes, Lockhart, S. C., principals; and Rev. H. W. DuBose, D.D., Spartanburg, S. C., and Rev. C. G. Gunn, Winnsboro, S. C., alternate ministers; and ruling elders W. M. Stenhouse, Greenville, S. C., and J. V. Askew, Mt. Tabor, S. C., principals; and C. L. Woodside, Pelzer, S. C., and S. C. Stribling, Gaffney, S. C., Alternates.

Next meeting—Fairview Church was chosen as the place and October 30, 1923 at 7:30 p. m., as the time of the next stated meeting.

Adjourned meeting—Presbytery decided to hold an adjourned meeting in Greenville First Church on May 15, 1923 at 12 m.

Vote of Thanks—By a unanimous, rising vote Presbytery tendered its thanks to the people of Lickville Church and community for their generous hospitality. S. C.

NORTH CAROLINA

Rutherfordton—Our every member canvass for the new church year, shows a marked increase over last year, in the number of the members who signed the pledge cards.

The report from this church to Kings Mountain Presbytery shows 17 additions during the year, and present membership of 179.

Pastor's salary, current and miscellaneous expenses, amounting to $2,300, and about $1,800 for benevolent causes have been paid. R. G. H.

Hickory—This church has had a year of great encouragement. There have been 70 additions, 21 on profession of faith. The church has paid its benevolent quota and went beyond in everything, amounting to $4,371. The total gifts of the church amount to $9,742. The membership is 362, with 324 in the Sunday School. The every member canvass was made in less than two hours and the figures now show the quota subscribed for both objects, current expenses and benevolence.

Wilmington, First Church—The officers of this church have adopted a plan of organization, in the carrying out of which they confidently ask for the help of the congregation. The plan consists of the sub-division of our church territory into districts, and the assignment of an elder and a deacon to each of these districts, to be the special visitors of the church families living in that district. In their ordination vows the officers of the church assume very definite and solemn obligations toward the members of the church. In a large congregation it is almost impossible for any officer to know all the members of the church. By assigning two officers to a smaller group of the members by district, we make it possible for each officer to discharge his official obligations. It is hoped that there shall be set apart several Sunday afternoons during the year when general visitation will be undertaken. Between times the officers will endeavor to keep in close touch with the members of their respective districts. In this it is assumed that all members will cordially co-operate with the officers. The plan may thus be the means of knitting the congregation together in close ties of fellowship, and of greatly increasing our efficiency as a church.

Laurinburg—In February, Laurinburg had a feast of good things in the preaching of Dr. W. E. Hill, of Fayetteville, for ten days. The services were held in the Methodist Church, the Presbyterian and Methodist churches holding the meeting jointly.

Mr. Frank P. Allen, of Charlotte, conducted the singing. All North Carolina Presbyterians who have been privileged to hear Dr. Hill know that he is a preacher of unusual ability, one of our very finest. But perhaps few know what a treat is in store for any congregation who have the privilege of hearing him in a series of evangelistic services. Dr. Hill preaches the Gospel with a force and logical directness that is well nigh irresistible and withal, there is a charm of personality and true eloquence of style in preaching that give every single sermon a gripping power. There were a number of professions of faith. Eight joined the Presbyterian Church as a result of those services. In spite of many deaths and removals, Laurinburg Church has now reached the 400 mark in membership. We have much to be grateful for. Our senior C. E. is only two years old, but already numbers about 75. Under the presidency of Mr. C. E. Beeman and now of Mr. Floyd McLean, it is doing wonders in developing leadership among our young men and women.

One class of ladies with an average attendance of 12, the Willing Workers, contributed $927 during the past year to benevolent causes. Our Auxiliary is doing splendid work in every way, also contributed $3,700 during the past year, a portion being for the new Sunday School building.

The Building Committee has employed an architect who is drawing plans for the new Sunday School building which we hope will soon be under partial construction. Cor.

Spray—Last Sunday morning was the greatest day in the history of our church. It was communion Sunday and more members were present than any time during the year. Eight persons were received into the church. Our every member canvass was the best we ever had. An increase of over 50 per cent over last year both for current expenses and benevolence, and in addition to this the church has secured an assistant for the pastor, Miss Annabel Jones, Fletcher, N. C., a graduate of Biblical Seminary, N. Y., formerly White's Bible School, who is now on the field and is making plans to lead the church in an intensive Bible study. Miss Jones has already won the hearts of the people and the outlook for a fruitful year is bright.

Miss Annie Walker, of Graham, N. C., has been working with us on the Leaksville field since November 1st and has done a wonderful work. One man in the community made this statement, namely: "I would be willing to pay her salary rather than see her leave the field." The following is partial report of what Miss Walker has done:

1. 240 rural visits made.
 2. Organized one Christian Endeavor Society.
 3. 25 Sunday School services held.
 4. Lead 20 Christian Endeavor services.
 5. Organized a prayer meeting for the first time.
 6. Held a Sunday School together during the winter months for the first time.
 7. Prepared a Thanksgiving program.
 8. Gave a Christmas pageant.
 9. More than doubled the enrollment in two Sunday Schools.
 10. Organized a mission Sunday School.
 11. Made 28 religious talks.
 12. Got men to come to Sunday School who had never attended it before.
 13. Organized a "boys' club."
 14. Conducted a Bible story hour for children each week.
 15. Was the means of the church getting a church playground.
 16. Besides assisting in all the preaching services.
- Rev. J. W. Clegg, of Greensboro, N. C., has also been working with us since October 1st, and has done a great work, preaching two and three times every Sunday, assisting in Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and prayer meeting. Mr. Clegg for the month of March alone, made 102 visits and collected for benevolences for the past year in the Leaksville field over $275. J. S. Cook.

ALABAMA

First Presbyterian Church, Huntsville—At a congregational meeting held in this church on March 25th, after due notice had been given, the following additional officers were elected: P. W. Lowndes and A. P. Bean, elders; R. L. Adair, S. A. Cramsey, and J. C. Green, deacons.

After a month's preparation the every member canvass was made on March 18th, and the quota assigned this church has been pledged, while a few members have not been canvassed.

GEORGIA

Cartersville—The year that has just closed has been a good one with our church. Twenty-five have been received into the church; 14 by profession, and 11 by letter. Nearly $5,000 was contributed to all causes, including the local expenses of the church. The Christian Endeavor has grown and in developing the activities of our young people is doing a splendid work. Our pastor, Rev. L. C. Vass, is the Scoutmaster for the Boy Scouts. The every member canvass was made by seven teams on the 18th. A few absent ones and those that were sick yet remain to be seen. We believe that when the final results are tabulated we will have done better than we did last year.

Columbus—On April 1st an unusually interesting service was held in the First Presbyterian Church of Columbus, Ga. The weather was fine and the big auditorium of the old church was filled almost to its capacity. The Sabbath before had been observed as "Decision Day" in the Sabbath School and in response to an appeal by Dr. McConnell, our acting pastor, quite a number of the young people professed faith in Christ. Nineteen of them were received into full communion of the Church at this service. Besides these, four adults were received from other churches, one of them, a young soldier from "Fort Benning," who had been reared a Roman Catholic. A lady, whose family has prepared the bread and wine for the sacrament supper for half a century, said "There were more communicants present than there ever had been in the history of the church." The service was a most delightful one in every way.

Dr. McConnell announced a "surprise service" for the evening hour. It was held in the Sabbath School room in order that it might be informal. The object was to begin the new church year with new church life in harmony with the new life in the world of nature. The room was filled with an interested congregation, the service was in the nature of an open forum and was a real surprise to every one present. Dr. McConnell, in a brief talk, outlined work that might be done which was followed by suggestions from a number of the church officers and as a result a church on the Alabama side of the river that has been vacant a long time will be resuscitated, and supplied by one of the elders of the Presbyterian Church, and several afternoon Sabbath Schools established in different sections of the city, one of them for the negroes, one of the deacons offering to give a lot for that purpose. The Christian Endeavor Society under the leadership of Mr. T. B. Hay, a seminary student, will furnish the teachers for these schools.

A few weeks since the deacons fixed as their goal for the present year $30,000 to be divided equally between home expenses and benevolences, and provided in their budget for the expenses of the Sabbath School so that all contributions of the school might go to benevolences and the children be instructed in regard to the nature and importance of these causes.

Recently, the support of some half dozen out-stations in Africa have been undertaken by classes in the school and individuals in the church. A field of almost limitless possibilities awaits the coming of a wide awake active aggressive pastor.

There is undoubtedly a revival of religion in our old First Church, which has come about under the calm and spiritual leadership of our acting-pastor, Dr. McConnell.

TENNESSEE

First Church, Nashville—Eighty-one new members were welcomed into the church on Easter Sunday. During the past year there have been 261 accessions, 131 on confession of faith and 130 by certificate.

Tennessee Young People's Conference—Time: June 19-26. Place: Ovoca, Tenn.

An excellent program of worth and inspiration is being prepared to meet the needs of the young people.

Synod's Committee—Rev. L. R. Walker, D.D., Franklin, chairman; Rev. J. L. Sherrill, Covington; Rev. J. N. Jackson, Lynnville.

Synodical Auxiliary Committee — Mrs. Chas. S. Kinkead, Nashville, chairman; Mrs. Bruce Cochran, Columbia; Mrs. Warren Newsome, Memphis.

VIRGINIA

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.—Rev. Charles L. Goodell, D.D., of New York, author of The Price of Winning Souls, Heralds of a Passion, and other stimulating books on pastoral and personal evangelism, made one of the most helpful addresses to the students on this subject last week that it has ever been their good fortune to hear. Evangelism is Dr. Goodell's specialty, and he has kindly promised to come again and speak on the subject more fully at a later time. This was his first visit to our seminary, and he was greatly interested in the spacious site and substantial buildings of the institution, especially in Schaffler Hall, the model Sunday School building, which is a memorial of his old friend, Dr. A. F. Schaffler.

Union Theological Seminary in the course of its 113 years of life has accumulated quite an assortment of anniversaries. The next one to be celebrated will be of unusual interest. It is the 25th anniversary of the location of the seminary at Richmond, Va. A committee has been appointed to prepare for a suitable observance of this occasion and plans are being made which promise a happy time for all who may have the privilege of being in attendance. The principal speaker will be Rev. Robert F. Campbell, D.D., Asheville, N. C. The address to the Society of Missionary Inquiry will be delivered by Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D., Executive Secretary of our Foreign Mission Committee. Dr. George Summey, of New Orleans, of the Class of 1873 will preach the annual sermon to the graduating class, and the address to the graduating class on behalf of the board of Trustees will be made by Rev. J. R. Bridges D.D., of Charlotte, N. C. Other speakers will be the Governor of Virginia, Hon. E. Lee Trinkle, and six other very prominent ministers and laymen. The exercises will be spread through the four days of the commencement period May 6th to May 9th.

South Boston—This church has enjoyed a ten days' meeting in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. D. K. Walthall, D.D., of Waynesboro. A deep interest pervaded the meetings and 25 persons made profession of faith in Christ. Sixteen united with the Presbyterian Church on Sunday, April 1st.

The reports for the year are encouraging: All quotas for benevolences have been overpaid and the every member canvass this year surpasses former records.

The quotas for the ensuing year have been pledged and a number of members yet to be heard from. The heating plant in the church and Sunday School building has been installed and paid for, with a wholesome balance in the treasury to the credit of the current expense fund. At a recent meeting of the session, an increase of 20 per cent to the pastor's salary was recommended.

Assembly's Training School—The event of the student body year occurred this afternoon at the Assembly's Training School.

(Continued on page 10)

News of the Week

Lord Roberts, the noted British exponent of the League of Nations, says that some kind of association of nations is now needed, and that if we can devise a better league he will favor it.

The Democrats are hopeful of the next election of a President. They propose to make normalcy and the tariff the principal issues.

The known dead in the tornado which struck Pineville and vicinity, across the Red River from Alexandria, La., reached 14, with the arrival of a train bringing the bodies of eight persons killed at Pineville and a sawmill settlement a mile east of that town.

Clashes between French soldiers and German workmen at the Krupp plant resulted in the death of five or six of the Germans and the wounding of about 30.

Striking evidence of prosperous business conditions were furnished in earnings figures for the first quarter made public by a number of industrial corporations.

Beginning April 2d the wages of all operatives of the Highland Park Manufacturing Company, Charlotte, N. C., will be increased 10 per cent.

Charlotte, N. C., will have a Ford assembling plant that will employ 700 men whose daily pay-roll will total at least $4,200, and that will turn out 75,000 cars annually, provided the Southern class freight rate investigation known to the Interstate Commerce commission as docket 13494, results favorably for this territory. The plant would occupy eight or ten acres of ground.

The six army airplanes which left San Antonio, Tex., a month ago on a 6,000 mile flight to Porto Rico and thence to Washington, landed at Bolling field, April 4th, bringing to successful conclusion one of the most remarkable pioneer flights ever attempted by the army air service.

Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, asserts in his annual report to stockholders that the government's railroad regulatory policy, which since 1908 has allowed a return upon the railroad investment, averaging only about four per cent per annum, for this 15-year period, is not regulation, but confiscation of the investment.

The biggest crowd that has attended a Confederate Veterans' reunion in 20 years will be present in New Orleans, according to Carl Hinton, of Denver, Col., adjutant-in-chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans. Mr. Hinton warned the committee in charge of providing quarters for the visitors, that unless they revised their figures they were going to find themselves swamped.

Sixteen thousand persons took part in the Easter program at the Home Moravian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., at daybreak, engaging in a ceremony held by Moravians through more than a century and a half.

Adjustment of attorney's fees in the railroad suits, effected by Governor Morrison, leaves the state and counsel in agreement on a $15,000 fee for Judge W. P. Bynum, of Greensboro; $5,000 for former Governor Locke Craig, of Asheville, and $5,000 for Thomas D. Warren, of New Bern.

A score of persons are said to have been injured, some of them fatally, a hundred or more large buildings blown down and property damaged to the amount of $100,000 by a tornado which cut a path a half-mile wide and between seven and ten miles long through eastern Wake County, N. C., shortly before 8 o'clock p. m., according to reports.

The president of the naval committee of the French senate, Gustave de Kerguezec, in a statement to the Associated Press advocated the summoning of a further naval armament conference which would have for its object the actual scrapping of the big navies of the world. "I guarantee, in the name of the French parliament, that France will suppress her entire fleet if the other powers will do likewise."

Monsignor Constantine Butchkavitch, vicar-general of the Roman Catholic Church in Russia, condemned to death for willfully opposing the soviet government, has been executed by a firing squad.

Judge William E. Dever, running on the Democratic ticket, was elected mayor of Chicago over Arthur C. Lueder, Republican, by a plurality of 103,748, according to complete unofficial returns.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

After prayer by the vice-president, Miss Hill, the president, Miss McLaurin, read the vision of Zechariah 4, comparing the junior and senior classes to the olive trees which are not large nor beautiful but fruit-bearing, and said that whatever the graduating class and the school had accomplished had been "not by might, nor by power, but by the spirit of Jehovah."

The usual annual reports were then made by the retiring officers:

Miss Cornelia McLauren, Sumter, S. C., president; Miss Jessie Woods Hill, Fulton, Mo., vice-president; Miss Frances Glasgow, Lexington, Va., secretary; and Miss Gladys Pugh, Greensboro, N. C., treasurer.

A rising vote of thanks was given Miss Pugh and Miss Marguerite Park, Chattanooga, Tenn., for their invaluable voluntary service in keeping a book and stationery room for the convenience of the students.

In a spirit of prayer the real business of the afternoon followed: The election of officers for the year 1923-24, resulting in the choice of the following: Miss Eva Harris, Brunswick, Ga., president; Mrs. Janie Garrison, York, S. C., vice-president; Miss Margaret McElwee, Rock Hill, S. C., secretary; and Miss Elizabeth Edwards, Dallas, Tex., treasurer.

The student body's sincere appreciation of the unselfish service of the retiring officers and its welcome to the new was voiced by Miss Frances Worth, of Davidson, N. C.

One of the Students.

KENTUCKY

From the Kentucky Christian Endeavor Field—The first of our March conventions was that of the Thirtieth District held in Central Presbyterian Church, Princeton. This district comprises the six counties lying between the Tennessee River and the Trade water, and from the Ohio to the Tennessee state line. It was organized last October with but 12 societies on its roll. Since then it has organized seven new societies and found eight that had never been reported to the State union. There is no finer spirit of co-operation or enthusiasm to be found anywhere than in this youngest of the Kentucky districts. The officers elected when the district was organized were re-elected. Mr. A. L. Boatwright, of Hopkinsville, is the president, and Miss Aurine Wilkins, of the same town, secretary. The state convention May 11-12-13 will be held in this district, in Hopkinsville.

The second Sunday in March the field secretary made a visit to the society in Eddyville prison. This society has 11 committees, all of which have good reports to make. A fine program had been arranged for the coming of the field secretary, and at its close the Christian Endeavor invitation was given and eight men signed the pledge of membership. A short service was held in the annex, where three men are awaiting the electric chair.

Georgia Dunn, Field Secretary.

Heidelberg—On Sunday, March 25th, we closed a delightful series of evangelistic services at the Beechwood Seminary at Heidelberg, Ky. Professor Saucier, the principal, and his splendid corps of teachers rendered valuable aid. Two services were held daily in the school building. At the morning services all the pupils, about 100, attended in a body and gave splendid attention. The evening services were well attended by the people of the community. More than a hundred homes were visited and in practically all a short service was held consisting in reading and expounding the Word, also song and prayer. The people showed great appreciation. Thirteen united with our church, three others who made profession of faith will unite with other churches.

Beechwood Seminary is one of our Assembly's schools and has been assigned to the Christian Endeavor Society as its special work. Under the leadership of Prof. W. A. Saucier the school is doing a good work. We are in need of a church building at this place. If you want to spend some of God's money which you may chance to have, I know of no better way to spend it than by helping these good people build a place of worship.

H. L. Cockerham, Evangelist.

LOUISIANA

New Orleans—At its spring communion, last Sunday, the Third Church, Dr. George Summey, pastor, had the largest congregation it has ever had in its present building, and the session announced the names of 35 new members received, one of the largest gatherings ever enjoyed by the church.

MISSOURI

St. Joseph, First Church, Rev. Bunyan McLeod, D.D., pastor. A most delightful series of meetings came to a close on Sunday, April 1st. Dr. J. G. McAllister, of Louisville Seminary, conducted the meeting. The church was greatly blessed by his wonderful Bible exposition.

The church closed a very successful year, reporting 50 additions and a membership of 702. It contributed $30,041 for benevolences and $104,953 for current expenses, making a total for all purposes (including Sunday School building), of $134,994. Of the above amount the Woman's Auxiliary contributed $17,175, of which $6,337 was for benevolences.

The reports from every department were most gratifying, and a fine spirit of optimism prevails throughout the entire church.

MISSISSIPPI

Jackson, Central, Rev. R. E. Hough—The last service in the old building was held on the evening of March 25th. This building has been the only home of the congregation, and has been in use for about 25 years. Owing to the growth of the congregation and city a new site and building had to be secured. The new location is at West Capitol Street and Grand Avenue, one of the very choice locations of the city, and the building now nearing completion is not only handsome and substantial, but designed to care for all the organizations of the church after the latest approved plans. A manse has been erected on an adjoining lot and is occupied by the pastor's family. The congregation will hold services until the completion of their new church building in the Junior High School auditorium, which is near the new building.

Tupelo—The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian Church of Tupelo, under the leadership of Miss Katherine McAlpine, superintendent, entertained the young people of the Presbyterian League of East Mississippi Presbytery with a banquet at the church, Friday night, this being the first of a series of meetings to be held in this church the 23d, 24th, and 25th.

The Sunday School auditorium of the church was thrown open and decorated for the occasion with festoons of ivy and baskets of yellow johnquills and ferns and lighted with yellow candles in brass and crystal candlesticks. Covers were laid for 85. After the invocation and welcome by the pastor, Rev. F. R. Dudley, the toastmaster, Sam T. Watts, Jr., took charge of the meeting, and after a few appropriate remarks, introduced Carlton Godsey, president of the local society, who expressed a welcome from the young people of that organization, which was responded to by Wayne W. Gray, of Pontotoc. Then followed a short program:

What the Christian Endeavor Means:

To the Future Church—Miss Margaret McCann, Columbus.

To the Young People of the Church—Clarence Cline, Tupelo Military Institute.

Reading—Miss Frances Motlow.

Music—Miss Anna Belle Reese.

The Comrades Sunday School Class—S. B. Murray, A. & M. College.

Quartet—J. A. Thompson, William Jones, R. L. McRaney, Fred Walker, Pontotoc.

Announcements—Bertrand Downing, president East Mississippi League.

Mr. R. L. Landis, Synodical Superintendent of Young People's Work, then briefly outlined the plans for the summer conferences of the league, one to be held at Mississippi Synodical College, at Holly Springs, June 5th-12th, the other at Hattiesburg Normal College, July 10th-19th. Some of the speakers of these meetings will be Dr. Wood, of Canton; Mrs. Margaret Russell, from Richmond, Va.; Miss Nancy White, of Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. Vander Meulen, from Louisville Seminary; Dr. Sweets, and Dr. Melvin. Plans are being made for more than 200 delegates.

During the last two years there have been seven volunteers for the ministry and 20 volunteers for definite Christian work from these conferences.

Late in June delegates from the entire Southern League will meet in annual conference at Montreat. This league comprises all organized class work, Westminster Leagues, Local Christian Endeavorers, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls and all other young people's organizations under the care of the Presbyterian Church.

The League of East Mississippi Presbytery was organized last June at Chickasaw College, Pontotoc.

Cor.

WEST VIRGINIA

Bluefield—This Church has extended a hearty and unanimous call to Rev. Warner H. DuBose, of Lewisburg, W. Va., to become co-pastor of the church, and take charge of the work in South Bluefield, the most beautiful and rapidly growing residential section of the city. For almost a year now the church has been conducting Sunday School and Thursday evening prayer meeting in their new Sunday School building, and the prospects for growth are bright indeed. Mr. DuBose visited the field recently and expressed himself as pleased with the outlook, and approving the plan of work the church is following. His decision is awaited with interest by the congregation. S. W. Moore, Pastor.

PERSONAL

"The Pinnacles," the paper published in the interest of the Banner Elk School, devotes its March issue to memorials of Rev. Edgar Tufts, the beloved founder of the school. Banner Elk will begin its year's work in April with Mr. Edgar Tufts, Jr., in charge of the work, and we are confident Mr. Tufts will feel the need very keenly of the prayers and the support of the friends of the school as he enters upon his new and responsible duties.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Central Church of Washington—On communion Sunday, April 1st, six persons were received on profession, and nine by letter. Two of the six were grandchildren (one of them a namesake) of former Chancellor Robert B. Fulton, of the University of Mississippi, who for many years was an honored elder in the Presbyterian Church at Oxford, Miss.

The following persons have been elected as officers of the Christian Endeavor: President, Mr. Leland Hunt; vice-president, Miss Adele Allison; corresponding secretary, Miss Katherine Wright; recording secretary, Miss Katherine Matthews; treasurer, Mr. Arthur Van Meter; assistant treasurer, Mr. Willard Newton.

Potomac Presbytery is due to meet in this church, Tuesday night, April 17th, at 8:00 p. m. A. H.

CHILDREN

SECOND CLASS AT SUNDAY SCHOOL

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school every day. My teacher is Miss Paddison. I like her fine. I am in the second grade. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. I have two sisters; one is ten and the other is five; their names are Janie Fairley Allsbrook and Frances Howard Allsbrook. Dear Standard, please do not let my letter reach the waste basket, as I want to surprise my mother and father.

Your friend,
Della House Allsbrook.

Tarboro, N. C.

A SURPRISE LETTER

Dear Standard:

I enjoy reading your paper very much. I read the stories and letters every week. I go to school every day; I am in the fifth grade. Miss Aline Reid is my teacher. I go to Sunday School too. Rev. J. H. Henderlite is our pastor. I want to surprise my grandmother and father. I will close for fear of the waste basket.

Your friend,
Elizabeth Williams.

Gastonia, N. C.

ADVERTISING A GOOD DENTIST

Dear Standard:

I am writing you a letter. I am eight years old. I went to Mooresville, N. C., on George Washington's birthday and got four teeth filled. Mr. Voiles filled them. I was in the chair about an hour and a quarter; he stopped once and said he was going to let me rest. I don't know if he stopped to let me rest or for him to smoke. If any of you cousins want any teeth filled I advise you to go to him; he sure is a fine dentist; he works so easy too. Well, my letter is getting so long Mr. Waste Basket might get it. I will close for this time. I want to surprise my father. Hope to see my letter in your paper.

Your friend,
Johnsie Archer.

Davidson, N. C.

A VERSE A DAY

Dear Standard:

I'm a little girl ten years old. I am in the fifth grade at school. My teacher is Miss Moseley. I like her fine; she teaches us a Bible verse every morning. I have three pet kittens: Tot, Toby, and Blacky. Blacky is seven years old and soon will be eight. I go to Sunday School every day I can.

Your unknown friend,
Burtie Brice Gettys.

Shelby, N. C.

RECEIVED A BIBLE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 11 years old. I go to school every day. I have six studies. My teacher's name is Miss Lula McPherson. I like her very much. I go to Sunday School every Sunday at Philadelphia Church. My teacher's name is Mrs. Clifford Phillips. I recited the Child's Catechism and received a Testament on September 25, 1921. I also recited the Shorter Catechism and received a nice Bible on June 11, 1922. Our pastor's name is Mr. L. W. Brown. We like him fine. Our Sunday School superintendent is Mr. C. S. Harkey. I will close by asking this question: Who had fifteen years added to his life in answer to prayer?

Your unknown friend,
Jennie Ruth Freeman.

Matthews, N. C.

LIKES PASTOR AND TEACHER

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy 11 years old, and in the fourth grade. I go to Sunday School, and my teacher's name is Mr. Benton. My pastor's name is Mr. Brown. I like them both fine. I will close.

Harry Keziah.

Matthews, N. C., R. D.

PLUM JAM

Paul and Penny had been sniffing under the kitchen windows and around the doorstep all morning, for there was a delicious smell in the air. Aunt Lydia, armed with a long spoon, stirred something in a big kettle on the stove. The stuff was dark red, and it smelled like fruit, spice and hot sugar, which it was.

"Aunt Lydia is making plum jam," Penny said wisely. "It will be done in a few minutes now, and when she gets ready to put it into the jar she is going to give us some, I think."

After awhile Lydia came to the door. "Paul and Penny," she called, "I want you to do an errand for me. I promised Miss Mary Ann Bigelow some excelsior to make nests with. Bring your express wagon to the entry door, and we'll pack it full."

At any other time the children would have run with joy to get the wagon, but now they went rather slowly. How could they wait for plum jam until they had made that long trip down to Miss Mary Ann's house and back? Still there was nothing else to do.

With sober faces they trundled the little wagon round to the entry door and helped pack it tight with excelsior.

"Oh, wait a minute," Aunt Lydia said when the load was on. "I've just remembered." She leaned over and made a little hole in the excelsior; then she went into the kitchen and came back with something in her hand. "Give this to Miss Mary Ann with my compliments," she said.

To Miss Mary Ann with her compliments! Paul and Penny looked at each other in dismay. Were they not to have any plum jam after all? For here it was, dark red and shining in the crystal jar, so delicious looking that they felt sure they could eat the whole quart.

The wagon creaked dismally as they walked down the road to Miss Mary Ann's. It seemed to whine, "Plum jam, plum jam," in a sorrowful voice.

Paul and Penny were very solemn; but when they had gone halfway they forgot their woe, for a forlorn-looking little dog came out from behind a hedge and showed plainly that he wanted to make friends. Paul and Penny could not resist him.

"He is a stray dog," said Paul. "And half starved, too. Let's name him Frowsy."

"Oh!" cried tender-hearted Penny. "Do you suppose Aunt Lydia will let us keep him?"

As they neared Miss Mary Ann's house Paul began to sniff. "I smell something sour," he said.

Penny wrinkled her nose. "Just like vinegar," she answered. "It makes me want to sneeze. What can Miss Mary Ann be cooking?"

Miss Mary Ann came out to meet them as they stopped in front of the kitchen door. She held up both hands. "There!" she exclaimed. "I should have let Aunt Lydia know. Mr. Barnes gave me plenty of excelsior out of his store. You can just take the load back to her, Paul and Penny, for her own hen's nests, though I thank her just the same."

"Yes'm," said Paul and Penny. "Do you see our new dog, Miss Mary Ann?"

But just then the new dog caught sight of Miss Mary Ann's cat under a rhododendron bush. With a dash he was into the bush, and with another dash the cat was out of it. Then across the yard they went, a brown streak and a yellow.

"Dear, dear!" said Miss Mary Ann. "Call him off, children, while I run back to my kettle."

It took five whole minutes to quiet Frowsy and to soothe the feelings of the offended cat. When Paul and Penny came back to the kitchen at last, Miss Mary Ann was in the pantry. As they started off again with the wagon she put her head out of the window. "Tell your Aunt Lydia that one good turn deserves another," she called.

"One good turn deserves another," Penny repeated obediently. "Oh, look, Paul; he's just crazy to go after that cat again!"

They hurried out of the yard, and Frowsy forgot the cat and hurried after them. As they came in sight of Aunt Lydia's house the same delicious smell of hot sugar came wafting out.

"Plum jam!" cried Paul.

Penny stopped short in the lane. "Oh, Paul, we forgot to give that jar to Miss Mary Ann!"

This was dreadful. It had been bad enough not to want Miss Mary Ann to have the jam, but to forget to give it to her was worse still.

Paul began to dig into the excelsior. "There is no use in pulling the wagon all the way back," he said. "I'll carry the jam down."

Penny looked on wistfully as he lifted the jar. Then she and Paul had the surprise of their lives. The jam had changed! Instead of being a rich, dark red, it was a distinct green. What had happened to it? What could have happened in that short time?

"It has soured," Penny said in awe.

"The sun must have been too hot," said Paul, ruefully.

Frowsy was the only cheerful one of the trio when they reached the kitchen door.

"Well, well," said Aunt Lydia. "Back with a stray dog and all the excelsior? What does this mean?"

Paul explained about the excelsior. "And, Aunt Lydia," he went on, "We—we are bringing the jam back too. We—it—" He gulped and could get no further.

"We forgot to give it to Miss Mary Ann," finished Penny. "Besides," she added sadly, "it soured on the road."

"Soured?" cried Aunt Lydia. "Nonsense, Penn!" she stooped and lifted the jar. "Why, this isn't jam at all," she said. "It's green tomato pickle."

Paul and Penny could only stare.

"How did you come by green tomato pickle?" Aunt Lydia asked. "Speak up, Paul and Penny."

"We didn't come by it, Aunt Lydia," Paul said. "The jam just turned into it."

"Did Miss Mary Ann send any message?"

"No'm," said Paul. Then he added: "Oh, yes, she said: 'Tell her that one good turn preserves another.'"

"Deserves another, Paul," corrected Penny.

Miss Lydia shook with laughter. "Now I know what happened," she said. "Miss Mary Ann took out the jam when you weren't looking and put in the pickle for me."

The two children looked tremendously relieved.

"This is our new dog," they plucked up courage enough to say. "Oh, may we keep him?"

"Well, I suppose so," answered kind-hearted Aunt Lydia. "And now go wash your hands, and then come into the kitchen and get your lunch."

Paul and Penny laughed for pure joy when they sat down to the table, for Aunt Lydia was spreading slices of loaf bread with golden butter, and after the butter came thick spreadings of rich plum jam.

"But you sent the jar of jam to Miss Mary Ann," Penny said with a puzzled look.

Aunt Lydia laughed again. "And do you think, my little town-bred Penn, that I made only one jarful of jam at a time?" she said.—Ex.

THE ACORN CHAIR

Baby was sitting in her little new oak chair she had gotten for her birthday.

"When that little chair was an acorn it never, never would have dreamed that some day a little red-headed girl would sit in it," I said to her.

Baby's eyes popped wide open.

"An acorn! My chair an acorn?" She looked at me and laughed, for, you see, she thought it was a joke.

"Yes; that chair was an acorn once," I repeated, "and I'll just give you a history of that chair's life, for it has lived a long, long time, though not always as a chair, it is true.

"One day an acorn fell from an oak tree to the ground, and was buried under some leaves, and bless you, it took root!

"Then it did just like it was a seed, and it began to grow and grow and grow, till it was a tree.

"A great big oak tree it was then, not an acorn any longer, and it had taken a great many years, too, to grow to be such a tree.

"It was such a fine tree, some men admired it one day and what do you think they did?"

Baby shook her head.

"Why, they cut it down and hauled it off to a saw mill. Then this tree was cut up or sawed into lumber.

"So you see, it wasn't a tree any longer, but now it was lumber, and it was shipped to a factory.

"Then at this factory it was cut and sawed and hammered and glued, till it wasn't lumber any more, but a dear, comfortable little chair!

"It took yet another trip, and was sent to the store here, where your father bought it for you, and here you sit in it!"

"My! all the names and trips this chair had before it was a chair!" said Baby. Then she laughed and added, "And I am in an acorn!"

"Yes, and you are sitting up in a tree," I said, "and then you are sitting on some lumber, and yet all the while you are in a dear little oak chair!"—Child's Hour.

THE TWO MOONS

One spring evening young Piggy Wig decided that he would slip out of the pen and take a walk in the woods all by himself. When it began to grow dark he wished himself at home, but he kept on going, for he was full of curiosity.

He looked up through the trees and saw the moon shining. "The moon will keep me company," he said to himself.

After a while he came to a little brook; he was much interested, for he had never seen a brook before. "It's water anyhow," he thought.

As he leaned over the bank to drink he was astonished to see the moon in the water.

"Why, it's fallen out of the sky," Piggy Wig said. "I wonder how that happened!"

He leaned still farther over the bank and tried to catch the edge of the moon between his teeth and so draw it ashore. But while he was trying to save the moon it seemed to grow paler; soon it disappeared.

Piggy Wig looked up to see if it had gone back to the sky; but no, he saw nothing but a mass of dark clouds. He ran up and down the bank for a while, and at last he saw the moon in the water again.

"Poor moon," he said. "Your face is all wrinkly; you are crying, and no won-

(Continued on page 13)

Educational

Queens College—Beginning this year the alumnae association of Queens College will start the custom of letting each alumnae luncheon be the occasion for the reunion of all classes whose numerals end with the same digit as the current year, as for instance the 1923 banquet will feature reunions of the classes of 1913, 1903, 1893, etc. In 1924 the classes of 1914, 1904, etc., will hold their reunions, and so on. This arrangement will eliminate the complaint so often heard, "Well, I'd like to go to the luncheon, but I don't know whether there will be any of my old crowd there," as it will guarantee the presence of a number of the old crowd. The association would greatly appreciate it if any member of the classes in question who happen to read this notice would advise any other members of the class whose address she happens to have, of this action. In this way a live reunion can be worked up.

Flora Macdonald College—The first of the graduating recitals was given on Monday night in the college auditorium at 8:00 o'clock, when the Misses Louise Mandeville (Sylvester, Ga.), graduate in voice, and Murphy Hall (Lumberton, N. C.), certificate in piano, gave a joint recital, assisted by Miss Lula Morrison, accompanist. Both of the young ladies presented four groups of numbers, and the Misses Ruth Vardell and Maie Sinclair accompanied Miss Mandeville in the rendering of the number, "Ave Maria."

The annual Junior-Senior reception was held Monday night. The college parlors, libraries, first floor rotunda, Senior tea room, and dining hall were all decorated for the occasion in Japanese style, wisteria, cherry blossoms, chrysanthemums, and colored Japanese lanterns being used for this effect. Music was rendered throughout the evening by Misses Virginia Ashlin, pianist, and Virginia Frank, violinist. Two Japanese pantomimes, given in costume, were very effective and highly enjoyed. Refreshments were served in the college dining room, where numerous tables, each set for two couples, were placed at intervals. Visitors were present from Wilmington, Charlotte, Chapel Hill, Greensboro, Florence, (S. C.), Lumberton, Raeford, etc., also quite a number from town.

The newly elected officers for the Zetesian and Epsilon Chi Societies were installed Saturday night at the meetings of the respective societies.

Dean C. G. Vardell, Jr., and Mrs. W. B. Robeson will give a recital on May 1st in Concord, N. C., at the First Presbyterian Church, under the auspices of the Cabarrus County Alumnae Association.

The original marble slab which marked the grave of Flora Macdonald, in Kilmuir church-yard, Isle of Skye, Scotland, and presented to the college last summer upon the occasion of Dr. Vardell's visit to Scotland, has been received and placed in the college rotunda. The slab is 28 by 29 inches and contains the following inscription: "The preserver of Prince Charles Edward Stuart will be mentioned in history, and if courage and fidelity be virtues, mentioned with honor."

Basketball championship was won by the Sophomores in last week's match games, this being the second year that class has come out the winning team. The Varsity team was chosen by the Athletic Board on March 24th and is composed of the following: Misses Faires, Carr, White-side, Frank, Vardell, and Patten. These girls each received an athletic letter (the Flora Macdonald "M") for their prowess in the sport. The Varsity-Faculty game on Saturday afternoon was highly amusing as well as enjoyable; Faculty, enjoying special rules, won out by a slightly higher score.

An "open meeting" of the Charles Vardell, Jr., Music club took place in the First Presbyterian Church of Red Springs Thursday night, March 29th, with a well-prepared and very enjoyable program rendered by the various members of the club, consisting of vocal and violin solos, organ and piano selections, choruses, etc.

A students' recital, held in the college auditorium, Friday, March 16th, was participated in by the following: Misses Nelle Britt, Ga.; Sallie Scott, Va.; Linda Cook, Amanda Brown, Mary Shaw, Louise McCallum, and Pauline Edminston, North Carolina.

Dr. Isaac Yonan, former commander of the Syrian army and now representing the Near East Relief work, made an intensely appealing address Wednesday evening at the chapel service, telling of the appalling conditions existing among his people as a result of the atrocities of the Turk, and asked the student body of Flora Macdonald to reach a helping hand to those in such dire distress as he described. It was decided at a student body meeting last evening to adopt one of the orphans of the stricken area as Flora Macdonald's "little brother," and the college will be responsible for the welfare of one of these helpless ones.

Dr. Vardell spoke before the forum meeting in the Pinehurst Club House on Sunday night, the occasion being a memorial service for the late ambassador to England, Walter Page.

Davidson—The spring or Easter recess was marked at Davidson by Junior Speaking or Junior Week Celebration. The program was one of the most elaborate and ambitious ever put through by third year men. Beginning Thursday night with "movies" and on Friday staging a class flag raising, oratoricals of a high order, baseball with a visiting team. Oak Ridge, dramatics at night, and then on Saturday class football, a reception in the afternoon given to the entire student body by the fraternities, and in the evening an extravaganza or cabaret with a great variety of plot and incident, on Sunday continuing to enjoy a good program, this one of a religious order in a beautiful and appealing sermon by Rev. Dr. Richards, with a special musical program at "Y" service in the afternoon in which the visiting young ladies took part, the Junior celebration was first to last one in which the class may take a just pride.

Two representatives from each of the four literary societies spoke on Friday morning, these being Messrs. H. M. White, C. E. Hodgin, R. H. Smith, Warren Cox, A. M. McBryde, D. B. Walthall, Paul J. Story, L. D. Elkins. Appointment to a place on the commencement program fell to Messrs. Cox, Elkins, Smith, and Walthall, with Story as alternate.

The student body was privileged to hear last week an address of outstanding merit and of unusual interest by Mr. John Todd, of the widely known firm, Todd-Robinson-Todd Engineering Corporation of New York. Mr. Todd was introduced by his friend, Rev. J. C. Rowan, of the class of '04, who knew Mr. Todd while pastor at Camden, S. C., where Mr. Todd spends part of his winter. The address was filled with striking examples of men who had succeeded and of those who had failed, and why. The hour was a notable one for all the young men who were privileged to hear it.

Hampden-Sidney College—Recently four young men, students from our Union Theological Seminary, came and spent three days on the campus. They conducted several services and held numerous conferences with the students. We always look forward to the visits of the young men from the Seminary.

Dr. W. T. Thompson was with us on last Sabbath, and brought two most helpful messages directed especially to the students. Dr. Thompson is a great favorite with Hampden-Sidney men.

Mr. Abner Robertson, president of the Hampden-Sidney Y. M. C. A., is this year the president of the Southern Regional Council of Student Y. M. C. A. organizations. This council exercises jurisdiction over the college associations of 11 states.

Two fine additions will be made to the Hampden-Sidney faculty for the coming session. Prof. Charles S. Sydnor, a son of Dr. G. G. Sydnor, of Charles Town, W. Va., and an alumnus of Hampden-Sidney, will take the chair of History and Economics. For several sessions he has been doing post-graduate work at Johns-Hopkins University. He comes well equipped for his work.

Prof. D. M. Allan, another alumnus of Hampden-Sidney, will take the chair of Philosophy and Psychology. For two years he has been doing post-graduate study in philosophy and psychology at Harvard University. Professor Allan is thoroughly furnished for the work of this chair. For the last four years Dr. Massey has been teaching philosophy and psychology in connection with English Bible, but the growth of the college demands a division of the work, and from this time forward Dr. Massey will give his entire time to English Bible, and Professor Allan will have full charge of the department of Philosophy and Psychology. This will greatly strengthen both departments. Both Professors Allan and Sydnor are strong Christian characters, and Hampden-Sidney counts herself fortunate to have them in the faculty.

On March 16th the annual praise service was held in College Church. The offering amounted to well over $300.

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.—The Seminary professors do a great deal of outside preaching and lecturing in addition to their daily schedule work with their classes.

Dr. W. L. Lingle preached every afternoon last week in Dr. Cecil's church. Dr. W. T. Thompson has been preaching by request on Wednesday evenings for a week or two in Episcopal churches in the city. Dr. W. W. Moore has recently been giving Bible lectures twice a day for a week in Dr. Fraser's church, at Staunton. Dr. Edward Maek is this week giving his Stone Lectures at Princeton Seminary, dealing with the fascinating subject, "The English Versions of the Scriptures." It is a subject which he, with his opulent scholarship and rare literary taste, is exceptionally well qualified to handle, and his lectures should by all means be published.

Dr. T. C. Johnson, whose "extra" work is the acting pastorate of the Ginter Park Church, announced Sunday that there had been 70 accessions to the membership of the congregation during the year. This church was organized in the Seminary chapel in 1907 with 16 members. It has had a notable growth, the membership being now 373. It has an ideal place of worship and ideal facilities for its flourishing Sunday School in Schaffler Hall. It is a well instructed, active and liberal congregation and one in which the church at large feels peculiar interest, because in addition to the remarkable character and work of its resident membership it includes during the Seminary session the 250 students at the Seminary and the Training School, in whom the hope of our whole Church for the future so largely centers.

Presbyterial Theological Seminary of Kentucky—Sunday, March 25th, was a busy day for the Gospel team composed of the Louisville Seminary quartet, and Mr. Thos. B. Talbot, Secretary of Home Missionary work in the Kentucky mountains.

These men conducted services in the State Reformatory at Frankfort, Ky., at the invitation of the officials of the institution, at 9:00 o'clock in the morning. An audience of 1,400 men greeted them. Chaplain Hoffman presided and called upon the quartet for several selections. They responded with good old Gospel songs and conveyed their message to the men whose lives are limited by prison walls. In song they told of "The Riches of Love in Christ Jesus," and how "He Lifted Me," and gave other messages of love and life.

Mr. Talbot then spoke on the subject, "Influence," using as his text, "No Man Liveth Unto Himself." In his own unique way he brought many a ray of sunshine to the lives of these men, and with the humor, which is typical of Mr. Talbot only, he soon won his way into the confidence of his large audience. One minute he had the men breaking forth into a roar of laughter, and the next he would lead them into a more serious trend and drive home a worthwhile truth. Illustrating the possibility of influence for bad by the story of "Bob" Ingersoll's life, he showed the wonderful influence for good in the life of Dwight L. Moody, "A man who walked with God."

Immediately after this service, in company with the chaplain and the warden, the team went to the women's section. Twenty-nine women were present and it was a service long to be remembered by those who attended. The quartet sang several selections which were well received by the inmates. Mr. Talbot gave his message of cheer, using the key-word "Watch." He made a strong plea to those present to keep their hearts right with the Master. It is our prayer that some soul may have been brought by these messages to the decision and determination to lead a life for the Master.

At 11 o'clock the men attended the First Presbyterian Church and were cordially welcomed by the pastor, Rev. Pelgrin. The Seminary quartet again took part in the service and their songs were very much appreciated by those present.

After traveling 50 miles back to Louisville the team went out in the evening to hold services in the Mt. Tabor Church, a few miles from New Albany, Ind. A fine audience greeted them and an inspiring service was held. Mr. Talbot had kindly consented to go with the quartet, and so he gave his message in addition to the Gospel message in song.

All in all it was a big day and we hope a day of results for the Master's Kingdom. C. M. Hanna.

"BEING A PREACHER"

"A poor business but a great calling," is the way one who is at once a real preacher and a great preacher, justly describes the work of the Gospel ministry. With characteristic charm of style and felicity of expression, Dr. Vance exalts this high calling. He speaks of that which he knows, and voices the hopes and experiences and memories of one whose faith has been tested in the crucible of life.

His appeal is big and compelling. There is no room for that which is petty or unworthy. His loyalty to the Gospel message enables him to speak with authority and his sound judgment, his broad sympathy, and his keen imagination enable him to sense the present need and to speak helpfully to the men of today.

"Being a Preacher," the James Sprunt Lectures for 1923, which were recently delivered at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., by Rev. James I. Vance, D.D., of Nashville, Tenn., should be widely read because it has a message and an appeal to all.

Every minister and prospective minister ought to read this book for stimulation and refreshing. A wise man once advised every minister to read at least one good book on Homiletics each year. This is a good one. The young candidate who seeks to invest his life so that it will bring in the largest returns for the Kingdom will here catch a new inspiration and a new glimpse of the glory of this vocation. The man in the thick of the fight who is perhaps unconsciously dissipating his energies will be steadied and brought face to face with the eternal realities which he is called to proclaim. The older man who under heavy burdens has perhaps lost the glow of the early vision will see afresh the golden picture and feel anew the thrill of a wondrous grace.

The officers of the church and the others who sit in the pew will find the book exceedingly interesting, and the reading of it will make for a better understanding of the preacher's life and work, and, in consequence, for a more sympathetic and intelligent co-operation. The greatest calling has been worthily portrayed.

Chas. E. Diehl.

WHAT IS RIGHT WITH THE CHURCH?

Every now and then some critic tries to tell us what is wrong with the Church. A writer in the Lutheran answers with the question, "What is right" with it, and cites some things that ought to be said in answer to the question.

First—The Church has a generous heart. With all the coolness of individual church people, it is the Church and the organizations and the peoples that have come out of Church influence that are doing the mass of benevolent work of the world.

Second—The Church stands for a worthy life. Notwithstanding all that has been said about hypocrisy, the Church has furnished and still does furnish the finest examples of manhood and womanhood.

Third—The Church is the one institution which assumes the responsibility of transmitting the whole Bible to man.

Fourth—The Church presents the world's greatest character. It has been noted that in certain groups today Christ is popular, but the Church is not. That the Church holds forth a Christ better than herself as her authoritative head is more than any other institution is willing to do, however much admiration it may claim for him.

Fifth—The policy of the Church is to back every movement for the betterment of humanity. She should have co-operation, not abuse, for that effort and interest.

Sixth—The Church's philosophy at bottom is not 'other worldliness' but the wisest of every day practicality. Her teachings are the only ones that stand the hard test for men and nations in all the affairs of life.

Seventh—The Church is right in her play upon the deep things of the soul. When all other things have been tried and found to fail, and the human heart yearns for faith, for satisfaction in prayer, for repentance, for forgiveness, for godliness, for hope restored in this life, and for hope in death, it is the Church that leads to the 'peace that passeth understanding.'

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Wilhelm-Hager—At the manse of Hopewell Church, Mecklenburg County, N. C., April 1, 1923, by Rev. R. S. Burwell, Mr. F. E. Wilhelm, of Cornelius, N. C., and Miss Blanche M. Hager, of Lemley Township, Mecklenburg County.

Schmidt-Dinwiddie—At the home of the bride's parents, in New Orleans, La., March 28, 1923, by Rev. George Summey, D.D., the grandfather of the bride, Professor Alfred Schmidt, of the Warren Eastman Boys' High School, New Orleans, and Emily Dinwiddie, eldest daughter of Dr. Albert B. Dinwiddie, president of Tulane University, and Mrs. Carrie Summey Dinwiddie.

DEATHS

JOHN T. WOMBLE

John T. Womble, aged 69, for many years a beloved and honored elder in Mount Vernon Springs Presbyterian Church, passed to his reward on January 28, 1923. Mr. Womble never married. He was a successful farmer, a man of exemplary piety, and was a devoted member of his church. Having ample means, his greatest pleasure in life seemed to be found in helping those less fortunate. More than one man has been enabled to secure a home by his timely assistance. The bulk of his estate of $20,000 was left to the church and its causes, including Barium Springs Orphanage. An attentive listener, it was his custom to take notes of his pastor's sermons that he might meditate upon them later. Toward

"UNDERSTANDEST THOU?"

"Understandest thou what thou readest?" (Acts 8:30) Bible readers require "Dummelow's Bible Commentary" in order to get the best in the reading and study of "The Book of Books." "Dummelow's Bible Commentary" is authoritative, comprehensive, usable. Size 5x8x2 1-2. 1,200 entertaining, inspiring, educative pages. Price postpaid $3. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

Senior at Davidson College who will graduate in June wants summer work. Good musician. Would like to help some pastor in young people's work. References: The Faculty, Davidson College. Write care Box 293, Davidson, N. C.

TYPEWRITERS

New and Rebuilt
For Sale, Rent or Exchange
S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A.B., B.S., B.M. Degrees

Catalog on Request

Address the Registrar

the last, when he knew from the condition of his heart that he might soon be called home, he was asked by a friend if he had any dread of death. He replied that he had not the slightest, but that it seemed to him a glorious thing to pass on. We who knew and loved him feel that we shall meet him in a little while.

There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign;
Infinite day excludes the night,
And pleasures banish pain.
Jonas Barclay, Pastor.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)

der." He thought to himself: "I must get somebody to tell the wise little old man to put it back into the sky."

Though Piggy Wig had often heard of the little wise old man, he did not know exactly where his home was. Walking on and on, Piggy Wig came at last to Black Biddy's house. Black Biddy herself opened the door.

"O Black Biddy," cried Piggy Wig, "the moon has fallen into the brook and is crying. Let's ask the wise little old man to put it back."

Black Biddy agreed, and the two set off together.

On the way they stopped at Pip Rabbit's house. Pip came to the door rubbing his eyes.

"O Pip Rabbit, come with us," Black Biddy cried. "The moon has fallen into the brook; Piggy Wig saw it there. We must hurry and tell the wise little old man, so he can put it back into the sky."

Pip Rabbit flopped his long ears and wiggled his long whiskers until he was wide-awake. Then he went down the road with the others.

After a while they came to Pussy Cat Mew's house. Pip rang the bell, and Pussy Cat Mew came yawning to the door.

"Something dreadful has happened, Pussy Cat Mew," said Pip. "Piggy Wig saw the moon fall into the brook. Come with us; we are going to ask the wise little old man to put it back into the sky."

Pussy Cat Mew locked the door carefully, and away they all went.

Presently they came to Dog Rover's house. Pussy Cat Mew rapped at the door, rat-a-tat-tat, rat-a-tat-tat. Dog Rover came stumping sleepily to the door.

"O Dog Rover, come with us," cried Pussy Cat Mew. "Piggy Wig saw the moon fall into the brook and heard it crying because it can't get out. We must hurry and tell the wise little old man, so he can put it back into the sky."

Dog Rover glanced back longingly at his cozy bed, but he did not refuse to join his friends.

At last the company reached the house of the wise little old man. Dog Rover rang the bell, and the little old man answered.

"O wise little old man," cried Dog

Rover as he wagged his tail vigorously, "do please come with us. Piggy Wig with his own eyes saw the moon fall into the brook. He says it is crying and wailing down in the water because it can't get out. Do come and put it back into the sky."

The little old man put on his cap, picked up his walking-stick, scratched his chin thoughtfully, and went off with his friends.

They walked and walked. The road was dark, for the night was cloudy. But at last they reached the brook.

At first Piggy Wig could not find the moon at all; he went running up and down the bank in dismay. But at length the wind blew away some of the clouds, and the air became brighter, and all at once Piggy Wig cried, "Here it is! Here it is! Here is the moon drowning in the brook just as I said."

The wise little old man came hurrying and stared into the brook; then he straightened up and stared over his left shoulder; and then he began to laugh. He laughed and laughed until the tears rolled down his cheeks and he had to hold his sides. "O my! O my!" he gasped.

All the other animals were shocked. How could he laugh like that when the poor moon was in such a fix?

The little old man tried hard to stop laughing. At last he wheezed, "Look up over your left shoulders. O my!"

The other animals looked up over their left shoulders. "The moon's in the sky!" they cried all together.

"It generally is," said the little old man as he wiped his eyes. "But you folks were so solemn that I thought something really had happened. O my! O my!"

Then Black Biddy and Pip Rabbit and Pussy Cat Mew and Dog Rover all began to laugh. They laughed and laughed until the tears rolled down their cheeks.

"Piggy Wig was so sure about it that we believed him," they gasped. "Oh, what a joke!"

But it was no joke for poor Piggy Wig. He could not understand what had happened. Why were they all laughing? And how, oh, how could the moon be in two places at once? He stared up at the moon in the sky and then he stared down at the moon in the brook, and then he burst out crying.

"Boohoo!" he wailed. "I want to go home! I want to go back to my nice home where there's only one moon!"

All the others felt sorry for him; they stopped laughing, and the little wise old man explained to him just what had happened.

"You see, Piggy Wig," he said, "that isn't the real moon in the water, but—well, just a sort of picture of it. The real moon has been hiding behind clouds most of the evening."

Piggy Wig brightened up at that. "Maybe it was just playing a trick on me," he said.

"Sure enough," cried all the rest.

Then Blacky Biddy and Pip Rabbit and Pussy Cat Mew and Dog Rover and Piggy Wig and the wise little old man all went trotting back to their homes.

My, but Piggy Wig was glad to get to his home!

Just before he wiggled into the pen he looked up at the moon over his left shoulder and kicked up one foot and winked.

"Hey, old moon!" he said, "You fooled me once, but you won't fool me again!" —Mrs. Besse M. Stager, in The Youth's Companion.

A representative government is one that elects six men in favor of a thing and six against it and wonders why something isn't done.—Warren Chronicle.

A platitude is just an epigram you have heard before.—Atlanta Constitution.

DR. E. C. BROOKS HEADS CLOTHING DRIVE IN STATE

State School Head Asks North Carolinians to Save Human Lives by Sending In Cast-off Clothing.

A campaign for old clothing, to keep Armenian sufferers from freezing to death next winter, will be held during the last week of April in every county in North Carolina, announcement has just been made from State Headquarters of the Near East Relief in Raleigh.

Dr. E. C. Brooks, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has been appointed State clothing chairman for this drive, which will come to its climax May 1. Josephus Daniels, honorary State chairman, and Col. George H. Belamy, State chairman of the financial campaign, will actively assist Dr. Brooks.

DR. E. C. BROOKS

Most of the county chairmen who raised their quotas in the campaign just ended for money to feed these children and refugees, will handle this campaign for old clothes. It is pointed out that housewives in their spring cleaning will be more than glad to get rid of this cast-off winter clothing, and at the same time save human lives thereby.

Lack of clothing was so acute last winter that, in spite of the generosity of the American people, hundreds of women and children were found who had dragged themselves for miles suffering from acute rheumatism and pneumonia, simply for lack of clothing. Others just froze to death by the wayside. North Carolina made a generous response last year, but some of the other states failed to do their duty by humanity.

May 1st has been designated as "Bundle Day" by Dr. Brooks, and everyone in this county is asked to take or ship their cast-off winter clothing to the Near East Relief county chairman, or send it by parcel post or freight to the Near East Relief Clothing Warehouse, Raleigh, N. C.

Dr. Brooks believes that everyone should have at least one complete suit of clothing which they are about to cast-off for the winter, and points out that if sent to the Near East Relief this suit will save a human life in the battle between Christianity and Mohammedanism. Every complete suit of warm clothing—coat or sweater, trousers, heavy socks, shoes, heavy underwear, woolen shirt and cap, or the equivalent in women's clothing will save a life.

North Carolina's goal is set by Dr. Brooks as 30,000 lives.

You must be an overcomer or be overcome. "Be not overcome of evil." How can you help it? "Overcome evil with good."

Story and Incident

AMONG THE LOWLY

"Grammie, I been a good boy today?"

Hester Graham looked at the four-year-old questioner with a tender smile. She held on her lap her little granddaughter, a year younger than the boy, and was preparing her for bed.

"Yes, Harlie," she answered, "Grammie's good little man."

Harlie was already undressed. His face was clean-scrubbed, and he was clad in little striped pajamas, faded, but also clean. He balanced himself perilously on the railing of his crib.

"Maybe," he remarked cautiously, "maybe I didn't be all time good! Maybe I runned away to Mrs. Merton's house when you didn't say might I."

"Yes, Harlie did yun away!" corroborated little Maisie. "Count my toes, G'ammie! Say 'Iss little pige went to market.'"

"But you won't go again without asking Grammie, will you, dear?" said Hester. "I'm glad you told me about it. You knew you ought not to go, and you feel better now that you've told me."

"Yes, I guess so!" said Harlie. "But

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions.

Won't you be one to enroll? A postal address to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

DRAGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware

Write

JAMES ALLAN & CO.

THE JEWELERS

185 King St. Charleston, S. C.

67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices

Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references

We prepay charges on all purchases

Foote's Sketches of North Carolina

Published 1848. Second edition exact reprint of the first. Thoroughly reliable. Invaluable to those interested in early history of Presbyterian Church and older families of the State. $2.25—Postpaid.
REPRINT COMPANY, DUNN, N. C.

The Family Memorial

GOLDSMITH

The selection of the proper stone for a family memorial calls for refined taste and mature judgment.

OGLESBY GRANITE MONUMENTS stand the test of time. They are known and admired throughout the land.

MONUMENTAL ART—A beautifully illustrated booklet, showing famous memorials cut in Oglesby Granite mailed free on request. It gives many splendid examples and suggestions for the family memorial and will solve the problem of stone selection. Write for your copy today.

OGLESBY GRANITE SALES CO.,
Sales Division
Oglesby Granite Enterprises,
ELBERTON, GA.

you mus' let me go when I ask you, 'cause I do like Mrs. Merton's big boy so much. He's a nice big boy, and he made me a top today 'at'll spin! Made it out o' just a empty spool."

"Spin wound and wound!" put in Maisie. "Say 'Iss little pig'—say it, G'ammie, please!" And she held up a little bare foot, the pink "piggies" wiggling.

Long after the two babies, dearer, perhaps, than her own had been, were tucked into bed, and were sweetly sleeping, Hester sat near them, sewing. Until a late hour her lamp was burning, this night and every night, for upon her devolved the care of these little ones, all that was left to her since their mother died. The money she earned doing washings, plain sewing, and mending must pay for the small rent in a poor part of the mill village where she lived, buy fuel, and feed and clothe herself and them. Kind friends donated many a little "outgrown" garment for the children, and contributions from vegetable gardens; and these Hester accepted with pleased gratitude and no feeling of humiliation, knowing how gladly she herself would have helped them had circumstances been reversed.

By dint of careful planning, her rent money was always ready when the landlord called, and she bought only what she had money to pay for. When any one offered commiseration over her necessity to support the little ones, she answered that they were her joy in living; that life would seem a desolate thing without their love and companionship.

A little anxiety crept into Hester's thoughts as she glanced from time to time at her little grandson, his face moist and rosy in slumber. The big boy he "did like so much"—Jimmie Merton—was not altogether such a youth as she would want Harlie to admire, she feared, though Mrs. Merton, his mother, was a good neighbor and an old friend. For Jimmie had of late seemed secretive and sullen, and his companions, she judged, were questionable. Would she be able, as the years passed, to safeguard her little lad, to bring him up to the noble manhood she craved for him?

"Dear Lord, help me," she prayed. "Give me the wisdom I need."

When at last her tired eyes warned her that she must go to rest, the clock in the little kitchen was on the stroke of eleven.

Sometime in the night she woke, and lay listening—for what? She did not know. Had she been asleep? Yes, for the moon had been shining when she blew out her light, and now darkness shrouded the room. Had she heard a noise? A light breeze stirred the window curtains, but surely that had not wakened her. She could hear the soft, regular breathing of the little ones, so there could be nothing amiss with them. With heart-beat quickened, she listened intently.

Yes—that was a soft, shuffling footstep in the next room. Over the threshold it came creeping, and she could dimly see the slow movement of a dark form. Suppressing a frightened gasp, she fortified herself by inwardly repeating:

"The Lord is my defense and my deliverance. I shall not be greatly moved."

In the darkness of the night, the dim form moved to Hester's bureau. The top drawer was noiselessly opened, and its contents fumblingly examined.

With cautious slowness Hester drew from under her pillow the flash-light she always kept within reach at night, then suddenly poured its circle of light upon the intruder.

Her fears dissolved, for, through attempted disguise, she knew the figure which stood shrinking in the flash-light's glow; but horror and sorrow made her sick at heart.

"What are you doing here?" she questioned, in firm, clear voice.

There was no answer.

A grotesque figure it was, indeed, that stood half crouching in the light, immature, shambling. Pitiful, it looked to the mature woman who watched.

The vizor of the boy's cap, turned wrong side before, hung over the back of his neck, and his face was covered with a strip of black cloth, with two jagged slits for eyes. His feet were swathed in rags, to muffle his footsteps into silence.

"Why did you come here?" Hester's clear voice asked.

Still no answer, but the figure made a quick move toward the door.

"Stop!" commanded Hester. "Stop, Jimmie Merton! I want to talk to you."

A half-cry broke from the lips behind the strip of black cloth, and the lad stopped.

"How—how did you know?" he faltered, his voice scarce above a whisper.

"Poor, foolish boy," was Hester's answer, "having seen you every day of your life, almost, how could I help knowing you, even though your face was covered? Did you think I wouldn't know your size and build, your stooping shoulders, your clothes? Why, only last week, your mother sat in my kitchen and put that darker patch on the knee of your overalls!"

The boy's hand instantly—involuntarily, it seemed—covered the patch, as if to blot out a piece of incriminating evidence.

"Pull off that silly makeshift of a mask, and take off your cap," said Hester. She sat up in bed, reached for a knitted shawl that hung over the rail of Harlie's crib, and drew it around her shoulders.

Jimmie Merton took off the mask and cap, as she directed, and stood before her, a big, awkward boy of fourteen years, shifting from one swathed foot to the other, plainly frightened, yet trying to look defiant.

"Light the lamp there on that little table," directed Hester; "the matchesafe is close beside it. There, that's better," as he complied with her request. "Now we can see each other as we talk."

"I got to go," Jimmie mumbled. "Mother might miss me."

"You should have thought of that before. Sit down in that chair. How did you get in here? The doors were locked."

"I—the kitchen window"—

"Why did you come?"

"I ain't goin' to talk! I tell you I got to go home. It's bedtime."

"Yes, and long past. Oh, Jimmie, you poor child! you poor child! If you came to steal, you came to a poor place, but whatever I own, I would have gladly given it to save you from crime. Perhaps you don't realize it, but it is crime! Jimmie, I was with your mother when you were born, and I remember how she looked at you with her eyes all shining—her face was young, and plump, and pretty then—and said, 'My baby boy!' Pleased as she was, I believe she'd rather have had you die then, before her eyes, than to know you'd grow up to be a thief."

The boy turned away his face, cringing at the word, but not before Hester had seen a tear drop on the patched overalls.

"Don't tell her!" he said. "And don't you tell my father. He'd whale me—"

N. C. State College of Agriculture and Engineering SUMMER SESSION JUNE 12th to JULY 25th

Courses for teachers holding standard State Certificates, and for graduates of Standard High Schools. Courses giving College Credit for graduates of Standard High Schools. Cotton Classing courses. Catalogue upon application. Numbers limited to 1050. Apply for Reservation at once to

W. A. WITHERS, Director :: :: Raleigh, North Carolina

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach. R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship.

For catalogue and information, write—
Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President,

Clinton, S. C.

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

there wouldn't be a whole bone left in me."

"Tell me all about it, Jimmie?" pleaded Hester. "You used to sit in my lap and tell me things when you were a little fellow."

"What's the use—you'll just send me to jail!" he blurted out despairingly. "But Ted Carson would have done it anyway, so it don't make no difference."

"No, Jimmie, I sha'n't do any such thing—or to reform school, either. But if you will tell me what you wanted and why Ted Carson has anything to do about it, perhaps I can help you. Haven't I always been good to you, Jimmie?"

"Yes!" he answered, "you have, and"—He covered his face with his hands in shame.

In silence Hester waited, while a struggle went on in the boy's mind.

"Help me, Heavenly Father, to help this poor sinning child—one of Thy 'little ones,'" she prayed.

"I'll tell you!" Jimmie said. "First to last, and the whole thing. Honest, Mrs. Graham, I never meant"—The already drooping shoulders suddenly sagged lower. "You won't believe me."

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

NEW CHURCH DESIGNS
"HIGHEST EFFICIENCY YET ATTAINED"
INDORSED BY CHURCH AUTHORITIES

WRITE US YOUR NEEDS

R. H. HUNT CO. ARCHITECTS
CHATTANOOGA TENN. DALLAS TEX.

Grippe
Physicians advise keeping the bowels open as a safeguard against Grippe or Influenza.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

"Yes, Jimmie, I believe you will tell me the truth. Go on. You were saying"—

"I didn't mean no harm, not in the first place. I thought father was mean to me, making me be in early nights, like I was six years old. And when the fellows laughed at me for it, I begun climbing out over the shed roof, after the folks thought I was in bed. Ted Carson—you know his father's one of the mill bosses—he's older'n I am, an' I felt proud to have him notice me. So when he wanted me to play some gambling games with him and some others, I—I did it, an' we—oh, I'm ashamed and sick o' the whole business now! One night I couldn't hardly climb up over the shed roof to my room. I don't know what it was we drank, but it made me dizzy! Well, with one thing an' another, I owe Ted six dollars an' forty cents, an' he says he's got to have it right off, an' if I don't get it for him he'll have me arrested, an' tell my folks all the things I've done." Despair was on the young face, and the boy's fingers locked and unlocked nervously.

"Ted told me," went on the low, shamed voice, "to get the money out o' father's pocketbook; said 'twould serve him right for not giving me more to spend. I couldn't do that, an' I couldn't ask him for it, an' Ted wouldn't wait for me to try and earn it, so—so"—

"Go on, Jimmie! So you thought you could 'borrow' it from me, did you?"

Jimmie looked up quickly, wonder in his eyes.

"That's just it!" he exclaimed, unbounded relief in his tone, never dreaming, any more than had Hester when she uttered them, that the words might be sarcasm. "How did you understand? I didn't s'pose anybody would. It's—it's awful to have to tell you, but 'twas like this." He rushed on rapidly, his words jumbling together, seeming to fear his courage would fail before he finished. "It's the first of the month, an' I knew you'd have your seven dollars ready for your rent now, an' I wanted to ask you to lend it to me, but I didn't dare to, 'cause I didn't dream you would, so I—I—ah, I was a mean sneak, an' I come here to get it anyway. But I was goin' to pay you back! I thought maybe you'd think you'd lost the money somehow."

"How did you know I kept it in the top bureau drawer?"

"I heard my mother say to another woman once, 'I don't know how she manages, but Hester Graham always has money in her top bureau drawer to pay her rent and buy her food and fuel. Well, I figured that when the landlord come an' found you didn't have his money, he'd be willin' to wait 'count o' you always bein' so prompt. An' I meant to pay Ted, an' then earn the money some way an' put it back in the drawer again where you'd find it."

Hester was listening eagerly, believing what he said, as she had promised.

"Thank God, Jimmie, that you didn't really mean to steal it!" she exclaimed. "But, oh, child, think of the sin and the danger you have been in! Thank God, too, that He woke me when you came in. Jimmie, do you know what I am going to do?"

"No, I—I guess I wouldn't blame you, whatever you done."

"I am going to lend you the money you need to pay Ted Carson, and when the landlord comes tomorrow, ask him if he will wait a few days."

"No," cried Jimmie, "you can't mean that! I'd feel too mean. I'll just tell Ted to go ahead an' do whatever he's a mind to."

"You will take it," insisted Hester. "Ted would not do anything about it, I fancy, for he would not want his own misdeeds known, but I want you to pay him, and start new! Keep away from boys who tempt you to do wrong, and believe that your father is trying to do what is best for you when he wants you at home at night."

"I know it!" said the boy. "I've been a fool. I don't know as I'll ever be anything else. If I try to do anything, the fellows'll say"—

"What do you care what they say? You can take a step up higher, and set your face toward the right. It will take courage to keep going, but you must just hold up your head, straighten your shoulders, and be a man; such a man as your mother wants you to be—such a man as God meant you to be. Jimmie, do you know it is hard to bring a boy up right, in a town like this?"

"I guess it is," the boy admitted soberly.

"I was wondering, only this evening, as I sat here sewing, if I could guide my little Harlie in the right way, as he grows up." She looked at him narrowly, then added, "You can be a help to me with him, Jimmie."

"Me!" the boy exclaimed, startled. "I

BOILS Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

6% No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
W. F. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

TEACHERS WANTED
Positions to offer in grades, High School subjects; Principals and Superintendents of High Schools; also in Colleges. Correspond with us at once.
SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY
410 Wesley Memorial Bldg. Atlanta, Ga.

ART GLASS
for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs free on request
F. J. COOLEIDGE & SONS
ATLANTA, Ga.

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE
Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.
DAISY FLY KILLER at your dealer or
5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points. For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN
The Presbyterian College of South Carolina
Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds Ideal Surroundings
Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address
Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D. Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen	45	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	--- Ashley Heights	43	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	f 8:36 am	f 9:26 am	9	--- Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	s 3:05 pm	s 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	--- Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	--- Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
f 8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	s 9:53 am	19	--- Raeford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	s 7:30 am
	s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	--- Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	s 1:25 pm
	f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	26	--- Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
	s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	30	--- Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	s 12:55 pm
	f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	--- Hope Hills Jct.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
	f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	--- Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
	s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	36	--- Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	s 12:33 pm
	f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	--- Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
	f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	--- Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
	s 11:30 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville	0	s 4:45 pm	s 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class.
All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

should think you'd want to keep him away from me, Mrs. Graham!"

"I confess I have been feeling a little that way lately," said Hester, "but, Jimmie, you're going to turn over a new leaf. Harlie likes you, he says you are 'a nice boy,' and he was pleased with the top you made him today. Little boys like older boys for friends—and if you will, you can help my little Harlie to keep clear of pitfalls."

The boy's face was incredulous, but alight with hope.

"You must go now," Hester told him, "but I want you to come over some time tomorrow, and we will talk things out together. Now go to that top drawer. In the further left-hand corner is a little box. Take the seven dollars you will find there."

Jimmie's face was working strangely. "I can't take it—I can't! I'd feel too mean!" And he burst into tears, his shoulders shaking with great sobs.

"Hush," warned Hester, "you'll wake the children. You will take the money, Jimmie, and that will start our partnership together, for we've got to plan all sorts of things to help you and Harlie about traveling on life's road in the best and happiest way."

After Jimmie Merton had gone, carrying with him the few hard-earned dollars that were to play so large a part in his regeneration, Hester sank back on her pillow trembling, shedding thankful tears.

Her heart swelled with a strange joy, a heavenly compassion and love. So might the Holy One of Nazareth have felt when He touched the leper and healed his foulness, sending him forth into newness of life.

"I thank Thee, I thank Thee, for giving me this work to do," she prayed. "May Thy wisdom direct me, and as I help this poor child, so may he help my little Harlie. Thou who hast been our dwelling-place in all generations, keep us all in that safe abiding-place, and fill us with the joy of Thy salvation."—Lena B. Elingwood, in Zion's Herald.

If my faith is wrong I am bound to change it; if it is right, I am bound to propagate it.

Sparkles

An Italian who kept a fruit stand was much annoyed by possible customers who made a practice of handling the fruit and pinching it, thereby leaving it softened and often spoiled. Exasperated beyond endurance, he finally put up a sign which read: "If you must pincha da fruit—pincha de cocoanut."—Hhe Crow's Nest.

Buek—Can you give definition of an orator?

Private—Sure. He's a fellow that's always ready to lay down your life for his country.—American Legion Weekly.

They call prices prohibitive because they never take a drop.—Philadelphia North American.

Flying Start

An old yokel saw a motor car for the first time in his life. It came dashing up the main street, and disappeared in a cloud of dust. "Well," said the yokel, "the horses must ha' bin goin' a good speed when they got loose from that earriage."—Brisbane Mail.

London doctor now comes forward with the cheerless news that women are too weak for housework. Well, the men are not strong for it, either.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Second Round

"Waiter, I came in yesterday for a steak."

"Yes, sir. Will you have the same today?"

"Why I might as well if no one else is using it."—Jaek Canuck.

THE LIFE OF OUR SAVIOUR...

Papini's "Life of Christ," perhaps the most realistic, interesting and inspiring ever published. Just off the press. Price postpaid $3.50. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—
KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS
IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP.—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Five Makes of Pianos Comprise THE STIEFF LINE:

Stieff
Shaw
Bennett-Bretz
Davies & Sons
Leslie Bros.

There is a piano to fit every purse. $340.00 up. Payments surprisingly small. Write for catalogue.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

Chas. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank

Resources Over $5,000,000.00

KALTEX FIBRE FURNITURE

The Kind "With a Heart of Steel"

Every strand of fiber in the genuine Kaltex furniture is woven around a steel wire which makes it almost unbreakable. The big three-piece suit shown above—rocker, arm chair and six-foot sofa in pretty tapestry—is only $120.

We prepay freight or deliver by truck to any point in N. C. or S. C.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., APRIL 18, 1923

No. 16

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
Family Religion	1
No Unsoundness in the Foreign Field	1
The Contrast	2
The Weak Point in Prohibition	2
The Trials of a Bishop	2
CONTRIBUTED—
"Real Religion"—By Rev. C. O'N. Martindale	3
"The Southwestern Presbyterian University"—Will It Be the Same?—By Rev. W. C. Clark	3
Justice to the Small Churches	3
"We'll Call It a Day"—By Miss Anna Lou Greer	4
Montreat Young People's Conference—By Rev. Gilbert Glass, D.D.	4
Pray This Thing Through—By S. W. McGill	4
Report of Committee of Foreign Missions to the General Assembly on Orthodoxy on Foreign Field	5
The Prime Minister	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

FAMILY RELIGION

THE family is the oldest and most important institution. It has its counterpart in heaven. God is the Father and all the redeemed of all ages are His children. The gathering place of those who fall asleep in Christ is the Father's house. The heavenly condition has its beginning here. Paul speaks of the "whole family in heaven and in earth." It is one family, living in different environments, but bound together by common ties and sharing in common privileges and blessings. That part of the family, which "has crossed the flood," dwell in the Father's presence. Worship is their ceaseless employment. Not that they are forever engaged in formal acts of praise, but their service is worship. They are forever joined in loving fellowship with the Father and Son, and adoration is the breath of their being.

Can it be that any part of the family here on earth should be so destitute of religious sentiment as to make no provision for its daily expression? Religion is that which links them to heaven. It is the one thing that fits them for heaven. How unthinkable that it should find no place in the daily life.

If parents are Christians, they must wish their children to be Christians. This desire finds expression with us when we bring our children and formally consecrate them to God in baptism. We claim a place for them in the Church. We base this claim on the gracious covenant in which God says, "I will be a God to thee and to thy seed after thee." If we do not wish our children to be God's children, His loyal and loving children, this ceremony is converted into a solemn mockery. But if we do wish them to be Christians, we should keep them mindful of this fact, and how can we do this so well as by praying with and for them.

Of course, natural affection can be counted on to do much for the welfare of the children. But God does not think this can be depended on without His guidance. Hence He gives instructions to all the members of the family, to husbands and wives, to parents and children. The specific instruction to parents is to train their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Our children are God's children. He has not only told us how he wishes them trained, but has provided the means—the Bible and prayer. How can we claim His promises in behalf of our children if we fail to use the means?

The greatest enemy to godliness is worldliness. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." If we believe this should we not guard against the danger of having our children put the world with all its attractions and allurements in the first place in their thoughts and lives? Think of a Christian family in which all the talk is about worldly interests, and all the planning and efforts have that direction. The father rushes through breakfast to get to his business. If he takes time to read anything it is the morning paper. No Bible reading, no prayer, no recognition of God. How can the children ever suspect that he is chiefly concerned for their spiritual and eternal interests? Is there any religious atmosphere in a home like that? Is there any visible evidence that we should seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness?

There are difficulties in the way of family worship. So there are difficulties in the way of our getting anything that is worth the having. Difficulties in the way of our getting our daily bread. "In the sweat of thy face, thou shalt eat bread."

But we are willing to pay the price. It is a question as to how much we prize a thing as to whether we will be deterred by the difficulties.

One difficulty is timidity. Many parents are like the old Scotchman whose little boy begged him to have family prayers. "But Robbie, I can na pray." "Just tell the Lord that," said the boy, "and that will do for a beginning." We should overcome this timidity. What is there to be ashamed of? Nothing unless there is a daily life inconsistent with prayer. The thing then to be ashamed of is not the praying but the life. The devil's children are not ashamed to serve him, not ashamed to use the name of God profanely. Surely we should not be ashamed to use it reverently.

A common objection is lack of time. This is the flimsiest of all objections. We have all the time there is. It is only a question as to how we shall use it. If we are sensible, we will give it to the things which we deem most worth while. Suppose that every prayer offered at the family altar in the morning meant five dollars, would we find time for a wee bit of a prayer? Suppose that every omission meant a spell of sickness and a doctor's bill, would we not let something else wait while we gave five minutes to the morning prayer? People who have no time for morning prayer really mean that they have no time to waste on prayer. They mean that they can use the time on something else to better purpose.

How much would it mean to our homes, to all the interests of society and the state, if there were a family altar in every Christian home? Why not one in your home?

NO UNSOUNDNESS IN THE FOREIGN FIELD

For several years our Church has been concerned lest the unsound views, said to be prevalent among the workers of other churches in the foreign field, should affect the views of our own men.

Two Assemblies have authorized the Nashville Committee to make a thorough investigation of the views of the workers. Elsewhere will be found a report from the Committee, which we hope all will read.

The Kiangsu Mission has reported, and they have found that in the University where report had connected unsoundness with the faculty, there were three teachers, unsound in their views, according to our Standards, one being a foreign missionary of another church and the other two being native teachers. The other seven men of the faculty were perfectly satisfactory.

The Mid-China Mission has completed its report, but our Executive Committee has not yet received it.

The investigating committees of the two Missions met in joint session and agreed unanimously to certain recommendations that they will make jointly to the Seminary Board of Directors in June "with the view of getting such a declaration from the other co-operating missions as would remove the trouble and suspicion which hangs over the Seminary."

With regard to the National Christian Council which the North Kiangsu Mission refused to join, our Committee at Nashville will hold in abeyance the request of this Mission that no appropriation be granted for its expenses, for the present. They will wait till the Mid-China Mission reports.

It behooves us all at this time to pray for Divine guidance that all differences between our workers be adjusted, and that they abstain from all entangling alliances with any who do not recognize the inspiration of the Word, the deity of our Lord, and His atoning death, and that we do not allow any rumors to affect our interest in this great cause.

THE CONTRAST

For hundreds of years God's people have had the Bible, and have believed that its messages were God-inspired. The children were taught its truths at their mother's knee, and they stored their memories with its blessed words. The young men cleansed their ways by its lessons and sought to measure up to the standard found in its pages. The sick found comfort to endure, and looked confidently to the future set forth in this Book. Believing in this Book, men and women have met with songs of triumph the tortures of martyrdom.

In these latter years its foes have been those of its own household. Once its enemies boldly denied its truths, and openly charged that it was a fraud from lid to lid.

Now those who profess to teach it, and who have taken a solemn vow to uphold it, are trying, not to deny its truthfulness, but to trim down its lessons and to undermine its authority.

The forces denying its infallibility are growing, not only in numbers, but also in influence. Once it was the blatant blasphemer, then came the moral man, then the professing Christian, and now the teacher in the theological seminaries, presenting the strange paradox of a man employed to teach the truth of the Bible to young men who are to teach it to others, and seeking in every way to take away from the Bible its divine authority, and making it depend for its influence over men upon the force with which it appeals to his reason.

Recently we read two books, written by two men in New York, one a professor in a theological seminary and the other the president of a Bible Training School. One dealt with the origin of the New Testament, especially the Gospels, while the other discussed the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. One was Rev. E. T. Scott, D.D., Professor of Biblical Theology, Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and the other was Rev. W. W. White, D.D., President of the Biblical Seminary, New York City.

After reading the first book, we felt as if we had been breathing impure air. The Gospels had become a collection of facts, gathered by men, independent of any divine guidance, differing very little from other legends, and with the disappearance of their inspired authority. He of whom they wrote had become a creation of the imagination, and like Mary Magdalene, we cried out, "They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid Him."

When we took up Dr. White's book, it was refreshing to breathe the atmosphere of devotion under the influence of which it was written. Here is a man who not only teaches the Bible, but he teaches that it is an infallible Book. He does not place the results of man's reasoning against Paul's statement that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God," and upon the strength of what man thinks, cast overboard cherished beliefs of the ages.

It is not only sad to think that a teacher of Biblical Theology should thus reason away the book he teaches, but it becomes a tragedy when we realize that the young men whom he fills with such views are each year becoming a part of the Presbyterian ministry, and that many of them are being sent to spread the same poison among the heathen.

In view of this danger, is it any wonder that there are many among us who view with alarm any alliance or co-operation between our workers in the foreign field with those who preach another Gospel? Knowing their faithful and self-denying works, there are many over here who are jealous over our men with godly jealousy. They fear lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so their minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is Christ.

THE WEAK POINT IN PROHIBITION

That prohibition does not fully prohibit, we are all ready to confess. Yet we claim that in this respect it is no worse off than any of the commandments of the decalogue or laws of the land.

There are laws on our statute books that are broken, yet no one, for that reason, argues that they should be repealed. The prohibition law seems to have been singled out as a special object of attack, because its enforcement runs contrary to the appetite of men of every class.

There are many reasons why it does not prohibit more than it does, among which we might mention the fact that many of those employed to enforce it have never been in full sympathy with the law, or else because the breaker of the law has money enough to close the eyes of the officers whose duty it is to convict them. We do not mean that this connivance is general, because it is not, but we mean that there are some officers of the law who are not averse to being bribed. They are generally men whose salaries are too small to place them beyond the temptation to add to their income by closing their eyes to such violations of law.

The weakest point in the law of enforcement is the international law that prevents any country from exercising jurisdiction over foreign ships outside of the three-mile limit. As a result our Government seems powerless to enforce its own laws, because in defiance of law, a fleet of rum runners infest our long coast line, and land whiskey when they please. While the British Government has declined to allow police jurisdiction to extend 12 miles from our shores, as requested by our Government, it has expressed its willingness to co-operate with us in curbing liquor smuggling. Though this offer was voluntarily made, as far as we know, our Government has made no practical response to this offer. Though this offer is known, our prohibition authorities are claiming that the three-mile limit is what renders all their efforts useless.

A Florida judge like Abou Ben Adhem, may his tribe increase, has taken the bit between his

THE PASSERBY

By John Jordan Douglass

I saw Him pass amid the hurrying throng,
When noontide lay upon the trembling trees;
When, seeking rest, the thrush had lost her song
Amid the echoes of the wandering breeze.

I saw Him cool an infant's fervid brow,
And bind the wounds that hate and anger gave;
His presence sweetened like a scented bough;
He taught the world to suffer and be brave.

I saw Him cheer the sad and heal the lame,
And bid a tear-stained visage weep no more;
His sunlight gleamed like gold where'er He came,
And glory shone around the weak and poor.

O Prince of Peace, thou art among us yet,
Where grief and hunger still hold shadowed sway;
Thy gentle eyes with pitying tears are wet,
Would God, the world bid thee with it stay!

Wadesboro, N. C.

teeth, and punished one of those liquor smugglers who trusted to the three-mile limit.

We have a law, and if our Government would boldly say that this international law in this case must give place to this national, no nation would question our right.

THE TRIALS OF A BISHOP

The meaning of the term, bishop, varies according to the denomination over which he exercises authority. In the Presbyterian Church it does not differ from presbyter or elder. The parity of the ministry is one of the principles of Presbyterianism. In the Methodist Church the bishop is a superintendent with extraordinary powers. In the Romish and Episcopal Churches the office is held in direct succession from the apostles, it is claimed.

Just at present, the office in the Episcopal Churches of New York is not a soft one, though the backbone of one bishop seems softer than a bishop's backbone should be. New York seems to be a breeding place for all kinds of ecclesiastical revolts and heresies. This is not surprising when we remember that Union Seminary, once a Presbyterian training school for our ministry, has cut loose from the Presbyterian Church and has now in its faculty representatives of other denominations.

The Baptists in the person of Dr. Fosdick have their problem. The Presbyterians in the session and membership of the church employing Dr. Fosdick, have theirs, and the Episcopalians in the person of Dr. Grant have theirs. Their bishop uttered no uncertain sound when Dr. Grant's views were first made public, but he has since shown an unwillingness to grapple with the problem there. Now while he is trying to find some way out of the difficulty and escaping a heresy trial, another one of his charges is wandering off. Rev. Wm. Norman Guthrie, who is in charge of St. Mark's-in-the-Bowrie, New York City, recently had a service in honor of Amen-Ra, the sun god of Egypt. A space was curtained off and a dim religious light cast a soft glow over a kneeling audience while Brother Guthrie chanted a service to "Amen-Ra, Lord of the thrones of the earth,"

(Continued on page 10)

Devotional

HOW FAR WE MAY TRUST THE LORD

For many years I have been a professor of the religion of Jesus Christ, and had truly believed that in His hands might safely be trusted all our soul's interest. To Him I had prayed, and unto Him rendered thanks. When sickness came and the dark shadow of death approached those who were dearest to me, my faith ventured another step, and I prayed not only for the salvation of the child, but that it might be restored to health; beyond this I never used to go. That wide field of temporalities, where the Christian finds his trials, his defeats or his conquests, to me was practically beyond the care of the Almighty. The every-day business of life I dared to transact without praying to Him for success in it or asking Him to guide me. Thus I passed through several years of extensive business transactions with almost unvaried success, and was esteemed rich.

But the terrible financial crises which fell so suddenly and with crushing force upon every part of the country, brought embarrassment for me also. My property was not lost; my securities had not depreciated; and my name had not been dishonored; yet I owed money; not in large sums; only such sums as I ordinarily could have obtained in an hour. The times were very hard, my neighbors were begging for loans; still I felt confident that I could obtain what I needed from any of several quarters. The time of payment came nearer, and with it the pressure grew harder; and, more than all came that universal distrust which made men doubt even their own flesh and blood. I applied to one after another for temporary loans and went away disappointed. Then I attempted to sell property, which at another time would have found ready sale and at its full value; but now it would not sell at any price. The money must be paid; a business reputation, which had cost years of labor and many sacrifices, was at stake, and to preserve it I was willing to give all the wealth that I possessed. But no one of my friends could or would help, and none would buy.

I had but a day left, and went home at night with a sad heart. My dear wife was as devoted and faithful as ever, and when I saw the sweet joy that my coming gave her, I thanked God for the gift of such a wife. My only son came with beaming eyes to tell me of his success in his school examination, which had that day taken place. His joy was contagious, my heart was softened, and I thanked God for that child. Then little Ellen came, the youngest, so fair, so innocent and happy, and climbed up into my lap; in her little hand my heart became a harp of sweetest melody. Again I thanked God for His infinite and constant love. And with the prayer a blessed thought came into my mind: "You are discouraged; you have applied to friends for relief; you have used all the means in your power to obtain it, and have been everywhere disappointed. Why not go to your Father in heaven?"

This seemed to be whispered not into my ear, but into my heart. It seemed to me to be a suggestion from above, and I followed it. That night I prayed that the Lord would relieve me from my embarrassment; and no one who has not experienced the same feeling can tell what burden that prayer removed or how much courage it gave me. "The Lord is my Shepherd," came constantly into my head, and up to my lips for utterance. A sweet and refreshing night's sleep was enjoyed, and in the morning I went to my office—without money, it is true, but with a faith and hope that felt no place for fear, and patiently awaited for the fulfillment of its desire. Before that day had gone, a gentleman to whom I had before applied and who refused me assistance, called and asked me what amount of money I required. I named the sum; and he sat down and made out his check for that amount. That day my debts were paid, my property was saved, my business reputation was preserved—and, best of all, I that day learned to trust the Lord in temporal matters as well as in spiritual concerns.—Selected.

"REAL RELIGION"

By Rev. C. O'N. Martindale

The title is derived from a fresh book of revival sermons delivered on the twentieth visit of Gipsy Smith, lay evangelist, of the Wesleyan Methodist Church (England). Here are treated—The Agony and Joy of Salvation, the Faith that Saves, the Marks of the New Birth, the Spirit-filled Life, the Model Christian, the Model Church, the Real Kingdom, Seed-time and Harvest, Strength and Beauty, Jesus and the People, Christ in the Home, Paul Teaching in the Inquiry Room, Bearing and Sharing. Here one gets a pure taste of "Real Religion" sure enough, the messages driving home the Bigness of Being a Christian, which one can never be without effort and joy; which one cannot be without a faith that convinces of sin and leads to repentance and reforms life. If you are a Christian, you know it, the marks of the new birth being unmistakable. (I John 3:3, 7; 4:4; 5:4, 5; 3:14 and 4:7; 5:18; 4:12, 13; Gal. 4:5, 6, 7; Rom. 8:14-16).

The great need of all Christians today is the Holy Spirit; He makes the saint; He makes people fearless of the devil; He enables us so to witness for Christ as to woo and win others into the Kingdom.

To be like Christ is to be a common-sense Christian. That is Christianity; and wherever it is, it seeks to get rid of sin and is devoted to righteousness. This is the model for the individual.

In the model church people love to pray, are united, show generosity, are characterized by grace, and have spiritual power. The officers are good, choice, Spirit-filled men—knowing everyone in the district around the church, attending its services, watchers and hunters for souls, supporters of the minister, with lives open toward heaven, putting first things first, and resisting the worldly drift. This church is arrestive, outstanding, convincing, converting in its power. It is not the bricks and mortar and cement and stone-work which constitute the church; it is the living, redeemed, sanctified people who have fellowship with their Lord. You are the church.

In the Kingdom of Christ, represented by the church, we get rightness of life, reconciliation with God, and spiritual joy. We reap in kind and amount as we sow, not only in this but succeeding generations, and in the great beyond.

To be a Christian is the noblest, the strongest, the most useful, the most beautiful thing in the world. The man who goes forth to live life as it ought to be lived, who is linked to eternal things, who walks with God in daily companionship, will grow in grace, in strength, and in beauty until the angels envy his character. People who think it weak to be a Christian are badly mistaken, as they readily find out on a trial of it.

You are not a Christian if you are a church member only. You are not a Christian unless you are Christ's man or woman or boy or girl; unless you have been born again; unless sin in your life has been given up. You have no right to that holy title of "Christian" until you are Christ's. Then you will not need a label, when you are born again everybody will know it. A "nominal" Christian literally means one who is "unreal."

For your own and others' sakes you ought to be a Christian, one that not only bears the name, but has the Spirit of Christ. And a Christian concerns himself with the sinful and lost, the sick and the suffering, the tried and troubled, the blind, lame, and halt, to bring them to Christ.

Above every place in the world be a Christian in the home, remembering it is far easier for the children to be Christian when the parents are Christians. The worst thing of all in the home is a Christless woman. Here the opportunity to mold and fashion the child in the likeness of Christ is greatest; and carelessness here will lead the child to become one of the worst of beings. A real home is where righteousness, love, peace, joy, God is; Christ is its corner-stone.

What is the sin that has kept you from Christ all these years? God gave His Son to make it possible for you to be saved. Your faith is a mockery if you still cherish your sin. Your faith is false if it does not mean absolute surrender. Whatever divides you from Christ you must positively give up before Christ will become what He wants to in your life. When you submit to the unalterable conditions, and surrender your whole heart to the keeping of Jesus Christ, you will have your own experience of real religion, and not another's. If you want Christ as your Lord and Saviour, empty your hands, your heart, of everything that is evil, and take Him as yours, the world's Greatest Lover.

If we are to share with Christ we must bear with Christ. It means far more to be a Christian than the average professor seems to realize. It means to become a partaker of the Divine nature, of the Divine sufferings, and of the Divine glory—no more, and no less. To multitudes of people it means a very little thing to be a Christian. It does not cost anything to be one, the standard is so lowered, one comes in and slips out of the church so easily. Our religion is a sickly, sentimental, sanctimoniousness, instead of being vital, life-giving, a terror to evil-doers, its presence a rebuke, its authority commanding, resisting, and holding in reverence and holy awe. We have lost much by our inconsistency.

Contributed

The name Christian does not belong to you until you have inbreathed, taken in, absorbed, conformed to, become a part of, the Divine nature—so that you remind men of Christ, and they feel that with you they are living with Christ's man, Christ's woman, Christ's boy, Christ's girl. They must recognize Christ in you the hope of this life and the hope of glory. For the Christian to live is Christ, i. e., is for Christ to live in and manifest Himself through you. How are we revealing Christ to the world about us? If we partake of His nature, we will share in His sufferings as well as in His glory to come. Religion is no cheap affair. It costs something to be a Christian. Christ is worthy of the best.

Reidville, S. C.

"THE SOUTHWESTERN PRESBYTERIAN UNIVERSITY"—WILL IT BE THE SAME?

By Rev. W. C. Clark

Our people have responded liberally to the appeal to give to the cause of Christian education. It will gratify many if they can be fully assured that the ideals of the past are to be preserved in the future—in the new institution. Recall some of these ideals as embodied in the charter secured by Dr. Palmer and his associates. The S. W. P. U. was to be a Christian institution in which instructors should be Christian men and in which the Bible should be taught as a part of the regular course of study.

It was to be a Presbyterian school, that is it was to be owned and directed by Presbyterians, but on the broad platform of liberty of conscience and non-interference with private convictions.

It was to be a university in which, ultimately, the various professional branches should be taught, and in which were taught scientific, academic and theological branches, and the hope was held out that law and medicine would be added.

It was to be an institution in which the students pursuing theological branches should be closely associated with the students engaged in the study of other branches.

It was to be an institution under the influence of the ideals held by our own Church.

Will the new school be such an institution? That of course will depend largely upon the character of the men who manage it. There are some indications which do not point very much in this direction. For example, it is not to be called Christian, nor Presbyterian, nor university, and the emphasis is not laid upon instruction in the Word of God, and the divinity school has been "suspended," notwithstanding the wonderful demonstration given, in its graduates, of the beneficial results from the association of ministerial students with those taking other branches.

Then too there have been some indications that the ideals of our church are to be disregarded or overlooked.

The trustees have gone out of the large circle of graduates from this and kindred institutions, to find a president, and there has been a disposition to link up with an institution not fully under our own control. It must be seen, from these statements, which cannot be denied, that the prospects are not very encouraging for the preservation of those principles and ideals which were so earnestly sought in the establishment of the Southwestern Presbyterian University.

Now is the time for the directors of this institution to determine, and let the public know, just what they mean shall be the character of the school to be established at Memphis. Unless it is to be decidedly Christian, it will not be worth much. Unless it be Presbyterian it cannot claim the loyalty of Presbyterians. Unless it is to be more than an ordinary college it will fall short of realizing the hope entertained by its founders. Unless the several classes of students be trained, in close association with each other, they will miss the mutual benefit which they could render each other. And unless the men who direct and teach them prize the principles which we hold dear, the young men who go there are not likely to be taught to prize and maintain these.

These are grounds for fearing that the far-reaching effects of any radical departure from the plan of the wise men of the past may prove hurtful to the peace and usefulness of the Church we love.

"A word to the wise should be sufficient."

JUSTICE TO THE SMALL CHURCHES

In the Standard recently appeared an article under the title of "Some One to Blame." Speaking of some figures that were displayed on the walls at Synod, two paragraphs run as follows:

"It was shown that last year there were 155 churches in which there were no conversions; 109 churches in which there were no Sunday School scholars; 245 churches that had no evangelistic services; 159 churches that decreased in membership; 132 that decreased in the number of children in the Sunday Schools; 272 in which there were no family altars.

"This is a sad picture of the Church of God, one that makes men wonder why such churches do not dissolve. They are not doing the work that the Lord committed to them, and therefore they are really doing harm."

It is said that statistics do not lie; but sometimes statistics, as tabulated, do make false impressions, which is bad for the cause of Christ. It might be supposed that the churches that have no family altars, that have had no "evangelistic" services; that have no Sunday Schools, that have reported no 'conversions,' that have added no members, and that have decreased in membership, are in the main the same. But such a surmise would be far from the facts. There are churches that have family altars in a large per cent of their families, that run Sunday Schools the best way they can, or know how, that have held real 'evangelistic' services from Sunday to Sunday, and yet for a year, or more, have reported no 'conversions' or additions on profession of faith, but have actually decreased in membership. Who is to blame?

The second paragraph quoted, the beginning, is an unjust and unwarranted conclusion, that reflects uncharitably on many faithful and God-serving small churches. For example, let us take a concrete case. The church in mind we will call Philadelphia. Though that is not its real name, it is a real church, and the facts that are about to be given are real facts. In this church of Philadelphia, at least 60 per cent of the families have family altars. At least 70 per cent of its male members will lead in public prayer. It maintains a fairly alive Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society. During the year it tried to hold a protracted meeting, but the rain, snow and freezing weather forbade. Twice a month it holds services that are usually "evangelistic," according to the Scriptural meaning of that word; and yet during the year it counted no "converts" or additions on profession of faith, but has actually decreased in membership.

What is the explanation? First, in churches, as well as in wheat fields, there is sowing time, and there is harvest time. This church has had its sowing time, and then its harvest time in which all that could reasonably be expected, considering that there are other denominations which have claims, were gathered in, so that Philadelphia has had to sow again, and wait for another harvest to grow.

But, second, during the last three or four years this church, being in a rural district, has had to dismiss at least one-fourth of its members to other churches, who have moved to various towns. Among the members it dismissed were half of its elders and deacons, besides others of its most enterprising and useful people. In the families dismissed were children coming on, some of whom have joined the churches in the towns to which they had moved, but who, had they not moved away, would doubtless have been counted as additions to the Church of Philadelphia. More recently, a large family of this church, with children, some of whom were members, and some not quite old enough to unite with the church, have moved to a community in another state, where there was neither a church nor a Sunday School. But being brought up to consider the church the most vital interest of life, they have organized a Sunday School and secured a minister to preach for them occasionally; and out of this beginning we may hope that another church will grow.

In short, the Church of Philadelphia has had to give up much of its harvest, for which it had labored for years, to other churches; and with the part it has lost, has gone the best of its seed corn; and this church is only one among many. There are many others that could tell a like story; and with the continual drift of so many of the most enterprising country people to the towns, as the years come and go, we may expect this story to be repeated over and over again. But "not doing the work that the Lord committed to them?" Shame on the accusation! They are doing some of the best and most important work upon earth. They are continually feeding many of the town churches with fresh life and vigor of truest Christian manhood and womanhood; and it is nothing short of a reproach that their service to mankind and trying ordeals in the kingdom of Christ, are not better understood and more truly appreciated.

Many of us like to do hard and necessary work; but we are all more or less human; and under such criticisms as statistical tables often call down upon small and struggling churches, when the fruits of their labors are added to other churches, instead of to themselves, we are liable to become restless, and seek fields where, instead of losing credit for what we have done, we too can get some credit for what others have done.

Is it not time to quit whining, or harping with a doleful twang on small churches that sometimes report no "conversions" during a whole year? It is not honoring the Lord's work. It is not doing justice to those who are patiently laboring in such fields. It is not encouraging them to stick to their work, or enticing others to take it up; and it is hardly manifesting the Spirit of the Master who praised, not the great and showy churches—Ephesus, Thyatira and Laodicea, but their poor little struggling churches of Smyrna and Philadelphia. If we wish to carry on our mission work most successfully, we must learn to labor, and sometimes to wait, trusting in the Lord, "who giveth the increase."

A Country Parson.

"WE'LL CALL IT A DAY"

An Interesting Letter from Soonchun, Chosen, Asia
By Miss Anna Lou Greer

I wonder if you, in the homeland, ever think of just the part each of us as individuals play in the work as a whole, out here. I am going to ask you to spend the day with me as I think this is the best way for you to know of our medical work. Since I was up twice during the night, I wished this morning at 6:00 o'clock that I might sleep a bit longer, but today, as other days, will be a busy one, so I must be about my work promptly. My first trip to the hospital is at 6:00 a. m. Breakfast at 7:00 or 7:30, and then I am ready for the day's work.

First we will go over the charts with the night nurses and ask about all the patients, then a trip to the cellar, where lamps are filled, rice given out—I know almost to the grain how much is needed—soap and lye for the day's wash. Then we stop in the clothes room where the nurses are waiting for the day's supply and for any special orders. The old woman is ready to settle for the marketing of yesterday and get money for today. I'll give her an extra yen as this is the day we give the charity patients meat, a great event in the week for them. While at prayers an emergency operation comes in; we are in the operating room about an hour; mother and baby doing nicely, but if they had not come to us both would have answered the death call. We will go to the clinic now as I want you to see a baby that comes for treatment; the baby is a month old and a regular job; I would guess she weighs not more than three pounds.

I hear the postman's whistle, and as I had letters a few days ago telling me three packages were on their way to me, I am anxious to see what he has. He looks like Santa Claus with so many interesting looking packages. There are sponges and bandages for the hospital from Charlotte, N. C. Our women made supplies to win the war against Germany; how appropriate to help in the same way to win the war against Satan! There are pecans from Texas, and the nicest "package of trash" from a lady in Montgomery, Ala., containing the very things needful for preparation for annual meeting. How could we get along without our friends to assist and cheer us on the way!

Now come back to the clinic; this little boy has not walked for months on account of a bad burn on his leg; we will have to operate, but think of the mother's joy when she returns after a few weeks and finds her only son walking again.

It is lunch time; one of the nurses calls me to see an old lady who has just come in and is suffering very much. Dr. Chung has gone to lunch so I examined her throat, as she says she has swallowed a fish-bone; I can just touch it with the tip of my finger; I can get it with curved forceps; but look, it is not a fish-bone, but a needle she swallowed while eating rice. She looks very much relieved. Now to finish lunch and then to the operating room for about two hours.

The secretary is now ready to report on the day's work. There were more than 30 in clinic and six new patients admitted to the hospital, four of them charity. People ask us why we take in so many charity cases when we find it so hard to keep within our budget, but how can we turn away those who need treatment most. It is 5:00 o'clock and we will have time to do a little visiting. Let's call on the wives of our elders; they always seem glad to see us.

Supper is at 6:30 and then usually a meeting of some kind. I cannot go this evening as we have three morphine fiends as patients and they require a great deal of my attention. While looking after them I will write a letter and read a bit, things I do not have time for during the day.

I make my last visits at the hospital at 10 o'clock and then say good-night to my nurses.

Do not think that this is an unusual day's work; it is not, and I have not mentioned several interruptions, such as settling a fuss between a Japanese and a Korean patient, a call from the deacons to help care for a poor old man and his wife, comforting a little boy after hurting his sore finger when changing the dressing.

It is a busy life, but a great joy comes to our hearts when we realize Christ's message was for us when He said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto me."

(Any letter with five cents postage, or postcard with two cents postage, addressed to Miss Anna L. Greer, Soonchun, Chosen, Asia, will reach her in due course of mail.)

MONTREAT YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE

June 19-28, 1923

By Gilbert Glass, D.D., General Superintendent

The program of the Montreat Young People's Conference will present certain interesting and outstanding features for its seventh session, June 19-28.

Careful attention should be given to these changes by churches that are planning for delegations to Synodical Conferences and to Montreat.

Age Limit—The age limit to Montreat has been advanced to 18 through 26 instead of 16 through 24 as in previous years. This has been done in view of the rapid development of the Synodical Conferences and their adequate programs for younger groups. The program has been planned to meet the needs of those who are ready for advanced leadership courses. Adult leaders of young people will also find interesting and helpful study courses and conferences. Note carefully the leadership courses listed below.

Group conferences for consideration of life and service problems, methods in organization of young people's work, and the challenge of the Church and Kingdom of God to the dedication of life and resources. These group discussions will supersede the open parliament or general discussion period of former conferences. Practically every member of the conference will thus be given an opportunity to discuss these most vital matters in a constructive way.

The morning service of devotion will be conducted by Dr. W. Taliasterro Thompson, Professor of Religious Education in Union Seminary, Richmond, Va. Dr. Thompson's special qualifications for this and other conference leadership are well known.

Conference Bible study will be conducted by Dr. M. Ryerson Turnbull, of the Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers. Dr. Turnbull is particularly well fitted for stirring enthusiasm of young people for the study of God's Word and also for guiding them into the use of best methods.

Text-Book Courses—All delegates will be required to enroll in one of the following text-book classes:

Foreign Mission Course: "The White Fields of Japan." Teacher, J. Woodrow Hassell.

Home Mission Course: "The Child and America's Future." Teacher, Miss Nancy F. White.

Sunday School Course: "Story Telling." Teacher, Miss Elizabeth McE. Shields.

Sunday School Course: "Organized Class and Department for Young People." Teacher, Miss Anna Branch Binford.

Christian Endeavor Course: "Expert Endeavor." Teacher, Dr. R. F. Kirkpatrick.

Christian Education Course: "Education for Successful Living." Teacher, Mrs. R. B. Willis.

"Religious Education, Its Aims and Organization," Dr. W. T. Thompson.

"Methods of Missionary Education," Mr. E. D. Grant.

"Supervised Recreation," Mr. C. R. Warthen.

The clan organizations which will constitute a most important feature of the conference will be under the direction of the following adult leaders: Rev. J. J. Murray, Dr. E. E. Gammon, Rev. R. W. Miles, Rev. S. K. Phillips, Miss Julia Lake Skinner, Miss Clarabel Williams, Miss Irene Hudson, Miss Janie McGaughey, Miss Gertrude W. White, Mrs. B. H. Bunch.

Rev. Wesley Baker will be director of the conference program, and will give particular attention to the development of clan programs of activity.

Recreation: The afternoon programs of recreation will be, as usual, a most attractive and helpful part of the conference. In addition to the tournaments and competitive games, such as basketball, volleyball, baseball, tennis, there will be opportunities for mountain climbing, swimming, and recreational and social diversion. Please note, however, that no outside trips will be allowed during the conference period, so do not plan for a trip to Mt. Mitchell or other nearby points during the conference.

The Vesper services which have always been of deep and permanent devotional value in these conferences, will be under the direction of Dr. H. H. Sweets.

Inspirational Addresses—The following inspirational speakers have been secured for the evening addresses: Dr. James I. Vance, Dr. William Kay Dobyns, Dr. F. T. McFaden, Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

Conference music will be under the direction of Mr. C. T. Carr, an experienced musical director, and popular superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's Work in the Synod of North Carolina. Mr. Carr will be assisted by a good piano accompanist, yet to be announced.

All delegates should bring clothing and equipment for outdoor life and athletic activities. The Montreat regulations with regard to bathing suits will be rigorously enforced. Life guards will be on hand during the afternoon hours set apart for swimming and the lake cannot be used by delegates except during these hours.

Young people should bring their kodaks and get interesting pictures of conference scenes and groupings. These will be valuable as souvenirs of the conference and for entrance in the contest for the best conference picture.

Information about railroad rates and hotel reservations will be furnished on application for registration at the Richmond office. Hotel rates for the conference will be $2.00 a day for room without bath, and $3.50 a day for room with bath on the basis of two in a room.

All delegates should arrive at Black Mountain, N. C., the Montreat railroad station, not later than the afternoon of June 19th.

Do not seek to make room reservations direct with the Montreat management. Reservations will be made in the order that registrations with conference fee of $3.00 for each delegate are received at the Richmond office.

Conference programs giving detailed information and suggestions will be sent to churches, and we will gladly furnish additional quantities on request.

The matter of sending well selected delegations of young people to summer conferences is of very great importance in the development of work in the local church. Church leaders should give thoughtful attention to the selecting of delegations, and the programs of Synodical and Montreat Conferences should be carefully studied with a view to meeting the needs of young people of different ages and training. Representation from different churches to the Montreat Young People's Conferences will be limited as follows:

Three delegates for the first 100 in church membership, and one additional delegate for each additional 100 in membership or fraction thereof.

Do not delay in making your plans for summer conferences. Registrations for the Montreat Young People's Conference should be made on or before June 1st. Send names of delegates with checks for conference fee, $3.00 for each delegate, to Gilbert Glass, Chairman, Box 1176, Richmond, Va.

PRAY THIS THING THROUGH

By S. W. McGill

In 1920 the Presbyterians of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Tennessee, subscribed a total of $1,400,000 for the establishment of a Christian college for the Mississippi Valley, at Memphis, Tenn. All of the amount subscribed is past due. The amount paid totals $653,000. The amount past due and unpaid is $747,000.

A splendid site has been secured. Contracts have been let and buildings are being erected. There is not money enough in hand to pay for the contracts that have already been let. There would be money enough for a good beginning provided Presbyterians pay what they promised. It is generally understood that when this is done another million dollars must be provided to establish Southwestern on a substantial basis.

Our sister denominations are experiencing great difficulty in collecting what their people promised in their big campaigns. It has become necessary for our sister denominations to begin their campaigns all over again to secure the payment of what was pledged. This will involve great additional expense. Shall Presbyterians be compelled to resort to another campaign to get what we promised we would give? We hope not.

The original campaign in 1920 was pushed to a successful completion through the leadership of the pastors together with the prayers of pastors and people. If we are to complete what our Church has so splendidly begun we must pray this thing through. It is already being suggested that other denominations may establish colleges in Memphis even before we Presbyterians complete our project. Memphis is the most strategic location in the Southwest for a Christian college.

Without further ado we Presbyterians ought to pay what we have so splendidly promised. We undertook the task in prayer. We must now Pray and Pay.

Louisville, Ky.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF FOREIGN MISSIONS TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY ON ORTHODOXY ON THE FOREIGN FIELD

The Executive Committee called the attention of the last Assembly to rumors which had become a matter of public discussion concerning the prevalence of unsound teaching on the mission field, and to the letter that had been addressed by this committee to all our Missions asking them to make a thorough investigation and report on this subject in order that we might report the facts as found to the General Assembly. As the investigation was incomplete at the time of the last Assembly, the committee was instructed to carry it to completion as soon as possible and report to this Assembly.

In the committee's letter to the Missions sent before the meeting of the Assembly they were asked to report as to the existence of unsound teaching, either in the preaching of missionaries or in the mission schools, especially those in which we were co-operating with other Missions.

All our Missions have complied with this request of the committee except those of East and North Brazil. It may be said, however, that there are no union schools in the bounds of those Missions, and that no rumor has ever reached the committee casting suspicion upon the doctrinal position of any of their members.

Campinas Theological Seminary is within the bounds of our West Brazil Mission. In this seminary we co-operate with the Mission of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., and with the Brazilian Presbyterian Church. The Mission reports that there is no unsound teaching in that institution nor in the preaching of any of the members of the Mission.

The Korean Mission reports that a special committee had been appointed and was conducting an investigation, but the report of that committee has not yet been received.

Our African Mission seems to have misunderstood our request and responded by sending a list of questions to which satisfactory answers should be required of all future appointees to that field.

Recognizing that it possesses no ecclesiastical functions, the Executive Committee does not feel authorized to set up other doctrinal tests for appointment than those contained in the Assembly's Manual, one of which is that every appointed missionary for every field is required to subscribe to the doctrinal standards of our Church. We deem it worth while to say, however, that the list of questions proposed by the African Mission indicates a strong type of conservative orthodoxy as characteristic of that Mission.

The Japan Mission reports that it finds nothing for criticism or justifying anxiety in regard to the teaching or preaching of any of its members.

The Mexico Mission reports that in the Union Theological Seminary at Mexico City, Clarke's Theology had been used in teaching a class of three English-speaking students, but that its use was immediately abandoned when objected to by our Mission, and Strong's Theology, a thoroughly conservative work, was substituted in its place.

The vogue of Clarke's Theology in Mission institutions, which seems to have been quite extensive, is perhaps due to the fact that it is written in a style clear and simple and easily understood by those having only an imperfect knowledge of English, and that it has been difficult to find another theological work in English comprehensive enough to be used as a text-book of which this is true to the same extent.

China is the field in which rumors of unsound teaching have attained the greatest notoriety and it was chiefly in reference to that field that discussion was had on this subject in the last Assembly. For this reason in carrying out the instructions of the Assembly a special letter, dated June 6th, adopted at the first meeting of the committee following the meeting of the Assembly, was addressed to our China Missions, requesting them to make a thorough investigation and to make reports based on full Mission action.

Both Missions have complied with this request. The investigating committee of the North Kiangsu Mission was appointed at the regular meeting of the Mission held in August, and its report which was submitted to the Mission and adopted by circular letter has been received. This report implicates no member of the Mission in any charge of unsound teaching. It does raise a question concerning the views expressed by three members of the teaching staff of Nanking Seminary, one foreign member representing a Mission of another denomination and two members representing the Native Church, as affecting their qualifications for the chairs they occupy. The doctrinal position of the other seven members of the faculty on the field was found to be satisfactory.

The Mid-China Mission also appointed an investigating committee at its regular meeting held in October. We are informed by the chairman of the North Kiangsu Committee, and in other letters from the field, that the report of the Mid-China Committee has been completed, but at this date, April 10th, when our annual report to the Assembly must be adopted and go to the press, the official report of this action of the Mid-China Mission has not been received.

We are also informed by the chairman of the North Kiangsu Committee that since making out their separate reports the investigating committees of the two Missions have met in joint session and have come to a unanimous agreement as to certain recommendations they would jointly make to the seminary board of directors at its meeting in June, "with the view of getting such a declaration from the other co-operating Missions as would remove the trouble and suspicion which hangs over the seminary."

We confidently expect that the separate report of the Mid-China Mission and also the report of the joint meeting of the two Mission committees will be received in time to be laid before the Assembly in a supplemental report.

In presenting the matter to the Assembly the committee would state that in its judgment the careful and faithful manner in which the Missions have dealt with this matter up to the present time entitles them to our fullest confidence that in their further dealing with it they can be trusted to safeguard in every possible way the interests of evangelical truth, and to have full regard to the historic position of our Church on such questions as the Deity of Christ and His vicarious atonement, the inspiration and authority of the Holy Scripture, and their inerrancy as our rule of faith and practice, and as to the spiritual mission of our Church.

And inasmuch as it will not be possible for the Missions to present to the board of directors of the seminary the proposals on which they have agreed until the regular meeting of the board in June, we would recommend that the matter be left in the hands of the Missions to complete the task in which they have been engaged, and to make full report to the next Assembly through the Executive Committee of their findings and of the results of their labors.

The National Christian Council

On its adjournment the National Christian Conference, held at Shanghai in the month of May, set up a National Christian Council composed of representatives to be appointed by the Missions and the Native Churches, the purpose of which is to furnish an organ of communication in connection with matters of interdenominational character, and to facilitate arrangements for co-operative work. The Chinese Recorder for February reports that up to that date 23 Missions had voted approval of the organization and program of the Council. Our North Kiangsu Mission voted adversely on the question of membership in the Council and issued a statement that has been published, giving the reasons for its adverse vote, among which were the expensiveness of the Council and the lack of what were deemed to be adequate safeguards for ensuring doctrinal soundness in its membership. Our Mid-China Mission voted to postpone for a year the decision of the question of approval or disapproval. Meanwhile the Executive Committee has deemed it proper to comply with the request of the North Kiangsu Mission to make no appropriation for the expense of the Council and to take no action on the subject pending final action on their relation to the Council by both Missions on the field.

THE PRIME MINISTER

Helensburgh Reminiscences of Mr. A. Bonar Law

Named after the saintly Dr. Andrew Bonar, the son of a New Brunswick Presbyterian minister, brought up by kinsfolk whose name was honored in the Free Church of Scotland, Mr. Bonar Law's traditions are essentially Presbyterian. The Premier's mother was one of the old Kidston family, closely associated with Helensburgh West United Free Church. Indeed, it was largely owing to the generosity of the Kidstons of Ferniegair that the church and manse, as well as the beautiful glebe on which they stand, were saved for the Free Church at the time of the Disruption.

Standing in front of the manse, looking at the church tower over the tall trees, Dr. Rainy once exclaimed, "Leitch, you can sing with the Psalmist, 'Unto me happily the lines in pleasant places fall!'" These pleasant places are remembered by the Premier and his family, not only for their beauty, but for their "gorgeous hide-and-seek trees."

A Conservative in politics, Mr. Bonar Law has always been a Liberal in theology. In the eighties, when the "Robertson Smith Case" distracted the Free Church, William Leitch, minister then of the Tron Church, Glasgow, and "champion of William Robertson Smith," was called to Helensburgh West Free Church.

There he found a keen young business man who made time to help his minister by teaching in Sunday School and debating in his church's literary society. When his relatives of the stern old school expressed the fear that "the new minister might be in with the organ and out with the Bible," this young optimist tranquilly remarked, "I think not." The optimist was Andrew Bonar Law.

How he delighted in the remark of an old friend in the congregation, who had vehemently protested against the introduction of the organ, "Bonar, I am afraid I am going to like that thing!"

Not that Mr. Bonar Law advocated instrumental music in the days when an organ was considered a tremendous church innovation. By no means. He did not object to it; on the other hand, he was serenely content with a distinctly "old-fashioned" church service. He is not musical, and says so frankly. Indeed, he has been known to "nod" at the opera, and he decidedly prefers a game of chess to a concert. But the sermon Mr. Bonar Law gives his attention to must be abreast of the times. His preacher must live in the world as well as in the study. If a sermon in Helensburgh was worthy of absorption, Mr. Bonar Law absorbed it. "You know your Bible," once said another famous man to him. "I know my old minister's Bible better," was the characteristic reply.

One sermon the Premier actually took unto himself was on the text, "He gave them their request, but sent leanness into their soul." Many years after hearing that sermon, Mr. Bonar Law, in his Rectorial Address in Glasgow, made effective use of it. He was talking on "Success," a subject on which he had lectured to his church's Guild in Helensburgh, and he pointed out that a man must narrow his interests and occupations to gain his end. He has not been afraid to wear himself out in the service of the State—and now he is Prime Minister.

In those far-off Clydeside days, his minister was wont to look on "clever young Law" as one of his most eloquent hearers. His faith in him was indeed unbounded. The story goes that, on Mr. and Mrs. Bonar Law's wedding day, Dr. Leitch prophesied that "the bridegroom would be Prime Minister yet!" The older Helensburgh folk like to talk of that wedding today, of how lovely the fair, golden-haired bride looked, amid the masses of daffodil decorations, behind which the choir sang their very best—for was not the bride one of their former members? The bonnie bride was Miss Annie Robley, eldest daughter of Mr. Harrington Robley, then one of the leading elders in Helensburgh West United Free Church.

The friendship between minister and rising young Member of Parliament deepened as the years wore on, and when, in the course of Mr. Bonar Law's parliamentary career, it became impossible for Helensburgh to be more than a place for holidaying, he came to his old friend with the request that his name might be allowed to remain on the communion roll of the church. "Let it go, Doctor, when you go," he added. So it remained for over 30 years. Little did they dream that in after years Jim and Charlie Law would ask that their names be put on that other sacred roll of the church in which they were baptized—the Roll of Honor of the Great War.

The "little Bonar Laws" always took an intense interest in the children's sermon and hymn at church service, often lying in wait at the manse gate for the minister, just to ask, "What would it be next Sunday?" Their favorite hymn was always "The World Looks Very Beautiful and Full of Joy to Me." Just a few short years later, Charlie and Jim made the supreme sacrifice, and in the black days of the war the congregation sang in their old church, "for remembrance," their old favorite, closing with the verse:

"Not even death can harm me,
When death I meet one day,
In Heaven I'll follow Jesus
All the way."

Surely that was written for the boy soldier!

Mr. Bonar Law's Helensburgh church pew was a full one. The beautiful mother, the four boys, then the rosy-cheeked little girl, so eager always to be beside her father. It is easy to recognize in her Lady Sykes, the Premier's eldest daughter, who has indeed been "beside her father" since her mother's death in 1907. Miss Katherine Law was the baby then; now she is the hostess of 10 Downing Street.

The Guild of Helensburgh West United Free Church is singularly fortunate in having had as its chief lecturer the Prime Minister. A lecture such as Mr. Bonar Law once gave on "Thomas Carlyle" proved him to be a litterateur as well as a politician. Another, "The House of Commons as I see it," showed that in those early Westminster days the onlooker was missing no points in the game—the game of which he is now made captain. A keen Liberal remarked about that lecture, that the member for Blackfriars seemed to be trying to get at the best side of the honorable members of the House. Yes, Mr.

(Continued on page 10)

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Enoree Presbyterian will meet at Fountain Inn Tuesday, April 24th, at 3:30, continuing in session through the 27th.

A Letter from Mexico—(A few weeks ago Foreign Mission Day was observed in the Second Church, Charlotte, in a most interesting way, the ladies of the First Church uniting with those of the Second in presenting a unique and instructive program. "Sunshine in Aztec Land" was used as the basis, which of course means Mexico was the subject. Mrs. Jeff R. Palmer, who was then the secretary of Foreign Missions in the Second Church Auxiliary, sent Mr. Ross, the author of the book, a copy of the program. In return she received the following appreciative letter from Mr. Ross.—Ed.)

La Mision Presbiteriana En Mexico,
Aportodo Postal 117 Bis.,
Mexico, D. F., Mexico, March 28, 1923.

My dear Mrs. Palmer: I thank you with all my heart for your letter enclosing the program for your Foreign Mission Day. It makes us very happy to see the interest in Mexico this year. With a few more services and days spent studying like the day you spent in Charlotte soon the whole Church will be informed and aroused.

I wish you would thank all who made the day possible. We always expect the best from a Presbyterian center like Charlotte—you have not disappointed us.

We can never thank North Carolina enough for sending us so many missionaries. We have more from North Carolina than from any other state. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, who are from Steele Creek Church, are unusually fine missionaries.

You perhaps know that we have recently had a visit from Mrs. Winsborough; I hope you may hear her give a report of her trip.

With very best wishes, I am, Sincerely yours,
(Signed) W. A. Ross.

Charleston Presbyterian Auxiliary held its 17th annual meeting at Crockettville, Hampton, S. C., P. O., April 3-4. The full program was interesting, and meetings were well attended. There were several inspirational addresses, as well as important business, the principal item of the latter being the adoption of a new constitution. Reports of the president, cause secretaries, and standing committees testified to the growth of the work. Five "Institutes" were held during the year, 12 Bible classes, 24 prayer bands, 32 mission study classes, 19 volunteers for life service reported.

At the first session, Tuesday morning, a memorial service was held in memory of our beloved Synodical president and chairman of the woman's advisory committee of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, a woman of beautiful Christian character and rare spirit. At the afternoon session Miss Ruth B. See gave an impressive address on missions in Brazil, where she has been working 23 years. On Wednesday the community worker, Sarah Gray, gave an account of work done among colored people on the coast islands. Mr. Fleming, from Thornwell, made a touching appeal for the proposed Baby Cottage at the orphanage. Mrs. Willis gave a stirring talk on Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, stressing the Student Loan Fund which aids boys and girls to attend college. Rev. and Mrs. A. P. Toomer conducted instructive devotionals. The hostess Auxiliary furnished special music and hospitable entertainment, which was appreciated. The next meeting is to be held at Knox Church, Charleston.

Following officers were elected: President, Miss Amey N. Allen, Charleston; vice-president, Mrs. J. G. Murray, Edisto Island; recording secretary, Mrs. Parker E. Connor, Edisto Island; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Alex. Sprunt, Jr., Charleston; treasurer, Mrs. O. H. Bissell, Charleston; historian, Mrs. S. G. Stoney, Charleston; cause secretaries: spiritual life, Mrs. Henry Rankin, Walterboro; foreign missions, Mrs. L. A. Beckman, McClellanville; Assembly's home missions, Mrs. A. P. Toomer, Beauford; local home missions, Miss T. C. Hutson, McPhersonville; C. E. and M. R., Mrs. D. P. Junkin, McClellanville; S. S. Ext. and Y. P., Mrs. G. L. Mikell, Edisto; literature, Mrs. E. J. Tuton, Hampton; orphanage, Mrs. J. P. Clarke, Charleston.

Marion S. Connor, Sec.

Bethel Presbyterian—We are indebted to the President of the Auxiliary of Bethel Presbytery, S. C., for a copy of the program of the annual meeting of the Auxiliary which is being held this week in Oakland Avenue Church, Rock Hill. We hope to give our readers later a full account of this meeting, which we are sure from the program will be decidedly worth-while.—Ed.

Albemarle Presbyterian—The 25th annual session of Albemarle Presbytery was held at Farmville on April 4, 5, and 6. Farmville is a beautiful town and a perfect setting for a church meeting, but it is the charm of her people that will linger in our memories. The theme was "Stewardship," and after hearing Mr. Spillman plead for "God's Tithe" and a systematic giving to all of the "causes" as apporportioned by our General Assembly, we felt that hereafter hysterical giving would be lessened if not done away with, and that we would have a strong realization of our obligation to those dependent on our gifts.

The keynote of the meeting was Spirituality, and in everything that was said and done our president faithfully held up this side as the mainspring of our works, the source of all Christian graces.

Being our 25th anniversary, Mrs. B. R. Lacy gave us a resume of our work from the first missionary union to our present Auxiliary with its members over a thousand strong.

Bible study was emphasized and all of us felt that it was a great privilege to have four studies under Miss Clarabel Williams, of Wilmington.

Mrs. Woodrow Hassell, of Japan, showed us Japan's door wide open for the Gospel with not enough missionaries to begin to reach the whole people. While we listened our hearts burned within us to go over and possess the land for Christ.

To know Dr. Homer McMillan is to know Assembly's Home Missions, to hear him is to hear Assembly's Home Missions. A debt of gratitude we owe him for his wonderful presentation of this cause.

Close attention was given every speaker, but the most acute interest was aroused when we were told of our Synodical Orphanage at Barium, with its 300 children, the Mexican at our back door, the negro at our elbow, and the neglected missions in Albemarle Presbytery.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"To include Barium in our budget and to ask each circle to give one dollar ($1.00) per month more than they are now giving for its support. To help establish a girls' school in Mexico. To promote all good feeling possible between the white people and negroes and to ask that a colored delegate be sent from each locality in the Presbytery to the conference to be held for them in Charlotte on June 7th, and to advocate supporting a home missionary in Albemarle where there are now only seven for this urgent need."

The Young People's Work is one that carries gravest responsibility and gives deepest concern, and we feel sure no one could have handled the subject better than did Mrs. Bunch. Earnestly will we pray for others, but it is, "O Lord, save my child or I die."

Being brought face to face with the "Failure of the Church" to measure up to her responsibility and opportunity, many resolved to go home and do better.

All Auxiliaries seemed full of enthusiasm and well organized; more tithers are evident; more family altars and prayer bands are being established; more study books are being used and all are determined to inform themselves on the various activities of the Church. Very few Auxiliaries failed to send a delegate and it was quite gratifying to note the increase.

Mrs. S. N. Harrell, Mrs. H. L. Hicks, and Mrs. Goode Cheatham were elected delegates to the Synodical.

The next meeting of Albemarle Presbytery will be held in Raleigh. Mrs. Goode Cheatham, Sec. Treas. Albemarle Presbytery.

Attention! Presidents and Treasurers of Local Auxiliaries!—Please remember that the offering at the "Mexican Fiesta" for the Mexican Girls' School is to be sent by the local treasurer to your Presbytery Treasurer. It will then be credited to the quota expected from your Presbytery. Please note this carefully.

The Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church, U. S.
256-59 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

The Mexican Fiesta!—Celebrate May with a fine meeting! Order free programs for this most interesting occasion (seven copies sufficient for any Auxiliary). Attractive invitation cards in Mexican flag colors, 50 cents per hundred! Order now before the supply is exhausted. Do It Now!

The Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church, U. S.
256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

What About the Girls!—(What a Mexican girl thinks about the need of a school for the girls of her race).

All the readers of the Survey know we have had a school for Mexican boys at Kingsville for the last 10 years and there boys have been doing splendid work. But what about the girls?

Through all these years they have seemingly been forgotten and neglected just as the Mexican women have been for centuries past. We wonder why? Is the Mexican boy any better than the Mexican girl? Why don't we give the girl the same opportunity? Is the Mexican girl not worth our time and money?

I have the opportunity of watching dozens and dozens of these girls every day, going to some unworthy place to work and thus increase the family income, and as I watch them week by week and month by month, year in and year out, without a chance in this world to better their condition, a pang of sadness comes to my heart, and I ask myself this question: Why don't people help the Mexican girls? And when I say these girls have no chance of improving their situation, I do not mean that these bright, intelligent girls are not able to, but I mean that their mental capacities are not, and never have been developed, and therefore they cannot use them to a great extent. Then, when these girls marry, their situation does not improve, for they are not likely to marry educated men, and therefore their misery increases; they then lead lives of slavery.

If an uneducated girl marries an educated man he soon discovers her ignorance and her lack of high ideals of life. He soon finds out that she does not know what her rights are, and finally loses all respect for her.

But we must not only educate the girls for their own personal good. We must remember the boys at our Christian school. Soon the time will come for those boys to choose life partners, and not one in a hundred will remain single. Now if the girls are not educated along with the boys, what can we expect our boys to do? There are only two alternatives. They will either marry the non-Christian educated girl, or they will marry the Christian non-educated girl. Whichever one they choose will prove disastrous.

We must, should, and will, God helping us, give these girls an opportunity which they will promptly grasp, to make their future brighter and happier by giving them a Christian school where their bodies, minds and souls will be so developed as to render untold service to the Mexican race.

San Antonio, Tex.

(Quoted from the Missionary Survey)

Some Careless Comments About the Mecklenburg Presbyterian Meeting—Women who have been going to Presbyterian meetings for years agree that the nineteenth meeting of Mecklenburg Presbytery, held at Philadelphia Church, April 11 to 13, 1923, was one of the very best the Presbytery has ever had, considered from the viewpoints of program, attendance, hospitality, interest and the spirit of the meeting.

Mrs. J. M. Black, of the hostess church, gave a most heartfelt and earnest "welcome" to the visitors, and made each of them feel that they were expected, and had been especially planned for. It was most fitting that the "response" to the welcome should be given by Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick, now of the First Church, Charlotte, formerly a member of Philadelphia Church. Her father, Rev. Wm. McDonald, was pastor of this church for 25 years, and in the course of her most interesting speech Mrs. Kirkpatrick told that the Woman's Missionary Society of Philadelphia Church was organized the day she was born.

Everybody knows that Philadelphia was "one of the seven churches" that was here before the Revolutionary War, but the only visible sign of even approaching old age to be noticed about Mrs. Kirkpatrick was her purple hat, the wearing of purple being a very frank acknowledgment that one is no longer young.

Mr. J. B. Spillman's enlightening talk on the making of a "budget"—that bugaboo of woman's work; Dr. Frazer's two Bible studies; Miss Margaret Rankin's talk on colored work, and a practical demonstration of a proper Auxiliary meeting, given by the ladies of the Second Church, Charlotte, were outstanding features of Thursday's program.

Friday morning was largely given to the hearing of reports from the Auxiliaries of all the churches. In spite of opinions to the contrary, this is one of the most interesting and important things on the program, certainly the most interesting to the trembling delegate who has come, perhaps, all the way from Monroe just to give this report. Time was when they were so scared that you could not hear what they were saying three seats away, but now each delegate marches up to the front, faces the congregation and speaks right out; and they are an inspiration to those who hear. Some years ago a woman's club Presbyterian woman, attending a Presbyterian meeting, said the reports were the dullest things she ever heard. It may be just as true now as it was when Paul wrote his first letter to the Corinthians, that "not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble," not many bright, not many interesting, are called to do the Lord's work—they are presumably in the woman's club, writing papers on "When and Why to Swat a Fly"—and the marvel still is, what God does, with what He chooses to do it with. It's wonderful how "Mrs. Sloop," of Crossnore, can attract the men. They bobbed up from everywhere around when she was announced as the after-dinner speaker, and she almost talked the clothes off their backs.

After the election of officers, it was found that the vice-presidents "had it," there being six women elected to this office. Keeping a finger on the president's pulse being about all that's expected of a vice-president, and with five other people to help you, it must be a particularly nice job to be on, in this Presbytery. If things go well, you could claim a generous share of the glory; if they go badly, you could assume your most detached air, prove an alibi, and blame it all on the other five.

Mrs. Baird has made a fine president, unselfish and untiring in her efforts, and because of her work and loving interest, many new societies have been brought into the Presbytery Auxiliary. She is a most gracious and encouraging presiding officer.

Rev. L. W. Brown, present pastor of Philadelphia Church, and Mrs. Brown were most attentive and cordial to all visitors, and the supply of good things prepared by the ladies of Philadelphia for the delectation of the "inner woman" seemed unlimited. To some present this brought up the rather painful contrast between city and country hospitality. Given, a woman's meeting in the city, the country women are invited, probably, "two from each congregation," and they are given a sandwich and a cup of tea. Given, a woman's meeting in the country, the city women go out in carload lots—the country women would be awfully disappointed if they didn't—and you'd think, to see us at lunch time, that "little Billy Goodin' had come, A-eatin'! an' a-eatin'! an' a-eatin'!" And it takes just as much dough and fruit and energy to make a pie in the country as it does in town!

The next meeting of the Presbytery will be held in Caldwell Memorial Church, and everybody is expecting great things under the able leadership of the new president, Mrs. J. B. Spillman. Pattie Morris Cole.

Mecklenburg Presbytery—The following officers were elected at the recent meeting: President, Mrs. J. B. Spillman, Charlotte; first vice-president, Mrs. J. M. Boyce, Polkton; second vice-president, Mrs. C. W. Tillet, Charlotte; third vice-president, Mrs. Hargett, Monroe; fourth vice-president, Mrs. W. E. Milton, Albemarle; fifth vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Stork, Mt. Gilead; sixth vice-president, Mrs. Marshall French, Rockingham; recording secretary, Mrs. M. E. Peabody, Charlotte, R. F. D. No. 8; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Connor Reid, Charlotte, R. F. D.; historian, Mrs. J. W. Zimmerman, Charlotte; foreign missions, Mrs. L. W. Brown, Matthews, R. F. D.; S. S. extension, Mrs. Lucy T. Russell, Laurinburg; Assembly's home missions, Mrs. C. H. May, Morven; secretary of literature, Mrs. E. V. Irvin, Charlotte; S. P. & C., Mrs. C. C. Anderson; orphanage, Mrs. W. B. Hodge, Charlotte; spiritual resources, Mrs. Arthur Craig; treasurer, _____.

The winning of a Gold Star by an Auxiliary is a real achievement and is not accomplished without labor and sacrifice. To the societies of Thomasboro and Seversville go the honor of having reached this golden distinction during the past year.

Under the direction of Miss Annie Wilson the ladies of the First Church, Charlotte, put on a model circle meeting. The ladies of the Second Church, Miss Margaret Rankin, presiding, put on a model Auxiliary meeting. These meetings were very instructive, especially to the societies that have come into the Presbytery during the year.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The advance leaflet of the Young People's Conference of the South Carolina Synod shows some fine things in store for those who go to Clinton, June 11-17. The daily schedule shows that plenty of instruction, inspiration, entertainment, and recreation have been planned for the time between "rising bell" at 6:30 a. m. and "lights out" at 10 p. m.

The conference leaders and speakers include Rev. R. F. Kirkpatrick, D.D., vice-chairman of the All-South C. E. Extension Committee and pastor of the First Church of Anderson; Rev. W. T. Thompson, D.D., of Union Seminary; Rev. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., of Columbia; Rev. Melton Clark, D.D., of Columbia Seminary; Miss Earline Cox, home missionary, Bennettsville; Mr. S. Wilkes Dendy, former South Carolina C. E. field secretary, now at Columbia Seminary; Rev. J. P. Marion, D.D., Sumter; and a number of other fine leaders.

Dr. Marion, chairman of the committee in charge of the conference, advises that not less than 200 delegates are expected. Board for the week will be provided for $10, and the registration fee will be $2.

In January we had an article giving the four points in the contest for the "Merit Cup" to be given at Davidson in June to the Presbytery in the Synod of North Carolina, and the society in the Presbytery, that makes the best record in the contest, 25 per cent being awarded for each of the four points attained. This contest is promoted by the Young People's League, which is designed as a federation of all existing young people's societies and not as a local organization in the individual church, as some have supposed. We have had articles on three of the points: Home and Foreign Mission Study, and contributions to the College Fund for Barium and for our Sunday School Missionary. The fourth point is a 10 per cent increase in membership. The societies should not overlook this important phase of their activity and of the contest.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

APRIL 22, 1923

MOSES: LIBERATOR AND LAW-GIVER

Lesson: Exodus 2:1-19:25; 32:1-33:23; Duet. 34:1-8. (A Survey of Moses' Life.) Printed Text: Exodus 14:10, 13-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord."—Exodus 14:13.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

10 And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were sore afraid: and the children of Israel cried out unto the LORD.

13 And Moses said unto the people, Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will shew to you to day: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 The LORD shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace.

15 And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward:

16 But lift thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it; and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And I, behold, I will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 And the angel of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

20 And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was a cloud of darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

22 And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 33. What is justification?
A. Justification is an act of God's free grace, wherein He pardoneth all our sins, and accepteth us as righteous in His sight, only for the righteousness of Christ, imputed to us, and received by faith alone.

When Israel, departing from Egypt, reached the Red Sea, they were pursued by Pharaoh and the Egyptian forces. The tremendous judgments, especially the destruction of the first-born in every Egyptian house, visited upon Pharaoh and his people made them willing, nay even glad to let them go. But they recovered from the terror inspired by their calamities and determined to follow Israel, to bring them again into bondage. They needed again to be reminded that they were struggling against not an enslaved nation, but Jehovah of Hosts. "Who hath hardened himself against God and hath prospered." "Woe to him that striveth with his Maker!" Israel was seemingly in a desperate condition. Behind them was a powerful and enraged enemy, on either side mountains, and in front a storm-tossed sea. We will contemplate Israel Crossing the Red Sea; The Agencies Employed; The Protection Given; The Results Secured.

I. Israel Crossing the Red Sea

It was physically impossible without Divine aid. But the nation crossing the sea, with Jehovah's help, was a very different thing. It was not only possible, but assured. It is thus with many other things in the kingdom of nature and in the kingdom of grace. Man by his unaided efforts can not make a crop or bring forth food out of the earth. But human beings, with Divine help from the sunshine, the showers and in other ways can secure abundant harvests. Man alone can not convert a sinner into a saint nor evangelize the world, but mankind, with Divine co-operation, can not only transform the individual but cause "the knowledge of God to cover the world as the waters cover the face of the deep." As in Israel's crossing the Red Sea, it demands faith, prayer, human effort, under Divine direction, and the co-operation of Jehovah.

II. Mark the Agencies Employed

They were human and Divine. Moses and Israel "cry unto the Lord." They earnestly pray and trust in Him. Moses, in token of his faith, is required to stretch forth his rod over the sea. That rod was a symbol of Jehovah's power and had previously been used to work wonders in Egypt. God had promised them a dry path through the sea, but He commands them to "go forward." They must walk to the sea and through the sea. Jehovah sends "a strong east wind" to pile up the waters and make a dry path. But the path is made step by step as they advance. The crossing is done by night, and the Lord gives them light from the cloudy pillar. The Lord gives them what they can't supply: ability to trust, light from heaven, and power to remove obstacles, but He requires of them faith in Him, obedience to His commands and the use of their faculties.

III. The Protection Given

Israel at the Red Sea not only encounters obstacles to progress, but are endangered by a mighty and vindictive enemy. The forces of Egypt are combined for their conquest or destruction. But they have the assured protection of the Almighty. The cloudy pillar which usually went before them giving shade by day and light by night, changed its position and went behind them, producing darkness for the Egyptians and giving light to Israel. The light enabled them to keep their prepared path, and the darkness shielded them from the enemy. The Lord also piled the waters like a wall on either side of them and prevented any side attack. Jehovah also fought against the Egyptians. He glanced at them from the cloudy pillar, and that glance, like an electric bolt, paralyzed and terrified them. He also took off their chariot wheels, hindered their flight, and commanded Moses again to stretch forth his rod that the waters might return and swallow them up. The sea, restored to its strength, drowned the whole host; not one of them escaped.

IV. The Results Secured

Grand effects were produced by the overthrow of Pharaoh and his haughty army. Israel was completely delivered from the sea and from their pursuing foes. Their faith in Jehovah and His servant Moses was also confirmed at the very outset of their wilderness pilgrimage. The pride of Pharaoh and Egypt was humbled. The resistless power of Jehovah was illustrated and the folly of contending with Him was demonstrated. By this judgment the nations of the earth have been taught for centuries that God's people are secure, under all circumstances, and that no nation, however powerful, can oppress Jehovah's hosts with impunity. God is glorified in protecting and providing for Israel, and in judgments visited upon the haughty enemies of himself and people. But alas, Israel and the world are slow to learn and remember these important lessons.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

MY DENOMINATION

- M., April 23—An Evangelistic Force: Rom. 1:8-16.
- T., April 24—Citizenship: Tit. 3:1-8.
- W., April 25—For Truth and Principle: I Tim. 1:18-20.
- T., April 26—Missions: Rom. 1:1-7; 3:28-31.
- F., April 27—Benevolence: Matt. 25:34-45.
- S., April 28—Faithfulness: Luke 16:10-13.

Sun., Apr. 29—Topic: What My Denomination Has Meant to the World. I Peter 2:9-12.

What is the origin of our denomination?

What vital truths has our denomination stood for? How has our denomination benefited the world?

We belong to the Presbyterian Church, and we get our name from the fact that our church is governed by elders, or the older men of the church, who are elected by the congregation, to rule the church. This was the form of the Old Testament Church, and was adopted by Christ and the apostles as the form of the New Testament Church. The Greek word, presbyter, means an old man, whence the name of the church.

When the Roman Catholic Church grew to be so powerful that it absorbed nearly all the other churches, the rule by elders was discontinued, except in a few communities and countries, like the Waldenses, in Italy, and the Culdees, in Scotland. The Catholic Church was ruled by priests and bishops. But when Martin Luther started the Protestant Reformation in the sixteenth century, and the churches declared they would not submit to the rule of Rome and its pope any longer, but would decide all religious questions by the Bible alone, the office of elder was restored. This Presbyterian movement was begun by John Calvin, at Geneva, Switzerland, and spread rapidly, over France and Scotland. In these two countries, the Presbyterians became very strong, though they were persecuted with great severity, so that the Presbyterians of France, who were known as Huguenots, were driven out of the country. Many of those not martyred, found a home in America. Some went to Scotland, where they and many Scotch Presbyterians had to suffer yet more for their faith.

There are over 80 kinds of Presbyterians in the world. We belong to the denomination popularly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church. This church started in 1861, when the Northern Presbyterian Assembly, at Philadelphia, decided that all ministers who did not take an oath of allegiance to the Union government of the United States was a rebel, and should be required to quit preaching, the Southern Presbyterian preachers got up and left, and organized the new church in 1861.

Presbyterianism has done a good many things for the world. Let us hope that the young people of our Church will some day study what our Church has accomplished very carefully. We have space only for a list of a few of these things.

What Has Presbyterianism Done for the World

1. It joined with other Protestants in overthrowing the rule of priests in the church, and their subjection of the people to church regulations, for which they had to pay money. The Protestants declared we were saved by God's grace, and not by baptism, that every man could read the Bible for himself, without permission of the priest, and the Presbyterians said the church should be ruled by elders as the apostles commanded.
2. The Presbyterians believed in civil liberty and religious liberty, and when they could not have this liberty in Europe, they came to America, and the war of the Revolution was supported by them. In one battle of the Revolution, an American general found his army had run out of paper to make wads for the guns of his soldiers, so he ordered his men to enter a church nearby, and take the hymn books and use the pages for gun wads, as he cried, "Give them Watts, boys." Watts was a Presbyterian writer of hymns.
3. The Presbyterians were the first to establish colleges for higher education in America, and they have ever since been noted for an educated ministry and educated people.
4. The Presbyterians have always been loyal to the Bible as the Word of God, and they have always preached God's sovereignty in the affairs of men.
5. The Presbyterians have ever had a high regard for the Sabbath day, and have observed it in their homes, and resisted the desecration of it by others.

6. The Presbyterians have had a reputation for family religion, and the proper discipline of their children, and many of our great men and women have come from the Presbyterian homes.

Let the rising generation of Presbyterians see to it that the glory of the past shall not be dimmed by weakness, failures, and sins against God.

Let us continue to make the Presbyterian Church glorious for its doctrines, its church life, its home life, and its influence in the world.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Senior Endeavorers of the Lowell, N. C., Presbyterian Church recently had a very effective program called "Laying the Ghosts." A meeting advertised to begin on time was opened 15 minutes late. One by one during the meeting, as the same old songs and the same lack of orderly program and definite preparation were imposed upon the audience, several ghosts came in bearing placards. These were "Song: Same old song, number 341;" "Leader only 15 minutes late;" "Clippings: we always read 'em;" "Special number; stayed away;" "Sentence prayers: call on the pastor." A stirring talk by the leader showed how the society was haunted by ghosts, as evidenced by slipshod preparation, general slackness, etc. A placard was then hung on the curtain behind which the ghosts had retired, naming that place the "Abode of the Dead." Make them stay dead!

The annual report of the Senior C. E. at St. Pauls, N. C., relates some fine work. Junior and Intermediate societies have been organized. A Home Mission Study class was held in December and the season of prayer observed, with studies in stewardship used in the devotionals. "Unfinished Tasks" was the mission book studied. In this study a millinery exhibit was held, each member being presented with a cutout of a Mexican sombrero with the aim of the lesson written on them. A fine Christmas social at the manse; a Foreign Mission study by the Seniors and Intermediates in February; self-denial offerings of $99 during the two mission study classes; a camp breakfast with steak, scrambled eggs, coffee, and bread; and an Expert Endeavor study now being conducted; make a fine set of accomplishments.

The March report of the North Carolina C. E. Union's Monthly Service Program Superintendent, Miss Maud Little, of Charlotte, shows some interesting items. Five hundred letters were sent. A hundred and ninety-five report cards were received on time, showing that 97 societies observed Dixie Endeavor Day and 98 sent contributions for C. E. work. The total on efficiency chart ratings showed 2,175 points on the Dixie Four-Square Chart, 1,504 points on denominational charts, and 4,014 on the C. E. Missionary Chart.

On March 28th the Junior C. E.'s of the Lumber Bridge Presbyterian Church celebrated the birthday of Junior C. E. work. After a delightful Easter egg hunt the Juniors assembled in the church parlor. Here they found an elaborately decorated birthday cake with candles. Forming in single file the Juniors dropped one penny for each year of their lives into a bank, then each lighted a candle on the cake. After cutting the cake and enjoying light refreshments, the kiddies departed, the contents of the bank being assigned for C. E. extension.

The Gaston County Christian Endeavor Union held its fifth quarterly Rally in the First Presbyterian Church, Gastonia, N. C., April 6th, with 360 in attendance. The banner to the society having the largest number present was awarded to the New Hope Senior society, that for the largest percentage to the Cherryville Senior society, for the second quarter.

Mr. C. T. Carr, superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's Work, was present at the Rally and led the singing. An interesting feature of the program was a 20-minute model Christian Endeavor prayer meeting, very effectively presented by the Belmont Senior society.

Officers elected to serve during the coming year were: Rev. R. C. Long, Gastonia, president; Miss Etta Baker, Lowell, first vice-president; Mr. C. J. Rhodes, Cherryville, second vice-president; Miss Melva Gullick, Belmont, secretary-treasurer; Miss Helen Ragan, Gastonia, superintendent of Junior societies; Miss Elizabeth Martin, Gastonia, superintendent of Intermediate societies; Miss Lena Wilson, Gastonia, superintendent of quiet hour; Mr. C. L. Spencer, Gastonia, superintendent of Tenth Legion.

The Endeavorers of the First and Second Presbyterian Churches of Mooresville, N. C., joined on March 25th with the young people's societies of the other denominations in a joint meeting. Talks were made on "Higher Thinking," "Higher Living," and "A Closer Relation Between the Young People of Our Churches." Mr. S. H. Price, of the First Church society, spoke for the Endeavorers.

Church News

PULLMAN ACCOMMODATIONS TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Commissioners living near any of the following cities may secure Pullman accommodations to Black Mountain, N. C., or Asheville, N. C., by writing to the District or Division Passenger Agent of the Southern Railway given below. If as many as 24 or more make application, a special Pullman will be arranged for them.

Atlanta, Ga., V. L. Estes, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Birmingham, Ala., F. F. Forth, Division Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Chattanooga, Tenn., W. C. Spencer, Division Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Louisville, Ky., B. H. Todd, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Memphis, Tenn., C. A. DeSaussure, Division Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

New Orleans, La., G. C. Robson, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Richmond, Va., F. H. Poston, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

St. Louis, Mo., T. J. Connell, District Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Washington, D. C., S. E. Burgess, Division Passenger Agent, Southern Railway.

Be sure to write in good time to secure your Pullman accommodations.

These agents will also be glad to assist with your ticket, and furnish any information desired with reference to fares, schedules, connections, etc.

Commissioners west of the Mississippi River will receive full information as to fares, schedules, Pullmans, and connection at the various gateways mentioned above. The same conditions as to through Pullmans, as mentioned above, are good in this territory.

J. D. Leslie, Stated Clerk.

WHAT THE ASSEMBLY HOME MISSIONS REPORT

They raised $523,401.66, an excess over last year's receipts of $20,030.20

The General Assembly apportioned to this cause $720,000, but they received only $450,558.80, $269,441.20 less than they should have received.

Owing to this deficit and the need of much building necessary, they, for the first time in 10 years closed their books with a small deficit.

They supported 936 missionaries, including 271 unsalaried wives. The various nationalities served remind one of Pentecost. Mexicans, Cubans, French, Italians, Bohemians, Hungarians, Syrians, Chinese, Jews, Indians, Caucasians and Negroes.

We have no reason to criticize our Home Mission secretaries, because they not only have done a great work, but they have done it at the low cost 5.9 per cent.

NOTICE OF THE MEETING OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The Sixty-Third General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States will convene at Montreat, N. C., Thursday, May 17, 11:00 a. m., 1923. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., retiring Moderator.

The Stated Clerk will be in the auditorium Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning for the purpose of enrolling commissioners. Commissioners will please present their commission to the Stated Clerk as soon as possible after arrival at Montreat.

J. D. Leslie, Stated Clerk.

THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE AUXILIARIES

The recent meeting of the Mecklenburg Presbyterian broke all previous records. The attendance was especially gratifying, there being present 500 visitors and delegates. Gradually the various church societies are entering the Auxiliary, and thus covering the interests of the seven causes of the Church.

The wisdom of utilizing the energy of the women in church work is shown by the fact that they raised the past year $600 more than ever before, the total being over $43,000. The membership has also increased by 300, and 11 new Auxiliaries have been organized. While all of the women have worked hard and all deserve credit, special mention should be made of the work of the president, Mrs. J. G. Baird, to whose energetic leadership this wonderful record is largely due. She seems to have imparted her enthusiasm to her fellows, so that the Presbytery of Mecklenburg bows in grateful acknowledgement of what has been done.

We begin to understand better what Paul meant when he spoke of "those women which labored with me in the Gospel."

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Rev. E. Wayne Thompson has changed his address from Sparta, N. C., to Bel Air, Maryland.

NORTH CAROLINA

Gastonia, Armstrong Memorial Church—On April 1st, this church organized as a self-supporting church of 161 members on March 25th, over-subscribed its current expense and benevolent budget of $2,110 and enters upon its infant year with five elders, ten deacons and young people's council. Rev. G. R. Gillespie will be installed as pastor on the first Sunday in May.

Wilmington Presbytery—This Presbytery has issued a Home Mission Bulletin which is an excellent piece of printing, and gives a pen picture of Home Mission activity in this Presbytery where the fields seem ripe for the harvest.

Monroe—On last Wednesday night Rev. F. R. Riddle, of Columbia, Synodical Secretary of Home Missions of South Carolina assisted by Mr. D. H. Buie, of Red Springs, N. C., closed a ten-day meeting in the Monroe Presbyterian Church. It was a meeting that will live long in the memory of this congregation and be of lasting good to the community. These men impressed everyone with their deep earnestness and spirituality and won the hearts of all who heard them. During the last quarter 66 members have been added to the church, 33 of which came as a result of this meeting.

Salisbury, First Church—This church has enjoyed special evangelistic services for two weeks, beginning April 2d, and ending April 15th. Three able preachers have been with us and services were held twice each day. Dr. J. S. Foster, of Winston-Salem, N. C., Dr. L. S. Fulmer, of the Salisbury Normal Institute and Dr. James I. Vance, of Nashville, Tenn., assisted the pastor, Dr. Byron Clark, and large audiences attended the services. There were several hundred reconsecrations and there will be a number of additions to the church. We never heard finer sermons than these brethren preached and the spiritual life of Salisbury was deepened.

St. Paul Church, Charlotte—One of the best meetings ever held in this church closed on Sunday, April 1st. The preaching was done by Rev. M. F. Daniels, superintendent of our Home Mission work in Mecklenburg Presbytery, and continued for ten days. The attendance was good throughout the meeting, and the preaching was clear, sound and forceful. Our church was helped wonderfully. As a result of this meeting there were 32 additions to this church, 27 on profession and five by letter. Of those who came in on profession several were heads of families. We give all the praise to God for this outpouring of His Spirit.

S. B. Lyerly, Pastor.

Greensboro, First Church—It is very gratifying to know that this year the support of two Home Missionaries was included in our budget and Rev. R. H. Stone and Rev. E. G. Clary are our representatives in Home Mission work. Rev. R. H. Stone is a young man of our own Presbytery and comes from one of our Home Mission churches. He graduates in May from Union Theological Seminary and will take charge of our mission work in Ashe County.

Rev. E. G. Clary is a graduate of Union Seminary and has been doing mission work for the past two years. The field of his work includes the whole county of Wilson and he has already opened up six stations and is having Sunday School and Church services regularly.

Mecklenburg Presbytery—Rev. M. F. Daniels, the chairman of Home Missions in Mecklenburg Presbytery has been authorized by Presbytery to issue a monthly bulletin.

The first copy has been received. It is called "The Reflector," and is intended to reflect the work of the Home Mission workers.

The first number is bright and readable. If supported by those in Presbytery who are interested in Home Missions, it will be a valuable assistant to the energetic chairman.

The Standard wishes it "God Speed," and will do all it can to help it in its mission.

Our progress in Presbytery's Home Mission work has been wonderful.

Let each one help to add to this progress. There remains much land yet to be occupied.

The Davidson College Presbyterian Church feels that it has made a liberal contribution toward the rebuilding of Chambers in the most generous gift that comes from Mr. F. J. Knox, a beloved elder and for many years clerk of the session, and his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Knox, who today told the committee waiting on them that they would give $5,000 to build the Knox Bible Hall to be used by Rev. Dr. C. M. Richards as a teacher in the department of the English Bible and related subjects. The gift is regarded by all who know the givers as in keeping with their usual liberality and the keen interest that Mr. and Mrs. Knox have through a life-time manifested in all that makes for religious education and the spread of Christian truth in the home land and in foreign lands. Mr. Knox has for a very long period of time been conducting in the Davidson church a Bible class for women, which he has taught with marked acceptability and if possible with increasing popularity as he grows older. This gift to the college of a Bible hall where the Bible will still be taught when he has gone hence is a most fitting and effective way to insure that his work and his influence and that of his good wife shall continue to abide as the years roll on.

Kings Mountain Presbytery held its spring meeting in Cherryville Church. Its opening session Tuesday night, April 10th, consisted of sermon by retiring moderator, Rev. R. C. Long, roll call of ministers and churches, and election of officers. Rev. George R. Gillespie, of Gastonia, was elected moderator, Rev. T. G. Tate, of Olney, temporary clerk, and Rev. W. J. Roach, of Lowell Covenant, permanent clerk to assist stated clerk.

Rev. Dr. I. S. McElroy, Columbus, Ga., was received from Macon Presbytery and commission appointed for his installation as pastor of the Kings Mountain, N. C., Presbyterian Church. Presbytery overruled the General Assembly for the appointment of a full-time Christian Endeavor superintendent for North Carolina. The committee on young people's and Sabbath School work was granted permission to raise from churches and Sunday Schools of Presbytery $1,000 for the creation of a manse erection fund. A special day to be known as "Presbytery Day" was appointed to the young people's societies of the Presbytery.

Rev. J. J. Harrell, of Bessemer City, Rev. George R. Gillespie, of Gastonia, elder S. C. Reid, of Ruthersfordton, and elder C. L. Spencer, of Gastonia were the principals elected as commissioners to the General Assembly in May.

Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Banks and their people, ably assisted by the people of the Methodist and Lutheran Churches, were admirable and most hospitable hosts.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Sumter, First Church — Summary of Disbursements, 1922-1923:

Foreign Missions	$1,869.00
Assembly's Home Missions	745 00
Local Home Missions	700.00
Christian Education and Ministerial Relief	375.00
Sunday School Extension and Publication	120.00
Educational Institutions	791.44
Bible Cause	64.00
Orphanages	717.65
Current Expenses and Presbyterial Tax	2,344.63
Pastor's Salary	3,000.00
Miscellaneous Contributions	2,440.49

Lickville—Probably one of the most delightful and interesting meetings of Enoree Presbytery came to a close here today. The Presbytery convened on Tuesday night, and notwithstanding the wet weather the attendance upon the service was large.

The youngest pastor in the Presbytery, Rev. F. B. Estes, was made Moderator. The reports showed gratifying growth for the year in all of the churches.

Intense interest was taken in the earnest discussions of the Presbytery on the many phases of its work.

Rev. J. F. Matheson, chairman, Union, made an exhaustive report on home missions, showing the rapid growth and growing interest throughout the Presbytery in this work. All churches now have pastors, and the Presbytery requested to furnish funds to enable the Home Missions committee to occupy strategic points which just at this time offer great opportunities for development. The report of Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent of Home Missions, was heard with interest.

Rev. J. G. Walker, Greenville, chairman of Sunday School, Young People's Work, made a thoughtful report of activities in these departments. Presbytery directed that a conference of superintendents be held in the Greer Church, on May 3d; that a conference of C. E. and Young People's Leaders be held in three counties during the spring; that three county Sunday School institutes be held during the year, and one standard training school at some central point during the year. Rev. J. K. Roberts, also superintendent of this work made an interesting address on the above report.

Probably one of the most interesting discussions of the Presbytery occurred during the report of Rev. J. K. Roberts, chairman of General Assembly's Home Missions, on the subject of colored evangelization. The discussions were led by Rev. C. G. Gunn, Rev. W. A. Hafner, Gaffney, Rev. J. F. Mattheson, Union, Rev. C. O'N. Martindale, Rev. T. W. Sloan, D.D., and Rev. J. S. Lyons, Greenville, and Rev. J. M. Wells, D. D., president of Columbia Seminary.

Rev. H. W. Dubose, D.D., of the First Church, Spartanburg, made an excellent report, as chairman of the committee on Foreign Missions. Prof. Morton, of Converse College, gave an address on Mexico, and the progress of the Gospel in the land of the Aztecs.

Rev. Messrs. F. B. Estes, Lockhart and J. G. Walker, of Greenville; and elders, W. M. Stenhouse, Reedy River, and J. V. Askew, Mt. Tabor, were elected commissioners to the General Assembly which meets in Montreat May 17, 1923.

The hospitality of the Lickville people was unbounding; and the Presbytery was deeply sensible of the fine and cordial entertainment given by the church and community.

Presbytery will meet in adjourned session in the First Presbyterian Church, Greenville, on Tuesday noon, May 15th; and in regular stated session, in the Fairview Church, October 30, 1923—Greenville Piedmont.

Harmony Presbytery, Salem Black River—This satly old church, in the beautiful moss draped grove of ancient pine and oak, was honored yesterday and today by the annual spring meeting of Harmony Presbytery. This is the third time in 35 years that Presbytery has been entertained by this church, 1888, 1906, and 1923. The attendance each day was more than at both of the former meetings. This is due to automobiles, and better roads. Salem congregation though fewer in numbers than in either of the former years, entertained the delegates and visiting friends with bountiful picnic dinners, and in their homes with gracious hospitality fully up to the traditions of this once wealthy and cultured community.

Harmony is one of the oldest, if not the oldest Presbytery in the State. It has several times been divided to form other Presbyteries, the latest when Congaree Presbytery was organized about 10 years ago. It was the home Presbytery of Dr. J. Leighton Wilson, for 18 years a missionary on the West Coast of Africa in the forties and fifties of the last century, and who was secretary of Foreign Missions of the whole Presbyterian Church before the secession of the Southern Church in 1861, and then of the Southern Church for many years until retired on account of the infirmities of age. It was likewise the home Presbytery of Dr. Hampden C. DuBose, perhaps the most distinguished missionary that the Southern Church has sent to China. Dr. Wilson was the most active leader in breaking up the African slave trade. Dr. DuBose was the leader in the fight on the opium traffic in China. Both were noted as statesmen of the first order as well as preachers of the Gospel who brought many heathen in to the Kingdom. It is gratifying to know that this old Presbytery, meeting this time in the second oldest church within its bounds (the old Williamsburg Church at Kingstree is the oldest), is not only keeping the "home fires" bright and planting new churches in the destitute places, but also has some of its choice spirits, men and women, ministers, teachers, and doctors, carrying on the great work that Dr. Wilson and Dr. DuBose gave their lives to establish.

There are 32 churches and 14 pastors in the Presbytery. Of the ministers 13 were in attendance, and 25 elders, a most remarkable attendance. Only one pastor was absent, and only seven churches not represented. Tuesday the Presbytery was called to order by the retiring moderator, Rev. R. H. Ratchford, who preached the opening sermon. The Lord's Supper was celebrated. Dr. Hammond and Dr. McIver conducted this solemn service. The number of communicants was the largest that had assembled in this church in perhaps a half century.

Rev. L. K. Martin was elected moderator and Rev. R. L. Grier temporary clerk. Rev. W. H. Workman is stated clerk. Under the capable handling of the machinery by the officials the work of the church court moved very smoothly. The various committees in their reports showed that most earnest and diligent study had been given to the subjects under consideration. The financial side of the Home Mission work has been hit like all business in this section of the State where the ravages of the boll weevil and the heavy rains of 1921 and 1922 have hardly been equaled anywhere else.

Tuesday afternoon, Rev. D. M. Douglas, president of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina, made a most instructive and hopeful report of present activities of the college at Clinton. Outside of the one million dollar educational fund, he has been guaranteed 35,000 of $75,000 needed for a new dormitory to accommodate 100 additional students. There are 180 there now, all that the college can accommodate at present. Dr. Douglas is hopeful of getting the other $35,000 by commencement in June, which will insure the building by the time the college opens in September. The advance enrollment indicates that there will be students to fill the new dormitory when it is ready for occupancy.

Dr. R. A. Lapsley, Sr., of Richmond, Va., reported on the work of the organized adult Bible classes and the home department of the Sunday Schools. Dr. Lapsley is the editor of the Adult and Home Department Quarterlies. This work is fast getting all the membership of the churches into the Sunday Schools, their aim being to have all members studying the Bible. He outlined the splendid team work that is the outgrowth of this system, and the bringing into the church of many that would not otherwise be reached by the Gospel.

The call of the Lake City Church to Rev. R. W. Park, now a senior at Columbia Seminary was found in order and the call placed in his hands. Thirty-one of the 32 churches sent up a narrative of the state of religion. One church reported that every family has family worship. Two churches reported that there is no worldly conformity among their members. Twenty-five churches reported the pastor's salary paid in full. It seems that every church has some arrangement for regular services. The next meeting of Presbytery will be held at the Williamsburg Church in Kingstree.

The report of the Stewardship Committee showed that a total of $73,000 was contributed for local causes as against $68,000 for the previous year, but the benevolent causes showed a falling off of about the same amount as the increase in local support. Several churches reported their apportionment to all causes paid in full. Several reported that the Every Member Canvass for this year shows the apportionments pledged in full. The Georgetown Sunday School reported that every cause of the Church was supported with its contributions. An overture to the General Assembly which meets in May at Montreat, N. C., calls for a careful investigation of the orthodoxy of all of the Church's missionaries in China. This action was due to reports that some of these missionaries are leaning toward the doctrine of modernism. Rev. L. L. Legters who has for some time been laboring outside the bounds of the Presbytery was refused permission to continue such labors further. Rev. J. P. Marion resigned as a trustee of Chicora College and Rev. L. B. McCord was elected in his place for the term to end in October 4, 1923.

Rev. W. R. Pritchett was elected commissioner to the General Assembly and Rev. R. L. Grier alternate. Mr. M. B. Wilson, of Mayesville was elected elder commissioner and Mr. D. E. McCutchen, of Indiantown alternate. Dr. Hammond offered a very complimentary resolution of thanks for the hospitable entertainment which had been accorded to the Presbytery. This was adopted by a rising vote. The business was finished with the reading and approval of the minutes. The meeting was closed with sermon by Dr. McIver of the Bishopville Church. This series of meetings will long be remembered by the people of the old "Brick Church."

E. W. Dabbs.

Charleston, Second Church—Under the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Hickman, this church is making fine progress. There were 70 additions last year, a majority upon profession of faith; 34 joined last quarter. Mr. Hickman has been holding evangelistic services in the Gordon Street Church, Atlanta.

Union—The report of the year's work of the First Presbyterian Church of this city made at the recent meeting of the Enoree Presbytery was a splendid one and received favorable attention at the Presbytery. The pastor, Rev. John F. Matheson, gives the following information:

Received into membership the past year 42, 23 by confession of faith and 19 by letter, making total membership to March 31st, of 215.

Contributions for the past year for church causes were as follows:

Foreign Missions, $1,716; Assembly Home Missions, $1,124; Local Home Missions, $774; Congregational Home Missions, $25; Sunday School extension and publication, $103; Educational Institutions, $1,719; Bible cause, $30; Thornwell Orphanage, $521; making a total to benevolences of $6,346, while other expenditures amounted to $3,792, the entire expenditures of the Church for the past year being $10,138, making a per capita contribution of $47.15.

Allan Nicholson.

ADVANCE FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Executive Committee of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions presents its advance summary as follows:

Appropriations Regular
Budget	$1,124,019.85
Appropriations Special
Budget	148,997.93	$1,273,017.78
Receipts and Credits:
Regular Budget	$1,065,385.20
Special Budget	148,997.93	1,214,383.22

Deficit on Regular Budget for the year	$ 58,634.56
Deficit March 31, 1922	$ 251,704.49
Gains in Adjusting accounts and appropriations for Exchange Guarantees	60,928.64
	190,775.85

Deficit March 31, 1923 $ 249,410.41

The gain of $60,928.64 in the Deficit Account was mostly due to the fact that uncertain exchange conditions in several of the missions compelled us to carry balances last year to safe-guard this year and the final working out of the accounts resulted to our advantage.

The comparison of income with the year 1921-22 is:

	1922-23	1921-22
Living Donors	$1,146,204.48	$1,210,742.02
Legacies	43,757.38	57,170.58
Income from Invested Funds	20,217.45	10,587.06
Other Sources	4,203.91	2,824.20

$1,214,383.22 $1,281,323.86

The full analysis of the result of the year will be set out in the Treasurer's Report.

Edwin F. Willis, Treasurer.

Nashville, Tenn., March 31, 1923.

FIRST REPORT OF EVERY MEMBER CANVASS SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA

J. B. Spillman, Secretary of Stewardship

One hundred and fifty of the 508 churches report an increase in benevolent subscriptions of $43,417 over subscriptions of last year, and many of these are partial reports. There has been a very gratifying increase in Family Altars and Tithers in many churches. Reports coming in show that this canvass was a more thorough canvass than the previous one. Reports to April 14th are as follows:

Presbytery	Quota of Church Reporting	Ben. Subscription This Year		Ben. Subscription Last Year		Tithers		Family Altars
		No.	Amt.	No.	Amt.	1922	1923	1922	1923
Albemarle—12 of 49 Chs.	13,769	631	$ 11,188	667	$ 11,043	101	101	27	70
Concord—26 of 62 Chs.	48,921	2,099	45,124	2,086	38,065	242	343	142	174
Fayetteville—30 of 119	57,593	1,664	45,115	1,813	31,615	187	239	144	164
Kings Mtn.—12 of 38	38,528	1,617	29,421	1,492	24,293	154	163	47	93
Mecklenburg—28 of 86	73,231	2,016	64,821	2,655	50,248	194	424	153	196
Orange—20 of 89	64,976	1,648	64,123	1,848	57,463	140	343	146	154
Wilmington—22 of 65	57,916	1,424	51,074	1,541	52,763	101	338	108	175
	$354,934	11,099	$308,866	12,102	$265,449	1,119	1,974	789	1,026

Educational

Flora Macdonald College—The official commencement program is as follows: Saturday, May 19th, 5:00 p. m., Senior Class Day Exercises, Woodland Theatre. Sunday, May 20th, 11:15 a. m., Baccalaureate Sermon, College Auditorium, by Rev. J. E. Purcell, Jr., pastor St. Andrews' Presbyterian Church, Wilmington; 6:30 p. m., Vesper Service, Woodland Theatre, College Campus, Dr. C. G. Vardell; 8:00 p. m., Sermon before the Y. W. C. A., Presbyterian Church, Rev. J. E. Purcell, Jr. Monday, May 21st, 8:00 p. m., Concert by the Conservatory of Music, College Auditorium. Tuesday, May 22nd, 9:00 a. m., Meeting of Board of Trustees; Meeting of Advisory Boards; 10:30 a. m., Business Meeting of General Alumnae Association; 4:00 p. m., Reception and Exhibits Departments of Fine and Household Arts; 8:00 p. m., Senior Class Play, "Midsummer Night's Dream," College Auditorium; 10 p. m., Alumnae Banquet, College Dining Hall. Wednesday, May 23rd, 10 a. m., Graduating Exercises, College Auditorium. Address.

A quarterly concert was given on Monday night by the pupils of the Music department, in the auditorium.

Miss Anna Spencer Daniel, head of the Domestic Art department, died on Saturday evening, April 7th, at 9:00 p. m., at the Baker Hospital of Lumberton, where she had been a patient for some time. The immediate cause of her death was septicaemia. Present at the hospital at the time of her death were Miss Patty B. Watkins, dean of the faculty, Mrs. J. H. Glenn, and Miss Nan Robert, of the faculty, and a sister of Miss Daniel, who reached her bedside a few minutes before death came. The remains were carried to Farmville, Va., on Sunday morning accompanied by Mr. Hiram Grantham, of Red Springs, and Miss Nan Robert. Funeral services were held on Monday, April 9th, at 3:00 p. m., at the home, and were conducted by Dr. Vardell. Services at the grave were conducted by Dr. Vardell, Dr. Rankin, of the Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Spooner, of the Methodist Church. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The faculty, student body, and domestic art students sent special designs as a tribute of love and affection.

Queens College—Through the columns of the Standard I wish to say a few words about the Queens College annual banquet this year.

Please, "old girls," note the time—Saturday of commencement week, May 12th; and place, the college dining hall. Cards will be mailed to all members a week in advance, and I wish to urge you now to work up a reunion of your class, sign the card, with date of your graduation, and mail to the secretary. We will have one of the brightest lawyers of the state—an alumna of Queens—as principal speaker. There will be toasts by other distinguished alumnae, songs and plenty of good fellowship. Besides there will be report of the year's work. You will be surprised and delighted to know the number of valuable books which have been added to the college library. This has been the chief work of the association this year. So, for fear you will miss something, get in touch with your class now and arrange to come.

I would like to urge especially reunions of classes 10 years apart from present year—1923, 1913, 1903, 1893—as we will take notice each year of the 10-year period. Our infant class, one year old, we are expecting 100 per cent strong. There is nothing which revives our loyalty and interest in our alma mater as meeting there once a year, so let's give Dr. Frazer and Miss McLean a real "storm party."

Our marching song will be (sung to chorus of Tip-terary):

"It is not far to our Queens College,
It is not far to go;
It is not far to our Queens College,
The dearest place we know.
Good-bye to home and duties,
Welcome alumnae fair;
It is not far to our Queens College,
And I'll be right there."

(Signed) Mrs. Jno. D. Shaw, Jr.,
President Alumnae Association.

Mary Baldwin Seminary—Being one of the now comparatively few persons conversant with the efficient work of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, in Staunton, in its earlier stages, I have been asked to say, through the Presbyterian Standard and other papers, a few words about the proposed Mary Baldwin Woman's College for higher education, to be at the same place but further from the center of the city.

Having known for much over a half century the beneficent, Christian educational service of the seminary for the young womanhood of our Church, and others, far and near, I am gratified to know that the Synod of Virginia has decided on placing the higher institution in a contiguous location, and under the immediate control of those who have long been deeply interested in the seminary.

I think it will, by no means, lessen the influence or attendance of the older school; but will in all probability tend to increase both. The traditions of the past and the influences of the present will combine to make the new institution desirable for those who seek higher education, without the sceptical atmosphere of some of the colleges for women in different environments and under very different auspices. Knowing of some sad cases of loss of faith in securing supposedly superior advantages, has deeply impressed me. Surely no more favorable environment than this center of staunch Scotch-Irish Presbyterianism, with such trustees, and with such a leader and organizer as Dr. Frazer can be found.

Parke P. Flournoy.

Union Theological Seminary—Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of its location at Richmond. Mention was made last week of plans for the observance of this anniversary. The names of Dr. Robert F. Campbell, Dr. George Summey, Dr. Egbert W. Smith, Dr. J. R. Bridges, and Gov. E. Lee Trinkle were published as participants in this celebration. It is now announced that in addition to the foregoing there will be a number of addresses bearing on the relation of the seminary to the work of the Southern Presbyterian Church and on its significance as a factor in the life of the city of Richmond.

On Tuesday, at 4:00 p. m., the principal address of Dr. R. F. Campbell will be preceded by two brief addresses. Rev. J. J. Gravatt, D.D., rector of Holy Trinity Epis-

(Continued on page 12)

News of the Week

Rev. William Sunday has closed his great meeting in Columbia, S. C. Thirty-seven thousand people heard him in four services the last day. Mr. Sunday was escorted to the train at 10 o'clock at night by the 800 ushers of the tabernacle organization. The men drew Mr. Sunday's car through the streets to the station with ropes attached to his car, and along the streets stood delegations from the public schools, the university and the two colleges for women and many citizens, who sang songs of the tabernacle and shouted and waved good-bye to the evangelist.

At the close of the service Dr. Melton, chairman of the Columbia committee, presented Mr. Sunday with a check for $25,002, the gift of the people of Columbia.

The new Fisheries Commission of this state held its first regular meeting last week. The board elected J. B. Dixon full-time chairman at a salary of $3,600, M. L. Willis, secretary, and John A. Nelson, fisheries commissioner, at a salary of $3,600 and a subsistence allowance of $240 annually. The commissioner was authorized by the board to employ inspectors and other officers necessary for the proper conduct of the business of the commission.

Judge Julian Mack, of the federal court of Tampa, Fla., ignored the three-mile limit law, and sentenced five men, one the owner of the boat, to a year and a day in the federal penitentiary, and the other four $200 each. The case was appealed.

President Harding is about to appoint a Kansas man to the Federal Reserve Board. He has let it be known that he will not name a Southern man, as he claims that the appointment of J. G. McNary, of El Paso, Tex., was blocked by the votes of Southern Senators.

Thomas E. Cooper, former president of the defunct Liberty Savings Bank of Wilmington, and J. C. Rouark, former cashier, have been arrested and held in the sum of $5,000 each for their appearance at Raleigh. They are charged with issuing certificates of deposit without delivering the money.

Wages cannot be fixed by law, the supreme court, dividing five to three, held in a case brought to test the constitutionality of an act of Congress fixing minimum wages for women and minor girls in the District of Columbia.

United States Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, told the Women's Democratic Club that the League of Nations would be an important issue of the next presidential campaign. He declared that the attitude of the Democratic party on the league was unchanged and that he was in favor of it "body and soul, with or without reservations."

As an avowed protest against the execution of the prelate, Butchkavitch, put to death because he opposed the revolutionary doctrines of the soviet, the state department has withdrawn the authorization under which Ekaterina Kalinin, wife of the Russian President, had planned to pay a visit to the United States.

W. A. Ryan, manager of sales, Ford Motor Company, Detroit, according to advices, announces that the company's Charlotte branch has won first place in the national campaign of the Ford Motor Company to increase its retail sales 100 per cent for the six months ending March 31, 1923, over the corresponding six months last year.

The United States Steel Corporation announces a wage increase of 11 per cent, effective April 16th, for day laborers employed in the manufacturing plants of its subsidiary companies, with an equitable adjustment for other classes of labor in those plants. More than 150,000 employees are affected and the increase, it is estimated, will add approximately one-half a million dollars to the weekly pay roll.

The first crate of strawberries appearing on the market at Whiteville, N. C., Columbus County, sold for $25, and the grower, Duff McPherson, won a $10 cash prize offered for the first crate.

The second crate brought in was sold by L. O. Sellers for $18.

Gen. William B. Haldeman, of Louisville, Ky., was elected commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans at the closing business session of the annual reunion at New Orleans, and Memphis, Tenn., was selected as the 1924 reunion city.

Although considerable irregularity was apparent in the chief financial markets during the past week, reports from industrial districts showed that the strong upswing in business is being continued. Pig iron production is at a new high level for all time and a similar condition probably exists with regard to steel.

The car in which they were riding was badly shot up and Miss Rosalie Bowen and Miss Mary Gwinn, young women of Asheville, N. C., miraculously escaped death when they failed to halt as ordered to do so by a group of federal prohibition officers on the Greenville-Asheville highway about 20 miles north of Greenville, S. C. Prohibition officials in Greenville County having agreed to pay for damages to the machine, and in order to avoid further publicity, Miss Rosalie Bowen and Miss Mary Gwinn, Y. W. C. A. workers, will take no steps to prosecute the officers.

EDITORIAL.

(Continued from page 2)

Ancient of Days, Lord of the Ages, Upstayer of things that are, Foremost of the Gods, Lord of truth and righteousness, Begotten of the Gods, Maker of men and beasts and birds." He further expounded the "Gospel of Osiris" and held up "Queen Isis" as a prototype of the Virgin Mary.

He explained these extraordinary procedures on the ground it exemplified the unity of religion.

The Reverend Mr. Guthrie goes far beyond Dr. Grant, and makes the problems confronting Bishop Manning such that if he is going to deal with them in a way that will count, he must strengthen his spinal column and assert his episcopal authority in a way that will show that he means business.

We Presbyterian bishops have had no experience in exercising any such authority, but this bishop would like to change places with his reverence for a day.

THE PRIME MINISTER

(Continued from page 5)

Bonar Law was always far too big a man to act as "the gentleman with the duster."

The Premier is generally accepted as level-headed, far-seeing, resourceful. These and many other statesmanlike qualities are allowed him, but to these virtues his friends add—sincerity, temperance, kindness, and sympathy. The fellow-feeling with the grief-stricken made the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the war "wondrous kind." "The Scotch brother in Canada"—"the old Glasgow schoolfellow"—"for the past's sake"—such appeals to find out for his fellow-sufferers some pathetic details, omitted by officialdom, never failed. Often the carefully-collected typewritten information had a few sympathetic lines added by Mr. Bonar Law himself, in his own characteristic "scrawl," for the sake of "auld lang syne."—Marion C. Cameron, in "The Record," Edinburgh, February, 1923.

BE NOT AFRAID

Beside the dead I knelt for prayer,
And felt a presence, as I prayed.
Lo! it was Jesus standing there;
He smiled, "Be not afraid!"

"Lord, Thou hast conquered death, we know, Restore again to life," I said,
"This one who died an hour ago."
He smiled, "She is not dead."

"Asleep then, as Thou didst say,
Yet Thou canst lift the lids that keep
Her prisoned eyes from ours away."
He smiled, "She doth not sleep."

"Yet our beloved seem so far,
The while we yearn to feel them near;
Albeit with Thee we trust they are."
He smiled, "And I am here."

"Dear Lord, how shall we know that they Still walk unseen with us, and Thee,
Nor sleep nor wander far away?"
He smiled, "Abide in Me." —Selected.

CHILDREN

HER FIRST LETTER

Dear Standard:

This is my first letter to you. I go to school and to Sunday School at Springfield. I like my school teacher very much. Miss Effie Bailey is my Sunday School teacher, I like her too. I will close. From your unknown friend, Maud McDonald.

Cameron, N. C.

LIKES THEM BOTH

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 12 years old, in the sixth grade, and I go to school at Springfield. My teacher's name is Miss Margaret McLauchlin, I like her fine. I go to Sunday School at Union. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Cassie McLauchlin. I like her fine.

Your unknown friend,

Leta Crutchfield.

Cameron, N. C.

THE TWINS ARE DARLING

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 11 years old. I am in the sixth grade in school. My teacher is Miss Felton, we love her very much. I have three sisters and two brothers. Two of my sisters are twins; I think they are darling. My father is the superintendent of our Sunday School. My Sunday School teacher is Mrs. McCormick.

Your friend,

Catherine Ann McInnis.

St. Pauls, N. C.

SURPRISE FOR DADDY

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl six years old. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. My teacher is Miss Annie Jarvis; I like her fine. Our pastor is Rev. H. B. Searight, we like him. I hope this will not reach the wastebasket, for I want to surprise my daddy.

Your little friend,

Sophia Jane Ross.

Washington, N. C.

A NICE SWING

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl seven years old. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School. I have a big swing; it is a long rope and a pillow at the end and I get up on top of a hill and swing off.

A new little friend,

Madge Blanding Taliaferro.

Atlanta, Ga.

THE BEST THERE IS

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy seven years old. I have a little sister five years old, her name is Ruth. We do not go to school. Mother teaches us at home. We go to Sunday School. Miss Sue Woodward is our teacher. We love her very much. She gave us a valentine party and an egg hunt. Dr. Grier is our preacher. We think he is the best preacher there is. I know almost all of the catechism. Ruth and I like to read the letters and the stories in the Standard.

Your friend,

Tom Worth Crowell.

Newton, N. C.

HOW GRANDMA USED TO PLAY SCHOOL

It was raining hard, so grandma knew she would find the children up in the playroom. She wanted to ask Ethel where she had put her scissors that she had borrowed that morning and had forgotten to return.

She did not go to the playroom often as it was on the third floor and it was hard for her to walk up so many stairs. But she needed the scissors so badly just then that she made the effort and after several rests along the way, finally reached the playroom door and knocked loudly enough for the children to hear her.

When they opened the door and discovered who their visitor was they were delighted, for they loved her dearly and she always entered into whatever they were doing as if she were as young as they. And she could tell such wonderful stories, mostly about when she was a little girl up on a big farm in Vermont, that the children never tired of hearing them and always begged for just one more.

"What are you doing, my dears, playing school?" asked grandma after she had glanced around and had seen the dolls arranged in front of tables. "My, what fortunate little girls you are to have so many dolls and playthings! I'm afraid you wouldn't have enjoyed playing school the way I used to do when I was your age. But I had good times and I guess I was just as happy as you are, for it was my favorite game and I played whenever I had a chance."

"Oh, grandma, please tell us a story about it," begged Ethel as she led grandma to a chair. "But I thought everybody played school in the same way."

"Yes, I guess they do as far as a teacher and scholars are concerned—but they don't always have the same things to play with. You have so much and we had so little. You have everything and we had nothing. That's the difference. I wonder how you'd like to play school if you had no big playroom all to yourselves, no beautiful dolls, no desks and tables, no story-books, and only a slate and pencil."

"Why, how could you play school with out any of those things?" asked Rosalie. "I shouldn't think it would be any fun."

"Oh, it was the make-believe things that helped us out, I guess. And then, besides, we didn't know anything about the things that you have today, so we didn't miss them."

"But what did you have, grandma, that made you like it so?"

"Well, I guess it was what we called our dolls, but they were not much like yours, my dears. You see, my father's farm was way up in the hills a long way from the cities and so we didn't have many things that came from the stores. Father didn't go to town often, and besides, there wasn't much money to be spent on us children, so we had to get along with what was made at home."

"But who could make dolls for you at home?" asked Rosalie, who had never had a doll that was not bought at the store.

"Your great-grandmother made the first one I ever had, a little rag dolly, something like your raggedy Ann. Later on I made some for myself, and then your great-grandfather made the ones I liked best of all and the ones I am going to tell you about that I played school with."

"Were they all rag dolls that you had?" and Ethel looked rather pityingly at her grandmother as she thought of her own collection of beautiful dolls.

"No, Ethel, there was only one rag doll for each of us girls and they soon were the worse for wear with much handling, and mother didn't have time to make us any more. Mothers on farms were very busy those days."

"Well, what was the kind you made yourself?"

"Wooden dolls—but I don't suppose you would call them dolls at all, for they were only sticks of wood. You see, there were always great piles of split wood in the yard all summer, waiting to be stacked in the woodshed for the winter. I used to spend days looking them over and picking out the pieces that were thin and crooked, with knobs at the end that looked like heads. After I had found a half dozen or so that satisfied me, I used to carry them down to my favorite apple tree in the south orchard and there I played school day after day and was as happy as any little girl in Vermont."

"But I shouldn't think pieces of wood would have looked anything like dolls," said Ethel in a tone that showed she was anxious to hear more of the story.

"Well, they didn't exactly, at least not like one of your dainty dolls. But you see one of my older brothers, who was very clever with his knife, cut eyes and a nose and a mouth in the head of each piece of wood and I put pieces of cloth round them for dresses and gave each one of them a name, and they made the best kind of scholars you ever saw. And there on the green grass under the blue sky we sang our multiplication tables and our geography lessons over and over all through the long summer."

"What were the dolls' names?" asked Rosalie.

"Oh, I don't believe I can remember them all, it was such a long time ago. But my two favorites were always Mehitabel Ann and Roxanna Rose Ann, named after my favorite aunts."

"Now there was only one trouble with these dolls and that was that they wouldn't stand up unless I propped them against the trunk of the apple tree. I never said anything about this to anybody, but my father must have noticed it when he went by the tree so often and saw me playing school there, for before the summer was over he made me some dolls that would stand alone. And of what do you suppose he used to make them?"

"Oh, tell us quickly!" said Ethel. "I know we could never guess."

"Well, it was an old bedstead that he found up in the attic."

"But, grandma, how could he possibly make dolls from a bedstead? That sounds even funnier than your sticks of wood."

"Yes, I suppose it does, dear, but let me explain a little more. The old bedstead in its day had been a very beautiful one and its four slender posts were hand carved, each with a top shaped like a pineapple.

"Now without telling any one what he was doing, my father one day carefully sawed off these posts about ten inches from the top. You see that gave plenty of length for the bodies, the narrow part for the necks, and the heads on top. These he painted and polished out in his workroom in the barn, and one morning when I went down to the apple tree to play school I could hardly believe my eyes when I saw the four lovely new dolls standing there as straight as I could have stood myself. There was no word of explanation and if I had believed in fairies I should have said they had left the dolls there in the night.

"I'm sure that never, until I was grown up, anyway, did anything give me so much happiness as did those pineapple-top dolls. I played with them as long as ever I played school and even until I was a big girl I kept them in my room and played with them once in a while. And if you'll believe it, when I was married I took one of them to my new home and my first little girl played with it."

"But how did you ever find out who made the dolls for you?"

"Well, it was by accident. A day or two after I discovered them I happened to hear father and mother talking together out in the milkroom. First mother said, 'But why in the world did you ever spoil a perfectly good bedstead to make silly dolls for little Sarah Jane?' And father answered softly, 'Well, the old bed wasn't good for anything and we weren't using it and I knew what fine dolls the tops would make. And I'd do most anything for little Sarah Jane. She does love dolls so and plays school so contentedly with them down in the orchard! Why, she'll be teaching a real school before we know it. She's a born teacher if ever I saw one.'"

"And did you teach a real school, grandma?" asked Rosalie.

"Yes, dear, until your grandfather persuaded me to give it up and go to live with him."

"Oh, tell us about your real school, please," begged Ethel.

"Not today. We'll save that for another story. I have some sewing downstairs to finish. And you will want to go on with your school. There's your mother calling me now."

So Ethel and Rosalie helped grandma down the stairs and then went back to the playroom and started playing school again. But they didn't get very far, for they spent the rest of the morning talking over what grandma had told them and they decided they were very fortunate little girls to have so many real dolls instead of just wooden "make-believes." —Gertrude Fisher Scott, in Zion's Herald.

BREAKING OLD MR. T. BOARD'S HEART

Frances Margaret Fox, in The Continent

Long, long ago back of Grandpa's house in the country was a little brook narrow enough to step across when you went down a pretty green slope on one side and up a pretty green slope on the other, as Sally's mother always did when she was a little girl.

"No one ever thought to put a board across the brook to walk over when I was a little girl and lived here," mother told her small Sally and Flora and Tommie and baby Dick the time they came visiting and found a wide board laid from one bank of the pretty stream to the other.

Next day Sally made a discovery. "Oh, do come!" she called to the children. "Grandpa's bridge is a teetering board. Come and try it."

They came and tried it. By clinging to one another and giving little lumps they made a jolly sort of a teetering board of the bridge. Up and down, up and down they went with gay little springs and jumps, and the board went with them and seemed as merry as they.

"I believe our little old teetering board has a cheerful heart!" Flora

(Continued on page 15)

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Huff-Wyatt—At the residence of the bride's mother, in Greenville, S. C., April 8, 1923, by Rev. E. P. Davis, Mr. William H. Huff and Miss Evelyn Wyatt.

DEATHS

D. ANGUS McINNIS

1908

1922

Resolutions adopted by the Intermediate class of Galatia Sabbath School:

Whereas, Almighty God, our heavenly Father, in infinite wisdom and love has seen fit to call from our midst, our beloved president and classmate, D. Angus McInnis.

In his death our class has lost a valuable and faithful member. We miss his presence, association and friendship. As co-workers we resolve:

First, That while we bow in humble submission to God's will, we express in these resolutions our sense of loss both to the church and community.

Second, That we assure the members of the bereaved family of our sincere sympathy and earnest prayers that the God of peace and comfort may comfort their sorrowing hearts.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the family and a copy sent to the Presbyterian Standard for publication.

Isabel Ray,
Fanny Monroe,
Cleo Wood,
Carl Andrews, Committee.

MRS. VIRGINIA P. LASATER

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from our midst, our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Virginia P. Lasater, we, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Broadway Presbyterian Church desire to extend to the bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy, feeling that they are comforted in the knowledge that she has finished her task and entered into eternal rest.

We miss her. She was a true friend, a good neighbor and loyal to her Lord and Master.

Therefore be it resolved: That we bow in humble submission to His will.

That we cherish the memory of her pure Christian life.

That as a testimony of our affection and appreciation of her a copy of this memorial notice be sent to the family, to the church and county papers and a copy inscribed upon our minutes.

Mrs. D. E. Shaw,
Mrs. J. C. Davis,
Mrs. Nettie McLean.

W. E. McCALL

The officers of the Presbyterian Church, of Matthews, N. C., feel deeply the loss that they have sustained in the death of our faithful and beloved elder, Mr. W. E. McCall, who died February 2, 1923. We can say of him as Jonathan once said to David, "Thou shall be missed for thy seat will be empty." Whereas God in his mighty wisdom has taken him from the church he loved. Be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the divine will of Him who doeth all things well. The Lord gave, the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord."

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy, feeling that they are comforted in the knowledge that he has finished his task on earth and entered into eternal rest and his friends will meet him again.

3. That a copy of this resolution be written upon a page of our minutes and a copy sent to the bereaved family and a copy published in the Presbyterian Standard.

CHARLES J. MARTIN

Whereas, Mr. Charles J. Martin has been a member of the Executive Committee of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. for 22 years, and has been chairman of this committee for nine consecutive years,

And whereas, he has brought to this office a devotion to the cause of Christ and His Kingdom, a readiness of heart and hand, a business foresight and ability far above his fellows, and a consecration to service unsurpassed.

And whereas, God in His wise and loving providence has removed him from his sphere of service into His Kingdom of Glory, we the Executive Committee of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. do hereby resolve,

First, That the cause of missions throughout our entire Assembly and the devoted servants who labor under the auspices of this committee, have lost a friend wise in counsel, and unstinted in his labor of love.

Second, That the Executive Committee of Home Missions has experienced the loss of a dearly beloved friend and fellow-servant of Christ, a loss which is felt not only in the capacity of members of same committee, but which each of us feel likewise as an acute personal bereavement.

Third, That the first page of our report to the General Assembly be a memorial page, embodying the following expression:

IN MEMORIAM

CHARLES J. MARTIN

Born February 22, 1859

Served faithfully as member of the Executive Committee

Twenty-two years

Presided as Chairman

Nine successive years

Since June 10, 1914

Entered into rest March 30, 1923
"The memory of the just is Blessed."

—Prov. 10:7.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to Mrs. Martin, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of this committee, and that copies be furnished to our church papers for publication.

Fifth, That we extend to his distressed family our deepest Christian sympathy in their great sorrow with the assurance that we share their loss and suffer with them in their bereavement, but are comforted in the abiding confidence that he has entered upon the rewards of the faithful.

With us his name shall live,

Through long succeeding years;
Embalmed with all our hearts can give,

Our praises and our tears."

B. R. Lacy, Jr.
S. L. Morris.
W. M. Everett.

WHY DRUGS FAIL

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from drinking Shivar, America's best stomach, liver and kidney water. If you suffer with chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept the Springs liberal offer as printed below. Their records show that only two in a hundred, on the average, have reported "no benefit." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful Spring. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Springs,
Box 3H, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____

Address _____

Shipping Point _____

(Please write distinctly.)

EDUCATIONAL

(Continued from page 10)

copal Church, on behalf of the Christian forces of Richmond, will speak of the influence of the seminary on the religious life of the whole city. Rev. Russell Cecil, D.D., for the Presbyterian Ministers' Association, will make an appraisal of the contribution of the seminary to the work of the Presbyterian Churches of Richmond.

At 8:00 p. m. of the same day the address of the Governor of Virginia will be made. Appearing on the platform at the same time will be Mr. John Stewart Bryan, leading business man, editor, churchman, neighbor and friend of the seminary, who will make an address on what Union Seminary means to the civic and commercial life of Richmond.

Four moderators will speak on this occasion. They are Rev. Thomas Cary Johnson, D.D., LL.D., of Richmond, moderator of the Synod of Virginia; Rev. E. D. Brown, D.D., of China Grove, N. C., moderator of the Synod of North Carolina; Rev. L. B. Hensley, of Beverly, W. Va., moderator of the Synod of West Virginia; Rev. J. W. Tyler, D.D., of Winchester, Ky., moderator of the Synod of Appalachia. These are the four Synods which own and control Union Theological Seminary.

Lees-McRae Institute—The 23d session of Lees-McRae Institute, Banner Elk, N. C., opened Thursday, April 12th, with a splendid attendance. For several days previous cars and wagons had been arriving from all directions, bringing girls and teachers. By Wednesday night the two dormitories were ringing with the voices of happy-faced girls. The "old girls," happy to greet each other again after the four months' separation, were expressing their joy over their return, were visiting the "new girls" in their rooms, playing games with them, and doing all in their power to help the teachers in their task of getting things into working order again.

The eight "old teachers" are heavy hearted this year over the loss of our leader and friend.

Over in the upper corner of the cemetery, near the church which he loved so well, and near the school for which he worked and prayed 23 years, is the resting-place of Mr. Tufts, a spot very dear to us all, a mound covered with a blanket of beautiful bronze galax leaves, with fresh flowers at the head.

Frequent visits are made there by little groups of us, and as we stand there, looking back over his years of service, and thinking of what his life has meant to us and this whole section, we thank our Father for it, and we take courage and try to face the future with faith and confidence.

Dr. Robert King, of Kingsport, Tenn., is to open the school with an address in the auditorium of our new North Carolina building, but there will be a notice of this later.

Will you not remember in your prayers Mr. Tufts' son, who is taking up his father's work so bravely; the faculty and the student body of Lees-McRae? And will you not send us material help this year? Remember that we need your prayers.

Banner Elk, N. C.

Montreat Normal School—The Montreat Normal School was favored Sunday, March 25th, by having Dr. W. J. Martin, president of Davidson College, to deliver an address on the subject, "Having the Mind of Christ." The address was well adapted to the needs of the student body and was most timely and effective.

On Sunday, April 1st, Miss Sadie Buckland, missionary from Korea, delivered two addresses to the students, on missions in Korea; both of the addresses were most pleasing, instructive and inspiring. There are 17 volunteers for life service among the students in the school. These young women are earnest and consecrated and represent a high type of Christian womanhood.

On Saturday afternoon, March 30th, the faculty gave a beautiful reception in honor of Miss Buckland and Miss Clark, sister of one of the teachers.

On Monday night, April 2nd, the Junior class gave a reception to the Senior class. The decorations and refreshments were carried out in the class colors, green and white, and the whole affair was beautiful in design and execution.

The Montreat Normal has not been extensively advertised and many would be surprised to know the high standard which the school has attained in its brief history. It has a faculty of nine consecrated Christian teachers, all but one having their college degrees; it has an enrollment of over 90 students, over 70 of these being boarders. The Montreat Hotel is full to its capacity with students and teachers. The chapel and class rooms of the Anderson Auditorium are used for chapel and class rooms for the school.

The Montreat plant and management serve the school without charge and the major portion of the teachers' salaries are paid out of a scholarship fund given for this purpose. In this way the best service is rendered at the least possible cost. The school is doing work of a high order and yet the charge to the girls is but little more than nominal, the greater portion of the girls paying only the actual cost of table board. There are furnished rooms and class rooms for 350 students in the two hotels and Anderson Auditorium. As soon as funds are provided to pay a sufficient number of teachers every room can be easily filled with students. No money can be spent for Christian education to better advantage than that which is being invested in this institution. We urgently need just now funds sufficient to pay the faculty in full this year, and contributions to this end will be highly appreciated.

Chicora College for Women—The commencement exercises at Chicora College for Women will be held this year earlier than usual, and will be opened with the annual music week. The program of music week will begin May 7th, and close May 12th. The commencement program will begin May 13th and will continue through the 14th.

Rev. Alexander Sprunt, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Charleston, will preach the baccalaureate sermon, and Rev. T. C. Skinner, D.D., pastor of the First Baptist Church of Columbia, will preach the annual sermon before the Christian Endeavor Society, both of these coming Sunday, May 13th.

The annual Alumnae Association meeting and luncheon will take place Monday, May 14th, at 1:00 o'clock, and the class day exercises will be held that afternoon at 5:00 o'clock.

The graduating exercises will be held the night of the 14th and the annual literary address will be delivered by Rev. J. B. Green, D.D., professor of theology at the Columbia Theological Seminary. Diplomas will be awarded to 21 graduates.

YOUR CAST OFF CLOTHES WILL SAVE LIVES

Pneumonia and Acute Rheumatism in Armenia Can Be Stamped Out Next Winter by Discarded Garments From North Carolina and America

An appeal to all Tarheels to contribute articles of clothing which they cast off for the winter to the saving of human lives in the Bible lands, is going out this week from headquarters of the Near East Relief in Raleigh.

Josephus Daniels, honorary State chairman; Col. George H. Bellamy, State chairman; Governor Morrison and 25 other members of the State Executive Committee of this great humanitarian organization, are asking North Carolinians to make a special effort between now and May 1st to contribute at least one complete set of warm clothing each.

Dr. E. C. Brooks, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, is State clothing chairman this year, in active charge of the work. Dr. Brooks has set the State's goal as the saving of 30,000 lives, which means that this many complete suits of warm clothing, in which there is still some wear, must be contributed.

May 1st has been designated as "Bundle Day" by Dr. Brooks, and so declared in a proclamation to the people of the State by Governor Morrison. Schools, churches, women's organizations, and clubs of all kinds are asked to take or send as much clothing as possible to the local Near East Relief chairman, or to ship it by parcel post or freight to the Near East Relief Clothing Warehouse in Raleigh.

In spite of the generosity of Americans, many women and children were found last winter who had dragged themselves for miles, suffering from acute rheumatism or pneumonia, simply for lack of clothing. Others just simply froze to death.

Dr. Brooks and the State committee are especially desirous of receiving as many as they can obtain of coats, trousers, dresses, sweaters, wool gloves, mittens, boots and shoes, shop-worn garments, blankets, sheets (for bandages), new cloth or garments, and any heavy warm clothing in which there is still some wear.

The Near East Relief cannot use laces, silks, veils, chiffons, evening clothes, satin slippers, muslin underwear, high-heeled shoes, straw or frame hats, or silk stockings. If any considerable quantity of these articles are available, it is suggested that a community sale or auction be held and the proceeds turned over to the Near East Relief county chairman or sent to Robert A. Brown, State treasurer, 901 Citizens Bank Building, Raleigh, N. C.

WANTED — Pupil nurses for the Rocky Mount Sanitarium, at Rocky Mount, N. C. High School graduates preferred. For further information, apply to the Superintendent.

"UNDERSTANDEST THOU?"

"Understandest thou what thou readeest?" (Acts 8:30) Bible readers require "Dummelow's Bible Commentary" in order to get the best in the reading and study of "The Book of Books." "Dummelow's Bible Commentary" is authoritative, comprehensive, usable. Size 5x8x2 1-2. 1,200 entertaining, inspiring, educative pages. Price postpaid $3. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

Story and Incident

THE CHURCH OF THE LIGHTED LAMPS

Elizabeth Cheney, in N. Y. Christian Advocate

Many years before the late war an American woman who loved the byways of Europe better than the highways, found herself at dusk in a small village in the mountains which form a natural rampart between Saxony and Bohemia, just above the pass where the River Elbe, after meandering aimlessly in the latter country, suddenly seems to gather force and purpose to reach the far-away Northern Sea.

She entered the village on foot, alpenstock in hand, and a small kit of actual necessities on her back, gloriously independent—in her short tweed skirt and jacket, stout boots and little green felt hat with its eagle's feather—of wind and weather, of time-tables and porters and even of the traveling companion who does not see eye to eye with one's self, but wants to do the other thing and go in the opposite direction. She was a trifle short of breath from the last steep incline of the path as she entered the outskirts of the village, and sat down to rest for a few moments on a flat rock by the wayside. The western sky still held something of the dying glory of a magnificent sunset, and against the dimming rose and faded gold the towering summit of the mountain loomed savagely above the ranks of dark firs and the ruins of a mediæval castle which was silhouetted on its projecting crag, the once proud protector of the clustered roofs on the small plateau below it. In the midst of the short, narrow streets was a paved square surrounded on three sides by small shops and a primitive inn, but on the side toward the mountain a flight of wide, worn stone steps led up to a church of rough-hewn stone with a low belfry. As the woman saw the lights begin to gleam in the windows of the villagers she rose reluctantly, for the evening star in that clear air seemed very near, and the music of the Elbe far below sang with the star of the goodness of God.

The traveler made her way quite confidently to the inn. She knew what to expect. It would be rough but scrupulously clean, with walls and floors of unpainted boards. There would be a thick, soft feather bed daily beaten and sunned, coarse homespun linen smelling of the mountain grasses, a huge, red feather puff, quite pleasant to think of now that the autumn wind was rising. For food she would find a thick vegetable soup, brown bread thickly sprinkled with anise seeds, and cheese of goatsmilk. She had her own tea in her kit, and some loaf sugar. She was greeted cordially at the door of the Green Eagle, and her understanding of the dialect was quite sufficient for the interchange of information. "Madame, the high-born, has come to visit the castle? It is indeed a wonderful castle, though few tourists seem to know about it. In the morning Johann will take her all over it. Yes, the village is not Catholic, but Lutheran from the time of the Great Elector of Saxony. Martin Luther himself had visited the castle—in fact had been in hiding there."

The Lamp Carriers

After supper the traveler went up to her room, which overlooked the square. The church bell was ringing for service, and out from the narrow streets came people, sometimes in twos or threes, often singly, and each bearing a quaint little object which in the dimly lighted square she could not identify. She resumed her hat and coat and slipped down into the street. Then she made out that the objects were iron or bronze lamps of ancient design, little oil lamps with wicks, perchance such as the wise and foolish virgins had set out with to meet the bridegroom. She noted also that although the bell still pealed for service, only the steps to the church were lighted. Gradually a faint glow outlined the long windows. She was about to follow the steady stream of church-goers, when a house door slammed loudly behind her and a woman stepped down hurriedly, also bearing a lamp. She was a little late, for the sound of the choral, solemn and rich and sweet, floated down into the square. The traveler could not restrain her curiosity, and begging a thousand pardons, accosted the woman, saying, "Please, I am a stranger. Will you tell me why you carry a lamp to church?"

The woman paused with a slight air of impatience. "Won't you walk along with me?" she said, "for I am late. You see there's no other way of lighting our church. It is a very old custom in this village, for when the duke who lived in the castle in 1550 built the church, he endowed it and put into writing his wish that the folk should each bring his or her own lamp. He even furnished the lamps. The church loans them to the families year by year as they have need. It's a queer thing, madame, and it is not convenient, but we've never departed from the old custom."

"I should think it would keep people from attending the evening service," said the visitor.

"Oh, no, it works just the other way," said the woman. "You see it is called 'The Church of the Lighted Lamps.' Everybody that goes makes it a little brighter, and when a body is tempted to take her ease and stay at home, a body remembers that the dear old church needs everybody's lamp, and if your lamp isn't there there's so much less light; there's a lack that only you can make up for. We

STATEMENT
MANHATTAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
NEW YORK CITY

Condition December 31, 1922, as Shown by Statement Filed

Amount of Capital paid up in cash	$ 100,000.00
Amount of Ledger Assets December 31st of previous year, $19,301,711.41; Total	19,301,711.41
Premium Income, $2,055,293.45; Miscellaneous, $1,224,175.73; Total Disbursements—To Policyholders, $2,488,409.43; Miscellaneous, $956,749.50; Total	3,279,469.18
Business written during year—Number of Policies 3,682; Amount Business in force at end of year—Number of Policies 34,311; Amount	$ 3,445,158.93 10,485,305.00 71,418,185.00

Assets

Value of Real Estate (less amount of encumbrances),	$ 4,033,304.36
Mortgage Loans on Real Estate	6,608,767.73
Loans made to Policyholders on this Company's Policies assigned as collateral	4,061,561.39
Premium notes on Policies in force (of which $9,287.50 is for first year's premiums)	177,767.15
Net Value of Bonds and Stocks	3,516,578.00
Cash	527,551.08
Interest and Rents due and accrued	440,809.95
Premiums uncollected and deferred	194,158.76
All other Assets, as detailed in statement	16,395.10
Total	$19,776,893.62
Less Assets not admitted	70,218.82
Total admitted Assets	$19,706,674.80

Liabilities

Net Reserve, including Disability Provision	$17,945,609.55
Present value of amounts not yet due on Supplementary Contracts, etc.	221,534.39
Policy Claims	82,343.71
Dividends left with Company at interest	11,711.39
Premiums paid in advance	10,215.81
Unearned Interest and Rent paid in advance	80,705.27
Commissions due to Agents	11,174.80
Estimated Amount payable for Federal, State, and other Taxes ..	53,500.00
Dividends due Policyholders	21,140.58
Amounts set apart for future dividends	186,151.23
All other Liabilities, as detailed in statement	477,440.37
Total amount of all Liabilities, except Capital	$19,101,527.10
Capital paid up in Cash	$100,000.00
Unassigned funds (surplus)	505,147.70
Total Liabilities	$19,706,674.80

Business in the State of North Carolina During 1922

	ORDINARY
	No.	Amount.
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State in force December 31st of previous year	768	$ 1,306,318.00
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State issued during the year	38	108,925.00
Total	806	$ 1,505,243.00
Deduct ceased to be in force during the year	51	$ 106,799.00
Policies in force December 31st	755	$ 1,398,444.00
Losses and Claims incurred during year	8	9,902.00
Total	8	$ 9,902.00
Losses and Claims settled during year	8	$ 9,902.00
Premium Income—Ordinary		$42,586.08; Total $ 42,586.08

President, Thos. E. Lovejoy; Secretary, M. De Mott; Comptroller, F. D. Kirven; Actuary, W. N. Stanley; Home Office, New York City. Attorney for Service: Stacey W. Wade, Insurance Commissioner, Raleigh, N. C.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
INSURANCE DEPARTMENT
(Seal)

Raleigh, February 28, 1923.

I, STACEY W. WADE, Insurance Commissioner, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct abstract of the statement of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, of New York City, filed with this Department, showing the condition of said Company on the 31st day of December, 1922.

Witness my hand and official seal the day and date above written.

STACEY W. WADE,
Insurance Commissioner.

light our lamps at a torch in the ante-room, and set them in sockets in the book-racks in each pew. The pastor sees every empty socket and knows whose face and whose lamp should be right there where there's a shadow and no face at all. You see we each have our very own place and there can't anybody else occupy it, and there's the socket for one's own lamp, and one is missed so much if one stays away, besides missing the blessing. We need the blessing to tide us over from one Sunday to the next."

They had reached the foot of the steps. "Won't you come in?" said the woman kindly. So the traveler went along, and watched the woman kindle her wick at the torch, and they entered softly into the church, for prayer was being offered, and sat down on a bench by the door. While another choral was sung she thanked her companion, who moved forward and entered her own pew. It was in shadow until she came, for all the sockets but hers were empty. The traveler herself moved forward into the last pew. That too was unoccupied, and she noted that beside each empty lamp socket, under a small glass plate, was a name written on cardboard. The place where she sat belonged to one Anna Lindenbaum. Somehow her mind recalled a line in John's Gospel, "He calleth his own sheep by name," and yet another lovely phrase from an epistle, "The Lord knoweth them that are His." She wondered quaintly if the Lord missed Anna Lindenbaum's little lamp.

The Church Needs Everybody's Lamp

When she returned to the Green Eagle, before retiring for the night, the traveler wrote a letter to her sister, Mrs. Harvey Olcott, in the Middle West. The letter arrived late one winter afternoon, and Mrs. Olcott read it aloud to her husband at the dinner table, between the salad and the dessert. Mr. Olcott was an usher and a member of the official board in the First Methodist Church, and his wife was an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society, but they had both drifted out of the habit of going to the mid-week prayer meeting. At first their consciences had disquieted them a little, but after awhile they did not think any more about it. More people stayed away than went anyhow. Then they began to accept invitations for Wednesday night, and to invite guests for Wednesday night, and for them the most vital part of the church work no longer existed.

Silence reigned as the wife folded her sister Marion's letter and slipped it back into its envelope. It was an awkward silence, and to break it Mrs. Olcott said with a nervous little laugh, "Isn't Marion just the queerest girl to go poking about in such impossible places?" But her remark fell unheeded. A sentence from the letter was repeating itself in her husband's consciousness. "The dear old church needs everybody's lamp." Even while Ellen Olcott spoke, she too was listening perforce to another phrase, "We need the blessing to tide us over from Sunday to Sunday." She had almost forgotten there was such a thing as a "blessing." She used to know what it was, that tender warming of the heart, that breath from the heavenly hills, that peace which quieted and strengthened the weary spirit. She had found nothing to take the place of it.

She also lapsed into silence, and as they rose from the table and made their way to their accustomed easy chairs before the blazing hearth in the library, the church bell made itself heard in the stillness.

Which Shall it Be?

"Anything on for tonight, Nell?" asked her husband.

"Nothing special," she replied. "I

Speaking of Survey Week

Dr. W. W. Moore, President of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., says:

"The Church owes a vast deal in every way to the devotion and zeal of our Christian women, and not the least of the valuable service they are rendering is their canvass for an increased circulation of the MISSIONARY SURVEY. If they meet with the large success they deserve it will mean an increase of interest and vigor and fruitfulness in all the work of the Church."

Survey Week Comes May 6 to 13

As in the past, the Woman's Auxiliary is asked to conduct this canvass.

Make it a real success.

Think What It Would Mean

To have the SURVEY Coming Regularly to Each Home of your Church

During Survey Week make a special effort to put your Church on the Survey Honor Roll by getting one subscriber to every five resident Church members

In Clubs of Five or more, 75 cents per year
Single Subscriptions, $1.00

The Missionary Survey

Box 1176

Richmond, Va.

OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE, Oak Ridge, N. C.

T. E. Whitaker, President

Founded in 1852. Military. Courses thoroughly covering Literature, Science, Book-keeping, Short-hand, Typewriting, and Music. Eight buildings; electric lights, steam heat and shower baths. 350 acres in campus, athletic grounds, orchards, and farms. Beautiful lake nestling between hills covered with virgin forests. Healthful—1040 feet above sea level; accessible location near Greensboro. Sane, moral influences. Costs reasonable. $125 for the year. Fall session opens first Tuesday in Sept. each year. Write for illustrated catalogue. Address Oak Ridge Institute, Oak Ridge, N. C.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA SUMMER SCHOOL

Thirty-Sixth Session : : June 18-September 7, 1923

First Term, June 18-July 28—Second Term, July 27-September 7

Standard Courses in the Regular Departments of the University. Cultural and Professional Courses leading to the A. B. and A.M. Degrees. High Class Recreational Features and Entertainments of an educational character. Able Faculty of Trained Specialists. Spacious campus, modern library and laboratory facilities, delightful climate, highest service. Low cost. Write for complete announcement.

N. W. WALKER, Director : : : : Chapel Hill, N. C.

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach. R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship.

For catalogue and information, write—
Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President,

Clinton, S. C.

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

A COLLEGE THAT DEVELOPS

Morals and Christian Character

As Well as Mind and Body

An A grade college, co-educational, of highest standards and scholarship.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Thorough instruction, excellent equipment, under Christian environment. Courses leading to A.B., and B.S. Degrees. Excellent Musical training and Home Economics. Able faculty. Fine athletic record. 10 modern buildings. Large campus. Healthful climate. Rates reasonable. Six miles west of Greensboro. For literature and other information, write—

THE PRESIDENT, GUILFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

WHERE TO GO TO COLLEGE?

There are three major considerations that determine the greatness, or the potential greatness, of an educational institution.

1. The Plant, including grounds, library, classrooms, laboratories, and apparatus.
2. The Faculty.
3. The Student body and its democratic standards.

In addition to the thirty-four buildings already on the campus, the State of North Carolina is this year putting $1,650,000 into new buildings and equipment. The library of 150,000 volumes is spending $24,000 annually for books and periodicals. Eight thousand volumes were received in 1922-1923, and one thousand and five magazines and learned journals were received on subscription.

The Faculty numbers 128 of the country's best scholars. Speaking of the student body of the University, Mr. Sherwood Eddy, of Yale University, who has spent the major portion of his life studying in four continents, said, that with one exception, it was the most seriously thoughtful and democratic group of students he had ever known.

Registration for fall quarter, September 25, 26, 1923.

For further information address

The Secretary to the President
UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C.

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A.B., B.S., B.M. Degrees

Catalog on Request

Address the Registrar

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules Effective January 28, 1923

Charlotte, N. C.

Daily Except Sunday as Shown Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

Foot's Sketches of North Carolina

Published 1848. Second edition exact reprint of the first. Thoroughly reliable. Invaluable to those interested in early history of Presbyterian Church and older families of the State. $2.25—Postpaid. REPRINT COMPANY, DUNN, N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

NEW CHURCH DESIGNS
"HIGHEST EFFICIENCY YET ATTAINED"
INDORSED BY CHURCH AUTHORITIES

WRITE US YOUR NEEDS

R. H. HUNT CO. ARCHITECTS
CHATTANOOGA TENN DALLAS TEX

Stop Laxatives
Which Only Aggravate Constipation

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

thought of 'phoning the Fowlers to come over for bridge."

"Well, suppose we step around to the prayer meeting?"

"Of course I'll go with you, Harvey, but I'll feel like a fish out of water."

"But we belong to the church, Nell, every Wednesday night, and if it has come to the pass, as it certainly has, that, first, we do not want to go, and secondly, we will feel out of place there, it strikes me that we've pitched our tent on dangerous territory, and had better face our present relation to God."

Mrs. Olcott had already risen to get her hat and coat.

"Here we go with our lamps," said her husband, smiling, as they went down the steps.

True it was as they entered the place of prayer a certain brightness seemed to attend them, for the face of the pastor lighted up as he saw them, and other hearts kindled joyously, and their own souls, which had been starving, unrealized by themselves, felt that it was good to be there. And when the time for testimonies came Harvey Olcott arose and told the story of the Church of the Lighted Lamps.

Before 10 o'clock they were again seated before their library fire, and Mrs. Olcott, pen in hand, was turning the leaves of her engagement calendar. For weeks ahead there was an entry for every Wednesday night, bridge parties, dinner parties, theaters and receptions. She was resolutely drawing a line through them all.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)

exclaimed gleefully, and how the children laughed!

"Let's have him for one of our friends," Sally suggested. "His name could be Mr. T. Board, and folks that didn't know his first name was Teetering might think it was Thomas!" Sally could read in the first reader.

After that when they went to dance on the bridge they said they were going down to play a game with Mr. T. Board, and Mr. T. Board certainly seemed to enjoy the fun and grew more springy every day.

When mother sat on the grass under the apple tree on the bank of the little brook, with the children close beside her, she used to tell stories about what happened when she was a little girl, and of course Mr. T. Board could hear if he chose to listen. Sometimes in that lovely place mother talked with the children about loving God and being good. Of course if Mr. T. Board had ears, he could hear if he chose to listen because it was always so still when mother talked solemnly about the love of God for little children and about being good. Mr. T. Board certainly might have heard it all, if—

"He is a good old Mr. T. Board," Tommie said one day. "He has never bounced one of us into the water."

"Prob'ly he thinks we are berry good children," baby Dick said.

When they stopped laughing Sally shook her head at Dick. "I believe," she insisted, "that Mr. T. Board has a 'berry' soft heart."

Next day was Sunday. Mother got the children ready for church early. She dressed them in their Sunday best and tied Tommie's big necktie, just so, and then kissed them all because they were her babies and looked so sweet.

"Now go," said she, "and sit quietly under the old apple tree while mother gets ready for church. And, children, please do not romp and play because I wish you to be spotless when I take you to grandpa's church."

Hand in hand the four walked across the grass and sat down under the old apple tree. After a minute baby Dick said,

"Mr. T. Board looks berry lonely."

"Somebody ought to have scrubbed him up for Sunday," Tommie added. He is wearing his same old play-day clothes."

"Let's walk over and say howdy to him," Flora suggested.

"I don't suppose that could do any harm," Sally agreed.

Then slowly, as if they were walking down the aisle in the white country church, Sally, in her white dress and blue sash, Flora, in her white dress and pink sash, Tommie and

TYPEWRITERS

New and Rebuilt For Sale, Rent or Exchange

S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

THE LIFE OF OUR SAVIOUR

Papini's "Life of Christ," perhaps the most realistic, interesting and inspiring ever published. Just off the press. Price postpaid $3.50. J. T. Norsworthy, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

Senior at Davidson College who will graduate in June wants summer work. Good musician. Would like to help some pastor in young people's work. References: The Faculty, Davidson College. Write, care Box 293, Davidson, N. C.

Church Furniture
WORK OF THE HIGHEST QUALITY AT REASONABLE PRICES
Write for Catalogue
BJDDE & WEIS MFG. CO.
JACKSON, TENNESSEE

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.

Salisbury, N. C.

Anything in...
CEMETERY WORK

Satisfaction our Motto

A card will bring full information.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President.

207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds

Ideal Surroundings

Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address

Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D.

Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen, Ar.	45	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	40	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	s 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	f 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
8:00 pm	9:55 am	9:53 am	19	Rae ford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	f 1:25 pm
f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	s 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	s 12:55 pm
f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jet.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	f 12:33 pm
f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
11:30 am	s 11:15 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	s 4:45 pm	s 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

Baby Dick in their white suits with red bows tied under their chins, all walked in their white socks and black patent leather slippers, straight into temptation.

Mr. T. Board gave a warning creak when Baby Dick stepped upon the bridge. Afterward, Sally was sure he was trying to say:

"Oh, children, children, why don't you obey your beautiful mother and sit quietly under the apple tree until she is ready for church! Oh, children!"

Anyway, they didn't; and in three minutes they were playing with Mr. T. Board whether he wished to play or not as merrily as if it were Saturday morning instead of the lovely country Sabbath. Those four children clung together and danced up and down harder and harder, until—they broke—Mr. T. Board's—heart!

With a crash his heart broke square in two in the middle, and down went the children to the bottom of the brook! They bumped their heads, they bumped their toes and all four were dripping wet.

"Look at us," wailed Sally. Grandpa, grandma and mother looked. They heard the crash and the screams and came running in time to see the four walking up the little green slope toward the house.

Quickly and silently mother and grandma changed the children's clothes and took them to church.

And in grandpa's pew that Sunday morning, four little children wore on the outside their Monday gingham; on the inside they wore hearts that were sad—as the minister could plainly see. But their four hearts were not broken square in two like Mr. T. Board's because before sunset they laughed again.

Sally is a grandmother herself now, and she told me this story only the other day. She says that if you do anything you know is really wrong, you will never, never forget it. And that may be worse than what happened to poor, tender-hearted Mr. T. Board.

Sparkles

"A man shadowed me all the way home yesterday."

"Did you scream?"

"Of course not; he was carrying my parasol."—Purple Cow.

"Your wife has a strong mind and a firm chin, Mr. Henpeck."

"Yes," replied Mr. Henpeck, "and they do superb teamwork."—Judge.

"Is the baby strong?"

"Well, rather. You know what a tremendous voice he has?"

"Yes."

"Well, he lifts that five or six times an hour."—Victorian.

What Every Infant Knows

That he is a boofle-ofle, lumpy-dumpy, so he is.

That he mussen ky!

That he has rosy-posy tootsy tootsy-wootsies!

How big he is.

Where his curls are.

Who's a tunnin' itsy bitsy lump o' sooda.

How the mooly-cow goes.

That he is knowing for his age.

That he is Gamma's b'essedest angel!

How the rooster goes.

That he must pat-acake pretty for the ladies.

BUT, the Infant of today does NOT know how the Horsie goes!

—Carolyn Wells, in New York Sun.

WANTED—Position as stenographer by qualified young lady. References furnished. Address P. O. Box 405, Bamberg, S. C.

WANTED—Young women to take nurses' training. Good course offered. Unusual advantages. Write to Superintendent of Nurses, Westbrook Sanatorium, Richmond, Va.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The STIEFF TONE

Is famous with three generations of music lovers. It has never been duplicated. It is the expression of a passion for perfection that has actuated three generations of piano makers.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 99c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS.

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $1.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

No. 3407---$57.50

There is an elegance in a handsome library table that few other pieces of furniture possess. We are showing a great variety of library and sofa tables.

We prepay freight or deliver out-of-town orders by truck.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., APRIL 25, 1923

No. 17

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
Report of Committee of Foreign Missions	1
The Doctrinal Epidemic	1
The Work of the Ministry	1
"Here Am I, Send Me"	1
The Law of Supply and Demand in the Movies	2
CONTRIBUTED—
China's Call to Christendom—By Rev. Lacy L. Little	3
"As Ye Go, Preach," or Personal Evangelism—By C. E. Paxson	4
North Carolina Sunday School Convention	4
To the Montreat General Assembly	4, 5
Advantages of the Plan Proposed by the Ad Interim Committee on Vacancy and Supply	5
New Testament Greek for Beginners—By Rev. J. Gresham Machen, D.D.	5
Without a Preacher—By Rev. S. W. Magill	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

REPORT OF COMMITTEE OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

The report of our Committee, which appeared last week, will be read with great interest, and we think with great satisfaction by the Standard's whole family.

There have been disturbing rumors in the air. Our Church is sensitive, and justly so, to the approaches of Modernism. "The old-time religion is good enough for us." The faith of our fathers not only satisfies us, but rejoices our hearts. We are neither looking for anything better, nor do we desire anything better. Hence we guard with jealous care our precious heritage.

The Standard has been among those apprehensive ones, and we have so expressed ourselves.

This report of the Committee should quiet all apprehension. It is evident that our sentinels are not asleep at their post. They are able to report that in the foreign field there are no enemies within our lines. Our missionaries are standing in the "old paths," and they are keeping a close look-out for any "false brethren" who might "come in privily and spy out our liberty."

When great interests are based on the confidence of the people, it is a matter of first importance that nothing be permitted to shake that confidence. We should be exceedingly cautious about exciting apprehensions.

As some charge that we in our zeal for sound doctrine in the foreign field, have weakened that confidence by recent editorials, we take pleasure in saying that such was not our purpose. On the other hand we urge our readers to study this report, given last week, and instead of criticism, let us all unite in wiping out the deficit and sending forth to the fields the young people who are waiting. Let us remember that it is easier to awaken than to allay apprehensions.

It is easier to fire a sedge field than it is to put it out. We have two organized agencies for watching over the orthodoxy of our missionaries. One of these agencies consists of the missions on the field. These are composed of members who are under vows to the Church. They are all under covenant bonds to preach the doctrines which we bid them preach. If rumor touches one of them, we should give it no hospitable entertainment till we have heard officially from the body. This much is due to the missionary. Rumor flies fast, and the further it flies the stronger it grows. It should be arrested and held in durance vile till it can be confronted with official statements from the mission. If the mission is divided in its judgment, both sides should be heard, but it should be heard first of all by the Executive Committee. This is the other organized agency for guarding the orthodoxy of our missionaries. To this Committee the missionaries have given their pledges, and from them they have received their commission. Their first responsibility is to the Committee, and through it should make their voice heard. The Church should not forget that the Foreign Mission Committee is not the same thing as the secretaries. Besides the secretaries, there are fourteen members on the Committee, all conservatively orthodox, and several of them what we are fond of calling hard-headed business men, high-class ruling elders. This committee should be the mediating body between the missions and the General Assembly. If the mission as a whole, or if any part of it, even one member, is not satisfied with the way the Committee decides matters brought before it, appeal can be taken to the General Assembly.

By this orderly method of procedure, both the orthodoxy of the Church is safeguarded, and the confidence of the Church is maintained. It is to be hoped that pending questions can be held in abeyance till these organized agencies have an opportunity to pass on them. When we are looking at matters on the opposite side of the globe, it is easily possible that we may not see all sides of them. The National Christian Council is a case in point. To us at this distance, it wears rather a dangerous aspect. Our North China Mission prefers to hold aloof from it. The Mid-China Mission is taking time to give it a close study. We can safely leave them to form their judgment from a viewpoint much more advantageous than the one we occupy. So in reference to other matters. We should avoid hasty judgments. We can afford to wait the well-considered actions of our missions as these are brought to us by our vigilant Foreign Mission Committee. Obviously at present there is no reason for alarm, but rather reason for thankfulness that the great cause so dear to our hearts, so dear to the Saviour, is being safely guided and guarded.

THE DOCTRINAL EPIDEMIC

Literally an epidemic is something that affects the people in mass. It is generally applied to diseases that spread among the people. We sometimes stretch the meaning of the word and apply it to an emotion that sweeps over the land. Figuratively we say an epidemic of fainting sweeps over a room when several faint at once, or when in the case of a fire, an audience springs to its feet and trample each other in their efforts to escape, we call it figuratively an epidemic of fear.

By the same stretch of the imagination we speak of the epidemic of false doctrine when all over the land, as at present, men are discarding old beliefs and accepting strange doctrines, for no other reason than it gives them an intellectual standing, and proves that they are not like sheep following their ancestors in their beliefs.

In the present instance this epidemic is affecting the people not so much as it is the ministry, who are the teachers of the people, and for that reason it ought to give us the more concern.

The student of human beliefs will tell you that seldom in the history of man have the beliefs of men been more unsettled.

There are various causes for this instability of belief, the chief among which is the contagion of fear. Men hear of other men giving up old beliefs, and they then begin to fear lest these men may be right while they are wrong.

Just at the present this unrest is manifesting itself in every denomination, and it takes many forms of unbelief, though when reduced to its last analysis it is simple rationalism, the testing of every belief by reason, and the rejection of the belief, if reason cannot understand it.

It had its day in the eighteenth century, and in the shape of deism it undermined the faith of many.

We find this new form of unbelief in every land, in England and Scotland, and in our own land.

The facts of the birth of Christ, His death as a substitute for man, and His resurrection, together with the infallibility of the inspired Word, are all tested by reason, and so trimmed down and divested of the miraculous that they are fit only for the scrap heap. The pulpit is especially active in spreading these strange doctrines, seemingly unconscious of holding up to men a Saviour who is not divine and therefore cannot save. Their position reminds us of what the Latins would call a "Lucus a non lucendo."

In England they are fighting over the verbal inspiration of the scriptures. In the London Missionary Society the divergence of views is so sharp that the Dean of Canterbury has severed his connection with this society.

In this country it is also spreading, and we read of one prominent man after another giving up cherished beliefs and joining the crowd.

N. C. Library Dept.

In the Methodist Church, South, there is much feeling on the subject, and the faithful are beginning to organize as a defensive measure. In the Baptist churches they are organizing unions for the same purpose. In our own Church this evil is as yet in an undeveloped stage. Here and there we hear of some one who is beginning to waver, but the rank and file is still true to the old faith.

Let our ministers and people remember that while no court of the Church can control what a man believes, it can control the question whether he can teach his unbelief in one of the pulpits over which it has jurisdiction.

Our great hope is that this epidemic, like the flu, may have its day and then subside, as it has done in other ages of the Church. If science can isolate this germ as it is said to have done with the flu germ, we will forgive its attack upon the faith of our fathers.

Let us hope that our young ministers will stand by the old doctrines, and cling to the old truths by which their fathers and mothers lived, and in which they triumphantly died. Let their reputation for intellectuality rest upon something more reasonable than the rejection of old truths. Remember what Paul wrote to the Corinthians, those worshippers of worldly wisdom, "We are fools for Christ's sake," and also that their faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

THE WORK OF THE MINISTRY

The ministry in apostolic times had full directions for their work. Especially in the Pastoral Epistles we find their duties clearly laid down. That they were expected to work is very evident. The apostles themselves, when they asked for the appointment of deacons who should serve the tables, said that they would give themselves "continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word."

Though since then in every age and in every church there have been found men who shirked work and did not give themselves energetically to the ministry of the Word, as a class they have been faithful to their duties. In their desire to fulfill their office they have evidently overdone their duty, with the result that in the large churches they have had to decide between giving up or becoming physical wrecks.

When the apostles defined their work as giving themselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word, they did not have in mind the many duties of this age that are crushing the life out of the city pastor. Since that day, especially in the modern church, there has been such a multiplication of the machinery of church management that only the strongest men have been able to stand up under it. As a result many are dropping out and the church is thereby suffering. This great evil is the direct result of the mechanical conception of the church. Originally it was to preach the Gospel and to bring men to Christ. Now it seems to be patterned after the great commercial organizations. Its duties have increased, and now, in addition to looking after the souls of men, the care of their bodies has also been added. We have the social Gospel, a phase of work that deacons were expected to look after, with the result that the minister's duties remind us of the demands made upon the Prince of Wales, in England.

We hear a great deal about getting back to the simple Gospel. No doubt many of the modern preachers long to get back to the original duties of the apostles, when the minister could confine himself to praying and preaching, and did not feel called upon to run the affairs of the city or the state.

"HERE AM I, SEND ME"

About 30 of our young people have answered the Lord's call, "Whom shall I send?" and to the Church they are saying, "Here am I, send me," so that upon the Church rests the responsibility of this delay, this neglect of willing service.

In another column will be found a statement from our Nashville Committee that if any church, auxiliary, or individual will pledge as much as $300 per annum of new foreign mission money, or more if possible, one of these thirty will be assigned who will sail when the whole $2,700 is pledged.

Let every steward of the Lord's money examine his accounts. Perhaps he may find that there is some of it that can be wisely invested in one of these thirty young people.

THE LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND IN THE MOVIES

The decent people of the country have been trying to control the moving picture display. They propose, and in many places do have censors, whose duty it is to see that nothing obscene shall be shown.

Mr. Hayes, however, much as some may criticize him, seems anxious that the industry shall be elevated and made a means of public benefit. His critics, we feel sure, do not fully realize the difficulties he has to encounter, among which may be mentioned the cupidity of the leading men and the popular craving for the salacious. The man-

IN THE HOUSE OF THE RULER

By Margaret E. Sangster

There was woe in the house of the ruler,
The dear little daughter was ill.
Like a lily she lay on her pillow,
All pallid and frozen and still.
The flush of the fever had left her,
And faint came the fluttering breath;
Till at last, in the sight of her mother,
She slept in the silence of death.

Her father had gone for the Master—
The Master whose touch brought relief;
Whose step at the door would mean healing,
Whose presence would banish their grief,
Ah, why had he traveled so slowly,
Why tarried so long and so late;
Till the angel who walks in the shadow,
Had come in the darkness of fate?

Keen rose the sad wail of the mourners,
And one who bore tidings ran fast,
"Thy daughter is dead, and the hour
When the Master might save her is past."
But sweet was the voice of the Master:
"Fear not, she shall yet be made whole."
And faith, like the tide of great waters,
Rolled in on the man's smitten soul.

Then swift to the home that was stricken
Came the rush of a throng at the door.
"Make way, for the Master comes hither;
"Stand out of his path, we implore."
Then the crowd fell apart at his bidding,
And hushed, they awaited the word
That should come from the dim, latticed chamber,
Whence the sobs of the mother were heard.

At the couch of the dear little maiden,
Stood Christ with a light in his face,
That somehow brought heaven's own glory
To brighten the sorrowful place.
He spoke and his accents were kingly,
As one who held tryst with the skies.
In his hand he took hers and said softly:
"Wake, daughter, I bid thee arise."

There was joy in the house of the ruler;
They lifted their praise to the name
Of Jesus the blessed, whose presence
Brought gladness wherever he came.
The dear little daughter was with them,
Their only, their sweetest, their own,
And the song in their hearts was the deeper,
That it followed the cry and the moan.

agers of the movies often defend their actions by pleading that they give the people what the people want, and that therefore the blame for offensive pictures lies with the people. While we are no defenders of these managers, we must confess that it has always seemed to us that they were nearer correct in their contention than our people were disposed to give them credit for.

Last week, in this city, this was shown. A picture was to be presented to which the city censors and the Public Welfare Officer objected. They insisted that it be withdrawn, and he, in order to justify himself, put the question to his large audience. Of that large audience only two voted against it, thus showing that the public was indeed getting what the public wanted. The case was taken to the Recorder's Court, who, after thinking over the matter all night, decided the next day in favor of the indecent show. We mention this case to show that the real blame for indecent shows is with the public. If they want clean shows they can get them. We must confess that we cannot suggest any way of cleansing our movies, except by cleansing the audience.

What may impress censors in one place may seem harmless to those in another place, and what may be turned down by the censors may be upheld by some judge. There is evidently no fixed standard of moral cleanness.

After all, in reforming the movies as well as in doing away with war, we have to fall back upon the Gospel of Jesus Christ. When He dwells in every heart, all men will see alike.

Devotional

"LOVE NEVER FAILETH"

It never goes out of fashion. It is never cast aside like an antiquated robe. It is fit and beautiful in every time and season. It adds some light to the light of childhood. It adorns life's prime. It beautifies old age. It is a lovely garment that moth and rust can never consume and that death itself cannot destroy. We may take it with us through "the valley of the shadow," and we may wear it on the resurrection morning. It is always in fashion. "Love never faileth."—J. H. Jowett.

SEEN IN A BETTER LIGHT

The young woman sat sewing in a cool and shaded sitting room. She was in doubt as to which was the right side of the material which she had basted together. She appealed to the members of the family who were present. After some deliberation they all agreed on what they believed was the right side.

The young woman went on with her sewing, but in the morning when she carried the dress into a room on the sunny side of the house she saw that she had made it wrong side out. If, in the beginning, she had carried it into a better light, she would not have had to rip the dress and make it over.

In all our perplexities the best thing to do is to take them into a better light. A few minutes spent in prayer with our heavenly Father will enable us to see the puzzling problems in a clearer atmosphere.—Queen's Garden.

A SOUL'S QUEST FOR A FRIEND

Life is spent in a search for sympathy and understanding. We have many needs in this world—food, clothing, shelter, and a chance to work. But the great need is some one who is a true companion of the soul, receiving the confidences and confessions we long to make, giving back the encouragement we require, the affection without which we go famished through the years. Such a friendship is hard to establish. It demands time, and trust, and full appreciation of virtues as well as sensitiveness to the defects, but always an unflinching love that forgets the evil and treasures the good. Stevenson says in a fine paragraph: "In this world of imperfections we gladly welcome even partial intimacies. And if we find but one to whom we can speak out our heart freely, with whom we can walk in love and simplicity without dissimulation, we have no ground of quarrel with the world or God." Most of us have acquaintances without number, associates in groups, companions and comrades whose society is a comfort and a pleasure. But fortunate above most is the one who in all the fine intimacies of affection has a friend.—Exchange. "There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother."

OUR TRUE WEALTH

In a public park in Manchester, England, is a statue to the memory of Joseph Brotherton, who represented that city in Parliament for many years. On it is this inscription: "My wealth consisteth not in the abundance of my riches, but in the fewness of my wants." Let us learn to make the most of the enjoyments we have, and not worry about those we have not. We have friends, and home, and health, and hope—let us enjoy them. We can, indeed, so educate our will power that it will focus our thoughts on the bright side of things, will lead us to see the good we have, until we shall attain such a spirit of happiness as will make us rich. The habit of making the best of things, of always looking on the bright side of things, is a fortune in itself. To make the least of our lacks, and to make the most of our present enjoyments, will go far toward giving us the riches of contentment—a good suggestion for ourselves and our people.—The Expositor.

CHINA'S CALL TO CHRISTENDOM

By Rev. Lacy L. Little

While the Student Volunteer Convention was in session in Kansas City, some years since, the following cablegram was received: "China is choosing her destiny. Why make it Christian?" Attached to this message were the signatures of C. T. Wang and several kindred spirits. C. T. Wang, the son of a Chinese pastor, completed his studies at Yale University and became a zealous Christian leader among his own people. When, under the republican Government, the first Parliament assembled, he was elected vice-president of the Senate. Since this Parliament was dissolved, he has occupied many positions of responsibility, steadily gaining ground in the esteem of his fellow-countrymen.

"China is choosing her destiny." What a wonderful destiny this is! Lord Woolsey, of the English Army, predicted some years since that the Chinese would eventually rise up as a great military power and conquer the world. Dr. Pentecost, the famous evangelist, has well expressed the possibilities of the future when he said: "It is no longer a question as to what we are going to do with the four hundred millions of China but as to what they are going to do with us." Better still is that fine sentiment of the sainted Maltbie Babcock: "Let us not talk so much about the 'Yellow Peril' as about the 'Golden Opportunity' now presented to the Church of Christ in China."

The reader will recall the fact that not many years since, the partition of China among the great powers of the earth was under very serious consideration. To the lamented Christian statesman, John Hay, then Secretary of State for the United States, more than to any other influence is due the credit, for the maintenance of the integrity of China and the "open door" or commerce with all the nations of the earth. It was he who said: "Whoever understands China and her people, socially, economically, politically and religiously, has a key to world-politics for the next five centuries."

The Call of China's Crisis

About one-fourth of the entire population of the globe, crowded together in an area only a little larger than that of the United States is now undergoing a wonderful transformation. A well-known writer on oriental questions describes the change as follows: "The last and strangest fact in Chinese history is that a nation that originated in time with Babylon and Assyria and advanced rapidly for several hundred years, a nation which ceased to grow some 25 hundred years ago, a nation which retained for all these centuries some living sap in its apparently dead branches, is now suddenly blossoming out and giving promise of large fruitage." Again, he writes: "If China simply adopts the material civilization of Western nations without accepting the spiritual life and moral discipline which underlie and are the cause of our material progress, then the new civilization will be rotten before it is ripe."

China styles herself "The Middle Kingdom." In years gone by—for many centuries, in fact—she regarded herself as the very center of the fairest civilization of the world, and all the other families of the earth were but the fringes thereof. She was "The Flowery Kingdom": within her bounds were to be found the choicest flowers of refinement and culture, and all the other nations were but the weeds of the field. At the hands of England and France and Germany and Russia and Japan, she has had a rude awakening, has been shamefully humiliated, has confessed her weakness and insufficiency and is crying out for help.

The leaders of these multitudinous millions are casting off the old, outgrown civilization, of which they had good reason to be proud, and are endeavoring to array themselves in the bright, new garments of the Western world. They find themselves sadly behind, in the onward march of the nations, and are making a strenuous effort to place their country alongside the great powers of the earth. At the beginning of the twentieth century railways were practically unknown in China. Now, more than 6,000 miles have been completed, including several trunk lines, while many other systems are being projected, to be constructed when a stable government has been set up. An elaborate network of telegraph lines is binding the 22 provinces into close communication with each other. A finely developed postal service is scattering hundreds of daily newspapers all over the land, and, as a result, the people are becoming more and more enlightened in the things of the outer world. Mining syndicates are being organized and China's immense mineral deposits are being laid bare. The telephone has been established in the leading cities, while electric lights are making their streets to shine with a new brilliancy. Silk filature and cotton factories, flour and cotton seed oil mills are becoming common in some of the large centers of industry. A wireless system has been established by which messages may be sent from Peking 1,500 miles to Canton, and a government line of aeroplanes is making its contribution to the new order of things.

Contributed

But there is another side to the picture: along with these instruments of Western civilization, which make for China's enlightenment, there are many other forces at work that aim at her destruction. While the importation of opium from other lands and the production of it within her own bounds has been prohibited, large quantities are being brought in by smugglers and the derivatives of opium are being scattered broadcast in the form of destructive medicines. Various kinds of spirituous liquors from foreign countries are adding their woes to those being wrought out by the intoxicating drinks of the natives. The writings of Darwin, John Stuart Mill, Herbert Spencer and Huxley are being widely distributed among the scholar class, which is already too well prepared for their reception by the agnosticism of Confucius. A new "Intellectual Movement" is being fostered by a number of the leading educators in government school circles, who are weary of the old systems of religion and are not satisfied with Christianity. They have determined to discard the whole lot, with the exception of certain ethical principles which appeal to them. These they will construct into a new moral code for China.

Such in bare outline is the crisis that confronts the Church of Christ in a land that is bristling with wonderful opportunities. Some years since, after hearing a report of conditions existing among the Chinese, President Wilson gave expression to the following, which is equally true today:

"Why, this is the most amazing and inspiring vision that could be offered to you, this vision of that great sleeping nation suddenly cried awake by the voice of the Christ. Could there be anything more tremendous than that? Could there be any greater contribution to the future momentum of the moral forces of the world than could be made by quickening this force which is being set afoot in China?"

The Call of the Chinese Church

Christendom, in answering China's call, must work through the Chinese Church. The divine plan for the extension of the Kingdom can only be carried out by the winning of disciples to Christ who shall be able to "teach others also." To what extent has the Church of the West been faithful in discharging this sacred obligation to the perishing millions of the East?

In 1807, Robert Morrison, the first Protestant missionary to China, arrived at Canton. For seven weary years he patiently toiled, in the translation of the Bible into Chinese and in the creation of an English-Chinese dictionary, before the first Protestant convert to Christianity was baptized. Later, other missionaries from Great Britain and the United States joined him, but their propagation of the Gospel was done under strict government control. In 1842, after 35 years of faithful toil, there were only six Protestant Christians in all the land. In 1922, the number of baptized Protestant converts is reckoned at 375,000. A Chinese Independent Church has been organized, with members enrolled from self-supporting churches in many sections of the country. The Chinese Christians who have been gathered in by representatives of the Presbyterian Church in various parts of the world have been bound together in Presbyteries and Synods and in one General Assembly for all China. The total enrollment of Chinese Presbyterians is from 75,000 to 100,000.

In May of 1922 a general conference was held in Shanghai, consisting of more than 1,000 delegates, chosen by the missionary organizations and the Chinese Church, in which the representation was about equally divided between missionaries and native Christians. This marked the first occasion on which the Chinese had been invited to take part in a general conference. The chairman of the conference was a Chinese of outstanding ability and the native brethren rendered distinguished service as members of the various committees. By general consent, the time has arrived when the Chinese Church should undertake in large measure the direction of affairs in the upbuilding of the Kingdom in China.

The membership of the Chinese Church has to a large extent been won from the ranks of the middle classes, but the number of men of influence who have professed Christ is rapidly increasing. Many men of high standing in government circles have announced themselves as favoring Christianity, while a few of this class have been enrolled as church members. Yuan Shik Kai, the first President of the Chinese Republic, said:

"I am a Confucianist, but I confess that our morals are not equal to the crisis."

Li Yuan Hung, who succeeded Yuan Shih Kai as president, and, after being deposed for a number of years, has been recently restored, said:

"Jesus is better than Confucius. We welcome the American missionary."

A famous quotation from Confucius is:

"Wei ts seng: Yien ts sz?"

Translated, this means:

"I do not know life:

How can I know death?"

This represents the attitude of the average Confucian scholar toward the future life. To state it somewhat more clearly, he means:

"I am not familiar with the mysteries of this life: why do you ask me about the life to come?"

What a privilege and responsibility to be permitted to proclaim to him One who announced Himself to be "The Way, the Truth and the Life!"

A notable movement, constituting a powerful call from the Church in China, has sprung up among the soldiers of the land. Gen. Feng Yu Hsiang, who has been called the "Stonewall Jackson of China," is at the head of this movement. One of the strongest impressions made upon his life as a young soldier was by the triumphant death of a young woman who as missionary to China perished under the Boxer sword, of which he was an eye-witness. Later, he was much touched by the kindness received from a medical missionary, who would accept no compensation for services rendered. His open profession of Christ was under the influence of Dr. John Mott and Mr. C. T. Wang, in the first year of the Chinese Republic.

Young Feng was steadily promoted until he was placed in command of a division of troops at Changteh, in Hunan Province. Here, under his influence and leadership, a notable revival of religion sprang up among his officers and men. A number of missionaries were called upon to take part in this movement. Perhaps Dr. Jonathan Goforth, of the Canadian Presbyterian Mission, was most abundantly used to reap the fruits of this wonderful quickening. The following is a part of his graphic description of his experience among these troops:

"Truly this army is more entitled to the name of Christian than any other army on earth. On the city gates, on prominent places on the streets, and on the walls of their own barracks, in large Chinese letters, appear the best sayings from their sages and the most telling passages from the Word of God, such as, 'God so loved the world,' 'A new commandment give I unto you,' 'Put on the whole armor of God.' I have seen these men carrying heavy loads of sand for road repairing; I have seen them at drill; I have seen them at their sports; and have never heard a foul word, nor a cross word, nor have I seen a cross look. They seem as happy as the day is long, and, as one missionary remarked, 'the officers are like a happy family of brothers.' You never see any idling or carousing on the streets. When they come into an audience there is no buffoonery. No audience could be better behaved.

"On the fifteenth day, we began the first meeting at 6:15 a. m., and baptized 960 men and, with the help of other missionaries, we held 11 communion services, at which 4,606 officers and men commemorated the dying love of their Saviour. The men who were baptized had been under instruction for at least a year. The general seemed wonderfully pleased to see his boys come forward in such numbers to confess the Lord in baptism. The colonels served every one all day and never seemed to tire. The joy of the Lord was their strength.

"The last meeting closed at 6:15 p. m. It was perhaps the greatest day of the Lord China has ever seen, but there are greater days ahead if the Lord tarry. May God inspire many young lives to come over to China and share in them!"

A remarkable incident occurred at an encampment of Shantung soldiers located at Shanghai. One day a dog wandered into this camp with some leaves of a book in his mouth. The soldiers caught the dog and read the fragment of the book. It was a portion of the Word of God. They became much interested and followed the dog to a Christian hospital near by and asked for more of this kind of literature. This was, of course, gladly given them. As a result Dr. Goforth and a Chinese evangelist visited this camp and 200 men were enrolled as enquirers. If God can so use the mouth of a dog to deliver His Word can He not use you and me?

The "New Thought"—usually called "Modernism"—is a real menace to the young church in China which sounds forth a veritable S. O. S. call to the Church of the Western world. In the opinion of the writer, the history of the Church of Christ all over the world does not record a finer opportunity ever presented for constructive, aggressive service than is offered to the representatives of our beloved Church in China by the onslaught of this new enemy of the Cross of Christ. Our well-known loyalty to the Word of God and to the vicarious atonement of His Son, the thorough-going preparation our young men and women are receiving in our schools of the prophets and our liberal attitude toward all other evangelical denominations give our Church a special fitness to answer this urgent call for help.

China has also her "noble army of martyrs" whose heroic death should stir our hearts to more sacrificial giving and living. During the Boxer outbreak of 1900, it is estimated about 15,000 Christians laid down their lives for Christ. Among these there is perhaps no more conspicuous instance of loving loyalty than was furnished by a Chinese preacher who was caught by these bloody-handed murderers and told that he must die because he was a follower of Jesus. He was not moved by the thought of death but began to exhort these hearts-of-stone to accept Jesus as Saviour. This enraged them so that one of the soldiers drew out the tongue of the young preacher and cut it off with his sword. With bleeding lips and outstretched hands, he continued to plead with them in mute entreaty, when one of their number cut off his hands. Still, he stood before them, stretching out those stumps of arms until they cut him down with their swords.

Does not the blood of this faithful servant of Christ, together with that of the hundreds of other Chinese heroes who bled for Him, cry out to you and to me for help?

The Call of the Christless Chinese

While we rejoice over the 375,000 converts who have been enrolled under the banner of the Cross, let us not forget the well nigh 400,000,000 who wander in darkness and death! Let us not forget that every 24 hours 25,000 souls go down to death in China, nearly all of whom have no knowledge of the way of life! This constitutes the greatest "Macedonian Call" on earth, today.

"Through midnight gloom from Macedon

The cry of myriads as of one;

The voiceful silence of despair

Is eloquent in awful prayer;

The soul's exceeding bitter cry,

'Come o'er and help us or we die!'"

"AS YE GO, PREACH," OR PERSONAL EVANGELISM

(Matthew 10:7)

By C. E. Paxson

The literal obedience to this command of Christ was illustrated to me years ago, when, walking through a crowded street, with an evangelist, who was not only such in the pulpit but at all times and in all places, I heard him quote Scripture in rather a loud voice, addressed apparently to no one in particular, such as "The wages of sin is death;" "The gift of God is Eternal Life," etc. At first I did not understand his object, but he quoted the above Scripture in reply to a question from me. If, as we believe the Word of God is the imperishable seed of which when sown in the human heart through the ear, at least a part shall bear the wonderful fruit of eternal life, how we should take advantage of every opportunity to sow it. There are so many overlooked opportunities, like the above.

The Engineer's Device

I heard of a railroad engineer in Kentucky who was converted and desired to testify to others, but had but little opportunity, until the novel idea occurred to him of using his engine whistle to remind people of saving truth, so when passing through a town the startled dwellers at times would hear his whistle in short "toots" playing such familiar tunes as "I am so glad that Jesus loves me," or "Jesus loves me, this I know."

"Love Will Find a Way"

This old saying usually applied to earthly things is surely true of the most important things in life.

Rev. F. C. Spurr, of London, relates an instance unparalleled, I think, of a poor girl in Australia who found a way through obstacles apparently insurmountable. He says: "When I was in Australia, in my ministry for five years in Melbourne, I kept hearing stories about a woman, a cripple, and I never believed them. I did not think the stories could be true. And I went one day and took my eldest boy to see her. I went to offer comfort to her, but before I had been in the room ten minutes I found it was I who was receiving instruction, broken down, and dissolved in a flood of emotion. When she was 18 she was seized with a dread malady, and the doctor said to save her life he must take off the feet. Both feet went. They followed the disease up the body, took off her legs to the knees, still followed it up, and cut as far as the trunk. Then it broke out in her hands. The first arm went to the shoulder, and the second to the shoulder, and when I saw that woman, Miss Higgins, all that remained of her was a trunk, nothing more than a trunk. For 15 years she had been there. I went to offer comfort, but I did not know how to speak to her, or what to say. I found a room the walls of which were covered with texts all of them radiating, speaking of joy, and peace, and power, and I found that that woman from her room radiated such a power that scores, and literally hundreds of people had been converted or lifted through the letters she had written.

A Striking Illustration

She lay in bed one day and asked what she could do, a dismembered woman without a joint in her body. Then an inspiration came to her, and she got a friend who was a carpenter to come, and he fitted a pad to her shoulder, and then to that another, and a Swan fountain pen, and she began to write letters with it. And remember, when you write, you write with your arm. She had to write; there was no joint, she wrote with the whole of her body. There may be clever calligraphists in this place, but I will undertake to say there is no woman in this congregation who could write a letter one-half so beautiful from the point of view of calligraphy as that woman wrote in my presence, almost like copperplate; and she had got 1,500 or 1,600 letters from people who had been brought to Christ through the letters she had written in that way from that room. And I said to her: "How do you do it?" And she smiled and replied, "Well, you know Jesus said that 'They who believed in Him out of them should flow rivers of living water; and I believed in Him, and that is all.'" My dear people, if God can do that for a woman like Miss Higgins, a dismembered creature, what can He do through you and through me?

St. Louis, Mo.

NORTH CAROLINA SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The State Sunday School Convention, held in Winston-Salem, N. C., April 10-11-12, broke all past records for attendance at such meetings in this state, according to reports sent out from the state office in Raleigh. In all more than 1,500 people attended.

The total number registering as delegates to the convention was 1,234; of this number 735 were workers from out-of-town Sunday Schools. There were delegates from 48 counties. Among the delegates were 91 preachers, 112 superintendents, 480 teachers, and 551 other delegates.

Regional Conventions

The convention adopted a recommendation made by the executive committee to hold four regional conventions in the spring of 1924, and one general state convention again in 1925. These regional groups will be known as the eastern region, eastern central region, western central region, and the western region. The four groups are as follows:

Eastern Region—Chowan, Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Craven, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Gates, Green, Halifax, Hertford, Hyde, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell, Washington, Wilson.

Eastern Central Region—Bladen, Brunswick, Cumberland, Columbus, Duplin, Durham, Franklin, Granville, Harnett, Hoke, Johnston, Lee, Moore, New Hance, Pender, Person, Robeson, Sampson, Scotland, Vance, Wake, Warren, Wayne.

Western Central Region—Alamance, Alleghany, Alexander, Anson, Ashe, Cabarrus, Caswell, Catawba, Chatham, Davidson, Davie, Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford, Iredell, Lincoln, Mecklenburg, Montgomery, Orange, Randolph, Rockingham, Rowan, Richmond, Stanly, Stokes, Surry, Union, Wilkes, Yadkin.

Western Region—Avery, Buncombe, Burke, Cherokee, Clay, Cleveland, Caldwell, Graham, Haywood, Henderson, Jackson, Macon, Madison, McDowell, Mitchell, Polk, Rutherford, Swain, Transylvania, Watauga, Yancey.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were: State president, J. B. Ivey, Charlotte; treasurer, E. B. Crow, Raleigh; president eastern region, R. B. Peters, Jr., Tarboro; president eastern central region, D. H. Dixon, Goldsboro; president western central region, W. L. Balthis, Gastonia; president western region, Thos. P. Pruitt, Hickory.

The following were elected as members of the executive committee: J. M. Broughton, Raleigh, chairman; M. A. Briggs, Durham; C. A. Brown, Asheville; W. A. Bullock, Rocky Mount; Jos. D. Cox, High Point; Josephus Daniels, Raleigh; J. E. Dillard, Murphy; T. S. Franklin, Charlotte; J. R. Hanby, Wilmington; Nelson Jackson, Jr., Tryon; C. F. Lambeth, Thomasville; F. C. Niblock, Concord; Chas. M. Norfleet, Winston-Salem; Hugh Parks, Franklinville; C. S. Starbuck, Winston-Salem; Gilbert T. Stephenson, Raleigh; A. E. Tate, High Point; C. M. Van Poole, Salisbury; R. G. Vaughan, Greensboro.

Facts About Last Year's Work

According to the report of D. W. Sims, general superintendent, 71 counties of the state are organized into County Sunday School Associations. During the year 66 of these held county conventions, in which a total of 1,264 Sunday Schools were represented by 16,500 people. Among those attending were 455 preachers, 572 superintendents, 3,146 teachers.

Besides the county conventions the state workers helped in 17 township conventions and one county institute, in which a total of 275 Sunday Schools were represented by 3,960 people. In these meetings were 162 preachers, 162 superintendents, 1,247 teachers.

A summary of the reports shows that during the year the state workers helped in a total of 84 county and township conventions, reaching 617 preachers, 713 superintendents, 4,393 teachers, the total attendance at all meetings being 20,460 people.

The first county in the state to open 100 per cent of the "County Aims" suggested by the state association was Rowan, which taught the standard early in March. Cabarrus ran a close second, reaching the standard the last of March. Other honor counties are Randolph, covering 90 per cent of the "Aims;" Vance, 80 per cent; Alamance and Guilford, 55 per cent; Wayne, 50 per cent.

TO THE MONTREAT GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Fathers and Brethren:

By resolution of the Charleston, W. Va., General Assembly the undersigned were appointed an ad interim committee "to prepare and submit to the Assembly of 1924 rules for the conduct of the business of the Assembly."

In compliance with the duty imposed on us, and the privilege granted us, we have prepared and herewith submit a "Manual of Rules of Procedure for the General Assembly," and attach and make this suggested manual a part of our report.

J. D. Leslic, R. C. Reed, W. H. Baker, Committee.

Manual of Rules of Procedure for the General Assembly

Organization

1. The General Assembly shall meet annually on the third Tuesday of May at 11 o'clock a. m. The Assembly shall meet at the place designated by the preceding Assembly; but in the event of an emergency preventing the meeting at such place, the moderator shall designate a place of meeting. The Assembly shall be opened with a sermon preached by the retiring moderator, followed by the celebration of the Lord's supper. The afternoon session of the Assembly shall begin at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

2. At the afternoon session after the reading by the stated clerk of the roll of the commissioners present and enrolled by him, a moderator shall be elected. Nominations for moderator shall be received, but only one speech not exceeding ten minutes in length nominating a candidate for moderator shall be made; and only one speech seconding a nomination not exceeding five minutes in length shall be made.

3. After all nominations have been made and seconded, the Assembly shall proceed to an election of a moderator in the following manner: If more than one candidate is nominated, the election shall be by ballot. The stated clerk shall have suitable blank ballots prepared and cause same to be distributed among the commissioners for use in the election. The stated clerk shall appoint two tellers to count and tabulate the vote and report the tabulation to him. The ballots of the enrolled commissioners shall be collected and delivered to the tellers by commissioners appointed by the presiding officer for such purpose. If there are more than two candidates and no candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, a second ballot shall be called; but the candidate who received the smallest number of votes on the first ballot shall be dropped as a candidate on the second ballot. In similar manner other ballots shall be called, if necessary, and after each ballot the candidate receiving the smallest number of votes shall be dropped as a candidate. An election shall be declared by the moderator when a candidate shall have received a majority of the votes cast by the commissioners present and voting. As soon as a moderator shall have been elected, he shall assume the discharge of his duties as moderator.

4. The moderator shall preside at all sessions of the Assembly except as he may temporarily invite a commissioner to act as presiding officer; he shall appoint all committees unless the Assembly otherwise prescribes; and he shall call the succeeding Assembly to order and preside over its sessions until a moderator is elected as provided by the rules in the Book of Church Order.

Standing Committees

5. Nominees for the standing committees shall be made in the following manner: Before the convening of the Assembly, the stated clerk shall divide the commissioners into ten sections or groups. The number of commissioners in each section shall be the same as far as possible. The moderator shall appoint a member of each section as chairman of the section. The sections shall be numbered one to ten inclusive. Each section shall be furnished by the stated clerk with a list of the standing committees and the number of the members on each committee the section is entitled to nominate to the moderator. The chairman of each section shall convene his section immediately on the adjournment of the afternoon session of the first day of the Assembly; and the chairman, after consultation with his section, shall nominate from among the members of the section, commissioners to serve on the standing committees as follows: On each of the committees, on Bills and Overtures, Judicial Business, Foreign Correspondence, Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Publication and Sabbath School Work, Stewardship, and Synodical Records, two members, one of whom shall be a minister and the other a ruling elder; on each of the committees, on Theological Seminaries, Church Societies, Bible Cause and Minutes of the Council of the Reformed Churches, one member, which member, if nominated by an odd section shall be a minister and if by an even section shall be a ruling elder, on Training School for Lay Workers, Narrative of Christian Life and Work, and Sabbath and Family Religion, one member, which if nominated by an odd section shall be a ruling elder and if by an even section shall be a minister; and on the Committees on Audits and Mileage each odd numbered section shall nominate one member who shall be a ruling elder; and on the Committees on Devotional Exercises, Leave of Absence, and Thanks, the sections numbered two, four and six shall nominate a member who shall be a minister and the sections numbered eight and ten shall nominate a member who shall be a ruling elder.

6. There shall be only one standing committee on Synodical Records to which shall be referred for review the records of all Synods.

7. The moderator shall appoint the chairman and members of standing committees; and shall appoint as the members of these committees, the commissioners nominated to him by the chairman of the sections except he may make such transfers of nominees as he deems advisable. The moderator shall appoint and announce the standing committees as soon as possible. The moderator may assign to committees, commissioners who enroll on the second and third days of the Assembly; and commis-ners who may not have been nominated to him by the chairman of sections.

8. The report of the following standing committees shall be presented and considered by the Assembly at the times and on the days following:

- (a) Foreign Correspondence, Saturday at 10 a. m.
- (b) Bills and Overtures, Monday at 10 a. m.
- (c) Foreign Missions, Tuesday at 10 a. m.
- (d) Publication and Sabbath School Work, Tuesday at 3:00 p. m.
- (e) Home Missions, Tuesday at 8:00 p. m.
- (f) Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Wednesday at 10 a. m.
- (g) Stewardship, Wednesday at 3:00 p. m.

9. No partial report from a standing committee except from the committees on bills and overtures and foreign correspondence shall be received by the Assembly without the consent of the Assembly. All reports of committees shall be typewritten in seven copies by the Assembly's stenographers, and proof read by the chairman of the committee reporting. The duties of the chairman of a committee shall not be completed until he has edited carefully his committee's report after it is typewritten for errors in phraseology and grammar and shall have filed the required number of copies of the report with the stated clerk. The chairman of each committee shall also after the Assembly shall have acted on the report presented by him, incorporate therein at the proper place each amendment made by the Assembly to the report.

10. The report of a standing committee to the Assembly shall be as brief and concise as the recommendations of a committee will permit. The report shall only contain a brief preamble of the questions acted on by the committee and the conclusions and recommendations of the committee. Extracts and quotations from reports of an executive committee, a permanent committee, or an ad interim committee should be avoided except when required to make the report intelligible. Overtures shall be answered simply by reference to the number of the overture.

Stated Clerk

11. The stated clerk shall be elected for a term of three (3) years. He shall perform all duties required of him by the Book of Church Order, this manual and such other duties as may be imposed on him by the Assembly. He shall keep the minutes of the Assembly and be the custodian of all books, papers and documents of the Assembly, and prepare for and supervise the printing and distribution of the minutes and documents required to be printed and distributed. His salary shall be thirty-six hundred ($3,600) dollars per annum, payable in equal monthly installments, and he shall be allowed a sum not exceeding four hundred ($400) dollars for clerical assistance at the meeting of the Assembly; and such other sum as may be appropriated by the standing committee on audits for clerical help and office expenses between the meetings of the Assembly.

12. In the event of the death or the incapacity of the stated clerk to perform the duties of his office, the moderator may appoint an acting stated clerk who shall perform the duties of the stated clerk until the Assembly elects a stated clerk.

13. All reports of permanent and ad interim committees shall be delivered to the stated clerk by April 1st; and all overtures by May 1st in each year. The stated clerk shall have the reports of permanent and ad interim committees and all overtures printed in pamphlet form for the use of the Assembly. Each commissioner shall receive a copy of this pamphlet. All overtures shall be numbered by the stated clerk, and presented to the Assembly in the order of their numbering. The same order of numbering shall be observed in the minutes of the Assembly and in the printed copy of the minutes.

14. The annual statistical, Sabbath school, narrative and systematic beneficence reports from the Presbyteries shall be delivered to the stated clerk on or before May 1st, of each year. The annual reports of the executive committees shall all be printed together in a separate pamphlet for distribution, together with such other reports which the General Assembly may order to be printed with these annual reports. Each executive committee shall bear the expense of the publication of the part of this pamphlet containing its report. Synopses of these reports shall be omitted from the appendix to the printed copy of the minutes of the Assembly.

15. The stated clerk shall have charge of all arrangements for the meeting and entertainment of the Assembly. He shall secure, if possible, special railroad rates and accommodations and supervise all other matters for the comfort and convenience of the commissioners.

16. All churches which desire to entertain the Assembly shall officially notify the stated clerk at or before the convening of the Assembly; and he shall inform the Assembly of all invitations. All requests by persons desiring to address the Assembly shall be given to the program committee. The program committee shall consist of the pastor of the church entertaining the Assembly, the moderator, and the stated clerk.

Docket

17. The stated clerk shall prepare and print with the reports of committees and the overtures herein provided for, a docket embracing all the business expected to come before the Assembly, including all special orders of the day adopted in these standing rules. This docket is necessarily of a tentative character, subject to daily changes. The moderator shall follow as closely as possible this docket in order that standing committees may know when their reports shall be heard.

18. In the consideration of any question before the Assembly no commissioner shall speak more than once on the question. Each recommendation in a committee's report shall be considered a separate question. The chairman or the member of a committee presenting a report shall have the right to speak when presenting a report, to answer interrogations addressed to him by consent of moderator, and to conclude the debate on the pending question.

19. Popular meetings shall be held as the following:
- 3. (1) Home Missions—Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock.
 - 4. (2) Foreign Missions—Wednesday night at 8:00 o'clock.

1. Publication and Sabbath School Work—Friday night at 8:00 o'clock.

2. Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—Monday night at 8:00 o'clock.

Standing Rules

20. These rules shall be standing rules and govern the procedure of each Assembly until amended or repealed. No rule shall be amended or repealed except by the concurring vote of two-thirds of the commissioners present and voting.

ADVANTAGES OF THE PLAN PROPOSED BY THE AD INTERIM COMMITTEE ON VACANCY AND SUPPLY

Should the General Assembly adopt the report of the Committee on Vacancy and Supply as published in the papers? The proponents of the plan suggested by this committee believe that it will, in a large measure, help to solve a most vexing problem. The chief reason for this belief is that it will be a return to Presbyterian polity in the matters of settling pastors. Theoretically the Presbytery has episcopal authority in the establishment of a pastorate. At present this episcopal supervision is not exercised and the church has lapsed into congregationalism. While the Presbytery still observes the formality of authorizing a church to call a minister and of placing the call in his hands, it has ceased to exercise the guiding power which it should use under the Presbyterian system. Neither does it use the veto power which, inferentially, it possesses. The local church is entirely independent in this particular unless it happens to be under the supervision of the Home Mission Committee. The plan proposes to put into operation the episcopal power of the Presbytery without in the least infringing upon the right of the membership of any church to have a voice in the matter. It will bring each congregation seeking a pastor into close touch with Presbytery's Committee on Vacancy and Supply and promote the spirit of co-operation.

Do we believe that the Presbyterian form of government is the scriptural form? If so, it is the best and most practical. And have we learned by turning aside to independent or congregational practice that we have suffered a loss, and if so, what is the remedy? There is but one answer, a return to the practice of Presbyterian principles. If the plan is in harmony with the genius of our church, then it is the best. Then work it.

Its friends believe that it will serve to bring the church and the Presbytery into a closer relation and to vitalize the bond between them. It will beget sympathy and confidence between the two and enable those who are best fitted for the duty to serve the church. So general and manifest are the injuries to the church from the present congregational plan that it is unnecessary to emphasize further the importance of assistance and counsel from capable men to whom Presbytery shall delegate the task.

The evils of candidating so much decried will be avoided to the great benefit of both the ministry and the church. Also the evils resulting from a prolonged vacancy will be avoided to a large extent. Supplies will not be selected in the usual haphazard fashion, but under the authorized agency of Presbytery acting in concert with the committee appointed for that purpose by the session or by the church.

The duration of vacancies will be shortened, because the usual hit-or-miss efforts will be supplanted by intelligent systematic methods. The following advantages will accrue: It will save the church a loss of membership not only in the number of those who would come into the church under normal conditions but in the number of those wandering away into other pastures because there is no shepherd. It will prevent discouragement and division and demoralization of the membership. It will promote the spiritual life of the church and utilize its energy and resources. It will make available to the church the services of a number of capable ministers who, under the present system, are discouraged and tempted to turn aside from the ministry. In a sister church of like faith and order there were 400 ministers engaged in secular pursuit before this plan was put into operation. After it was adopted this number was reduced from 400 to 50.

There will be a great saving to the church in the matter of benevolence alone. A vacancy in any church means a decrease in benevolent contributions and in some cases the entire suspension of benevolent offerings. According to Rev. Walter H. Houston, D.D., the former secretary of the Committee on Vacancy and Supply in the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., the yearly saving to the church in benevolences alone was $100,000. This fact of itself should be sufficient to decide the question in favor of the proposed plan, especially in this age in which the emphasis is laid on practical results.

The old plan of supervising home mission churches alone made invidious distinctions which are contrary to our doctrine of the parity of the ministry, and which are hurtful to the church and to the ministry. The purpose and effect of the proposed plan is to put the wealthiest and poorest church on the same basis under the care of Presbytery's Committee on Vacancy and Supply, and every minister from the least unto the greatest shall receive the sympathetic aid of men chosen by Presbytery because of their fitness for the duty. Briefly, the plan, if adopted and worked by all the Presbyteries and churches, will demonstrate the wisdom of the Presbyterian system by its practical results.

NEW TESTAMENT GREEK FOR BEGINNERS

By J. Gresham Machen, D.D., Assistant Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis in Princeton Theological Seminary. The MacMillan Company, New York, 1923. Pp. 285. $2.20.

By Rev. Eugene C. Caldwell, D.D.

Union Seminary in Virginia may be pardoned for taking special pride in the fact that she had a part in starting Dr. Machen on his career as a writer of notable books. Several years ago he delivered the Sprunt Lectures at Union, under the title, "The Origin of Paul's Religion." These lectures were subsequently published in a handsome volume by the MacMillan Company, and already have passed through a second edition. The book attracted most favorable attention from American, English and European scholars. Since that time Dr. Machen has published two others books: Christianity and Liberalism, and New Testament Greek for Beginners. The last book has just come from the press. It is exceedingly handsome in its formation. The type is large and clear, the spacing is ample, and the binding is sturdy. It is a delight to the eye and to the hand.

It has been my privilege to teach the Greek New Testament for 17 years to seminary students. During that time I have been on a constant lookout for a suitable text-book. Heretofore I have found no book altogether satisfactory. Now, however, I believe I have found the very book I need. I know of nothing quite so good for beginners in New Testament Greek as Dr. Machen's book. I shall certainly use it in my seminary classes. In my opinion it excels every other book of my acquaintance for beginners in its treatment of the participles and the tenses, which is a matter of the greatest importance to the student of the New Testament. Dr. Machen has evidently put long and careful study into his preparation of the vocabularies and exercises. While dealing with only the essential elements of his subject, Dr. Machen, on many a page, leads the student by lucid explanations to an appreciation of the underlying spirit and genius of the Greek language.

The book is of great value for ministers as well as seminary students. I am thinking how helpful it would be if our ministers in the pastorate would renew their knowledge of Greek with such an attractive guide book. Such a study would fertilize the mind and brighten and freshen the minister's preaching. Dr. Machen has rendered a great service to New Testament students by the preparation of this fine text-book.

Union Theological Seminary.

WITHOUT A PREACHER

By Rev. S. W. McGill

The fact that the Southern Presbyterian Church does not have an adequate supply of preachers is pretty generally known. When this statement is made, however, it is sometimes said, "Oh, well, there are a lot of little churches that cannot support a pastor." Suppose we look at this:

- First Church, Montgomery, Ala.—Vacant.
- First Church, Pensacola, Fla.—Vacant.
- First Church, Birmingham, Ala.—Vacant.
- First Church, Columbus, Ga.—Vacant.
- First Church, Macon, Ga.—Vacant.
- First Church, Selma, Ala.—Vacant.
- Central Church, St. Louis, Mo.—Vacant.
- First Church, Lexington, Ky.—Vacant.
- First Church, Roanoke, Va.—Vacant.

That's only nine. The list includes some of the strongest and most important churches in the Southern Assembly. The list could be enlarged. Now how are these churches to be supplied with preachers? By creating vacancies in other churches.

The Christian college is the recruiting ground. The theological seminary is the training ground. Theological seminaries are sometimes charged with a lack of aggressiveness in enlisting men for the work of the ministry. Theological seminaries have no resources for this important work. With their pressing financial problems it is all the seminaries can do to continue their work of training men for preaching the Gospel.

The energies of the seminaries ought to be released for the two-fold work of recruiting and training men to preach the Gospel. Any organization without an adequate number of capable trained leaders will perish. Louisville, Ky.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

A Gold Star for Woodlawn—As we let our minds go back over our past year's work, we feel very proud indeed of what has been accomplished by the women of Woodlawn Auxiliary. There has been a marked increase in spirituality among our women during the past year. We have reached the gold star on the standard of excellence. The holding of the Woman's Institute at Woodlawn on last October helped to enable and inspire us to reach the gold star. We have 57 members, which is an increase of 12 over last year. We had an average attendance upon Auxiliary meetings of 42. Our girls' circle made the highest average in attendance both at Auxiliary and circle meetings. We've completed the study of three books of the Bible and Mrs. Askew's book on stewardship and have had three cottage prayer bands. We studied both the home and foreign mission study books. We found the number studying our foreign mission book not doubled, but trebled. Our ladies presented a little pageant on our home mission work during the Christmas holidays to the public which was both educational and inspirational. The number of homes subscribing to church papers this year has increased 33 1-3 per cent; also number of tithers and number of homes having family altars have increased 33 1-3 per cent. Our ladies have contributed over and above what they gave through the church envelopes, $980, which is $17 per capita. At our November meeting we gave a shower for Thornwell Orphanage, which amounted to $135. Among the things donated that day was 14 new quilts. One lady pieced eight of them. Instead of having an Easter egg hunt for our children we sent 90 dozen of eggs to Thornwell Orphanage. We sent a delegate to the Young People's Conference at Clinton, S. C., and a negro woman to Atlanta. We also taught a negro's Bible class. We sent quilts and linen to Stuart Robinson building, in Kentucky, and some old clothes to Mrs. Sloop. During the whole year not a woman has refused to serve on the program, and not one refused to accept an office for the coming year.

Nine of our ladies attended the Bethel Presbyterial at Oakland Avenue Church, in Rock Hill, S. C., and came back filled with enthusiasm for the work. Mrs. L. H. Good, our delegate to the Presbyterial, gave a report of the Presbyterial to our Auxiliary at our April meeting, which was very interesting and inspiring.

Mrs. S. D. Good,
Secretary of Woodlawn Auxiliary, Sharon, S. C.

Bethel Presbyterial—The recent meeting of Bethel Presbyterial Auxiliary, held in Oakland Avenue Church, Rock Hill, S. C., brought to a close a quarter of a century's earnest and consecrated efforts on the part of the women of the church for the advancement of the Master's cause. If there was one particular thought underlying each and every deliberation at this meeting, it was the need of personal work, and the individual efforts of every woman as a "soul-winner."

Dr. Alexander Martin, in a few words of welcome, which he added to the cordial greetings of Mrs. Dunlap Roddey, attributed the growth and success of this woman's organizations to the fact that "information preceded inspiration."

Our president, Mrs. I. R. Hayes, of Kershaw, S. C., in her splendid address showed that the Auxiliary's work has grown spiritually, educationally and materially. The notable increase in prayer bands, Bible study classes, family altars and volunteers for life service attest to the fact that the spiritual life has deepened and broadened, while a greater interest in missionary study classes and all-day institutes give great cause for rejoicing at the impetus given the work along educational lines. A total of $20,524 in gifts to all causes, with $6,808 to foreign missions, an increase of $12 per capita gift as against $9 last year, and an increase in tithers leagues show that we are beginning to realize that we are but stewards of our earthly possessions. Two Auxiliaries, Woodlawn, of Sharon, and Zion, of Lowryville, deserve especial mention as having attained the gold seal on the standard of excellence. Our hats off to these two splendid bodies of women! Seven Auxiliaries reached the blue seal, and 12 the silver seal.

Dr. L. Ross Lynn, of Thornwell Orphanage, brought a very touching message to the Presbyterial of the great need at the orphanage for a building for the small children, there being no provision made to take those under school age. He laid before the assembled body the plans, that are as yet in an embryo state, for a baby cottage at this institution, to be built by the Synodicals of Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. This appeal met an instant response and aroused a sympathetic interest on the part of all present, and Bethel Presbyterial went on record as approving the plans so far developed. Dr. Lynn says there is already $3,500 in sight for the furnishings of the cottage, and the first gift for it, a scrap book, made by the Junior C. E.'s of Kershaw, S. C., was presented on the floor.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Dr. Alexander Martin, pastor of Oakland Avenue Church, just before which "That Old Rugged Cross" was beautifully sung by Rev. and Mrs. Watkins, of Delaware, Ohio.

Rev. Ray Riddle, who spoke on home missions in South Carolina, gave some startling statistics to show the great need of personal evangelism in this state. He said that "the church people must awake to the fact that there are thousands of lost souls in our own state," and bore out this statement with figures showing that there are 350,000 persons above nine years of age not members of any church. He gave "soul-winning" as the objective of woman's work and begged that each individual might become a missionary force in the church.

The Bible study hours conducted by Miss Jean DuPuy, of Assembly's Training School, and the model Auxiliary meeting originated and carried out through the ingenuity of Mrs. Andrew Bramlett, Synodical vice-president, were equally enjoyed. Memorial services for Mrs. J. J. Stringfellow, first historian of Bethel Presbyterial, and for Mrs. Louise Mayes, our own beloved Synodical president, were beautifully and fittingly observed.

Miss Evelyn Fishbourne, one of our home missionaries from the mountain school at Canoe, Ky., completely won the hearts of her audience by her loveliness of manner and deep earnestness. She told many human interest stories of these mountain folk, whom civilization in its onward march has passed by. She asked for the concerted prayers of her hearers for a boy and girl who are leaders among the young people at this school and who have not accepted Christ. She also asked for prayers that an under shepherd may be sent to guide this little flock, who are struggling against almost unsurmountable difficulties to keep their "light shining in the clearing."

At the night session of the Presbyterial, Dr. F. M. Hawley, of Kershaw, S. C., delivered a very forceful appeal for more personal evangelism on the part of church members. Dr. Hawley is comparatively a new-comer to Bethel Presbyterial, and every one was delighted at the opportunity of hearing him.

Rev. J. Porter Smith, of Campinas, Brazil, brought a very earnest and serious message from the country which he characterized as "the land of the Christless Cross." In this country, he says, is found the cross everywhere, but great ignorance of Jesus Christ. With a surety of purpose and a masterly handling of his theme he undertook to show the fallacy of the Romanist religion and its utter failure in this great sister continent. He says that instead of a living, vital religion they have a devitalized system of formalism "which has deposed an institution between Jesus Christ and the sinner." He gave as a result of Romanism in these Latin countries, "unbelief and a moral and intellectual conscience that has become atrophied." He characterized this religion as a "man-made system blocking the way to Jesus Christ." He emphasized the great need of missionaries and voiced a deep appeal that we give more of our material substance that these may be sent to combat an influence which he says may not have the spectacular appeal of the savages in Africa, but is nevertheless an insidious force which is gradually engulfing these countries in a hopeless morass of formalism and darkest pessimism. E. S. S.

The 17th Annual Meeting of Harmony Presbyterial Auxiliary was held at Bishopville, April 12-13, with the largest attendance on record, the total registration being 173. The session was opened Thursday morning with communion service, conducted by Rev. D. M. McIver, assisted by the elders of the local church. Representatives from the sister churches of the town were present to extend greetings to the visiting women.

Mrs. S. D. Fraser responded to these greetings for the Presbyterial Auxiliary. Mrs. N. Y. Alford, of Wisacky, was the presiding officer and filled the place with ease and grace. Reports from the Presbyterial officers showed a wonderful improvement in correctness and punctuality of the local officers.

While there was a decrease of $170 in total gifts to all causes, 11 of the 28 Auxiliaries, enrolled, showed an increase of $848. There were eight blue (60%) Auxiliaries, and six silver (80%) and no gold; Manning attained the highest percentage (90%).

Institutes were held during the year in the following counties: Clarendon, Georgetown and Williamsburg. A one-day Presbyterial was held at Tirzah Church, Sumter County, immediately after the Synodical meeting in the fall.

A memorial service was held in honor of our beloved Synodical President, Mrs. F. Louise Mayes. Mrs. N. Y. Alford read a beautiful tribute to the life and work of Mrs. Mayes and the following resolutions were adopted: "Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom, called to her heavenly home, on March 16, 1923, the beloved president of our Synodical Auxiliary, and chairman of the Woman's Advisory Council, Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, we, the members of the executive committee of Harmony Presbyterial Auxiliary, in session at Bishopville, April 12, 1923, desire to express our sympathy and sense of bereavement in the loss of one who has endeared herself to us by her charming personality, her sweet Christian spirit, and her consecration to the Master's work.

Mrs. English McCutchen feelingly sang "Only Remembered by What We Have Done."

Mrs. M. P. Young, of Soochow, China, was the foreign mission speaker, and charmed her audience with a description of life on the mission field.

Mrs. A. M. Copeland was the representative from Thornwell Orphanage. She gave an insight of the life, work and needs of the orphanage.

Mrs. T. C. Peden, our Synodical Secretary of Young People's Work, presented her cause in a pleasing and earnest manner. She urged the local Auxiliaries to pray, plan and prepare for the Young People's Conference at Clinton.

Rev. H. C. Hammond, D.D., of Mt. Zion Church, delivered an able address on "How to Study the Bible."

Rev. R. A. Brown, D.D., of the Home Mission office, was the speaker for the evening services. Colored Evangelization was the theme. The local Auxiliary presented "A Mexican Fiesta" at the evening service also.

The following recommendations were unanimously adopted: (1) That we report favorably on the Baby Cottage at Thornwell Orphanage. (2) That each local Auxiliary put on this Mexican pageant. (3) That we endorse and heartily commend the conference for colored women to be held at Claflin University, Orangeburg. (4) That we endorse the address of Mrs. Peden most heartily. (5) That the local Auxiliary presidents use the secretaries of causes in the Presbyterial continually.

Mrs. J. H. DesChamps, chairman of our special, reported $350 raised for the Training School scholarship fund.

Mrs. S. D. Fraser, of Oswego, was elected secretary of young people's work; Mrs. W. N. Wells, of St. Charles, secretary of literature, and Mrs. P. R. Keels, secretary of Christian Educational and Ministerial Relief.

Delegates to Montreat: Mrs. N. Y. Alford; alternate, Miss Annie Anderson. Synodical: Mrs. D. M. Boykin; alternate, Mrs. Jas. Reaves. Workers' Conference: Mrs. W. N. Wells; alternate, Miss Annie Mae Boykin.

A short installation service was held; Rev. D. M. McIver charged the officers and Rev. L. F. Martin the Presbyterial.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the ladies of Bishopville for their gracious hospitality, after which the Presbyterial adjourned to meet at Lake City in 1924. (Miss) Bettie Aycock, Rec. Sec.

Report from Fayetteville Presbyterial—At the request of Mrs. J. M. McIver, I shall try to give a few gleanings from the annual meeting of Fayetteville Presbyterial, at Sanford, N. C., April 10th to 12th. The weather being ideal, there was a large attendance. The people of Sanford are truly given to hospitality, and treated us so royally that we are looking forward with pleasure to the time when they shall invite us to meet with them again. The opening meeting of the Presbyterial was held at 3:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and was called to order by the president, Mrs. W. A. West, Fayetteville.

Greetings to the visitors were given in a very pleasing, whole-hearted manner by Mrs. L. S. Jones, of Sanford, and the response was given by Miss Lee, of Laurel Hill.

The Bible hour throughout the meeting was conducted by Miss Claribel Williams, of Orangeburg, S. C., who received her training for this splendid work at our Assembly's Training School at Richmond, Va. All who heard Miss Williams were impressed by her earnestness and consecration. Would that many more of our young women would take this training. Miss Williams gave an exposition of the Book of Acts, calling it the Book of the Acts of the Holy Spirit working through the Apostles.

Mrs. R. B. Willis, of Montreat, was sent by Dr. Sweet to present the cause of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. She made a noble plea for the Christian College as a character-producing agency, and begged anyone in her audience who did not feel satisfied with her own life to get hold of the life of some young person, and plant in that life the things that were omitted in her own. Her plea for an adequate endowment fund to care for the aged minister and his family was very impressive.

Mr. Joseph B. Johnston, of Barium Springs Orphanage, thanked the members of the Presbyterial for all they have done for the orphanage, but he also showed us that there is much yet to be done. And between the lines of his address we could read the big, tender heart he has for all children—how intimately he knows the children in his care, and how well he knows their needs and their rights, and how nobly he is trying to provide for the development of the fourfold life of these orphan children. Let us rally to the needs of Barium Orphanage and provide clean, wholesome recreation for these children, as well as bread and meat.

Mrs. R. L. Ryburn, of Shelby, made an impressive address on "The Christian Home," comparing the Presbyterial Christian home of a generation ago with the one of today. She also stressed Sabbath Observance. There was sufficient warning in her address to cause all of us to "stop, look and listen."

Mr. J. B. Spillman, Secretary of Stewardship for the Synod of North Carolina, made an excellent address on "Stewardship," and showed us how to use the budget system in our Auxiliaries.

Mrs. A. M. Fairley, of Laurinburg, in her usual enthusiastic manner told about Elise High School, at Hemp, N. C., and made a plea for better support for this school than we have ever given it. With a record of 14 ordained ministers, seven candidates for the ministry, two Sabbath School missionaries, six volunteers for Christian service, many elders, deacons, Christian teachers, etc., among her alumni, what further reason do we need to give this school our most loyal support? Shame on us if we do not give liberally!

Mrs. H. M. McAllister, of Lumberton, told in a well prepared address the wonderful accomplishments of Flora Macdonald College, and made an earnest plea for funds and equipment to make this school an A-1 college. This is absolutely necessary in competition with the non-Christian schools of this grade.

The outstanding address of the whole meeting was given by Rev. J. Hoyt Miller, of our Congo Mission in Africa. His subject was, "Whence I Am and Why I Am There." He gave a thrilling description of that most interesting country and people.

We were especially grateful that Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Hemp, had brought over the boys and girls from Elise to hear this address. Mr. Miller's challenge to young men and women for service in Africa was so impressive that we feel it must have touched the hearts of many of his hearers, especially these boys and girls.

The reports of the secretaries of causes in the Presbyterial were very encouraging. More prayer bands have been organized, more people are studying missions, and these are more gratifying signs than increased collections.

The installation of officers was conducted by Dr. R. C. Gilmore, the pastor of Sanford Church. This was a most impressive, helpful service, and will enable those to whom it was addressed to enter into their new duties with a fixed purpose, an increased sense of responsibility, and a greater reliance upon God for help and guidance.

The closing exercise was conducted by Mrs. J. R. Page, of Aberdeen, the new Presbyterial president. She gave inspiring reports from the Laymen's Convention in Charlotte.

The officers of Fayetteville Presbyterial for the ensuing year are: Mrs. J. R. Page, Aberdeen president; Miss Della McGoggin, St. Pauls, vice-president; Mrs. A. G. Carter, Sanford, recording secretary; Mrs. Talbot Johnston, Aberdeen, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. D. McNeill, Cameron, treasurer; Mrs. E. C. Murray, St. Pauls, secretary foreign missions; Mrs. Roland Hayes, Pittsboro, secretary Assembly home missions; Mrs. John Knox, Lumberton, secretary Ch. Ed. and Min. Relief; Miss Margaret McQueen, Dunn, secretary S. P. and C. home missions; Mrs. J. O. McClelland, Maxton, secretary literature; Mrs. A. H. Suttonfield, Pine Bluff, secretary young people's work and S. S. extension; Mrs. M. G. McGuire, Maxton, secretary orphanage work; Mrs. A. M. Fairley, Laurinburg, secretary Elise High School. Lena McClelland.

MISSIONARY SURVEY WEEK

MAY 6-13

Campaign by Woman's Auxiliary

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

We welcome this week a report from the young people of the Presbyterian Church of Sumter, S. C., and will be glad to have further reports from the young people of South Carolina.

Our Reporters' Honor Roll is printed again this week. Twenty-eight names are shown, an increase of nine since the last publication of the list. We welcome the new reporters and thank those who have reported more than once. Let's keep the news rolling in and build up the usefulness of the department.

The C. E. topic for the coming Sabbath is "What Our Denomination Has Meant to the World," helpfully discussed last week by Mr. Garth. This topic applies one of the cardinal principles of the Endeavor movement—loyalty to the church, the local church in which the society exists, the whole church of which the local church is a part.

It is this strong feature that makes Christian Endeavor a world-wide organization, acceptable to and valuable to any particular denomination. At times some of our earnest Presbyterians feel that C. E. doesn't stress our denominational interests enough. Our Endeavorers should watch this and make sure that they are loyal first of all to our own great denomination. It has been the editor's experience that since he has been in C. E. work he has come to appreciate more the good points of other churches, but has at the same time come to know more about and to be prouder of his own church. Unless our Endeavorers are loyal to our own church first, they fall short both of the ideals of C. E. and of the legitimate expectations of our own denomination.

But whatever the name under which our young people are working, they will find the topic for Sunday extremely helpful. The courage, wisdom, zeal and Christian power of the makers of our church are worthy of our highest admiration and sincerest emulation. Follow up your meeting with a class in Presbyterianism, taught by your pastor, if he has time, and by regular Bible reading, prayer and definite service. The world needs strong Presbyterians, strong Christian workers.

North Carolina Young People's Conference
June 12-19, Davidson, N. C.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

APRIL 29, 1923

RUTH, THE FAITHFUL DAUGHTER

Lesson: The Book of Ruth. (A Survey of Ruth's Life.) Printed Text: Ruth 1:14-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."—Ruth 1:16.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again; and Orpah kissed her mother in law, but Ruth clave unto her.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister in law is gone back unto her people, and unto her gods; return thou after thy sister in law.

16 And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God:

17 Where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried: the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 When she saw that she was steadfastly minded to go with her, then she left speaking unto her.

19 So they two went until they came to Bethlehem. And it came to pass, when they were come to Bethlehem, that all the city was moved about them, and they said, Is this Naomi?

20 And she said unto them, Call me not Naomi, call me Mara: for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me.

21 I went out full, and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter in law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab; and they came to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harvest.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 34. What is adoption?
A. Adoption is an act of God's free grace, whereby we are received into the number, and have a right to all the privileges of the sons of God.

In this lesson we have three types of womanhood. Naomi, whose name means "Pleasant," is one. She represents the old chastened, but real saint. She and her family had gone to Moab, because of scarcity of bread in the land of Canaan. They remained there ten years. They ought not to have gone to Moab. They thereby forsook the worship of Jehovah and accompanied with idolaters. The Lord could have taken care of them in Canaan. In Moab, Naomi lost her husband, her two sons, and what property they carried. She herself says, "The Lord hath dealt bitterly with me. I went out full but return empty." But she returns to her own land and the worship of Jehovah. Her daughters-in-law, Orpah and Ruth, must decide whether they will remain in their own land or go with her. Orpah's name means "hind," the female of the Reddeer. She seems to be a young woman, graceful, attractive, affectionate, yet wholly dominated by earthly considerations. Ruth, likewise young, winsome, loving, but spiritually minded, and having a supreme regard for Jehovah and His worship. We will contemplate Orpah's Choice; Ruth's Choice; The motives Controlling Her Choice; The Results She Attained.

I. Orpah's Choice

At first they both said "They would go with Naomi to her people." But when their mother-in-law told them of the sacrifices they would have to make, and how little she had to offer, Orpah could not stand the test nor endure the discouraging prospects. She kissed Naomi, for she loved her, but she left her and went back to her own land and people. Worldly ties, pleasures and advantages exerted their spell and controlled her choice and conduct. She had no vision of Jehovah's glory and of the blessings of His people both here and in a future life. Many amiable and attractive young women, strongly drawn towards the Lord and His people, walk in Orpah's steps and choose the world and its divinities instead of Jehovah and His service. They can't endure the trials of a godly life and do not realize that its delights far exceed its troubles.

II. Ruth's Choice

Ruth has to make a choice, too, and so has every mortal being. Her choice involves some painful sacrifices. She has to leave her native land, her former home, her familiar scenes, her loved sister, and all her kindred. She has to encounter an unknown land, the company of strangers, poverty, fatigue and lowly toil. But grandly does she meet this crisis of her life and expresses her decision in words of sublime courage, God-given faith and extraordinary beauty. She says to the desolate, desponding Naomi, "Entreat me not to leave thee, nor to return from following after thee; where thou goest I will go, where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest I will die, and there will I be buried; God do so to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me." Ruth's choice was as wise as that of Abraham or Moses and was indicated in language that only a devout and noble heart could dictate.

III. The Motive of Ruth's Choice

An important choice involving transcendent issues should be made under powerful motives. We generally make serious decisions under varied and combined incentives. Ruth's choice was doubtless in part due to her love for Naomi. She pitied her lonely and desolate condition, and could not bear to see her return to Canaan by herself and bereaved of all her family. But she had for her mother-in-law more than the love of compassion. She also loved her with the love of delight, because of the moral qualities and pious graces that she revealed. Even Orpah was drawn to Naomi by her excellent virtues, and though she departed she did so reluctantly. Naomi's sincere piety impressed Ruth favorably and she learned from her to love her land, her people and Jehovah. Ruth's choice was largely dictated by a changed nature, given her by the Holy Ghost. Otherwise she could not have said to Naomi, "Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

IV. The Results Ruth Attained

She made many sacrifices, went a long journey to a strange land, endured poverty and encountered trial and toil. But the blessings secured more than compensated for all she suffered. She was kindly received at Bethlehem, and God raised up for her friends and benefactors. She comforted and sustained the aged and sorrowing Naomi. Boaz, Naomi's kinsman, commended and rewarded her toils. He also redeemed Naomi's land and provided for her a home. He was so impressed and won by Ruth's charms, virtues and pious graces that he made her his wife. She became the mother of Obed, who was the grandfather of David, and Ruth was the ancestress of Messiah and shared His glory.

Her choice led her steps to fair Canaan land.
Bestowed reward upon faithful toil.
Gave her a home in the land of the vine,
And linked her sweet name with the Saviour divine.
The fruits of her choice did not end upon earth,
But were joined with rich blessings of heavenly birth.
It set free her spirit from sin and from strife,
And wrote her dear name in the Lamb's Book of Life.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

A PRAYER PSALM

M., April 30—Prayer of Petition: Isa. 38:1-22.
T., May 1—Intercession: Gen. 18:23-33.
W., May 2—Thanksgiving: Ps. 8:1-9.
T., May 3—Communion: Matt. 17:1-8.
F., May 4—United Prayer: Matt. 18:19, 20.
S., May 5—Unanswered Prayer: Deut. 3:23-29.

Sun., May 6—Topic: Lessons from the Psalms. 5. A Prayer Psalm. Ps. 86:1-17. (Consecration meeting).

Why pray at all?
What help do we find in prayer?
Why should we pray for others?

God has created certain ordinances, or means of grace, by which Christians are enabled to grow in grace. Among these means of grace are the Bible, the sacraments, and prayer. The last of these, prayer, is subject for our meeting today.

What Is Prayer?

The Shorter Catechism defines prayer as the offering up of our desires unto God, for things agreeable to His will, with confession of our sins, and thankful acknowledgement of His mercies. Prayer is communion with God. We tell Him what we wish Him to know, not that He does not already know it, for He knows all things from the beginning, nor that we think we can alter His mind, for God is unchangeable in His purposes, but that we may just talk with Him, as our Father in heaven. It is our duty to pray, for God commands it, and besides, there is a natural instinct within us to pray, for we feel a deep need in our hearts that none but God can meet. As the old-time darkies used to sing, "I'm standing in the need of prayer." We are dependent on God, for we are His creatures. We are made in His image, with reason and conscience, and joy, and thus can commune with Him, as the lower animals cannot. God not only commands us to pray, but He has made the answer to prayer depend on whether we pray or not. So if we want a blessing we must pray.

The Parts of Prayer

A prayer may have several parts. First, there are adoration and praise, in which we acknowledge God as supreme, and speak of Him in the highest terms of praise. Then there are confession of sin, and supplication for His forgiveness. Thanksgiving is a part of prayer, as we thank Him for His goodness to us. And last are petition and intercession, in which we ask blessings for ourselves and others. We should learn to use all the parts of prayer, and not simply be beggars at the throne of grace.

The Forms of Prayer

We may use these parts of prayer in several forms. Prayer may be just in our thoughts and meditations, or it may be spoken. We may pray at regular times, morning and night, and maybe noon, or we may just let our hearts go up to God in prayer at any time of need, or joy. We may have seasons of special prayer. There is social prayer, or prayer with others, at church, in small gatherings, with two or three, or more. In public prayer one leads the rest in prayer, and we should carefully follow the one who leads us, whether it be the minister or someone else.

The Subject of Prayer

God's Word assures us we may pray for anything, just so we are willing for God to do as He wills. David, in the 86th Psalm, prays for guidance, strength, mercy, approval, and so on. We may pray for what we need—health, success, gifts, influence, opportunity, assurance, and other things. God does not limit the subjects of prayer, but we should especially pray for spiritual blessings.

The Conditions of Prayer

While we may present all our petitions to God, yet He has made certain conditions of prayer, and we need not expect the answers unless we meet the conditions God has set up. First, all our prayers must be for things agreeable to God's will. Next, we must ask in Christ's name, which also means we wish Christ to approve our requests. Then we must ask in faith, believing God will answer, as He promises. We must be penitent for our sins, and ready to forsake them. We must love our Christian brethren, and not be selfish in our prayers. We must be ready to forgive our enemies, and to do them good. We must be ready to resist all temptations, and to try to please God by our lives and service.

The Lord's Prayer, Our Father which art in heaven, is the example for all our prayers, and as followers of Jesus, we should study His prayer, and make our own conform in parts and spirit to His.

AN ECHO FROM THE GASTONIA TRAINING SCHOOL

To Directors C. T. Carr and O. V. Woosley, Prof. H. E. Spence, Mrs. B. H. Bunch, Miss Virginia Jenkins, Mrs. G. W. Green and Mrs. C. L. Van Nopen, the pastors, superintendents, teachers and workers of all churches and Sunday Schools, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, and Baptist, are under lasting debts of obligation for the splendid methods of instruction during the week at the Main Street Methodist Church. These fine characters and splendid instructors will leave a most valuable legacy to Gastonians and people of the whole country in the constructive work they have done and the "sure foundation" erected for the coming generation. "May the Lord cause his face to smile upon them" and their work.—Gastonia Daily Gazette.

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

Eugene Brown Morgan, Concord.
Carcy P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.*
Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.*
Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.*
Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville.
Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton.
Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville.
Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington.*
Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell.
Miss Rachel Beall, Durham.*
Miss Anne Sample, Hendersonville.
J. M. Carr, Davidson College.
Miss Ruth Beard, Cornelius.
Miss Lillie Gilleland, Greensboro.
J. M. Harvey, Wilmington, N. C.
Chalmers R. Carr, Mooresville.
Garton Pearce, Fayetteville.
Miss Annie Davis, Greensboro.
Mrs. Chas. Lilly, Sanford.
Mrs. E. C. Murray, St. Pauls, N. C.
M. DeLorme, Sumter, S. C.
Miss Elizabeth Falk, Maxton, N. C.
Miss Isabel Jean Lamont, Raeford, N. C.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Trinity Avenue Presbyterian Senior Endeavorers, of Durham, N. C., have an active personal workers' band of 25 members. Each week they conduct a prayer meeting in the homes of the community.

This society observed Dixie Endeavor Day on April 1st and contributed $7.50 for the spread of Christian Endeavor in the South. This will entitle them to a pretty felt pennant and is a good showing for a society in a church of 115 members.

The Buffalo Christian Endeavor Society, near Sanford, N. C., with a membership of 25, observed Dixie Endeavor Day, April 1st. A large audience witnessed the pageant "Thelma" and contributed a nice sum to promote the Southern Endeavor work. This society is doing a good work for the church and community.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Presbyterian Church of Sumter, S. C., sends us some interesting news about its activities. Not only do the members begin each new year with a sunrise prayer meeting, but they keep busy during the year. Every Sunday afternoon a committee from the society holds services at Camp Alice (Tubercular Sanatorium), at the county jail, and at the county almshouse. Their financial budget for this year was $150, and they have raised $180.

The Midway Presbyterian Endeavorers, near Maxton, N. C., gave the Dixie Endeavor pageant, "Thelma," on March 18th so well that many wanted a second performance. Special music by Misses Alice Gattis and Mary Gluyas and Messrs. K. S. Monroe and Lee McFarland, with Miss Mary Stewart at the organ, added much to the program. The offering for the Southern C. E. work was $11. Other recent contributions by this society have been a neat sum to Beechwood Seminary and the payment of a voluntary pledge to the State C. E. Union. An Expert Endeavor Class is now in progress.

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:
Miles Hampton$ 3.00
McGee Presbyterian Church 52.00

CONCERNING RATES TO GENERAL ASSEMBLY

1. The Western and Southwestern Passenger Associations will place on sale Round Trip Summer Tourist Tickets to Black Mountain, N. C. (Black Mountain is the railroad station for Montreat), beginning May 15th, and on sale daily thereafter.

2. Ministers holding Clergy Permits from the Southwestern Clergy Bureau can use their permits going and returning. The Clergy Permit is generally cheaper than Summer Tourist Tickets in South-eastern territory.

3. Ministers holding Clergy Permits from the Western Clergy Bureau can use their permits to purchase through tickets to Black Mountain and return. It is not good for local trips in the South-eastern territory. A permit from the Southeastern Clergy Bureau may be obtained from Mr. W. H. Howard, chairman, Atlanta, Ga. The Summer Tourist Ticket is generally cheaper than Clergy Permit from the Western territory.

4. Ruling Elders all over the Church should use the Round Trip Summer Tourist Tickets to Black Mountain, N. C. See your railroad agent at once about a ticket. If he does not sell coupon tickets, ask him to secure one for you. It is necessary for you to avail yourself of this rate.

5. Trains from Richmond and contiguous points will come via Salisbury and will arrive at Black Mountain at 2:25 p. m., 10:35 a. m., 2:50 a. m.

6. Trains from St. Louis, Louisville and contiguous points will come via Morristown, Tenn., and will arrive at Asheville at 1:10 p. m.

7. Trains from Memphis will come via Morristown, Tenn., and will arrive at Asheville at 1:10 p. m.

8. Trains from New Orleans, Birmingham, Atlanta and contiguous points will come via Spartanburg, S. C., and will arrive at Asheville 8:30 p. m., 11:45 a. m. Commissioners from New Orleans may also come via Knoxville and arrive at Asheville 10:45 p. m.

9. Trains from Asheville to Black Mountain leave at 6:00 a. m., 2:25 p. m., 4:40 p. m., and 8:10 a. m. All these schedules are subject to change. Secure from your agent the correct schedule before leaving home.

10. A Pre-Assembly Meeting will be held Wednesday night.

For fuller information see agents and church papers.

J. D. Leslie, Stated Clerk.

A CORRECTION

Rev. E. G. Clary did not organize the six Presbyterian schools in Wilson County as stated in the Standard. This work was started by pastors, associate pastors and workers of the Presbyterian Church of Wilson, with the generous support of the Home Mission Committees of Presbytery (Albemarle) and Synod of N. C.

E. G. Clary.

A CORRECTION

In our issue of April 11th, in an editorial, we made reference to the growing indebtedness of the Foreign Mission Committee. It seems, according to Dr. E. W. Smith that there is no growing indebtedness, but that the debt is less than it was last year. We gladly make the correction, and congratulate the secretary that such is the case. Dr. Smith also states that the American Board, one of the oldest, largest and best mission boards in America report a decline on their receipts along every line. We are glad to give place to this information and to know that when we reported a growing deficit, we were mistaken.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Charleston, First Church — Beginning Tuesday, April 10th, a series of meetings will be conducted at the First Presbyterian Church, Tradd and Meeting Sts., by Dr. W. R. Dobyns, of Birmingham, Ala. Meetings will be held daily at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Dr. Dobyns is one of the most successful evangelistic speakers in the Southern Presbyterian Assembly, and the members of this congregation are invited to attend these services as far as possible.

Harmony Presbytery met April 10th in Salem (B. R.) Church. There were present 12 ministers and 25 elders. Opening sermon by retiring moderator, Rev. R. H. Ratchford. Rev. L. K. Martin was elected moderator; Rev. R. L. Grier, temporary clerk. Rev. W. R. Pritchett, of Indiantown Church was elected commissioner to the General Assembly with elder M. B. Wilson, of Mayesville Church; Rev. R. L. Grier, pastor of Mayesville alternate with elder D. E. McCutchen, of Indiantown Church.

Presbytery adjourned to meet in Lake City, Tuesday, June 19th to act upon a call of Lake City Church for R. W. Park. The next stated meeting will be at Kingstree, S. C.

W. H. Workman, S. C.

Greenville—On April 8th, in the Second Presbyterian Church, Greenville, the tower chimes were dedicated to the worship of Almighty God in the presence of more than a thousand people. The chimes were purchased by the voluntary subscriptions of the members and are a valuable addition to the assets of the church. They will prove a blessing and a means of grace to the members of the church and to the community as they peal out the old hymns of the Christian faith. The musical program was elaborate and a cantata by Caleb Simper on "The Rolling Seasons" was rendered by 25 voices. The work of the church for the past year was one of the best in its history. It has 13 elders, 13 deacons and 512 members and contributed last year to all causes $14,571. There were eighty additions; 50 by examination and thirty by certificate and a net gain of 63. Of the total gifts, the Sunday School contributed $2,363 and the Women's Auxiliary $2,031.

Charleston, Second Church—Under the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Hickman, this church is making fine progress. There were 70 additions last year, a majority upon profession of faith. Thirty-four joined last quarter. Mr. Hickman has been holding evangelistic services in the Gordon Street Church, Atlanta.

Dr. J. K. Frazer, of Galt, Ontario, a former pastor was expected to fill the pulpit April 15th.

The Gilbert Brackett Bible class held its sixth annual anniversary meeting on Monday afternoon, March 26th. Fifty members and guests were present to bear testimony to the efficient work which this organization is carrying on. The officers for the new year were elected.

The members of the congregation are asked to reserve the evening of Monday, April 23d, for the observance of "Church Night." At this time all the organizations of the church will make a complete report of their work for the past year and their plan for the future. This is one step in the direction of the unifying of the work of the church, by which it is hoped its efficiency may be greatly increased.

Bethel Presbytery met in Blacksburg, S. C., April 18, 1923, 8 p. m. Moderator, Rev. J. J. Brown; assistant clerk, elder Jas. S. White, of First Church, Rock Hill, S. C.

Received: Rev. T. M. Stevenson from Atlanta Presbytery and arranged for his installation at Zion and Uriel churches.

Licensed: Mr. J. W. Anderson and Mr. M. R. Williamson and dismissed them, the former to Athens Presbytery and the latter to Savannah Presbytery.

Received by letter from Mecklenburg Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry: Mr. Alex. M. Simpson.

Presbyterial sermon by Rev. F. Ray Riddle, on the subject: "The Final Authority of Faith and Practice." This sermon made a deep impression and Presbytery requested its publication in the Church papers.

Next regular meeting: September 18, 1923, at Olivet Church.

Overture: Bethel Presbytery respectfully overtures the General Assembly to meet in Montreat, N. C., that they instruct our Committee of Foreign Missions,

1. That they do not use the funds contributed to our Foreign Mission enterprise for the support of the National Christian Council inasmuch as, in our judgment, they have no right to do so.

2. That they refrain from encouraging said Council in any way whatever.

3. That they heartily endorse the Bible Union of China.

Done in Presbytery this 20th day of April, 1923. Blacksburg, S. C. F. H. Wardlaw, S. C.

Piedmont Presbytery met in Seneca, S. C., April 16, 1923.

Present, 12 ministers and 22 elders; moderator, Rev. J. B. Belk; temporary clerk, elder R. L. Parker; opening sermon by Rev. R. F. Kirkpatrick, D.D.; received, Rev. T. D. Cartledge from North Alabama Presbytery; licentiate S. H. Fulton from care of Pee Dee Presbytery; candidate G. W. Belk, Jr., from Mecklenburg, and candidate R. R. Craig from East Hanover. Candidate A. R. Craig was dismissed to care of Durant Presbytery; candidate H. R. Foster was licensed to preach; licentiate S. H. Fulton and candidate G. W. Belk, Jr., were examined for ordination, and commissions were appointed to ordain them. A commission was also appointed to install Rev. T. D. Cartledge as pastor of Westminster. The pastoral relations between Rev. I. E. Wallace and the Seneca and Richland churches were dissolved. An overture was adopted, asking the Assembly to have printed a blank form of pastoral call. Rev. J. B. Belk was elected trustee of Presbyterian College of South Carolina. The Presbyterial sermon was preached by Rev. Robert Adams, D.D., on Regeneration. Next stated meeting at Pelzer, S. C., October 2, 1923. Robert Adams, S. C.

Pee Dee Presbytery met in Bennettsville, S. C. April 11th, with 18 ministers and 27 elders present. Rev. R. A. Brown, of Atlanta preached the opening sermon.

Elder M. J. McInnis, of Lamar was elected moderator and Rev. J. S. Garner was elected temporary clerk. Rev. John McSweeney was dismissed to Piedmont Presbytery to become pastor of the church at Clemson College. Samuel Hewitt Fulton was licensed as a probationer. The licensure was conducted in a very impressive manner by his father, Rev. D. M. Fulton, D.D., of Darlington. Licentiate Fulton was dismissed to Piedmont Presbytery. James H. Caligan and Sidney F. Caligan of McColl and S. L. Smith, of Bennettsville were received under the care of Presbytery as candidates. The first two are sons of Rev. J. A. Caligan. The pastoral relation between Rev. E. C. Bailey and the church of Latta and Dumbarton was dissolved and Mr. Bailey was given permission to labor outside the bounds of Presbytery until the next meeting. Rev. D. M. Fulton preached the Presbyterian sermon on The Jealousy of God. It was an excellent sermon and he was requested to publish the sermon in the church papers. Rev. D. M. Douglas, D.D., president of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina and Rev. S. C. Byrd, D.D., president of Chicora College for Women were present and addressed the Presbytery. A commission was appointed to organize a church at Marlboro. Presbytery decided to place a negro pastor-evangelist in the field, and aggressive Home Mission work in Horry and Florence counties was decided on. An adjourned meeting will be held in Bennettsville April 30th at 11 a. m. The fall meetings will be held in the Kentyre Church, October 23d, at 11 a. m. A. H. McArn, S. C.

South Carolina Starts the Dixie State C. E. Convention. (C. F. Evans, Southern Secretary, United Society of Christian Endeavor.) South Carolina fired the first shot in the battery of Dixie State Conventions, opening at Florence April 6, with 245 registered delegates.

Among the speakers were Dr. H. H. Pitzer, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Dr. G. A. Nickles, Charleston; Miss Mamie Gene Cole, Junior Field Secretary for Dixie; S. W. Dendy Field Secretary of South Carolina; Dr. J. M. Wells, President Columbia Theological Seminary; Dr. Howard S. Hilly, President Atlantic Christian College; Dr. R. F. Kirkpatrick, Vice-Chairman the All-South Committee; Dr. E. B. Quick, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. Dudley Jones, Clinton, S. C., and Southern Secretary Evans.

Mr. Marshall Woodson, of the Columbia Seminary, directed the singing in his usual splendid way, and greatly helped the convention. He has become a definite part of the South Carolina conventions and will be greatly missed when he completes his Seminary work, as he will do this year.

The Columbia Seminary Quartette was one of the outstanding features of the convention, and delighted the convention time after time with splendid selections.

The Florence folk looked after every detail in a way that added greatly to the success of the convention.

The convention theme was "The Strength of Youth." The convention text was "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," and was placed on a large cloth sign at the front of the main auditorium. Dr. Nickles based all the devotional messages upon this theme, and greatly inspired the Endeavorers by his gripping messages.

The retirement of S. Wilkes Dendy as Field Secretary brought a cloud of sorrow over the convention, but since his retirement is caused by his heavy work in the Columbia Seminary the Endeavorers were willing to give him up, and as a slight expression of their appreciation and love presented to him a handsome purse of gold containing five valuable pieces.

State President Flannagan has won a great place in the hearts of the South Carolina Endeavors by his faithful work, and his renomination was received with hearty applause by the entire convention.

State Treasurer, Miss Virginia Taylor, brought the State Union to the end of the year with all bills paid and a balance for the new year.

The State Efficiency Cup was awarded to the McConnellsville Society. Its Efficiency Chart per cent is 911. The Effingham Society stood second in this contest.

The Intermediate Cup was awarded to the Hartsville Society. This society had 12 delegates in the convention.

The "Pep" luncheon Saturday noon had 225 present, with others turned away. The Intermediate banquet had 125 Saturday evening, and was a most unusual and interesting banquet in many ways. The Senior banquet was held at the close of the Saturday night session, and had more than 200 present. The Florence folk gave a highly enjoyable program during this banquet, which greatly added to the pleasure of the occasion.

One hundred and one subscriptions were received for The Dixie Endeavorer, with 86 more pledged.

The State Life Work Recruits gave a very impressive program at the Christian Endeavor hour, presenting a ladder with five rounds to illustrate their points. Starting at the bottom, the rounds were designated: "Study the Need," "Seeking God's Plan," "Save by Prayer," "Sacrificially Give," "Surrender Life."

One hundred and forty-one attended the early morning service Sunday, which was led by Dr. Kirkpatrick.

The next convention goes to Chester, April 11, 12, 13, 1924. The following officers were elected for the coming year:

South Carolina State Officers, 1923-1924: President, J. A. Flanagan, Bowling Green; Vice-President, Rev. R. F. Kirkpatrick, D.D., Anderson; Secretary, Miss Emmie Osteen, Chicora College, Columbia; Treasurer, Miss Virginia Taylor, 116 West Prentiss St., Greenville; M. S. P. Supt., S. Wilkes Dendy, 1600 Blanding, Columbia.

NORTH CAROLINA

Williams Memorial—On April 15th there were four additions to this church on profession of faith. Rev. Dr. A. R. Shaw has been supplying this church most acceptably.

Bessemer City—Beginning Monday night, March 12th, Bessemer City Church had the pleasure of a week's preaching by Rev. R. C. Long, of Gastonia. Every sermon was founded upon the beatitudes as recorded in the fifth chapter of Matthew, and directed towards deepening the spiritual life of the Lord's people. Our people were greatly pleased with brother Long's simple and plain way of stating the old Gospel message and so were the brethren of other churches. At the last service 97 reconsecration cards were signed by members of some church and several were signed by Sunday School boys and girls who expect to make a public profession of their faith in Christ by union with the Church.

J. J. Harrell.

Monroe—At the evening service on last Sabbath, Rev. W. B. S. Chandler was installed as pastor of this church. A large congregation was present and the service was very interesting throughout. The installation sermon was preached by Rev. J. F. Ligon, pastor of the Tenth Avenue Church, Charlotte, and the charge to the people made by Mr. A. M. Gray, elder in the same church. The charge to the pastor and the propounding of the constitutional questions were by Rev. H. E. Gurney, of Providence Church, a former pastor of the Monroe Church. Mr. Chandler comes to the Monroe Church from a most successful pastorate at Dillon, S. C.

Belmont—This church sent up a splendid report to Presbytery, showing that last year was one of progress and growth along all lines. While there were only six additions to the church roll, nearly all the attendants at the services being church members, the various departments of the church show evidences of life and efficiency. Our quotas to all causes were fully paid and many of them were more than paid. The church gave $5,528 to benevolences last year, an average of $28 per member; $3,064 to current expenses, making a total of $8,582 or an average of $44 per member for all causes. There are 193 members on the roll and 197 in the Sabbath School. On the third Sabbath of the month the pastor, Rev. J. T. Dendy and Rev. J. M. Walker, pastor of Steele Creek Church, exchanged pulpits and both enjoyed the exchange.

Charlotte, First Church—In the absence of Dr. Johnson, Rev. M. F. Daniels filled his pulpit last Sunday at the morning service.

Mr. Daniels as superintendent of Home Missions in Mecklenburg Presbytery delivered a Home Mission address which was rich in striking facts. Any church in the Presbytery would do well to have Mr. Daniels deliver this address to its people. It will pay in results.

Charlotte, First Church—At the communion service, on April 1st, 37 members were announced as being received since January 1st; 15 on profession and 22 by letter.

The church has had a remarkably successful year in regard to its benevolences. In 1918, the benevolences amounted to $12,500; this year to almost $69,000, against a budget adopted of $28,000. Foreign Missions received $19,786; Assembly's Home Missions $7,279; Synod's and Presbytery's Home Missions amounted to $7,779; Schools and Colleges $14,400; Orphans' Home, $13,180. The total amount raised for all causes was $94,969. The pastor of the church, Rev. A. S. Johnson begins evangelistic services at the First Presbyterian Church, Fort Smith, Ark., on April 18th, and from there goes to speak twice before the World Conference on Fundamentals, at Fort Worth, Texas.

Greensboro—All of the services of the Church of the Covenant are interesting, but the service yesterday, was rather unusual. We had a father who came into the church on profession of faith, and was baptized, and with the reception of this new member, he and his wife presented their seven children for baptism, from six months of age up to 10 years.

One of the oldest and most honored ministers of our church told an official in this church, that it was the most inspiring baptismal service he had ever witnessed.

The church has just closed one of the most successful years of its 17 years of history. Twenty-four were received on profession of faith, and 50 were received by certificate. The contributions of the church amounted to $20,450, which was $49.50 per capita.

The church is located near the North Carolina College for Women, with its 1,400 students, and in a growing residential section.

On the 10th of May we celebrated our 17th anniversary.

Durham, Trinity Avenue Church—The every member canvass in this church was a success. The canvass was made by the C. E. Society. The church averaged $13 per member. The C. E. conducts a prayer meeting in some home each Friday evening, lead by different members. This is bringing remarkable results. Many are brought into the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor this way. The young people never refuse to do anything they are called on to do. The Woman's Auxiliary under the leadership of Mrs. Rochelle has closed a fine year. Miss Rachel Beall's class is supporting a native missionary in Africa. This class is doing good work. The C. E. has decided to take one night every six weeks and devote it to the study of our mission fields until the entire seven fields are studied. The geography, the history, workers on the field, and the needs will be presented. The personal workers band is carrying out the spirit of the Master. In one evening a girl 14 years old made 10 calls doing personal work. In the past three Sundays 11 have been received into the church. Geo. L. Cooper, Pastor.

Gastonia—The past year has been one of the best in the history of this church, according to annual reports to Presbytery. The total Sunday School enrollment, including the outposts, is 1,434. There were 163 additions to the church, 101 being on profession of faith. The total contributions for all causes were $58,896, of which $21,426 went to benevolences, and $18,000 to the building fund; the balance being for the local work. The Woman's Auxiliary reported a membership of 105 and total contributions, $3,437.

During the absence of Dr. Henderlite, who will spend the last part of April in Florida, helping in the Synodical evangelistic campaign, the pulpit of this church will be occupied by Dr. Egbert W. Smith, our Secretary of Foreign Missions, and Mr. J. B. Spillman, Secretary of Stewardship for the Synod of North Carolina.

Dr. C. G. Vardell, president of Flora Macdonald College, made a flying visit to the Alumnae Association of that institution in Gaston County, and on Sunday, April 15th, preached a strong sermon at the morning hour and, at night, made a very interesting talk on his recent trip to England and Scotland in connection with the unveiling of the Flora Macdonald monument on the Isle of Skye.

The Presbytery of Mecklenburg met in Caldwell Memorial Church, Charlotte, N. C., April 10, 1923. Present: 47 ministers and 53 elders.

Rev. C. H. Rowan, Moderator; Rev. S. A. Ewart, Temporary Clerk

Received: Rev. W. B. S. Chandler, from Pee Dee Presbytery; Rev. J. A. McQueen, from West Hanover Presbytery; Rev. J. A. Satterfield, from Montgomery Presbytery.

Dismissed: Licentiate D. C. Stogner to Enoree Presbytery; Candidate W. C. Neel to Greenbrier Presbytery; Candidate Coyte Hunter to Albemarle Presbytery; Candidate Edmund P. O'Conner to Cherokee Presbytery.

Licensed: D. C. Stogner of Columbia Seminary.

Received on examination: Edmund P. O'Conner as candidate for ministry.

Dissolved pastoral relations between Rev. G. B. Thompson and Waxhaw Church.

Overtures: 1. The Assembly to withdraw from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

2. The Assembly to list Boys' Societies with Young People's Societies rather than with Men's Societies.

Presbyterial Sermon: Rev. C. H. Rowan on "Deity of Christ."

Next Stated Meeting: Central Steele Creek, October 23, 1923.

Adjourned Meeting: Charlotte First Church, July 3, 1923 at 2 p. m.

C. C. Anderson, S. C.

Wilmington Presbytery met in Elkton Church, Elkton, N. C., April 10, 1923, and was opened with a sermon by Rev. J. J. Murray, the retiring moderator. Present, 21 ministers and 28 ruling elders.

Officers: Rev. D. M. McGeachy was elected moderator and Rev. R. E. McClure and ruling elder F. B. Johnson, temporary clerks.

Received: Rev. C. B. Heller was received from Concord Presbytery.

Sermon: The Presbyterial sermon was preached by Rev. D. T. Caldwell on "Evangelism," after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated.

Pastoral Relations Dissolved. The pastoral relation between Rev. J. R. Phipps and the Jacksonville Church was dissolved, also that between Rev. J. S. Crowley and Pearsall Memorial.

Commissions: Commissions reported the organization of a church in Bladen County and the ordination of Rev. J. K. Fleming. Commissions were appointed to install Rev. C. B. Heller pastor of Elizabethtown, Brown Marsh, Beth Car and Glengarry churches, and Rev. C. W. Davis, pastor of Southport and New Hope churches.

Candidate: Candiate B. F. Yandell was dismissed to the care of Congaree Presbytery.

Commissioners: The following commissioners were elected to the General Assembly, to wit: Rev. W. P. M. Currie, Wallace, N. C., and Rev. J. J. Murray, Wilmington, N. C., principals; and Rev. J. R. Phipps, Pollockville, N. C., and Rev. N. N. Fleming, Wilmington, N. C., and ruling elders F. B. Johnson, Clinton, N. C., alternate ministers; and D. L. Blue, Elizabethtown, N. C., principals; and Clarence Clark, Clarkton, N. C., and J. A. Salling, Wilmington, N. C., alternates.

Local Home Missions: In connection with the report on Home Missions, short but interesting addresses were made by Rev. J. M. McBryde, Rev. J. J. Murray and Mr. J. M. Harvey. Wilmington Presbytery is doing a splendid and aggressive Home Mission work through the combined efforts of Rev. J. J. Murray, superintendent, and Mr. J. M. Harvey, Sunday School Missionary. The fields are being better equipped and new territory being occupied. Rev. A. W. Crawford was present and made an excellent report and a strong appeal for Synod's work.

On the whole, the reports of the various Permanent Committees were encouraging and indicated that our churches are falling more and more in line with the Progressive Program.

Adjourned Meeting: An adjourned meeting of the Presbytery will be held in St. Andrews Church, Wilmington, N. C., April 19, 1923, at 11 a. m.

Next Regular Meeting: The regular fall meeting of Presbytery will be held at South River Church, on Tuesday, September 25, 1923, at 11 a. m.

Flat Branch—March 20th was a great day for the pastor, Rev. F. M. Bain and his family. During the afternoon flour, hams, and the many other good things that it takes to fill the store room were brought in as an evidence of their welcome, and the kind heartedness of this people. We feel that we are pleasantly situated among the Presbyterian Scotchmen of Harnette County. The new manse, which is a six room bungalow, built during the last few months, is a credit to any church and community. The members of the Flat Branch Church should be highly commended for this splendid piece

(Continued on page 10)

Educational

Union Theological Seminary—Arrangements are completed for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the location of Union Seminary in Richmond.

On account of the crowded condition of the dormitories, due to the large number of students this session, it will be impossible to extend a general invitation to alumni and other friends of the institution to come to this celebration.

Looking forward to more ample arrangements next year for the still larger number of students who are expected to attend, the Executive Committee and the Board of Trustees have let the contract for an additional building to contain 16 rooms. This will be ready for occupancy at the opening of next session. The seminary will also acquire "Brightside," one of the buildings now occupied by the Assembly's Training School, and this also will be in readiness for seminary students in September. It is hoped that the additional accommodations provided by these two buildings will enable the seminary to take care of all the students applying for admission next fall.

With the acquisition of these two buildings, the seminary plant will consist of 18 buildings and 47 acres of ground. The first group of buildings in the new location numbered eight. Looking back over the 25-year period since the removal of the seminary to Richmond, it is interesting to note that 2,184 students have been in attendance during this quarter of a century. The total number in attendance during the preceding 25 years was 1,078. The total number of students in attendance in the session of 1897-98, the last year at the old location, was 68. The total number of students in attendance this session is 128.

Mitchell College—The local alumnae of the old Statesville College, now Mitchell College, will give a luncheon to the alumnae of the college scattered throughout North Carolina and other states, on Tuesday of commencement week. All alumnae are urged to come back to their alma mater and see how she is renewing her youth and progressing with the times, under the splendid management of Concord Presbytery, with Dr. W. F. Hollingsworth as president. We want every alumna to come, if possible. Dates will be fixed later, when the commencement program will be announced. All who can come will please write either one of the committee, and entertainment will be provided.

Miss Johnnie Deal, Mrs. J. F. Carlton,
Mrs. Z. V. Long, Mrs. M. R. Adams, Committee.

Flora Macdonald College—The Y. W. C. A. service was led on last Sunday evening by Rev. H. A. Cox, of the Episcopal Church. Special music was rendered by the Y. W. Choir, and a vocal solo by Miss Caroline Pollard was the musical feature of the evening. Mr. Cox spoke on the relation between modern science and Christian faith.

Miss Sara Pollard, graduate of the college in household arts in 1918, has been secured to take charge of the Domestic Art department for the balance of the term, this change being made necessary on account of the death of Miss Anna Spencer Daniel.

The Senior tea room was officially opened last week—tea, sandwiches, lemonade, etc., being served, and many "side lines," such as candy, fruit, etc., being sold for the benefit of the Senior class. The tea room has many convenient features, such as a built-in cabinet, a selling counter, and numerous tables and chairs placed at intervals for serving refreshments.

A minstrel was presented under the auspices of the Pine and Thistle staff Monday night in the college auditorium. The cast was composed of members of the Lumberton High School.

A recital was given at Dunn, N. C., Thursday evening, April 19th, by Mr. C. G. Vardell, Jr., dean of the conservatory, assisted by Mrs. W. B. Robeson, violinist. This entertainment was given at the Methodist Church, under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliaries of the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches of Dunn. A large and appreciative audience was present.

The forty-second branch association of the General Alumnae Association was organized in Jacksonville, Fla., on April 14th, with Mrs. Annie Lee Cleveland Smith, president; Mrs. Maynor. Huie Bennett, secretary-treasurer. It is planned by the Florida alumnae to have a state meeting once every year in which the 45 alumnae residing in Florida will come together.

Davidson—Before his usual large congregation of townspeople and students Rev. Dr. C. M. Richards on Sunday morning preached a very strong and altogether forceful sermon on the reasonableness of and the evidence for miracles. The sermon was the subject of very wide and eulogistic comment, carrying at times into the camp of the enemy and setting forth how many of the hypothetical pronouncements and philosophies of science call for an exercise of faith more difficult than that demanded by supernaturalism.

The Senior class which sometimes ago subscribed $5,000 to the $600,000 campaign for the rebuilding of Chambers and for enlarged endowment has voted to use the money for the building of one of the handsome lecture rooms in the new building, making choice of history and naming the room in honor of Dr. J. M. McConnell with proper bronze tablet and inscription telling of the donors and in whose honor they have made their gift. The Seniors vote Dr. McConnell the most popular professor in the faculty and testify to his usefulness in and to the college, specifying in particular his fine work and influence in helping to show the student body the wisdom of eliminating all forms of hazing and of the establishment of a board or court of control that shall have decision in all matters that involve members of the Freshman class in relation to other classes. Further, the Seniors give recognition to Dr. McConnell's successful efforts toward the installation of Phi Beta Kappa at Davidson.

The latter part of the coming week will stage a debate in Shearer Hall by representatives from Trinity College, Durham, whose young men are famous for oratory in point of both content and declamation, and Davidson, who is sending up against them some talent that in the crisis hour will speak both for itself and the college. Warren Cox, of Alabama; L. D. Elkins, and A. M. Hillhouse, of Georgia, will represent the Red and Black of Davidson.

Recent elections among the students resulted as follows: A. M. Hillhouse, president of the student body; J. P. Hendrix and M. S. Beall, vice-presidents; W. T. Jones, of Mississippi, president of the Y. M. C. A.; A. M. McBryde, vice-president; E. L. Elkins, editor-in-chief of The Davidonian; W. Z. Bradford, managing editor, with C. M. McIlwaine and H. B. Price, assistant managers. R. L. Price, business manager; Harry B. Price, secretary and treasurer (Y. M. C. A.); W. M. Heston (election by the Junior class) editor-in-chief of the Annual, Quips and Cranks; R. H. Smith, business manager.

TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR A NAME

The Southern Railroad, that serves the South so acceptably, is about to establish a new through train between New York and New Orleans, La. There will be sleeping car service between New Orleans, Montgomery, Atlanta, Washington, Philadelphia and New York; over the L. & N. R. R. between New Orleans and Montgomery; West Point route between Montgomery and Atlanta; the Southern R. R. between Atlanta and Washington; and the Pennsylvania between Washington and New York.

The Southern Railway offers $200 to the one suggesting an appropriate name for this new train service. Those entering this contest will address all communications to W. H. Tayloe, Passenger Traffic Manager, Southern Railway, Washington, D. C.

News of the Week

The charge of E. E. Dudding, president of the Prisoner's Relief Society, Washington, D. C., that there are abuses in the state prison of North Carolina, will be ignored by the board of directors, after a long conference with Governor Morrison. Mrs. Kate Burr Johnston, commissioner of public welfare, is in favor of an investigation.

According to the political prophets Judge Stacy and Governor Morrison will be candidates for the senatorship, to represent the east and west sections of the state, when the terms of the present senators expire.

President Harding is planning a western trip, when he will make several speeches. Thus far, a dozen cities in the central and western states have been given more or less definite position on the list of places where important addresses are to be delivered.

The barrier to aliens erected by the restrictive immigration law of the United States threatens to create a serious labor shortage and is "one of the worst things this country ever did for itself," E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, told stockholders at their annual meeting.

Between 700 and 800 of the leading cotton mill executives of the country are expected to gather in Richmond, Va., May 16th and 17th, at the twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, it was announced Tuesday by W. D. Adams, secretary and treasurer of the association, which has executive offices in the Commercial National Bank building. Besides many of the most prominent figures in the cotton industry, the governors of North and South Carolina and Virginia are on the convention program.

Two million dollars worth of bonds and securities, included in the loot taken in a hold-up of an armored mail truck in St. Louis, Mo., April 2d, were recovered in a home in St. Louis, several miles west of the city limits.

Police were called upon to assist in preserving order at the Daughters of the American Revolution annual congress during balloting in connection with the triennial election of officers.

One hundred thousand dollars for a women's building—that is the decision of the executive committee of the University trustees upon the question that caused so much argument recently. This amount does not provide for as elaborate a structure as was once proposed.

After a lingering illness, the Right Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, died at his home in St. Louis, April 17th. He was 86 years old and the oldest Anglican bishop in point of service in the world.

Criminal prosecutions may follow an injunction suit filed in New York by the federal government to protect the public against exorbitant sugar prices.

Instead of people going to church on Sunday or any other day, the church will be brought direct to the people by radio under a plan proposed by the Radio Church of America, which was incorporated under the laws of the state of California, and purports to be non-sectarian and non-denominational.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

of work and this should encourage them to go forth and do even greater things for the Master's kingdom. While our hearts have been made glad, they have also been made sad by the loss of one of our most aggressive and faithful elders, Mr. Edward Monroe, who as chairman of the building committee was always ready and willing to do anything in order that the manse might be completed, but we bow in submission to our Master's will. We need the prayers of God's people that in all the churches of this field that the work may be enabled to go forward as never before for the advancement of God's kingdom.
F. M. Bain, pastor.

PERSONAL

The address of Rev. C. R. Garrison is changed from Huntington to Malden, W. Va., where he becomes the pastor of the Malden Church.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to attend the annual commencement of the Assembly Training School, on May 7th, at Schauffler Hall, Richmond, Va.

Rev. Thompson Pharr, son of elder James W. Pharr, of Charlotte has resigned his charge at Renick, W. Va., in order to become Religious Director of the Y. M. C. A., Davidson College.

APPALACHIA

Weaverville, N. C.—Sunday, April 8th was a day we will all long remember. At the morning service five of our young people stood before the congregation and made a public profession of their faith in Christ. God is wonderfully blessing us in our work. Our membership has grown from ten members a year ago to 29 at present. We finished our first year of work with all current expenses and benevolences paid up. The every member canvass was put over in fine shape. We are looking forward to still greater things in the future.

Rev. Homer Casto is again opening Bethel Home for the summer. This is a home for Christian tubercular men. If there are any men in our Church who feel that they are not able to afford the more costly places and yet who should be taking the cure, if they can afford to pay ten dollars per week they would do well to get in touch with Mr. Casto before his place is filled.
Cor.

The Canton, N. C. Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. W. M. Sikes, D.D., is pastor, has had a good year. Two evangelistic meetings were held during the church year, one by the pastor in April, 1922, and one by Rev. Paul N. Gresham in March, 1923. Brother Gresham did some fine preaching for us and the Lord blessed his messages to our good. Nine united with the church on profession of faith at the close of his meeting.

The statistical report to Presbytery for the year shows 17 added to the church on profession of faith in Christ, and ten on certificate from other churches, making 27 new members during the year. The contributions to benevolences for the year were $369 and the amount spent on the local work for the year was $2,079. This makes a total raised and paid out for the year of $2,448. The Lord has blessed us graciously, but we look forward in faith to even greater things during the coming year. Both the pastor and the people are planning some forward steps for the new year.

FLORIDA

DeFuniak Springs—The annual reports sent up to Florida Presbytery had some very encouraging facts and features. The church reported a membership of 345 (the largest in its history), of whom 313 are resident members. The amounts contributed to benevolences aggregated $2,547 and the gifts to all purposes aggregated $10,488, an average from resident members $8.00 and $33.50 respectively.

The various agencies of the church are active and energetic in their spheres. The Ladies' Auxiliary is well organized and has had a year of fine success. Besides the home Sunday School, five afternoon Sunday Schools are successfully manned and maintained and fine fruits are appearing as the results of self-denying labor. An interesting and helpful conference of the officers and teachers of the Sunday School meets regularly each month. The Presbyterian Brotherhood also meets monthly and is greatly enjoyed by its members. Three branches of the Christian Endeavor meets regularly on Sunday.

We hope to be in our church building before the meetings of Florida Presbytery in the fall.

Daniel J. Currie.

The Presbytery of Florida met in Milton, Fla., on April 10, 1923. Present: 13 ministers and 13 elders. Officers: Judge T. F. West, of Tallahassee, moderator; ruling elder J. L. Hendrick, of Pensacola, recording clerk.

Received: Rev. J. E. Guthrie, from the Presbytery of Abingdon.

Overtures: (1) Asking the General Assembly to put the Lord's Day Alliance in the budget of our Church. (2) Asking the General Assembly to appoint an ad interim committee to consider the question of consolidating some of our Theological Seminaries, and to consider the readjustment of our Seminary courses to meet present demands.

(Continued on page 12)

.....
CHILDREN
.....

SOLD HER PONY

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 13 years old, I have written you once before, and my letter was printed, so I thought I would write again.

I have sold my pony, Minnie. My aunt takes your good paper, it helps so in the Christian Endeavor Society My school teacher was Miss Edith Todd, I like her fine. My mother is my Sunday School teacher. I am a member of South River Presbyterian Church. I will close by asking a question: What occupation did Paul follow? I don't want this to reach the waste basket as I want to surprise my Aunt Cora Graham and my daddy.

Your friend,
Mary Elizabeth Cromartie.

Garland, N. C.

A SISTER IN CHARLOTTE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 11 years old. I go to school at Springfield. I love my teacher fine. She has offered a prize to all her little boys and girls who do not miss a day, I have not missed a day yet. My principal's name is Mr. Ira Turnley, he is teaching in Mr. Keith's place, who is sick in the hospital.

I am in the sixth grade. I joined the church when Mr. A. T. Lassiter held a meeting at Union. I go to Sunday School every Sunday I can. I have one little sister at home. She is the baby. She is two years old. Her name is Jean. I have another sister in your city, she is in training at the Presbyterian Hospital; hope she will see my letter. We have a great big dog, and one little pig. The pig is just as fat as he can be. I will close, hoping that my letter will be printed. From your unknown friend, Dorothy Swett.

Cameron, N. C.

SCHOOL AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Dear Standard:

This is my first letter to you. I am 12 years old. I am in school at Springfield. I like my teacher very much. I go to Sunday School at my school house. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Irene Thomas. I hope my letter will be printed.

Your friend,
Vera Underwood.

Carthage, N. C.

A NEW LITTLE FRIEND

Dear Standard:

I am 14 years old, have brown eyes, light hair and fair complexion. I go to school at Springfield. My teacher's name is Miss Margaret McLaughlin. I like her fine. I am in the sixth grade. Hope my letter will be printed. Your new friend,

Alma Crutchfield.

Cameron, N. C.

TWO PET DOGS

Dear Standard:

This is my second letter to you. I am going to school. Rev. A. T. Lassiter came to see us not long ago to tell us about his church. He did not stay with us as long as we would have liked. I love to go to Sunday School. I have two little pet dogs. I must close. Your friend, Helena Vick.

Vass, N. C.

A SMART LITTLE GIRL

Dear Standard:

I have never written a letter to you before. I am just nine years old, and in the sixth grade. Don't you think I'm smart? I am going to school at Springfield. I go to Sunday School there too. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Irene Thomas. I like her so much. I hope my letter will be printed.

Your little friend,

Mollie Underwood.

Carthage, N. C.

A PRESENT FOR ANN

The parcel post wagon came rattling along the street and stopped in front of Grace Holmes' house. Grace ran to the door and held out her hands for the package the postman brought. Then she flew back to the kitchen, where mother was shelling peas.

"Oh, mother, mother," she cried, "I know it's a present!"

"Let me see," said Mrs. Holmes, as she looked at the address. "Why, it has Ann's name on it."

"Ann's name," said Grace in surprise. "Why, Ann is too little to have packages."

"Well, Ann would like to have you open it, Grace," said mother.

Hurriedly, Grace cut the string and opened the box. There was a lovely blue sweater of the softest wool.

"A slip-on," cried Grace. "It's just like Harriet's. She has to pull her's on over her head."

Mother read the card which was tucked in it—"For Little Ann, who is six months old today; from Aunt Alice.

My, how Grace did wish for that sweater! It was just the kind she had wanted for a long, long time. It was blue, trimmed with narrow gray stripes; the very colors she wanted, too. If only Aunt Alice had made it too big for the baby, perhaps it would fit her.

She watched as mother slipped the sweater over Ann's head and put her little hands through the sleeves. How pretty she looked! The blue in the sweater just matched her blue eyes. Then she smiled at mother and laughed right out loud for Grace.

But Grace did not smile back. She kept saying to herself, "If Aunt Alice only had known how much I wanted that sweater she would have made it for me. She could have sent Ann something else. Ann's too little to know the difference, anyway."

All morning long she kept saying it over and over to herself. Her lips were drawn down at the corners, and her forehead was puckered up. At last she took a pad and pencil and sat down on the porch steps. She was there a long time, and this is what she wrote:

"Dear Aunt Alice:

"Next time you have a sweater to give away, I wish you would send it to me. A rattle would do just as well for Ann. She is too little to know the difference.

"Your loving niece,
"Grace."

She folded the letter and put it in her pocket. Then mother brought Ann out in her carriage.

"Grace," she said, "I would like you to wheel Ann up and down the walk in front of the house until she goes to sleep."

Grace did not look pleased as she generally did when she had Ann in her care. Back and forth she wheeled the carriage. A lady passing said,

"What a pretty baby!" but Grace did not pay any attention.

Then Harriet came along. "Oh, look at Ann's new sweater! Grace, let me wheel her—just once."

Grace willingly surrendered the carriage, and went and sat down on the steps. She watched Harriet, who was having such a good time with the baby. Ann smiled and smiled. Soon her eyes began to droop, and in a moment she was asleep.

"Grace, come look at her," whispered Harriet. "Isn't she just lovely? If I had a little sister I'd want her to have a blue sweater just like Ann's."

Grace looked, and she couldn't help but be proud of Ann. Then she thought of the letter in her pocket. She took it out and tore it into very small pieces.

"Why, what is that?" asked Harriet. "It's a horrid old letter I wrote," answered Grace. "If Ann belonged to you wouldn't you rather have her get a new sweater than for you to have one?"

Harriet said of course she would.

"So would I," said Grace. Then the puckers left her forehead, and the corners of her lips turned the right way once more.—Ex.

WHAT THE TOAD SAYS

I'm a brown little toad that lives all alone

By the side of the wall 'neath a gray mossy stone,

And there I have lived for many a day

In comfort and peace. Please don't drive me away.

I blink at the stars and I wink at the moon,

I squint at the sun in the heart of the noon,

And when the soft rain gently drips on the ground,

I love to come out and hop around and around.

I am homely, I know, but my dark, ugly skin

Is just a protection to wrap myself in;

And I do not make warts, I no magic possess.

I'm only a toad in a little brown dress.

Did you notice the cut-worms that bit off your greens?

Or the stout army-worms that were eating your beans?

Did you see your rose-bushes all covered with bugs?

And the pretty green ferns that were eaten with slugs?

Those insects are gone, but they tasted so good,

I'd eat them again, ev-ry one, if I could.

For I am not harmful to gardens, you see,

Though I know what so often you've thought about me.

So if you'll be kind, I will be just as good

In my own quiet way as any toad could,

And eat all the bad, harmful bugs that I see.

Though they're bad for the plants, they are dainties to me.

And here in your garden, content and alone,

By the side of the wall, 'neath the gray mossy stone,

I will quietly live year by year, day by day.

Little boy, little girl, please don't drive me away!—Irene S. Woodcock, in Our Dumb Animals.

WHEN MARIE'S EYES WERE OPENED

Marie had big, bright, brown eyes that could see the birds and the flowers and the trees, and that could see to read and to go about, yet there were many things that those bright eyes did not see at all. At night, somehow, the eyes could not see the chair where all Marie's clothes should have been neatly placed. If they had, her tired mother would not have had to pick up the clothes from the floor before she went to bed.

In the morning they did not see the place in the bathroom where the towel should have been hung; at breakfast they did not see the napkin ring. They did not see the clock said there was plenty of time to help mother before school.

One day Aunt Margaret came to visit, and she felt so sorry about those bright, blind eyes that she began to help them to see.

"Suppose we tidy up this room before mother comes in," she whispered one day. Marie was going out to play, and had not noticed how the room looked, but she joyfully clapped her hands as she saw her mother's delight when the room was done.

When once the eyes began to see things that ought to be done, they soon began to hunt for things to do to make people happy. And if you have seeing eyes yourself, I need not tell you how much happier and more beautiful the world became for Marie and for every one about her.—Ex.

THE GARDEN YEAR

January brings the snow,
Makes our feet and fingers glow.
February brings the rain,
Thaws the frozen lakes again.
March brings breezes, loud and shrill,
To stir the dancing daffodil.
April brings the primrose sweet;
Scatters daisies at our feet.
May brings flocks of pretty lambs,
Skipping by their fleecy dams.
June brings tulips, lilies, roses;
Fills the children's hands with posies.
Hot July brings cooling showers,
Apricots, and gillyflowers.
August brings the sheaves of corn;
Then the harvest home is borne.
Warm September brings the fruit;
Sportsmen then begin to shoot.
Fresh October brings the pheasant;
Then to gather nuts is pleasant.
Dull November brings the blast;
Then the leaves are whirling fast.
Chill December brings the sleet,
Blazing fire, and Christmas treat.

—Sara Coleridge.

A MOLE OR MYSELF

A mole is dark and soft and gray,
And lives in such a funny way
Beneath the ground.
In tunnels dark, without a light,
That turn to left and turn to right,
He runs around.

He's never heard a wood-thrush sing,
Nor watched a tulip in the spring,
Nor seen the sun.
He's never looked at morning skies;
But then he has no need for eyes,
So he has none.

He cannot tell the night from day,
And doesn't have much room to play;
So I've been told.
Sometimes I'm tired of being a lad,
But always I am very glad
I'm not a mole.

—Anne Blackwell Payne.

Study your neighbors not with a view to getting the advantage of them but with a view of helping them.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Harper-Matthews—At the Ebenezer Presbyterian Church, Rock Hill, S. C., on Saturday, April 14, 1923, at noon, by Rev. John C. Bailey, assisted by Rev. John B. Swann, Mr. Alvin Brock Harper, of Knoxville, Tenn., and Miss Nannic Brooks Matthews, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Matthews.

DEATHS

Deck—On April 13, 1923, Mrs. Sarah A. Deck, aged 76 years and 28 days. She had been a faithful and consistent member of Bessemer City Church for quite a number of years. Her suffering was protracted through a long period of time, but was meekly borne. Two sons and two daughters are left behind to mourn the death of a good mother. Pastor.

Conolly—At his home near York, S. C., on February 6, 1923, James R. Conolly, aged 58. He had been in ill health for over a year. He is survived by six sons and five daughters. He was a member of Tirzah Church. The interment was in the Beth-Shiloh cemetery.

Setzer—William Marshall Setzer, at his home near India Hook, York County, S. C., after an illness of over a year. Survived by his wife and two sons and two daughters. He was a member of the Ebenezer Church and the interment was in the adjoining cemetery.

Hoagland—On March 30, 1923, William Ray Hoagland, aged 17 months, son of James R. Hoagland, of India Hook, York County, S. C., of measles, followed by pneumonia. Interment in the Ebenezer cemetery.

Kimbrell—On April 1, 1923, Mrs. Margaret J. Kimbrell, widow of William Kimbrell, and daughter of Newton Alexander Steele, aged 85 years. She had been confined to her room for several years and latterly to her bed. She was the oldest member of Ebenezer Church. The interment was in Laurelwood cemetery, Rock Hill, S. C.

Bowen—On April 13, 1923, Napoleon J. N. Bowen, at his home in York, S. C., after a short illness, aged 77 years. He was an old Confederate soldier. He is survived by his wife and two sons. He was a member of the Methodist Church. The interment was in the Ebenezer cemetery.

Massey—Jean Neely Massey, daughter of Thomas Neely Massey, of Waxhaw, N. C., died at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Lilly Massey, Rock Hill, S. C., on April 19, 1923, of meningitis, aged 14 months. The interment was at Waxhaw, N. C.

SAMUEL B. NEWTON

At his home in Rose Hill, N. C., on the evening of March 14, 1923, Mr. Samuel B. Newton quietly passed from this life to the life beyond, in the eighty-first year of his age. Several weeks previous, he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and despite all that medical skill and faithful nursing could do, he continued to grow weaker until the end came.

As can be seen from his age, Mr. Newton came to young manhood during that memorable period when our country was engaged in bitter and fratricidal strife. And like every other loyal patriotic son of the South, when war was declared between the States, he readily responded to the call for volunteers, enlisting as a private in Company E, 30th N. C. Regiment, of which he was soon after promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant. Thus, he served as a private or an officer in the Confederate army during the entire period of the war, being a prisoner at Johnson's Island at the time of the surrender. Although many of his comrades in battle had received their discharge from the warfare of life before him, and gone on to their eternal camping ground, he never forget them nor lost his interest in the men who donned the gray during that struggle more than half a century ago.

On February 25, 1868, Mr. Newton was happily married to Miss Sarah Ann Southerland, who proved herself a worthy helpmeet. These two, enjoyed the unusual privilege of living together as one, for almost 50 years, she, however, preceded him to the better land by almost two years. To them were born nine children, six of whom, with many relatives and friends are left behind to mourn the separation. But the sorrowing ones may find comfort in the remembrance that a precious heritage is left to them in the belief that their loved ones have fought the good fight and have only passed on to the beautiful realms of God, to receive and enjoy the reward of the faithful. Their lives, humble, simple, earnest, trustful, true and faithful, are an inspiration and a challenge to draw the waiting ones heavenward.

As might be expected of one reared in a Christian home, Mr. Newton, in early life, "chose that good part which shall not be taken away from him," uniting with Mt. Zion Presbyterian Church, of which he was afterwards chosen a deacon. In this latter capacity, he exhibited unusual gifts in the discharge of his duties. He went about his church duties in a business-like way and with the consciousness that he was going with the approval and authority of the Master. Consequently he asked people to do things for Christ's sake and without apology. After serving as a deacon for a number of years, he was chosen an elder of the same church. In this official position too, he served faithfully and efficiently the church whose very name he loved.

In short, Mr. Newton was a valuable citizen, a generous neighbor, a faithful friend, a loving father, a devoted husband and withal a Christian gentleman. Hence we may say:

"Servant of God well done!
Rest be thy lov'd employ;
The battle fought, the vict'ry won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

MRS. SARAH McGEACHY

Circle No. 4 of the Laurinburg Presbyterian Church feels deeply the loss that it has sustained in the death of one of its most faithful and loyal members, Mrs. Sarah McGeachy. Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom and love, has taken her from us, be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the divine will.

Second, That we extend to the bereaved family our heart-felt sympathy, feeling that they are comforted in the knowledge that she has finished her task on earth and entered into eternal rest.

Third, That as a testimonial of our esteem and appreciation of her this memorial notice be sent to the family, to the Presbyterian Standard and a copy inscribed upon our minutes. Mrs. Jno. Phillips, chairman. Mrs. Jas. P. McRae, vice-chairman.

WANTED—Settled white woman as working housekeeper in family of two grown women. $15-$20 per month and home. Permanent if satisfactory. Write at once to Box 339, Hendersonville, N. C.

The little volume that I published several years ago, "The Book of Revelation," is out of print. I should like to get several copies; and if anyone has a copy that he is willing to part with, I should like to have it. If he will send it to me and name the price, I will remit upon receipt of the book. G. F. Nicholassen, Oglethorpe University, Ga.

$200.00 PRIZE

Washington, D. C. Apr. 16.

Two hundred dollars will be given as a prize to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for No. 33 and 34, the new trains between New Orleans and New York, to be inaugurated on Sunday, April 29th, by The Southern Railway System, the Louisville and Nashville, The West Point Route and the Pennsylvania Railway, according to announcement made today by W. H. Taylor, Passenger Traffic Manager of The Southern, Washington, D. C., to whom all suggestions should be sent. The prize will be awarded after all suggestions have been considered by a committee of officers of the interested lines.

R. H. GRAHAM
Division Passenger Agent
Southern Railway System
Charlotte, N. C.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 10)

Calls: Rev. J. E. Guthrie received a call from the Knox Church of Pensacola and arrangements were made for his installation on April 29, 1923.

Memorial: An appropriate memorial to the late Rev. Francis Tappey, D.D., of the First Presbyterian Church of Pensacola was adopted by Presbytery.

Dedication: The morning session of Presbytery was held at the New Church of Santa Rosa where the new building was dedicated after an able sermon by Rev. Wm. E. McIlwaine, D.D., A most bountiful dinner was afterwards served by the ladies of the community on the church grounds and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered them by the members of Presbytery.

Presbyterial Discourse: The Presbyterial discourse on "Christian Education" was delivered by Rev. D. J. Blackwell and was greatly enjoyed.

Commissioners: Rev. H. A. Love and elder C. H. Meinike, principals; Rev. T. C. Delaney and elder R. D. Daffin, alternates

Summer Conference: Special provision was made for the Sunday School and Young People's Conference to be held in the Palmer College buildings at DeFuniak Springs, Fla., June 12-19, 1923.

Thanks: After a busy and most harmonious meeting, Presbytery passed a hearty vote of thanks to the pastor and people of the Milton Church for their kindness and courtesy to the Presbytery.

Fall Meeting: At 7:30 p. m., November 16, 1923, at DeFuniak Springs, Fla.

Daniel J. Currie, S. C.

"For the world is filled with roses,
And the roses filled with dew,
And the dew is filled with heavenly love
That drips for me and you."

CHURCHES SUBSCRIBING AS MUCH OR MORE FOR THE BENEVOLENT CAUSES THAN FOR LOCAL CHURCH EXPENSES

Concord Presbytery		Pastor's Salary and Cur. Exps.
Members.	Benevolences.	No.	Amt.
378	Davidson College	215	$ 5,100
537	Mooresville First	450	10,740
249	Thyatira	197	1,374
Fayetteville Presbytery		Pastor's Salary and Cur. Exps.
Members.	Benevolences.	No.	Amt.
335	Antioch	276	2,680
149	Bethel	56	1,313
200	Centre	58	2,413
750	Fayetteville First	276	11,250
280	Maxton	74	3,553
196	Parkton		1,000
10	Progressive	6	26
388	St. Pauls	273	4,944
132	Union		570
Kings Mountain Presbytery		Pastor's Salary and Cur. Exps.
Members.	Benevolences.	No.	Amt.
191	Belmont	124	3,956
1,266	Gastonia First	685	16,272
301	Lincolnton	199	4,311

	Total Quota	Benevolent Subscriptions		Total last Yr.	Tithers 1922.	Tithers 1923.	Family Altars 1922.	Family Altars 1923.
		No.	Amt.
Albemarle—12 of 49	$ 64,946	639	$ 11,188	1,825	$ 48,193	334	101	116
Concord—36 of 62	104,754	3,073	69,218	3,629	60,851	366	644	300
Fayetteville—27 of 119	111,296	1,862	50,959	4,158	58,911	341	239	282
Kings Mt.—20 of 38	54,158	2,150	33,466	1,931	32,542	226	194	94
Mecklenburg—49 of 86	175,934	4,570	126,212	4,777	106,148	808	1,140	505
Orange—29 of 89	184,437	4,738	125,478	4,536	143,148	719	723	318
Wilmington—21 of 65	93,834	1,424	51,074	2,533	71,448	440	339	180
205 of 508	$789,359	18,456	$467,595	23,489	$521,241	3,234	3,380	1,795

Mecklenburg Presbytery
130	Amity	44	576
1,535	Charlotte Second	970	36,000
485	Philadelphia	210	2,750
743	Steele Creek	425	7,700
100	Bethlehem	35	350
45	Glade Valley		108
254	Mebane	140	2,550
860	Winston-Salem		28,000
Orange Presbytery
287	Ch. of Covenant	249	10,139
64	Wildwood	45	159
822	Wilmington First		29,000
Wilmington Presbytery
287	Ch. of Covenant	249	10,139
64	Wildwood	45	159
822	Wilmington First		29,000

TWO HUNDRED AND FIVE CHURCHES REPORT SUBSCRIPTIONS OF $467,595

There are 303 churches in the Synod of North Carolina that have failed to make a report of their canvass up to April 21st.

The 205 churches reported 3,380 tithers, which is a larger number than the whole Synod reported last year. These churches also reported 1,876 Family Altars, which is also a larger number than all of the 508 churches reported last year. The report to April 21st is as follows:

	Total last Yr.	Tithers 1922.	Tithers 1923.	Family Altars 1922.	Family Altars 1923.
Albemarle—12 of 49	1,825	$ 48,193	334	101	116
Concord—36 of 62	3,629	60,851	366	644	300
Fayetteville—27 of 119	4,158	58,911	341	239	282
Kings Mt.—20 of 38	1,931	32,542	226	194	94
Mecklenburg—49 of 86	4,777	106,148	808	1,140	505
Orange—29 of 89	4,536	143,148	719	723	318
Wilmington—21 of 65	2,533	71,448	440	339	180
205 of 508	23,489	$521,241	3,234	3,380	1,795

WANTED—Position as stenographer by qualified young lady. References furnished. Address P. O. Box 405, Bamberg, S. C.

WANTED — Pupil nurses for the Rocky Mount Sanitarium, at Rocky Mount, N. C. High School graduates preferred. For further information, apply to the Superintendent.

TYPEWRITERS

New and Rebuilt
For Sale, Rent or Exchange
S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses. Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions. Won't you be one to enroll? A postal address to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.
DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923

Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points. For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Why Take Laxatives?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today. (adv.)

Story and Incident

DICKY-BIRD AND THE STUDENT

Winifred M. Kirkland, The Congregationalist

Dicky-bird is the youngest member of the faculty except one, but that one is only a three-months baby, and a girl besides. Dicky-bird lives on Faculty Hill, which looks across the meadow land of the athletic field and the bit of wood beyond, to the other hill where the college stands. Over there live the students. He does not like students. He wishes there were no students, for then his father could play with him in the mornings instead of bolting his breakfast and skipping down the stone steps, running across the athletic field and then up again on the other side, to be in time to teach students at nine o'clock.

Dicky-bird could stand students if they would only let him alone, but they won't! They come trooping up the stone steps and past his yard, on their way to the road and country walks beyond. And always they stop to talk to Dicky-bird, playing—as if he had time to talk to students! There were no students in sight now, and Dicky-bird went into the house and brought out his tin soldiers, resolved to play Valley Forge near the road, beside which the tiniest of brooks runs down the hill.

Over at the college, in a room under the gables of Croft, Jean Dawson was in a pretty rage. Five minutes before, she had been cheery, whistling softly while she braided her hair and tugged on her sweater preparatory to an early game of hockey—but now, since the coming of the mail!

Jean had read the letter over ten times; she seemed to hear the ringing of his voice through it, and see the fire in his eyes. He was a dear boy—it was just that which made her angry with him—her tall twin brother, with the football hair, the tense lips, the changing eyes. But there lay the obstinate letter:

"Dear Jean: Your letter does not affect my decision in regard to the Christmas vacation. I shall spend it as I please. It's no use trying to tell you how sick I am of the city. To be here in Boston is bad enough, but you ask me to go to New York! To Aunt Lucile's house party, to theaters and dinners and parties—no sleep and no fresh air, and nothing but racket day and night! No, it's Cousin James' good old Vermont farm I'm going to, a hundred miles from a city, and five miles from anywhere, where I can breathe and tramp and ride and ski, and have a taste of woods and hills. Since you are so displeased with me, it is hardly necessary to say that I shall not keep to the plan of spending Thanksgiving with you. I had looked forward to having a hully time, but I don't feel much like coming now.

"Your aff. brother,
"Robert Lynn Dawson."

Jean dashed off four separate replies, each shorter than the preceding. This was the last:

"Dear Rob: I certainly fail to understand. You have no right to disappoint me, after all I've done for you.

"I should think you'd get enough of solitude in camp in the summer, and that two weeks with me in New York at Christmas wouldn't hurt you.

"You are right not to come Thanksgiving. We'd both have a pretty poor sort of time.

"Your loving sister,
"Jean Dawson."

TEACHERS WANTED

Positions to offer in grades, High School subjects; Principals and Superintendents of High Schools; also in Colleges. Correspond with us at once.

SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY
410 Wesley Memorial Bldg. Atlanta, Ga.

BOILS

Old sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

ART GLASS

for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows

Catalog and Special Designs free on request
F. J. COOLEIDGE & SONS
ATLANTA, GA.

WANTED—Young women to take nurses' training. Good course offered. Unusual advantages. Write to Superintendent of Nurses, Westbrook Sanatorium, Richmond, Va.

DAISY FLY KILLER

PLACED ANYWHERE ATTRACTS AND KILLS ALL FLIES. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Sold by dealers, or 5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 Le Barb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

STATEMENT
MANHATTAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
NEW YORK CITY

Condition December 31, 1922, as Shown by Statement Filed

Amount of Capital paid up in cash	$ 100,000.00
Amount of Ledger Assets December 31st of previous year,
$19,301,711.41; Total	19,301,711.41
Premium Income, $2,055,293.45; Miscellaneous, $1,224,175.73; Total	3,279,469.18
Disbursements—To Policyholders, $2,488,409.43; Miscellaneous,
$956,749.50; Total	$ 3,445,158.93
Business written during year—Number of Policies 3,682; Amount	10,485,365.00
Business in force at end of year—Number of Policies 34,311;
Amount	71,418,185.00

Assets

Value of Real Estate (less amount of encumbrances),	$ 4,033,304.36
Mortgage Loans on Real Estate	6,608,767.73
Loans made to Policyholders on this Company's Policies assigned as collateral	4,061,561.39
Premium notes on Policies in force (of which $9,287.50 is for first year's premiums)	177,767.15
Net Value of Bonds and Stocks	3,516,578.00
Cash	527,551.08
Interest and Rents due and accrued	440,809.95
Premiums uncollected and deferred	194,158.76
All other Assets, as detailed in statement	16,395.10

Total	$19,776,893.62
Less Assets not admitted	70,218.82
Total admitted Assets	$19,706,674.80

Liabilities

Net Reserve, including Disability Provision	$17,945,609.55
Present value of amounts not yet due on Supplementary Contracts, etc.	221,534.30
Policy Claims	82,343.71
Dividends left with Company at interest	11,711.30
Premiums paid in advance	10,215.81
Unearned Interest and Rent paid in advance	80,795.27
Commissions due to Agents	11,174.80
Estimated Amount payable for Federal, State, and other Taxes	53,500.00
Dividends due Policyholders	21,140.58
Amounts set apart for future dividends	186,151.23
All other Liabilities, as detailed in statement	477,449.37

Total amount of all Liabilities, except Capital	$19,101,527.10
Capital paid up in Cash	$100,000.00
Unassigned funds (surplus)	505,147.70
	605,147.70
Total Liabilities	$19,706,674.80

Business in the State of North Carolina During 1922

	No.	ORDINARY Amount.
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State in force December 31st of previous year	768	$ 1,306,318.00
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State issued during the year	38	108,925.00
Total	806	$ 1,505,243.00
Deduct ceased to be in force during the year	51	$ 106,799.00
Policies in force December 31st	755	$ 1,398,444.00
Losses and Claims incurred during year	8	9,902.00
Total	8	$ 9,902.00
Losses and Claims settled during year	8	$ 9,902.00
Premium Income—Ordinary		$42,586.08; Total $ 42,586.08

President, Thos. E. Lovejoy; Secretary, M. De Mott; Comptroller, F. D. Kirven; Actuary, W. N. Stanley; Home Office, New York City.
Attorney for Service: Stacey W. Wade, Insurance Commissioner, Raleigh, N. C.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
INSURANCE DEPARTMENT
(Seal)

Raleigh, February 28, 1923.

I, STACEY W. WADE, Insurance Commissioner, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct abstract of the statement of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, of New York City, filed with this Department, showing the condition of said Company on the 31st day of December, 1922.

Witness my hand and official seal the day and date above written.

STACEY W. WADE,
Insurance Commissioner.

Jean scaled her letter, thrust the envelope up under her sweater, grabbed her hockey stick, and stormed out of the room, down stairs, and out of doors. She hurried to the athletic field, but when she got there she found herself too cross to play, and went on up the stone steps, and past Dickey's house, toward the road, and the country beyond. Striding along unseeing, she stepped over Dickey-bird, playing Valley Forge.

"Hi, there," he cried. "Keep off the Delaware!"

"Why?" the tone was as cross as Dickey's own.

"Cause George Washington doesn't like students."

"Don't care—it's not his Delaware!" and stout shod as she was, Jean continued to walk on down the hill right in the Delaware.

"You'll be drowned," Dicky-bird called after her, gloomily, for he had stopped his play to watch her. This was a new sort of student. He didn't remember ever to have seen her before. Somehow her snappishness pleased him. He dropped George Washington, he pattered down the hill. The student faced about.

"Now who asked you to come along?" she asked, glaring at him.

"Nobody didn't." Dicky-bird was frightened, but charmed.

"I didn't, remember that," and the student turned on her way.

Dicky-bird trotted abreast, his blouse well protruded in front, hands thrust into his belt at the back. The student, in her white sweater and crimson skirt, had her hands behind her, too, dragging her hockey stick. The resolution expressed in both those square young backs would have been a study—if anybody had been there to see.

They trudged on, not speaking, making a great racket with the dead leaves. It was a wonderful wood road, arched by branches all crimson and gold. In the crisp air was a faint smell of autumn bonfires. It was very hard to stay cross as one fared on through such blue November weather. Once a squirrel, disturbed in his nutting, scolded at them loudly. Dicky-bird laughed.

"Crosspatch!" he said, panting at the furry mite; "but then we bovvered him, didn't we?"

"Yes," said the student—she was not quite ready to talk.

On they went. Dicky-bird was enjoying himself immensely: he didn't know why. At last a sudden turn brought them on a vista of autumn landscape, corn-stacked fields, stretches of woodland, and beyond, blue hill lines against the sky. The student stopped, threw back her head a little, drew a deep breath, and smiled.

"Oh, isn't it nice?" she said. "Aren't you glad we came?"

"Yes," said Dicky-bird. "Let's play babes in the wood; there's lots of leaves."

"Let's!" cried the student.

They turned from the road into the woods for a romp. They were the babes, the wicked murderers, the kindly robins, by turns, then they forgot the game in rolling over and over in the crisp brown leaves. Then, Dicky-bird, sitting in a pile of leaves, tousled and breathless and bright eyed, said suddenly:

"I was awful cross when we started."

"So was I," said the student.

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach. R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship. For catalogue and information, write—

Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President,

Clinton, S. C.

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A. B., B. S., B. M. Degrees

Catalog on Request Address the Registrar

Speaking of Survey Week

Dr. W. W. Moore, President of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., says:

"The Church owes a vast deal in every way to the devotion and zeal of our Christian women, and not the least of the valuable service they are rendering is their canvass for an increased circulation of the MISSIONARY SURVEY. If they meet with the large success they deserve it will mean an increase of interest and vigor and fruitfulness in all the work of the Church."

Survey Week Comes May 6 to 13

As in the past, the Woman's Auxiliary is asked to conduct this canvass.

Make it a real success.

Think What It Would Mean

To have the SURVEY Coming Regularly to Each Home of your Church

During Survey Week make a special effort to put your Church on the Survey Honor Roll by getting one subscriber to every five resident Church members

In Clubs of Five or more, 75 cents per year
Single Subscriptions, $1.00

The Missionary Survey

Box 1176

Richmond, Va.

FOR GIFTS OF

Watches, Jewelry or Silverware

Write

JAMES ALLAN & CO.

THE JEWELERS

185 King St. Charleston, S. C.

67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices

Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references

We prepay charges on all purchases

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6¼ per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

Dicky-bird came a little nearer. "I ke to play with you," he said. "Say, will you be my sister, if I ask my mother may you?"

"I'll have to ask my brother may I."

"Cause he wants to play with you himself?"

"No, he doesn't want to play with me," said the student, suddenly gloomy again. She shook the leaves from her kirt. "We must go home now," she said.

The walk home was almost as silent as the other, only it was different, because now the student carried her hockey stick over one shoulder, and with the other hand grasped Dicky-bird's dirty little paw. On their way they made a circuit around by the village, stopping at Ebhart's to buy chestnuts and sweet chocolate. Arriving at Dicky's house they sat out on his steep piazza, tapping their heels against the lattice work while they ate.

Dicky-bird's little brain was still over busy. "I want you for my sister," he said, with emphasis, "I think you'd be most as nice as a muvver. But muvvers are nicest—muvvers—muvvers—" he was plainly struggling with his thought.

"Mothers understand boys?" suggested the student.

Dicky-bird beamed at her penetration. "Yes," he cried. "Do sisters understand boys?"

"I don't know," then gazing down at his intent little face, she added, "I think perhaps sisters could understand boys—if they wanted to—I think perhaps sisters can understand boys."

She jumped down lightly. "I must go home," she said; "I must write a letter to my brother."

"To ask him may you be my sister?"

"To ask him if he wants to play with me himself."

This was the letter Jean mailed that evening:

"Dearest Bobs boy: You do not mind my calling you mother's name for you? For you and I are going to understand each other. I think sisters can understand boys if they want to.

"You have a right to do as you please with your vacations. Never mind about my 'services.' Let's forget we talked like that. I don't want to give a boy things he wants just to make him do something I want.

"I'm a little afraid to suggest it—only you always have wanted me along—should I be very much in your way if I went with you to Cousin James'? You know I'm as tough to stand cold air and exercise as you are. May I go with you, and will you teach me to ski?

"You must come Thanksgiving. I want you to come and play with me. I'll let you play the way you want to I won't bover you.

"This letter is largely quotation; I'll explain at Thanksgiving. It is nineteen days until then.

"Always your loving,
"Twinnie."

A flower unknown; a book unread;
A tree with fruit unharvested;
A path untrod; a house whose rooms
Lack yet the heart's divine perfumes;
A landscape whose wide border lies
In silent shade, 'neath silent skies;
O wondrous fountain yet unsealed;
A casket with its gifts concealed;
This is the year that for you waits,
Beyond tomorrow's mystic gates.

To persevere in one's duty and be silent is the best answer to calumny.

N. C. State College of Agriculture and Engineering
SUMMER SESSION JUNE 12th to JULY 25th
 Courses for teachers holding standard State Certificates, and for graduates of Standard High Schools. Courses giving College Credit for graduates of Standard High Schools. Cotton Cladding courses. Catalogue upon application. Numbers limited to 1050. Apply for Reservation at once to
W. A. WITHERS, Director : : : : Raleigh, North Carolina

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN
 The Presbyterian College of South Carolina
Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty
Beautiful Grounds Ideal Surroundings
Healthful Climate
 For Catalogue and Information, address
Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D. Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
f 7:00 pm	f 7:30 am	f 9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen Ar.	45	f 6:50 pm	f 3:50 pm	f 8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	f 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	40	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
f 7:28 pm	f 8:36 am	f 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	f 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
f 8:00 pm	f 9:55 am	f 9:53 am	19	Raeferd	26	f 6:00 pm	f 2:25 pm	f 7:30 am
	f 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	f 1:25 pm
	f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
	f 10:40 am	f 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15	f 5:25 pm	f 12:55 pm
	f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
	f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
	f 11:00 am	f 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9	f 5:08 pm	f 12:33 pm
	f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
	f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
	f 11:30 am	f 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	f 4:45 pm	f 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound train of the same class.
 All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

Help Convert a Deficit Into a Profit

The "Missionary Survey," the official organ of our Church, has to be subsidized out of other funds that ought to go to Benevolences. Its circulation is 32,500. With a circulation of 50,000 (easily obtainable with a little effort) this magazine would be self-supporting.

The Woman's Auxiliary will conduct a Campaign May 6-13 for SUBSCRIPTIONS to be known as Missionary Survey Week

The organ is indispensable to our Church and its organized work. Nothing else takes its place. It represents the Whole Work of the Whole Church in an attractive way. Every home should have it. Give the women your support in this effort. Let us make the total subscriptions not 50,000, but 75,000.

Help Put the Missionary Survey in the Homes of Your Church and Do Two Things: Stop a Deficit and Educate Presbyterians

In clubs of 5 or more it sells for 75 cents; single copies $1.00 per year

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

MAY 6-13

Chattanooga, Tennessee

MAY 6-13

WHY DRUGS FAIL

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from drinking Shivar, America's best stomach, liver and kidney Water. If you suffer with chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept the Springs liberal offer as printed below. Their records show that only two in a hundred, on the average, have reported "no benefit." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful Spring. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Springs,
Box 3H, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____
Address _____
Shipping Point _____
(Please write distinctly.)

Forget those things that gave distress,

For New Year's here! Be glad, be glad;

Take up your task and joyful press

The battle hard. Do not be sad.

A brighter day awaits us all,

If true to duty and to God;

And if we're smitten, still we'll call

On Him, and, trusting, kiss the rod.

Sparkles

"I am no good unless I strike," said the match.

"And you lose your head every time you do," said the match box.—The American Boy.

Judge—"What's this man charged with, officer?"

Cop—"Careless walkin', Yer Honor. He bumped into a truck and bent both fenders and the radiator."—The American Legion Weekly.

Mr. Blimp—"Remember, the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world. Don't forget that, dear."

Mrs. Blimp—"Then you come right in and rule the world a while. I'm tired."—Good Hardware.

"Are you sure I've left nothing behind?" asked the old lady, popping her head from the train window.

"Not even a penny, ma'am," said the porter.—Tit-Bits.

At a Christmas dinner in Washington a well-known professor was called upon to speak. In introducing him the host said to the guests:

"You have given your attention so far to a turkey stuffed with sage. You are now about to give your attention to a sage stuffed with turkey."—Boston Transcript.

"Tommy," asked the teacher, "what can you tell me of America's foreign relations at the present time?" "They're all broke," answered the brightest boy in the class.—American Legion Weekly.

"No more horse thieves in Crimson Gulch?" "No more," answered Cactus Joe. "We have progressed with the times. We have all kinds of automobile thieves."—Washington Star.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The STIEFF TONE

Is famous with three generations of music lovers. It has never been duplicated. It is the expression of a passion for perfection that has actuated three generations of piano makers.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleisbers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A
Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

The "Old Hickory Jackson"

The most popular style of Rustic Hickory Rocker ever placed on the market. We have also the Chairs, Settees and Swings to match.

Write for "Rustic Hickory" furniture and "Leonard Cleanable" refrigerator booklets. We pay freight.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., MAY 2, 1923

No. 18

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
A Sunday in Atlanta	1
Hand Book of Theology	1
"Shining to the Perfect Day"	2
"Mother's Day"	2
Digest of the General Assembly—New Edition	2
Impartial Justice	2
CONTRIBUTED—
The Law of the Mother—By Rev. Clyde J. Walsh	3, 4
Cyrus Goes to Meet Mother	4
Mother	4
Condensed Summary of Report of Publication Committee to General Assembly—By R. E. Magill	4
Your Pastor's Successor—By Rev. S. Waters McGill	4
A Creed for Mothers	4
Oklahoma—Opportunity and Lookout—By S. L. Morris, D.D.	5
"Except They Be Sent"—By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.	5
Deficit Reduced—By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.	5
Presbyterial Presiding Elders and Presbyterial Oligarchies	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	6
Woman's Auxiliary	2
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	10
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

A SUNDAY IN ATLANTA

Atlanta is the heart of Georgia, and the state is having a constant and rapid enlargement of the heart. In the individual such a situation would be alarming. But no one seems to be alarmed over the ever accelerating growth of Atlanta. The city itself is not alarmed over it. So far as can be learned, Atlanta is perfectly willing to grow to be as large or larger than New York. It has no objection to being called the New York of the South. Its congested streets bear no slight resemblance to those of the great metropolis. The automobiles wiggle in and out and criss-cross very much after the fashion of certain unmentionable little animals in certain unmentionable environments. The pedestrians have apparently grown accustomed to being run over, and so they take their chances with perfect sangfroid, or nonchalance, or something after that order. One from the rural districts, with less experience of fatalities, imitates Moses when about to smite the Egyptian, "looks this way and that way," and when he finally decides to venture, forgets all about the speed limit.

Presbyterianism is also growing in Atlanta. It can hardly be expected to keep pace with the growth of the city, because there are so many people coming here and swelling the growth of the city who have had no opportunity to become acquainted with the superior excellence of Presbyterianism, and who for that reason prefer to be Methodists and Baptists. It is sadly true that the vast majority of the rural population all over our vast country have had to grow up and struggle along as best they could without the advantages of Presbyterian teaching and training. They have not known what it was to be nourished on the Shorter Catechism. Consequently when they come to the city where they might enjoy the strong, wholesome doctrines of Presbyterianism, they ignorantly deprive themselves of the privilege and continue to feed on the less nutritious and poorly seasoned diet of the churches in which they were reared.

Doubtless the combined forces of the Protestant Churches are keeping abreast of the growth of the city. They have just concluded a simultaneous evangelistic campaign, and the resultant accessions, to the churches reporting, amount to about 4,000. Of course, the churches will not wait a whole year to add more members.

It was our privilege to occupy the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning. This is no slight privilege, for there are few audiences that afford so much inspiration. The spacious auditorium is a delight to the eyes, though the decorations are not yet complete. The chief attraction, however, is the congregation. It practically fills all the 800 seats that are provided for its accommodation. The galleries furnish other seats, and these are needed when anything of special interest adds to the congregation. But the people who look up at the preacher from the seats in front of the pulpit constitute by no means the whole of the congregation. The church is equipped with a radio attachment, and so "their line is gone out into all the earth, and their word unto the uttermost ends thereof." In this practical way this particular church is keeping up with the progress of science, and pressing into the service of the Master, its marvellous discoveries. This is a kind of modernism to which we offer no objection. It so happened that Sunday marked the first anniversary since the installation of the radio service. Dr. Lyons, the pastor, used the occasion to comment briefly on results. He is receiving letters from all over the country, from all sorts of people, testifying to benefits received. Of course, the most notable service is rendered to the "shut-ins," God's afflicted children, those who count it one of their sorest trials that they are deprived of the worship of God's house. The radio brings the worship of God's house to them, the preaching, the singing and the rich music of the deep-toned organ. The only thing missing is the sight of their fellow worshippers. Dr. Lyons assumed the role of a prophet and promised them that in the near future they should not only hear but see the worship. He mentioned as a justification of his prophecy that the invention was on the way and nearing completion which would accomplish this result.

Dr. Lyons occupies a throne of power. The size of his visible congregation is not the most striking characteristic. It is noted for its culture, its wealth and its devotion to the high ideals of the Christian life. It probably represents more wealth than any congregation in this wealthy city. We should not mention this but for the fact that many of his wealthiest members are his most faithful and devoted church workers. They give not only their money, but themselves to the service of the Saviour. Persons who visit the slum missions of the great cities mirate over the miracles of grace as exhibited in the resuscitation of bums and dead beats. More marvellous in our eyes are those miracles of grace which we witness when we see rich men, whose names are a power in the money market, who are flattered and lionized by high society, and who, despite the clinging attractions of the world, keep close to the humble Carpenter, and learn from Him to be meek and lowly of heart. All honor to them, and may their tribe increase.

In the evening we preached for so much of the congregation of the Westminster Church as felt it safe to put itself under our spiritual guidance. Obviously it is rather a timid flock. We beg pardon for even insinuating a criticism. This church has passed through the fire. Seldom has a congregation suffered so severely. Out of a membership of four hundred, only twenty escaped being burnt out. Many lost their all of earthly possessions. It is hoped that most of them, or all of them, could say that they had laid up their most valuable possessions above the reach of the fire. This was Mr. Moody's noble speech when some one condoled with him over his losses in the great Chicago fire. The Westminster Church bravely rallied to the occasion, and before the ashes were cold, they were planning to rebuild. They have put their building out on Ponce de Leon Avenue, just about the point where the destructive fire was halted. It is a structure that does them great credit. The commodious auditorium is handsome enough and comfortable enough for any congregation; and the acoustics seem to be all that could be desired. There is a burdensome debt resting on the building, but the people have shown a courage and a determination before which the debt will rapidly disappear. Dr. Caldwell, their able and popular pastor, is taking a rest down in Florida by helping in a state-wide evangelistic campaign.

We enjoyed close contact with only these two churches, but careful inquiry failed to discover any reason for discouragement on the part of any of our Atlanta churches. They are all manned by young, enthusiastic, consecrated and orthodox pastors. No faintest taint of liberalism is putting its baneful blight on the Presbyterianism of this busy, bustling, great and growing city.

HAND BOOK OF THEOLOGY

This is a modest little volume of 114 pages, the cost of which is trifling, 50 cents for the paper, and 75 cents for the cloth edition, postpaid. It is published by our Richmond Committee of Publication. Dr. Russell Cecil, the author, is the pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Richmond, Va.

It is for the students in Theological Seminaries, Training Schools, and Bible Classes. This is a much needed book, and if we were assured that it would have a general circulation, it would rejoice our heart exceedingly, because never in our memory has there ever been a greater need of a thorough grounding in orthodox theology than at the present time.

No one ought to teach the Bible in our colleges, whether male or female, who has not been indoctrinated in the Reformed Theology. Indeed we have in mind some preachers who could be helped by a thorough course in this, the queen of the sciences.

Dr. Cecil has done his work well. His style is clear, and he makes his meaning plain, so that even a wayfaring man need not err therein.

Let us hope that its study will become general. "SHINING TO THE PERFECT DAY"

We have never been able to believe in Perfectionism as an actuality, though we do believe in it as possibility, held out to sinful man by the scriptures. Now and then, however, we see characters that rise high enough above their fellow believers to make us understand what the scriptures mean by the beauty of holiness.

Among the Scotch, whether in this country or across the water, we occasionally find one whose life is a blessing to men and a striking proof of what grace can do.

In this Synod we have sections where the Scotch predominate, and it is there you will find the choicest fruits of grace. In our obituary notices you will find a sketch of one such man as we have been describing, Capt. Malcom Hugh McBryde, of Laurinburg, who died at the ripe old age of 86 years and five months.

In his youth he stored his mind with large portions of the scriptures, which brought him much comfort in his old age. The following prayer, written in his own hand-writing, and found in his Bible after his death, tells better than any words of the writer the firm faith, humble trustfulness in God, and Christian hope that was his; and in large measure, God granted to him his request:

"O most merciful God, cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not if my strength faileth; preserve my mind from dotage and imbecility, and my body from helplessness and protracted disease and excruciating pain. I humbly ask that my reason be continued to me to the last, and that I may be so comforted and supported that I may leave my testimony to the reality of religion, and of Thy faithfulness in fulfilling all Thy gracious promises to them that love Thee. Deliver me from despondency in my declining years; and enable me to bear with patience whatever may be Thy holy will. And, O Lord Jesus, when the time of my death arrives, send some of the blessed angels to convey my inexperienced soul into Thy presence in the New Jerusalem above."

"MOTHER'S DAY"

Upon general principles we have little use for the celebration of special days, a custom that seems to be growing. It may be the result of our Scotch descent, for our forbears were hard-headed and soft-hearted Scotch. These special days savored too much of the Romish feast days, with all the evils associated with them.

When, however, any custom is associated with the name of mother, it brushes aside all prejudices, and appeals to both our heart and head. As a child we envied companions who had mothers, because from the tender age of six years, we had none. Whatever then will make the young appreciate their mothers must have the right of way on the editorial page.

Although Mother's Day does not come till the second Sunday in May, we are devoting this issue to the subject, owing to the fact that our space will be crowded by matters pertaining to the Assembly. We are proud to publish a sermon on "The Mother," by Rev. Clyde Walsh, a Charlotte young man, reared in the First Church, under the prayerful influence of a godly mother, who has given two sons to the ministry, Rev. Walter M. Walsh, D.D., pastor of our church at Abingdon, Va., and Rev. Clyde Walsh, of our church at Madison, Va. We call especial attention to this sermon, and regret that we were forced, by reason of lack of space, to leave out some fine illustrations.

We change from infancy to manhood and with each change our ideas, our standards and our love shift as with a tide. But however much we change and however far we drift from our old moorings—

"A mother is a mother still,
The holiest thing alive."

DIGEST OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY NEW EDITION

The thanks of the Church, especially of the ministry, are due Dr. G. F. Nicolassen for the appearance of this Revised Edition of the Acts and Proceedings of the General Assembly, U. S.

This is the third edition of the Digest. The first, edited by Dr. W. A. Alexander, appeared in 1888, and the second by Dr. Alexander, appeared in 1898, in the form of a supplement. The present edition reaches to the acts of the Assembly of 1922. It is a bulky volume of 1,258 pages, so that it is a full statement of all that the Church has done from its beginning.

It is needless to say that Dr. Nicolassen has done his work in the most systematic manner, according to his usual method of work. The price is $4.44, postpaid.

Every minister should own this book, and all Presbyteries should carefully study it. If they will do so, there will be fewer overtures offered and fewer to take the time of the Committee on Bills and Overtures. Each year valuable time is consumed in offering and discussing overtures, regarding which previous Assemblies have already delivered themselves. There ought to be a permanent committee in each Presbytery to examine the Digest before allowing overtures to reach the Assembly.

THE MOTHER

She never touched with skillful brush the canvas
And left a painting that the world might praise;
Or with the inspired fingers on the key-board
Sent down an echo through the length of days;
But once with eyes tear dimmed yet looking upward,
With smiling face she passed beneath the rod
Descending almost to the vale of shadows
To bring a little new-born babe from God.
She never sung a song of joy or gladness
In clear sweet tones to make us smile or weep;
Her voice, too weak to win the world's approval,
Was only good to hush a babe to sleep;
She never penned a book whose glowing pages
Might lift us up and help us in the fight;
But day by day she sought through loving patience
To guide two little stumbling feet aright.
And yet, me thinks, when at the gate of heaven
She paused—God looked up at her and smiled;
With hands outstretched His kind voice spoke a welcome
To her—The Mother of a Little Child.
—Ex.

IMPARTIAL JUSTICE

Those of us who believe that Justice should be blind and know no difference between the black and white man, between the poor and the rich, have never been able to reconcile the varying sentences given, nor to preserve a proper respect for the majesty and impartiality of the law in prohibition cases. All of us, however, are greatly encouraged by the recent decision of the Federal Judge in New York, before whom three aristocratic bootleggers were recently arraigned.

The La Montague Brothers in the past was a firm with an aristocratic name who furnished the high society of New York with the best of wines and liquors. When prohibition came, they still continued this business, though in secret. Recently they were apprehended and were brought before the Federal Judge. The high society people had their best lawyers to defend them, but the evidence was so conclusive that they threw themselves upon the mercy of the court. Their lawyers pleaded for mercy on the ground that they were of high social standing, and that therefore their disgrace, if punished as any common transgressor, would be out of all proportion to their offense. The judge failed to be impressed by this argument, and he imposed upon them a heavy fine and sent them to jail.

One such decision is worth a great deal to the cause, and will serve to inspire respect for the law on the part of the transgressor and for the judge on the part of the public. We need many such judges and also Governors who will not turn such men loose after the courts have sentenced them.

Devotional

THE EXTRA STITCHES

Two young girls were engaged in stitching flannel dresses for the poor.

"Our work is finished for this season, at least," said one of the two girls, with a sigh of relief.

"No, no, wait a moment; just a few moments more," replied the other; and, going into an inner room, she returned with some skeins of crimson silk, and a few knots of ribbon and lace.

"Why, what are you doing," asked her companion, with surprise, as her deft fingers swiftly fashioned a dainty edging of crimson silk, frilled in the soft lace at neck and sleeves, and fastened on the bright ribbons here and there.

"These extra stitches take just a moment," was the answer, given with a blush, "and I want to make the dress pretty for some mother's baby."

As the great pile of dresses was distributed to the needy, that cold winter, one hard-visaged woman burst into tears and hid her face in the folds of a little dress trimmed with lace and ribbons. "Oh, to think of someone doing this for my poor baby! I didn't think anybody cared!" she sobbed.

"God cares for you and your baby," said the reverent voice of a pastor, who had long sought an opportunity to reach this hardened heart. And for the first time, the woman was willing to listen to the sweet, old story. Does this not teach us that there is something more for us to perform beyond the rigid call of simple duty? The extra stitches are surely the threads of gold that beautify and enrich the dull, dark fabric of our too often careless and indifferent charity.—Ex.

MOTHER'S DAY PRAYER DELIVERED UNITED STATES SENATE

"Almighty God, we honor Thee by setting apart a day to hallow our mother's name.

"Thou hast held in thy keeping one universal heart and close to it in safety and peace thou hast put the babes to whom thou hast given life in this world.

"We cannot lose our whole life while we feel the touch of her hand.

"The symbol of her power today is the white carnation, more beautiful than our words, more fragrant than our praises, more pure than our thoughts.

"Amid the rush of life, may we this day go back in holy memory to this pure fountain of life, and may we come forth in the innocence and peace in which she gave us to our life's task.

"Enthroned once more in every place of power the sceptre of mother love. For Christ's sake. Amen."—Rev. F. J. Prettyman, D.D., chaplain.

ST. LUKE AND WOMANHOOD

St. Luke alone gives us the psalms of the three women, Anna, Elizabeth, and Mary. He alone gives us the names of Joanna and Susanna, who ministered to Christ of their substance; he alone gives us that Galilean idyll, where the nameless "woman" bathes His feet with tears, and at the same time rains a hot rebuke on the cold civilities of the Pharisee, Simeon; he alone tells of the widow of Zarephath, who welcomed and saved a prophet men were seeking to slay; he alone tells of the widow of Nain, of the woman bent with infirmity, and of the woman grieving over the lost piece of silver. And as St. Luke opens his Gospel with woman's tribute of song, so in his last chapter he paints for us that group of women, constant amid man's inconstancies, coming ere the break of day, to wrap around the body of the dead Christ the precious and fragrant offering of devotion. So in this paradise restored do Eve's daughters roll back the reproach of their mother. But ever first and foremost among the women of the Gospels we must place the Virgin Mary.—Burton.

It isn't the experience of today that drives men mad. It is the remorse of what happened yesterday, and the dread of what tomorrow may disclose. These are God's days. Leave them with Him.

Therefore, I think, and I do, and I journey but one day at a time. That is the easy day. That is the man's day. Nay, rather it is our day—God's and mine. And while faithfully and dutifully I run my course, and work my appointed task on that day of ours, God the Almighty and All-loving, takes care of yesterday and tomorrow.—Robert J. Burdette.

THE LAW OF THE MOTHER

Text: "Forsake not the law of thy mother." Prov. 1:8.

By Rev. Clyde J. Walsh

A Mother's Day Sermon for Mothers preached in Elon and Pedlar Mills Presbyterian Churches, May 14, 1922.

DEDICATION

To my own dear mother whose influence and example has been the greatest factor in my own life and who also was the indirect inspiration of this sermon, I dedicate it.

The three greatest words in any language are, God, Mother, and Home. They are the three links of the golden chain which encircle all that is worth-while in life and are so linked together that one is incomplete without the other two, and the central link which binds together the other two is "Mother." These three words are the foundation of society; destroy any one of them and society will surely crumble into the dust. Destroy the glory of motherhood, the sanctity of the home, the worship of God, and any nation will become a wreckage of human bones.

The world today is bordering upon a period of transition in the home life. There is a tendency, especially in large communities, to so organize the home that its fire-side is no longer graced by the home circle. The dining room becomes a sort of cafe; and the bed chamber merely sleeping quarters for the children whose chief interests are outside the home.

The most serious condition which threatens the home life is the proclivity of the mother to become absorbed also in interests outside the home, which, of course, means the neglect of home and children. As for the place of God in the home, too often we find that He stands at the door and knocks, desiring a definite place around the fire-side, but alas denied admission. These unhealthy conditions are bound to undermine society and wreck the nation unless they are arrested.

I can never lose the ideal which is my own heritage, that of the mother, in the home, ministering to the needs of the family, imparting the right principles of society and religion to her children. In doing this she is not only the ideal mother, but she is also moving in her most exalted God-given sphere and contributing more to the good of the world than she could anywhere else. Napoleon expressed this ideal in the words: "Let France have good mothers and she will have good sons."

God's richest gift to a man is a good mother. A man may have brothers and sisters, many or few; he may have friends by the dozens or by the hundreds; in the course of a life-time for him to have several wives is possible; but he never has but one mother, and no one else on earth can take her place. That which a man gets from her has more to do with the shaping of his destiny, the moulding of his character, the making of his happiness and fortunes than anything else he gets in life. If this be true, then motherhood is a most glorious privilege and a most solemn responsibility. They who disregard it shall come to grief and they who fail to measure up to its duties shall spend their gray hairs in tears and anxiety.

God recognizes this fact in His Word, and in our text, the wise man exhorts the young man to hear the instruction of his father and not to forsake the law of his mother. And there is a law of the mother—written not in the book of codes, but engraven in blood upon human hearts. And this law is one law which hurries men on to happiness, to usefulness, to prosperity; makes their ideals, governs their thoughts, restrains their words, forms and regulates their characters. It is about this law of the mother that I wish to speak today. What are its characteristics?

First of all, the law of the mother is

I. A Law of Love

And it is a love all its own. There are various other kinds of love, such as paternal or father love, brother love and sister love, friend love, sweetheart love, and matrimonial love. Each of these is wonderful in its own way, but mother love is the strongest passion in life. Scarcely is there any species of life which does not demonstrate the power of mother love. Have you not observed a mother bird caring for her nestlings? Have you not heard a mother cow lowing for her calf, or a mother sheep bleating for her lamb? In the brute world a vital, active love of the male parent is rare, love of brother or sister in kind is more rare still, but mother love is universal. What are some of the qualities of the mother's law of love?

(A) I should say, first of all, that Tenderness and Sympathy are its essential qualities. A child in distress instinctively runs to his mother's arms, because he knows that they are a place of safety and of tenderness and sympathy. Her lap is a haven of rest, her bosom a refuge for childish fears, a place where sobs are hushed and little broken hearts are knit together again.

The dearest spot on earth which neither years nor misfortune can sweep from our memories is mother's lap; cuddled there with head resting upon her breast, feeling the gentle stroking of her hand, hearing words of tenderness and sympathy, which to others may indeed sound foolish. It is there that men get all those finer qualities of gentleness, virtue, and thoughtfulness for others. The mother's law of love is stamped upon their hearts for life.

Contributed

(B) A second quality of a mother's law of love is Sacrifice. Mother love is the child of sacrifice, begotten in agony. A man never lives long enough, nor is it within his power to repay his mother for those weeks and months of anxiety, uncertainty and bodily pain which were necessary in order that he might be brought into being. The reason that mother love is the strongest love is because it walked through the valley of the shadow of death and agonized in a Gethsemane when no one seemed to understand.

When we think of the hours, days, weeks, months, years of anxious watching over the crib, the loss of sleep and rest, the denial of personal comforts and pleasures that our lives cost our mothers, can we ever be grateful enough?

(C) Another quality of a mother's law of love is that it is Disciplinary. It demands obedience and meets out correction and obedience. It is one kind of love that is not blind—or should not be—though some mothers seem to be blind to the faults of their children, and this to their sorrow.

Sometimes a mother's faithfulness is tested just here. It is hard to punish a child that she loves and yet she knows that it is that very love that demands that she correct him and teach him to obey her. A mother's love resembles God's love in this respect, for, "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." The same wise man who wrote the words of our text, also said: "He that spareth the rod hateth his son, but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes;" and again he said, "A child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame." If a mother's love is so blind that it cannot see her child's wrongs, or seeing them, does not try to correct them, the price of that mother's folly is sorrow in old age.

(D) Another quality of a mother's law of love is Loyalty. A friend will desert you upon very little provocation; brothers and sisters fall out over a few paltry dollars in a will; divorce courts are thronged with husbands and wives seeking separations; fathers have been known to turn out a wayward son or daughter from his home, but a mother—never.

In the crowd which gathered about the cross of Jesus stood His mother. Many of His disciples had deserted Him, friends had fled. There He hung between the thieves, humanly speaking, disgraced and dying the shameful death of a criminal, but was His mother ashamed of Him? She clung to His feet and warmed His broken heart until the last breath left His body.

During the war between the Israelites and the Canaanites, Sisera, captain of the enemy's forces, was betrayed and slain. And back at home there was a mother's heart yearning for his safe return. She looked through the lattice of the window and cried, "Why is his chariot so long in coming? Why tarry the wheels of his chariots?" Although she was a goddess heathen woman, she had a mother's heart and she was loyal to her son to the end. And how many others like that mother have gone to the window at midnight, unable to sleep, waiting for the return of a wayward son, and said over and over again, "Why is his chariot so long in coming?"

"Forsake not the law of thy mother," a love that is tender and sympathetic, a love that is sacrificial, a love that is disciplinary, and a love that is loyal; a love that is greatest of all loves—mother love. The law of the mother is also

II. A Law of Ideals

While we may claim universality for the mother's law of love (for every real mother loves her offspring, saint or savage) the second characteristic of the law of the mother varies almost with every mother, although Solomon takes it for granted that every mother wants to instill into her child the right kind of ideals. These may be divided into three classes:

(A) First, Ideals of Personality. If your boy turns out to be just the kind of man that you want him to be, what kind of a man will he make? You may put it down with a fair degree of certainty that his life will be circumscribed by the ideals that he gets from his mother. With very few exceptions the great men of this world became great because of their mothers. Abraham Lincoln said, "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my mother." George Washington attributed his success to his mother, and John Quincy Adams, another President, said: "All I am my mother made me." And we might call the roll of the world's great men and inquire into the secret of their greatness, and very few would respond without saying "Mother."

While in the seminary my class had an experience meeting in which each man told how he was led into the ministry. Seventy-five per cent of them testified that it was because of their mothers. One of the happiest moments of my life was the day that my mother told me that before I was born she gave me to God for the ministry. Since then I have never had a moment's doubt about my call to the ministry.

If only the mothers of the world could realize what a Divine, God-given power they possess in moulding the personalities of their children, what a tremendous influence they would wield—a greater influence than the ballot-box or the speech stump or senate. I know that every one of us here today, both young and old, can testify that our lives have been largely controlled by the ideals which our mothers imparted to us.

(B) The second class of ideals in the mother's law are Ideals of Society. What ideals of society are you mothers giving your children? Richter, an eminent writer, said, "Unhappy is the man for whom his own mother has not made all other mothers venerable."

Sometimes when I see some of the things that you see too among the young of today I wonder where their mothers are—if they are dead or asleep or dreadfully negligent of their duty in giving their children the proper ideals of society. It seems that some mothers have but one ideal for their children, and that is that they get into the fast set of the community, regardless of the cost in money and character, and they push their little children into card parties and dances unchaperoned long before the baby dimples have disappeared from their painted cheeks. God pity those children whom their mothers have robbed of the joy of looking back upon a long and happy innocent childhood. And God pity those mothers, too! A society built upon loose social ideals will work out its own ruin. The mother can save it.

(C) The other class of ideals of the mother's law are Religious Ideals. What kind of religious ideals do you mothers impart to your children? Are they founded upon God's Word? Is it the mother who first teaches the child to pray, to love the name of Jesus, to know the stories and the teachings of the Bible. If the mother doesn't do it, it isn't done. A man may wander far away in sin, but he can never forget the things that he learned at his mother's knee. Oftentimes those things will bring him to himself and he will return to God.

III. A Law of Example

How careful a mother must be in everything that she does and says, for little hands are not slow to imitate their mother's example, and little lips are quick to repeat hasty words, and little tempers are swift to catch fire. There was never a truer saying, "Like father, like son; like mother, like daughter."

So often a child will say, "Well, I know such or such a thing is right because my mother does it." But did you ever hear a child say that a certain thing was wrong because his mother does it? The example of a godly mother is the greatest factor in the life of the young; it is a far greater power for good and for God than all other agencies combined, and I am not excepting the church and Sunday School. The mother can do more for her children by the example of her own pure and unselfish life than any one else, and happy is that mother who does it; her reward is great.

And what is her reward? It is a son or a daughter who is an honor to her name and a joy to her soul. There was a little mother in a New England state who was very poor but wanted her son to have an education. She had saved up enough money by taking in washing to put him through college. The boy was of the right stripe and appreciated his mother's sacrifice and made the best of his opportunities. He was made valedictorian of his class and graduated with honors. On the night of his graduation the hall was filled with the parents and friends of the students. Down on the second row from the front sat this boy's mother. She was clad in shabby clothes and wore a sunbonnet upon her head. He made his graduation speech and the judge awarded him a gold medal. With trembling hands he received it, then stepped down from the platform and walked over to his mother and pinned the medal upon her breast and kissed her. That old college hall rang with a storm of applause; strong men wept and some mothers' sons thought seriously for the first time in their lives. That was her reward. All the hardships, privations, and labor of those years of his college course were forgotten in a moment. And her reward is that which every mother covets. But my dear mothers, your child's gratitude and appreciation will cost you something, too.

Let me say, in closing, to those of us who are so blessed of God to have our mothers still with us: show your gratitude to her now; don't wait until she is gone and then lay a cold, cheerless wreath of flowers on her grave—give her some of the flowers now. Let her breathe their fragrance; let her see their freshness, for they are more than pretty flowers to her. Don't wait until she is dead, to say beautiful things about her, to write poems to her memory; say some of those things now, for they are to her more than soft words. Tell her how much you love her, how you appreciate her; that is her just reward for what she has done for you, and it will bring back the roses to her cheek and it will thrill her soul with a bit of heaven.

"Forsake not the law of thy mother"—her law of love, her law of ideals, her law of example. And there is also a reward for the man who abides by her law. Here it is: "They shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head and chains about thy neck."

"The noblest thoughts my soul can claim,
The noblest words my tongue can frame,
Unworthy are to praise the name
More sacred than all others.
An infant when her love first came—
A man—I find it just the same;
Reverently, I breathe her name—
The blessed name of Mother."

CYRUS GOES TO MEET MOTHER

Mr. Westover, the manager of the Motor Transportation Company, wheeled about abruptly in his chair as a boy came in and stood by his side.

"Well, Cyrus," he said not unkindly, "what is it?" Cyrus twirled his cap. He was a lad with clear eyes and a frank, boyish smile; yet, young as he was, he was one of the company's best men.

"It's this way, Mr. Westover," he said slowly. "You see, mother, she's been away on a visit for three months, and this morning she's coming home, and I wondered if you'd let me off for just an hour. I'd like to meet that train." He paused. "It's been pretty lonesome with her away so long," he went on. "My sister Mabel kept house; but say, Mr. Westover, if you've got a mother, you know just how it feels to go home and not find her there. And then, the meals. My sister cooks well enough; but gee! I'd rather just eat plain bread and butter that mother put on the table than a meal anybody else would get. And so I wondered if you'd let me off long enough to meet that train."

The manager of the Motor Transportation Company was looking at the boy, but was not seeing him. He was reviewing memory pictures of that time long ago when he was a boy, and in those pictures he was seeing his mother with her sweet smile and brown hair and soft blue eyes, and he was saying, as he flung his cap aside: "Is dinner ready, mother? I'm as hungry as a bear."

And she had smiled as she patted the rough hair. "Yes, it's ready, and I've a surprise for you, son. No, I'm not going to tell you. Run and wash your hands and you'll soon know."

And how good the surprise had tasted that had turned out to be a cherry pie! And how she had smiled at him as she passed him a piece in one of those blue-and-gold china plates! And on Saturdays, how he used to enjoy the doughnuts she had made him! Mother! How patient she had been with his rough noisy ways! How tenderly she had tucked him in at night! How happy she had made those early boyhood days! Mother—ah, the sweetness of that name!

"Cyrus," he said, somewhat gruffly to hide his emotion, "take my new electric to the station, and drive your mother home in it. Take all the time you want. I had a good mother myself!"—Selected.

MOTHER

Nobody knows of the work it makes
To keep the home together;
Nobody knows of the steps it takes,
Nobody knows—but mother.

Nobody listens to childish woes,
Which kisses only smother;
Nobody's pained by naughty blows—
Nobody's hurt like mother!

Nobody knows of the sleepless care
Bestowed on baby brother;
Nobody knows of the tender prayer,
Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the lessons taught
Of loving one another;
Nobody knows of the patience sought,
Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the anxious fears,
Lest darlings may not weather
The storm of life in after years,
Nobody knows—but mother.

Come, let us kneel at the throne above
To thank the heavenly Father
For that sweetest gift—a mother's love—
The love of our own dear mother!

—The Fireside.

CONDENSED SUMMARY OF REPORT OF PUBLICATION COMMITTEE TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

By R. E. Magill, Secretary

The year has been filled with evidences of God's favor and a service of increasing value has been rendered the Church.

The total sales were $491,385, a slight increase over the previous year. The list of books and tracts published is larger than our usual output and Christian literature was enriched by our publications. Among the prominent publications we list the following books: "Unfinished Tasks," by Homer McMillan, D.D.; "Presbyterianism," by S. L. Morris, D.D.; "What Is the Kingdom of God," by R. C. Reed, D.D.; "Sunrise in Aztec Land," by Rev. W. A. Ross; "Handbook of Theology," Russell Cecil, D.D.; "Needed Council for New Christians," by S. M. Glasgow, D.D.; "Dream of Pilate's Wife," by W. H. Woods, D.D. Tracts and pamphlets were published in unusually large quantities and several new titles of unusual value were added to our list, notably: "Verbal Inspiration," by W. R. Henderson, D.D.; "Elders That Rule Well," by John I. Armstrong, D.D.; "The Office of the Deacon," by Edward Mack, D.D.; "Baptism—the One Vital Point," by E. C. Murray, D.D.; "Keeping Alive the Family's Thought of God," and "How One Family Handled Family Prayers," by C. A. McAfee, D.D. More than ten million tracts and over three million books and pamphlets have been issued and distributed since 1903.

Donations

A new record was made in awarding Bibles and Testaments for the recitation of the catechisms. We gave 1,760 Bibles for the recitation of the Shorter Catechism, and 4,930 Testaments for the recitation of the Introductory Catechism. Since 1903 we have awarded 20,374 Bibles and 57,578 Testaments for memorizing catechisms. The Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., with a Sunday school enrollment of 1,600,000, gave 296 Bibles and 660 Testaments for memorizing catechisms.

The donation of books, Bibles, hymn books, pamphlets, tracts and Sunday School periodicals for this year reached a total of over $30,000. This was provided by the Business department as the receipts for Sabbath School Extension and Publication did not equal the amount spent for support of our Sabbath School and Young People's Work. Since 1903 our Business department has contributed $225,000 to the benevolent work of the Church, as a supplement to the fund given by the Church.

Sabbath School Extension

We reached and slightly exceeded the goal fixed for us by the Assembly, but the total received for Sabbath School Extension and Publication was slightly less than last year. Our total receipts were $95,248.07.

In the support of the field workers, the organization of new schools and in the promotion of educational work we spent over $105,000. The excess expenditure was taken care of by the Business department in addition to providing for the large donations of the year.

Fifty-six workers were supported in whole or in part in addition to the headquarters staff, and their reports show the year was fruitful in soul winning, in reaching neglected fields and in promoting better methods of work through institutes, conferences and schools of methods.

Periodical Department

We printed 14,997,425 single copies of periodicals during the year, a gain of 1,082,682 copies over last year. This increase shows our schools are very loyal in using the publications of their own church. The gain was largely in the series of departmental graded lesson helps.

Our editorial staff has been completely reorganized and greatly strengthened and our publications have been materially improved in contents, quality of paper, and appearance. Further improvements will be made when we take the publication of the Departmental Graded helps into our own hands on October 1, 1923.

Increased Enrollment and Enlarged Gifts

Reports coming direct to our office indicate we have passed the four hundred thousand mark in Sunday School enrollment. The reports show a material gain in contributions over the $740,000 total of last year, and for every dollar expended upon themselves the schools have given more than one dollar and a half for benevolences. The schools gave for Sabbath School Extension almost as much as the churches and all other church organizations combined. The additions to the church show that the Sunday School is the church's most fruitful field for evangelistic effort.

Young People's Societies

Promotion of Young People's Society work has been one of our major tasks during the year. The reports indicate the largest gain ever made in one year in newly organized Christian Endeavor Societies and in membership. We report this year 1,905 Christian Endeavor Societies with a membership of 57,009 against 1,379 societies and a membership of 43,278 last year. Very full programs and suggestions as to organization and activities are carried in our weekly papers "Onward" and "Junior Life."

Since the Assembly gave us authority to promote Christian Endeavor Work in 1916 the number of societies has grown from about 226 to 1,906 and the membership has increased from about 12,000 to 57,000. The C. E. Societies now have as their special missionary objectives the support of Dr. and Mrs. Stixrud, in Africa; Mr. and Mrs. Hunnicut, in Brazil, and the Beechwood Seminary, a mountain school in Kentucky. Other forms of young people's work have been vigorously promoted during the year, notably the week-day programs for organized Sunday School classes.

Needs

A Sunday School worker could be employed profitably in almost every Presbytery and every Synod should have a superintendent of Sabbath School and Young People's Work. In addition every live church should establish one or more outpost mission schools. Only by such a program of extension and education can we reach our share of the thirteen million spiritual illiterates in the South. Our budget at present is $95,000. It should be $150,000 if we are to measure up to the obligation and opportunity confronting us.

YOUR PASTOR'S SUCCESSOR

Rev. S. Waters McGill, Department of Church Efficiency, Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

Some day your pastor must have a successor. It is to be hoped that the day will be long delayed. But sooner or later your church will need a successor to your pastor. Where will the successor to your pastor come from? The present program for filling vacancies in our church is to create a vacancy some place else. This is not good business. It is not religious statesmanship.

Your pastor's successor may now be in the theological seminary. But if all the men in all the classes in all the seminaries were graduated in a single year there would not be men enough to fill the vacancies caused by death and the infirmities of old age. This condition makes no provision for advance. Why organize new churches if we cannot supply the pulpits?

The seminaries must get their ministerial students from the Christian colleges. The Christian college must get their students for the most part as a result of the preaching of Presbyterian pastors. The Church must supply the college. The college must supply the seminary. The seminary must supply the church. So it is a sort of interlocking program.

What are the churches doing to strengthen the work of the seminary? The work of the seminary ought to include recruiting and training men for the work of the ministry. The seminary has about all it can do in trying to finance the work of training men to preach. There are no funds available for the work of recruiting men for the work of the ministry. The theological seminary ought to be equipped for this important task.

Some of our ministers are assisting in the work of educating their successors. A Presbyterian pastor recently said, "There has not been a year since I left the seminary that I have not had the privilege of educating a ministerial student." This is a fine program and example. The cost is only $150 a year. Why should not individual churches undertake the support of at least one ministerial student a year? If this were done, in a few years the supply would overtake the demand.

Churches may provide for the education of their pastor's successor in one of two ways. First, by providing $150 a year for the work of theological education in the seminary. Second, by providing the full amount of a scholarship, which is $2,500. This fund would be permanently invested and the income, which would be $150 a year, would be used to educate a ministerial student each year so long as time shall last. Real religious statesmanship seems to demand a more definite and practical program of providing for ministerial supply. The greatest need of the Church and the world today is preachers. For how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent?

A CREED FOR MOTHERS

I believe in the eternal importance of the home as the fundamental institution of society.

I believe in the immeasurable possibilities of every boy and girl.

I believe in the imagination, the trust, the hopes and the ideals which dwell in the hearts of children.

I believe in the beauty of nature, of art, of books and of friendship.

I believe in the satisfaction of duty faithfully done.

I believe in the little homely joys of every-day life.

I believe in the will of God as the one and only law of human life in all its relations.

I believe in training my children to be faithful children of God and loyal disciples of Jesus Christ.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

OKLAHOMA—OPPORTUNITY AND OUT-LOOK

By S. L. Morris, D.D.

For the past 20 years the Executive Committee of Home Missions has made an annual visit to Oklahoma—in addition special visits as occasion required—for the purpose of investigating opportunities, inspecting the work and encouraging the missionaries in their arduous toil. His recent tour of the state reveals so many points of interest which the whole Church should know it has been deemed advisable to narrate some of these outstanding features which more than justify home mission investment and constitute the background of the bright outlook for the future. The story of adventure, struggle and achievement could easily and truthfully be woven into an extended narrative entitled The Romance of Home Missions.

The Oklahoma Presbyterian College

Twenty-five years ago Calvin Ralston, the little son of our missionary to the Indians, was accidentally drowned. His small bank deposit was dedicated by his parents to the establishment of a mission school in the town of Durant, known as "Calvin Institute," in his honor. After a few years it developed into "Durant College"—the building costing $12,000. The first year revealed its utter inadequacy to meet the need, but it served the purpose of Christian education for seven years under the efficient presidency of Rev. E. Hotchkin, himself being the third generation of missionaries to the Indians. His address before the General Assembly at Greensboro, N. C., in 1908 evoked a spontaneous response embodied in a resolution for the enlargement of this institution into the "Oklahoma Presbyterian College."

The town of Durant purchased the college building for a high school, paying the Home Mission Committee $20,000 for it, and friends in Durant presented the new institution with a magnificent site of 23 acres at a cost of $27,000. The executive committee undertook the erection of a hundred thousand dollar building, largely on faith in God—and in the women of the missionary societies. Its confidence in both sources of help was well founded, but it struggled with a tremendous debt for several years, being bonded for $30,000.

Rev. E. Hotchkin having declined re-election, Prof. W. B. Morrison, one of the teachers, was called to the presidency—a remarkably wise choice—and he successfully financed its affairs for 10 years and educated hundreds of young people now serving the State and Church in every useful capacity.

Crowded beyond all capacity and conception, the General Assembly, meeting at Durant in 1918, authorized the Home Mission Committee to undertake a second dormitory, costing nearly $100,000 which again entailed a heavy debt on the struggling institution in a weak Synod which could not rally to its support. The town, however, paid one-third of the cost, the Home Mission Committee another third; and Mr. C. E. Graham, of blessed memory, came to the rescue with $20,000—one-half being paid before his death and the other half assumed since by his family.

Then came the resignation of Dr. W. B. Morrison, for business considerations; and the scholarly and lamented Dr. E. H. Lyle was elected president. Unfortunately his administration coincided with the ravages of the boll weevil and the terrible financial depression of the country. His health broke under the strain and he fills an untimely grave. The college now faced its gloomiest prospect. Burdened with debt, a heavy deficit on current expenses, its patronage reduced by the financial embarrassment of the country and its president sinking into his grave. The board of trustees one year ago, undaunted, turned to the Home Mission Committee for support, and to Dr. Morrison, its former president, for services. It required faith and consecration, but when Dr. Morrison again accepted the challenge for service and assumed the presidency the board breathed freely and took courage.

Never was faith more richly rewarded. The transformation in one year has been little short of a miracle. One year ago there was an indebtedness of about $20,000 on the property, and nearly $10,000 of accumulated deficits on current expenses and repairs. The new dormitory was bare of furniture, practically all the teachers declined reelection from lack of faith in its ability to pay salaries, and worst of all it had no prospect of students.

In such circumstances the college threw open its doors last fall—with hope at the lowest ebb. Then came the first surprise. Students poured in from all over the state and from far down in Texas. Not only was it the best opening in its history, but it was blessed with the finest body of students imaginable—mature in age, serious in purpose and with physical and mental endowments unsurpassed by any junior college in the land. Next came the wiping out of all indebtedness—its board of trustees at its recent meeting had to pinch each other to be sure they were not dreaming.

How did it all happen? Well, the mantle of a noble sire fell upon the worthy shoulders of his son, Allan G. Graham, who started the ball rolling by agreeing to pay the $10,000 which his father hinted as a prospect when he paid the first $10,000. Several Indians came into fortunes by the discovery of oil on their lands, and three of them gave $20,000 to the college—an illustration of "casting bread on the waters" by the Presbyterian Church in years past, and now coming back in grateful recognition of the benefit received by the Indian people. Still another Indian has subscribed $10,000, which, when paid, will be used for furniture, scientific apparatus, etc. Several of them have also made large gifts to the Goodland School. The remarkable thing about it is that none of these Indians belong to our Church.

To appreciate the full measure of the marvelous change in the fortunes of this institution it is only necessary to compare its student body of 1923 with five years ago. The number is almost exactly the same, but in 1918 there were none in the college classes. Now 20 per cent are in the college proper. Five years ago a large proportion were day pupils. Now there are about 100 in the boarding department. In 1918 church membership was distributed among other denominations largely. Now half of the students are Presbyterian. At the opening last fall 33 registered as being members of no church. During the present school year practically all of them were added to the church.

In conclusion it may not be out of place to give a summary of assets, achievements, and prospects. (1) A skilled architect was employed to examine and give an appraisal of the property, and his report states that it would take $302,000 to duplicate it. (2) It is now for the first time absolutely free of debt of any and every character. (3) Repairs, furnishings and improvements imperative for preventing damage and to prepare for the coming session will cost $20,000, one-half of which is already in sight. In view of its remarkable record and its missionary character, generous friends of Home Missions, Christian education, and of Indian people, are asked to respond to its appeal for the necessary funds to fulfill its worthy purpose. (4) Its students scattered throughout the state furnishing leadership in their respective communities, are among its most valuable assets as a recruiting agency for future students. (5) It is the only Christian institution for girls in the state and it is the greatest spiritual forces in the Synod for evangelizing and training the future membership of the Presbyterian Church in Oklahoma.

It is just at the beginning of its career of usefulness and if properly equipped and sustained will quadruple its usefulness in the near future and will multiply its results in ever increasing proportion as the years go by and will more and more demonstrate its claims as perhaps the best investment the Church ever made in building up the Kingdom of God in our Southland.

"EXCEPT THEY BE SENT"

By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

After months of study and prayer the Foreign Mission Committee's final decision is that trustworthy pledges of $2,700 per year, over and above accustomed foreign mission contributions, shall hereafter be required for each new missionary sent to the field. This figure is obtained by dividing the total cost of a normal year's work by the number of missionaries. The committee believes it wiser to require this whole amount at the start than to require only half and then struggle for years with the other half in the form of a debt.

About 30 of our candidates should sail this summer. To any Church, Auxiliary, or individual pledging as much as $300 per annum of new foreign mission money, or more if possible, one of these 30 will be assigned who will sail when the whole $2,700 is pledged.

"How shall they preach, except they be sent?" It is the young people's business to go. It is the Church's business to send. Will our Church say to these waiting candidates, "Stay at home?" Will it say, "Seek service under some other church?" Or will it say, "If you give your lives, I will give the money to send and support you?"

For further information write Executive Secretary, Box 330, Nashville, Tenn.

DEFICIT REDUCED

Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

The Church at large will rejoice with the Foreign Mission Executive Committee in the fact that the deficit, which for several years has been climbing, has at last turned about and is now facing the other way. The deficit reported March 31, 1923, is smaller than that reported March 31, 1922. We believe next year will show a still further reduction, now that the tide has turned.

While one means of this reduction was the painful scaling of appropriations for the work abroad, yet we may all rejoice in, and take courage from, the substitution of a declining deficit for a growing one.

PRESBYTERIAL PRESIDING ELDERS AND PRESBYTERIAL OLIGARCHIES

In the Presbyterian Church all episcopal power, so far as the churches and ministers are concerned, is supposed to reside in the Presbytery; and as to members, first in the pastor and secondarily in the session, with the pastor sitting with them as moderator. Clandestine meetings of session held in a pastor's absence, are illegal, and their proceedings null and void. But in these latter days we have in our Presbyteries a new order of bishops, yclept "Superintendents of Home Missions," while not a few "ruling elders," misled possibly by the extra-scriptural title conferred upon them by the church, seem to imagine that they have been ordained to rule both church and pastor. Further, the current church press reports that a Presbytery the other day constituted its Home Mission Committee a commission to deal with all matters in its home mission fields. In that Presbytery, therefore, so far as those fields are concerned, the Home Mission Committee, of which the "superintendent" is chairman and ex-officio "manager," will perform all the functions of Presbytery at all times. The missionary pastors are under the power of an oligarchy, composed of the members of that committee. That committee may determine the duration of a pastorate, or for whatever it may count a sufficient cause, suspend a minister from his pastorate, or from the communion of the church, or even depose him.

Does our church need and desire such a system of autocratic rule in our home mission fields? And do we need and want among us an order of bishops like Methodist presiding elders, who are in fact deputy bishops? Possessing episcopal authority over the ministers in their districts in the bishop's absence, they may remove ministers from their charges and put them elsewhere if they deem it necessary. Home mission superintendents are apt to magnify their office, and become bishops in fact, for their title means bishops. We may not forget that the first bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church were ordained to be "superintendents." These new Presbyterian bishops visit fields under their jurisdiction at will, gather information as to the work and acceptability of the pastors, count themselves authorized to hold conferences with sessions in a pastor's absence, and, as a matter of course, are appealed to by those who wish to hasten a pastor's resignation. They not only feel themselves authorized to fill the home mission pulpits with men of their own selection, but to empty them, if the "good of the work" seems to require it. Their prejudice may keep some efficient ministers from obtaining work, and bring about the premature retirement of others. Availing themselves of their opportunities to get between a pastor and a session, they can at any time embarrass a pastor who may happen, as most of us happen at times, to have a session in which there is a ruling elder who thinks its the highest, holiest and most delightful function of his office to get rid of his pastor when he thinks proper to do so. There are many such elders in our church, elected for life, and yet become non-representative by reason of age and infirmity, or personal unacceptability to the congregation. Superintendents, judging by appearances, as visitors are likely to judge a congregation, may count such men the real leaders of the church.

This system of superintendency breeds espionage, induces restlessness in our home mission charges, and involves danger of serious injustice to both churches and pastors. Disaffected individuals complain to the "superintendent," and if he happens to be a man who confounds reticence with prudence, he may keep a pastor in ignorance of some secret scheme to oust him until it is too late for the pastor to protect himself from outrage or the church from grievous injury at the hands of incompetent and vicious officers.

Is such a system Presbyterian? "There is always disaffection," said a wise man to me not long ago. And a wiser once said, "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you." Personally, I want no man to visit my churches occasionally, listen to clandestine complaints, and then go home fancying that he knows more about conditions than I do myself. Under such a system a minister may be railroaded out of a pastorate and left stranded without employment years before his infirmities would compel his retirement. From "prudent" superintendents, and from secretive and treacherous ruling elders, good Lord deliver us! When a minister's resignation is forced from him by a "superintendent" who makes common cause with marplots and mischief-makers, he has no appeal.

If we are to have an itinerary, let us have it, with an appointing committee which shall make appointments for a year at a time. But let Presbyteries retain their episcopal authority, and let the powers of home mission superintendents be clearly defined. Presbyter.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

To the Women of the Southern Presbyterian Church in South Carolina: I wish to give you the latest news of our History of the Women of the Southern Presbyterian Church and their work.

July 1, 1922, all the material we had gathered through the Presbyterian historians was sent to Mrs. M. D. Irvine, our able historian general. I felt very proud of our South Carolina record, for it is most interesting and inspiring. On its receipt and examination, Mrs. Irvine wrote me: "You have as much material as we will have, or be allowed to have, in the whole book. But you will be entitled to a large proportion of space, because you report such wonderful facts. I am simply thrilled as I read, and am so proud of our Southern history."

In a letter dated March 13th of this year, Mrs. Irvine writes me that they are working to have the history ready for the Woman's Conference at Newberry in July. There have been many difficulties and much discouragement connected with the work, not the least of which has been the misunderstandings which would naturally arise in an enterprise of such magnitude, and indifference on the part of a few. But Presbyterians, women as well as men, do value their heritage. We stand for information and education, and as Macaulay tells us, "A people who do not care for their past will accomplish nothing to which their posterity can look back with pride." So, women of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina, rally to your history.

Mrs. Irvine adds: "If the state histories are as interesting to the states as they are to me, I feel no fears. And I have some data back of that we will all take pride in. But after all, there will be some disappointments and criticisms because we can only touch in high places in a work so general." And the different states are urged to preserve, collect and publish their own histories. I beg the Presbyterian historians to continue collecting material, for as yet there are many churches not heard from. Each Auxiliary should preserve its history yearly through its historian.

During the past year we lost by death, the historian of Bethel Presbyterian, Mrs. J. J. Stringfellow, Chester, S. C. Mrs. Stringfellow was one of the pioneers in the women's work of this Presbyterian. She was an able and consecrated woman. Though handicapped by failing health, her interest was fresh and intense.

All our Presbyterian historians did fine work, and with each it has been a labor of love, without money and without price.

I cannot close without saying how much I owe to our dear president, Mrs. F. Louisa Mayes, of beloved memory. She was the soul of cheer and encouragement, and her words of appreciation are amongst my most precious memories. She had so vital an interest in this history and was so full of plans for the future.

Asking for your prayers, your fullest interest and cooperation in this work which will be of such value not only to ourselves but to future generations.

Very truly yours, Margaret Gist,

Historian of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Synod of South Carolina.

York, S. C.

Two Gifted Sisters—Inquiries have come to us regarding the compiler of the Year Book of Programs, and the author of the Devotionals for this year.

Miss Margaret McNeilly, of Nashville, Tenn., who prepared the Year Book, and Mrs. J. S. White, of Campbellville, Ky., writer of the devotional studies, are daughters of Dr. J. H. McNeilly, of blessed memory, for so many years pastor in Nashville and a member of the Foreign Mission Committee.

Miss McNeilly had charge of the Literature Department of the Foreign Mission Office for years, and still prepares the Foreign Mission Program for the Survey. She is Secretary of the Synodical Auxiliary of Tennessee.

Mrs. White is a busy wife and mother in a rural home, and the Devotionals are written in snatches of time between arduous demands upon time and strength. Perhaps that is the reason these studies are speaking a real message to other busy women.

The Auxiliary of the Church owes a debt of gratitude to these gifted sisters. Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

Many Gay Mexican Fiestas!—For a happy combination of work and play the recent study of Mexico by the various Woman's Auxiliaries seems to have no equal. Perhaps the striking contrasts of that picturesque land fostered a spirit both serious and gay in regard to it, for the many letters daily coming in to the Auxiliary office show a serious determination to have a very gay Mexican Fiesta for the May meeting.

Calls are pouring in for the appealing little pageant, "A Mexican Fiesta," with the attractive invitation cards! The latter have so captivated the fancy of one enthusiastic woman that she wants not only every woman of her own church to have one, but many women in her town as well.

Another letter, from a rural church, requests extra copies of the pageant that the music in it may be learned and sung by members of a chorus of girls dressed as Mexicans, who will take part in addition to the speaking members of the cast.

One Auxiliary is planning to make an all-day affair of it and serve a regular luncheon in true Mexican style with girls in costume waiting on the table. Another, apparently up to the ears in work, wishes to know the latest date permissible to celebrate and still have the contribution in on time.

The foremost thought in the minds of the serious women planning this gay festival is the building of that school for these interesting Mexican girls and promises of more large pledges for it are being whispered about in the May breezes. What is your Auxiliary doing about it?

To the New Presidents and Secretaries of Literature in Local Auxiliaries: One of the most important occasions of the year occurs May 6-13—the canvass for the Missionary Survey. The president and secretary of literature are responsible for planning to canvass every member of the congregation for subscriptions.

Helpful suggestions about how to conduct this canvass have been sent out from the office of the Survey to all presidents and secretaries of literature on last year's list. We have not yet secured the list of the officers for this year.

If you have not yet received these suggestions, won't you send a card at once to the Missionary Survey, Richmond, Va., asking for help in this canvass?

A very interesting playlet, "Save the Surveys and You Save All," is also ready for you on request.

Let every Auxiliary put on this canvass for our splendid magazine. Place a Survey in every family and put your name on the honor roll! Get to work now!

Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

Auxiliaries Attention! The high cost of printing and the heavy demand for organization literature compels us to make the small charge of two cents each for every organization leaflet, and a charge of 25 cents for every organization package, which contains everything pertaining to the Auxiliary Circle Plan.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

The Seventeenth Annual Meeting of Concord Presbyterian was held in the First Presbyterian Church of Statesville, April 19th and 20th.

Because the King's business requireth haste, the usual address of welcome and the response thereto was omitted. After singing "Come Thou Almighty King," and being led in earnest prayer by Mrs. R. W. Orr, the Presbyterian, with Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, presiding, went to work.

The theme of the meeting was "Unto Him," and the three Bible hours were devoted by Mrs. W. B. Ramsay to an amplification of the theme: Looking unto Him for salvation, looking unto Him for service, and looking unto Him in intercession. These Bible studies were one of the outstanding features of the program, and I am sure that none of those who heard them can be just the same afterwards. Fortunate is the Presbyterian which has within its bounds teachers of such marked ability as Mrs. Ramsay and Mrs. Archibald Currie, who presented the topic, Mission Study in Auxiliaries and Sunday Schools, and speakers of such womanly tact and gracious presence as Mrs. E. F. Reid, president of the Synodical, but belonging to Concord.

To come to her home meeting Mrs. Reid had to leave Orange Presbyterian in the midst of a celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the founding at Alamance Church of the "Female" Missionary Society in 1823. She brought the heartening message that the women of North Carolina had contributed $212,419 during the year, which is an increase of $15,000 over the gifts of last year. Mrs. Reid spoke also of the Conference for Negro Women to be held at Biddle University, Charlotte, from June 7th to 14th, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Rankin, of Charlotte, and of the great need of the school for Mexican girls which is to be provided through the birthday offering of the Auxiliaries in May.

The faculty, through President Hollingsworth, invited the delegates and visitors to what proved to be a delightful reception at Mitchell College at 5:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The presence of the student body at the evening services, and the excellent solos, vocal and instrumental, rendered by members of the Mitchell musical faculty, added much to the inspiration of the sessions.

The reports show an Auxiliary membership of 1,555; of these 249 are tithers, 583 were in foreign mission study classes, and 477 were in home mission classes. In 766 of our homes the Survey is taken and over 400 copies of the Prayer Calendar are used.

Thursday afternoon was devoted largely to the hopeful and helpful reports of officers and secretaries of causes, while Friday morning was given principally to narrative reports from the Auxiliaries represented. These reports brought out in many cases excellent and practical suggestions, and it was fitting that they should be followed by a conference, led by Mrs. G. W. Taylor. In this conference Miss May White, Mrs. Clarence McNeely, Mrs. C. E. Mayhew, Miss Flora McQueen, and Mrs. Chesley Watkins gave valuable suggestions on methods of work in local societies.

The hospitality extended was entirely worthy of "The best town in North Carolina." The charming courtesies culminated in a beautiful luncheon served under the fine old trees which surround the church, to which all visitors were urged to come.

Twenty-nine Auxiliaries were represented by 29 delegates. The 12 officers of the Presbyterian were all present, while a large number of visitors from nearby towns and the surrounding churches, and the presence of five of the Synodical officers added to the enjoyment of the sessions.

The popular meetings at night were largely attended. Rev. A. Hoyt Miller, of Georgia, told a thrilling story of his four years in Africa, and Mr. J. B. Spillman gave a practical demonstration of budget-making. He stressed stewardship in a forceful way and laid the burden of the 32 missionaries waiting to go and the 33,000,000 of heathen waiting for them to come, on the hearts of the women of our Church. If the women get behind stewardship, said the speaker, it will succeed. Mrs. R. B. Willis, representing Dr. Sweet's, made a strong appeal to mothers, urging them to know what is being taught their children, as well as their grown-up sons and daughters, and a tender appeal in behalf of aged ministers and their families. Mrs. Reid had stressed the importance, at an earlier meeting, of greatest care in the selection of the institutions which are to mold the minds of our young people in their formative years. Mr. Joseph B. Johnston aroused deep interest in our 300 orphaned children at Barium, whose support fund has fallen off about 50 per cent this year.

The 1924 meeting will be held at Lenoir.

Cornelia Shaw, Secretary.

Davidson, N. C.

The Presbyterian of Congaree, comprising 19 Auxiliaries, met at the Richland Presbyterian Church, in Eastover, S. C., on April 17th and 18th. Mrs. W. L. Dunovant, of Edgefield, the president, presided over the sessions. At the first meeting on Tuesday evening there was an address of welcome by Mrs. Alfred Scarborough, of Eastover, responded to by Mrs. J. H. Dudley, of Columbia; also roll call of Presbyterian officers and local Auxiliaries. The president delivered her address, following which Mrs. Andrew Bramlett spoke on the Conference for Negro Women; Miss Nora Johnson on the Baby Home at Thornwell, and Miss Evelyn Fishburn, of Canoe, Ky., on Assembly's Home Missions. After the devotional on Wednesday morning a memorial service for the late Synodical president, Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, was held, at which Mrs. R. P. Hamer, of Pee Dee Presbyterian, and Mrs. A. M. Bramlett, of Columbia, gave beautiful and touching tributes to the life and work of Mrs. Mayes. The rest of the morning was spent in hearing the reports of the officers and Auxiliaries.

The ladies of the Eastover Church served a magnificent barbecue dinner on the grounds, after which Mrs. O. Y. Owings, of Columbia, presided as toastmistress for the following most attractive toasts: "The Sphere," "The Circle," "The Circumference," "The Diameter," "The Radius" and "The Segment."

The afternoon session was given over to reports of committees, election and installation of officers, and the Bible hour by Dr. R. C. Reed, of Columbia Seminary.

At the closing session the women were most fortunate in hearing Rev. Porter Smith, a returned missionary from Brazil, speak on the need of the Gospel in that country. He was a forceful speaker and made a deep impression on his hearers.

During the sessions delightful music was furnished by Mrs. McNeil, Mrs. Price, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Tom Hopkins, Mrs. Dutrow, and Mrs. Moffatt. One of the outstanding features was the playlet entitled "The Missionary Survey," given under the direction of Mrs. W. T. Aycock, of Columbia.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. L. Dunovant; Vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Dudley; Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. T. Aycock; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. H. S. Macglashan; Treasurer, Mrs. R. H. McDonald; Secretary of Foreign Missions, Mrs. W. D. McDermid; Secretary of Assembly's Home Missions, Mrs. M. M. Freeman; Secretary of S. P. C. Home Missions, Mrs. Inglis Keels; Secretary of Spiritual Resources, Mrs. Hal Dick; Secretary of Literature, Mrs. Auburn Woods; Secretary of Young People's Work, Miss Lula Switzer; Secretary of Orphanage, Mrs. R. C. Hamer; Secretary of Publicity, Mrs. Wyatt A. Taylor.

Between the afternoon and evening sessions Mrs. R. C. Hamer entertained the visitors with a most beautiful reception at her spacious country home at Acton.

South Carolina Presbyterian Auxiliary held its 24th annual meeting in the Abbeville, S. C., church, April 18-20. There was a splendid program; 50 representatives attended, as did also a number of visitors from nearby places, and many women of the local Auxiliary.

Rev. Ray Riddle, Synodical Superintendent of Home Missions, made a fine address on Wednesday night. On Thursday evening Rev. J. P. Smith, of Brazil, made perhaps the most soul-stirring address on missions in Latin America that was ever heard by South Carolina Presbyterian. Mrs. Leslie Stribling, of Seneca, and Mrs. S. C. Hodges, of Greenwood, conducted a memorial service for Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, beloved and lamented president of South Carolina Synodical. Mrs. Andrew Bramlett brought echoes from the Laymen's Convention in Charlotte. On Thursday afternoon Mr. C. A. Fleming, of Thornwell Orphanage, made a most touching appeal for the proposed Baby Cottage to be erected there.

One of the features of the meeting was a questionnaire, Information is Inspiration, conducted like an old-time spelling match, by Mrs. W. O. Brownlee, of Donalds.

All officers were re-elected except Mrs. Brownlee, who was elected at this meeting and welcomed as president of South Carolina Presbyterian.

On both days beautiful luncheons were served the representatives and visitors by the hostess Auxiliary, in the basement of the church, which has just been completed and used for the first time.

The next meeting will be held at Aveleigh Church, Newberry. R. M. Morse.

Richmond, Va.—The Woman's Auxiliary of Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church, of Richmond, has this week paid a handsome tribute to the memory of Rev. J. Calvin Stewart, D.D., the late pastor of the church, and has, at the same time, made a substantial contribution to the work of educating ministers for all future time, by establishing at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, the "J. Calvin Stewart Scholarship" of $1,000. It is especially fitting that Dr. Stewart's name be forever associated with Union Theological Seminary. He entered the seminary as a student in September, 1879, and graduated in May, 1882. From that time forward he was a staunch friend of the seminary. He was very active and influential in the movement which resulted in changing the location of the seminary to Richmond, which was accomplished in the fall of 1898, and he showed his abiding interest in the welfare of the students by gifts from his well stocked library, notably a collection of the classic writers, filling two large book-cases in the social room at Richmond Hall. His widow has, within the past month, donated to the seminary several handsome steel engravings for this same social room. Few graduates of Union Seminary have a record of more substantial achievement than Dr. Stewart, and none have the record of a more saintly life. The seminary, therefore, feels honored in receiving the "J. Calvin Stewart Scholarship."

MISSIONARY SURVEY WEEK
MAY 6-13
Campaign by Woman's Auxiliary

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The time for the Young People's Conference in the two Carolina Synods is drawing near. The South Carolina Conference begins at Clinton, June 11th and lasts through the 17th, and the North Carolina Conference begins at Davidson, June 12th and lasts through the 19th. These dates are not very far ahead and the churches and societies should be choosing their delegates. Dr. J. P. Mason, at Sumter, S. C., and Mr. C. T. Carr, at Mooresville, N. C., will be glad to give full information about the different conferences.

We are showing this week a picture of the Junior Endeavor Experts of the Rowland, N. C., Presbyterian Church. The whole society seems to be a busy one. It is a fine thing to give the boys and girls the idea of being experts in whatever they undertake.

A charge sometimes brought against the meetings held by our young people—too often a correct one—is that their programs do not show enough depth. It is our feeling that this is due to two causes. One is that those in charge of the programs do not fully consider the purpose of a "prayer meeting" and consequently do not take pains to see that the meetings are properly planned. The other is that the young people do not prepare during the week by daily devotions and by thought about the subject for the coming meeting. Both of these troubles can be and should be corrected. Our Publication Committee at Richmond has a fine supply of Christian Endeavor and Presbyterian Church booklets giving an infinite variety of plans for better meetings and better work generally. Various movements for the promotion of the devotional life are being promoted. A daily period of Bible reading, meditation and prayer is possible to most of us. Let us plan and pray concerning all our work.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MAY 6, 1923

SAMUEL, JUDGE AND PROPHET

Lesson: I Sam. 1:1-4:1; 7:3-10:27; 11:12-13:15; 15:1-16:13; 25:1-28:3-20.

(A Survey of Samuel's Life.)

Printed Text I Sam. 12:1-5, 20-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart: for consider how great things he hath done for you."—I Sam. 12:24.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

1 And Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and have made a king over you.

2 And now, behold, the king walketh before you; and I am old and grayheaded; and, behold, my sons are with you; and I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day.

3 Behold, here I am: witness against me before the LORD, and before his anointed: whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or whose hand have I received any bribe to blind mine eyes therewith? and I will restore it you.

4 And they said, Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken ought of any man's hand.

5 And he said unto them, The LORD is witness against you, and his anointed is witness this day, that ye have not found ought in my hand. And they answered, He is witness.

20 And Samuel said unto the people, Fear not: ye have done all this wickedness; yet turn not aside from following the LORD, but serve the LORD with all your heart;

21 And turn ye not aside; for then should ye go after vain things, which cannot profit nor deliver; for they are vain:

22 For the LORD will not forsake his people for his great name's sake; because it hath pleased the LORD to make you his people.

23 Moreover, as for me, God forbid that I should sin against the LORD in ceasing to pray for you: but I will teach you the good and the right way.

24 Only fear the LORD, and serve him in truth with all your heart: for consider how great things he hath done for you.

25 But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. What is sanctification?
A. Sanctification is the work of God's free grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole man after the image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto sin and live unto righteousness.

Samuel served Israel as judge and prophet for about 70 years. He was a civil ruler or judge and had a regular circuit where he administered justice. He was much from home attending to public business, and perhaps this was a reason why his sons did not show his virtues. But Samuel was also a prophet, or religious teacher, and instructed Israel as to their pious faith and duties towards Jehovah. But Israel in Samuel's old age demanded a king, and the Lord chose Saul to be their king. He was the son of Kish, a Benjamite, and a young man of fine presence, unusual stature and superior gifts. Our lesson relates to the time of his anointing as ruler. We will consider Samuel Vindicating His Fidelity; His Proving to Israel Their Sin in Demanding a King; His Warning Them Against Forsaking Jehovah; His Encouraging Them to Worship the Lord.

I. Samuel Vindicating His Own Fidelity

The heads of the tribes are assembled to see and greet their king. Samuel is about to lay down his authority as judge. Ceasing to be the civil ruler, it was desirable to show that he had been faithful in the duties of his office. It was all the more needful since his sons, invested with authority during their father's absence, had been charged with wrong-doing. Samuel asks his people if he had taken any man's property or defrauded or oppressed any one, or taken any bribe to blind his eyes. They unanimously agree that he had done no wrong. The old faithful judge calls upon God and their anointed king to witness their testimony in his behalf. Blessed is the man who after so long a tenure of civil office, can claim and receive such proofs of his fidelity! Some men regard public office as an opportunity for securing selfish advantages instead of a sacred trust for promoting the welfare of their fellows.

II. Samuel Shows Israel Their Sin in Demanding a King

As judge he had administered the government for them for many years and he had done it faithfully. Naturally the old man was hurt and grieved that they desired to set him aside and substitute a king. But the Lord tells him that Israel had not only rejected their judge, but God Himself, who had done so much more for them. Jehovah had chosen for them the Theocracy as the least burdensome form of government, and for many years had raised up for them judges to do justice and to deliver them from oppression into which sin had betrayed them. But now they demanded a king. He granted them their desire, but told Samuel to tell them concerning the burdens the king would lay upon them. To convince Israel that they had rejected Him, and that He did not approve of the change contemplated, Samuel asked the Lord to work a miracle. At wheat harvest rain was almost unknown, and the prophet prayed the Lord to send "thunder, lightning and rain" to prove that they had sinned. It came, and the people were convinced and "greatly feared the Lord and Samuel." Let people who deny Jehovah's sovereignty over His own works deny it. Some one controls natural forces, and man would be in a sad condition if Jehovah did not.

III. Samuel Warns Israel Against Forsaking the Lord

He reminds them of past sins and of the evils they entailed. He said, "Fear not, ye have done all this wickedness, yet turn not aside from following the Lord and serve the Lord with all your heart. And turn not aside. For then shall ye go after vain things which can not profit nor deliver if they are vain." He affirms, "Only fear the Lord and serve Him in truth and with all your heart, for consider how great things He hath done for you. But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king."

IV. Samuel Encourages Them to Worship Jehovah

Men have to be encouraged to do their duty as well as warned concerning sin and its fearful results. He stimulates with promises. He declares, "For the Lord will not forsake His people for His great name's sake because it hath pleased the Lord to make you His people." He promises them his prayers. He says, "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you." His not praying for them would be not only a deprivation to them, but a sin against God. He also engages to teach them. They needed teaching of doctrine and duty as well as praying for Jehovah's protecting care and blessing to rest upon them. He says, "I will teach you the good and the right way." The way of God's worship and service is the right way and is shown to be such by reason, conscience, the Divine Word, and every standard of duty known to man. It is also the good way, promoting human welfare.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

THE SON OF GOD

M., May 7—Christ Claimed It: John 10:22-33.
T., May 8—Apostles Believed It: John 1:1-14.
W., May 9—Resurrection Proved It: Rom. 1:4; 8:3.
T., May 10—Paul's Belief: Col. 1:9-17.
F., May 11—His Message Shows It: Heb. 1:1, 2; 2:1-4.
S., May 12—The Church's Faith: I Tim. 3:16.

Sun., May 13—Topic: Why Do We Believe That Jesus Christ Is the Son of God? John 20:24-31.

In what ways was Jesus different from others?
What claims did Jesus make that imply His deity?
What impression did Jesus make on His disciples?

John, the writer of the gospel, declares that he wrote his book to prove that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that faith in Christ is the only way by which we may have eternal life. As children in the home and Sunday School, we have always loved Jesus and believed in Him, and perhaps, it has never occurred to us to even question why we believe this to be true. But as we grow older, we learn that some are in doubt, just as Thomas was; and so it is well for us to know the definite reasons for believing this great and all important fact. We need this for our own comfort, and so we can help others who may be disturbed about it. When young people come to be about 16, their reasoning powers are stronger than their imaginations, and they wish for definite grounds, on which to rest beliefs, that were taught us in our childhood. We shall follow five lines of proof that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, any one of which is sufficient in itself, but their accumulating proof makes belief doubly sure.

The Virgin Birth of Jesus Proves Him the Son of God

Matthew and Luke both tell us about Christ's birth, and both say He was born of a virgin, Mary of Nazareth, and that He had no human father, like all the rest of mankind have. The Son of God was from all eternity, equal with the Father and the Spirit in power and glory. But when it came time for Him to come into the world to be our Saviour, He took a real human body, and chose Mary as His mother, and was born of her, thus He was both God and man, with two natures, human and divine, but only one person, and this He is to this day, and will be forever. The Bible foretold His birth. It prophesied that He would be the seed of a woman, the seed of Abraham, the son of David, and the child of a virgin. And all this came to pass, which proves He is the Son of God.

The Present Human Life of Jesus Proves He Is the Son of God

There is nothing we human beings know as well as the fact that we are all sinners, and do wrong every day in thought, word, and deed. As we grow old enough to think about the world, we conclude this is a very wicked race we belong to. But as we study the life of Jesus, we can find no fault in Him. He is perfect in morals, perfect in good works and kind deeds, perfect in purposes, perfect in every way. No mere man or woman has ever lived a perfect life, and excepting Jesus Christ, history does not record any other perfect man, and no writer of literature has ever depicted one. Sin has marred them all. No man has ever lived, who claimed to be sinless, except Jesus. He did declare He had no sin, and His life proves His declaration to be true. He also claimed to be God, and so His life proved He was what He claimed to be, the Son of God.

Christ's Death Proves Him to Be the Son of God

Christ told His disciples He was going to die on the cross, and that He was doing this in obedience to God's command. No man took His life from Him, He laid it down of Himself. He said His death was to be a sacrifice for the sin of the world, and that it would satisfy God's demands for men's sins. God is the judge of the world, and requires men to suffer for their sinful lives, both in this world and the world to come. But God can accept a substitute for the sinner, and this Christ claimed to be, and with His virgin birth and His sinless life, he could offer Himself as that substitute, which He did. No other being, angel or man, could die in man's stead. But Jesus could and did die for men, and thus His death proves Him to be God's Son.

Christ's Resurrection Proves Him to Be the Son of God

Christ rose from the dead in three days. Death could not hold Him. He appeared to His disciples for 40 days after He arose, and they are witnesses of His resurrection, which was so important a fact that they observed the first day of the week as the Sabbath to celebrate His resurrection. And as Sunday comes, its regularity is a proof of the resurrection. Certainly none but the Son of God could overcome the power of death.

The Church Proves Christ Is the Son of God

The Church was organized by the word of Christ, from the very beginning, it was the body of people who were witnesses of Jesus, and trying to live according to His law. The Church has wrought so much good in the world, and destroyed so much evil, that it is recognized as the greatest power for good, ever since it was started, and even down to our own times. Such an institution as the church, claiming Christ as its head, working for the betterment of mankind, and expecting its reward from him in heaven, proves that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and the Saviour of the world.

So the virgin birth, the sinless life, the atoning death, the resurrection from the dead, and the church, believing and obeying Jesus Christ as Lord and king, as well as Saviour from sin, proves Jesus of Nazareth to be the Son of God.

North Carolina Young People's Conference
June 12-19, Davidson, N. C.

NEWSGRAMS OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The above picture shows the Experts of the Junior C. E. Society of the Rowland, N. C., Presbyterian Church, organized the first Sunday of this year. In the front row, from left to right, are Mary Kate Webster, Sarah Faircloth, Sadie Martin, Alice McLaurin, Sarah McKinnon; second row, Gilbert Robertson, Bessie May Bracey, Louise McNeil, Mary Ruth McQueen, Elizabeth Carper, Mary McCallum, Rowland McKellar.

This society grew in three months from 14 to 28 members. They have contributed to all causes $28. Two-thirds of the members have read "African Adventures" and "Under Many Flags."

The Intermediate C. E.'s of the Raeford, N. C., Presbyterian Church have recently increased their membership more than 10 per cent, this despite the fact that five members were promoted to the Senior Society. Some of the boys of this society hold services at the jail. Some of the Endeavorers have a custom of going from their prayer meeting Sunday afternoon to the homes of some of the elderly people of the community and holding services of song for them. On Dixie Endeavor Day a pageant, "Christian Endeavor," was given, to which the pastor and Sunday School superintendent were specially invited.

The Wilmington, N. C., First Presbyterian Junior Endeavorers are the first in the state to report 90 per cent on the Dixie Four Square Chart. Mrs. W. H. Howell, superintendent of this society and of all the State Junior work, promises us a surprise next month regarding some memory work done by the Junior Societies in North Carolina.

The Senior Endeavorers of the First Church, Mooresville, N. C., sent automobiles to Davidson College on April 29th and brought 20 members of the C. E. Training Class up to conduct a meeting as it should be conducted. All the Endeavorers of this church and the Second Church, together with the older people of both churches and many visitors, packed the First Church's fine new Sunday School building, chairs being added to accommodate the crowd.

The Training Class members first put on a very poor meeting, using the plan "Laying the Ghosts" recently given in the Standard. Five ghosts, such as "Leader 15 Minutes Late as Usual" and "Giggling on the Back Seat," hovered over the society until the "President" made a rousing talk and got all the members to rise as a sign that they would help him have better meetings and a better society. A meeting as it ought to be was then conducted, in which many of the things that the Presbyterian Church has meant to the world were mentioned. A summary talk was given at the close, stressing the meeting as an example of the way Christian Endeavor promotes denominational loyalty.

The Junior Endeavorers of the Hendersonville, N. C., Presbyterian Church recently gave a party to the children of Balfour Orphanage. Music and games, supplemented by lemonade and doughnuts, furnished a pleasant occasion for 65 children. Several adults, including the Balfour teachers, were also present.

Church News

NOTICE TO COMMISSIONERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Bring overcoats and warm clothing, as a cold spell in May may require their use at Montreat. Sometimes even in August fires are needed.

A SPECIAL REQUEST FROM THE STATED CLERK OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The Stated Clerks of Presbyteries will do me a great favor if they will notify me of the reception of ministers who have been recently dismissed, and are marked "In trans" in the Presbytery from which the have been dismissed. Give me not only the Presbytery, but the new Post Office address.

The ministers themselves will also do me a favor if they will drop me a card giving full information. It looks as though there will be over 75 ministers marked "In Trans," in Presbyterian reports. If this information can be secured promptly, many of these changes can be made before the Statistical Reports are printed.

J. D. Leslie, S. C.

MONTREAT AND THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

If those planning to attend the meeting of the General Assembly which convenes in Montreat, N. C., May 17, 1923 will give attention to the following suggestions it will be to the advantage of all concerned.

In buying railway tickets inquire for the best through train to Asheville, North Carolina and buy your ticket over this train to Black Mountain, N. C., railway station for Montreat. On arrival at Black Mountain ask any taxi-driver to take you and your baggage to the hotel or house as indicated on a card which will be mailed to each commissioner in advance, the taxi charge is not over 50 cents. If any commissioner finds that he cannot attend the meeting of the Assembly he will please promptly forward the card sent to him to his alternate, if the alternate cannot come he will please notify the Montreat Hotels immediately.

Rooms in the hotels will be reserved first for commissioners and their wives. Advance notice must be given for the entertainment of wives in the hotels.

Quite a number of visitors in addition to the commissioners can be comfortably roomed in buildings near the hotels and meals can be had either at the hotels or cafeteria. Several boarding houses will be open during the meeting of the Assembly. "Hickory Lodge," "Nisbet Lodge," "Umarest Cottage," and probably others. All visitors should reserve rooms before coming by writing to the Montreat hotels.

Commissioners will be entertained for $2.00 per day and the Assembly pays this expense. The charge for the entertainment of visitors will be $2.50 per day and this expense will be borne by the individuals.

All guests and commissioners will please notify the Montreat hotels in advance as to the time of their arrival, this is important so that the hotels may have rooms ready.

The hotels will serve the noon meal Wednesday, May 16th, for all who give notice in advance that will be here at that time.

If any commissioner makes private arrangements for his entertainment he will please promptly notify the Montreat hotels.

There will be some unusual expense in operating the hotels for a week or ten days in advance of the conference period and we estimate the charges as indicated above will not cover more than the actual cost of operation.

The Assembly will probably close about May 25th or 26th and the Y. W. C. A. Conference will begin June 5th. This leaves a period of about ten days between the close of the Assembly and the opening of the conferences. Montreat is most beautiful at this season of the year and during this vacant period of ten days a special rate of $2.00 per day will be given to all visitors and those wishing to remain a while in the mountains after the meeting of the Assembly. Reservations should be made for this special rate.

Mountain Retreat Association.
R. C. Anderson, President.

NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte, First Church—In the absence of Dr. A. S. Johnson, the pastor, Rev. J. P. Smith, of the Faculty of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Campinas, Brazil, filled the pulpit in the morning. Rev. J. F. Ligon, of Tenth Avenue Church preached at night, and Rev. C. C. Beam preached at Tenth Avenue at night.

Thomasboro—This church is adding a section to its building to make room for the expanding Sunday School. One member was recently received by letter. Both the Seversville and Thomasboro churches are setting up the Workers' Council suggested by the Assembly's Committee of Stewardship.

Seversville—This church is planning to erect a chapel at Savona Mills, for the purpose of conducting a Sunday School, and other services. This church is also going to add rooms and possibly a basement to its own equipment. Two members of the Sunday School were received last Sunday into the membership.

Providence Church—The spring communion service will be held at the Providence Church on Sunday morning, May 6th, at 11 o'clock.

After the service lunch will be had, following which there will be a short service held in the church. The members of this congregation look forward, with especial pleasure, to meeting many of those who have gone from the community, but who still "Remember Zion" in "Old Providence."

The Session.

Parkton—I accepted a call to this field not quite two months ago. The present pastor served the Parkton Church once before. The pastor and family have been very kindly received by the entire charge, and many nice things have been sent to the manse. The manse has been thoroughly remodeled, newly papered and painted; a sleeping porch built and all modern conveniences added except steam heat.

The work is starting off in a very encouraging way. The congregations have been large, the most of the time. All business houses of the town close for the Wednesday evening prayer service, so that the prayer services have increased from ten or twenty to about 200. On the first Sunday in April the sacrament of the Lord's supper was celebrated at the Old Lumber Bridge Church, and the congregation numbered between four and five hundred, the largest number of communicants that this church has had for many years were present.

The sacrament of the Lord's supper was celebrated at the Parkton Church the fourth Sunday in April; 19 were received into the church, two by letter and 17 on profession; three of these received baptism. Thirteen infants and small children were also baptized.

V. G. Smith, Pastor.

Charlotte—The past Sabbath marked the beginning of the commencement exercises of the Nurses' Training School of the Presbyterian Hospital, of this city, with the baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. W. H. Frazer, D.D., president of Queens College. For several years past the Training School has been holding its closing exercises on the beautiful campus of the hospital, but on this occasion they accepted the hospitality of the Caldwell Memorial Church and had the sermon in their beautiful new church home. Rev. G. F. Bell, the pastor of the church, presided at the exercises. Mr. Bell also read a letter that had been received by a circle of the Tenth Avenue Church from Miss Farmer, a former graduate of the Training School, who is now working in Africa, in which she thanked the ladies of the circle for remembrances sent her, and in which also she told something of the work she is doing. Dr. Frazer took as his text for the occasion Jesus' words: "I must work the works of Him that sent me." He brought a challenge for her best efforts for the Master and a promise of his presence and help to each individual young lady as she goes out into the world to practice her chosen profession. There are 11 graduates in this year's class. A note of sadness was introduced into the exercises this year by the death of one of the young ladies who was to have graduated with this year's class. This was Miss Pauline Pearce, one of the best loved and most efficient members of the class. A special prayer was offered at the service Sabbath by Rev. C. C. Beam for the family of the deceased young lady—a prayer that was marked by loving sympathy for the bereaved family. The music for the occasion was rendered by a quartette from the Tenth Avenue Church, and added very much to the beauty of the service.

Concord Presbytery met in Lenoir, N. C., April 10, 1923, and was opened with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. J. L. McBride.

Present: 31 ministers, and 37 ruling elders.

Officers: Elder C. F. Ritchie, moderator, and Mr. Chas. H. Hamilton, clerk.

Received: Rev. Eugene Alexander from the Presbytery of Fayetteville. Arrangements were made for his installation as pastor of the Second Church, Salisbury.

The Statistical Report to the Assembly shows a substantial increase in contributions to several of the causes of the church.

There were 497 additions to the church on profession, and we now have over 10,000 members.

Stirring addresses were made on Home Missions by Rev. E. M. Craig, Rev. R. A. White, Mr. Martin and Rev. J. M. Clark.

Dr. Grier, chairman of Foreign Missions announced that two members of the Lenoir Church have offered to give $1,350 of the amount needed to send out one of the waiting candidates if Presbytery or some of its churches will give the balance.

Dr. W. J. Martin and Rev. W. F. Hollingsworth were heard in the interest of Davidson and Mitchell colleges.

A committee on Men's Work was elected consisting of Mr. C. F. Ritchie, of Concord, Dr. D. M. McIntosh, of Old Fort, Mr. H. D. Mills, of Mooresville, and Rev. R. A. White and Rev. A. A. McLean.

Rev. W. C. Jamison, of Kannapolis was elected secretary of Stewardship with Rev. Eugene Alexander as chairman of the committee.

The fall meeting will be held in Contre Church, near Mooresville, October 16th, at 7:30 p. m.

An adjourned meeting will be held in Statesville April 29th, at 2 p. m. E. D. Brown, S. C.

Orange Presbytery met in the Church by the Side of the Road, Greensboro, N. C., on April 10, 1923. There was a large attendance, 40 ministers and 40 elders.

The retiring Moderator, Rev. T. W. Simpson, preached the opening sermon on Judges 16:6.

Rev. R. S. Arrowood was elected Moderator and Rev. J. S. Kennison, temporary clerk.

One minister, Rev. Jno. R. Offield, from Greenbrier Presbytery, and two candidates for the ministry, Messrs. Carey Hansel and W. L. Hodgkin were received. Mr. Offield accepted a call from the Thomasville Church. Licentiate R. H. Stone, who completes the course at Union Seminary this term, was examined with a view to ordination and tentatively accepted calls from Jefferson, Peak Creek, Obids and Ebenezer Churches in Ashe County.

The following commissioners to the Assembly were elected: principals, Rev. J. S. Foster, D.D., Winston, N. C., Rev. C. E. Hodgin, Greensboro, N. C., and Rev. C. W. Ervin, Glade Valley, N. C.; alternates, Rev. R. M. Williams, Greensboro, N. C.; Rev. M. E. Hansel, Mebane, N. C., and Dr. W. T. Thompson, Richmond, Va. Ruling elders: principals, C. M. Norfleet, Winston; A. W. McAlister, Greensboro, and R. A. Gilmer, Greensboro; alternates, P. E. Morrow, Burlington; J. S. Kuykendall, Winston, and Geo. A. Durham, Hillsboro, N. C.

Dr. D. H. Scanlon, of Durham and Mr. Edward Johnston, of Winston, were appointed on the Board of Trustees of Davidson College, in the place of Dr. Wilds, removed, and Mr. A. W. McAlister, resigned.

The Presbytery was delightfully entertained by the Church by the Side of the Road, and adjourned to meet in First Presbyterian Church in Greensboro, on May 14th, at 2 p. m., to license two candidates and for other business.

The next stated meeting will be held with the Little River Church in Orange County, October 23, 1923. D. I. Craig, S. C.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Piedmont—Four new officers were ordained and installed here April 22d. Mr. R. B. Gresham and Mr. C. V. Verner were made elders; Mr. J. F. Donald and Mr. J. C. Harper were made deacons. A special service was held. The officers sat in a body, and the pastor, Rev. J. Blanton Belk, preached from I Timothy, 3:2, "An Overseer therefore must be without reproach." This church now has seven elders and ten deacons. Of the new members received last year 50 were on profession of faith, and 30 of them were baptized.

Our pastor has declined the call to the Presbyterian Church at Woodruff, S. C.

Columbia Theological Seminary—A two days normal was held here on April 19th and 20th in the interest of the Daily Vacation Bible School. A number of the students attended with the addition of four Columbia churches, the First, the Arsenal Hill, and the Rose Hill Presbyterian, and the First Baptist. With the added students who will conduct schools but could not attend the normal, there will be between thirty and thirty-five schools started this summer as a result of the training school. Mr. Frank Langham assisted Dr. Wells in arranging for the course, and Mr. Frank Ellis assisted by conducting the hour on song leadership. Mr. Chas Douglas spoke on craft work, demonstrating the use of the scroll saw, and Mr. Thomas Byan took the missionary story hour. If there is enrolled in the 35 schools an average of 100, this course will reach 3,500 children. It was a great pleasure to have a part in conducting this normal.

C. Groshon Gunn.

APPALACHIA

Bryson City, N. C.—This church has closed the past church year with the following results:

Added on profession, 14; by letter, 11; total, 25. Baptized: Adults, 12; infants, 2; total, 14.

Contributions to local and benevolent causes $3,588.

Resident members, 62; non-resident, 16; total, 78.

The outstanding achievement of this church for this year in regard to better equipment for a more effective service locally has been the erection of a Hut. The building contains three small rooms, one of which is completely and conveniently furnished as a kitchen. The other two are Sunday School class rooms. In front of these and spanning the entire width of the building is a room 20 by 36 feet, designed for a social center. The most unique feature is a large river rock fire-place and chimney constructed and designed by a Cherokee Indian. In this we find a most valuable asset for the promotion of social life of our church. In it we have bazaars, dinners, socials for young people, church suppers, men's meetings, etc. Being designed for such it lends itself very pleasingly to all of these exercises. To quote Dr. R. P. Smith, Superintendent of Home Missions in Asheville Presbytery: "Twenty-five years ahead of anything which the average church has." Our people deserve commendation for their vision and liberality which made its erection possible. It means much toward the solution of the "problem of the young people," and is worthy of the consideration of every ambitious church.

J. T. G.

FLORIDA

Jacksonville—At the communion service in the Riverside Church, April 8th, Dr. McCaslin welcomed into the church 128 new members, received during the last quarter. This church received during the past year 271 new members, and reports to Presbytery a total of over $38,000 in contributions

ALABAMA

Rev. F. E. Bagby has been called to a church in Mississippi. His churches of the Macon County group most earnestly hope that he will decline the call and remain as their pastor.

Gadsden—The State Christian Endeavor Convention convened in the First Presbyterian Church of this city, April 12th for its annual convention. More than 300 delegates were in attendance, and the convention was a great inspirational blessing to all these young people.

TENNESSEE

Nashville Presbytery met in Gallatin, April 17, 1923, 7:30 p. m.

Officers: Rev. Herbert L. Waker; clerks, G. W. Talbott, A. G. Link, A. S. Allen.

Ordained, for Nashville Presbytery by Presbytery of London, England, Mr. James Savels, missionary to the Congo.

Candidates, 6; preparing for medical missions, 2. Overture, that the Lord's Day Alliance be put on the budget for such a percentage as all the interests involved will permit.

Commissioners: Principals, Rev. W. C. Alexander, D.D., Rev. S. I. Nash; Alternates, Rev. E. W. Williams, D.D., Rev. Lynn R. Walker, D.D. Ruling elders, W. W. Jones, H. H. Ring, Walter H. Clark, W. A. Wills

Ministers, 20; ruling elders, 33 present. An enthusiastic Sunday School Institute was held preceding the meeting of Presbytery on same day. W. C. Alexander, S. C.

TEXAS

Waco—The Waco Mexican Church made fine progress during the last Presbyterian year and is sending up excellent reports. It added two elders and two deacons to its official force; it organized a Woman's Auxiliary; a Junior and also a Senior Society of Christian Endeavor; and started a branch Sunday School.

Austin—On Easter Sunday, April 1st, the First Southern Presbyterian Church, Austin, Texas, held very impressive services at the morning hour. A number of infants were baptized, and several young people and adults were received into the church on profession and baptism. A simple memorial service was held for those members of the church whom the Heavenly Father had called home during the past year. There was a short communion talk, followed by the communion service, making withal a very solemn, yet simple and meaningful hour.

K. M. S.

The First Presbyterian Church, Dallas, welcomed 188 new members at the quarterly communion April 1st.

One very interesting department of the work in this congregation is the school for the deaf and dumb. On the afternoon of April 1st a special communion service was observed for these, about 50 attending.

Appropriate hymns were used in this service and it was unusually inspiring to see how these deaf and dumb, while they could not sing so one could hear, were making joy in their hearts as with the Lord.

Communications received from him indicate he has had a most enjoyable and profitable trip.

East Hanover Presbytery—At the adjourned meeting of the Presbytery held in Richmond, April 23d, a petition was received for an organization of a Presbyterian Church in King William County, at Sweet Hall. A commission was appointed to perfect the organization.

The pastoral relation between Rev. Chas. R. Stribling, D.D., and Tabb Street Church, Petersburg, was dissolved. Highly appreciative resolutions on the part of the congregation were presented.

Rev. Chas. R. Stribling, D.D., has accepted the call from the Orange Church and expects to enter upon his duties as pastor May 1st.

A petition for the organization of a church in Colonial Heights, a suburb of Petersburg, was presented and steps taken in the appointing of a commission to erect the same.

The Presbytery spent on its Home Mission work the past year nearly $20,000. Two manses were thoroughly overhauled and made modern. Three church buildings in mission fields were erected. Steps were taken to repair other manses and erect other church buildings in some of our mission fields this ensuing year.

Christiansburg—This congregation sustained a great loss recently in the death of Mr. D. Tosh Stephens, a consecrated member and faithful elder for many years. Mr. Stephens had suffered for several years past from a serious heart malady, and his death occurred Friday, April 6th, the result of this trouble. While his going will sadden our community and his many friends, we rest secure in the knowledge that he is now in the living presence of his Lord.

In the recent every member canvass, this church went beyond its quota by a large margin and the financial needs of the coming year are amply provided for. Beginning April first the pastor's salary was raised 20 per cent.

Richmond—Rev. F. C. Davis has accepted the call from the Samuel Davies Church and will enter upon that work May 1st. This is very gratifying to the church as it has been without a pastor for quite a while.

At congregational meetings recently held by the Providence and Genito churches in Powhatan county licentiate W. T. McDonald was called to become their pastor. He has accepted the call and will take up the work May 1st. These churches were able to call a pastor at this time because of the splendid work which Rev. D. P. Rogers has been doing for them in connection with his regular pastorate at Amalia. Several years ago Mr. Rogers noticing the moribund condition of Providence and Genito churches, took the oversight of them, and with the aid of a seminary student, he succeeded in reviving and building them up, until now they are calling a pastor for all of his time. This is a capital piece of constructive work which he has done.

Second Church, Richmond, recently received 14

(Continued on page 10)

268 CHURCHES REPORT SUBSCRIPTION OF $539,683

There are still 240 churches that have made no report of the result of their Every Member Canvass. Last year the final reports showed subscriptions amounting to $521,241, so that our report to date is $18,000 ahead of last year and we have not received reports of as many subscriptions as were made last year. Report to April 28th is as follows:

	Total Quota	Benevolent Subscriptions		Total last Yr.		Tithers		Family Altars
		No.	Amt.	No.	Amt.	1922.	1923.	1922.	1923.
Albemarle—24 of 30 chs.-----	$ 64,946	1,417	$ 44,908	513	$ 46,065	334	414	116	195	5,576
Concord—36 of 62 -----	104,754	3,073	69,218	3,629	60,851	366	644	300	482	9,844
Fayetteville—70 of 119 -----	111,296	3,950	68,442	4,158	58,911	341	539	282	343	13,527
Kings Mt.—20 of 38 -----	54,158	2,150	33,466	1,931	32,542	226	194	94	120	4,638
Mecklenburg—50 of 86 -----	175,934	4,570	126,212	4,777	106,148	808	1,421	505	697	13,574
Orange—29 of 87 -----	184,437	4,738	125,478	4,536	143,148	719	723	318	288	11,729
Wilmington -----	93,834	2,987	71,959	2,533	71,448	414	617	180	324	7,051
268 of 508 -----	$789,359	22,885	$539,683	23,489	$521,241	3,234	4,552	1,795	2,449	65,939

This church has a total membership of 2,702. An enthusiastic Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society was organized in the Colonial Hill Church, which is a branch of the First Presbyterian Church, last Sunday.

Rev. Wm. M. Anderson, Jr., pastor, is delivering a series of sermons on Romans at the night services. The congregations are increasing in attendance and show great interest.

Dr. Anderson will spend April 22-29, "A Week with the Bible" in a Bible conference in the First Presbyterian Church, Cleburne.

VIRGINIA

Richmond, Grace-Covenant Church—The Woman's Auxiliary of this church has given $1,000 to Union Theological Seminary for establishing a scholarship for educating ministers, in memory of their former pastor, the late Dr. J. C. Stewart, who was a sincere and valuable friend of the seminary.

Staunton—Rev. Wm. E. Hudson, D.D., superintendent of Home Missions and Sunday School work in Lexington Presbytery, is expected to arrive on the S. S. Rotterdam, May 4th from a trip abroad. Dr. Hudson left on February 10th for a Mediterranean cruise, touching points in Spain, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Palestine, Egypt, France and England.

Churches subscribing as much or more to the Benevolent Causes as to their own local church expenses:

Mem.	Benevolent Causes	Pastor's Sal.	& C. E.
451	Albemarle Presbytery
57	Howard Memorial	$ 8,565	$ 6,852
	Rocky Mt. Second	342	300
	Concord Presbytery:
577	Concord First	12,839	8,000
205	Prospect	1,968	1,005
	Fayetteville Presbytery:
9	Fairview	49	40
124	Lumber Bridge	1,250	1,000
95	Oakland	300	200
10	Progressive	26	315
14	Wildwood	17	17
	Mecklenburg Presbytery:
56	Banks	448	400
66	Carmel	629	300
1,160	Charlotte First	39,967	23,000
126	Cook's Memorial	477	435
291	Huntersville	2,000	2,000
120	Mulberry	965	965
35	Rehoboth	150	150
	Orange Presbytery:
804	Durham First	29,028	16,354
	Wilmington Presbytery:
31	Phoenix	134	85
490	St. Andrews	12,464	9,482
240	Wallace	1,880	1,856

Educational

Columbia Theological Seminary, Commencement Program, May 6-9, 1923: Baccalaureate Sermon—First Presbyterian Church, Sunday, May 6th, at 11:30 a. m., by Rev. Alexander Martin, D.D., pastor of the Oakland Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Rock Hill, S. C.

Sermon Before the Society of Missionary Inquiry—Arsenal Hill Presbyterian Church, Sunday, May 6th, at 8:00 p. m., by Rev. Walter L. Caldwell, D.D., pastor of the Woodland Street Presbyterian Church, of Nashville, Tenn.

Tuesday, May 8th—12 m.: Meeting of the Board of Directors of Columbia Seminary.

Tuesday, May 8th—8:00 p. m.: Inaugural Address of Rev. James B. Green, D.D., as Professor of Theology, First Presbyterian Church.

Wednesday, May 9th—11:00 a. m.: Graduating Exercises, in the Seminary Chapel. Hon. John T. Brantley, President of the Board, presiding.

Presentation of the diplomas and address by Rev. John M. Wells, D.D., LL.D., President of the Seminary.

Mitchell College—At a recent meeting of the trustees the work begun a year ago of reorganizing the curriculum resulted in the decision to standardize as a junior college after one more year (1923-24) the third year of college work and the issuing of baccalaureate degrees will be discontinued. The high school department was named officially "Mitchell Academy." After the present year all grade work is discontinued. All the college equipment and resources will be devoted to the maintenance of a standard high school (4 years) and two years of standard college work. In discontinuing the third year of college work instead of taking on a fourth year the trustees were influenced by a number of considerations. The college has not the equipment in buildings, library, laboratories, or endowment, to enable her to enter the four-year college field. Nor were the trustees sure that there is at present a demand in the Synod for another four-year college for women. The third and fourth years are the most expensive in the college curriculum, and the trustees did not wish to raise prices when it seems to be the special mission of Mitchell to give a good foundation of an education at the lowest possible cost. In confining our work to the junior college curriculum we can do four years of standard high school work and the two first years of standard college work at our present very moderate charges. The work is already being recognized by the accrediting agencies as it has not been heretofore.

The commencement exercises will begin on Sunday, May 20th, with a sermon by Dr. J. M. Wells, president of Columbia Theological Seminary. He will also preach the sermon in the evening before the Y. W. C. A.

Monday the trustees will hold their annual meeting, and Monday night the department of music will give a concert.

Tuesday morning the graduating exercises of the academy will take place. An alumnae luncheon will be served at 1:30, with a business meeting to follow. Class day exercises will feature the afternoon. At night the graduating exercises, with an address by Dr. Henry H. Sweets, of Louisville, Assembly's Secretary of Christian Education, will close the session of 1922-23.

Under the new plan of operation, begun a year ago as an experiment, the college has had a very successful year, and the prospects are bright for a better one ahead.

Flora Macdonald College—Miss Sallie Lou McKinnon, one of the most interesting speakers the Y. W. C. A. has brought to the college this year, made an address at the "Y" Sunday evening chapel service. Miss McKinnon is doing mission work in China, and vividly described the new era that is in progress in China, discussing the effects of the new thought movement, better education, and the republican form of government, with its improvements over the old and its corruptions.

The last graduation recital of the term was given Monday night in the auditorium by the Misses Mary Alice Boyd, Townsville, graduate in piano, and Maie Sinclair, Wilmington, certificate in organ. After the recital, a reception for the young ladies was held in the college parlors.

The annual May Day pageant was given Tuesday afternoon in the Woodland Theatre, under the direction of Miss Sue Haile, physical director. The pageant, "Nations at Play," was participated in by 100 students and illustrated by means of typical dances and sports of the different nations what can be done for "public spirit through recreation." All during the afternoon the Y. W. C. A. sold refreshments at their various booths on the campus, and the holiday ended with the showing of the feature film, "Smilin' Thru," in the auditorium.

Flora Macdonald College will graduate on May 23rd the largest class in her history, with 28 Seniors receiving degrees. Twenty members of the class are from North Carolina; four from South Carolina; two from Georgia; one from Florida; and one from Japan. Seventy-five per cent of the class will teach and take up advance work along the following lines: Medicine, journalism, physical education, cafeteria management, banking, community work, nursing, law, foreign missionary.

The graduates are: Misses Ellen Erwin Black, Davidson; Mildred McAulay, Mount Gilead; Eliza MacKay Whitted, Wilmington; Margaret Hall, Wallace; Anna Mae Caddell, Carthage; Phoebe E. Wakefield, Banner Elk; Annie Lee Funk, Florence, S. C.; Lucy Hunsucker, Gibson; Julia Ramsay, Banner Elk; Janie Belle Buchanan, Japan; Miriam Harrison, Leesburg, Fla.; Ada MacRacken, Whiteville; Mamie Baker, Latta, S. C.; Ruth Nowell, Fayetteville; Bonnie Bessie Bulla, Fayetteville; Lillian Street, Glendon; Mary Alice Boyd, Townsville; Willie Mae Whiteside, Charlotte; Alma M. Burgess, Summerton, S. C.; Sarah Louise Mandeville, Sylvester, Ga.; Onie Ruth Erwin, Clarksville, Ga.; Vera Coe, Richmond, S. C.; Hannah Nash McNeill, Buies; Margaret McGirt, Maxton; Martha Miller Jones, Red Springs; Mary Rice McCulloch, Burlington; Margaret Reid Morton, Oxford; Margaret McLeod, Red Springs.

Queens College Commencement—We acknowledge an invitation to attend the coming commencement exercises of Queens College. The program is as follows:

Saturday, May 12th—8:15 p. m.: Inter-Society Reception.

Sunday, May 15th—7:30 p. m.: Baccalaureate Sermon, by Rev. W. T. Thompson, Richmond, Va., at Second Presbyterian Church.

Monday, May 14th—1:00 p. m.: Alumnae Luncheon; 4:00 p. m.: Class Day; 5:00 p. m.: Art and Domestic Art Exhibit; 8:30 p. m.: Grand Concert.

Tuesday, May 15th—10:00 a. m.: Commencement Address, by Congressman W. B. Bowling, Lafayette, Ala.

News of the Week

According to the evidence in the trial of those concerned in the death of young Tabert, of North Dakota, the judge who tried him and the deputies who handled him were all drunk. The Florida senate voted to remove Sheriff J. R. Jones, of Leon county, from office. Jones was the first official to fall under the crusade against ill-treatment of convicts in this state, brought on by the death of Martin Tabert, a North Dakota boy.

Two children, Charles and Leon Hale, 11 and 13 years of age, walked from Hickory, N. C., to Johnson City, Tenn., following the death of their father.

Owing to the absence of several members, the conference of the state board of charities and public welfare with Governor Morrison was informal and no definite action regarding an investigation of charges of E. E. Dudding, president of the Prisoners Relief Society, of Washington, that improper conditions exist at the state prison, Raleigh, was announced.

On April 26th the Duke of York and Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon joined hands and hearts before the golden altar of Westminster Abbey while all Britain poured out its blessings. The magnificent church service that elevated the modest Scotch girl from the common ranks to a place in the crown of the Empire would have exalted a king or queen.

The finance investigating committee of the Legislature of North Carolina will find the budget commission and the governor's estimate of the state's financial expectancy is correct, that Treasurer Ben Lacy's $1,800,000 deficiency report is correct and that Corporation Commissioner Allen J. Maxwell's figures representing a $5,000,000 deficit are correct, though "extremely misleading." What is of perhaps greater importance, the committee will find that the administration for the past two years has lived within its income and that it has provided ample revenue to meet the heavy appropriations of the 1921 General Assembly.

The negro migration started soon after the outbreak of the world war keeps up at a steady and increasing lick. Thousands of negroes are leaving the South for the North daily. Several hundred thousand have moved within the last few years.

High industrial wages is given as the chief reason for the reported migration. Boll weevil conditions last year, which made cotton growing unprofitable for a number of negro farmers, unrest among returning negro troops who experienced more attractive living conditions away from farms during and after the war, and breakdown of the labor contract system are given as contributory causes.

During the last 12 months 32,000 negro farm hands or laborers left Georgia.

President Harding is up a tree on prohibition enforcement. He is very anxious to carry out the provisions of the law in spirit if not to the letter, but that seems impossible. The rum fleet off the Atlantic coast is worrying him and other administration leaders, who see a reaction from the people in the coming campaign. Harding is preparing to start a very aggressive campaign to effectively enforce national prohibition. He will find a way to defeat the rum fleet that, through collusion with bootleggers ashore, supplies America with liquors.

A dispatch to The Times from Paris says it has been learned, on what the correspondent believes to be excellent authority, that France is willing now to agree to a reduction in Germany's debt to somewhere between 40 billion to 50 billion gold marks, provided in the settlement of the inter-allied debt all of France's indebtedness is extinguished. Otherwise, it is asserted, France is disposed to hold out for her original figure of 132,000,000,000 gold marks.

The British government has flatly declined to aid the United States in suppressing the rum traffic, the State department announced. Balked in the effort to sweep the liquor fleet from the high seas through diplomatic exchanges, the President immediately set in motion more drastic measures.

Hostilities for control of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan ended with the signing of an armistice between the opposing factions, William J. Simmons, emperor, and H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, are retained in their posts under the agreement.

State Senator Joseph M. Zachary, of Transylvania County, N. C., died suddenly Wednesday night about 10 o'clock at his home in Calvert. Senator Zachary had been suffering for some time from heart trouble.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

members into its communion, making a total of 43 for the year. Ginter Park received seven members at its last service thus bringing its total additions for the year up to 70.

Westminster Church is enjoying a series of services this week; they being conducted by Rev. J. E. McClure, D.D., of Petersburg.

Hoge Memorial has called Rev. Nuchaux Raine, as their pastor. He enters upon his new work, April first.

WEST VIRGINIA

Bluefield—Rev. Warner H. DuBose, of Lewisburg, who was recently extended a call to become co-pastor of the Bluefield church and take charge of the work in South Bluefield, a beautiful and rapidly growing residential section of the city, has accepted the call and will enter upon his new work following the meeting of Montgomery Presbytery, April 17th, at which time he will be received from Greenbrier Presbytery and arrangements made for his installation. He and his family will receive a most cordial welcome from the congregation.

On Sunday, April 15th, five new elders and four new deacons were ordained and installed. The elders are J. Lawrence Alexander, William L. Alley, Thomas H. Claggett, Dr. David Littlejohn and Charles S. Ralston. The deacons are James R. Cameron, Creighton C. Campbell, Frank P. Early, and Dr. Albert H. Hoge. With these splendid additions to the official forces the church is well equipped to carry on the new work. The prospects are bright for substantial growth and development.

The reports to Presbytery show a total membership of 721; resident, 623; non-resident, 78. The Sunday School enrollment is 606, an increase of 174 since starting our new Sunday School in South Bluefield a year ago. The financial report is best yet sent to Presbytery. The contributions total $43,975.82 for all causes. $30,925.51 for benevolences, and $13,050.31 for current expenses.

PERSONAL

In our last issue we had an editorial reference to a notice from our Foreign Mission Committee proposing to send out any of the waiting missionaries, if any church, auxiliary or individual will pledge as much as $300 of new Foreign Mission money. This notice from the committee which should have appeared in the same issue, was overlooked in the press-room. On page five this week it will be found.

Miss Mary Owen Graham, president of Peace Institute, who has been absent from school for several months, enjoying a leave of absence granted her by the board of trustees, writes most charmingly of her European trip. The last letter received from her was written from Paris.

The party with which Miss Graham is travelling left New York February 3d, on the Empress of Scotland. After a delightful ocean voyage, the party spent some time cruising in the Mediterranean, landing at points of interest along the way. Six days were spent in Palestine and 12 in Cairo and Luxor. One evening as they lay near Stromboli, she gave three exhibitions of fire-works for the benefit of the appreciative audience on board the ship. Leaving the ship the party landed in southern Italy for a trip through southern Europe. Besides other points of interest Florence, Rome, and Naples were visited, and two days and two moonlight nights were spent in Venice. Miss Graham says that Venice by moonlight is truly a dream and is all the guide books and enthusiasts claim for the city. She was quite impressed by the grace of the gondoliers, and by the ensemble singing of an Italian opera from one of the gondolas by a group of what appeared to be just common laborers, one of whom had a most divine voice. Miss Graham also mentioned visiting the beautiful tomb of Canova, which spot is of course a point of interest to all North Carolinians. From Lake Maggiore the party passed through the Saint Pass to Lake Lucerne. They found the lake district beautiful beyond description.

After her stay in Paris Miss Graham plans to go to England and Scotland. She has engaged her return passage and expects to sail May 2d on the Empress of Scotland, the same boat on which she made her home until the party landed for the trip through southern Europe.

There are 880 people on the same cruise. From other North Carolina friends on Board, we learn that Miss Graham is one of the most charming and one of the most popular members of the party. At the "Boom Your Own State" party Miss Graham represented the North Carolina delegation, and brought down the house with what she had to say about the Old North State, and at the Lincoln Memorial service held on the ship, she was the only woman on the program. Miss Graham was also one of the speakers at the Democratic dinner held at the Commodore Hotel in New York City the night before she sailed.

CHILDREN

VISITS MISS BERTHA

Dear Standard:

I live away up in the mountains. I said the books of the Bible last Sunday before the whole Sunday School. I am seven years old. I will be in the third grade next year. Miss Bertha Abernethy is my teacher. She lives in a little house just across the ridge from my home. I spend the night with her sometimes. I wash the dishes for her. My little brother's name is Horace.

Your friend,
Elizabeth Dillingham,
Dillingham, N. C.

GRANDMOTHER TAKES THE STANDARD

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl seven years old. I am in the first grade at school. I go to Sunday School at the first Presbyterian Church, Miss Madeline Hatch is my teacher. Dr. Potter is our pastor and we like him fine. My grandmother lives in Salisbury and I visit her often. She takes the Standard and always reads the letters to me when I am there. I hope my letter will not reach the wastebasket as I want to surprise my grandmother.

Your unknown friend,
Dorothy Lee Earle,
Burlington, N. C.

SICK A LONG TIME

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years old. I would like so much to go to school, but I can't go because I am sick. I was taken sick the first of July and here it is March, so I have been in bed nine months. If I was going to school my teacher's name would be Miss Jones. I am in the fourth grade. Year before last at Sunday School I got a prize for going to Sunday School every Sunday. I think I had better stop, for I'm afraid of the wastebasket.

Your unknown friend,
Sallie B. Lovelace,
Tarboro, N. C.

HER FIRST LETTER

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years old. I am in the fourth A grade, my teacher's name is Miss Mary Sherfield, of Ruffin, I like her fine. Rev. Mr. Huske is our pastor. Mr. Montgomery is our superintendent. Miss Kate Watt is my Sunday School teacher, I like her fine. I am a Junior at Sunday School. I have a sister and a little brother. This is my first letter to you.

Your unknown friend,
Julia L. Burton,
Reidsville, N. C.

P. S.—Please print my letter as I want to surprise my sister.

RIDES A PONY TO CHURCH

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eleven years old. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. My teacher is Miss Lolita Frazer, I like her fine. I go to school every day; I am in the fifth grade. I have a pony, I like to ride her. Santa Claus brought me a saddle to ride my pony with and I ride her to church every Sunday. Our preacher is Mr. Joe Mack, we like him very much. Mr. McNeel is our Sunday School superintendent. I have three sisters and two brothers; one of my sisters is teaching school; one of my brothers is off at school.

From your friend,
Russell Vanlandingham,
Scotland Neck, N. C.

A SURPRISE LETTER

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy seven years old. I go to school at Crisp. My teacher's name is Miss Maggie Wooten. I am in the second grade. I go to Sunday School at Eagles Baptist Church. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Zora Cox. Hoping this will not reach the paper-basket as I want to surprise my mother, daddy, brothers and sisters.

Your little friend,
Edward Lovelace.

AN EXCITING BIT OF SEWING

Zelia M. Walters, in Continent

"I've mended my father's gloves, and he says they are beautifully done," said Marjorie proudly.

"I'm so glad you sew well," said grandmother.

"Did you sew when you were as young as I, grandmother?"

"Oh, yes!" and she began to smile.

"Is it a story?" begged Marjorie.

"When I was your age I did quite a remarkable piece of sewing. Perhaps there is time to tell you about it."

"Oh, yes!" cried Marjorie.

"When I was your age," began grandmother, "I was expected to do my daily 'stent' of sewing by piecing quilt blocks. I had a nine patch, I remember, in lovely green sprigged calico and pink gingham. I knew I had to do two patches each day, but one lovely spring afternoon I said to my mother: 'Please may I go to play with the little Crabs. They have three cousins coming today.' Of course you remember, Marjorie, that the little Crabs were children, whose name was Crab."

"But my mother said: 'Emily, show me your patches.'

"They were not done, and I knew there was no play until they were. So I got out my workbag at once. I took a dozen slow stitches with my eyes on the calling birds outside the window, the tiny white clouds sailing before the fresh breeze, the budding trees down by the fence. Then I had a bright thought. If I were out in the midst of it all I could sew much faster."

"'Mother,' I said, 'please may I go and sit on a log in the woodlot and sew?'

"'Yes, but don't go out of sight or sound of the house.'

"I ran across the woodlot and chose a log beside the path. By peeping through the paw-paw bushes I could see our side door, and I could hear brother Mark whistling as he worked in the woodshed. It was easier to work out there. When I sat very still two birds went on with nest building in a bush a dozen feet away. I suppose I looked about a great deal. But at length remembering that if I was to see the little Crabs I must finish that second patch, I bent over and sewed industriously on the little squares."

"The sunlight was suddenly shut off from my work. Looking up I saw before me an Indian in blanket, buckskin and moccasins. I suppose I should have screamed if I had had breath to do it. I opened my mouth, and no sound came. I had several times seen some of the few Indians that remained in our neighborhood, but always when my parents were with me—and from a safe distance. I had been told repeatedly that they would not hurt any one. But people were still living in our neighborhood who had gone through times of Indian warfare, and I had heard tales of daring and danger. The Indian stared at me, and I stared at him. Neither moved nor spoke for a moment. Then my eyes, traveling over the handsome blanket that he wore draped from his shoulders, spied a big three-cornered rent.

"I pointed to it, and said: 'I will mend your shawl!'

"The Indian looked where I pointed. He took off his blanket, and laid it across my knees, with the rent uppermost. I threaded my needle with dark thread and, taking neat little stitches I sewed up the hole. The Indian stood with folded arms, and watched. My terrified thoughts raced on. What would he do when I was through? Would he carry me away and make me become a little Indian girl? I had heard of such things happening. What he did do surprised me very much. When the last stitch was taken he bent over and inspected the work.

"'Good!' he said in a loud emphatic voice. 'Thanks!' Then, draping his blanket around him, he went on down the wood path."

"I waited until he was quite out of sight and then raced home. But I didn't tell any one what had happened. I was sure Mark would laugh at me and say he wouldn't be afraid of the Indians."

"A few days later when I came downstairs in the morning I heard my mother talking to some one at the door."

"'Emily, come here, and see if you know what he means,' she said, turning to me."

"I ran to the door. There was the tall Indian whose blanket I had mended. Oh dear! Oh, dear! Had he come back for me after all? I clung tightly to my mother."

"'Heap good little squaw!' said the Indian; and he held out to me a wonderful beaded bag. (You've seen it in my treasure box.) I took it and shyly murmured, 'thank you'—at last realizing that this tall, savage looking man was my friend."

"'But why do you give it to her?' asked my mother."

"In answer the Indian spread out his blanket, and as I looked at the neatly mended place I was sure even my mother must call that pretty good sewing."

"'She make hole no more!' said my Indian friend."

"Then he wrapped the blanket around him and went stepping softly down the path while my excited family demanded that I tell them the story."

"Did he ever come again?" cried Marjorie.

"Oh, yes, he came many times again. And perhaps sometime I will tell you some of the stories he told me. He was a lovely old man of the family of a once great chief. The rest of the tribe was gone, but he lingered in his old haunts. He had a wonderful dignity, and if we did him a favor, he felt that he must do something for us. I sewed for him more than once, but that first time was the only occasion when it seemed like an adventure."

It was little Muriel's first time in church, and she was somewhat awed by the solemnity of the occasion. "Mamma," she whispered during a brief pause in the service, "does the minister live here, or does he come down from heaven every Sunday?"—Boston Transcript.

A FLOWER STORY

One year long ago—so the fairies say—winter stayed so late that it began to look as if spring were never coming again. At last Mother Nature made up her mind that the flowers, at least, must do their part. She hurried to the pussy-willow tree and said, "It is cold, I know, but you must let your buds come out. Quick, buds, quick! Out of your hiding-places!"

So out popped the willow buds and threw open their brown coats as they came. The sun was shining at that moment, and the air was not so cold; but soon a north wind rushed down the valley, and the buds shivered.

"Oh! Oh!" they wept. "The tears are freezing on our faces."

Mother Nature, who was busy talking to some of the other flowers, heard the pussy-willow buds and hurried to her store-house. There she found a pile of gray fur. Snip, snip went her flying scissors, and soon every little willow bud was toasting warm in a new fur coat.

But scarcely had the pussy-willow bud been attended to before there was a sound of sobbing down in the marsh.

"Dear, dear!" cried a hundred little voices in chorus. "It is so chilly in the march! Our ears are aching!"

"My poor shunk-cabbage!" said Mother Nature. So she rushed off to her store-house again. There was no more fur there, but she found some reddish-brown leather, and out of that she made hoods. When the homely little skunk-cabbages got those neat hoods on they were comfortable and from a distance almost good-looking.

But soon cries of distress came from the hillside. The hepaticas were shivering and calling in the sharp wind, and were so cold that they were blue. Once again Mother Nature hurried to her storehouse. There was no more fur and no more leather; but at last she found in a corner some soft wool. Five minutes later the shivering bodies of the hepaticas were wrapped in silky wool.

When the bloodroot came peeping through the dry leaves Mother Nature did not know what to do. The sun was growing warmer, but the breeze was still cold, and the bloodroot began to shake. The fur, the leather, and the wool were all gone, and there was nothing else to use.

"You will just have to cuddle up in your own leaves," Mother Nature said.

So the bloodroot wrapped its leaves round itself like a cape and stood up sturdily.

Down in the woods the anemones began to shake out their delicate pink muslin petticoats, and on green banks the violets came curtsying in pretty purple hoods.

"O my stars!" said Mother Nature to herself. "Suppose they catch cold! I haven't a single scrap to cover them with, and they can do nothing for themselves."

But then suddenly she noticed that the air had grown so warm that the latest comers had no reason to complain. Spring had come at last.

"Why did you wait so long?" asked Mother Nature.

"It was the fault of the sun and the wind," Spring answered. "They would not do as they should. But when they saw that all the flower children had come of their own accord the sun and the wind were ashamed and began to hurry."

"Then it's just as well that I called the flowers out," Mother Nature said. "But I hope I shall never have to do it again.—Gertrude I. Felts, in The Youth's Companion."

Marriages and Deaths

DEATHS

CAPT. MALCOLM HUGH McBRYDE

On September 20, 1922, at Laurinburg, N. C., there passed from earth to life everlasting, Capt. Malcolm Hugh McBryde, aged 86 years and five months.

Death was but an incident to this man of God whose delight was in the law of the Lord, who pondered deeply its truths, who walked in faith, who lived nobly and served well his day and generation, and who waited patiently the summons of his Lord to come up higher. In him was amply fulfilled the scripture, "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness."

He was born in February, 1834, at the McBryde ancestral home, in Scotland County, a son of Daniel McBryde. From the same godly home came the late Rev. D. D. McBryde, brother of Captain McBryde, and for many years pastor of Sardis and other Presbyterian Churches in Cumberland County. Malcolm McBryde attended school at Laurinburg Male and Female Academy, then entered Davidson College, from which he graduated with honor. During the Civil War he served his country with bravery and distinction as captain of the Scotch Greys, a famous fighting unit composed largely of men from what is now Scotland County. His company is said to have been the best drilled and trained in the entire regiment. After the war he engaged in the mercantile business at Wadesboro and Linden, N. C., for a short time. But for the most of his life he was engaged in farming together with his brother, the late J. A. McBryde. He was a successful farmer and business man and helped to promote and build Dickson Cotton Mill, at Laurinburg.

Captain McBryde had a genius for invention. The famous McBryde Cotton Press was the child of his brain and workmanship. It was considered the best device in ginning for a long period and was used extensively throughout the cotton belt. He also made plans for a machine to compress cotton into square bales but it was never applied in practice.

In youth, he united with Laurel Hill Presbyterian Church, of which he was a lifelong member, faithful and interested in the work of the church. He was a man of deep convictions and real piety and lived the principles of his faith. Modest and retiring by nature, he was a deep student and thinker, and an omnivorous reader. He not only knew the classics and standard literature, but he also kept abreast with events and movements of the times and was a most interesting conversationalist. Some men in old age become pessimistic and critical, seeing only the dark side of things, but not so with Captain McBryde. He was an optimist profoundly convinced that progress is marching forward. His optimism was grounded in profound faith in God and His purposes as revealed in scripture. Few men are better versed in Bible truth than was he. Years ago, he committed to memory the Shorter Catechism, and many portions of Scripture, especially the Psalms and Romans. To the very end, he studied the Bible with painstaking care. At the age of 86, with snow-white hair, with halting, feeble step, and impaired eyesight, his memory of Scripture was perfect. Often he has quoted to the writer the whole of the fifth chapter of Romans, and discussed the truths and doctrines therein. He remarked that he had stored his memory with Scripture passages against just such an emergency as failing eyesight, when he might no longer be able to read.

Captain McBryde was a man of dignity and quiet bearing, which to a stranger might have passed for sternness, but in reality concealed a tender and generous heart. It is said that he gave well over a tithe of his yearly income to benevolences and charity, and few were the worthy calls of the church at large to which he did not generously respond. He hated ostentation, and let not his left hand know what his right hand did in deeds of kindness. In his will he made bequests to various benevolences, $5,000 each to Davidson College and Flora Macdonald, $1,000 each to the Southern Presbyterian Church and to Barium Springs Orphanage, and smaller bequests to Laurel Hill and Laurinburg Churches.

MITCHELL COLLEGE (Junior)

(Founded 1856 by Concord Presbytery)

Two years of standard, accredited college work—courses leading to Baccalaureate degrees—Excellent department of Music—Certificate courses in Home Economics and Secretarial.

Mitchell Academy — An accredited High School, with standard and flexible courses.

Bible teaching emphasized throughout.

Teacher Training courses for secular and Sunday Schools.

Catalog on application.

W. F. Hollingsworth, Pres.
Statesville, N. C.

Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.

A High Grade Institution for the Education of Young Women

Christian Ideals constantly held before the Students; Christian Characters in the chair of each Department; Five Teachers with M. A. Degree; Two Teachers with Ph.D. Degree; Christian Atmosphere permeating the Student Body.

Location, the very best: Myers Park, Charlotte. Equipment rapidly reaching standard requirements. Curriculum equal to that of any institution in the State. Expenses very moderate indeed, considering advantages offered and work done.

Our Motto: "Christian Women for Christian Homes." Send us your daughter, support us in our administration and instruction, and we will return a thoroughly developed and fully refined Christian woman.

For catalogue and other information, write

WILLIAM H. FRAZER, President
Box 300
Charlotte, N. C.

Story and Incident

HIS MOTHER'S SERMON

A MOTHERS' DAY STORY

From "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush,"
by Ian MacLaren.

He was an ingenious lad, with the callow simplicity of a theological college still untouched, and had arrived on the preceding Monday at the Free Kirk manse with four cartloads of furniture and a maiden aunt. For three days he roamed from room to room in the excitement of house-holding, and made suggestions which were received with hilarious contempt; then he shut himself up in his study to prepare the great sermon, and his aunt went about on tiptoe. During meals on Friday he explained casually that his own wish was to preach a simple sermon, and that he would have done so had he been a private individual, but as he had held the MacWhannel scholarship, a deliverance was expected by the country. He would be careful and say nothing rash, but it was due to himself to state the present position of theological thought, and he might have to quote once or twice from Ewald.

His aunt was a saint, with that firm grasp of truth, and tender mysticism, whose combination is the charm of Scottish piety, and her face was troubled. While the minister was speaking in his boyish complacency, her thoughts were in a room where they had both stood, five years before, by the death-bed of his mother.

He was broken that day, and his sobs shook the bed, for he was his mother's only son and fatherless, and his mother, brave and faithful to the last, was bidding him farewell.

"Dinna greef like that, John, nor break yir hert, for it's the will o' God, and that's aye best.

"Here's my watch and chain," placing them beside her son, who could not touch them, nor would lift his head, "and when ye feel the chain about yir neck it will mind ye o' yir mother's arms.

"Ye'll no forget me, John, I ken that weel, and I'll never forget you. I've loved ye here, and I'll love ye yonder. Th'ill no be an 'oor when I'll no pray for ye, and I'll ken better what to ask than I did here; sae dinna be comfortless."

Then she felt for his head and stroked it once more, but he could not look up nor speak.

"Ye'll follow Christ, and gin He offers ye His cross, ye'll no refuse it, for He aye carries the heavy end Himself'. He's guided yir moother a' thae years, and been as guid as a husband since yir father's death, and He'll hold me fast tae the end. He'll keep ye too, and, John, I'll be watchin' for ye. Ye'll no fail me," and her poor cold hand that had tended him all his days tightened on his head.

But he could not speak, and her voice was failing fast.

"I canna see ye noo, John, but I know yir there, and I've just one other wish. If God calls ye to the ministry, ye'll no refuse, an' the first day ye preach in yir ain kirk, speak a gude word for Jesus Christ, an', John, I'll hear ye that day, though ye'll no see me, and I'll be satisfied."

A minute after she whispered, "Pray for me," and he cried, "My mother, my mother!"

It was a full prayer, and left nothing unasked of Mary's Son.

"John," said his aunt, "your mother is with the Lord," and he saw death for the first time, but it was beautiful with the peace that passeth all understanding.

Five years had passed, crowded with thought and work, and his aunt wondered whether he remembered that last request, or indeed had heard it in his sorrow.

"What are you thinking about, aunt? Are you afraid of my theology?"

"No, John' it's no that, laddie, for I ken 'ye'll say what ye believe to be true, without fear o' man," and she hesitated.

"Come, out with it, auntie: you're my only mother now, you know," and the minister put his arm around her, "as well as the kindest, bonniest, goodest auntie ever man had."

Below his student self-conceit he was a good lad, and sound of heart.

"Shame on you, John, to make a fule o' an auld dune body, but ye'll no come round me wi' yir flattery. I ken ye ower weel," and as she caught the likeness in his face, her eyes filled suddenly.

"What's the matter, auntie? Will ye no tell me?"

"Dinna be angry wi' me, John, but a'm concerned aboot Sabbath, for a've been praying ever syne ye were called to Drumtochty that it might be a great day, and that I might see ye comin' tae yir people, laddie, wi' the beauty o' the Lord upon ye, according tae the auld prophecy: 'How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace,'" and again she stopped.

"Go on, auntie, go on," he whispered; "say all that's in yir mind."

"It's no for me tae advise ye, who am only a simple auld woman, who ken's naethin' but her Bible and the Catechism, and it's no that a'm feared for the new views, or aboot yir faith, for I aye mind that there's mony things the Speerit hes still tae teach us, and I ken weel the man that follows Christ will never lose his way in any thicket. But it's the fould, John, a'm anxious aboot the flock o' sheep the Lord hes given ye tae feed for Him."

She could not see his face, but she felt him gently press her hand, and took courage.

"Ye maun mind, laddie, that they're no clever and learned like what ye are, but just plain country fould, ilka ane wi' his ain temptation, an' a' sair trachled wi' mony cares o' this world. They'll need a clear word tae comfort their herts and show them the way everlasting. Ye'll say what's richt, nae doot o' that, and a'body 'ill be pleased wi' ye, but, oh, laddie, ye sure ye say a guide word for Jesus Christ."

The minister's face whitened, and his arm relaxed. He rose hastily and went to the door, but in going out he gave his aunt an understanding look, such as passes between people who have stood together in a sorrow. The son had not forgotten his mother's request.

He asked his aunt to have worship with the servant, for he must be alone in his study.

It was a cheerful room in the daytime, with its southern window, through which the minister saw the roses touching the very grass and dwarf apple tree lining the garden walls; there was also a western window that he might watch each day close. It was a pleasant room now, when the curtains were drawn, and the light of the lamp fell on the books he loved, and which bade him welcome. One by one he had arranged the hard-bought treasures of student days in the little book-case, and had planned for himself that sweetest of pleasures, an evening of desultory reading. But his books went out of mind as he looked at the sermon shining beneath the glare of the lamp and demanding judgment. He had finished its last page with honest pride that afternoon, and had

WANTED—Young women to take nurses' training. Good course offered. Unusual advantages. Write to Superintendent of Nurses, West-cook Sanatorium, Richmond, Va.

WANTED — Pupil nurses for the Rocky Mount Sanitarium, at Rocky Mount, N. C. High School graduates preferred. For further information, apply to the Superintendent.

TYPEWRITERS

New and Rebuilt
For Sale, Rent or Exchange
S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

6%

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.
For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

declaimed it, facing the southern window, with a success that amazed himself. His hope was that he might be kept humble, and not called to Edinburgh for at least two years; and now he lifted the sheets with fear. The brilliant opening, with its historical parallel, this review of modern thought reinforced by telling quotations, would not deliver. For the audience had vanished, and left one careworn, but ever beautiful face, whose gentle eyes were waiting with a yearning look. Twice he crushed the sermon in his hands, and turned to the fire his aunt's care had kindled, and twice he repented and smoothed it out. What else could he say now to the people? and then in the stillness of the room he heard a voice, "Speak a gude word for Jesus Christ."

Next minute he was kneeling on the hearth, and pressing the magnum opus, that was to shake Drumtacht, into the heart of the red fire, and he saw, half-smiling and half weeping, the impressive words "Semitic environment" shrivel up and disappear. As the last black flake fluttered out of sight, the face looked at him again, but this time the sweet brown eyes were full of peace.

The moon flooded his bedroom with silver light, and he felt the presence of his mother. His bed stood ghostly with its white curtains, and he remembered how every night his mother knelt by its side in prayer for him. He is a boy once more, and repeats the Lord's Prayer, then he cries again, "My mother! my mother!" and an indescribable contentment fills his heart.

His prayer next morning was very short, and when he turned, his aunt said: "Ye will get yir sermon, and it will be worth hearing."

"How did ye know?"

But she only smiled, "I heard you pray." When he shut himself into the study that Saturday morning, his aunt went into her room above, and he knew she had gone to intercede for him.

An hour afterwards he was pacing the garden in such anxious thought that he crushed with his foot a rose lying on the path, and then she saw his face suddenly lighten, and he hurried to the house, but first he plucked a bunch of forget-me-nots. In the evening she found them on his sermon.

Two hours later—for still she prayed and watched in faithfulness to mother and son—she observed him come out and wander round the garden in great joy. He lifted up the soiled rose and put it in his coat; he released a butterfly caught in some mesh; he buried his face in fragrant honeysuckle. Then she understood

WANTED—Settled white woman as working housekeeper in family of two grown women. $15-$20 per month and home. Permanent if satisfactory. Write at once to Box 339, Hendersonville, N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building. Louisville, Ky.

Influenza

Physicians advise keeping the bowels open as a safeguard against Grippe or Influenza. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment
Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.
Salisbury, N. C.
Anything in... CEMETERY WORK
Satisfaction our Motto
A card will bring full information.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

A FRIEND WANTS ADMITTANCE INTO YOUR HOME

During the week of May 6-13, This Friend will make A SPECIAL Request to be allowed to Come Into Your Home and BRING YOU MONTHLY A MESSAGE FROM

The WHOLE Work
Of the Church

THE NAME OF THIS FRIEND IS, THE MISSIONARY SURVEY

We are hoping that during SURVEY WEEK the Woman's Auxiliary of every local Church will make an active canvass to secure at least one subscriber to every five church members, which entitles a Church to be placed on the Survey Honor Roll.

HOW TO PLAN AND CONDUCT THE CAMPAIGN

1. Secure from your pastor a complete list of the heads of the families of your Church—the list used in the "Every Member Canvass."
2. Divide this list into groups according to the section of the city or community in which they live.
3. Select the members who are to make the canvass.
4. Call a meeting of these workers and bring the above named list with you.
5. Pair off the workers, giving to each pair a group of names for whom they are responsible.

Remember that two persons working together can secure much better results than when working separately. The best results can also be secured by allworking at the same time. Work up a little rivalry among the canvassers and see which "pair" can bring in the most subscriptions.

Don't wait for some one else to become enthusiastic. You start the movement. READ THE SURVEY AND KEEP INFORMED. ENCOURAGE OTHERS TO DO LIKEWISE BY SPEAKING A GOOD WORD FOR IT AND BY ASKING FOR THEIR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

SAMPLE COPIES SENT FREE ON REQUEST
In Clubs, 75 cents per year; Single Subscriptions, $1.00

THE MISSIONARY SURVEY

BOX 1166

RICHMOND, VA.

$200.00 PRIZE

Washington, D. C. Apr. 16.

Two hundred dollars will be given as a prize to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for No.'s 33 and 34, the new trains between New Orleans and New York, to be inaugurated on Sunday, April 29th, by The Southern-Railway System, the Louisville and Nashville, The West Point Route and the Pennsylvania Railway, according to announcement made today by W. H. Taylor, Passenger Traffic Manager of The Southern, Washington, D. C., to whom all suggestions should be sent. The prize will be awarded after all suggestions have been considered by a committee of officers of the interested lines.

R. H. GRAHAM

Division Passenger Agent
Southern Railway System
Charlotte, N. C.

that his heart was full of love, and was sure that it would be well on the morrow.

When the bell began to ring, the minister rose from his knees and went to his aunt's room to be robed, for this was a covenant between them.

When she had given the last touch, and he was ready to go, a sudden seriousness fell upon them.

"Kiss me, auntie."

"For your mother, and her God be with you," and then he went through the garden and underneath the honeysuckle and into the kirk, where every Free Churchman in Drumtachtly that could get out of bed, and half the Established Kirk, were waiting in expectation.

It is impossible to analyse a spiritual effect, because it is largely an atmosphere, but certain circumstances assisted. One was instantly prepossessed in favour of a young minister who gave out the second paraphrase at his first service, for it declared his filial reverence and won for him the blessing of a cloud of witnesses. No Scottish man can ever sing,

"God of our fathers, be the God
Of their succeeding race,"

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A. B., B. S., B. M. Degrees

Catalog on Request

Address the Registrar

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach. R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship.

For catalogue and information, write--

Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President,

Clinton, S. C.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA
SUMMER SCHOOL

Thirty-Sixth Session : : June 18-September 7, 1923

First Term, June 18-July 28--Second Term, July 27-September 7

Standard Courses in the Regular Departments of the University. Cultural and Professional Courses leading to the A. B. and A.M. Degrees. High Class Recreational Features and Entertainments of an educational character. Able Faculty of Trained Specialists. Spacious campus, modern library and laboratory facilities, delightful climate, highest service. Low cost. Write for complete announcement.

N. W. WALKER, Director : : : : Chapel Hill, N. C.

WHERE TO GO TO COLLEGE?

There are three major considerations that determine the greatness, or the potential greatness, of an educational institution.

1. The Plant, including grounds, library, classrooms, laboratories, and apparatus.
2. The Faculty.
3. The Student body and its democratic standards.

In addition to the thirty-four buildings already on the campus, the State of North Carolina is this year putting $1,650,000 into new buildings and equipment. The library of 150,000 volumes is spending $24,000 annually for books and periodicals. Eight thousand volumes were received in 1922-1923, and one thousand and five magazines and learned journals were received on subscription.

The Faculty numbers 128 of the country's best scholars. Speaking of the student body of the University, Mr. Sherwood Eddy, of Yale University, who has spent the major portion of his life studying in four continents, said, that with one exception, it was the most seriously thoughtful and democratic group of students he had ever known.

Registration for fall quarter, September 25, 26, 1923.

For further information address

The Secretary to the President
UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C.

OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE OAK RIDGE, NORTH CAROLINA
T. E. Whitaker, President

Founded in 1852. Military. Courses thoroughly covering Literature, Science, Book-keeping, Short-hand, Typewriting, and Music. Eight buildings; electric lights, steam heat and shower baths. 350 acres in campus, athletic grounds, orchards, and farms. Beautiful lake nestling between hills covered with virgin forests. Healthful—1040 feet above sea level; accessible location near Greensboro. Same, moral influence. Costs reasonable. $425 for the year. Fall session opens first Tuesday in September each year. Write for illustrated catalogue. Address OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE, Oak Ridge, N. C.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

STATEMENT

HOME SECURITY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

DURHAM, N. C.

Condition December 31, 1922, as Shown by Statement Filed

Amount of Capital paid up in cash	$ 50,000.00
Amount of Ledger Assets December 31st of previous year, $93,-
571.31; Total	93,570.31
Premium Income, $326,816.52; Miscellaneous, $3,812.88; Total	330,629.40
Disbursements—To Policyholders, $115,002.46; Miscellaneous, $187,-
985.94; Total	302,988.40
Business written during year—Number of Policies, 44,853; Amount	4,490,291.00
Business in force at end of year—Number of Policies, 48,398;
Amount	4,723,595.50

Assets

Mortgage Loans on Real Estate	$ 105,650.00
Net Value of Bonds and Stocks	10,000.00
Cash	1,661.31
Interest and Rents due and accrued	1,297.25
Premiums uncollected and deferred	2,439.00
All other Assets, as detailed in statement	20,235.89

Total $ 141,283.45
Less Assets not admitted $ 8,725.00

Total admitted Assets $ 132,558.45

Liabilities

Net Reserve, including Disability Provision	$ 78,479.00
Policy Claims	400.00
Premiums paid in advance	2,800.38
Estimated Amount payable for Federal, State, and other Taxes	600.00

Total amount of all Liabilities, except Capital $ 82,278.38

Capital paid up in Cash $50,000.00
Unassigned funds (surplus) 280.07 $ 50,280.07

Total Liabilities $ 132,558.45

Business in the State of North Carolina During 1922

	No.	Amount
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State in force
December 31st of previous year	44,677	$4,126,142.00
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State issued during the year	44,853	4,490,291.00
Total	89,529	$8,616,433.00
Deduct ceased to be in force during the year	41,131	3,892,837.50

Policies in force December 31st 48,398 $4,723,595.50
Losses and Claims incurred during year 599 $ 38,464.00

Total 599 $ 38,464.00
Losses and Claims settled during the year, in full, 38,464.00 599 $ 38,464.00

President, A. M. Moize; Secretary, T. C. Worth; Treasurer, T. C. Worth; Home Office, Durham, N. C.; Attorney for Service: Stacey W. Wade, Insurance Commissioner, Raleigh, N. C.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
Insurance Department

(Seal)

Raleigh, March 2, 1923.

I, STACEY W. WADE, Insurance Commissioner, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct abstract of the statement of the Home Security Life Insurance Company, of Durham, N. C. filed with this Department, showing the condition of said Company on the 31st day of December, 1922.

Witness my hand and official seal the day and date above written.
STACEY W. WADE,
Insurance Commissioner.

with a dry heart. It satisfied me at once that the minister was of a fine temper when, after a brave attempt to join, he hid his face and was silent. We thought none the worse of him that he was nervous, and two or three old people who had suspected self-sufficiency took him to their hearts when the minister concluded the Lord's prayer hurriedly, having omitted two petitions. But we knew it was not nervousness which made him pause for ten seconds after praying for widows and orphans, and in the silence which fell upon us the Divine Spirit had free access. His youth commended him, since he was also modest, for every mother had come with an inarticulate prayer that the "puir laddie wud dae weel on his first day, and him only twenty-four." Texts I can never remember, nor, for that matter, the words of sermons; but the subject was Jesus Christ, and before he had spoken five minutes I was convinced, who am outside dogmas and churches, that Christ was present. The preacher faded from before one's eyes, and there rose the figure of the Nazarene, best lover of every human soul, with a face of tender patience such as Sarto gave the Master in the Church of the Annunziata, and stretching out His hands to old folk and little children as He did, before His death, in Galilee. His voice might be heard any moment, as I have imagined it in my lonely hours by the winter fire or on the solitary hills—soft, low, and sweet, "Come unto Me . . . and I will give you rest."

The elders, one by one, gripped the minister's hand in the vestry, and, though plain, homely men, they were the godliest in the glen; but no man spake save Burnbrae.

"I a' but lost ae fairm for the Free Kirk, and I wud hae lost ten tae be in the Kirk this day."

His aunt could only meet him in the study, and when he looked on her his lips quivered, for his heart was wrung with one wistful regret.

"Oh, auntie, if she had only been spared to see this day, and her prayers answered."

But his aunt flung her arms around his neck.

"Dinna be cast down, laddie, nor be unbelievin'. Yir mither has heard every word, and is satisfied, for ye did it in remembrance o' her, and you was yir mither's sermon."

N. C. State College of Agriculture and Engineering
SUMMER SESSION JUNE 12th to JULY 25th

Courses for teachers holding standard State Certificates, and for graduates of Standard High Schools. Courses giving College Credit for graduates of Standard High Schools. Cotton Classing courses. Catalogue upon application. Numbers limited to 1050. Apply for Reservation at once to
W. A. WITHERS, Director :: :: Raleigh, North Carolina

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds

Ideal Surroundings

Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address

Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D.

Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad

BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen Ar.	45	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	49	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:38 pm	f 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	s 3:05 pm	s 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	s 9:53 am	19	Raeferd	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	s 1:25 pm
f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	s 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	s 12:55 pm
f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jet.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	s 12:33 pm
f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
11:30 am	s 11:15 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	s 4:45 pm	s 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class.
All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

World's Best Roofing at Factory Prices

"Reo" Chester Metal Shingles, V-Crimp, Corrugated, Standing Seam, Painted or Galvanized Roofings, Sidings, Wallboard, Paints, etc., direct to you at Rock-Bottom Factory Prices. Positively greatest offer ever made.

Edwards "Reo" Metal Shingles
cost less; outlast three ordinary roofs. No painting or repairs. Guaranteed rot, fire, rust, lightning proof. Send for samples and free roofing book.

Edwards Ready Made Buildings
Send for the Edwards Catalog of "Superior" Ready-Made Buildings, showing a complete line of houses, bungalows, barns, wood garages, poultry houses, etc., all at money-saving factory prices. These buildings are not merely "ready-cut" but actually ready built, and represent a wonderful money-saving.

READY MADE

Let Edwards Save You Money

Be Sure to State Which Books You Want
—Roofing and Free Samples; Ready-Made Buildings; or Metal Garages. Postal or letter brings one or more of them FREE.

Free Roofing Book
Get our wonderfully low prices and free samples. We sell direct to you and save you all in-between roofing profits. Ask for Book No. 2373

LOW PRICED GARAGES
Lowest prices on Ready-Made Fire-Proof Steel Garages. Set up any place. Send postal for Garage Book showing styles.

FREE Samples & Roofing Book

THE EDWARDS MFG. CO.,
2323-2373 Pike St. Cincinnati, O.

The Value of Team Work Next Week - May 6 - 13

Pastors; Officers; S. S. Supts; Woman's Auxiliary---Your Co-operation next week---Missionary Survey Week---will easily put the Missionary Survey on a self supporting basis. We should have at least 50,000 copies in the homes of our people. The Magazine is absolutely indispensable.

The Woman's Auxiliary next week undertake a campaign to increase its circulation. Will you support them?

Dr. Robert Speers said: "Only concrete facts about our work and not money raising schemes, will build up an adequate sense of Stewardship." The Missionary Survey brings every month concrete facts about our Field and its Force. Our progressive Program depends upon intelligent Presbyterians. Help put this splendid Magazine in every home in your church, and every cause of the church will profit by it.

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

MAY 6-13

Chattanooga, Tennessee

MAY 6-13

(Write the Missionary Survey - Box 1176, Richmond, Va. Single Subscriptions

$1.00 per year; clubs of 5- 75c.)

WHY DRUGS FAIL

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from drinking Shivar, America's best stomach, liver and kidney Water. If you suffer with chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept the Springs liberal offer as printed below. Their records show that only two in a hundred, on the average, have reported "no benefit." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful Spring. Sign the following letter:

Shivar Springs,
Box 3H, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

Name _____
Address _____
Shipping Point _____
(Please write distinctly.)

The little volume that I published several years ago, "The Book of Revelation," is out of print. I should like to get several copies; and if anyone has a copy that he is willing to part with, I should like to have it. If he will send it to me and name the price, I will remit upon receipt of the book. G. F. Nicolassen, Oglethorpe University, Ga.

Sparkles

Keeping up to Date

A somewhat rapid city man, according to a story that is going the rounds, remarked to a farmer friend:

"Thursday we autoed to the country club and golfed till dark, then trolleyed back to town and danced till morning."

The farmer "got back" in this language:

"I've been havin' some time myself. Wednesday I muled to the cornfield and gee-hawed till sundown. Then I suppered till dark and piped till nine. Then I bedstedded till 5 o'clock, then breakfasted till it was time to go mulin' again."—Selected.

Give It Credit for That, Anyway

Another thing that may be said for prohibition is that it has a tendency to keep exiled royalty from choosing this country as a place of residence.—Indianapolis Star.

De Gush—"What would you prescribe for the ills of the world today?"

De Crush—"The Mosaic tablets."—Wayside Tales.

There was a young men of Kilpeacon,
Whose nose was as red as a beacon.

But by saying, "It's white,"

Twenty times, day and night,
He cured it, and died an archdeacon.
—Punch

"Doctor, can't you help my husband?"

"What's the matter with him?"

"Oh, he worries so."

"About what?"

"About the money. Can't you please do something for him?"

"I think I can. Send him to me; I'll relieve him of some of his trouble."—London Tit-Bits.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The STIEFF TONE

Is famous with three generations of music lovers. It has never been duplicated. It is the expression of a passion for perfection that has actuated three generations of piano makers.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. A. S. E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, enlightenment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A
Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

The "Old Hickory Jackson"

The most popular style of Rustic Hickory Rocker ever placed on the market. We have also the Chairs, Settees and Swings to match.

Write for "Rustic Hickory" furniture and "Leonard Cleanable" refrigerator booklets. We pay freight.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., MAY 9, 1923

No. 19

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
Bureau of Vacancy and Supply	1
Fair Play	1
Union Seminary Review—April, 1923	1
The Blessings of Prohibition	2
"Cheating the Junk-Pile"	2
An Important Correction	2
Revival in Home Mission Literature	2
The "W. C." Problem—A Good Solution	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Separation of Church and State—By Rev. W. H. Frazer, D.D.	3
North Carolina Young People's Conference Good News—By Rev. John M. Wells, D.D.	4
The Heart of the Home—By Emma A. Lente Oklahoma—Opportunity and Outlook—No 2 —By S. L. Morris	4
Religious Advertising—By T. E. S.	4
A Joint Agency on Christian Education	5
The Challenge of Christ—By L. S. Roe	5
Pre-Assembly Evangelistic Conference—By Homer McMillan	5
Things to Pray For	5
An Appreciation—By Dr Jas. I. Vance	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

BUREAU OF VACANCY AND SUPPLY

The Synod of Virginia and the Presbyteries of Winchester and Montgomery overtured the last Assembly to establish a Bureau of Vacancy and Supply, to correct, if possible, the evils of vacant churches and ministers without charge.

The Assembly appointed the following Committee to report at the approaching Assembly: Rev. R. F. Campbell, D.D., Rev. P. C. Clark, and ruling elder R. A. Dunn, a level-headed and conservative Committee.

We know them all intimately, and we have great confidence in their recommendations. As the changes contemplated are rather radical, we are concerned over the fact that though Dr. Campbell's report has been before the Church for some time, yet, as far as we know, there have been only two articles on the subject, each written by those closely concerned with its passage.

This Bureau of Vacancy and Supply has been functioning in the Northern Church for some time, and, if we may judge from criticisms and complaints in the Church papers of that section, it has not been an unmixed blessing. These complaints, however, do not necessarily prove its worthlessness, because the complainers are generally the disappointed ones, and from what we know of mankind in general, there must be among ministers in every Church, men for whom no Committee on earth could find a suitable place. However, the fact that there is some friction in its workings, ought to make us look out for its weak points before the Church commits itself to it.

The strongest point in its favor is that it will do away, in a large measure, with candidating—at least such an advantage is claimed for it.

Then to the weaker churches it gives the benefit of a Committee that knows the field and can select the right men for each field.

If this Committee would confine its work to the weaker churches, all would go well.

Unfortunately it cannot discriminate, and we know that there are few churches able to pay the salary without help, that will submit to the dictation of a Committee as to the choice of a pastor.

In theory they are supposed so to do—but any one acquainted with the average session and congregation, know full well that such a supposition is a very rash one.

We could name churches in this Synod where it would not tend to peace for any Committee of Presbytery to dictate their choice.

Again, if we could always be sure of an ideal Committee, it might be better, but where would you find material for such a Committee?

Ministers, with all their good traits, are subject to prejudices, and unfortunately petty jealousies are not unknown among us.

In the complaints against the working of the system in our Sister Church, North, we have noticed that the charge of prejudice and jealousy seems the common charge advanced. That the present system has its objections we all know, and that there is much waste of good men and checking of work at critical times, no one will deny.

We have to balance the evils against the gains, and then vote.

It may, however be well to note that the drift in our Church seems to be towards centralization of power.

is gradually being taken from the individual churches and vested in the hands of a few—with the result that the only work of the Assembly seems to be to endorse what the Committees have already done.

Democracy has its evils, but the same is true of an oligarchy.

FAIR PLAY

We hold no brief for the Ku Klux Klan, nor do we propose to defend it as some have done, and, as it tends to bring the laws of the land into disrepute, we feel that it should be condemned by all good men. Madame Roland once lamented that in the name of liberty many crimes were committed, and now in our day we see that in the name of the Ku Klux Klan many crimes are also committed, or at least, are attributed to these men who so often take in hand the execution of our laws.

Whether guilty of all that is attributed to them, or not, it is always a dangerous practice for any set of men, however pure their motive, to assume voluntarily the office of judge, jury and executioner. That they should have as the peculiar objects of their attention Catholics and negroes, does not the more recommend them to the loyal citizens of this country.

The same objections we have just mentioned can be brought against the Knights of Columbus, because however much they may claim that they are a social and educational organization, the fact remains that no one is deceived by such claims. During the war they carried on a persistent campaign against the Y. M. C. A. and used so skillfully some of the Association's blunders, that to this day it is in bad repute with the overseas men. This organization, however, represents a large vote, especially in states where the Catholic population is large, as is the case in Louisiana, which accounts for the fact that Governor Parker, of Louisiana, according to the New York Times, has announced that he will not appoint to office any man who is a member of the Klan, having in mind the fact that the Klan was against the Catholic Church. No one could object to this platform, if he would also include the Knights of Columbus, because they war against the Protestant Church. This is shown by the call given them by the Pope to prevent the Methodist Church of this country from building a college on a hill in Rome overlooking the Vatican.

We could give many more instances of their activity in the field of politics, but this is sufficient. We only plead for fair play, equal treatment for the K. K. K. and the K. C.

UNION SEMINARY REVIEW—APRIL, 1923

The last number of this Review, that of April, is one of unusual merit.

Dr. Parke Flournoy who is a specialist in that line has a valuable article on "The Bible and the Spade."

Dr. A. W. Blackwood contributes a readable paper on "The Delivery of the Sermon." Every young preacher, and the old ones too, for that matter, would add to his efficiency in the pulpit by a careful study of this article.

Dr. A. F. Carr writes on "Effectual Prayer," and Dr. P. B. Hill discusses the duty of the Church with regard to its youth.

J. F. Taylor's article is entitled "Companion with Christ," while Dr. B. F. Lacy continues his studies of the "Spoken Messages of Paul," this being the third.

Dr. Edward Mack writes on "The Ethical Messages of the Old Testament," and Rev. J. P. Smith, of Brazil, out of his long experience with Romanism, gives some reasons why it should be studied. This Review fully maintains its high standard of excellence.

THE BLESSINGS OF PROHIBITION

There are many who refuse to recognize these blessings, and to whom the claim that the country has been benefited by prohibition is only to add fuel to the flame of their wrath. One of their favorite arguments is to say that the cost of enforcing the prohibition laws will in the end be the cause of their repeal.

They recite the cost of the army of officials necessary, the loss in revenue to the Government, and the general demoralization of the people.

According to the figures of the Government only $9,250,000 was appropriated by Congress for the purpose of enforcing this law.

Nine and one-quarter million dollars is a large sum we admit, but $14,121,209 is much larger, and that amount is what the Government received from fines and sale of property seized by prohibition officers and levied by the courts of the land.

If a balance of $4,871,209 to our credit is any proof of losing money, we would like to exchange places with the Government.

We confess that the enforcement of the prohibition laws is attended with more demoralization of the people of this country than is good for the future welfare of our land.

We can imagine how this decay of morals vexes the righteous soul of the opposers of prohibition, who love their country with such disinterested love. No doubt they are like Lot when he was in Sodom, and was "vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked."

Unlike Lot, however, they are not willing to separate themselves from the wicked, but are themselves the chief culprits.

They are the ones who bring about that contempt for law which they deplore.

If they could be eliminated, there would be no demoralization of morals.

But even if the present condition of morals be continued, there is less crime and less suffering than when nothing interfered with the sale of liquor.

One can but wonder at the control a liquor man must have over his countenance, when he does all he can to undermine respect for law, and then deplores that the laws are held in contempt and society is hurt.

"CHEATING THE JUNK-PILE"

Dutton Co., New York

Our methods of living today differ greatly from those of our grandmothers.

In nothing is the problem of mankind shown more than in the greater comfort in which man lives, to say nothing about the many conveniences.

Man's ingenuity has been exercised along many lines, to make life easier.

This is manifest in the washing of clothes and dishes, in the cooking of meals, and in the heating of our homes.

Once a family required a number of rooms, both within and without, with servants in abundance—now a small apartment, bedrooms, kitchen and store-room all on one floor is all that is necessary. It all seems to move along smoothly, but you have to know how, and that knowledge does not come intuitively, as swimming does to a fish or flying to a bird.

Here we have a book of 402 pages, by Ethel R. Peyser, which is a useful guide to the purchase and care of the best household equipment, to the best labor-saving machinery for the home. Here you will find data for the solution of every problem, whether of kitchen floor or weather strips; of vacuum cleaners or ice-cream freezers, or anything else pertaining to a well-kept house. Young couples compelled to economize will find this book invaluable, not only as a saving help, but also as a help to make the household machine run smoothly.

AN IMPORTANT CORRECTION

In our issue of April 25th, in giving the report of the Committee to prepare a Manual of Rules of Procedure for the General Assembly, through the carelessness of some one, it was stated that the General Assembly should "meet on the third Tuesday of May," when it should have been "the third Thursday of May."

REVIVAL IN HOME MISSION LITERATURE

Recently there seems to be a revival in home mission publications.

This is not necessarily due to what the Latins call "Cacothes Scribendi," the love of scribbling, but rather to the belief that there is persuasive power in the printed page, and that if our people are once brought face to face with the bare needs of the home fields, there will be money enough forth coming.

Mecklenburg and Wilmington Presbyteries have a monthly magazine, and now Concord Presbytery is sending out the first number of the Home Mission Bulletin, with Dr. J. M. Clark as editor.

The Home Mission Committee of the Synod of South Carolina have for some time been publishing a monthly magazine called "The Progressive Presbyterian," a name suggestive of that progressive Synod.

The Standard wishes them all "God-Speed," and hopes that the present subscribers will not grow weary in well-doing, and that it may not be said to them as it was to the Galatians, "Ye

BELIEF

If I were asked what I believe, I could not help but say,

The gentle and the simple creeds of boyhood's yesterday;

The tender faith in Bible things, the truth, the way, the right;

The Golden Rule to live one's life according to the light;

And everywhere the thought of God, that we are everywhere

The children of one Father's love and of his heavenly care.

If I were asked what I believe, I know my thoughts would go Back to the little child at prayer in the soft evenglow;

And I can think of nothing else so beautiful, so sweet,

As prayer beside my mother's knee, who tried to lead our feet

In paths of righteousness and truth where none could go astray

From that dear life of simple trust in childhood's yesterday.

If I were asked what I believe, I'd have to say, as then,

A simpler faith in God's command, a manlier trust 'mong men,

A clear and more abiding course t'ward that which men might call

The straight-out-from-the-shoulder faith of Peter and of Paul;

The teachings most of all that came to us in Sunday-school,

Way back in little childhood's land, the land of Golden Rule.

—Baltimore Sun.

did run well: who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?"

The start in any new enterprise is generally easy, but it takes grace and grit to stick to the job.

"Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

THE "W. C." PROBLEM—A GOOD SOLUTION

Rev. Dr. E. C. Murray, of St. Pauls, N. C., has laid before the Committee on Vacancy and Supply, and in this issue also, he presents to the Commissioners to the Assembly, a most excellent suggestion as to those of our ministers who are without a charge, either by reason of infirmities of body or old age and who are not able to secure a call to the regular pastorate.

Dr. Murray's plan is for this Committee, if the Assembly adopts their report, to add to it a provision that the Presbyterian Committee on Vacancy and Supply make use of these brethren by arranging for them to become the supply for the vacant pulpits until a regular pastor can be secured.

There are men now in our ministry, who by reason of the age limit are debarred from a call, yet by reason of experience are capable of excellent work for sometime yet. Instead then of being a burden upon the Church, they become partly self-supporting, and at the same time they will be free from that feeling of dependence so trying to men of spirit.

We hope that the Commissioners will read carefully what Dr. Murray has to say.

Devotional

"NEVER REFUSED GOD ANYTHING"

Florence Nightingale, looking back over a long life, said: "If I could tell you all, you would see how God has done all and I nothing. I have worked hard, very hard, that is all, and I have never refused God anything." "Never refused God anything"—there is the secret of the life of service she lived. She worked hard, very hard, but God had His way with her life. She worked hard, but it was God working in her His will and through her His work. If our lives as Christians are not wholly a success, it would be well to test them by Florence Nightingale's test—"I have never refused God anything."

THE SECRET OF ENDURANCE

Without vision, a man chooses like Lot, and his affinities are with the earth. As with Moses, so with us, we need to learn the secret of endurance. We live in circumstances where it is not easy to endure. In every one of us there is a consciousness of a dual nature; a lower and a higher, with its secret conflict, where character is at stake. There are life's sorrows and bereavements, experiences which admit of no explanation. We meet difficulties in Christian service. Those we try to help are hard to get along with; others are unresponsive. Thank God that the Arm upon which Moses leaned never fails. These words are true today. Are you cultivating the vision which sees God now? Do you keep fellowship with the Eternal? When the soul seeks God, all the infinitude of a Father's love goes out on its behalf.—Arthur T. Fowler.

THE WEAKER BROTHER

In the early days of the Christian Church there were persons in its membership who were very scrupulous regarding the eating of meats and the observance of special days and seasons. The broad-minded Apostle Paul gave counsel to the stronger Christians to deal kindly with those of less rugged faith, to respect their scrupulous notions and to practice self-denial for their sake.

Perhaps the weak brother may be regarded as an inconvenience, and even a mild nuisance at times. We look upon him as "queer" in his religious convictions and practices, petty and narrow in his conception of things. He may be so far behind the times that his modes of thought and action are more closely fitted to the period of James I than that of President Harding.

What is to be done with the weak brother? The Scripture does not say that he is to be permitted to run the church, to map out its programs and write its creeds and dictate its policies. But he is to be treated with consideration and charity. We are not to apply to him such uncomplimentary terms as "back number," or "old fogy," or "hopeless crank." Be generous toward him, and never forget that he is a brother in Christ Jesus, and at heart may be just as sincere and devoted as other followers of the Master.

We are to practice self-denial in consideration of the moral safety of others. Paul declared that if the eating of meat would cause his brother to violate his conscience and go wrong, he would eat no meat while the world standeth.

The "personal liberty" plea, of which we have heard a good deal, has a lot of selfishness in it. It is an expression of that egoistic, non-Christian philosophy, which considers only personal inclinations and desires, and is serenely willing to let the other fellow take care of himself if he can. Real religion says, "I will make daily sacrifices in order to help my weak brother keep straight and true." In the vast majority of cases the "personal liberty" argument is nothing more than the cry of incarnated selfishness. It is the mark of noble souls that they gladly help to carry the burdens of those who are weaker than themselves. In doing so they "fulfill the law of Christ."—United Presbyterian.

The sooner you get a child to be a law unto himself, the sooner you will make a man of him.

SEPARATION OF CHURCH AND STATE*

By Rev. W. H. Frazer, D.D.

This paper was read recently at the Presbyterian Ministers' Association at Charlotte, and is published by request.—Ed.

This question, as old as Protestantism, was introduced into the Presbyterian Ministers' Association by an action of the body to the effect that it would not overture the Legislature to reduce the age of consent, but rather that members of the organization, in the capacity of citizens, should write to members of the county delegation urging them to vote for such reduction of age limit. The writer of these lines stated at the time that, while the Presbyterian Ministers' Association has no ecclesiastical status, it is a company of ministers engaged in the study of, and work in behalf of, things that pertain to the Church of Jesus Christ; and while, strictly speaking, such action as was proposed would not be that of an ecclesiastical organization, it would at least have the semblance of being such to those on the outside.

It is the candid opinion of your writer that there are separate spheres to be occupied by Church and State, and that the nearer each organization conforms itself to its particular sphere and to the exercise of its particular duties, the happier the situation in every respect will be. The contention made is that the Church as such has no right to endorse a matter which lies within the province solely, or under the jurisdiction of, the State, and that an overture to the State, unless there has been some violation of the rights of individuals which would interfere with conscience, is in violation of the commission which the Church has received. We believe this to be true for the following reasons:

I. First of all, because of the nature and functions of the Church and of the State. The Church may be defined as the visible kingdom of Grace, and its mission in the world is to proclaim the Gospel of Jesus Christ unto a dying world, thereby gathering men into its folds, and through instruction and correction, the perfecting of the saints. It is distinctively a spiritual body, and "is the great instrumentality of the Saviour, through which, by His eternal Spirit, He dispenses salvation to the objects of His love." "Its ends are holiness and life to the manifestation of the riches and glory of Divine grace; and not simply morality, decency and good order, which may, to some extent, be secured without faith in the Redeemer or the transforming efficacy of the Holy Spirit." "The Church has a positive constitution in the Holy Scriptures, and she has no right to utter a single syllable upon any subject except as the Lord puts words in her mouth." The Church is a supernatural institution, founded in the facts of redemption, and is designed to realize the idea of grace. The Church aims at spiritual holiness. The State aims at social order. The Church is concerned with the invisible and the inward; the State is concerned with the visible and the outward. The power of the Church is exclusively spiritual; the power of the State is one of force and coercion. The constitution of the Church is a divine revelation. The constitution of the State is determined by human reason and the course of providential events." The Church has no right to dictate to the State, and the State has no right to prescribe a creed or a course for the Church.

II. The second reason why we believe that there should be a total separation of Church and State is that the statement of Jesus Christ can have no other interpretation than meaning that there are certain relations that we sustain to the Church and certain relations that we sustain to the State, and that we are to render unto the Church the things that pertain to its scope and authority, and that we are to render unto the State the things that pertain to its scope and authority. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

III. Because it is contrary to the very genius of the Word of God in the securing of a high state of morality. The Word distinctly teaches that it is to be gotten by the transforming power of the Word of God upon the heart, which is, after all, the fountal source from which all real morality flows, and then the expression of life from within. The Apostle Peter says (II Peter 1:14): "Whereby are given unto us exceedingly great and precious promises that by these we might become partakers of the Divine nature, having escaped the corruption which is in the world through lust." And, Paul: "Be not conformed unto this world (age) (that is, do not accept the moral standards without questioning them and proving them), but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

IV. Because of the expediency of the matter in the long run. It will be very easy to begin upon the border of apparent harmlessness, but when one violation has been made, it becomes easier for another and of a more sweeping kind; until, after awhile, as seems to be the case with some denominations, the Church Court is turned into an organization for memorializing and overturing a civil body, and apparently the strongest testimony that can be borne against an evil is that of appeal unto Caesar. Furthermore, such a practice is liable to create an impression of a conscious subordination of the Church and have a Caesar to presume to lord it over the heritage of God. It is a very dangerous thing to tamper with the dividing line which separates the Church of God from a human institution, which is the State.

Contributed

But, someone is ready to say, "Has the Church no effort to put forth in the presence of the social evils of the time? Has she not a testimony to bear against the corruption of morals and manners of men? Shall the commandments of God and of man be broken, and her voice be silent, simply because she is a spiritual body?" By no means, and she must not lower the force of her message or invalidate the testimony that she bears by putting herself in the prostrate form of one who appeals to force and to material or physical power. It is her mission to preach a Gospel which, under the power of the Holy Ghost, will touch the lives of men and make them shed the evil thoughts and desires which give rise to evil practises. It is her's to go down to the very fountain source and touch the heart-spring from which conduct flows, and change there the inward character which gives expression to the outward form. Furthermore, let the Christian conscience be aroused by the preaching of the highest form of purity and of spirituality so that men will become citizens of the State, and as such will bear their testimony against the evils which exist in human society, and will, as citizens, make laws and enforce them for the protection of those human relationships which they sustain in the State. That ecclesiastical organization or that individual minister or church which gives itself or himself unto the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, as the Church has been commissioned to preach it, and that does not intermeddle with politics or appeal to the force of a man-made institution, will find in the end that the work thus done will be more effective than it would be should that society or that individual express itself or himself in the other way. When the writer was just beginning his ministry in the city of Atlanta, there were two prominent pastors who were pursuing directly opposite methods in the ministerial labors. The one was the lamented Theron H. Rice, then pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church of that city. The other was a living minister, whose name is not used for that reason. Dr. Rice's ministry consisted in the preaching of the pure Gospel of Jesus Christ. He found his field in the application of Divine truth unto the hearts and consciences of men. The other pastor gave himself largely unto appealing to Caesar and the fighting of vice through the channel of organized government and the appealing to legislative bodies. With a Thor hammer, he struck at the evils of the social life of the city, and dramatically he cited policemen and courts to their duties and overtured legislative bodies to enact statutes against certain forms of crime. When the ministry of these two prominent men closed in their city, and the results began to project themselves into the after years, it was easy to trace the living, fruit-bearing effects of the preaching of the Gospel of Christ in the lives of hundreds of men and women whose consciences had been reached by the Gospel preacher. But, in the other case, although there were some vices repressed and some crimes exposed, these vices were bursting out in different forms and manifesting themselves in different circles after the hammer man had left his sphere of operation. The one selected the method of the Church of Christ, which is the method of eradication; and the other selected the method of man and man-made institutions, which is one of repression. By adhering to the spiritual proclamation of the Gospel, we are throwing the salt into the fountain which purifies the source from which the stream has its flow. By tampering with legislative bodies and appealing to the authority of the State, we are but trying to cleanse the stream, only to have other water of like nature flow in where we have tried to cleanse. From the classical mythology there come two illustrations that I believe will serve us here. When Ulysses sailed through the enchanted gulf, where he knew the sirens were to come forth and sing, we are told that he bound himself legs and arms to the girders of the ship, and sealed the ears of his crew; and when the sirens came forth and sang, he cut the skin in his attempt to liberate himself to rush into their embrace, and the blood ran in streams from his wounds; but when the Argonauts sailed through this enchanted valley, they had Orpheus, with the sweet music of his lute, and they had filled their souls with the entrancing music which he furnished; so, when the sirens came and sang, they called upon Orpheus to arise and play, and so superior was the music which he gave that the songs of the sirens fell flat upon their ears. If we have brought the hearts of men to see the force of truth and purity, there may be the appeal of evil, but it does not overcome the force of good; and the only conquering power that the Church can expect to wield is not that of restraint, as it is made by a human institution, but that of a spiritual character, as it comes from the teaching of the truth of God and the complying with the exhortation of the Apostle to overcome evil with good.

*NOTE—The first argument in this paper was taken largely from Dr. Thornwell's Ecclesiastical writings, and while the language may have been slightly changed, quotations should be thrown around the entire heading and credit given to him.

NORTH CAROLINA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE Davidson, June 12-19

For four years consecutively the Young People's Conference of the Synod of North Carolina, under the leadership of Synod's Committee and the Synodical Auxiliary Committee, has been one of the great annual events in the religious life of the young people of the Synod. It has brought together every year hundreds of the choicest spirits for seven days of instruction, vision and inspiration. Last year there were 286 in attendance, representing over 100 churches. We trust not one went away without a blessing and certainly none without happy memories and the eager desire to return. About 75 sought interviews with the Life-work leaders of the conference.

The Program for 1923

There will be classes for different groups and ages in Bible, in the new Home Mission and Foreign Mission study books, in Sunday School work and in Young People's Society work. The evening addresses will be inspirational in character. The vesper service out under the trees of the campus will be soul-stirring. Life decisions have been made under the spiritual influence of these services.

The young people's period conducted by the president of the Presbyterian Young People's League will be vitally interesting. During this period the young people give the history of the past year's work in their societies and make plans for 1923-24.

The Leadership

Rev. J. G. Garth, Synod's Chairman of Sunday School and Young People's Work; Mr. Claude T. Carr, Synod's Superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's Work; Rev. Roswell C. Long, Gastonia, platform manager; Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, Synodical Auxiliary Chairman of Young People's Work; Mrs. D. H. Shaw, Synodical Auxiliary Secretary of Young People's Work; Miss Mamie McElwee, Synodical Auxiliary Secretary of Y. P. Conference, and Student Work; Mr. Wilson W. Moore, President of Presbyterian Young People's League; Miss Elizabeth McDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of Presbyterian Young People's League.

Faculty

Bible—Rev. Robert Yost, D.D., King College, Bristol, Tenn.; Mrs. S. H. Askew, Bible teacher, Atlanta, Ga. Sunday School Work—Miss Virginia Nourse, Assembly's Training School, Richmond, Va. Home Mission Study Book—Rev. J. J. Murray, Wilmington, N. C. Foreign Mission Study Book—Rev. Woodrow Hassell, Japan. Young People's Society Work—Miss Julia Lake Skinner, White Bible School, New York. Music—Mr. Claude T. Carr, Mooresville, N. C.

Speakers

Rev. Homer McMillan, D.D., Secretary Field Work and Publicity of Assembly's Home Mission Committee; Rev. W. E. Hill, D.D., Fayetteville; Rev. C. M. Richards, D.D., Davidson; Rev. Samuel Glasgow, D.D., Knoxville, Tenn.; Rev. Robert Yost, D.D., Bible Teacher, King College; Rev. Flournoy Shepperson, D.D., Chester, S. C.; Rev. Woodrow Hassell, Marugame, Japan.

Recreation Leaders

Mr. Dwight M. Chalmers, Union Seminary, Richmond, and Miss Marion Moore, Assembly's Training School, Richmond.

Counselors

Rev. R. S. Arrowood, Miss Alma Headen, Orange Presbytery; Rev. R. C. Long, Miss Mary Ragan, Kings Mountain Presbytery; Rev. W. H. Goodman, Mrs. J. M. Harvey, Wilmington Presbytery; Rev. H. N. McDiarmid, Mrs. Walter Sheppard, Albemarle Presbytery; Rev. E. M. Craig, D.D., Miss Bessie Arrowood, Concord Presbytery; Rev. C. R. Bailey, Mrs. Chas. Rose, Fayetteville Presbytery; Rev. R. C. Clontz, Mrs. J. H. Suttentfield, Mecklenburg Presbytery.

General Information

Every delegate is expected to come for the opening session and to remain through the closing session. No visiting outside the conference grounds permitted until the last afternoon of the conference. The morning hours will be devoted to instruction, the afternoon to rest and recreation. There will be sports of all kinds on the college campus under trained leaders. Bring towels, soap, a pair of sheets and a pillow-case, also an extra sheet to be used as a curtain—dormitories have no shades. Parcel-post or bring a blanket.

Books

Each delegate should bring a Bible and note-book. Text-books can be secured after arrival at 50 cents each.

Expenses

A fee of $10.00 is paid as each delegate registers at Davidson, which covers all conference expenses. Find the transportation expense from your town or station. A small allowance should be made for extras.

Who Should Attend

(1) Boys and girls appointed by the session of their church as representatives of the Christian leadership of the young people of the church; those whom the Church is looking to as the future men and women into whose hands the Lord may commit the work of His Kingdom.

(2) Candidates for the ministry or volunteers for mission work may be delegates at large. The conference limit is four delegates from a church—ages 15 to 24 years.

Address all inquiries as to the conference and all applications for reservation to Mr. Claude T. Carr, Mooresville, N. C.

GOOD NEWS

By John M. Wells

I have read with great joy the report of our Executive Committee of Foreign Missions on the soundness of faith of our Foreign Missionaries. Not that I did not expect that report, but because it sets at rest any anxiety in the minds of our people. When we hear of the inroads of Modernism into the ranks of the missionaries of the Southern Methodist Church, the Northern Presbyterian Church, the Northern Baptist Church and others that I might mention, it is an occasion of true thanksgiving to know that all our missionaries are still safe and sound.

The Church owes our Foreign Mission Committee and Secretaries a vote of thanks for the thorough way in which they have conducted this investigation and secured this information. Let us all feel and show our appreciation by the support we give them in the arduous task to which we have called them. They need our help. Let us give it.

And now that our Committee and Secretaries have made so excellent a beginning we feel sure they will keep on. They will give Dr. Henry M. Woods the support he needs in preparing the Conservative Chinese Encyclopedia authorized by the General Assemblies of 1920 and 1921. They will grant him the money he needs to carry on this essential work. They cannot afford to do otherwise in this time of danger. And they will ask the coming Assembly to give them so clear a warrant for this that there can be no mistake or misunderstanding. Nothing short of this will satisfy our Church.

Many of us are glad to see that they will not permit our missions to enter into the new National Christian Council until both the Mid-China Mission and the North Kiang-su Mission vote to enter. Would it not make for confidence for the Executive Committee to secure from the next General Assembly a recommendation stating that our Missions are not to enter the Council until the General Assembly gives its consent thereto? This can do no harm. It may do much good.

THE HEART OF THE HOME

By Emma A. Lente

Her face is freckled, this girl whom I know,
And her nose has a tilt in the air;
And not even her mother, with mother-love blind,
Can truthfully say she is fair;
Her hair is the color that may be called red,
And straight as a ruler hangs down;
Her eyes are pale blue, and her forehead is low—
Though it never is drawn in a frown.
Her sisters are graceful, bonny young things,
And her brother is handsome and bright,
And all of them think in their innermost hearts,
That their sister is truly a sight.
But the soul of this girl is a beautiful thing,
And her voice is as sweet as a bird's,
And her goodness of heart and her wisdom of mind
Are seen in kind actions and words.
And the mother has ever a fond word and smile
For this child of her daily delight,
And the father's eyes glisten with tenderest love
As he kisses and bids her good-night.
And, oh! they would miss, and miss her full sore,
If out of the world she would roam,
For the girl with no beauty of face or of form
Is most truly the heart of the home. —Ex.

OKLAHOMA—OPPORTUNITY AND OUTLOOK

No. 2

By S. L. Morris

Indian Presbyterianery

The most remarkable gathering, the most unique institution in our bounds is Indian Presbyterianery. Nothing else at all approaches it. Twice a year it serves a multiple purpose. It is not simply a meeting of the Presbyterianery. That is only one phase—the occasion that brings together the whole tribe as far as possible. It serves as camp meeting, social gathering and religious conference all in one. Nothing except serious illness could keep any minister away. Practically all of its churches are represented—not simply by elders but by whole families. In some instances they bring their live stock—dogs being always abundant. At the last meeting some brought their little chickens—scarcely a week old—and they ran in and out of the tents like the children.

The Presbyterianery lasts one week, and they kill beeves or hogs to feed the crowd. In communities where only a few families live it costs on an average more than $100 per family to entertain Presbyterianery; and yet they contend for the privilege. They begin every day with sunrise prayer meeting and insist on preaching at least twice a day. Everything must be interpreted into English or vice versa. It requires ordinarily one hour to read and interpret the minutes of the previous day.

The Secretary of Home Missions has been attending Indian Presbyterianery for 20 years and has never lost his keen interest in its proceedings. His first experience was at Oskichito, 12 miles in the country across three mountains and over roads filled with rocks occasionally as large as a man's body. Riding in a wagon driven by an Indian boy—his suit-case, a jug of syrup and supplies for the camp battling with each other in a free-for-all skirmish, while he himself was jolted and bruised till sore and sad. Upon arrival, however, he got relief from his bruises in a most unexpected manner. The red-bugs made him forget all his other troubles. Everything being in an unknown tongue, he could only understand two sounds—the dogs barked in English and the babies cried in the same language.

At the recent meeting of the Presbyterianery, as usual they called on the Secretary for an address. He began by repeating, to their surprise, a few Choctaw words he had picked up, saying: "Ammihoka, Umahorsh, chugma, ho-ke"—Indians will please excuse the spelling—and then informed them he would be his own interpreter, giving an address of 20 minutes. They have a keen sense of humor and greatly enjoy the Secretary's attempt to use Choctaw. At the table he always asks for articles of food as, "Nippee," "Tuerfuller," "Hoppee Champulli," "Perchofa," etc.; and he is very much gratified with his progress as it always brings the right dish.

Memorial services were held for three of their preachers who have died since the last meeting—Silas Bacon, Watson Anderson, and Martin Camp—the Secretary being invited to pay the tribute to Silas Bacon, their greatest preacher, the founder of Goodland School and Orphanage, largely at his own expense. He was one of the most remarkable characters our Church ever produced—a man of great spirituality and power, the product of our mission schools.

On one occasion the Secretary visited one of these schools, and the teacher assured him that the Indian school knew the Shorter Catechism. He tested one child only six years old with satisfactory results. At this meeting of the Presbyterianery he was introduced to a full-blooded Choctaw boy 12 years old and was informed that he was a regularly ordained deacon in a Presbyterian church. The statement was made on the floor of Presbyterianery that one of their churches had dwindled to two families, containing only five members, and in very ordinary circumstances; and yet that church contributed during the year for its support and benevolences over $400. They are as simple in their faith as children, sing the pathetic weird tunes which sometimes bring tears to the eyes of visitors; and they have such tender consciences they will not take the communion after a fall till they have confessed and had assurance the Church had forgiven them. They might teach Catholics the real meaning of confession and forgiveness.

Compared with their status of 20 years ago, several things are worthy of note: (1) Their churches have not grown in numbers, which has a two-fold explanation. Allotment of lands has scattered them and they no longer live in communities around their churches as formerly. The other is a still sadder fact. They die young and tuberculosis is playing havoc with them since they have abandoned the simple life in the open air. There was scarcely one present at this meeting of the Presbyterianery of the number that composed the Presbyterianery 20 years ago. They have been "gathered to their fathers." (2) Indian Presbyterianery, however, gave birth to Durant Presbyterianery, which in turn was divided to form Mangum Presbyterianery. The original Presbyterianery is now the Synod of Oklahoma; and it counts its sainted dead by the thousands. Surely it can give a good account of itself. (3) It is the mother of Goodland School and of the Oklahoma Presbyterian College. Their membership may dwindle by death and by inter-marriage with the whites, but Indian Presbyterianery will live on in its four daughters—two Presbyterianeries and two institutions—which will perpetuate its work and receive the commendations of the Master whose eyes is upon all His servants and their work.

VACANCY AND SUPPLY, AND PASTORS AT LARGE

By Rev. E. C. Murray, D.D.

I have suggested to the Assembly's Ad-Interim Committee on Vacancy and Supply, and now present to the commissioners-elect for consideration, a provision in the plan to be adopted for the employment by each Presbyterianery and Synod of one or more pastors at large, under the supervision of their committees on Vacancy and Supply, for the supply of vacant churches. The ministers chosen for this position should generally be those who by reason of age or infirmity should be relieved of the work of the regular pastorate, but who are still capable of efficient service as temporary supplies. They should be guaranteed a competent financial support, their income from churches supplied being supplemented, if necessary, from the Assembly's Fund for Ministerial Relief.

The advantages of this plan are:

1. The Presbyterianeries and Synods would have ministers available at once for the supply of vacant churches.

2. It would also solve that other serious problem of the minister who has passed the "dead line," and yet is still capable of good service. Many a minister at 60 is at his prime as a preacher, is strong enough for active pastoral work, and has well-ripened administrative abilities, and yet cannot get a call to a suitable pastorate. Why? The churches would gladly have him as he now is for definite term, but they are afraid of having a man growing old settled upon them for an indefinite pastorate. We have also had notable examples of ministers physically incapacitated for the regular work of a large pastorate who have rendered most efficient service as temporary supplies and in evangelistic meetings. The employment of such men as pastors at large would save their valuable services for the Church, furnish a regular corps of supplies for vacant churches, and relieve the anxiety of the minister growing old by assuring him of continued work and support.

3. It would relieve the Assembly's Committee of Ministerial Relief of the support, in whole or part, of all aged and infirm yet serviceable ministers.

4. These pastors at large, when not needed to supply vacant churches, could be used in evangelistic meetings by the Home Mission Committees.

St. Pauls, N. C.

RELIGIOUS ADVERTISING

A distinct honor has recently been paid the Southern Presbyterian Church by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, headquarters New York City, in extending an invitation to the Church's General Secretary of Stewardship, Dr. M. E. Melvin, to make a series of addresses to a number of the clubs in various cities, including the annual meeting to be held at Atlantic City, June 5-6, on the theme of "Selling Religion."

Dr. Melvin delivered the first of these addresses before the Baltimore Advertising Club on Wednesday, April 25, and made a deep impression because of the emphasis he placed upon the unlimited possibilities of the undeveloped field of legitimate religious publicity. The substance of this address is as follows:

"The world needs religion and needs advertising. The time has come for the Church to advertise, and I believe that the time has come for the federated churches and the 300 advertising clubs of America to get together."

"I want religion advertised so that a man cannot walk down the street without having it brought to his attention; so that he cannot open a magazine or read his daily paper without facing a religious advertisement."

"I want to see the advertising clubs give the brains and the rich men of the country contribute the money to put over a great national advertising program for old-fashioned, real religion."

"The age of appealing to reason in advertising has given way to the age of suggestion. The salesmanship of the Church must be different. Education will not make men inherently better. Nothing will do that except religion. Just as the advertisements of life insurance make the approach to a prospective buyer much easier, so a campaign of advertising religion would make it easier to get people to become members of the church."

T. E. S.

Shrink not from trials. They are a part of life's discipline. The severer the trial faithfully endured the larger the recompense.

A JOINT AGENCY ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

On behalf of the General Council of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in America, I am handing you herewith for presentation to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. for its consideration a recommendation concerning the erection of a joint agency on Christian education, the recommendation being preceded by a brief history of the actions leading thereto:

Historical Sketch

1. In March, 1922, amendments to the "Articles of Agreement" of the Council of Reformed Churches became effective, and the organization under its amended "Articles of Agreement," became an ecclesiastical council under the name and style of "The General Council of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in America." (Minutes, page 29).
2. Under the new "Articles of Agreement," the General Council was given power to establish "administrative agencies to maintain and conduct work representative of any one or more causes mentioned (missions, education, etc.) as consented to by the several supreme judicatories concerned." (Minutes, page 30).
3. In accordance with the provision just quoted in paragraph 2, the General Council expressed the judgment that the time had come for the erection of "a joint committee on Christian education, made up of representatives of the Presbyterian and Reformed agencies of education, publication, and Sunday School work, for the purpose of leading the churches of this council in such forms of educational work and can best be done co-operatively." In order to carry out the conviction expressed in the preceding quotation, the various agencies of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches were requested to send representatives to a conference, said conference "to perfect a plan for the erection of a joint committee, and recommend a plan to their respective supreme judicatories for approval."
4. The requested conference was held in Philadelphia on December 5, 1922, representatives being present from the various educational agencies of five churches, Dr. Jas. E. Clark, of Nashville, being the chairman, and Dr. Rufus W. Miller, of Philadelphia, being the secretary of the conference. In accordance with the request of the General Council, the conference prepared the following plan for a joint committee, and a recommendation concerning the type of work which might be assigned to such a joint committee.
5. It should be observed, that under the "Articles of Agreement" of the General Council, it is provided (Article II) that members of any joint agency of the council shall be nominated either "by the supreme judicatories directly interested, or by their boards or agencies, as the judicatories may determine." It is therefore respectfully suggested that if the supreme judicatory approves of the plan recommended, it should proceed either to nominate or to direct its agency or agencies to nominate the number of persons indicated in the plan, the understanding being that, in accordance with the action of the General Council, the persons nominated shall be representatives of an agency of education, publication, or Sabbath School work.

Plan and Recommendation

1. Name—The joint committee of the General Council is to be known as the Committee on Education of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches.
2. Membership—This committee shall be composed of 15 members, distributed as follows:

Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church	----	1
Cumberland Presbyterian Church (colored)	----	1
Reformed Church in the U. S.	-----	2
Reformed Church in America	-----	2
United Presbyterian Church	-----	2
Presbyterian Church in the U. S.	-----	3
Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.	-----	4

The representatives of the constituent churches are to be nominated in accordance with Article II of the Articles of Agreement of the General Council, namely, "All members shall be nominated by the supreme judicatories directly interested, or by the boards or agencies as the judicatories may determine. Each judicatory shall nominate one or more persons for each vacancy, and the term of office shall be for four years, the members being divided into two classes, one of which, in the first election, shall be elected for two years only."

3. Purpose—The purpose of this committee shall be to administer all forms of educational work, which in the judgment of the churches can best be done co-operatively, and which may be committed to it by the churches or their separate educational agencies.

4. This committee shall have power to perfect its own organization in harmony with the Articles of Agreement of the General Council. The expense of any work assigned to this committee to be met by the agencies represented, on an equitable basis, and to be determined by the committee and the agencies of the constituent churches.

The conference further recommends that the several judicatories advise their existing agencies to assign to the Committee on Education of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches, the administration on behalf of all the churches of such activities as can best be done co-operatively; such as:

1. The promotion of study course on Christian education, and the preparation of suitable material for this purpose.
 2. The preparation of material for use in Daily Vacation Bible Schools, week-day Church Schools of Religious Instruction, and similar agencies.
 3. The production of text-books suitable for use in study courses in the Bible and Religious Education, for colleges, Sunday Schools, and elsewhere.
 4. The promotion of work at university centers, where such a work can best be done co-operatively.
 5. The preparation of material suitable for the use of parents in the Christian education of their children.
 6. The joint production of certain Sabbath School supplies other than lesson helps.
- The conference further authorizes its officers to communicate to the General Council the action taken by your supreme judicatory with reference to the preceding plan and recommendation. Therefore, when your judicatory has acted, will you kindly send to Dr. J. E. Clarke, Presbyterian Building, Nashville, Tenn., an official statement of the action taken.

Very cordially yours,
(Signed) Jas. E. Clarke, Chairman.
Rufus W. Miller, Secretary.

THE CHALLENGE OF CHRIST

By L. S. Roe

Instead of having an examination at our period, the professor of Personal Evangelism at the General Assembly's Training School, recently had the students to write a brief tract on one of the subjects studied. Many of them were excellent. Three or four have been printed. It may interest the readers of the Standard to see what sort of work these fine students are doing, so I am enclosing one.

F. T. McFADEN.

"What shall I do then with Jesus that is called Christ?" Matt. 27:22.

On that fateful day, in the city of Jerusalem, the world said that Jesus, the Carpenter of Nazareth, the Preacher of Galilee, was on trial before the Roman official, Pilate; but what the armies of heaven saw was the lost sinner, Pilate, on trial before Jesus Christ, the Judge of all the earth. "What shall I do then with Jesus that is called Christ?" Pilate faced this question, and his cowardly soul yielded to the mad crowd before him, and he stained his hands—in spite of all his washing—with the blood of the Son of God.

And you—what will you do with Jesus? He challenges you today; not to say something about Him, no matter how true your words as to His person and work may be, for He says, "Not everyone that saith unto Me 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven;" not merely to believe high and noble things about Him; "the devils also believe and tremble"; but do something with Him. What are you going to do with Jesus as He stands before you with outstretched bleeding hands, pleading with you? What is Jesus going to do with you, when you stand before the Judgment Seat? The answer to the second depends upon the first.

The story is told of a young man who was drowning, and was rescued by a stranger, at the risk of his own life; and long afterward the rescued man was summoned into court on a criminal charge, and was found guilty of death. He recognized in the judge the man who had saved him from drowning, and he cried pleadingly to the judge, "Why, don't you know me? I'm the man whose life you saved." But the answer came, "Then I was your savior; now I am your judge." Jesus Christ pleads with you to let Him be your Saviour, but the day will come when you must face Him as your judge, from whose decision there is no appeal.

What will you do with Jesus? Will you accept Him or reject Him? "But," you say, "how am I to accept Him?" God is infinitely holy, and man is unutterably sinful; and because God is just and holy, He must punish sin. "The wages of sin is death"—"but the gift of God is eternal life." "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Jesus Christ paid the wages in order that we should not pay. And the only condition of the availability of this gift is acceptance by faith; "to as many as received Him, to them gave He power (or authority) to become the sons of God, even to those that believed on His name."

But to "receive Him," to "believe on His name" means more than intellectual assent; it means a real sorrow for sin, and a real endeavor after righteousness, not in one's own strength, but in the strength of God; it means resting on Christ as Savior from sin, and following Him as Lord of one's life. Can you do this? "What shall I do then with Jesus that is called Christ?"

And when you have taken Christ at His word, and have accepted life at His hands, you have only started, you have just been born into the family of God; you must begin to grow. There are certain laws of growth in the physical world, and the same laws obtain in the spiritual world. You must have food, and God's Word is the bread of life; feed on it daily. You must breathe pure air; prayer is the breath of the Christian; without it spiritual suffocation follows; live in the constant atmosphere of prayer, not only in times of temptation and trial, but in times of joy and buoyancy. You must have exercise; this you get in service for Christ and your fellows; it may be in a simple daily task, it may be in the places of larger influence, but constant service, in the name of Christ, is essential to growth. These three, Bible study, prayer and service, enable us to grow towards "a full grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

DWELLING TOGETHER

The intimate union of the believer with God is set forth in two ways: Christ says, we shall come and make our abode with him; God dwelleth in us; the other way is by a representation of God enthroned in heaven, and believers on thrones encompassing that throne. The question is, What is the heaven of your heart? Is self on the central throne, or is God there?

PRE-ASSEMBLY EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCE, MONTREAT, NORTH CAROLINA

Wednesday, May 16, 1923

The Executive Committee of Home Missions regrets that it does not seem practical to have a full day Pre-Assembly Evangelistic Conference this year, as was held in St. Louis in 1921 and in Charleston in 1922. The railroad schedules are such that the majority of the commissioners and visitors to the Assembly cannot reach Montreat before Wednesday afternoon, May 16th.

The Committee, however, has arranged for a great evangelistic meeting Wednesday night, May 16th, at which time it is expected that the Hon. William Jennings Bryan will make the address. Mr. Bryan had hoped to be at the Assembly in Charleston last year, but was prevented from coming by serious illness in his family. He has written that it is his purpose to be at Montreat for the meeting this year.

Dr. J. D. Leslie, the stated clerk of the General Assembly, informs us that all commissioners are expected to reach Montreat Wednesday afternoon so as to be there for the opening of the Assembly Thursday morning. Dr. R. C. Anderson, president of the Montreat Association, writes that all will be in readiness to welcome the commissioners and visitors at that time.

It is hoped that as many as possible will make their plans to reach Montreat for the great meeting Wednesday night.

Homer McMillan.

THINGS TO PRAY FOR

The Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief requests that there be earnest prayer throughout the entire Church:

1. That the youth of our Church may find God's plan for their lives and by the help of the Holy Spirit seek to do the will of God.
2. That the boys and girls of our churches in increasing numbers may be guided to our Christian schools and colleges.
3. That in the building up of the faculties of the schools, colleges and seminaries of the Church for the next year, the most consecrated, efficient, helpful teachers may be secured.
4. That the Student Loan Fund may be so increased that all of the boys and girls of approved character and ability from poor Presbyterian homes may have the privilege of attending our own colleges.
5. That "the Westminster Teachers' Bureau" may be richly blessed in finding broad fields of Christian service for the youth of the Church, and in securing Christian teachers for our institutions, and the schools and high schools of our communities.
6. That the members of the Presbyterian family may more faithfully support, by their interest, prayers, active help, finances, the ministers and missionaries who are now serving their generation by the will of God.
7. That all our people may fully appreciate the solemn responsibility of the Church to care lovingly and liberally for our aged and infirm ministers who have ceased from their labors, and for the needy widows and orphans of those who are being called to their eternal reward.

For information on any of these themes address Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

AN APPRECIATION

"Being a Preacher"
By Dr. James I. Vance

The thrill of possession repeatedly seized me as I moved through the charming chapters of this new book. The thought, "And I am in the work of such majesty and riches as that!"—constantly set my heart aflame with a subtle joy as the author proceeded to unfold the testings, the trials and the triumphs of the greatest task committed to man. Every minister who can should procure and read this book, repolishing therewith his sense of royal partnership in a work that angels might covet. The book comprises the series of lectures delivered by Dr. Vance on the Sprunt Foundation at Union Theological Seminary.

Samuel M. Glasgow.

Knoxville, Tenn.

THE COMMONPLACE

"Noble deeds are held in honor;
But the wide world sadly needs
Hearts of patience to unravel
The worth of common deeds."

The maelstrom attracts more notice than the quiet fountain; a comet draws more attention than the steady star; but it is better to be the fountain than the maelstrom; and star than comet, followed out the sphere and orbit of quiet usefulness in which God places us. It is among the commonplace, that the Christian's daily lot is thrown; and the daily appeals are to him as sacred as those which come seldom and with a louder knocking at the gate.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Atlanta Presbyterian—Villa Rica entertained the Atlanta Presbyterian April 30-May 2. Never was such cordial hospitality. Not merely the Presbyterians but the whole town regarded the visitors as their guests. The men of Villa Rica entertained the Presbyterian guests at a barbecue Tuesday, and the Villa Rica ladies gave a luncheon for them Wednesday. All homes, irrespective of denominations were open.

Miss Sadie Buckland, of Chunju made an inspiring address on Korea. Miss Nancy White held the close attention of her hearers in "Glimpses of Home Missions." Dr. L. Ross Lynn presented the work of Thornwell Orphanage, Mrs. R. B. Willis the work of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. Conferences were held on Spiritual Life, Young People's work, and S. P. D.

The Presbyterian accepted a quota of $3,000.50 for the Baby Cottage at Thornwell, accepted its own budget as presented, recommended the adoption of a budget by each Auxiliary with careful oversight that each cause gets its assigned percentage. Also adopted recommendations that Young People's Societies be more closely linked with Presbyterian work, that the Young People be asked to make the posters for next meeting, and that Auxiliaries see that all Young People's Societies send representatives to Young People's Conference at Gainesville and Montreat and to Smyrna Camp Meeting.

Miss Aline Clayton and four students of Nacoochee Institute were given an enthusiastic welcome on their appearance on the platform, representing mountain missions in the Synod of Georgia.

Mrs. W. M. Everett, of Atlanta, was elected president, and the invitation of Covington for next year accepted.

Secretaries of literature—Only three more days of "Missionary Survey Week!" If you are busy working for renewals, and new subscribers, keep it up; if for any reason you have not been able to make the canvass in your church, now is the time to do it.—Ed.

Dear Friends:

I am readable, interesting, practical. Through me material and programs are secured by your auxiliary. I strive to prove indispensable in your homes and in your Sunday Schools. I furnish illustrations to your preachers. I bring to you each month your church and its work in detail.

My Week is May 6-13.

Work for me then. Renew your subscription and help to secure others so that I may grow into wider usefulness.

Yours in His Name,
THE MISSIONARY SURVEY.

Why Have a Christian Industrial School for Mexican Girls?—(Mrs. W. M. Fairley, El Paso, Texas.)

For a great while the Mexican Presbyterians of Texas have dreamed of Christian education for their girls. It has long been the hope of American Presbyterians to see their dream realized. The time has now arrived for making this dream true.

For the past ten years a noble work has been done by Dr. and Mrs. Skinner in the Texas-Mexican Industrial Institute for boys at Kingsville, but nothing has ever been done for girls. Is it fair to any race to educate and elevate one sex and leave the others in ignorance, superstition and weakness? No race can progress faster than its womanhood, and the character of the motherhood determine the safety and usefulness of a people; therefore:

1. For the sake of the home, we must have this school now.—In the Divine economy the home comes first. It is to be a little sanctuary where both the mother and father are honored and beloved, sharing equally the responsibility to God for lives committed to their care. It is the Mother who makes the home and gives it social standing, establishes its moral and intellectual ideals, creates its atmosphere and makes it wholesome and healthful. Nothing is so influential for good as Christian womanhood, radiating purity of heart and behavior, gentleness, modesty and refinement. We must give the Mexican girls this school now for the sake of the home of this generation and also for the homes of the future.

2. For the sake of the Presbyterian Church, we must act.—The Southern Presbyterian Church has for many years had her schools and colleges for girls, her mission schools for mountain girls, for Indian girls, and lately for Negro girls, but none for the Mexican girls. What of the Mexican Presbyterian Church of the future without an educated womanhood? We are proud of our Church's loyalty to her missionary enterprise but she has woefully neglected this one denominational necessity. Mexicans must be evangelized through Mexicans. If we are to have consecrated trained leaders for our Mexican Church we must have efficient teachers in Sunday School, leaders of the young people's work and officers of the woman's societies. Work among the Mexican people is retarded for lack of ministers. We must have Grandmother Lois and Mother Eunice to train up our young Mexican Timothies to pastor the flock. With an educated motherhood will there not come forth more boys and girls volunteering for life service in Christian work for their own people?

The Theological Seminary at Austin proposes to conduct a Training School for Lay Workers with Spanish speaking department. It is said by Dr. Homer McMillan in "Unfinished Tasks," that "of our 2,000 Mexican Presbyterians in Texas there are not five girls with a high school education." How long must Austin Training School wait for its young women students? Abraham was afraid for Isaac to marry among the idolatrous people of Canaan; so in developing Protestantism in Texas we must prepare girls to be life companions of our Mexican ministers, missionaries and teachers, and not look to other denominations to train them for us.

3. For the sake of our Country, we cannot delay the building of this school.—There are 1,500,000 Mexicans in the United States, with approximately 500,000 in the great Empire State of Texas. The 19th Amendment has conferred the franchise upon all native or naturalized women. This applies to Mexican women too. How will they use this power? Give it over into the hands of unscrupulous political bosses? Think what this school will do towards developing an earnest Christian citizenship with deep rooted principles and Presbyterian ideals. With their native ability, their innate love of the beautiful and artistic, their grace and courtesy, and proper training, these Mexican sisters of ours will be able to take their place along side the women of other races; but with their untrained minds, their inability to read and write, their ignorance of our laws, lack of knowledge of sanitation and domestic hygiene, they may be a menace to the State. The hope of any country is Christian education for its men and women.

4. For the sake of the Kingdom of God in the world, this school is imperative.—Many girls coming from Catholic and non-Christian homes, under the influence of Christian leadership and atmosphere in this school will go out into the workaday world having given their hearts to Jesus, and having been fired with a broad spiritual vision for their people, carrying with them a Gospel of salvation through faith in the living Son of God, thus spreading Christianity and the growth of the Kingdom. They will be the religious teachers and missionaries to their race of two Republics and thus hasten the coming of our Lord.

Women of the Southern Presbyterian Church, this appeal comes to you today that through your gifts and prayers you may help realize this dream. When the woman in the crowd touched the hem of Jesus' garment, He knew that power had gone out from Him in response to an outstretched hand. The Mexican girls of the Southwest are stretching out their hands to you today for that which only the Church can give them. Shall not we who represent the Master in His absence heed their cry?

The Synodical of Texas will raise $25,000 and the other fifteen Synodicals an equal amount. It calls for sacrifice and self-denial, but remember that these girls are of one blood with your own daughters, and the Master gave His life for them also.

We can and will have this most necessary educational institution of our Church. Do you know where you could better invest $50,000 than in a Christian Industrial School for Mexican Girls? Then for the sake of Mexican homes, for the sake of the Presbyterian Church, and for the coming of our King, let us build this school.

Mecklenburg Presbyterian—(Echoes of the wonderful meeting at Philadelphia Church are still reaching us. In practically all write-ups the speakers of the particular occasion are the subject of discussion; in these echoes the listeners and the whole gathering are under fire of discussion. We think this reversal of the usual order of things is interesting and so we are publishing herewith glimpses of the Presbyterian as seen by men and women on the platform—Ed.)

The Way Mecklenburg Presbyterian Looked to Not-Disinterested Speakers

One day last week we passed through Charlotte looking for the meeting of Mecklenburg Presbyterian. Our search took us down to Matthews and we looked around for a church, but found none holding a meeting. We inquired the location of Philadelphia Church and were told that it was six miles in the country. Our hearts sank and we thought that this meant a little country church with a handful of people attending the meeting. However, we coaxed our little John Henry down the road and in the course of about 20 minutes we arrived at a brick church in a ten acre field of automobiles.

As we drove up we noticed that there seemed to be a great many people at the back of the church. We soon found that this was where dinner was being served, not to just a few people but at least five hundred splendid women and a whole lot of men that somehow straggled in about dinner time. The dinner was not just a sandwich and cup of water of water affair, but a real Mecklenburg picnic dinner and everything from deviled-eggs to fried chicken, ice-cream, cake, and plenty of everything.

We saw that we were mistaken about the small crowd, but when we scanned the program for the afternoon exercises we did not see how it was possible for anybody to hold all that dinner and stay awake to listen to the multiplicity of speeches scheduled. If it had been men, the first speech would have put half of them to sleep—but not these women. Why, each number on the program was greeted with wide-awake interest and sometimes applause! Think of that! Old Timer! Did you ever hear of applause in the Presbyterian Church before in your life? Well, it happened in Philadelphia Church last week and sounded real good. The heavens did not fall—not even the plastering. And if the writer knows anything about it, the speakers did themselves a whole lot better by this tangible evidence of appreciation than if they had been speaking to a church full of silent people. We believe that applause was just another evidence of the whole-hearted interest that these good people have in the cause of the Church, and was just a natural expression to show that they were absolutely devoted to the work in the Master's Kingdom.

In our visits to the various Presbyteries over the State, we have met with the same unflinching interest among the ladies organizations, but Mecklenburg just seemed to reach the climax. Our only fear for the State is that the people at the head of our various causes are going to find such delightful audience always in the Ladies' Meeting that our Presbyteries are going to suffer for the lack of attention.

J. B. Johnston.

As a visitor looking in for an entire day on the recent meeting of the Mecklenburg Presbyterian, I was greatly impressed with many features of this organization of the godly women of our Church. First of all, the remarkable attendance was impressively interesting. I had just been in attendance upon my Presbytery, and heard name after name of churches called without any answer of representatives present. At the roll call of the Auxiliaries it was very noticeable that only a limited few were not represented at all, and in most cases there was more than one official representative; and from the large congregation present, one would infer that a delegation was in attendance, along with the official representatives.

"Then, there was the matter of seriousness of purpose which marked the progress of the program. They were intent upon the King's business and no time was frittered away. The program moved smoothly along to its climax and conclusion. Furthermore, the day for smiling at a woman's meeting, from the standpoint of parliamentary proceeding, is over. Business was presented to the body, discussed and issued in strictly parliamentary form. The presiding officer was courteous, exact and efficient in every way. Business was disposed of with ready dispatch. The reports were interesting and revealed the fact that, from the standpoint of contributions, the woman's movement is no longer a negligible element in the great work of the Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Apostle Paul once wrote, "Help those godly women who labored with me in the Gospel" and surely there has been a reversal of the situation, for they are now "helping" the ministers and are themselves laboring mightily in the Gospel.

W. H. Frazer.

Impressions are subtle things in which there is more of heart than of head and it is sometimes difficult to put them in cold type. The first thing that came to me was the fact of the earnest, untiring effort of the officers to make such a meeting possible. Then the promptness with which the business of the meeting was dispatched. The hearty co-operation of the women who had the affair in charge. The carefully prepared and well-delivered messages by those who were on the program. The spiritual uplift of the Bible hour conducted by Dr. Frazer.

As to what was said by me, as I have no notes I'm not quite certain of the points. The ideas presented in part were as follows:

The chief business of a democracy is education, and education in the broader sense—the training of hand, head and heart. The training of leaders. Nor does this mean a dozen men or women at the top. Every person who can direct the action of another is a leader. We need them in our churches our C. E. societies, our Sunday Schools, our clubs.

While vocational training is obviously necessary and the cultivation of the mind of great importance, yet the creation of character is of supreme import.

The aim of our work at the Albemarle Normal and Industrial Institute is to create character. Since the foundation of the school by Miss Frances Ufford, intensive Bible study has been carried on, and her successor, Miss Eva Rupert, has conscientiously carried out her program. We also have a six weeks' course in mission study with the result that for four years our C. E. society has supported a Chinese girl under the care of Mrs. Porteus, and our Sunday School classes are paying the tuition and board of an Armenian child in the U. S. Orphanage at Beirut. We regret that four of our teachers are forced to resign this year, and among them our honored principal, Miss Rupert. For 14 years she has labored here and endeared herself to the school and town alike. She will carry with her the respect and love of all who touched her life.

We want to thank the Mecklenburg Presbyterian for their gift to our school which makes possible the help given to girls now with us. And we ask for the prayers of each one present that our work may go on to its fulfillment.

(Signed) Maude Smith Fausell.

ARE YOU READY FOR YOUR "MEXICAN FIESTA?"

If not, you had best order now your program. An attractive pageant has been prepared for the celebration of the May Auxiliary meeting, "A Mexican Fiesta." Seven copies, enough to produce it in one Auxiliary, will be sent on request. Gay invitation cards for it are priced at 50 cents for 100.

Order now from
THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
256-269 Field Bldg. St. Louis, Mo.

CIRCLE GIFT ENVELOPES!

The Auxiliary Office has small envelopes in which the gifts of members may be offered at Circle meetings each month. Each woman should have 12. Price, 35 cents per 100.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

Old Man Spring Fever seemed to get hold of our correspondents the past week and they left us in the lurch. However, we have been holding a few things in reserve and are glad to show this week the list of points in the contest for the North Carolina Junior Endeavor Efficiency Banner.

The Editor has seen some proud Juniors and their Superintendents at former State Endeavor Conventions when the committee awarded the Efficiency Banner to them. The banner is always attractive and the work done toward winning it is quite worthwhile. Our Junior boys and girls often set an example which the older folks would do well to follow when it comes to the enthusiasm with which they do their work.

If any of our young men or young women want a real interesting and inspiring field of service right in the corner where they are, they can hardly do better than to get the boys and girls of their church and community together into some form of Junior work.

The value of the reports sent to our department was well illustrated last week by the Christian Endeavor

Training Class of Davidson College. Our department reported a plan of "Laying the Ghosts," used by the Lowell, N. C., Society. The Davidson students took the plan, changed it slightly, and presented a very effective program at the First Church of Mooresville. We wish more of our societies and Sunday School classes would use the department as a means by which to give other young people the benefit of their good ideas and plans. If you know a good thing, pass it on.

South Carolina Young People's Conference
Sumter, June 11th to 17th

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MAY 13, 1923

DAVID, THE POET KING

Lesson: I Sam. 16:1-31; II Sam. 1:1-24; I Kings 1:1-2:12. (A Survey of David's Life.) Printed Text: I Sam. 16:1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."—Ps. 23:6.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

1 And the LORD said unto Samuel, How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel? Fill thine horn with oil, and go; I will send thee to Jesse the Bethlehemite: for I have provided me a king among his sons.

2 And Samuel said, How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the LORD said, Take an heifer with thee, and say, I am come to sacrifice to the LORD.

3 And call Jesse to the sacrifice, and I will shew thee what thou shalt do: and thou shalt anoint unto me him whom I name unto thee.

4 And Samuel did that which the LORD spake, and came to Bethlehem: and the elders of the town trembled at his coming, and said, Comest thou peaceably?

5 And he said, Peaceably: I am come to sacrifice unto the LORD; sanctify yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

6 And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on Eliab, and said, Surely the LORD's anointed is before him.

7 But the LORD said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart.

8 Then Jesse called Abinadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the LORD chosen this.

9 Then Jesse made Shammah to pass by. And he said, Neither hath the LORD chosen this.

10 Again, Jesse made seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, the LORD hath not chosen these.

11 And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all thy children? And he said, There remaineth yet the youngest, and, behold, he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Send and fetch him; for we will not sit down till he come hither.

12 And he sent, and brought him in. Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the LORD said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he.

13 Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and the spirit of the LORD came upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 36. What are the benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from justification, adoption and sanctification?

A. The benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from justification, adoption and sanctification are: assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, increase of grace, and perseverance therein to the end.

Samuel, told by Jehovah, had informed Saul of his being chosen king and anointed him for his office. When Saul by two flagrant acts of disobedience had forfeited his right to be king, Samuel, by divine command, told him that he was rejected of Jehovah, and that the Lord would provide him another king. Men who are slow to observe that God rules in the affairs of men, and that "He putteth down one and setteth up another," but it is certainly true, whether men believe it or not. But Samuel, though supplanted by Saul, mourned for his sin and his downfall. At first, Saul manifested superior natural and supernatural gifts for his functions, but he allowed success and pride to master his conduct and betray him into wilful disobedience to Jehovah's plain commands. We will consider Samuel Sent to Bethlehem; The Sons of Jesse Summoned Before Him; David Chosen and Anointed; The Reasons for David's Choice.

I. Samuel Sent to Bethlehem

Samuel, however, distressed by Saul's failure and rejection, was not to spend his time in protracted mourning. Duties still devolved upon him. The needs of the nation pressed, a better king had to be provided and the will of the Lord done. It is thus with ourselves, when we have been sorely bereaved. We must not indulge in desponding and weakening grief, but address ourselves to pressing duty. When first told to go to Bethlehem to anoint a new king, Samuel objects. "Saul will kill me." But the Lord tells him, "Perform your functions as prophet, and hold a sacrifice unto the Lord, and "Call Jesse and his sons to worship." Then "I will tell you what to do." Jehovah discloses His will by degrees, affirms only truth, but gives this as needed. When Samuel reaches Bethlehem the elders approach him tremblingly, saying, "Comest thou peaceably?" He affirms that he did, and says he "came to sacrifice unto the Lord." This was true, but not the whole truth, and we are not bound to tell the whole truth except at the proper time.

II. Jesse's Sons Summoned Before Samuel

He doubtless told Jesse and his family about what his purpose was. Eliab, Abinadab, and Shannanah, are called before the prophet. They are men of fully developed manhood and of impressive appearance. They appeal to Samuel's judgment favorably, and he says, "Is not the Lord's anointed before me?" But Jehovah does not choose them. In choosing Saul He had chosen a king according to their desires. Now He proposes to select one to please Himself. Seven sons of Jesse pass before Samuel without divine choice, and he says, "The Lord has not chosen these." The prophet asks Jesse, "Have you any other son?" He replies, "The youngest, David, is keeping the sheep." Samuel directs, "Send for him, for we will not sit down to the sacrifice till he comes."

III. David Chosen and Anointed

When he appears, he is a youth "ruddy in complexion and beautiful in countenance," and winsome in person and bearing. When he is presented, the delayed Divine choice is rendered and the Lord says, "This is he, anoint him." He has not the outward gifts of matured manhood, but he has other qualifications that pleased Jehovah. Samuel, with his horn of oil, anoints him in the presence of his brethren to designate him as God's chosen king. But he goes through years of training and many bitter experiences to fit him for his functions. The same is true of many earthly kings and of all spiritual kings who are to become "kings and priests unto God." David was not only anointed with oil to indicate his kingship, but his soul was anointed with the Holy Ghost to qualify Him for his exalted functions. "The Spirit of the Lord came upon him." The Divine Spirit not only fitted him to bear trial, to rule justly, to fight needful battles and to subdue formidable enemies, but to conquer inbred sin and spiritual foes. He also inspired him to write the songs of Zion and to "strike the lyre to themes harmonious with the morning stars and pure as those by sainted bards and angels sung waking the echoes of eternity." Well he may be termed "The Poet King."

IV. The Reasons Why God Chose David King

The Lord does not always give us reasons for His choice or conduct. But in David's case, in the lesson itself, and in his subsequent story, some reasons are apparent. We are told "that men judge by outward appearance," but "the Lord looketh at the heart." David was "a man after God's own heart." The intellectual, moral and spiritual qualities given him by God, accorded with the Divine will and the Lord knew they would be used for Israel's welfare and the glory of God. David had mental powers of a high order, in his dealings with man he was habitually just, generous, kind, faithful and forgiving; in relation to Jehovah he was devout, submissive, penitent, truthful and consecrated.

Christian Endeavor

C. E. TOPIC COMMENTS FOR MAY 20TH

By Edmund O'Connor, Rome, Ga.

Member of C. E. Training Class, of Davidson College

After reading the whole of the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, we are, at its end, confronted with two great questions: "How have I been helped by the Bible?" and "What parts of the Bible have helped me most?" There is much food for thought in those questions, and one must carefully separate the many petty things that immediately fly to the mind, from the grander, larger and nobler changes that have been effected by a portion of the Scripture. While everyone has been helped by the Word of God, in different ways, yet all help is based on five fundamental truths gotten by close study of the Bible.

Knowledge of the Power of God

Surely there is no greater truth learned in Genesis than the one that the creation of all things was at the command of God, and that all existing things are sole servants of his will.

"And God said, Let there be light and there was light." Belief that this is true and that light came without the delay of human power helps us to realize that God, having such control over the elements, has the power to protect us from our enemies and to preserve us through sickness and danger.

Knowledge of the Love of God

"For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" that he might die for the world. Truly, no greater love is there than that which demands human sacrifice to make it evident. We hear the tiny children raise their voices in chorus as they sing, "Jesus loves me, this I know, for the Bible tells me so." We oft-times pass this chorus by, but at times we stop and think, "Does Jesus love me?" "And does the Bible tell me so?" "and if so where?" The answer is found in the story of the crucifixion of Christ, to which experience he voluntarily sacrificed himself through love for men, that they might be saved by it. This answer helps us to love Him who loved us.

Knowledge of Salvation Through Jesus Christ

The beautiful passage of John 3:16 tells us that God gave his only Son to die for the world that whosoever believed on Him shall not perish. And Christ himself tells us, "I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him, and he with me."

To know that one thing, will help us throughout our lives. No longer will we need to fear the punishment of the unjust or the spiritual death of the sinner, for Christ can lift us beyond the grave and carry us to an eternal reward if only we will believe on Him and let Him enter our hearts as sole Master and Lord.

The Knowledge of the Privilege of Serving Christ

Ah, yes, it is more than a command that we find in Mark 16:15, "Go, ye, into all the world, and preach to every creature." Christ is offering us a share in spreading His gospel over the earth, making way for His kingdom which He has promised will come. Should we disregard this duty, the advance of his army would be retarded not the least bit, for the coming of His reign is not dependent solely on man's effort (although that is the method God seems to be using). However, He has offered us the great privilege of co-partnership with Him in bringing in His reign. The knowledge of this encourages us to faithful labor.

John pictures to us in Revelation, the future condition of those who have served Christ in this life. Knowledge of that future life, when existence will be fellowship with Him, helps us, as we contemplate it, to live cleaner and purer lives here. It encourages us to strive forward and upward to worthwhile things.

What more or greater help could come from our Bible than these thoughts? In every association and in every duty we will be helped beyond expression when we have gained from our Bibles a knowledge of the power of God, a knowledge of the love of God, a knowledge of salvation through Jesus Christ, a knowledge of the privilege of serving Him, and a knowledge of the fact that some day we shall live with Him in a glorious new world.

BANNER POINTS FOR JUNIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR, NORTH CAROLINA 1922-1923

Standard Efficiency Banner to society making the largest total score in the following matter:

1. Junior Efficiency Chart ----- 8 Points
2 credits for each 25 points attained on chart.
2. Four Square Dixie Chart ----- 8 Points
2 credits for each square attained.
3. Denominational Chart (Presbyteries have a card for Junior Work ----- 5 Points
1 credit for each 20 per cent attained on the chart.
4. Missionary Gifts ----- 10 Points
An average of 25c per active member.
5. Monthly service program ----- 12 Points
1 credit for each month reported on time.
6. State Union Pledge ----- 5 Points
7. Memory Work ----- 20 Points
10 per cent of active members learning "String of Pearls."
75 per cent of members learning the entire First Year's Graded Memory Work. (10 points on each.)
8. Each society who had delegates at the State Convention and District Conventions ----- 3 Points
9. Organizing a new society ----- 5 Points
5 credits may be claimed when society has been organized and running three months.
10. New Members ----- 5 Points
5 credits when society has increased its roll 25 per cent since June 1, 1922.
11. Subscriptions to papers ----- 15 Points
2 credits for every club of 10 subscribers Junior C. E. World, 6.
1 credit for every 4 subscribers Dixie Endeavor, 4.
1 credit for every 5 Church Paper subscribers in Junior homes, 5.
12. Mission Study Classes ----- 5 Points
6 credits to be taken after one or more Mission Classes have been completed.

NOTE—Each society will get at least some points. The society scores will be figured on the portions of the above points under the 12 items, that each society has won, and the society getting the largest total points will be awarded the Banner.

NEWSGRAMS OF OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Hendersonville, N. C., Senior C. E.'s instituted a fine custom in February during Christian Endeavor Week. They decided to attend the church's Wednesday evening prayer meeting in a body. Wednesday night, April 18th, was "Christian Endeavor" night, and 50 young people, from the Junior and Senior Societies of the church and from the Balfour Orphanage Society, stood up in answer to the pastor's invitation. The Balfour Society was organized two years ago by the Hendersonville Seniors.

The members of the Prospect Senior C. E. Society contributed last year through the society budget an average of $7.86 each, although the majority of the members are girls and have no regular incomes. Besides, every member of the Society contributed to the church budget.

This society has registered a delegate for the International C. E. Convention at Des Moines, Ia., in July.

"CHRIST CRUCIFIED"

Let others hold forth the terrors of hell and the joys of heaven. Let others drench their congregations with teachings about the sacraments of the church. Give me the cross of Christ. This is the only lever which has ever turned the world upside down hitherto, and made men forsake their sins. And if this will not, nothing will. A man may begin preaching with a perfect knowledge of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew; and he will do little or no good among his hearers unless he knows something of the cross. Never was there a minister who did much for the conversion of souls who did not dwell much on Christ crucified. Luther, Rutherford, Whitefield, M'Cheyne, were all most eminent preachers of the cross. This is the preaching that the Holy Ghost delights to bless. He loves to honor those who honor the cross. (See I Cor. 1:23; 2:2; Gal. 2:20.) —x.

North Carolina Young People's Conference
June 12-19, Davidson, N. C.

Church News

PRICE OF THE NEW ASSEMBLY DIGEST

When the Assembly ordered the publication of a revised edition of the Digest two years ago we contracted for printing a book of the same size as the 1910 edition (780 pages) which sold for $2.50. Printing costs are about 100% higher than in 1910, but we hoped to sell the new book at $3.00 and get out without a serious loss. We did some preliminary advertising in which we named a price of $3.00 for the new book. The new edition was held until the important acts of 1922 could be included and when the book was finished it contained 1,158 pages or about 400 more than the 1910 edition. The final costs show that $4.00 per volume will not cover the manufacturing cost and postage but we have decided to furnish the book at $4.00 postpaid believing that this is as much as the average churchman will care to invest in a book of this character. We regret that we could not produce the book at $3.00 as we had hoped but the size of the book and present printing costs made it impossible.

R. E. Magill, Secretary,
Presbyterian Committee of Publication,
Richmond, Va.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Enoree Presbytery has the honor of being the only Presbytery to report the Every Member Canvass completed on time; and also went over the top $2,500 above its quota.

At an adjourned meeting of Pee Dee Presbytery held in Bennettsville, S. C. April 30th, the pastoral relation between Rev. C. G. Brown and the churches of Clio and Carolina was dissolved and Mr. Brown was granted a letter of dismissal to Kings Mountain Presbytery in order that he might accept a call to the church of Dallas, N. C.

Mr. Brown has done a wonderful work in the field he is leaving and Presbytery expressed sincere regret at losing him.

Jonesville—On Friday evening, May 25th, at 7:30 a conference of C. E. Workers for the counties of Cherokee, Spartanburg and Union, will be held in this church, conducted by Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent of Young People's Work. All officers and committee chairmen and leaders are expected to be present. An interesting program has been arranged. A prize will be given for the best thought or suggestion on "Better Society Work" brought out during the conference. The conference theme is: "Better Society Work." Societies have been asked to select speakers for the program.

Greelyville—Beginning Sunday, April 22d, and continuing through the following Sunday, Rev. W. H. Miley, D.D., evangelist of the Synod of South Carolina, preached able sermons twice a day in McDowell Presbyterian Church, Greelyville. He was ably assisted in the service of song by Mr. W. Furman Betts, of Raleigh, N. C. Dr. Miley's sermons, clear, simple and full of the spirit of Christ, rejoiced the hearts of Christians, leading them to dedicate their lives anew to God's service, and brought a goodly number, some 25, to profess their faith in Christ, and unite themselves with the churches of the town. God is using this servant of His to render glory to His name and to Him we give the praise.
R. H. Ratchford.

Effingham Church—The great progress along almost every line of the church work during the second year of our pastor's, Rev. P. D. Patrick, work here is very encouraging indeed. During the past year the Woman's Missionary Society was organized along the Auxiliary plan, and there was not only an increase in membership, but the women through the Auxiliary more than doubled their contributions over the past year.

A men's Bible class was organized in the Sunday School with a membership of 30. Three other classes were also made into organized classes. The Senior Christian Endeavor Society more than doubled its membership and was given honorable mention at the state convention. There was also a Junior Christian Endeavor Society organized.

We had a splendid meeting the first week in November conducted by Rev. Ray Riddle and Mr. S. E. Ayers of the seminary as song leader. During the year we had 14 additions to the church, nine of the 14 were received on profession of faith and seven of the nine were adults.

Our every member canvass was a success. We are glad to note an increase of $150 to benevolences over last year's gifts.

One of the outstanding features of our work for the past year was the Daily Vacation Bible School which was held during the last two weeks of June and the first week in July. There was an enrollment of 40 children, and we feel that it was of such a benefit to the children of our church and community that we are planning to have the school again this summer.

The members of Effingham Church feel that God has greatly blessed us and our mother Church, Hopewell, in sending us as our pastor and leader, Rev. P. D. Patrick. Correspondent.

Conestee (Reedy River)—Last Friday night a conference of C. E. workers for Greenville County was held in this church, conducted by Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent of Young People's Work. There were 112 present, 93 of whom were C. E. officials.

A picnic supper was served on grounds promptly at 7 o'clock; and at 7:45 the conference began its session. Rev. J. G. Walker, Third Church, Greenville, lead the devotional exercises. The singing was earnest and inspiring.

The conference theme was: "Better Society Work." A prize was offered for the best thought or suggestion for better society work open to every one taking part in the conference. Each speaker was given five minutes on the program to show his subject would lead to better society work. While all of the speeches were full of "pep" and enthusiasm, no speaker used the five minutes.

Better Society Work, Miss Augusta Walton, Reedy River; The President, Miss Virginia Taylor, First Church, Greenville; Lookout Committee, Mr. Reid Patrick, Second Church, Greenville; Prayer Meeting Committee, Mr. Leonard Howard, First Church, Greenville; Music, Miss Pallie McCrittick, Lickville; Prayer Meeting Leader, Mr. C. A. Ware, Second Church, Greenville; Literature, Miss Stoddard, New Harmony; Missions, Miss Agnes Deal, First Church, Greenville; The Social Committee, Miss Caroline Swingley, Third Church, Greenville; The Pledge, Miss Catherine Bryan, First Church, Greenville.

The open conference developed lively discussions. Mr. Charles Cutino made a hit on the subject, "pep" or C. E. Ball. The judges, Dr. E. P. Davis, Dr. T. W. Sloan, Rev. Messrs. J. G. Walker, R. C. Morrison, and J. S. Davis, awarded the prize for the best thought suggestion on better society work to Miss Allie Gentry, First Church, Greenville. After a series of delightful games on the church grounds, the conference adjourned with the Mispah.

Greenville—On the evening of April 27th, the officers of six churches met in the First Church to complete the organization of a Presbyterian Officers League of Greenville County. After a delightful supper served by the ladies of the First Church the league went into conference presided over by Hon. R. N. Ward. The following subjects were discussed: Extension of Presbyterianism in the City, elder B. B. Smith, Third Church; Extension of Presbyterianism in the mill districts, elder P. W. Seyl, Second Church; Need at Large for the Extension of Presbyterianism, elder W. M. Stenhouse, Reedy River Church; Co-operation, elder W. Lindsay Wilson, Fourth Church; A Definite Aim, Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent H. M. S. S. and Y. P. Work.

Constitution and By-laws were adopted and the following officers elected: President, deacon W. B. Smith, Second Church; first vice-president, R. N. Ward, First Church; second vice-president, W. M. Stenhouse, Reedy River, Church; secretary-treasurer, W. Lindsay Wilson, Fourth Church.

NORTH CAROLINA

Greensboro, First Church—On May 27th, Dr. Campbell Morgan will begin a series of Bible lectures in this church. All the churches in Greensboro are invited to unite in this Bible conference. Dr. Morgan is considered the greatest Bible teacher living.

Arrangements are being made for the Summer Camp in June. A special train will leave Greensboro Monday morning, June 18th, and returns Thursday morning, June 28th. If you have not made your percentage for camp, mail your registration fee of $2 to the church office and a place will be reserved for you in the camp or a tent will be reserved for your family. The camp is open to every one this year and any friend of any other denomination can be invited. The camp is limited to 300, and we expect to have every vacancy filled by the first of June.

Acme—On Sunday night of April 22d we closed one of the best meetings ever held at this church. Rev. J. J. Murray, Presbytery's evangelist, came to us on April 16th and preached with great power each night. On Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, morning services were held, the Lord's supper being observed on Sunday morning. Each morning during the week Mr. Murray went over to the high school and held chapel for the children. The boys and girls found his chapel talks not only enjoyable but very helpful and inspiring. It seems that the time was just ripe for a real revival. For some weeks a season of prayer at mid-week services had been engaged in with special reference to the coming meeting. Another important factor in the success of the meeting was the good effective personal work rendered by members of our own congregation, and by the public school teachers. There was perhaps the largest attendance on these services that the church has ever had. As to visible results, most of the church members took their stand for a more consecrated life; 22 were added to the membership of the Presbyterian Church, and 11 to the Baptist. Twenty-eight joined on profession of their faith in Christ, and five by letter. We feel that the power of the Holy Spirit was with us through the whole meeting, and that we have been greatly strengthened, both as a church and as individuals for the Master's service.
J. K. Fleming, Pastor.

Greensboro, First Church—It is seldom that a church has to apologize for lack of seating capacity, yet the following is taken from the First Church bulletin:

We regret exceedingly the fact that many of our people have been unable to secure a seat at the Sunday morning services. Three Sundays ago, dozens of people were unable to get seats and each Sunday morning people have to sit in the cloak room in order to worship with us. The officers of the Church regret this condition exceedingly and we hope by this time next year, we will be able to accommodate all of those who would like to worship with us.

We would like to say to our Sunday School teachers who are doing such faithful work and who are clamoring for more room for their classes that within another year, we hope to be in our new Sunday School quarters and be able to accommodate all those who would like to attend Sunday School.

Fayetteville Presbytery met in the Highland Church, Fayetteville, N. C., April 17-19, 1923, with an attendance of 38 ministers and 86 ruling elders.

Organization: Rev. A. T. Lassiter was elected moderator and Rev. G. F. Kirkpatrick, temporary clerk.

Received: Rev. V. G. Smith from Roanoke Presbytery, and Rev. H. R. McPherson from Tygart's Valley Presbytery.

Candidates Received: John S. Johnson, of Rex Church, and DeWit F. Helms, of Kenly Church were received as candidates for the ministry.

Churches Organized: Fairview, in Johnson county. Church Dissolved: Rennert.

Dismissed: Rev. L. C. Campbell, to Albemarle Presbytery.

Evangelist Rev. M. F. Ham, made a most earnest and forceful address before Presbytery on Evangelism.

Overtures to Assembly: The Assembly was overtured to sever all relations with the Federal Council of Churches, and to appoint a special committee to thoroughly investigate charges of unsoundness in doctrine of certain missionaries on the foreign field.

Overture from Fayetteville Auxiliary asking Presbytery to overture Synod to hold Young People's Conferences in both Western and Eastern parts of the Synod, was granted.

Foreign Missions: At a popular meeting, Rev. A. Hoyt Miller from Mutoto, Africa, made a most instructive address.

Home Missions: The reports from both Presbytery's and Synod's Home Mission Committees showed a good advance all along the line. The Synod's Committee is determined to place a worker in every field in the Synod where there is evident need. All the fields of our Presbytery are filled but two, and these are making progress toward securing pastors. Superintendent Letcher Smith was re-elected for another year by a rising vote. Assembly's Home Missions was also stressed, by our Presbyterial Committee, and the churches urged to give this great cause their proportionate part of the benevolent funds.

Elise High School received a great deal of consideration, and Presbytery expressed its conviction that this school must continue, and pledged it its sympathetic support.

Parkton Group: Parkton, Lumber Bridge and Rex. were allowed to call Rev. V. G. Smith as pastor and arrangements were made for his installation.

Ephesus Group: Calls were placed in the hands of Rev. F. M. Bain, accepted by him, and arrangements made for his installation.

Jonesboro Group: The proposed change in this group, which involves a division of the large group, was placed on the docket for consideration at an adjourned meeting in June.

Fall meeting will be held at West End Church, September 25th.

Nominations: A. L. Bullock, Rev. A. R. McQueen, J. W. McLaughlin and McKay McKinnon were elected to succeed themselves as trustees of Flora Macdonald College for a term of four years.

Presbyterial Sermon: Rev. D. L. Jones appointed to preach on "The Virgin Birth" at next regular meeting.

New Permanent Committee: A committee on Synod's Home Missions was elected, consisting of Rev. A. W. Crawford, Rev. Letcher Smith and ruling elder E. H. Williamson.

Union Seminary Review was most heartily commended to all our ministers as being a most excellent quarterly.

Stewardship Committee recommended an overture to the Assembly asking that the church year be made to conform with the calendar year. This was adopted.

Sabbath Schools: The report to Assembly shows a total enrollment of 11,419 and a total of contributions $19,390.

After adopting a hearty vote of thanks for the gracious hospitality of the Highland Church, Presbytery adjourned to meet in the First Church, Fayetteville, June 26th, at 1 o'clock p. m.

E. L. Siler, S. C.

FLORIDA

The Synod of Florida is called to meet in the First Church, Jacksonville, May 10th, at 9:30 a. m.

W. A. Cleveland, Moderator.

GEORGIA

Columbus, First Church—On account of impaired health, our former pastor, Rev. I. S. McElroy, D.D., was not able to resume his work here at the end of his annual vacation in September last and he was granted, by this congregation, a further vacation of three months with the privilege of an additional three months if, in the meantime, his recovery was not complete. After several months, Dr. McElroy decided that he would not be physically able to do the work necessary here and tendered his resignation to take effect April 1st.

Rev. T. M. McConnell, D.D., of Greensboro, N. C., a minister who is most favorably known throughout the Southern Presbyterian Church, came to us as stated supply pastor the first of last November. On account of his somewhat advanced years he has been doing this type of work for some while and has repeatedly declined calls because of the arduous labor entailed. By his deeply spiritual sermons, by his gentle, genial and loving ministrations and address; by his Christ-like humility of spirit and by his constructive and aggressive force in the Master's work, he has greatly endeared himself to our people.

At a congregational meeting held immediately after the morning services, Sunday, April 15th, at which Rev. A. G. Harris presided, the Pulpit Committee recommended that Dr. McConnell be called as pastor. This recommendation met a most enthusiastic and unanimous response from the congregation by a standing vote and the committee was instructed to tender the call at once. Dr. McConnell's gracious acceptance of it is certainly an evidence that he loves our people and feels that God has given him an opportunity to do a great work in this part of the Master's vineyard. He will be given an assistant so soon as some worthy younger minister can be secured for the place.

Pulpit Committee.

ARKANSAS

Hardy—The Ozark Summer Conference will meet at Warpeton Inn, Hardy, Ark., and will continue from June 4-18. These conferences are springing up over the Church and will do much good in bringing our people together.

Blytheville, First—It is common enough for the pastor, at this season of the year, to begin the report of the church's year's work with the words: "This has been the best year in the history of the church." We can truly say that this has not only been the best year in the history of the Blytheville Church, but also, so far as visible results are concerned, the best year in the life of the pastor. The church and pastor co-operating have achieved during the past 12 months several things to be properly gratified over. We are calling them "The Big Six:" (1) Making a new record in enrollment and attendance at the Sunday School, and the winning of the Presbyterial Banner for the largest per capita offering for Sunday School Extension. (2) The organization and successful conduct of a mission in the western part of the city. (3) The organization of a church at Bassett, in which we had the encouragement and assistance of the superintendent of Synod's Home Missions. (4) Overscribing our benevolence quota, notwithstanding the undertaking for a new church building. (5) Plans formed and being matured for the erection of a thirty or forty thousand dollar church. (6) The addition of 74 new members to the church roll, about 24 of whom came in as a result directly or indirectly of the Stephens-Storrs Tabernacle meeting, and the rest through the personal efforts of the pastor and congregation.

At the beginning of the new year, the pastor's salary has been increased $300.

Paul may plant, Apollos water, but it is God who giveth the increase.

J. Walter Cobb, Pastor.

KENTUCKY

Kentucky Christian Endeavorers are looking forward to the big convention in Hopkinsville, May 11, 12, 13. Everybody who can go will be there, those who can't go will be anxiously awaiting reports from the returning delegates.

Nowhere are they busier than they are in Hopkinsville. There never were more enthusiastic committees anywhere than those right now in Hopkinsville getting everything ready for the Christian Endeavor or guests who will come in May. Let everybody go to Hopkinsville!

The Spring Meeting of the Presbytery of Louisville was held at the Bardston Presbyterian Church, April 9-11. There were present 25 ministers and 16 ruling elders.

Rev. W. H. Armistead was received from the Presbytery of Louisville, U. S. A.

Candidates J. C. Vander Roost and Willis R. Booth were licensed to preach the Gospel. Licentiate G. S. Wuthrich was examined for ordination and accepted a call to the Boston and Hebron Churches. He will be ordained and installed by the following commission April 22d. Rev. David M. Sweets, D.D., Rev. Alfred E. Higgins, Rev. J. V. Logan, D.D., and ruling elder Owen R. Mann.

The Presbyterial sermon was preached by Rev. Thomas Brewster on the subject, "The Holy Spirit." Rev. I. W. Wilcox was appointed to preach at the next meeting on the subject, "God's Detestation of Sin."

The Presbytery established the office of central treasurer and Rev. R. T. Phillips, D.D., was elected. A helpful conference was conducted on the subject of evangelism, and that subject was the predominant one throughout the meeting.

The next meeting will be held at Shelbyville, October 8, 1923. Rev. David M. Sweets, D.D., was the moderator and Rev. I. W. Wilcox was the temporary clerk.

W. H. Hopper, S. C.

Overture to the General Assembly—The Presbytery of Louisville overtures the General Assembly to convene in Montreat, N. C., May 17, 1923:

To make some worthy appropriation to the expenses of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America for the current year in view of the membership, of the Assembly in the council, which expresses the essential oneness of the Protestant Evangelical Churches of our country.

The protest which our General Assembly has made on former occasions against some of the actions of some of the commissions recognized by the council has made plain the position of our Assembly with regard to the spirituality of the Church and has helped the council to a larger emphasis on the fundamental truths of Christianity.

We regard the membership of our Assembly in the council as a helpful contribution to the religious work and ideals of this generation.

W. H. Hopper, S. C.

LOUISIANA

New Orleans, St. Charles Avenue Church—We are very happy over the victory of faith of last Sunday. Subscriptions for $34,000 had been secured for the new Sunday School building and our loyal people last Sunday raised $26,000 more. It was thrilling and magnificent the way they kept pledging until the entire $60,000 was subscribed. Our faith was in the furnace but it stood the test. Many people made as many as three and four additional pledges. We are grateful to God for this manifestation of His living power in the hearts of His people. The membership of this church is 316. The total contribution for all causes for the past year was $17,848.

MISSOURI

The Presbytery of St. Louis met in St. Charles, Mo., April 10, 1923. Present, 14 ministers, and 14 ruling elders. Officers, Rev. C. B. Yeagan, moderator. Rev. Allen Anderson, temporary clerk.

Dismissions, Rev. H. F. McChesney was dismissed to Transylvania Presbytery.

Rev. D. C. MacLeod, D.D., was dismissed at a recent pro re nata session to St. Louis Presbytery, U. S. A., and the pastoral relation between him and the Central Church dissolved.

The Presbytery, also at a pro re nata session, ordained Mr. J. Allen Anderson, and installed him as pastor of the Mizpah Church; and at another ordained Mr. William Colby, and installed him as pastor of the newly organized church of the Open Door, in St. Louis.

The following overture was ordered sent to the General Assembly:

"That the General Assembly advise the Woman's Synodical Auxiliaries that Locals and Presbyterials do not include in their Benevolent budgets gifts to other than to regular Assembly and Synodical Causes without the consent of the Synodical management; also that the Synod's committees on Woman's Work be advised to maintain closer relations with the same."

Presbyterial sermon by Rev. C. B. Yeagan, from I Thes. 4:3.

Next stated meeting, Overland, Mo.

Adjourned meeting, Central Church, April 24, at 3:00 p. m.

Walter M. Langtry, S. C.

OKLAHOMA

Duncan—This little Oklahoma city has experienced the greatest revival of religion perhaps ever held in any Oklahoma town or city. Over 1,000 confessions of Christ and reconsecrations. Rev. James Rayburn, of Merton, Kansas, a presbyterian preacher was the evangelist. His methods were scriptural and with the hearty approval of all the co-operating pastors and the Christian people.

Fifty-eight were added to the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. J. W. Moseley, pastor, on Sunday, April 15th; 42 of these on profession of faith of whom 41 were baptized. This with the 15 received during the last 12 months makes 73 added to the church during the ecclesiastical year. This is 100 per cent increase. The Duncan Church has at last made a permanent place in the city.

Mangum Presbytery met in Cordell, April 10, 1923. The opening sermon was preached by the retiring moderator, Rev. W. W. Sadler.

Rev. Henry Austin, of the Beal Heights Presbyterian Church, Lawton, was elected moderator. Rev. E. D. Curtis was elected temporary clerk.

The Presbyterial sermon on "Presbyterianism in History," was preached to an appreciative audience by Rev. S. L. Hogan.

Rev. J. W. Allen was received from the Presbytery of Cherokee. He accepted a call from and was installed during Presbytery as pastor of the Cordell Church. In the installation, Rev. S. L. Hogan presided and preached. Rev. J. E. Latham charged the pastor; elder D. T. Dunlap charged the people.

Rev. C. C. Tatum was dismissed to the Presbytery of Oklahoma, U. S. A.

An interesting letter was received and read from Rev. T. D. Murphy, Presbytery's missionary to Korea.

Golebo was selected as the next place of meeting. Presbytery adjourned to meet at Davis, Oklahoma, in July during the meeting of Synod to be held at the Presbyterian Encampment at Price's Falls.

J. W. Moseley, S. C.

VIRGINIA

The Presbyterian Church of Colonial Heights, a suburb of Petersburg, was organized April 29th. The young church starts off with very encouraging conditions.

Providence Church, Powhatan County. Licenti-

(Continued on page 12)

COMMISSIONERS
To the General Assembly at Montreat, N. C.,
May 17, 1923

Table listing commissioners by synod: SYNOD OF ALABAMA, SYNOD OF APPALACHIA, SYNOD OF ARKANSAS, SYNOD OF FLORIDA, SYNOD OF GEORGIA, SYNOD OF KENTUCKY, SYNOD OF LOUISIANA, SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI, SYNOD OF MISSOURI, SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Table listing principals, postoffice, and alternates for various synods: Presbytery of Fayetteville, Presbytery of Mecklenburg, Presbytery of Orange, Presbytery of Wilmington, Presbytery of Oklahoma, Presbytery of South Carolina, Presbytery of Tennessee, Presbytery of Texas, Presbytery of Virginia.

CHILDREN

SCHOOL HAS CLOSED

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl ten years old. I am in the fifth grade at school, my teacher's name is Miss Vera Rullen, I like her fine. I have one sister and one brother; my sister's name is Mildred, my brother's name is Forrest; he is in the second grade at school. Our school has closed for this term and I am missing all of my friends. I go to Burgaw to Sunday School. I have recited the child's catechism and have my testament and I know 13 questions in the other catechism. My oldest sister is going to school at Burgaw, she is boarding at Rev. P. L. Clark's sister's house. Rev. P. L. Clark is our pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Burgaw. I will have to close in fear of the wastebasket, as I want to surprise my father.

Your little friend,
Lucile Mallard.

Burgaw, N. C.

FOUR OF EACH

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl ten years old. I am in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Williamson and I like her fine. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. Our pastor is Mr. Gibbs, and our superintendent is Mr. Bulla. We like them fine. I have four brothers and four sisters. I must close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your unknown friend,
Dorothy Ray.

Linden, N. C.

THE BEST IN THE STATE?

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eight years old. I live in the best town in North Carolina. I go to the First Presbyterian Sunday School. My papa is superintendent of Sunday School. I'm in the third grade in school. I like spelling best of all. This is my first letter, so please put it in. I want to surprise my little cousins in Charlotte.

Your little friend,
John Morris Gray.

Statesville, N. C.

TESTAMENT AND BIBLE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 11 years old. I go to school at Lan Tabor, and in the sixth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Winifred Williamson and I like her fine. I go to Sunday School. My Sunday School teacher is Mrs. W. N. Campbell. Our pastor is Rev. C. M. Gibbs. I have recited the child's and shorter catechism and received my Testament and Bible. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your little friend,
Lazette Tew.

Linden, N. C.

PASTOR TO LEAVE

I have just finished reading some of the letters in the paper and decided to write you too. I am a little girl eight years of age. I go to the Lamar grammar school and am in the third grade. My teacher's name is Miss McLeod and I like her fine. I go to the Presbyterian Church, my Sunday School teacher's name is Mrs. M. J. McInnis, and I like her fine. My music teacher's name is Mrs. Reedy and I like her fine. Our pastor, Mr. McSween is going to leave us and we hope that God will not let him go somewhere else and leave us.

Your unknown friend,
Elizabeth McInnis.

Lamar, S. C.

A BIRD BOARDING HOUSE

Dear Standard:

As I am too young to write, mother is writing this letter for me. I am learning to read and write, and I can whistle like a boy. My brother, David, goes to school. He is 11 years old and in the seventh grade. We have a German police dog named "Trench." He will do funny tricks. I had lots of fun this winter feeding the birds. I have a feeding table in the back yard. Lots of birds come every day for food; I have seen wrens, juncos, cardinals, song sparrows, chowink, hermit thrush, and the naughty little English sparrows. David has put two bird-houses so I hope some birds will build in them. I love to watch the birds eat. I have no kitty, I would rather have birds. I am going to plant a little flower-garden and have pretty flowers. I love to hear mother read the little stories and letters in your nice paper.

Your little friend,
Inez Caldwell.

Tryon, N. C.

PHYLLIS' PARTY

Ruth and Marian Burnam leaned against the railing of the wide piazza of their new country home in the New Hampshire hills.

"Smells nice and piny," said Ruth, lazily, sniffing the warm fragrance.

"Let's make a playhouse of pine boughs," said Marian. Too much in a hurry for steps, both climbed over the railing and jumped to the springy moss below.

"I wish there were some other little girls," said Ruth, half an hour later, peeping out of the tiny bushy playhouse. "All these houses—three, four, five, on the road half-way down the hill—and nobody in them but grown-ups. Mother said so."

"I wonder if mother is sure," sighed Marian.

"That's what I asked her," said Ruth, "and she said she was sure as sure, and she began at the first house—you know that cunning low brown one with the pretty garden—and she told me who lived in every one, and there wasn't one single little girl or little boy."

"Who does live in that cunning brown house with all the flowers?"

"A lady and a big cat. The lady's name is Mrs. Merton."

"What's the cat's name?"

"O, mother didn't know that!" laughed Ruth. "She stopped there once when she was up here looking for a place, and the lady gave her a cup of tea and a piece of d'licious cake—chocolate cake with chocolate frosting as thick as that—and she saw the cat and he was 'normous, and he slept on a pillow on the table on the piazza, and the lady was afraid he'd catch her pet chipmunks."

"I never heard mother tell about him."

"Well, she did, and the pet chipmunks ran to the lady and ate peanuts out of her hand, and the only way she could tell them apart was that one's tail was bushier than the other's."

"I'm going down some day with mother, if there's a cat and cake and chipmunks," decided Marian.

"Cake was with tea," said Ruth, "so I don't s'pose we'd get any. I wish a little girl lived there."

And what do you suppose happened the very next morning? The farmer man who drove over the hilly roads early each morning to leave milk for all the families in the community left with the milk for the Burnam family a square white envelope addressed to Ruth and Marian Burnam!

"For us?" cried the two little girls, at the breakfast-table, and mother nodded and watched as Ruth slit it open.

"Why, she says, mother," began Ruth, excitedly, "that she'd like Marian and me to come and stay all the afternoon and play with Phyllis, and maybe you'd come at four for tea!"

"Who says?" asked mother.

"And she says Phyllis hasn't had any little girl to play with her for a long time and she's lonely," finished Marian joyously.

"Who says?" asked mother for the second time.

"Who is Phyllis?" asked Ruth and Marian in one breath, and then they all laughed, and Ruth said: "It's from Mrs. Merton. You said she lived in the little brown house with the garden and the cat and the cake and the chipmunks."

"And she says"—Marian took up the tale—"that we needn't let her know, but just be sure to come if we can, 'cause she and Phyllis will be 'xpecting us. Whose little girl can Phyllis be, mother?"

After luncheon, as soon as they had put on clean dark gingham dresses, Ruth and Marian scampered down the woody path, across the sweet sunny meadow, and were soon knocking at the door of the little brown house. They listened hard just a minute before they knocked, but no little girl's voice did they hear.

"My dears, come in!" Mrs. Merton greeted them. Sure enough, mother was right about the "normous cat." There he was at her heels.

"What's his name? We all know about him," said Marian, feeling at home at once. Then, suspicion flashing upon her, "Your cat's not Phyllis?"

"No, oh, no!" said Mrs. Merton. "Just plain Peter is my cat. Phyllis is waiting for you in the front east room. You don't know how glad she is that you've come to play with her."

Mysterious it certainly was. Why didn't Phyllis come to meet them at the door? Was she sick? So mysterious it was that both Ruth and Marian found themselves unconsciously tiptoeing after Mrs. Merton, noiseless as mice. One look into the little east room and they understood.

"Oh!" said Ruth. "The darling!"

"Oh!" echoed Marian. "Her arms out to us!"

In a tiny chair in the middle of the rug sat Phyllis, blue-eyed, flaxen-haired, pink-cheeked. Dressed in a dainty white muslin frock she was, with a white garden hat hung over one arm.

"And a trunk!" said Ruth, dropping on the rug with a sigh of utter content.

What was in the trunk? What wasn't in the trunk! To begin with, the trunk itself was shiny black leather with real straps and a real wee key, on one end in white letters was "P. M." "Phyllis Merton!" crowed Marian. And inside, a tray with two partitions, slippers, socks, brush and comb, handkerchiefs—yes, with lace on them—and hats, as many as six—straw hats for summer, and for winter a darling ermine cap with a tippet and muff to match.

And in the bottom of the trunk, dresses and dresses, pink, blue, white, and black-and-white checked aprons, and coats, pink, blue, white, and blue-and-white checked aprons, and coats, and a parasol, with petticoats, and all the other clothes any doll ever thought of having. Oh, now I've told! But you've guessed long ago that Phyllis was a doll and that she looked as much like a dear little girl as ever a doll could.

At four came mother, and twice she knocked and nobody heard her! So in she walked, and guided by gay voices, looked into the east room, to see Ruth and Marian on the rug, dressing a flaxen-haired doll, with wee doll dresses and slippers and hats scattered about them. On the rug, too, was Mrs. Merton, looking on, and close by her side, curled in a ball, was old Peter-cat, his eyes shut to the vanities of Phyllis' wardrobe.

Chocolate cake with chocolate frosting? Yes, a whole uncut one. And mother and Mrs. Merton drank tea out of white cups banded with gold, and Ruth and Marian drank cocoa out of tiny blue cups and everybody had little jam sandwiches, and Phyllis sat at the table with her sweetest smile and manners, and right in the middle of the party Peter-cat woke up and meowed so indignantly that he had a saucer of milk.

"Now everybody's at the party 'cept the chipmunks," said Marian.

"Hush!" said Mrs. Merton, and scratch, scratch, something scuttled across the piazza floor! They're waiting for us, but don't hurry, they're never far away."

Sure enough, on the piazza, at Mrs. Merton's first call, two chipmunks, fat, saucy, bright-eyed, scampered up with tails whisking. Tame? They ate out of anyone's hand, ran up into anyone's lap, and the door was safely shut on Peter.

"Have I had Phyllis since I was a little girl?" said Mrs. Merton, in answer to mother's question, as they were all telling what a lovely play-party that they had had. "No, indeed! I have her now, perhaps, because I never had the kind of doll I wanted when I was a little girl. And perhaps I have her," looking down into Ruth's and Marian's rapt, upturned faces, "so little girls will come to see me sometimes. Houses without little girls in them sometimes feel empty."

"May we come again, then?" It was Ruth who spoke, but four brown eyes pleaded the question.

"The oftener you come, the happier Phyllis and I will be," said Mrs. Merton. "We sometimes get tired of just ourselves, and even of old Peter."

On the way home Marian said suddenly: "She remembers just 'actly how it feels to be a little girl! And all the time she played with us we felt as if she were a little girl like us, didn't we Ruth?" A happy pause as all three rested a minute on the upward climb, then Ruth paid childish tribute.

"Why, mother!" she said in the voice of one making an unexpected discovery. "Is that what makes the difference in grown-ups—that the nicest ones remember how everything felt when they were little?"—Rose Brooks, in Zion's Herald.

Those desiring the best of table board during the Assembly at Montreat can secure the same from Mrs. W. W. McCutchen, at reasonable rate, by writing to her at Wysacky, S. C.

Miss Mamie Bays will furnish comprehensive daily reports of the General Assembly for The Charlotte Observer. This paper will be sent by mail, daily, to any address during the Assembly week upon receipt of twenty-five cents.

News of the Week

The Florida Prison System, as well as that of this State is to have a strict probing. In this State some big penologist will be employed.

In Florida the Governor wishes the judge who is charged with drunkenness, to be removed.

Federal agents are also probing peonage conditions.

During the past week various societies have met. The Woman's Club Federation met in Winston-Salem, the opening session being held in Memorial hall of Salem College, where the visitors were most cordially welcomed in a pleasing and captivating address by Mrs. Lindsay Patterson, who is distinguished with the title of founder and first president of the North Carolina federation.

The Southerland Construction Company, of St. Louis, was awarded the general contract for the erection of the George Vanderbilt Hotel, in Asheville, at a meeting of the building committee members today, with a bid of approximately $600,000.

Work on the new structure will be started within two weeks, with 12 months required to complete the nine-story hotel, which will have 200 rooms.

Asheville has been selected as the location for a national school for the treatment of mentally deficient children, and at least $50,000 will be expended as an initial investment, with arrangements to care for 50 children, according to Dr. D. C. DeGroat, noted psychologist of Tampa, Fla.

A recent decision of the Supreme Court complicates the situation with regard to foreign vessels carrying liquor. Announcement that the government in 30 days will begin to "vigorously" enforce the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court to prohibit American and foreign ships from carrying liquor within the three mile limit was made by Attorney General Daugherty.

In Washington it is stated that the rigorous interpretation of the prohibition law given by the Supreme Court shall become effective June 10th.

Bootleggers along the coast are giving much trouble, so that Secretary Dendy is co-operating with the President in the plan to use naval force to bring the rum-runners off the coast of the United States to trial and break up the traffic.

In Robeson County, J. W. Bailey, who was to speak at a school commencement, was invited not to come by some over-zealous friends of A. W. McLean, of the same county, who imagined that his coming might militate against Mr. McLean, both being candidates for the Governorship.

Mr. McLean promptly wired his regrets, and invited Mr. Bailey not only to come to Robeson County, but also to Lumberton, the home of Mr. McLean.

Governor Morrison and E. B. Saweezy, vice-president of the First National Bank of New York City, began a tour of Piedmont and Western industrial centers of the State. Mr. Saweezy, who is a member of the syndicate that has a large amount of North Carolina bonds, is the guest of the Governor for the week.

United States Senator Knute Nelson died on a Pennsylvania railroad train at 8:15 o'clock April 28th, while on his way from Washington to Chicago where he was to continue on his way to his home in Minnesota.

For the first time in history the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet the bishops of the colored Methodist Church to discuss means of co-operating in regard to negro education, particularly as it affects Paine College, an institution for the higher training of negroes in Augusta, Ga. The college is owned and controlled by the M. E. Church, South.

"A plan which will revolutionize the present parcel post system of the nation has been taken under construction by the post office department. The plan involves the separation from the regular mails of all parcel post except packages smaller than the size approximated by the standard cigar box and perishable classifications, such as day old chicks and eggs. Instead of distributing parcel post in expensive post office space now crowded beyond the limit in many places, sorting would take place in warehouses adjacent to the railroad stations.

Educational

Davidson—Announcements appearing in the Davidsonian relative to appointments to membership in the teaching staff for next year are of interest. Professor L. M. Currie expects to spend the coming year at Cornell taking graduate work in chemistry and physics looking toward the Ph.D. degree. During his absence his work at Davidson will be carried on by Mr. W. N. Mebane, of the class of '18, and by C. K. Brown, valedictorian of the class of '21. Mr. Brown, who will teach some of the classes in mathematics, received his M.A. degree from the University of Virginia last year and during the present session has been a graduate fellow at the University of North Carolina. Mr. Mebane was for a time at V. P. I. in the engineers training camp prior to his return to Davidson for his degree. He will teach here two sections of Physics I and will have charge of certain laboratory work.

The department of Spanish attracts so many students that additional classes and another instructor is needed. Prof. F. L. Blythe, who graduated at Davidson a number of years ago and later took his M.A. at Columbia University, taught Freshman Latin and Greek here for two years and then accepted a position in one of the well-known university schools. This present session he has been connected with the Blue Ridge School for Boys. It is his purpose to spend the summer in Europe, studying Spanish at the University of Madrid for a time and later he will travel over the country studying the manners and customs of the people.

Dr. W. R. Grey, of the department of Latin, and vice-president of the college, sailed from New York on the 18th for a four months' visit to Europe. He will spend the first half of the time in Italy, studying Italian and classical antiquities in their relation to his special department. Later in the summer he will come to Paris for a further study of French. Before returning to this country he will tour part of the battle-scarred sections of France and Belgium.

Work on the rebuilding of the burned Watts dormitory has begun, the contract having been awarded to Blythe and Isenhour, of Charlotte, who built last summer what are known as the East and West dormitories, handsome fire-proof structures that attract the notice of all visitors to the campus. The new Watts will in large part be a reproduction of these last buildings, and will therefore be from every viewpoint an improvement on the former building, handsome and satisfactory as it was.

Hampden-Sidney College—Announcement has been made that Rev. Graham Gilmer, pastor of Tinkling Spring Church, Staunton, Va., will preach the sermon to the graduating class at the approaching commencement. The address to the graduating class will be delivered by Hon. Geo. Bryan, of Richmond, Va.

Recently we have enjoyed visits from Mr. Lyman Hoover, field secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, and Mr. Frank J. Gilliam, of our Congo Mission. Both of these gentlemen by their addresses and personal conferences left a fine impress on the student body.

Commencement day will be on June 13th, and at that time a considerable number of the alumni will attend the various class reunions.

Commencement Exercises at Chicora College, Columbia, S. C.—Program:

Saturday, May 12—5 to 6 p. m.—Annual Art Reception; 8:30 p. m.—Music Concert.

Sunday, May 13—11:30 a. m.—Baccalaureate Sermon, by Rev. Alexander Sprunt, D.D., Charleston, S. C.; 8:30 p. m.—Christian Endeavor Sermon, by Rev. T. Clagett Skinner, D.D., Columbia, S. C.

Monday, May 14—12:30 p. m.—Alumnae Luncheon and Reception; 5 p. m.—Class Day Exercises; 8:30 p. m.—Graduating Exercises. Literary Address, by Rev. J. B. Green, D.D., Columbia, S. C. Conferring Degrees. Annual Address to the Graduates, by the President of the College.

Columbia Seminary—At the seminary year comes to its close, it is always a matter of great interest as to the location of the men for work, both of the Senior class in their permanent work, and the undergraduates in their summer work. Below gives the following as to the location of the members of the student body of Columbia Seminary.

Senior Class:
J. W. Anderson, Presbyterian Church, Toccoa, Ga.
S. E. Ayers, Evangelistic work, Atlanta Presbytery, Atlanta, Ga.

A. R. Batchelor, Whitmire, Carlisle and Santu Presbyterian Churches, Whitmire, S. C.

G. W. Belk, Jr., Presbyterian Church, Pelzer, S. C.
C. D. Brearley, Hopkins and Lugoff Presbyteria Churches, Columbia, S. C.

J. V. Cobb, Shongalo Presbyterian Church, Vaider, Miss.

H. R. Foster, Carrollton, Reform and Gordo Presbyterian Churches, Carrollton, Ala.

S. H. Fulton, Honea Path and Belton Presbyterian Churches, Honea Path, S. C.

S. B. Hay, Presbyterian Church, Covington, Ga.
G. A. Hudson, Foreign Mission work in China.

C. R. Jenkins, undecided.

W. G. Neville, Landrum, Campello, Clifton Presbyterian Churches, Landrum, S. C.

R. W. Park, Presbyterian Church, Lake City, S. C.
D. C. Stogner, Lickville, Fulton and Simpsonville Presbyterian Churches, Simpsonville, S. C.

A. T. Taylor, Presbyterian Church, Atmore, Ala.

M. R. Williamson, Independent Presbyterian Church, Savannah, Ga.

M. S. Woodson, Oakhurst Presbyterian Church, Decatur, Ga.

B. F. Yandell, Rose Hill Presbyterian Church, Columbia, S. C.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

ate W. T. McDonald was ordained and installed as pastor of this church April 29th.

Staunton—The session of the First Church has invited the General Assembly to meet in that church in 1924. At a meeting of the women of the congregation this invitation was heartily seconded, without a dissenting vote. It has been 42 years since the Assembly has met in this church.

The trustees of Mary Baldwin College have purchased a site for the new college plant. It is situated a mile from the city limits on the Lee highway. It contains 200 acres, 75 of which are at present in productive orchards. The scenery is beautiful. The citizens of Staunton are delighted and enthusiastic over the securing of this site.

WEST VIRGINIA

Moorefield—The annual reports sent by this church to Winchester Presbytery were very encouraging. The resident membership is 230. The gifts to the various causes (apart from those sent to the Near East Relief) aggregated $10,134. The Woman's Auxiliary had a remarkably successful year. Its members are energetic and enthusiastic. The Christian Endeavor Society is flourishing. In the bounds of the congregation we have three outposts at which Sunday Schools are held and at which the pastor preaches monthly. The results of the work at these points, as well as that in the town, are very gratifying.

Bluefield—Rev. Warner H. DuBose was installed co-pastor of the Bluefield Church Sunday, April 29th, at 11 a. m. Rev. P. C. Clark, D.D., for nearly 13 years a former pastor of the church, presided, preached the sermon and propounded the constitutional questions; Rev. W. M. Lorimer, of Graham, Va., delivered the charge to the pastor, and ruling elder Dr. S. S. Guerrant, of Callaway, Va., the charge to the congregation. A large congregation filled church and gallery and entered very heartily into the service. It was a very happy service in every way, and gives the new pastor and the new work in South Bluefield a splendid send-off. Mr. DuBose has been most cordially received by the people. He is a young man eminently fitted for such a constructive work as is to be done in that section of the city, and under his leadership, and heartily supported by the present church the work will grow rapidly.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Central Church of Washington—Rev. Dr. J. W. Skinner, of Texas, gave to our congregation, Sunday night, April 15th, a very interesting and instructive talk on Home Mission work among the Mexicans in that large state, which contains some half-million of these southern neighbors of ours. Our pastor, Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, has been invited to preach during the month of August at Carr's Lane Church, in Birmingham, England, and the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, London, England. The Presbytery of Potomac met in this church Tuesday night, April 17th, and adjourned the next Thursday afternoon. A. H.

PERSONAL

Rev. H. H. Leach has changed his address from Swan Quarter to Kenley, N. C.

We have received an invitation from the faculty and senior class of the Albemarle Normal and Industrial Institute to attend the commencement exercises, May 19-22, 1923. This invitation is one of the most beautiful of the season.

COMMISSIONERS

(Continued from page 10)

Principals	Postoffice	Alternates	Postoffice
Rev. Robt. L. Riddle	Baltimore, Md.	Rev. Wm. Cumming	Washington, D. C.
Rev. Wm. H. Woods	Winchester, Va.	Rev. D. J. Shopoff	Stordie, Va.
George Earle	Laurel, Md.	J. E. Douglas	Aldie, Va.
H. Bradley Davidson	Washington, D. C.	T. E. Bartenstein	Warrenton, Va.
Presbytery of Roanoke
Rev. F. M. Allen	Clarkville	Rev. C. H. Phipps	Martinsville
Rev. W. E. Harrop	Chase City	Rev. H. S. Morgan	Keysville
D. Y. Henry	Brookneal	W. E. Scott	Charlotte C. H.
J. S. Moore	Prospect	T. W. Friend	Drakes Branch

Principals

Postoffice	Alternates	Postoffice
Rev. W. G. Greenless	Petersburg, W. Va.	Rev. J. L. Rogers
Rev. J. B. Bittinger	Gerrardstown, W. Va.	Rev. G. G. Sydnor
G. W. F. Mullis	Martinsburg, W. Va.	L. E. Harris
Philip Williams	Woodstock, Va.	W. B. O'Neal
SYNOD OF WEST VIRGINIA
Presbytery of Greenbrier
Rev. T. H. Wix	Frankford	Rev. H. H. Orr
Rev. J. M. Moore	Lewisburg	Rev. R. L. Kinnaird
J. R. Pence	Union	T. S. McNeil
J. W. Baxter	Retick	J. B. Sydenstricker
Presbytery of Tygarts Valley
Rev. F. H. Barron	Elkins	Rev. John McKenzie
F. L. Fox	Sutton	J. J. Dotson

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Odom-Johnson—At the manse, Raeford, N. C., on March 18, 1923, by Rev. C. Brown, Mr. W. C. Odom, of Raeford and Miss Sallie Mack Johnson, of St. Pauls, N. C.

Hunter-Sherrill—On April 5, 1923 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Sherrill, of Raeford, N. C., by Rev. W. C. Brown, Mr. Godfrey Earl Hunter, of Laurinburg, N. C., and Miss Marquerite Sherrill, of Raeford, N. C.

Monroe-Lindsay — At the manse, Hope Mills, N. C., on March 15, 1923, by Rev. D. L. Jones, Mr. C. Leroy Monroe, of Hayne, N. C., and Miss Linnie Lindsay, of Cumberland County, N. C.

Wood-Monroe—At the manse, Hope Mills, N. C., on April 11, 1923, by Rev. D. L. Jones, Mr. Martin L. Wood, of Rockfish, N. C., and Miss Clara Monroe, of Hayne, N. C.

DEATHS

Price—After a brief illness in the morning of April 24th at her home in Wilmington, N. C., Bettie Price in the 80th year of her age.
He giveth His beloved sleep.

MRS. M. P. SHAW

Whereas, on March 26, 1923, our heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, called from us unto Himself our co-worker, Mrs. M. P. Shaw, we, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Rex Presbyterian Church, wish to express:

First. Our appreciation of her life, and recommend her faithful Christian character to all as an example of loyalty and cheerful obedience to His will.

Second. Our sympathy to her loved ones.

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and copies to the Presbyterian Standard and the Robesonian for publication, and a page in our minute book dedicated to her memory.

Mrs. I. J. Williams.
Mrs. J. M. McIver.

ARCHIBALD FAIRLY PATTERSON

On March 1st Mr. Archibald Fairly Patterson passed to his reward. The end came at Baltimore, Md., in Johns-Hopkins Hospital, where he was being treated for an old malady. The immediate cause of death was pneumonia. The funeral took place at the First Presbyterian Church of Laurinburg and the remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery.

Mr. Patterson was born January 1, 1857, near Laurinburg, in Scotland County, North Carolina. His father was Dr. Archibald Patterson, a practicing physician, and his mother was Miss Mary Ann Fairly. Both families were well known and highly respected in the community.

In November, 1881, he was married to Miss Emily Elliot, of Cumberland County, N. C. Of this union ten children were born, two sons and eight daughters. The sons and two daughters died in childhood.

Mr. Patterson lived all his life in the county of his birth. He made his home on the plantation located near the Laurel Hill Presbyterian Church. The home and the church were the two main centers around which his life revolved. His presence was a benediction to both institutions. The family altar, hospitality, love and truth of that home will long remain a heritage to those who knew him best and loved him most. His services in the church he loved so well, the mother church of that county, will never be forgotten. He held up high standards of Christian life as an elder and Sabbath School superintendent for many years and inspired the congregation to live up to them. His place in public life, while less marked than in the home and church, was that of a Christian gentleman. He took a keen interest in and lent a generous hand to all movements for the uplift of humanity.

We mourn his loss, yet we bow in deep humility, submission and resignation to the Father's will. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" His fallen life is a challenge to friends and neighbors to take up the unfinished task. His spirit articulates through the immortal words:

"To you we throw the torch from falling hands."

Be yours to lift it high.

D. M. McIntyre.

MRS. HATTIE GIBSON MORGAN

We, the members of Circle Number 2, of the Laurinburg Presbyterian Church do lovingly pay this tribute of respect to the memory of our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Hattie Gibson Morgan.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we point with pride to her record as a member of this organization, her hearty co-operation, her devotion to her church.

Second, While the circle has suffered a great loss, and we miss her untiring interest in our work, yet we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

Third, That we assure the bereaved family of our sincere sympathy and earnest prayers, that the God of peace and comfort may be very near to them in their sorrow. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes, that a copy be sent to

Laxatives Replaced By the Use of Nujol

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

Wash the Poisons of RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

SHIVAR SPRING AS NATURE MADE IT. NOW PROTECTED BY SANITARY SPRING HOUSE.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucamines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept our guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-weeks' visit to this celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water if you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

Fremont, North Carolina.

After using Shivar Water my rheumatism has almost entirely disappeared. When I commenced to take it I was unable to turn myself in bed. I am now going where I please. Wishing you much success in your noble work, I am Very respectfully,
J. H. B.

Seranton, South Carolina.

My wife has been a sufferer of rheumatism, and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease.
J. D. M.

Bishopville, South Carolina.

The Water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. Have been drinking it three months and am entirely free from pain. I stopped the medicine upon receipt of the first Water.
H. S. C.

Fredericksburg, Virginia.

Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement.
Wm. C. C.

Lexington, Virginia.

I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water. Please ship at once and oblige.
J. P. R.

Roper, North Carolina.

I am anxious to get more of the Water. It has done me more good than anything I have ever tried for rheumatism.
Mrs. H. C. E.

Leeds, South Carolina

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent result. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.
C. A. C., M. D.

Union, South Carolina.

I have suffered from headaches for the past ten years, due to constipation, but since using your Water I have been greatly benefitted and scarcely have headaches at all. It has made me feel better in every respect and has given me a fine appetite, something I did not have before.
C. B. C.

Warrenton, Virginia.

It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.
MRS. J. R. C.

Chancellor, Alabama.

I have been for many years affected with uric acid and kidney trouble, and the Mineral Water has helped me more than anything I have ever done for them, and therefore heartily recommend same to all who need a speedy relief.
W. F. M., M. D.

Florence, South Carolina.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your spring water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.
Mrs. T. K.

Atlanta, Georgia.

In the interest of the afflicted I cheerfully state, seeing your advertisement in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, I decided to try Shivar Spring Water in the case of my daughter, who had been a sufferer from a malignant type of sciatica, and could get no permanent relief from medicine. After using the Water a few weeks she has almost entirely gotten relief from pain. In this case it has been a great blessing.
REV. M. L. U.

Fill Out This Coupon and Mail It Today

SHIVAR SPRINGS,
Box 3-L, SHELTON, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith three dollars (check or money order) for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within thirty days.

Name _____
Address _____
Express Office _____

$200.00 PRIZE

Washington, D. C. Apr. 16.
Two hundred dollars will be given as a prize to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for No.'s 33 and 34, the new trains between New Orleans and New York, to be inaugurated on Sunday, April 29th, by The Southern Railway System, the Louisville and Nashville, The West Point Route and the Pennsylvania Railway, according to announcement made today by W. H. Taylor, Passenger Traffic Manager of The Southern, Washington, D. C., to whom all suggestions should be sent. The prize will be awarded after all suggestions have been considered by a committee of officers of the interested lines.

R. H. GRAHAM

Division Passenger Agent
Southern Railway System
Charlotte, N. C.

TEACHERS WANTED

Positions to offer in grades, High School subjects; Principals and Superintendents of High Schools; also in Colleges. Correspond with us at once.

SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY
410 Wesley Memorial Bldg. Atlanta, Ga.

the family. Also that a copy be sent to the Presbyterian Standard for publication.

Mrs. Geo. F. Avinger.
Miss Mary McKinnon, Committee.
Miss Bessie McNeill.

Story and Incident

HOW JOHN PAID ANN

The family were at the supper table when John came in with his skates. After supper his father said to him: "John, you have been gone all the afternoon. You did not get your work done. It must be finished tonight, you know."

John went out into the shed with gloomy brow. It was not long, however, before the tones of his voice came in very cheerfully through the closed door into the sitting room.

"Is that Nan out in the shed with John?" asked Janetta.

Her mother smiled and nodded.

Janetta was almost grown up. She felt herself to be wise and often liked to give her mother advice, as most of us have

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach. R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship.

For catalogue and information, write—
Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President, Clinton, S. C.

A COLLEGE THAT DEVELOPS

Morals and Christian Character

As Well as Mind and Body

An A grade college, co-educational, of highest standards and scholarship.

GUILFORD COLLEGE

Thorough instruction, excellent equipment, under Christian environment. Courses leading to A.B., and B.S. Degrees. Excellent Musical training and Home Economics. Able faculty. Fine athletic record. 10 modern buildings. Large campus. Healthful climate. Rates reasonable. Six miles west of Greensboro. For literature and other information, write—

THE PRESIDENT, GUILFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A.B., B.S., B.M. Degrees

Catalog on Request

Address the Registrar

STATEMENT

HOME SECURITY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

DURHAM, N. C.

Condition December 31, 1922, as Shown by Statement Filed

Amount of Capital paid up in cash	$ 50,000.00
Amount of Ledger Assets December 31st of previous year, $93,571.31; Total	93,570.31
Premium Income, $326,816.52; Miscellaneous, $3,812.88; Total	330,629.40
Disbursements—To Policyholders, $115,002.46; Miscellaneous, $187,985.94; Total	302,988.40
Business written during year—Number of Policies, 44,853; Amount	4,490,291.00
Business in force at end of year—Number of Policies, 48,398; Amount	4,723,595.50

Assets

Mortgage Loans on Real Estate	$ 105,650.00
Net Value of Bonds and Stocks	10,000.00
Cash	1,661.31
Interest and Rents due and accrued	1,297.25
Premiums uncollected and deferred	2,439.00
All other Assets, as detailed in statement	20,235.89

Total $ 141,283.45
Less Assets not admitted $ 8,725.00

Total admitted Assets $ 132,558.45

Liabilities

Net Reserve, including Disability Provision	$ 78,470.00
Policy Claims	400.00
Premiums paid in advance	2,800.38
Estimated Amount payable for Federal, State, and other Taxes	600.00

Total amount of all Liabilities, except Capital $ 82,278.38
Capital paid up in Cash $50,000.00
Unassigned funds (surplus) 280.07 $ 50,280.07

Total Liabilities $ 132,558.45

Business in the State of North Carolina During 1922

	INDUSTRIAL
	No.	Amount
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State in force
December 31st of previous year	44,677	$4,126,142.00
Policies on the lives of citizens of said State issued during the year	44,853	4,490,291.00
Total	89,520	$8,616,433.00
Deduct ceased to be in force during the year	41,131	3,892,837.50
Policies in force December 31st	48,398	$4,723,595.50
Losses and Claims incurred during year	599	$ 38,464.00
Total	599	$ 38,464.00
Losses and Claims settled during the year, in full, 38,464.00	599	$ 38,464.00

President, A. M. Moize; Secretary, T. C. Worth; Treasurer, T. C. Worth; Home Office, Durham, N. C.; Attorney for Service: Stacey W. Wade, Insurance Commissioner, Raleigh, N. C.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
Insurance Department

(Seal)

Raleigh, March 2, 1923.

I, STACEY W. WADE, Insurance Commissioner, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct abstract of the statement of the Home Security Life Insurance Company, of Durham, N. C. filed with this Department, showing the condition of said Company on the 31st day of December, 1922.

Witness my hand and official seal the day and date above written.
STACEY W. WADE,
Insurance Commissioner.

WANTED — Pupil nurses for the Rocky Mount Sanitarium, at Rocky Mount, N. C. High School graduates preferred. For further information, apply to the Superintendent.

TYPEWRITERS

New and Rebuilt
For Sale, Rent or Exchange
S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

erves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.
Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.
Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses. Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions. Won't you be one to enroll? A postal addressed to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.
DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write

JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

BOILS Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923

Charlotte, N. C.

Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

liked to do in our time. She gave her some now.

"I think, mother, that you ought not to let Nan help John so much. She will spoil him. It is no girl's work for her to be carrying wood for him down into the cellar. She never seems to mind what she does, if it will make things easier for John."

"He pays her pretty evenly, I am sure," said Mrs. Neville, quietly.

"Pays her!" repeated Janetta in surprise, looking doubtfully at her mother. "How?"

"Keep your eyes open and see," said Mrs. Neville. She would give no hint of what she meant.

"John," said Nan, when they had come back into the house and were warming themselves luxuriously, "Eva Hastings cannot go to the singing class because she has nobody to take her home. We could walk just that little distance round the corner with her, couldn't we?"

"Where's her brother, Jim? Why can't he go for her?"

"He'll not be bothered, he says. You always come after me, anyway. So I think that it wouldn't be so very much farther to take Eva on home."

"I suppose it wouldn't," said John. "All right."

Janetta looked across at her mother. But Mrs. Neville's head was bent over her work.

The next day at noon John was full of a plan which the boys were making at school.

"We are going to get up a sleigh ride—just we ourselves, amongst us boys. Then we will invite the young ladies to come with us."

Janetta condescended to show a little interest. She usually felt herself much above John and his friends, but if it was a question of having a sleigh ride when sleigh rides were few, perhaps she might forget her dignity for once to advantage. John noticed this. He was divided as to whether to feel flattered or to grumble.

"Yes, of course, some of the fellows want you, Janetta," he said. "They know that generally you don't remember that they are alive; and it is just possible that now and then you slip out of their memory for a minute or two at a time. But on an occasion like this we can make-believe all round. You see, it adds something to the style to have girls on board with long skirts and their hair put up."

Nan was listening wistfully. Her skirts were not long and her hair was in a pig-tail. Still, she oughtn't to be selfish; it was nice for John and Janetta, and her turn would come by and by.

"In my own case, though," John continued, "I didn't choose my girl for style. I have more sense. She is young; she may fall asleep during the proceedings, but she is the nicest girl in town, for all that, of any size—except mother—Nan is."

"Oh, John, you didn't!" cried Nan, joyfully. "How perfectly, perfectly lovely of you!"

Janetta thought of several things, of which the sleigh ride was only one. Meantime, Dr. Neville had come in for his dinner.

"John," he said, "I hope you have not been making friends with those two Barbour boys."

"I haven't," said John; "Nan wouldn't let me. I couldn't see anything had in them; and they are awfully entertaining. But Nan made such a fuss that I had to give in."

"Well, you may be very thankful to Nan," said his father. "They have got themselves into a miserable scrape. They were picked up on a back street drunk last night and put in jail!"

While the others exclaimed and questioned, John was uncommonly silent. At the end, before he started back to school, he said, soberly:

"A fellow doesn't lose much by taking Nan's advice. Maybe if Harry and Phil Barbour had had a sister like her they never would have got into such bad ways."

In the course of the afternoon Janetta drew her chair up close beside her mother's.

"Mother," she said, "I have watched and I see. Nan gets high pay from John for hewing wood and drawing water—the highest."

"I knew that you would see it before long," said her mother. "A girl cannot do better work than build little fences of kindness and love and goodness about a brother that will help to keep him safe. Even if she roughens her hands a little at it and works rather more than her share, it is well worth while. Isn't it?"

—The Instructor.

Kill All Flies! THEY SPREAD DISEASE
Placed anywhere, DAISY FLY KILLER attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient and cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed.
DAISY FLY KILLER
at your dealer or
5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ART GLASS
for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs free on request
F. J. COOLEGE & SONS
ATLANTA, Ga.

N. C. State College of Agriculture and Engineering
SUMMER SESSION JUNE 12th to JULY 25th

Courses for teachers holding standard State Certificates, and for graduates of Standard High Schools. Courses giving College Credit for graduates of Standard High Schools. Cotton Classing courses. Catalogue upon application. Numbers limited to 1050. Apply for Reservation at once to

W. A. WITHERS, Director :: :: Raleigh, North Carolina

FASSIFERN
A HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

is situated on a plateau over two thousand feet above sea level and completely surrounded by the majestic Appalachian mountains, in the city of Hendersonville, N. C., far-famed for its year-round delightful and health-giving climate. Fassifern offers thorough preparatory courses both for entrance to colleges of highest rank and professional work. Teachers have A. B. and M. A. degrees from the following colleges and universities: Columbia University; Smith, Wellesley and Goucher Colleges; Tulane University. Next session opens September 26, 1923.

MISS KATE C. SHIPP, Principal :: HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.

Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.

A High Grade Institution for the Education of Young Women

Christian Ideals constantly held before the Students; Christian Characters in the chair of each Department; Five Teachers with M. A. Degree; Two Teachers with Ph.D. Degree; Christian Atmosphere permeating the Student Body.

Location, the very best: Myers Park, Charlotte. Equipment rapidly reaching standard requirements. Curriculum equal to that of any institution in the State. Expenses very moderate indeed, considering advantages offered and work done.

Our Motto: "Christian Women for Christian Homes." Send us your daughter, support us in our administration and instruction, and we will return a thoroughly developed and fully refined Christian woman.

For catalogue and other information, write

WILLIAM H. FRAZER, President

Box 300

Charlotte, N. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
f 7:00 pm	f 7:30 am	f 9:00 am	0	Aberdeen Ar.	45	f 6:50 pm	f 3:50 pm	f 8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	f 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	49	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	s 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	55	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	f 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	58	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	62	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
f 8:00 pm	f 9:55 am	f 9:53 am	19	Raeford	68	f 6:00 pm	f 2:25 pm	f 7:30 am
	s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	71	f 5:45 pm	f 1:25 pm
	f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	79	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
	f 10:40 am	f 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	85	f 5:25 pm	f 12:55 pm
	f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	84	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
	f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	Renix	81	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
	s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	78	f 5:08 pm	f 12:33 pm
	f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	73	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
	f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	69	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
	f 11:30 am	f 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	f 4:45 pm	f 12:00 pm

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class.
All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

WANTED—Settled white woman as working housekeeper in family of two grown women. $15-$20 per month and home. Permanent if satisfactory. Write at once to Box 339, Hendersonville, N. C.

YOUNG CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN desires to connect with some good firm. Have had 12 years experience in grocery and department store work. Am also experienced in collecting and can assist with book work. Will consider position as shipping or stockroom clerk, or any position, except travelling, that a man with a good education and 12 years of business experience can fill. Best of references furnished.

M. A.
Care Standard.

The little volume that I published several years ago, "The Book of Revelation," is out of print. I should like to get several copies; and if anyone has a copy that he is willing to part with, I should like to have it. If he will send it to me and name the price, I will remit upon receipt of the book. G. F. Nicolassen, Oglethorpe University, Ga.

MITCHELL COLLEGE (Junior)
(Founded 1856 by Concord Presbytery)

Two years of standard, accredited college work—courses leading to Baccalaureate degrees—Excellent department of Music—Certificate courses in Home Economics and Secretarial.

Mitchell Academy — An accredited High School, with standard and flexible courses.

Bible teaching emphasized throughout.

Teacher Training courses for secular and Sunday Schools.

Catalog on application.

W. F. Hollingsworth, Pres.
Statesville, N. C.

Sparkles.

The Man Worth While

It is easy enough to be happy
When life is a bright, rosy wreath,
But the man worth while
Is the man who can smile
When the dentist is filling his teeth.
—New York Times.

Little Bobby had been praying for some time for a little sister, but as time passed with no fulfillment of his petition, he finally came to the conclusion that it was no use, and announced his intention of stopping.

Shortly after he was called into his mother's room to welcome two little sisters. Gazing thoughtfully at them a few moments, he said:

"My, but it's a good thing I stopped praying when I did."—Biblical Recorder.

"Mamma, I just now fell downstairs and hit every step all the way down!" exclaimed little Mary, who attends the Christian Science Sunday School.

"Did you hurt yourself, dear?"
"No, mamma, I kept saying, 'Truth, truth, truth!' every step I hit and I didn't hurt myself a bit. But I had Fido in my arms when I fell, and I think he is pretty badly hurt."

"What makes you think so, dear?"
"Why, every step we hit he yelled, 'Error, error, error!'"—Judge.

Absent-minded medical school professor, to class: "I will now give a practical demonstration of the fundamental principles of anatomy, by exhibiting the inner workings of a frog which I dissected this morning."

Taking a small neat package from his pocket, he cut the twine and folded back the paper, dislosing two ham sandwiches and a piece of cake.

"Most peculiar," stammered the bewildered professor. "I could swear I ate my lunch."—The Open Road.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 613 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The STIEFF TONE

Is famous with three generations of music lovers. It has never been duplicated. It is the expression of a passion for perfection that has actuated three generations of piano makers.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail — appealingly pretty — easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Veils and Lace are used in making model shown.

There is a "Quality Seal on Every Wheel," if it is a Heywood-Wakefield.

The special treatment of the reed in a Wakefield Carriage enables it to retain the beauty and freshness of the finish much longer than the average kind.

These carriages are built to afford the baby the greatest amount of comfort. We have a big variety of these Coaches from $20.00 to $60.00

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representative of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., MAY 16, 1923

No. 20

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
The Church's Leadership	1
Union Seminary	1
The Meeting of the General Assembly	2
The Young People's Conference	2
CONTRIBUTED—
The Foolishness of the Cross—By Rev. A. A. McGeachy, D.D.	3
The Federal Council As It Is—By Rev. A. S. Johnson, D.D.	4
"Shorter" Catechism	4
The General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers	4
Supplementary Report of the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions	5
The Assembly's Y. P. Conference	5
Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Closer Co-Operation	5
The S. W. P. U.—By Rev. W. C. Clark	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

THE CHURCH'S LEADERSHIP

IN some sections the demand is urgent and persistent that the Church take the lead in everything that looks to the betterment of the world. In the newspaper that comes to our desk this morning are the glaring headlines: "Church to Lead in Fight on War." From the lips of distinguished preachers we have heard it said that the Church should place itself in the lead of all moral reforms. One easily gets the impression that those who thus talk think the Church belongs to us and that we can use it for any purpose that we see fit. If it can be used as an agency to stop war, use it for that. If it can be used to settle the labor disputes, use it for that. If it can be utilized to promote reforms of any kind, use it for such purposes. Let us use the Church freely, and do all the good with it that we can.

Whose Church is it that we propose to use so freely? Is it our Church? Not so have we been taught. It is recorded in our official standards that it is the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. If this be true, then had He not better be consulted as to how it is to be used? Has He expressed any will on the subject? Has He given us any clear intimation as to what He wishes His Church to do? Can any one cite chapter and verse where He authorized His Church to head social reforms? Did He head any reform movements? Did He settle any labor disputes? Did He organize a campaign avowedly to put a stop to war? Had we not better consult Him as to what we shall do with His Church?

Can you really promote moral reforms by using the Church as an agency? Of course. Then why not do it? We may raise the same questions about Christ. No doubt He could have made a first-class king. He could have framed a wonderful code of laws for Palestine, and cleaned it up, and made a model little kingdom of it. If the Romans objected, He could have taught them in short order to pack up their duds and go home. Why did He not do it? Presumably because He did not wish to. It is altogether possible then that He does not wish His Church to take the lead in all sorts of social and industrial and political reforms. You can peel potatoes with a razor, but that does not prove that it was made to peel potatoes with. Peeling potatoes with it is very likely to render it less fit for doing the thing it was made to do.

It is a great pity that we have to preach the same sermon over so frequently. Especially is it a pity that we have to preach it to those who ought to be able to preach it themselves. How any one can study the New Testament with the care that every preacher should give to its study, and not see that Christ restricted His Church to purely spiritual ends to be pursued by strictly spiritual methods, we cannot understand. The Apostles so understood Him. Paul leaves us in no doubt. "Though we walk in the flesh, we do not war according to the flesh, for the weapons of our warfare are not of the flesh, but mighty before God to the casting down of strongholds." Now all these reforms which the Church is asked to lead are dependent for success on carnal weapons. They can be brought about only by means of civil legislation. They can be maintained only by the use of physical force. When the Church is engaged in reform movements, it is simply lending its aid to the State. That was what the Church avowedly did, and did on a large scale, during the world war—it lent its aid to the government to help the government kill Germans and win the war. The Church is disposed to glory in this performance. We have just noticed a call for all the churches to observe an annual memorial day to keep alive the memory of how the Church helped to break the Hindenberg line and start the enemy on the retreat. Now the Church is asked to take the lead in putting a stop to war. But how? By preaching the Gospel of Christ and expelling the demon of war from the hearts of men? No, but by urging the civil governments to band themselves together and stop it by force, if necessary.

We Southern Presbyterians ought to know our lesson. We were put out of the church of our fathers by those who taught that the Church should lend its aid to the State, especially in time of war. Instead of inquiring of Jesus Christ what He would have His Church do, they sent a telegram to President Lincoln to know if it would strengthen the hands of the administration for the General Assembly to give an expression of its loyal support. When he answered that such an expression would be a great help, the Assembly proceeded to pledge its support to our noble constitution and to the Federal government. It was equivalent to expelling its Southern members. Those who now hold that it is the duty of the Church to lend its aid to the State in the conduct of civil affairs, would do the same thing today in the same circumstances. This is the reason why many of us are decidedly apprehensive of the Federal Council of Churches. The leaders in this Council hold this utterly false theory of the Church's mission, and they spend most of their time in devising ways to help our government manage its affairs.

UNION SEMINARY

As a member of the Board of Trustees of the Union Seminary and also as an appointee to address the graduating class, the editor spent several days in Richmond.

Please bear in mind that when a Southern Presbyterian speaks of the Union Seminary, he does not mean the seminary of that name located in New York, where they run a factory that turns out doctrinal views that would not lie easy on the stomach of the Southern Presbyterian, even if you could persuade him to swallow them.

This Seminary in Richmond occupies a position doctrinally that is as far from its New York namesake as one pole is from the other.

The session just closing has been one of the best in the history of this old institution. The number of students in attendance reached 128, which breaks the record of any Seminary in our Church. This increase in attendance calls for increased endowment, as the space available both in sleeping quarters and recitation rooms is not sufficient. In order to accommodate this increase the Board took steps to purchase two residences.

The death of Dr. Theron Rice last summer was a serious loss, not only to the teaching force, but also to the student body, upon whom his lovely Christian character left an indelible impress. The vacancy in the faculty has not yet been filled, but Rev. E. T. Thompson, the talented son of Dr. Ernest Thompson, of Charleston, W. Va., has been elected associate professor of the same chair. The President reported that Mr. Thompson has already been at work, and is giving entire satisfaction.

Dr. W. D. Reynolds, of Korea, presented a memorial scroll, given by the seminary students in Korea, to commemorate the beginning of the work of our Church in Korea.

On Monday afternoon, the fortieth anniversary of Dr. Moore's connection with the Seminary was celebrated. As the editor was unable to reach the Seminary in time, he will be unable to picture the scene, but according to all reports the distinguished President received his dues, and bore with dignity his "blushing honors thick upon him."

We clip the following from a Richmond paper: The exercises yesterday were in honor of Dr. Walter W. Moore, president of the institution for the last 19 years, and member of the faculty for

N. C. Library Dept. Acq. 1923

40 years. Students of the seminary, training school, and friends of the seminary took part in honoring Dr. Moore. President John S. Munce, of the board of trustees of the seminary, the only living member of the building committee that erected the buildings here 25 years ago, extended a cordial welcome to the visitors. He paid a high tribute to the seminary faculty and students, and told of the great economic value the institution has been to Richmond. His real subject, however, was a personality—his colleague and friend, Dr. Moore. He said it was impossible to think of the seminary without thinking of Dr. Moore. "His clear vision of the greatness of his work," Mr. Munce said, "his enthusiasm for a pure evangel as God's message to man, his courage striving against difficulties that seemed insurmountable, his infinite patience, his refined courtesy, his sound scholarship, his scorn of everything unworthy, his lovable disposition, his kindness of heart, his gentleness and his meekness are some of the traits that have made him an honored leader, beloved by all with whom he comes in contact."

Following President Munce's address, Rev. H. J. Williams, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, presented Dr. Moore three handsomely bound volumes, entitled, "What They Say to Dr. Moore . . . 1883-1923," containing several hundred letters from ministers in all parts of America and in every country where the Southern Presbyterian Church is conducting missionary work. Referring to the style and content of the letters, Mr. Williams declared: "Dr. Moore, every man who was given an opportunity to write a letter for this volume, has violated the tenth commandment by coveting your English with which to express his own appreciation. . . . Some of them are written in Emersonian English, some in Latin, and a few in Hebrew. In them you are referred to as a Christian statesman, and you are. In some you are called the Moses who has led the prophets through the wilderness for 40 years, only you have never doubled back into the wilderness. Some have called you a peerless leader, a distinguished scholar, a courteous gentleman, and a humble Christian. All of these and more you will find written in these Books of the Chronicles."

Dr. Moore expressed his appreciation of the gift and reviewed the events in connection with the growth of the seminary.

The Board appointed a committee to draft resolutions appreciative of Dr. Moore's life and services. Dr. Moore responded in a speech full of feeling.

Besides the routine business the Board took steps to secure two residences for housing the overflow of students; elected Mr. E. T. Thompson as associate professor of the Bible Chair; and arranged for Dr. Taliaferro Thompson to have a leave of absence in order to visit the far East.

The many friends of Dr. E. C. Caldwell, whose health last Commencement was such that he was under the care of a specialist and was unable to attend to his duties, will learn with great pleasure that he has measured up to every demand the past session and is in finer physical condition than for years.

The prospects of the Seminary were never brighter. The Commencement exercises were held on Wednesday morning.

The editor made some scattering and desultory remarks to the graduating class, taking as his subject, "Some Don'ts for Young Preachers."

Dr. Moore presented the diplomas to twenty-two graduates, and then gave a brief review of the world as it was in 1898, when the Seminary came to Richmond. It was a wonderful address, such as few men could have made. It was both a retrospect and a prospect—a combination of the sublime and the ridiculous, the humorous and the pathetic, delivered in that choicest English of which he is the unchallenged master.

The members of the Board, as usual, were entertained in the homes of the faculty and residents.

We have always maintained that Hampden-Sidney retained the old Virginia hospitality as no other section. That peculiar charm of that delectable village seems to have been brought to Ginter Park with the Seminary, and makes those of us who lived in the old days, live over our youth.

THE MEETING OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

By the time this copy of the Standard reaches our readers the General Assembly of our Church will be about to open its proceedings. This year the meeting will be at Montreat, and it will be at the most beautiful season of the year in the mountains of North Carolina.

As the official organ of the Synod of North Carolina, the Standard extends the glad hand to our brethren of the other Synods and prays that their stay among us will not only be pleasant but profitable, and that the steady conservatism of North Carolina Presbyterianism may characterize all of their actions, with the result that the Church may take an advance step in everything pertaining to God's Kingdom here.

We pray that the peace of God may dwell among them, and that in honor they may prefer one another, and that each man may look, not upon his own things, but upon the things of others.

There may be many important matters coming up for action, which we hope may be prayerfully approached and prayerfully considered.

Let those at home pray constantly that the Holy Spirit may dwell among them and direct all they do, and hold ever before them the ideal Church, whose main and only business is to preach the everlasting Gospel.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE

We cling to the old doctrines, because they are the fixed elements in our worship, being founded upon Him who is the same yesterday, and today, and forever.

In our application of these doctrines we believe in progress, and therefore we welcome the evidence of progress in our work among the young people.

This year there is to be a great gathering of them at Montreat, under the direction of trained leaders, but at Davidson, on June 12 to 19, the young people of this Synod will gather and for seven days they will study along every line that will fit them for wider service.

The following will constitute the faculty:

Bible—Rev. Robert Yost, D.D., King College, Bristol, Tenn.; Mrs. S. H. Askew, Bible teacher, Atlanta, Ga.

Sunday School Work—Miss Virginia Nourse, Assembly's Training School, Richmond, Va.

Home Mission Study Book—Rev. J. J. Murray, Wilmington, N. C.

Foreign Mission Study Book—Rev. Woodrow Hassell, Japan.

Young People's Society Work—Miss Julia Lake Skinner, White Bible School, New York.

Music—Mr. Claude T. Carr, Mooresville, N. C.

Speakers—Rev. Homer McMillan, D.D., Sec. Field Work and Publicity of Assembly's Home Mission Committee; Rev. W. E. Hill, D.D., Fayetteville; Rev. C. M. Richards, D.D., Davidson; Rev. Samuel Glasgow, D.D., Knoxville, Tenn.; Rev. Robert Yost, D.D., Bible Teacher, King College; Rev. Flournoy Shepperson, D.D., Chester, S. C.; Rev. Woodrow Hassell, Marugame, Japan.

R. C. Reed, D.D., Retiring Moderator of Assembly

Devotional

THE UNEXPECTED GOD

How full of surprises God is! He who is most sure of God is never quite sure what He will do next, in what situations He will manifest Himself, out of what griefs He will bring glory.

One Man's Tragedy

Here is a lad far from home in the midst of a wild country. He is not only a wanderer. He is a fugitive. The anger of a brother whose birthright he has stolen had made it unsafe for him to remain at home any longer. For him it is exile or death. Not for years will he hear again his mother's voice or feel her hand in love and blessing upon his head. Probably never again will he see the father whose fast-ebbing strength gave token that death is not far away. And he has been very much a home boy. He cared not for the fields and the chase. He preferred sitting by the camp fire and listening to the homely conversation of his parents. And now that is all behind him—how far behind him he does not know—perhaps forever. With sinking heart he sees the sun setting in the western sky and watches "darkness fall from the wing of night."

In addition to the distress of his separation from home was the lugubrious weight of his sense of guilt. Had he been exiled because of his espousal of some unappreciated virtue there would have been some compensation. John Bunyan found his prison cell a place of glory. While his heart ached at his separation from wife and children, there was blessed balm in his consciousness that his separation was for conscience's sake. But there is no such anodyne for Jacob. While he sits upon the rocks of the hillside, thicker than the gathering shadows comes about him the gloom of a guilty conscience. "Conscience doth make cowards of us all." What if Esau were upon his trail with such wild bloodthirsty fellows as usually consorted with him? He can picture the scene should he be overtaken—Esau's anger, his own helplessness, a few sickening blows, a wail, spurring blood, darkness. A night bird's call sends a shiver through him.

To add to his unhappiness there is the uncertainty of tomorrow. What if he finally arrives at his uncle's tents and pastures? Uncles are sometimes hard taskmasters. He will not meet him on terms of equality, for he is a fugitive. If there were any hardness in Laban's disposition, present circumstances would only accentuate it. It is a lonely and comfortless lad that finally makes a pillow of stone and throwing his cloak over his face succumbs to weariness and sleep.

His Surprise

And then the unexpected happened. He dreamed—a dream of angels and of God. To him the dream became a revelation. He was persuaded that his vision was a token that he was not abandoned to his fate, that in spite of his folly and sin God still loved him. After all, the lonely man was not alone. The friendless had a great Friend, the defenseless a great Defender. And so the place of fears became a place of confidence; the night of despair was lighted by a great hope; the barren hillside was none other than the house of God and the gate of heaven. Had anyone told Jacob as night overtook him that God was near, he would have been laughed to scorn. But God was near. And Jacob had a surprise whose gladness he never forgot. In the long weary years ahead, while he toiled to build a home and get a start in life, he remembered and was comforted.—Rev. Albert E. Day in N. Y. Advocate.

THE ONE ESSENTIAL

If Christ has stamped His signature and superscription upon any soul, at its rising again its eternal fortunes are bright and safe and sure. The one essential thing is union and communion with Jesus Christ, both now and forever.

I was in heaven one day, when all the prayers
Came in, and angels bore them up the stairs,
Unto the place where he who was ordained such ministry
Should sort them, so that in that palace bright
The presence chamber might be duly light;
For they were like the flowers of various bloom,
And a divinest fragranee filled the room;
Then did I see how the great Sorter chose
One flower that seemed to me a hedgling rose;
And from the tangled press of that irregular loveliness
Set it apart, and "This," I heard him say,
"Is for the Master." So upon his way
He would have passed; then I to him:
"Whence is this rose, O thou of cherubim, the chiefest?"
"Knowest thou not?" he said, and smiled,
"This is the prayer of a little child."

THE FOOLISHNESS OF THE CROSS

By Rev. A. A. McGeachy, D.D.

Text: "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness." I Cor. 1:18.

Amiel once said, "When the cross became the foolishness of the cross it took possession of the masses." Religion can interest a few people if offered as a cult, a philosophy, a system of morals. But it makes an appeal to the masses only when it speaks the language of the heart, addresses itself to the instincts and urges its claim with arguments that mere intellectuals will say are foolish and unreasonable.

Paul uses this word foolishness several times in this chapter. He says that the preaching of the cross is foolish. Again he speaks of the foolishness of preaching. Again Christ crucified is foolishness to the Greeks. And, finally, he speaks of the foolishness of God. What did he mean? Well, Paul was afflicted as we are today, with a lot of high-brows and literary dilettantes who were not interested in anything unless it was obscure nor satisfied with the statement of anything unless it was complicated. Their rhetoric was florid, their metaphysics Teutonic, their logic transcendental. I will give you a sample of it. The Gnostics at Colossae repudiated the direct mediatorship of Christ as being too simple. They postulated a chain of mediators running up from man to God, each of diviner type than the one below. Christ the first link in the chain was a little more than human. The last link in the chain was a little less than divine. You shook the chain on earth and the vibration ran up through all the links to heaven. You prayed to Christ, He to the one above Himself, and so on and on until your prayer was relayed to the Father. The Gnostics scoffed at this simple gospel, as too easy. Anybody could understand it. It was foolishness. Paul took the word out of their mouths and said, I preach the foolishness of the cross.

I want you to examine with me the foolishness of the cross and then the foolishness of those who say it is foolish.

Take such matters as the virgin birth of Christ, which involves His divinity. The inerrancy of the Bible, which involves the reliability of what we depend upon for salvation. And the miracles, specially the miracle of His resurrection, which witnessed the truth of His claims. A constant effort is made to discredit these things as beneath the dignity of modern scholarship, as inconsistent with the discoveries of science. It is the old charge of foolishness.

Now, I don't want to be foolish myself in answering the charge. I am no more of a scientist than some of these men are Christians. The shoe-maker should stick to his last, and all of us should be modest. In the strife between orthodoxy and unbelief there is too much ridicule on the one side and dogmatism on the other. I simply do not see that these things are foolish.

It seems to me perfectly reasonable that Christ should have been conceived and born in the way described. It was prophesied, and I believe the prophets. It is a matter of history and must be believed until disproved. It has been accepted by the great and the good of every generation, including the first.

Contributed

It will not satisfy me to discredit it by representing it as strange, unnatural, contrary to precedent, miraculous and a contravention of the laws of nature. Religion is nothing to me if not miraculous. And I think it perfectly reasonable that God should break in upon the established order when conditions required it.

But did conditions require it? Yes, we were in a bad fix in consequence of sin. Justice had to be done, for the soul that sinneth, it shall die. Our moral nature had been poisoned and had to be cleansed by blood, for without the shedding of blood there is no remission. We had lost the truth and had to be taught it again. We had become alienated from God and were afraid of Him and had to be reconciled. Now for all this great work an extraordinary personage was required. One who had no sins of his own and so could bear ours. No mere man, but a God-man.

Again it seems entirely reasonable that God should have written a book, in which should be compiled the fragmentary revelations of His will that had been given through prophets and apostles. And that this book should be accurate and dependable in its main thesis. I won't insist that it must be biologically abreast of the times. But in matters concerning God, duty, character and salvation, it must be exact, and I maintain that it was and is.

Is there anything foolish about such a position as this. Can't a sermon be a perfectly good sermon and yet contain an historical inaccuracy. Last Sunday a child convicted me of misquoting the catechism. And the Sunday before that I made O. Henry die in Asheville though he died in New York. Yet both sermons were blessed of God in the conversion of souls. Why then all this pother and pow-wow about the six days of creation? They were not writing geology. The Bible is right on the deceitfulness of sin, on the wickedness of the unregenerate heart, and on the way of peace and salvation through Christ.

Look now at the foolishness of those that talk about the foolishness of the cross. If a man does not accept the Bible account of creation, that God made all things of nothing, he must explain the creation in some other way, and he can't do it.

If he does not believe in the inspiration of the Bible he must explain how 40 authors writing 66 books over a period of 1,600 years could stick to the same theme and develop the same system. He must show how four ignorant fishermen could draw a perfect and identical picture of Christ presenting the carpenter's son as the ideal of the ages.

If he doesn't believe in the resurrection of Jesus he must explain the 11 appearances of Christ after His resurrection, one of them to above 500 people who were still alive when Paul was circulating his story.

If he does not believe in the actual forgiveness of sins he has a controversy with you and me and millions more who say that their sins have been forgiven. Really, it seems to me that, in view of the difficulty, it is rather foolish to deny these things.

Yet some men do. Out of Germany came the theory that Christ swooned and did not die on the cross. This in spite of the broken legs of the thieves, the pierced side of our Lord, the faith and enthusiasm of His disciples and their final martyrdom for the truth. Men are willing to believe this fiction rather than the simple story.

A gentleman told me that what we call the divinity and humanity of our Lord were His subjective and objective mind and that where He failed to work miracles it was because His subjective mind was not in working order. The Bible account declares He could do no mighty works "because of their unbelief," yet the gentleman believes his own theory rather than the scriptural explanation.

I am constantly amazed at the credulity of unbelief. There is no story too big to swallow, no theory too absurd to adopt, no trouble that men won't take to get around the truth when the truth is unacceptable. Like the leper Naaman they are not content to wash in the waters of the Jordan, but want the prophet to strike an attitude and call on the name of his God. Like Tom Sawyer, freeing the negro Jim, they are not content to unlock the door and let him walk out, but must follow the books and dig a tunnel and go to all manner of unnecessary trouble only at the last to release a negro who had already been made free by his mistress' will.

In conclusion I bring you the old gospel of your fathers. I have no quarrel with science.

"Let knowledge grow from more to more,
But more of reverence in us dwell."

However, there are some things in which we can only make progress as we are taught of God, and in which the men of our generation have no advantage over the men of the first. The heart is the same in all ages and the problem of sin and its forgiveness. There are no higher types of character now than Abraham and Moses and Joseph. We shall never outgrow the Sermon on the Mount nor grow up to the statue of Christ.

Therefore I preach you this old Gospel, to the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness, but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the wisdom of God and the power of God.

(Stenographic report of a sermon preached by Rev. A. A. McGeachy, D.D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Charlotte, N. C.)

The boy who "turns out" well, is likely to be the one who "turns in" early.

ANDERSON AUDITORIUM

Where our Assembly is holding its sessions this Week

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL AS IT IS

By Rev. A. S. Johnson, D.D.

At the General Assembly, in Charleston, W. Va., in 1922, on the debate as to whether any appropriation should be made to the Federal Council, the following resolution was introduced by Rev. Wm. E. Crowe, D.D., of St. Louis, and adopted by the Assembly:

"In view of the fact that the Federal Council is including in its budget of expense, causes that do violence to the conscience of the Presbyterian Church of the United States as well as to its traditions, therefore, this Assembly declines to make any appropriation to the work of said Council at this time." (Minutes of Assembly, 1922, page 34).

The Federal Council continues to do violence to the spirit and interpretation of the office of the Church of Jesus Christ, as set forth in our Confession of Faith and the Word of God. This can be abundantly shown from its own official records since the last Assembly.

The representatives of the Council ring the changes upon the fact of the Protestantism of its organization. An examination of its workings will show that this is bunk, and given out for special occasions. In the Federal Council Bulletin of April-May, 1922, page 4, in relation to its action regarding the coal controversy, the following statement is made:

"It is in view of these principles that the Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America united with the Department of Social Action of the National Catholic Welfare Council in an appeal on behalf of the Christian conscience of America. . . .

"The two great religious groups then united in a request to the Government to set up an exhaustive and scientific study to get at the pertinent facts of the coal industry. These should include authoritative information as to wages, profits, capitalization, ownership, cost of transportation and distribution, etc."

Not satisfied in bringing in those of the Romish persuasion, the Jewish brethren are also called in, as shown in the Bulletin of June-July, 1922, in article on "Conference Urges in Place of Economic Combat."

"Unusual attention has been attracted by the action of the three great religious groups in the United States—Protestants, Catholic, and Jewish—in making a joint appeal to the President on June 19th to take action looking toward the settlement of the coal strike. This is believed to be the first time that the three religious organizations have definitely joined in an attempt to bring moral and religious principles to bear upon an industrial question. The action was taken by the Federal Council's Commission on the Church and Social Service, the Department of Social Action of the National Catholics Welfare Council and the Social Justice Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis. It is noteworthy that President Harding has since acted along the lines suggested."

But the farther you go, the worse it gets, as shown in Bulletin of October-November, 1922, page 16, under the caption, "Ku Klux Klan Disowned by the Church":

"The mistaken impression that the Ku Klux Klan deserves, and is receiving, the support of the Protestant Churches, has led the Federal Council of the Churches to make its position clear and unmistakable. A full statement was made by the Administrative Committee at its September meeting." And in the Bulletin of January, 1923, page 32, reiterating and congratulating itself on its action, we see the following: "The action taken by the Administrative Committee in October with reference to organizations whose membership is masked and concealed has met with much favorable comment from the religious press. In only a single church publication, as far as we have seen, has exception been taken to the action."

Local problems become too small for the Council, and they begin to take a world sweep. In a communication sent out from the Washington office, November 29, 1922, this statement is made, "expressing the sentiment of approximately 50,000,000 members of the Christian churches of all faiths in America":

"On the eve of the Lusane Conference, representatives of great church bodies or organizations interested in Near East problems made a final appeal to Secretary of State Hughes, on Saturday, November 18th, to make the 'observers' of the meeting fully accredited delegates. This action by the various churches and other organizations was taken at a meeting called by the Federal Council of Churches."

But why go on? The whole thing is filled with actions and deliverances contrary to the spirit of the Church of Christ, and one is struck by the absence of the things to which the whole program of the Church ought to be committed. For instance, the action taken by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council at its annual meeting, December 15, 1922. (This is from their own Bulletin): "We voice the gratitude of the Churches of America for the success attending the Conference on Limitation of Armaments, convened by our government, and we urge our government to take steps toward the convening of a second conference to deal with the economic reconstruction of the western world." It is to be remembered that this was the conference in which the name of Christ was omitted from the opening prayer because it would offend some of the pagan nations represented there.

The Council has not the right ring about it. It will not stand the test of evangelical scrutiny. Here, for instance, is a book review under the head, "Some Books That Have Stirred and Helped." The reviews are signed by S. M. C., the initials of one of the two general secretaries of the Federal Council, and the same initials which have signed all the editorial pages for the past year, except one, so we suppose this is authoritative. Here is the review (Bulletin, March, 1923, page 32).

"If anyone who thinks that Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is disturbing the foundations of Christian faith, would read his 'Christianity and Progress,' we do not believe he could any longer cherish such a notion. Dr. Fosdick here displays at his best that rare combination of spiritual insight and searching intellectual analysis which has given him a unique place in the life of the American church. Unflinchingly he faces the problems which confront us because of the modern conception of progress in every realm, including religion, traverses the fields of doubt and questionings and leads us out into the clear sunlight of an unshakable Christian faith."

Here are some of the things that this book of "unshakable Christian faith," commended by the Federal Council Bulletin, says:

(Page 32): "The progress, he plainly tells us, involves 'the abandonment of an external and inerrant authority in religion.' (Page 153).

"He holds that Christ shared with His generation many forms of thought which modern scholars have outgrown (page 203). He throws out the substitutionary atonement (page 43).

"He ridicules all miracles (page 227). The miracle of the Israelites crossing the Red Sea is placed alongside the story of Aladdin's lamp (page 51).

"He condemns the church for 'dividing mankind into two classes, the saved and unsaved' (page 238). He holds that in practically every man's life 'a door or window has unwittingly been left ajar, and through that God steals in.'" (Page 239).

The specious plea is made that the Federal Council is the only organization that represents a united Protestantism, but in no sense does it represent the solidarity of American Protestantism. Take the South, for instance. The largest and most aggressive body of Protestants (the Southern Baptists) which is not even on speaking terms with the Federal Council. The Protestant Episcopal Church at its last General Convention, held last summer on the Pacific coast, after careful examination, voted not to go into it as a church. The United Lutheran Church is not a member, having only a consultative relation with it. The Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church does not belong, so in the South, at least, the field is held by the Disciples, Presbyterians, Methodist, and Negro Methodist Churches.

Mind you, now, these things set forth above have already been done in the past year in the name of our church, because we cannot escape the responsibility since we are a part of the whole. If they violated our conscience and traditions, last year, in their deliverances on the holy week, lenten observances, the Irish question, etc. ad nauseam, what have they done this year, and what will they continue to do?

The thing that is going to face our Assembly is whether we shall continue to allow a Council that has repeatedly violated the very principles for which our Church stands, continue to use our name, or make a determined stand now, for the testimony for which our Church has been called of God.

"SHORTER" CATECHISM

Catechetical instruction has always been a favorite method of imparting the truth in Presbyterian circles. For the sake of truth and accuracy, and in justice to all parties concerned, it may not be amiss to propound for the consideration of those interested in the authority of the Assembly and the democracy of our Church the following questions and answers:

Q. 1. Did the Presbyterian Committee of Publication adopt a paper favoring the Graded Lesson System, and outlining certain proposed "changes and improvements" in the present system of Lesson Helps?

Ans. Yes, in a series of six resolutions, afterward printed in the Earnest Worker, October, 1922, page 580.

Q. 2. Were these plans submitted to the General Assembly?

Ans. 2. Yes. In the Earnest Worker for October in printing these resolutions it was announced that they had been "submitted to the Assembly" (Earnest Worker, October, 1922, p. 580, column 2, par. 1), and in the Minutes of the Assembly of 1922, on page 36, in the Report of the Standing Committees on Publication and Sabbath School Work, section 7 in answer to overtures, the reception of these plans and the Assembly's action is recorded. (See Assembly's Minutes, page 36).

Q. 3. What action did the Assembly take in regard to this paper?

Ans. 3. (Page 36, Minutes of Assembly): "In view of certain serious consequences likely to be involved in any attempt to bring our Church to the adoption of the Departmental or Graded Lessons, instead of the Uniform Lesson Helps, at present almost universally in use among us, the Assembly instructs the Executive Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work to adhere to the preparation and publication of the lesson helps at present being furnished the Church, and that the Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work be instructed by this Assembly to study thoroughly the whole question of lesson systems and lesson helps and report its findings and any recommendations which may seem wise to the next General Assembly."

Q. 4. What were the main issues decided by this action?

Ans. First, that the present system of lesson helps be adhered to, and second, that the whole matter be studied further by the committee and their recommendations submitted to the next Assembly.

Q. 5. Did the Presbyterian Committee of Publication obey the Assembly's instructions?

Ans. They did not. They violated both the spirit and the letter of the Assembly's action, when they went ahead with their proposed plans for changing and improving our lesson helps (see Earnest Worker for April, pp. 194-197, where these changes and improvements are described in detail), and even published as the basis of these changes they have already made the very paper which they had submitted to the Assembly (Earnest Worker for October, page 580, column 2, par. 2), which paper the Assembly had declined to approve.

Q. 6. Does the Presbyterian Committee of Publication offer any excuse for violating the Assembly's deliverance?

Ans. Yes. In the Earnest Worker for April 1st, in defending their action the excuse is offered that the "special report" (the paper outlining the proposed improvements, submitted to the Assembly, printed in the October Earnest Worker) was not brought before the Assembly by the standing committee and that the Assembly was "left in the dark as to these plans for improving the publications."

Q. 7. What does Dr. A. S. Johnson, who was chairman of the standing committee, have to say about this?

Ans. Dr. A. S. Johnson, in a recent issue of the Standard, makes it very clear that this was not true. That the Assembly was not "left in the dark" in regard to the contents of this paper. That in bringing in the recommendations of the committee touching this "special report," he held the report itself in his hands, and asked if the Assembly wished to have it read.

Q. 8. In view of these facts does the Presbyterian Committee of Publication consider itself the agent of the General Assembly, or an independent board with the authority to follow its own wisdom and judgment, even in violation of the Assembly's most definite instructions?

Ans.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL FOR LAY WORKERS

"The Presbyterian" of Philadelphia has an article urging the Northern Presbyterian Church to establish a Presbyterian Bible Training school where their women workers can be trained under the church's own teachers for their different lines of service, and makes this reference to the lead taken in the matter by our branch of the church:

"For a long time other churches have been doing this very thing. First, the Southern Presbyterians. In 1915 this comparatively small denomination of some 400,000 members established its own Assembly's School in Richmond, Va. They have eight acres in the best section of the city, where 116 of their young women are being trained—30 of them for foreign service. They are erecting a group of buildings to cost $350,000, designed to accommodate 300 young women. Here, under teachers who are their own ministers, breathing the same atmosphere they find in the churches which nourished and converted them, they are trained in its doctrine and ideals and history, and from such instruction they go out with intelligent sympathy to do its work. Is the Southern Presbyterian Church wise? Is it well that she who has given these young Christians the character and consecration which leads them to dedicate their lives to Christ and which expects to utilize their lives in service should herself train them for the kind of work she wants done?"

The new buildings of the Training School at Richmond are making rapid progress, and visitors at commencement found that they present a very handsome appearance. It is hoped that they will be ready for occupancy by the opening of the session in the fall.

SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF FOREIGN MISSIONS TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY ON ORTHODOXY ON THE FOREIGN FIELD

Since the adoption of the report of the Executive Committee on this subject, which is published in our annual report, we have received the report of the Investigating Committee of the Mid-China Mission, together with the report of a meeting in joint session of the Investigating Committee of the two China Missions, held in Shanghai on February 10th, relating to conditions in Nanking Theological Seminary, and making recommendations to the board of directors of the seminary, which were adopted by both missions by circular vote before being presented, and a statement of the action of the board of directors of the seminary on these recommendations.

A copy of these documents, which are quite voluminous, is herewith submitted for the use of the Standing Committee on Foreign Missions, or for reference by any member of the Assembly.

The substance of them is herewith given as follows:

The following union institutions within the bounds of the Mid-China Mission are included in this report, namely, Hangchow Christian College, Nanking Woman's Bible Training School and Hangchow Union Girls' School. After what the report shows to have been a most thorough and careful investigation, all these schools are commended as being "worthy of our continued co-operation and sympathetic support," and free from anything objectionable, either in their courses of instruction or in the personnel of their faculties.

The mission co-operates in the medical departments only of Nanking and Shantung Universities. By special arrangement with the mission which control Peking University, Dr. J. Leighton Stuart, a member of the Mid-China Mission, is acting president of that institution. The mission also co-operates in an interdenominational school for foreign children at Shanghai. The Investigating Committee of the Mission is conducting an investigation as to the character of the instruction given in these schools, which has not yet been completed.

The report of the Mid-China Committee implicates no member of that mission as holding doctrinal views not in harmony with our standard.

The finding of the Mid-China Committee with reference to Nanking Theological Seminary is the same as that of the North Kiangsue Committee mentioned in our previous report, calling attention to the unsatisfactory character of the instructions given by one foreign member of the faculty, and also of that of two native teachers in the institution.

At the joint meeting of the two Investigating Committees held in Shanghai on February 10th, a unanimous agreement was reached as to certain recommendations they would jointly make to the board of directors in the seminary, looking to the removal of one foreign member of the present faculty, to greater care in the selection of text-books, and to a better observance of the requirements of the constitution of the seminary, and of the agreements entered into by the co-operating missions, especially as to the strict adherence to the doctrinal basis of the seminary required to be signed by all the members of the faculty as a guarantee of the evangelical character of their teaching. A copy of the minutes of the joint meeting of the two committees, in which all these matters are set forth in detail, is herewith submitted along with the copy of the Mid-China Committee's report.

On March 28th a sub-committee appointed by the two Investigating Committees at their joint session met the board of directors of the seminary and presented the requests and recommendations which had been agreed upon. The minutes of this meeting with the directors are also herewith submitted. We give the substance of them in the following letter addressed by the special sub-committee appointed by the joint committee to the two missions:

"Dear Brethren: Agreeable to the instructions of the joint committee of the Mid-China and North Kiangsue Missions, we, the sub-committee of the joint committee, have met with the board of managers of the Nanking Seminary and presented in full the action of the joint committee which was endorsed by both missions by a ye and no vote.

We are glad to report that the attitude of the board was both responsive and sympathetic, as indicated by their cheerfully granting to us essentially every request we were instructed to bring before them. We wish to express our satisfaction at the action taken by the board of managers. We are sending you the action of the board for your information only at this time (not asking for any vote). The papers will come before the annual mission meetings in due course for your final action on the same."

In closing this report the Executive Committee would respectfully suggest: (1) That in handling this very difficult and delicate matter involving the relations of our two missions with several missions of other churches, our two missions have shown both wisdom and tact in so dealing with the matter as to preserve harmonious relations with the other missions involved and have also manifested a spirit of absolute loyalty to the historic position of our Church in regard to the integrity of the Scriptures and the fundamentals of our faith. (2) There are many phases of the situation with which they have been dealing concerning which their knowledge, because of their intimate contact with them, must be greater than ours, and it is possible that the issuing of any specific directions to the missions as to their further handling of the matter at the present time might prove embarrassing rather than helpful. (3) Some parts of the investigation undertaken have not yet been completed, and final action on the matters involved cannot be taken by the missions until the time of their annual meeting.

We therefore recommend that the matter be left in the hands of the two missions to complete their investigations and to effect the adjustments growing out of these investigations which they have in view, with instructions to make full report to the Assembly through the Executive Committee after their work has been completed.

THE ASSEMBLY'S Y. P. CONFERENCE

The following Young People's Conferences will be held within the bounds of our General Assembly in the next few months. Many of the youth of the Church will be making serious efforts to find God's plan for their lives. They will not be rushed to decision but surely the whole Church will be much in prayer at this time that the Spirit of God may guide them in this matter and qualify them for work in the fields which are white unto the harvest.

Young People's Conferences

May 29-June 5—Alabama Y. P. Conference, Mobile, Ala.

June 6—Mississippi Y. P. Conference, Holly Springs, Miss.

June 7-14—Alabama Y. P. Conference, Talladega, Ala.

June 11-17—South Carolina Y. P. Conference, Clinton, S. C.

June 12-19—North Carolina Y. P. Conference, Davidson College, N. C.

June 13-21—West Virginia Synodical Y. P. C., Lewisburg, W. Va.

June 14-21—Kentucky Y. P. Conference, Danville, Ky.

June 15-25—Missouri Y. P. Conference, Fulton, Mo.

June 16-24—Georgia Y. P. Conference, Gainesville, Ga.

June 19-26—Tennessee Y. P. Conference, Ovoca, Tenn.

June 19-28—Montreat Y. P. Conference, Montreat, N. C.

July 10-19—Mississippi Y. P. Conference, Hattiesburg, Miss.

July 16-23—Virginia Y. P. Conference, Massanetta Springs, Va.

July 17-25—Kerrville Y. P. Conference, Kerrville, Tex.

July 17-27—Oklahoma Y. P. Encampment, Davis, Okla.

Student Y. M. C. A. Conferences

June 9-18—Y. M. C. A. Conference, Hollister, Mo.

June 15-24—Y. M. C. A. Conference, Blue Ridge, N. C.

State Christian Endeavor Conventions

May 11-13—Kentucky C. E. Convention, Hopkinsville, Ky.

June 6-10—Texas C. E. Convention, Sherman, Tex.

June 8-10—Arkansas C. E. Convention, Russellville, Ark.

June 8-11—Florida C. E. Convention, Miami, Fla.

July 4-9—International C. E. Convention, Des Moines, Iowa.

REPORT OF AD-INTERIM COMMITTEE ON CLOSER CO-OPERATION BETWEEN HOME AND FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEES

To the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, Montreat, N. C.:

Brethren: The ad-interim committee appointed by the last General Assembly to investigate the practicability of bringing about a closer co-ordination of the Home and Foreign Missionary Committees of our Church, and to report its findings, with its recommendations, to this meeting of the General Assembly, begs leave to report as follows:

In view of the importance of this matter, which vitally concerns the two largest of the executive committees of our Assembly, and

Whereas, That as yet no provision has been made for a permanent home for the Committee on Stewardship, and

Whereas, The work of the Committee on Stewardship is so closely related to both Home and Foreign Missions, drawing the larger part of its support from these two sources alone,

It is therefore the opinion of your committee that further time for consideration would result in rendering greater assistance to the Assembly in reaching a proper conclusion, and therefore recommends:

1. That a decision on this whole matter be deferred until the next Assembly; and that the matter of a permanent location for the Committee on Stewardship be incorporated in the resolution now being considered by your committee.

That the Assembly fill the vacancy on the committee caused by the inability of Hon. John J. Eagan, of Atlanta, to serve.

3. That the continuance of the committee be without expense to the Assembly. Respectfully submitted, (Signed) J. Nat Harrison, Chairman.

THE S. W. P. U.

Will It Be the Same?—Let Us Make It the Same!

By Rev. W. C. Clark

A warm personal friend has written me a kind letter expressing the fear lest my recent article on the above subject might have an influence for evil on the enterprise which has called forth the liberality of our people. Those who know me best should understand that no such purpose was intended. On the contrary, I have been one of the warmest friends of the institution. I have given as I felt able to its support and sent to it my only son, and have been the means of other students going there. Dr. Bunting began his canvass for funds in my church in Greensboro and my people there gave liberally. My old church in Woodlawn made a most favorable showing along this line, and my church here subscribed more than twice their contribution to the pastor's salary, and I am encouraging them to pay in full.

I was only expressing my regret to see the several features of the plan, as drawn by Dr. Palmer and others, apparently being eliminated from the present plan, and seeking to urge my brethren to retain and give emphasis to such features of the original plan as may be retained. At heart we must all feel that the institution must be Christian, Presbyterian, and real and thorough in its work. If we do, then we should say so in the name and in the literature, in plain and unmistakable terms. Then it would greatly please the earlier friends of the S. W. P. U. if its managers could see their way clear to have as their ultimate goal the making of a real university and the education of young men studying for the ministry along with fellow students preparing for other lines of work.

The success of the young men who have gone into the ministry from the S. W. P. U. is a marked seal of approval of God upon the plan to train our young men for the ministry along with students of other branches of learning and the requirement that all students take a regular and thorough course in the Bible has given our Church an able and intelligent body of laymen who are warm friends of the Bible.

May not the hope be indulged that the idea of a university under the direction of our Church may yet be realized? A good start was made. The academic, scientific, and the theological departments were in successful operation and plans were on foot to add the departments of law and medicine and when the move was made to secure a larger endowment and move to Memphis, we hoped the way would be clear to establish the medical and law departments and to revive the Divinity school. This would have been a much easier task in a city where there were many able ministers, doctors and lawyers. One specialist in each of these departments, together with the assistance of local talent, would give us thorough courses in these departments. The idea has been suggested that the term university was not well understood at the time the plan for the S. W. P. U. was drawn—that it might "mean almost anything from a primary school up to a group of technical colleges." It would be difficult to convince those who knew Drs. Palmer, Waddell and Lyons, that they did not know the meaning of the word university when they drew the plan of the S. W. P. U. Webster, of that date, gives, in his definition, this, "A universal school, or the four faculties of theology, medicine, law, and the sciences and arts," and in the original charter the incorporators define the scope of the institution to be "to found a school of instruction in the various liberal and professional studies," etc., so that whatever may have been the popular idea of the use of the term, these men knew what it meant and how to use it.

An honored brother has assured me that my fears are groundless. No one would be more delighted than myself to find that he is correct.

The fear has been expressed that some one might make that article an excuse for not paying his subscription. I trust not. The best thing to do with a debt is to pay it. The man of honor will pay what he promises.

On the other hand, if that little article of mine should prove the means of calling the authorities back to the best features of the original plan and to a pronounced declaration of the determination to make the institution continue to be Christian, Biblical, Presbyterian and thorough, the discussion should win new friends and bind together more closely those who have been its warmest friends all these years.

Those who walked with the risen Christ to Emmaus felt their hearts burn within them. We still get the joy of the burning heart by walking the ways of life with Jesus.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

A Call to Prayer for the Young People's Conference at Davidson, N. C., June 12-19—Let us come to God confessing our sins and praying that He will restore to us the years that have been miserably barren. (Sec Joel 2:25, 12, 13; Ps. 51.)

Let us pray for the leaders of the Conference that the Spirit may empower each one for his or her work at the Conference. Zech. 4:6; John 15:5; Phil. 4:13.

Shall we not pray that the Spirit may choose the young people who shall attend the Conference and shall manifest Himself to each life? 1 Sam. 16:6-12; Rom. 12:2.

Enoree Presbyterial—Twenty-five years ago last January, Enoree Presbyterial was organized. The twenty-fifth annual meeting was held in Fountain Inn Presbyterian Church, Fountain Inn, S. C., April 24th and 25th. Seldom, if ever, has there been such a large attendance, there being nearly 200 registered the second day.

Each session showed evidences of the Spirit's presence. The reports of officers and local Auxiliaries all showed marked gains along most lines. More prayer bands, family altars and tithers showed increased spirituality, while an increase of nearly $5,000 in gifts indicates a growing realization of our stewardship. But the most encouraging sign was the general enthusiasm of representatives, and the often expressed intention of "doing better next year." We had no "Gold Circle" Auxiliaries, though two, Antioch and Greenville First, had attained 95 per cent in the standard of excellence. There were reported 5 "Silver Circle" Auxiliaries, and 9 "Blue Circle" Auxiliaries. The goal for next year is "One Hundred Per Cent 'Gold Circle' Auxiliaries in 1924."

On Tuesday evening Presbyterial communion services were conducted by Rev. R. C. Morrison, pastor of the hostess church, assisted by Rev. J. K. Roberts. Mr. Roberts, who is Superintendent of Home Missions, S. S. and Young People's Work in Enoree Presbytery, then gave an address, illustrated by stereopticon views. By word and pictures he showed the alarming religious needs in the bounds of our Presbytery, there being 29 unchurched persons to every one in the church.

On Wednesday, Mrs. S. C. Hodges, of Greenwood, conducted the morning Bible hour. With winning earnestness she appealed for a more vital use of God's Word. She also gave resounding echoes from the Charlotte convention, which should bear fruit in more personal work on the part of her hearers.

Miss Evelyn Fishburne, one of our Home Mission workers in Canoe, Ky., captivated every one present by a wonderfully appealing address on Mountain Work.

In response to an appeal from Miss Johnson, of Thornwell Orphanage, Enoree Presbyterial gave ready support to the proposed baby cottage, at that institution, and pledged itself to help raise the funds needed for its erection.

Mrs. Oscar Hammond, of Greenville, conducted the afternoon devotional, using Growth as her theme.

There then followed a brief memorial service in honor of our lamented co-worker and Synodical president, Mrs. F. Louise Mayes. She was our very own, and her loss is keenly felt. A number of ladies gave feeling tributes to her many accomplishments, but all dwelt on her zeal in the Master's service. Mrs. S. T. D. Lancaster's earnest prayer for a portion of her sweet spirit of service concluded this service of loving tribute.

Mrs. J. W. Allen's address, Glimpses of the Orient, was a very interesting one. All felt we had truly had a glimpse into the Eastern world.

Mrs. T. T. Quarles' report of the Montreat Summer School of Missions was exceptionally inspiring. May the call to prayer that the 91 per cent indifferent women of our Southern Church be aroused to service, awaken new prayer life in all who heard.

Miss Virginia Taylor, Secretary of Young People and S. S. Extension, gave a concrete example of the work being done by our young people. Twenty-six Junior Christian Endeavorers came down from Greenville First Church (18 miles) and conducted a beautiful service of song, scripture recitations and prayer.

On the closing night, to a full house, Rev. J. Porter Smith, of Recife, Brazil, gave a message of compelling force. As never before, we were made to see the peril of Romanism, and to feel the need of Brazil—"the land of the Christless cross."

It would be an incomplete report to make no mention of the generous hospitality accorded by the good people of Fountain Inn. Every one, from the pastor to the children in the homes, made us feel "at home." Every speaker was at his or her best, and I am sure the presence of so many Fountain Inn visitors and their sympathetic responses had much to do with this happy result. In every way the meeting of Enoree Presbyterial in Fountain Inn will ever be another pleasant and inspiring memory.

Mrs. D. L. Morris, Sec.

Belmont—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Belmont Presbyterian Church celebrated the eleventh anniversary of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Southern Presbyterian Church with a "Birthday Party" at the home of Mrs. J. M. Pressly, president of the Auxiliary, May 8th. Mrs. Pressly presided over the meeting. Miss Melva Gullick, secretary of Young People's Work, led the devotional exercises, after which a brief business session was held. Interesting reports were heard from those who attended the Presbyterial at Olney.

The feature of the afternoon was the "Mexican Fiesta" presented by a number of the ladies and young people of the Auxiliary. The parlor, living room and dining room were elaborately decorated with a profusion of spring flowers, carrying out a color scheme of red, white and green, the Mexican colors. American and Mexican flags adorned the walls.

The suggested birthday program was carried out. Each character taking part in the play, dressed in effective

Mexican costume, made an earnest appeal for a girls' school in Texas.

A free-will offering of $40 was received, after which all marched to the dining room, where the real, big, white birthday cake, surrounded by red roses, formed the centerpiece for the attractively arranged table. The cake held 11 tiny red and green candles, which were lit by Mrs. Marion Crawford, the eldest member of the Auxiliary, and a much loved one. The program closed with a prayer by the president. After the pageant a social hour was enjoyed. Delicious ice-cream and angels'-food cake were served by the Mexican girls.

These "Birthday Parties" are occasions of real profit and pleasure.

Mexican Pageant presented at the First Presbyterian Church of Durham, N. C.—At the regular monthly inspirational meeting, May 7, 1923, of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church, of Durham, N. C., held in the Sunday School auditorium, the Secretary of Assembly's Home Missions, Mrs. W. F. Franck, and her assistant, Mrs. T. C. Atwood, put on a beautiful pageant, "The Melting Pot."

Prior to the pageant a very enlightening and impressive devotional was conducted by Mrs. E. W. Shackelford, giving the present condition and needs of the Mexican girl.

The topic for the month of May was Mexico, particularly the Mexican girl, and the aim of "The Melting Pot" was to show what religion had and was doing for the different nationalities of the world.

The rostrum was most effectively decorated, representing the home of the Mexican peon. Many lovely cacti were used in the setting. In the foreground was the melting pot with America standing by it. Religion entered, carrying a white cross, and asks that America take up the cross and give it to the different nationalities of the world. Seven girls effectively dressed to represent seven nationalities, entered and testified to what religion had done for them, when the poor little Mexican peon girl entered and made her plea of long neglect.

The whole pageant was most effective and impressive and no one present could fail to hear the call of our long neglected neighbor, the Mexican.

The Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Presbyterial Auxiliary of Pee Dee Presbytery convened at Mullins, S. C., on April 10th. The president, Mrs. M. S. McKinnon, of Hartsville, called the meeting to order.

The opening services were conducted by Rev. J. S. Garner, pastor of the Mullins Presbyterian Church. Mrs. W. W. Jordan, in a very pleasing manner, welcomed the visitors, and Mrs. A. M. McNair very graciously responded for the Presbyterial. A beautiful memorial service for Mrs. Mayes was conducted by Mrs. R. P. Hamer, and her favorite hymn, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," was sung. After Mrs. McKinnon had presented an interesting report of the Presbyterial's work for the year, Mrs. Duncan McKenzie introduced Mrs. A. M. Copeland, who talked to us about Thornwell Orphanage and told of plans to enlarge the plant by adding a cottage for babies too young to be taken care of under existing conditions.

The Bible hour was ably conducted each day by Miss Jean Dupuy, of Richmond, Va. Miss Dupuy, by her interesting discussions afforded one of the rare treats of the meeting.

Miss Evelyn Fishburne, who is engaged in mountain mission work at Canoe, Ky., gave an interesting talk each day on the different phases and incidents connected with her work.

At the Tuesday night session a very instructive address was made by Rev. J. P. Smith, of Campinas, Brazil. Reports of the secretary disclosed a very encouraging situation and showed that real progress had been made in practically every line of Presbyterial endeavor.

The Presbyterial special was explained in detail for the benefit of the delegates and a number of pledges were received. The Standard of Excellence chart was also fully discussed. Only two Gold Circle Auxiliaries were reported but the outlook for the coming year is much more encouraging. Four institutes were held last year at Florence, Dillon, Bennettsville and Jefferson.

After Mrs. J. H. McSween's report on Young People's Work three minutes were given to each representative for Auxiliary reports and conference on the work.

At the closing session on Wednesday afternoon, the 11th, a rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. McKinnon, the retiring president.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Miss Julia Erwin, President; Mrs. R. P. Hamer, First Vice-president; Mrs. M. B. John, Second Vice-president; Mrs. M. G. Scott, Secretary; Miss Amelia Howard, Treasurer. Department Secretaries: Mrs. E. M. Dible, Prayer Bands and Bible Studies; Miss Margie McLaurin, Foreign Missions; Mrs. M. G. Anderson, Assembly's Home Missions; Mrs. Dugald McIntyre, Local Home Missions; Mrs. W. W. Jordan, Christian Education and Ministerial Relief; Mrs. J. H. McSween, Y. P. Work and S. S. Extension; Mrs. Lamar Watson, Literature.

The meeting next year will be held at Dillon, S. C. Hartsville, S. C. Mrs. J. R. McAlpine.

Maxton—On Tuesday, April 24th, Mrs. E. T. Reid, N. C. Synodical President came to pay a visit to her old friend, Mrs. J. P. Wiggins, the president of Maxton's Auxiliary.

In honor of Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Wiggins gave an afternoon reception to the members of our Auxiliary, and also invited representatives from four of our nearby county Auxiliaries. About 100 guests were present. The little pageant, "When the Dumb Speak," was given by several of our young ladies, and it was so impressive that we feel there will be a greater appreciation of the Missionary Survey and the wonderful fund of information it contains.

Mrs. Reid made a most inspiring and helpful address on "Our Spiritual Resources." She left with us many good things to think about—the one standing out pre-eminently in the mind of the writer is that most of our women are intelligent, well-informed women, having studied about the mission fields and their needs, and what we now need is to deepen our prayer life, and to give of our time, talents and money to meet their needs.

After Mrs. Reid's address a delightful social hour was enjoyed by all present. Refreshments were served, and a splendid musical program was rendered by Mrs. A. B. Croom and Miss Louise McCallum, accompanied by Mrs. R. M. Williams.

We hope many of our Auxiliaries will have the good fortune to have Mrs. Reid visit them.

Lena McClelland.

At the recent meeting of Bethel Presbyterial held in Rock Hill, S. C., a most cordial invitation was accepted from the Presbyterian Church, of Kershaw, S. C., for its next meeting. The following officers were elected also.

Group 1 to serve two years:

Mrs. E. E. Gillespie, York, president; Mrs. Orrin Hull, Rock Hill, secretary Foreign Missions; Mrs. J. C. Bailey, Rock Hill, secretary Home Missions; Mrs. S. C. Ashe, York, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. F. Bell, Rock Hill, secretary Christian Education and Ministerial Relief; Mrs. J. M. Williams, Van Wyck, secretary Literature.

Group 2 to serve one year:

Mrs. I. R. Hayes, vice-president; Miss Ada Saunders, recording secretary; Miss Annie Wallace, York, treasurer; Mrs. Sumter Lewis, Chester, secretary Assembly's Home Missions; Mrs. A. M. Erwin, Sharon, secretary Young People's Work; Mrs. J. K. Roach, Rock Hill, secretary of Orphanage; Mrs. S. M. McNeill, York, Historian.

"That Little Gray Book"—In a demure dress of gray, an attractive little book is giving a beautiful new vision of the Bible principle of Stewardship to many women who had no conception of its deep significance before.

"Christian Stewardship," six Bible studies written especially for women by Mrs. S. H. Askew, shows how God is the owner of all, and how the possession of life should be the administration of all for God.

The book is an excellent guide for a Woman's Bible class or for a devotional at any woman's meeting.

Price, 15 cents.

Charlotte—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Tenth Avenue Presbyterian Church held its May meeting in the lecture room of the church Monday night at 8:00 o'clock. Mrs. L. S. Boyd, president of the Auxiliary, presided.

The Mexican fiesta which is being presented all over the Assembly, was splendidly given by some of the young folks of the church.

The decorations were appropriate and beautiful, American and Mexican flags being used. An abundance of red, green and white crepe paper was arranged from the chandelier to all corners of the room. Silver vases of red roses and baskets of wild flowers were also used on the platform.

A special feature was the singing of "How Long Must We Wait," by those participating in the play, and "Why Stand Ye Idle," rendered by the Auxiliary choir, and accompanied by Mrs. J. F. Ligon.

At the close of the devotional exercises Mexican refreshments were served and souvenir hats given to those present.

The cast of characters were as follows: Carmencita, Miss Annie Swindel; Juanita, Miss Sarah Brady; Marice, Miss Margaret Davis; Louise, Miss Sarah Bell Mitchell; Anna, Miss Kathleen Gray; the sisters, Violet Dunn and Ruth Ellis.

A silver offering was taken and a splendid amount realized, which will be donated to the advancement of Christian education in Mexico.

Mrs. Harvey Morrison, Secretary.

Notice to all Auxiliaries—The Conference for Colored Women will be held at Biddle University, Charlotte, N. C., beginning the evening of June 7th, closing June 13th. Board and registration fee, $8.00. Delegates must bring their own linen (sheets, pillow cases, towels), also something to sew on, with needles, thread, etc. The program will be both interesting and instructive. Be sure that every Auxiliary sends at least one delegate. It is money well spent. Send the one that will get the most out of it, and carry it back to her own people. We are anxious that the wife of every Presbyterian pastor should be a delegate.

The delegate does not need to be a Presbyterian, but the best woman.

Won't you help us? Pray, oh, so earnestly, that every teacher and speaker may be filled with the Spirit and that there may be a wonderful spiritual awakening among the colored women of our state.

Readers of the Auxiliary Column, Presbyterian Standard—What are we going to do about those 34 missionary volunteers waiting to be sent over to the foreign field? Are we going to sit idly by and let them go over to other denominations who will send them, as we heard some one say at the Presbyterial, some of them spoke of doing. We hear "the fields are white unto the harvest, but the laborers are few." Now when they are ready and anxious to go, there are no funds to send them! Other denominations are not hampered in this way. What are we going to do about it?

"How long, how long, must they wait?"

Circle Member.

CIRCLE GIFT ENVELOPES!

The Auxiliary Office has small envelopes in which the gifts of members may be offered at Circle meetings each month. Each woman should have 12. Price, 25 cents per 100.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The write-up in the department this week concerning the Mooresville Endeavor work shows in a striking way the superiority of a voluntary pledge plan for finances over a plan that calls for "dues" or other compulsory contributions. The contributions of these young people through the C. E. Society averaged well over three dollars apiece, which, of course, does not fully measure all their contributions to religious work. We are glad to see these young people following this wise principle of making giving a privilege rather than an action under compulsion.

It takes the spirit out of giving for any organization to assess obligations automatically, and we would strongly urge our young people in their work to avoid this error. The challenge to give can be made much more effective if the heart of the giver is appealed to.

For some strange reason we have recently received the catalogue number of the bulletin of the Assembly's Training School at Richmond. We enjoyed looking it over just the same, and our eyes rested on some familiar names. The bulletin shows that 120 young ladies, from 14 states, the District of Columbia, and Korea, are preparing themselves for work in the Master's vineyard. And a fine lot of earnest folk they are! Joy, fellowship, harmony, service, and the motive power of prayer are given as the elements in the spirit of the students. This training school is filling a real need in our Church. We hope that more and more of the young ladies of our churches will avail themselves of the excellent training that is there provided. A trained worker, filled with the earnest spirit of those who go to A. T. S., is a great power for good. Won't you join the ranks?

Prepare for the Young People's Conferences
South Carolina: Sumter June 11-17
North Carolina: Davidson, June 12-19

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MAY 20, 1923

ELIJAH, THE BRAVE REFORMER

Lesson: I Kings 17:1-19:21; 21:1-29; II Kings 1:1-2:12. (Survey of Elijah's Life). Printed Text: I Kings 18:30-39.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Choose you this day whom ye will serve." Josh. 24:15.

30 And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the LORD that was broken down.

31 And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, Israel shall be thy name:

32 And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

33 And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, Do it the second time: and they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time: and they did it the third time.

35 And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass, at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

37 Hear me, O LORD, hear me: that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

38 Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

39 And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 37. What benefits do believers receive from Christ at death?

A. The souls of believers are at their death made perfect in holiness, and do immediately pass into glory; and their bodies, being still united to Christ, do rest in their graves till the resurrection.

Israel, under the lead of Ahab and Jezebel, had forsaken the worship of Jehovah and engaged in the worship of Baal and Ashtoreth, the false gods of the Sidonians. Baal had four hundred priests to lead the people astray. Elijah appears before Ahab, by Divine command, and declares that "for years there should be neither rain nor dew but according to His word." The judgment was terrible. Vegetation withered, there was neither earing nor harvest, water became scarce, and starvation threatened man and beast. Ahab sought Elijah to remove the judgment with all the forces of his kingdom. But he could not find him. Elijah was hidden by Jehovah. After three and a half years Elijah appears before Ahab, and proposes that there should be a trial of Jehovah and Baal's claims on Mt. Carmel. The king consents. The elders of Israel and many of the people assemble. Ahab, his court, and the priests of Baal are present. The test agreed upon was "Fire from heaven consuming the sacrifice." We will consider Elijah's Preparation; The Prophet's Prayer; The Answer Given; The Effects Produced.

I. Elijah's Preparation

The priests of Baal have the first trial. They rear their altar, slay and divide their bullock, place it on the altar and cry unto their god from morning till noon for any answer of fire. But there was no voice nor response, nor fire given. Then Elijah builds with 12 stones Jehovah's altar that had fallen down. He cuts in pieces his sacrifice and places it on the altar. He digs a trench about the altar. He commands that four barrels of water be poured on the altar and sacrifice and in the trench, three times until it overflowed, that there might be no suspicion of earthly fire being used. Then he is ready to invoke the presence of Jehovah and the manifestation of His existence and power.

II. Elijah's Prayer

It is brief but comprehensive, definite and effective. "And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice that Elijah the Prophet came near and said, Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, let it be known this day that Thou art God in Israel and that I am Thy servant, and that I have done all these things at Thy word. Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that Thou art the Lord God, and that Thou hast turned their heart back again." The prayer, though brief, contains five petitions, that God would reveal Himself as Israel's God, that they might know him as God's servant, that he had done all those things by God's command, that Israel might know Him as their God, and that their hearts might be turned back again."

III. The Answer Given

"Then the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burnt sacrifice and the wood and the stones and the dust and licked up the water that was in the trench." The response was immediate, there was no delay. The character and sovereignty of Jehovah was to be vindicated. The authority of Elijah, His prophet, was to be demonstrated. Israel was to be delivered from fatal error and brought back to the worship of the God of their fathers. Such ends booked no delay. The answer was the Lord's fire from heaven. It was fierce and consuming. It devoured everything it touched and forcibly proved the falsity of Baal and the reality and might of Jehovah and the danger of provoking His wrath.

IV. The Effects Produced

Israel was fully convinced of their error, and of Jehovah's power and His claims for the time. "And when all the people saw it they fell on their faces, and they said, 'The Lord He is the God, the Lord He is the God.'" But many of them did not stay convinced and continue loyal to Jehovah. It is surprising how soon men forget manifestations of Divine power and return to their errors and evil passions. Pharaoh and the Egyptians, smitten ten times by the rod of God, and with death brought to every Egyptian house in the land, in a very few days attempt to conquer Israel at the Red Sea and to bring them back to bondage. On Carmel, Ahab and his court are so deeply impressed that they do not dare to oppose Elijah's command as Jehovah's representative to slay all the priests of Baal. These advocates of error, these false guides into the ways of idolatry, these leaders in rebellion against Jehovah, these insulters of Jehovah's majesty, are promptly slain with none to oppose their doom. That day too the judgment was lifted from the land. The Almighty who could send fire in answer to prayer could also bestow rain when His servant desired it. Elijah ascends Carmel and falling down before Jehovah, besought Him to relieve the drought and to send rain. Seven times he prays and every time he sends his servant to look for the answer. The seventh time the cloud appears, and a copious rain descends.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

By an oversight, the topic and daily readings were left out of last week's Standard, in connection with Mr. Conner's excellent article, and are printed just here:

BIBLE HELP

- M., May 14—Help to Salvation: John 3:14-21.
- T., May 15—To Peace: Phil. 4:4-8.
- W., May 16: To Know God: John 14:8-14.
- T., May 17—To Pray: Matt. 6:5-15.
- F., May 18—To Testify: Rom. 10:9-13.
- S., May 19—To Serve: I Pet. 5:1-11.

Sun., May 20—Topic: Something in the Bible That Has Helped Me: Ps. 19: 7-14. (Union meeting with the Juniors and Intermediates).

At what time does the Bible help you most?
What is the most helpful truth you have found in the Bible?
Why does searching study reveal wonders in the Bible?

MEDICAL MISSIONS

- M., May 21—Christ, the Healer: Mark 1:29-34.
- T., May 22—Apostolic Practice: Acts 3:1-10.
- M., May 23—Healing by Faith: Jas. 5:13-20.
- T., May 24—Moved by Compassion: Matt. 9:35-38.
- F., May 25—Healing Opens the Door: Matt. 5:21-24; 35-43.
- S., May 26—Healing Minds: Mark 1:23-28.

Sun., May 27—Topic: Medical Missions at Home and Abroad: Matt. 4:23-25; 10:5-8.

Why use medical skill in missionary work?
What opportunities have doctors to serve Christ in missions?
How have medical missions shown the Christ spirit?

(I am indebted to Mr. Edward D. Grant, Educational Secretary, Nashville, Tenn., for facts and figures for the discussion of medical missions of our Foreign Mission Committee. These items are from the annual report soon to appear.—J. G. G.)

The Great Need of Physicians in Heathen Lands

Missionary work in foreign lands was very slow in reaching the people until the missionary doctor went to the field and began his work of healing the people of their diseases. The story of the cross found its way into human hearts, just as Jesus opened the way when He was here on earth, by healing the sick, curing the lame, giving sight to the blind and hearing to the deaf. One great curse of sin is sickness, and in heathen lands, they have no scientific doctors, but superstition and gross ignorance permit the quack doctors and old women to do anything. As a result, misery, deformity, pain, and all the things that accompany disease thrive, while ignorance, neglect, noise, cold and discomfort, hasten the sad end that comes in all its wretchedness. "This is the sight with which we are confronted in China and Korea. The sick and injured of those lands are crushed as between two approaching icebergs—on the one side is disease, claiming their life, on the other is the treatment they receive for their ailment. It often happens that the closing days of life are spent in terrible discomfort and pain, and the end is hastened by shameful neglect."

What Medical Missions Have Accomplished

Medical missions have opened the way for the gospel. In China, the first foreigners were traders, who were wicked and unscrupulous, and for a long time Christian missionaries could not gain an entrance. Even the medical missionary was distrusted by the people, who believed he kidnapped children, and took out their eyes for medicine. His operations must be done in full view, lest he be misunderstood. Dr. Worth once put a woman to sleep with a crowd watching, and if she had died, they would have killed him. Her heart did stop beating for a moment, and he thought his time had come. But she rallied, and the woman got well from the operation. Then they brought a dead woman, expecting him to raise her to life. But such successes as this opened the door, and now missionaries and doctors go anywhere, and are gladly received.

Medical missions have made the way for our Gospel in Korea and Africa, as well as in China.

Facts About Our Medical Missions

We have in all our fields, 19 physicians, two being women, 16 missionary nurses, 147 native nurses, 21 dispensaries, 39 hospitals, with over 980 beds. Last year, 3,533 operations were performed, and a total of 320,000 treatments were given. We have two schools to train doctors, and 11 schools for nurses. Many of these hospitals are supported in large part by native gifts and fees of patients. Figures will probably show $125,000 contributed in this way.

We have medical mission work in China, Korea, Africa, and Mexico. Let us observe a list of our foreign hospitals:

Hospitals in China: Elizabeth Blake Hospital, Soochow, Dr. M. P. Young, Dr. J. W. Moore, and Mrs.

Church News

DR. F. H. GAINES, PRESIDENT OF AGNES SCOTT COLLEGE

Dr. Frank Henry Gaines, founder and president of Agnes Scott College and one of the leading educators of the South, died Saturday morning, April 14th, at the Piedmont Sanatorium, Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Gaines had been ill only two days. Wednesday morning he led the chapel services as usual, and feeling a little unwell Thursday, he went into Atlanta to consult his physician. Later Thursday he entered the Sanatorium where he died Saturday.

Dr. Gaines was born July 25, 1872, in Tellico Plains, Monroe County, Tenn., the son of John Rhea and Sarah (Rice) Gaines. He secured the foundation of his education in the schools of his community, then entered Cumberland University, from which he graduated with honors in 1870. After spending sometime in missionary work in the mountains of his home State, he entered the Union Theological Seminary in Virginia from which he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Divinity in 1876. In 1888 Dr. Gaines accepted a call to the Decatur Presbyterian Church. He soon recognized the great need in Decatur for schools and especially the importance of a Christian education for girls. He began discussing privately with the leaders of his church and the community in general the possibility of establishing such a school. His suggestions were received with favor, with the result that on July 17, 1889, before he had been six months in his new pastorate a meeting was held in his study and there the foundations for Agnes Scott College were laid.

Colonel George W. Scott, a splendid citizen, a devoted Christian and a man of wealth and public spirit, offered the resolution adopted at that meeting "to establish at once a school of high character." In 1889 the seminary opened.

In the meantime Colonel Scott made his great gifts of the permanent site with a fine building and equipment. The name was then changed to Agnes Scott in memory of Colonel Scott's mother. In 1895 Dr. Gaines resigned as pastor of the Decatur Presbyterian Church to become in name as well as fact, president of the institution.

In 1893 Dr. Gaines wrote the "Agnes Scott Ideal." He declared the supreme aim to be the glory of God, and the plan of accomplishing that aim embraced seven specifications. First, a liberal curriculum, fully abreast of the best institutions of the land; second, a sound curriculum with text books in harmony with the Bible; third, the Bible as a text book, with a Bible course necessary to graduation; fourth, thoroughly qualified and consecrated teachers; fifth, a high standard of scholarship; sixth, the institution a model Christian home; seventh, all the influences to be made conducive to the formation and development of Christian character.

In his death Agnes Scott, the Presbyterian Church, and the cause of higher Christian Education have lost a firm supporter, friend, and benefactor.

MRS. JEANIE DE FOREST JUNKIN VINSON

Mrs. Jeanie de Forest Junkin Vinson, wife of Rev. John W. Vinson, of Haichow, China, died at Peking on March 25, 1923.

She had been in very poor health for nearly a year; first with amoebic dysentery and then with sprue and later still with malaria. At the earliest time (under the conditions of her health and the existing methods of travel there) she was taken for special treatment to a hospital in Peking, but after two or three days, went on to her eternal home. She, and her sister (Mrs. John W. Bradley), went to China in their early womanhood, in 1904, and were stationed at Sutsien, but when Haichow station was opened, as a bride Mrs. Vinson went with her husband and others to open that work.

She leaves three sons and a baby girl (Jeanie) only six months old. Her husband thus bereaved, plans to "carry on" as best he may, keeping the children with him in Haichow (Mrs. T. B. Grafton caring for the baby).

NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte—Rev. J. T. McCutchan, who for two years and one-half has been the executive secretary in the Second Church has accepted a call to Warm Springs, Va., and will begin his work May 20th.

The Presbyterians, as well as others, of this city will regret to give up Mr. McCutchan, who, together with his excellent wife, has greatly endeared himself to all of us.

Charlotte—On last Sabbath morning, Dr. A. A. McGeachy, the popular pastor of the Second Church, preached the baccalaureate sermon to the one hundred and sixty graduates of the Charlotte High School in the presence of one of the largest audiences ever assembled in a Charlotte church. The church was crowded with interested listeners and hundreds of people were turned away for lack of space. Dr. McGeachy, a past master at pulpit oratory and an always interesting speaker, was at his best on this occasion and preached a sermon beautiful in diction and in thought and replete with the sage and loving counsel that can only come from one who has himself passed the way of enthusiastic youth and who still holds in his heart an understanding love for young people. The beautiful music for the occasion was by the regular choir of the Second Church.

El Bethel—The Sunday afternoon of May 6th the commission appointed at the spring meeting of Orange Presbytery met at Bethel Chapel, four miles from Leakesville, N. C., to organize a new church in pursuance of a petition received by Presbytery. Rev. S. M. Rankin preached the sermon from the text: "My grace is sufficient for thee." Fifty-two members were received by transfer from Leakesville Church, one by statement, and two on profession of faith.

Jason Barnes, D. B. Holland, and R. Holman were elected and installed elders. L. C. Radford, W. H. Roberts, Tony Holland, and D. D. Calhoun were elected deacons. The first mentioned was installed. The last mentioned was ordained and then installed. The other two were absent. The undersigned was called as stated supply. The church was named El Bethel. J. W. Clegg.

Durham, First Church—Rev. and Mrs. D. H. Scanlon have returned from a sojourn of several months through the Orient and Southern Europe.

Dr. Scanlon is delivering a series of messages to large audiences on Sunday nights on the general subjects "Some Near Views of Distant Lands."

"The Land Where Jesus Dwelt."

"The Lands of a Clouded Cross and Dismal Crescent."

"The Spain of Yesterday and Her Bondage Today."

"The Lights and Shadows of Sunny Italy."

"The Eternal City of Rome in Ruins."

"The City of Athens with Its Message from Mars Hill."

"The Land of the Pharaohs and the Pyramids with a Visit to the Tombs of the Kings."

Gastonia, First Church—On April 22d, during the absence of the pastor, Dr. J. H. Henderlite, the pulpit was filled by Dr. Egbert W. Smith, executive secretary of Foreign Missions, both morning and evening. At the close of the evening service the elders and deacons in joint session voted unanimously to assume responsibility for one of the new missionaries waiting to be sent out to foreign field at an annual cost of $2,700. This amount in addition to $5,500 already pledged for this year's gifts to the foreign field.

On Sunday morning, May 6th, the Men's Bible class raised in five minutes $1,000 to defray the expenses of the assistant pastor, Rev. G. R. Gillespie, as a member of the American commission to visit the Near East in July.

Laurinburg Church and Community had the privilege of a week of instruction in Sunday School Teaching methods from April 23d to 27th. Mr. C. T. Carr, superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's Work in the Synod of North Carolina, was our guest and instructor. Section two of the New Standard Teacher Training Course was our textbook. Six or more churches were represented, mostly Presbyterian, and the attendance averaged over 40 pupils each night. Twelve took the examination on the work covered. Mr. Carr is not only a born teacher, but a skilled teacher with nearly two decades of experience in the class room. Every single lesson was helpful, instructive, and intensely interesting. We are hoping to have him back with us next year in a four unit school, the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches combining, and if other Presbyterian Sunday Schools have not yet had the pleasure and profit of having Mr. Carr, we hope they will soon avail themselves of this privilege and opportunity. Pastor.

Washington, Rev. H. B. Searight, pastor.—Our church recently enjoyed a week's evangelistic meeting conducted by Rev. Leonard Gill, of Charlotte, who came to us on the 21st, and preached through the 29th of April. His sermons were able, earnest and sound, and the people were greatly benefited by them. The congregations steadily increased until they filled the house, and interest in the services deepened as the week advanced. Rev. J. L. Yandell aided us by leading the singing and conducting the personal workers' league. These brethren were zealous and untiring in their labors for us, and the church was greatly blessed by their efforts. Our only regrets are that the services could not continue longer, and that more of the unsaved did not attend. So far, four have united with the church, and we look for more to follow.

Our church made a very creditable report to Presbytery for the past year. The growth in the Sunday School in recent months has been most gratifying. The attendance has increased from about 125 to 225; the catechisms are being taught, and the school is growing in liberality and spirituality. H. B. S.

Spring and Summer Evangelistic Campaign Fayetteville Presbytery—Smithfield, S. K. Phillips; Eagle Springs, Wm. Black; Oak Grove, L. Smith; Community, L. Smith; Flowers (Tabb.), D. M. McGeachy; Selma, Leonard Gill; Galatia, W. C. Brown; McPherson, V. G. Smith; Hope Mills, I. N. Clegg; Sherwood, C. M. Gibbs; Sunnyside, G. F. Kirkpatrick; Big Rockfish, E. C. Murray; White Oak, C. E. Clarke; Wildwood, C. M. Gibbs; Roseneath, Neill McInnis; Alaska, L. Smith; Benson, Chas. R. Bailey; Flat Branch, L. Smith; Ephesus, D. L. Jones; Raven Rock, R. A. McLeod; Harnett, A. T. Lassiter; Hebron, E. B. Carr; Cumnock, A. R. McQueen; Pocket, R. A. McLeod; Euphonia, Wm. Black; Horseshoe, Alton McIver; Vass, Leonard Gill; Manly, W. C. Brown; Cape Fear, Neill McInnis; Lillington, Leonard Gill; Buie's Creek, R. G. Matheson; Coats, Chas. R. Bailey; Sardis, W. E. Hill; Bunnlevel, A. R. McQueen; Duke, Moore, nurse; Everett Brown Chester Woman's Hospital and Nurse's School, Soochow; The Kiangyin Hospital, Dr. G. C. Worth, and Miss Elizabeth Corriher, nurse; Kashing Hospital, Dr. F. R. Crawford, Dr. E. W. Buckingham, Miss Margaret Dixon, nurse; Sutsien Hospital, Dr. J. W. Bradley; Tsing-Kiang-Pu Hospital, Drs. J. B. Woods and L. N. Bell; Hsuehoufu, Men's Hospital and Mary Irwin Rogers' Hospital, Dr. A. A. McFadden and Mrs. M. B. Grier, M.D.; Haichow, Ellen Lavine Graham Hospital No. 2, Dr. and Mrs. L. S. Morgan, both doctors, and Miss Mary Bissett, nurse; Yencheng Hospital, Dr. J. W. Hewett; Chinkiang, Goldsby King Hospital, now being built; Taichow, Sarah Walkup Hospital, built by Belk Bros., of Charlotte, Dr. R. B. Price.

Hospitals in Korea: Miss M. E. Kestler, registered nurse; Kusan Hospital, Dr. J. B. Patterson, and Misses L. O. Lathrop and Annie I. Gray, nurses; Kwanju, Ellen Lavine Graham Hospital, No. 1, Dr. R. M. Wilson, Miss Georgia Hewson, nurse; Mokpo, French Memorial Hospital, Miss Mary R. Bain, nurse; Soochun Hospital, Dr. J. McLean Rogers, Dr. H. L. Timmons, Miss Anna L. Greer, nurse.

Africa: McKowen Memorial Hospital, at Luebo, Dr. T. F. Stixrud, and Mrs. Stixrud and Miss Belle Setzer, nurses. Dr. and Mrs. Stixrud are the Christian Endeavor missionaries. Medical work, at Mutoto, Dr. R. R. King, and Miss Nina L. Farmer, nurse; at Bibanga, Dr. E. R. Kellersberger and Miss Ruby Rogers, nurse.

Mexico: Hospital at Morelia, Dr. L. L. Coppedge and Miss P. F. Southerland, nurse.

Our Church is doing some medical work at Highland, Ky., and at Banner Elk, N. C. But aside from these, not much of this kind of work is being done in our Home Mission fields, so far as public mention goes.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The last monthly meeting of the Executive Committee of the Senior C. E. Society of the First Church, of Mooresville, N. C., showed some interesting results of the work there. Every committee chairman handed in a written report.

The Lookout Committee notifies all members what the coming program is to be and urges them to be present. The result of this, together with the fact that the programs are interesting, is many meetings with a 100 per cent attendance. The Sunday School Committee has ready for service four regular teachers for the school and three regular substitutes. Pledges from 22 members toward the budget of the year have reached $73.20, two of the contributors being titheers.

The Juniors in this church are doing excellent work, having just finished the Junior Expert course. They are a happy, earnest set of little folks, with a fine superintendent and assistant superintendent in charge of them.

The executive committee of the Southeastern District C. E. Union of North Carolina met the latter part of April in the Highland Church, of Fayetteville. Among those present were President Norman Shepard, of Wilmington; Treasurer Miss Kate McLean, of Maxton, and Secretary Miss Leila Hubbard, of Lumber Bridge. Reports showed real advancement in the work since last November's meeting. Extensive plans were made for every department of the work. A special drive was begun for the organization of Intermediate societies, and plans were made for the next district convention.

The Christian Endeavor Training Class of Davidson College has just completed a fine year of work and installed new officers for the coming year. During the past year the services of 25 men have been supplied on 14 deputations, to 15 towns and 19 churches. Members of the class have addressed 300 meetings and helped in 10 workers' conferences and five classes in methods, reaching 755 young people and 713 older people. They have helped in the organization of one Senior C. E. Society, helped in or conducted two socials, spoken to three Bible classes, and held conferences with three pastors. Three articles have been written for the Young People's Department of the Standard.

Plans for the coming year call for a much larger service to the churches and young people that can be reached. These men study young people's work every Sunday and are finding a large opportunity and need for real service in the young people's work. The officers for the coming year are: J. L. McLean, St. Pauls, N. C., leader; W. W. Purdy, Pensacola, Fla., president; A. H. Hollingsworth, Atlanta, Ga., vice-president; A. Y. Bowie, Talladega, Ala., secretary; and B. U. Ratchford, Gastonia, N. C., treasurer. The member in charge of deputations is Edmund O'Connor, of Rome, Ga., and deputations can be secured through him.

The gospel of the resurrection is marvelously comforting. There are multitudes of sad hearts in the world. How few are the homes that have not felt the blighting touch of bereavement. It is a time to remember in loving prayer those whose faces are stained with tears and whose hearts are weary with heavy burdens.

L. Siler; Westminster, L. Smith; Fair-ew, R. G. Matheson; Progressive, A. T. Las-ter; Broadway, R. C. Gilmore; Spies, Carl B-raig; Pinehurst, Wm. Black; Bensalem, V. R. Gas-on; Church of the Covenant, C. E. Clarke.
L. Smith, Chmn. Committee on Evangelism.

Mooresville, First Church — The work of the past ear may be summed up, as far as figures can give, s follows: Number of persons added to church, 16 n profession and 30 by letter. Whole number of embers 568. Number in Sunday School 628. Of ese 520 are in home school and 108 in mission hools. Gifts to benevolences, $10,842; to current penses $5,849; to New Church Plant $19,810. Total 36,501. The results of our E. M. C. were $18,549 rom 450 subscribers. The canvass also showed 94 thers and 57 families holding worship. Since then ue of our elders, Mr. J. L. Harris, has given $5,000 o Davidson College. Two weeks ago we moved into ur handsome new Sunday School building and are elighted with its comfort and convenience. It is ntirely separate from the church and is now being sed for all services while the main building is be- ing enlarged to accommodate the congregation. This work is being pushed and we hope to be able o use it before winter. When all is finished we hall have a very complete plant.

We are much pleased that the officers have eured the services of Mr. Dwight M. Chalmers, a nior in Union Theological Seminary, as pastor's assistant for the summer. He is a native of Char- lotte, graduate of Davidson College, and served this institution last year as leader of the Y. M. C. A. work. He comes to us very highly recommended and we think we are fortunate in securing him. We expect him to begin his work here the middle of May.

Charlotte—At the Second Church last Sabbath night Rev. W. T. Thompson, D.D., of Union The- ological Seminary, preached the baccalaureate ser- mon to the students of Queens College in the pres- ence of an audience that taxed the large auditor- ium of the church to capacity. He took as his text Jno. 17:19: "For their sakes I sanctify myself,"—and from this scripture as a basis he preached a very impressive sermon in which he challenged the young ladies of the graduating class, as they go out into the world of service, to sanctify mind, time and talents to the service of their master and of their fellowmen. On the platform with Dr. Thompson were Dr. McGeachy, the pastor of the Second Church, who made the opening prayer, and Dr. Frazer, president of Queens College, who presided, read the scripture and made the announcements. Dr. Frazer also thanked the pastor and the of- ficers of the Second Church for their hospitality in allowing the college the use of their auditorium for the baccalaureate sermon; and the pastor of the First Church and its officers for dispensing with the usual evening services at that church in order for the congregation to worship with the college girls on this important occasion. At the appointed hour of 8 o'clock the students of the college marched into the church singing the beautiful hymn "O Mother Dear, Jerusalem" as a processional, and led by the college choir, who took their places in the choir loft. Arrayed in their white dresses, their faces lovely with the loveliness and enthusiasm of youth, they made a very fine impression on the large audience. The music was led by the college choir and added greatly to the beauty of the ser- vice. Two anthems, "Rejoice Ye With Jerusalem," and "Faith, Hope and Love," were beautifully ren- dered and the offertory, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," was charmingly sung by Miss Beulah Holmes, a student at the college. Queens will hold the commencement exercises proper at the college this week, which will bring to a close the most successful year's work in the long and honorable history of the school.

Charlotte, West Avenue—On May 8, 1923, appro- priate and impressive exercises were held at this church. The occasion was the breaking of ground for the erection of the first unit, a modern commod- ious church building. The old church, a wooden structure, had been moved several feet to the front. The space thus gained added to a rear lot purchased by the congregation affords sufficient ground for the erection of the new three-story brick building.

The congregation will worship in the old church until the new building is available. Later on the old structure will be torn down and a new brick church auditorium will be erected. By reason of inadequate equipment the church has been seriously handicap- ped in its efforts to do the Lord's work in this rapidly developing section of the city.

The efficient pastor, Rev. C. C. Anderson, and his band of loyal church officers and members are to be warmly congratulated on the success of their ef- forts to provide suitable material equipment for their expanding work. The ground-breaking exercises were informal and delightful, conducted by the pastor and consisting in song, prayer and short impromptu addresses. The following partici- pated in the break of ground, each shovel of soil thrown into a near-by wagon:

Rev. C. C. Anderson; Mr. D. H. Johnston, for building committee; Mr. Wilkinson, for the con- tractor; Mr. L. L. Hunter, for the architect; Mr. W. A. Jamison, for church officers; Mrs. Paul H. Brown, for Woman's Auxiliary; Mr. John B. Ross, for business men "up-town"; Mr. J. H. McAden, for busi- ness men in community; Rev. G. F. Beil, for Pres- byterian Ministerial Association; Rev. H. M. Pressley, "on general principles."

Short talks were made by the following: Rev. C. C. Anderson, S. B. Lyerly, A. R. Shaw, J. G. Garth,

M. F. Daniels and H. M. Pressley. In a review of the progress of this church the 11 years' pastorate of Rev. H. M. Pressley whose faithful labors did so much to render possible the happy ground-breaking event will continue to receive grateful recognition. In his address he stated that during the first years of his pastorate he "preached to a procession, not to a congregation." Under changed and improved conditions the present pastor is preaching to a congregation, not so much to a procession.

If the Woman's Auxiliary is as energetic in its work as Mrs. Paul H. Brown was in handling the shovel it is no wonder that the prospect for a new up-to-date church building is so bright.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Salem and Concord—Recently the men of the con- gregation of Salem and Concord churches (Harmony Presbytery, S. C.) met at the Salem Church manse and made many needed repairs upon the manse and premises, which adds much to the comfort of the pastor, W. H. Workman and family, which is warm- ly appreciated.

And at a meeting of the congregation of Salem Church directions were given to the deacons to place a metal roof upon the church and library and also to make repairs upon the manse and to paint the same. These are forward steps, that indicate a deep interest in the welfare of the Church of God.
W. H. Workman, Pastor.

Westminster Church, Charleston has closed an- other year of work with a creditable increase along most all lines. The Sunday School especially has in- creased in numbers and efficiency. The members of the church, in spite of depression such as is seldom experienced, maintained a high standard of liberal- ity, giving approximately $55 per resident member. The close of this church year marked the third an- niversary of the present pastorate. This fact was not forgotten by the people and a few nights ago the pastor answering the door bell was greeted with yells from the Christian Endeavorers and by almost the entire congregation assembled with good cheer and a generous pounding. This was a great sur- prise to the pastor and his family and there is no belittling the value of a well stocked pantry in these times, but he especially expressed with grati- tude his appreciation of this token of kind regard of the people for him and his wife. There have been three pleasant years of cordial relation between pastor and people. A few nights ago the choir of the Church, which is entirely voluntary, gave a musi- cal entertainment in the Sunday School auditorium. This made a very pleasant evening, the program was splendid, and exhibited a fine spirit of co-operation and good work on the part of the choir in the work of the church.

APPALACHIA

Plumtree Church — Things are going nicely at the Plumtree Church; a large percentage of the boys have confessed Christ this spring and are striving to lead Christian lives. During the latter part of June we plan to have Rev. J. McD. Lacy with us for special services and are praying that this will be a season of revival in our little com- munity.
C. Mickle, Cor.

ALABAMA

Opelika—Rev. W. Bruce Doyle, who has been ill for three months, has been sent by his church at Opelika, to Hot Springs, N. C., for treatment. The latest reports are that he is getting on well.

Huntsville, First Church—An unusually large con- gregation was present on Easter, at which time the communion of the Lord's supper was observed. At the same time 14 members, who have united during the past quarter, were publicly received by the pas- tor, Rev. Neill G. Stevens.

Montgomery, Trinity Church—The annual report of this church is full of encouragement. Its total number of communicants is 664, of which 37 were added last year by profession and 77 by letter. There are 422 in the Sunday School. To benevolent causes they gave $12,500. Rev. Chas. H. Pratt, D.D., is the pastor.

Tuscaloosa—By far the most largely attended communion service in the history of the church was observed at the First Church on the first Sabbath of this month. There were 13 additions to the church during the day. In the afternoon at four o'clock that most magnificent oratorio "Stabat Mater" was given by the great choir that has been developed this year. Probably 2,000 people attended the two services of the day. The pastor, Dr. Chas. M. Boyd, will lead in an evangelistic campaign at Ocala, Fla., at the latter part of the month.

Mobile, Government Street Church—On Sunday morning, April 8th, a very large congregation was present and the quarterly morning communion was administered. The pastor announced the names of 32 persons who had been received into the mem- bership of the church during the past three months. Of this number 13 were on confession of faith.

This congregation is rejoicing over a successful every member canvass; the goal of $38,830 being the largest in the history of the church. This does not include the gifts of the congregation to the educa- tional campaign.

Perhaps the feature of greatest interest in the work of last year has been the large attendance upon the evening services.

Montgomery—The greatest series of meetings in the history of the Trinity Church came to a close on Easter Sunday when 47 persons united with the church; 26 on baptism and profession and 21 by let- ter, with six others still to come, when the quarterly communion service was held. The session of Trin- ity felt that it was appropriate that the pastor, Dr. Charles H. Pratt, should conduct the services rather than an evangelist, and beginning with the Sun- day preceding Easter Dr. Pratt's sermon on "The Source of Power" was a wonderful opening for the great series that followed.

Dr. Pratt handled his subjects in a masterly way to audiences that increased day by day, all eager to hear his lofty interpretation of God's Word.

Earnest and sustained interest has been manifest- ed. The great audiences have evinced the power of the sermons, and the whole community has felt an intense spiritual awakening. Well attended morn- ing prayer circles have been held in different parts of the city by the women of the church.

Mr. T. J. Makin, the song-leader organized a large and enthusiastic choir, and under his skillful leader- ship the singing was splendid.

The electric motto which blazes on the beautiful community religious work building of Trinity "Jesus Saves" has a deeper meaning to many weary hearts than ever before.

The Presbytery of North Alabama met with the 33d Avenue Church, Birmingham, April 10, 1923. At the request of the retiring moderator, Judge R. T. Simpson, the opening sermon was preached by Dr. J. A. Sparrow. Rev. R. G. Hershey was elected moderator, and Rev. P. H. Carmichael, temporary clerk. Received: Rev. J. B. Butler, from Tusca- loosa; Rev. G. C. Scott, from Nashville; A. G. Har- ris was reinstated. Dismissed: Rev. T. C. Cartledge to Piedmont Presbytery; Rev. J. A. McSporrin, D.D., to U. S. A. Church; Rev. J. T. Schoeffelin dropped, having gone into another Church. Mr. N. E. Opling- er was licensed. Four candidates were dropped and 11 retained. Pastoral relations dissolved between Dr. J. A. McSporrin and First Birmingham; Rev. J. P. Stevenson and 76th Street and 35th Ave- nue; Pastoral relations retained between Rev. E. C. Scott and Ensley First; Rev. J. P. Stevenson and Fairview; Rev. C. H. Moorman and Collinsville group. Rev. J. B. Meacham to preach the Presby- terial sermon. Commissioners to the Assembly on list. The next regular fall meeting at Taylorsville on fourth Tuesday in October.

W. D. Clark, S. C.

ARKANSAS

Batesville—After a careful distribution of appro- priate literature, bearing upon the duty and privi- lege of worshipping the Lord with our substance, the every member canvass was made in this church on Sabbath afternoon, March 18th, with a follow-up campaign during the following week, with the re- sult that the pledges in hand making a total of $3,375 to meet a quota assigned us of $3,075, for the ecclesiastical year which begins on April 1st.

For the year 1922-1923, which closes tomorrow, March 31st, the quota assigned this church was $2,843 and our treasurer of Benevolences has remit- ted $2,952.68, being $109.68 in excess of the quota as- signed us.
X.

Pine Bluff Presbytery—Overture number one. Be it resolved: That the Presbytery of Pine Bluff, in regular session at Star City, Ark., April 11, 1923, does hereby overture the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States to with- draw entirely from participation as a member of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Overture number two: Presbytery of Pine Bluff in regular session at Star City, Ark., April 11, 1923, would respectfully overture the General Assembly in session at Montreat, N. C., to send down to the Presbyteries for advice and consent the necessary changes in our constitution to allow any church desiring to do so to elect elders and deacons for a limited term of service, the length of time for such service to be determined by each church.

Attest: James H. Morris, S. C.

FLORIDA

Jacksonville—Deeply appreciative of the spiritual blessing that came to their congregation through the recent series of evangelistic services conducted by Rev. W. W. Akers, of Lincolnton, N. C., in the Second Presbyterian Church, of Jacksonville, Fla., under the auspices of Synod's Evangelistic Com- mittee, a committee of the pastor, Rev. E. W. Way and officers, passed very hearty and unanimous res- olutions of appreciation. The services continued for two weeks. E. W. Way, Pastor and Moderator.
J. C. Connolly, Special Committee.

VIRGINIA

Evangelistic Services of East Hanover Presbytery for 1923-24. The time to be fixed by the church and the minister. The church to take the initiative in the matter:

Churches:
Aberdour, Rev. L. W. Curtis; Bardwell, Rev. D. F. Rogers; Botts Memorial, Rev. J. A. McClure; Beth- any, Rev. Michaux Raine; Bethlehem, Rev. O. E. Bucholz; Beulah, Rev. W. A. Hall; Brunswick, Rev. John M. Alexander; Byrd, Rev. J. D. Keith; Chester, Rev. J. E. Cook; Emporia, Rev. C. L. King, D.D.; Fairfield, Rev. L. W. Curtis; Fairmont, Rev. W. L.

(Continued on page 12)

Educational

This Commencement at Peace Institute will be the fiftieth commencement of the school. A reunion of all former students is planned. Mrs. Josephus Daniels is chairman of this committee. Invitations have been sent to approximately 3,300 former students by Mrs. Margaret Merrimon Kenney, executive secretary of the alumnae, and by Miss Mary Owen Graham, president of Peace Institute. It is the plan of the alumnae to entertain all of the visitors in the homes of the Raleigh people, and plans for their accommodation are being made by a special committee. It is hoped that all who are planning to attend will notify Mrs. Kenney of their plans in order that a place may be reserved for them.

The alumnae will have their group meetings, their class reunions, their luncheon and their business meeting on Monday, May 28th. Mrs. Josephus Daniels will be hostess to the alumnae at a tea Monday afternoon at her new home, "Wakestone." The pageant, "The Progress of Peace," will be given Monday evening. The pageant will be built around the administrations of the school. There have been five presidents of the school. Rev. John Burwell was president from 1872-1889; Dr. James Dinwiddie from 1890 to 1907; Dr. Henry Jerome Stockard from 1908 to 1912; Dr. George Junkin Ramsey from 1912 to 1916; Miss Mary Owen Graham from 1916 to the present time.

The pageant will be the outstanding feature of commencement. The parts in it will be played in certain parts by relatives of those whose industry and zeal played so great a part in the early success of the school.

The baccalaureate sermon on Sunday will be preached by Rev. B. R. Lacy, Jr., D.D., pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Lacy is a great-grandson of Rev. John Burwell, and it is particularly appropriate for him to assist in this fiftieth commencement.

The address to the graduating class on Tuesday evening will be delivered by Judge Kerr Morehead Harris, of Danville, Va. Judge Harris is an alumna of Peace Institute of the class of 1883. The graduating class this year numbers 28, and is one of the largest in the history of the school.

Miss Mary Owen Graham, president of Peace, is expected home this week. She has been on a four months' cruise, visiting Mediterranean ports, France, England, and other places. Miss Graham has written very interesting letters from the various ports.

The following is the Commencement, 1923, program: Friday, May 25, 8:30 p. m.—Annual Concert in Chapel, followed by Art Reception in Studio.

Sunday, May 27, 11:00 a. m.—Baccalaureate Sermon, in First Presbyterian Church, Rev. B. R. Lacy, Jr., D.D., Central Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

6:00 p. m.—Alumnae Tea on Peace Institute Campus.

7:30 p. m.—Vesper Service.

Monday, May 28, 11:00 a. m.—Alumnae meeting.

1:00 p. m.—Alumnae luncheon.

5:00 p. m.—Mrs. Josephus Daniels, hostess to Peace Alumnae, at Wakestone.

8:30 p. m.—Pageant.

Tuesday, May 29, 5:00 p. m.—Class Day Exercises on the campus.

8:30 p. m.—Commencement Exercises in chapel. Address by Judge Kerr Morehead Harris, Danville, Va. (Class of 1883).

The Ninth Annual Commencement of the General Assembly's Training School was held May 5-7, at Ginter Park. On Saturday, the Senior class exercises were held in Schaffler hall, when the spirit of the A. T. S. was vividly portrayed by the Senior class before a large audience. On Sunday afternoon, vesper services were held at 3207 Seminary avenue, when Dr. W. L. Lingle made the address, appropriate to the occasion.

The Commencement exercises proper were held Monday, the 7th, in Schaffler hall, which was crowded to its capacity by a large and enthusiastic audience. The address to the graduating class was delivered by Dr. W. Taliaferro Thompson, from the text, "For their sakes, I sanctify myself." Red Cross diplomas were presented by Dr. W. A. Plecker, director of public health and sanitation. Certificates were awarded to Minna Montgomery, Jasper, Fla.; Ann Gwynne Douglass, Memphis, Tenn.; Lena Fontaine, Crockett, Va., who had completed one full year's work and who would be unable to return for the second year. Diplomas were presented by Dr. W. L. Lingle, the new president of the board of trustees, to 40 graduates. Most of these have secured positions and will shortly enter upon their work.

The alumnae banquet was held on Tuesday and attended by about 100 alumnae and friends. Interesting addresses were made, at the conclusion of which the following officers of the alumnae association were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Irene H. Buckles; first vice-president, Mrs. Irene Hudson; second vice-president, Mr. E. S. McGavock; secretary, Miss Jean Dupuy; treasurer, Miss Clara Belle Williams.

The following officers of the student body were elected: President, Miss Eva Harris, Brunswick, Ga.; vice-president, Mrs. Janie L. Garrison, York, S. C.; secretary, Miss Margaret McElwee, Rock Hill, S. C.; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Edwards, Dallas, Tex.

One hundred and twenty students have been enrolled during the past session. At a meeting of the board of trustees of the school, steps were taken for the completion and equipment of the new buildings which will be ready for the opening of the next session, September 19, 1923.

At a meeting of the board, held May 3d, the following officers were elected: President, Dr. W. L. Lingle; vice-president, Miss Katherine Heath Hawes; secretary, Robert M. Friend; treasurer, George W. Call, Union Bank, Richmond, Va.

Davidson—Invitations to commencement in the name of the faculty and of the Senior class with a program card of this eighty-seventh celebration, beginning Sunday, June 3d, and ending at noon Wednesday, June 6th, are being mailed this week. The order of the events is as follows:

Sunday, June 3—11:00 a. m., Baccalaureate Sermon, by Rev. Dr. J. M. Vander Meulen, Louisville, Ky.; 8:00 p. m., Annual sermon before Y. M. C. A., by Rev. Dr. D. N. McLaughlin, Norfolk, Va.

Monday, June 4—5:30 p. m., Senior class exercises; 8:00 p. m., Dramatic club presentation.

Tuesday, June 5—9:30 a. m., Meeting of Board of Trustees; 12:15 p. m., Annual Literary Address, by Dr. J. Campbell White, New York; Award of college medals; 1:30 p. m., Annual luncheon; meeting of Alumni Association; 5:00 p. m., Faculty reception; 8:00 p. m., Exercises of Literary Societies; contest for Junior Oratorical medal; Award of society diplomas, trophies and medals; 10:30 p. m., Campus fete.

Wednesday, June 6—10:30 a. m., Senior Oratorical contest; Graduation exercises; Lowering of class flag.

Rev. J. C. Rowan highly pleased his audience in his address a few days ago before the Y. M. C. A. Pastor now at Concord, his visits to his alma mater have not as yet been made frequent enough to satisfy his friends here.

Louisville Seminary—The closing communion service was held in Harbison Memorial Chapel, April 30th. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. W. O. Thompson, D.D., president of Ohio State University in Second Presbyterian Church, Sunday night, May 1st. The theme was: Faith in the Living God. The students annual picnic was held at Cherokee Park, Monday, May 2d. The commencement exercises were held in First Presbyterian Church, Tuesday night, May 3d. President Vander Meulen presiding. The commencement address was delivered by Hon. Helm Bruce, of Louisville. Mr. Bruce's subject was The Preacher and the People.

The E. L. Warren Medal was awarded to Hugh Elmer Bradshaw, A. B., B.D., of Texas. The address to the graduating class was delivered by Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D., professor of Systematic Theology. The graduating class consisted of William Harvey McAtee, A. B., of Mississippi, Hugh Elmer Bradshaw, A. B., of Texas, James Grady McLean, of Texas, John Ephram McLean, A. B., of Texas, Walter Irvin Munday, LL.M., of Kentucky, William Amariah Stevenson, A.B., of Georgia, John Cornelius VanderRoest, of Kentucky. Diplomas were awarded to Rev. Walter Gray Butler, of Kentucky and John Macfaden McMillan, of Kentucky.

The annual alumni meeting and banquet was held on Tuesday. The alumni address was delivered by Rev. Jos. G. Venable, D.D., class of 1905, now pastor of First Church, Norfolk, Va. The Board of Directors held their annual meeting and received the annual reports of President Vander Meulen and Dean Charles R. Hemphill, D.D. The following new directors were elected: Rev. C. C. Carson, D.D., of Bristol, Tenn., Messrs. Brainerd Lemon, John W. Price, R. S. Reynolds, of Louisville, and Rev. William Ray Dobyns, D.D., of Birmingham.

President Vander Meulen announced the successful completion of the Million Dollar Campaign in Kentucky, of which the seminary is to receive $300,000. This fund included $86,000 for the Chas. R. Hemphill Chair of New Testament on the Second Church, Louisville Foundation, the Thompson M. Hawes Department of Music on the Highland Church, Louisville, foundation. The Herrick Johnson Chair of Homiletics established by Mrs. Herrick Johnson, of Louisville, for which $20,000 has been paid and $30,000 additional pledged. A long list of scholarships of $2,500, including one from Rev. T. A. M. Thomas, D.D., was announced. A gift of $10,000 additional was announced from Hon. Robert W. Bingham to be applied to the erection of a dormitory for married students to be known as Bingham Hall in honor of Judge Bingham's father who has been a Presbyterian elder for fifty years. An anonymous gift of $25,000 additional was also announced.

The Board of Directors confirmed the establishment of the Department of Church Efficiency and Evangelism. The student enrollment was eighty-one, the largest in the history of the seminary. Announcement was made of the gift of $10,000 for the Humphrey Fellowship and of the action of the Synod of Missouri approving the securing of not less than $100,000 for the Chair of Old Testament. It was generally agreed that this was one of the best years in the history of Louisville Seminary. The only note of sadness was the announcement of the death of Mrs. Henry E. Dosker, wife of the beloved professor of Church History, which occurred in April of this year.

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina is to have a magnificent new gymnasium as the gift of Col. Leroy Springs, of Lancaster, S. C. This gymnasium is to be beautiful in appearance and complete in every way necessary to take care of the physical development of young men.

The baccalaureate sermon is to be preached Sunday morning, May 27th, by Dr. John W. Douglas of Baltimore, the sermon to the Y. M. C. A. by Rev. J. A. MacLean, of Greenwood, and the commencement address will be delivered Wednesday morning by Hon. Thos. G. McLeod, Governor of South Carolina.

The college now has almost as many applications as it can take care of next year.

DUTY OF LOVE

For Paul, as for Christ, there is no possible discharge from the duty of love, no substitute for it. Other things, even so-called spiritual gifts, are not only no substitutes, but themselves are worthless without love. . . God's whole redemption is to a life like His own, to a sharing His life, and that life is love.

News of the Week

Federal Judge Knox declared unconstitutional the right of a physician to prescribe for his patients, the provision of the Volstead act and its amendments prohibiting the prescribing of more than a pint of spirituous liquor every 10 days. By implication, he indicated his belief that a provision of the Harrison anti-narcotic act, prohibiting physicians from prescribing increased doses of drugs to addicts under treatment, also was unconstitutional for the same reason.

Forsyth county commissioners and the Winston-Salem board of aldermen have voted $21,000 for erection at the Jackson Training School at Concord of a building for delinquent boys from this county and city, the work of construction to begin at once.

Snow fell in North Carolina on May 8th, according to reports from Wilkesboro, where it is reported the Blue Ridge mountains were blanketed in white.

Mrs. Flora Stuart, widow of the renowned Confederate cavalryman, Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, and daughter of Maj. Gen. Philip St. George Cooke, of the Union forces, died May 10th, at Norfolk, Va., at the home of her son-in-law, R. Page Waller. She was 88 years old.

A gavel in the hands of a judge has been substituted for a tomahawk in the hands of a brave by the great Sioux nation in its fight to recover about $750,000,000 from the Federal government as payment with interest for lands and property taken from them by the pale-face years ago. Of this total demand more than half billion dollars represents interest.

One hundred and 37 stills were captured in North Carolina during April, according to announcements by A. B. Coltrane, prohibition director for North Carolina.

In addition 15 automobiles were taken while in the act of hauling liquor and 104,890 gallons of beer and 725 gallons of liquor were seized.

M. Vorovsky, an unbidden guest from soviet Russia at at Lausanne conference, lies dead, slain by a Swiss, formerly an officer in the Russian service, and two of his lieutenants are seriously wounded, each with two bullets in his body.

Memorial Day was generally observed throughout North Carolina. Everywhere the graves of the Confederate dead were strewn with spring flowers, and in a number of places the aged veterans and the children and women of the Confederacy paraded. Several notable addresses were made.

The British note to the Russian soviet government, the text of which was issued by the foreign office, is a virtual ultimatum. The soviet is given 10 days in which to forward a reply complying fully and unconditionally with certain specified demands, failing which, the note says, Great Britain will recognize that the soviet does not wish to maintain the existing relations between the two governments.

Action of Chinese bandits of Shantung province in holding up an express train and capturing a number of foreigners, including 19 Americans, has created a situation regarded as seriously affecting the continuance of friendly relations between the United States and China. The situation is held by some officials as containing elements of still broader scope, possibly entailing other governments in a similar entanglement with China.

Democratic leaders, especially those who come from Southern prohibition states, are worried over the liquor issue. They believe the people generally are more interested in the wet and dry controversy than any other. The action of the New York Legislature indicates to them that their allies in the North are in earnest in their efforts to break down nation-wide prohibition. Many Southern congressmen will urge Governor Smith to veto the measure repealing the Mullen-Gage act. They fear that if he approves it the dry organizations of the country will charge it up to the democratic party.

Gaston B. Means is up against a real serious proposition and the machinery is set to put him in prison. The department of justice program is to bring him back from abroad, or wherever else he may be, and try him for an alleged swindling scheme involving between $250,000 and $300,000. Affidavits and other evidence in the hands of the treasury department and the department of justice indicate that to make his scheme a success Means used the names of former friends freely.

CHILDREN

BELONGS TO CANNING CLUB

Dear Standard:
This is my third time I am writing you. I haven't seen any letters from this neighborhood in a long time, so I thought I would write. I belong to the Harvest Jubilee Club. I took up canning, there are eight in our school that joined. Our school will be out in May. I will be glad when it is out. I will close by asking a question. What is the shorest verse in the Bible?
Your friend,
Margaret Wicker.
Carthage, N. C., R.F.D. 2, Box 22.

CARRIE AND HELEN ARE FAVORITES

Dear Standard:
I have written you once before, and was glad to see it in print. I hope this one will follow it. I live in the country, and I love to play in the woods, and climb trees. I go to the Episcopal Church and my pastor is Rev. W. P. Peyton; we all like him so much. My little friend, Rebecca Stevenson is going to write too. I love to play dolls, and I have a good many. The ones I like best are Carrie and Helen. Carrie is a waxen-headed doll and Helen is a rag doll. I have a play-house in the yard, and I keep Carrie and Helen in the play-house. I enjoy reading the letters and I hope to see this one in print.
Your little friend,
Frances Douglas.
Avon, S. C.

A YOUNG TEACHER

Dear Standard:
I am a girl 12 years old. I go to school at Linden. My teacher's name is Miss Worthington, I like her fine. I go to Sunday School every Sunday I can. I have been teaching almost two years. I have recited both catechisms. I have two brothers and one sister. Hope this letter won't reach the wastebasket as I want to surprise my grandma.
Your friend,
Lucy Williams.
Linden, N. C.

AT SCHOOL AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl ten years old. I am in the fifth grade at school. My teacher's name is Mrs. N. L. Simmons, and I like her fine. Mrs. Simmons is also my Sunday School teacher. As this is the first letter to the Standard I want to surprise my mother.
Your little friend,
Minnie T. Ross.
Washington, N. Car.

IN THE FIFTH GRADE

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl 11 years old. I go to school and I am in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Williamson. I go to Sunday School every Sunday and my teacher's name is Mrs. W. M. Campbell and our pastor's name is Mr. C. M. Gibbs and I like them fine, and our superintendent is Mr. D. J. Bulla. Well, I must close in fear of the wastebasket.
Your friend,
Thelma Hall.
Linden, N. C.

WON FIVE GAMES

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl 13 years old. I live on a farm, and I like farm work. I go to school at San Tabor. My teacher's name is Miss Winifred Williamson. I like her fine. We have a basketball team and our girls have won five games. It certainly did make me feel good. I go to Sunday School nearly every Sunday. My teacher's name is Mrs. W. N. Campbell. I like her fine. I have recited the child's and the shorter catechism. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.
Your unknown friend,
Margaret King.
Linden, N. C.

MUMPEY

Bob and Suzanne and their Uncle Jim's pet monkey from South America were out under the apple tree having a tea party. Suzanne had set the table with her new china; every piece had a bluebird on it. There was even a bluebird pitcher. It was fun to take up the pitcher and pour candy eggs from it instead of water. It was fun, too, to watch the apple blossoms float down on the button-sized biscuits and little slices of yellow cheese. But most of all it was fun to watch Mumpey.

Mumpey was not so large as Suzanne's doll, which sat propped up between her and Bob. His head was covered with short black fur, and his eyes were like the shiny black shoe buttons on Bob's shoes. Uncle Jim had brought him from South America, and he had become as tame as a little dog.

When Uncle Jim went away that morning he had said, "Look out for Mumpey while I'm away," and the children had readily promised that they would.

Mumpey sat on one of the lower branches of the tree—he dearly loved to sit in trees—and watched his two friends. He was very much interested in the contents of the pitcher. Every time Bob or Suzanne shook a candy egg from the narrow neck he would look at them enviously, for he had had one or two of those eggs, and he knew they were good.

All at once there was a shout at the gate.

"It's Joe and Mary Marsh," said Suzanne, "and they've got something exciting to tell us; I know it by the way they sound."

Bob and Suzanne jumped up from the table and ran down to the gate. A minute or two later they were scurrying back to the house to get their wraps, for they had been invited to take a long car ride with the Marshes. Mumpey and the tea party had gone clean out of their heads. They snatched up hats and sweaters and went tearing back.

The ride was a long one. Bob and Suzanne reached home after twilight. They were so sleepy that they could scarcely hold their eyes open long enough to eat supper.

After Bob was in bed his mother came into the room. "Uncle Jim took Mumpey with him after all, didn't he?" she asked.

Bob was so nearly asleep that her voice seemed to come from a long distance. "Uncle Jim? Mumpey?" he murmured. "No—yes—I don't know." His own voice trailed off into a snore. The next morning while the children were dressing they remembered what they had done.

"We left Mumpey sitting in the tree," Bob called to Suzanne in stricken tones.

"Oh, so we did," cried Suzanne.

"How dreadful! I wonder what became of him!"

They finished dressing and hurried out into the yard. Fannie had cleaned away the remains of the tea party; table, china, and all had been taken into the house. But where was the monkey? Bob and Suzanne could not see a sign of him in the tree, though they peered into the branches until their eyes ached. Nor could they find him anywhere on the place.

"What will Uncle Jim say?" they asked each other. "How can we face him when he comes home?"

At last they went dolefully to Fannie. "When you cleared our tea things," they asked, "didn't you see any signs of Mumpey?"

Fannie shook her head. "Nor of your pretty pitcher, either," she said. "You two are one careless pair, that's what you are. Somebody must have come into the yard and taken the pitcher."

"Oh, I wonder if somebody took Mumpey, too!" Suzanne cried.

But Bob shook his head. "No," he said. "Mumpey's too quick and frisky to let himself be kidnapped. I'm afraid he's run away."

They spent the whole forenoon searching. At last Suzanne was almost ready to cry and Bob looked very solemn.

They sat down on the ground beside the rhododendron bushes to rest and talk the matter over.

"Just suppose he's hungry somewhere, or thirsty," Suzanne said. "Poor little old Mumpey!"

At the last word there was a slight stir in the rhododendrons.

"What's that?" said Bob sharply.

They jumped to their feet, parted the branches, and looked in. There, crouched far back, almost out of sight, was Mumpey—quick and frisky no longer, but sad and downcast.

"Why, what in the world is the matter with him?" cried Bob and Suzanne.

Ducking under the branches, they crept over to the monkey. The next moment they saw what was the matter. Mumpey's paw was stuck in the bluebird pitcher!

The children pulled the sad little animal carefully out from under the rhododendrons. They could not help laughing—he looked so funny, and they were so relieved to have found him.

Bob took hold of the imprisoned arm and pulled it gently. But, though the arm drew back out of the pitcher as far as the paw, it would come no farther. Try as they might the children could not pull it out.

While they were struggling over their task the gate opened and Uncle Jim came striding up the walk.

"Oh, come here, Uncle Jim," Bob cried, "Mumpey's paw is caught in Suzanne's pitcher."

Uncle Jim came quickly across the grass. He was laughing; Suzanne privately thought that was rather cruel.

Stooping down by Mumpey, he took hold of the pitcher with one hand and with the other hand he gave the monkey a sharp rap on the forearm. Mumpey squeaked indignantly—and out came the imprisoned paw.

"But why didn't he pull it out all alone?" Bob and Suzanne cried in chorus. "He's been caught that way all night."

"What is in the pitcher?" asked Uncle Jim.

When the children told him he nodded. "I thought so," he said. "It isn't the first time Mumpey's been tied up this way. You see, he had doubled up his fist over those candy eggs and he wouldn't undouble it; and so—he couldn't get his hand out."

Mumpey gazed at him and blinked. "You know that's true, sir," Uncle Jim said, "for that's the way I caught you to begin with, as you remember very well."

Then he told the children that one night in South America he had cut a hole in a cocoon, stirred some rice into the milk and left the cocoon under a tree; the next morning there was Mumpey, a prisoner in the cocoon just as he had been a prisoner in the bluebird pitcher.

"Greedy," finished Uncle Jim, looking sternly at Mumpey. "So greedy that he wouldn't unclinch his fist until he's made to."

Mumpey did not mind the stern voice. He had begun to feel a little better, and so he went over and sniffed at the pitcher.

"Mayn't I give him a candy egg?" Suzanne pleaded. "He's earned it, I think."

Mumpey sat up and crunched the candy contentedly. Bob looked at Suzanne, and they both drew a sigh of relief.

"I believe we've had almost as hard a time as Mumpey," said Bob.

Mumpey got up and began to caper round the grass.

"He wants his breakfast," said Suzanne. "Oh, what a monkey!"—Lucy Meacham Thurston, in The Youth's Companion.

SOME CONUNDRUMS

Why is the letter A like the honey-suckle? Because a B follows it.

When is a lady's dress like a chair? When it is satin (sat in).

What is that which we can all make, but which is never seen after it is made? A bow.

Why is the letter U the gayest in the alphabet? Because it is always in the midst of fun.

THE KING

Outside my window there's a tree
With leaves as green as they can be,
Except one leaf which is so red
I thought it was a bird instead.

I think this red one is their king
It looks as proud as anything,
And then it must be very brave
To make the other leaves behave.

Anne Blackwell Payne.

WHAT THE BOOK SAID

"Once upon a time," a book was overheard talking to a little boy who had just borrowed it:

"Please don't handle me with dirty hands. I should feel ashamed when the next little boy borrowed me.

"Or leave me out in the rain. Books as well as children catch cold.

"Or make marks on me with your pen or pencil. It would spoil my looks.

"Or lean on me with your elbows when you are reading me. It hurts.

"Or put in between my leaves a pencil, or anything thicker than a single sheet of thin paper. It would strain my back.

"Whenever you are through reading me, do not turn down the corner of one of my leaves, but a neat little book-mark to put in where you stopped, then close me, lay me down on my side, so that I can have a good rest.

"Remember, that I want to visit a great many other little boys after you are through with me. I may meet you again some day, and you would be sorry to see me looking old and torn and soiled."—S. S. Visitor.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

Foley; Genito, Rev. John R. Williams; Granite, Rev. M. B. Porter; Grove Avenue, Rev. F. I. McFaden, D.D.; Hawkins Memorial, Rev. H. J. Williams; Hebron, Rev. J. W. Bain; Hopewell, Rev. J. D. Keith; Laurel, Rev. Boude C. Moore; Lawcrossville, Rev. John M. Alexander; Milford, Rev. R. M. Turnbull, D.D.; Montrose, Rev. J. E. Cook; Namozine, Rev. H. J. Williams; Olivet, Rev. W. S. Golden; Providence, Rev. M. B. Porter; Roseneath, Rev. A. W. Honey; Salem, Rev. W. L. Carson; Union, Rev. Hugh Fitzpatrick; Windsor Shades, Rev. L. W. Curtis.

Mission Points:

Centralia, Rev. L. W. Curtis; Creighton Road, Marshall Wyatt; Ebenezer, Rev. A. B. Montgomery; Fairview, Rev. L. W. Curtis; Hebron (congregation), Rev. T. A. Painter; Holly Wood, Rev. H. B. Fraser; Jetersville, Rev. H. T. McFaden, D.D.; Mattoax, Rev. Russell Cecil, D.D.; Mill Wood, Rev. H. B. Fraser; Pilkington, Rev. L. W. Curtis; Pine Grove, Rev. W. S. Golden; Rennie Memorial, Rev. T. W. Painter; Sweet Hall, Rev. L. W. Curtis; Woodland, Rev. J. E. Cook; Taylor's Crossing, Rev. J. A. McClure.

Recommendations: We would recommend that the laymen, in their organization assist, as far as possible in these meetings by way of conducting preparatory services, the week preceding the time fixed for the minister to begin the evangelistic services.

WEST VIRGINIA

The Presbytery of Winchester met in Keyser, W. Va., on Tuesday, April 10, 1923. There were present 23 ministers and 20 ruling elders.

Officers: Rev. A. O. Price, moderator, and Rev. T. H. Daffin, reading clerk. Rev. A. H. Clark resigned the office of permanent clerk, and Rev. L. F. Harper was elected in his place.

Pastoral Relations Dissolved: The relation between Rev. W. G. Patterson and the Davis Church was dissolved. Rev. J. Hoge Smith offered his resignation as pastor of Cedar Cliff, Cedar Creek, Nineveh, and Milldale churches, and asked for a letter of dismissal to Tygarts Valley Presbytery, in order to accept calls to Huttonsville and Mill Creek Presbytery dissolved his relations with Nineveh and Milldale, but retained him as pastor of Cedar Cliff and Cedar Creek, thus giving him a more compact and workable field.

Church Organized: A new church, known as Burnt Church, was reported organized in Rev. T. H. Daffin's field, and he was made stated supply of it until the next stated meeting.

Overture: Presbytery adopted an overture offerred by Dr. F. J. Brooke, asking the General Assembly to rescind actions of former Assemblies appropriating money out of the Equipment Fund to the Mountain Retreat Association.

Synod's Entertainment Fund: Presbytery endorsed the call of the Synod of Virginia upon our churches for payment of seven cents per member into the Synod's treasury to cover traveling and other expenses under the new plan of self-entertainment, and advised early remittance of the amount.

Foreign Missions: Rev. Dr. W. D. Reynolds made an interesting and informing address on Korea.

Next Stated Meeting: Gerrardstown, W. Va., September 4, 1923. J. A. McM., S. C.

Greenbrier Presbytery met in the Ronceverte Presbyterian Church and was opened with a sermon by Rev. W. H. DuBose, from Romans 8:38-39, at the request of the retiring moderator, ruling elder A. M. Hubbard. There were present 26 ministers and 29 ruling elders.

Ruling elder Calvin W. Price, of Marlinton, W. Va., was elected moderator, and Rev. J. T. Pharr, and E. C. Curry were elected temporary clerks.

The pastoral relation between Rev. W. H. DuBose and the Old Stone Church of Lewisburg was dissolved in order that he might accept the call to become associate pastor of Rev. S. W. Moore, of the First Church Bluefield, W. Va., and upon his request also he was dismissed to Montgomery Presbytery.

Two churches were reported as having been organized since the meeting of Presbytery last fall: One at Auto, W. Va., in Greenbrier County, a mission of the Spring Creek Church, with 16 members, two elders and three deacons; the other one at Scarbro, W. Va., with 21 members, three elders and two deacons. The church at Auto was enrolled as Woodland, and the one at Scarbro, in Fayette County, as White Oak.

The commission reported that Rev. W. J. Flint had been installed pastor of the church at White Oak, and the field is self-supporting.

The Presbyterian sermon was preached by Rev.

John I. Armstrong, D.D., on "Satan and His Work." The Presbytery by a unanimous standing vote requested the Presbyterian Committee of Publication to publish this sermon in tract form for general distribution.

Rev. F. P. Sydenstricker, with Rev. R. L. Kinnaird as alternate, was appointed to preach at the fall meeting, on the "Coming Dearth of the Word of the Lord," from Amos 8:11-12.

Rev. W. W. Pharr by appointment of Presbytery preached a missionary sermon from Acts 1:7-8. Rev. J. E. Flow, D.D., was appointed to preach in the Ronceverte Church the Sunday after the meeting of Presbytery.

The following overtures were sent to the General Assembly:

1. In regard to revising the Sunday School and Narrative Blanks.

2. In regard to placing the Lord's Day Alliance on the Budget for an amount equal to the Bible Cause.

3. In regard to an Ad Interim Committee to study the relationship of our Theological Seminaries to the Church and to each other, the advisability of coordination of their work and any other matters in the interest of economy and efficiency in the training of our candidate for the ministry.

Presbytery accepted the invitation of the Liberty Church, Greenbank, W. Va., to meet with them in fall session September 4, 1923.

Adjourned to meet at Ronceverte, W. Va., April 30, at 1:30 p. m.

J. E. Flow, S. C.

PERSONAL

Rev. Dupuy Holladay has changed his address from Coveseville, Va., to Crystal Springs, Miss.

Rev. E. C. Bailey, of Latta, S. C., has changed his address to Accomac, Va.

Rev. R. W. Crain has changed his address from Lamar, Mo., to 405 N. 5th St., St. Joseph, Mo., where he has accepted a call to the Riverside Presbyterian Church of that city.

REPORT OF THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

	Ben. Sub.	This Year
Albemarle—28 of 49 churches	1,460	40,335
Concord—39 of 62	3,073	71,836
Fayetteville—75 of 119	3,999	74,102
Kings Mountain—25 of 38	2,265	36,986
Mecklenburg—55 of 86	4,570	128,637
Orange—30 of 87	4,738	125,478
Wilmington—39 of 87	2,987	71,959
291 of 508	23,092	$549,333

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA TO MAY 7TH

Ben. Sub.	Tithers	Family	Altars
Last Year	1922	1922	1923
513	$ 46,065	334	377
3,620	60,851	366	644
4,158	58,911	341	773
1,931	32,542	226	247
4,777	106,148	808	1,429
4,536	143,148	719	752
2,533	71,448	414	736
23,489	$521,241	3,234	4,958
			1,795
			2,796

WHY GO TO DAVIDSON?

All during her long history Davidson has had an enviable record for turning out finished products of sterling quality—men of character, equipped to do a man's work in the world, men sought after to fill places of responsibility and honor, as teachers, ministers, athletic directors, and in other professional and business enterprises.

DAVIDSON'S STANDING:

The training given at Davidson has long been recognized as thorough. Recent recognition of the scholastical standing has been the establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa Society. Davidson also has been placed on the approved list of American and European Universities. This means that Davidson's students can be admitted, without examination, into all American and European Universities on equal standing with their own students.

IMPROVEMENTS:

In the past year Davidson has spent $200,000 in better equipping the College plant. The new central heating plant is complete and connected with each of the seven dormitories, as well as the new gymnasium. Two four-story fire-proof dormitories were built last year. Students are not permitted to room more than two to the room, while a limited number of single rooms are available. New teachers are being added in higher ratio than student increase. A new athletic field is under construction. New apparatus is being purchased each year for the various laboratories—Chemistry, Physics, Biology, Applied Mathematics, Psychology and Geology.

REGISTER EARLY:

Applications are being received daily. One mail early in May brought $10,000 room deposits from new men from St. Louis, Mo., Jackson Miss., Thomasville, Ga., Lynchburg, Va., Pickens, Miss., Crossnore, N. C. Registrations are ahead of last year, and the prospects are that we shall again have more applications than can be accommodated. Make your application to Dean, M. E. Sentelle.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Kelly-Fleming—On May 2, 1923 at the residence of the bride's parents, Miss Vera White Fleming, daughter of L. P. and Isla Fleming, near New Hope, S. C., to Mr. Newman Perry Kelly, Rev. W. H. Workman officiating.

Holder-Leach—At the residence of the pastor, Candor, N. C., by Rev. W. Baker, Mr. S. A. Holder, Rubyatt, N. C., and Miss Gladys Leach, Candor, N. C.

DEATHS

THOMAS S. BRYAN

On April 10th, at his home in Columbia, S. C., died from a stroke of paralysis, Thomas S. Bryan, honored member of the First Presbyterian Church, aged 66 years.

Two extracts from the many letters received briefly sum up the career

PRUDENT, PROVIDENT PARENTS

Before buying a set of books for the children's use in the Home and School, Prudent, Provident Parents are requested to first examine COMPTON'S PICTURED ENCYCLOPEDIA—the most fascinating, most instructive work published for the young, and is many years later than any other. It brings in the most attractive form, both by text and pictures, the world's knowledge down to 1923. More than any other book, it entertains, it charms, it educates the child, and interests and benefits every member of the family, from the "tiny tots" to the gray-haired grandparents. Sold on easy terms, or for cash, at a lower price than old and hackneyed "hodge-podge" compilations. I guarantee that "COMPTON'S PICTURED ENCYCLOPEDIA" is by far the best work ever published for children in the grades and high school. I will cheerfully refund your money, and ask no questions, if for any reason you are not satisfied and delighted with "COMPTON'S PICTURED ENCYCLOPEDIA." Write me, please.

T. NORSWORTHY, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C. I sell "Anything and Everything" in Books at Publisher's Prices. I pay postage. Send me a list of your Book Wants."

$200.00 PRIZE

Washington, D. C. Apr. 16. Two hundred dollars will be given as a prize to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for No.'s 33 and 34, the new trains between New Orleans and New York, to be inaugurated on Sunday, April 29th, by The Southern Railway System, the Louisville and Nashville, The West Point Route and the Pennsylvania Railway, according to announcement made today by W. H. Taylor, Passenger Traffic Manager of the Southern, Washington, D. C., to whom all suggestions should be sent. The prize will be awarded after all suggestions have been considered by a committee of officers of the interested lines.

R. H. GRAHAM
Division Passenger Agent
Southern Railway System
Charlotte, N. C.

of this most unusual Christian man and also man of affairs.

The one. "There are not many men to whom the name of Christ-like can be applied. He was one of the few I knew. I loved him with an increasing devotion to this Christ-like character.

As I have taken on years, and have added to my acquaintance with men, I have been able to see more clearly how great was his ability as a man of business and how high was his position in the world. I do not know anyone with whom I would place him.

My business relations with him convinced me that his word was as good as his bond—that every act was honorable, and that as this world goes he was one man picked out of ten thousand. The business world will miss him; it will always remember the high ethical business standards for which he stood. Columbia has lost her leading citizen."

The other: "When I was a student in the Columbia Seminary I saw much of Mr. Bryan. From my earliest recollection I saw him in some form of religious work. He was then an active worker in the Y. M. C. A. as well as in the Sabbath School. He has certainly been an indefatigable worker in the Lord's vineyard in some form all his days. He has left a rich legacy in the services he rendered, and in the place of esteem which he holds with all who knew and observed his Christian character.

Surely he now enjoys the reward of the Welcome from the Master, for he put his talents to a wise and good use."

"I cannot say, and will not say that he is dead.

He is just away.

With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,

He has wandered into an unknown land

And left us dreaming how very fair It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you—oh you who the wildest yearn

For the old-time step, and the glad return

Think of him faring on as dear, In the love over there, as the love of here.

Think of him still as the same I say, He is not dead—He is just away."

REV. J. F. McKINNON

Pressure of other duties has hitherto prevented my asking of you the privilege of adding a few words to the brief tribute that your editorial note of a recent issue paid to the late Rev. J. F. McKinnon, whose death occurred a few weeks ago at Rutherfordton. In every way he merits a warm and affectionate tribute to his worth as a man of genuine Christian character, as a teacher of indisputable excellence, and as a preacher who but for limitations that were no reflection on him would have reached quite marked prominence in pulpit and church court.

Mr. McKinnon graduated with the class of '80 at Davidson, though he entered college a year or so earlier than this class and was then compelled by circumstances beyond his control to drop out of college for a time. The writer came to know him intimately during his college days and to recognize in him a man of ability and a most earnest student, with a special gift for mathematics, a gift he generously employed in helping from time to time this one of his friends who was not in possession of this particular talent.

He had a most worthy and laudable

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach. R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship.

For catalogue and information, write—
Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President,

Clinton, S. C.

THE LOUISVILLE PRESBYTERIAN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

BRILLIANT FACULTY MODERN CURRICULUM

Situated in the heart of the institutional section of a great metropolis, with all the added advantages of these associated institutions

Write for particulars to JOHN M. VANDER MEULEN, President
109 East Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

BLUE RIDGE SCHOOL FOR BOYS HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.

A select home school on Accredited List, offering to a limited number of boys, from 9 to 20 years old, a more intensive system of training than public schools can give. Ideally located in healthful, invigorating climate, conducive to study. Each boy's personality carefully studied and directed by efficient teaching staff composed of verile, patriotic men with successful teaching careers. A teacher for every seven or eight boys insures individual attention in studies. Boys taught HOW TO STUDY. All branches of athletics directed and supervised by able instructors.

High moral tone; cultured, home-like environments; parental discipline.

Total charge for session, September 18 to June 4, $650. Summer term, July and August. For catalog, address,
J. R. SANDIFER, Headmaster, Hendersonville, N. C.

WHERE TO GO TO COLLEGE?

There are three major considerations that determine the greatness, or the potential greatness, of an educational institution.

1. The Plant, including grounds, library, classrooms, laboratories, and apparatus.
2. The Faculty.
3. The Student body and its democratic standards.

In addition to the thirty-four buildings already on the campus, the State of North Carolina is this year putting $1,650,000 into new buildings and equipment. The library of 150,000 volumes is spending $24,000 annually for books and periodicals. Eight thousand volumes were received in 1922-1923, and one thousand and five magazines and learned journals were received on subscription.

The Faculty numbers 128 of the country's best scholars. Speaking of the student body of the University, Mr. Sherwood Eddy, of Yale University, who has spent the major portion of his life studying in four continents, said, that with one exception, it was the most seriously thoughtful and democratic group of students he had ever known.

Registration for fall quarter, September 25, 26, 1923.

For further information address

The Secretary to the President
UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women

Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A.B., B.S., B.M. Degrees

Catalog on Request

Address the Registrar

The General Assembly's Training School For Lay Workers

Richmond, Va.

1. CONTROL.—The Training School is incorporated under the laws of Virginia and is owned and controlled by the General Assembly, through its Board of 15 Trustees elected by the Assembly.
2. PURPOSE.—The purpose of the School is to train lay workers, both men and women for all branches of church work except the Gospel Ministry. It prepares for Foreign and Home Missions, Sunday School Workers, Pastor's Assistants, Bible Teachers, Young People's Leaders and Societies, and Voluntary workers in the Home churches.
3. FACULTY.—The School has a faculty of 16 experienced and able pastors and teachers and practical workers. In the judgment of many, this Training School has the best Faculty of any similar institution in the land.
4. COURSES OF STUDY.—The School stands for the supremacy of the Bible and places large emphasis upon the practical and develops a high standard of Scholarship. It has seven main departments of (1) English Bible, (2) Christian Missions and Church History, (3) Christian Sociology, (4) Personal Evangelism, (5) Religious Education, (6) Practical Study, (7) Field Work. These are the results of personal experience of the teachers and close observation of the needs of Christian Workers in the various fields and of conference with prominent leaders in the different branches of the Church's work.
5. LOCATION.—In Richmond, a city of churches, history, and culture, the student has a great advantage, studying first-hand the work of large churches, and Sunday Schools, factory and city mission work. The School is located in Ginter Park, one of the most delightful residential sections of the city. Just across the avenue is the Union Theological Seminary with all of its advantages and opportunities available. No better location could be found for such an institution.
6. NEEDS.—The School has no endowment fund and is dependent upon the voluntary offerings of the Church. It needs to be placed on the Church's budget, to receive contributions from churches where the budget is not used. Its immediate needs are 3 houses for professors, an administration and 2 dormitory buildings, equipment for the new dormitory and dining hall, the endowment of professors' chairs, and an adequate annual income. $150.00 will equip a memorial room in the new dormitory building. There are about 90 rooms. This is a fine opportunity for Synodicals, Presbyterials, Sunday Schools, Churches, and individuals to do a fine work in taking a room as a memorial.
7. CORRESPONDENCE AND EXTENSION COURSES.—Mrs. Margaret T. Russell, a most efficient Bible Teacher, is teaching Bible classes in Churches, Sunday Schools, and the Woman's Auxiliaries. Excellent courses by correspondence are provided on Bible Study, Biblical Geography, Church History, Christian Doctrine, and Home Missions. About 500 have been taking these courses during the past year. A postal card will bring you the desired information.
8. ENROLLMENT.—During the 9 years of its existence between 400 and 500 students have been enrolled. During the past session, 120 from 15 states and one foreign country have been in attendance. About 85 have already enrolled for next session. The next session opens September 19, 1923.

For Information or Catalogue, write

The President, or Business Manager

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

Ginter Park, Richmond, Va.

hibition to attain distinction based merit and to have the recognition others that his natural ability and acquired learning properly entitled to. but he was destined to suffer from handicap that kept him from reaching the full rewards that would naturally have come to him. He was weaker physically and especially so he weak in voice, and therefore matter what the merit of his composition or the content of his discourse he lacked the physical vigor of the force and tone of voice to make the impression that his sermon address would otherwise have made. Notwithstanding this handicap however, he was known everywhere as an excellent sermonizer and as a Presbyterian perfectly familiar with parliamentary law and able to discuss clearly and with logical force questions up for debate in the lower and higher courts of the church. Further he was man of sound judgment and for years was a member of the Board of Trustees of Davidson College and of the Board of Directors of Columbia Theological Seminary. Again as a teacher and administrative officer in high school work, both public and private, he was recognized as a man of exceptionally high qualifications and was sought to fill positions of responsibility. His death is a distinct loss to the Church in this two-fold way, in that he was an earnest, able preacher of the living Word and at the same time a Christian teacher and wise counselor whose influence told for good in a very pronounced and positive manner in the class room and as an executive in school work of varied kind.

C. R. H. Davidson College.

MRS. CHARLES D. LARUS

Cornelia Keen Baldwin, the oldest daughter of the late Thomas S. and Jane M. Baldwin, was born in Richmond, Va., the 26th day of May, 1853.

At the age of 13 she united with the Third Presbyterian Church, Richmond, of which her father was an honored elder for many years, until his death from injuries sustained in the appalling Capitol disaster, occurring April 27, 1870.

She was happily married to Mr. Charles D. Larus on February 25, 1875, a union which was blessed with three children. Mr. Larus died on March 21, 1908. Mrs. Larus was a semi-invalid for many years, yet her end came very suddenly confined to her bed for less than a week by a violent attack of pneumonia she entered peacefully into everlasting rest on April 26, 1923.

Her faith was firm in an all-sufficient Saviour, undisturbed by questions or doubts.

She was faithful to the friends of her childhood, as well as to those of later years. Her gifts to others were varied and many, and without ostentation; in fact, her right and left hands seemed to be strangers, when the knowledge of these acts was to be considered.

After her husband's death her membership was transferred to the Ginter Park Church, and while she was counted among its most valued members, she always recognized that her old church had its claims upon her, which she fulfilled in many acts of helpfulness. She had a great love for Union Theological Seminary, testified by her liberal gifts to its support, and her oft-expressed affection for all of its supporters and for its very walls. Another warm spot in her heart was for the great Foreign Missionary cause, and her loving sympathy went out freely to all of the missionaries within her reach. Her place is vacant, but only outwardly, for her memory dwells in the hearts of her dear family—her dear friends—her dear church and seminary, as well as in those who will sadly miss her substantial help.

She is survived by one daughter and two sons: Mrs. John H. Reed and Charles D., Jr., and Lewis G. Larus, and by a sister and brother: Mrs. Luther Sheldon and Thomas J. Baldwin. Her body was laid to rest in Hollywood by the side of her husband, after services at the home, conducted by Drs. T. Cary Johnson and Walter W. Moore. E. P.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

TYPEWRITERS
New and Rebuilt
For Sale, Rent or Exchange
S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Provides Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who fill positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc. Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women. Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers. Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to
Henry H. Sweets, Manager
100 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with
Gray's Ointment
Sold by all druggists. Write for sample
W. F. Gray & Co., 722 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.
SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.
Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points. For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

N. C. State College of Agriculture and Engineering
SUMMER SESSION JUNE 12th to JULY 25th

Courses for teachers holding standard State Certificates, and for graduates of Standard High Schools. Courses giving College Credit for graduates of Standard High Schools. Cotton Classing courses. Catalogue upon application. Numbers limited to 1050. Apply for Reservation at once to
W. A. WITHERS, Director :: :: Raleigh, North Carolina

OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE, Oak Ridge, N. C.
T. E. Whitaker, President
Founded in 1852. Military. Courses thoroughly covering Literature, Science, Book-keeping, Short-hand, Typewriting, and Music. Eight buildings; electric lights, steam heat and shower baths. 350 acres in campus, athletic grounds, orchards, and farms. Beautiful lake nesting between hills covered with virgin forests. Healthful—1040 feet above sea level; accessible location near Greensboro. Sane, moral influences. Costs reasonable. $125 for the year. Fall session opens first Tuesday in Sept. each year. Write for illustrated catalogue. Address Oak Ridge Institute, Oak Ridge, N. C.

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA
SUMMER SCHOOL

Thirty-Sixth Session :: June 18-September 7, 1923
First Term, June 18-July 28—Second Term, July 27-September 7
Standard Courses in the Regular Departments of the University. Cultural and Professional Courses leading to the A. B. and A. M. Degrees. High Class Recreational Features and Entertainments of an educational character. Able Faculty of Trained Specialists. Spacious campus, modern library and laboratory facilities, delightful climate, highest service. Low cost. Write for complete announcement.
N. W. WALKER, Director :: :: Chapel Hill, N. C.

1854 COLUMBIA COLLEGE 1923
COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA
One of the South's oldest Colleges for the Christian Education of Young Women. Standard Courses leading to B. A. and B. S. Degrees. Strong Departments in Music, Art, Home Economics, Expression. Christian Atmosphere. Magnificent Plant. Write for Literature.
J. CALDWELL GUILDS, President

Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.

A High Grade Institution for the Education of Young Women

Christian Ideals constantly held before the Students; Christian Characters in the chair of each Department; Five Teachers with M. A. Degree; Two Teachers with Ph.D. Degree; Christian Atmosphere permeating the Student Body.

Location, the very best; Myers Park, Charlotte. Equipment rapidly reaching standard requirements. Curriculum equal to that of any institution in the State. Expenses very moderate indeed, considering advantages offered and work done.

Our Motto: "Christian Women for Christian Homes." Send us your daughter, support us in our administration and instruction, and we will return a thoroughly developed and fully refined Christian woman.

For catalogue and other information, write
WILLIAM H. FRAZER, President
Box 300
Charlotte, N. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY	DAILY	DAILY			DAILY	DAILY	DAILY
EXCEPT SUNDAY	EXCEPT SUNDAY	EXCEPT SUNDAY			EXCEPT SUNDAY	EXCEPT SUNDAY	EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38			NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	Lv. Aberdeen, Ar.	45 s	6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashey Heights	40 f	6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	f 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36 s	6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	s 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35 f	6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32 f	6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	s 9:53 am	19	Raeford	26 s	6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
	s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21 f	5:45 pm	s 1:25 pm
	f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	19 f	5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
	s 10:40 am	s 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15 s	5:25 pm	f 12:55 pm
	f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	14 f	5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
	f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11 f	5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
	s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9 s	5:08 pm	s 12:33 pm
	f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5 f	5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
	f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3 f	4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
	s 11:30 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0 s	4:45 pm	s 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

Mitchell College

(JUNIOR)

(Founded 1856 by Concord Presbytery)

Two years of standard, accredited college work—courses leading to Baccalaureate degrees—Excellent department of Music—Certificate courses in Home Economics and Secretarial.

MITCHELL ACADEMY

An accredited High School, with standard and flexible courses

Bible teaching emphasized throughout.

Teacher Training courses for secular and Sunday Schools.

Catalog on application.

W. F. Hollingsworth, Pres. Statesville, N. C.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.

Salisbury, N. C.

Anything in... CEMETERY WORK

Satisfaction our Motto

A card will bring full information.

Sparkles

A Frenchwoman, proud of her limited knowledge of English, and an American woman, proud of her limited knowledge of French, were introduced. The Frenchwoman insisted in expressing herself in bad English, and the American would talk nothing but bad French.

When the guests began to depart they were still at it. At last they arose to go. Here is their watery farewell:

"Reservoir," said the fair American. "Tanks," responded her new friend. —The Way.

"The next one in this room that speaks above a whisper will be put out!" exclaimed the angry judge. "Hip, hip, hooray!" shouted the prisoner, as he ran for the door.

"I can't do a thing with Jones," said the manager. "I've had him in three departments, and he dozes all day long."

"Put him at the pajama counter," suggested the proprietor, "and fasten this card on him:

"Our night clothes are of such superior quality that even the man who sells them cannot keep awake."

Church Furniture
WORK OF THE HIGHEST QUALITY
AT REASONABLE PRICES
Write for Catalogue
BUDDE & WEIS MFG. CO.
JACKSON, TENNESSEE

School Desks,
Opera Chairs,
Folding Chairs
Kindergarten Chairs,
Church Pews,
School Supplies,
Blackboards

Southern Des't Co., Hickory, N. C.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The STIEFF TONE

Is famous with three generations of music lovers. It has never been duplicated. It is the expression of a passion for perfection that has actuated three generations of piano makers.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Constipation

Relieved Without The Use of Laxatives

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving.

Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

Nujol

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.

IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank

Resources Over $5,000,000.00

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Fine Furniture Within Reach of the Average Home

We are selling this Louis VI three-piece suit upholstered in beautiful blue and taupe velour combinations at $160.00.

Think of McCoy's when you think of good furniture.

W. T. McCoy & Co.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., MAY 23, 1923

No. 21

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription id.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to our office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
Facts, Doctrine, Life	1
The General Assembly at Montreat	1
The Prayer Assembly	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Hell—By Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D.	3, 4
The Tidy Church—A Community Center—By J. S. Kuykendall	4
Kim Ki Suni—By Miss Emily Winn	4
Impressions of Chapel Hill—By Rev. J. Keir Fraser	4
I Must Be Strong—By Mrs. Daisy P. Carrigan	4
Summary of Work of Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—By Rev. H. H. Sweets, D.D.	5
An April Meadow	5
Four and a Half Years	5
Union Theological Seminary	5
Southwestern Tied to the Presbyterian Church—By Rev. S. Waters McGill	5
D. L. Moody, a Friend of Prisoners	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

FACTS, DOCTRINE, LIFE

WE see much in these days of doctrinal unrest about the relation of these three things to each other. The question is raised and hotly discussed, which precedes and which follows, which is cause and which is effect. All three are essential elements of Christianity. We can have religion, but not the Christian religion without facts, for the whole system is based upon facts, historic facts. We cannot have Christianity without doctrine, for doctrine is the statement of facts. It is quite a common opinion that doctrine lies in the sphere of speculation, that it has something of the vagueness and uncertainty which attaches to metaphysics. This opinion is shared in by those who have had opportunity to know better. All true doctrine is nothing more nor less than the statement of fact. Take the catechism question, What is God? "God is a spirit infinite, eternal and unchangeable in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth." This answer is doctrine, i. e., teaching about God. But if it be true, it is the statement of facts about God. Is God infinite? If He is, then to say so, is to assert a fact. That God exists is no more a fact than that He is an intelligent Being. In other words, what God is is just as truly a fact as that He is.

What is the doctrine of the atonement? It is the statement that Christ died for our sins to reconcile us to God? Did Christ die for this purpose? Then the doctrine is the statement of a fact. The purpose for which He died is just as truly a fact as that He died. So it is with all the doctrines of our most holy faith. In so far as they are true they are the statement of facts.

Facts are of no value without doctrine. Doctrine determines the meaning and significance of facts. Paul said: "I determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." Did Paul mean that he intended to confine himself to the bald statement that Jesus Christ was crucified? What good does the knowledge of that do? If anybody knew that Jesus was crucified, it was the soldiers who nailed Him to the cross. Did the fact have any religious value for them? They supposed they had put to death a malefactor, and they sat down and gambled for His clothing. Without the true doctrine explaining the fact, the crucifixion of Christ had no more religious value than that of the two robbers who were crucified with Him?

So about the Person of Christ. When the jailor asked what he must do to be saved, Paul replied: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Does anybody suppose the jailor was expected to do that without knowing who the Lord Jesus Christ was? Paul was no fool, and when he made that answer, he did it on the assumption that the jailor had already heard enough about Christ to know who He was; or else Paul followed the answer with an explanation of who Christ was. To one ignorant of all doctrine about Christ, the answer of Paul would convey no meaning. Those who disparage doctrine darken counsel by words without knowledge. All but idiots base belief on doctrine, not upon naked fact.

One of the ruses of Liberalism is to iterate that Christianity is essentially a life and not a creed. It is not believing something about Christ, but it is "Christ in you the hope of glory." The vital thing is not to know about Christ, but to know Christ. Of course, the final end of Christianity is to produce a certain type of life. "I came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." But to emphasize life at the cost of doctrine is simply to exalt the end against the means. How can the name of common sense is any one to know Christ without first knowing about Christ?

The question is asked, Which is primary, doctrine or life? One writer tells us that the answer to this question marks one for a liberal or a fundamentalist. If we say doctrine is primary, then we are a back number. If we say life is primary, then we can claim spiritual kinship with Dr. Fosdick. It is very remarkable that there should be two answers to the question. If by primary is meant that which comes first, then to say that life is primary is to say that a harvest can be garnered before the seed is sown. If by primary is meant that which is most important, then to say life is primary is to say that the harvest is more important than the seed from which it sprang.

The trouble about Liberalism is a lack of clearness of thought and precision of statement. It indulges in much pious phraseology, but lives and moves and has its being in a kind of luminous fog bank. When one begins to decry dogma and doctrine and theology, you may set it down that he does not care to stand hitched. He wants to run with the hounds, and hold with the hare. He can talk glibly about the hidden life, and the mystic union, and the supremacy of love, but he is using language mostly as camouflage. The Apostle Paul, by anticipation, makes all confusion touching the questions we have been discussing inexcusable. "It shall be that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. But how shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed; and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard; and how shall they hear without a preacher? So faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." First the message, then the faith, then the life.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AT MONTREAT

(Editorial Correspondence)

On Wednesday evening, May 16th, the Pre-Evangelistic Assembly met under circumstances that were far more favorable than the morning promised. All Tuesday night the rain poured down and morning found lowering clouds. As the day advanced, the clouds broke and by the time our train reached Black Mountain, the sun was shining, and by the next day Montreat was resplendent in its clean garb.

The evangelistic meeting on Wednesday evening was a great success. Dr. Chas. L. Goodell, representing the Federal Council of Churches, gave one of the most inspiring addresses we have ever heard. Dr. Goodell is a most impressive speaker, and his address will no doubt influence the work of our evangelists through the coming year.

On Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. Dr. R. C. Reed, the moderator, preached the opening sermon, on the subject of "Hell." This sermon is published in this issue of the Standard. It created a fine impression and there were many expressions of satisfaction from the commissioners, who were delighted that, from our Church, in the person of our moderator, such a note of fidelity to the truth of scripture should sound forth. However much Modernism has erased the word from the Bible, they rejoice to know that the Southern Church still holds to the plain truth everywhere taught by Jesus Christ.

During this opening sermon the infant daughter of Rev. J. B. Belk was baptized by the moderator in the presence of the Assembly. Mr. Belk was a pupil of Dr. Reed's at Columbia Seminary, and that it was peculiarly appropriate that this young lady should be able hereafter to boast that she received in the beginning of her career such honor.

At the close of the sermon, the communion and the Lord's Supper was celebrated. Dr. C.

Dr. Hemphill, both ex-moderators of the Assembly, presided.

In the afternoon the Assembly was formally organized by the election of Dr. Alexander Sprunt, of Charleston, S. C., as moderator. This election was held under the new rules governing the business of the Assembly. Instead of numerous speeches in nominating men, there was a limit placed. No man could speak more than once in nominating a man and then only ten minutes in length, and the man who seconded the nomination had only one chance and was given only five minutes for his speech. This rule of course choked off long speeches and thus saved time, but this time saved was largely wasted by the many nominations made. There were seven men nominated, as follows: Dr. Alexander Sprunt, Dr. W. T. Thompson, Dr. J. C. Malloy, Dr. J. H. Lumpkin, Dr. W. H. Woods, Dr. E. W. McCorkle, and Ruling Elder Bailey Springs, an Indian. Dr. Woods asked that his name be dropped, as a slight deafness would prevent his performing the duties of the chair. This reduced the entries to six. There were two ballots taken, Dr. Sprunt and Dr. Thompson leading in both ballots, but in the final ballot, Dr. Sprunt received 152 votes, with Dr. Thompson falling just outside the breastworks.

The selection of Dr. Sprunt met with universal satisfaction, as he has been for years a faithful and hard working pastor, who has never been in the limelight, but the fruit of whose work can be found in every Synod where he has labored.

At the evening session, which was devoted to the Sunday School Cause, Dr. W. L. Lingle and Dr. W. T. Thompson made addresses. There was a large audience, filling at least two-thirds of the immense auditorium. These addresses were unusually fine. Dr. Lingle explained the methods of the International Lessons Committee, and Dr. Thompson spoke on the importance of educating the young people. Before these addresses Dr. Goodell spoke on the need of the churches standing together. This address, as was the case in his previous address, stirred the Assembly as few addresses have done.

In presenting his report of Foreign Missions, Dr. E. W. Smith made this statement, which will relieve the anxiety of many in the Church. He stated that the missionaries were found to be orthodox, and that they stood precisely where the Executive Committee and its secretaries all stand, on the Standards of our Church. He further stated that all except five of the new missionaries that should sail this summer had been provided for, and he appealed for $300 pledges per year of new money to help send these remaining five. The Assembly was glad to hear from Dr. Smith that the deficit which has been climbing, had at last faced about, and on March 31, 1923, was less than twelve months before.

On Friday morning the devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. James I. Vance. Dr. Vance is always good, but he really surpassed himself in this short address. He spoke on the Dawn and Twilight of Paul's Life. It was a vivid picture that gripped the attention of the Assembly, painted with words, so that all could see Paul's difficulties in finding his work. There was a freshness in his treatment that made his address peculiarly enjoyable. As one listened, he could but hope that the young preachers in the audience would learn the lesson that old truths, clothed in new figures of speech, will always get a sympathetic hearing.

Dr. H. H. Sweets in his hopeful report on Ministerial Relief, rejoiced every heart with the fact that whereas the infirm preachers or their widows, when in dire want, formerly received $200 a year as the limit, now we have been paying them $900.

J. Nat Harrison, an elder from Petersburg, Va., moved that Mrs. Winsborough be invited to read her own report. A few years ago this invitation would have been met with a protest, but times have changed and the Church has moved on. We mossbacks cannot keep up with the procession, so that this practically was carried with only a few negative votes.

Dr. Robert E. Speer, head of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Northern Church, was presented and invited to address the Assembly on Foreign Mission work. At the close of his address, Rev. Isaac Yonan was heard in behalf of the Near East Relief. We have heard Mr. Yonan very often, but never in such an address as he made. His appeal in behalf of his people was so powerful and pathetic that all over the vast congregation could be seen men and women weeping, wiping their eyes, as tears fell uncontrolled. Measured by its moving effect, this was the most powerful address of the day. He called attention to the fact that Mohammedanism had challenged Christianity, and that nominal Christian countries were silent, or else yielding.

Dr. Sprunt's response was simply a quotation from the words of the Judge in the Judgment parable: "I was hungry and ye gave me no meat."

In the afternoon Dr. Speer spoke in the interests of the Federal Council, of which body he is the president. Dr. Speer again addressed the Assembly on Friday in the interests of the Federal Council. He began by claiming to have been among conservative people, having therefore great sympathy with those objecting to the Council. He claimed, however, that while there were some objections to it, the benefits outweighed them. He said, for example, that he could find many things objectionable in the church to which he belonged, but he joined because the good in the church outweighed all such objections.

Dr. Melvin's report on the work of the Progressive Campaign Committee was a long and excellent report. In the discussion of its disposal there was some confusion, several motions, several divisions, but it was finally referred to the Stewardship Committee.

This meagre report of your editor closes with Friday afternoon's session.

REV. ALEXANDER SPRUNT, D.D.
Moderator of 1923 General Assembly

THE PRAYER ASSEMBLY

It has become the fashion these latter days to designate each Assembly by that subject that is to be prominent in its proceedings, and that is to be specially stressed. We have had the Home Mission Assembly, and the Evangelistic Assembly, in which we featured especially the work of Home Missions and the pressing duty of evangelism.

The present Assembly has been designated the Prayer Assembly, though we must confess that we do not like the implication that previous Assemblies did not stress the duty of prayer.

Be that as it may, we should realize that prayer, which is our duty at all times, is especially so now when the Church of God, all over our land, is being assailed by foes within as well as without, and the Word of God which for ages has been a lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path, is no longer a light from the presence of God, but is a compilation of the efforts of sinful and erring man. Let us then join in earnest prayer that the spirit of grace and of supplications may be poured out upon the commissioners as they deliberate concerning the affairs of the Church, and that the Church may be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men; for all men have not faith.

The hunger for happiness which lies in every human heart can never be satisfied without righteousness. The Bible brings news of a kingdom which is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit.

Who depends upon the inspiration of the moment is apt to meet with many an hour that is not very inspiring.

Devotiona

THE PREACHER'S POWER

Ruskin said, "For every hundred men who can hear one can speak; for every hundred who can speak but one can think; for every hundred who can think only one can see." Too many are like Wordsworth's "Peter Bell!"

"A primrose on the river's brim,
A yellow primrose was to him,
And nothing more."

Bushnell said that the first requirement of a minister was a great consciousness, a consciousness that sees great things to be done and moves toward the doing with shout and song. Too many essay to be leaders who are no better equipped than those they essay to lead.

The age demands an educated ministry. The intellectual demands upon the minister are tremendous. More is required than intellectual preparation. Those who would become God's spokesmen must grasp the spiritual aspect of things. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. They must begin with a right life. Otherwise the vision will be blurred. One may know theology but he can speak no healing message to the world until his spiritual vision has been cleared. He may be able to speak in intellectual terms, but not in spiritual syllables. A cleansed soul can see more than a trained intellect. People must see the man back of the message. Unless the preacher's life is right his words will carry no conviction. He may have an intellectual grasp of truth but he will have no gospel for the soul.

No one can be a great preacher who is not first a great soul. The man must be prepared before he prepares a sermon. A sermon out of the man and not out of the thing he tries to be on the occasion of its preparation is a delivery. The message must be personalized in the preacher. Isaiah's picture of the Messiah, the Prophet places the emphasis upon His character. He was prophesy, but back of His message was to be His life.

Jesus always held before the people who He was more important than what He did. Other religious teachers urged people to believe what they teach. Jesus commanded them to accept Him. Buddha taught that renunciation was the way to perfection. Jesus said, "I am the way." Plato bade his disciples "follow the good." Jesus said, "Follow Me." Pilate voiced the question discussed in the schools of his age, "What is truth?" Jesus answered, "I am the truth." His chief message to the world was His life. The Gospels are a history, not a system of theology. Being was the greatest word in Jesus' vocabulary. That was larger than His teachings and mightier than His miracles.

The supreme demand upon a minister is a right life. Moral beauty counts for more than intellectual strength. Character is a greater teacher than intellect. Xenophon said that the disciples of Socrates were more influenced by what he was than by what he taught. Emerson said to an inconsistent person, "What you are makes such noise that I cannot hear what you say." The world must see as well as hear what constitutes Christlikeness. Being is better than explaining. Goodness is the highest grade of power. Quality counts for more than quantity. Learning may convince, eloquence persuade, power compel, but the grip of a good life will hold when others are forgotten. He who would speak for God must live for God.

The greatest sermon is not the utterance of the preacher's lips, but the impress of his life.—United Presbyterian

WHAT IS CHRISTIANITY?

In the home, it is kindness;
In business, it is honesty;
In society, it is courtesy;
In work, it is fairness;
Toward the unfortunate, it is pity;
Toward the weak, it is help;
Toward the wicked, it is resistance;
Toward the strong, it is trust;
Toward the penitent, it is forgiveness;
Toward the fortunate, it is congratulation;
And toward God, it is reverence and love.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"BOUGHT WITH A PRICE"

One of the profound truths of God's Word is that Christians are not their own, but are bought with a price and that they are bound to glorify God in their bodies and in their spirits which are His. Arthur Detmers has put the thought into verse:

To know that what I have is not my own,
To feel that I am never quite alone;
This would I pray from day to day.
For then I know my life will flow
In peace until it be God's will
I go.

HELL

Opening Sermon at the 1923 Assembly

By Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D.

"I am tormented in this flame." Luke 16:24.

I have chosen this subject not because it is a pleasant one, but because it is a neglected one. We hear the word hell all too frequently from the lips of the profane. It is a favorite place for sending people by those who ought to have a wholesome fear of going there themselves. But hell has almost ceased to be a theme for pulpit discussion. We are told that we must adapt our message to the age in which we live. This doctrine of hell is not relished by the modern mind. It smacks of Medievalism. It belongs to a coarse and cruel age when men needed to hear of fire and brimstone to curb their brutal natures. We have grown up to such a stage of refinement that instead of being terrified, we are repelled by the warning of danger signals before our eyes.

Perhaps we do well to bear in mind that those to whom Jesus preached represented the modern mind of that age. They did not relish His teachings. They bore with Him for three short years and then crucified Him. He knew that was coming but He did not modify His message. He looked his adversaries in the face, and said: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?"

Jesus had more to say about hell than any one who has spoken to us as a messenger from God. And the hell which He portrayed was about as frightful as language can portray. The imagination of a Dante or a Milton can elaborate, but can add nothing essential to the sum of horrors. Why was this? Why did the gracious and loving Jesus refer so frequently to a subject that could have had no inherent attraction for Him? Was it not because He knew more about hell than any one else knew? With His infinite sweep of vision, He had seen all and He knew as no one else could know the sufferings of those who go there.

Jesus believed that the fear of hell was a salutary experience. He tried to frighten men. "Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear; fear him who after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell: yea, I say unto you, fear Him." He warns us to avoid sin even at the cost of a right eye, or a right hand; and assigns as a reason that sin means hell.

Shall we not with open mind permit Jesus to preach us a sermon on hell? He has proven His devotion to us. By laying down His life for us, He has earned a right to speak to us on this awful subject in language which on other lips might seem repellent.

In this parable he answers three questions: What is hell? Where is hell? Who are going there?

I. What is hell? His answer is that hell is a place of torment: "I am tormented in this flame." Figurative language, do you say? Probably so. We need not suppose that He means to teach that the immaterial soul can be roasted literally in material fire. Presumably He is using a figure of speech, but the figure does not affect the argument. We use figure to visualize truth, to make it vivid. There are many kinds of torment. 2. To use merely the abstract term would leave the idea vague. What kind of torment does the lost soul suffer? The figure is used to answer this question. We know the kind of torment that is caused by burning and hence this figure makes the idea very vivid. Figurative language in the mouth of a truthful man is just as true as any other language. There are many other figures which Jesus might have used; and may we not say with reverence, which He must have used had He meant to suggest any milder measure of torment than that which is suggested by fire? Note how uniformly He uses this figure. See Matt. 13:41, 21— "The son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of this kingdom all things that cause stumbling, and them that do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire." Also verses 49, 50: "So shall it be in the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the righteous, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire." In the 25th chapter of Matt. the Judge is represented as saying to the wicked, "Depart from me ye cursed, into the eternal fire which is prepared for the devil and his angels." Mark 9:47: "And if thine eye cause thee to stumble, cast it out: it is good for them to enter into the Kingdom of God with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell, where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." It is not evident that Jesus by the persistent use of this figure meant to emphasize the fearful, the excruciating nature of the torments, which those will suffer who wake after death where this rich man awoke? Surely if language have any meaning, Jesus teaches that hell is a place of torment.

Jesus does not stop here. He adds another touch to teach us that the pains of hell can never have the slightest mitigation. This lost man prayed for one drop of water to cool his tongue. Can you imagine a slighter request?

Contributed

He did not pray to have the flame quenched, or to be lifted out of it. He asked to have merely the faintest momentary alleviation of his torment—a drop of water from the tip of the finger to fall on his tongue. This request was denied. There was a time when he might have had all the bliss of heaven for the asking, but now the ear of mercy is closed.

Jesus adds one touch more to teach that the suffering is endless. "Betwixt us and you is a great gulf fixed." Once in hell there is no way out. This rich man is still there, with a limitless eternity of despair stretching on before him. Over this prison house the motto may well be inscribed: "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here."

Such in brief is the hell which Jesus unveils—a place of unmitigated and eternal torment. Truly it is a frightful picture, and our hearts revolt against it. You do not wish to believe it, do you? I am sure I do not. Then why should we? A few years ago, a brilliant lecturer, standing before a great audience in the city of Chicago, stoutly affirmed that there is no hell. He was not a Christian, but a great many Christians echo his words. Why should we believe a doctrine that is so harrowing to our sensibilities? We are accused of narrowness, and hardness of heart. We are reproached for believing such a doctrine as if we relished the idea of seeing sinners roasted in the fire. We may justly protest against the injustice of such reproaches. Our moral sensibilities are no test of truth. We cannot make a thing to be or not to be by our wishes and preferences.

A young friend of mine suffered a chronic decline of health. After months and years, traveling from place to place seeking restoration, the widowed mother, suspecting consumption, decided to end the suspense, and know the worst. She sent for the most noted physician in the city. He made a careful examination and told the mother that her suspicions were correct, that he had consumption, that one lung was entirely gone and the other seriously affected, and that the disease was beyond control. The young man decided that he would not accept this disagreeable announcement as true. He sent for a so-called electric doctor. This much-advertised quack came, passed his hands over the patient's body, tapped him a few times and with pleasant smiles and confident words assured the young man that there was nothing seriously the matter with him. The young man gladly believed him, was much buoyed up, and seemed really better for a time. But the relentless and fatal malady did not relax its grip for a single moment. The sad and tragic truth was not affected by the confident assurances of the quack, nor by the comfortable hopes, and ardent wishes of the patient. The disease carried its ravages steadily deeper and deeper till it stilled the heart forever.

Why should I believe in hell if I do not wish to? Simply because I do wish to believe in Christ. Destroy my faith in Christ, and you make me an orphan in the universe, and spread a pall of impenetrable darkness over the future. This is purely a question between Mr. Ingersoll and Christ. Mr. Ingersoll knew as much about the matter as any man who rejects Christ. Did he know as much as Christ? Every man is at liberty to follow either. Some have the remarkable faculty of being able to follow both, swapping from one to the other as inclination prompts. I must choose one for the whole journey, and I prefer to follow Christ. If I believe what He says about the Father's house of many mansions, I must also believe what He says about the place prepared for the devil and his angels. Terrible as is this doctrine of endless torment, I will not let it drive me away from Jesus. I will cleave to Him till some one comes and persuades me that he stands nearer to God and knows more about that which lies beyond the grave.

II. Where is hell? A difficult question, do you say? Yes, geographically speaking. We do not believe with the ancients that hell is in the heart of the earth. We do not need to know its geographical latitude and longitude. The practical answer to the question is an easy one. Hell is just at the end of the impenitent sinner's life. No purgatory lies between; no second probation forming a half-way place where the sinner can stop and have another chance. Of all delusions invented to cheat dying men out of heaven, these doctrines of purgatory and second probation have least support from Scripture. From beginning to end the Bible teaches that here on earth and in this life, the soul decides for heaven or hell. "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation." Of this man it is written, he died and was buried and in hell. These brief words contain the whole history. Out of life into the flame. Even while friends were performing the last rites of sepulture, no doubt with much pomp and circumstances as became his position; with weeping and lamentation, he was feeling the first torments of the flame. He had been making direct for that place all of his life. He was on his way while clothing himself in purple and faring sumptuously every day. He was traveling thither while his companions were envying him his good fortune and praising him for his good success. That is where every impenitent sinner is heading, and where his life will terminate. If we knew just how far any Christ-rejecting sinner was from the day of his death, we could tell just how long before he would lift up his eyes being in torment. When the doctor, with finger on pulse, says to sorrowing friends, "It is all over," that will date the beginning of his eternal imprisonment.

Does not such teaching dishonor God? Does it not present Him in the light of a cruel tyrant, thrusting helpless sinners down to a punishment out of all proportion to the sins of a short life-time? It is sufficient to reply that Jesus is responsible for the teaching; and who are we that we should presume to be more jealous for the honor of God than Jesus Christ was? And again, who are we that we should venture to climb into the judgment seat of God, to say what punishment it is proper for Him to mete out to incorrigible rebels against His government? Was it ever known that a criminal was permitted to walk into a court-room and dictate to the judge on the bench what penalties he should inflict upon law-breakers?

The picture, however, is not that of sinners arrested and violently thrust down to hell. It is the picture of sinners deliberately going there, and that in the face of warning and entreaty. Jesus put up a signboard on the broad road, saying this road leads to destruction. If any sinner in this land of gospel light shall hereafter find himself in hell, who will be to blame for it? Not the gracious Saviour, who put up the signboard and gave the warning; and not the faithful servant of Christ who points to the signboard and repeats the warning. After all it is sin that makes hell; and cause and effect cannot be separated. Unrestrained sin will make hell anywhere. It has made it here on earth. It would make it in heaven. If hell lasts forever, it is because sin lasts forever. The broad road continues on without terminus because the travelers never change their moral direction. The broad road begins here, and the travelers choose it for themselves. Let no man accuse God, who is ever pleading, "Turn ye, turn ye. Why will ye die, for as I live, saith the Lord, I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth."

III. Who are going to hell? This is the intensely and personal and practical question. It is easy to answer that bad people of all kinds—drunkards, gamblers, libertines, prostitutes, the roughs and toughs, the offscourings of society, are going there. But this man whose sad history we are considering did not belong to any of these classes. He was rich and respectable, occupying a high social position. He went to hell from a fine house and elegant surroundings. He did not go to hell because he was rich. Riches create a serious difficulty. "It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven." But God can and does save many rich men. Abraham, who occupies a choice place in this parable, was a rich man. On the other hand, poverty is not a passport to heaven. Lazarus was not carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom because he was poor. Abraham and Lazarus, the one very rich, the other desperately poor, are forever associated in the bonds of loving fellowship in the Father's house. This settles it that social conditions have nothing to do in determining destiny.

Why did this man make shipwreck of his soul? We can let him answer the question. He had five brethren who were traveling the same road that he traveled. He knows that unless something is done to prevent it, they will land where he landed. What is it that he asks? It is that Lazarus be sent to testify to them. When reminded that they had Moses and the Prophets, he said, "Nay, Father Abraham, but if one go to them from the dead they will repent." Here is the rich man's own answer to our question. He went to hell because he would not heed the warnings of Moses and the Prophets. His five brethren are following his example, and he knows if they continue to do that, the result will be the same.

Who are going to hell? All who turn a deaf ear to the warnings and admonitions of God's Word. All are sinners, and the only possible way for a sinner to be saved is to repent, to right-about-face and reverse his moral direction. This he will never do while he refuses to hear Moses and the Prophets. Sinners do not have to multiply sins in order to be damned. Only one thing is needed, and that is to neglect God's calls to repentance. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" It requires no effort, only the absence of effort to go to hell—just as it requires no effort for a boatman to go over the falls of Niagara; he has merely to let his boat drift.

What about church members? This man was a church member. Hear him saying, "Father Abraham." He belonged to the chosen people who were in covenant relation with God. Let us never harbor the idea that church membership insures our safety. The one man whom we know by the most incontestible evidence to be in hell, was once a church member; he was a preacher of the Gospel; he was one of the twelve apostles of Christ. Church membership is a curse if it acts as an opiate and puts our conscience to sleep, and lulls all our apprehensions to rest.

Who are going to hell? All who are traveling the road that leads there, whether they are in the Church or out of the Church; and no matter what their wishes and intentions. It is just as certain as a mathematical demonstration that if we travel the wrong road we can never reach the right place.

Why preach on this subject? First of all because it loomed large in the preaching of Christ, and was judged by him to have a wholesome influence on human conduct. We should not be afraid of alienating men by presenting the harsher aspects of the truth. It is what men need, and what the most thoughtful of them know they need. A recent writer in the Outlook said that he had shopped around in church after church, Sunday after Sunday, to hear something about his sins and how to get rid of them, and had not heard the matter mentioned. "I, for one," he said, "yearn to be 'cussed out,' to be drawn over the coals." He complains that preachers are dealing with the wrongs of the social order, and failing to recognize that the source of these wrongs is the sins of the individual. The Unitarian and Universalist Churches that have eliminated hell from their creeds are the weakest of all churches in spiritual power. We had as well eliminate it from our creed as to eliminate it from our preaching.

What we should be concerned about above all else is the truth. If what Christ taught about hell is true, then it is tremendously true. It is a colossal truth, and sustains a vital relation to the other great truths of revelation. It imparts a measureless significance to sin, and a supreme glory to our redemption from sin. What is hell but the cumulative effects, the final fruitage of sin? What is redemption through Christ but our deliverance from this infinite disaster?

As for the reality of hell, it seems to me there is more evidence for it than any other one thing in the Bible. Why was the Bible given? It teaches us what we are to believe about God, and what duties God requires of us; but it is above all else the story of man's fall and redemption. This book then means hell; Christ means hell; Calvary and the cross mean hell. Take hell out of the way, and the whole scheme becomes an insoluble riddle.

Why preach on this subject? Because men need not go to hell. Redeeming love has opened up a way of escape. God is not wishing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance. If men will only hear Moses and the Prophets, they need have no fear of hell. God is ever waiting to be gracious and delighteth to show mercy. We preach hell only to awaken men to their danger that they may turn unto the Lord who will have mercy on them and to our God who will abundantly pardon.

THE TIDY CHURCH—A COMMUNITY CENTER

By J. S. Kuykendall

Some time ago the writer visited a country church, and was greatly impressed with the improved condition of the country along the new highways being built by the county, homes were being improved and painted and a general air of progressiveness prevailed everywhere, but when I went into the Presbyterian Church the door was standing open with a broken lock, the seats were badly disarranged, the floor was simply filthy, and looked as though it had not been swept or cleaned in years, and hymn books, lesson leaves, pamphlets and circulars dating back from 1897 to 1917 were found on this table which looked as though it never had been dusted off. A young Presbyterian minister preaches at this church, I understand, every two weeks, and a gentleman who had been to one of the other churches informed me that it was in worse condition than this church. I do not see how intelligent people with nice homes and home conditions could be expected to come to any building as dirty and untidy as this church was, even for religious worship; they could not do so without ruining their clothes, if they sat down on those seats, and yet the young minister complained because of the lack of interest and attendance on the part of his members. I wonder how many other churches in other communities may be suffering from the same trouble. A clean, tidy home or building of any kind is always attractive, and it gives the members and visitors the impression that the building is there for real, definite purpose, that there is life and interest, and a real pride in God's house of worship, and that it can and should be the pride of the whole community.

There may be many churches whose discouraged pastors might help their attendance and interest on the part of their members mightily if they would announce a church house-cleaning, and no doubt they will be surprised at the number of willing volunteers they will secure to help do the job; at least it might be tried out and see just what the result would be.

Winston-Salem, N. C.

KIM KI SUNI An Every-day Heroine

By Miss Emily Winn

It has been on my heart a long time to tell you about Kim Ki Suni, for her story is really the story of many hundreds of young women in Korea today.

Just about two years ago now, I went out for the first time to hold a Bible class in a little village called Sudong kol, way up in the mountains. The morning I left one of our boys' schools teachers came to see me to tell me that his younger brother had married the daughter of the deacon of the church, that his brother, who was studying in Seoul, was at that time spending the spring vacation at his father-in-law's. This was quite a surprise to me, for I knew the Christians at Sudong kol were very ignorant country people, hardly a woman or girl there that could read, and this school teacher was one of the most cultured modern Korean men I knew—a man who had lost none of the grace and courtesy of an old-time Korean gentleman and yet with his western education had taken on much that is best of our western culture. And his brother, who was getting a good education, was married to a little ignorant country girl who knew nothing beyond the life of her mountain village!

The old deacon turned over his guest room to me and during the week I was there I got well acquainted with the whole family. Mr. Kim, the deacon, a big, lonely old man, owning most of the rice fields around there and therefore lording it over the whole neighborhood; his wife, Kisuni's step-mother, one of the sharpest-tongued and meanest women I've known; her little daughter, and then this young married couple, Mr. Yi and Kisuni. Mr. Yi was even more attractive, in his physical appearance, at least, than his brother; and Ki Suni, a gawky girl of nineteen, her bright face, the deep glowing color in her cheeks and her big brown eyes holding out such promise of attractive young womanhood, and yet even in her bright silk waist and light blue skirt she was so unkempt looking and awkward and oh so dirty as she sat in the smoky kitchen cooking and doing all the work for the family. And of course she couldn't read, though she did know a little something about the Korean syllabary.

That first night as my Bible woman and I were sitting in my room talking a little before going to the evening service, I said, "Madia, how did Mr. Yi's brother happen to come way out here to find a wife?" And before Madia could answer there was the merriest little laugh outside my paper door and Ki Suni answered, "It was just by the grace of God."

That she loved her boy-husband was very evident, and he was no doubt kind to her, for she was so happy the first few days and then one morning he went back to Seoul and the light all went out of her face and her eyes were swollen from crying. I heard many tales of the cruelty of her step-mother and saw this woman fly into a rage one morning and knock Kusuni off the high porch. So I was not surprised at her nervousness when I tried to teach her to read—at first when I'd stop her to correct a mistake she'd jump as if someone was going to hit her—nor was I surprised at the pitiful un nourished condition of her little girl baby whose frail little body was laid to rest not many months later.

It was all very pitiful, wasn't it? Not but one ray of happiness in all her nineteen years. Her father's money had gotten her a good husband, but there was such a dreadful gulf between them and the young men were wanting educated girls that could be real companions, and many young men were falling before this big temptation. Ki Suni realized this in a vague way, and her eagerness to study was pitiful.

Mr. Yi, the older brother, and I talked over the situation when I got home and he promised to use all his influence to get the old deacon to let her study. Miss Colton had a class for young married women, but no dormitory room for them, the studying being scattered out in the village. So finally we got Ki Suni in school. With a brother-in-law living near it would be against all custom for her to live in another house with other students, so she had to live with them, but it would also be against all custom for the brother-in-law to help her with her studies. So Ki Suni plodded on without any help, without even the stimulus of being with other girls, and failed to keep up with her class. There wasn't enough money to run another class, so those that failed were told not to come back in the fall, and Ki Suni was one of these. But Ki Suni came back in the fall, a "no" meaning absolutely nothing to a Korean woman is she wants anything. She came by to speak to me, and she reached town all flushed and tired with a long hot thirty-mile walk from her village, but an eager, happy look in her eyes and a marked improvement in her whole general appearance. You can imagine how it hurt me to see her, for I knew she couldn't study before spring anyway. Then the days passed and I knew nothing of Ki Suni except that she'd left early the next morning, and I was so distressed over the girl's bitter disappointment and wrote begging her not to be discouraged but study as much she could at home and be patient till spring.

But what do you think Ki Suni had done—this little inexperienced country girl who'd only been as far as Chunju for the first time six months before? The first of November a very thin, pale young woman with her right arm all bandaged and in a sling came to our front door and it was several seconds before I recognized Ki Suni. Her hair was nicely arranged waved back from her forehead and caught in a knot at the back of her head—a western style our school girls have adopted—her dress neat and clean, almost all her awkwardness gone. As she sat in our sitting room and told me her story not once did she duck her head way down on her chest and cover her mouth with her hands. She had just come from school when she went home in June she got her father and the leader of the church to help her, studied every day at caught up with her class, but I suppose she failed to do this at school and asked for an entrance examination. She probably didn't know to do this. When she was received here, without one word to anybody, she took the train to Seoul, having to change trains twice, got there at night and somehow found her husband who was studying in college, and told him she'd come to study in Seoul. How they managed I don't know, but he did put her in school and she studied for nearly two months, when her arm gave her so much trouble, swelled up dreadfully, pained a great deal at first and then lost all feeling. The doctors said her right arm must be cut off, and Ki Suni wouldn't consent to that and was on the way home. Fortunately the Korean doctor in our hospital diagnosed the trouble as artereal rheumatism, treated her for that and in two weeks she went home practically well and she's still there, still hoping to come to school in the spring.

Just how Ki Suni's story will end, I don't know, but I'm sure you agree with me that her grit and determination will do much toward making this a happy ending but best of all Ki Suni is a Christian girl who believes in the "grace of God." Won't you please pray for her and all our Korean girls who are struggling to meet the demands of this day, this very new era in Korea when the young men are demanding and seeking wives who will be companions to them, the help-meet for them as God intended.

Any letter with five cents postage, or postcard with two cent postage, addressed to Miss Emily Winn, Southern Presbyterian Mission, Chunju, Korea, will reach her in due course of mail.

IMPRESSIONS OF CHAPEL HILL

By Rev. J. Keir Fraser

Among the places which I visited in North Carolina during my recent itinerary in the South was Chapel Hill the seat of your great State University. I use the word "great" advisedly, because it is one of the most progressive, up-to-date institutions I have seen anywhere, and ranks with the leading universities of the North. The old state has reason to be proud of it.

I spent a Sunday in the town, and had the pleasure of preaching in the beautiful Presbyterian Church, the gift of one of the State's noblest benefactors, Dr. Sprunt, of Wilmington. It is an architectural gem, ecclesiastically correct in every respect. Its minister, Dr. Moss, a Canadian, by the way, and one of Canada's best gifts to the Southern Church, is doing a wonderful work. His influence over the student body and professors alike is something phenomenal. I was told on all sides that he is the greatest power in Chapel Hill, and a professor—the head of one of the departments of the university—said he is doing a bigger work than any man in the State. The Synod is to be congratulated on having such a man in such a strategic centre.

Galt, Ontario, Canada.

I MUST BE STRONG

By Mrs. Daisy P. Carrigan

I must be strong,
The piercing winds that blow upon the shore
Of Life's bleak camping ground,
Do threaten me to wound.

I must be strong,
The storms that I must face demand full play
Of all man's God-given power
To stand 'mid trying hour.

I must be strong,
The tempter stands with outstretched hands and vile
To thwart God's divine plan
To crown himself in man.

I must be strong,
Nor coward's part must play in life's review
Of deeds and action done,
When I life's race have run.
Burlington, N. C.

SUMMARY OF WORK OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND MINISTERIAL RELIEF—1922-1923

I. Financial

Receipts for all departments (except Endowment Fund of Ministerial Relief) from living donors—Churches, S. S., Societies and Individuals, $183,114.50, a decrease of $3,901.68; from legacies, interest, etc., $135,043.36, a gain of $2,371.16; total receipts General Funds, $318,157.86, gain of $19,469.48.

Amount requested from living donors for the general work of the Executive Committee for past year, $337,500.

Receipts for Endowment Fund from living donors, $12,578.09, a decrease of $46,781.90; from legacies, interest, $43,184.76, a gain of $28,787.20; total receipts Endowment Fund, $55,762.85.

Receipts for all causes from living donors, $195,692.59, decrease of $50,683.58; receipts for all causes from legacies, interest, etc., $178,228.12, a gain of $52,158.36.

Receipts for Life Annuity Funds, $20,969.69, a gain of $13,249.66.

Grand total to all causes from all sources, $394,890.40, gain of $14,724.44.

Amount requested for Endowment Fund, at least, $2,500,000. It is now $1,445,800. For Student Loan Fund, at least $300,000. It is now $183,200.

II. Education for the Ministry and Mission Service

Number of candidates aided, 421 (282 last year). Of these, 344 are candidates for the ministry, 16 candidates for medical service, and 61 are women. Total amount forwarded, $70,810.05 ($45,485 last year).

We are now able to locate 599 candidates. Some of these will be licensed at the spring meetings of Presbyteries and others are to be received.

Since the world war 88 candidates for the ministry from 48 Presbyteries have been dropped from the rolls and two have died.

III. Ministerial Relief

There have been on the rolls during the year:

34 Ministers who have received ----- $80,124.25
 17 Widows who have received ----- 71,656.50
 38 Orphans who have received ----- 8,968.20
 6 Lay Workers who have received ----- 2,285.00

There was remitted these 375 homes, $163,033.95. (The sum of $137,395.45 was remitted last year to 344 homes). During the year 22 ministers, nine widows and one orphan on the roll died.

IV. The Endowment Fund

$55,762.85 were added to the Endowment Fund ($73,575.55 last year). The last Assembly urged "the Church to continue to push this cause until at least the sum of $2,500,000 be reached."

V. Schools and Colleges

The campaign for Schools and Colleges in the Synod of Kentucky secured in cash and pledges $1,250,000; in West Virginia more than $900,000 has been secured; in North Carolina for Davidson College more than $403,000; in Arkansas the effort to secure $406,000 has been hopefully launched.

VI. The Student Loan Fund

Amount received this year, $22,727.30. Total amount of loan, $173,161.58. Number of loans made this year, 20, of which 202 were to boys and 118 to girls. Total number of loans, 696, of which 428 were to boys and 268 girls.

VII. Westminster Teachers' Bureau

Is serving our young people in securing suitable fields of labor for them; our schools and colleges in locating trained, capable Christian teachers and helpers; the schools, high schools and colleges of the country and other lands in finding teachers and helpers of ability and Christian character. There is a clear, loud call for Christian teachers.

Henry H. Sweets, Secretary.

410 Urban Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

AN APRIL MEADOW

Some of the soldiers are pink,
 And some of the soldiers are grey;
 And—under a shadowing palm—
 I watch as they grapple and sway,
 Triumph and yield; yet unscathed in the field,
 They stand at the end of the fray.

Some are in grey, at the dance,
 And some, they are dressed in pink,
 And madly they caper and whirl,
 Dizzily flutter, and sink.
 But they nod to the sun when the frolic is done,
 Fresher than ever, I think.

For one wind blew from the south,
 And one from the eastern hill,
 And over the tranquil grass
 They wrestled and romped at will.
 Now battle and ball are over, and all
 The rose-grey meadow is still.

Miami, Fla.

FOUR AND A HALF YEARS

Under the above modest title, the April 29th calendar of "The Old First" Presbyterian Church, of Birmingham, Ala., comments upon the departure of their minister, Dr. John A. MacSporran, for his new work in the East, with facts that are eloquent. It runs:

Four and a Half Years. Last week marked the close of the pastorate of our beloved minister, Dr. John A. MacSporran. The brief years have been years of achievement in the history of the Old First as the remodeled church building, new Sunday School building and the largest gifts to all causes in the history of the church will attest.

A few facts from the record book will be of interest at this time. When Dr. MacSporran's ministry began there were 321 members on the active roll of the church. Of these 26 have died and 46 moved, leaving 249 of that number on the roll today. He received 417 members. Of these five have died and 77 moved, leaving 335. Our present membership is therefore 584 on active roll.

Dr. MacSporran baptized 48 children and 12 adults, performing 58 marriage ceremonies and read the burial service for 41, including seven members of the session. These are some of the services rendered in the crowded years. However the earthly record contains no account of the troubled, comforted and cheered, the weak strengthened, the erring reclaimed and the doubters helped in their quest for light. One day perhaps, when another record book is opened, we may find that on that ledger these ministries out-balance the visible results of the years.

"And they thanked God, and took courage."

The foregoing leaves little to be said of the past, but it calls to mind some arresting thoughts for the future. In cities where changes are not so swift and great as they are in Birmingham there is a tendency to let yesterday's impressions serve also for today and tomorrow. In Birmingham this cannot be. Fifty years ago the site of the First Presbyterian Church was the exact geographical center of a wilderness: Today it is the center of a circle that includes almost 20 per cent of the population of Alabama within the ten-mile radius. The bells of the Old First's carillon will chime this Christmas over the swarming streets of a city already well half-way on its road to the half-million population that statisticians assign it within the life of this generation.

Further significance is given the position of the First Church in Birmingham by the modern trend back toward the central downtown churches. For a time they lost ground under the pushing out of the residential sections of cities until they were "too far from church," and neighborhood churches sprang up and flourished. The field of the latter is great and is in nowise diminished, but a discovery has been made: Cities are laid out for traffic to flow in and out from their hearts. This is as true on Sundays as on week-days. Development of rapid transit and the automobile has turned the tide back toward the downtown churches again.

All this—the growth of Birmingham, the rebirth of the strong old central churches, the smooth-running organization that Dr. MacSporran built up at the Old First—points out the immense responsibility and the immense opportunity that awaits the next minister of this great church.

UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

Following is the list of the graduates of Union Seminary, class of 1923, with the addresses of the communities in which they will take up their life work:

- *George C. Bellingrath, Chattanooga, Tenn.
- Walter Lee Brown, Little Rock, Ark. (Home address).
- J. C. Clarke, Iron Gate, Va.
- M. O. Cockersham, San Augustine, Tex.
- T. I. Deane, Mt. Hope, W. Va.
- C. J. Hollandsworth, Buchanan, Va.
- Coyte Hunter, Willow Springs, N. C.
- *Sterling L. Hunter, Tallulah Lodge, Ga. (Home address).
- S. B. Lapsley, Craigsville, Va.
- E. O. G. Lilly, Chiquapin, N. C. (Summer).
- W. C. Neel, Fayetteville, W. Va.
- *C. H. Patterson, R. F. D. 2, Staunton, Va. (Summer).
- *R. P. Richardson, Augusta, Ga. (Summer).
- Wm. R. Reed, Richmond, Va. (Home address).
- Ben Reed, Meadowview, Va. (Home address).
- *C. G. Smith, Danbury, N. C. (Summer).
- R. H. Stone, Jefferson, N. C.
- W. B. Sullivan, Raleigh, N. C.
- *M. A. Tremain, Ahoskie, N. C.
- J. W. Witherspoon, Harrisonburg, Va.
- *G. R. Womeldorf, Lexington, Va. (Summer).
- *J. R. Woods, Smithfield, N. C. (Summer).

The Degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. O. E. Buchholz, of Richmond, Va., professor in the General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers, and Rev. H. W. Sublett, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, these gentlemen having successfully completed the prescribed courses of study for this degree.

The Degree of Master of Theology was conferred upon Rev. James E. Bear, of Lexington, Va., the Hoge Fellow for 1922-23.

Two fellowships are now available to students of this Seminary, and the incumbents for 1923-24 were announced as follows:

Moses D. Hoge Fellowship: J. Russell Woods.

Charles D. Larus Fellowship: Edward O. G. Lilly.

(We carried a report of the Seminary's commencement proceedings in our editorial columns last week.—Ed.)

*Foreign Volunteer.

SOUTHWESTERN TIED TO THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

By Rev. S. Waters McGill, Louisville, Ky.

Southwestern Presbyterian University, at Clarksville, Tenn., has never been held by the Presbyterian Church in its constitution. Why this was not done by the original founders is not for us to say. Southwestern has been held for the Church by a by-law. The directors at any time could have rescinded this by-law. That such a thing has never been thought of attests the sterling Presbyterian Church loyalty of the long succession of capable directors.

The new Southwestern, to be established at Memphis, Tenn., will be tied to the Presbyterian Church with cords that cannot be broken. This is accomplished by legislative enactment which very legislation is a result of the loyalty of the Church and activity of the present president of the board of directors. At the last meeting of the State Legislature a law was enacted which makes possible the securing of a charter by which Southwestern will be forever tied to the Presbyterian Church.

The present board of directors includes such distinguished Presbyterian ministers as Rev. W. McF. Alexander, D.D., and Rev. Jas. I. Vance, D.D., ex-moderators of the General Assembly; Rev. Joseph Rennie, D.D., Rev. A. A. Little, D.D., both of Mississippi; Rev. William Ray Dobyns, D.D., of Alabama. These men and others like them who are serving the Church as ruling elders, can be counted on to see that Southwestern is not only Christian, but that it is maintained as a Presbyterian educational institution. A prominent leader in another denomination in Memphis said recently: "I want my boy to be educated at Southwestern because it is a Presbyterian institution, and I know the kind of Christian education the Presbyterian Church provides."

The present president was induced to leave an attractive pulpit and undertake the difficult task of "saving Southwestern." This occurred at a time when it seemed impossible to secure anyone else to accept the responsibility. Under the leadership of President Chas. E. Diehl, and the guidance of the present board of directors, Southwestern is about to come into its own. Not only is there evidence of larger equipment, but also larger resources and larger student enrollment. In addition to this, the ideas and ideals of the original founders are to be preserved and will be protected as they have not been heretofore.

Because of what they have done, the present leaders of Southwestern deserve the gratitude of every loyal Presbyterian. Because of what they will do these men merit the cordial co-operation of every right-thinking Presbyterian in what is recognized as the greatest educational undertaking in the history of our Church. The task is large enough to call for united action on the part of Presbyterians throughout the entire Church.

D. L. MOODY, A FRIEND OF PRISONERS

In 1895 Mr. Moody's attention was attracted to the spiritual needs of the large criminal class, then numbering about 750,000 in and out of prison. He at once instituted a fund with which to place religious literature in penal institutions, chiefly Gospel books and Bible portions. This ministry has been blessed of God in a marked degree.

The Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, the administrators of this fund, report some recent expressions from Christian workers who have used their literature with prisoners. Among them is the following from a chaplain at Atlanta:

"I believe I would speak in the bounds of reason if I should tell you that at least 50 prisoners have been awakened to see their sins and to promise God and man to live for God and heaven. In addition to these, six men are now doing religious work in the camps and three of them are preaching the Gospel, as a result of reading your books."

This association is making an effort to place Gospel literature and Scripture portions in all the penitentiaries, reform schools and larger county jails throughout the country during 1923.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

What Wilmington Presbyterian Did at Mt. Olive—

The 1923 meeting of Wilmington Presbyterian is over, but there are some splendid memories clustering around the meeting we held in the prosperous town of Mt. Olive. I am almost afraid to say how many women registered, fearing we shall never get an invitation from another town. There were 127 women registered, not counting, of course, the many members of the hostess church; they represented 29 out of the 36 Auxiliaries composing the Presbyterian, and women from seven other churches, mostly from other Presbyteries. Six ministers were also interested visitors,—or, at least, they looked that way,—including Rev. W. M. Baker, of the Mt. Olive Church, who was tireless in his courteous attentions to us all.

We were all most graciously entertained by this congregation, which numbers less than 200, all told. Just a few days before the meeting one dear saint, who had prepared her large home to entertain many guests, was called up Higher; another member who expected to entertain quite a number, was suddenly called away on account of sickness; and yet, there seemed a large welcome for all. Indeed, Mrs. Baker said casually that it was no trouble at all, and that they were prepared for even more than came. They said that in preparing the mid-day lunches, they had determined to do exactly as Miss Jane Hall insisted upon, and serve very simple menus; and I expect they really tried to follow her instructions; we will give them credit for that much, even if they did not succeed very well.

In the address of welcome, Mrs. Wooten expressed the earnest wish that it might be the most harmonious Presbyterian ever held; and it was very much so, but not in the sense that the majority of the women sat mum through all the sessions; no, that time has passed. There were earnest discussions on many points; but the will of the majority was always cheerfully accepted.

Our greatest cause for thankfulness was the great increase in the number of family altars and tithers which, I feel sure, added to our larger education in stewardship, will correct the weakness which has been shown by some Auxiliaries in not budgeting their gifts according to Assembly's percentages.

We heard an illuminating address by Rev. M. R. Turnbull, D.D., of the Assembly's Training School; we had with us our two fine women, Mrs. E. F. Reid, Synodical President, and Mrs. Mary M. Sloop, of Crossnore, to bring us their stirring messages; we had very helpful Bible studies, led by Miss Clarabel Williams, of Wilmington; we had the presence of our own Mrs. Jackson Johnson, who grows younger every year; we were proud and thankful to see the first copies of "The History of Wilmington Presbyterian," the compilation of which is the work of our gifted historian, Mrs. J. A. Brown, of Chadbourne; and, friends, if you wish to read something uniquely interesting, send Mrs. Brown 50 cents for a copy of this book.

Our retiring President kept everything going in her gentle yet extremely efficient way, never impatient, always smiling, and none knew that the shadow of pain walked with her, and that she was only waiting for the close of the Presbyterian to enter a hospital. We are glad that her operation is safely over, and that at this writing she is convalescing comfortably.

The Presbyterian banner was awarded to the Woman's Auxiliary of Westminster Church, Whiteville, which was the only Auxiliary reaching 100 per cent on that hard but inspiring Standard of Efficiency. Mrs. Harvey was quite embarrassed about the award of her Young People's banner, as five societies reached the Standard; but she finally decided to let the banner visit around, two months at a place. There were two societies in the Mt. Olive Church, one at the near-by town of Calypso and two in Wilmington on the honor roll.

The following are the officers-elect for next year: President, Mrs. A. J. Howell; vice-president and corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. H. Witherington; recording secretary, Mrs. G. W. Oldham; treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Maxwell; secretary Spiritual Life, Mrs. R. C. Platt; secretary Foreign Missions, Mrs. J. O. Carr; secretary A. H. M., Mrs. J. M. McBryde; secretary S. P. and C. H. M., Mrs. E. C. Clark; secretary C. E. and M. R., Miss Sallie Hill; secretary Y. P. and S. S. Ex., Mrs. J. M. Harvey; secretary literature, Mrs. A. O. Trust; historian, Mrs. J. A. Brown, Chadbourne.

Delegate.

Statesville, N. C.—A Mexican Fiesta, which was most interesting and enjoyable, was presented at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, of the First Presbyterian Church, Monday afternoon. Those taking part were Misses Bessie Smith, Cordelia Watts, Johnnie Deal, Eula Gray, Lucy Seawell, Bessie Cowan and Mary Bell Deaton and Mrs. William Brady. After the program a free-will offering amounting to $40 was received for the building of a school in Texas for Mexican girls. Mrs. R. M. Gray vice-president, presided over the meeting and Mrs. C. E. Raynal led the devotionals. Mexican refreshments were served during the social hour.

For Missionary Five Minutes in Sunday School or for Other Meetings—Miss Carrie Lee Campbell's "Mission Methods" contains a wealth of the happiest and most practical suggestions for interesting people of all ages in Home and Foreign Missions.

Programs, maps, flags, games, costumes, blackboards, the alphabet, ribbons, postals, pictures, telegrams, posters—it has in fact about everything that a bright mind, a fertile fancy, and a knowledge of human nature can suggest to give life, color, movement, and often humor, to mission people, customs, places, names, and needs. Facts made fascinating, or information made entertaining, would be a good sub-title. It should prove a God-send to leaders of mission classes, circles, young people, auxiliaries, and a death blow to dull mission meetings.

Egbert W. Smith, Executive Secretary F. M.

To the Secretaries of Young People's Work—Dear Friends: The Young People's Conferences of the Synod of North Carolina meets at Davidson College, June 12 to June 19th.

Will you not urge the young people of your church to attend this conference and see if necessary, if you can't get their expenses paid by the session of the church? It will mean so much to the work of the young people of the church to have them attend.

Sincerely,
Nan C. Spillman,
President Mecklenburg Presbyterian

Notes From Banner Elk—Thursday night the Woman's Auxiliary had the "Mexican Fiesta," and it certainly did go off smoothly. It was given in the North Carolina Building, because the auditorium was heated, and the church so cold. How we did wish Mr. Tufts could have been spared to see the first public use of the auditorium!

The stage looked wonderfully pretty and attractive, with the colored paper decorations and flowers, and the bright costumes of the Mexican girls.

Maggie Parker who is president of the girls' circle and a member of the senior class of Lees-McRae, told the reason for the school as given in the Standard, and did it astonishingly well.

Friday evening we had the Christian Endeavor social in the high school building, and as usual had a splendid attendance.

Our new teachers took charge of the entertainment features.

Did I tell you that we have 81 boarding pupils, 91 in the dining room including teachers!

El Paso Presbyterian—The 18th annual meeting of El Paso Presbyterian Auxiliary was held in the Pecos Church, April 25-27, and was the largest in attendance, the most encouraging in reports and interest, of any meeting in its history. Eight Presbyterian officers and 19 voting delegates were present besides 24 visitors from neighboring Auxiliaries. Thirteen of the 16 Auxiliaries were represented, and one new Auxiliary, Clovis, N. M., was enrolled.

Mr. J. L. Spears, pastor of the local church gave the opening address, and Rev. B. K. Tenny, of Barstow officiated at the communion service. The Bible studies on "Important things as God sees it" were conducted by Mrs. C. J. Wagner, of Lubbock, a graduate of Moody Bible Institute. The business sessions were conducted with the idea of giving instruction on efficiency in methods. The new constitution adopted, also the budget presented by the finance committee. The Presbyterian was divided into four districts, plans being made to hold conferences in each in September following the meeting of Synodical.

El Paso Presbyterian enthusiastically assumed its quota of $1,000 towards the Mexican girls' school, and a thank offering of two shares ($20) was made at the meeting. Mrs. L. C. Majors, Presbyterian representative to the conference at Kerrville gave a most interesting report. Her report as secretary of S. S. Extension and Y. P. W. showed marked increase in the number and efficiency of C. E. societies and Sunday Schools, there now being 21 of each. Much interest was manifested in the Standard of Excellence, several Auxiliaries having attained 80 per cent, though the percentage for the Presbyterian was only 53. Reports from the Auxiliaries were fine and showed development along all lines especially Spiritual Life and Mission Study. A considerable increase was made in gifts and the enrollment now is 321 members.

Among the speakers we were privileged to hear were Mrs. J. L. Brock, Synodical president, Bryan, Tex.; Miss Charlotte Jackson, Louisville, Ky.; Mr. J. E. Watts, Southwestern Home and School, Itasca, Tex.; Rev. W. F. Junkin, D.D., Sutsien, China, and Rev. Brooks I. Dickey, D.D., superintendent of Home Missions in the Synod of Texas, all of whom were inspiring and helpful.

Mrs. G. D. Coon, president of the Pecos Auxiliary had planned everything for the comfort and pleasure of the delegates and a most delightful time was enjoyed by all. Lunches were served at noon and also in the evening, assisted by the women of other churches. The Girls' Glee Club of the High School gave several splendid numbers and the male quartet of the Baptist Church also rendered delightful music. Pecos is an attractive little city in the midst of the irrigated section of the Presbytery, one very striking feature being the large "Salt Cedar" trees on both sides of the streets, which are usually found only on the sea coast, but owing to the alkali in the soil here they have a very luxuriant growth. The next place of meeting will be Big Springs.

Mrs. J. E. Bean, Rec. Sec.
Mrs. W. M. Fairley, President.

Matthews—Mrs. J. M. Barrett was hostess to the Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary Monday afternoon, May 14th, at her home in Matthews. Mrs. N. S. Cochran, president of the Auxiliary called the meeting to order. "Somebody Else Needs a Blessing," was used as the opening hymn, followed by the Lord's prayer, repeated in concert. The devotional was led by Mrs. J. A. Crowell. A program featuring a Mexican fiesta was in charge of Mrs. B. Plaxco. The home was artistically decorated with American and Mexican flags, and a profusion of red roses, sweet peas and ferns. The reception hall was arranged to represent a Mexican room, bands of crepe paper were used in carrying out a color scheme of red, white and green. The girls dressed in Mexican costumes sang "How Long Must We Wait," and appealed to Mrs. Cochran for a girl school in Texas. The program was excellently rendered.

A free-will offering was taken which amounted to $13.36; and afterwards Mrs. T. J. Orr led in prayer of dedication. About 35 fine ladies were present. Following was the cast of characters:

Carmencita, Miss Sadie Barrett.
Juanita, Miss Margaret Smith.
Louisa, Miss Grace Hood, Juanita's little sister
Lois Benton.

Maria, Miss Gwendolyn Crowell.
Maria's little sister, Helen Renfrow.
Alma, Miss Sarah Hood, sister, Sue Renfrow.

After the play, the hostess invited her guests into the dining room, where Jamaica and cakes were served by the Mexican girls.

Mrs. W. C. Billingsley, Secretary.

Augusta Presbyterian Auxiliary—The 24th annual meeting of Augusta Presbyterian Auxiliary was held in Lexington, Ga., April 23-25, with 67 in attendance, and the president, Mrs. A. H. Brenner, presiding. At the opening session Monday night the devotional service was led by Rev. B. R. Anderson, the new pastor of the Lexington Church, followed by cordial greetings from the Auxiliaries of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Baptist churches, to which appreciative response was made. The addresses of Mrs. W. A. Turner, of Newnan, Synodical president, and Miss Sadie Buckland, of Korea, and the beautiful music which was a part of each service, were the special features of the evening. Tuesday morning the annual reports from Presbyterian officers and secretaries were heard, and an efficiency period was led by Mrs. Turner, after which Mrs. Joel Cloud, of Lexington led in a most beautiful memorial service, illustrated by cross and a crown of flowers, to which was added a stanza in honor of each of the eight beloved members who during the past year have finished their course, and who "have kept the faith." At its conclusion, the Lord's Supper was celebrated, at which the pastor and Rev. F. G. Hartman officiated, assisted by the elders of the church. A delightful luncheon was served at the close of the morning program, during which many pleasant new friendships were begun, and many older ones renewed. On Tuesday afternoon the Secretary of Y. P. Work, Mrs. Wm. I. Ashe, introduced the Synodical Secretary of her department, Mrs. Audley Morton, and both gave most interesting talks, answering questions and telling of the good things in store for the young people who are fortunate enough to attend the conferences at Montreat and Gainesville. Next, Mr. Fleming, of Clinton, S. C., was glad to hear in regard to Thornwell Orphanage, telling especially of the great need for the cottage for younger children, and as was well said: "To say Thornwell and motherless babies to the women of Augusta Presbytery is to arouse instant enthusiasm." The devotional "Consecration" by Mrs. T. D. Johnston, of Greensboro, left a deep impression on the hearts of each of her hearers and the Presbyterian is fortunate in having gained this leader for her Bible studies. The address for the evening session was made by Rev. R. A. Brown, of Atlanta, who spoke convincingly on "The South's New Vision," giving to all a clearer and more sympathetic understanding of his work. At the conclusion of Mr. Brown's address Mrs. C. P. Crawford, of Milledgeville, took charge and directed the two beautiful processions arranged by her, and in which many of the members of the Presbytery took part. The first was called "Plain Facts" about giving—and told with posters and figures what is given per capita for Christ's work and for our own pleasure.

The second showed just what the Southern Presbytery Church and its Progressive Program represents. These processions, in all their beauty and suggestive thought are to be given, by request, in some of the churches of the Presbytery. The last session was on Wednesday morning, when reports were finished, special committee heard from, the revised constitution and by-laws adopted and the chairmen of the four districts into which the Presbytery has been divided, announced. Special honored guests were Miss Sadie Buckland, of Korea; Mrs. W. A. Turner, Mrs. Chas. H. Newton, Mrs. Audley Morton, and Mrs. Wm. M. Rowland, representing the Synodical; Mrs. George D. Thomas and Mrs. Hooper, of Athens Presbyterian Auxiliary; and Rev. R. A. Brown, of Atlanta, and Rev. F. G. Hartman, of Washington.

Lexington left nothing undone which could add to the comfort or pleasure of those who enjoyed her hospitality, providing delightful homes, beautiful music, in which times the sweet children's voices sounded, and flowers in abundance. The next meeting will be held at Reid Memorial Church, in Augusta. The text for the year "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." The slogan: "Every woman in the Auxiliary a worker."

Mrs. James Thomas,
For Publicity Committee.

Fiesta Enthusiasm Contagious!—Waves of enthusiasm for the Mexican fiesta to be held at the May-meetings of the Woman's Auxiliary are still rolling in at headquarters. On their crests are borne strange demands that drive the office force to search the musty literature shelves for tambourines, miniature Mexican flags, sombreros, and Mexican crystallized fruits, to meet the same enthusiastic demands!

In the end, they are forced to confine themselves to mere suggestions as to where, how, and why to obtain a frills and furbelows essential to a high-class Mexican fiesta. One day the literature room was turned into a millinery shop where sample Mexican hats were cut from cardboard after a smart sombrero model of 1923. The

(Continued on page 10)

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The spirit of graduation is in the air in many sections of our country. Boys and girls of the teen age are finishing their high school courses; those in the early twenties are completing their years at college, and those still older are drawing to the end of university or seminary work. Those who have been honest and thorough in their days of study are now much better fitted to make the world better and happier and better fitted to get the best enjoyment from life for themselves. We wish there could be some way to get into the heart and mind of every boy and girl a vision of the possibilities ahead for those who study to fit themselves for larger usefulness. Along with that we wish for the available means to supply educational advantages for all who really wish them.

To all the young people who read these lines we would earnestly make the plea that they seriously and prayerfully consider their future development and leave no stone unturned to make a further education for themselves possible. Our Church's schools and colleges, and a number of other such institutions, furnish excellent and safe opportunities of this kind. Many loan funds are available and there are a number of ways by which a good part of one's college expenses can be taken care of. We hope our Presbyterian young people will more and more seek to make of themselves trained workers and well equipped companions of those about them.

Just a little less than three weeks remain before the Young People's Conferences in South Carolina and North Carolina will open. Let us be preparing to go to Clinton or to Davidson and enjoy the splendid fellowship and inspirational uplift that these gatherings furnish.

Prepare for the Young People's Conferences
South Carolina: Sumter June 11-17
North Carolina: Davidson, June 12-19

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MAY 27, 1923

ISAIAH, THE STATESMAN-PROPHET

Isaiah: II Kings 18:13-20:19; Isa. 1:1; 6:1-13. (A Survey of Isaiah's Life). Printed Text: Isa. 6:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Here am I; send me."—Isa. 6:8.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

In the year that king Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphims: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that stood, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, for mine eyes have seen the King: the LORD hosts.

Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar; and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips, and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy purged. Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 38. What benefits do believers receive from Christ at the resurrection?
 A. At the resurrection, believers being raised up in glory, shall be openly acknowledged, and acquitted in the day of judgment and made perfectly blessed in the full enjoyment of life to all eternity.

Isaiah's name from "Jah" the name of Jehovah means "God is my Helper." His father was Amoz, of whom nothing is recorded. Isaiah was royally connected and had much to do with the affairs of government especially during the reign of Hezekiah, and therefore is called the Statesman Prophet." He predicts too clearly the character, functions and sacrificial death of Christ, and for this reason is sometimes termed the "Evangelical Prophet." He prophesied for 60 years, from 750 B. C., and his prophecy is the longest in the Old Testament scriptures, and manifests great eloquence and beauty. Our lesson relates to his call to the prophetic office. We will read to Isaiah's Vision of Jehovah, The Effects of that Vision; The Divine Cleansing Given Him; His Response to the Divine Call.

I. Isaiah's Vision of Jehovah

This was given mentally in the temple at Jerusalem. In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up and His train filled the temple." Celestial beings attended Him, and the seraphim cried, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hosts, the whole earth is full of His glory." The seraphim had two wings, covering the face in adoration and covering the feet, and two to fly in missions of service. Jehovah is revealed as lofty in position, high above all creation, as seated on a throne, as triune in person, as holy is repeated three times, and as holy in nature, word and deed. He is a supreme sovereign over nature's forces and all rational beings, good and bad. "The Lord hath prepared His throne in the heavens and His kingdom ruleth over all." "He doeth according to His pleasure amid the hosts of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth and none can stay his hand nor ynto him, what doest thou." But the most impressive aspect of Jehovah's character is that "He is holy. He is absolutely free from all moral defect and evil and possessed of all spiritual and moral excellence. It was this attribute of Jehovah that most impressed Isaiah and filled him with dismay.

II. The Effects of this Vision upon the Prophet

It produces conviction of sin for himself and his people. He says as he contemplates this Almighty sovereign and Holy God, "Woe is me for I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell among a people of unclean lips, for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts." It is ever thus. A vision of an Omnipotent, Sovereign and Holy God, hating iniquity and abundantly able to punish it, always kindles in sinful beings a consciousness of guilt and alarm concerning their own safety. The main reason why human sinners are often unconcerned about their future fate is that they do not thus see God.

III. The Divine Cleansing Given Isaiah

So long as he felt guilt and danger he could not voluntarily approach Jehovah nor engage in His service. But we are told that "One of the seraphims took a live coal from off the altar and said, Lo, this has touched thy lips, and thy iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." God had furnished the altar, the fire and the sacrifice. On the altar "the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world," had been laid. The fire was kindled from heaven. "The Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all." Blood was shed that cleanseth the believer from all sin. The live coal from the altar typified the blood shed there, and the fire the influences of the Holy Ghost. Isaiah receiving them was declared to be cleansed from iniquity. So is every human sinner who accepts Christ's blood atonement, and the first of the Holy Ghost who purges every sin. Man, even when awakened and conscious of defilement, often makes an effort to cleanse himself. Like Isaiah, humanity needs a Divine cleansing by the blood of Christ and the "Washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

IV. Isaiah's Response to His Divine Call

When the prophet is cleansed by Divine agencies, he hears the call of the Triune Jehovah for service. He says, "I heard the voice of Jehovah saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" The single pronoun I is used, showing the unity of the God-head, and the plural us is also employed, implying the Trinity of the persons. The same plural is also used in Genesis when the purpose to create man is announced. The Triune Jehovah says, "Come let us make man in our own image after our own likeness in knowledge, righteousness and true holiness." Isaiah, responding to this summons, says, "Here am I, send me." God's people shall be willing in the day of His power. The cleansed, pardoned, justified, regenerated and consecrated sinner is willing to be God's messenger to his fellowmen. The privations may be many, and the work arduous, but he is sustained by Divine grace and power, and the reward is sure and eternal.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

THE SHEPHERD PSALM

M., May 28—The Good Shepherd: John 10:11-18.
 T., May 29—The Great Shepherd: Heb. 13:17-21.
 W., May 30—Feeding the Soul: John 6:30-35, 47-51.
 T., May 31—Refreshing Times: Joel 2:23-32.
 F., June 1—Death Conquered: John 14:23-31.
 S., June 2—God, Our Home: Ps. 90:1.

Sun., June 3—Lessons from the Psalms. 6. The Shepherd Psalm. Ps. 23:1-6. (Consecration meeting.)

What help have you got from the Shepherd Psalm?
 What blessings make your cup overflow?
 How can we find God's goodness in everything?

(I hope I may be excused if, in the article below, I follow the outline of a little book I published some years ago, The Idyll of the Shepherd, a discussion of the Twenty-third Psalm.—J. G. G.)

Of all the words of scripture this psalm is repeated oftener than any other passage, with the single exception of the Lord's Prayer. The Twenty-third Psalm embalms in its imagery the spiritual life of David, who rose from a shepherd's crook to a monarch's crown, and it outlines God's providential dealing with him. The psalm is like a perfect flower in verse, a lily that rears its head over the other psalms, and sheds a fragrance all its own.

The Stamen of the Flower

The first sentence is like the stamen of the lily, that springs from the center, and bears aloft the pollen, or germlife, of the flower. The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. This is the keynote of the psalm. The Lord, Jehovah, David's divine shepherd, was the covenant-keeping God. The word Jehovah means "I am that I am," and signifies that God is the self-existing, eternal, and everlasting God, who made all things and controls them for His own purposes; and so He will supply the wants of His children from His own great fulness. So if we trust God, we shall not want any good thing.

The Three-Fold Division of the Psalm

This psalm may be divided into three parts, and we shall call the first three verses, the First Pasture, because they seem to mark the early experiences of life; the fourth verse marks a change, or transition, which we shall think of as the Journey; and the last two verses are the Second Pasture. This division will serve to show the progress of David's idea in comparing human beings to sheep, and thus he unfolds human experience. Most men's lives may be divided into three parts. There are the tranquil, happy years of childhood. Then when we grow up, great changes come, and the old home breaks up. At last, our careers take on a new phase, with larger usefulness and greater privileges.

The First Pasture

God leads His sheep into green pastures and beside still waters, and especially is this true of the young. Few wants, no fears, no responsibilities, no griefs mark those happy days, and our homes are this way till we are grown. While children, we are led in paths of righteousness, such as purity, honor, diligence and truth. Then we learn the great virtues, and the value of good character. We are taught to remember our Creator in the days of our youth, and we are assured of God's blessing for His name's sake; and thus we learn to resist temptation. Often like silly sheep, we go astray, and God restores our souls with the loving corrections of His Word, through our parents and teachers. This First Pasture is a very happy time.

The Journey

The voice of the shepherd rings out over the meadow, calling the sheep. The First Pasture is drying up, and he must lead us to new ones. Over the fields goes the shepherd, and the sheep follow. He leads on till he reaches the hill, and down he goes into a dark narrow valley, the valley of the shadow of death. The darkness deepens, and the way is rough, and dangerous. But the sheep follow on, and fear no evil; for the shepherd is With them; and in times of great danger they feel the shepherd's crook holding them.

Thus it is great changes come into our lives. Loss, sickness, accident, sorrow, and other troubles come, and bring these changes. As the sheep pass through the valley, so we pass through these trials. But the Lord our shepherd is with us, and supports and strengthens us for them, and we fear no evil. For we have His promise that all things work together for our good.

The Second Pasture

After the First Pasture has failed, and the shepherd has led the sheep through the valley so dark and dangerous, he leads them on to a new pasture. He has prepared it for them. This is the Second Pasture, and it is even richer and fuller than the old one. With the old griefs and trials past, we enter into this new pasture, to rejoice in its fulness and satisfaction. Jesus gives us a new anointing with the Holy Spirit, and we become victorious over ourselves, and He leads us to triumph in this new life. Our joy in religion and faith in Christ grow stronger, and we become more and more conscious of His presence, and more confident that His goodness and mercy shall follow us all our days. And with this confidence comes a greater determination to serve Jesus, and to make His house our home and the place of our service for the rest of our lives.

Thus we have seen how this psalm fits in with human life, compared to the life of a sheep under the care of a shepherd. As a sheep must have the love and attention of a man, so we mortals need the love of Jesus our Good Shepherd, who loves us and gave His life for us, and is ready to bless, and comfort us, and give us His Holy Spirit.

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville, N. C.*
 Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro, N. C.
 Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro, N. C.*
 Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord, N. C.*
 Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge, N. C.
 Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham, N. C.
 Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory, N. C.
 Miss Maud Little, Charlotte, N. C.*
 Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville, N. C.
 Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton, N. C.
 Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville, N. C.
 Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington, N. C.*
 Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell, N. C.
 Eugene Brown Morgan, Concord, N. C.
 Miss Rachel Beall, Durham, N. C.*
 Miss Anne Sample, Hendersonville, N. C.*
 J. M. Carr, Davidson College, N. C.
 Miss Ruth Beard, Cornelius, N. C.
 Miss Lillie Gilleland, Greensboro, N. C.
 J. M. Harvey, Wilmington, N. C.
 Chalmers R. Carr, Mooresville, N. C.
 Garton Pearce, Fayetteville, N. C.
 Miss Annie Davis, Greensboro, N. C.
 Mrs. Chas. Lilly, Sanford, N. C.
 Mrs. E. C. Murray, St. Pauls, N. C.
 M. DeLorme, Sumter, S. C.
 Miss Elizabeth Falk, Maxton, N. C.
 Miss Isabel Jean Lamont, Raeford, N. C.
 Miss Margaret McQueen, Rowland, N. C.
 Miss Alma Culp, Mooresville, N. C.

*Additional reports.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT

On Sunday, May 13th, a Junior Christian Endeavor Society was organized in the Presbyterian Church of Clinton, N. C. About 30 Juniors were present at the meeting of organization. The District Secretary, Miss Leila Hubbard, was present and talked on Junior work. Mrs. George Matthis is superintendent of the society. Welcome to the new Juniors! These are 30 more added to the Church's prospective leaders for the days ahead.

The Cabarrus County Christian Endeavor Union held its convention May 20th, in Concord, N. C. Among the speakers from out-of-town were four members of the C. E. Training Class from Davidson College. The general theme of the convention was "Loyalty," and the college students spoke on subjects under this general head. The subjects covered by them were: "Loyalty to Self;" "Loyalty to Home;" "Loyalty to Church;" and "Loyalty to Country." Those making these talks were W. Ernest Milton, Tom C. Barr, Ben U. Ratchford, and Joe M. Garrison.

On Friday evening, the 18th of May, the Senior Endeavorers of the First Church, of Mooresville, N. C., gave a picnic to the members of the Davidson C. E. Training Class, who have helped them during the past year. Automobiles were sent down for the guests and a pleasant evening was spent out in the open. A plentiful spread and interesting hosts and hostesses carried through to the end a happy occasion.

Sunday, May 27th, will be a great day for Christian Endeavor in Alamance County, North Carolina. The baccalaureate sermon of Elon College will be preached that morning by Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, of Boston, Mass., who in 1881 organized the first Christian Endeavor Society, and is now president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor and of the World's Christian Endeavor Union. The County C. E. Union is taking advantage of the occasion to have a convention, to be held at Graham in the afternoon. Several leaders of the State Union have been invited, among them Mr. Paul Rawlins, president; Miss Eunice Long, secretary; Mrs. W. H. Howell, superintendent of Junior work; and Mrs. L. W. McFarland, superintendent of Intermediate* work. An interesting time is forecasted and all who are within reach of Burlington and Graham have a fine opportunity.

Church News

SOUTH CAROLINA

Tirzah (L)—This church, although over the line in North Carolina is still kept in Bethel Presbytery, and brother J. B. Hillhouse is the beloved pastor. They have a comfortable manse and grounds, with everything to make it attractive and it was my privilege to preach for them Friday, Saturday and Sunday. On the Sabbath we had a large congregation, the house being filled with earnest attentive worshippers. Almost the entire congregation took the sacrament. All the children of the Sunday School over 14 years are members of the church, the parents see to that, this is old Scotch fashion. It is a grand privilege to be called to serve such a people, and Brother Hillhouse and his wife are truly beloved by them. This is the first preaching I have been able to do since I came out of the hospital about the first of March. I rejoice that I am again enabled to hold up the glorious Banner of Christ my King.
 James Russell.

Ebenezer—The spring communion was held as usual on the first Sabbath in May, a large crowd being present. The pastor, Rev. John C. Bailey, preparatory to the sacrament, gave during the week preceding, a Bible study on the First Epistle of John. On Sunday the roll was called. Three were received by profession and one by letter. At night the pastor gave an illustrated missionary lecture, entitled "The Gospel under the Southern Cross," showing the work in Latin America, and featuring our work in Brazil.

On Thursday, May 10, at 3:30 p. m., the annual Confederate memorial exercises were held in the church. The address was delivered by Capt. H. C. Tillman, of Greenwood, S. C., and the graves of all soldiers buried in the Ebenezer cemetery were decorated by the school children. Many soldiers of the Revolutionary War and the Mexican War as well as the Confederate War are buried in this cemetery.

Fort Mill—Following preparatory services, which began Wednesday evening, May 9th, and continuing each evening, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed in Fort Mill Presbyterian Church Sunday morning, May 13th. These services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. H. Viser, who was assisted by Rev. W. A. Hafner, of Gaffney, formerly for more than seven years pastor of this church. Mr. Hafner preached the sermon at each of the services, and also delivered the address at the Sunday evening service when Mother's Day exercises were observed. At all of these services, there was a large attendance, and especially on Thursday and Sunday evenings when the auditorium would hardly hold the congregation. Mr. Hafner has a host of friends in the community who were delighted to welcome him, and the subject and earnestness of his preaching found response in many hearts. There were 19 additions to the church during the season, and a number of infant baptisms. Special music by the choir added to the good work which was accomplished, and on Thursday evening and Sunday evening the male quartette of the business men's evangelistic club rendered several gospel songs.
 C. S. Link, Cor.

NORTH CAROLINA

Albemarle Presbytery stands adjourned to meet in Raleigh, at the First Presbyterian Church, on Wednesday, June 6th, at 11 a. m. It is hoped that the eye of every minister and session will see this notice.
 J. N. H. Summerell, S. C.

Concord Presbytery—This is just to remind the brethren of the adjourned meeting at Statesville, May 29th, at 2 p. m. It is probable that there will be at least one matter of importance to be considered.
 E. D. Brown, S. C.

An Adjourned Meeting of Orange Presbytery was held in Greensboro on Tuesday the 14th inst. Candidates J. H. Carter, of Mt. Airy and H. C. Hamilton, of High Point were licensed to preach the Gospel, and licentiate C. G. Smith, son of Rev. Wade C. Smith, of Greensboro, was received from East Hanover Presbytery and ordained as an evangelist. Mr. Smith is a candidate for the foreign field, but for the present will work in Stokes County, N. C.
 Stated Clerk.

Charlotte, Tenth Avenue Church—On last Sabbath evening the pastor, Rev. J. F. Ligon, preached the baccalaureate sermon to the students of the Albemarle Normal and Industrial Institute at Albemarle, N. C. In his absence his pulpit was filled very acceptably by Rev. Coyte Hunter, a recent graduate of Union Seminary, who is soon to become assistant to Dr. White of the First Church, Raleigh.

Winston-Salem, Reynolda Church—The session is glad to announce that Mr. Jno. H. Powell, Jr., of Kansas City, Mo., will become temporary pastor of the Reynolda Church until Dr. D. Clay Lily, D.D., arrives July 1st, to become permanent pastor.

Mr. Powell comes to Reynolda from Union Seminary, Richmond, Va., where he was a member of the Junior Class. Before entering the seminary he was a teacher in Pardue University in Utah.

This church has been supplied with preaching every Sunday, with one exception, since Rev. T. W. Simpson accepted a call to Durham, October 1, 1922.

Mt. Carmel Church organized in 1776 is two miles and a half away, Dr. Black started his meeting there on the 22d and ran through the 29th, we had good attendance at this church, the people were greatly revived, many of the officers leading in prayer for the first time. Results: 21 united with the church, 19 by profession and two by statement, and some signed cards for the Baptist Church. Mr. Burr also lead the singing here, and Miss Myrtle Poole played the organ. An offering was taken up for Synod's work. This is an old church but is still growing and taking on new life. Rev. William C. Rourek is our pastor. He lives in the manse at Ellerbe, N. C.

Charlotte—From the Tenth Avenue Calendar we take the following announcement of the coming of an assistant to the pastor, Rev. J. F. Ligon:

"It is with a great deal of pleasure that we welcome Miss Pauline Barton to our midst, as a worker in our Church. Miss Barton is a graduate of our Assembly's Training School in Richmond, and is giving all of her time to Christian service. We are glad to have such a worker in our congregation, and expect great things from her labors among us. Miss Barton's work will be along the line of assistant to the Pastor, and she will be pleased to be of any service to anyone who will command her time and talents."

Charlotte—From last Sabbath's calendar we take the following notice in regard to a forward step on the part of the Caldwell Memorial Church:

"It is a pleasure to announce that the goal of $8,200 for current expenses in the recent canvass was reached; and that a total of $7,300 was subscribed for benevolences. Included in these figures are surplus and special gifts to foreign missions as a result of which 'this congregation will have one-fourth of the support of a new missionary couple preparing to sail for China in August: Rev. Jas. E. Bear, Hoge Fellow at Union Seminary, Richmond, last year, and Miss Margaret White, who is to become Mrs. Bear June 12th; and the full support this year of Rev. Jas. I. Paisley, a young missionary now on the field in Kwangju, Korea.' The congregation will have letters from these representatives from time to time, and Mr. and Mrs. Bear hope to visit us in July. Their work is ours and the Master's. Let us pray for them regularly and constantly."

Hamlet—Sunday, May 6th, was a red-letter day in the calendar of the Hamlet Presbyterian Church. With the splendid building almost complete, formal ceremonies put the corner-stone in position, at which time emphasis was laid upon the great basic fact of the divinity and the sacrifice of Jesus Christ as the foundation of the Church. We have had a remarkable growth since the organization of the church, about twenty-five years ago, until today the membership is around 200 and the church in vigorous condition, taking the full time of the pastor, Rev. Arthur T. Young and making its contribution to the Kingdom of the Lord beyond its borders. Dr. W. H. Frazer, president of Queens College, was with us on the occasion of the corner-stone laying, and made the address of the morning.

Kings Mountain—Sunday night, May 13th, was a happy occasion at Kings Mountain, when Dr. I. S. McElroy was installed as pastor. Rev. W. A. Murray presided, propounded the questions and charged the pastor. Rev. W. W. Akers preached the installation sermon and Rev. J. E. Berryhill, a former pastor, charged the people. Elders A. C. Miller and C. E. Neisler completed the commission. Already the church which has been vacant since September, has taken on new life. A goodly number of new members has been recently received. Dr. McElroy has not only won the hearts of his own congregation but also of the entire community and has taken hold of his new work with his characteristic energy and ability.
 W. A. M.

Providence Church—1765-1923—The annual May Communion Service was held Sunday, May 6th in accordance with the time-honored custom of an "All-Day Meeting."

At eleven o'clock there was a sermon by the pastor on the theme "Redeemed by the precious blood of Christ" This service was attended by a very large congregation, many of whom "came from the east, and from the west, from the north and from the south," to the old church of their fathers, and of their own childhood, to "eat of this bread, and drink of this cup," and thus show their faith in His death, and their hope in His coming again. "When they had sung a hymn they went out" into the beautiful church grove to partake of a genuine fellowship dinner, of which "they did all eat, etc." (For further particulars see Matt. 14:20.)

When "it was towards evening, and the day was far-spent" a second service was held, at the conclusion of which "The disciples went away again unto their own home."
 Cor.

Norman Presbyterian Church was fortunate in having Rev. William Black, Synodical evangelist of North Carolina, to preach for us from April 15-22. We had large crowds to hear him each night, and the school attended in a body in the mornings. The ladies had prayer meetings each afternoon at four o'clock, then they asked for a prayer meeting just for themselves and one afternoon we had 15 boys in attendance, and practically every one read some portion of scripture and prayed. This was a fine thing for the boys. The girls also had a prayer meeting and they read and prayed. It was a fine meeting. Mr. Burr lead the singing, and trained a junior and senior choir. Miss Myrtle Poole, of Jackson Springs played the piano (which was loaned by Mrs. Martin).

Results: There was about 75 conversions, 37 signed cards for the Presbyterian Church. Eighteen united with our church, the others will come in later, the others went to the Methodist and Baptist churches.

We have a chapel here, but Dr. Black urged them to build a better church, the building committee is now working on the plans and we hope in the near future to have a model and up-to-date church building. Rev. William C. Rourk is our pastor.

APPALACHIA

Black Mountain—Rev. Harry Boehme, who has been for some time the popular and efficient teacher of the B. B. B. Bible Class in the Presbyterian church, has resigned this position. Resolutions by the class were passed expressing their regret at this action and appreciation of the work he had done.

The North Carolina Home for Religious Workers at Montreat will be in charge of Mrs. N. L. Barnes, of Davidson, N. C., for the coming conference season. This home is run for the entertainment of our church workers of limited means. To these, preference is always given in the assignment of rooms. Space not spoken for by eligible religious workers will be open to others but at somewhat higher cost. Send all applications for entertainment in the home to Mrs. N. L. Barnes, Davidson, N. C.

Newland, N. C.—The first Sunday Rev. D. B. McLaughlin preached at Banner Elk to a full house and at the close of the services gave the invitation and there was added to the church 12 or 13. The spirit of God was very manifest. There were six baptized.

The first Sunday he preached at Newland and there was added to the Newland Church four young men and ladies all on confession of faith, and were baptized. There has not two months passed during the ministry of the pastor of the Newland group without adding some one to the churches.

Banner Elk has a student for the summer that has just come on the field. The carpenters are completing the work on the Pinola church this week. We hope to finish the repair work on Linville in a couple of weeks.

The Smoky people have most of the material on the ground to build a new church that will be called Tax's Chapel.

This is a very poor community and we would appreciate a little help to finish the building and to put seats in it. If any one has any second-hand seats, they would certainly be appreciated. And also a pulpit and some carpet.

Mountain Missionary's Needs: Seats, pulpit and carpet, money to help finish church, piano, organ, clothes for the poor, books for library and a furnace. Our work has progressed with one exception, we can't do much financially, as our people are poor mountain people; they have the heart to do, but are not in shape to do very much. We have made improvements on all the churches and manse. A good lady gave us a bath tub, and now we are installing it. D. B. McLaughlin.

ALABAMA

Pea River—This fine old church is preparing to celebrate her centennial in July. While quite old in years, she is still vigorous and has recently added six new officers to her already efficient corps, namely: elders Chas. Jones, Jno. Baxter, Jr., Baxter McLean; deacons, P. P. McRae, George Shipman and Aramen Currie.

Clio—Rev. William Duncan, of Troy, recently assisted the pastor in a week's meeting, which was greatly enjoyed by all. The church was crowded at every service, the preaching was of a high order and the singing fine. Ten children of the Sabbath school united with the church. The Clio Church has a wide-awake Junior Christian Endeavor Society of 75 members. R. M. Mann.

Tuscaloosa—A meeting of one week has just been concluded in the West End Chapel of the First Church. Rev. A. G. Irons did the preaching. There were seven additions to the church. Since the first of April the First Church has had 26 additions. Twenty of these have been on confession of faith. At the recent conference of Presbyterian pastors and workers of churches located near state institutions of higher education held in Knoxville, Tenn., permanent organization of such workers was formed and the pastor of the First Church, Dr. Chas. M. Boyd, was elected president.

Selma—The Alabama Avenue Church, of which Rev. Geo. W. Cheek is pastor, has just closed one of the greatest and most successful revivals of its history, under the leadership of Rev. Samuel M. Glasgow, of Knoxville, and Mr. Thos. G. Makin, of Othman, Ala. For ten days beginning the first of May, Dr. Glasgow preached twice a day with unusual power to large congregations. This strict adherence to God's inspired and inerrant word, together with the earnest pleadings that came from the life of a man whose soul throbbled with the divine message, gripped his audience from the very beginning. Mr. Makin proved to be a song leader of no mean ability. He seemed to have the knack of getting everybody in the audience to sing whether he cared to or not. The meeting closed on Wednesday evening, May 9th. Sunday the 13th was set as the day when all who took their stand for Christ in the meeting would unite with the church. At the morning service the session received 40 people into the church, and there will be at least ten more to come yet, as a direct result of the meeting. Of these 40 members, five came by letter, five were reclaimed, and 30 publicly professed their faith in Christ. Of these 30, 20 adults and six children were baptized.

One very interesting feature of this work is the splendid Yoke Fellow Bible Class, which was organized a little over a year ago. This class invited P. T. Shanks, to become its teacher. Mr. Shanks has proven to be a great leader of men. On Sunday the 6th there were present at this class 146 men, the most of whom have been hitherto untouched by the influence of any church. We have the largest men's class in the city. We have three well-organized and thriving Christian Endeavor societies. A splendid Sunday School whose enrollment is much larger than the church membership. Our church membership is nearing the three hundred mark, a gain of 33 1-3 per cent, since the present pastorate began a little over two years ago. "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy and for thy truth's sake." Cor

ARKANSAS

Monticello—During the week before the first Sunday in April, the pastor, assisted by elder Lamar Williamson, conducted an evangelistic campaign among the students of the State Agricultural School which is located near this place. Thirty-three young men and young women responded to the invitation for church membership and more will probably be reached later through personal work. Fifteen were received Sunday morning into the Presbyterian Church, and the cards of those who indicated preference for other churches were turned over to the respective pastors.

The report to Presbytery will show that 63 members have been received during the past year, of whom 45 were received by profession of faith. The total contributions for benevolences exceeded last year's contributions by $2,200 and were larger than any previous year in the records of the church. Three young men from the church are now under care of Presbytery in preparation for the ministry.

Camden, First—The campaign for the Arkansas Educational Institutions has just closed in this church. In spite of the fact that the church went over its budget in the annual every member canvass recently, raised the salary of its pastor, Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, $900 on April 1st, assumed the full support of a missionary in Korea, is building just now a modern brick manse, and is looking forward to the day not far into the future when a new church building must be erected, the campaign went over the goal of $16,000 set by the local committee. After canvassing for two days, subscriptions were turned in for the amount of $10,145, with others to come later. In a number of cases, the giving was truly sacrificial. Under the active leadership of Mrs. A. H. Seats and Messrs. Paul Harris, Jr., and C. H. Green, the campaign brought a genuine spiritual blessing to the congregation. The final victory meeting closely resembled the closing service of a great revival. During the campaign five splendid young people of the congregation made decision for full time Christian life service.

Marvell—The session of this Church have received seven new members since the reports to the spring meeting of Pine Bluff Presbytery, for the year ending March 31, 1923, among the number is the following remarkable record:

1. A grandfather, a father, a father-in-law. Three? No it's one.
2. A son, a husband, an uncle, a brother-in-law to a member of the session. Four? No, it's one.
3. A wife, a daughter, a daughter-in-law, a sister-in-law to a member of the session. Four? No it's one.
4. A daughter, a grand-daughter, a niece, a niece by marriage to a member of the session. Four? No, it's one.

The grandfather is a brother to the pastor's co-worker in the ministry for seven years, and the pastor has been once a month a guest in this grandfather's home in Marvel for seven years. Matthew 12:46-50, "While he yet talked with the people, behold his mother and his brethren stood without desiring to speak with him, then one said unto him, behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without desiring to speak with thee; but he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my Mother? and Who are my Brethren and he stretched forth his hands towards his disciples and said, Behold my mother and my Brethren, for whosoever shall do the will of my Father who is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother."

James H. Morrison, Pastor.

TENNESSEE

Nashville—The Glen Leven Church, Dr. W. C. Alexander, pastor, concluded a fruitful year's work on March 31st. Without special services, 48 members were received, 18 being on confession of faith. The financial report was encouraging. A balance of $205 was reported after all obligations had been fully met. Exclusive of gifts to the Building Fund and Southwestern, the regular contributions totaled over $12,000. The Woman's Auxiliary had a remarkable development. Their budget was $1,500, their offering $1,782. A second Endeavor society has recently been organized. The Sunday School under the active leadership of Mr. A. R. Cornelius is prospering. We "thank God and take courage."

Memphis—May 8th we closed a ten-days' meeting with Norris Avenue Church, Memphis, in which I assisted the pastor in charge, Rev. John W. Orr. The services were well attended, and much interest manifested. Church members were revived and a number reconsecrated themselves to the Master and His service. Fifteen were received into the church on profession of faith, and others signified their acceptance of Christ as their Saviour. A special feature of the meeting was that the young people and children attended in large numbers, and took active part in the services. This mission church is steadily growing under the able leadership of Mr. Orr, pastor of McLemore Avenue Church. He and his wife devote their Sabbath afternoons to this work, he teaching the Bible class and preaching, Mrs. Orr teaching the primaries. The work of this mission church is in addition to the arduous pastorate of McLemore Avenue Church. God is richly blessing their sacrificial labors.

J. J. Hill, Supt. Home Missions, Memphis Pres.

Nashville—The constitutional requirements having been complied with, the Presbytery of Nashville, U. S., is hereby called to meet in the First Presbyterian Church of Nashville at noon on Tuesday, May 15th, for the following business:

1. To dissolve the pastoral relation between Rev. Lynn R. Walker, D.D., and the First Presbyterian Church of Franklin.
2. To dismiss Dr. Walker to the Presbytery of East Alabama.
3. To make such changes in the committees of Presbytery as shall be necessitated by Dr. Walker's removal.

H. L. Walker, Moderator.

W. C. Alexander, S. C.

TEXAS

Waco—The Waco-Mexican Church made fine progress during the last Presbyterian year and is sending up excellent reports. It added two elders and two deacons to its official force; it organized a Woman's Auxiliary; a Junior and also a Senior society of Christian Endeavor; and started a branch Sunday School.

Is established a Study and Play Room for the young people of the church. It has a Cradle Roll and Home Department.

It received 18 new members on examination, and five on certificate, which is one new member for each four members in the church. It contributed $295 for all purposes, which is at the rate of $4.90 per member.

The Session employs an active, consecrated woman missionary who is doing good work. Plans are well under way for the building of "The Anna King Memorial Chapel."

The First Church of Waco helps materially in the support of the work. The Mexican Church of Waco has a most hopeful outlook for the next church year.

VIRGINIA

Lexington Presbytery met at Waynesboro, Va., April 17, 1923 with 43 ministers and 42 elders. Rev. A. P. Dickson, moderator, preached opening sermon from texts: Isa. 14:32, Matt. 16:18. Rev. W. W. Sprouse was elected moderator and Rev. J. K. Parker and elder F. W. Somerville, clerks. Rev. Jno. R. Rosebro was reelected permanent clerk for five years. Rev. Wm. C. White, D.D., completed 30 years as stated clerk.

Received—Rev. W. E. Davis from Piedmont Presbytery; Rev. W. S. Trimble, from Potomac Presbytery.

Dismissed—Rev. C. W. Reed to Kanawha Presbytery where he becomes pastor of Montgomery, W. Va., Church. Rev. J. K. Parker to Roanoke Presbytery, where he becomes pastor of a group of churches in Charlotte County, Va.

Licensed—G. Raymond Womuldorf, of Lexington, Virginia.

Ordained: To be—On June 10th at Lexington, G. Raymond Womuldorf as evangelist for the foreign field, by a commission, viz.: Rev. T. K. Young, D.D., Rev. H. W. McLaughlin, D.D., Rev. E. W. McCorkle, D. D., Rev. J. A. Trostle, Rev. O. M. Anderson, (alt.) Elders, G. W. Womuldorf, Paul M. Penick, W. P. Irwin, (alt.). To be ordained on June 10th at Harrisonburg, Va., as associate pastor, by commission, Rev. B. F. Wilson, D.D., Rev. J. B. Gordon, Rev. S. B. Hannah, Rev. W. T. Walker, Rev. J. M. Harris, Rev. W. W. Sprouse, (alt.); elders, Dr. C. H. Rolston, of Cooks Creek, and Dr. W. T. Lineweaver, of Harrisonburg, with Mr. L. C. Myers, alt.

Pastorate Dissolved—Rev. C. W. Reed and Warm Springs; Rev. J. K. Parker and Collierstown.

Installations—Rev. S. B. Hoyt at Sinking Spring; Rev. S. B. Lapsley at Craigsville; Rev. H. R. Borthwick at Fairfield; Rev. W. E. Davis at Staunton Second.

Presbyterial Sermon—At this meeting by Rev. O. M. Anderson on "The Atonement." For next meeting, by Rev. W. E. Davis on "The Virgin Birth of Christ."

To Organize Church at East Bethel—Commission, Rev. H. S. Turner, D.D., Rev. J. L. Fairly, D.D., Rev. Graham Gilmer, Rev. H. M. Wilson, Rev. W. W. Sprouse, alt. Elders, W. R. Skutt, H. P. Dickerson.

Laymen—Organization of Committee—Rev. J. L. Fairly, D.D., and elders J. A. Noff and F. M. Somerville.

Instruction of Applicants of Church Membership—Committee, Rev. Graham Gilmer, Rev. J. B. Gordon, Rev. J. L. Fairly, D.D., Mr. R. D. Haislip, and Mr. P. H. Lee.

Deaths—Rev. L. E. Scott and Rev. S. T. Ruffner, D. D.

Fall Meeting—Monterey, Va., September 11, 1923 at 3 p. m.

Adjourned Meeting—Staunton First, May 30th at 11 a. m. Wm. C. White, S. C. Churchville, Va.

News of the Week

John B. Gordon, Washington representative of the American Vegetable Oil industries, replied to the Southern Tariff Association and John H. Kirby by saying that the tariff has done the South great injury. He denied Mr. Kirby's claim that the Fordney-McCumber tariff rates upon foreign vegetable oils have conferred a great boon on Southern agriculturists.

Increased demands for all classes of skilled labor, skilled mechanics and farm hands have practically put an end to unemployment in every section of the country, the department of labor reported in an analysis covering conditions during April.

Hot Springs, Ark., was the victim on May 14th of a terrible disaster caused by flood that originated in the upper basin of the mountains near the city and that swept over it, followed by fire. No lives were lost.

The North Carolina State Prison Board ordered drastic changes in the method of discipline for prisoners under the state's penal system, in fulfilling one phase of Governor Morrison's promised "action" in a prison betterment undertaking. It abolished corporal punishment and the dark cell; provided for the reclassification of all prisoners so as to give greater privileges to those of good conduct; adopted rules for the maintenance of discipline almost identical with those of the Federal government's penal system.

The General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church, in session at Indianapolis, Ind., defeated Wm. J. Bryan for moderator and elected Dr. C. F. Wishart, president of Wooster College. Friends of Dr. Wishart based their campaign on the claim that an ordained minister was needed to direct the highly specialized work of the Church, and on Mr. Bryan's views on the theory of evolution, holding that his position as a leader of the fundamentalists would not be conducive to unity.

A terrible disaster occurred on May 18th, near Camden, S. C., when a two-story frame building known as the Cleveland School House was burned to the ground, costing the lives of 75 persons who were witnessing an entertainment by the school children in the second story of the building. When a lamp exploded a stampede occurred for the one exit and under the weight the stairs collapsed. About 60 persons were burned beyond identification and were buried in one grave.

A proclamation has been issued by Governor McLeod, of South Carolina, calling upon the people of the state to contribute to the sufferers in the Cleveland school fire. The response has been most liberal.

The twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, in session in Richmond, Va., elected W. E. Beattie, of Greenville, S. C., president of the organization.

Representative Claude Kitchen, former minority leader in the lower house of Congress, continues ill at a hospital in Wilson, N. C.

America's bill of war claims against Germany amounts to $1,479,064,313.92 as it has been presented to the mixed claims commission, for settlement. The United States government itself is the largest claimant, asking for $366,113,000, while the smallest of the 12,416 claims filed with the commission is for $1.

President Harding's plan to use the United States Navy to fight rum-runners off the Atlantic Coast has been definitely scrapped. Two serious obstacles stand in the way, according to officials, which are extreme doubt of the President's authority under the constitution to divert naval vessels to prohibition duty, and lack of funds, either in the Navy or the Treasury departments, to finance the naval operations contemplated by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

President Harding has remained obdurate in his refusal to sanction payment of $1,700,000, which Congress authorized for an ill-fated post-war venture in Argentine sugar to P. Deronde, a ship owner, whose bill was approved on Capital Hill. Congress passed the buck to the President on the Deronde claim. The President declined to sign the bill. It became a law without his approval. Now he declines to avail himself of the authorization, although some of his closest personal and political friends have gone to the mat with him about it. He has refused to act since February and now has referred the matter to the sugar equalization board for a final recommendation.

Andrew Bonar Law, England's Prime Minister, has resigned this position, due to ill health. His administration has been brief but very eventful. Lord Curzon is looked on as his likely successor.

A battle between Chinese troops and the bandits who still hold a number of prisoners, is reported, in which several soldiers were killed. The military governor of Shantung province has ordered 1,500 troops toward the hills, notwithstanding the statement of the bandits that it is necessary to withdraw the troops if the prisoners are to be safe. Terms of the bandits include a "guarantee of their security by six foreign powers."

Washington officials are still reluctant to resort to drastic measures, due to several reasons, one of which is America's traditional policy to "give China a chance and not subject her to foreign interference on the road," and another, the fear that interference might cause the collapse of even such government as now exists in Peking.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

(Continued from page 6)

were enclosed in letters as patterns for souvenirs to be made by home talent for the festive occasion!

Another request led to heated argument as to the best way of making a souvenir Mexican burro out of two willing little boys and a gray blanket. Again, do matches or tooth-picks make the best staffs for miniature Mexican flags of red, white, and green ribbon, and could a real live pet pigeon be enclosed in the "pinata" without being hurt when the "pinata" was broken!

Such are the weighty demands upon the Auxiliary office at this time, as they come borne on the crests of the waves of enthusiasm for the Mexican fiesta. Enthusiasm is contagious, and if this keen interest penetrates the purses of the Auxiliary women as deeply as it has their hearts, the school for Mexican girls in Texas will be speedily built.

It is a matter of regret that the first supply of 50,000 invitation cards was so rapidly exhausted, for later orders must lack the brilliant flag colors on the address side. Those who ordered promptly won the prize in gayer cards.

M. I. S.

The Woman's Auxiliary.

273-277 Field Building, St. Louis, Mo.

An Appeal for Arbor Dale Sunday School, near Banner Elk, N. C.—For many years the writer, accompanied by an officer of the village church, went four miles winding around the side of Ball and Sugar mountains to a rural school house where interested people assembled for Sunday School.

When, three years ago, the road had become well nigh impassable, most of our people moved down into the valley, and the only available building for our work was a dilapidated dwelling on the farm of Grandfather's Orphans' Home farm. Backless benches were made of wide boards from the partition between the two downstairs rooms, and windows were purchased with proceeds from a "box supper." Summer and winter the attendance has been good, and the annual picnic and Christmas tree have been sources of great pleasure.

On Sunday morning, April 22d, we met for the last time in our old building, for before nightfall a forest fire, fanned by high winds, left only the chimney standing. We are not quite homeless, for a dear member of the school has offered us temporarily the use of her home, and we are hoping and praying that friends will make it possible for us to proceed immediately with the erection of a chapel on a beautiful site donated by Mr. Holcomb.

Contributions for this purpose, sent to (Miss) Fannie K. Taylor, Lees-McRae High School, Banner Elk, N. C., will be gratefully received. Miss F. K. Taylor.

ATTENTION, MADAM PRESBYTERIAL PRESIDENT!

You are urgently requested to attend an all-day conference of Presbyterial Presidents at Montreat, July 11th. Arrange to arrive on the Afternoon of Wednesday, July 10th.

Many important matters will be discussed informally, and every phase of our work considered.

The Synodical Presidents will also be there. You cannot afford to miss it.

WON'T YOU COME?

Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN TITHING?

If yes, write us for 29 large page, closely printed pamphlets, 240 pages by 25 authors. Three playlets are included.

If you decide to keep them, send us 30 cents. If not, return them in the same envelope. We will pay return postage.

If you send 30 cents with your order and decide to return the pamphlets, we will refund the 30 cents.

Please mention the Presbyterian Standard; also give your denomination. The Layman Company. 35 North Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Not always with rejoicing

This ministry is wrought,

For many a sigh is mingled

With the sweet odors brought.

Yet every tear bedewing

The faith-fed altar fire

May be its bright renewing

To purer flame and higher.

Educational

Queens College—May 12-15 was commencement week at Queens—an ideal one—for weather, attendance, and attractions were all really above par. The alumnae banquet on Saturday afternoon was the first event of importance. It was featured by an after dinner speech of a very high order by Miss Louise Alexander, an alumna, who is making for herself a name in legal circles in North Carolina. Another special feature was the unveiling of the name tablets on two of the buildings—one to Miss Lily Long, so long the beloved dean of the institution, another to Miss Mildred Watkins, a teacher who made her impress on hundreds of former pupils. One other—the administration building, is named for Rev. and Mrs. Burwell of sainted memory.

For the next three days events crowded on each other, so full was the program. Baccalaureate day was Sunday, May 13th, an account of which we carried last week. Monday Class Day exercises were charmingly conducted on the campus by the seniors at 4 p. m.; an attractive Art and Domestic Art Exhibit was enjoyed by many visitors at 5 p. m.; the Grand Concert, a delightful musical event with a well-balanced program of vocal and instrumental numbers, was given at 8:15 p. m.

Tuesday was commencement day proper, and at 11 a. m. a capacity audience gathered in the auditorium in honor of the senior class. The address of the occasion was delivered by Congressman W. B. Bowling, of La Fayette, Ala., and Washington. After this the diplomas were presented and the degrees conferred. The following young ladies composed the graduating class:

Members of the Senior Class—Candidates for the Degree of Bachelor of Arts: Katy Bess Anderson, Ruth Anthony, Frances Boyd, May Belle Brown, Virginia Hoover, Margaret Smart, Marie Smith, Marie Mitchell.

Candidate for the Degree of Bachelor of Science: Pauline Corbett.

Diploma in Special Departments—Music: Viola Jordan, Louise Wilkie.

Expression: Meme Hampton.

Home Economics: Ruth Cox, Mary Johnston, Marguerite Wilson, Louise Jennings, Faye Sloan.

The past year has proven the best in the history of this school. Under the leadership of Dr. Frazer and a splendid faculty it has advanced along all lines. The future of Queens College was never brighter than it is today.

Agnes Scott College—The following is the order of exercises for commencement at Agnes Scott:

May 25, Friday—10 a. m., Annual Meeting of Board of Trustees; 3 p. m., Annual Alumnae Council Meeting; 7:30 p. m., Junior Banquet to Senior Class.

May 26, Saturday—1:30 p. m., Alumnae Luncheon to Senior Class; 8:30 p. m., Presentation by the Blackfriars of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

May 27, Sunday—11 a. m., Baccalaureate Sermon, Decatur Presbyterian Church, by the Reverend J. M. Vander Meulen, D.D., president Louisville Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

May 28, Monday—3 p. m., Annual meeting of the Alumnae Association; 4 p. m., Class Day Exercises; 8:30 p. m., Concert by the Glee Club.

May 29, Tuesday—10 a. m., Address to the Senior Class, by the Reverend J. Sprole Lyons, D.D., Atlanta, Ga.

Conferring of Degrees.

Flora Macdonald College—The last fortnightly recital of the year was given Friday afternoon in the college auditorium with the following taking part: Misses Nonie Dell Lovin, Louise McNeill, Virginia Parsons, Esther Brown, Francis Newton, Christine McPhaul, Linda Cook, Catherine Deaton, Pauline Edminston, Martitia Hodgkin, Nettie Kimble, Celeste Legette, Louise McCollum, Katherine McIntyre, Mary Shaw, Nora Williams, and Mary Snoddy, of North Carolina; and Sarah Jenkins, of Georgia.

The colored supervisor of schools of Hope County, Maggie Hester, made a very interesting talk on last Wednesday evening at the weekly prayer meeting service. She came under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A., and made a plea for greater co-operation between the white and colored races, showing how both could be bettered by the proper spirit between the two races. She also told of the work she was doing among those of her race, industrially, mentally, and spiritually.

Miss Mary Johnston, dean of the college, entertained the faculty of the college Wednesday afternoon at an informal tea in the college parlors. A few guests from out in town were also invited for the occasion, and refreshments of tea, sandwiches, stuffed dates, and confections were served.

The last tennis tournament doubles were played off this week with Sophomores winning out against Seniors, and Freshmen against Juniors.

The 43d branch alumnae association will be organized on May 15th at Middleburg, N. C., under the direction of Mrs. Ethel Council Rogers.

An hour comes when the strong and beautiful way to deal with ourselves is—having thought ourselves to a standstill, having worn ourselves weary with the imagination of grief or fear—to lift up our head and to look round about us to see if there is not one who needs us.

CHILDREN

ATTENTION PALS

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl 12 years old. I go to school at Woodville. My teacher is Mr. Willie Monroe. I go to Sunday School every time I can. Miss Alma Lee is my teacher. Mr. G. L. Kirkpatrick is my pastor. I like both of them. I belong to the Junior Christian Endeavor. I play the organ for them. Mr. Wilson is going to give us a talk this Saturday. We have recited the Shorter Catechism and got my Bible on February 25th. I am starting reading it. I have two pet cats that I am very fond of, and I have four little nieces that live right near me, and we have a good time. Please print this letter as I want to surprise my four pals—Evelyn Priest, Marjorie Black, Mary Alice Seals, and Frances Murray.
Your friend,
Evelyn Jackson.
Laurinburg, N. C.

A JUNIOR C. E.

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl seven years old. My birthday was the 10th of January. I go to school at Wagram. I am in the first grade. My teacher is Miss Annie McEachin. I like her fine. I go to Sunday School as often as I can. My Sunday School teacher is Mrs. Angus Lytch. I just love her; she is so good. I am a member of the Junior Christian Endeavor. I like to go. I have three more sisters younger than I. Their names are Frances McGirt, Marjorie Lois, and Mary Lile. Please print my letter as I want to surprise my Uncle John.
Your unknown friend,
Janice Jackson.
Laurinburg, N. C.

A SURPRISE LETTER

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school and am in the third grade. Miss Henderson is my teacher. As this is my first letter, I want to surprise my father and mother. Guess I had better stop on account of the waste basket.
Your unknown friend,
Margaret Evan Bryant.
Rowland, N. C.

SEVEN BROTHERS

Dear Standard:
I am 11 years of age. I go to the Presbyterian Church at Harmony. Dr. A. Scott is our pastor. Mr. W. F. Cowan is my Sunday School teacher; he is the superintendent of the Sunday School. I have seven brothers and I haven't any sisters. I go to school at Williamsburg. I have had a fine Easter. I am studying the Child's Catechism. I hope this letter will not reach the waste basket.
Your friend,
Allen Moore.
Harmony, N. C.

LIKES BALL BEST

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl ten years old and am in the fourth grade at school. I like it here, and have three class-mates; we play ball, pool, poison, three deep, and many other games that we like to play. I like best of them all playing ball, but I am seldom chosen to play with them. My teacher's name is Miss Edith Furr. I like her fine. My older brother, my six-year-old brother, goes to school also. His teacher's name is Miss Marcie Stroup. We go to Sunday School every Sunday we can. I have recited my first Catechism and received my Testament. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Mamie Wilson. Our pastor is Rev. J. E. Berryhill. We like him fine. I must close for fear Mr. Waste Basket will see this letter and swallow it up. Please print my letter for I want to surprise my father, mother and brother.

Your little friend,
Margaret Virginia Hoffman,
Gastonia, N. C.

CHURCH'S BIRTHDAY

Dear Standard:
Here comes a boy from Alabama. I am nine years old, and am in the third grade. I like to go to school fine; my teacher is Miss Lula Andrews. I have a brother named Ralph and a little sister named Laura. I am the oldest. I go to Sunday School at Baxter's School House and go to Pea River Church to preaching. Our church will be 100 years old this summer. We are going to celebrate it. We have invited the editor of the Standard to be with us that day. If the goat doesn't get this I'll come again.
Your little friend,
James Franklin Baxter.
Louisville, Ala., R. F. D. 2.

OUR PRACTICAL JOKE

If we had known that mother was going to start housecleaning the very first day of our spring vacation, we never would have hidden it under the bed. And while we were dawdling over breakfast Monday morning mother went upstairs and started to pull our room to pieces. Then she called:

"Meg! Alice!"

Even before we got up the stairs and saw mother standing in the doorway of our room we knew what had happened. And we saw in an instant that our beautiful hiding place was demolished. The bedclothes lay in a pile on the floor. The mattress towered against the wall. The usually retiring bed-springs lay exposed to the brilliant light of day. And on the floor beneath, our booty could be seen distinctly. No one could doubt for a minute what that sprawling array of articles was. And mother didn't. In a voice that almost succeeded in sounding cool, she remarked: "That fishing tackle, the last time I saw it, was packed away carefully in Bob's suitcase, the one he took with him to camp. Now, can either of you tell me how it got here?"

We neither of us seemed to be able to tell her. It seemed to us maddeningly unnecessary.

"Well," Meg's voice spoke up spunkily, "they stole the freezer of ice-cream the night of our club party."

"Ah!" exclaimed mother, "so they did. But," she went on thoughtfully, "they returned it later in the evening, I believe."

"Not until some of the girls had gone home," I put in explosively. "They just about spoiled our party."

"Let me see," mused mother. "The boys left Saturday, and this is Monday. I think quite enough of their week's fishing trip will be spoiled if you return their fishing paraphernalia today."

"Return it!"

"Certainly. You can take the carryall and put up a lunch. You can easily drive to the camp and back in a day. You can take the children with you, too. Mary and I are going to be busy cleaning."

A nice sweet plan all laid out for us. A drive of fifteen miles and back behind slow old Barbedoes, with the lively twins climbing over us—with their sharp knees and elbows. Object of said trip being to eat humble pie before six grinning boys.

* * *

But mother insisted, and we started. I sat on the front seat with the beloved fishing tackle resting snugly beside me. I was driving Barbedoes, because any one could drive her. She just jogs along the same old way, no matter what you do. Meg sat in the back seat with the twins, because she has very strong arms. The twins did practically all of the talking—teasing to sit on the step and pick flowers as we drove along. "Honest we won't fall out. We could pick 'em easy. Oh, you're mean, just mean," screamed the shrill little voices. Meg, with an arm around each, was kept busy restraining them. I, in the intervals between disentangling Barby's adventurous tail from the reins, was trying to devise a dignified and graceful way of eating humble pie. It was a perfect spring day, but it is safe to say that none of us were enjoying the ride.

Two hours dragged by, Barbedoes' tail and the twins behaving about the same. Meg must have been sore all over.

"Suppose we take a rest," said I, "and eat lunch. We'd better get that cherry pie eaten before the boys get a smell of it. I'm sure the camp is just around the next bend."

Meg, thankfully agreeing, released her strangle hold on the reins as I stopped Barbedoes and loosened his check rein so he could nibble the grass. And while we were eating Meg and I got a chance to talk—the twins for the moment silenced with sandwiches and pie. I had a bright idea to suggest.

"Perhaps the boys wouldn't be in the tent, and we could slip inside and leave the stuff with a sarcastic note. Even if they were in, we could hang around a bit and wait for them to leave."

This seemed a good plan. The only trouble was—the note. Neither of us seemed strong on sarcasm. We finished our lunch and started on again. But the twins began their interminable teasing once more. "Why won't you let us? It would be such fun seeing who could pick the most. Don't squeeze us so tight. Ouch!" How could we think?

And then came another interruption—an old woman in a rusty black dress and bonnet begged us for a ride. "I'm that tired I could drop," she declared with a toothless smile.

Pulling up Barbedoes, I helped the poor thing in.

"Goin' fishin', I presume," she cackled sociably as I removed the fishing tackle to make room for her.

"No," said I, reddening, "just taking them to my brothers."

"Just so," said the old hag. "Wait till I git my bonnet straightened, and I'll drive. Now, here we be." With that she reached over and took the reins from my astonished hands.

"I prefer to drive," I said sternly. "No you don't, young lady; you wouldn't take me where I want to go." Flapping the reins on Barbedoes' back, she turned him into a straggling, rutty road leading into the thick timber.

Turning a grinning face to me, she said wickedly: "I'm taking you all to the orphan asylum—if you want to know."

"Orphan asylum! But we don't want to go to an orphan asylum."

"Course you don't," grinned the woman. "But I want you to come, and my old man wants you to come. We've run clean out of orphans. You'll do nicely."

"But we're not orphans!" cried Meg.

* * *

"No?" The strange old woman busied herself for a moment untwisting the reins from Barbedoes' tail. "The last ones weren't orphans either. Not when I found 'em anyhow. My old man attends to that end of the business. Don't you worry."

What could she mean? She was watching me warily out of the corner of her eye. Giggling foolishly, too. Crazy, not a doubt of it. And strong! Her wrists had felt like iron when she grabbed the reins. But Meg and I would have to overpower her and throw her out.

"There it is," crowed the crazy old woman. "And my old man waiting on the steps!"

I breathed a sigh of relief when I saw the house. This would be the insane asylum, I felt sure, and the old man would take charge of her. As we drove up to the side steps of the porch, I gave a help-me-quick sort of look to the old man. So did Meg, I'm sure.

But the man—he was the old-fashioned kind with a thin fringe of white whiskers framing his face—cried out admiringly: "You got 'em. Good for you, old lady. The trustees telephoned they'd be over this afternoon. And now there'll be some orphans to show 'em, and we won't lose our jobs after all."

"Yeh," drawled the woman; "these'll keep us going for a spell. Only," she added briskly, "you'll have to make another trip into town. These aren't orphans neither."

* * *

"Always piling up work for me," grumbled the old man, "and them twins," he added sourly. "Why couldn't you have picked out some long legged, skinny ones with stringy, black hair. Golden curls and dimples won't keep orphan asylums open long."

"We'll just shave off the curls and starve out the dimples," soothed the woman. "Just you get ready and drive to town, and I'll see to things here."

Meg and I and even the twins had been listening spellbound to this extraordinary conversation. We had two lunatics to deal with instead of one; that was clear.

"Now, my little dears," began the woman in a wheedling tone, "if you'll jest step out and set on the veranda for a spell, you'll look nice and pretty when the trustees come."

And quite unexpectedly I found myself outside the carriage. With a skillful twist of those strong wrists of hers, she had helped me out before I realized what she was doing. Whereupon Meg in a panic at being left alone, immediately followed with the twins hanging fast to her skirts.

There were benches on the veranda, and we sank into them. The woman went into the house—probably to get the shears. And the man seated himself on the front steps. Huddled together, wondering what would happen next, we waited, it seemed an age. The old woman didn't come back; not a sound came from the inside of the house. And suddenly—we could scarcely believe our eyes—we realized that the old man had disappeared from the steps.

And the carriage and Barby waiting at the curb! Thrilled at our almost unbelievable good luck, we sprang pell-mell into the carriage. Even Barby seemed to realize the dire need for haste. Bumpety bump over the rutty road we flew at a surprising pace. Not until we turned into the main road did we dare to believe that we were safe.

Then and not till then did we discover that the fishing tackle was gone!

A note, however, was in its place. Pinned neatly to the floor of the carriage. A sarcastic note. Imagine our feelings when we read it. The note follows:

"Thanks for the fishing tackle. In return we have had the pleasure of entertaining you with a little farce—aided very efficiently by the two boys who live in the house you visited. They called upon us this morning in their make-ups, and we were returning with them when we saw the dear old carryall coming down the road. While you were eating your lunch we planned our little stunt. Clever, don't you think? Bye-bye—see you next week.—Bob.

"P. S.—Myron—he's the boy who took the part of the dear, old lady—hopes he didn't frighten you too much. He says he's afraid he laid it on a bit thick at times."

A bit thick! Meg and I sank limply back against the cushions, and Barby carried us home. Our practical joke on the boys had not been what you might call an unqualified success.—Dora Dexter, in The Continent.

The most satisfactory substitute for coal is spring.—Associated Editors (Chicago).

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Green-Munroe—Rev. Thos. L. Green, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, Texas, and Miss Emma Munroe, of Milford, Texas, on April 26th, at 8 p. m., at the Presbyterian Church of Milford. Rev. E. M. Munroe, D.D., of Milford, father of the bride, officiated, assisted by a brother of the bride, Rev. E. M. Munroe, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Taylor, Texas.

Cobb-Shaw — In Greenville, S. C., May 12, 1923, by Rev. E. P. Davis, Mr. Lewis Shumate Cobb and Miss Cathleen Jay Shaw; both of Greenville.

DEATHS

REV. JOHN FRANKLIN McKINNON

Rev. John Franklin McKinnon was born in Jefferson County, Florida near Monticello, July 25, 1856. He was a graduate of Davidson College, N. C., and also of the Theological Seminary of Columbia, S. C. He was ordained in a South Carolina Presbytery at Woodruff. His first pastorate was at Upper Long Cane Church in South Carolina. He served that church for six years. His next work was teaching in an Indian school in Indian Territory (now Oklahoma). He was soon called to one of the city churches in Little Rock, Ark., and, finding the western climate did not agree with him, he accepted the call. He served this church six years. Mr. McKinnon next accepted a call to the Sanford and Oakland churches in Florida, dividing the time between the two. After he had served the two a year the Sanford Church called him for his entire time. He served that church faithfully for six years. He was then urged by his friends to become Superintendent of Education in Orange County, but, not wishing to give up his ministerial work, he accepted, in addition to the office of Superintendent, the pastorate of two churches in that county. After the expiration of his term of office he was again called to the Oakland Church, which he served for four years. Finding his health required a higher climate, he accepted work, as teacher, in The Westminster School, in western North Carolina, in the fall of 1920. Soon after he began teaching he became stated supply for Brittain Presbyterian Church, which was without a pastor at that time. In July, 1921, he accepted a call from Brittain, Union Mills, and Duncan's Creek Churches which he served till the time of his death.

The people of these churches soon became attached to him. All were moved by his spirit of kindness and unselfishness. He was in and out among this people, visiting the sick, and was always ready to help anyone in need. He was especially fond of children and was a strong believer in education. His life was a beautiful life of Christian service.

We were all shocked to learn of his illness Thursday, March 22d. He grew worse and was taken to the Rutherfordton Hospital, N. C., Saturday, March 24th. With all the medical care and attention possible he gradually grew worse until the end came near midnight, Friday, March 30th. He was buried at Brittain Church, Sunday afternoon, April 1, 1923.

Signed:

Committee of Brittain Church.
D. H. Long.
G. M. Long.
Miles Hampton.

MR. WILLIAM H. McCALLUM

On January 16, 1923, there passed from our midst, Mr. William H. McCallum, a man loved and respected by all who knew him. He deserved this love and respect because his motto in life was the Golden Rule, which he accepted when he took Christ as his Saviour and united with the Ashpole Presbyterian Church in 1873.

Mr. McCallum was born September 23, 1844. At the early age of 17, he entered the Confederate Army and joined Company E, 40th Regiment, with which he served until captured at Fort Fisher and was taken to Old Point prison.

On the 26th of February, 1874, he married Miss Matilda Carmichael. God blessed this happy union with two sons and four daughters. Three of the daughters passed away early in life. Miss May died at the tender age of four. Miss Grace and Miss Katie lived until they had reached young womanhood.

Those who survive to cheer and comfort the widowed mother are: Mr. N. H. McCallum, Dothan, Ala., Mr. C. J. McCallum, Rowland, N. C., and Mrs. R. L. Carmichael, Washington, D. C.

MRS. E. C. McNEILL

Mrs. E. C. McNeill passed away quietly at her home in Rowland, N. C., February 1, 1923. She was the daughter of Duncan and Harriett McKay, born September 22, 1851. In early life she confessed faith in Christ and united with the church at Philadelphia, and has since then continued to be a faithful and devoted member of the Presbyterian Church. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, three sons and six daughters, and also three brothers and two sisters. She was laid to rest near the church of her childhood, and her grave was covered with beautiful flowers, loving tributes of many friends.

How blest the righteous when he dies,
When sinks a weary soul to rest;
How mildly beam the closing eyes,
How gently heaves th' expiring breast.

Life's duty done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies;
While heaven and earth combine to say,

"How blest the righteous when he dies."

Pastor.

ALFRED DOCKERY McLEAN

Was born March 2, 1854, died, January 15, 1923 near where he was born, altho he had moved to Rockingham for a time, he was not satisfied with town life, he came back to the farm where he could live a peaceful life. He married Miss Amanda Alice McInnis on April 16, 1890, and eight children were born to them, they all survive him except one dying in infancy.

He was interested in Church and Sunday School work, he organized a Sunday School at Paradise School House in 1907, and he was superintendent for a number of years, he also was interested in education and in 1896 through his efforts the Paradise School was organized, and he served faithfully on the committee until his death.

He was elected an elder in the Ellerbe Springs Presbyterian Church July 22, 1894, thus serving the church he loved so much for 29 years, this should be an example for us who are left behind to carry on the work.

At a meeting of the session of the Ellerbe Springs Presbyterian Church, May 6, 1923, the following was adopted:

We, the session of the Ellerbe Springs Presbyterian Church, desire to express and put on record our appreciation of the Christian character and faithful service of our brother elder, Alfred Dockery McLean, who for many years has been an elder of this session, and whom God has now taken from us to his heavenly home, to our great sorrow and loss.

His faith in his God and Saviour was strong and unwavering, his hope of the life everlasting was sure and steadfast, and his love for his fellowmen was far-reaching.

Such faith and hope and love, instilled into his soul from childhood to manhood by his sainted mother, enabled him to bring forth continually the fruits of righteousness in his long and consistent life, "to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with his God."

An honest man, a kind neighbor, a true friend, an affectionate father, and a loving husband, a zealous Christian, he will be sadly missed by his wife, children, elders of the church, and his many friends.

"How blest the righteous when he dies
When sinks a weary soul to rest;
How mildly beam the closing eyes,
How gently heaves th' expiring breast;
So fades a summer cloud away,
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er,
So gently shuts the eyes of day,
So dies a wave along the shore.

Life's duty done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies;
While heaven and earth combine to say,
'How blest the righteous when he dies.'"

William C. Rourk.
Nelson McAskill.
J. H. McRae.
Committee of Session.

Story and Incident

THE BAPTIZING AT KITTLE CREEK

From "Aunt Jane of Kentucky," by Eliza Albert Hall

"There's a heap o' reasons for folks marryin'," said Aunt Jane, reflectively. "Some marries for love, some for money, some for a home; some marries jest to spite somebody else, and some, it looks like, marries for nothin' on earth but to have somebody always around to quarrel with about religion. That's the way it was with Marthy and Amos Matthews. I don't reckon you ever heard o' Marthy and Amos, did you, child? It's been many a year since I thought of 'em myself.

"Nobody ever could see," she continued, "how it was that Amos Matthews and Marthy Crawford ever come to marry, unless it was jest as I said, to have somebody always handy to quarrel with about their religion; and I used to think some times that Marthy and Amos got more pleasure that way than most folk git out o' prayin' and singin' an listenin' to preachin'. Amos was the strictest sort of a Presbyterian, an Marthy was a Baptist, and to hear them two jawin' and arguin' an bringin' up Scripture texts about predestination and infant baptism an close communion and immersion wa enough to make a person wish they wasn't such a thing as churches an doctrines. Brother Rice asked Sam Amos once if Marthy and Amos Matthews was Christians. Brother Rice had come to help Parson Page carry on a meetin', and he was tryin' to find out who was the sinners and who was the Christians. And says, 'No my Lord! It takes all o' Marthy's time to be a Baptist and all o' Amos to be a Presbyterian. They ain't go time to be Christians.'

"Some folks wondered how they ever got time to do any courtin', they was so busy wranglin' on baptism an election. And after Marthy had her weddin' clothes all made they come to a dead stop. Amos said he would feel like they wasn't rightly married if they didn't have a Presbyterian minister to marry 'em, and Marthy said it wouldn't be marryin' to her if they didn't have a Baptist. I was over at Hannah Crawford's one day, and she says, says she, 'Jane, I've been savin' up my eggs and butter for a month to make Marthy's weddin' cake, and if her and Amos don't come to an understandin' soon, it'll all be a dead loss.' And Marthy says, 'Well, mother, I may not have any weddin', but one thing is certain: I'm not going to give up my principles.'

"And Hannah sort o' groaned—she hadn't had any easy time with Miles Crawford—and says she, 'You pore foolish child! Principles ain't the only thing a woman has to give up when she gits married.'

"I don't know whether they ever would 'a' come to an agreement if it hadn't been for Brother Morris. He was the Presidin' Elder from town, and a powerful hand for jokin' with folks. He happened to meet Amos one day about this time, and says he, 'Amos, I hear you and Miss Marthy can't decide betwixt Brother Page and Brother Gyardner. It'd be a pity,' says he, 'to have a good match sp'iled for such a little matter, and s'pose you compromise and have me to marry you.'

"And Amos says, 'I don't know but what's that's the best thing that could be done. I'll see Marthy and let you know.' And, bless your life, they was married a week from that day. I went over and helped Hannah with the cake, and Brother Morris said as pretty a ceremony over 'em as any Presbyterian or Baptist could 'a' said

"Well, the next Sunday everybody was on the lookout to see which church the bride and groom'd go to. Bush Elrod bet a dollar that Marthy'd have her way, ad Sam Amos bet a dollar that they'd be at the Presbyterian Church. Sam won the bet, and we was all right glad that Marthy'd had the grace to give up that one time, anyhow. Amos was powerful pleased havin' Marthy with him, and they sung out of the same hymn-book and looked real happy. It looked like they was startin out right, and I thought to myself, 'Well, here's a good beginnin', anyhow. But it happened to be communion Sunday, and of all the unlucky things that could 'a' happened for Marthy and Amos, that was about the unluckiest. I said then that if Parson Page had been a woman, he'd 'a' postponed that in the Brushy Mountains of North Carolina, 1400 ft. elevation. Rates $12.50 to $17.50 per week. The place of "good eats," six miles west of Taylorsville, N. C., on State highway No. 75 from Statesville, N. C. to Lenoir, N. C. Only 40 miles to Blowing Rock, N. C. The best mineral water and the most agreeable climate in the temperate zone. Two large comfortable buildings with or without bath. Rooms full of windows or sleeping porches if desired. Capacity 100. The place for a real vacation. Fried chicken, country ham, the spice of life from the Brushy Mountains, with beans, potatoes, corn fresh from the farm, and milk, butter and real hen's eggs. In the mountains and at a mineral spring. Hotel open June 1st. Write for particulars.

ALL HEALING SPRINGS

O. F. POOLE, Proprietor
 Taylorsville, N. C.

WANTED

Primary Teacher, Experienced House Mother for fifty High School Girls in Boarding School, Able Teacher for Grammar Grades, High School English Teacher, and Principal for Two Teacher Mountain School. Address communications to this paper.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU SPECIALIZES in securing Christian teachers, officers and helpers for schools, colleges and universities—private, public and denominational—and in helping trained, Christian teachers and helpers to larger fields of service. Write today. Henry Sweets, Manager, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

$200.00 PRIZE

Washington, D. C. Apr. 16. Two hundred dollars will be given as a prize to the person suggesting the most appropriate name for No. 33 and 34, the new trains between New Orleans and New York, to be inaugurated on Sunday, April 29th, by The Southern Railway System, the Louisville and Nashville, The West Point Route and the Pennsylvania Railway, according to announcement made today by W. H. Taylor, Passenger Traffic Manager of the Southern, Washington, D. C., to whom all suggestions should be sent. The prize will be awarded after all suggestions have been considered by a committee of officers of the interested lines.

R. H. GRAHAM
 Division Passenger Agent
 Southern Railway System
 Charlotte, N. C.

SHURBINE MILITARY SCHOOL Waynesboro Virginia

Year. In Blue Ridge Mountains. 1300 ft. altitude. Four hours from Washington. Prepares for universities and business life. Small classes and individual attention secured through faculty of one teacher for every ten pupils. New $250,000 fire-proof buildings. Swimming pool and all athletics. Rate $600. Annual Spring Encampment. For catalogue write.

J. Morgan H. Hudgins
 Principal
 R. O. T. C. under U. S. War Dept.

communion. But a man couldn't be expected to have much sense about such matters, so he goes ahead and gives out the hymn,

"'Twas on that dark and dreadful day; and everybody in church was lookin' at Amos and Marthy and watchin' to see what she was goin' to do. While they was singin' the hymn the church-members got up and went forward to the front seats, and Amos went with 'em. That left Marthy all alone in the pew, and I couldn't help feelin' sorry for her. She tried to look unconcerned, but anybody could see she felt sort o' forsaken and left out, and folks all lookin', and some of 'em whisperin' and nudgin' each other. I knew jest exactly how Marthy felt. Abram said to me when we was on the way home that day, 'Jane, if I'd 'a' been in Amos' place, I believe I'd 'a' set still with Marthy. Marthy'd come with him and it looks like he ought to 'a' stayed with her.' I reckon, though, that Amos thought he was doin' right, and maybe it's foolish in women to care about things like that. Sam Amos used to say that nobody but God Almighty, that made her, ever could tell what a woman wanted and what she didn't want; and I've thought many a time that since He made woman, its a pity He couldn't 'a' made men with a better understandin' o' women's ways.

"Maybe if Amos'd set still that day, things would 'a' been different with him and Marthy all their lives, and then again, maybe it didn't make any difference. It's hard to tell jest what makes things go wrong in this world and what makes 'em go right. It's a mighty little thing for a man to git up and leave his wife settin' alone in a pew for a few minutes, but then there's mighty few things in this life that ain't little, till you git to follerin' 'em up and seein' what they come to."

"Anyhow, it wasn't long till Amos was goin' to his church and Marthy to hers, and they kept that up the rest of their lives. Still, they might a got along well enough this way, for married folks don't have to think alike about everthing, but they was eternally arguin' about their church doctrines. If Amos grumbled about the weather, Marthy'd say, 'Ain't cverything predestined? Warn't this drought app'nted before the foundation of the world? What's the sense in grumblin' over the decrees of God?' And it got so that if Amos wanted to grumble over anything, he had to git away from home first, and that must 'a' been mighty wearin' on him; for, as a rule, a man never does any grumblin' except at home; but pore Amos didn't have that privilege. Sam Amos used to say—Sam wasn't a church-member himself—that there was some advantages about bein' a Baptist after all; you did have to go under the water, but then you had the right to grumble. But if a man believed that everthing was predestined before the foundations of the world, there wasn't any sense or reason in finding fault with anything that happened. And he believed that he'd ruther jine the Baptist church than the Presbyterian, for he didn't see how he could carry on his farm without complainin' about the weather and the crops and things in general.

"If Marthy and Amos'd been divid-

Educate Your Boy Under Christian Influences

Safeguard his morals, start him in with high ideals and a sound foundation with a thorough course at the

Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Renowned for its Christian teaching, beautiful campus, modern buildings, strong faculty, excellent athletic teams, field and coach, R. O. T. C., high standard of scholarship.

For catalogue and information, write—
Dr. D. M. DOUGLAS, President,

Clinton, S. C.

THE LOUISVILLE PRESBYTERIAN THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
 BRILLIANT FACULTY MODERN CURRICULUM

Situated in the heart of the institutional section of a great metropolis, with all the added advantages of these associated institutions

Write for particulars to JOHN M. VANDER MEULEN, President
 109 East Broadway, Louisville, Ky.

BINGHAM MILITARY SCHOOL
 ASHEVILLE, N. C.—"The Land of the Sky"

Has stood the tests of 130 years. Buildings one-story brick—for safety, sanitation and service. Each pupil carefully studied. Small classes allow individual attention. Ideal school life, of the simpler type, directed by men of ability and experience. R. O. T. C. Unit under U. S. Army officer. All forms of athletics. COL. R. BINGHAM, Supt. Emeritus. COL. S. R. McKEE, Supt.

FASSIFERN
 A HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

is situated on a plateau over two thousand feet above sea level and completely surrounded by the majestic Appalachian mountains, in the city of Hendersonville, N. C., far-famed for its year-round delightful and health-giving climate. Fassifern offers thorough preparatory courses both for entrance to colleges of highest rank and professional work. Teachers have A. B. and M. A. degrees from the following colleges and universities: Columbia University; Smith, Wellesley and Goucher Colleges; Tulane University. Next session opens September 26, 1923.

MISS KATE C. SHIPP, Principal :: HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6¼ per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
 President.

207 N. Tryon St.
 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
 Sec'y & Treas.

PEACE INSTITUTE

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

For Young Women Established 1857

College Courses. Preparatory Courses for Standard College Requirements. Diplomas in Piano, Voice, Art, Expression and Home Economics. Commercial-Secretarial Course. Teacher Training Course. Specialists in all departments.

LULA B. WYNNE HALL, HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS
 MARY OWEN GRAHAM, President

Flora Macdonald College

Red Springs, North Carolina

Where the Spirit of SERVICE and LOYALTY Abounds

3,000 Alumnae engaged in 60 Occupations

10 Graduates "On the Firing Line"

Courses leading to A. B., B. S., B. M. Degrees

Catalog on Request

Address the Registrar

TYPEWRITERS

New and Rebuilt
For Sale, Rent or Exchange
S. H. WILEY
Salisbury, N. C.

THE McCALLIE SCHOOL

Founded for Christian education, never more needed than today. Prepares boys for leading colleges and Government Academies. High academic standing. Small classes, individual attention. Military training. All athletics. Fine athletic field, and new concrete swimming pool.

Headmasters
S. J. McCallie, M. A., and
J. P. McCallie, M. A., Ph.D.
For catalog address The McCallie School
Mission Ridge Chattanooga, Tenn.

DAISY FLY KILLER

PLACED ANYWHERE ATTRACTS AND KILLS ALL FLIES. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Sold by dealers, or 5 by EXPRESS, prepaid, $1.25.
HAROLD SOMERS, 150 De Kalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ART GLASS
for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs free on request
F. J. COOLEGE & SONS
ATLANTA, Ga.

School Desks,
Opera Chairs,
Folding Chairs
Kindergarten Chairs,
Church Pews,
School Supplies,
Blackboards
Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N. C.

6%
No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.
SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

TEACHERS WANTED
Positions to offer in grades, High School subjects; Principals and Superintendents of High Schools; also in Colleges. Correspond with us at once.
SOUTH ATLANTIC TEACHERS' AGENCY
410 Wesley Memorial Bldg. Atlanta, Ga.

GOOD POSITIONS
Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.
Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions.
Won't you be one to enroll? A postal addressed to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.
DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write
JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.
Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.
For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

ed on anything but their churches, the children might 'a' brought 'em together; but every time a child was born matters got worse. Amos, of course, wanted 'em baptized in infancy, and Marthy wanted 'em immersed when they j'ined the church, and so it went. Amos had his way about the first one, and I never shall forgit the day it was born. I went over to help wait on Marthy and the baby, and as soon as I got the little thing dressed, we called Amos in to sec it. Now, Amos always took his religion mighty hard. It didn't seem to bring him any comfort or peace o' mind. I've heard pople say they didn't see how Presbyterians ever could be happy; but la, child, it's jest as easy to be happy in one church as in another. It all depends on what doctrines you think the most about. Now you take election and justification and sanctification, and you can git plenty o' comfort out o' them. But Amos never seemed to think of anything but reprobation and eternal damnation. Them doctrines jest seemed to weigh on him night and day. He used to say many a time that he didn't know whether he had made his callin' and election sure or not, and I don't believe he thought that anybody else had made their's sure, either. Abram used to say that Amos looked like he was carryin' the sins o' the world on his shoulders.

"That day the baby was born I thought to myself, 'Well, here's somethin' that'll make Amos forgit about his callin' and election for once, anyhow,' and I wrapped the little feller up in his blanket and held him to the light, so his father could see him; and Amos looked at him like he was skeered, for a minute, and then he says, 'O Lord! I hope it ain't a reprobate.'

"Now jest think of a man lookin' down into a little new-born baby's face and talkin' about reprobates!

"Marthy heard what he said, and says she, 'Amos, are you goin' to have him baptized in infancy?'

"'And Marthy says, 'Well, hadn't you better wait until you find out whether he's a reprobate or not? If he's a reprobate, baptizin' ain't goin' to do him any good, and if he's elected he don't need to be baptized.'

"'And I says, 'For goodness' sake, Marthy, you and Amos let the doctrines alone, or you'll throw yourself into a fever.' And I pushed a rockin'-chair up by the bed and I says, 'Here, Amos, you set here by your wife and both of you thank the Lord for givin' you such a fine child;' and I laid the baby in Amos' arms, and went out in the gyarden to look around and git some fresh air. I gethered a bunch o' honeysuckles to put on Marthy's table, and when I got back, Marthy and the baby was both asleep, and Amos looked as if he was be-ginnin' to have some little hopes of the child's salvation.

"Marthy named him John; and Sam Amos said he reckoned it was for John the Baptist. But it wasn't; it was for Marthy's twin brother that died when he was jest three months old. Twins run in the Crawford family. Amos had him baptized in infancy jest like he said he would, and such a hollerin' and squallin' never was head in Goshen church. The next day Sally Ann says to me, says she, 'That child must 'a' been a Baptist, Jane; for he didn't appear to favor infant baptism.'

"Well, Marthy had her say-so about the next child—that one was a boy, too, and they named him Amos for his father—and young Amos wasn't baptized in infancy; he was 'laid aside for immersion,' as Sam Amos said.

BLUE RIDGE SCHOOL FOR BOYS
HENDERSONVILLE, N. C.

A select Home School for boys from 9 to 20 years old. Ideally located in healthful, invigorating climate conducive to study. A teacher for every 7 or 8 boys. Greatest stress laid upon teaching correct methods of study. On Accredited List. All branches of athletics. Total charge for session, September 18th to June 4th, $650. Summer term July and August. For Catalog, address,

N. C. State College of Agriculture and Engineering
SUMMER SESSION JUNE 12th to JULY 25th

Courses for teachers holding standard State Certificates, and for graduates of Standard High Schools. Courses giving College Credit for graduates of Standard High Schools. Cotton Classing courses. Catalogue upon application. Numbers limited to 1050. Apply for Reservation at once to
W. A. WITHERS, Director :: :: Raleigh, North Carolina

Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.

A High Grade Institution for the Education of Young Women

Christian Ideals constantly held before the Students; Christian Characters in the chair of each Department; Five Teachers with M. A. Degree; Two Teachers with Ph.D. Degree; Christian Atmosphere permeating the Student Body.

Location, the very best; Myers Park, Charlotte. Equipment rapidly reaching standard requirements. Curriculum equal to that of any institution in the State. Expenses very moderate indeed, considering advantages offered and work done.

Our Motto: "Christian Women for Christian Homes." Send us your daughter, support us in our administration and instruction, and we will return a thoroughly developed and fully refined Christian woman.

For catalogue and other information, write

WILLIAM H. FRAZER, President
Box 300
Charlotte, N. C.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway
Oldest Largest Best Phone 281

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY				DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY
NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38				NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
7:00 pm	7:30 am	9:00 am	0	lv. Aberdeen Ar.	45	s 6:50 pm	3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	40	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	f 8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	f 8:36 am	s 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	f 8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	f 7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	f 7:48 am
8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	s 9:53 am	19	Rae ford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
	s 10:13 am	f 10:08 am	24	Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	f 1:25 pm
	f 10:21 am	f 10:15 am	26	Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
	s 10:40 am	f 10:29 am	30	Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	f 12:55 pm
	f 10:43 am	f 10:31 am	31	Hope Hills Jct.	14	s 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
	f 10:53 am	f 10:40 am	34	Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
	s 11:00 am	s 10:46 am	36	Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	f 12:33 pm
	f 11:12 am	f 10:56 am	40	Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
	f 11:19 am	f 11:02 am	42	Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
	s 11:30 am	s 11:15 am	45	Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	s 4:45 pm	f 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class.
All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

hen it was Amos' time to have his day, and so they went on till young Amos was about fifteen years old and Marthy got him converted and ready to be immersed. The Baptists had a big meetin' that spring, and there was a dozen or more converts to be baptized when it was over. We'd been havin' mighty pleasant weather at March; I recollect me and Abram wanted our potatoes the first week of March, and I would put in some peas. Abram said it was too early, and sure enough the frost got 'em when they was about two inches high. It turned off real cold about the last of March; and when the day for the baptizin' come, there was a pretty keen east wind, and Kittle Creek was mighty high and muddy, owin' to the rains they'd had further up. There was some talk o' puttin' off the baptizin' till better weather, but Brother Gyardner, he says: 'The colder the water, the warmer your faith, brethren; Christ never put off any baptizin' on account of the weather.'

"Sam Amos asked him if he didn't reckon there was some difference between the climate o' Kentucky and the climate o' Palestine. Sam was always a great hand to joke with the preachers. But the way things went that day the weather didn't make much difference anyhow to young Amos.

"The whole neighborhood turned out Sunday evenin' and went over to Kittle Creek to see the big baptizin'. Marthy and Amos and all the children was there, and Marthy looked like she'd had a big streak o' good luck. Sam Amos says to me, 'Well, Aunt Jane, Marthy's waited a long time, but she'll have her innin's now.'

"Bush Elrod was the first one to go under the water; and when two or three more had been baptized, it was young Amos' time. I saw Marthy dashin' him forward and beckonin' Brother Gyardner like she couldn't wait any longer.

"Nobody never did know exactly how it happened. Some folks said that young Amos wasn't overly anxious to go under the water that cold day, and he kind o' slipped behind his father when he saw Brother Gyardner comin' towards him; and some went so far as to say that Brother Gyardner was in the habit o' takin' little spirits after a baptizin' to keep 'em takin' cold, and that time he'd taken it beforehand, and didn't know exactly what he was about. Anyhow, the first thing we knew Brother Gyardner had hold o' Amos himself,addin' him towards the water. Amos was a timid sort o' man, easy flustered, and it looked like he lost his wits and his tongue too. He was kind o' pullin' back and lookin' round in a skeered way, and Brother Gyardner he hollered out, 'Come right along, brother! I know jest how it is myself; the spirit is willin', but the flesh is weak.' The Baptists was shoutin' glory Hallelujah! and Uncle Jim Matthews begun to sing, 'On Jordan's stormy banks I stand,' and pretty near everybody j'inin' in till you couldn't hear your ears. The rest of it was about as flustered as Amos. We knew in reason that Brother Gyardner was makin' a big mistake, but we jest stood there and let things go on, and no tellin' what might 'a' happened if it hadn't been for Sam Amos. Sam was a cool-headed man, and nothin' ever flustered him. As soon as he saw how things were goin' he set down on the bank and pulled off his boots; and jest as Brother Gyardner got into middle o' the creek, here come Sam wadin' up behind 'em, and grabbed Amos by the shoulder and hollered out, 'You got the wrong man, parson! Here, Amos, take hold o' me.' And he give Amos a jerk that nearly made Brother Gyardner lose his footin', and him and Amos waded up to the shore and left Brother Gyardner standin' there in the middle o' the creek lookin' like he'd lost his job.

"Well, that put a stop to the singin' and the shoutin', and the way folks laughed was scandalous. They had to walk Amos home in a hurry to git his wet clothes off, and Uncle Jim Matthews and Old Man Bob Crawford went with him to rub him down. Amos was subject to bronchitis, anyhow. Marthy went on ahead of 'em in the wagon to have hot water and blankets ready. I'll give Marthy that credit: she appeared to forgit all about the baptizin' when Amos come up so wet and shiverin'. Sam couldn't git his boots on over his wet socks, and as he'd walked over to the creek, Silar Petty had to take him home in his spring wagon. Brother Gyardner all this time was lookin' round for young Amos, but he wasn't to be found high nor low, and that set folks to laughin' again, and so many havin' to leave, the baptizin' was clean broke up. Milly come up jest as Sam was gittin' into Old Man Bob's wagon, and says she, 'Well, Sam, you've ruined your Sunday pants this time.' And Sam says, 'Pants nothin'. The rest o' you all can save your Sunday pants if you want to, but this here's a free country, and I ain't goin' to stand by and see a man bapitized against his will while I'm able to save him.' And if Sam'd saved Amos' life, instead o' jest savin' him from baptism, Amos couldn't 'a' been grateful. When Sam broke his arm the follerin' summer, Amos went over and set up with him at night, and let his own wheat stand while he harvested Sam's."

"Did Marthy ever get young Amos baptized?" I asked.

"La, yes," laughed Aunt Janc. "They finished up the baptizin' two weeks after that. It was a nice, pleasant day, and young Amos went under the water all right; but mighty little good it did him after all. For as soon as he come of age, he married Matildy Harris (Matildy was a Methodist), and he got to goin' to church with his wife, and that was the last of his Baptist raisin'."

STANDARD PIANO CLUB

Takes the Guess Out of Piano Buying

So many people have bought guaranteed pianos on the old-time installment plan only to find in a few years that they had a tin-panny instrument instead of a high-grade musical instrument of which they could feel proud. And, when they tried to get protection on the guarantee they find that the company from whom they bought had gone out of business. It is indeed a sad story.

The Standard Piano Club insures its members against this outrage by enabling them to procure their instruments from one of the oldest and best known Piano Houses in America. Dozens of Clubs have been formed and never yet has a buyer been disappointed. Arrangements have been perfected with Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, which makes piano buying safe and easy. Ludden & Bates have been selling Pianos and Player-Pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. It is a reliable house whose guarantee means exactly what it says. They are not in business today and out tomorrow, but are ever ready and willing to make good on every promise they make.

What the Standard Piano Club Means to You

1st. It means that you are buying at wholesale prices instead of retail prices. Each Club consists of 100 members who by buying together gain a much better price than any one purchaser can procure. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but by joining the Club you are helping the other 99 members to get wholesale prices and they are helping you.

2nd. You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable Music House. You try the Piano or Player-Piano in your own home before you obligate to keep it.

3rd. By joining the Club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a tremendous saving as compared with the customary installment prices which are usually much higher than cash prices.

4th. The family of a Club Member is fully protected in case of the death of the purchaser. If the regulations of the Club have been complied with, the unpaid balance is cancelled and the family is given a receipt in full.

5th. You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation, for a new piano or player-piano.

What Other Club Members Say

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.

"The Piano is a treasure, and everyone remarks on the sweetness of tone, and it has been so much pleasure to the family. The Club Plan places the Piano in so many homes that otherwise would have to wait an indefinite time to buy. Accept my sincere thanks for your courteous treatment."

MRS. R. A. SPINKS.

College Grove, Tenn.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.

"In regard to the Piano, I am perfectly delighted with it, and everyone that has heard it, or has played on it says they never heard a finer toned one; and I can observe such a vast difference in this one and others that are in this community, that have been placed by agents. Too, every one, even those that know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this piano over others. Wishing you much success, I am,"

MRS. JORDAN RIGGS.

Columbia, S. C.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.

"I have had one of your pianos in my home for several months and I find that it comes up to your representation in every particular. Your Club Plan for the payment of same strikes me as being very lenient and I think that every home can afford a Piano on this basis. Trusting that you have a very prosperous business along this line, I am,"

MRS. ALVA JACKSON.

Write today for beautifully illustrated catalog, which pictures and describes the superb Ludden & Bates instruments, and explains more fully the many attractive features of the Club. It is helping others by the hundreds. It will help you, too. Address

Ludden & Bates

STANDARD PIANO CLUB DEPT.

Atlanta, Georgia

Mitchell College

(JUNIOR)

(Founded 1856 by Concord Presbytery)

Two years of standard, accredited college work—courses leading to Baccalaureate degrees—Excellent department of Music—Certificate courses in Home Economics and Secretarial.

MITCHELL ACADEMY

An accredited High School, with standard and flexible courses

Bible teaching emphasized throughout.

Teacher Training courses for secular and Sunday Schools.

Catalog on application.

W. F. Hollingsworth, Pres.
Statesville, N. C.

BOILS

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Why Take Laxatives?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today. (adv.)

Sparkles

Carfare

For hours they had been together on her front porch. The moon cast its tender gleam down on the young and handsome couple who sat strangely far apart. He sighed. She sighed. Finally:

"I wish I had money, dear," he said. "I'd travel."

Impulsively, she slipped her hand into his; then, rising swiftly, she sped into the house.

Aghast, he looked at his hand. In his palm lay a nickel.—Lampoon.

A story that was very popular with the army in France. A Negro who was "beating it" for the back areas as fast as he could go, was stopped by a white officer. "Don't delay me, suh," said the negro. "I's gotta be on my way." "Boy," replied the officer, "do you know who I am? I am a general." "Go on, white man, you ain't no general." "I certainly am," insisted the officer, angrily. "Lordy!" exclaimed the negro, taking a second look. "You sure is! I musta been travelin' some, 'cause I didn't think I'd got back that far yit."—Ottawa Evening Citizen.

"That musician said that the tune haunted him." "Why shouldn't it? He murdered it."—Jack-o-Lantern.

"Don't you just adore a bright sunny day in winter?" "No; it starts my wife talking about house-cleaning."—Boston Transcript.

"The reckless driver must go!" proclaims Mark Sullivan. But why must he go so fast?—Weston Leader.

The sophisticated person asked the waiter: "Do you serve lobsters here?" "Why, yes," said he, "we serve anybody."

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The STIEFF TONE

Is famous with three generations of music lovers. It has never been duplicated. It is the expression of a passion for perfection that has actuated three generations of piano makers.

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of
Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, Inc.
Charlotte, N. C.

STIEFF PETIT GRAND
The smallest Grand Piano made that embodies all the essential qualities of the Concert Grand.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

