picture which accompanies this article shows the new Creek Presbyterian Church as it appears after the addition of the Sunday School building at the rear, and the portico at the front. This work was completed in the last of 1927. The Plan Committee consisted of W. P. Todd, Adrian Cathey, C. W. Love, Torrence, and H. K. Hallett. The Finance Committee consisted of T. W. Sadler, C. W. Todd, R. Cathey. The Building Committee consisted of W. P. Todd, Wilton Todd, and S. O. Baker. The building was completed Mr. Baker moved to the new church, N. C., and Mr. W. R. Sadler was elected pastor. C. H. Rowan served as an advisory member of the committees. Mr. Louis H. Asbury, of Char-

Wedgefield, Tirzah, Hebron and Hepzibah. Later Rev. E. C. Clyde was received from the Presbytery of Concord, N. C. A call from Indiantown Church was accepted by him. These brethren have been installed in other respective churches.

Rev. J. M. Forbis, Stated Supply for several years at Andrews, was released by Presbytery and a dismissal granted him to Bethel Presbytery.

Mr. A. K. Dudley was received under care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry. W. H. Workman, Stated Clerk.

Newberry, Aveleigh Church—The present pastor has just completed his first year's work in this field. It has been a year marked by numerous activities, including the election of additional officers, a Vacation Bible School, organization of another young people's society, two weeks of evangelistic services, a recently conducted School of Missions, by Dr. C. Darby Fulton. We have lost five members by death and eleven upon dismission to other churches. God has seen fit to bless us, however, with the addition of forty-two new members, of whom twelve were upon profession of faith. With God's blessings attending us, the future seems bright; we hope to make material progress during the coming year.

GEORGIA

Athens Presbytery meets at Cornelia, Ga., Tuesday, April 16th, at 8:00 p. m. J. S. Cartledge, Stated Clerk.

All this week and continuing through March 29th, at the Baptist Tabernacle Union Meetings will be held for one-half hour, from 12:15 to 12:45. There is ten minutes of song and prayer followed by twenty minutes Evangelistic message.

Last week the meetings were handled by the Episcopalians and messages were brought by Episcopal Bishops in convention here.

ARKANSAS

Central Church, Little Rock—During the months of January and February, without any special effort, beyond that of the regular service of the Church, twelve new members have been received into the membership of the Central Church, Little Rock. The budget of the Church for the new year was presented to the congregation on Sabbath morning, February 24, and adopted; and the fifteen teams selected and lotte, N. C., was selected as the architect. Mr. Asbury is one of the leading architects of the State, a Christian gentleman, and a most agreeable man to deal with.

In addition to the Sunday School building and portico, which were financed by the congregation, a retaining wall at one corner of the church grounds, and a new floor in the old church auditorium were financed by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church at a cost of about $900.00. The total cost of the additions and improvements to this old country church was about $15,000.00. The improvements have resulted in an increase in the average Sunday School attendance of about 15 per cent as well as in an improvement in the character of the work done.

names read out for the EMC, March 10th. "Loyalty Day" will be observed, and a close, personal follow up will conclude the canvass.

Second Church, Little Rock—The third Sunday in February Rev. Hay Watson Smith completed his 18th year as pastor of the Second Church. During that time a new church and a new manse have been built and 1,737 members have been received. At present the Church is growing faster than at any previous time in its history. The Sunday School, under the able superintendency of Dr. H. A. Dawson, who is connected with the State Department of Education, is better organized than ever before. The Auxiliary has chosen an unusually efficient Board for the coming year.

WEST VIRGINIA

Berkley Springs—About 1873, George M. Gill, a Baltimore Lawyer, visited the celebrated Berkeley Warm Springs, in Morgan County, W. Va. There he became an important helper in building a comfortable attractive Presbyterian Church. A few years later he directed and aided the young deacon and church treasurer (this writer), in a successful campaign to pay the deed of trust on the church: due to Mrs. Dangerfield, a Baltimore client of Mr. Gill.

With only six members, the Berkeley Springs Presbyterian Church was organized by Winchester Presbytery. Four women and Doctor E. Boyd Pendleton and H. C. V. Campbell. Campbell was a rather bashful young clerk in the village store. He was the first deacon and Sabbath School superintendent, but served later as an elder, and eventually as pastor. He became an efficient and talented church officer and pastor there; and for the Presbyterian Church in Salem, Va. He and Rev. Doctor W. C. Campbell, father of the Presbyterian churches in Roanoke City, were youthful members of the Presbyterian Church in Gerrardstown, Berkeley County, W. Va., where their father was the village cabinet maker. Harry Campbell, as he was locally known, got a neat mission church built at New Hope, four miles east of Berkeley Springs. The Duckwall Church, two miles north, is another mission of the town church. But both have been organized into churches by Winchester Presbytery. The state road to Hancock, and the one to Martinsburg now invite ambitious farmers to some 4,000 acres of land, within perhaps three miles of one or the other of them. This little group of mission churches has furnished four living Presbyterian preachers, including a Princeton student, who has proved a successful pastor for another denomination. A fifth is living; but not on earth. They furnished the first pastor for the Presbyterian churches of Bluefield and Bramwell, Mercer County, W. Va. And influenced the training of ministers of various denominations, who have preached Christ's Gospel in New York City, and wide sections of Virginia, West Virginia, and Maryland. If we include Dr. Campbell of Roanoke, and the use of printed publications, the institute of the little village cabinet maker has probably preached the Gospel to a full million of men, women and children. And they are passing on to other millions, the glad tidings from God.

J. McCarty Duckwall.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va.

The Presbytery of Bluestone will meet in stated spring session in the Presbyterian Church, Mullens, W. Va., on the 15th day of April, 1929, 7:30 p. m. W. C. Neel, Stated Clerk.

Berkeley Springs, New Hope and Duckwall Churches—Since the New Hope Church was organized by Winchester Presbytery, last fall, and protracted meetings held there and in the Duckwall church, those two churches have taken on new life. The men of Duckwall Church have organized, and are providing a night service for the alternate Sabbath, when their pastor, Rev. Geo. H. Rector, preaches at New Hope. That gives their church services every Sunday night. And the new members and former members have increased and improved the Sabbath School. Mr. Rector preaches in Berkeley Springs every Sunday morning.

A very interesting and successful protracted meeting has just been held in the Berkeley Springs Church. Rev. J. A. Wood, of Keyser, was the preacher for the occasion. But a funeral called him home at the critical stage of the meeting. The pastor had prepared for the meeting, by getting the local pastors to preach every night, for one week, before Mr. Wood arrived. When he left, the meeting was thus carried on into the next week. The congregations much enjoyed his preaching, and that of their home pastors also.

TEXAS

The Presbytery of Brownwood will meet in San Angelo, Texas, 8 p. m., April 16, 1929. Malcom Black, Stated Clerk.

MISSOURI

Westminster, St. Louis—Xenia Theological Seminary is projecting a series of lectures which are to be popular, non-technical discussions of things which ought to interest every church worker and Bible teacher. These lectures will be for the Christian people of St. Louis generally and will be given at this Church each Thursday night beginning this week and continuing for five weeks. The discussions last Thursday night were:

1. The Founding of the Church, led by Dr. Webster.
2. The Boundaries of a Neighborhood, led by Dr. McCreary.

Men-of-the-Church

Presbyterian Church in the United States

REV. J. E. PURCELL, D.D., Executive Secretary
HENRY GRADY BUILDING
ATLANTA, GEORGIA

REV. JOHN L. FAIRLY, D.D., Wilmington, N. C., Editor in Charge of Men-of-the-Church Department

(The following is the outline of an address delivered by Rev. William F. Weir, D.D., Director of Men's Work in the Presbyterian Church, U. S.A., before the Interdenominational Council on Men's Work, Chicago, Ill., December 18th, 19th, 1928. Although the plan differs somewhat from the plan of our church, it will prove very helpful.)

ORGANIZATION OF THE LOCAL CHURCH

William F. Weir

In our Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., the one greatest objective for twelve and a half years of promotion has been the organization of men in the Local Church. During the first four of these twelve and a half years I was working alone on this job. During the last eight years of this period there have been three men with their office staffs; and during six years of this period four men; and during two years of this period five men with office staffs and equipment. This means that an effort of considerable proportions has been made in our denomination to organize men in our Local Churches. This staff, with its well furnished equipment, is operating now on a normal budget of $44,090; and during the current and next church year an additional $10,000 for the specific purpose of promoting a series of District Men's Conventions.

The method of promotion of this great objective has been, in large part, afternoon and evening Conferences of the men of small groups of churches, in fellowship dinner meetings. Our staff reaches in these Conferences approximately 50,000 men each year; and through other methods of publicity, literature, correspondence, etc., approximately 50,000 men. We have secured to date an enrollment of around 3,600 Organizations of Men in Local Churches, with considerable data on their activities. Some of these organized bodies of men are highly efficient, many of them are large value, and almost all of the most considerable value in the work of our Local Churches. We have built up in this connection a list of men that now approximates 6,000 who are our contact men in the field. They consist of Presidents of Men's Clubs or Brotherhoods, teachers of Men's Bible Classes, and Chairmen in Presbyteries who are responsible for Men's Work.

During this year and next church year we are seeking to speed up the organization of men in Local Churches through a series of around twenty-six District Conventions. The General Council and the four Boards of our denomination send their representatives to these Conventions. We are able to secure outstanding pastors and lay leaders for these programs. The purpose is to present to men the whole work of the Church and the total task of men, all of which is to be accomplished mainly through Organized Men's Work in Local Churches. While we are without data relative to contributions, since there are no separate budgets for Men's Organizations other than their incidental expenses, we are very confident that contributions to our churches are on a much better basis because of this propaganda among the men. It is the consensus of opinion generally among our leaders that the next urgent step must be the getting to the men of the church with a program of work for men which functions mainly through their Organized work in Local Churches.

We are depending for speeding up the work on our Men's Conventions, on the basis of having these Local Organizations established in the churches. Our churches now send delegates to the Convention who can take back workable methods to the Local Churches which will be actually operated in them. In the former day we learned that when the Convention was over, all was over. We can now conserve the results of Conventions.

These Conventions are one-day or twelve-hour conventions, since many more men will attend a one-day convention than would undertake to attend if it continued longer. It is not practicable for men to be absent from home for long periods of time. It is the day of the automobile and we are learning that a large proportion of our convention men come by use of the auto.

We discover that more than two-thirds of the convention delegates are laymen and that they are attended by the younger men. We are thus reaching the new generation of leaders in the Local Churches. While we have taken up convention programs we have not on this account departed from our policy of aiming directly toward the organization of men in their own churches.

Obviously, for most men the Local Church is the only field of continuous service in the work of the Church. Men may and do serve throughout the year and all the years in these programs of work in their own churches. The principal part of the training of men, as well as of the activities of men, must be carried on in the Local Church. Our Men's Bible Classes, our Men's Forum and Fellowship Meetings, etc., contribute definitely to the training of men. Two much cannot be said in favor of building fellowships of men of the same church. No group of men in the community has so many precious experiences in common, and so many common great responsibilities as the men who belong to the same Local Church. This group of men can do more for one another and for other men than can any other organization of men.

The importance of developing the Local Church is obvious on account of the fact that almost all resources for our many Christian enterprises come of the Local Church. Men who become leaders in various enterprises, almost without exception, receive their training and inspiration in their own church. Most of the money for these varied and splendid Christian enterprises is produced by the spirit of sacrifice and benevolence through the preaching of the Gospel and the training of men in their own local churches. The Anti-Saloon league has always been conscious of being a League of Churches. Y. M. C. A. men and money are in very large part the product of the Local Church, as are Red Cross funds and workers, community funds and workers, etc.

The Local Church is a permanent institution. No matter what shall occur in future years relative to church union it will always be true that the greatest objective will be founding and developing of Local Churches. The Church is the Local Church or the Christian Congregation. Public worship, the Sacraments, the Covenants center in our Local Churches. The most important activity ever put on in a community is when the Christian people are assembled in their churches worshipping God, observing the Sacraments, and hearing the Gospel preached. Our churches are not better than the attendance on public worship, the renewal of vows through the observance of the sacraments, and through worship of God.

We cannot magnify beyond measure the importance of the Local Church and of organizing men in it. One urgent necessity is to make clear to men the very essential place that the Local Church holds. I am persuaded that most men without such instruction feel that their work in the Local Church is monotonous, repetitious, and of small consequence. Absolutely the contrary is true. It is my judgment that we will not go very far in Men's Work without making clear to men the essential place of the Local Church. This will inspire and motivate men for work. It will make them grateful and they in their own churches are at the very center and heart of our great Christian enterprise and that their opportunity transcends all other opportunities that God gives to men.

PROGRAMS FOR MEN

By Fred T. Barnett
Methodist Episcopal Church South

An important principle that ought to govern us in the working out of programs for men's organizations is that programs are made for men, and not men for programs. A perfectly-prepared program, with the essential elements of fellowship, worship, instruction and service taken into consideration, which fails to grip the attention and enlist the consecrated efforts of the men, must be regarded as a failure. A careful study, therefore, of the needs of our men, many of whom have immature and undeveloped conceptions regarding the mission of the Church and the world Kingdom of Jesus Christ, is absolutely essential in the preparation of an adequate program for men's meetings.

Need of Fellowship

Effort should be made to discover the best ways and means by which a deep and satisfying fellowship can be developed through the Brotherhood meetings for the men of the church. It is pathetic to think how many of our Protestant men get most of their fellowship with men and their sense of brotherhood in organizations wholly outside of the church. We believe that the heart of Jesus Christ is grieved at the lack of emphasis in many of our churches on the fundamental importance of binding men together into a common fellowship as members of the body of Christ, and it is well to recall those solemn words of the Master: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

There is a regrettable tendency among American men, even in our men's organizations in the church, to be content with a feasting, fun-making program, with limited appreciation of the fact that the finer fellowships of life are developed in an atmosphere where men co-operate together for the performance of worth-while, unselfish, tasks for their fellow-men. Our programs, therefore, must include fellowship, instruction and inspiration, opportunity for self-expression, and definite plans for the enlistment of the men in the great objectives of the Kingdom of God.

Practical Programs

These programs must not deal too much in mere abstractions. Our American men are active beings in the business, social and political realms, and the program of the Christian Church must be presented to them in the language and by the method of practical, concrete application of the principles of Jesus to the world in which men live. Vague, glittering generalities will not appeal to the average American man, but programs dealing with the issues which confront men in their daily lives, which show the Christian Church in action, and which demonstrate to our men their place in this great world program, should be emphasized in our men's organizations. These programs should bring men face to face with God and with their individual and corporate responsibility to assume their part of the burden of promoting the Kingdom of God in all of the relationships of life.

Programs for men should not be too formal. A careful study of successful men's Bible classes in the South, as well as the Brotherhood Movement in England, reveals the fact that the meetings of these organizations are not cold and formal, but are characterized by a freedom, a friendliness and spontaneity, which seems to make a strong appeal to the average man. Without denying the place in the regular services that our programs for men's organizations must partake of a more informal character. Great wisdom will be required to so construct our programs for men as to make adequate provision for such fundamental features of worship, fellowship, instruction and service, without appearing to be too formal and mechanical in our approach.

These programs should be built around the needs of the average man. It is not safe to assume that a successful hardware merchant, the busy doctor, the leading lawyer or the progressive farmer is a found philosopher of the Aristotle type. Nor we assume that such men are necessarily possessors of expert knowledge and ability in the affairs of the Kingdom of God. The program of Jesus is enough to challenge the best in every man, whether he be rich or poor, whether he be highly educated or illiterate, whether he be superficial in his outlook or profound in his thinking.

Emphasize Fundamental Principles

These programs should deal with the fundamental principles and aspects of a man's Christian life. Personal testimony should be among the themes included in any constructive program for men's meetings.

These programs should confront men with civic and social responsibilities in the community in which they live. With this end in view, the program for our own Brotherhood meetings in September, October of the present year were "The Stewardship of Citizenship" and "Prohibition—A National Issue."

Work among boys constitutes a fruitful field of service for the men of the Church, and should, therefore, occupy a prominent place in our program for men's meetings and also in the service activities of our men's organizations.

Other forms of community service should be included in the programs of the men's organizations. Men should be led to see their unique opportunities to serve their fellowmen through the program of Brotherhood and the local Church to which they belong. The social service activities of too many testant laymen are performed wholly outside of the Church, and without detracting for one moment the spiritual mission of the Christian Church, we are profoundly convinced that our men's organizations must undertake a very definite and constructive program of service in every community which will minister to the bodily, intellectual and social needs of the people, as well as to their moral and spiritual fare.

Definite Information

These programs should provide definite information respecting the great movements of a man's denomination, and in our own Brotherhood Movement, have provided programs of such topics as the Seward Endowment Fund, the Christian Education Movement, the Work of the Board of Christian Missions, the other Boards of our Church, and similar phases of our Church Program.

Our plan has been to provide at least two programs during the year on the missionary operations of our church, for the months of January and February, which constitute the social period for missionary activity in our denomination. Our topics for the months of 1928 were "Christianizing the Home" and "Methodism in the Land of Confucius." For the months of January and February which lie just ahead, our topics are "Methodism and Mexicans in the United States" and "Methodism in Poland."

The ignorance of the average layman regarding the program of his Church is little less than appalling, and if we can acquaint our men with the sacred and helpful ministries of the Church in the life of the modern world through the Brotherhood program, we believe they will develop a new sense of interest in their church membership and will be more willing to invest of their time, talents and money in the promotion of such a program.

Christian stewardship should be given large emphasis in the building of our men's programs. Men should be led to realize that nothing less than the complete dedication of their lives, including their time, talents, business, profession, education and material possessions, is worthy of a professing Christian. Stewardship of all that we are and all that we possess should become the underlying principle and basis of our whole men's work in the Church. The practical phrases of this fundamental doctrine should be overlooked, and men should be taught the very practical and spiritual way of acknowledging God's ownership of the whole is by setting up a business-like, systematic way a definite program of their income for the support of the Kingdom of God, and that this minimum basis should be established in accordance with the prosperity which may be to the life of the individual Christian.

Evangelism should be dealt with in our Brotherhood programs, since we are convinced that the religious lives of countless scores of American Christians are being starved for lack of adequate expression in the forms of personal testimony and effective witness to a personal knowledge of Christ.

DR. WILLIAM F. WEIR AT COLUMBIA SEMINARY

One of the outstanding things in Men's Work the whole year will be the series of addresses by William F. Weir, General Director of Men's Work in the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., to the students of the Columbia Seminary, Atlanta, Georgia, March 11-13. So far as the writer knows this is the first series of addresses on Denominational Men's Work delivered by any Seminary group in this country.

No better man for the task could be found than Weir. He is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College and the Western Theological Seminary. He held large pastorates in Ashtabula, Ohio and W. Ohio. From 1906 to 1914 he was an active part just as other pastors were in the Men's Work, maintained in the pastorate. During that period he did considerable promotion including two state conventions. He became Chairman of the Synod of Ohio. He became Chairman of the Assembly's Committee in March 1914, and came its General Secretary in 1916. During the years, 1914-1916, there was no field worker and really in charge of all that was being done.

a leading figure in that realm of service with growth ever since. As a student of the principles of Christian work of modern church men, it has been recognized beyond his own denomination. Department Staff addresses annually 100,000 men in various conferences and conventions, seeking to inspire and inspire the modern church men with something of present day responsibility for the progress of the Kingdom of God through the Church. The educational program of Men's Work, so far as the total program of the denomination is concerned, is widely recognized. His addresses are the product of wide experience and accurate observation.

Weir's themes will be:
 "Whither the Church?" Setting men's minds about the progress of the Church.
 "Why Men Believe in the Church." The situation and grounds for belief that appeal to average men.
 "Religious Movements Among Men." History of religious movements.
 "Permanence determined by results." Organizational movements necessary.
 "The Ministries of the Church." Ministry essential to man welfare through the Church alone.
 "The Responsibility of Men for the Programme of the Church." Men's part vs. that of women, young people.
 "The Fellowship of Christian Men." Making the Men's organization organic. The discovery by men of their own interests in the Church.
 "Men's Organizations and Their Activities." A constructive yearly program of activities.
 "Program of Jesus For Men of Today." Awareness of His methods applicable to our situation.
 R. T. Gillespie, President of Columbia Seminary, extends a cordial invitation to all men and pastors to attend lectures. Those who can attend will be well re-

ARE THEY WILLING?

Egbert W. Smith

It is natural that our home people should want to be sure of the genuineness of the conversions in our field and of the depth and reality of the spiritual life of the native Christians. Our veteran and Korean missionary, Miss Mattie S. Tate, realizes the desire on the part of our home people and writes as follows:

"How might ask, are they willing to serve the Master though it brings them trials and suffering? Just ample.

When the writer was in charge of the Bible Class among country women she went to our farthest station to one of their Country Women's Bible Classes and home in February in plenty of time to get home to class under usual conditions. Mrs. Pak Yung was also out in the huts holding classes. When she came, she, knowing how far from home I was, came home to assist me in making certain plans for the before they came in. She walked about 30 miles in a cold north wind and rain. When she got home she was so wet they hesitated to take her in. She stayed and dried out over Sunday. Monday morning she started out and walked the rest of the way 6 miles in similar conditions and came in very wet again. On Tuesday or two later, when we had gotten the class in full, one of the students came to me recommending that I go and see Mrs. Pak in her room. I found what I thought a pneumonia case, breathing difficult and coughing. I had the doctor see her and he said the trip had been too hard for her and she had a badly leaking heart. He considered only the Master's business. She still has a leaking heart. But is still about her Master's business.

Could tell you of many more who are willing and give of what they are and have that their Saviour has provided. The women many of them sew from 1 to 2 hours daily to help in getting their knowledge of the Bible in this country where in former years it was a difficult thing to know how to read. Pray for them and us."

MONEY *

By Robert H. McCaslin, D.D.)

Money is potential power. It can wreck or make life; it can bring infinite sorrow or increasing joy; it can spill tears or smiles over life's long journey. It can make men cold, hard and selfish or it can give love, kindness and good will; it can narrow men's hearts or broaden men into benefactors. It is how it is used that determines its power to blight or bless.

Money has great purchasing power in the trade centers and market places of the world, and it likewise has great influence in the fields of far-reaching service for mankind in the wilderness of human ignorance. It can be a factory where men toil and die to become rich, or it can erect an institution to dispel human suffering and pain, where men can find peace and life. It can make men so selfish that the needs and woes of the poor and heartaches of little children arouse no sympathetic response, or it can be a messenger of hope to the twisted and bent lives of childhood doomed to a life of pain by sin and selfishness.

It can be hoarded until it becomes an incubus, or it can be used until it becomes an angel of mercy.

It can become a weight to bind man down, or it can be the wings to lift men up. It all depends upon the way we look at money.

With all its power there are things that money cannot do. With all its influences there are things that money cannot accomplish; with all its potential strength there are things that money cannot lift.

Money cannot buy happiness. It cannot ease the heart's ache for lost love. It cannot wield the influence comparable to that which goes out from the fireside. It cannot parallel the wealth of home.

Money cannot buy contentment. It cannot purchase anywhere in the marts of trade, peace and quiet of soul. It cannot still the throbs of heart pains. It cannot rain-bow life with the promise and gift of love. Money cannot purchase truth. Brave men, pioneers, explorers, have plunged into the wilderness and suffered in lonely and forsaken deserts seeking truth, and finding it, they have set it in the garner of the world whose wide open doors invite all men to come and take freely.

Money cannot purchase love. It has no value in the market of the heart. For love is a coin in a realm where sordid money has no power. It can never win the true love of the heart. It can never hold the gentle faith that cements into eternal union the deeper feelings and the richer graces and the higher qualities of the human heart.

But money can be used to bless mankind, even though it is no worthy goal within itself. Money can be used to lift human burdens from weary shoulders, even though it is no high aim for a great life in itself. Money does have power, and my plea is to think of money in the terms of its higher potentialities. Money can be a great blessing, and my desire is to set out the opportunities of money in the fields of service. Money can be used for lofty purposes, and I wish to encourage men to use it and not to hoard it; to make it a messenger of peace and kindness to men and not a club to wield as a threatening gesture.

Money can enrich the world with sweet charity; it can enlarge the heart of the giver as well as the one on whom it is bestowed. Wisely used, it can radiate sunshine in a thousand different directions. It can relieve distress, minister to human need, build refuges for the suffering, create bonds of sympathy, erect institutions of education—in short, become a philanthropic messenger of good will and service to a tired world hungering for an opportunity to live.

Thus used, it becomes a servant and not a master, a blessing and not a curse, useful and not baneful.

Thus used, the giver becomes a blessing to humanity, and the owner of money is not pitied for the shame of his selfishness.

Thus used, the man who holds money becomes a beacon light in the world and future generations will utter his name with praise and remember his service with prayerful gratitude.

THE COUNTRY WORK

Rev. G. A. Wilson, Jr., D.D., Marion, Va.

Having been born and reared in a country manse, having spent my ministry in the open country and in an agricultural town, and being interested in the country work near at hand and throughout my Presbytery, I feel that I am qualified to some extent to speak of the Country Church Work.

Sometimes we do not see the woods for the trees, and country preachers may well be so busy attending to their great job, or so busy perhaps trying to get called to a city church, that they lose sight of the real import of the country work. If any city pastor attaches relatively little importance to this vital task of the church, let him look over the roll of his membership and meditate upon the names of country people written thereon, or better still, let him cast an eye full of wholesome and Godly envy upon the strong Methodist and Baptist churches about him with their continuous streams of incoming country people. Instead of trickling rivulets mighty flood volumes of these streams should be turned into Presbyterian channels.

We would make a grave mistake in our thinking, however, were we to evaluate the country church solely or mainly as a feeder for the city church. If not a single member ever went from the country to the city church the country church as an end in itself would amply justify every effort that can possibly be made in its behalf. For in spite of the cityward trend, and in spite of the industrial revolution that is now beginning to strike its stride, most of the people in the South are to be found in the country today, and will be found there for many a day to come. It is the glory and the privilege and the duty of the Presbyterian Church to carry the Gospel to the masses. People are conveniently and spectacularly massed in our cities, but the masses of the people are scattered over the country districts. Therefore to the country we should go with the Presbyterian gospel of Jesus Christ.

The industrial revolution that is upon us tremendously intensifies the urgency of the country church problem. From the viewpoint of the industrial community itself, the people that are flocking to these new centers of population came in large numbers from the country. What an asset it would be to our mission work if they came Presbyterian ready made at the source whence they spring. In almost every Presbytery there is the problem of building up a church in some town where the Presbyterian constituency is small. If these people coming in from the country were already largely Presbyterian, the building of that church would almost take care of itself. But as with the old city, so with the new industrial church, the main emphasis must be placed on the country itself, even in this new industrial phase of the problem. Unless we are criminally blind and negligent, we must learn something from the bitter experience of other sections which have been industrialized at the terrific price of death and extinction of their old American country life. While gladly welcoming the new industrial era, we must preserve our pure and wholesome country life. This is a task that challenges the red blood and the consecrated brains of the Presbyterian Church.

The denomination that takes and holds the country today is the denomination of main strength and influence tomorrow. Perhaps, as well as our future power and usefulness as a denomination depends upon the committal of the whole church to an adequate program of country church development and conservation. We rejoice that the Assembly has taken a great forward step in the erection of the Country Church Department, and we are to be congratulated that Dr. McLaughlin is the Director of the Department. Dr. McLaughlin with his long and varied experience, his broad knowledge, his grasp of detail, his fine judgment and constructive imagination is the ideal man for the place. But the Assembly's department alone cannot solve, can merely touch the problem. The task is so great and so vital that every Synod, every Presbytery, and every strong congregation should have its own country church program.

Any adequate country program must make due provision for three essential elements. They are perfectly obvious and may be designated the preacher, the people, and the provender.

It has been repeatedly said, with truth, that the crux of the situation is the right sort of preacher to lead the country people in their community life. A special type of man, a strong man, an able man, a consecrated man. Equally important—the people. A preacher without a people can never have a church, and in the South we Presbyterians do not have the country people, but we can get them by adapting our policy to their needs. Outside of the two strong Presbyteries we have only isolated groups of country church members, and scattered nuclei of small and weak country churches. But the people are inviting us to come and take them. Let me tell of a concrete case to show what I mean. I could tell of a dozen such cases, but choose this because it is fresh in my own experience. Within recent months I have spent a week preaching in a country community, a fine rural community thickly settled with sturdy, substantial old Scotch-Irish and English Primitive Baptists. Thirty years ago Presbyterians were practically unknown there, fifty years ago a Presbyterian preacher could not have had a hearing. We now have a little church there whose founding is a romantic story I would like to have the time to tell you. For the week that I preached there, in spite of pouring rain, the church was well filled with fine young men and women, most of whom are children of Primitive Baptists. They do not belong to that church. They will go into the new evangelical church that really meets their needs. I haven't the slightest doubt that if we could place the right man there and if he would stay there ten years he would have by that time a great and glorious Presbyterian church, holding and purifying the country life of that whole community and sending out its steady quotas to the city and industrial churches. That situation can be duplicated in its essentials a thousand times in the country districts of our southland.

The Provender. We need not expect this work to be accomplished without material equipment; we cannot expect these small churches and undeveloped communities to equip themselves; and we have no right to blight the fine romanticism of our consecrated young preachers by allowing them to go to these fields without a salary that enables them to do justice to themselves and to the work. Our strength is in the cities and in a few strong country churches. A certain Baptist minister recently described the Presbyterian as an urban church. There is entirely too much truth in that description to suit me, and so much truth that our city churches must to a very large extent provide the provender if we are to perform the task.

The psychology of the situation demands immediate and urgent attention. Preachers able to do the work, churches able to provide the means must be brought to see it aright, and the people must be brought to look with favor upon the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. McLaughlin, with his usual fine judgment and his instinct for the key point of a problem, is addressing himself to these essential elements.

He spends about one-third of his time in the seminaries, where he lays the call before the young ministers of the church. His work is telling. There has been a noticeable change in the viewpoint of strong young preachers selecting their field of labor. A few years ago the best men in the seminaries did not as a rule consider the country fields. Now many of them do. How much of this is due to Dr. McLaughlin's work I cannot say—there are doubtless many contributing causes, but I do happen to know personally of two or three young ministers of the very first grade who are in virgin country fields and are there as a direct result of Dr. McLaughlin's work. One-third of his time is given to conference work over the church and the remainder to visiting and lecturing in churches. He is also contributing largely through his books and through personal counsel to the winning of people by pointing out the methods of work for the country. The fruits of his work will be increasing through the years if he is properly supported.

I appeal for support of the Assembly's Department and for an adequate whole church country program.

FOUR THOUSAND DOLLARS IN PRIZES FOR TWO BOOKS

Under the conditions of the John C. Green Income Fund the American Sunday School Union is seeking by the prize contest method to secure manuscripts for two books on popular religious themes. The subjects and conditions as set forth in their announcement are suggestive; and the generous prize offer for each successful manuscript should prove an inducement to writers. This announcement will be sent to anyone on request.

They offer a prize of $2,000 for a manuscript on "Religion in Education," and another prize of $2,000 for a manuscript on "The Heroic Appeal of Christianity to Young People."

CHILDREN

WHAT THE PRINCESS-DAUGHTER WANTED

Florence Kerigan

Once upon a time there lived a king in a splendid castle on the top of a hill. Now, this king had a daughter who was very beautiful, and every one loved her and wanted to do nice things for her. Every time she wished for anything, some one was sure to overhear the wish and see that it was fulfilled. It was almost like having a fairy grandmother right in the house!

But one day the princess-daughter wanted something that no one could get!

"I don't even know what she wants!" wailed the queen-mother.

"Nor I!" said the king-father. "Let us hear what the soothsayer can tell us."

The soothsayer was called in, and he listened to what the princess-daughter wanted.

"I want something that will make my heart sing," said princess-daughter. "I want something without a price which can not be bought, and yet which I would not exchange for a king's ransom."

The soothsayer stroked his whiskers thoughtfully. The king-father looked at the queen-mother, and none of them had the faintest idea what the princess-daughter wanted.

So the king-father issued a proclamation. In these days he would have advertised. But in those days they posted up big notices on the gateways and doors and posts and prominent places in the kingdom, and then people answered them at the castle.

When the notice appeared asking for something rare and wonderful for the princess-daughter, a number of people at once came to the castle bringing all kinds of queer things. I just wish you could have seen the things that some of them thought were priceless!

But the princess-daughter thought differently. She already had most of the things, and they didn't make her heart sing.

Now, it happened that away in one corner of the kingdom there lived a little boy with his grandmother in a little house. Little boy tended to the garden and kept ducks, and when he was not doing anything else he whittled wood with his jackknife.

A long time before, little boy had been driving his ducks along the road, and he saw a beautiful girl in a handsome coach. Some one told him that she was the princess-daughter, and right then the little boy decided that she was the loveliest person he had ever seen. He took his knife that very night and began to whittle on a nice, smooth stick. After awhile his grandmother could see that the stick was growing into a doll, but she couldn't imagine what little boy would want with a doll! And little boy didn't tell her. He just went on whittling.

After awhile the doll was done, and it was a very beautiful one. It was carved perfectly, and then polished with sand and stained with the juice of walnut-hulls until it was a lovely, shiny brown. Then little boy put on his best clothes and went to the castle.

The man at the castle gates stopped him, but he said he had something for the princess-daughter, so the man at the gate, who had been ordered to let any one through who had a gift for the princess-daughter, opened the gate, and little boy went right in. He went right to the room where the king-father and the queen-mother were playing checkers, and the princess-daughter was reading by the window.

The king-father looked up when little boy came in, and when he saw the parcel which little boy carried so carefully he smiled.

"You have come to try for the reward?" he asked.

"I didn't know about a reward," said little boy, shyly. "I brought this to the princess-daughter because I love her."

He held out the parcel, and the princess-daughter took it and opened it.

As soon as the princess-daughter saw the doll, her heart sang. "Where did you buy this?" she asked.

"I—I made it," said little boy. "I thought you might like it."

"Then, it has no price!" cried the princess-daughter, "and can not be bought; but it was made for me out of love, and so I would not exchange it for a king's ransom!"

FOR SUSIE FROM TED

(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

"Oh!" cries YELLOW-haired Susie May. "How lovely!"

"It's a birthday present for you, Susie May!" says BROWN-haired Teddy, handing Susie May three long BROWN wands of pussy-willows. The pussies are GRAY (use BLACK lightly) with BROWN caps.

Teddy wears a BLUE coat and he has his RED cap beneath his arm. His boots are BLACK, you can see the top of one and his glove is RED.

Susie May wears a light GREEN frock trimmed with PINK (use RED lightly) and the ribbon fastened to her left shoulder is PINK, also. Her beads are GREEN.

The curtains are white with a little BLUE band fastening the ruffles on. The window frame is BROWN and the sky BLUE. There is white snow on the ground. The window has a YELLOW lift handle.

Both children have PINK cheeks and RED lips. Susie May has PINK eyes and Teddy's are BROWN.

Paint the border of this picture RED and the lettering BLUE.

Susie May received many gifts for her birthday but she loved Ted best.

"He went out and picked them self!" says Susie May. "Because I knew I liked pussy-willows!"

"That is what you wanted!" cried the queen-mother.

"Why, of course!" cried the king-father.

"Not the doll!" said the queen-mother.

"Of course not!" cried the king-father.

"Just some one to make something for me because he wanted to!" said the princess-daughter, softly. "Something I hadn't asked for, or offered a reward for!"

"Why, of course!" they all said together. "Why didn't we think of that before?"

"Little boy," said the queen-mother, "bring your grandmother here and live at the castle with us. We love all our subjects!"

"Of course!" nodded the king-father.

"But we love those the most who do something for us out of love for us!"

"Of course!" nodded the king-father again.

"Of course!" echoed the princess-daughter. And so little boy and his grandmother came to live at the castle, because he was the only one of the king-father's subjects who made something for the love of the princess-daughter, and not for the reward!

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst the soul of our departed friend and co-worker, be it resolved:

First, That in the death of Mrs. Hannah Angeline Benfield, the community at large, the Mallard Creek Presbyterian Church, and the Ladies Auxiliary have lost a most valued member.

Second, That while her place in the Church and in our Society has been made vacant by the call to come up higher, yet we feel that it is better to dwell upon the good and useful works she daily performed as she walked in and out among us here, than to sorrow and grieve over her passing, for her life was filled with unselfish and loving deeds, carrying courage, hope, and good cheer.

Third, That her life was an example of piety and faithful attendance upon Church duties, especially strict observance of the Sabbath, devotion to husband and children, and kindness to neighbors and friends.

Fourth, That a copy of these be sent to her surviving husband and each of her children, a copy sent to the daily paper, and a copy spread on the minutes of our circle.

By the members of Circle No. 2 of Ladies Auxiliary of Mallard Creek Presbyterian Church.

IN MEMORY OF JESSE A. FETZER

Again the Reidsville Presbyterian Church is called upon to mourn the loss of one of its most faithful and consecrated officers—Jesse A. Fetzer—who passed away just at the dawn of Christmas Day, December 25, 1928.

This sad dispensation brings to each of us a feeling of deep sorrow as we realize that in the death of Mr. Fetzer we, as individuals, our Church, and the community at large have all lost a true and loyal friend, than whom no one in many years was greater beloved.

A man of the cleanest and purest character, of gentleness and tenderness in his relations with others, of lofty ideals and humility of spirit, he was indeed a noble example of the faithful follower of the "Lowly Nazarene."

Although a man of small means, every worthy cause met with his ready response, and noiselessly he wended his way through life, always glad to lend a helping hand and render a kindness to those in need.

His life's work was with the Southern Railway Company, where he was a faithful employee for over thirty years. He was more than once offered well-earned promotion, but his innate modesty and retiring disposition caused him to prefer the inconspicuous work in which he was engaged. But undoubtedly Mr. Fetzer's greatest love was for his Church, in which he had been an honored Elder for many years. It was more like home to him than anywhere else; not only did he enjoy its service, but he loved its very atmosphere, and when he was heart-sick and weary he would, all alone, seek the quietude of this Church building for rest and contentment, thus foreshadowing his entrance into that "rest that remaineth to the people of God."

We, the Session of the Reidsville Presbyterian Church, do therefore, Resolve:

That the above tribute to our departed friend and co-laborer be duly recorded in the minutes of this Church in appreciation of his exemplary life and dedicated to his memory.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF LOUISE BENNETT MURRAY

A year ago at our Annual Mission Meeting there was with us one whose presence is sadly missed today, a girlish form, a face sparkling with interest and sympathy, hands quick for any service. Last year she was with us, Louise Bennett Murray, the wife of E. C. Murray, Jr. And now she is in the presence of the King. Perhaps some of us thought then of those of long service here who might be the first called to the higher service above; and probably no one thought that she, the youngest of all, would be the one. But God knew best. The Master plucked the fairest flower. "He doeth all things well."

Radiantly she lived among us, a happy bride and faithful missionary; reverently she waited God's gift, her baby; joyously she welcomed the little son, Edward Bennett Murray, and then she quietly went away to be forever with the Lord.

Twenty-four years here. An endless life there. A joyous service here, and there such a service, such joy, such opportunities of which we cannot dream.

Mrs. Murray loved music as it is granted to few people to love it. It was not only a great avenue of self-expression to her, but through it she seemed to hold communion with spiritual forces. It is sometimes hard to imagine our loved ones whose voices have been stilled on earth as falling instantly into the activities of heaven, but since we know that music is certainly a part of our larger existence, it has never been hard to think of Louise there. We naturally think of her as a bright vision, finding first of all the presence of the Lord whom she had known lovingly through her short span of earthly life and then bursting with eager joy into that perfect harmony of sound which she had always seemed to seek here, but never perfectly to have apprehended.

In that home in Mexico, so bright with her presence, so rich in memories now, her husband carries on the work of the King whom she now sees face to face. In another home near to the one where she spent her early years is the little son. For a few brief days her arms had clasped him, her mother love encircled him.

And the young wife and mother is in the Heavenly home. "I want to be a missionary, I can be a missionary. I will be a missionary." So she wrote in her diary when she was fifteen.

She was truly one sent from God to all who knew her. We loved her, the beauty of her young eager soul; we loved her for the exquisite sensitiveness to beauty and to truth; we loved her playfulness and bubbling mirth, and happy laughter; we loved her quick response to any call for service, her warm sympathy, her cheerful readiness to help; we loved her careful, earnest way of wanting things well done; we loved her for her gift of music; we loved her because she was one sent from God to us.

We love her still now that she has gone from us to God. We know she still loves us, and though we feel her loss too poignantly for words we give thanks that we had her for our own a little while and we rejoice to believe that she has entered into that more abundant life which our Lord promised to all who love Him.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT TO THE MEMORY OF MR. F. J. KNOX

The Session of the Davidson College Church records with unfeigned sorrow the death of its highly esteemed and beloved member, F. J. Knox, which occurred at his home December 27, 1928. Mr. Knox was in his 82nd year.

Through a long period of time he had proved himself a loyal and devoted member of this church. Many years ago he transferred his membership to Davidson from the neighboring church of Bethel, of which he was a son and to the support of which he continued to contribute till the day of his death.

Mr. Knox was elected a deacon in 1885, he with the late S. C. Scofield being the first men elected to serve as deacons in the newly reorganized Davidson College Church. This office he filled most acceptably and efficiently till called to a higher one, the eldership, in 1896. He was appointed Clerk of the Session the following year, succeeding the late Dr. John J. Dupuy. In this capacity of Clerk he served with such fidelity and painstaking care that the minutes of the Session sent up to Presbytery from year to year were almost invariably marked "approved" without qualification or criticism of any kind.

Always an enthusiastic and close student of the Holy Scriptures, with which he became conversant to a rare degree, he taught in the Sabbath School through most of his long life. For a number of years he served as Superintendent and then resigning in favor of a younger man he continued to teach a Bible Class until the inroads of disease made it necessary for him to give up this work some months before his death.

Generous hearted and wise in counsel, Mr. Knox was helpful and sympathetic in his attention to all matters that came before the congregation or its officers for discussion and decision, yet doubtless he will be best remembered for his humble and unquestioning faith in his Bible, as the infallible word of God and for his many, many years in teaching this word to interested men and women who esteemed him for his fine qualities of both head and heart, and who always found him an engaging, informing and reverent interpreter of Holy Writ. His going hence leaves a void in pew and elders' bench that will long remain unfilled, but his blessed memory abides.

FRED A. HOUSTON

In the sudden death of Fred A. Houston, on January 15, 1929, Mount Vernon Springs Presbyterian Church lost one of her most valued and best loved members. He was taken at the age of forty-seven, in the prime of strong and vigorous life. He loved his Church, was marked in his loyalty to his pastor, was efficient as treasurer of the board of deacons, and being an earnest Bible student was the successful teacher of a large Bible class. He possessed a host of friends, by whom he was known as a man whose word was as good as his bond. He was glad to so invest his ample means, by lending, as to help those less fortunate financially. He leaves to mourn his loss a mother, Mrs. Margaret Houston, a wife, Mrs. Ila Houston, a son, Joseph, a brother, Houston A., two sisters, Mrs. Annie Sockwell and Miss Davie Houston. We feel that this useful servant has now been promoted by his Lord to a higher service.

MRS. EVA HARRIS POTTS

In the passing from earth of this esteemed woman and church worker, host of friends are saddened and the church sustains a great loss.

Her early life was that of consecration to her home and church. She was a charter member of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Banks Church. Faithfulness and devotion to duty were outstanding qualities, both of her nature and life work. Her attendance upon church was unusual. She gave liberally of her means to all the causes of the church.

Our church has lost the presence of a friend, but life has been made fuller because of her who while among us walked with God.

We, the members of Woman's Auxiliary of Banks Presbyterian Church desire to pay this tribute of love and appreciation to her memory.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father we feel heavily the loss and will ever cherish her memory.

2. That we are thankful for her beautiful Christian life and pray that we may be able to emulate her fine Christian Spirit and character upholding the standard of faithfulness, love and service that were hers.

3. That we extend to the family our tender sympathy in their sorrow and commend them to Him who alone can comfort.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the Presbyterian Standard and a copy be spread on our minutes.

MRS. JANIE GARRISON BASSETT

On the evening of January 4, 1929, Mrs. Janie Garrison Bassett, a beloved member of Central Steel Creek Church was called to her Heavenly home.

Since God has seen fit to call her, the Woman's Auxiliary would pay tribute to her memory by adopting these resolutions:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

2. That we are thankful to God for the inspiration of her happy devotion to duty, the example of her readiness to do any needful task, and the influence of her gracious personality upon the entire community.

3. That we extend our sincere sympathy to the loved ones whom she has left behind, and pray that God will encircle them in the arms of His love and comfort them.

WALTER CRAIG GUTHRIE

Walter Craig Guthrie was born at Waynesboro, Virginia, September 2, 1852, the son of John Gilkeson and Adeline (Paxton) Guthrie. He received his education at Washington and Lee University, and in 1873 embarked upon his chosen career of teaching at Union Church, Mississippi. After teaching for three years in Jefferson and Adams counties, Mississippi, he accepted a position at New Roe, Kentucky. He taught for four years in Kentucky, first at New Roe and then at Scottsville, and for three years at Pulaski, Tenn.

In the fall of 1883 he was called to become the principal of Chamberlain-Hunt Academy at Port Gibson, Mississippi, which position he filled with conspicuous success until his retirement in 1907. During this period many hundreds of young men were helped and guided by him, and he is affectionately remembered by them not only as an inspiring teacher, but also as a sympathetic friend and counsellor. Always patient and tactful, gifted with a rare understanding of boys and their problems, his success as a disciplinarian was remarkable. One of his former pupils wrote of him in an article in one of the church papers a short time ago—"I want to take this occasion to pay tribute to Chamberlain-Hunt's most famous president—Mr. W. C. Guthrie. He was a born ruler of boys, and thousands of boys today in our great Southland are indebted to him for his lectures on morals and principles, for inspiration, and for sane practical advice."

Soon after coming to Port Gibson, he was made an Elder in the Presbyterian Church. He served most faithfully and efficiently for a period of over forty years.

After his retirement from the teaching profession he was active in various business enterprises, served for some time as a member of the town council, and at the time of his death was vice-president of the Port Gibson Bank, a position he had held for many years.

In October, 1882, he married Miss Sally Lyle Gilkeson, of Augusta County, Virginia. She was called to her reward in February, 1897, leaving her husband and four little boys to mourn her loss. Three of these sons survive—David Vance Guthrie of the Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.; Frederick Preston Guthrie of Washington, D. C., and Edgar Paxton Guthrie of Port Gibson, Miss. The other son, Walter Craig, and a little daughter, Alice Lyle, died in childhood. In 1899 Mr. Guthrie married Miss Ruth Shreve, of Port Gibson. She also preceded him to the Heavenly home, in October, 1914, leaving two children, William Shreve Guthrie and Miss Gretchen Guthrie, both of Port Gibson, Miss.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call to his eternal home our friend and brother, W. C. Guthrie, for over forty years a ruling elder in this Church, be it resolved by the Session of the First Presbyterian Church of Port Gibson, Mississippi,

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of an all-wise God whose we are and whom we serve, as that He doeth all things well.

2. That we, the members of the Session, do hereby knowledge our loss with sorrow, and a deep sense of the ciation of his life of service as a friend, neighbor, worker in the Lord, and a faithful elder for many years.

3. That in the death of Mr. Guthrie, we realize that of one of God's noblemen, who as the head of Chamberlain-Hunt Academy for so many years, left an indelible in for good upon the lives of hundreds of young men; and "he being dead, yet speaketh."

4. That we extend to his family and relatives our sympathy, and commend them to Christ who alone can fort the sorrowing.

5. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Session, be published in the Church papers, and a be sent to the family.

Port Gibson, Miss.

SAMUEL LLOYD COPE

To R. W. and M. E. Cope was born forty-one years a son, Lloyd. This young man of sterling worth, a favorite among his associates, in youth as well as in hood. A child of the covenant, he grew into manhood became a member of Robinson Church. Early in life was stricken with a disease that made his sinews so that he was not able to use himself; so his last days spent sitting in a rolling chair. Those who knew I and those who were accustomed to visit him, expressed themselves by saying that he was an exceptional character. His friends, a few years ago, for his pleasure gave him a radio so that he might enjoy life as much as possible seeing that he was a "shut in" on account of a bodily infirmity. He was an intelligent and consistent Christian.

His patience was something wonderful, never complained his lot while in the flesh, always saying, when one asks him how he felt, he would say: "Fine." Amidst his suffering, he never murmured nor complained. His Christian spirit enabled him to bow in humble submission to the will of God. What a beautiful specimen of Christ! But on the twentieth of January, nineteen hundred and

MRS. CHARLES COPE

On the eleventh of April, eighteen hundred and ninety born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wallace, a daughter, Sathell. This daughter in early womanhood professed faith in Christ and obedience to him as all Christians. Later in life, she married Charles Hampton Cope. On eighteen of January, nineteen hundred and twenty nine left this tenement of clay to be numbered with the Rede after a few days of sickness. Her death was lamented by her friends, the hearts of her loved ones have been their spirits bruised and their minds still consider the loss of the occasion; but God called her home for a rest to which we cannot yet give the reason. To Mr. and Cope were born three boys and two girls; these five children and her husband, together with her parents, three sons and four brothers mourn her loss; yet cherish the hope seeing her in the General Assembly of the Redeemed. Her disposition was very gentle, and those who knew her visited in her home, felt that air of hospitality and gentleness, which made her home a place of joy and pleasure. She was a tender mother, a devoted daughter and a affectionate wife. Her remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of Robinson Church, of which she was a member, reared her children in the faith of which, she herself believed and hoped, being a woman of a strong mind and gracious position; these traits are characteristic of a Christian the world is made better by having such people to live. Her absence is loss to us; to her, is gain.

"Her children will rise up, and call her blessed, and husband also, for he praiseth her." J. C. M.

HUGH DE ARMOND HARKEY

In the Providence of God, on the fifteenth day of February, nineteen hundred and twenty-nine, the spirit of Hugh De Armond Harkey took its flight into the realms of the Redeemed. Harkey was born fifty-one years ago, and in early life he his heart and life to his Lord and became a member of Amity Presbyterian Church. On the twenty-fourth of December, nineteen hundred and seven, he married Myrtle Johnston. To this union were born four boys and two girls. Mr. Harkey, afterwards joined Robinson Church and became a very valuable member of that Church, made an elder, afterwards, the superintendent of the Sabbath School, which offices he served faithfully and efficiently was loved by all who know him. Being a good neighbor, a fine citizen, affectionate husband and a devoted father, a vacancy has shown up at this time, in congregation, which only God can fill; yet we must and pray for the will of God to lead us to the person will fill this breach, that has taken place so recently in our Church. Our hearts go out for those who are left to mourn his absence. May God in his tender mercies, comfort the hearts of his dear wife and children that are won on account of sorrow, and speak peace to their troubled minds and into their broken spirits, pour the oil of gladness and love, that they may rejoice and feel the nearer their Heavenly Father, who knows their grief; and can carry their sorrows and speak peace to their souls.

Father has gone to his Heavenly home—how many hearts are touched as many as knew him. Only a release this tenement of clay, to continue the life in Christ, he lived here, one with his God. It is good to know cherish the face of one so faithful in duty for his God for those who loved him and called him "papa."

MRS. MAUD CARSON CUMMING
Egbert W. Smith

The sudden home-going of this gifted and beloved young missionary brought me the pang of a personal bereavement. Her father was my friend and college classmate at Davidson. At his marriage to the beautiful daughter of Colonel A. C. McAlister, at Asheboro, North Carolina, I was present, my father performing the ceremony. Maud's brilliant career at the University of North Carolina I followed with affectionate and admiring interest. And it was through an address of mine at Winston-Salem, as she once told me, that the divine call came to her to be a missionary of the Lord Jesus.

Beautiful in person and in character, with a vigorous and thoroughly trained mind and a heart wholly devoted to the Saviour and to the extension of His Kingdom, what hopes we had for her of a long and preeminently fruitful mission- ary life! After four years of language study and successful leahship of our Soochow Girls' School, the China upheaval returned her to America where she was happily married a few months later to her fellow missionary, Rev. William C. Cumming. When the way was just opening for their return to their loved work in China, suddenly her earthly service ceased.

For the explanation of a providence so sore and heart- breaking we must wait till we stand on higher summits in a clearer light. Perhaps the Master had some greater work for her in the upper realm of His Kingdom, or perhaps, for some deeper reason as yet unknown to us, He longed to have her "with Me and I am, that she may behold My glory."

For the following sketch we are indebted to Rev. Dr. Lacy L. Little, her friend and fellow missionary:

"Maud Carson Cumming has gone out from us. She is not dead, but, with her Master, 'alive for evermore.' For the child of God there is no death; what we call 'death' is but a transition, a call to higher service. What we call 'life' is but the beginning of life—the school-room experience, from which we go forth to wider spheres of activity. Maud has received her diploma from heaven, having learned well and lovingly and patiently the lessons assigned by her great Head Master and won the degree 'Cum Maxima Laude.'"

"Possessed of a strong body, a brilliant mind and a loving, unselfish soul, she gave herself unreservedly to the good of all with whom she came in touch. Hearts were won of her and lives were brightened and cheered, wherever she went.

"Daughter of James Edward and Sarah McAlister Carson, of Charlotte, North Carolina, where Maud was born July 27, 1897, at an early age she displayed those unusual traits that marked her for a distinguished career. The city schools and Queens College of Charlotte provided for her a well rounded education. Later, she was graduated from the Uni- versity of North Carolina at the head of her class. Having consecrated her life to the service of God in the 'regions beyond,' a special course of training was taken at the Biblical Seminary, New York City.

"Mission work in Japan was the goal toward which she pressed with singleness of purpose and Christlike zeal. A vacancy in the principalship of the George C. Smith School for Girls, Soochow, China, created a direct appeal for her fine talents and, with characteristic unselfishness, she changed her plans to meet the demands of this needy situation.

"Sent out by the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, she arrived in Soochow in 1923, and devoted herself for two years to the study of the Chinese language. She was then made Lady Principal of the school for girls, filling this difficult position with efficiency and success until the Chinese revolution of 1927, when it became necessary for her to come away.

"Returning to the Homeland in July, 1927, she was married, in November, to Rev. William C. Cumming, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Henderson, North Carolina. Mr. Cumming was an evangelistic missionary at Kiangyin, China, who returned to the United States on account of the disturbed conditions in his field of service.

"Entering upon the duties of her new environment with untiring energy and resourcefulness, she quickly established for herself a place of wide usefulness, not only in her own church but, also, by delivering addresses on China in other places.

"As 'Mistress of the Manse,' inspirational leader of circles among the ladies of her own and other denominations, as sympathetic friend and counselor for all who came to her, she shed forth the light of her radiant personality on every side.

"How sorely this sinful, sorrow-stricken world needs the blessing and uplift of a life such as we have described! How staggered we are when the heavenly summons comes and the earthly career is closed.

"After weeks of constant attention from her physician, her spirit took its flight to the 'City Beautiful,' on the afternoon of January 19, 1929, leaving an infant son, to bless and com- fort the heart of her devoted husband.

"The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. S. John- son, D.D., and Rev. W. B. McIlwaine, Jr., at the First Pres- byterian Church, Charlotte, North Carolina, and the inter- ment was made in beautiful Elmwood Cemetery in the same city. A large concourse of friends gathered in token of the universal esteem and love in which she was held, while a lavish floral offering lent its fragrance and beauty.

"The memory of her life of loving service will ever be dear to those who knew and loved her. Its message to us has been well expressed:

'Ask God to give thee skill
In comfort's art,
That thou mayst consecrated be
And set apart
Unto a life of sympathy.
For heavy is the weight of ill
In every heart;
And comforters are needed much
Of Christlike touch.'

RESOLUTIONS FROM THE SESSION OF ROBINSON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On the morning of February 15, 1929, Hugh DeArmond Har- key, an efficient ruling elder and Sunday School superin- tendent of Robinson Presbyterian Church, his soul passed into the beyond, wherein rest the people of God.

Whereas, in His inscrutable wisdom, it has pleased Al- mighty God to remove from our midst, our beloved ruling elder, superintendent of Sunday School and citizen:

And, Whereas, at this time of loss and bereavement the Session of Robinson Church desires to put on record its appreciation of his life and worth in both church and neighbor- hood. Be it resolved:

1. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the loved ones, relatives and friends of our deceased ruling elder.
2. That as we meet from time to time, we will miss his smile, his fellowship, his gracious manner and his zeal for the cause of his Master's business laid upon us here below.
3. That copies of these resolutions be given to his family and loved ones, a copy be delivered to the Presbyterian Standard for publication, and a copy be spread on the pages of the Session book of Robinson Church for reference.

DAVID A. JOHNSTON

On February 22, 1929, the soul of David Johnston, took its flight into the realms of the Redeemed, wherein he now mingles with the spirits of just men, made perfect in the eternal adoration of the living God. On the 24th of February, 1929, his remains were lowered into their final resting place, awaiting the resurrection morning, in the cemetery at Rob- inson Church. Mr. Johnston lived to a ripe age, being eighty-six years of age. In early life, he accepted Christ as his personal redeemer and lived his religion until the end. He served in the Confederate Army. Married Miss Martha J. Blakney, of Chesterfield, South Carolina, who died three years ago. Mr. Johnston spent all of his days as a private citizen, caring only to adorn the profession of the gospel of his Redeemer, of which he was a great promoter.

He was made a charter elder in Robinson Church and held that position until death, with dignity, efficiency and grace, always speaking words of wisdom and love to those out of Christ.

To him and his consort were born five daughters and three sons, two daughters preceded him to the grave, three daugh- ters and three sons and five grandchildren survive him. Miss Essie, Miss Mabel, Mrs. Randolph Lemmond, his daugh- ters; D. Luke, Will and Sam, his sons. Testimonies of living men give words of their devotion to this man, who was pure in his living, pure in speech and pure in thought, all of which go to present to our consideration, that he was a fine citizen and above all, a Christian. Death has taken from our neighborhood, a devoted father, his footsteps were heard in the halls of the Church; he has borne at his chariot wheels, as a trophy a devout Christian, a neighbor and a child of God. His face in the flesh, we no longer see; but his name, his spirit will always be cherished by those who knew and loved him.

"Soldier of Christ! Well done!
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run, Rest in thy Saviour's joy."

"OH, HOW THEIR SOULS ARE THIRSTING"

Egbert W. Smith

We may measure our likeness to Christ, by the ten- derness of our compassions. It is a fact of immeasurable significance that, in our Lord's two greatest parables, one picturing what God is, the other what a true Chris- tian is, he shows us compassion as the impelling motive of each. "But while He was yet afar off, His father saw Him and was moved with compassion, and ran, and fell on His neck, and kissed Him." "And when He saw him, He was moved with compassion, and came to him, and bound up his wounds." I do not envy the disposi- tion of any one who can read the two following para- graphs from a recent letter of our beloved evangelist in Korea, Miss Willie Burnice Greene, without feeling his heart go out with tender sympathy to these under- privileged sisters of ours in far off Korea:

"During the past year, all throughout the territory where I travel, I have found the women ready and long- ing to be taught. The feature about the country work that has struck me so forcefully, is that these little groups of believers out in the country have no constant, or regular, feeding of their Souls; for so often the leader of the group is ignorant in spiritual truths, and in many cases, seemingly, even lacking in spiritual zeal. It is only wonderful grace of the Lord that holds these little ones faithful to their belief; and oh! how their souls are thirsting for the water from the 'Spring of Life.' During this year we have given out 90 New Testaments and 12 Old Testaments for the perfect recitations of the Child's and Shorter Catechisms to those of Kunsan Territory.

"A most interesting, but rather strenuous, trip of the spring itinerating, was a visit over to the Island of Peon. I would not have missed this trip for anything, for the few faithful believers (only 5 women) had had no one to teach them in years. It had been 5 years since I had visited the Island, and I believe even longer than that since Mr. Bull had made the trip over. All these years those few had faithfully met for worship in the home of the one baptised woman, a dear old soul. Here they would sing songs of worship together, read in the Bible, offer their prayers, and then take up their collec- tion. As a result of the class we held there, one or per- haps two of these women are planning to come to the ten days' Bible Class next March. I'm sure you will want to remember these women of the Island in your prayers. May God bless their efforts and give them great joy."

Working Through the Church

Suppose there were no organized churches, and that a group of people decided that they would like to go as missionaries to some foreign land, or up into the mountains, or into some isolated district. How would they get there? Unless they had money enough to pay their own way to where they wanted to go, and were sure that they could make enough to support them while they were preaching, they might perish by the roadside with nothing but missionary zeal to keep them going. But we do have organized churches, and a person of very moderate means can become a missionary. The church has provided schools to train volunteers, and to teach them what methods have proved most successful in presenting the Christian religion. And the church supports the missionaries who have gone out so that they can spend all their time teaching those who have no money to pay them for their services. The church builds hospitals to care for the sick both here at home and in other lands. There are innumerable things that Christians do thru the church. It is the instrument through which they work.

Ardent Christians

Dr. A. W. Beaven has said that there are three kinds of church members: those who pull, those who ride and those who ride and drag their feet. We wonder if these last two classes are Christians well as church members. Perhaps it would be well for such members to read what was written to one of the early churches—the church at Laodicea. "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot. So because thou art lukewarm and neither hot nor cold, I will spew thee out of my mouth. Because thou sayest, I am rich, and have gotten riches, and have need of nothing and knowest not that thou art the wretched one and miserable, and poor and blind and naked: I counsel thee to buy of me gold refined by fire, that thou mayest become rich; and white garments that thou mayest clothe thyself, and that the shame of thy nakedness be not made manifest; and eyesalve to anoint thine eyes, that thou mayest see. As many as I love I reprove and chasten: be zealous therefore and repent."

The church stands ready to help us—and thru the church we worship "him who loved us and gave himself for us."

Questions

1. How can we show that we are on the Lord's side?
2. Name some Bible characters who proved themselves to be on the Lord's side?
3. What things hinder us from being on the Lord's side?
4. What dragons must we fight?
5. What will help us fight our dragons?
6. Are we ever afraid or ashamed to let it be known that we are followers of Jesus?

The Hymn "Who Is On The Lord's Side?" was written by Frances Ridley Havergal. It is said she never tried to write a hymn, but on certain occasions words just came to her, and she wrote them down wherever she was. "Who Is On The Lord's Side," is said to be based on a verse in the Old Testament: "Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse." David had just been made king over a united Israel. He was gathering together his mighty men, for he wanted to know the ones on whom he could depend to serve and follow him. Thirty men of the tribes of Benjamin and Judah came up to the stronghold where David was, and David went out to meet them to make sure before he received them whether they came as friends or enemies. To his question the leader replied, "Thine are we, David, and on thy side." Perhaps as the author of the hymn read these words there flashed across her mind, not "Who is on the side of King David?" but the more important question, "Who is on the Lord's side, who will serve the greatest king of all? and so she wrote her hymn asking this question and ending each verse, with the response, "We are on the Lord's Side, Saviour, we are Thine."

(Divide the Juniors into four groups and have each group to sing a verse and let the whole group sing the response at the end of each verse. Change the order until each group has sung the entire hymn, always having the whole group to sing the words, "We are on the Lord's Side, Saviour, we are Thine.")

Poem: Which Side Are You On?

Come, children, and listen; I'll tell you in rhyme
A story of something that happened one time.
There was war in the land, and each brave heart beat high,

And many went forth for their country to die;
But words fail to tell of the fear and dismay
Which swept the small village of W—— one day,
When the enemy marched into the street,
And their own valiant soldiers were forced to retreat.
Such hiding, surrendering, and trembling with fear!
When what in the midst of it all should appear
But Grandmother Gregory, feeble and old,
Coming out from her cottage courageous and bold.
She faced the intruders who marched through the land, Shaking at them the poker she held in her hand
"How foolish!" her friends cried, provoked, it is true;
"Why, grandmother, what did you think you could do?"
"Not much," answered grandma; "but ere they were gone—
I wanted to show them which side I was on."
Now, children, I've told this queer story to you
To remind you of something the weakest can do
There is always a fight, 'twixt the right and the wrong,
And the heat of the battle is borne by the strong;
But no matter how small or unfit for the field,
Or how feeble or graceless the weapon you wield,
O fail not, until the last enemy's gone,
To stand up and show all which side you are on!

2. Making two special contributions (which are P. Y. P. L. Specials): College Gift Fund for Barium boy or girl in college; and the Mamie McElwee Scholarship Fund—which we hope to complete this year.

3. Support of three Assembly Specials: Medical Missions in China; The Blue Ridge Academy; and your Young People's Division.

Albermarle needs and wants company and competition this year in the Honor Roll honors. During the time between now and April, work especially on your Study Class (many of you have completed that already); and in connection with that make your contribution to the Medical Missions in China; then by all means let's help the Division which has published the Onward, The Program Builder, and the Junior Life as well as many other things for use in our work, namely the Young People's Division—watch the March issue of The Program Builder for a complete program for the Young People's Day.

May God bless your work for Him. May we be truly "Living Christ." May we be working for and looking for the best year in our new Church Year which will begin soon.

Yours in His Service, Archie Williford, President,

CHURCH NEWS

VIRGINIA

Westminster Church, Lynchburg—The month of February has been an unusually busy one in Westminster. Our Virginia School of Missions was put on the 6th through the 10th while the week of the 17th saw another enterprise carried out successfully.

The twelfth Standard Training School in Lynchburg with an enrollment of exactly 300 met this year in Westminster. The School started Sunday afternoon, the 17th, and ran through Friday night, the 22nd. The ladies in the church served supper, averaging 100 plates a night. Westminster's pastor, Robert Whitfield Miles, taught the class in the "Life of Christ." Twenty-six of our members were enrolled for credit.

Sinking Spring Church—On Sunday, February 10, a congregational meeting was held in this church at which time, Dr. P. S. Smith, brought in a report as chairman of the canvassing committee that sufficient funds had been raised to erect our long neglected Sunday School building. Erection of the building will begin at an early date. The new building will be built on the lot next to the church building and will be of brick and stone construction and will hold a Sunday School of six hundred. Provision is made for separate departmental auditoriums and classrooms for every department from the cradle to the adult. Rev. J. G. Patton, Jr., is pastor of the church.

WEST VIRGINIA

Martinsburg—The Young People's League of Winchester Presbytery had a wonderful meeting on February 14th in the Presbyterian Church here. There were over two hundred young people present between the ages of twelve and twenty-four. It is said to be the largest gathering of young people held in Winchester Presbytery in a long time.

The ladies of the Martinsburg Church served a delicious supper to the young people at six o'clock. The tables were most attractively decorated with Valentine favors. It was a beautiful sight to see such a crowd of young people seated at the tables, interested in the work of the Lord. The orchestra of the city furnished the music. Among the selections were a solo by Miss Harriet Seibert, a duet by Mrs. J. A. Robbins, and a duet by the Misses Harris. These selections contributed greatly to the success of the meeting.

Miss Frances McFaden, Chairman of the Young People's Work of the Woman's Auxiliary in Winchester Presbytery, presided in a very graceful and humorous manner. She was the master of the occasion from the beginning. Miss Matoaka Selig, President of the Young People's League of Winchester Presbytery, made a brief talk. It was largely through her ability as an organizer that such a large crowd was gotten together.

Rev. J. M. Carr, of Berryville, formerly one of the leaders in the Young People's Conference of North Carolina, gave an interesting address "Young People and the Young People's League." Rev. L. A. McMurray, a missionary from Africa, gave a brief talk which made a distinct impression.

Rev. S. R. Diehl, pastor of the church at Martinsburg, and Director of Religious Education in Winchester Presbytery, was the leading figure at the meeting. His address on "Young People and Religious Education" was most instructive and inspiring. The young people "ate it up."

The supreme purpose of the meeting was to promote the Massanetta Springs Intermediate Camp of the Young People's Conference. The Massanetta Springs songs composed by Dr. C. D. Gilkeson, who was present, were lustily sung by the large gathering of young people. It was a meeting which really boosted. Wm. E. Hudson, Manager of the Massanetta Springs conferences, was present. He gave an address on Massanetta Springs and showed the moving picture story of the Intermediate Camp, and some of the colored slides of the Massanetta Springs grounds and delegates. The young people were quite excited over seeing themselves in these pictures, and determined to attend the Camp next summer.

This meeting was pronounced by the leaders a big success as it enlisted the young people and helped them in a special way with the program of the church.

The meeting was closed with the singing of the Doxology and the benediction by Dr. C. D. Gilkeson.

FLORIDA

The Presbytery of Florida will convene in its regular spring meeting in the Presbyterian Church at Milton, Florida, on Tuesday, April 16, 1929, at 10 p. m. Daniel J. Currie, Stated Clerk.

DeFuniak Springs Church—The congregation of this church had a rich treat on the last Sabbath in January. At the Sunday School the Men's Bible class had an earnest talk from Mr. J. M. Allardice, of Antonio, Texas, on Personal Work. Mr. Allardice spoke again to the whole congregation at the 11 o'clock hour for public worship, giving his impression of the work and the needs of Christian Missions in Mexico. His careful investigation of the work in the needs in Mexico during two protracted visits to that country fitted him to speak with authority on the cause to which he is now giving himself, presenting it most forcibly here and there, and at his own expense. His splendid message is a blessing, as he is bringing to other churches the intelligent judgment of a mature and successful business man and is delivered with the confidence and enthusiasm of youth. He brought us a fortunate to hear him.

D. J. Currie, Pastor.

Lake City—Rev. William Evans, the well-known Bible teacher of Los Angeles, Calif., held a conference at the First Baptist Church here last week, in company with all the other churches united. Rev. Edward F. Montgomery is pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Lake City, which is the gate city for automobile travel through Florida.

Milton—The pastor announces Rev. J. T. Y. that a meeting will be held here beginning March 10 and that Rev. C. H. Nabors, D.D., pastor of the First Church, Pensacola, will do the preaching.

to play with him sometimes. "Where are you going in such a hurry?" Rupert asked.

Giovanni paused and gazed at him in surprise. "Haven't you heard?" he asked.

"I have heard nothing," Rupert answered eagerly. "What is the news?" "Why, the king has lost his royal emerald!"

"Yes, the king's emerald," Giovanni went on. "Yesterday he attended a wedding of the nobility and wore the emerald on the slender golden chain around his throat. In some way the emerald became loosened from the ring that holds it to the chain, and it must have dropped into the road. All the countryside is searching, for the king has offered a reward of ten pieces of gold to the one who finds it. Come, we must hurry."

"But I cannot go without asking Grandmother," Rupert faltered.

"Then I cannot wait. Join us later. Who knows but that you or I might be the one to find the emerald!"

Rupert's eyes sparkled as he hurried back to the cabin at the edge of the woods. How splendid it would be to find the precious gem and earn not only the reward of ten pieces of gold, but the gratitude of the king as well! His feet fairly flew over the ground.

But at the cabin disappointment awaited him. From within came the sound of soft groaning. "It is the misery in my bones," his Grandmother groaned as Rupert opened the door.

"Once again it has come upon me. I must stay in the house today."

Rupert almost groaned with her. "The king has lost his emerald, Grandmother," he said. "He offers a reward to the one that finds it. If I could go and help in the search perhaps I might find it, and then we could leave this hut with its dampness and buy a piece of high land up on the hillside."

His Grandmother shook her head. "What would the sheep do?" she asked. "Already they are restless in the pen. You must take them into the fields to feed on the green grass, and do not forget to take them to water when the sun shines high in the heavens."

Very slowly Rupert drove the sheep from the pen and into the wood and very listlessly he walked after them. If only he could have helped in the search for the emerald! "Other boys have their chances, but I never do," he said sadly. "There is always something that I must do—the sheep to herd or the sticks to gather for the fire or the weeds to pull from the garden patch."

But sad and disappointed as he felt, he was gentle with the stupid sheep, and when the sun was high in the heavens he drove them toward the brook that flowed through the wood.

Rupert sat down on a large stone by the stream. "If I could only have had a chance to look for the king's emerald!"

Turning his head he gazed down into the sandy bottom of the brook. Suddenly he started and stared into the water. What was it—it couldn't be! He leaped suddenly into the water.

His gripping fingers held something—something that was green with delicate threads of yellow, slender strands of gold woven into a crest.

"The king's emerald!" shouted Rupert. "It must have been flung from the chain when the king was crossing the bridge on the highway and the water washed it here! I have found the king's emerald. I would never have had a chance to find the emerald if I had not been following my duty!"

With shining eyes, the king's emerald clutched in his hand, he drove his homeward.—Dew Drops.

HOW LINCOLN HELPED A LITTLE GIRL SAVE HER MISSIONARY MONEY

Once upon a time there lived a little girl in a little town in New York.

She lived with her father and mother and her brothers in a respectable, homey home, where she liked to come. One of the guests who liked to come was the great Abraham Lincoln, President of the States. The little girl was very happy when he came, and she used to like to sit in his lap and talk to him. She called him "Uncle Abe" and he often called her "Sissy," but her real name was Julia.

One time when the President was visiting at Julia's house she was counting the money in her missionary box. Mr. Lincoln watched her moment and then asked:

"What are you doing over there, Sissy?"

"I'm counting my missionary money, Uncle Abe," replied Julia.

Mr. Lincoln put his hand in his pocket and pulled out something which he held toward Julia. Julia drew her box.

"Oh, no, I can't take that, Uncle Abe," she said, earnestly; "I have earned all the money I put in this box."

The next day, when he was ready to start for the train, he said to Julia: "I wonder if you couldn't walk to the depot with me, Julia?"

As they started down the street together, Abraham Lincoln shifted the valise to the other hand. It was an old-fashioned valise with two handles.

"Do you suppose," he said, "that could help me carry my valise, Julia?"

Julia took hold of one of the handles, and they carried it between all the way to the depot, talking as they went. At the depot the President took the valise and pulled a shining coin out of his pocket, held it out to the little girl.

"There, Julia," he said, "now you have earned your missionary money."

"Oh, thank you, Uncle Abe!"

And then he went away on the train, and Julia ran home with the shining coin clutched tight in her hand. She thought it was the very brightest penny she had ever seen, and she tried to put it into the missionary box, where it would be safe and sound.

The next Sabbath the missionary boxes were opened.

"How much money did you have in your missionary box, Julia?" asked the superintendent.

"Eighty-two cents," answered the little girl, without any hesitation.

"Are you sure that was all you had?" asked the superintendent. "Where did this come from?" she asked, and she saw the bright shining coin that the President had given her.

"Oh, that's the money Uncle Abe gave me!" she answered eagerly. "I earned it helping him carry his valise."

The shining coin was a five-cent gold piece, and this is a true story. How Abraham Lincoln helped a little girl to earn her missionary money. I know that it is true because I told the girl, who is a little girl no longer, the story herself. Nicholas.

JOEL'S HARP

It was in the days of the great King David. This beloved king had saved his people from the fierce Goliath, who had held them in bondage for many years. He had also, captured from the Jebusites the strong fort, the city of Jebus, sat on its two hills, lifted by steep or rock from the plain, and surrounded by deep ravines, except on the one side where there was a mighty wall of stonework. This city David's men of battle under General Joab stormed, by climbing its steep southern precipice, and coming to the citadel unexpectedly.

Then David had taken the city, his royal dwelling place, and he came to Jerusalem. "Hither the tribes of Israel went up," to pledge allegiance to the greatest king perhaps the world has ever known. He was the shepherd boy, whom God had anointed over Israel years before the time he had called from tending his father's flocks to slay the mighty giant Philistine, to be a friend of a king, and of the king who afterwards saved his life, and at long last, after fleeing and hiding and hiding again, with more and more

The BEAUTIFUL ROSE WINDOW of NOTRE DAME

A Masterpiece of Permanent Beauty and Color

THE Famous Rose Window of the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris is a work of infinite beauty and splendor. It is perhaps the masterpiece of all art glass windows. Built in the Thirteenth Century, it stands today unsurpassed in beauty and excellence of workmanship. The color of gorgeous gems and precious stones are wrought into this magnificent spectacle for the admiration of passing thousands through all the years. If a world-wide search were made for a monumental material approaching the beauty of the assembled colors of the famous Rose Window, such material would be found in

It is found, also, that the beautiful colors of Winnsboro Granite come from the various crystals it contains, which are identical in substance to many of the finest of precious stones and jewels of the order of the amethyst and moonstone. When the surface of this granite,—which is a composite of these actual precious stone crystals,—is highly polished, all the beauty and color of these jewels become visible. Could a more beautiful monumental stone be found anywhere than this?

Winnsboro Granite is most lasting because it is composed of the most durable mineral known. It is superbly beautiful because it is made up of the substance of precious stones and gems. Inscriptions on it are clearly legible because of the marked contrast between cut and polished surfaces.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty, because they contain more deleterious elements, such as water, lime and iron. These elements tend to disintegration and discoloration.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsboro Granite.

The certificate of the quarries is signed by B. H. Heyward, Treas., and General Manager, whose signature insures genuine Winnsboro Granite. A facsimile of this signature is reproduced below.

clans of Israel gathering to his standard, to be king over a great loyal, united empire.

But King David loved the Lord his God. And the Ark of the Lord had been carried away by the Philistines, and never restored to its proper place.
It stayed in the house of Obed-Edom for three months, and brought him a rich blessing. But now that David had a royal city, he knew there should be a place in the heart of it for the worship of God. So he determined to bring the Ark home.

It was to be the greatest celebration in the history of the Children of Israel.
David had his most skillful workmen to make a sumptuous tent on Mt. Zion, one of the twin hills, a beautiful tent, with gorgeous curtains, to house the most precious thing they had. And there he was to bring the Ark—that sacred gold-covered chest, in which were Aaron's rod and the pot of manna, to remind the people of their forty years' journeying in the great, desolate wilderness, and the two tables of stone with the Ten Commandments on them, which God had given Moses.
And over the Ark were the two golden cherubim, with their great beautiful wings hovering the spot where the glory of God rested in a cloud always.
And this sacred Ark must never be touched by the hand of man, must be covered with thick robes of blue when brought from one place to another, must be carried by long rods or staves run through rings in its sides, and only on the shoulders of the Levites, the tribe set apart for the service of God.

Little Joel of Bethlehem sat in the doorway of his father's cottage on the evening before the great day, practicing on his loved harp. For had he not been chosen to head the boy orchestra from the native town of the King, when the great procession should sweep up the hill to enter the gates of the City of God? His heart was full of joy. For Joel loved to play the harp. And he often thought of the days his mother told him about, when King David himself sat on the same hillside where Joel tended his father's sheep, and played a harp just like Joel's, and made the songs his people loved so much.

"Mother," Joel called into the dim room behind him, where his mother was sewing his new red robe by the failing light of the sunset.

"I am here, my son," answered his mother's sweet voice.

"I have invited little Amos, the lantern-maker's son, to play in the orchestra. He has a small harp, not so good as mine, but 'twill do." Joel spoke proudly, as a boy of twelve may speak of one of seven years.

"That is good, my son," answered his mother. "Now play once more that ancient hymn the King requires for tomorrow, 'Arise, O Lord, into Thy rest, Thou and the Ark of Thy strength.' There was one false note, when last you practiced it." So Joel practiced on faithfully, his eyes shining. For his, he thought, was a very important part in the next day's celebration. The great men of the land were to be in that procession—nearly a thousand of the most eminent priests and Levites, with the flower of King David's army, his famous captains in all their shining armor, and thousands and thousands of rejoicing people would move forward behind the Ark, as soon as they heard the sound of the loud trumpets. As they moved, bands of singers, and players on trumpets, cymbals, great harps and small harps, clarions, castanets and tambourines, would accompany the procession, singing the songs of Zion, and playing their very best, as they circled about in slow religious dances beside the marching throngs. And in the little Bethlehem Band of boys would be Joel, as their leader, and tiny Amos, the least of them all, whom Joel had asked out of kindness.

Joel and his mother talked of all this joy and grandeur, and very softly of that Ark of the Covenant so deeply reverenced. She reminded him, too, that the duty of a leader was first to look out for the others under his charge.

The great day dawned, and Joel was up before the sun. He hurried through his morning work of feeding the hens and the little donkey in the court yard; his mother gave him breakfast and her blessing, telling him she would surely watch for him in the procession; and washing himself with greater care than ever before in his life, he put on his new sandals of straw, and his beautiful red robe, tied his striped sash, and wound his new white turban about his head, and stepped forth into the first sunshine, his little harp clasped tightly in his arms. With a ringing call and a shrill whistle he summoned his village orchestra. There they came, running out of dim doorways, up the cobble street, little Amos the first and most eager of them all.

"See, Joel! See my harp!" he cried.
"Father polished it." And indeed his tiny harp shone like a jewel as he turned it about in the sunshine, then tucked it safely under his arm.

Joel motioned them all into place behind him, and marched them off. For they were to walk all the way. But the distance, of about six miles, was nothing to the sturdy legs of the Judean lads, and nothing indeed compared with the two hundred and fifty miles some pilgrims would have walked to reach the Holy City for this great day. They would come from Dan and from Beersheba, the ends of King David's realm, and all the towns and villages in between.

"Boys, they say our king himself has written a new song. Yes, of course he writes new ones all the time. But this is a very, very wonderful song, which we must sing by parts, following the choirs of the Priests and Levites. Never let me hear a voice out of tune, mind me!"

"No, Joel," they all wagged their heads solemnly in their brave new turbans.

"And mind you strike up with your harps and trumps and cymbals only when I do, and in perfect time. Amos did you practice some more on that old Hymn of the Wilderness. 'Let God arise, and let His enemies be scattered?' Little Amos assured his leader that he had practiced it till he was perfect, and almost worn-out, too. So they talked and trudged along, stopping only once in a while to investigate some fascinating cave of the hillside, perhaps one in which their King had once hidden.

And presently others joined them on the Bethlehem road, that same road which, many centuries later, was to see three great men swinging along on their beautiful camels, looking for Him who was "born King of the Jews."
Men, women and children, they poured out of the little country roads upon the highway, with their knapsacks filled with lunch for the midday meal, and their water skins with water. But after the great procession King David would distribute meat and bread and wine for the thousands of worshippers, and there would be a great feast at supper time.

Now the sound of music was borne faintly on the breeze, and the steps of all the pilgrims quickened. A runner sped past, calling out, "They have passed the village of Beth-car, they are coming up the valley, they are almost there!" He meant the Ark, and those who were bringing it, from the house of Obed-Edom.

At last the travellers on the Bethlehem Road, coming along the Valley of Rephaim, passed the southern end of the City, and climbing higher and higher, could see the great procession of the Ark winding up from the west along the road from Kirjath.

There in the front they could see the sacred Ark, closely covered with its blue curtains, slowly borne along the rods resting on the shoulders of chosen Levites. The two High Priests followed, in their gorgeous robes of scarlet and blue and gold, with the jewels blazing on their breast-plates; behind them came long ranks of priests and Levites in spotless white; then the great captains of the army in their splendid armor; next the heads of the priestly houses, and the noble princes of the tribes and their attendants; then long companies of their tribesmen; and all were accompanied by the bands of musicians and singers.

Suddenly there burst out the long-drawn peal of the trumpets. Like a great shout of victory it echoed among the hills that ringed the city. Then the choirs of the white-robed Levites began to sing one of the ancient hymns of Zion, and the thousands of people shouted with a mighty sound.
And from all the roads the pilgrims poured in to join that great procession, among them the Bethlehem Band with Joel at its head. On, on to the city which was to surrender this day to its God, and open its gates to receive the Ark of the Covenant.

Presently there was a halt, and a great silence.

"The King!" exclaimed Joel, in a low voice trembling with excitement.

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy.
It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc show they need a good purging.
The mark of genuine Castoria is the

And there, not far in front of them, beside the road stood their beloved King, not in royal purple now, but in the snow white linen robe of a priest. And he was sacrificing at an altar. The procession had stopped that the King might worship God for all his people. And while all the throng stood with bowed heads silent, at prayer, Joel remembered his mother's words:

"It is a great day, to be forever remembered, not for its magnificence, but because of the loving kindness of our God."

Then, as the King gave the signal to move on again, he took up something in his hand which he held before him.

"Joel, he has his harp!" cried little Amos. "He's playing his harp!" And that was indeed what the king carried—his own harp which had kept him company on the hills of Bethlehem, and with which he had soothed the mad King, Saul, before he had been chased from the palace, a fugitive. The King himself was among the musicians! And when the music struck up again the Bethlehem Band played more proudly. Little Amos did his very best, Joel and the other harpists twanged away nobly, and the rest beat and blew with all their might. The King, walking first with one band of musicians then with another, had stopped a little beyond the boys, was waiting in the road, his head up, his great dark eyes brilliant, his lips moving to the words of the thrilling songs his people sang.

Little Amos playing and gazing at his King, did not see the stones in the road. He was walking, also, perilously close to the edge, and here the road was very high and the hill very steep. Singing his loudest in his piping voice, "Arise, O Lord, into Thy rest," suddenly he stumbled. Daniel, the boy nearest him, tried to catch him, but was too late. Amos had fallen over the edge of the precipice.

Then there was confusion indeed. The Bethlehem Band stopped playing and singing, and all of them crowded to the road's edge. They could hear the little boy crying piteously, and there he was, just below them. God be thanked! He was caught by a bush, and was not killed. He was scarcely hurt.

"There! There, little Amos!" Joel crept down to him, caught him, drew him safely up again. He talked to him and tried to comfort him, for Amos still wept. And Joel felt like an unfaithful shepherd who had let one of his lambs get hurt. His mother would have said he should not have been gaping so at the King, himself, the boy thought remorsefully, as Amos wept broken-heartedly.

"Oh, Joel, my harp! My harp!" So that was it. The dear harp was gone. It had fallen from the little boy's grasp and rolled down, down into the valley below. How should they get it now? There was no time to climb away down there to search, and back, if they were to take part at all in the celebration. Joel thought hard. It was his fault, he told himself. Anyhow, his mother would expect him to be unselfish. But how could he go look for it, when he must lead the band?

"Here, Amos." Suddenly he thrust his own beloved harp into the little boy's hands. "You can play mine. We shall come back and look for yours afterwards. We'll find it for you. Play mine, now, and don't cry." Amos wiped his eyes, and gasped with astonishment and delight. He grasped Joel's harp, which seemed so big to him, and as the music struck up again he twanged away awkwardly, with all his eyes now on his job of watching the road and taking care of Joel's harp. But little Amos was quite too small to understand just how much his young leader had given up. And Joel, with a smile that tried to be brave, took his place again at the head of his band, waving his empty hands to keep them all in time, and singing with the throng, "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever." But two big tears rolled down his cheeks, and his lips trembled in spite of himself. For his King was playing a harp, and Joel had none to play.

While he was doing his best to "be glad in the Lord," without the help of his harp, and little Amos was bravely marching behind him with the strap of that same harp hung around his neck, suddenly Joel heard a deep, thrilling voice close to him.

"Stop a moment, my son. Who art thou?" Joel looked up startled, to behold the king himself in his pure white linen robe standing beside him, looking down with a smile in his great shining eyes. Instantly Joel fell to his knees in the dust, and touched his forehead to the King's sandals.

"Thy servant, Joel, my lord King, son of thy servant Araunah, of Bethlehem."

"Ah, of Bethlehem, eh? Bethlehem-Ephratah, little among the princes of Judah, but oh! how dear!" said the King softly. For that was David's own childhood home.

"And where is thy harp, my son?" asked the King, searching Joel's face. Now, how did the king know? Joel looked down; he hated to tell his sovereign of his carelessness in not watching over little Amos.

But little Amos himself now stepped up timidly, and bowed his new turban low before the King. Then he held out the precious harp of his friend, and began stammeringly telling of his mishap.

But King David had seen it all. There was no need to tell him. One of his hands rested on little Amos's head, the other on Joel's, for a moment, and he smiled a very kind smile. Then, before Joel knew what was happening, the King turned to one of his attendants, took something from him and put it into Joel's empty hands.

"Here, my son, play mine. March beside thy King, and play his harp. For thou hast done a gentle deed, and made my heart glad."

Joel bowed very low, his face flushed like a peony, and tried to thank his King. Then, reverently he lifted the King's harp and placed it against his breast, while one of the soldiers shortened the strap to hold it in place. Waiting for the beat of the music, the little boy struck bravely into the closing measures of the hymn they were singing, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, forever and forever. Amen."

"Nobly done, lad," exclaimed the King. "Thou shalt some day play and sing for me in the palace." And Joel's heart beat like one of the priests' great drums.

And now the head of the long procession, where the Ark marched hung from the shoulders of the white-robed Levites, had almost reached the city gates.

"Ye lads of Bethlehem," said the king hastily, "follow me." And in

YEARS PRACTICE

Physician watched the results of medicine for 47 years, and believed that matter how careful people are of health, diet and exercise, constipation occur from time to time. Of importance, then, is how to treat it comes. Dr. Caldwell always favored of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup is a mild vegetable compound. It does not harm the system and is not purgative. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant and youngsters love it. Dr. Caldwell did not approve of cathartics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he has never seen any reason for their use when Pepsin will empty the bowels just as naturally.

Let a day go by without a movement. Do not sit and hope for the nearest druggist and get the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, in a sealed bottle.

the vast silence that now fell, King David stepped up to an elevated bank above the road, and all the people fell away to give him place. For here his throne was set. Following closely after him came his little village boys, awe-stricken at this honor. And standing behind the throne, on the little knoll, they saw the great spectacle spread before them—the long, glorious procession dazzling in the sunshine, with white robes and gorgeous colors and shining armor. And the sacred blue-covered Ark was the heart of it all, and drew all eyes. There it stood waiting before the massive city gates, which were to open to let it pass in. The City of David was to surrender to David's God, Jehovah of Hosts.

Now it was time for the new song the King had made, to be sung at this triumphant moment. There came a blast from the priests' trumpets, which echoed and re-echoed about the Holy City; and this was answered by a blare of other trumpets from within the closed gates.

"The Keepers of the Wall! Look!" cried Daniel to Joel, in great excitement. And there on the walls above them were those who were to surrender the city to its God. Then the music struck up a great and noble strain, and the choirs of the priests and Levites without the gates began the new song. Thus it went:

Priests: "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein."

Levites: "For He hath founded it upon the floods."

Priests (softly): "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in His holy place?"

And the Levites answered, with a sweet, triumphant burst of song: "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully."

Then both together, in full-throated chorus: "He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation."

A few slow steps the procession moved, nearer to the gate, and all the crowd of men and women and little children, with the great choirs to lead them, sang, "This is the generation of them that seek Him, that seek Thy face, O God of Jacob." The voices ceased, the music died away softly and stopped for a moment; when quickly there burst out a challenge from the choirs of priests and Levites with the Ark outside the gates:

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates,
 And be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors;
 And the King of glory shall come in."

And the warders upon the walls answered in chorus:

"Who is this King of glory?"
 "The Lord strong and mighty," sang the priests.
 "The Lord, mighty in battle," sang the Levites.
 "Lift up your heads, O ye gates," they shouted once more together,
 Even lift them up, ye everlasting doors;
 And the King of glory shall come in."

Again the warders on the walls inquired, as the company of other waiting priests inside the city marched down and laid their hands upon the great iron gates to open them:
 "Who is this King of glory?"

Then at last all the great throng of Priests, of Levites, of princes and captains and people from all the land, shouted the answer in a vast tumultuous shout of victory. And the King shouted, where he stood on the knoll before his throne all surrounded by his courtiers and attendants, and the little Bethlehem Band gathered at his feet shouted, and all the trumpets and clarinets pealed it out, and the cymbals crashed, and the harps and psalteries struck throbbing chords, and the tambourines and castanets rattled, till the very hills around the Holy City trembled with the sound:
 "The Lord—the Lord of Hosts—He is the King of glory!"

And the great iron gates swung open wide. And in they bore the Ark of the Covenant, up, up to its place on Mt. Zion, the dwelling place of great David's greater King. And singing and playing with all their hearts, the Bethlehem Band followed, with Joel at its head.

Life carefully planned

ASK any of the boys who've made good and they'll tell you it didn't just happen by a lucky break. Their success was the result of careful planning. Hard work. Night school, perhaps. And above all, always attending strictly to this important matter of health.

"I had no time for outdoor exercise," is the story you'll hear. "I couldn't afford one of those gymnasium courses. But I figured I could keep myself in good shape by taking Nujol. I've taken it ever since. And it's helped as much as anything to keep me fit and on the job every day."

There's no easier way to keep in first rate condition than by taking Nujol. Nujol is not a medicine. It's just a pure, natural substance that helps your system to function as Nature meant it to under all conditions. Normally. Regularly. Easily.

It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them), but aids in their removal. Nujol can't possibly upset or disagree with you, because it contains absolutely no medicine or drugs. It is simply a pure natural substance. Perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 26 Broadway, New York.

Start Nujol today. Give it a fair try—for the next three months, anyway. By the end of that time—even before then perhaps—see if you don't feel much more all 'round fit.

You can buy Nujol at all drugstores for a small sum. Worth trying, isn't it? Nujol is sold in sealed packages only. Stop and buy a bottle on your way home tonight.

Presbyterian College Has Library Addition

Presbyterian College Receives Many Volumes Relating to South Carolina History

Dr. E. A. Smythe of Flat Rock, N. C., has donated his highly prized library of South Carolina literature to the Presbyterian College of South Carolina, at Clinton. President Smythe made this announcement to the student body last Tuesday, and Professor F. Dudley Jones, largely through whose influence it was secured, made a few comments on its value to the college. He says that it is one of the finest in existence relating to South Carolina history. The collection is more than fortunate in having its contents comprize many volumes of valuable histories, manuscripts and engravings, which the owners have been carefully assembling for the past 40 years. It is a magnificent part of a generous and thoughtful friend.

An interesting announcement of the fact was that Dr. S. C. Hayes, well-known physician and surgeon of this city would head the biology department for the next session. He will be succeeded by Dr. W. E. Hoy, Jr., who goes to the University of South Carolina to head the department there. Dr. Hoy is a graduate of Presbyterian College and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, New York. Later he served one year at the New York Nursery and Hospital, two with the Bellefontaine Hospital, six months with St. Plomew's. With his preparation completed, he returned here, his name being Dr. W. E. Hoy, Jr. He has successfully operated Dr. Hayes' hospital, a privately-owned institution. Last week Dr. Hoy was away on leave, and Dr. Hayes took care of the department and managed it in a satisfactory manner. Although his stay will extend only one year, the college is fortunate to have him.

Ralph Connor At Salisbury

Author of "The Sky Pilot" and Other Books Visits First Church

The First Presbyterian Church, Salisbury, N. C., felt greatly honored March 3 in having as guest and speaker Rev. Chas. W. Gordon, D.D., of Winnipeg, Canada.

Rev. Gordon, who is better known as "Ralph Connor" to the many thousands who have learned to love his stories, is the son of a Scotch Presbyterian Minister, who came to Canada nearly forty years ago. He was graduated from the University of Toronto and received his Theology at Knox College, Toronto. Being ordained to the Presbyterian ministry he went as a missionary to the miners and lumbermen in the Canadian Northwest territories, afterwards securing the help of Presbyterian Churches in Great Britain in the furtherance of Canadian Missions. He became pastor of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of Winnipeg.

Among Dr. Gordon's best known and most loved books published under the pen-name of "Ralph Connor" are "The Sky Pilot," "Black Rock," "The Man of the Mountain," "The Man of the Valley," "The Doctor," "The Spotted," and "The Sky Pilot in the Man's Land."

Hampden-Sydney Offered $100,000

Challenge of General Education Board to be Met by Alumni

The General Education Board has offered Hampden-Sydney College $100,000 for endowment, provided that the college raises $225,000 before July 1 of this year. This was announced Saturday, March 2, by J. Scott Parrish, at a luncheon in Richmond of representative alumni from all parts of the state. Mr. Parrish is chairman of the Executive Committee engaged in raising $1,000,000 for expansion and endowment of Hampden-Sydney.

Robert K. Brock, of Farmville, chairman of the Alumni Association, presided and welcomed the visitors.

Dr. J. D. Eggleston gave an account of the progress of the college since he became president in 1919. "Enrollment then was 80, this session it is 260." Dr. Eggleston referred to building improvements made in recent years and said the college was now out of debt for almost the first time in its 153 years of continuous service. He mentioned that in the last 50 years the college had made no appeal for help either from the general public or from the alumni as a group.

Mr. Parrish told the alumni that the situation facing the college was of sufficient gravity to warrant their whole-hearted co-operation. "Our total endowment funds are only $167,000," Mr. Parrish said, "the lowest of any standard college in the United States, and these funds must be raised to $500,000 in the very near future to meet the rating required as a standard college. The Board of Trustees asks the alumni to be responsible for raising $225,000 before July 1, in order to obtain the gift offered by the General Education Board."

Mr. Richard W. Carrington, the chief speaker for the Virginia alumni, said: "The possibility of this old college losing its standard rating is enough to make Patrick Henry turn in his grave. Patrick Henry and James Madison, and no less than six members of the First Virginian Conventions of '74-'76 founded the college, but in all its great history, it has never received a gift of more than $10,000. The endowment must be increased if the college is to pay its way, and new buildings must be erected to care for increased enrollment and to replace buildings which are out of date.

"There are 160 colleges and universities in the United States with endowment funds of over $1,000,000, yet the service which Hampden-Sydney has rendered the country is comparable with that of any other institution. After all these years, there is still no Chair of Learning endowed, and professors' salaries are below the average of standard colleges."

Mr. Carrington continued, "There are over 1,100 of us in Virginia. Our college is a Virginia product, its history is typical of the spirit of Virginia. It is for the alumni of Virginia to show a lead to the rest. Our founders said: 'We will begin it, our children will carry it on; they will estimate its value and its inheritance.' I am confident that Hampden-Sydney men today have the same vision, the same pluck, the same spirit of sacrifice and endeavor that spurred the founders to build this college, and those that followed to carry on and uphold her splendid traditions."

Enthusiastic acceptance of the challenge to raise the necessary endowment money from the alumni followed. Over thirty Virginia cities and towns were represented at the meeting and other alumni came specially from New (Continued on Page Two)

Country Church Day In May

Mother's Day Chosen for Rural Life
Sunday

At its recent meeting, the Home Missions Council, representing 26 different denominations, officially approved the keeping of an annual "Rural Life Sunday." The action of the Council was as follows:

"Resolved, That the Home Missions Council approve the suggestion that the constituent denominations of the Home Missions Council observe, where possible, the fifth Sunday after Easter in each year as "Rural Life Sunday," this to be done in such ways and by such means as the various church organizations and local conditions permit."

Dr. C. J. Galpin, of the United States Department of Agriculture, said when he heard of the action taken by the Home Missions Council, "What a vital thing to do! Should the Government of the United States, the governments of the several states, and colleges and schools and farm organizations unite with the churches in keeping an annual 'Rural Life Sunday' no one can estimate the results of such observance." This is the verdict of others acquainted with and interested in the country life of America.

Country Church Day was approved by the Committee on Country Church Work of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., at its first meeting last July. Mother's Day, Sunday May 12, was designated. It was thought that this would be an opportune time to observe a home coming day for the country churches when all who had gone out from the old congregation would be invited back to not only wear the flower in honor of "Mother" but decorate the graves of loved ones. Some congregations may prefer to have home coming day during the week.

Five features are suggested for the occasion:

(1) A Rally Day for the country church Sunday schools. It is the beginning of "bare-foot time" and a good slogan is: "Every member of the community, a member of the Sunday school."

(2) A Mother's Day exercise when a sermon or address may be delivered emphasizing the importance of the Christian home, home training, the family altar, etc.

(3) An historical address should be given in which the young people should be made acquainted with the deeds and lives of those who made the present day possible. These addresses should be committed to writing and the manuscript sent to Rev. S. M. Tenney, D.D., Curator, Montreat, N. C.

(4) An address should be made on the Country Church and strongly emphasized. Materials for these addresses may be secured from "The New Call" and "Christ and the Country People," and the other books included in the Country Church Circulating Library.

(5) The pageant, "Along the Highway of the King," should be given by the young people. This offers an opportunity for the young people to have an important part in the program, and it challenges them to lives of leadership in rural areas.

Dinner may be served on the ground, if desirable. The offering should be for the promotional work in the local church. The Country Church Department asks for nothing but an opportunity to be of service. The money may be used for the promotion of Daily Vacation Bible Schools, a school of sacred music, etc.

Huntington Calls Florida Pastor

Dr. J. Blanton Belk, of Orlando, Accepts Second Invitation from
West Virginia

Rev. J. Blanton Belk, D.D., of the First Presbyterian Church, Orlando, Florida, has just accepted a second urgent and unanimous call to Huntington, W. Va., First Church. Dr. Belk was here last September and later declined to become our pastor, largely on account of the hurricane that laid waste large sections of Central Florida.

A new committee visited Dr. Belk in January. The people of our church insisted that a second call be extended. This was done February 17th. Never before in the history of our church has a more enthusiastic and urgent call been issued. Besieged by letters and telegrams, Dr. Belk again visited Huntington last month, and last Sunday, March 3, he wired the Session his acceptance. He will assume his new duties here about April 1st.

Our congregation is extremely fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Belk as its leader. His ministry in the past has been greatly blessed and we feel the future has great things in store for this new union.

Dr. Belk succeeds Rev. J. Layton Mauze, D.D., who was the beloved pastor of this people for eleven years, but the challenge to a greater work in Kansas City, Mo., caused him to take up the work there September 1, 1928.

We most heartily welcome Dr. Belk and his family to our midst.

Louisville Seminary Announces Gift

Brainard Lemon Department of Archaeology Added to Equipment and Lectureships

The Louisville Presbyterian Seminary announces the gift of a Department of Biblical Archaeology. The giver is Mr. Brainard Lemon, of Louisville, and, at the request of the faculty, the Department will be known as the Brainard Lemon Department of Biblical Archaeology.

This Department consists of two things. The first is a collection of Palestinian antiquities dug up from the ruins of buried cities and towns in Palestine. The collection consists of 400 pieces mostly of pottery but also includes some battle axes, spears, etc., from the time of Abraham on. The collection has been gathering over 20 years. It is not surpassed by any collection of Palestinian Archaeology in this country. It will be a most unique possession for a theological seminary. And it is not likely ever to be duplicated in America since, as we are informed, Mr. Rockefeller is now building a museum in Jerusalem and the government of Palestine will probably not permit future collections to leave the country. The collection has been packed and shipped and is now on the way to Louisville.

The value of such a collection is that it corroborates and establishes in a wonderful way the historical accuracy and reliability of the Old Testament. The students of the Seminary will have the visible evidence before them of the trustworthiness of the Bible. The destructive higher criticism of the Bible has been largely speculative and theoretical. The science of Archaeology has proved to be the concrete and practical refutation of the speculations of the higher critics.

P. C. HAS LIBRARY ADDITION

Carson-Newman College, Jefferson City, Tenn. The query was: "Resolved: That some substitute should be found for the jury system." P. C. was represented by J. I. Copeland and G. W. Palmer, who upheld the negative of the question. The Carson-Newman team was awarded a 2-1 decision over the Blue Stocking debaters. The second debate of the year was the triangle among Wofford, Newberry and P. C. Davis and Keels met Wofford at Newberry and Chapin and Johnston met Newberry at Wofford. Wofford won both her debates, P. C. won one and lost one, while Newberry lost both.

The students are showing continued interest in the Y. M. C. A. meetings, which are being conducted under the leadership of Dr. D. J. Brimm. By far the largest gatherings of that body in the last few years are meeting with Doctor Brimm to discuss subjects of wide-awake interest to college men. The subject last week was "What Part Does Emotion Play in Religion?" The subject for next Wednesday is concerning the younger generation.

LOUISVILLE SEMINARY ANNOUNCES GIFT

The other part of this gift is the endowment of a lectureship in Archaeology. This will enable the Seminary to bring to Louisville every year some noted scholar in Archaeology to lecture to our students and the public on the remarkable findings of this branch of Biblical scholarship.

The lecturer this year was Dr. Melvin G. Kyle, the president of Xenia Theological Seminary in St. Louis. Dr. Kyle is one of the most noted authorities on the subject of Biblical Archaeology. He has been engaged, himself, for years in the actual digging up of the ruins of buried civilizations in Palestine and has made some remarkable first-hand contributions to the subject. He is the author of several books on Biblical Archaeology.

Dr. Kyle, in addition to being a great scholar of the subject, is also a very interesting lecturer. He has the gift of humor and the human touch and knows how to make his subject live before an audience. He entranced all who heard him, students and professors and visitors, and he spoke to a full house at every one of his lectures.

His lectures were concerned with the subject of Biblical Archaeology in general, with the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, with his own discovery of the site of Sodom and Gomorrah, with his excavations at Kirjath-Sepher and, throughout, with the verification through Archaeology of the trustworthiness of the Old Testament. So strong was the demand for him that Dr. Kyle has consented to be the permanent lecturer on Archaeology in our Seminary and, with the Brainard Lemon Collection of Palestinian antiquities before them as an object lesson, will unfold each year to the Junior Class and others who may be interested the methods and results of Biblical Archaeology.

The Louisville Presbyterian Seminary and its friends rejoice greatly in this fine addition to our equipment and feel deeply grateful to Mr. Brainard Lemon for it.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CHRISTIAN MEN'S CLUB

Charlotte Organization Five Years Old, Gives Account of its Stewardship

We publish below the fifth annual report of the Christian Men's Club, of Charlotte, N. C. This club has been in active and unceasing operation since March, 1924, and has had the same president, Mr. Thomas McP. Glasgow during this time, while Mr. Edgar W. Pharr, has had charge of the detail work of appointments of assignments for the teams. Mr. Glasgow is a business man, brother of Dr. S. M. Glasgow, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, Tenn. Mr. Pharr is an attorney. Many other business and professional men, and men of the industrial ranks, without regard to denominations have been thus associated in this evangelistic work.

They meet every Friday evening at 6:30 at supper at the Y. M. C. A. They are also responsible for an evangelistic service each Sunday at one of the downtown theatres.

The teams hold other services every week. The men also do much private personal work.

The report gives a summary of the five year's work, with a comparative statement of the last two years.

I submit herewith statistical report of the work done by the Gospel Teams of the Christian Men's Club up to February 1, 1929:

DEVOTIONAL

THE CONSECRATION PRAYER

Holy and Most Merciful God, we would invoke Thy presence in the labors to which Thou hast called us; and for this task we need pure hearts and reverent spirits. As we shall wait before Thee, may Thy people engaged in the building of Thy house be aware of a power mightier than our own, working within us, quickening us, and giving us strength for the accomplishment of all that is worthy.

As Thou hast promised to be an everlasting Companion among men in the pursuit of whatsoever is worthy, we beseech Thee that Thy blessings attend us in every phase of the task of building. O Thou who lovest all and hast need of our talents, use our little lives in Thy wise designs.

Forbid that our courage should falter or that our faith should fail. Touch our spirits with Thine own, and make this, our duty, delightful to our souls. May we find in Thy service our supreme joy, and at last may our names be written among the faithful who counted it all joy to be workers with Thee. Graciously bless all who are praying and toiling and giving for the cause so dear to our hearts and to Thy heart.

And now, O God, for whose glory we build our temples of worship, beckon, that we may follow; command, that we may obey; and evermore let Thy spirit lead us onward. In His name. Amen.

(This prayer was written by George Stanley Frazer, Litt.D., minister, on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the Idlewild Presbyterian Church at Memphis, Tennessee.)

DRAWING A CIRCLE AROUND GOD

The memory verse for the Sunday School lesson for today is taken from one of the Psalms. It is one of the Psalms descriptive of the history of God's dealings with the children of Israel, and was written to be a reminder to them and their children of the ways that God had dealt with them in the past, as a means of making them follow Him fully in the future.

The verse chosen has one of the most striking things in it that is to be found anywhere in the Bible; it reads thus: "They turned back and tempted God; and limited the Holy One of Israel." Read the whole of the 78th Psalm for yourself. The striking thing about this particular verse is the use of the Hebrew word tavah, translated limited; it means to set a mark, or draw a circle. God wanted to do certain great things for this people, but they turned back and tempted God, and drew a circle about the Holy One of Israel, and said to Him, Thus far can you come and no further! These people who were no more than mere human beings, in all their weakness, set a mark beyond which the Almighty God Himself could not go!

The people of Nazareth did the same thing when Jesus came to preach to them. The record is that "He could do no mighty work among them because of their unbelief." They could see no more in Him than the carpenter's son who had grown up with them, making tables, and chairs, plows for them.

The tremendous truth for us in these events is this: We are in danger of doing the same that they did; we are mere weaklings because we are made in the image of God, we have the power to draw a circle around God and say to Him, You can come thus far, and no further; you may do this much for me, but I will not have you go the length and do all for me that I would like to do. We may limit the blessings that the Holy One is to give us.

There are several ways that we do this. We may absent ourselves from the ministry of the Word a time when He has sent us one of His servants to break the bread of life to us. When we neglect the assembling of ourselves together, as the command of some is, we are in direct disobedience to the command of God. Of course He cannot bless us then.

Or we may come and refuse to be all to Him; He will not be satisfied with anything less than one hundred per cent of our lives. No man would marry a man who would give her only 99 per cent of his affection, reserving the other one per cent for some other woman. And that is tremendously true when the shoe is on the other foot!

Or we may doubt Him. What do you do for a person who would believe your word? What could you do for a friend who would not believe your statements, who would not believe you to carry out your promises?

We have been praying for a while for a great blessing. God is ready and willing and able to do more than we can ask or think; are you going to let Him have His way? Do all He would like to do?—Avenue News, Atlanta.

THE CREED OF A CHURCH MEMBER Loyalty—Fellowship—Service

Recognizing my duty to my church, my family, my friends and my country and the world in which I live.

I Believe in the Church

Its principles, its mission and its destiny. I believe in the church which I am a member, and the measure of my loyalty is a testimony to my faith. I must, therefore, be true to my church, its work, its teaching and its government.

I Believe in the Membership of the Church

There may be many vices in them but there are also many virtues. My own imperfections will not be moved by gazing on the frailties of others. I must see their goodness and must know their strength. I can see and know unless there is a Fellowship among us.

I Believe That My Church Offers a Real Opportunity to Serve

Its message is true, its voice is in its field is the world. My profession is worthless unless they are pressed in living terms of Service worth to my church and my country—all the good I do, no less. The world is a world in which My duty is plainly written. I will serve.

CURING LONELINESS

Loneliness haunts me every where in the far islands of the sea or in the teeming city. A journalist in many ways writes: "This inner loneliness is hard to satisfy; it is easier to be beneath some superficial interest than to cure it fundamentally. It is to cure it fundamentally, average American, like the average European of today, at any rate it is more convenient to hide this feeling of discontent under some outward activity."

Curiously enough, this observation convinced that the automobile cure for loneliness in America, in Germany they cure it with Man demands more than gas and beer. He needs the company of the Highest to satisfy that appetite for loneliness, which may make a demon out of him or drive him to drink.—Exchange.

No one can be courageous in practice.

ITALY AND THE VATICAN

Monday, February 11th, Premier Mussolini and Cardinal Gasparri in the palace of St. Mark's in Rome, signed a "political treaty" that made peace between the Kingdom of Italy and the Papacy.

It has been healed a breach that has existed since that memorable day, September 20, 1870, when the army of Victor Emmanuel entered Rome, and the Pope declared himself a prisoner in the Vatican.

Our readers will recall that for more than a hundred years before that date the Papacy claimed temporal sovereignty over parts of Italy.

The so-called "donation" of Constantine is pure fiction. The "patrimony" of the Papacy that was made up of lands granted to the Pope for the relief of the poor and the clergy, carried for centuries no claim of temporal sovereignty. Nor did the Pope have the authority which the pontiff exercised in the Roman duchy, while as the ally and supporter of an Emperor he aided him against barbarian sovereignty.

When the ties, in the eighth century, which bound Italy to the Eastern Emperor were severed, and the Lombards undertook to seize the Kingdom of Rome, the Pope called in the King Pepin from across the Alps, to aid him. And after crushing the Lombards in 754 Pepin bestowed a large district in northern Italy on Pope Stephen, "to be held in fief by the pontiffs of the apostolic See."

In this and adjacent territory the papacy exercised with varying fortunes for more than a thousand years.

At the coming of the Nineteenth Century the revolutionary ferment that had been stirring in Europe began to be felt in Italy. The independence of the Church, as the territory belonged to the Pope was called, was probably the most governed country in all Europe. The people were confined to the Ghetto and were religiously persecuted. The death rate was frightfully high. The ignorance of the people was appalling. Morals were of the lowest type. The dungeons of Rome were filled with suffocation with political prisoners.

Then came a new patriotism that cried for freedom. Mazzini, Garibaldi, Cavour, and finally Victor Emmanuel, led Italy's sons in a struggle for liberty and unity. Austria was kept out. Only French armies held the Pope. And then in 1870 the Prussian war came, and the French were withdrawn to defend French territory. Ten days after Sedan, the troops of Victor Emmanuel representing a united Italy entered the States of the Church. On September 20, 1870, through a break in the walls of Rome they entered Rome. The temporal sovereignty of the Papacy seemed to be ended.

In May, 1871, the "Law of Guarantees" was passed which declared that papal sovereignty over the States of the Church was at an end. It conferred certain privileges to the Pope. He occupied the Vatican, the Lateran and the Basilica of St. Peter's in the Campidoglio. He should have an income of $600,000. He could maintain a private guard. He would have the right of sending and receiving ambassadors. But the Pope rejected the law. He said: "We declare and protest before God and the whole Catholic world that we are thrown into such captivity that we cannot freely and completely exercise our supreme pastoral authority."

And from that day to yesterday, a succession of popes has remained sullen prisoners in the Vatican.

Leo XIII excommunicated the King of Italy as a usurper. Pius X in 1903, urged "to keep alive in the minds of the people the conviction that the Holy See finds itself in an intolerable position since the invasion of the civil principality."

Benedict XV in 1920, re-asserted his claim to temporal sovereignty.

And as late as 1926 the present pope reaffirmed the demand for temporal sovereignty.

PROPOSED UNION WITH THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The last Assembly sent down to the Presbyteries the proposal to unite our Church with the United Presbyterian Church in order to get an expression of opinion from the Church at large.

Some of the Presbyteries have already taken action while the large number are waiting for the Spring meeting before expressing an opinion as to its advisability.

From one who has kept close "tab" on the Presbyterial votes we learn that thus far the action of Presbyteries of the U. P. Church is as follows:

Twenty-nine Presbyteries have given a majority vote in its favor, and of this number 11 were unanimous for the union.

Eight voted against the union and three were doubtful. In the 17 other Presbyteries there was no action or no report.

Of the 90 Presbyteries of the Southern Church 31 have voted for union and eight have voted against it. Of the remaining 50 Presbyteries, one-half have taken no action, and one-half have postponed action till the Spring meeting.

It is said that in union there is strength, but we opine that in this union, if ever consummated, there will be found weakness.

COLLEGE FEES—A COMPARATIVE STUDY

These are the days when parents who have sons and daughters to educate, study with critical interest the question of college expenses.

We have recently read a clear and, to us, interesting study of the question of college fees by our old friend F. L. Jackson, the efficient treasurer of Davidson College.

Mr. Jackson has written a readable discussion of college fees, and has shown very clearly that the complaint that Davidson College is increasing the expenses of an education is without justification.

It seems that Davidson College that once listed fees and tuitions separately, in the 1927-28 Catalogue listed them together, thus creating the impression that there had been a great advance in their charges.

Again he shows that Davidson collects a charge for student activities as the college paper, annual, Y. M. C. A. dues, admission to the athletic games, etc., none of which goes to the College.

It is not denied that fees at Davidson as well as other colleges have increased, but on the other hand so have the conveniences of college life increased. In our day, at Hampden Sydney College we had either to kindle our own wood fires, or else employ a man to do so.

Now steam heat, furnished rooms, shower baths, with hot and cold water, all combine to produce an age of luxury that read like a fairy story.

Then our fraternity charges were a trifle, only the cost of a supper once a month, rarely over 50 cents or at the furthest $1.00. While now some spend more on their fraternity dues than for their college course.

Mr. Jackson states that during the current year the aid to students from without will reach more than $20,000.00 and loans from the college funds more than $3,000.00.

As we look back and compare college life and college expenses of to-day with those of the past 50 years, we are impressed by the many advantages the college boy enjoys, the low cost of them, on the whole, and the ease with which a young man can obtain an education.

We often wonder whether this ease is not a detriment to the student when the balance is struck.

REV. W. B. RILEY, D.D., THIRTY-SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Last Sunday, March 3rd, was the thirty-second anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. W. B. Riley, of the First Baptist Church, of Minneapolis. It was observed by a tempting order of service.

Dr. Riley belongs to our Baptist brethren, as far as his Church connection is concerned, but in another sense he belongs to the entire Christian Church, that body of believers who believe in the inerrancy of the Scriptures, and who have not been led astray by the vagaries of Science and some of its preposterous claims. In 32 years he has seen 5,948 persons welcomed into the Church. His membership is now 3,270.

He has not only been a bulwark of defense in the fight with sin in his own city, but he has rendered yeoman service in the fight to uphold the integrity of the Scriptures. We congratulate the Church on its possession of such a pastor and the pastor on his valiant fight for the truth, and we pray that his days may be long upon this earth.

HAMPDEN SYDNEY COLLEGE

Recently we had a story of the action of the Trustees of Hampden Sydney College in inaugurating the campaign for one million dollars to be added to its endowment. That story has revived memories of the old College when the editor entered, and where he spent three happy and profitable years, graduating in 1874.

At that time there were five professors and about 90 odd pupils.

We recall our shock when the grim old brick building loomed in sight—four stories high, four non-communicating halls, with rooms large and airy, all heated by open wood fires. All the water used was drawn from a well at the west end of the building and it had to be carried up each day. The wood was also carried up and stacked at the door of each room.

They had a narrow curriculum, so that the foundation, while not broad, was deep, and the graduates now look back with gratitude for the thorough equipment with which they entered life.

Of the faculty of five only one remains, and he is on the retired list.

Since then there have been some changes in the buildings and accommodations.

Instead of the dim oil lamps and the laborious carrying of wood, steam heat gives them the luxury of home life.

While these comforts have been added, there has been no change in the high tone of the teaching, though the faculty has been increased commensurate with the increase of students.

We trust that the general tone of the student body is still as high as when we attended.

Then it was of a very high type, so that a majority of the graduates entered Union Seminary which was at that time in the same village.

With a history of 153 years behind it, crowded with usefulness to Church and State, this appeal to the Presbyterians of Virginia ought to be heard with sympathetic ears.

With its modern improvements the old students will not feel at home, but those that come on at this stage of its existence would balk at the wood carrying and the water "toting," the high thinking and the low living, but we, who are the products of the old era, congratulate ourselves that we were reared under such conditions, though at the time we envied the more prosperous colleges.

CONTRIBUTED

DEFEATIST TALK

Daniel Ferguson

Christians are chiefly responsible for the accusation that rests against their belief habitually in the public mind. For they have selected words unwisely to describe their opponents. The words are unfortunately accepted and eagerly adopted by their opponents.

For instance, every speaker has felt that he was defeated already if he mentioned "modernists," however he strove to confute their views. Why? He has a good case against their ideas and methods, but he starts his course of discussion unfavorably for himself by his use of the word modernism. For the Christian is presumably a man who extols progress and the excellent state of civilization as it contrasts with conditions in former times. Socially, domestically, commercially, politically, modern conditions improve on the conditions of a century ago. In point of freedom and opportunity, we think well of modern conditions and would not hark back to the seventeenth or eighteenth centuries. The favor associated with modern conditions we give away forthwith, by making our opponent in religious matters take the name of modernist, whether he wants it or not.

All the learning, activity, grace and praiseworthy interests of our day are thus made to contribute their quota of favor and that favor is handed over to the enemy. How can one move vigorously against an opponent under that incubus? How surmount a hurdle we place for ourselves each time we mention the word Modernist? Every writer who mentions the word or opposes its implications, has felt his ideas cluttered the instant he wrote it, no matter how much excellent material he had to prove that his opponent is a rash and uncandid type of thinker.

Theory Back of "Modernism"

The theory back of the choice of this word modernist, as it is used to denote destructive writers in religion, is that the golden age of religion was just in its prime a generation or two ago. It is a sort of sliding relationship, perpetually pitched about fifty years prior to the time in which a given defender of the faith is living. The theory is that the spiritual impetus gotten from that golden age, carried by its momentum the admirable movement of civilization that brings us to the present, while the religious views of the present are changing for the worse under the treatment the modern mind gives them. For myself, I am against the views usually designated as modernism. I am also against the name itself. Men in the ranks of the safe and fair minded strangle themselves by using it, in their effort at once to brand and berate and expose the fallacy of the views they attack. The word pulls backward far more effectively than any argument of theirs can pull forward. Its influence on the public becomes auto-suggestive and therefore very powerful. We need a new word to describe the ex parte information coupled with extensive arrogance in assertions known as modernism. What is the word we need? How shall it be set to work?

The Illiberality of the "Liberal"

The same comments apply to the word Free-Thinker. Is the Christian not free? Has he not surveyed the whole field of thought at least as well as his opponent, and usually far better? Can he not usually rehearse all the critical theories his "free-thinking" opponent has embraced and then tell him others of which he has not heard? It is not true that the view of the believer is just this; that the denials and statements of the free-thinker call for more credulity and the view of conservative Christians? And is it not true that the free-thinker is binding himself up to very constricted group of facts which he has selected for his consideration, while the Christian alone ranges freely over the whole field of facts that humanity may employ? Yet, the Christian calls his opponent a "free-thinker" and so gives his case away in the name—as if the Christian himself were not free. Trench points out the fact, in his "Study of Words" that a more powerful vehicle of thought than a treatise is a simple word; for it gathers up tradition and puts it before one in the briefest compass. When a word like this one now under discussion is employed by Christian writers, they have spiked their own guns as they open the conflict. The word "free" with its excellent implications should be replaced by the word "loose," it seems. It is synonymic, but connotes more truly than the word "free," the attitude of the radical mind.

The Christian a Real "Freethinker"

Take also the word Liberalism. What a travesty on language and facts it displays. The most intolerant, illiberal person we meet is the so-called "liberal" of common acquaintances. We have all met him in conversation, and we remember that he would not permit us to finish a sentence without cutting in caustically. He must do all the talking, and we are liberally to allow him the right of way in the conversation. He counts on our Christian law of love to do that for him, while he claims the name "liberal" for his illiberal methods.

We might read in this connection after the leading "liberal" and protagonist of tolerance, Mr. Fosdick. Says he, "The absurd attempt to make Genesis mean evolution by stretching the days into aeons," etc. "Absurd" is a very illiberal word to apply to his opponents, especially when they are men of unimpeachable information and reliable judgment. I first heard those "days" thus explained by the head of the department of geology in one of the world's foremost universities, twenty years ago. Men whose information on Biblical Hebrew ranked as high in their department as the geologist ranked in his, have often said the same thing. Whether these men are right or wrong, it ill becomes Mr. Fosdick, pleader for tolerance, to sit in judgment and belabor them with the word "absurd." And he is a leading "liberal."

Again, how is this for illiberality, indicative of the actual spirit of the "Liberals"? Sir Arthur Keith, last year's head of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, speaks thus of the prosecutors of Prof. Scopes at Dayton. (Doubtless Sir Arthur would berate Calvin as intolerant for his alleged recommendation of burning in the case of Servetus). Thus the Liberal; "I'd like to see the people who instituted this prosecution hanged on the spot," and more to the same effect. Of course, Sir Arthur reverses his science. So do I, altho what I know of it leads me to quite another path from that which the ex-president of the British Association takes and rather along the path the present head of that organization sets forth in his insistence of a spiritual basis for human life. I am in no danger of contradiction however, when I claim that Mr. Keith does not deserve to be thought of as liberal, although Christians have applied that term to him and his like.

Liberal is a good adjective to have applied to one, in the common run of conversation. When applied to opponents of Christian teaching and eschewed by Christians, it is naturally inferred that opponents alone are willing to be considerate. It is inferred that they alone are willing to hear liberally the arguments of other men and that Christians are unwilling to do so. The same thus goes on doing its work of commending opponents and defaming Christians. It gives "liberals" good claim to be occupying the charitably ground that Christ always occupied; it implies that they alone have no fear of what they may find out, while the Christian is afraid he may come on something to make his fragile faith topple, so that he is quite unwilling to be liberal with ideas. It thus implies clearly enough that the Christian is a dishonest sort of insect, in his mental life. In view of all this, would it not be better to use the old word, "worldly" in describing the mental processes of the man whom we now pleasantly distinguish by the name of "liberal"?

The only argument to be noticed against this change of terms is that it will take away some of the comfortable cushions on which our opponent now reposes. And they are our own missiles which we have hurled at him. Those opponents ask a strange favor of us, in desiring to keep these comfortable names. He ask us to quit being just in the matter, but by all means, to be generous. For we imply by calling him a modern that we are not up to date, and he is. We imply for all the world to take note, that by calling him liberal he is benevolent and we very crabbed, very loveless, and altho the implication is not just—at least to us—they still expect to get us to acquiesce in it. For we are evangelical, and an evangelical is by all means to be loving, even if his opponent is not, and even to the extent of becoming absurd, by admitting that we are mean in mind and out of date. Foolishly enough, we continue our fight in self imposed shackles. To all this we are first exhorted, then taunted in the name of generosity by those who always claim the name and rarely the graces of generosity or even justice.

THE GOLDEN RULE OR THE RULE OF GOLD?

Robert H. McCaslin, D.D.

Which rule shall hold sway in human life, the Golden Rule or the Rule of Gold? Which shall direct the thinking of men? Which shall control the activities, the energies, the minds of men? Which should men place uppermost and foremost in their lives? Which rule shall men live by, and act by, and work by; the Golden Rule or the Rule of Gold?

The one is a high pronouncement of conduct and action, the other is a low and selfish thought of gain; the one is a great uplifting and transforming program, the other is a sordid and unworthy spirit of greed; the one will give breadth of vision, largeness of horizon, sweetness of spirit, and strength of soul; the other will narrow the heart, dwarf the soul, destroy the sympathies, and cramp the life. The one lures men into unselfish and altruistic action, the other confines men into lines of hardness and selfishness. The one thinks of others, and the other thinks only of self.

The one practices the principles of the highest human relations, the other follows the low level of the sordid. The Golden Rule is the rediscovered principle of a practice that results in happiness, contentment and satisfaction. The Rule of Gold is the old plan of operation that forgets, neglects and is unconcerned except for selfish purposes.

The first rule is an economic law, a divine principle governing human relationships, the only worthwhile, workable, industrial and economic law in the universe today; the other rule is a false and fatal plan, neither successful or happy, and results inevitably in the destruction of the finer and higher instincts of human life. The first rule teaches men to do their full share in promoting all things that are for the good of the community; the other compels men to forget all but self. The first avoids exaggeration, misrepresentation in word or inference; the other is egotistic, unreliable, undependable in life and action. The one will transform the cold clay into real life, so that life will be broadened and the soul vision; the other will live apart, act for self until human sympathy and brotherhood are things of memory rather than experience.

Follow the Golden Rule, and your heart will beat for every friend, and throb with joy at every triumph of truth; follow the Rule of Gold, and you will narrow your own vision until you can only see sordid gold.

Here they are, the two rules by which men live. Which will you follow? The Golden Rule is the only trustworthy, high-principled policy worthy of real men. It teaches us to increase and enlarge our service; it brings us to realize that first one must be an ethical man, and that no success is legitimate which is secured by taking unfair advantage of others; it tempts men to go the second mile; it invites men to fair dealings, square relations, honor and trust, faith and charity.

The Rule of Gold is untrustworthy, low-principled and unworthy of real men. It teaches men to refuse service; it brings men to forget the ethics of business, and advises them to get to their goal at any cost, and is never founded on either justice or morality; it takes advantage, plays the game unfairly, cheats, and honor and trust are not to be found in its vocabulary. It does not know cooperation; fellowship and friendship are foreign plans, and its language is always the language of and greed.

The Golden Rule was proclaimed, and again taught and followed by the Man of Galilee when he declared "whatever ye would that men should do to do ye even so to them," and so He went teaching, healing, helping and loving men into better. The Rule of Gold is as old as the race. Its father no name save self, and is followed by the rabbi who would go to any length, pay any price, or sacrifice name for temporary, fleeting, passing, selfish purposes.

Follow these rules as they play in human life their re-action on human hearts, observe their results in various relationships, notice their products of life count up at last the real wealth each produces, a then which is the better rule.

HIGH COST OF EVANGELISM

Sir Henry Lunn, editor of the Review of the Church, a British religious periodical, has recently said things that have been needing badly to be said for some time, concerning the sums received by a certain evangelist. Sir Henry writes under the title: "De Economist, A. D. 1928." For the benefit of our readers who may be forgetful, let it be recalled that Demas was the man who forsook Paul, "having turned to this present world," to quote Paul's exact words.

This noted Englishman seems both amazed and disgusted at the huge sums collected by professional evangelists in this country. He refers to such a process as "selling Christ," and argues that it is worse to sell than to deny Him. Attention is called to the case of B— S—, D.D." who is generally known as "B— S—," "received for his campaign in New York, in addition to the expenses of himself and his staff, the sum of $100,000." The system is likened to the sale of indulgences by Tetzel, which roused the indignation of Martin Luther and started him upon his crusade of reformation, pointed out, however, that the money collected by him and his associates went into the coffers of the Pope rather than for the enrichment of their individual souls.

Sir Henry learned that during six years of evangelism, Aimee Semple McPherson had been able to accumulate $600,000 in clear profits. These two cases are exceptional in the amounts that have been accumulated. But everywhere are found evangelists, both big and small, who follow similar tactics. They make engagements wherever they can, but always with the stipulation that they are to receive "free-will offerings." The method of securing these "free-will offerings" is often a matter of skill and ingenuity.

Sir Henry's suggestion as to how to meet and deal with the situation seems adequate and directly to the point. "But the whole of this money-making business the guise of evangelism, can be brought to an end if the Churches will unanimously agree to insist that the evangelists shall be paid a fixed salary by the society that sponsors them, and that all free-will offerings shall be counted for and forwarded intact to the society sponsors the evangelists."

"HOW MUCH OWEST THOU MY LORD?"

In the matter of stewardship there are, broadly speaking, three groups of Christians. Perhaps it would be summing less to say that in the matter of supporting church there are in the main three groups of men: those who give "free-will" offerings, those who pledge, and those who pledge. The answer one gets to the question, "How much owest thou my Lord?" depends on the group to which the person addressed belongs.

If he belongs to the first group, he will probably answer, "I owe Him nothing. I do not like to have this presented as a debt or a duty. To do so is unscriptural. Religion is free." Abe Martin implied as much one morning when he said, "Religion must be free." Aimee Semple McPherson has opened a church in Chicago. The fact that a member feels that he owes nothing is always a "free-will" gift, a voluntary offering amount of which is determined by the impulse of the moment, and the impulse of the moment is determined by the strength of the emotional appeal made to him. His emotions may be worth five cents today, but tomorrow, and possibly as much as a dollar some day. If for one reason or another his emotions are stirred, the grace of giving refuses to function, and offering is nil. We have much to be thankful for the fact that this group of twentieth century Christians is not proportionally large.

If the person addressed belongs to the second group, the prompt answer is—"By the teaching of Scripture and by all the laws of grace, I owe Him at least one-tenth of my income." There are thousands and tens of thousands who conscientiously believe that the tithe is obligatory. They would just as soon refuse to acknowledge a note at the bank as to refuse to pay their tenth. What some of these tithers give and give cheerfully, is almost incredible to persons who have never tried that or any other system. We know of a bright consecrated young woman, whose earning city is $15 per week and whose gifts to the agencies of her church average $1.25 per week.

Members of the third group are often tithers, not tithers they at least qualify as systematic. Ask one of these how much he owes his Lord an answer in substance, "I owe Him the amount stated in the budget, the amount pledged for the support of the church and the advancement of her mission. It is ten cents per week or ten dollars per week, but I have pledged I always regard the payment of that as a binding obligation, unless by mutual agreement with those who represent my church, the amount is altered or cancelled."

The work of the United Presbyterian Church in the outlay of six million dollars annually, is almost entirely by members who belong to the se-groups—those who tithe and pay, and those who and pay. Blessings on all such. May their number increase. Without them the Church would be crippled and organized religion impossible.—A.H.B. United Presbyterian.

DR. PAISLEY IN ACTION

Five-Day Conference on Religious Education

wisdom of our Assembly's Training School in Dr. E. B. Paisley for the Chair of Religious Education, was fully evidenced in his recent visit to Bluefield, West Virginia, where he held a series of conferences with the Sunday School workers of the First and Westminster Churches. There was a moment of his conferences that he did not forget in the hollow of his hand. The one that followed was that this man is a wonderful teacher.

On February 14th, at a Valentine Supper for the workers for both churches, Dr. Paisley presented his program with Dr. Henry H. Sweets, who came to Bluefield to speak on the subject of Stewardship. This "double-header" was a great treat to the Religious Educational conference that evening on the subject, "Your Place." The teacher's part of the beginning of the history of Sunday School work in England, he touched upon the three elements relative to the education of the child: the home, the State and the Church. He traced the development of each in America; he mentioned the philosophy of education today, which makes the home a simply a controlled part of life, putting in something that is met in life except religion. "The home," said he, "is that the home and the church each teach this subject. The National Education Association spent most of an entire convention in Dallas, upon the subject of character building. This is the task of the church today, and until the home begins with the church it is a hopeless task."

On the second evening Dr. Paisley's subject was "The Christian Religion." He first defined religion as a man's response toward God. Then he defined the Christian religion, the true religion as an attitude toward the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which makes a man willing to become like Christ in character and loving service. Later in this address he defined Religious Education as the process which goes on whereby a child comes to know God through Jesus Christ, and therefore comes to be like him. In closing this evening's address, Dr. Paisley gave three "ear marks" of educational instruction: "First," said he, "it deals with growing individuals. This being true, it must change and adapt itself to the individuals. Second, it is interested in what it can get out of people. Some Sunday School work to get money or to get members for the church. And lastly it does its work through fellow-workers. Young people want older people around them, they want them to walk with them and not ahead of them. It is easier to run a block alone than to run a block with your baby, by the hand. You measure your church by whether your church is giving herself to the Sunday School. Age must be youth may live."

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Paisley spoke to a general assembly meeting to which all other churches in the area were invited, upon the subject of "The Sunday School Teacher Plus the Parents." He discussed the nature of the child, the method of dealing with the child in the home, through the government of the child in the work they share, through play, through prayer, and through the church.

On Monday night the subject of the discussion was "The Curriculum." Four general definitions were given in answer to the following four questions: What is a School? Second, What is the Curriculum? Third, Why have Departments? Fourth, How are the lessons to be Uniform or Graded? In answering the first question Dr. John Dewey's definition for any school was given, "a school is a community environment." To this end the environment must be purified, simplified, broadened and graded. There are two elements in every educational problem—the immature child and the mature experience. The subject is to balance both. The teacher is supplementary to the parent, and deserves the co-operation of the parent. It is the teacher who must adapt the experience of the immature pupil, so he or she may come mature.

There is no question in all the educational world as important as the curriculum. The N. E. A. took up this subject at the Dallas convention to answer that question. Everything in the child's experience is his curriculum. So it is not only what is taught but how it is taught. The teacher of the Sunday School talks, prays, worships, is part of the curriculum. The old-fashioned Sunday school gave little material but the attitude of the teacher and the superintendent made the impression which have a long life with the pupils.

The reason why there are departments in the Bible is to meet age, need, capacity and ability. It is recognized in all the environment of the child that other interests in life. The next question is how to handle the departments there shall be the regular lesson material, or the graded lessons. The teacher took the same lesson and tried to adapt it to the child, while the latter took different material for each department. The advantage of the uniform lesson is that it permits unity of study at home, in the church, in publication, and among denominations. The advantages are that you must pick only Scripture which will meet the needs of all ages. The result in all the years of the uniform lessons, only one-seventh of Bible has been taught. This is the one-seventh of the Bible that should be studied. It is for unity of study at home, but brings it to the lowest age in the home. Hence we must descend to a lower grade of knowledge. It cuts absolutely contrary to the system of education which all recognize as right in the public school. Suppose a child should come home and tell the parent that tomorrow we are to all study the same lessons, from the first grade? It is not hard to imagine what a commotion this would raise. And then suppose the child would give as the reason that the teachers said it was the easiest way? The greatest reason for the uniform lessons is that it is the easiest. The best thought of the Sunday School world have turned their backs on the uniform plan. It is better to have teachers willingly using the uniform than unwillingly the graded, but the better plan is the graded.

Last evening was devoted to the study of "Your Program." This discussion was divided into three parts, Worship, Instruction and Missions. Relative to worship in the church school the speaker said that it should receive first emphasis. "We do not have 'opening exercises'" he stressed "but we begin in the atmosphere of worship. The chief duty of the church is not service but worship. We adore Him who did for us what we could not do for ourselves. Therefore we worship Him. This is the whole difference between the Law and the Gospel. We could not keep the whole Law, and God loved us and gave us a Saviour and Him we worship for doing for us what we failed to do for ourselves."

The speaker illustrated the result of worship by telling the story of the great Baptist preacher, the Rev. Dr. Alexander MacLaren who said that he spent three hours before he preached getting himself ready to preach—not his sermon ready, but himself. "The one who leads the worship must have it in himself, he must arrange his program to bring about the presence of God. For this song, Scripture, and prayer must work to this aim. We get our attitudes by the attitudes of others. And through it" he continued, "we must not forget that church worship is the chief place where children should worship. They should not think that after Sunday School they are through. Pastors and teachers should work together to make public worship most important for children."

On the second point concerning "Instruction," Dr. Paisley greatly interested his hearers. In answer to what are you going to teach the child? he said, "First of all, Jesus Christ. He is the center of all the Scripture. He interprets Scripture. It is the living revelation of Jesus Christ—the chief text book. And the third thing is the Christian Life. The pupil is not just to memorize the Scripture and the catechisms, but to learn through them to live Christ, in one's life. As to the catchism it is a good statement of doctrine, but should be explained as it is taught and should be made as interesting to the child as possible."

Finally coming to the last point, Dr. Paisley paused, weighing his words, as he said, "the church that doesn't center its education around worship and missions is going to fail. You cannot be a Christian and not be more concerned about others than about yourself. Unless you are, you are not even a Christian. The first center is worship and the second is missions, and only as you make these centers, can you be a Christian. Otherwise you will lose Christ."

THE FUTURE LEADERSHIP OF THE CHURCH

(The Student Loan Fund)

The subject for this program is the Future Leadership of the Church and the vital relationship borne to it by the Student Loan Fund. Someone has said that the great need of the church and of the world today, is not more leaders but more servants—more men and women preparing, not to direct the energies of others, but for that leadership which follows in the footsteps of Him who said, "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant"—of Him who also said, "I am among you as he that serveth."

A recent book which has been described as one of the finest of American novels centers around this theme of 'the servant of all.' Its hero is a young Swedish farmer in Minnesota who has never had more than ten months interrupted schooling in his life, but whose eager mind searching in the monotonous round of his laborious life for something satisfying, flames into a secret but steadily pursued ideal of serving the race of men. Casting about him for a medium through which to work, he chooses a seed of wheat which shall some day, through selection and blending, be able to resist the red rust which scourges the wheat fields all about him and brings the farmers to despair. Year in and year out he works, silently, patiently, dying at last, when his acre of heavy-headed golden wheat stands untouched by the blight which has ruined all the adjoining fields. Unsung, unrewarded, he dies content—a servant of all—putting bread into thousands of mouths yet unborn. This is the type of leadership which the world needs and longs for, and which the Church is trying to supply. "If only he had a better chance, how much more still such a man might have accomplished," the state agricultural agent cries at the end of the novel.

It is in order that boys and girls of this type shall have their chance that the Student Loan Fund has been erected. For these 'servants of all' must have training and preparation if they are to render their fullest measure of service.

Our Scripture lesson gives us the names of three great leaders and servants of God, two of whom at least influenced not only their own age and time, but the whole course of later history. Moses, trained first in his earliest years to love and fear Jehovah, is trained afterwards in all the wisdom and learning of Egypt, until ready for service, at Jehovah's word, he leads the Hebrew people out of their long bondage into the beginnings of national life. Samuel, lent to the Lord before his birth by his mother Hannah, is trained by Eli, the High Priest, becomes the Judge of Israel and in turn gathers about him disciples whom, in a retired and quiet place, he taught the Law of Jehovah. It is said in 1 Samuel 19:18, that David fled and escaped and came to Samuel to Ramah and told him all that Saul had done to him and that he and Samuel went and dwelt at Naioth. This Naioth, which was in the outskirts of Ramah, was the first school of the prophets, and it is probable that Samuel spent all the time he could spare from his public duties there training these young men for service after him.

Paul, the great apostle, was trained for his world mission in the midst of three civilizations. As Paterson Smythe says, Paul, whether in Jerusalem, Corinth, Athen, or Rome, or in his boyhood home in Tarsus, was every where in the midst of the Greek, the Roman and the Jew. Like Moses and Samuel, he learned his earliest and most important lesson, the knowledge and the fear of the one true God, in his childhood's home and from his father and mother. Then he went to Jerusalem to sit at the feet of the great teacher Gamaliel, to study the great history of his race. And now upon his eager, active mind beat the great influences of his day—Greek thought and language, Roman power and order and government. Three great servants of God, trained for His service, first in their homes, then in the school and church of their day and time.

The Growth of Student Loan Funds in the Country at Large

There has been a tremendous growth in Student Loan Funds in the last few years. Various orders, benevolent societies, parent-teacher associations and other organizations are erecting Loan Funds. According to Walter Greenleaf, associate specialist in the United States Bureau of Education, funds totalling nearly $4,000,000 are lent annually to 282 colleges and universities to students in order to enable them to complete their college education. In addition, more than one hundred agencies and foundations maintain independent loan funds. "We are living," says Mr. Greenleaf, "in what appears to be the installment age, where people make large purchase by paying so much down and so much per month. Higher education is no exception to the rule, and as an investment, yields a high rate of interest with passing years." Funds administered by independent organizations, Mr. Greenleaf points out, sometimes are restricted to students funds, established years ago, have been administered in such a way that the original amount has been many times multiplied.

The studies of this specialist showed that there is no uniformity in the manner in which loan funds are administered. Various restrictions are imposed according to the policy of the institution, restrictions imposed by the donors, and according to the need of the student and the ability of his parents to help him. The study showed that in some cases no interest whatever is charged, while in others rates run as high as 8 per cent. but 6 per cent. is the usual rate. Individual loans average $100 to $150, but many are twice as large. Repayment usually begins as a stated period after graduation.

The Student Loan Fund of the Southern Presbyterian Church

The Student Loan Fund of the Presbyterian Church in the United States was launched in 1909. The first loan was made in 1911. Up to March 31, 1928, loans have been made to 1,538 Presbyterian youth who have thus been enabled to attend our own Presbyterian Colleges. Of this number, 894 are young men and 644 are young women. The purpose of the Student Loan Fund is twofold; first to help the youth of the Church to secure higher education in order that they may be more useful in their various vocations in life; in the second place to assist our own Presbyterian colleges. Loans from the fund are made only to those who attend these institutions, except in the case of students who have already received the Bachelor's degree in one of our colleges and are seeking the Master's or the Doctor's degree with a view to teaching. In this case, loans are made to them. It should be noted here that applicants for aid from this Student Loan Fund are under no obligation to enter upon any particular form of service, since students intending to enter the ministry or mission service are aided through other funds. A student desiring to borrow from this fund must have a parental acknowledgement of his pledge and application; must have the personal recommendation of two persons; must be recommended by the Session of his Church, and have the recommendation of the faculty or principal of the High School which he has attended. He also signs the following pledge.

1. I, the above named person, desirous to secure an education, hereby solicit a loan from the Student Loan Fund of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. (Southern).

2. I will apply the loan, if granted, toward no other than the necessary expense of continuing my education.

3. I promise to begin payments on my note within six months after leaving a Presbyterian College. My notes will mature on July 1st of the year that work at a Presbyterian College is discontinued. If the note is paid in full within two years after maturity, no interest will be charged. On all amounts not paid within this period, I agree to pay interest at the rate of 6 per cent. from the date of maturity, until paid.

4. I promise that other obligations will not receive preference in the order of payment, fully understanding that the loan from the Student Loan Fund is for my use only while I am in college, and that upon its repayment, the money is to be used to help other students.

5. I promise that I will keep the Executive Committee of Christian Education informed of my address and my occupation as long as any part of my indebtedness to the Student Loan Fund remains unpaid, and will answer promptly all communications from the office.

There is a vital principle in a loan fund. "Unless the immature student is impressed with the responsibility assumed in borrowing money, great harm will certainly be done his character. Some one has wisely said: "The saddest day in a young man's life is when he finds there is an easier way to secure a dollar than to work for it." In an old, old book of wisdom it is also written: "It is better not to vow, than to vow and not to pay." Students must often have financial help but they must also learn the value of money, develop a spirit of independence and form habits of economy and thrift.

The larger part of our Student Loan Fund has been secured through Memorial Scholarship Funds of $600. or more. This permits a loan of $150 a year for the four years of the college course. The Fund now amounts to $255,031.09. During the year 1927-28 the amount of $33,330 was loaned to 273 students of whom 142 are men and 131 are women. But because there was no money left in the Fund to lend them, loans had to be denied last year to forty-one choice boys and girls from Presbyterian homes.

The Advantages of the Church College

Many radical changes are developing in the educational world and in them the Church College faces the definite challenge as to whether it any longer has a reason for existing. What this challenge is can best be shown by some quotations from a recent report of the Ad Interim Committee appointed by the Synod of South Carolina to study the relation of the Church to education. The Committee of which Dr. Henry Wade DuBose is Chairman, takes up the challenge in these words: "The Church faces a new educational situation. Some of the reasons that were adduced in a former day for the building of church colleges no longer exist. It cannot be said that without these colleges gifted and aspiring youth would be denied an opportunity for higher learning. It cannot be said that the Church has a peculiar duty to provide such education for the sons and daughters of the poor. The State has vigorously undertaken the education of the masses, and vast private endowments have become available for the same purpose. Has the Church College then a present and a permanent reason for being? Or has it served its purpose and has it come to a day when it must give place to institutions supported by tax levies or by great private endowment?"

This Committee hastens to express its profound conviction that the Church has a permanent and definite mission in the sphere of college education, and that the elimination of the church college would be a stupendous disaster both to the life of the Church itself and to the nation in which the church has been divinely placed, as a lamp upon its stand and as a city that is set on a hill.

It is well for us to remember that we are not standing alone in this matter of providing higher education under the banner of the Church. Every other influential denomination, Protestant and Catholic, is engaged in the same enterprise and not one has any idea of giving it up.

Vast areas of the intellectual life of America today are distinctly pagan. That this is not true of other areas is in no small degree due to the dominant influence that Christian colleges have exercised in our educational history. The best guarantee of Christian ideals in State institutions is to maintain alongside of these institutions, colleges whose Christian standards are guaranteed by the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Christian college is a necessary training school for the Church's own leaders. The church college will exercise an influence in the educational world all out of proportion to its material equipment and student enrollment. Its presence alongside of non-church colleges will in many ways effect their policies and life. Christian ideals will radiate their light far beyond the centers that exalt them.

If the voice of the Church is needed in the business world, it is more desperately needed in the intellectual world.

To give her testimony effectually in the educational world, it is not necessary that the Church educate the majority. God has a wonderful way of working through minorities. Judah is not the only nation that has been redeemed by a remnant.

The church college undertakes to discharge this mission through a selected faculty and student body. Its ideal faculty is made up of professors and instructors to whose training, intellectual equipment and character, something more has been added—an illumination of personality which only comes out of the depths of a personal religious experience. The student body is made up of a small group, many of whom come from homes of moderate means, many from homes poor in goods but rich in ideals of character and service. "This is the matrix of education—that this relationship, this confronting of an illuminative personality by combustible material, shall result in the lighting of those lamps in the mind and heart, that shall eventually show the Way, the Truth and the Life."

It is for all of these reasons that the church college becomes the ideal place for the investment of Student Loan Funds. The very fact that loans are only made to young men and women known and approved by the sessions of their own churches, means a selected group—boys and girls who from childhood have learned to look upon life, not as a playground but as a battle line, in which each one has his place. They come from homes which represent the early American type—homes simple in life, rich in ideals, high in standards of honor and service.

These applicants for loans are not likely to want a college education because it 'is the thing 'o do'; because a college education confers social advantages; because it will hasten the making of money—but they are likely to apply because they want to make not a living, but a life.

And knowing as they do, that other boys and girls having the same coveted chance will depend on the promptness with which they repay the loan, they are likely to be impelled by a high sense of honor, to make the most of their opportunities, in order that they may the sooner hand on the torch.

The Church college has another intangible but tremendous advantage over other independent and state institutions of learning. It only can claim that it is definitely and continuously prayed for. It is said that after the first battle of the Marne when the German tide sweeping towards Paris was, for some mysterious reason, suddenly turned back, that Sir Douglas Haig and Lord Roberts were discussing the strange happening. "Somebody", said Lord Roberts, "must have been praying very hard."

In a day of the world when old, tried and established things seem to be in flux, a safe place for the investment of student loan funds would seem to be a church college which stands for unseen and eternal realities—the things which cannot be moved.

The Student Loan Fund From a Personal Point of View

From the very dawn of history, man has shown one universal poignant, pathetic trait—the desire that he himself and those whom he has loved shall not be forgotten, when he has journeyed from the scene and passed to the unseen and timeless world. "Do not forget me" is the universal cry of the human heart. But how can a man best insure his remembrance against the oncoming years?

Six hundred dollars or more will establish a Memorial Scholarship, and the roll of them grows steadily longer. Nor is it necessary that they should be built all at once. They can be added to from year to year, until the Memorial is complete. Many of these Memorials are "Gold Star" ones, placed there in memory of a boy who gave his life for liberty, 'over there.' There are others in thanksgiving for the boys who came back to their homes. Others are in memory of pastors and teachers, of boys and girls and little children. And fathers and mothers take up the threads the tired hands let fall, and through the boys and girls who borrow from this fund to go to college, they go on with the weaving of that life's golden patterns, enabling it to forever fulfill itself in other lives.

Could a man answer that cry, "Do not forget me!" more surely than through the Student Loan Fund—to live in lives made better by his presence, when he himself is one of that

"Choir invisible, whose music is the gladness of the world?"

ALAMANCE AUXILIARY

At Alamance Church, near Greensboro, N. C., February 27, Circle No. 2 of the Woman's Auxiliary presented a pageant entitled, "Critics and Missions." Several duets were beautifully rendered by Mrs. Cyrus Causey and Miss Ola Fogleman, with Mrs. L. C. Troxler at the piano.

Following the pageant, Rev. J. M. Millard, the pastor, made a most interesting talk to the Woman's Auxiliary on the book written by Dr. Egbert Snodgrass, "Desire of All Nations."

At the social hour delicious refreshments were served by Circles 3 and 4.

AUXILIARY AT MOUNT OLIVE

The officers of our church and the Woman's Auxiliary had a special service Sunday, March 3, in interest of Our Every Member Canvass. Each part of the work was presented by an officer, and prepared for that cause. We consider it a very worthwhile program:

Devotional, Special Music, The Burden of the Reached in Foreign Lands, Prayer, The Call of Our Homeland, Prayer, Our Orphanage Family, Prayer, Our Own Church Needs, Prayer, How Every Member Canvass March 10 can Help Answer These Calls, Singing Prayer.

The new members were received into the church Sunday morning on Confession of Faith, and twenty-six new members this year, over one to ten church members.

Sunday evening we had a large congregation gathered in the church at six o'clock to tune in on Radio installed for that service to hear Dr. Lacy on Stewardship. The message was greatly enjoyed. We think Dr. Gillespie's broadcasting for last Sunday proved most successful.

Mrs. W. M. Baker

BLUE RIDGE AUXILIARY

When the Blue Ridge Auxiliary met at the Home, Va., in February, 1926, there were seven members present. The weather was bad and the members went on. There were no circles and there were about 20 on the Auxiliary roll. We elected officers and during that year we progressed rapidly. We had all the monthly meetings and towards the end of the year we organized a girls' circle. At the beginning of the year, we organized a prayer band. This has been a part of the Auxiliary ever since. In addition to organizing a girls' circle, we organized a mission study class, foreign missions.

The next year we organized a junior girls' circle and a home mission study class, and each circle had a prayer band. That year we put on a drive for the new building, and by constant, steady, prayerful effort and co-operation we increased our membership from 20 to 45 and our gifts from $26 to $128, also sent white cross offerings and a good offering for Foreign missions.

This past year we have increased our membership from 45 to 58, our offerings have already reached $128 and there is still another meeting to be held. We have three circles, a ladies', a senior girls' and a junior girls' circle and they are all working nicely. We have two organized mission study classes, home and foreign missions, we have given our quota on all causes and on our pastor's salary. Our church officers' said a few days ago, "Blue Ridge Auxiliary is a real help."

Our prayer bands have been augmented by the high school, which meets every Wednesday morning at the morning recess to pray for the success of God's work here in our community. This prayer band was organized by Hardin King, our student minister, and every student in the senior and junior classes has led this meeting at least once during the term.

Friends, will you not please pray that we may be a real help? And that our girls may grow real live helpful Auxiliary members some day. Truly God is in the work here.

Cor. Sec. and Sec. of Spiritual I.
The Hollow, Va.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AT MANNING

During the week of February 10, a Church School of Foreign Missions at Manning, S. C., consisting of three classes, one for men, one for women, and one for young people, was held, sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary. This school was preceded by the "Week of Prayer," for Missions. Dr. Egbert Snodgrass' book, "The Desire of All Nations," profitably used. The classes, consisting of two each, for three successive evenings, had an average attendance of fifty-eight members.

The class for women was taught by Mrs. L. Little, returned missionary from China, who, by her personal experience, added many points of interest to the study. The classes for men and young people were most ably conducted by Rev. J. O. Davis, of Kingston, S. C., and Rev. Charles K. Las, pastor of the local church, respectively. The Executive Board of the Auxiliary, feeling that the School of Missions has been beneficial, have planned to request that the Session hold a similar school next year.

An Appreciation

Dr. Lingle's recent book, entitled "Presbyterian Their History and Beliefs," has been read with keenest interest.

The writer recently spent a good deal of time through several large volumes on Church History, a view to securing the information which is presented in Dr. Lingle's book in such a clear and interesting way.

Our young people and church officers would be delighted with the items contained in this book. It is like a fascinating story and one taking it up could hardly put it down without reading it through.

AFTER THE CANVASS WHAT? FOLLOW UP WORK

Whatever method employed in the every member canvass last Sunday there are probably many in every congregation who for some reason failed to make his or her pledge to the benevolences of the church. Deacons or the Canvassing Committee should make thorough work in seeing each one while the information about the causes is fresh in mind. Make the canvass 100 per cent. complete.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BROADCAST

The First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, through its pastor, Dr. Samuel McPheeters Glasgow, is broadcasting the Sunday School lesson study for the following Sunday on each Monday night from 7:30 to 8 p. m., Central Standard Time. This radio service is put on the air by the Old First Church with the hope that they can serve a large constituency of Sunday School teachers, Bible students and those interested in the Bible and its message.

WNOX has been heard in Canada, Texas and Cuba.

NORTH CAROLINA

Concord—Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, of the school of religion at Duke University, has accepted the invitation of the Concord Ministerial Association to deliver a series of Bible lectures, twice daily, during the week of March 31 to April 7, inclusive, at Central Methodist Church.

China Grove—Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin, of Richmond, Va., country church director of the Presbyterian Assembly of the United States, will be conference leader and principal speaker at a country church conference that will be held on Friday afternoon, March 15, at Back Creek Presbyterian Church, near Mount Ulla, in Rowan County. The program will start at 1:30 p. m., and will last three hours.

The conference, arranged by pastors and members of Thyatira and Back Creek churches, will be open to all other country churches of the Concord Presbytery and each church will be urged to send a large delegation.

A special message for the women of the Presbytery will be brought by Miss Claudia Frazier, director of religious education in the Concord district. Talks will also be made by Dr. J. E. Flowe, superintendent-evangelist of the Presbytery, H. P. Brandt, Presbytery treasurer, and others.

Laurel Hill—Probably the finest piece of work yet accomplished in connection with the endowment campaign for Flora Macdonald College in Scotland County has just been completed at Laurel Hill. In this community there is but a small number of former Flora Macdonald girls, but they have put across a great piece of work. At the beginning of the campaign in this country this small group set for themselves the task of subscribing $600 to be designated as the "Vardell Chair." They decided upon this high goal because, if accomplished, when two additional gifts from outside parties should be added, they would have in reality added $1,000.00 to the endowment fund.

It is with pardonable pride then that they announce the attainment of this purpose. Their untiring efforts were met with a splendid spirit of enthusiasm and interest, which resulted in the accomplishment of this really great task. This is probably the smallest group in the county, but they are the first one to put over their campaign effort. Mrs. Eugene Morgan accepted the responsibility of leadership in the effort among the girls of that community and much of the success is due to their splendid work.

The Presbytery of Orange will meet in its three hundred and eighteenth stated session in the Madison Church, on Tuesday, April 16th, at 7:30 p. m. Charles P. Coble, Stated Clerk. High Point, N. C.

Presbyterian Orphans' Home, Barium Springs—Recent visitors to Barium were Dr. and Mrs. Ross Lynn, and Miss Mammie Adams, of Thornwell Orphanage, Clinton, S. C. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. B. Johnston.

On the first Sunday in March the pulpit at Little Joe's Church was filled by Dr. H. B. Arbuckle, of Davidson College. This was a special service preparatory to our Every Member Canvas. Dr. Arbuckle's subject was Stewardship. It was pointed out that we should not only give our money, but ourselves and our time as well. Dr. Arbuckle is authority on the subject of Stewardship, and we were delighted to have him bring this special message.

Carthage—The good people of the Carthage Church have been exceedingly kind in welcoming my family and me since we came to take up the pastorate here on January 2. The manse has been done over with new wall paper and other improvements, making it a most attractive and comfortable home. The auxiliary has filled our pantry with good things, and held a delightful reception in our honor at the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Welch. But best of all has been the eager and willing spirit with which the people have responded to suggestions for the advancement of the work, and their fine attendance at the church services.

A Mission study class was recently completed, studying Dr. Smith's "The Desire of All Nations," with an average attendance of twenty-five; the week of prayer was observed by well attended services for an hour each afternoon. The Church Choir, directed by Mrs. M. G. Dalrymple, has added greatly to the services, and the Junior Choir, led by Mrs. L. R. Sugg has begun to lead the music for the evening services. Twenty members of our Christian Endeavor recently attended the Rally at Southern Pines. Led by Mr. W. G. Sugg, they hold services at the County Home each fourth Sunday afternoon.

A committee headed by Mr. S. H. Miller has been appointed to make some much needed repairs on the church building, and expect to do this in the early Spring.

At the Eureka Church we are having a School of Missions, with three classes. In spite of extremely bad weather, forty-four had enrolled at the second meeting. I spoke to the Christian Endeavor Society at Eureka last Sunday night, at which more than fifty were present. This is a splendid country church. W. S. Golden.

Charlotte—The annual banquet of the Men's Bible Class of the Second Presbyterian Church was held February 25, in the church clubroom.

Dr. James F. Hardie, pastor of the church and Frank R. McNinch, former mayor of Charlotte and teacher of the class, made the addresses, while the Queens College orchestra gave several numbers and the class members themselves joined in singing under the direction of Ralph Urey. A skit was presented in which Maurice Dunlap impersonated George Washington and C. W. Grimes appeared as Abraham Lincoln.

Held during February, the "birth month of great Americans," including Washington and Lincoln, the banquet also celebrated the wedding month of Mrs. John R. Irwin, the first teacher of the class, who recently with Dr. Irwin celebrated the golden wedding anniversary of their marriage. Mrs. Irwin was presented a beautiful bouquet by the class.

Members of the Queens college orchestra were Miss Margery Hughes, director, and Misses Mary Lee Beach, Margaret Johansen, Laura Martin Jarman, Christine Rosebro, Lucy Lee and Mary Groome McNinch.

Presbytery of Congaree will meet in the Batesburg Church, Batesburg, S. C., on April 22, 1929, at 8 p. b. G. G. Mayes, S. C.

Charleston, First Church—Occasional mention has been made of Mr. J. M. Allardyce in our church papers, and his self-denying work in behalf of our Mexican Missions and the Church in general. Those who have read these references to him in the papers know that he is a retired business man, an elder in the First Church of San Antonio, Texas, and that he is making a tour of our churches with a message about our work in Mexico, and in the interests of personal evangelism. It would be well if our people at large would note the endeavor of this consecrated man, and hear him when the opportunity offers. He has just left Charleston, S. C., and left a splendid impression on the many that heard him. He has the approval of our Committee of Foreign Missions and the endorsement of the churches he has visited. This note is written that our congregations may know of him, and be prepared to give him the hearing he deserves when he visits them. He asks for no contributions and accepts none. His services are altogether voluntary. Alexander Sprunt.

The Presbytery of Pee Dee will meet in Ruby, S. C., on Tuesday, April 16, 1929, at 11:30 a. m.

Columbia — Conference of Chairmen of Religious Education in our various Presbyteries and Synod's Committee on Religious Education, Mrs. George W. Sheffer, Synod's Field Worker, being present also, was held in the First Church, Columbia, December 7. Six Presbyterial Chairmen were present, and an aggressive program of Religious Education for our Synod was carefully considered, and heartily adopted.

1. The Daily Vacation Bible School was commended as an invaluable factor in the work of Religious Education, and it was suggested that Chairmen consider the possibility of securing for the summer one or more of the young women from the Assembly's Training School to assist the weaker churches, especially in putting on such a school. Many Presbyteries have tried this plan and have gotten fine results. The Richmond Committee has in the past agreed to pay half the salary of such a worker, which is only fifteen dollars a week, and the only other expense is that of travel and entertainment. Chairmen who contemplate following this suggestion should proceed at once as the services of these young women are in demand.

2. It was agreed that we would seek to promote the work of Leadership Training by the use of one unit schools, and Standard Training Schools, and Chairmen were asked to consider the plan of holding group or district Standard Training Schools in which a number of churches would combine.

3. Presbyteries are to be asked to set apart an hour at their Spring meeting for the consideration of a specific program of Religious Education for the Presbytery, at which time an effort will be made to ascertain just what is being done along this line in the various Sunday Schools.

4. An effort is to be made to arrange for a conference with the workers in each of our Sunday Schools with a view to checking the work of the Sunday School by the Standard of Efficiency in order to ascertain the possible needs of the School, and for mutual counsel about problems the School may have. It was recognized that these conferences have great possibilities, and the services of Mrs. Geo.

W. Sheffer, Synod's Field Worker, were offered condition Chairmen would arrange an itinerary in their respective Presbyteries. The expense any church would have in connection with Mrs. Sheffer's services would be that of entertainment.

The Presbyterial Chairmen are the key to the successful promotion of any campaign of Religious Education, and it is believed that this confidence in Chairmen, which is to be an annual affair, prove an invaluable factor in the great task of Religious Education in our Synod. R. F. Kirkpatrick.

Hartsville—A circle of the auxiliary prepared a delicious supper for the December meeting of Men of the Hartsville Church which was attended by more than thirty of the men. Rev. H. W. Graham of Florence was the honor guest of the occasion and delivered a splendid address on "Faithfulness." This was followed by J. S. Cathcart, C. M. and J. H. Thornwell, who made brief appeals for faithfulness on the part of the men to the School, the Men's Bible Class and the home pastor, Rev. H. G. Bedinger closed with a summary of the activities of the Men of the year since the beginning of the church year. The meeting was one of the most enjoyable the men have yet had.

The January meeting was held without a hitch at the church.

The program on Foreign Missions was closed by W. H. Miller, J. P. Evans and J. S. C. conducted the Worship Program. G. J. W. Tatum and D. R. Hopkins presented the Education Program in a very interesting and helpful way. The pastor closed with a brief message. Rev. Davis represents this church at Oliviera, Brazil program was well presented, though the attendance was not up to that of the last meeting.

Harmony Presbytery—On March 5 there was held at Kingstree, S. C., a meeting of the Men of the Church. All the ministers of the Presbytery were invited to attend. It was expected that Rev. Swarts, D.D., Rev. Flournoy Shepperson, D. D., Rev. H. G. Bedinger, pastor of the Hartsville Church, would deliver addresses. This meeting was under the auspices of the Committee on Men's Work of the Harmony Presbytery.

On March 13, the Deacons' Association of the Presbytery will hold a convention of deacons at Lake City, S. C. Rev. John McSweeney, President of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina, will deliver an address on "The Deacon According to Scripture." There will be talks by deacons on "The Treasurer of Benevolences of the Presbytery." Rev. W. H. Workman.

Calls for the pastoral services of Rev. C. S. now at Georgetown, have been issued by the churches of Effingham and Hopewell. W. H. Workman.

Bethel Presbyterial Auxiliary will meet at S. C., April 9-10. Mrs. C. S. McCrorey, President.

VIRGINIA

The Presbytery of Winchester will meet in the Presbyterian Church, Winchester, Va., on April 16, 1929, at 8 o'clock p. m. Changed from 9, by the Moderator. Jos. A. McMurray, Stated Clerk.

Newport News—The Standard Training School, an unusually strong faculty began February 1929. More subjects for study have been provided than in any previous year. Two Bible courses (one for men and one for women) were taught by Dr. E. T. Thompson, of the Theological Seminary) and one course (Stewardship) for those interested in any kind of church work.

APPALACHIA

Mount Carmel, Lee County, Va.—The Auxiliary held their quarterly meeting at the church with good attendance and with a fine effect. The program and life service seasoned with the Holy Spirit provided a program of unusual interest. Personal devotion keeps one in close touch with God so that His will may be known; the life service emphasizes the need for Spirit-directed activity. The Christmas spirit of gratitude supplies the power to do His will.

The Sunday School put on an interesting program on Sunday night, December 28th.

Windsor Ave., Bristol—On Sunday afternoon, December 23rd, the choir of this church supplied by some of the leading singers of Bristol beautiful cantata entitled "The Song of the Suffering Servant." Mrs. Karl M. Harrop played the piano and the music, Miss June Allen was violinist, and did variety of sweet music pleased and interested a large audience.

Brevard, N. C.—The Rev. Vernon A. Crawford are under appointment to go as Foreign Missionaries. These friends have done splendid work in the home field and every one of them every blessing in their new work.

Maxwell School, Franklin, N. C.—This school has been facing some serious problems for several years. It is now suggested that the school be put in Manual Training giving the backward boys a chance to get some education and at the same time prepare for becoming useful citizens.

town—Although this church has suffered loss by death and removal of members during year, still the work of the Church has ad-green formed the artistic decorations and every effort was made to carry out the program sent from the department of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, and an offering was sent to that most worthy cause.

The pastor, Rev. C. Barnett Rich, has been conducting a campaign of Personal Evangelism for the past six weeks, presenting his prayermeeting talks along similar lines, and the whole church working at soul winning.

Rev. E. E. Houghton, of the Louisville Theological Seminary, preached to this congregation, both morning and evening, of January 13th, in the absence of the pastor who preached at Oxford, Bethesda and Beards on that day, installing Rev. A. Erickson as pastor of those churches.

On last Friday evening a most enjoyable banquet was given to the members of the Y. P. S. C. E. Music, readings, talks and games formed the program of the evening.

The members of this church were greatly pleased at the announcement of the engagement of the pastor to Miss Ruth Jenkins, of this city.

Wewoka—The First Presbyterian Church of this city has had a struggle during the past year due to the fact that we haven't had a building of our own.

The Presbyterians should have been on this field long ago but it was neglected. We have a wonderful opportunity here in this state which has been neglected by our church.

MISSISSIPPI

Shaw-Benoit—Rev. W. H. McAtee has accepted the call to this pastorate and has already taken up his new work.

Brookhaven—Rev. J. C. Barr, of New Orleans, conducted a very profitable meeting in the Presbyterian Church.

Moss Point—Rev. J. E. Wallace conducted a week's meeting in the Presbyterian Church during the last week in October.

Vicksburg—Mr. Harmon Ayers, son of Rev. A. M. Ayers, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, was received as a candidate for the ministry by the Presbytery of Memphis at its recent meeting.

Greenwood—Rev. Dunbar H. Ogden, pastor of the Government Street Presbyterian Church, Mobile, was recently with Dr. J. P. Marion, pastor of the First Church, in a very gracious meeting.

Montrose—Rev. R. L. Campbell assisted Rev. T. B. West in a splendid meeting. Rev. Mr. West has recently taken charge of this work.

Batesville—The church has purchased a manse, and is looking forward to having a resident pastor at an early date. This is a most commendable effort on the part of this aggressive congregation, and no doubt they will succeed "splendidly well," as one of our distinguished college presidents would say.

FLORIDA

Gainesville—Rev. U. S. Gordon who was the popular pastor of the Starkville Church before becoming Assistant Pastor of the Second Church, Memphis, has accepted the call to the First Presbyterian Church.

Westminster Church, Miami—This Church has been richly blessed in a series of special services led by Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, D.D., pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church of Atlanta.

The meetings were preceded by the observance of a week of prayer. Following the Sunday services of January 13th, the Men-of-the-Church combined their monthly supper and meeting with the prayermeeting of Monday night.

The meetings began on Sunday, January 20th, but as Dr. Flinn could not arrive before Wednesday the 23rd, Rev. Peyton H. Hoge, D.D., of Louisville, and Coral Gables, preached on Sunday morning, and Rev. George B. Laird, D.D., pastor of the Coral Gables Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. occupied the pulpit at night.

This meeting was not one of great ingathering for that was not the primary object. During the church year 1927-28 there were 62 additions to the church. During the first nine months of the current year there had been already 62 additions to the church, and half of this number had united during the quarter immediately preceding these services.

Pensacola—Recent plans and activities in the First Church of Pensacola embrace the following items of interest:

- 1. In April the Woman's Auxiliary will be host to the Florida Presbyterial, this being the second time that the Presbyterial has met with the First church in the past five years.
2. On March 24th the pastor will have charge of a Union Communion Service to be held in the First Church at 4:45 in the afternoon.
3. There will be special services, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, D.D., in the First Church each evening of the last week of March.
4. The congregation will come to the close of the church year in better shape than ever before in its history.
5. Miss Kathlyn Monroe, the efficient superintendent of the Intermediate Department of the Church School, has been elected Director of Young People's Activities in the Church.

ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS Facts and Figures S. L. Morris, D.D.

From the beginning of the present century, Assembly's Home Missions advanced steadily by leaps and bounds, each year ordinarily exceeding the previous in receipts in extent of operations and in additions to the church.

The climax was reached in 1924, when receipts aggregated $688,400. From that date to the present there has been a steady decline. In 1925 there was a decrease of $111,571, total receipts being $576,829. Each succeeding year there has been a deficit averaging over $100,000 annually as compared with 1924, which means a loss to the Cause in four years of $496,851.

It was not reckless appropriations that caused our embarrassing indebtedness. It began in 1925 when the unexpected decline for that year was $111,571.

This decline and consequent indebtedness necessitated a "cut" in appropriations; and so in 1927 the Committee scaled the budget nearly 20 per cent. A second similar "cut" in 1928 became necessary to prevent an increase in the indebtedness.

At this date, March 1st, receipts are less than the same period for last year by $9,378, which forecasts a serious third "cut"—now confronting the Home Mission Committee. At the same time, petitions are pouring into this office, begging piteously for larger assistance in various sections of the church. Each year the applications total nearly $1,000,000, while the income scarcely exceeds half a million.

Will the Church stand by and see the Cause sacrificed, important work abandoned, our missionaries suffer and the growth of the Church halted?

Answer, ye pastors, charged with the leadership of the Church!

Answer, ye Christian people, entrusted of the Lord with the means for extending the Kingdom of God among men—by saving America!

IS THE CHURCH TIRED OF ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS? J. W. Caldwell, D.D.

We may well ask this question. What is the meaning of constantly decreasing receipts for this cause for four or five years? Is the work growing less important? Is the ministering to the Mountain folk, the Indians, Mexicans, Italian, Syrians, Chinese, and Negroes becoming less necessary as the years pass? The attitude of the Southern Presbyterian Church, in its decreasing gifts for Assembly's Home Missions, makes these questions of supreme moment.

No one wants to retard the Foreign Mission work or the Education work, or the Relief work; but what about Assembly's Home Missions? Does our attitude mean we are tired of the task? Here is the basal task, here are the real foundations to the denomination's upbuilding. Cease this work at home and you cut off every possible chance of enlarging abroad. If we do not strengthen the stakes, we cannot lengthen the cords. Fellow workers, let us be fair about this question. Let us be honest with our Master. Let us see that we do not ruin the possibility of enlargement everywhere by a niggardliness here.

When this is written receipts are $9,378 short of the corresponding date last year. Let us not cripple our Assembly's Home Mission work by a short-sighted policy of cutting down our gifts. Let us, as a great Church, do our part by this fundamental work. This cause bears the brunt of the whole burden of retrenchment. It is the first to suffer in any cut. Presbyterian Home Missions must be carried on, that is closest home. Synodical Home Missions is not forgotten, that's our own Synod. But Assembly's Home Missions is remote from us, and a bit hazy to some. It is furthest off, and so we cut there!

The Assembly has set a certain per cent for this work, which, in its judgment, is right and fair. But we set up our own judgment, in Session or Presbytery against that of the Assembly, and we cut down the percentage for this cause. My Brethren, this is not right. The Assembly has said: If a cut is necessary, cut all the causes alike, and thus keep the relative proportion as outlined. That's fair and equitable. Nothing else is. Will we be loyal to our Assembly, and thus be just to Assembly's Home Missions?

Think on these things.

TRANSLATING THE BIBLE

George M. Brown, General Secretary American Bible Society

From the Point of View of the Field

The problems of translating the Bible into another tongue are interestingly described by a missionary who was one of the chief translators of the Scriptures into Bulu, a tongue spoken in the French Cameroun of West Africa. Some of his difficulties follow:

On one occasion Jesus speaking of a son asking his father for a fish inquired whether the father would give his son a serpent. However the Bulu regards serpents or snakes as quite a delicacy hence a Bulu boy would be more pleased at receiving a snake from his father than at receiving a fish. Snakes do not have bones or scales. A fish therefore is not better than a snake to the Bulu.

However, it is better than a centipede. Accordingly centipede instead of serpent is used in the translated text, so the Bulu at once understands that as a father gives his beloved son not a centipede but a fish "so much more is God willing to give good things to them that ask him."

In His sermon on the mount our Lord warns his hearers against "laying up treasure which moth and rust corrupt." But the moths do not trouble Bulu treasures. They have no fur coats and very little cloth of any kind. The moth is not to be included among their vexations. But there is an insect, a very destructive insect, locally known as the bibiam. To the house wife the bibiam is a great annoyance. So the translation is "Do not lay away goods where bibiam and rust eat." And the translation is more forcible than it would be with the literal translation of "moth."

When the translator came to deal with the moral sense or voice of God which we call conscience the task of discovering a proper term was not easy. Different words and phrases were tried and were found to fit about as well as Saul's armor fitted David. At last after a long search a striking native expression for conscience was discovered. It was found that the Bulu have a suggestive term which they apply to their lingering remnant of a conscience which they designate "little man of the heart." And so these quaint suggestive words appear in the Bulu translation and this unique hidden "little man of the heart" speaks louder and is obeyed better since he has taken his place in the oracles of the new-found God.

BEFORE THE BOOKS CLOSE

Egbert W. Smith

With pleasure I comply with the request of the Assembly's Stewardship Secretary to add a word to his appeal for "full and complete payment of all pledges and as much over and above money as possible before the books close on April 5."

The necessity for this is tremendously emphasized by the condition of the Foreign Mission Treasury and I am grieved to hear by that of the other General Assembly causes also. For the ten months closing January 31 our receipts were far the smallest of the last ten years and were $62,000 behind those of the previous year at the same date. Our regular receipts for the eleven months ending February 28 are $698,556, leaving $541,493 to be raised in this closing month of the year if we are to pay the actual estimated cost of the year's work.

Our people are not dealing with budgets and quotas and apportionments in this matter of reaching the unreached. They are dealing with Christ Himself. In every poor hungry heart among them Christ is hungering. In every poor imprisoned life Christ is imprisoned. In every thirsty soul Christ is crying "Give Me to drink." "Inasmuch as ye did it not to these, ye did it not to Me."

Let us all lay hold on Him who is our All-Sufficient Resource. Let us besiege the Throne of Grace for an outpouring of the spirit of prayer and sacrifice that shall mean a forward movement along our Church's whole firing line.

A SUITABLE MEMORIAL

Henry H. Sweets, Secretary

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church of Columbus, Georgia, desiring to honor the memory of a noble and remarkable woman who was its first President and who through her unparalleled work as a teacher rendered such beautiful service to her Master and to her community, is establishing a Memorial Scholarship of $600 in the Student Loan Fund to bear her name. The money is being sent to the Department of Christian Education, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky. It will be known as "The Susie MacDonald Fox Memorial Scholarship." In Westminster Abbey there are two tablets to the memory of John and Charles Wesley. On these you may read the inscription "God buries His workers but carries on His work." This honored president has been called to her reward, but we can help Him carry on some part of her work by contributing to this Fund which, throughout the coming years, will help deserving boys and girls from poor Presbyterian homes to obtain at our colleges the education which will prepare them for leadership in the home, the church, the school, the nation and the world.

Throughout the whole Church there are many others who are worthy of being held in everlasting remembrance and many will rejoice to have a share in a similar "Love Gift," to perpetuate their memory and to extend their usefulness into the coming years.

TRANSLATING THE BIBLE

George M. Brown, General Secretary American Bible Society

From the Office Point of View

"Jesus always speaks in Welsh to me," said a devout woman of Wales.

Thus also must the Bible be made to speak so that he who takes it up may find the Gospel Story written in his own tongue. To that end the entire Bible has been translated into 169 languages and sections of it into 684 additional tongues. An alphabetical acrostic of some of these languages is interesting:

Arabic, Bulu, Cakchiquel, Dikele, Eleku, Fon, Gilbert Islands, Hmar, Ilocano, Jolof, Kurdish, Luba-Lulua, Miskito, Navaho, Olunyore, Pangasinan, Quechua, Ruluk, Tonga, Uvea, Votik, Wedau, Xosa, Yiddish.

The American Bible Society accepts as one of its tasks the obligation to translate the Bible into all languages and dialect. The range of effort in the field of translation may be measured by the expense of the current year. 1929 will see the publication for the first time of the four Gospels in Kuskokwim, an Indian tribe in southwestern Alaska; the four Gospels in Hopi Indians in Arizona; and the Psalms in Quechua, the tongue of one of the native peoples of Bolivia.

Among translations and revisions now in process be mentioned; the completion of the New Testament for the Cheyenne Indians; the translation of the New Testament into the languages of three Indian tribes in Guatemala; the preparation of an improved edition of the Modena Version of the Spanish Bible for Latin America; the translation of the New Testament for the spoken in Bolivia; the translation of Mark and Acts into Shilluk, a tribe living along the White Nile; the completion of the four Gospels and Acts into the West African tribe; the revision of the Turkish Bible; the revision of the Siamese New Testament; an improvement of Old Testament versions in certain Chinese dialects.

WHAT IS IT ALL ABOUT?

Henry H. Sweets, Secretary

This seems to be the question in the minds of members of the Presbyterian family as they hear the needs of the various Departments of the Church. Department of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief was called into being to minister to growing important groups in our Church. We are to have claims of Christian service before the youth of the Church. Almost alone of the denominations of America for the past ten years we have had a steady increase in the number of candidates for the ministry and in the number of these come from homes poor in world's goods, but rich in faith. We are helping year 319 to the amount of $125 each.

By means of loans of $150 each we have enabled choice boys and girls to go to our Presbyterian College but on account of lack of funds we had to decline earnest application of 53 who were eager for an education to prepare them for larger service. The Department is helping the Synods to care for the larger number of youth from Presbyterian homes in state dependent institutions of higher education. One of every six or seven or eight of these comes from a Presbyterian home. We must keep them in some touch with the life and worship and service of the church during this formative period of their lives.

We are also caring for 165 faithful servants of and our Church who have worn themselves out in service of the Master and for widows and orphans 293 homes of our ministers and missionaries. The amount provided for a family this year is $41.13 a day per family. For these and other ministries the Assembly requested $353,500 of which on March 1, $163,820.44 had reached the Louisville office. The amount yet to be secured in the single month of March is $189,679.56. In March 1928 $67,587.00 was remitted to 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky., for the work. In order to reach the goal this year this must be increased almost three-fold.

A CALL TO THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

By Mrs. W. C. Winsboro

Reports from the Executive Committee indicate a appalling deficit in the offerings for the work of the Auxiliary. Every department is showing a falling off in gifts including the Woman's Auxiliary.

Will the Auxiliary allow this falling off to continue and show a decrease in its gifts for the first time in seventeen years of existence? There is no doubt such will be the case on March 31st unless the Auxiliary bestir themselves with the next two weeks, as they never done before and see that their total offering at least equal the amount given last year.

Why are we failing to measure up to our Budget for this year?

Certainly it is not because God is withholding His blessing on the work of our Missionaries. Never they labored harder, or had more encouraging reports than during the past year. Souls are being won for your dollars and mine.

Is the Auxiliary failing to reach its responsibility because its members lack money? Nay—verily! few individuals may have less money than last year but the overwhelming majority of our women are absorbed in discussing the spring ensemble suit, the summer pleasure trips, or the new car to be purchased this year. America is the richest nation in the world and yet she has the money! Yet our gifts to the Church are small.

Is indifference our trouble? No, surely not! We have not forgotten God's gift to us of His beloved Son. His last commandment to us to carry the good news to all others. Christian women cannot be indifferent to the progress of the Kingdom.

The trouble may be partly because the word Bible is uninspiring and prosaic and fails to stir our imaginations and fire our imaginations.

What is a BUDGET? What lies behind that word what really does it include?

The BUDGET is our reply to the call of the millions beyond the seas who are our own responsibility.

The Lord In This Great Time Of

BUDGET is our answer to the needy cry of the plain folk and the Indian, the Mexican and the Chinese. It includes our response to the plea of the thousands of children, who have "never had a chance." The BUDGET holds our answer to the cry of aged ministers, the widows and orphans of ministers who have passed on.

BUDGET is our response to the call of the Master to do all the glorious work of our beloved Church. It is the symbol of our part in her great world task. Can YOU do about this situation?

WE CAN WORK. Every Auxiliary officer and member will at once see that her offerings to the Auxiliary BUDGET for this year at least equal those of last year. I have kept our promise made when we adopted the budget. Surely we will all do this.

WE CAN PRAY. Churches are many thousands of dollars behind in gifts to the Assembly's Committees. Unless God saves the day, it is hard to contemplate what the wreckage of our churches' work. We have had fifty thousand women enrolled in our Prayer Groups. Will not every Auxiliary call her Prayer Groups at once, that they may pray daily, earnestly and importantly that our members may have their hearts opened to meet the emergency of the hour and their riches into the Lord's treasury of the gold God has loaned to them? We must "pray without ceasing" until this threatened day is averted, and our Church's work is saved to its record of glorious achievement for the King-

PAY WHAT THOU OWEST

R. E. Magill, Secretary

and pay unto the Lord your God." Psalm 76:11. Presbyterian Church, U. S., holds that sacrificial is a sure road to an enriched spiritual life, and prompt and regular payment of all pledges. It is a disgrace to our Church and dishonoring to God that a large part of our benevolent funds are received during the last quarter of the year, and about 25 per cent. come in during the last month of the year. The Churches pay each year thousands of dollars in interest on money borrowed to pay salaries to workers, because they do not forward collections promptly. March would see the promise of every individual and every church paid in full.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

Bible tells us that Jesus went about all Galilee, preaching and healing. Those were the three departments of his ministry. In this article we want to speak especially of the teaching department. John Calvin wrote his book of government for the church at Geneva, it provided for pastors, teachers, and deacons. His teachers were not ordained. Special duty was to teach the young, and in their teaching they were to place especial emphasis upon religion. John Knox sat at the feet of John Calvin in Geneva for several years, and when he wrote his book of government for the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, he followed in Calvin's steps. Great emphasis was laid upon the teacher, upon education, and especially upon education in the home. In America the state has taken over public education and the state trains the public school teachers. Reliance is left out of the training of the teachers and left to the education of the children in the public schools. It has become an urgent necessity that the church should provide a large number of teachers who are especially trained to teach religion in our homes, in our Sunday Schools, and in our churches. It was the realization of this need which caused our General Assembly, fifteen years ago, to found the General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers. The purpose of the Training School is to train men and women for all forms of Christian service, at home and abroad, except the ministry. In the founding of the Training School for this purpose the General Assembly is simply walking in the fine old Presbyterian way which was followed by John Calvin, John Knox and other Presbyterian forefathers. It is a big task which our General Assembly has laid upon its Training School. We hope to tell what the General Assembly's Training School has done in these fifteen years.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

The president of a college of high grade wrote to the State Board of Education of Virginia asking about the General Assembly's Training School, here is what he said: "Thomas D. Eason of the State Board of Education in response to your inquiry concerning the rating of the General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers, 30 Brook Road, Richmond, Va., I take pleasure in stating that while the institution does not fall under the headings which the Virginia State Board of Education has for institutions of higher learning, the school recognizes the work done at the Assembly's Training School as college work. I had the pleasure of initiating the work and found it to be of a very high grade. A large number of the students are college graduates and they are taught by instructors who compare favorably with department heads in most universities."

WHY IS OUR CHURCH WAITING?

Rev. Jas. M. McChesney

In an article in our church papers of January 16th, Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D., asks the question, "What Is Our Church Waiting For?" The facts show that our Foreign Mission work is standing still or going backward. Why are we not going forward? Lack of funds. Why a lack of funds?

How about our great Home Mission work, are we advancing? Are we planning to take advantage of conditions being brought about in our Southland by the great industrial developments which are taking place? If not, why not? Lack of funds. Why this lack of funds?

There must be a reason for this lack of funds.

What is the reason? This is the problem to find and to solve. This problem should have the careful consideration of the leaders of the whole church. There is something wrong with our church life today. An expression of opinion through our church papers might help to solve this problem. I want to give some reasons why I believe our church is waiting.

The church is better organized than ever before. While the organization is not perfect, it has been carried out along well defined lines until it has reached a large part of the church. Millions of dollars have been and are being spent to enlarge and improve material equipment. There are more paid full time workers, aside from the ordained ministers, than ever before. The Assembly's Training School has sent out hundreds of trained workers who are employed throughout the church. Summer Conferences of all kinds, Young Peoples Conferences, Leadership Conferences, Schools of Methods, Schools of Missions, and similar meetings are training our people for larger and better service. Our people are better informed about the work of the church than they have ever been. With all the modern equipment, paid workers and trained leadership it takes twenty Southern Presbyterians a whole year to lead one soul to Christ by profession. It took that number twenty years ago. The average yearly increase for the past twenty years on profession of faith has been five per cent. No increase in rate of growth but a big increase in expenses. May we not reasonably expect larger gains with increased and improved material equipment, than with poor equipment? May we not reasonably expect more results in souls saved from full time paid workers and trained leadership, than from volunteer and untrained leaders? What is this material equipment, organization, and trained leadership worth if we accomplish no more with these things, than we did without them? Have we substituted these things for the spiritual? "But by my Spirit, saith the Lord," is true today. We are standing still in our great task of soul-winning. Here we find one of the reasons why our church is waiting.

Lack of funds. Lack of funds for what? Not for building. $3,325,000 for building last year. Not for current expenses. $3,496,000 for current expenses last year. The church as a whole, spent twice as much for self as she gave for the Benevolent causes. Some of our churches are contributing much more to benevolences than they are spending upon themselves. While other churches have a current expense account, aside from pastor's salary and building expense, of two or three or four times as much as they give for benevolences. A few churches have been selected to illustrate this fact. In making these calculations I have not taken into account the contributions to Congregational Missions. A church with a membership of 450 gave for benevolences $10 per member and $15 for current expenses. A church with a membership of 483 gave $4 per member for benevolences and $15 for current expenses. A church with a membership of 639 gave $20 per member for benevolences and $32 for current expenses. A church with a membership of 828 gave $17 per member for benevolences and $6 for current expenses. A church with a membership of 560 gave $46 per member for benevolences and $17 for current expenses. A church with a membership of 2,024 gave $4 per member for benevolences and $12 for current expenses. A church with a membership of 1,100 gave $51 per member for benevolences and $15 for current expenses. Some of our churches have the Kingdom vision and are supporting the Kingdom liberally, others are self-centered and selfish. Suppose all our churches gave twice as much to benevolences as they put into their current expense account budget then our benevolent contributions would be increased $1,900,000 a year. If some of our churches can give three times as much to benevolences as they spend for current expenses surely the whole church can give twice as much. This spending so much on self is another reason for this lack of funds.

Where do we as leaders of the church stand in relation to this task? Something wrong with the pew or the funds would come in. Something wrong with the elders and deacons or the funds would come in. Back of officers and pew is the pulpit. If there is anything wrong in the pew, there is usually something wrong in the pulpit first. Back of the pulpit is the study and the closet. Have we left the ministry of the word to serve tables in this era of organization and building? Are we faithful in declaring the whole counsel of God? Are we diligent in going from house to house in faithful pastoral work? There may come back the reply, "I haven't time for study and prayer, I haven't time for visiting from house to house." Can we afford to neglect these most important duties for anything? Are we enduring hardness as good soldiers of the Cross? Are we with our increased salaries, improved living conditions and the easy comfortable mode of traveling doing better work than we did before we had these things? In what measure are we, the teachers of the word responsible for our church standing still in the great Home and Foreign Mission work?

"What Is Our Church Waiting For?" For her leaders to call her membership by preaching and example, to heart searching repentance, to unselfishness, larger vision, economic living, sacrificial giving, more thorough consecration. Abingdon, Va.

The opening address will be by R. A. Lapsley, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Columbia.

The program of the convention will be built around the theme of "The Campaign with Christ," the campaign now being waged among the young people of many denominations, even some who are not otherwise affiliated with the Christian Endeavor organization. In addition to conferences on Christian Endeavor methods, special emphasis will be put upon denominational loyalty and national projects.

Out-of-state speakers include Mr. A. J. Shartle, pastor of the International Society of C. E., Boston, and Mr. W. Roy Breg, Southern Secretary of the International Society.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC

Day, March 24—Making Jesus King—Mt. 21:1-11:13.

Leader's Talk

As we are approaching Easter, and our lesson today is the passage about Christ's Triumphal Entry into Jerusalem. Jesus was proclaimed king by the ecstatic people who gathered on the road from Bethany to Jerusalem. We note that the children of the young people joined in that throng, and raised their voices in the cry, Hosanna to the Son of David! Another passage is from Colossians and points to that intelligent and loving service Christ expects from those whom he has chosen as his subjects. In our young people, we may this day unite our voices in joyful praises with those of that great day so long ago, and offer to Christ to join his Crusade with us.

The Triumphal Entry

It must have been a fine morning that Sunday Jesus started from Bethany to Jerusalem. The air was filled with the breath of spring, for it was a beautiful weather, and great crowds of people had gathered to the passover. Jesus knew his death was awaiting him, because the Jews would reject him as the Messiah. As he went along with his disciples that day, he quietly told two of them to go and get a donkey which was tied with its mother, and bring it to him. They did as he bade them, and when they came back, the disciples took off their cloaks and set Jesus on the back of the colt. As he came riding along, suddenly, the people saw him and he looked so kingly, that they began to shout, Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is he who cometh in the name of the Lord! Many tore off branches of the palm trees growing near, and cast them in front of Jesus and the colt. And thus they went on until they came nearly to Jerusalem.

The Young People Sing Hosanna

It was the fulfillment of a prophecy by Zechariah: Behold thy king cometh unto thee, sitting upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. As the procession neared the city, the news swept the walls of Jerusalem, and great throngs came to meet them. And many more joined in the glad Hosanna in the highest!

The crowd that sang and shouted as Jesus rode there were many boys who helped to swell the throng of voices. These young people even followed after he had descended from the back of the colt and had gone up into the temple, and they continued to cry out, Hosanna to the Son of David. The children loved Jesus, because he was so kind to them.

The noise the young people made was quite offensive to the priests of the Jews, and they protested to Jesus about it, and asked him to make them stop it. He replied, Have ye never read, Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?

Why Make Jesus King?

Why did the people act as they did on this Sunday? Why did they call Jesus a king? It was the fulfillment of prophecy, we are told. Jesus was very popular with the masses of the people. Several times they tried to force him to be their king. If the chief priests had not predicted they might have made him king. And a king was not what they wanted, but a rejected king. For on Friday of that week some of these same people probably stood by the wayside and jeered at him.

Jesus wants to be king over our lives today. He offers himself as our sovereign. He is God's Son, and has the right to our allegiance. He will rule over us, and will conquer our enemies. It will mean the greatest happiness for Jesus to reign over us. Jesus does not rule us; we must give our loyalty to the evil one, which will mean misery and death to our souls.

Intelligent Service to Christ

As I told the Colossians he was praying for you to be filled with the knowledge of Christ's will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding. If we make Christ our king, our greatest desire should be to know his will. We should wish to know what he wants us to be in this life, and what we should do with each duty. We want to act with wisdom, and have a spiritual understanding instead of a fleshly and gross idea of life and its purposes.

The service of Christ demands intelligence and education. It calls upon us for study and reflection on life's values. Christ as our king claims all we have and all we are, our gifts, our time, our influence, our money, and we must render to him each service with the finest and strongest spirit in our hearts.

Loving Service for Christ

The service of Christ offers every young man and woman a place to invest their all in intelligent application of what we have and are. But more than that, he asks of us a service of love and devotion. Paul goes on to tell the Colossians that he prays for them to walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God, strengthened with all might according to his glorious power unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness, giving thanks unto the Father.

So the service of Jesus, when we make him our king calls for love and joyous consecration of our lives to him.

The Crusade With Christ

The slogan of the Young People's Societies this year is the Crusade with Christ, and the young people are asked to do personal work in telling their friends about Christ, and getting them to accept him as a savior, to work for world peace among all men, to make ourselves good citizens of our own country, and try to encourage all to work for a better land to live in. If we can make Jesus king of America, and work with him in his crusade for right and goodness, we shall make ourselves happy and bring happiness to the world.

In the smaller villages of Mexico the houses are frequently of sun-baked bricks, plastered and painted, with roofs of palm or corrugated iron. The floors are usually of brick or cement, but in the very poor homes, plain earth. The bed is the pride of the housewife. A crocheted spread is most prized, and there will be a thick bolster or pillows with a wide fluted strip in the case showing a color through it, usually red. In the rockers or settee they usually have fancy embroidered cushions of satin or painted velvet. The enlarged pictures of father, mother and one or two of the children adorn the walls, and frequently there are paintings or drawings made by some of the children at school.

Poem

If every little child could see
Our Saviour's shining face,
I think that each one eagerly
Would run to His embrace.

Tho' black the hand, red, brown or white,
All hearts are just the same;
Each one is precious in His sight,
Each one He calls by name.

And those who hear in every land,
With loyal hearts and true,
Will grasp some little brother's hand
And lead him onward too.

WEST VIRGINIA

McKinnon Chapel, Charleston.—One of Bream's Memorial's five missions, held a series of meetings beginning Thursday, January 31st, and closing Sunday, February 17th. Excellent preparation was made by the members of the church in the community. Every family was visited personally, at least once. Also a personal letter was sent to every home in the community, asking for their prayers and hearty cooperation in bringing Christ to the hearts and homes of this community.

The services were conducted by Rev. C. R. Garrison, Superintendent of Home Missions in Kanawha Presbytery, whose messages were delivered with great earnestness and power. The attendance during these services was excellent, the total present during the meetings being 1,247.

Special prayer services were conducted several Thursday evenings preceding the meeting. We feel that the greatest help, however, was the definite prayers sent up to God by Bream Church and her other four missions.

Bible reading in the home was very conspicuous throughout the services, 1,248 chapters having been read—an average of more than seventy-three chapters each evening. Scripture quotations were also called for during the meetings, with good results.

There were twenty professions of faith, sixteen of whom were received into the church (sixteen by profession and one by re-instatement). At the last service on Sunday evening, Mr. Garrison asked for reconsecrations, and about seventy responded to this call. We feel that God has richly blessed our work here, and with a strong reinforcement in our church, we expect His Kingdom to advance rapidly in this community.

The choir, consisting mainly of young people, was led by Mr. J. L. Heizer, of Bream. They did splendid work.

E. Summers McGavock, Pastor.

Kanawha City.—The week ending February 3rd was perhaps one of the most interesting enjoyed by this church this year. Sunday January 27th, 17 new members were received at the close of a two weeks' meeting. Of this number, three generations were represented in one family; one of those coming upon restatement was formerly a member of the Congregational Church, London, England.

Monday evening the regular monthly meeting of Men-of-the-Church was attended by 67 men. The program consisted of a talk on the first three kings of Israel by the pastor, in a series requested of him by the men a few months ago; selections by the church orchestra, male quartet and a male trio; and a debate on the question "Resolved that New Year's resolutions are a good thing." Much wit and humor was displayed both in the debate and the decision of the judges.

Wednesday evening the School of Missions began with 55 in attendance. Each family brought a covered dish and the circle in charge arranged the meal which was served in cafeteria style. This was followed by a brief devotional and then classes for Primary, Junior, Intermediate, Young People, Men and Women.

Friday evening the Men's Class entertained the Women's Class at a banquet—the outcome of an attendance contest in which the men lost. Sixty men and women were present on this occasion. The most friendly rivalry exists between these two classes and it is no uncommon sight to see 25 to 40 men at Sunday School and as many women.

Sunday morning, February 3rd, 6 more were received into church membership, making a total of 23 received to date as the result of a special meeting in which the pastor, Rev. B. F. Sperrow, did the preaching and the local choir furnished the music. This brings the total membership of the church up to 183—of which number, 160 have been received since April, 1925, or during the present pastorate.

Kanawha Presbytery.—On Sunday morning February 10th, a Sunday School was organized at McConnell, W. Va., by Rev. C. R. Garrison, Superintendent of Home Missions. Seventy-four were enrolled as members and Mr. F. H. Leach was elected Superintendent. Mr. Leach has been teacher of the Bible Class of the Logan Presbyterian Church and is a very efficient leader and teacher. Mr. Shirley Jimison was elected assistant superintendent. Mr. R. H. Craddock, treasurer; Miss Lula Robinett, secretary; Mr. Wade Cooper, assistant secretary; Mrs. W. D. Browning, Primary; Mrs. W. B. Hale, Intermediate; Mr. C. E. Cooper, Junior; Mrs. F. H. Leach, Adult, and Mr. Ed. Browning, Young People.

There are about 140 children besides adults in this district and no religious work of any kind being carried on. Arrangements were made at the organization for preaching services every Sunday afternoon. Rev. A. M. Stout, Missionary at Mallory-Landville; Rev. C. D. Whitely, of Logan, and Rev. C. R. Garrison, Supt. H. M., will do the preaching. There is a fine prospect here for a great future for this work.

Most of our studies this quarter have had to do with the Gospel in its relation to the life of the individual. It is only right that before we complete our study we should consider the Christian's obligation to carry this Gospel to the ends of the world. That is the real theme of our present study.—Stewardship and Missions.

'Why should we preach the Gospel to all the world?' that is the first question that forces itself upon us. And if we are convinced that the obligation is a real one, we face inevitably a second question, 'How can we fulfill this obligation?'

Read the passages assigned for our study with these two questions in mind. Then sit quietly and think them through for yourselves. For example in connection with the first question. What arguments would you use to convince a professing Christian who did not believe in missions? What arguments would you use to convince a non-Christian that missions were a legitimate enterprise? In connection with the second question you will decide at once that if we are to help in the mission cause we must give of our money. But how much should we give? What principles are to guide us in our giving? Let us not leave this lesson till we and our classes have come to some very definite conclusions regarding our own missionary obligations.

I. Why Should We Send the Gospel to Other Lands?

Different reasons commend themselves to different men. To us most of these reasons reduce themselves in the last analysis to two: (1) the love of God, and (2) the love of man.

(1) The Love of God Constrains Us. We believe that God's purpose for the world is revealed to us in the pages of Holy Scripture, and above all in the life and death of our Lord Jesus Christ. That purpose from the very beginning embraces the blessing, the salvation of not a fraction but the whole of mankind. Take a few passages by way of example.

Gen. 12:1-3. The first eleven chapters of Genesis summarize the whole history of mankind before the call of Abraham, about 2000 B. C. The writer is not interested in the gradual development of civilization, or the rise and fall of states. He tells us how God made the world, and created man in the image of God, how sin came into the world, and spread in the human race until the whole of mankind became corrupt, and God was compelled to destroy the man whom He had made by a flood. He tells us how a new start was made with Noah, how sin reappeared in the family of Noah, and spread once more through the race until man as a whole had again rebelled against God. Then God chose Abraham, determining to reveal Himself to his descendants in ever increasing measure until at last in the fullness of the times he would send His only begotten Son that He might save His people from their sins. And when He called Abraham He promised him that through him ultimately all the families of the earth would be blessed.

Ex. 19:5-6. Five hundred years later Moses led the descendants of Abraham out of the land of Egypt where they had been severely oppressed by the Egyptians. When they came to Sinai God offered to make a solemn compact or covenant with the nation. "If ye will obey my voice . . . then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples, and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests." The priest in olden times was a mediator between God and man, he brought men into the presence of God, and secured for them the divine blessing. Israel was to be a priestly nation. The implication is that they were to bring other nations to God, and enable them also to secure the divine blessing.

Is. 2:1-4. The Israelites as a whole frequently rejoiced in their privileges as the Chosen People of God, and forgot the obligations of their position. But the great prophets never lost sight of the divine purpose that was being carried on through Israel as the priestly nation. Isaiah for example sought to bring the people back to a greater loyalty to God by reminding them that "it shall come to pass in the latter days that the mountain of Jehovah's house shall be established on the top of the mountains . . . and all nations shall flow unto it. And many peoples shall go and say, Come ye and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, to the house of the God of Jacob, and He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths."

Jer. 31:31-34. Jeremiah lived in evil days. A century and a half earlier Israel the northern nation had been carried into captivity, and the people had been swallowed up by the surrounding nations. Judah the southern kingdom was also about to go over the precipice. Israel as a nation had not observed their pledges, and the old covenant was about to be dissolved. Jeremiah predicted, however, that the time would come when God would make a new covenant with His people (Jesus had this prediction in mind when he said, This is the blood of the new Covenant), and this new covenant would succeed where the old covenant had failed. "And they shall teach no more every man every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying, Know Jehovah; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith Jehovah."

Jonah. Jonah was probably the last of the Old Testament books. It was written to remind the Jews who had returned from captivity of their missionary obligations. It tells the story of a prophet who was commanded to proclaim God's word to Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, the cruellest, the most wicked nation of antiquity. Jonah sought to evade the commission. But his experience with the fish caused him to change his mind. When Nineveh repented at his preaching however and God decided to spare the nation Jonah revealed his true feelings. He was angry because the nation was to be spared. Jonah represents the attitude of the Jews toward the people of the surrounding nations. The author of this book tells us more clearly than any other writer in the Old Testament that God loves all people, that He wants the Gospel to be proclaimed to all nations, and that even the most unlikely people will respond if the Gospel is offered to them.

Mt. 8:11; 28:18-20; Acts 6:1-8. Jesus preached a Gospel that was free from all national limitations. He declared that the time would come when men would come from the east and the west and sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven. After his resurrection he appeared to a large number of his disciples in Galilee and commanded them to make disciples of all the nations. Just before he ascended back up into the heavens he said to his disciples: "Ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you: and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Acts 26:12-20. 2d Cor. 5:14. The greatest of all the disciples of Jesus was the Apostle Paul. He tells us in the Acts how the commission came to him to preach the Gospel unto the Gentiles. His whole subsequent life is summed up for us in his own phrase: 'I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision.' One of the great motives which compelled him to wander back and forth over the face of the civilized world is put before us in 2 Cor. 5:14. "The love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that one died for all."

John 3:16. Rev. 21:24. John was the disciple who leaned on Jesus' bosom, and who entered into his thoughts more fully perhaps than any other. He has put the Gospel into a single sentence: For God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life. And he closes his great vision (the book of Revelation) with a picture of the eternal city, the nations walking in the midst of the light thereof.

God's purpose, the purpose for which our Savior gave His life, included the salvation of all peoples. And if we love God, if we love our Lord, we are constrained to do our bit to carry forward this purpose.

2. The love of our fellowman constrains us. This point of view is admirably represented by a little story told recently in this paper by Dr. Fulton. During the course of a journey from Cincinnati to Nashville he fell into conversation with a doctor. As they talked Dr. Fulton mentioned casually that he had been for several years a missionary in Japan. "Whereupon my companion turned to me and said, 'You know, there has always been one question that I have wanted to ask about this foreign mission business. I wonder if you would mind if I asked you with perfect frankness something that has been on my mind and heart for a long time?'

"'Why no,' I replied, 'go ahead and I will do the best I can to answer it.'

"'Well,' he said, 'it has always seemed to me to be highly presumptuous for a people of a young civilization like our own to go over there to China, and Korea and India and Japan, nations whose civilizations were thousands of years old before ours was ever born, and presume to tell them what they are to believe concerning God and religion; especially when we all concede the fact that these people have a genius for religion, and that every great religious system under the sun of which we have any knowledge, has come to us from the East. I have a nurse working for me in my hospital in Louisville, who has traveled somewhat extensively in the Orient, and she shares with me the views that I have just expressed. What do you think about it?'

"'Well,' I said, 'before I make definite reply, may I beg the privilege of asking you a question?'

"'Certainly,' he replied, 'what is it?'

"'Doctor,' I said, 'it has been a common custom until very recently in many oriental countries, and one that still persists in some, whenever a person was suffering from certain diseases to take a long needle, perhaps eight or ten inches in length, and plunge it into the body at various places, with the idea that the whole cause of the trouble was demon-possession, and that the only way to get rid of it was to make it so uncomfortable for the evil spirit that he would have to get out. Now, Doctor,' I said, 'they have been practicing these methods of cure for thousands of years—long before what we call scientific medicine was ever known in this country. Now the question I want to ask you is this: Would you count it presumptuous in you yourself to leave your home and your friends and every traditional tie and go across the ocean to these far away lands, at your own expense, at no cost whatever to the people whom you go to serve; to spend your life in exile, so to speak, among a strange people, binding up their wounds, comforting their hearts and suggesting to them that there are more effective, less painful ways of treating simple human maladies than by means of these drastic methods that they employ? Would you count that presumption, or would you consider it a kindness?'

"'The Doctor replied, 'I believe I see your point.'"

The simple truth is that we have found something in the Gospel that gives us peace and strength in this life, and hope for the life to come. If we love our fellowmen we simply must share it with them. Perhaps Paul had this in mind when he said: "I am debtor both to Greeks and to Barbarians. So as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you also that are in Rome. For I am not ashamed of the gospel: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Rom. 1:14-16.

II. How Can We Carry the Gospel to Other Lands?

If we recognize the obligation to carry the Gospel to other lands, in other words if we really love God and if we really love our fellowmen, this is the next question that we must face. Two things are necessary.

1. We must have men. There are some hyper-idealistic bodies that seem to think that God can convert the world without the help of man. Jesus did not agree with them. The last commission that he left to his disciples was to go into all the world and make disciples of all the nations. "Ye shall be my witnesses," he said in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Acts 1:8. There is an old legend which says that when Jesus had completed His work on earth, the angel Gabriel asked Him, "What plans hast thou made Lord, for carrying on Thy mission? How are all men to know what Thou hast planned? I left it to Peter and James and John and Mary and Martha to tell their friends, and their friends to tell their friends, until the whole world has heard," replied Jesus, "But suppose Peter is so busy with his nets, and Mary so full of her housework, or the friends they tell of, occupied, that they forget to tell their friends, what plans hast Thou made?" Then Jesus said, "I have no other plans; I am counting on them!" And the simple truth about the matter. He is counting on men. If the Gospel is to spread there must be men who will tell other men in the home lands, and there must be men who will go to foreign lands as missionaries. It may be that some who read these lines will face the question as to whether or not God is calling them. Many men have served your church as preachers. How many men have gone forth from your church to preach the Gospel? Is your church doing its quota? Is it giving back to the church what it gets from the church? If not what can you do about it?

2. We must have money. Men cannot preach the Gospel in the home lands or in the foreign fields unless there is money to send them, money to support them, money to give them the equipment (hospitals, schools, churches, residences) that are absolutely essential. The budget which our church has adopted does not meet the needs of the field, but the minimum which must be raised if the work is to be maintained. There is no doubt whether that minimum will be raised this year or next year there must be a disastrous promising work abandoned, native workers cruelly treated. There are other needs in the home field as urgent. One comes back from a meeting of a church court heart sick. There are so many doors which we cannot enter, so much promising work from which we must withdraw, because we lack the money. Certainly the kingdom will never advance as it has until Christians give as they should. What are the principles of Christian giving?

(1) In the O. T. the standard is the tithe. Cf. Lev. 27:30-33; Mal. 3:7-12. Is the tithe binding upon Christians? The students of the Bible think that it is. The writer here has to confess that he does not agree with them. He feels however, that most of us can afford to give at least a tenth of our income, and if so we should be able to give as much as the Jew was required to give. There are many Christians who should give much more than the tithe.

(2) Paul puts the NT ideal of giving before us in 1 Cor. 16:2. He is writing to the Corinthian church about a collection for the poor members of the Jerusalem church. He tells us first who is to give. Each one is to be excepted. That is the principle of our church has worked into the every member canvass. He tells us second how we are to give. First it must be systematic. Systematic in the time of giving. Every week. Systematic also in the amount which is given. Paul wants them to take thought and to determine the amount which they have decided upon. So in every member canvass we want every man to pledge a certain amount for every week. A great many men prefer to give just out of their pockets. But that is not intelligent giving, and generally it is not generous giving. A man gives 50 cents and thinks he has done well. If he decides on a definite amount and compares that sum to his income he will generally find that what has given is insignificant, less perhaps than he spends for his recreation, or his cigars. Some men prefer to give single check for the year or for the quarter. No man can realize what he is giving unless he makes a weekly pledge. It sounds better to say $50 for the year, than $4 each week. Paul tells us in the same place that our giving must be proportionate. According as God has prospered us. We can't lay down an arbitrary amount. The tithe is certainly a good proportion to figure from. Perhaps it is the best proportion for most of us. There may be some who cannot give more. There are certainly many who should give more.

Paul gives us a fine example of Christian giving in 2 Cor. 8:1-9. We cannot examine the passage in detail, but note that these Macedonian Christians gave joyfully. 8:2. Paul does not speak of the richness of their gift. It could not have been much, for they were poor. It was their liberality that was rich. The liberal man's gift does not depend upon the size of one's income. (2) They gave sacrificially. 8:2-3. (3) They gave joyfully. 8:2. (4) They gave themselves to the Lord and placed themselves absolutely at His disposal. That is the way that God would have us all to do. Let us measure ourselves by these standards which hold before us in the word.

Do we give systematically? Do we give proportionately—as the Lord has prospered us? Do we give joyfully, sacrificially, joyfully—having first given our hearts to the Lord and to His will for our lives? These are the questions between us and our Lord. And they are the very roots of the Christian life, and of Christian discipleship.

CHILDREN

Upon a time there was a young prince who was somewhat spoiled. He was the only child and wanted everything for himself. Even when he was to share something with the children who were occasionally to come to the palace and play with him—he would give them the best and keep the best for himself. He was rather shrewd, he was about selecting the best to eat. If there was an apple with a red end, or an orange somewhat green at the end, or a little cake not so big as the smaller nuts, he would bestow these upon his friends with a good air, perhaps saying: "The prince wishes you to enjoy his companions, being polite people, who had been taught to do their best behavior when they were at the palace, would accept what he gave them without protest. There was one little lad who came to the palace grounds some- times with his father, who was the gardener. And nearly always he brought something to the prince who he admired very greatly. What he brought, was the very nicest—the biggest and ripest peach, the earliest rose from the home garden, a pot of clear, golden honey, or a jar in its glass container like a jewel.

The prince was always much pleased in return he would occasionally bestow something upon Toby, such as the books of which he was tired or had become torn, or a garment which he wished to wear.

As the prince grew older, his greediness grew with him, as natures have a way of doing, and one day when he was out hunting in the forest, he was separated from his serving men, and in his great dismay, found that he wandered on and on, growing more and more frightened. Nightfall came and he shook with terror. He saw the green, shining eyes of owls in the darkness, and, not knowing what they might be, he ran from them, perhaps stumbling as he fled.

At the end of these flights, he stumbled over an old root and went headlong—slipping into dark, muddy waters. He came up with a fright, and to his relief, a light appeared and a voice cried to him to keep up his courage.

A few minutes the prince was up on the bank, and he then saw that the water was really only a pool, but large enough to have drowned him. His rescuer was Toby, who was camping in the woods with his brothers. The prince was very pleased and said, "I shall be rewarded for this!" Toby answered again and again—"richly indeed! We will go to the palace and you shall bring back with you a token of my gratitude."

Toby and his two older brothers and the prince set off for the palace, and the prince set off for the palace, the prince riding on a stout, little, black horse. One was greatly relieved to see the prince return safely, and as loud rejoicing. Toby and his brothers were fed and bidden to rest until they were rested. Before they departed, the prince placed upon the back of Toby, a gleaming jewel.

"You must always keep," said the prince, "for it will bring you much good when you tell people how you love me, and that I, the prince himself, gave you this lovely gem. You may show it down to your children for they will know what a brave fellow you are."

Several years went past, and the prince was grown. He was now King and had replaced his father. But one day his enemies invaded the kingdom and deposed the king from his throne. He fled for his personal safety, in disguise to a distant country. No one knew of his departure but his old friend.

At last he had the prince been able to make, that he had been able to take either food or money with him, but he had never worried about such things as that, and he was now. In his dress as a common laborer, he boarded the small boat of a fisherman, who was to take

WHEN DOLLY IS SICK

(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

"When Dolly is sick," says YELLOW-haired Susie May, "I always send for Doctor Teddy."

BROWN-haired Teddy is Susie May's neighbor, and comes to play with Susie May.

Susie May wears a PINK (use RED lightly) dress with White collar and cuffs. Her tie is BLACK like her shoes.

Dolly is dressed in a light BLUE flannel gown and Susie May has tied a RED flannel cloth about her neck.

Teddy wears GREEN trousers and a White blouse with a RED tie. He has BROWN shoes on and the bag he carried is BROWN, too. The derby hat lying beside the bag is BLACK.

Susie May's chair is light YELLOW with large RED flowers and GREEN leaves on it. The legs are BROWN.

Both children and Dolly have PINK cheeks and RED lips.

The wall is light BROWN and the chair board and floor are GREEN. The carpet is YELLOW with a wide RED border.

Dolly has BROWN hair and she has her eyes stuck shut, but Dr. Teddy will order her right to bed and give her a sharp rap on the top of her head to make her eyes open again. And Susie May will be quite pleased and thank Teddy for curing her Dolly. "She had a touch of the Sleeping Sickness I think!" Teddy will say wisely, and Susie May will wonder how Teddy knows so much.

Toby was there to bid him goodbye. "Oh Prince and King!" exclaimed Toby in a low and earnest voice, "I haven't much to give you or it should be yours, but one thing I have prized above all else. Take it, and when you need food or shelter, or protection, sell it and use the money as you know I would have you do."

The prince thanked him hastily, for he thought he heard pursuers in the distance. The fisherman pushed off, and the young ruler, now without a kingdom, was gone.

When morning dawned, the little boat came to rest in a sheltered cove. The King was hungry, for he was young and healthy. He had no money. He was cold, for the night had been chill. He bethought himself of the package which Toby had given him. He drew it from his pocket and opened it. A ring with a great jewel in its setting caught the sparkle of the morning sunshine.

But the young King's face was dark and angry at the sight of it, and a snarling sound came from his lips.

"Bah!" he exclaimed. "It's the very ring I gave Toby myself, and it is worthless—paste—nothing but a clever imitation!"

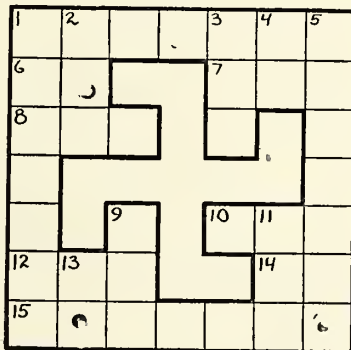

And in his wrath, he tossed the cheap bauble into the waters which eddied about a big rock in the mouth of the cove.

GALION CRYPTORIUM

"Ben Hur" comes to their neighborhood movie, they'll see it together. They've read the book together, you see, staged the most exciting parts in Martha's attic, and made the whole thrilling story an intimate part of their mutual life.

And it happens—of all fortunate things!—that the picture house down the street has booked the film for Lincoln's Birthday, a school holiday. Of course they're going to that matinee. The week preceding is crammed with exciting plans, requiring innumerable conferences and countless cipher notes. Pennies are anxiously counted; the little girls suffer equally when Kathie's cold threatens to develop into a sick-in-bed catastrophe, and know identical surges of relief when the cold "passes over." Everybody—everybody—knows that Martha and Kathie are going to the "Ben Hur" matinee on Monday afternoon.

Quite an hour before the doors could possibly open, Martha "comes by" for Kathie, gaily arrayed and swinging her birthday pocketbook. Little Kathie meets her at the door, evasive-eyed, clearly ill at ease, and wearing her morning middy.

With an uneasy premonition of disaster Martha enters. Mrs. Miller, Kathie's mother, looks up from her sewing to greet the visitor kindly.

"How sweet you look, dear. Is mother well?"

"Yes, thank you."

Martha tries to smile, but that miserable, falling sensation at the pit of the stomach grows worse. Something is wrong, but oh, surely it can't be anything as dreadful as—

Mrs. Miller proceeds to make conversation. "Did you tell Martha about the lovely treat daddy is planning for us, Kathie? He is going to take us to see 'Ben Hur' tonight," she explains brightly. "Won't that be lovely? And perhaps, if Kathie is a very good girl, there'll be ice cream afterward."

Martha turns stricken eyes upon her chum, who squirms into the corner of the davenport and looks hard at the toes of her shoes.

"I only knew it this morning—it's a surprise," she murmurs feebly.

"And such a delightful one!" Mrs. Miller smiles. "It will be so splendid for Kathie to have daddy there to explain the historical parts."

A wave of contempt that is not in the least childish curls Martha's lip. She happens to have heard Mr. Miller remark that he read the book when he was ten. She and Kathie know all about the historical parts. At school they're right in the midst of Roman history and they've worked the story out in every detail on the ancient maps. Martha feels, and rightly, that their fresh knowledge is infinitely more full and accurate than Papa Miller's dusty remembrings.

Silence follows Mrs. Miller's last gracious words, during which she sews serenely on. Then Martha, clenching her hands into desperate little fists and trying very hard to speak politely, brings out, "But Kathie was going with me this afternoon, Mrs. Miller."

"Well, that's too bad," the lady answers. "I remember now, you girls were planning that, weren't you? But it's early, and I expect you can get one of the other girls to go with you, can't you?"

Plain, sturdy little Martha lifts her head, and her honest eyes meet the mother's squarely. "Kathie promised to go with me," she says clearly, "and a promise is a promise."

A faint frown puckers Mrs. Miller's forehead. "You mustn't be rude, Martha. I have decided what Kathie will do; that is sufficient. And anyway," she ends laughingly, for Mrs. Miller is a sweet woman who cannot bear to be severe for long, "you must remember the old saying, my dear: 'Promises are like pie-crust—made to be broken!'"

This gracious, charming woman has done two dreadful things today, and the least of them is cheating her child of a very precious intimacy. The friendship will go on, but something fine and lovely has gone out of it, for Martha will never feel sure again. But the big thing of course, the sickening thing, is that this mother has cheerfully flouted the sacredness of the given word.—Zion Herald.

LINCOLN LOST A WHETSTONE
By Emily P. Bissell

The story is told of Lincoln that in 1834, when he was a candidate for the Illinois Legislature, he went to a certain farmer to ask for his support. The farmer was in the hay-field, and while they were talking, the dinner-bell sounded.

Lincoln was invited to stay for dinner, but politely declined. He said, smiling:

"If you will let me have your scythe while you are gone, I will mow around the field for you a couple of times."

He was as good as his word. When the farmer came back, Lincoln was gone, but three rows were mowed, and the scythe lay at the gate-post.

Nearly thirty years afterward the farmer and his wife were inington while Lincoln was President and went to the White House public reception. They stood in line to shake hands with him the farmer had no idea that I would recognize him, as they met since the day in the hay-field.

But Abraham Lincoln's memory was a marvelous one. He recognized the farmer far off in the waiting line, called an aide, and told him to take the old couple into one of the small parlors, where he could see them after the handshaking was over. After a while he came in and greeted them warmly, calling the farmer by name.
"Do you mean to say," the farmer exclaimed, "that you remember me after all these years?"

"I certainly do," replied Lincoln, and went on to recall how he had mowed round the field with the scythe.

"Yes, that's so," said the old man, astonished. "I found the field mowed, and the scythe leaning against the gate-post. But I have always wanted to know one thing."

"What is it?" asked the President.
"I always wanted to ask you, Mr.
President, what you did with the whetstone."

Lincoln smoothed back his hair with a characteristic gesture, and bent his brows in thought.

"Yes, I remember now," he said.
"I put that whetstone on top of the high gate-post."

When he got back to Illinois, the farmer looked on top of the high gate-post. There lay the whetstone, where it had lain for thirty years.—Youth's

WORDS THAT WOUND

There are few wounds that strike deeper than the unkind word. We may mean little, and we may forget it a few seconds after it is uttered, and yet it may linger in the memory of some one and poison that memory for years. Countee Cullen, the negro poet, gives a graphic illustration of this in a brief poem:

"Once, riding in old Baltimore,
Heart-filled, head-filled, with glee,
I saw a Baltimorean
Keep looking straight at me.

"Now I was eight and very small
And he was no whit bigger,
And so I smiled, but he poked out
His tongue, and called me 'Nigger.'

"I saw the whole of Baltimore
From May until December;
Of all the things that happened there That's all that I remember."

"Calling names" is a very old-fashioned habit, and it does not always cease with childhood. We have known men and women, and even those who thought themselves Christians, who had a wonderful faculty of calling others names, and they seemed to forget that these names might be remembered when all the kind things would be forgotten. The poor colored boy, only eight years old, remembered nothing of all the beauties of Baltimore, and recalled only the one word which had stabbed itself into his very heart, that hateful word "Nigger."

We may pride ourselves upon calling a spade a spade, but we had better take care lest in our passion for honesty we forget to be kind. We recall the verdict of certain scholars concerning a celebrated teacher. "Well, he may be a brute, but he is an honest brute." That is probably better than being an unjust brute, but it is not to any man's credit to be known as a brute. Better learn, with Paul, to speak the truth in love. This may be hard, but it is certain to spare us the anguish of knowing, when it is too late, that our thoughtless words had embittered some lives for years, and added deeper gloom to horizons which were already quite dark enough.
—The New Outlook.

"BROTHER JUNIPER"

"Everyone was very deeply impressed, but only one person did anything about it, and that was Brother Juniper." This sentence is taken from one of the popular novels of the day, but it gives us something to think about. "Only one person did anything about it."

"Brother Juniper" is the saving element in many a difficult situation. He may be counted upon to be present.
For while we often think that the crowd is capable of nothing but an emotional response to the call of great opportunities we forget that here and there is a person who will do something; and do it swiftly and effectively.
So long as he (in the church more often than not, she) is on hand the cause will not be lost.

If "talk" could kill the Church it would have expired long ago. If emotional extravagances could have discredited good causes they would now have no standing with thinking people.
If the only persons in the church were those who are capable of being "deeply impressed," Sunday after Sunday as they listen to sermons which call them to grapple with hard duties, the cause of organized religion in the earth would be in a bad way indeed.

But "Brother Juniper" is a member of every group. He does something about it and saves the day. He too is deeply impressed, but his emotion leads to action.

These words are written for the encouragement of "Brother Juniper" here, there, everywhere. May his number increase.—The Methodist Advocate.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED

"And now, young man, how much do I owe you?" The prosperous appearing motorist took a leather billfold from his pocket and looked inquiringly at Paul Hastings.

Paul wiped his greasy hands on a piece of old canvas with which he had been removing some superfluous oil from the engine of the stranger's expensive car.

"Oh, I hardly know—it didn't take me ten minutes to fix the engine. I happen to know quite a little about cars, as I look after my father's car and tractor. Whatever you think it is worth will suit me."

The motorist fingered his purse reflectively. "True it took you but a few minutes to get my engine running again, but you had to leave your work in the field, walk a half-mile in the hot sun, and you will have to walk back now."

Paul laughed. "Oh, I'm used to all those things. I don't mind the walking, and I can work a little later tonight to make up for the time I lost."

"Will a dollar pay you for your trouble?" inquired the stranger.

"Yes, thank you very much, sir." "Thank you," returned the other, extending the money. "And now would you mind telling me your name?"

"Paul Hastings."
 "I suppose you live in the house yonder?"

"Yes, but during school terms, I attend high school in the city."

"I see. Well, Paul, you have done me a great favor by starting my car, and I appreciate it. Perhaps I can do something for you at a later date. My name is Emory Markwell, of Chicago."

"From Chicago," mused Paul to himself after the stranger had driven on. "He is a long way from home."

As he started toward the tractor, which he had left standing in the field when he went to the aid of the stranger, he saw someone apparently waiting for him near the machine. Quickening his pace, he soon recognized one of his friends, Henry Brooks.

"Where have you been?" asked Henry. "I knew you must be close somewhere, but I couldn't see you."

"I was over in the road, fixing a fellow's car."

"I pulled a motorist out of a mud-hole the other day," Henry announced, an expression of glee crossing his face, "and I made him pay for it, too, I can tell you. I believe in charging a good price for my work in such a case."

"Why?" asked Paul wonderingly.

"Well, when a man driving a car gets stalled, he usually wants to get started as quickly as possible, and he'll pay well if he has to," said Henry sagely. "I got ten dollars for pulling this man's car out of the mud."

"Ten dollars!" cried Paul. "You surely did get enough."

Henry chuckled. "Yes, I figured that I did."

"You didn't do ten dollars' worth of work for him," said Paul.

"Oh, no, not in actual labor, but he had to pay for the accommodation. What did your man pay you for starting his car?"

"A dollar."

"A dollar? One dollar? Paul Hastings, do you mean to tell me that you let him get away as cheaply as that?"

"That was ample pay for my time," argued Paul.

"What about the accommodation?" demanded Henry.

"I just threw that in," said Paul, a little reluctantly. "Besides, the man said he might be able to do me a favor some time."

"Ha, ha, ha! You are certainly poor at business. The very idea of accepting one dollar, when you might as well have had five or ten. Perhaps you don't need money as badly as I do, though," Henry laughed derisively.

Paul flushed. "I need it in high school, all right, but I don't need any that I don't earn."

"The man could easily afford the ten dollars," said Henry easily. "He looked as if he had plenty of cash, and when he flourished a monogrammed billfold and asked how much he owed me, I thought I might as well get what I could."

"The man whom I assisted today had a monogrammed billfold, also. He drove a blue car."

"Was he a tall man with glasses?"

"Yes, he answered to that description," said Paul.

"The very same fellow," cried Henry. "No doubt he is glad that his car stopped in front of your place this time instead of mine, for had I been able to make the car run, I'd have expected good pay."

After Henry had gone, Paul climbed upon the tractor seat and resumed his plowing. As he guided the powerful machine along the rows he thought over the conversation with his friend, wondering if he really had been foolish to do the work for the motorist at so reasonable a figure. He felt a trifle disappointed that he had not been offered more, too, for if the stranger had paid Henry ten dollars for no more of a service, it seemed to Paul that he might have been more generous today.

He told his parents about the incident that evening. Mr. Hastings approved of his son's action heartily, and declared that he would certainly object if he thought Paul would try to overcharge strangers just because they needed help very badly.

When the school term started, Paul did whatever work he could obtain in the city. Henry worked at various tasks, also, but as a result of his shrewd bargaining during the summer, he had a great deal more pocket money at the outset than his friend. He did considerable boasting of the fact, letting his friends know how Paul had deliberately passed by opportunities to get some extra money.

Naturally Paul did not enjoy this sort of thing. He had done what he thought to be right, and it was not at all pleasant to be made sport of because he had been fair.

One autumn day, Henry and Paul were walking from school together.

"It seems as if it's hard to get enough to do to earn books, supplies, and the like," said Henry, who had been rather prodigal of his easily obtained vacation money.

"Yes, it is, even if one is very careful of what he spends," replied Paul, who was obliged to economize rigidly.

That night, Paul was called to the telephone, and a man's voice came over the wire.

"This is Hartley's Garage. I understand you are working after school. If you want something better than odd jobs, we'd like to have you drop in and see us."

"I'll stop after school hours tomorrow," promised Paul eagerly, and the man said that would be satisfactory.

The owner of the garage gave Paul a searching look when he appeared the next day, asked him a few questions, and gave him the position, which was far better than his previous work. Paul was delighted, but mystified as well.

"If you would not mind telling, I should like to know how you happened to hear of me," he said to Mr. Hartley.

"Oh, I've had you in mind ever since last summer," said Mr. Hartley.

"Since last summer? But I have never applied to you for a position," said Paul in amazement.

"No; but one day last summer a motorist stopped here for a few days and told me of your skill and courtesy. He informed me that you are a student here during the school term, and recommended that if I needed someone, you would surely fill the bill. This is a garage where we mean to give our patrons what they pay for, and according to your story told by Mr. Markwell, your policy is the same as ours."

"Mr. Markwell! The man whose car had oil spurting out over the spark plugs. I remember him well," said Paul.

"He didn't pay you very much, did he?" inquired Mr. Hartley in a half-humorous voice.

"He paid me fairly," said Paul.

"A fine man, Mr. Markwell. He never forgets little favors—those things that cannot be measured out in dollars and cents. He's always ready to speak a good word and use a bit of influence in return for value received. I've known him for a long time, and you just wait and see if he doesn't look you up next summer when he drives through this vicinity, as he does each year. You will always have a friend in need."

Henry was somewhat chagrined at first when he learned of his friend's good fortune and the reason for the position having been offered to him, but when he had thought it over, he admitted that Paul deserved it.

"I don't blame him a bit for not recommending me," said Henry, "and I'm through trying to get more than I earn from folks in trouble just because I can."—Caroline Young in Kind Words.

Old Presbyterian Church Takes Up -- And Gets Results

Church, Welch, W. Va., Located in Mining Section, Holds Sunday Morning Service in Theatre With Marked Results

I thought the readers of your newspaper would be interested in a novel experiment in our church at Welch, W. Va. At least we tried to us, though other churches have tried the same with success, notably Dr. James Vance in Nashville, Tenn., whose success prompted our pastor to the effort. Dr. Vance was at the leading a meeting in Bluefield, W. Va. which is forty miles from here.

Little city of 7,000 people, composed of white Americans, negroes, and foreign immigrants of many kinds is located on the main line of the Norfolk and Western Railroad, and is the center of the Pocahontas coal field. McDowell County has a population of 100,000. We are in Blue-ryberty.

First Church here has a membership of 300, which is made up of all kinds of folks, though the managing of the mining operators are in majority. They are all good people, many of them earnest Christians, ready to make sacrifices for the Christ.

Pastor is Rev. W. C. Williams, at Davidson College and Union University to his mates as "Smiley," because he wears a smile that won't come off his soubriquet has stuck to him ten years of his ministry, and two years here in this church. Known all over town as "Smiley," not only to his Kiwanis members, but the whole place knows "Smiley." It is just as well, because the town is full of Wilsons, one being another "W. C." comes from Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, where his father lives in Charlotte.

"Smiley" began to get dissatisfied with his little one-fourth of a congregation on Sunday nights, when the people came to church. The pews looked appallingly empty, and he took the smile off. So what he decided to do but decide to make a change. He told Dr. Vance about his situation and the reverend doctor told him it was all right. And he did.

New Pocahontas Theatre was completed, and actually open for business on Christmas Day. Dr. Williams thought he saw his chance and he found the managers of the theatre. The amusement would be mighty good if he should use their church services on Sunday and promised him there would be no expense for rent, heat, and light. He was for nothing for the glory of the salvation of souls, which was his object.

A good Presbyterian, Mr. Wilkes, took his session what they were about the scheme. They looked askance at it. It seemed a proposition that might fail, and they put them into debt. Smiley paid the expense on his own. And so they said, "Go ahead. We have many less than the 75 members of the church." Greatly relieved at the attitude, he made his arrangements for his first service at the theatre on January 6.

Prepared special cards of invitation, announcing the place, the subject, and the chorus choir. Five hundred people came to that first Sunday night at the Pocahontas theatre. That (Continued on Page Two)

E. T. Colton, Executive Secretary of the Foreign Department of the Association Speaks at Lunch

E. T. Colton, who is the Executive Secretary of the Foreign Department of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, for many years an associate in this work with John R. Mott and Fletcher Brockman, was a luncheon guest in Charlotte, March 11, at the Y. M. C. A. building, where he was greeted by a number of men interested in the missionary work of the association, and popularly known as the Barnett Club, which consists of the supporters of Eugene Barnett as foreign Y. M. C. A. secretary in China.

Mr. Colton has spent some years in the association's work in Russia. He said that the Soviet government has recently decided that the Y. M. C. A. is a most dangerous factor and opposed to the activities of the Communist regime in Moscow, and they have been denied the privilege of working in that country among the Russians. This came about because Communists sent to China to create sympathy for the Soviets in China observed the activities of the Y. M. C. A. and reported to Russia that it was a most dangerous organization and ought to be suppressed, which it accordingly was. The Y. M. C. A. men had to leave Moscow.

Mr. Colton gave an illuminating address on the reasons the Soviet is bound to fail at last. He spoke of the impossibility of one million Communists holding in subjection the other 140 millions of Russians, although they now control transportation, food supplies, money, and the press. Nine men compose the ruling body in Russia. But the limitations of the Soviet are beginning to appear. The peasants own the land now, and it will be impossible to regulate them forever. The application of force cannot continue. It is folly for one set of men to ignore the rest of the human race, and the Soviets are bound to lose. It may be soon, it may be later, but sooner or later, the present regime in Russia is bound to pass away. They have tried to sweep away the church and the home, but these fundamental institutions are sure to abide.

Bishop McConnell To Be At Duke

President of Federal Council to Preach Commencement Sermon at Durham

Duke University, of Durham, N. C., the great Methodist College, the main recipient of the late J. B. Duke's princely donations of several millions, announces that the commencement sermon will be preached in June by Bishop Francis J. McConnell, the newly-elected president of the Federal Council of the Churches of America. Bishop McConnell has had a notable career as preacher, author and administrator, and his visit south will be of general interest to the people of this section because of his new office as presiding officer of the Council, in which he succeeds Dr. Parkes Cadman, the well-known Brooklyn preacher and radio speaker.

Louisville Seminary To Have New Site

The Reynolds-Pratt Campus Will be the Future Home of the School— Gift of Four Men

The Louisville Presbyterian Seminary rejoices to be able to announce another magnificent gift. It is the gift of a new site.

For some years the Seminary has felt that while its present dormitory facilities for single students, on its present site, are still adequate, its continued and increasing expansion in this and other aspects of its life would demand a new and larger site for the future. Through the rapid growth of the City of Louisville during the past few years the business district of the city has so crowded in on the Seminary that further expansion in its present location has become prohibitive in price. Hence the need of a new site has for some time been apparent both to the faculty and the board of directors. So it was at its annual meeting two years since the board charged a committee composed of three of its own members and two members of the faculty with the important duty of finding a new site for the future.

The selection of such a site was no easy matter. It is, of course, desirable that a Seminary be located in some beautiful and quiet place where the atmosphere and surroundings are conducive to study. But every well-situated Seminary must also have the spiritual clime of a great city. It must be in such quick and easy reach of the churches, missions and factories of a large city that its students shall be able to take advantage of these for inspection on the one hand and spiritual services on the other.

In this dilemma, Dr. Charles H. Pratt, our own professor of Missions and Evangelism, came to our help. He had found a beautiful tract of 20 acres situated on Cannon's Lane just off the Lexington Road and immediately opposite the new Seneca Park which the city is building. This site fulfilled admirably the requisites desired. The price of it was $50,000. He offered to give from one-fourth to one-third of this himself and through his own generosity he inspired the generosity of his friends, Mr. R. S. Reynolds, Mr. C. K. Reynolds and Mr. A. D. Reynolds, to give similar amounts and together they have presented this splendid site for the new home of the Seminary. The donors are presenting the gift without any condition or suggestion of any sort. But the faculty have asked that it be called the Reynolds-Pratt Campus and there is every reason to expect that the board will accept both the gifts and the name.

In addition to its beauty of location and accessibility to the city, the new site is in close proximity to the Baptist Theological Seminary on the Lexington Road. The Baptist Seminary is the largest Baptist Seminary in the world. The relation between the Louisville Baptist Seminary and the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary have always been ideal. And it is hoped that through the proximity of these two Seminaries, both of them conservative, Calvinist type, courses may be worked out, for our post-graduate students especially, that will enable them to enjoy the advantage of both the faculties as well as of both the libraries of these two institutions. This will be a unique advantage to them that it will be difficult to duplicate elsewhere.

The exact time when our Seminary will be able to transfer itself to the new location is somewhat problematical. It will depend to a large extent on the time when we are able to get the best price in the sale of our present site on Broadway. This street has

Dr. Alexander Passes To Reward

Member of Assembly's Committee of Work in Kentucky is Dead

Dr. A. J. A. Alexander, of Spring Station, Ky., died on Sunday, March 10, at his home. Dr. Alexander was an elder in the church at Versailles, Ky., near which city is his country estate, Woodburn, at Spring Station. Besides being a prominent member of the Synod of Kentucky and deeply interested in all the activities of the Synod, and one of the representatives of his Synod on the Committee of Assembly's work, popularly known as the Committee of Forty-Four, Dr. Alexander was best known because of his participation in the foreign mission work of the Southern Presbyterian Church. He was at one time a medical missionary to Korea, but was compelled to give up his work on account of the health of his family. However, he brought a young Korean back with him, and educated him in medicine, and this young man is now at work in his native country, an outstanding surgeon of Korea.

Since his return to America, Dr. Alexander has made his beautiful home at "Woodburn," a Mecca for returned missionaries, and many a missionary has been financed by the liberality of this godly, earnest Christian, who loved to use his large wealth, and wide influence for the cause he loved so well. His personal aid and strong influence will be sadly missed by the whole church.

rapidly developed as a business street during the past few years and real estate men have conservatively appraised our present site, exclusive of the buildings on it, as worth now $630,000. But it is expected that it is destined to enhance considerably over that figure in value. When the price seems to justify the sale we shall hope to establish the Seminary at the new location and use the money in rebuilding there.

It is hoped, however, that before our central structure is thus transferred, generous donors may afford us the means of building auxiliary structures on the new site, such as dormitories for married students, homes for professors and for returned missionaries, etc. Through the use of the automobile such students and missionaries could readily attend the lectures and recitations at our present site before the main transfer is made. When the transfer of our main buildings takes place all the memorials erected in it will be conserved in the new structure. Indeed, it is quite possible that our present structure which has so long been the admiration of all who have seen it, for its exquisite architecture, should be re-erected on the new site. Architects have informed us that it can be carefully taken down, its pieces numbered and rebuilt in its present form. In that case the changes would not be in its outward form which cannot be surpassed but only in its internal arrangement where improvements are possible.

The faculty of the Seminary feels a great debt of gratitude to the Reynolds brothers and to Dr. Pratt for the beautiful gift of what we are already informally calling our Reynolds-Pratt Campus.

A STAID OLD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH WAKES UP

wasn't so bad for a start—just a little over six times the congregation that used to gather at the church. And the collection took care of the expenses. The next Sunday, a colored miners' quartet was engaged to sing negro spirituals, and the card again announced this fact, and the subject of the sermon, "Slave of the Second Best." Nine hundred came to that service. On January 20, the Boys' band made the music, and Smiley preached on the topic, "On the Fence." Of course the $20,000 Werlitzer pipe organ installed in the Pocahontas Theatre swelled the music all along, leading a chorus choir of many voices. More people came that night, over a thousand. This night, too, they showed two reels of "Scouting With Dan Beard," on the screen, but Smiley said, he wasn't so sure he liked moving pictures at the service. They took too much time and knocked out the sermon. He likes to preach the gospel, and he says that's what these services are for. He does not need the pictures.

The Pocahontas Theatre holds comfortably 1,300 people in the seats, but the night the 150th Regiment Band led the music, 1,500 people came, and there was not standing room. Hundreds of folks couldn't get in. Smiley is chaplain of this regiment. The Salvation Army band led another night, and a famous cornetist played solos.

Well, this has been our experiment. We have had the crowds, our collections have taken care of all expenses, and the gospel has been exalted as the means of men's salvation. But Smiley says, crowds are not what he is looking for, nor successful finances. He wants spiritual results, and they are coming. Twelve people have joined our church, and 15 have gone to other churches since these theatre meetings began. Some cold backsliders have been warmed, and some down-and-outs have been reclaimed. One drunkard has sworn off and comes regularly to the meetings, and has avowed his love for Christ. One man, an old Mecklenburg County boy, of North Carolina, who had wandered away from God, has come back to the Father.

Our congregation is made up of our own folks, and Jews, Catholics, Greeks, and many other nationalities. We have about 1,000 people in town who are members of all the churches, but our audiences consist of the rare church attendants mostly. We are not even affecting the audiences of the other churches. They report improvements also.

Dr. J. R. Reavis, of our Foreign Mission Committee visited us one Sunday, and you ought to have heard him preach that night. It shows what a big crowd can do for a real orator. Mr. Williams has preached all the other times.

Well, perhaps, this will convey to your readers some idea of what we have done. We are not proud, just grateful,—and satisfied the gospel is really what the people want, if you can get them to listen to it. Mr. Williams, we are sure, will be glad to give anyone other information, if they think they would like to try the same experiment.

SECOND CHURCH MEMPHIS TO INSTALL REV. P. W. WILSON

The Presbytery of Memphis held a special meeting in the Westminster Church, Memphis, Tenn., March 11, 1929, with 19 ministers and three ruling elders present. Rev. Parks W. Wilson was received from Mecklenburg Presbytery. A call by the Second Church, Memphis, for his services as associate pastor with Rev. A. B. Curry, D.D., was approved and accepted by him. A commission was appointed to install him in this relationship March 24, at 7:30 p. m., as follows: Rev. A. B. Curry, D.D., the senior pastor, to preside and propound the constitutional questions; Rev. J. J. Hill, D.D., to preach the sermon and charge the associate pastor; Rev. J. H. Lumpkin, D.D., to charge the congregation. W. E. Lundy, M.D., a ruling elder of the Second Church was put on this commission.

DR. EDWARD MACK AT PINEHURST

Winter Tourist and Resident Population Enjoy Intellectual and Spiritual Feast

The greatest intellectual and spiritual feast the people of this church and community have ever had was during the week of March 3-10, when Dr. Edward Mack of our Seminary in Richmond delivered a series of Bible lectures to an appreciative audience. Dr. Mack dealt in a most scholarly and inspiring way with some of the great subjects and books of the Bible: "The Cost of the Bible," "The Song Book of a Nation," "Job, the Tragedy of a Soul," "Immanuel," "The Servant of Jehovah," "Genesis and Creation," "Ecclesiastes, the Old Testament Twilight," "God's Thoughts," "The Rights of the Believer." College men and women and those with only few advantages alike were interested, inspired and strengthened by this great man of God. The ministers from the neighboring churches were impressed with two outstanding facts, namely: the average congregation understands and fully appreciates the highest and finest type of consecrated scholarship; nothing appeals to the average congregation so much as the Word of God. Dr. Mack won the love and admiration of all who heard him and implanted in their hearts not only a greater love for the Word which he taught but a keen desire and determination to learn more of that Word and of Him who is revealed in it.—Pinehurst, N. C.

Let us not forget that every one on earth is living a surrendered life. Every one is surrendered either to sin or to righteousness, either to Satan or to God. There is no such thing as living a life not surrendered. We can choose to which we will surrender, but we must live a surrendered life. The one who surrenders in Romans 6:13 yields unto God because he is alive from the dead.

In Romans 12:1 we read: "I beseech you, brethren"—that is, believers—"by the mercies of God"—why? Because you have received the mercies of God, you are born again—"present your bodies"—make a presentation of your bodies. Make a present of your whole body unto God. That is the meaning of surrender, "living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." It is the reasonable, the only logical thing to do, on the part of the Christian who has been raised from the dead by God. It is the logical thing, and anything else is unreasonable, anything else is ungrateful, unthankful, on the part of one who has received all that God has to give, when He wants us to give him all that we have to give, that is, ourselves. It is your spiritual service.

Have we noticed just what precedes the twelfth chapter of Romans, in the thirty-third and thirty-fifth verses of the eleventh chapter? Paul is speaking of the marvelous purpose of God. "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out. Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?" God gave Himself first, we read at the end of the eleventh chapter; and therefore at the beginning of the twelfth chapter. "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you give yourselves to Him." Is it not blessed and gracious and wonderful of Him always to do more for us than He asks us to do for Him?

Some people are afraid of the will of God. Think of it! Afraid of the will of God, the one who gave His only begotten Son for us! In a prayer-meeting a Christian woman prayed. "We are afraid to do our will, Lord, for fear of the consequences. Teach us thy will." We do not often hear that prayer, but do we not often hear Christians say, "Lord, I am afraid of your will, won't you let me have my will in this little thing?" Let us be afraid of our wills. God's will is safe. It brings heaven into our lives.

Hannah Whitall Smith tells of a Christian woman who, asked to surrender everything to the Lord, frankly said she was afraid of what it might mean in her life. Afraid of what God might do to her! She was a mother, and she had a little boy. Mrs. Smith said to her, "Have you ever asked your little boy to do what you wanted him to do?"

"Yes, many times."

"Has he ever refused to do it?"

"Yes, I am sorry to say, sometimes."

THE NEED OF THE HOLY SPIRIT Acts 1 Verse 8

When Jesus left the world he intended for man to have as a representative the third person of the Godhead, the Holy Spirit. So he sent him when he left and is in the world now.

The first Christian church had the Holy Spirit in the right proportion and was an example to all churches down the ages. The need of the Christian church today is the full power of the Holy Spirit which must come into the individuals and be expressed in the church.

We can not believe in Jesus without the Holy Spirit coming to us to help us to Him but in that act he is just with us and that is very important. He is with every man, woman and child in the world at all times, showing them to Jesus and helping to get us to accept Him.

After we accept Jesus as our saviour and redeemer from all our sins and are saved then it is we need the Holy Spirit within us, and for what? This we will try to answer as the main thought of this subject. To preface our statements let us say we need the Holy Spirit in this world after we are saved. When we get to Heaven Jesus will take care of us and here He has sent him to take care of us.

We need him for power as of ourselves we can not overcome sin. We all realize how powerless our lives are of our own efforts and how unsatisfactory. The coming in of the Holy Spirit is worth the sacrifice if he did nothing else but give us power over sin and temptations. Then he gives comfort which we so badly need. Comfort in disappointment, in bereavement, in sorrow and sadness. Our people are killing themselves with work and worry looking for comfort, when it can come only from within supplied by the Holy Spirit.

We need him as our teacher for without him we can not interpret the Scriptures aright, we can not see Jesus and be brought to know him. Again we need him as our guide. He will guide us into all truth and in all our ways he will instruct us. We have to acknowledge our ignorance and lack of the knowledge of the truth both of which the Holy Spirit will supply that we may know the way to go in this world.

If we would have power, comfort, a guide, a teacher, we have to let the Holy Spirit into our lives.

How may we know when we have him? We may know by the results produced by him in us as we have enumerated above as well as by the peace these virtues bring and the joy so much needed.

With him in the midst of sorrow we can have within peace and joy the world knoweth not of. By their fruits ye shall know them, and by the fruits of the Holy Spirit we shall know we have him and others shall see our witness bearing and will not be satisfied till they have the power, comfort, peace and joy they see in us. Applied to the church at large see what we may expect.

How may we get the Holy Spirit? Make room for him by a surrendered life and he will not need the second invitation to come in.

He is no impersonal influence but is a Person with influence and power beyond the carnal mind to grasp, but can be experienced.

All the spiritual giants down the ages with influence and all the power and influence exerted in the church today are the result of him and is produced by the man who has not. May the day speedily come when all God's children will not be satisfied without him in his fullness of power.

M. M. Inabinet, a Layman
McColl, S. C.

LIFE'S MYSTERY

"Christ has no hands but our hands
To do his work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in his way;
He has no tongue but our tongue
To tell men how he died;
He has no help but our help,
To bring them to his side.

"We are the only Bible
The careless world will read
We are the sinner's gospel,
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message
Givers in deed and word;
What if the line is crooked?
What if the type is blurred?

"What if our hands are busy
With other work than his?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things his lips would spur
How can we hope to help him
Unless from him we learn?"

THE TRAIL OF THE YEAR

Down the long trail of the years
Thou hast led us by Thy grace Calmed our hearts, removed our Shown the favor of Thy face.

When the sun shines on our way
Happy-hearted, we rejoice;
When the clouds obscure the day
We can still discern Thy voice.

Through the ordeal of fire,
Through the bitterness of strife
Thou didst lead us to aspire
To a purer, better life.

In the years that come and go
May we walk, dear Lord, with Until we leave this world below

FOR A COUNTRY CHURCH

If I were God,
How tenderly I'd cherish
Every country church,
Every little parish.

They seem so modest,
So humbly dressed in white,
Raising a tiny cross
As if to catch His sight.

The trees peer through Clear panes of window glass,
The altar can be seen
Should an angel pass.

With meekly folded doors,
I'd bless, if I were God,
Every country church
Kneeling on the sod.

AN ECCLESIASTICAL TEMPEST

A wise professor was accustomed to say that adherence to liturgy had a dwarfing effect on the minds of men.

We are constantly reminded of this remark when we read the discussions that are going on in the papers of liturgical churches. One correspondent writes to know what point of the altar should face or how the bread should be made.

We admire the patience with which the questions are given, for we have no idea that anyone will sympathize with such questions unless they have sufficient standing among his denomination to be in charge of a church organ.

Recently, however, indication of an ecclesiastical storm has manifested itself that seems far more important in the mind of those who are more than it can possibly be in the mind of those who are heretic enough to reject the figure of apostolic succession. It seems that at a meeting in one of the parish churches in New York City, the rector invited the suffragan bishop to officiate and a distinguished minister to assist. When the suffragan bishop heard that he was to be assisted by the unordained men of this day, he withdrew from the engagement on the ground that it was against the canons of the Church for a Baptist minister to take part in such a service in any of the Episcopal churches. He would not make himself a party to the

It seems that some of the Episcopalian members were not pleased with his position and reminded him that a service of the Russian Orthodox Church had recently been conducted at the Cathedral of the diocese by a member of that Church, with the apparent approval of the Bishop.

In defense of the Bishop the point is made that the Church makes a distinction between a Baptist minister and a Russian Orthodox minister, because the Russian has holy orders which are recognized by the Bishop's Church. The Baptist brother is only a plain minister, unordained according to the views of our Episcopal brethren.

According to our view the distinction is a false one, granting their premise:

The moral is that if you want to have the same for all the Churches, get into the line of apostolic succession. The Baptist preacher would not be Dr. Fosdick, who figures in the public eye, even though he lacks the apostolic touch.

ASSEMBLY'S WORK COMMITTEE—ITS DELAYED REPORT

Whether intentional or not, the Assembly's Work Committee seems unfortunate in the way that seems to attend the results of their report of the Committee, under which the first organized, did not appear till the meeting of the General Assembly that was to give it a permanent existence.

It was claimed that this delay was unavoidable, yet this delay raised prejudices against the committee and subjected it to criticism, and in some respects it has interfered with the full support of the Committee.

It was proposed upon the floor of the Assembly to send it down for a vote of the Presbyteries but that failed, and it was enacted without full discussion, as has been charged.

Now reports are flying around that a sub-committee of this Committee has decided upon a radical change in the Executive Committee's place of business by consolidating them in one place; but that the report will not be made public till May 1.

This consolidation of the Committees has been before the Church several times, but whenever it has reached the Assembly it has been discouraged.

We, with what light we have on the subject, are disposed to favor it, but we believe that the sub-committee will make a great mistake to hold back its report and thus prevent a full discussion of its conclusions. It is easy to make changes, but very difficult to correct the evils of a hasty change. Our success in work depends upon the general confidence that the Church at large has in its Committees. That confidence can only be commanded by full discussion of any change or any new method.

We hope that the sub-committee will reconsider its action, and make public what its recommendations are, in order that it may secure the full co-operation of the Presbyteries at their Spring meeting.

In order to get the full support of the Church our Committee should avoid any appearance of secret method or Star Chamber proceedings. Unless there be good reasons for secrecy, let the Church know your plans.

There have been recent movements toward again making the Pope a civil ruler. During the world war, according to W. E. Garrison, (whose splendid and temperate work on Catholicism should be read by all) the German Imperial Chancellor made the official statement before the Bavarian parliament, that when Germany dictated the terms of peace "Italy was to be compelled to cede to the Pope a small territory on the north bank of the Tiber, whose independence and neutrality should be guaranteed by all the contracting powers, and to pay to the Holy See an indemnity of five hundred million lire. But Germany did not dictate terms.

In 1921 the Vatican organ printed an editorial, evidently authorized by the Pope, hinting "that the Holy See might be willing to accept some modification of its former territorial claims." Immediately thereafter the matter was discussed in the Italian chamber of deputies, one of the speeches in favor being delivered by no less a person than Mussolini then a rising member of the chamber.

With the rise of Fascism the matter took on new interest. The Roman Church was sympathetic with this reversionary conservative movement. And the movement was exceedingly friendly to the Roman Church.

And now the expected has happened. The agreement has been signed by the plenipotentiaries. And "The treaty of conciliation, the concordat and the financial convention must be ratified by the supreme pontiff and the King of Italy within four months from to-day's signature and will have effect from the moment of ratification."

The outline or summary of the agreement published by the Associated Press is not complete and not very clear. It reaffirms the principle that the Roman Catholic religion is the state religion of Italy.

It recognizes the full and exclusive dominion and sovereign jurisdiction of the "Holy See over the Vatican as at present constituted."

All those persons living in the Vatican city and "all dignitaries of the Church, persons belonging to the pontifical court and Vatican officials declared indispensable by the Holy See" not residing in the Vatican but in Italian territory, shall be "subject to the sovereignty of the Holy See" and enjoy all immunity laid down in the treaty."

Territorial immunity is also granted to certain buildings belonging to the Pope and located outside the Vatican city.

The "Holy See's" right to send diplomats to foreign countries and to receive foreign diplomats according to the general rules of international law is recognized by Italy. Diplomatic relations between the Papacy and the Kingdom of Italy are established, and the apostolic nuncio or ambassador is to be dean of the diplomatic body in Rome. All the artistic treasures in Papal territory are to remain open to visitors. The Italian government will, on request, punish crimes committed in the Vatican city. Criminals from Italy will be delivered up by Vatican authorities.

The Vatican will be outside temporal conflict and international congresses unless invited in by all parties concerned. Its territory is to be considered neutral and inviolable.

The "Holy See" considers that with the agreements reached, "it possesses guarantees necessary to provide with due liberty and independence the spiritual government of the Diocese of Rome and of the Catholic Church, and declares the Roman question definitely and irrevocably settled.

It "recognizes the Kingdom of Italy under the dynasty of the House of Savoy with Rome as the capital of the Italian state." Italy "recognizes the state of the Vatican with sovereignty supreme in the Pontiff."

The "Law of Guarantees" of 1871 is abrogated.

Italy recognizes matrimony as a sacrament "regulated by common law in its relation to civil law," and provides for joint religious and civil marriage. The provision as to divorce is very obscure.

The teaching of religion becomes compulsory in all schools, "according to the program established in the accord."

Italy recognizes "Catholic organizations," but they must keep out of politics. Italy pays the "Holy See" 1,750,000 lire in settlement of all claims.

In the opinion of the writer Mussolini gains vastly more by the settlement than the Pope. The latter "saves his face" by escaping from a position that has long been absurd. He secures no real temporal power, but the merest shadow of it. He secures a liberal sum of money, but not nearly as much as the "Law of Guarantees" would have given him if accepted. The shadow of sovereignty may enhance his prestige in some quarters. It will undoubtedly give greater facility for diplomatic access to civil governments.

On the other hand Italy, or rather, Mussolini, secures some very definite advantages.

A festering sore is removed from the side of the kingdom. A very strong ally in fighting socialism is secured in local affairs.

Italy replaces France as the protector of the Papacy. The vaulting ambitions of Mussolini will cause him to use freely this position. It promises strife and danger in many quarters. The Papacy may again become the pliant tool of a strong temporal power.

What does it mean to us? Will the Waldensians again suffer from the alliance?

In schools, marriages and other directions, will they be oppressed? Will the Papal State be admitted to the League of Nations, and the Pope or some nuncio of his be made its president?

Will the United States be humiliated in diplomatic circles by having its ambassador forced to give place to Papal nuncios? And finally will the American Catholic know where his allegiance belongs, when he is the sworn subject of two temporal rulers, whose interests may at times clash?

The agreement opens up many interesting questions. Time will answer them.

THE GOD'S ACRE CLUB
THE BETHANY PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ZUNI, VIRGINIA

By Rev. Vernon L. Fisher

"What can I do to develop the spirit of Stewardship among my people?" is the cry of the country preacher. Super-conservatism, Pharaonic traditions, ancient customs, unprogressiveness and the lack of an early education on the subject, stand out like great mountain peaks in the mind of the country preacher as he seeks a means of developing a more liberal spirit among his parishioners. To the earnest pastor, especially in the rural communities, the question of Church finance is usually a nightmare. Much praying, frequent preaching, constant appeals and sleepless nights seem to bring little or no results. It is generally expected of the members of rural churches to be small givers to God's work, and yet I see no reason why we should expect less of the members of country churches than we expect of the members of urban churches. Expect more, and they will give more.

One day the pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian Church at Zuni, Virginia, approached his session with this question: "Gentlemen, the regular weekly offerings are not sufficient to support our little church, and I would like to know if you have ever tried the God's Acre Plan." Immediately several men answered that the plan had been tried by their former pastor and had utterly failed. They stated further, that the Baptist Church in the community had attempted the plan with the same result. It wasn't any use trying again they said, for it wouldn't work. In fact, it was too much to expect of a farmer. They couldn't afford to give a whole acre to the Church. That was very poor encouragement for a young minister in his first pastorate, but he made the matter a subject of sincere prayer and deep study. It dawned upon him that if any plan for God was to work, it must be sold through good salesmanship, and before he could sell anything he had to know what he was selling. Perhaps this was the reason why the God's Acre Club had not succeeded in these churches. Therefore, he proceeded to find a definite, workable plan, with good selling points to convince his session that it could be done. It is an easy matter to sell anything that is saleable. Business men and farmers know a good thing when they see it, and it is up to the ministry to make all their plans practical and saleable. When the pastor was completely sold on the proposition himself, he laid the plans before his session, and they heartily endorsed them. The following gives in detail the plans used by the Bethany Church.

The Plan

To insure success, the pastor developed the following plans in detail and prepared all the necessary equipment before he approached the session. Then when we had a meeting, everything could be shown as well as explained.

1. A letter was carefully prepared to be sent to each member of the Church who farmed, explaining fully the God's Acre Plan. In this letter we tried to picture how thoughtful God had been of our needs during the past year, and what a small thing it would be for us to express our gratitude for this care. Then we appealed to our members to take God into partnership and promise Him that they would cultivate one acre of their land for Him, and give the proceeds for the advancement of His work in their Church. We showed that it was not costing them anything but their time and faith, promising that if they entered into partnership with God, He would not only take care of His acre, but would bless their crop also. This letter was signed by the chairman of the God's Acre Committee.

2. Realizing that we had to convince them that this was an important undertaking, and something worthwhile, we printed membership tickets on typewriter, to be signed by the Chairman of the God's Acre Club. As each member promised to join the Club he was given a membership card. This card was worded something like the following: "This is to certify that----- (name) has promised God that he will develop one acre of his land and give the proceeds to His work in Bethany Presbyterian Church." Signed by chairman. We inserted in this membership ticket that the member had the right to deduct all cost of developing the acre.

3. Not only as a matter of advertising, but also for the purpose of impressing the importance of such a club upon each member, we made a God's Acre Club Honor Roll, and printed on it the name of each member that joined. This Honor Roll showed the name of the member, the number of acres planted, the name of the crop planted and the proceeds of the acre. It is important to put this Honor Roll in a conspicuous place, and constantly refer to it from the pulpit in order that you may create a feeling of pride among those who have ventured out on God's promises, and a feeling of desire and dissatisfaction among those who have hesitated to join.

4. A God's Acre Committee was appointed to visit personally every member of the church who farmed. The way had already been paved by the letter, the Honor Roll, the announcements and the prayers. All that was necessary was to visit each member with further information and secure their promise to join. As each joined, he was given a membership card, and a prayer was made by one of the officers praying that God would bless the member and his efforts.

5. Just before the crop reached any size, we made wooden signs, 24x18 inches, with the words, "THIS IS GOD'S ACRE" painted on it, and gave one to each member with the request that he place the sign on God's Acre. This idea proved to be invaluable, for it was a constant reminder to the member that he was now a partner with God, and may expect God to bless him.

People driving in their cars would read the sign and be deeply impressed.

6. Twice during the summer, the chairman called a meeting of all the members of the club. He arranged for several cars to take the members to each man's acre to see how God was blessing His acre. This idea proved to be very interesting and valuable, because farmers like to look at one another's crops. At each man's farm we had a word of prayer for God's continued blessings. After we had seen all the acres, we returned to the church and enjoyed a fine fish supper. If the Church had never realized one cent from this plan, it at least enabled it's minister to teach some of the most valuable lessons on man's relationship to God. Frequently you will hear one of the members say that his acre was not doing as well as he expected. But after you carefully inform him that it was no longer His acre but God's Acre, he will never make that mistake again. He has learned that he is a partner with God.

7. In order to bring the God's Acre Club to a fitting close and receive the entire proceeds in an attractive way, we set aside a "God's Acre Day." Each member was notified of the day and requested to bring in either the fruit of God's Acre, or if he had sold his crop, to bring in a check for it. The God's Acre Committee planned a nice supper and an interesting program, and invited the wives of its members to come also. At this meeting, more interest and enthusiasm was shown than in the beginning, and each member expressed his desire to rejoin for the next year.

Advertising

1. Whether a church has tried this plan or not, if it desires to do so, it is very essential that the plan be well advertised. Get people to think about it, read about it and pray about it. Attractive posters is one of the most fruitful ways of advertising in the country. We made several and placed them in the stores and in conspicuous places. I know there will be many pastors who will say: "We have no one talented enough to make posters." My answer is: "Necessity is the mother of invention." The pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian Church had never made a poster in his life, but through necessity, he learned to make some so others could read. Young people like to make posters and they will be glad to help you.

2. Nearly every farmer takes the county newspaper, or some popular city newspaper, and we cannot afford to reject the opportunity the newspapers offer us in announcing to our people whatever plans we might have. Fill these newspapers with announcements about the God's Acre Club. If you have a Church Bulletin, make use of it, and inform your members what you are doing. Pray for the Club. Pray in the pulpit; pray in their homes when you visit them; and pray in your closed closet. The wider publicity it gets, the surer the success.

Opportunities

The success of this plan was much larger than we anticipated. Our original purpose was chiefly financial, but it is strange how God multiplies the returns on investments made with Him. The Club realized $625 from the God's Acre Club, which is unusually good for only ten members. The returns, however, came in different ways. Much to our delight, several men were being developed into useful leaders, and from our God's Acre Club three new elders were elected. We feel that the Club has paid us more in good leadership gained than in the financial returns. Every one of the members is today more interested in Church work, more dependent upon God and more trustworthy as a servant. The Club offers the opportunity of inspiring its members with the full responsibility of Church work. When a man promises to give an acre to the Lord, he immediately feels that God's work depends upon him for its advancement, and he does not hesitate to assume his share of the responsibility. His spiritual life also grows as he becomes conscious of his partnership with God. Since he is a partner with God, he must be a partner worthy of the honor. There is no limit to the amount of good that can be accomplished through the agency of the Lord's Acre Club. If the pastor is wide awake and watches for his chances, he will be kept busy with personal instruction to individual members with reference to their relationship with God and the Church.

The success of the God's Acre Club depends entirely upon the minister. If the Club fails, no one is to blame but the minister. I do not mean to say that the minister must do the work. On the contrary, he must not do the work, but must see that his officers do the work. If the readers of this article will permit me, I shall offer some important suggestions that will enable any country preacher to organize and effectuate the above ideas.

1. First, you must believe it will work. If the minister does not have much faith in the proposition, he cannot expect his officers to believe in it. Believe it will work and never say to your officers you think it will work. It is vitally important that the pastor become conscious of the fact that it is God's Acre and not the Church's Acre. When the acre is given to the Lord it is His; and we must believe it. And until you have that much faith in the plan do not attempt it.

2. Do not be afraid to promise your members that if they will consecrate one acre to God during the year that He will not only bless His acre, but will bless their acres also. It has always troubled me that so many ministers are afraid to venture out on God's promises. Read Luke 6:38, and read it to your officers.

3. We must sell the idea to our officers. There is an inevitable law in the business of salesmanship, viz., that you cannot sell anything to anyone unless you are sold on it yourself. This Club will not work unless the minister is sold on it. And if he is sold on it, it will be an easy matter to sell it to others. The best plan to follow in most cases is to go to the man who is most likely to be interested, and sell it to him. After you have won your session, and organized your plans, it might be of advantage to secure the assistance of the county agent, who will be glad to help you. He can be of great benefit in helping the members to make the best of God's Acre.

Note to the Country Church Director

On February 23, 24 and 25 I visited the Bethany C Isle of Wight County. The county is the home famous Smithfield hams. Five years ago no Presbyterians were living in that county who are there. The Bethany Presbyterian Church, which resulted from work done by Rev. S. K. Emurian and of which Vernon L. Fisher is the present pastor, now has 100 members. At the morning Sunday School there were present 104 and the offering was $7.40. One hundred and thirty-five attended morning worship. An Sunday School was visited in the afternoon and were 70 present. While they have only dirt roads was just after a rain, there were 202 present at the service.

Mr. Fisher has had the Country Church course Seminary and feels called of God to this work. years ago while a student in Union Theological Seminary Mr. Fisher, in one of his papers on the Country Church, wrote: "Much to my regret, my knowledge the Country Church is very meager indeed. All my life has been spent in the city. I wish I were in the country to write you more about the Country Church. I hope one of these days I will know more about it for it is where my heart is anyway." The community in the South offers for the Demonstration Pastorates

"THIS AWFUL PRACTICE"

Egbert W. Smith

It is hard for one who has not traveled in Christian lands to realize the horrors of heathenism. Truly did the Psalmist declare "The dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruel men." It takes more than the thin veneer of modern civilization to change the heart or to reach down to destroy those deep-rooted evils and superstitions which have been sanctioned by the faith and practice of centuries. Rev. S. H. Wilds, of our Mission, tells of an incident that recently fell upon his own eyes. Writes Mr. Wilds:

"After about fifteen minutes, along came the traveling party returning to their village. With them they had an old woman, gray-haired and bent with age and hard work. Another woman with her had a native made hoe, the handle of which was short. The end of the handle to which the hoe was attached, had a large club-like knob. This crowd went along, the possessor of the hoe would give this old woman a severe blow with the club-end of the hoe. She was even knocked down. An old man went along with them, apparently the husband of the victim who urged her along as she fell, he helped her up roughly and pushed her forward. She had marks and bruises about the face from such ill treatment.

"We asked what was the trouble. They said that evil had happened in their village and she was accused of witchcraft, the medium of this evil was being thus treated in anticipation of their punishing her guilt. And in those hills away from civilization station or Government post, the witch with his trickery, with the consent of the community many times pronounce as punishment to get rid of the witchcraft, a treatment of fire brands, water over the naked body, or death.

"The death of an old worn out woman means a loss to them. They do not take into consideration the value that she has rendered to others by her hard toil. When her strength is spent she is no longer of any use and becomes a target for the 'wise man,' the witch doctor to show his cunning in discovering evil doers, thus gain the praise of the other villagers, to say nothing of the wealth he can rake in from such practices. They are in the game for the wealth they get out of it. The old women, the women who are poor, and strangers, are generally the victims of this awful practice.

"I thought as I looked upon this case that it was 'Darkest Africa' still alive with her practices going on along an automobile highway railroad being built through that part of the country and somewhere over head was the air mail from the West Coast of the Congo to Eliza a large white settlement over to the east great Cape to Cairo Railway.

"The only highway that will push back the savagery is the One Who said, 'I am the Way'."

WOODROW WILSON ONCE SAID

"I never went into battle; I never was under the fancy that it is just as hard to do your duty as when they are sneering at you as when they are shooting at you. When they shoot at you they can only take your natural life; but when they sneer at you, they wound your living heart, and men who are enough, steadfast enough, steady in their hearts enough to go about their duty with regard to fellowmen, no matter whether there are any cheers men who can do what Rudyard Kipling in his poems wrote, 'Meet with triumph and treat those two imposters just the same, for a nation to be proud of. Morally speaking, sneer and triumph are imposters. The cheering moment are not what a man ought to think but the verdict of his conscience and of the conscience of the consciences of mankind.'—Texas Advocate.

If you find yourself going downhill morally, stop, put on the brakes by breaking a bad habit. If you have kept of your best New Year's resolutions all year, you have something for which to be proud.

KINGSTON AUXILIARY

Woman's Auxiliary of Kingston, S. C. Presbyterian Church has recently been organized into three circles. These circles were named for three good men of our church who today are in glory. Circle One was named for Mrs. Elizabeth Lem-Circle Number Two was named for Mrs. Jan-Quattlebaum, and Circle Number Three was for Mrs. Hazel McNeil. The active interest of these three women once took in the work of this will inspire the names of the circles to achieve things for the Master.

ANDERSON AUXILIARY, CENTRAL CHURCH

During the Week of Prayer and Self Denial for the Missions the Woman's Auxiliary of Central Presbyterian Church of Anderson, S. C., held meetings afternoons to study Dr. Egbert W. Smith's "The Desire of All Nations." The meeting was opened with Stewardship Devotion. One or two chapters of the book were taken up, presented by members of the Auxiliary. The walls of the Auxiliary room were beautified with appropriate posters and mottoes, as well as of the nations in which our missionaries are and the Christian flag, and the slogan "For-ward was kept ever before us." Afternoon every member present was given a slip of paper upon which appeared the name of one missionary, and asked to include that mission in her prayers that night. One station was held each day and thus every foreign missionary membered individually in prayer during the attendance at the meetings was good. Great interest in Dr. Smith's excellent book and a renewed enthusiasm for the cause of Foreign Missions were shown and the self denial offering for this work was a goodly sum. At the completion of this study the books were given over to the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. They studied in their regular meetings, one chapter presented at each meeting. The Junior Christian Endeavor Society studied mission work in Africa as their text "Black Treasure." The February Inspirational meeting of the Auxiliary was followed, under the leadership of the Secretary of Foreign Missions. The meeting was inspiring, and was very well attended.

WILMINGTON PRESBYTERIAL!

Wilmington Presbyterian Auxiliary will meet in N. C., April 4, 5, opening meeting, 9:30 a. m. Executive Committee meeting, 8:00 p. m., Wednesday. Names of delegates, date and manner of arrival. Miss Winnie Faison, Faison, N. C., chairman of Hospitality Committee, before March 20, so that arrangements may be provided. A good program has been arranged, and the various phases of our work presented by outstanding speakers. We are glad to hear of Dr. George Worth, superintendent of our mission at Kiang Yin, China, to be our foreign missionary. It is earnestly desired that each local church will send their full quota of delegates to throughout the session. Mrs. W. T. Bannerman, President.

A FINAL APPEAL

As we are approaching the last weeks of our Church year, the time when we round up our annual budget and pay what all dues are paid. Usually these payments are made monthly by the Auxiliaries. They find themselves often able to add a little more above to some desired object from the surplus. The following is the condition this year. We are way behind in our payments to the Assemblies and probably also to S. and P. Home Missions. The following statements from our Executive Committee will startle you as they did me: The Auxiliaries are more than $52,000 behind in their gifts to Foreign Missions as compared with this year. We have given $5,000 less to Assembly's Home Missions this year than last. There is a small increase in our gifts to Christian Education and Ministerial Relief and a shortage of $1,000 to Sunday School Extension. It is not so appalling indeed should the Auxiliary Report show a decrease in our total gifts for the first time since we were organized seventeen years ago? I know you are determined it shall not occur while you are President of your Auxiliary.

Will you not earnestly set to work at once to see that your Auxiliary budget shows no deficit to any cause this year, but instead shows the increase of 5 per cent called for the Standard?

Prayer and work will accomplish this and save our Mission work from curtailment and disaster. I know you will see that your Auxiliary reaches our goal. We're counting on you!

Faithfully yours,
Hallie P. Winsborough.

OUR BELOVED SUPERINTENDENT

The women all over the Church will be interested to know that while Mrs. Winsborough has not been well enough for full work in her office this winter, she now reports that she is making a slow but sure recovery in the sunshine of Texas.

BIRTHDAY OBJECTIVES

The Auxiliary will soon be celebrating another birthday. 1929 will bring a gay Mexican party, festive with flowers and the red, green, and white which Mexico loves. For this year our gifts go to the equipping of two schools for girls in Mexico, at Chilpancingo (Chil-pahn-si 'ng-go) and Zitacuaro (Zee-t'ah-quah-ro).

At Chilpancingo you will find the Wallace Memorial school under the leadership of Miss Alice McClelland. At Zitacuaro is the Centenarista school in charge of Miss Lettie Beaty.

The demand for our Mexican girls who graduate from these schools now is very great; the demand for their service will grow as they are even better trained, for the Mexican government in its heroic effort to educate its 80 per cent illiterate masses, are asking for our trained Christian girls as fast as they graduate. Educational boards are finding it difficult to find teachers of moral character and of the love for others which will carry them out into Mexico's hard places. Our schools send out girls who are veritable torches in their communities, for they burn for Christ and teach things not in words to their pupils and patrons.

Into Christian homes, into the nursing and teaching professions go the girls, soul-winners, who will be ours in nearer sense through our share in the Birthday gift.

You are having two schools for one Birthday, so—Double Your Offering
is our slogan.

CHARLESTON PRESBYTERIAL

Presbyterial Auxiliary will hold its annual meeting in the Second Presbyterian Church, Charleston, S. C., on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 26-27. Some features of interest will be as follows: We shall have with us Rev. C. W. Caldwell, of China, Miss Sue Haley of Assembly's Home Missions Office, Atlanta, Ga., Miss Bowman of the Presbyterian Committee, Richmond, Va., and Rev. John McSweeney, President of Presbyterian College, Clinton, S. C. Miss Amey Allan will conduct a "Methods Period," for the solving of Auxiliary problems. A good attendance is hoped for. J. L. G.

WOMAN'S WORK IS COMPARED

Under the efficient leadership of the past President, Mrs. I. M. Keels, Congaree has gone forward, showing improvements along all lines.

This Presbyterial is composed of twenty-one auxiliaries, which are 100 per cent in registering every woman on the church roll as a member of the Auxiliary.

The annual meeting of the Presbyterial was held in April at Trenton and was characterized by the spiritual atmosphere which permeated every session, and the good fellowship of the women working together for the Master. Several fervent prayers of thanksgiving were offered for blessings received during the year.

In July the President attended Montreat Training School for Leaders; an executive of Synodical, and the Presbyterial President's Conferences.

The four Group Conferences which were held this Fall had splendid attendance at each. Much interest was manifested, and they resulted in renewed zeal and great inspiration. We are much indebted to Miss Edith Foster of Brazil for the splendid missionary addresses given. At each Conference, the program was so arranged that time was given for the study of methods and duties of officers. This was made possible by the co-operation of Presbyterial officers and cause secretaries attending.

Congaree was well represented at Montreat during Summer Conferences. Thirteen attending, and sent delegates to Conference for Colored Women at Benedict College.

A majority of auxiliaries in this Presbyterial have paid in full their quota to Ft. Hill Church at Clemson, and several others have contributed. We have also contributed to P. C. at Clinton, and were 100 per cent in our Birthday Offering.

Mrs. J. P. Elliott,
President Congaree Presbyterial.

MECKLENBURG PRESBYTERIAL

The annual meeting of the Mecklenburg Presbyterial will be held at Hamlet, N. C., in the Presbyterian Church, April 25, 26. Mrs. A. A. Walker, president, requests that delegates be on hand promptly at 10 a. m. An interesting program is being arranged.

SECRETS OF A SUCCESSFUL ORGANIZATION

W. D. McInnis, Mt. Holly, N. C.

No doubt the experience of practically every pastor has been just about the same in his work with the Men of the Church. He has truly worked with them but there have been discouragements and failures. My experience has been no different from all the rest, but I do believe that now, after wandering in the woods and fog for a long time, we have at last gotten upon the road that will lead us out into the light.

We have an organization in our church now that is about five months old, and it has all of the attributes of youth, enthusiasm, willingness to work, and best of all, possibilities for a fully developed organization rendering a great service to the church and community. With this organization functioning as it is, and with three absolute failures before me, I am convinced that three things are necessary before the Men's Work in any church can be made to go.

The Pastor Must Be Sold

First, the pastor of the church must be entirely "sold" on the idea of the Men-of-the-Church. It is no easy task to convince a pastor that it can be done. He has had too many failures before, but he MUST forget those failures. He must forget the mistakes that have been made in the past, both by himself and by the church, in failing to provide him with a workable program, and look only to those things which are before. The pastor must come to the place where he is willing to do as one pastor in our Presbytery said he had to do before he succeeded with the men in his church, he must be willing to "SWEAT BLOOD." The Lord can go over the head of the pastor in this work, but I don't believe He will. When we begin to check up on the reasons why we have failed, in the great majority of instances we find the cause right here. As long as a pastor is not willing to give the time and the thought and the effort to this work, it is a failure.

An Interested President

Second, there should be at least one other man in the church who is as interested as the pastor, and this man should be the President of the organization. I have talked to a great many ministers who have told me that their organization faded out simply because of the President. In our organization we were fortunate in getting a Christian doctor to head it up. Contrary to the average doctor, he puts the work of the Lord above his own noble profession, and his whole soul and body is in the work.

Group Leaders

The third and last necessity are your group leaders. These should be the most consecrated and active men in your church. It is upon them, after all, that the organization is to rise or fall. They should have the ability to lead and should command the respect and the confidence of men. Get them from any walk of life, but be sure and get CHRISTIAN MEN.

You will say that those three things are easy to find, and that you can meet those requirements very readily. Maybe you can, but it took us three years to do it, and at that we are not entirely successful.

After you have prepared the ground thoroughly; after you, as a pastor, are deeply interested; after you have your President with you and your group leaders in mind, you are ready to perfect your organization. Don't be in a hurry about it. The things that last are the things that were years in the making. My little boy can build a house of blocks in a minute, but I can come along and blow it down with my breath. When we were ready we asked our ladies to serve us a supper. We advertised the meeting from the pulpit, in the local paper and by word of mouth. We went out and literally "compelled them to come in." We prayed constantly for the success of the meeting, and it was a success. Rev. H. N. McDiarmid, of Shelby brought us the inspirational address. He knows men, and has one of the very few successful organizations in our Presbytery. After his address the nominating committee brought in their report and the men elected the President, Secretary and Treasurer at their suggestion. In the weeks that followed the group leaders were appointed, notified, and at our second monthly meeting they outlined their individual plans. Each man in the church was placed in a group, these groups consisting of approximately twelve men each. Name your groups anything you may wish, but be sure that every man in the church is placed in some group. The department chairmen should also be given careful consideration, but their responsibility is not nearly so great as the group leaders. A great many organizations think they can function with only the group leaders, or only the department chairmen, but that is a mistake. We failed right there once.

After your organization has been perfected you are ready for work, and the way in which you go about this work depends entirely upon your own local condition and needs. The Department of Men's Work in Atlanta does not know what our little church here in Mt. Holly needs. Their plan of organization is so flexible as to enable any church to adopt it, and still meet their own needs. The closer you can stick to their suggestions, though, I have found, the better it will be for your organization. Before our new church year begins the executive committee will map out our work for the year, and that committee will have before it the definite needs of our own church.

We meet once a month, the first Tuesday night. The different circles of the Auxiliary serve a supper before the meeting. In our case the supper must be a substantial one, for we have several men who work and work hard. Salads and nick-nacks would not satisfy them. They need something that will really satisfy, so the ladies know to always have a real meal. There is no charge, any one can pay who wants to, but thus far the average has been over seventy-five cents a plate. A great many churches find a difficulty here, but we find this no trouble at all. The men are glad to pay for a real meal once a month.

After the supper we adjourn to our meeting room. We have found it very unwise to have our meeting in the dining room. The supper is but a means to an end, and it is almost impossible to get the right atmosphere in the place where you eat. The men will want to smoke or recline in the chairs unless you get them in a different room. Once there, we carry out the program for that particular month. The ones to participate have been notified well in advance and are prepared. We follow the suggestions given in the Monthly Programs and Service Suggestions as closely as possible. The Worship Program and the Educational Program are both very fine as given there. Seldom is a change necessary. The service program, however, we have found to be the weak spot in these outlines. There is entirely too much suggested for the men to do, and we have made our own service program which we are trying to follow. If the committee would consider a suggestion, and I am sure they will gladly, I would suggest that they cut down on this Service Program. Make it easier. The Men's Work in our church as a whole is on its first legs, and we will have to feed these men on milk for awhile until they are able to digest strong meat.

As I have said, we are yet young in our organization. At the close of next year, with God's blessing during that time, I believe we can give you an account of some great accomplishments by our men. In the short time we have been going, I know that we have accomplished one thing. We have captured the interest of the men to the extent that they will come to the meetings and take part when called upon. That in itself is no little thing.

Monthly Programs and Service Suggestions, 1929-1933

The new Year-Book of Programs and Service Suggestions is just off the press. It is neatly and attractively the same as last year, being built around worship, education and service. The service program, however, has been simplified and placed in the appendix. Detailed suggestions are given for the President, the Council, the Leader, the Speakers, and the Group Leaders. These suggestions, arranged for every type of church, will have to be adapted to the local organization, but should prove helpful. Another addition is the time schedule. Each part of the service has its own time allotted, and it is printed in connection with each program.

These programs are issued by the Department of Men's Work, Henry Grady Building, Atlanta, Georgia, Rev. J. E. Purcell, Secretary. The price is $1.50 per dozen, seventy-five cents half dozen, and fifteen cents each.

DOUBLE THE SALARY

Let us double the salary of the country pastor. All will agree that he needs it. There are hundreds of small country churches in the General Assembly and, even in groups of two to four, are unable to pay a living salary to the pastor. The salary must, in many cases, be supplemented from home mission funds. Many such churches are vacant for want of men and means. Is there a remedy?

The auto and better roads have wrought great changes in our day.

The state has consolidated the public schools and perhaps we shall, at some time, be able to consolidate the churches, but it is hard to get people to abandon the old church and the burying place of their fathers. In the meantime, can we not change the "grouping" and give the pastor more churches? Every church wants a morning service at least once a month. If we can increase these "morning services" we can increase the number of churches in a charge. This can be done.

A pastor can preach at ten o'clock and, in an automobile, he can go ten or twenty miles and preach again at eleven thirty or twelve o'clock. By using the same sermon, he will expend no more energy than he now does, assisting in the Sunday School and perhaps, teaching a class, and preaching one sermon. Then, instead of going home with some family and dining, he can have a lunch in his automobile and go ten-twenty or forty miles and preach (the same sermon) at an afternoon appointment. After resting an hour or two, he can have an evening service and be at home in time for a night's rest.

In this way he can reach six or eight churches, give them as many services as, on the present plan, he can do to two or three.

The situation is similar in regard to pastoral help. The old style of "spending the day" is thing of the past. Domestic help is scarce and uncertain. Country life as well as city life has undergone great changes. We have taken the place of visits. With the aid of the mobile and good roads, a minister can do three times as much pastoral work as his father could do with a horse and buggy.

This plan would supply nearly all our churches with pastors and, in many cases, enable the pastor to be free from worldly cares and avocations."

C. W. Maxwell,

Chairman of Home Missions in Roanoke Presbytery, South Boston, Va.

AN ILLUSTRATION OF THE TITH

Rev. J. S. Crowley

(This story was told to the writer, by Mr. S. E. I. Ruling Elder in the First Presbyterian Church, Orlando, Fla., in the year 1901. The writer had just returned from the Congo Free State, Africa, and while at home he visited the churches as far as he could, in the interest of Foreign Missions; and while in the home of Mr. Ruling he related unto him this story. It may do some good as the writer knows it has done others good.)

When I lived in a certain town in the state of Georgia a few years ago, our pastor preached a sermon on the Tith, and plead earnestly for a generous offering from the members of our church. As a Tither my amount all prepared, and was overjoyed for the privilege of helping our missionaries who had sacrificed much to carry the Gospel to the heathen, as I could go myself. And when the Deacons took the offering was beside me a man whom I knew positively to have cleared net Four Thousand Dollars that year. I remember that his little boy was sitting with him. Before the plate was offered to us I saw something I would not have seen for anything in the world. The man sat there with his silk (stove pipe) hat beside him wore a long Prince Albert coat and had on a pair of kid gloves. He held the amount of his offering in his hand, and for some cause, he dropped it. I had to go for it rolled almost under my foot and I had to go to my foot in order for him to pick it up. It was the amount of nickel. I then and there offered a prayer for his behalf. I said to myself, "Something bad will happen to this man." But I prayed earnestly for him. Long afterwards he was unfortunate and lost his position, and for months he was not able to do anything to do. I was a merchant and he was in my debt for more than fifty dollars. Finally he was able to get a position with the railroad company at another town almost one hundred miles away. He did not have the money to move with, and finally came to me begging his position and circumstances, for a loan of fifty Dollars. He said he would have to pay me on a installment plan as he was only offered fifty dollars a month. The man paid me in full in the course of two years. After that I lost track of him but kept him on my prayer list, never forgetting to pray for him to the Throne of Grace. After some years a merchant called on me and he was telling of his trips to a certain part of Georgia. Then I asked him if he ever met a man in a certain town by the name of "Why yes," said he, "He is the depot agent and good farmer, runs a store and does a good business. I want to know something about him in his life, can you tell me anything about that?" I opened up. "That man is a wonder." He is in my community where there was no church nor Sunday School. He started a Sunday School in his own house, and afterwards he built a church. He tithes his income. I am a preacher to come over to that little church next month. He is the superintendent of the Sunday School and conducts services himself when there is no preacher. Mr. Ives said "That gives me great joy to hear good news." Does it pay to pray for another? I pay to worship the Lord with the due portion which belongs to him? Westminister, S. C.

A famous and eccentric clergyman of Philadelphia, walking down a principal street of that city was met by a stranger who said, "Mister, can you tell me how to find the sheriff's office?" The minister instantly and said, "Yes, sir! Every time you see a man who spends ten dollars spend ten!" Without delay the preacher on.

AMERICA

"It's fine to see the old world, and wander up and down Amid the ancient palaces and places of renown; To admire the crumbling castles, and the statues of kings, But now I think I've had enough of antiquated things."

"O, London is a man's town, there's power in the air And Paris is a woman's town with flowers in her hair And it's sweet to dream in Venice, and it's great to see Rome, But when it comes to living, there is no place like home."

"I know that Europe's wonderful, yet something is missing to lack;

The past is too much with her, the people looking for the glory of the present is to make the future better. We love our land for what she is, and what she has."

"So, it's home again, and home again, America My heart is turning home again, and there I long to be In the land of youth and freedom, beyond the ocean Where the air is full of sunlight, and the flag is flying stars."

ANNUAL REPORT OF PRESBYTERIAN HOSPITAL—CHARLOTTE, N. C.

The hospital, during the year 1928, has rendered the finest service of any year under the present management, and at the same time shows the best financial statement of any year during the same period. Many friends of the institution have had a part in this fine work, and to all these, the Trustees and Management wish to express their sincere appreciation.

The physical plant is in better condition than it has been for years, the entire interior having been painted during the closing months of the year, and much new furniture added.

The daily cost per patient was reduced from $3.99 in 1927 to $3.81 in 1928.

It has been felt by some that because of the large rooms and spacious grounds, we cannot operate the Presbyterian Hospital economically. But facts prove the contrary. We have not yet gotten figures for 1928, but the Duke Endowment has furnished a comparative statement for the year 1927, comparing the daily cost per patient of our hospital with the average daily cost per patient in sixteen similar hospitals in the Carolinas. The statement shows the average daily cost per patient in the sixteen hospitals to be $4.27, while the daily cost per patient in our hospital was $3.99, or 28 cents below the average.

The charity done by the hospital during the year cost $26,868.12. The gifts for charity from the churches, the Duke Endowment, the city and county, and other charitable institutions, amounted to $14,564.26, leaving a balance of $12,303.86 contributed by the hospital.

It has been the earnest endeavor of the management of the hospital to so permeate the hospital with the spirit of Christ that His influence may be felt by all who enter our institution.

Below, we publish a balance sheet for the year 1928. On December 31, 1927, the assets in excess of liabilities was $151,874.65, on December 31, 1928 the assets in excess of liabilities was $168,861.72, or a gain of $16,987.07.

Why Patronize the Presbyterian Hospital?

The question is sometimes asked: Why should I patronize the Presbyterian Hospital when its charges to me are as high as those of other hospitals? Here is one answer: If you, during the year, have been a patient in the Presbyterian Hospital, and have occupied a room for which you have paid $4.00 per day or more, you have contributed to its charity, and have had a part in its great ministry to the poor.

THORNWELL ORPHANAGE—S. O. S.

The situation at Thornwell Orphanage is worse than serious. It is critical.

For the eleven months, April 1, 1928, to March 1, 1929, receipts from the three Synods of South Carolina, Georgia and Florida have been $17,416.22 less than for the corresponding months last year.

South Carolina has given	$ 6,431.66 less
Georgia has given	7,222.15 less
Florida has given	3,762.41 less
Total	$17,416.22 less

Our deficit on support March first was $36,000.00. It was $27,000.00 one year ago.

We have done our best to keep down expenses. If receipts from the Synods had been up to last year the deficit would have been reduced from $27,000.00 a year to $19,000.00 March first, this year.

We are turning away children who are in distressing need of our help, because we fear to admit them under present conditions. Unless our friends come to our immediate help we will be forced to close some of our cottages.

Pray that God may even now show you your privilege of helping provide for the 330 children under our care.

Make checks payable to Thornwell Orphanage.

Yours with a burdened heart,

FOUR THOUSAND DOLLARS IN PRIZES FOR TWO BOOKS

Under the condition of the John C. Green Income Fund the American Sunday School Union is seeking by the prize contest method to secure manuscripts for two books on popular religious themes. The subjects and conditions as set forth in their announcement are suggestive; and the generous prize offer for each successful manuscript should prove an inducement to writers. This announcement will be sent to anyone on request.

They offer a prize of $2,000 for a manuscript on "Religion in Education" and another prize of $2,000 for a manuscript on "The Heroic Appeal of Christianity to Young People."

The manuscript on the subject of "Religion in Education" should show, according to the announcement, "the educational worth of the Bible, and of religious teaching based upon it." The style should be popular and readable, with a wide appeal. It "should have a convincing message to voters, lawmakers, parents and teachers."

The offer of a prize for a manuscript on "The Heroic Appeal of Christianity to Young People" is "based the conviction that our young people will find in Christianity, when rightly presented to them, a gripping appeal to the finest and noblest living." The form of manuscript may be what the author chooses.

The contests close March 1, 1930. The Editorial Department, American Sunday School Union, 1816 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., will furnish full particulars on request.

NORTH CAROLINA

Mooreville—At a recent election the following men were elected elders: Mr. H. N. Johnston, Sr., W. D. McLelland and Mr. B. M. McNeely. Four were chosen at the same time: Mr. P. B. McNeely, H. N. Johnston, Jr., Mr. S. H. Price, Mr. W. B. B. Sr. These men will be ordained and installed the Sunday in March. They are all good men and strengthen our official force.

On the second Sunday of March we closed a evangelistic meeting, in which the preaching was done by Dr. J. E. Flow, superintendent evangelist of Concord Presbytery. The sermons were clear, Scriptural and convincing. Four young people were received into the fellowship of faith. Quite a number of the Christian re-consecrated their lives to the service of their Master.

With the end of March Miss Claudia Fraser, who has been our director of religious education, will terminate her service with this church. She takes up the same under the direction of Concord Presbytery. We are sorry to give her up, as she has rendered fine service in our congregation. At the same time we feel she goes to a larger sphere of activity.

Mecklenburg Presbytery will meet at Steele Church, Tuesday, April 9, at 8 p. m.

Cherryville—An outstanding demonstration of personal work by one consecrated layman in this city has resulted in the organization of a Men's Bible with 66 members. Until three weeks ago there was no organization of men in the Sunday School and but few ever attended. From store to store and home to home, this one layman gathered in more than 60 men in three weeks.

Presbyterian Orphans' Home, Barium Springs

On the second Sunday in March the pulpit at Little Church was filled by another young man from Davidson College, Mr. T. E. Hill. Young Mr. Hill is a student of Davidson and member of the ministerial band there. His subject was "The Thing That Satisfies—Love." His message was interesting and inspiring. These young men so much to our young people here at Barium Springs are loved by all, and we wish to assure them that their messages are appreciated.

The same Sunday at three o'clock in the afternoon a congregational meeting was held in the church for the purpose of completing our Every Member Campaign. All the pledge cards are not in, we feel sure our campaign will be fully met by pledges. Following this meeting the Woman's Auxiliary held their regular monthly meeting, at the close of which the newly elected officers were installed.

Sugaw Creek—We had a fine meeting from March 3-10. The preaching was done by Rev. A. A. V. superintendent of home missions of Mecklenburg Presbytery. Mr. Walker is not only an excellent preacher, but one full of enthusiasm for his work which is infectious and convincing. We had a large attendance on profession of faith.

Our auxiliary had its annual meeting on March 13, at which the new officers were installed. Supply pastor, Rev. J. G. Garth. The Auxiliary reported a net gain of $624 during last year.

Mr. L. P. Burney, a student of Columbia Seminary, visited the church March 3, and notified the congregation of his intention to decide in one month on whether to accept the call to the pastorate. We are sure he will accept the call.

Hamlet—The men of the churches of Rowan County met at Hamlet First Church on March 13 and had as their guests and speakers two of the members of the Second Church, Charlotte, F. R. McNinch and W. G. McCulloch, who both spoke on Stewardship. Mr. McNinch took for his theme Stewardship of Possessions, while Mr. McCulloch talked on the Stewardship of the Spiritual Life. Both speeches were very fine, and were highly complimented. The speakers were highly complimented. The congregation was aroused to great enthusiasm and interest.

Our church listened in to the radio service on March 3, and heard Dr. A. D. P. Gilmour broadcast from Charlotte. The audience was very large and were much edified by the service which was clearly understood.

Winston-Salem Presbytery will meet in the First Presbyterian Church, Tuesday, April 9, at 8 p. m.

Davidson—With a season's record of two wins and two defeats, the Davidson College debater team their second week of strenuous activity. Zeb V. Long, Jr., of Statesville, and W. B. McNeill, of Franklin, meet the representatives of North Carolina and Wake Forest on March 12 and 13, at Wake Forest and at Wake Forest.

The subject is, "Resolved, That expert jurists should be substituted for the present system of trial by jury." Against N. C. S.

erians contend for the affirmative, but will negatively against Wake Forest.

ries were recorded last week over the University of Richmond, Va., and William and College at Williamsburg, Va. Davidson was led by W. L. Dumas, of Talladega, Ala., and Christian, of Mobile, Ala. Their feat of win-bates on successive nights was remarkable, being the fact that they debated both sides of the question. The University of Florida team defeated R. C. Grady, of Wilmington, N. C. Matthews, of Lumberton, at Queens College last week.

Wade C. Smith and Prof. T. W. Andrews, president of the city schools at High Point, came to Davidson this week to continue the third Vocational Guidance Institute conducted by M. C. A. here.

Andrews will be at Davidson on March 12th to discuss education as a life vocation, while Mr. Smith will spend two days on the campus. He plans to be at Davidson March 12 and 13th, and in addition will view all members of the "Y" cabinet and of the student body, he will conduct chapel and probably speak before a number of the scheduled Bible classes.

Ernest Milton.

Greensboro—A group of eight members of the Y. M. C. A. of the University of North Carolina conducted the evening service at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant Sunday night, March 10. The pastor is Rev. R. Murphy Williams. Included in the party was a vocal quartet, composed of Jack Miller, of Taylorsville; John Miller, of Winston-Salem; Steve Lynch and Wofford Humphries, of Asheville. The other members of the group are A. Lang, of Carthage, Douglas L. Potter, of Greensboro, and James W. Williams and Aubrey Perkins. Mr. Perkins is acting secretary of the University Association, while Mr. Williams is the son of Rev. Mr. Williams.

Charlotte—Mrs. John Y. Boyd of Southern Pines died February 28, in the Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, where she was operated on two weeks ago.

She was the daughter of the late A. J. Herr and William Herr, of Harrisburg, Pa., and the wife of John Yeomans Boyd, who died in 1914. The funeral service was held at Harrisburg, Saturday.

She was well known in North Carolina and Pennsylvania as a student and teacher of the Bible, and published several books on the Old Testament and "Stories for Children." While living in Harrisburg she taught in the Pine Street Presbyterian Church a weekly class of two hundred men, and her piety and spiritual power are still felt throughout the community.

For the last ten years she has lived in Southern Pines, N. C.

Greensboro, Westminster—A talk by Dr. E. E. Williams of the Home Mission board of the Southern Presbyterian Church, on the subject of tithing was the highlight of a delightful and inspiring meeting of the church held there recently. The meeting was the nature of a supper. Rev. C. E. Hodgkin, pastor of the church, and other members of the congregation made short talks.

Officers for the year were elected at the meeting. Harvey Dick was chosen president of the church, and the other officers who will serve are E. T. McCreary, president, and Howard West, secretary. J. T. Witherspoon was the retiring treasurer.

Charlotte—At the request of the secretary of Foreign Missions of the Woman's Auxiliary, the pastor, Rev. E. W. Smith, taught "The Desire of All Nations," by Dr. E. W. Smith. The attendance was large, much interest was manifested in the book and our offering for the cause. We believe much lasting good will result from this study of missions.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Greenville—The Central Church here has given a call to Rev. J. H. Carter, of Taylorsville, N. C. It is hoped Mr. Carter will accept the call. The church was vacated by Rev. John McSweeney, who resigned to become president of Presbyterian Church, Clinton, S. C.

Mr. Carter has been at Taylorsville several years, where from Elkin, N. C., where for four years he was a newspaper before he decided to preach. He was called back when he decided to preach. Mr. Carter has actively interested himself in home evangelism, and also in delivering series of lectures in public schools. He has frequently conducted week-ends in various towns teaching missions.

Greenville—The Presbyterian Church will meet in Bethel Church, Greenville, S. C., April 16, 1929 at 8 p. m. Alexander Sprunt, S. C.

Fraser Chapel—A most helpful meeting has been held in this chapel by Rev. P. D. Patrick, the pastor of Harmony and Pee Dee Presbyteries. The chapel is a mission of the Presbyterian Church, Greenville, S. C. A Sunday School has been conducted in the southern part of the city for a year. A very attractive lot has been purchased and a fine and handsome chapel and Sunday School building erected by the T. B. Fraser Bible class of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Peick came to us February 1st, just after the completion of the building and preached each night for ten days.

Excellent congregations attended and lasting good was done.

There were 19 professions. Seven of these have already joined the Presbyterian Church and others will join soon.

Six have come by letter as the result of the meeting.

The Sunday School had an attendance of 103 last Sunday and gives every indication of continued growth.

Mr. A. K. Dudley, of Union Seminary helped with the work at this point last summer, and accomplished much good. Mr. Patrick's preaching was of a high order, and he was tireless in his work of saving souls.

VIRGINIA

Danville—Burton Memorial and College Avenue Churches are waiting for an answer to their call for Rev. Norman Cook of Hazard, Ky. There are high hopes that he will accept the call. Sunnyside Home, of the Synod of Virginia falls heir to the Burton mansion. The Board of Directors of the Sunnyside Home have had an important question before them in regard to the best use to be made of the Burton mansion. In making her will, Mrs. F. X. Burton gave the residence on Main Street, Danville, to the Sunnyside Home to be used for a home for the aged. Some years later she added a codicil giving the residence in fee simple to the Sunnyside Home. The house is not well adapted to be used as a home for the aged because of the large rooms. The furnishings are also unusual for such purpose. Persian rugs and satsuma vases represent more money than is necessary for ordinary use. A committee was appointed, John T. Watson, chairman, to ascertain the cash value of these elegant furnishings so that, if advisable, they can be sold and other things bought to replace them.

It was found that by some inexpensive changes, we could house about half of the present Sunnyside inmates in the mansion. A building committee was appointed at a recent meeting of the board and instructed to make the necessary changes and to build 12 additional rooms as an annex. Authority was given also to sell the present home on Virginia Avenue. It is hoped that within a few months Sunnyside Home will be removed to the new quarters.

It is estimated that this can be done without incurring a debt. We have twenty-one inmates and there are others anxious to come.

The noble generosity of Mrs. Burton will enable us to make room for others but does not provide for their keep.

C. W. Maxwell, President of the Board.

Staunton—When we began to prepare for our annual every member canvass in March of 1928, at the Third Presbyterian Church, I conceived the following simple plan that was really quite a success. It put a good spirit into the campaign, brought more people to church, caused people to "search the Scriptures," and helped in the financial results of the canvass for pledges to cover the current expense and benevolence budgets of the church year beginning April first.

We formerly had used stewardship literature by the "bushel," and had sown the congregation with it. For this time we decided to leave off the literature and see what could be done in getting the people to go to the Scriptures and look up for themselves what the Bible had to say about the grace of giving. So I announced to the congregation that for the three Sabbaths leading up to the canvass I planned to preach on "Stewardship of Money in the Scriptures," and wanted them to furnish the texts. I asked every one of them who would, to go to the Bible and find all the verses they could find on "giving," or at least connected with the giving of means unto God, and to write them out, giving references, sign their names to the list, and hand them to the pastor, and he would for the next three Sundays use some of the outstanding of the verses for his texts.

I told them that unless they handed in the verses there would not be any sermons, and the better the texts and co-operation on their part, I hoped the better would be the sermons.

Then, in order to put a little spiritual spice into the matter, I announced that the man and woman, boy and girl, who handed in the largest list of verses would be invited to the manse for dinner on the closing day, the day of the canvass. I later enlarged this invitation to include the seconds in each class, making eight people in all.

It was really surprising how much interest many of them, young and old, took in the contest, and the Scripture verses just rolled in, and the pastor was embarrassed with the riches of his texts. They were encouraged to keep on handing in lists, from time to time as they searched more and more in the word of God. We made announcement from time to time just what progress was being made.

On Sundays when we preached from certain passages, we announced just who had handed in the various ones. By the time we were through the series many of the congregation had been touched personally in this way. Of course, our sermons were rather informal in this way, but we believe it gave an opportunity to speak more plainly than commonly, and possibly more effectively, for when we were speaking on a text that certain ones had handed in of their own free-will, they could not so readily excuse themselves from its teachings on the grace of giving. It gave the preacher a good chance to "bear down hard."

We believe that when the contest, or campaign, was over, that our people knew more about what the Bible has to say on giving than they had ever known before, and we are sure that the ones who had taken part can never quite forget how full the Bible is of "giving." The lady who handed in most verses of all, handed in 244.

One of the winning eight was ill at the last, but the other seven accepted our invitation to dinner at the manse, and we all just had a fine time, a good spiritual blessing for us of the manse, and we believe for our guests also. It was a "Presbyterian dinner" that was served that Sabbath. This personal touch brought pastor and people closer together, and proved to them that it was not just a mere matter of getting money out of people.

Then, as a little surprise, we announced on the last day that each one who had taken the interest to hand in any list of verses at all, was invited to the manse on a certain evening for a little party. We rather think that that announcement made some others sorry that they had not handed in any verses! When the evening came, we all had just a "grand and glorious time."

Our church is one of the smaller churches, and the above outlined plan might not work in larger churches, but for us, it gave a new and different touch to our annual canvass and its preparation, and made the people realize more fully that this matter of giving money to the Lord, through His church, is not just a "preacher's business," but that the Bible is full of it, and that if they have any quarrel at all it must be with the Word of God, and not the mere word of the preacher.

People handed in verses from the seven or eight year old child to the old grandmother. Some of other churches responded.

We do not wish to be understood as being against the use of stewardship literature, but just for a change, and a very Scriptural one, we found this idea full of helpfulness for both pastor and people.

We have in mind a slightly altered plan for this year, and may write of it later, if it proves successful.

W. W. Sprouse.

WEST VIRGINIA

Bluestone Presbytery—In this new Presbytery, we have tried a new plan in our Stewardship Campaign. The secretary of Stewardship secured the services of Rev. Henry H. Sweets, D.D., of Louisville, Ky., our Secretary of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. He came to this Presbytery February 12, and continued with us through Sunday 17th. He could not visit all of the churches, but was able to meet the people of Montgomery, Fayetteville, Mt. Hope, Beckley, Princeton, Bluefield, Welch and Mullens. We had so planned his work that he would be with one church at noon, and another in the evening. At noon, luncheon had been prepared, and the people invited. In the evening large congregations were present to hear him, and dinner was served at the church. He impressed his hearers by his description of the great need of the world, and our wonderful opportunity to help. Also he was able to lay on the hearts of the people the great need of faithfulness as stewards. Good congregations greeted him at the different churches, and the people were given a greater vision of service, and a greater determination to make this a new year in stewardship.

As we said in the beginning, this is a new plan. We believe it has been a blessing to us. Would it not be a good idea to use our secretaries when possible in this work? They have seen the needs of the world by travel and study. They know what we are trying to do, and are able to tell the people. Besides, it gives our churches a greater interest in these men and the causes they represent. Although Dr. Sweets did not discuss his cause with the people, our people all feel that they know him and are interested in him. We had the good fortune in Mullens to have him with us on Sunday. He preached two wonderful sermons. Also addressed our Sunday School, and both the Senior and Junior Endeavors. We feel that his coming has been a great help to us in our Stewardship Campaign, and also believe that all of our men and women, boys and girls will have a greater interest in the work, and in this great man at the head of our Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. As secretary of stewardship in this Presbytery, I just desired to tell the people how much we enjoyed this plan, how helpful we feel it has been to us, and suggest that possibly the same plan would be helpful in other Presbyteries.

Grover C. Currie.

Mullens—The members of this Church and congregation were delighted with our School of Missions held during the last three days of January. We used the Book, "The Desire of All Nations," by Dr. E. W. Smith. This school was under the direction of the Women's Auxiliary, and had the co-operation of our men, and also our Young People's Organizations and Sunday School. Mrs. R. F. Wildey, the secretary of Foreign Missions in the Auxiliary, together with several others planned the work. It was a wonderful study, especially when we consider the fact that so many took part, and had prepared so well their parts. We used several pageants to illustrate certain chapters, while men and women took other chapters and taught them. On the closing night, a very good offering was made to Foreign Missions. We feel that this, our first School of Missions has been a decided success, and we are hoping to make the next still greater. There was an average attendance of about fifty. Our Church is going forward with fine interest in every department.

PUBLISHING THE "BEST SELLER"

(The Office Point of View)

George M. Brown, General Secretary American Bible Society

Best sellers have their day and cease to be but the demand for the Bible never ceases.

The American Bible Society publishes Bibles, Testaments and Portions in a wide variety of styles and bindings. Portions of the Bible—Proverbs, Matthew, Luke, John, Acts, Romans and Revelation, each in one volume with the balance of the New Testament in four volumes—are published in English at one cent each. These booklets have met with such universal acceptance that the Society has found it possible to include maps and black and white illustrations and to use three-color pictures on the cover. The price of the booklets has been kept at one cent. The New Testament may be secured for a nickel and an entire Bible is sold for but forty-five cents. Pulpit Bibles, substantially bound Bibles for churches and Sunday Schools, higher priced Bibles for individual use, especially fine Bibles for gift purposes, including morocco Bibles bound in purple, red, maroon, brown and green and in white for brides, are all published by the American Bible Society.

The publication of Scriptures in foreign languages forms a large part of the Society's missionary service. The first complete Bible in Luba-Lulua, the dialect spoken by some 2,500,000 natives of the Bantu race in the Belgian Congo, was published last year for use of missions maintained by the Southern Presbyterian Church. A second edition of Bulu New Testaments was printed for West African missions. Publication work on new translations as well as necessary re-prints of Scriptures already published is carried on without interruption by the Society to meet the ever-increasing demand for the Bible. Printing plates of the Bible valued at more than two million dollars are stored in the fire-proof vaults of the American Bible Society's New York headquarters.

The American Bible Society renders an especial service in providing embossed Bibles for the Blind in six systems and eighteen languages.

PRINTING BIBLES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

George M. Brown, General Secretary American Bible Society

"No other printing house has such a polyglot output," said the New York Times of November 28, 1928, when writing of the New York headquarters of the American Bible Society. But these Scriptures from only a small part of those which are needed by the Society's twelve foreign agencies working throughout the world.

In China, so large has been the Scripture production that leather binding contracts placed by the Society's Agency recently exhausted the local leather markets. The typesetting on a new long-awaited pulpit Bible for general use in China required a year. But the enthusiastic reception accorded the book gave evidence that the efforts expended were appreciated and justified. New publications in the various Chinese dialects are constantly being made.

After September 1923, when the Japanese earthquake destroyed the Philippine Agency's plates and stock of Scriptures stored in Japan the stupendous task of setting up 14,000 pages of Scriptures by linotype and the restoration of permanent plates was undertaken by the Agency, located in Manila, and has been completed. The task involved the proof-reading of all the pages, and the printing and binding of thousands of Bibles, Testaments and Portions. There are seven dialect Bibles in plates. In addition to the molds kept by the Agency in the Philippine Islands a duplicate set is preserved in the New York vaults to guard against another disastrous earthquake.

From the Far East to the Near East run the presses for the American Bible Society. In the territory which the Society serves throughout Syria, Palestine, and Egypt publication figures for last year showed a 42 percent increase on the whole previous year's total.

The Bible is the only printed book which the Armenian blind children have to read. The Gospels and some other Scripture portions which are printed in Braille by the American Bible Society have been read over and over by the children until the chapters have been committed to memory. The Brazilian agency of the Society has issued in Portuguese Braille the Gospels of John and Mark, the only portions of the Scriptures printed in South America for the Blind.

THE MARCH SURVEY

The Presbyterian Survey for March is a fine tribute to the General Assembly's Training School at Richmond, Virginia. Six of the leading articles in the Survey are written by Christian workers who have been students at the Training School. Several other articles are about mission work which is being done by Training School graduates.

Dr. O. G. Jones writes a striking article about the splendid home mission work which has been done and is being done in Mississippi by graduates of the Training School. Dr. J. B. Ficklen has an article about the home mission work which has been done and is being done by women in the Synod of Georgia. Practically all of those women are Training School graduates.

Miss Mary Bittinger writes about the Bible and Christian Ethics in the Presbyterian College of Oklahoma. Miss Bittinger and Miss Sarah Hamilton, who are teaching those two departments in O. P. C., are graduates of the Training School.

Miss Grace Aust, who writes an article about the home mission work at Gooden Lake, Mississippi, is a graduate of the Training School who has stuck to home mission work although she has been offered positions in large city churches. In her article she mentions the work of Miss Emily Smith, another Training School graduate.

In the back of the Survey is a list of all of our foreign missionaries in various lands. Over ninety of these foreign missionaries have studied at the Assembly's Training School.

In his article Dr. S. L. Morris says: "The Assembly's Training School, under the guiding hand of Dr. Lingle, is not duplicating but powerfully supplementing the seminaries by furnishing the Church with pastor's assistants, church secretaries, mission teachers, Bible women, and so forth."

Back in the advertising department there is a description of the four books on Bible study—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, and Hebrews—which Dr. M. R. Turnbull has published. There is also a description of the new book, "The Bible and Social Problems", which Dr. Walter L. Lingle, President of the Training School, has recently published.

Thus the March Survey, all unconsciously, gives a fine exhibit of what the General Assembly's Training School is doing through its graduates in all parts of our church, at home and abroad. This institution which is serving the church so largely needs your hearty support.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

Fifteen years ago the General Assembly's Training School began with nothing. It owned no property, had no income, and had only one paid member of the faculty. During that first year classes were held in the Presbyterian Publication building. Students boarded where they could. There were less than ten boarding students.

Fifteen years have gone by. The General Assembly's Training School today has grounds and buildings of its own, valued at nearly six hundred thousand. However, there is still a debt of sixty-five thousand on one building. It also has endowments amounting to one hundred and thirteen thousand dollars. It has an able faculty of its own. For several years the student body has averaged more than one hundred and twenty-five and they come from practically every southern state. During the fifteen years more than one thousand students have studied at the Training School. They are now doing and working in twenty-seven states and ten foreign countries. One hundred and twenty-eight of them are foreign missionaries. When you come to think of it, that is a very remarkable record. There has never been a sufficient income for current expenses to do all that we wanted to do, but we have always managed to make ends meet. The General Assembly's Training School today stands face to face with its first deficit in current expenses. Only generous contributions on the part of churches and individuals between now and the first of March can prevent a deficit.

WHOSE BUSINESS IS THIS?

The method of Jesus for the extension of His Kingdom throughout the world is through impress of one personality on another. He has promised His own presence to those who will follow Him. His chief work was training the twelve, sending them out to train others who, in turn would continue this process.

It is the business of every member of the Church of God to continue his work. Some, however, are called to be pastors, some evangelists, some teachers. The church must see that these are properly trained, supported and cared for after their energies are used up. The Department of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky., is constantly recruiting the ranks of the ministry, helping to bear the financial cost to which poor students are put in securing their training at college, seminary and training school, and in caring for the aged and infirm ministers and missionaries and needy widows and orphans of deceased ministers. There is greatly needed for this work, $353,500. Up to March 1st only $163,820.44 had been received. During March last year there came to the office in Louisville, Kentucky, $67,857.69. If we reach the goal set by the General Assembly for this year, the offerings in March must be increased almost three-fold. The Department offers every member of the Presbyterian Church an opportunity to engage in Christ-like humanitarian service. This is the "life center" and the "love center" of the Church. All the work reveals the "inner spirit." It represents the noble service of yesterday and the splendid promise of tomorrow.

IT IS OUR BUSINESS

At least this is the conclusion reached by the Deacons of the First Presbyterian Church of Georgia. The pastor, Dr. J. Sproule Lyons, wrote recently: "While discussing the benevolences of the church assembly and the percentage tables for distribution meeting recently, one of the deacons said, 'There change I would like to see made and that is for a larger percentage to be provided for the old man.' I asked him how he got that way, as I did not see he was giving any particular thought to the subject. He said: 'I got that way at the last meeting of the Deacons of the Church'. He then explained that the facts presented made a deep impression on him and that he thought the Church ought to be more fully awakened to its responsibility."

Wherever the Woman's Auxiliary, the Men's Auxiliary, the Christian Endeavor Society, the Presbyterian League, the Sunday School and other organizations are brought face to face with regard to the responsibility of the church for Christian Education, the supply of ministers and missionaries and for the care of those who, having borne the burden of the cross, the scorching heart, are now able to serve the Lord no longer, the one conclusion is "This is our business." We would like to ask every member of the Presbyterian Church—"Is this your business?"

A SERMON BY "BISHOP PENNY"

Rev. C. G. Gunn

I am only a small copper cent. But I have more value than a rotund brother, the dollar, in that I am found more frequently in church than he. I am in great evidence in the Sunday School; I am a great handshaker with a child, and finally I go home with the Sunday School and the Treasurers. Then on Monday morning, when I go to the bank, I find my brother, the Almighty, was locked up all day Sunday, unable to rightly serve the Lord, who said "The silver and gold is Mine". His proud owner would not turn him loose. No one heard the eagles scream.

My friends, you have heard that "money talks" and kindly put me—a "converted copper", in the palm of your hand, and listen to me while I preach you a sermon. It may be only "a penny's worth", but do not close your eyes on me, or put me in your pocket before I have my "finality, brethren."

First:—You will note that I am a new Lincoln. Do you not think I am looking spick and span because I am just from the mint. I have no sin up against this sordid world, which so surely kills the soul. Your soul could also shine just like mine, you would keep close to your Maker. "Let your light so shine among men, that they may see your good works and glorify the Father which is in heaven."

Second:—I have a motto for circulation: "In trust." I know some people who trust more in their own big influential kinfolks, than they do in the Lord, their Father. Poor people, to let me—a copper cent—trust them. "Trust in the Lord, be of good courage, He shall strengthen thine heart."

Third:—I am pretty proud of the prize that I have won for my Country—"Liberty." Other nations have tried to take the blood to find it. My country was first taking God's Son. Roger Babson said the difference between South America and North America was well defined by the man who remarked that the American country had been discovered for gold while the European country had been opened by men who were seeking for God. This makes a difference: "If you shall make me free, ye shall be free indeed."

Fourth:—I am not ashamed of the day when I was "born again." That was the day of my "conversion." I was just rough copper ore. I was found who sought me and converted me into a use. Up to that time I was buried talent;—since then I have served others. Have you been "converted"? Have you been born again? "If any man be in Christ Jesus, he shall have a new creation; old things are passed away; and all things are become new."

Fifth:—"A man is known by the company he keeps." So I have taken "Honest Abe" as my companion. Lincoln stood for "Liberty"; he trusted in God. Though I am a Southern Penny, I find the same with my friend prevents me from walking in the paths. "Looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is seated at the right hand of God. For consider Him that has suffered for us, that we should be saved, such contradiction of sinners, against himself he was weary and faint in your minds."

Did you ever see a missionary "Box" where I was not more in evidence than any man. It was I who built the steamer "Lapsley" to carry missionaries to the Congo. I was sent over boys and girls of America. I have not limited my gift to the church; it was I who built the Wrigling in New York from the sale of chewing gum. I also build the Kingdom of God. ALL WE GIVE UP THE WORK?

Rev. J. M. Wells, D.D.

Southern Presbyterian Church ready to give up the Mission work? It looks in certain quarters like it. It can give it up in several different ways. It can reduce its share in the budget of Presbytery. It can reduce its gifts to this cause, as of what the budget calls for. It can magnify its share and regard this as of little consequence. These ways are being used more or less effectively it is time the Church waked up. Our life is its very life to Home Missions. Three-fourths of our membership is in churches that were once mission churches. Three-fourths of our contributions come from churches that were once Home Mission churches. Three-fourths of our ministers come from that were once in Home Mission territory. These are not exact,—you can make them exact,—but estimate if they err.

It is not merely gratitude for the past, but apprehension of the future that should move us. Home Missions is the breath of God to blow upon a cold Church in saving power.

Home Missions means Sustentation, saving the weak churches from which a stream of consecrated members flows into the worldly city churches with power.

Home Missions means an adequate ministry, for many of our ministers come from Home Mission territory.

Home Missions means suburban churches, young, growing churches, to solve the problems of our think twice before we sacrifice that work that is vital to every cause and every department of our beloved Church.

AN APPEAL THAT CANNOT BE DENIED

Rev. Neal L. Anderson, D.D.

Strange as it may seem the alarming decrease in the contributions of our people for the causes of Beneficence has not been due to their poverty, but to their unprecedented prosperity—a prosperity that has changed our former luxuries into what we call necessities.

Enjoy the blessing of God on their labors, a multitude of professing Christians have forgotten the source from Whom all blessings flow, and a spirit of self-indulgence has taken heavy toll of every great cause of the Kingdom of God. The burden of this decreasing liberality has fallen with peculiar force on the work of the Assembly's Executive Committee of Home Missions, and it has come at a time of the Church's great opportunity.

Just because we are God's people, one of two things must happen: Either we shall awaken to a sense of our obligations and responsibilities as stewards of God, or He will chasten us in our material things, through a judgment on our business and on our homes.

A comparative study of the contributions for Assembly's Home Missions over a period of years reveals the fact that the Church has never adequately appreciated the basic character of the work of the Executive Committee.

The needs of the immigrants in our larger cities, the pitiable spiritual needs of the Negroes and the needs of the mountain districts, all have an appeal of their own, and if met at all these needs must be met through the Assembly's Executive Committee of Home Missions.

In addition to these needy fields, this Committee has been contributing to the weak and needy Presbyteries, and the story of the last fifty years of Home Missions in the South and Southwest discloses the fact that the splendid constructive work now being done by many formerly weak and discouraged Presbyteries is due in no small measure to the aid furnished by the Assembly's Home Mission Committee at critical periods in the history of these Presbyteries. Without such aid whole sections of our Church would be without the ministry of the Southern Presbyterian Church. The support now given by these formerly weak and destitute churches to all the great causes of the Kingdom is a striking vindication of the policy of the Assembly's Committee.

It is evident that many of our people do not realize that there are still Presbyteries where adequate assistance, given during a critical period, will yield large returns to the work of the whole Church in the years to come. There is perhaps no other cause where the gifts of God's people render such large returns on the Church's investment. The ability of the Southern Presbyterian Church to meet the demands upon it at home and abroad, in the last analysis depends on the growth and development of what are now weak and discouraged Presbyteries, facing opportunities for constructive service utterly beyond their means to develop.

The fact that the Assembly's Executive Committee of Home Missions has never received as much as 75 per cent. of the apportionment by the Assembly for this great cause is conclusive proof that our people have never thought this thing through, with any adequate conception of the relation of this work to the whole program of the Kingdom as committed to our Church.

WHOM IT HURTS MOST

Rev. J. S. Foster, D.D.

An immortal story tells of the Lord of the Treasury sitting over against it noting the people as they made their offerings. His soul was not indifferent to what was transpiring. A sacrificial offering gladdened Him.

No heart is more distressed over the financial condition of our Executive agencies than Christ's. The work is His. He is counting on us and we are failing Him. Far flung lines are being drawn in. Strategic outposts secured through heroic service are being abandoned. Drastic cuts have been made by some of our Executive Committees and further cuts seem to be imperative. The Assembly has ordered the Committees to make no initial appropriations for the church year beginning April 1st in excess of receipts for the preceding year. Reports from the treasurers of the committees disclose an alarming decrease in contributions compared with the same period last year. These are not expressions of fancy but statements of sober truth.

The situation hurts and the harm is wide spread. It impairs our denominational growth. Let us not deceive ourselves on this point. It means fewer Foreign Missionaries, fewer Home Missionaries, less adequate equipment, greater strain and stress and in many instances actual suffering on the part of faithful servants of the Cross that must result in decreasing efficiency. It means souls unsaved—souls that shall rise against us in the final day because of our inertia. But over all and above all, the greatest hurt is felt in the heart of our Christ. We are more than His rational creatures; we are children of God, members with Him in the family of our Father. And we are failing Him. When Simon Peter failed Him the Master turned and gazed upon him. No words were spoken. The wounded heart reflected in the face was sufficient. It sent the faltering disciple out to weep bitterly.

This same Saviour is looking upon us individually today. There is an ache in the heart of God—the resources He has committed to us are not available for Him and His message of love to a dying world.

We can take this ache out of His heart. We can do it by bringing our offerings into His house. We pastors and elders can do it by prayerfully, lovingly and emphatically calling to our people to meet the Budget of the year just closing. The responsibility for this leadership is ours. By faithful application to our task we can conserve present attainments and make possible future advancement. By supinely remaining indifferent, by following the line of least resistance, we can permit the work to continue to shrink and the lines in the Master's face to grow darker and darker. What shall our answer be to the situation that faces us?

MISSIONS AND THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

Dr. E. R. Kellersberger

Ignorance and prejudice are two of the worst enemies our Church has in its onward march. To be interested in an enterprise one must be intelligent about it. Stockholders in the great commercial concerns that are gripping and exploiting Central Africa today know far more about that country than our church members do. These concerns invest great sums of money and expect great gain for themselves.

But, somehow, the Foreign Mission work has not yet been completely "sold" to some in our Church. Men want and need to know. What we need is a common sense, practical, and bold presentation of bare facts, lovely or unlovely. We need to become ashamed at our lack of interest in the most important work in the world. The only thing that can undo the bitter antagonism of the black, yellow, and brown races for the white race with its condescending superiority and its world wide greed, is an unselfish ministry in the name of Jesus Christ, and a love that is willing even to minister to their filthy bodies.

The man who says he doesn't believe in Missions and does not support Missions has a very dim vision of the value of Jesus Christ to the world and is denying life eternal to millions in bondage. The great commercial organizations put us Christians to shame by their programs of extension over the world, and they succeed from a commercial point of view. We are stockholders in God's greatest work, that of witnessing. We must be loyal to our Church and to our Christ, and this calls for our means, our prayers, and, from some of us our blood. A definite evidence of our real interest in this whole business will be seen in the way we pay up our church pledges made in the Every Member Canvass one year ago. The foreign missionaries are banking on this co-operation. Don't disappoint us.

Congo, Africa.

PLEDGES—TWO KINDS

H. Waddell Pratt

Two kinds of pledges made each year in the Every Member Canvass are in use. One of these is that authorized by the Church, and is properly called the Church pledge. The other is the kind, not exactly authorized, but rather approved or endorsed by the Bible and in contrast with the Church pledge might be called the Scriptural pledge.

The Church pledge, by means of a printed card, furnished by many regular Church agencies, suggests to members to promise so many cents or dollars each week. This is contrary to the Scripture for one or the other of two reasons. The Scriptural injunction as to the amount is "as God prospers you." Now if you are yet to earn this money, what you pledge may be a great deal less than your prosperity warrants. On the other hand, if you have already earned it and have it in hand to give, then your pledge takes no account whatever of "as the Lord has prospered you" in the week preceding the Sunday on which the gift is to be made.

This Church pledge which is in almost universal use, is responsible largely for the deplorable condition of the Church's finances. And the Church will continue in this condition until it adopts the Scriptural pledge.

The Scriptural pledge is the "as God prospers you" pledge, and the modern, business way to express that is per cent. In the Every Member Canvass each one should promise so much per cent of income for local current expenses and so much per cent for benevolences. And it is not necessary to argue about whether it means net income, or gross income; let each one settle with himself before God which it will be, and then stick to his decision as to what he regards as income, informing the Church only of the per cents when he signs the pledge. Of course if he regarded gross income, as income required, he would pledge a smaller per cent than if he decided that net income should be used.

If every Church member used this Scriptural pledge instead of the Church pledge, our Church treasuries would overflow with money.

Your New Pledge Does Not Cancel The Old

Respond Liberally! Discharge Promptly!

For The Sake of Christ and His Church

A LETTER FROM THE MODERATOR OF THE ASSEMBLY

Organized business may be expected to take advantage of every aspect of human nature. Recently a question has appeared in inquiries concerning character and fitness of prospective employees to this effect:—"Does he promptly fulfill his financial pledges to the Church, cannot wholly be relied on in a business way. The true test of character is not found in keeping promises we are bound to keep for the sake of our business credit, but in how we meet obligations we lay upon ourselves, which depend for their fulfillment solely upon the intention and loyalty of the individual.

This bears directly upon the problem raised annually by the problem of unfulfilled pledges of previous years. The Church bases its plans upon amounts pledged; failure to keep these pledges means impairment of the work. A new subscription does not cancel the old one.

I sincerely hope that all of our people will not only liberally respond to the present EMC but promptly discharge all previously unfulfilled pledges.

I-3; John 14:19; I Cor. 15.

The Cornerstone of Our Faith not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, who is crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said, Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

Quickly and tell his disciples, 'He is risen from the dead; and lo, He goeth before you into Galilee;
and ye shall see him; lo, I have told you.'

from the dead—how can such a thing be? He would rise on the third day, but then he spoke so often that this rising from the dead sounded reasonable too. Perhaps the angels were a dream!
They were a dream—where was the body of the Christ? The Jewish priests and Roman officials had that no one should steal the body. A watch and the tomb was sealed with the seal of the government. If the guards should sleep at their post, death warrant for them, and it would be signing a death warrant to break the seal of the Roman government. But here, the seal was broken and the body gone.

of us who believe that this Jesus was the son of God as no one else can be a son of God, it is not believable that he rose from the dead. "With God all things are possible." Those who believe that he was a man being think that the resurrection is all a dream. And they may well think it because it is not reasonable to think that any human being has ever risen from the dead. Christians—those of us who not only accept the teachings of Jesus but also accept his character—believe that he rose from the dead.
The resurrection there is no gospel—no good news. "Christ arose" is the cornerstone of our faith.

The Resurrection Not An Hallucination

Hammedan once took a Christian to the tomb of Jesus. As he was showing the Christian the tomb he said, "You Christians have no such tomb to show you." "No," said the Christian, "we have something infinitely better—an empty tomb." An empty tomb and a risen Christ. The resurrection is not an illusion, for the risen Christ was seen by five hundred men at once and five hundred people cannot all be deceived. We cannot place all our hopes in a vision. "If we have only hoped in Christ in vain, we are of all men most pitiable. But now hath God raised from the dead, the first fruits of them that sleep."

How Christ Looked on Death

his earthly ministry, it is recorded that Jesus was the people from the dead—the son of the widow and the little daughter of Jairus, and Lazarus, the brother of Martha and Mary. In each case he was touched by the death of the individual, but by the grief of those who mourned. Their sorrow was his sorrow and he raised the loved one to life again.
He himself spoke of physical death as a sleep. It is the death of the soul which we must fear. "And believe that of them that kill the body, but are not able to hurt the soul: but rather fear him who is able to cast both soul and body in hell." And again "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." Physical death is terrible only in appearance, but not in reality. Spiritual death is what Christ endured in our stead and those who believe on him need never fear death.

Those That Believe

Often we wish that we too might have seen Jesus in the flesh, that we might have touched him even as his disciples did. We long to look upon him and have our faith strengthened. Let us remember, however, that he prayed for you and me in his farewell prayer—for he included all who should believe on him through the words of the disciples. We, too, are included in his promise,
"I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Because Christ arose we have the assurance that we shall arise. We shall have a nature like that of the Son of God. Life with Christ after death—death is only the beginning of real life.

When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted

The following poem by Rudyard Kipling is a good commentary on our hopes of eternal reward:

When earth's latest picture is painted
And the tubes are twisted and dried;
When the oldest colors have faded,
And the youngest critic has died:
We shall rest—and, faith, we shall need it—
Lie down for an aeon or two,
Till the Master of all good workmen
Shall set us to work anew.

Then those who are good shall be happy,
They shall sit in a golden chair,
They shall work at a ten league canvas
With brushes of comet's hair.
They shall have real saints to draw from—Magdalene, Peter and Paul—
They shall work for an age at a sitting,
And never get tired at all.

And only the Master shall praise us,
And only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money,
And no one shall work for fame;
But each for the joy of working,
And each in his separate star
Shall paint the thing as he sees it
For the God of things as they are.

4. Tell what Paul said about joy.
5. Joys that Jesus gives.

Jesus loved people—we nearly always find Him with people around Him. Sometimes He was teaching them, sometimes curing them. It was one of the things that made His life a perfect life—the friendliness of it. There was no selfishness nor unloveliness in it.

We know Jesus loves our homes, because He went into homes, and healed boys and girls who were sick, leaving joy behind Him. Such a friend as Jesus gives joy.

WEST VIRGINIA

Charleston — Kanawha Presbytery was called to convene in the First Presbyterian Church, Charleston, W. Va., Thursday, February 28, 1929, at 2:00 p. m., to transact the following business if the way be clear, viz:

First, to approve the call of the First Church Huntington for pastoral services of the Rev. J. B.
Belk, D.D., of Orlando, Florida, and to authorize commission of said church to prosecute said call before Presbytery of St. Johns.

Second, to transact any other business growing out of above item.

F. J. Brooke, Jr., Moderator.

MISSOURI

Memphis—During January, the Rev. I. Cochrane
Hunt, D.D., resigned the pastorate of this Church to accept a call to the Westminster Church in Kansas City. The date of resignation was fixed for the 15th of February which marks to a day the four years of Dr. Hunt's pastorate. In this four years 125 members have been received into the Church; the gifts to all causes have been increased; the Church has been re-roofed, re-decorated, and a complete social equipment has been added at a cost of approximately $5000. The good people of the Church have done these things despite the fact that the past four years have been the worst, agriculturally and industrially, in Northeast Missouri for perhaps the past 10 years.

The congregation, in accepting Dr. Hunt's resignation adopted a very gracious resolution of appreciation and regret and the ladies of the Auxiliary tendered a delightful farewell reception to Dr. and Mrs. Hunt and family on the evening of February 13. Dr. Hunt began his work in Kansas City on February 17th.

KENTUCKY

Fulton—A town of about seven thousand inhabitants, located in the extreme southwestern part of the state. A part of the town is in Tennessee, and the dividing line is a street, running east and west, known as State Line. Fulton is one among several good towns in this section in which Mrs. Wade and I have been working. Fulton, Columbus, and Clinton (rather aptly called the burying ground of Presby-terianism, don't you think?) at one time had Presbyterian churches, but for some reason they were permitted to die out. Columbus, on the Mississippi, many years ago was the leading town of this section, and came within one or two votes of being the capital of the United States. Before the Civil War the Presbyterians there were among the best people of the town, a church in good working condition. During the war the church building was used for stabling horses, and, while the organization continued for a number of years after this struggle, the church was never remodeled, and finally the membership disbanded.

Clinton is a splendid town of about three thousand inhabitants, and up to some twenty-five years ago Clinton had a good membership of well to do and influential people, but about this time pastoral services became infrequent, the congregation dwindled, and church building was finally sold, and has been converted into a splendid dwelling.

Fulton Presbyterian church was organized in the 80's, and did a good work the greater part of the time till 1914. Rev. George H. Kirker was Fulton's last regular pastor, and he left at the close of this year.

As the result of removals, deaths, and other causes the membership became very small, and some ten years ago the church building, a small brick, was sold. From this time until Dr. John Goff, Supt. H. M.
Muhlenburg Presbytery, began to visit the field, in 1927, practically no work was done by Presbyterians in all this section; when he found this great territory, 50 miles square, of splendid towns and fertile lands, without a church building, and less than a dozen Southern Presbyterian members.

Early last Spring he opened correspondence with me relative to undertaking the work of rebuilding the waste places, and establishing the work in other towns where our church had never yet been, resulted in my accepting, and we arrived on the field 16th of last May. We have found the work difficult, but feel that we are making some progress. Though we have done considerable work in Columbus, Clinton, Hickman, Mt. Joy, and Murray, probably no other minister and wife know the conditions at Fulton as well as we, having visited personally practically every home in the city. Glad to report some ten professions of faith as result of this visitation. In our daily work we are keeping a close watch upon the program of our great church, and, following it, we are kept busy, and are therefore happy. At the Christmas time we put on "Prisoners of Hope," and sent $22 to cheer the hearts of dependent children of deceased ministers. Recently we observed the week of prayer and self-denial for Foreign Missions, and sent $15 to the Committee in Nashville. Mrs. Wade sponsored the putting on of the program of World Day of Prayer, participated in by the women and girls of all denominations, which proved a very spiritual meeting.

With the aid of Miss Margaret Warren, General Assembly worker, employed by Muhlenburg Presbytery, and Mrs. W. B. Duncan, recently received into our communion, we put on a School of Missions at the manse, having an attendance of 49. Quite a deal of interest in poster making, and sent some good work to Nashville to enter the contest.

A Junior Young People's Society has been organized, and the members are very happy in their work.
This is being sponsored by Mrs. Duncan, who is an expert worker among young people.

One of the group conferences of the Presbytery was to have met with us next Tuesday, but has been put off because of the severe winter weather, and will be held here some time in March.

We shall now begin to plan and pray for the evangelistic services we hope to hold in early spring.
Help us to pray for this meeting, and the new church we are so sadly needing.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Rev. Ernest Trice Thompson, D.D.

Lesson for March 31

THE FUTURE LIFE

Mt. 25:31-46; Mk. 12:26, 27; Lk. 24:1-12; Jn. 14:1-6; 1 Cor. 15:3-20, 50-58; 1 Thes. 4:13-18; Rev. 22:1-5.
Print Lk. 24:1-12; Jn. 14:1-6.

For three months now we have been studying together some of the great doctrines of the Bible. Dr. Snowden in Snowden's Sunday School Lessons points out the logical relation of the series of lessons. They began with the Fatherhood of God, for this is the basis of the whole range of Christian teaching. If there be no God and Father, then is all our Christian faith and teaching vain and we are infants crying in the night. But we have sinned and broken our fellowship with the Father, and so the dark mountain peak of sin loomed next into view. Yet there is pardon for our sin, and Christ the Savior was the next logical lesson and great Christian teaching. Christ sends the Holy Spirit to carry out His work of salvation, and the teaching as to the Holy Spirit was then brought before us. The Spirit operates through the Scriptures as the means of convincing and converting us, and we studied next the Scripture teaching as to the Scriptures themselves. Repentance and faith are the first steps in the Christian life and the nature and method of these acts of will were then brought out. The new life in Christ is one of growth and the process of Christian growth was then in order. But Christian growth takes place best in the Christian Church, and this came next in the logical order. The church has divinely appointed ordinances and this led to the study of baptism and the Lord's Supper. The Christian Sabbath is another means of grace and we were given the Christian teaching as to this day. It takes money to carry on the world-wide work of the church and this led to a study of stewardship and missions. The Christian life culminates in a great hope and this climaxes the studies of the Quarter with a lesson on the future life. It is this closing lesson on the Christian hope that we wish to study at this time. We will look first at its nature, second at its basis, and third at its conditions.

I. The Nature of the Christian Hope

What is the nature of our hope? What do we expect to find in heaven? How shall we spend our time? Think about these and other questions that interest you for a while and then read Lk. 23:39-43; Phil. 1, 21-24; 2 Cor. 5:1-8; Jn. 14:1-6; 1 Cor. 15:35-58; Rev. 21:1-6; 22:22-5; Mt. 24:45-47; 25:19-30.

We realize of course that the Bible does not and cannot give us any detailed information as to the nature of the future life. The mode of existence will be so different that human language based on our physical senses and the experience of this present world cannot adequately describe it. Much of the description is couched necessarily in negative terms, and most of the rest in frankly metaphorical terms, as for example those glowing descriptions in the book of Revelation, the river of life, and the tree on its banks, and the walls of precious stones, and the streets of gold. It is unfortunate that so many Christians interpret these terms literally, and that to some of them heaven means little more than a city with streets paved with blocks of gold, where we shall have nothing to do but twang our harps and sing our hymns of praise. The Bible does not answer all the questions that we would like to ask, but it does give us enough information to correct and supplement the picture that is cherished by many Christians and more non-Christians.

1. Heaven comes immediately after death. There is no long sleep in the grave. As our catechism puts it: "The souls of believers * * * do immediately pass into glory. We do not put our loved ones into the ground, we merely put away the outworn garments of the soul, which meanwhile has winged its way back to God who gave it. Thus Jesus said to the dying thief: 'Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise.' Paul writes to the Philippians that he hardly knows which he prefers, life or death. If he dies he knows that he will be immediately with Christ, and that is better than anything that life can offer, and yet Christ still has a work for him to do on earth, so he is in a strait betwixt the two (Phil. 1:21-24). For our purpose the important point is that to depart means to be with Christ.

2. We shall have a new body fitted for our new conditions of life. It is an old argument against the resurrection that the physical elements which go to make up our bodies are scattered after death, and enter into other bodies, and that it would be impossible to assemble them again. But the Bible nowhere teaches that our physical bodies will be reassembled, or that the resurrection gives us back our old bodies. The question which the Sadducees raised was based on this assumption. Jesus said to them, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God. Mt. 22:29. In 1 Cor. 15:35ff Paul faces the question frankly: "Some one will say, How are the dead raised? and with what manner of body do they come?" Paul in answering this question uses the analogy of a grain of wheat. "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be, but a bare grain * * * but God giveth it a body as it pleased him." A body we note that has some bond of continuity with the old, but that after all is a very different body. "So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." Just what a spiritual body is like we cannot say; but it is not a material or physical body; it will be a body through which we may express our own individual personality in the new spiritual realm.

3. There will be a glorious environment wherein man's personality may develop to its full stature. John speaks of walls of jasper and streets of gold, and tells us of the river of the water of life, with a tree on its banks that bears its fruit every month. We have already suggested that this description is not to be taken as a literal one.

But it does suggest an environment glorious beyond what man can conceive. And Jesus suggests that it will be an environment fitted to the needs of different individuals. "In my Father's house are many mansions. * * * I go to prepare a place for you." Jn. 14:2. In our present environment there are many things which limit us and thwart us, many experiences which wound us, and weight us down with heavy grief. But John tells us that in the heavenly Jerusalem, God "shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain any more." Rev. 21:4. There man shall be able to realize his own highest ideals. As Browning has said, catching the thought of Scripture:

"All we have willed or hoped or dreamed of good shall exist;

Not its semblance but itself; no beauty, nor good nor power

Whose voice has gone forth, but each survives for the melodist,

When eternity affirms the conception of an hour. The high that proved too high, the heroic for earth too hard,

The passion that left the ground to lose itself in the sky,

Are music sent up to God by the lover and the bard; Enough that he heard it once: we shall hear it by-and-by."

Or as Cannon Storr has put it: Eternal life "includes the presence of that which can give satisfaction to man's deepest spiritual needs and aspirations, together with the assurance that the human ideals, which take color from the existence of ultimate spiritual values, are not mere day dreams, but are part of the very texture of reality and are eternally realized in God." And to comfort those who think that they will miss the innocent diversions of life, Zechariah says: "And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." Zech. 8:5. And Jeremiah says: "Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, and the young men and the old men together; for I will turn their mourning into joy." Jer. 31:13.

4. There will be work to do, work which shall develop man's highest capacities, and from which he shall derive the greatest joy. There are some men who think that we shall idle away the hours of eternity and twang our golden harps and sing our hymns of praise, and to increasing numbers the picture does not appeal. Kipling has another idea of heaven. He might have called it the artist's dream:

"When earth's last picture is painted, and the tubes are twisted and dried,

When the oldest colors have faded, and the youngest critic has died,

We shall rest, and faith, we shall need it—lie down for an aeon or two,

Till the Master of all Good Workmen shall set us to work anew!

"And those that were good will be happy: they shall sit in a golden chair;

They shall splash at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comet's hair;

They shall find real saints to draw from—Magdalene, Peter and Paul;

They shall work for an age at a sitting and never be tired at all!

"And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;

And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame;

But each for the joy of the working, and each in his separate star,

Shall draw the Thing as he sees It for the God of Things as They Are!"

5. There shall be fellowship with the people of God, with God Himself, and His Son Jesus Christ. Many of the pictures that we have previously referred to included in them as an essential element the idea of fellowship. Heaven would not begin to meet our aspirations if we did not expect to be united there with our loved ones. Jesus said, "In my Father's House are many mansions * * * I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I come again, and will receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Jn. 14:2-3. John heard a great voice out of heaven saying, "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be His peoples, for God Himself shall be with them, and be their God." Rev. 21:3. There are many other questions about heaven, of course, that we would like to ask. But it is not essential that we should know everything. It reminds us of a story told by Dr. Boreham: "The doctor was leaving the bedside when the patient suddenly turned to him and said, 'Doctor I want to ask you a question.' 'Yes,' he said, 'what is it?' 'Am I going to get well?' The Doctor hesitated a moment and the patient went on: 'Don't treat me like a child. I have a right to know. Tell me.' 'Well,' he said, 'you may recover this time, but the second or third attack is pretty sure to prove fatal.' The sick man caught the doctor's coat and said to him: 'Doctor, I am afraid to die. Tell me what lies on the other side.' Very quietly the doctor said, 'I do not know.' 'You don't know. You, a Christian man, do not know what is on the other side?' The doctor was holding the handle of the door, on the other side of which came sounds of scratching and whining, and as he opened the door a dog sprang into the room and leaped on him with eager show of gladness. Turning to the patient the doctor said: 'Did you notice that dog? He had never been in this room before. He did not know what was inside. He knew nothing except that his master was here, and when the door was opened he sprang in without fear. I know little of what is on the other side of death, but I do know one thing. I know that my Master is there, and that is enough. And when the door opens I shall pass through quite fearlessly and with great gladness.' So it is with us.

II. The Basis of the Christian Hope

What grounds do we have for believing that there is a future life? What is it that puts this great hope in the Christian's heart? Read Job 19:25-27; Ps. 49:4f, 16:8-11; Mt. 22:31f; Jn. 14:1-6; 2 Cor. 1 Cor. 15:12-58.

1. The Old Testament basis. We will have brief, but after all no extended argument is needed. Immortality is not a clearly defined hope in the Old Testament. It comes gradually into view, and is based on the fact of a fellowship with God which it was felt not even death could break. As James Orr says: "Here we reach the core of the Old Testament hope of immortality. Such fellowship as the believer had with God could not be lost, even in Sheol; beyond the gates of deliverance from Sheol. In their highest moments, this hope that sustained patriarchs, psalmists, and prophets in their outlook on the future. Doubt might cloud the mind; there might be seasons of darkness and despair; but it was impossible in moments of strong conviction to believe that God would ever really desert them. Eternal God was their dwelling place; beneath the wings of His everlasting arms (Dt. 33:27; Ps. 90:1)." Jesus something of the same idea in mind when he rebuked the Sadducees that God said, I am the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob (Mt. 22:32). The fellowship which God had with the patriarchs was an eternal fellowship. Perhaps this is still the basis of our faith in the future life, it is linked up with our faith in God, a God who holds fellowship with men, and who have entered into that fellowship find it natural to believe that it will survive even the dissolution of the body.

2. The New Testament basis. The New Testament Christians found an additional basis for their hope in the words and works of Jesus. Jesus Himself had an unclouded communion with the Father. He was with the Father while he was here on earth, and ever since, to bring men into something of the same experience. Christ will always put His insight above the doubts and taints of other men. When he said, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live" (Jn. 14:25), his disciples believed in him, and they still believe him. When he said before he died: "Let not your heart be troubled; in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions * * * I go to prepare a place for you" (Jn. 14:1ff) he set his disciples' anxious hearts at ease and he sets ours. But the actual demonstration as the disciples were concerned came with the resurrection. On the first Easter morning they found the stone rolled away, and the tomb empty, and after that they saw and again the risen Christ. No one can deny that the disciples found the tomb empty and that they thought they had seen the Risen Christ, and that this faith which explains their new zeal, their readiness to die even on behalf of the Master whom they were convinced was alive. Nor can any one offer a plausible explanation of these undoubted facts, except the resurrection that Jesus actually did rise from the dead. The fact of Jesus' resurrection. Jesus rose, therefore, and we shall rise also. Cf especially 1 Cor. 15:12-28, which still remains as this great basis of the Christian's hope.

3. The basis of reason. We live in a scientific age and many men have wished to go beyond the science and to prove or disprove the fact of immortality by science or philosophy. We will have to admit that we cannot as yet demonstrate the fact of a life after death. It can, however, puncture the arguments of those who maintain that it is impossible. Men of as high scientific reputation as Sir William Osler and William James have said that while no adequate scientific demonstration of a future life has yet been given, there is nothing in the principles of science up to date to render such a hypothesis worthy of a reasonable man. Among the options of life offers to faith, this according to William James is still a living one. "Many of us go beyond this, and that such arguments as science and philosophy produce point decidedly to the probability of a future life. And yet after all, 'it is with belief in a life after death as it is with belief in God. We believe in God because we can demonstrate His existence, but because we cannot demonstrate a purpose and a meaning which it is reasonable to believe in Him. So we believe in a life after death not because we can prove it scientifically because we see the God in whom we believe vouching for His plan in the world, and this plan includes as an integral part the development and perfection of individuals. * * * We believe in immortality in that resort because Jesus Christ has revealed to us ourselves, and in others, capacities which require a life for their full expression."

III. The Conditions of the Christian's Hope

How can one be sure that he will share in the blessing of this future life? Read Mt. 25:31-46; Jn. 14:1-6. When Thomas asked Jesus of the way, Jesus said, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father but by me." We come to God through Jesus when we accept Him as our Lord and Savior. The basis of Scripture we do not see how anyone can understand the revelation of God in Christ and yet expect to qualify for immortal life. "In the production of God for humanity the production of moral character is an important part; and it may be that the human beings, whose life shows so little self-direction or moral effort, whose appreciation of spiritual things is so small, that they may be held to have failed to reach that standard of personality which qualifies for such a life. One's attitude toward spiritual things, one's capacity for heaven, is tested by one's attitude toward God. But many men have never heard of Christ, and who have heard of Him do not know Him as He is. We rather as we have presented, and oftentimes do not know Him. Jesus seems to indicate in Mt. 25, that there are some men who have served Him through their lives, and that these men may find themselves at the last day that they too have come to the Father through Him, who alone is the way and the truth and the life."

WHISPERING FOOTPRINTS

"O Eddy, where are you?"
 "Mother," came a shrill little voice from the back yard.

"Come here, Eddy; I want you to do something for me."
 The back door opened, and Taylor heard the soft thud of feet along the passage. But Eddy entered the sitting room unnoticed by mother's sewing table, and she said: "Why, Eddy, what's the matter?"

"There were no cuts or bumps anywhere about the little boy. Why do you mother think anything was the matter? Because his brown eyes, which generally looked right up at the two little birds flying out of the window, now had an uneasy look—here nor there, but away.
 "What's the matter," said Eddy, looking out of the window. "What do you call me for, mother?"

"I'm sorry my little boy has disobeyed about going to the apple room to leave." Eddy gave a little smile. The reason God put me here is because, mother, Eddy, is because he knows better what you ought to do and ought not to do than you did not answer. He was wondering how mothers knew so much.

"I'm especially sorry that you disobey me by sneaking out of the coal room window," said Taylor. "I would much rather see you, 'I won't mind you,' and go to my eyes than go in by telling

"Mother, I didn't say"—began Eddy, and had a chance to defend him-

"Do you think you talk only with your eyes?" interrupted his mother.
 "Do you suppose has whispered to you that you have been in the apple room and that you went through the window?"

"I can't imagine," said Eddy honest-

The little boy turned, and there behind him and the door were five white footprints on the white floor. Mother could not help smile at the look of surprise on the little boy's face. It was a rather mournful

"Do you think we can ever do wrong, and not leave marks of it somewhere?" she asked. "And O, my little boy, the marks which sin leaves are on your heart, which ought to be clean before God's eyes, instead of tracked over by wrong do-

"Do they come out?" asked Eddy.
 "The footprints on the mattress," mother was thinking about the marks when she said:
 "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all unrighteousness. You must ask him to come to you, Eddy, and to take away your sin, and to make you hate sin, and to give you such ugly footprints on your heart life."

When, for a punishment and for a reward, mother kept the footprints on the sitting room floor that whole day. That Eddy might see them and remember how every wrong deed leaves dark stains on his little heart.—

A DAY IN MARCH

(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

The sky was GRAY-BLUE (use BLACK lightly and a touch of BLUE), and there were ever so many BROWN leaves flying about. You see it was March and the wind was blowing and blowing. It blew Teddy's long GREEN cap right out behind him and the tassel flapped about like a long YEL-LOW leaf. His cap had YELLOW bands about the cuffs and his scarf matched his cap and had fringe and bands of YELLOW. Teddy wore a BROWN wind breaker and his trousers were dark BLUE. He wore high BLACK boots (be sure to leave the white shine on them) to slop through the slush.

"Oh, isn't it slushy and windy!" cried
 Y E L L O W - haired Susie May to BROWN-haired Teddy. "My RED tam is nearly blowing off at least the GRAY pom pom on the top is flying about awfully!" Susie May wore RED galoshes and her gloves were GRAY stitched in RED.

"Here, let me carry your books!"
 said Teddy, taking Susie May's RED and BLUE books and tucking them under his arm with his own GREEN book. "This wind is fine but it will snatch anything away it can!" Teddy wore GREEN gloves to match his cap.

Susie May's coat was RED with GRAY fur about the neck and sleeves.

The coat had a BLUE and RED plaid lining that showed when the wind blew it back. Susie May's socks had the same colored plaid on the cuffs.

"Look on the cuffs."
 "Look at those RED berries on the BROWN briar behind the RED brick wall, will you! They will all be off if the wind keeps pulling them!" Teddy said. The wall had a GRAY stone top.

Both children had PINK (use RED lightly) cheeks and Susie May had a RED mouth.

The slush on the ground and splashing up can be colored Brown. Paint the border of the picture RED and the lettering BROWN.

Going to her home, she shut herself into her room. But when she next appeared the angry look had been replaced by a thoughtful one.

That afternoon she went over to Belle's house. Belle saw her coming and was a bit apprehensive. Had she blundered after all and taken the wrong method? It was only her honest attempt to help Nettie that had made her do this thing, but perhaps she had been wrong about it. She hoped that Nettie had not come to break off her friendship.

But Nettie was not at all angry. Instead she smiled as she handed the book back.

"You must have put a lot of work on this, Belle," she said. "I am returning it to you. GIVE HIM RECOGNITION

Ordinarily the title of Doctor of Laws is conferred by a university upon an elderly man, but the general rule was disregarded when the University of Wisconsin conferred this title on the young man who not only flew alone from New York to Paris, but who has been successful in keeping his head ever since. In admitting the young man to the rights and privileges of the degree, the president of the University of Wisconsin called attention to the fact that because of quiet dignity, the young aviator had "refused to capitalize the affectionate plaudits of a planet for personal advantage."

In a time when we are in danger of allowing the dollar to cover up everything else, we do well to give recognition to the man or the woman who has the strength of character to resist the temptation to ride to wealth on a wave of popularity.—Forward.

A New Yorker eats an average of twelve pounds of candy a year, while the average person in Nevada eats seventeen pounds. Nevada has the highest candy figures of any state in the country. New York gets away with 130 million pounds, New Jersey with 31 million pounds, Pennsylvania 111 million, and Connecticut consumes 13 million pounds a year. These statistics were recently given over the radio. The speaker said that a report from eighty per cent of the nation's candy manufacturers shows that in 1926, the latest figures available, over $258,000,000 was spent for candy in the United States. New York's candy costs $43,000,000.

Try to figure out whether the churches get more than the candy trade, whether the clergy cost less than candy, whether any one gives up candy to give money to the church, whether New Yorkers think candy is more worth while than cathedrals, or vice versa, whether people give up more candy for luxuries than for necessities. And as the Irishman said, it leaves you "not dead, only spacheless."

The ignoramus would find the wide world monotonous; the wise could look from one window all his life and never find the view twice the same.

Your opinion is not of value just because it is your opinion; its value depends solely on the knowledge and wisdom upon which it is based.

Stand off, now and then, and take a look at your life; what is its tendency? Are you moving upward or downward, backward or forward?

Why regard yourself through the eyes of the rich who consider you to be poor, rather than through the eyes of the still poorer who hold you to be rich?

It is no success to build up a fortune without a character; but it is the highest success to build up a character, and the fortune naturally goes with it.

Your doctor will tell you it's absolutely safe, so you can give it as freely and as often as needed to keep your children happy and well. For like disorders in older children, you simply use a little larger dose of the same reliable Fletcher's Castoria. Don't use grown-folks' medicine; with babies or children, specialists say. Ninety per cent. of them recommend Fletcher's Castoria; and thirty years of steadily increasing popularity proves they're right. OBITUARIES

FRED A HOUSTON

In the sudden death of Fred A. Houston, on January 15, 1929, Mount Vernon Springs Presbyterian Church lost one of her most valued and best loved members. He was taken at the age of 53 years, 11 months and 27 days, in the prime of strong and vigorous life. He loved his Church, was marked in his loyalty to his pastor, was efficient as treasurer of the board of deacons, and being an earnest Bible student was the successful teacher of a large Bible class. He possessed a host of friends, by whom he was known as a man whose word was as good as his bond. He was glad to so invest his ample means, by lending, as to help those less fortunate financially. He leaves to mourn his loss a mother, Mrs. Margaret Houston, a wife, Mrs. Ila Houston, a son, Joseph, a brother, Luther A., two sisters, Mrs. Annie Sockwell and Miss Davie Houston. We feel that this useful servant has now been promoted by his Lord to a higher service.

THE MEASURE OF A MAN (Author Unknown)

The test of a man is the fight he makes,
The grit that he daily shows;
The way that he stands on his feet and takes Fate's numerous bumps and blows
The coward can smile when there's naught to fear
And nothing his progress bars;
But it takes a man to stand up and cheer
While some other fellow stars.

It isn't the victory, after all,
But the fight that a human makes;
The man, who, driven against the wall,
Still stands erect, and takes The blows of fate, with his head held high Bleeding and bruised and pale,
Is the man who'll win in the by and by,
For he isn't afraid to fail.

It's the bumps we take, and the jolts
we get,
And the shock that our courage
stands,
The hours of sorrow and vain regret,
And the prize that escapes our hands
That test our mettle and prove our worth.
It isn't the blows we deal,
But the blows we take on this good old earth,
Which prove that life is real.

A VISION IN THE THORNS Marian MacLean Finney

Like a river, emptying its toll of creek and stream into the coffers of the ocean, Jerusalem received its annual horde of Passover pilgrims. It was a motley multitude of men, women and children, a few on camels and horses but for the most part afoot, or riding grave asses. On a carpet of wild flowers, through the soft April air, pushed the cheerful, chattering throngs, winding their dogged, determined way over hills gray with olive and green with palm, and through valleys checkered with the multi-greens of wheat field, vegetable garden and grape vineyard.

Jerusalem, the hostess city, received her guests with very mixed feelings, and expressed her opinion while they were yet arriving. Upon the city wall paced a few soldiers. A priest who had regarded meditatively those who crowded the entrance gate below, turned languidly and addressed one who appeared to be an officer.

"Ah, Innocentius, methinks the Roman eagle is a bit more suspicious and uneasy today than at former feasts."

"But quite as able and relentless," the soldier made answer, "and if this Christ, who has so disturbed your peace these last three years, should decide that his popularity is now sufficient to lead a successful Jewish revolt, he will find the eagle's talon's well sharpened."

Outside the walls, on the slope of the hill, a group of boys (barometers of public feeling) loudly conversed. Phineas was astride of his enemy.

"Say that you think a priest is greater than this young prophet of Nazareth, and I will let you go."

"I cannot," panted the one underneath, "for has he not, these three years, healed the sick and taught things we hear not in the synagogue? And once when the people had followed him into the desert without thought of food, he took the five barley buns and two little fishes my mother had prepared for me (knowing I would follow him) and fed five thousand!"

The laughter which greeted this recital almost allowed the captor to release his hold, but not quite.

Reuben, one of the bystanders, undertook to champion the cause which was being ridiculed. "He is of the line of David. What if he should—" he lowered his voice and looked around furtively, "what if he should fight the Romans and take the throne for himself? Then would you be hanging upon the words of Joel, who is one of his disciples?"

Phineas was as scornful as he had previously been amused. "For a denarius I would roll him down the hill, into the thorn bed yonder." It was a pleasing thought. "This will I do," he said to his squirming captive. "A wager will I make. If this Nazarene carpenter becomes king, then will I be your servant and you my master until next Passover feast. If he be an im-poster, you visit the thorns."

On the soft April breeze came a murmur louder than from any company of previously arriving pilgrims; a shouting which seemed to acclaim some popular favorite; and that which was most striking of all—the chanting of the Jewish hallelujah chorus, taken from the Psalms and hitherto reserved for use in the temple.

In the excitement Phineas relaxed his fingers, a fact of which Joel, aided by Reuben, took prompt advantage. The other boy made no attempt to retake him. With open mouths the group watched a most unusual spectacle. In the midst of a shouting, joy-maddened multitude came a regal figure, riding an ass's colt, the mother beast walking sedately beside her offspring. In the absence of a saddle, a cloak had been spread upon the colt's hard back, and the rocky road was rendered a bit easier for the rider by the garments thrown down as an act of homage. Close behind the figure pressed a small company of men on foot, as if they feared to be jostled and separated by the frenzied pilgrims surrounding them.

"It is the prophet himself, and his twelve disciples," announced Joel's happy voice. Instantly he sped down the hill, scrambled across the deep ravine in which ran the brook Kidron, and up the opposite hill toward the oncoming procession.

"He has come to take his place upon the throne of David today," guessed the awe-struck Reuben, and he, too, ran swiftly to join the throng.

Directly in the path of the lads blown down by winter winds, were feathery palm branches and twigs of the olive and myrtle. Stooping, Joel picked them up and waved them in greeting. Reuben followed his example.

On the wall the priest and soldier still lingered. The exultant shouts were drawing nearer. The words were plainly distinguishable: "Hosanna to the son of David! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord! Hosanna in the highest!"

A crafty look came into the eyes of the priest. "The plotter is even at the gates, Innocentius, and his misguided followers announce him a restorer of the dynasty of David—a Jewish instead of a Roman government."

The officer adroitly flung back the challenge: "In my city there is a synagogue where I used often to repair. To me they seem to acclaim your long-expected Messiah. Mark you, he comes upon a colt, the emblem of peace, not a horse, the emblem of war. Is it not the fulfillment of your own prophecies?"

The priest frowned.

"Nor can we put a man in bondage because of the impulsive greeting of a mob," continued the officer, with a sidelong glance of malicious satisfaction at the displeasure of the other. "The rabbi's own acts of insurrection, or his own words against the authority of Rome, would alone convict him."

The priest moved away, muttering. All unconsciously he had been handed a weapon by one who meant to take it away. Forthwith, that most cruelly exciting game in all the world, a man hunt, was on in the fair city of Jerusalem.

The strange procession entered the sacred gates, watched by friend and foe, smiled and frowned upon. Gradually the shouts died down, the crowds dispersed and the cause of it all—a tall, rugged, young Galilean—went his way. None followed him more faithfully than a small group of boys at the hero-worshiping age—Joel, who had been recognized by the disciple to whom he had once given his luncheon, and by him led to the very feet of the Teacher himself; Reuben, who expected much, and Phineas, who came to see the discomfiture of both.

For the remainder of that eventful Sunday, for all of Monday and the whole of Tuesday, the three lads hovered in the forefront of every crowd, alert, inquisitive, deferential. At times, under the enthusiastic commendation of Reuben, Phineas almost allowed himself to believe. As Tuesday waned, however, and it became more and more apparent that the Nazarene's popularity waned with it, Phineas returned to his original apostasy.

"Behold, it is the third day," he pointed out contemptuously, "and he has not made a movement to cast off the Roman power. He will never be our king. My father says he is a deceiver."

CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of his system for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are in their diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. The importance, then, is how to treat it. comes. Dr. Caldwell always advised getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It is the most delicate system-forming habit forming. Dr. Caldwell never did approve of drastic purges. He did not believe in good for human beings to put on a system. "Not that," put in Reuben quickly, "for he is of the line of our great King David. Nevertheless my father says it is best to be careful lest the priests or soldiers disapprove. I shall not follow him farther until we know his purpose."

Only Joel remained unchanged by public opinion.

Phineas tested him unmercifully. "Ere the Passover feast is ended you will have visited the thorn patch," he predicted, and, seeing how his victim shivered at the mere thought, drew vivid word pictures of Joel-before and Joel-after, sending him home abject and devoid of courage.

By Wednesday Joel's gentle heart was the more grieved, for his Hero was sought in vain. While his followers said he rested at the home of friends in Bethany, but six miles distant, the opposition claimed that he was in hiding. Thursday was likewise spent in retirement, but Thursday evening he was with his closest disciple. It was Friday morning that Jerusalem awoke to its tragedy. The sensation hunting populace had no lack of thrills. Rumors went flying about the city, and little groups on the streets discussed the latest news.

At midnight (Thursday) the young Prophet had been arrested, betrayed by one of his most intimate followers! Before 6 a. m. (Friday) he had been tried before three Jewish courts and condemned by their legislative body, the sanhedrin. Before 6 a. m. he had been brought before the Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate; sent to Herod and back to Pilate, and referred to the vote of the mob. According to a foreign custom, imported by Herod, the people might claim one prisoner released on a national holiday. They had chosen Barabbas instead of Jesus. Forthwith he had been crucified. By three in the afternoon he was dead, and by 6 he lay in a rocky tomb donated by a rich man who had believed on him.

In the narrow streets a priest paused beside a soldier. "A rare day under the blue Palestinian sky, Innocentius. I rejoice that a public enemy is no more."

The officer shrugged his shoulders. "I should think you would mourn an innocent man sent to the grave of a felon, and the eclipse of your national hopes."

Phineas, in the wake of his family, paused for a brief and grinning instant beside the distressed Joel: "Tomorrow will be the Sabbath, but on Sunday, the third day—the thorn patch."

Joel moved away, muttering between pallid lips, "They mocked him with a crown of thorns."

It was a different Sabbath from any Jerusalem had ever known. In an inexplicable way the hasty and illegal death of this young prophet from Nazareth, who had made many to hope and many to fear, had cast a chill into the old city's very heart. Her citizens slept badly that night and were abroad betimes on Sunday morning. Some, talking of yesterday, wandered idly toward the place where the three crosses had been; some clustered outside the temple, speaking in awe-struck whispers of the earthquake which had rent the jewelled veil hanging before the holy of holies at the very moment the Nazarene had died, as if the presence of Jehovah had also departed from them; some took their way to the rocky cemeteries outside the city walls, where that same earthquake was said to have rent many of the graves.

Only a handful of women struck out boldly for the tomb, carrying a gift of ointments and spices for the dear, wounded body of one they had called "friend." Joel followed. Phineas, espying the object of his sport, ran to overtake him, and Reuben sped to the rescue. In a moment the three were loudly arguing:

"Had he but come down from the cross, even then we would have believed on him," asserted Phineas.

"Had they but let him live a little longer," sighed Reuben.

"But he said—" began Joel.

Phineas laughed boisterously. "It is the thorn patch. Nevertheless, let us first visit the grave, and if we leave the path and go over the hills, we can see farther and be able to locate the burial place by the soldiers around it."

It was a fatal mistake. Entering a little thicket of underbrush, Reuben drew back. A long scratch on his arm indicated the presence of thorny shrubs. He drew Joel after him. At the same moment came lusty cries of pain from Phineas, who had penetrated farther. Joel started back but Reuben detained him.

"He is but deceiving you. Said he not he would take you into the thorns?"

On the path they had left a woman ran panting, and, meeting another, stopped to tell a wondrous tale: "The soldiers are gone, and the heavy stone before the door of the sepulcher has been rolled away."

"The earthquake," scoffed the listener.

"No, for the stone and watch were set afterward. The grave is empty and the Master has been seen alive, they say. Let us hasten for he cannot have gone far, and we may see him."

The sorrow on Joel's countenance changed to surprise and joy. "Come, for we shall outrun them," he commanded, and pulled Reuben along with him.

The voice of Phineas had become pleading now. Joel came to a full stop, hesitated, swallowed hard, and turned back. Reuben tried to dissuade him. "You're afraid of thorns," he reminded. "But Phineas is hurt."

"It is no more than he would gladly do to you."

Joel waved his hand in farewell. "You will miss seeing the Teacher," Reuben called after him.

Joel stopped again, as if considering, but in a moment had resolutely turned to his self-imposed martyrdom. Reuben told himself he did not care, but after a few steps, anxiety swallowed up his indignation, and he followed Joel. A strange sight greeted him as he entered the underbrush.

Phineas was wiping the blood from a dozen wounds, where the long, cruel spikes had lacerated him. Joel, with the blood streaming from his forehead, gazed straight ahead, as if he beheld a vision. After a time he turned to his companions, and on his dreamy face was an expression of rapture.

"I have seen him," he declared, "and inasmuch as ye did it to one of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me," was what he said.

Reuben spoke gently: "You have seen a Galilean who looked like the rabbi."

But Joel did not stop to dispute. "I go to tell the disciples," he explained, and tore his way through the underbrush and over the uneven ground with a speed which left Reuben and Phineas far behind.

The two women who had met earlier. One of them was looking after Joel with a great pity in her face. "He is beside himself with grief, as our friends were also. We cannot find the Master. If he had risen, would we not see him?"

Sadly Reuben admitted the truth of the question, but Phineas eyed her scornfully. "Did you expect it? I am not good enough for the wise and holy Teacher to talk with me, but I think he would with Joel."

Without waiting for the astonished comments of the hearers, Phineas loosened his hold on Reuben's arm and ran after Joel. Catching up with him at last, he pantingly explained his haste: "I will go with you," he whispered, and Joel, nodding, realized that he had that day made both a friend and a disciple.—The Continent.

Where the carefully trained child learns bad manners is a standing mystery to its watchful parents. These anxious rearers of the young are often heard propounding this query, but generally without result. Once in a while, however, out of the deep silence comes an illuminating answer.

Johnny furnished one just the other day. He had just finished a particularly toothsome dish of apple pudding, which he ate to the last morsel. Then, despite the fact that there was company at the table, he deliberately picked up his saucer and licked it clean.

The laziest man in Beacon was discovered early yesterday morning. He was sound asleep when his wife, awakened by the fire siren, nudged him, and said:

"Wake up, honey, I think the whole town is on fire. The sky is all lit up. Wake up, wake up!"

The husband woke up slowly, indolently arose, and sleepily felt the four walls of his room, yawned and stretched with a grunt, and murmured to his spouse:

"The walls are still cool," and he returned to bed.—Beacon (N. Y.) paper.

A little while ago Dean Inge gave a young lady of his acquaintance a very bad quarter of an hour, albeit unwittingly. On her wedding day he sent her a telegram which, as received, tensely ran: "John 4:18." Story of Queens' Endowment

One of the most beautiful acts of Christ-Church of Charlotte, who gave his evening service to Dr. William H.

choir from his Department of Music for the services on Sunday eve-

The purpose of the invitation from Dr.
Little is that Dr. Frazer might present the story of Queens College, which insti-paign to complete its Endowment fund.

The service was not the ordinary packed house of inter-enthusiastically and gladly, but that forty thousand people in the radio audience heard him as well. Dr. Little requested the radio audience to write to Dr.

the service. Numbers of letters have been received by the college president, a

The address was the best one we have ever heard on Christian education. I wish the Presbyterian in the South could hear that address. To my mind
I do not have any other trouble with Christian education. I think they would appreciate the amount. We enjoyed the service too. There wasn't anything in the service that we did not enjoy.

I would not make any other pledges,

Dr. Frazer had as his subject "Christianity," and we are quoting a number of sentences from his address:

Education is one of the biggest words in our experience. All progress is to be measured in the terms of education.
Sometimes narrow this word and lead ourselves into confusion. The key in education is the adjusting of individual life being educated to an and harmonious relationship to and to a proper approach and entrance unto God. Education is that which is most vital and

Machen To Be at Hampden Sidney

Union Seminary Professor Will Preach Baccalaureate Sermon

Announcement is made that the Rev.
Gresham Machen, of Princeton Theological Seminary, will preach the baccalaureate sermon for Hampden-Sydney College on June 9. Dr. Machen is the ablest and most prominent contemporary Bible scholars of the day, and is looking forward with the keenest interest to his visit.

Rev. R. C. McQuilkin, dean of the Theological Bible School, Columbia, S. C., has conducted a series of services under the joint auspices of the mentioned Church and the Students' Christian Association. Mr. McQuilkin had large audiences, his messages were interesting and gripping, and the interest of the students was very pronounced.

Laying Cornerstone In Washington

Belated Story of "The Church of the Pilgrims" and the Interesting Ceremony of Last Fall

As the sun was setting one afternoon last autumn, friends gathered in the Parkway at Twenty-second and P Streets, N.
W., in Washington, D. C., to lay the cornerstone of the new "Church of the Pilgrims." It was a day of abounding thanksgiving to God who had brought the venture of faith of this little group of our brethren so far towards fruition.

There was much for everyone to see, as the construction which has been going forward since last March, under the supervision of the architect, Mr. Benjamin C. Flournoy, had advanced sufficiently to enable us to gain an excellent idea of the capacious, well-planned, and impres-sively beautiful structure. The date of the ceremony had been postponed until all who were to take part could be free to come. The attractive Gothic arches leading into the loggia on each side of the central tower were already in place and afforded lovely vistas which, with the partly finished tower and the Canterbury Porch, helped to produce an atmosphere of worship.

The address was delivered by the Moderator of the General Assembly, Rev. Dr.
Harris E. Kirk, of Baltimore. He spoke appreciatively of the faith and courage which had actuated the congregation through the discouragements and difficulties incidental to such an undertaking.
He noted the significance of the name, Church of the Pilgrims, and stressed the far-reaching influence of testimony to spiritual values in such a world-center as Washington. Very solemnly and earnestly did he lay upon the hearts of the local congregation their responsibility to prove worthy of the co-operation and confidence which the whole Church had placed in them through the contribution of a quar-

Dr. Henry Sloan Coffin At Duke

President of Union Seminary, New York, Delivers Series at Durham

The twelfth series of the Avery Lectures were delivered at Duke University, Durham, N. C., by Rev. Henry Sloan Coffin, president of Union Seminary, New York. He spoke three times, March 4, 5, and 6.

In answering his special topic of the first evening, "Of What Use Is Religion?" Dr. Coffin said, "First, religion gives us an interpretation of life, full of meaning, and secondly, it gives us power to achieve that meaning.

"There are three great things in life a man has to pit himself against. The first of them is the universe itself, full of its dangers and diseases. Religion is the only weapon with which men can fight danger, disease and death.

"The second of the three great things in life a man has to pit himself against is his fellow mortals. We have to realize that our fellow men are our sorest foes.
They bring us down from the top. We must remember that there were three on the cross; two of them were below the standard of living at that time. One was above it. Religion, he said, gives us independence.

"The third of the things man has to pit himself against and probably the most important one is himself." The speaker gave instances of great men and writers who knew that they had to pit themselves against themselves.

The subjects of the other two lectures of this series were: How Can We Know God? Why Was Christ Crucified?—N.
C. Christian Advocate.

A Plan for Union With the U. P.'s

Report of the Ad Interim Committee on Closer Relations With Other Presbyterian Bodies to the General Assembly at Montreat in May

At the meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church U. S., in Pensacola, Florida, May, 1926, overtures were presented asking for the appointment of an Ad Interim Committee on Closer Relations with the United Presbyterian Church and the Associate Reformed Synod of the South; the Assembly answered affirmatively, and such committee was appointed, consisting of Rev. S. L.
Morris, D.D., chairman, Rev. Wm.
Crowe, D.D., Rev. S. H. Chester, D.D., Rev. C. H. Nabers, D.D., Mr. R. A.
Dunn, LL.D., and Dr. James Ross Mc-Cain. The United Presbyterian Assembly accepted the invitation and appointed a similar committee. The Associate Reformed Synod made no response, but their official organ, "The A. R. Presbyterian," published a statement that this body declined the invitation.

The Joint Committee of the Presbyterian Church U. S., and the United Presbyterian Church held a meeting in Cincinnati, September 15, 1926, attended by all members except one from each delegation, at which time Rev. Wm.
Crowe, D.D., was elected chairman of the Joint Committee, and Rev. A. H.
Baldinger, D.D., secretary. Full and free discussion was held, participated in by all, facing both the advantages and the obstacles to the union of the churches; and sub-committees were appointed to make report at a subsequent meeting, which was

Chicora Plans Commencement

Presbyterian Girls' College of South Carolina Announces Speakers

Thirty-seven students will receive diplomas at the annual Chicora College commencement exercises, which will begin Saturday, May 18, with the annual alumni luncheon, and will continue through Monday night, when the graduating exercises will be held, according to announcement by Dr. S. C. Byrd, president of the college at Columbia, S. C.

Dr. W. S. Currell, dean of the graduate school of the University of South Carolina, will deliver the literary address on graduation night. Doctor Currell is one of the foremost educators in the state, and Doctor Byrd is pleased that he was able to accept the invitation extended him.

The Rev. George M. Telford, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Abbeville, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the First Presbyterian Church
Sunday morning, May 19. The Rev.
Frank A. Drennan, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Liberty Hill, will make the annual Christian Endeavor address Sunday night at Arsenal Hill Presbyterian Church. Both of these men are forceful speakers and are well known throughout South Carolina.

Class day exercises will be held in the college auditorium at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon. The graduating exercises will also be held in the auditorium Monday night, at which time Doctor Currell will speak.

The college has enjoyed one of the best years in its history. The largest number of boarding students ever to attend were registered this year, the acquisition of the seminary buildings for use enabling the college to care for the increased number.

Fundamentalists To Hold Meeting

The Twelfth Annual Convention of the World's Christian Fundamentalists Association

The Christian Fundamentalist announces the twelfth annual convention of the World's Christian Fundamentalists Association will be held in Cadle Tabernacle, Indianapolis, Indiana, May 26 to June 2, inclusive. A number of features will characterize this convention.

A daily Bible study will run throughout the same from the first day to the last.
Missions will have a prominent place in the convention.

Education, of course, will receive attention. The Orthodox College Association is an integral part of the World's Christian Fundamentalists Association, and the Bryan Foundation Fund, looking to the strengthening of the cause of all orthodox colleges, will receive attention.

The Sunday School Series, founded by the World's Christian Fundamentalists Association, will also have its place on the program; and Dr. Hull, of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of the Sunday School Committee, will present his report for the year and his prospectus for the year to come.

But while these special features will find place on the program, the two points that will be emphasized this year will be doctrinal teaching and evangelization.

We make no promises whatever that the convention will be free from polemics; in fact, we expect it to be characterized by a true contention for the faith, an able defense for the same, but we plan that it shall be constructive rather than merely contentious, and that evangelism shall have right of way at each evening hour. In truth, we are hoping to make these meetings a medium of blessing, not only to Indianapolis and Indiana, but to as many states of the union as send delegates to the convention. We

P. C. Observes Founder's Day

College at Clinton, S. C., Has Interesting Program Celebrating the Memory of Dr. W. P.
Jacobs

Founder's Day was observed at Presbyterian college with appropriate exercises in the college chapel Friday, March 15. It is an annual custom to celebrate March 15, the birthday of the illustrious Rev. William Plumer Jacobs, D.D., LL.D., founder of the college. On the platform were heads of three institutions that Doctor Jacobs had founded in Clinton.
The Rev. L. Ross Lynn, president of the orphanage represented that institution;
the Rev. D. J. Woods and John McSween represented the Presbyterian church and the college, respectively. The principal address was delivered by former Governor Martin F. Ansel, present judge of the county court for Greenville and chairman of the board of trustees for Thornwell orphanage. He spoke warmly and appreciatively of his 20 years' of association with Doctor Jacobs and of the great work being carried on as a direct result of his vision and energy.

Friday evening, March 22, the annual Pan-Hellenic banquet marked one of the high spots in the social year at Presbyterian College. In the course of its existence, it has come to mean more than a mere banquet, it is an institution. It is being directed by the Pan-Hellenic council a group with one representative from each of the fraternities on the campus.
Young women from all parts of the state were invited and it was a gala occasion.
This year the toasts were made by Presi-

Dr. Dubose Closes Meeting in Charlotte

Spartanburg Pastor Has Two Weeks Series at Caldwell Memorial

Dr. Henry Wade Dubose, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, S. C., bought a two weeks meeting to a close in Caldwell Memorial Church, Charlotte, on Friday, March 22.

Dr. Dubose began preaching on March 11, and had two services a day until the end of his series. Dr. C. R. Nisbet, the pastor of the Church where the meeting was held began the series on Sabbath before.

There was great interest taken in the series. All of Dr. Dubose's sermons were enjoyed and admired, and many recognized in them a strong presentation of Christian truth, a clear, logical appeal, a warmth of sincere sympathy and concern, and every sermon was a model in homiletics. There was also a wealth of illustration which fastened attention as well illuminated the point.

There were 48 professions of faiths, mostly among the members of the Sunday School, who will be assembled in a preparatory class by the pastor. About 175 declared themselves as desirous of reconsecration to Christ. Eight persons asked to be received by letter.

The ladies conducted cottage prayer meetings on several mornings, and a pre-service prayer meeting was held 15 minutes before the evening service.

The church is greatly revived, and pastor and people feel that a new era has opened for the work of the congregation. They are deeply grateful to God for the work of grace, and sincerely appreciate the visit and the work of Dr. Dubose.

Marshal Foch, Allied Commander is Dead

Head of the Armies of the Allies During the Great War Died on March 20

Courageous and indomitable to the end, Marshal Ferdinand Foch, generalissimo of the mighty Allied hosts in the last days of the World War, March 20, ended his last campaign, dying at his home after a lengthy illness in his 78th year.

We take the following story from Associated Press reports:

Crowned with an immortal glory, as the "savior of civilization," the conqueror of the Germans will go down in history as the military leader who, with more than 10,000,000 soldiers under his command, directed five battles at once and brought peace to a world desolated by four years of indescribable terror and bloodshed.

The appointment of Foch as generalissimo of all the Allied forces, March 29, 1918, eight days after the Germans had started what was to be their last great offensive in the west, was generally regarded as the master diplomatic stroke of the war. Unity of command brought fresh confidence to the Allies and consternation to the enemy.

Three months or more after taking the supreme command, Marshal Foch maintained an unbroken front of more than 350 miles from the North Sea to Belfort. He awaited his time to strike; the arrival of American reinforcements gave him numerical superiority over the enemy, and July 18 he began the ponderous smash that was to end in the complete collapse of Germany and the cessation of hostilities.

Foch gave the Germans no rest but struck unceasing, terrific, sledge-hammer blows—now here, now there—at various points of the line. With the British, French and Belgians, he stopped the enemy's advance toward the English channel; with the French and Americans he blocked the way to Paris. Then the Germans began to retire and, following the American victory at Chateau Thierry, the long battle line from Switzerland to the sea receded daily northward and eastward toward the Rhine.

Each of the five big battles that were fought under Foch's direction in the closing days of the war was so timed and placed that each army supported the other, all forming an indispensable part of the whole and all working as smoothly as the parts of a well adjusted automobile engine. All were directed toward the same end—to wear down the enemy's strength. Hindenburg fought with a bludgeon, a broadsword. Foch wielded a rapier with lightning-like thrusts at vital spots.

Marshal Foch was born October 2, 1857, at Harbes, a little city in the Pyrenees, close to the Spanish border.

He was entombed beside Napoleon in the dome of the Invalids, in Paris.

president of the college and S. R. Elliott president of the council. The honorary guests were Mr. and Mrs. McSween, Coach and Mrs. Walter A. Johnson, Coach and Mrs. Lonnie McMillian, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Spencer, Mrs. Myrtle Hunter.

The Presbyterian College Glee club returned to the campus last Saturday after a five-day trip through the upper part of the state. Programs were presented at Woodruff, Pelzer, Anderson, Abbeville and Clover. The performances were received favorably and the club feels well satisfied with the results of its long and rigorous training.

The favor with which the Y. M. C. A. discussions of the last month, led by Doctor Brimm have been received has led the cabinet to have him protract his discussions for at least another month. He has led open forums each Wednesday night on topics of wide-awake interest to the students, and because of them there has been a renewed interest in the Y work. His next topic is "What to Consider in Choosing a Vocation."

The annual evangelistic services at the college will be conducted this year by the Rev. S. M. Glasgow, D.D., of the First Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, Tenn. The first meeting will be held Monday, the 18th, and one will be held each day through Thursday. Doctor Glasgow is a great leader, an inspiring speaker and a prolific writer. He is one of the outstanding men in the Southern assembly and the college is most fortunate in securing his services. For the past week the student body has been preparing for the meeting under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Each evening prayer services are held in the dormitories under the leadership of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet, and the manifest interest and earnestness offer encouragement for a successful meeting.

that power may be good or evil, benevolent or malevolent."

Dr. Frazer said that knowledge alone does not alter the nature of man, but that we must have knowledge saturated with spirituality. Under three heads he outlined the importance of Christian education:

1. It is important in order to inculcate true ideals. Ideals, he said, make the man. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." He traced the ethical theories by which the world has been dominated, and drove home the truth that only that ethical theory which had come from God had produced a manhood and a womanhood worthwhile.

2. He spoke of the importance of Christian education as the one real establishing factor in the home life. The fundamental basis of the social order, declared the speaker, is the home. Until this is established according to the principles for establishment of the home as given by the Word of God, it rests upon an unstable foundation—and so does the social order. The speaker dwelt on the increasing evil of divorce, of companionate marriage, of the free and easy association of the sexes both young and old, and made a strong appeal for the establishment of the true relationship between man and woman, which would lead to the establishment of homes in Christian love and upon Christian principles.

3. The third and last point of the speaker was the importance of Christian education for the safe-guarding of the

Mrs. L. M. Thurston

They were at breakfast. Mary's gaze kept straying through the big window. John's was on the magazine he had picked up with his paper. Winter wheat was almost spring green inside. The forsythia had one yellow bud like an eye half opened. Morning haze was making woods and hills a blur of blue.

Suddenly Mary's spoon rattled excitedly against her cup. "John, some one is moving in that house down there. I thought you were going to buy it. John, why didn't you?"

"We have enough land. That little place makes a good home. No need to be land greedy."

"But stuck right under us—John, I'll never forgive you."

John laughed as he pushed back his chair. "Joe Harris is moving in earlier than he expected. Want to see what I've been reading?" He laid the open magazine face down on the table.

It was late afternoon before Mary picked it up. Then she saw that John had marked sentences here and there. She read these first: "Federal agriculture had a hand in the great quarrel." Why, this was interesting. This article was getting at the roots of the Great War, of all wars. She read more avidly: Although it is customary to think of France as the land of peasant freeholders those acquainted with her agricultural history are aware that the great estates of feudal days were not all dissolved. In 1911 she had 134,000 large holdings. In European Russia—Mary sought out marked phrases and words—it was officially reported that 30,000 families owned as many acres as 10,000,000 peasant families. Austria had 1733 estates above 2500 acres. Nearly one-third of Hungary was embraced in 4000 estates.

She had not noticed how late it was. John was coming in. "John, what on earth were you getting at with these markings?"

"Mary, you have been going about with petitions for signing the Peace Pact, you've been talking arbitration and brotherhood. The great underlying principle for the brother man hasn't burst upon you yet. But if the Peace Pact is to be effectual it must be personal as well as national, national before international." John's hand ran down to a line he himself had penciled upon the margin:

"Hogging land, squeezing the little fellow out in industry! We've gotten the Peace Pact. That is but a yardstick by which to measure other matters. The legend on that yardstick is love of your fellowman."

nation. Until education, business, society—everything, is projected upon the principles of the ethics of God's word, there is no safety for them. Referring to the World War, he declared that as horrible as it was, bursting out in the light of the Twentieth Century, it was only that which was to be expected, because it was the result of a system of education for decades and decades. The terms—scientific, practical, cultural, and kindred terms, had supplanted the term—religious, or Christian, in certain sources of Europe, and inasmuch as the moral element in Education had been eliminated, the outcome of the situation was a cataclysm of the most dreadful kind. Imperialism and commercialism, were the fruits of the system and process of education which had been inculcated for three or more generations.

The motto of Harvard University had been at one time, "For Christ and the Church." If every educational institution could live up to a similar motto, thus honoring Christ by teaching the principles which properly regulate man in his relationship to his fellowman, the stability of our social order would be assured. If peace and prosperity are to be enjoyed, we must get back to the fundamentals, and the Church must be aroused to the task of establishing real Christian institutions and enthroning Christ at the very fountain source of all real life.

Declaring that Queens College, with a plant easily worth $800,000; an invested fund of actual cash for Endowment of $132,000; a property known as the Westminster School property intrinsically worth $100,000, and a subscription list of $140,000, is in existence to do such a work as this, he concluded his appeal to the Christian public to give funds to complete the Endowment. He declared that as a task, it is a mere bagatelle, and that it could be easily done by an interested and an enthusiastic church.

"That makes a good little hole Harris down there," he added casually. "Oh, stop your preaching!" But voice belied her words. She turned the window. Stars were out, the star of a home light in the house valley. "I'm going to put out some bulbs. I've more than I want. I'll Sally Harris some in the m. They'll be lovely at her gate. John nice to have someone really getting good of that place down there, a neighbor. Why, that is what I must learn to be—all over the neighbors."—N. C. Christian Advocate

"AND THE PEOPLE STOOD BEHOLDING"

What if it hurts to cauterize wound, if thus a life is saved? if confession of sin is hard, if we come into salvation?

If it is important to learn work, it is equally important to how to rest; for there is no work without good rest.

Charlotte, N. C.EDITORIAL*FIXED MORAL BELIEFS

Have all heard of the school teacher who under examination was willing to teach the world was square or round, just as it pleased his patrons. We have all seen politicians who believe in prohibition or liquor-selling, just as the party platform or candidates believed. We have all seen preachers who were willing to wear a medal badge, just as the majority insisted. One, however, admires the weather vane politician or preacher, no matter how it blows. We admire the man who not only believes but is willing to suffer for his belief. The Psalmist had the correct idea when he gave us the marks by which you could determine who will dwell in the Lord's tabernacle, or on the Holy hill, "He that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not. He that doeth these things shall never be moved."

Time-servers may succeed for a time, but they do not live long. No man will trust them in religious matters it is especially important that we have fixed convictions as to doctrines. Truths may shift in their ratio of importance, but the truths cannot shift, because they are based upon the unchangeable nature of God.

Men may study the same truth and draw different conclusions from it. This does not mean that the truth changes or that it shifts with age—but only that the mind of man changes as he looks at truth.

Of course we should not expect every other man to agree with us, as we are often tempted to do.

The Calvinist and the Arminian looked at the same truth, yet each arrived at a different conclusion.

They were not arguing that one should yield to the other, but that each man should be fully persuaded of his own mind, and having once taken his stand on a certain phase of truth, that he should not waver, moved by popular clamor.

Can we imagine a man believing in the principles of the democratic party and in after life going to the republican party, or vice versa, without doing violence to his moral sense, because his principles change with the changing conditions of a country. We cannot imagine a man going from one moral truth to its opposite without being weakened morally, because such truths are eternal and are independent of changing conditions.

We believe that the Bible is inspired and that the wonderful advances of science have nothing to do with weakening the fact that "men of God" as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." The men of science claim that they can read the mind of the world in the rocks themselves, but we believe that we can see God's hand in sacred records, and whatever these records teach we believe.

We believe we have learned after a long time that we find that however it may be with us we cannot shake off the beliefs of a life confirmed by long years of study. The picture of an united Church, all bound together in a unity is a very attractive one.

It is doubtful men would be greatly impressed by the picture of a Church united, with one aim. If, however, this blessing depends upon your making a scrap heap of your beliefs, we seriously doubt whether the benefits would be as great as pictured. Isaiah draws a dark picture of Israel's downfall, and he calls down woes upon them. Among the symptoms of this downfall was the confusion of moral truths. "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil, that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter!"

The people had reached that point in moral degeneracy when all moral distinctions had been swept aside, and men no longer contended for the truth.

The present inclination of Churches whose original beliefs were far apart, to combine is a symptom of the same decay of the moral sense shown in minimizing differences of doctrine that were once deemed essential.

A DREAD TO BE BANISHED

We are publishing in this issue three pages which set forth the plan for raising a Ministers' Annuity Fund by which our pastors and other ministers may receive a pension after their labors are over. If retirement comes from disability previous to 65, the pension will become active then, but the expected retirement is set at 65, with a minimum pension of $600, and a maximum of $2,000.

This will banish an unnamed dread on the part of our ministers who fear the time when they must wait on the church to come to their help. However, much they may be told they deserve the aid of Ministerial Relief, they always speak of it in covert language. They have ever hoped they would not come to that.

The pension system which has been recommended will remove this dread, because the minister will have a share in laying by for this pension, and the Church he serves will also set aside a percentage in its annual budget for the same cause.

The system will be voluntary. The minister will accept membership in the Fund by paying two and a half per cent of his annual salary to the Fund, just as he pays his insurance premiums. The church will also pay to the Fund seven and one-half per cent of the pastor's salary. These payments will build up the Fund to an adequate surplus able to meet the demands of those who reach the retirement age. While every minister who pays to the Fund will receive according to his salary average for thirty-five years, no minister will receive less than a minimum of $600 nor more than a maximum of $2,000.

While the Fund looks especially to the future, and our younger ministers will fall into the regular workings of the Fund, the older men will not be forgotten, because the Endowment Fund which is aside from the Pension Fund will take care of their needs. This Endowment Fund will also take care of cases in which ministers die in their earlier years, and cannot lay by the pension long enough to complete their terms. Therefore, their families must look to the Endowment Fund for help. The Church will attempt to raise $3,000,000 next year for this Endowment Fund.

It is unnecessary for this matter to be fully treated in this editorial, as the full details are in the other pages, and can be learned by careful study. The object of bringing the matter to the attention of the Church now is to secure full cooperation at the meetings of the Presbyteries which meet next month, and that it may have adequate study by the time the Assembly meets in Montreat on May 16.

The last five Assemblies have approved this Annuity Fund, and it now awaits the action of the Presbyteries. The General Assembly at Atlanta last year took the following action:

"That the Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief lay before the Church the plan for the Ministers' Annuity Fund; that the Presbyteries, Churches, and agencies, and all the ministers and missionaries be urged to give the full measure of their support to this sane and needed effort to secure proper pensions for the servants of the Church, and that the whole Church make its plans, beginning January 1, 1930, to raise the amount of $3,000,000 to inaugurate the plan."

AN INVITATION TO PRESBYTERIANS AND METHODISTS

We have before commented on the union wave that seems to be sweeping over the churches of various denominations.

Instead of subsiding, it seems to be gathering volume. As far as the Lord is behind it, we should welcome it, as a precursor of the time when there shall be one Lord, one faith, one baptism—unfortunately such overtures are of the earth. Earthly man's pride and selfishness always crop out and mar the spirit of the movement. Self-pride and self-aggrandizement seem bound to develop and become the leading motive, so that what on the surface is a beautiful act of altruism, when dissected becomes sicklied over with bad motives. Now and then in the proceedings of some high court of a church we read that a proposal is made for union with some church of a different denomination.

For example the proposal of the eight Bishops at the Lambeth Conferences to unite the churches of Christendom upon a common platform. Their proposals finally centered on what is known as the Lambeth Quadrilateral. They were to accept these four articles of faith—Belief in the Holy Scriptures, the Apostolic and Nicene Creeds, the two Sacraments instituted by Christ, and the Historic Episcopate. In other words, they were to become, to all intents and purposes, Episcopalians. Of course the Lambeth proposal failed.

The late General Convention of the Episcopal Church has made another move for union. They invited the Methodists and Presbyterians to another conference.

One of their ministers now protests against the invitation on the ground that the wording of the resolution justifies the belief that the bishops hold that the basis of unity is moral theology; that is, that conduct, rather than faith, is the supreme test of the oneness of the Christian church.

This minister contends that conduct cannot be a uniting tie unless it springs from a unity of belief. In other words, any union between churches must depend upon those bodies believing the same truths. He argues therefore that with bodies like the Methodists and the Presbyterians "the question of union resolves itself into the sacraments, and to define the faith." "Bride of Christ, His Body, to whom was given all authority to preach the Gospel, to administer the sacraments, and to define the faith." He claims that his church believes that our Lord did establish his church on earth, "a visible body with a definite faith, a ministry, and prescribed sacraments which have come down from the Apostles essentially as it has them today."

It is needless to say that up to the present time, the other denominations are not found flocking to the windows of this church.

REV. W. H. HAMILTON

Our readers will remember that Rev. W. H. Hamilton of Edinburgh was recently elected General Secretary of the Alliance of Reformed Churches to succeed Dr. J. R. Fleming who was made Executive General Secretary. Mr. Hamilton is coming to the Boston Council of the Alliance that meets on June 19th. We are glad to be able to announce that he expects to remain in this country until April, and hopes to attend the General Association of several of the constituent churches.

We sincerely trust that he will attend our own General Assembly at Montreat, and speak to that body, and through its members to our whole church of the great world-wide work of the Alliance.

CONTRIBUTED

THE STILL SMALL VOICE

By Rev. J. Keir Fraser, D.D.

I Kings 19:11-12

"The Lord was not in the wind.
"The Lord was not in the earthquake.
"The Lord was not in the fire.
"And after the fire a still small voice."

Power of Silent Forces

Elijah was surprised. I doubt if in all his life-time he ever was so surprised. God was not in the earthquake nor in the storm, nor in the fire. But He was in the still small voice.

So often we look for God in the wrong place. God is all powerful, all mighty, and yet He doesn't make as much noise in the world as some people do. Sometimes He speaks in the mighty forces of nature, but oftener in her silent manifestations.

The stars, the moon, the sun, the growing crops, the flowers, the pull of gravity, the falling of the snow, the building of character—these are noiseless movements. God is in them all, but man does not hear.

Man is impressed by the big, the spectacular, the noisy; he has more faith in the whirlwind than in the still small voice. God values most the things that man prizes least. What looks little to man is often large in God's sight, and what seems big to man is often small to Him. The big corporations, the big cities, the big Churches, the big colleges, the big factories—these dazzle most people and keep them from seeing straight and thinking straight. In God's sight a thing is not big unless it is good. What does He care for size? When He wants to see mere size there are the mountains lifted up, the oceans stretched out, the distant stars moving in their majesty through infinite space.

The still small voice stands for the silent, the tender, unpretentious, but abiding realities of life. It was the modest, unassuming, quiet aspects of nature that appealed to Wordsworth: it was the massive, spectacular, noisy, that attracted Byron—and Wordsworth was one of God's elect, while Byron was not. And think of Christ—He loved most the quiet lake, the gentle lily, the tender lamb, the silently growing grain, the quiet mystery of night. He used the aggressive, impetuous, stormy Peter as the leader of His little band; but for His dearest friend He chose John with his tender touch, his gentle affection, his unassuming sincerity.

Lesson of the Unseen Needed

The world today is fearfully in need of learning this lesson. We are swept off our feet by mere size. We lose our head in the presence of power—external power. The spectacular dazzles us. If a thing is not big it is not worth bothering about. We are in danger of believing with the Germans that might makes right. But after all what does mere noise amount to? The prophets of Baal made a tremendous amount of noise in their effort to induce their God to hear and aid them, but nothing stirred or started. How different it was with Elijah and his God. It is not the loudest preaching that saves the most souls.

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit," saith the Lord. For a little while Moses dwelt amid the awful splendors of the lightnings and thunders of Sinai but it was not a pleasant dwelling place. A storm at sea is a grand sight, and an experience worth having, but we wouldn't want to live in one always.

The good and gentle women in our homes today are doing more to bring peace and righteousness on earth than all the noisy, busy, bustling, hustling men. The men seem to be doing it because everything they do, being on the outside, is seen; but the women are the silent sources of all that is grand and majestic in men.

We make much of Niagara. We forget the silent lakes without which there would be no Niagara. Anybody can see the seen, but only the elect can see the unseen.

We need today a new vision of God. We need to see Him in the common, ordinary, every-day affairs of life. We need to revise our estimates, to have a reevaluation of the silent and unassuming forces of life. If we have ears only for the earthquake, the storm, and the fire, we shall fail to hear the still small voice; we shall lose the very presence of God because He will hide his face from us.

"The Kingdom of Heaven," we read, "cometh without observation." The mustard seed, the leaves, the growing grain—these are its symbols. God sometimes acts with astounding suddenness and in the most spectacular and dramatic fashion. We must not forget that. But as a rule He is symbolized more accurately by the still small voice, than by the earthquake. And it is well that it is so. It is a kind provision of God. Were it otherwise we would be kept in a state of constant alarm and dread of Him. But as it is we hide ourselves under the shadow of His wing, when the storms of life beat against us. We rest in the everlasting arms when the earthquakes of life would swallow us up.

Tragic Absence of Quietness

My friends, the tragic thing in the world today is the absence of quietness. One of the blessings of the old time Sabbath, as I remember it as a boy, was its calm, its restfulness, its peace. But we have lost all that. We have heard so much about the art of being strenuous that we have lost the art of being still. Ours is an age of fuss and shouting. I saw sometime ago that in New York someone made a list of the needless noises on the streets with the result that between dawn and midnight there is an unnecessary noise every five minutes. And the lamentable thing is this babel and clatter have crept into the Church. We are getting to be very fond of a religious activity that has a noise in it. We think that unless it cries aloud on the streets and advertises in the newspapers in glaring headlines it is of no account. We have a strange idea that nothing is being done unless somebody is talking. You remember the conversation in "Pilgrim's Progress" between "Christian" and "Talkative"—"I thought we should have had a great deal of talk by this time." Don't you see? The time he was pursuing his journey in silence seemed wasted.

Finding the Secret of Strength

Is there not a fresh lesson here for us? So many of us are living in the sphere of the visible that we are forgetting that our real power is hidden from the public gaze, that it is secret. Today, I understand, they have the noiseless gun. I don't know how they do it, but in some way they eliminate the noise by a muffler. The power is not in the noise. There is never any real power in noise. Strength is not in bluster and noise; it is in quietness.

John Burroughs says that the first lesson a naturalist must learn is to be quiet. Let a man go shouting and laughing through the forest and every bird and beast within a mile will scurry away from him. "Be still and know that I am God." For remember Mrs. Browning's verse on the unchanging Christ:

"Speak low to me my Saviour, low and sweet,
From out the Hallelujahs, sweet and low,
Lest I should fear and fall and miss Thee so,
Who art not missed by any who entreat."

In reading biography I notice that the great men of action were also men who were great in prayer. They all had their seasons of retirement, when they got apart and were alone with God. During the recent World War Marshal Foch had an hour every day that he spent in prayer. The same was true of Stonewall Jackson during the War Between the States. It has been true of all great men.

Let us learn the lesson. Let us get off occasionally into the quiet and find out where we stand with the infinite. Let us climb the heights and be alone for a little while with the Lord. How haggard and worn most of us look! The shining face comes from the mountain-top where Moses got him.

When I get to the other world and meet Whittier, if I have that privilege, there are a lot of things I want to thank him for. But there is nothing I wish to thank him for more than his beautiful hymn:

"Drop thy still dews of quietness,
Till all our strivings cease:
Take from our souls the strain and stress;
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of Thy peace."

"Breathe this the pulses of desire
Thy coolness and Thy balm;
Let sense be dumb, let flesh retire.
Speak through this the earthquake, wind, and fire,
O still small voice of calm!"

DR. GRENFELL IN WASHINGTON

Celebrated Missionary Doctor, of Labrador, at the Central Presbyterian Church

Dr. James H. Taylor

Sir Wilfred T. Grenfell, the world famous Labrador doctor to the deep sea fishermen, was the guest of the Central Presbyterian Church of Washington, D. C., on Sunday, January 20. Sir Wilfred has visited the Central Church a number of times and has hosts of friends in the Church as well as in the entire city of Washington. For many years there has been a vital connection between this Church and the work of Sir Wilfred Grenfell when the Sunday School of the Central Presbyterian Church provided for him a very fine hickory sled, made according to his specifications, to take the place of the one he had lost on that memorable occasion when he was adrift on an ice pan. Every one, particularly the young people, should read that story entitled "Adrift on an Ice Pan," when Dr. Grenfell, trying to reach a very ill boy, while crossing the bay on the ice found that the ice was breaking away, and was drifting out to sea with him and his dogs. His story of this experience is a thrilling one because it emphasizes two great facts of his life,—his inspiring faith and his unselfish devotion to the service of others.

On Saturday when Dr. Grenfell arrived, through the courtesy of the Washington station of the Radio Corporation of America, the local manager of which is a member of the Bible Class of the Central Presbyterian Church, he spoke over the radio, with eleven of the largest stations connected up with Washington, and gave a brief account of his work in the Labrador.

On Sunday night Dr. Grenfell spoke at the Central Church. The service was to begin at eight o'clock, but by seven-thirty the Church was packed, and at a few minutes before eight, hundreds of people were on the sidewalk trying to get in. It was a remarkable tribute to the missionary work of this great doctor, who insists on speaking of himself as a missionary, and always emphasizes the privilege and challenge of service for Jesus Christ. He spoke for about an hour and three quarters, and told of the hospitals established along the twelve hundred miles of coast, from St. John's New Foundland, to the far north of Labrador. In addition to the hospital work, he has established dispensaries, where trained nurses are in charge, and where cases that need not be sent far up the coast can be taken care of, and from which points medical service can be rendered to those live comparatively near.

For generations, thousands of fishermen and their families along this coast had been in the grasp of the man who used the credit system, taking a lien in a upon all the "catch" of fish of the season. If the men had a bad season, or if they failed during the winter to trap many fur bearing animals, they were less in debt. Consequently, families were in all their lives, and were unable to secure even the necessities of life. Dr. Grenfell established co-op stores, giving the fishermen and trappers an interest in these stores, and enabling them to buy the necessities of life without paying such enormous profits to the store.

He has also established a large orphanage to take care of the many children who have been left homeless by the perils of the sea, or by the perils of disease as tuberculosis and typhoid. With skill and determination Dr. Grenfell was able to stamp out epidemics of typhoid and small pox.

One of the most serious problems that confront him was the fact that food was so scarce along the coast of New Foundland and Labrador, that thousands of people were undernourished, and suffered from the disease of malnutrition. Such a thing as a cow was not to be had on the Labrador coast. Milk and butter were very scarce. He introduced reindeer to provide meat and milk for the people. Now he has a herd of cows, and is also raising pigs. The result of this successful effort to provide food for the children is seen in the fact that the young people and children today in that region are an entirely new generation. They are as strong and enthusiastic about life as any children in any part of the world.

In order to provide for the education of the many children he has established schools along the coast where now opportunities for a common school education are given. Dr. Grenfell realized that the people did not feel that they were dependent upon various organizations of charity, so he has developed some of their own industries. He has revived weaving of reindeer hand and other types of weaving; various forms of carving, both of wood and of fine grained seal bone, ring ivory, the making of wooden toys, etc. Convalescent patients in the hospitals do a great deal in making handicrafts which when sold enables them to help those at home while they themselves are convalescing.

Dr. Grenfell told in his address of some remarkable operations that had been performed in the hospital at Labrador as well as some which he had performed on his own ship "The Strathcona" while at sea. He spoke of the restoration of sight to blind children, and the amputation of gangrenous limbs, by which the lives of many had been saved. In this far north, the rustiness of a rusty fish hook, or of a piece of iron on a boat, results fatally. Imagine being hundreds of miles from a doctor or a hospital when threatened with blood poisoning,—which was the case before Grenfell went to Labrador.

In recognition of his wonderful work as a physician and surgeon, Oxford University has conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine, the highest honorary degree of this kind that Oxford has ever conferred in all of its long centuries of history. In 1927, Dr. Grenfell was knighted by King George V, and with the Order of Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George. He has recently been elected to the honorary position of Lord Rector of St. Andrew's University, defeating Lord Melchett for the position. A few years ago this same honorary position was held by the great novelist Sir James Barrie. Sir Wilfred is also a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons in England, and a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

In addition to the enormous amount of work that Sir Wilfred Grenfell is doing, he has taken time to write a number of books, such as, "Off the Coast of Labrador"; "Our Northern Neighbors"; "Yourself and Your Own Body"; "The Autobiography of a Doctor"; most recently "Labrador Looks at the Orient"; numerous pamphlets and short stories.

Sir Wilfred was accompanied on his visit to Washington by Lady Grenfell, who was formerly Miss Ann Clananah of Chicago. Her father was a native of Tennessee, and was an officer in the Confederate Army. Recently the Southern Cross of Honor was presented to Lady Grenfell by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, in June 1928, at Nashville, Tennessee.

Those who may desire to get full information concerning the work of Sir Wilfred Grenfell, should write to the International Association of America, 156 5th Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

WHAT DR. JOWETT LEARNED

In reviewing his first pastorate, which was at a castle, England, Dr. J. H. Jowett said: "I have learned this lesson, 'that sin is mighty, but God is mightier.' I have learned that man is impotent to redeem himself; I have learned no man need be regarded as beyond redemption; I have learned that for the ruined life there is restoration, a power, a peace, and a joy unspeakable. I have learned that the care and misery of this world are in the homes where Christ is absent; I have learned that the happiest and most beautiful homes come with this congregation are the homes of the redeemed. These are the lessons of my ministry. Upon the end of these severe years of labor I declare with confidence and confident heart that Jesus has power and will to redeem everybody."—Exchange.

A discriminating layman says of a minister who preaches in a style both finished and ornate, "He so polishes his bat so that he cannot hit the ball." I hope the preacher will understand the point if some day hand the same bat to another man at the place of the pitcher.

Men-of-the-Church

Presbyterian Church in the United States

THE DALLAS CONFERENCE

Presbyterian men's conference in the first Presbyterian Church Friday evening was attended by representatives from a large number of churches. The conference was under direction of L. A. Coulter, General Assembly's committee on men's work, and A. E. Miller, superintendent of home missions, Fort Worth Presbytery.

The conference opened with a devotional service by Rev. Tom Cunningham, director of religious education at the Broadway Presbyterian Church. Following which the men enjoyed a bountiful and supper served by the Woman's Auxiliary. During the hours of the conference began with a Bible message by Rev. Alvin Swindell. Mr. Swindell outlined the special task of Home Missions in the building of new churches. Mr. Coulter then demonstrated the great need of organized men's work. He stated that only ten per cent of the men of the church are enlisted in the work. An efficient organization should be set up, suggested by the General Assembly, the groups are small, a practical survey of each church is made to find the special service that the church can render. A few leaders must be absolutely reliable in the value of the work. Small churches can have as much success as large ones.

Rev. T. Reviere spoke on personal work. Many said, hold religion a very personal and sacred thing which they do not care to discuss, but if the religion is of supreme value, there should be presented in it a sincere, humble and personal prayer. He gave several instances of the way in which an opening may be secured to present the Christ. A kindly invitation awakens inter-est and sympathy. Every one can announce or promote good tidings. One boy in his church was won by persistent and kindly invitation, and he has brought several others into the church. The conference was pronounced a great success, and the program of the church was discussed. W. F. Peden, superintendent of the Home Missions, invited the men of the district to meet at Scout grounds provided by the men of Itasca. The meeting to be held probably in April or May. The auxiliary appreciates the liberal co-operation of the men toward their work.

MEN-OF-THE-CHURCH—BLACKSBURG PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH Blacksburg, Virginia

Following is the splendid report of the president of the Blacksburg Presbyterian Church. A graphed copy was at the plate of each member at the March meeting.—Ed.)

The Men-of-the-Church organization is one year old. Last year we elected the following officers: J. E. Purcell, president; F. A. Motz, secretary; Rev. J. R. Johnson, pastor, ex-officio; J. R. Hutcheson, secretary, and F. A. Buchanan, chairman. Group C. W. Holdaway, W. H. Byrne and J. R. Johnson. The year has been one of encouragement and courage. The membership of our church has increased of men who are constantly "in" and "out" of Blacksburg. Most of the time "out." Some good people said that such an organization is a function, due to the fact that so many of our members were "on the road." Let us see what we have done, some of the "high lights."

Every Member Canvass: Soon after our organization our Every Member Canvass was put on. A Stewardship Committee headed by Mr. Buchanan resulted in a result speaks for itself. It has been the best that our church has ever had. Pledges are being paid and our church is now beginning to get into a financial shape. The results would have been better if our men had not rallied to the cause of the Master.

Mission School in Franklin. The Men's Bible Class bought Bibles for Dr. Guerrant's Mission School in Franklin. The appeal came and it was a joy to all. The pleasure it gave the men to give to this school could it have been done if we had not had our organization? Yes, but the joy would not have been the same.

Men's Bible Class: I consider this the best thing our organization has done. We have had five or six who came to Sunday School last year. There was no organized effort to get the men. Instead of the six, there have been as many as thirty-five men present. Have you no fellowship? The interest? The discussions? The pleasure? I consider the Men's Bible Class the best of our Church.

Worship: Under the able leadership of Mr. Johnson last summer, this little chapel became the place of nearly all the mountain folks in that section. What a wonderful piece of work was done for our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. There is more to be done there now.

Prayer Meeting: Our men conducted the prayer meeting during the absence of the pastor. This would not have been possible a year ago. It gave the men who took part in it real joy.

6. Roanoke Valley: Services were conducted by our men during the absence of the pastor. Do you think it was in vain? Ask the good people of Roanoke Valley and they will tell you they want us to come again.

7. Belspring: Your pastor and president went to Belspring on request of its pastor to help and organize a men's organization there. We hope we did some good, and that such an organization will result from our feeble efforts.

8. Council: Your Council has attempted to meet at least once a month to plan the work for the coming month. We have not attempted to do this in our own strength, but have always asked Divine guidance. Some members of our Council have sacrificed to be present. They have given their time and you men have responded.

9. Programs: We have attempted to put on our program, as far as practicable, our own men. We have had outside speakers and they have been the best we could secure.

There are some things which I believe ought to be done in the coming year.

1. Group leaders: More should be done by the Group Leaders. They should have meetings of their groups. Plan their work. Work up a competitive spirit among the different groups. Have devotional exercises at least once a month. In general, study the needs of the Church and recommend to the Council. The Council is dependent upon the thoughts and ideas of the different groups. Too much has been left to the officers and not enough initiative has been taken by the groups.

2. New Members: There are a number of people in our community who are not affiliated with any Church. A word spoken at the right times may lead some of these people to join some Church. We need not confine ourselves to the Presbyterian faith. What a real service we can do.

3. Men's Bible Class: The officers of this class, as well as the members, should make an especial effort to get the men out. Make our Bible Class so attractive that men will want to come without urging them. As I have already stated, this is one of our main objectives.

4. Comparison: The Woman's Auxiliary organization is formed almost on the same basis as ours. They have: (1) A circle plan working on our group leader plan, and (2) Study of religious books, work in the church, etc. The women are better organized than we are. They are head and shoulders above us. Let us get busy and show the women that we can do things.

Your president wishes to thank every member in the organization for his loyalty and help. Without your aid, we could have done nothing. Your President has not been able to do the things that ought to have been done. This was due partly to work which he is doing in the church.

Finally, my Christian friends, you elect tonight your officers for the coming year. Elect them, not for their faith in the Lord. Elect them prayerfully and carefully. There is a great work to be done and we "must be up and doing."—C. P. Miles, President.

GOOD WORK IN ARMSTRONG MEMORIAL

The men of Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian Church at South Norfolk, Virginia, were organized less than a year ago. Their organization followed a School of Methods put on by Dr. Purcell in the middle of January at the Second Presbyterian Church in Norfolk. This was the second school held in that Presbytery and this organization is only one of a large number that followed that school.

The Men of Armstrong Memorial Church meet regularly every Tuesday evening. They do not always use the Men-of-the-Church Programs, but endeavor to follow the plan as closely as possible. There was a tendency at the beginning of this organization to look upon it too much in the light of mere organization. Mr. A. E. Seiloff, who is president, says, "We now feel that this is all behind us and we have twelve men in our church upon whom we may depend to do definite work willingly, realizing the privilege they have to do something for the Master."

The organization has used the group method and through several months of effort it has done much to acquaint their men with each other and with the work of the organization. The men are better acquainted and happier in their fellowship.

Through regular attendance at mid-week prayer service and the special prayer service prior to an Evangelistic meeting, much has been accomplished in the development of men in public praying. They have frequently met thirty minutes before each service to pray for a blessing and for the success of the meeting. Men who never prayed before, now do not hesitate to pray in public when called upon. Mr. Seiloff says, "If our organization had done nothing more, this alone has been a great blessing."

Another very outstanding piece of work, however, was undertaken for the month of January. Special assignments of the names of the church members were given to selected workers and a thorough canvass made in the interest of placing a Church paper in every home if possible. They set their goal for at least twenty-five new subscribers. A full report is expected of the work and results in this effort at their next monthly meeting.

These men have certainly got a good start in the first ten months of their organization.

IN THE SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA

The achievement of the Assembly's Committee on Men's Work in providing a plan of general usefulness and adaptability to the needs of all kinds of churches is increasingly evident in the reports that come from churches where it is given a real trial.

Sardinia is a country church. Rev. R. Roy Brown is the pastor. The Men-of-the-Church was organized about a year ago with Mr. H. C. Wheeler as president, and a group of willing assistants as chairmen of departments and group leaders. The regular monthly programs are used, a copy being provided for each officer. Encouraging results have been seen in the development of speakers and leaders and in definite service objectives, which have been very helpful to the church. Among these the men determined to provide electric lights for the church and manse, and now the plant is well lighted. An evangelistic club is functioning under the department of Evangelism.

The meetings are held on the first Sunday afternoon of each month. They are short and to the point with a business session at the close. Pastor and men are pleased with the results from the Men-of-the-Church and commend it to other country churches.

Bennettsville is a strong county-seat church. Rev. J. S. Garner is the pastor and is much pleased with the results of the Men-of-the-Church. This church has been organized for quite a while, but did not function successfully until recently when the regular monthly programs began to be used. For several months the programs have been used and found both interesting and instructive. They are the life of the men's work plan.

Only local men have been placed on the programs so far. In November, when the theme was "Christian Stewardship," the meeting was one of the most impressive the men have ever had. The program was strictly followed. The attendance has not been large, but each month shows an increase which is encouraging. No supper meetings have yet been held.

The Bennettsville church has always had quite a large proportion of men who have been active in church work, and now more of them are being enlisted through the service programs. Immediately after the regular monthly meetings definite assignments are given to each, and as a whole the groups have been faithful to the appointed tasks. During the month of December the men centered their activities on the Bible Class attendance.

While all of the men in the church are not actively enlisted in the work of the Men-of-the-Church, more than ever before are giving some of their time and service to the church. The influence of the organization is being felt by the whole male membership. The president of the organization is Mr. J. L. McNair, who is an able and efficient leader.

"Songs for Men"

A very attractive book of praise for use in meetings of men entitled, "Songs For Men," has just been issued under the auspices of the Department of Men's Work and Field Promotion, of the Board of Christian Education in the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. This book is edited by Rev. Calvin W. Laufer, D.D.

Several principles have been kept in mind in making selections for the book. The hymns were those which would appeal to men; the music must be inspiring; the range must be suitable to the voices of men; and the vast majority of the selections must be familiar. The editor seems to have done his work well. As the writer looked over the hymns of the book he kept saying of nearly every hymn, "This is a hymn which I like to sing; and here is another and another."

There are nine Orders of Worship, one for use on nearly every occasion. These are not programs for men but worship services for the devotional period at the beginning of meetings for men.

Another attractive feature is the group of Community Songs with which the book closes. These are largely the old songs which men have loved to sing for generations. A few are to tunes which we learned to sing in recent years.

In addition to these features there is a Brief Statement of the Reformed Faith, the Lord's Prayer, The Ten Commandments, The Apostle's Creed, and Responsive Readings. The hymns are divided under the subjects of Worship and Praise, God, the Father Almighty, Jesus Christ Our Lord, The Holy Spirit, The Christian Life, and Evangelistic Hymns.

This book does not contain any features which are not found elsewhere, but it gathers together in the compass of one book more elements of use in meetings of men than any other which the writer has seen. It should prove of great value to the men of the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. The binding is good and the printing neat. Altogether it is a very attractive book.

The highway of Christian experience cuts at right angles the low ways of life.

We may stuff our brains, cram our stomachs, and still starve. Our souls need sustenance, too.

Time, as an auctioneer, offers opportunities to do good to-day: "Going! Going! Gone!"

The Ministers' Annuity Fund

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

1. What is the Ministers' Annuity Fund of the Presbyterian Church in the United States?

A scientific plan, in accord with modern pension systems, by which a minister may safeguard the period of old age, with benefits for himself in case of disability, and for his family in the event of his death.

2. What is meant by "scientific"?

That the plan is wrought out in accordance with the science of modern pension systems.

3. What is meant by "contributory"?

That the minister himself, according to the best practice in modern pension systems, shall make payments toward his own age annuity.

4. Why ask the minister thus to contribute?

(1) His payment promotes self-respect, since his age annuity is thus in part the result of his own initiative; (2) it expresses his willingness to co-operate with his Church and the whole fellowship in safeguarding his life; (3) regular payments by the member, accumulated at compound interest, are an important element in securing larger benefits for himself and family; (4) it helps bring more system into his personal finances; (5) it safeguards and multiplies his savings.

5. What are the benefits of the Ministers' Annuity Fund?

It contemplates a pension for every worker in the service of the Church (who is eligible according to the definition of service contained in paragraph 22) at retirement at any time on and after the age of sixty-five. This pension will be provided by annual payments equivalent to ten per cent of the salary of the minister, missionary, or other servant of the Church. Two and one-half per cent of this ten per cent is to be paid by the person receiving the salary, and seven and one-half per cent is to be paid by the Church or other organization paying the salary. The minimum pension will be six hundred dollars, based upon thirty-five years of service, and the maximum will be two thousand dollars. It is expected that both these pensions will be increased as soon as the actuaries announce that it is actuarially safe to do so. In addition, it provides disability benefits and provision is also made for the widows and orphans.

6. Who are eligible for membership in the Ministers' Annuity Fund?

All ministers of the Presbyterian Church in the United States who are devoting their lives to the service of the Church under the direction of the Presbyteries; missionaries of the Departments of Home and Foreign Missions of the Church; teachers and administrators of the educational institutions of the Church; and those regularly employed by the other agencies of the Church whose qualifications and types of service are upon a plane similar to that of the ministry.

Ministers of the Church who, with the consent of Presbytery, are serving outside agencies, not classified as of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, are eligible as rendering detached service on a salary basis of $1,200 or on their actual salary basis, to be determined by the Fund.

7. Why not turn this matter over to Life Insurance Companies?

Life insurance does not cover anything like all the features of this plan. The purpose is not to develop an estate at death, but to provide (1) for days of permanent total disability, (2) for retirement at old age, (3) for the widow in case of death, and (4) for the minor children. We have consulted with a large number of the best life insurance companies in America, who state that this is not an insurance proposition. It is in essence a pension plan.

I. THE PENSION

8. What is the basis principle of the Ministers' Annuity Fund?

That, in recognition of sacrificial service, it is the duty of the laity to provide a comfortable life support for the ministers, including those who are retired, in accordance with the teachings of Jesus that "the laborer is worthy of his hire" and the statement of Paul that "they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel;" principles which are embodied in the conviction that the right to a comfortable support inheres in the gospel ministry; a broad, generous recognition of a sacred obligation which applies to all ministers, both active and retired. Money did not and cannot buy this right. The price paid was sacrificial service.

9. What advantage has the new plan over the old?

The great advantage is that the pensions, although modest, are certain, because they have a sound economic basis. The uncertainty which prevails in matters of Ministerial Relief will be substituted by absolute security which is the highest quality a pension system can possess. When it comes to the widow, the certainty of the pension provision is most important, as there are more fluctuations related to the widow's pensions because of their greater longevity and the presence of children in the family.

10. How is the service pension to be calculated?

One-seventieth of the average annual salary multiplied by the number of years in which the full ten per cent has been paid.

11. What is the service pension under the Ministers' Annuity Fund?

A minimum pension of $600 based upon thirty-five years of service, and a maximum pension of $2,000. It is expected that these pensions will be gradually increased above the minimum, and they will be so increased as soon as it is actuarially safe to do so.

12. In figuring retirement allowances, why was one-seventieth chosen?

It was believed that this percentage would result in a fair allowance. It provides half the average salary received during service after thirty-five years' participation. This percentage is in line with the modern and scientific practice in pension building. A higher percentage would cost the minister and church too much; a lower percentage would provide too small an annuity.

13. Who will receive the minimum or the maximum amount of pension?

Some have thought that a man on a small salary would receive a pension of $600 and a man on a large salary a pension of $2,000. This is far from the truth. There are men whose salaries are double and treble the average salary who will never receive the minimum of $600 because they have not years of service enough to qualify for it. There are men on $1,000 salaries who will receive the minimum of $600 and this will represent more than 60 per cent of their average salary during a period of thirty-five years. The man on a small salary is favored by reason of the fact that his payments are small and that he is granted a minimum annuity. We are convinced there will be a leveling up of salaries as there has been in other churches.

14. Why do salaries differ so largely in the Presbyterian Church in the United States?

Salaries are more nearly equal than they appear. Careful study of the facts for twenty-five years convinces us that no minister in the Church is over-paid and that very few actually receive a salary sufficient to fulfill the solemn promise to provide such a sum for their worldly maintenance as will keep them "free from worldly cares and avocations." The specific amount of salary will always and justly vary according to the region in which the minister and his family live, the kind of congregation he serves, the nature of the work he performs, the previous salary level enjoyed, the demands on his sympathy and pocket-book, and other considerations.

14. Is there a health examination on admission to membership?

No.

16. Why not?

Because the pension plan is a group plan, designed to include ultimately the entire ministry of the Church.

17. What is the widow's pension?

One-half of her husband's pension, with a minimum of $300.

18. What is the orphan's pension?

One hundred dollars for each minor orphan up to the age of eighteen or twenty-one, but the total pension paid to the widow and orphans will not exceed the husband's and father's pension.

19. What is meant by disability?

Such as would "totally and permanently" prevent the member from engaging in the duties of a Presbyterian minister.

20. What pension will come to a man who is disabled before the age of sixty-five?

If he is a member of the Ministers' Annuity Fund and is disabled, he will receive a disability pension that at the beginning of the operation of the pension system will be $600, but as the plan develops will be forty per cent of the average salary of the five years preceding disability.

21. Why must a minister be a member for one year before he can claim a disability allowance?

Since there is no health or medical examination on joining the Fund, some lapse of time is necessary for the protection of the Fund. Furthermore, the providing of disability benefits is expensive; many retirement systems require five or ten years' membership before such allowance is permitted.

22. Must monthly participation payments be made during disability retirement?

No. When a member is retired on account of disability, neither he nor the employing church or other agency make monthly payments on his behalf.

23. Why are pensions smaller at the beginning?

Comparatively small pensions must be paid at the commencement of the pension system. The Church designs fairly adequate pensions for the ministers and their families; only in so far as it does this, can it be said to discharge its duty to itself and meet the moral demand of the world. The proposed pensions can scarcely be entitled to this description, although they must be a very considerable help in many cases. But this is a temporary situation, which will remedy itself with increasing rapidity. It is moreover a temporary situation which could not be avoided, and the world, full of imperfections as the world is, recognizes this. An old organization cannot start a pension system on an adequate basis at once, without a sum of money so large as to be impossible to obtain. That a church meets such a situation as well as it can, and that it will ultimately overcome it, satisfies the moral demand.

24. If a member does not retire at sixty-five, does he continue to pay?

Yes, as long as he hold a salary relationship to the church or employing agency. The additional service and payments will provide for him a much larger annuity when he does retire and make much better provision for his family at his death.

25. Would the Department of Ministerial Relief supplement the disability annuity from the Annuity Fund?

This could be expected if the annuity were inadequate for the needs of the member.

26. If a minister were temporarily disabled, could a grant from the funds of Ministerial Relief be expected?

It is a definite principle of the General Assembly not to make regular grants to ministers in active service from the funds of Ministerial Relief. Churches rely upon the Fund for support; serious emergencies grants are made to ministerial active service from the Ministerial Relief Fund.

27. Why may not the minister in years to depend upon the Relief Fund?

One of the chief considerations in the large of the new pension system is that this would usually the load which the churches have been endeavoring to carry through the cause of Ministerial Relief. If, then, ministers and churches do take advantage of these provisions, it is manifestly equitable to anticipate that the Church will meet their negligence.

28. To what use, then, will the Endowment of Ministerial Relief be put?

This will be imperatively needed: (1) to meet emergencies; (2) to supplement provision for disability through the Annuity Fund; (3) to assist families of ministers who die in the earlier years of their ministry; (4) to care for exceptional cases when men come to age without being able to take advantage of the Annuity Fund.

29. How may larger pensions be secured?

The basing of pensions on the salary automatically maintains a ratio which is not affected by the increase or decrease of salaries. To secure larger pensions must be increased. This is a matter of the hand of the local church and the Presbytery. That increases are greatly needed grows more manifest each day. Presbyteries have a solemn duty in this matter. Business men and women must be made to see the sin and folly of withholding a living wage from the servants of the Church.

30. What will a man receive if he pays a certain number of years and then withdraws from the service of the Presbyterian Church U. S.?

He shall be entitled to receive as a withdrawal the entire accumulation of his own payments and one-half per cent of the annual salary, interest.

31. How is the member's account kept?

Wholly separate from all other accounts, as if it were in a savings bank.

32. What advantage to the member is secured by this method?

The member receives an annuity based upon his accumulations to his credit supplemented by credits from the church funds.

33. What advantage is gained for the member by the Fund?

It is a group plan to be maintained by the group of members.

II. THE CHURCH AND THE PLAN

34. What is the part of the Church?

The church or organization employing the minister or missionary is to pay a sum equivalent to one-half per cent of his total salary each year to the Fund. This seven and one-half per cent is in addition to his salary.

35. What does "the total salary" include?

The cash received from the church or other paying organization, plus fifteen per cent of that cash in case a manse is provided.

36. How is this fifteen per cent reckoned?

This will be clear from the following example: Suppose a minister receives a salary of $2,000 a manse. His total salary would be:

Cash	-----
Manse, 15 per cent of $2,000	-----
Total	-----

37. Why is a uniform rate taken?

The Fund cannot enter into the question of the exact value of the free rental of the manse, which is widely variant conditions in different communities.

38. Why should the Church co-operate with the Fund?

The Ministers' Annuity Fund offers a plan which any church may well covet for its pastor, with minimum cost and with maximum security. It provides provision for age or disability and protects the pastor's family in case of the pastor's untimely death. It has the highest commendation of the forefathers. It is sound, scientific, sure in its results.

39. Why should the Church pay any part of the cost?

The plan that the Church shall share in the dues of the pastor is on the ground of social justice. The business world recognizes that a corporation owes those in its service not only the daily wage but a reasonable provision for the later years. The principle the high-minded business men of today consider the safeguard for age, not in any sense a luxury, but a well-advised factor in annual expenditures upon the strongest economic grounds. The years of a minister's strength, with meager provision, without such provision for age, is indeed a tragedy. It has been justly called an "economic crime." The conscience of Christendom has sharply awakened. Practically every church in America is arranging similar plans.

40. How should the Church take action?

Generally, the Session and the Board of Christian Education should indorse the Fund, pending the action of the congregation. A congregational meeting should be called and the united Boards present the recommendation for its adoption. The suggested form of resolution should then be adopted and sent to the headquarters of the Fund, 411 North Building, Louisville, Ky. The resolution is as follows:

(Name of Church or other organization) hereby agrees to participate in the Ministers' Annuity Fund.

of the Presbyterian Church in the United States when put into operation, by paying to the church each year, in monthly installments, a sum equivalent to seven and one-half per cent of the total paid to the minister or minister rendering servper cent in some other way, or else lose credit for the years in which the full ten per cent has not been paid in for him.

55. If a church will not go into this plan, what then?

It will make it impossible for the pastor to enter the Fund, unless he carries the whole burden of the ten per cent, in which case he will not be receiving a pension. It is confidently expected that the churches and ministers will eventually enter 100 per cent.

56. What has been the effect of a Service Pension Plan on the churches that have tried it?

(1) It has helped to a considerable degree to relieve ministers and missionaries of concern about their economic future. (2) It has helped to reduce the annual turn-over and has thus tended to stabilize the ministry. Members of the Fund continue in the work longer than those who are not. (3) It has helped ministers to save money and practice thrift. (4) It has relieved local churches and boards of the problem of providing for their disabled or aged pastors or secretaries and missionaries. (5) It has tended to level up salaries, as attention has been focused on the great need for more adequate provision for those who "bear the burden of the day and the scorching heat."

III. THE MINISTER AND THE PLAN

57. What is the part of the minister?

The minister is to pay two and one-half per cent of his salary into the Fund. This two and one-half per cent, with the church's seven and one-half per cent, makes the 10 per cent payment, which, if continued over the period of future service, will earn the promised retirement annuity on or after attaining the age of sixty-five, and also the other benefits.

58. When should a minister become a member of the Annuity Fund?

If possible, in the year of his ordination, for this permits membership for the maximum number of years. Since the number of years and the salary determine the retirement allowance, the time element is extremely important.

59. Why should a minister's wife be interested in the M. A. F.?

The whole purpose of the Fund is to help ministers and their wives in the event of death, disability, or age. Should the minister meet with a serious accident or incapacitating disease, the disability retirement allowance would surely be appreciated by a wife. In declining years, the regular monthly checks will relieve anxiety. In case of the minister's death, monthly payments continue to the widow and to the minor children.

60. If a member leaves the work of the Church or desires to withdraw, does he get anything back?

Yes, indeed! After making payment to the Fund, every dollar which he has paid will be refunded to him, and after a full year of membership interest will be paid, also.

61. If a man receives a salary of less than $1,200, what would he and his church have to pay?

The minimum yearly payment from any man under the new plan will be $30, and a minimum payment for a church or organization will be $90.

62. Why is this necessary?

Because the plan builds to a service pension of one-half salary with a minimum pension of $600, and because so many Presbyteries and Synods have declared that $1,200 is the minimum salary which any minister within their bounds ought to receive.

63. What is "future service"?

Service rendered after the Ministers' Annuity Fund is put in operation.

64. What is the future service pension?

The pension provided by the payments of ten per cent from the date the plan goes into operation till the minister reaches age sixty-five.

65. What is "prior service"?

It is service rendered before the date of the inauguration of the new plan.

66. Does the plan provide for credit for all this prior service?

No, it does not because it cannot. The amount required to enable the Church to assume such responsibility is so great that it would be an impossible sum to raise.

67. What credit will a man receive for his prior service?

He will receive a prior service pension which will assure him the minimum of $600, provided he enters the new plan within the first year of its operation, and has rendered the required years of service.

68. How will prior pension service be calculated?

The minister in service when the plan starts, upon reaching the age of sixty-five, will receive the amount of future service pension provided by the payments made by himself and his church. If this sum is less than $600, a sufficient amount to bring his pension to $600 per year will be added in recognition of his prior service. Thus every such minister will share in the $3,000,000 fund to be raised to provide for accrued liabilities for prior services to the Church.

69. Will a minister whose future service pension is $600 or over receive anything on account of prior service?

No, he will not, since his future service pension is greater than the minimum.

70. Is a minister in active service and aged sixty-five or over when the M. A. F. is started eligible for membership?

Yes, and would make his two and one-half per cent payments until retirement. He simply could not afford not to come into the plan on account of the provisions for minimum retirement annuities.

IV. THE THREE MILLION DOLLAR FUND

71. What is the $3,000,000 Fund?

It is a Fund which the General Assembly directed be raised in 1930.

72. For what will it be used?

It will be used to meet the accrued liabilities for the prior service of the ministers.

73. Why is such a sum needed?

The Church reached its present financial situation by failing to balance its pension obligations and receipts and allowing its pension debts to accumulate. Hence, today we are trying to pay obligations for services rendered to us and to our fathers or grandfathers, and to pass them on to our children and grandchildren. We are hopelessly embarrassed under our present relief plans and must change our system.

74. Is this an additional endowment of three million dollars?

The three million dollars needed to launch the Ministers' Annuity Fund is in no sense an endowment. Within a term of years every dollar of this will have been paid out in pension benefits. It is to help meet the accrued liabilities for service of ministers rendered prior to the inauguration of the plan. It will be used in meeting the minimum retirement amount guaranteed to every minister alike. All of the ministers of the church will share equally in the benefits of this fund.

75. Will other large sums be needed in the future?

No. It is necessary to provide now, but only once for all, a fund that will perform the function, at least in part, of what would have been the accumulated fund on hand if this plan had been in force during the past years of service of the men now in the ministry. The mere fact that we have been derelict in making this provision earlier does not lessen our obligation to provide for these faithful servants of the Church as well as for those who are just enlisting in the service. They have borne the Church's burden through all those years, and that with no brightening hope for the future until now. This view of the case, the correctness of which seems too obvious for discussion, has been accepted in all the other church pension plans. This sum of money, together with the current annual payments, will be handled, under the principles relating to insurance companies, with every protection as to safety, correct actuarial practice and economic administration.

76. Why must accrued liabilities be met?

Disregard of the accrued liabilities has wrecked many pension systems. If the requisite millions can be found, all will be well; but when a system assumes that the millions have been found, it starts with a vast deficit, and inevitably ends in hopeless bankruptcy. For a few years, like the old-time assessment insurance companies, there may be money in the treasury to pay the pensions as they fall due, but liabilities are piling up faster than assets, and the time, not long delayed, is sure to come when the treasury will be empty, and a long roll of pensioners will be looking for pensions that will never be forthcoming; and the members in active service will have to be informed that the money provided for their pensions has been used up in paying the pensions of their older brethren. Some systems, seeing this situation approaching, by drastic measures reconstructed their pension funds and protected the pensioners. The Episcopal Church forestalled the emergency and today is the outstanding example of wise and scientific handling of these important responsibilities.

77. Who will be benefited by this Fund?

The older men will chiefly benefit by this three million dollar fund. The younger men, with the help of the Church, will provide their own pensions. But the men over fifty will receive a large fraction of this fund. The nearer a man is to sixty-five the more he will receive of it; the nearer he is to sixty-five, the less he himself will pay and the larger the sum which must be set aside to his credit from this accrued liability fund.

78. Will all be treated alike?

It will be of interest to each man to realize that he is being treated just as generously as any other man who co-operates in this plan. No man will receive from the accrued liability fund a larger pension than $600. There have been a few who supposed that out of this three million dollar fund some men would receive $600 and other men as much as $2,000. No man will receive a pension in excess of $600 when the whole of his pension comes out of this accrued liability fund.

79. Will such a plan be accepted by the Church and the ministers and churches?

We believe it will. In eight other Churches in America each principle has been proved in public discussion and the plan has won its way on account of its essential soundness and reasonableness and the greater disadvantages of other methods suggested.

80. When is it proposed to raise the fund?

The year 1930 has been set aside by the General Assembly as a time for securing the money needed to cover the accrued liabilities for prior service of our ministers.

81. What action was taken by the General Assembly in session at Atlanta in May, 1928?

That the Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief lay before the Church the plan for the Ministers' Annuity Fund; the Presbyteries, Churches and agencies, and all the ministers and missionaries be urged to give the full measure of their support to this sane and needed effort to secure proper pensions for the servants of the Church; and that the whole Church make its plans, beginning January 1, 1930, to raise the amount of $3,000,000 required to inaugurate the plan.

is the Church's participation temporary?

The Church is not entering the M. A. F. merely for the benefit of the man who happens to be its pastor at the moment. It is the office that the Fund is to protect. Of course, if the Church fails to enter the plan, it will thus seriously handicap its pastor in his plans for entering the Fund. The individual church, therefore, is adopting the new plan as part of its permanent program, just as the General Assembly made the Ministers' Annuity Fund a permanent program of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

May the Church's percentage be taken from its benevolences?

It would not be. If the church takes the seven and one-half per cent from its benevolence, it will be taking the money from the present pensioners of the Department of Ministerial Relief who are not eligible for membership in the Fund. This, of course, refers to churches which contribute to the Department of Ministerial Relief. If a church, which does not contribute to this Department, takes the seven and one-half per cent from its benevolence, it will be taking it from the other three departments. The seven and one-half per cent is in addition to the churches' regular contribution to the Department of Ministerial Relief.

Will the church always carry this double payment for this cause?

Eventually all that any church will pay will be equal to seven and one-half per cent of the pastor's salary payable to the Annuity Fund. For the present, however, and for some years to come, the Department of Ministerial Relief will need a share of benevolent contributions of the churches in order to care for those ministers or widows and orphans now receiving aid from this department and who are not eligible to participate in the benefits of the Fund, and who must, therefore, apply to this department in their time of need. The number of these will be less and less as the Fund becomes, through its growth, more and more and more effective, so that finally those who will need the aid of the Relief Department can be cared for out of the proceeds of the Annuity Fund of Ministerial Relief.

How shall the Church include the seven and one-half per cent in its financial budget?

The seven and one-half per cent should be placed in the congregational expense budget of the local church along with such items as salaries, light and water, etc.

When should the Church place the seven and one-half per cent in its budget?

It should not definitely be stated when the Fund will be inaugurated, because there is no way of knowing when the conditions will be fulfilled. We would advise the local church to place the seven and one-half per cent in the Budget for January 1, 1931.

When will the payments begin?

The payments by the pastor and the church will begin when the plan is declared operative.

How should the seven and one-half per cent be paid?

Monthly installments, in advance, on the first of each month.

What is a church supporting foreign and home missions, what then?

If a church desires to assist its foreign missionaries and home missionaries to enter the Ministers' Annuity Fund, it will send to the Fund a sum equivalent to seven and one-half per cent of the salary of each pastor, so as to make it possible for them to enter the Fund and receive the benefits therefrom.

How will the seven and one-half per cent be paid, when there are several organizations contributing to the salary of the pastor or missionary?

The organization will pay seven and one-half per cent of an amount equivalent to that part of the salary which it pays.

What is the least amount to be accepted from a church under the new plan?

If two or more churches are paying the salary of a minister, the minimum payment from a church or organization will be $90. This is necessary, because the Presbyteries and Synods have declared that a minister ought to receive. Furthermore, the minimum pension, under the Fund, is $600.

What is the maximum pension?

The maximum pension, under the new plan is $2,000.

Why, then, should a church, paying a large salary, go in, since its pastor may not receive more than $2,000 pension?

It must be remembered that this Ministers' Annuity Fund operates on the group system and that the benefits of each organization and of every minister are supported by the payments of other organizations and ministers. A large church will, therefore, be able to carry the burden, and by its payments, those of its minister, make sure that the smallest minister will receive at least the minimum pension.

If a pastor will not go into the plan, is the church expected to enter?

If its vision is so much clearer than its pastor's, it may see the value of the Fund and provide help by sending its regular payments of seven and one-half per cent.

What should a church do if it should cease payments, what then?

It should, therefore, penalize its pastor and force him to provide for the payment of the seven and one-half

Lesson for April 7th

THE MINISTRY OF ISAIAH

Is. 6:1-13; 7:1-7; 20:1-6; 38:1-22. Print Is. 6:1-8; 20:1-2; 38:1-5.

We begin this week a six months' study of the prophetic teaching and leadership of Judah from Isaiah to the Exile. The aim of the course as formulated by the lesson committee is "to lead the pupils in discovering and appreciating how God, through prophets and other leaders, gave help and guidance to the people Judah, in order that the pupils may come to see the hand of God in their own lives and in all human affairs." Even a slight glance through the lessons arranged will convince one that the course is a rich one. The latter part of Israel's history is not so familiar as the earlier portion, and yet it is here that the religion of the Old Testament reaches its climax. As we study God's dealings with men like Isaiah, Hezekiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Ezra and Nehemiah we shall understand better his dealings with us.

We open our course with a glance at the ministry of Isaiah. Isaiah is generally considered to have been the greatest of all the prophets. We cannot hope to evaluate that ministry in a single lesson. We may be able to discover, however, why it was that God was able to use Isaiah to such a marked degree, and under what conditions He is able to use us in this age. We look first at the call of Isaiah, second at a few selected episodes out of the rich and colorful ministry of Isaiah.

I. The Call of Isaiah—Is. 6:1-13

Read carefully, over and over again, until you are familiar with the scene Is. 6:1-13. When did the incident take place? Where was Isaiah at the time? Describe in your own words the vision that he saw. What is the meaning of the various items, e. g., of the seraphim, and their three pairs of wings? What outstanding aspect of God's character did the vision emphasize? What impression did it make upon Isaiah? What were the results? Read together vs. 3, 5, 7, 8. Is there a logical order of events here? What commission did God give to Isaiah? What is the meaning of vs. 10? of vs 13?

This chapter does not stand at the beginning of the book of Isaiah, and yet it is generally recognized that it describes Isaiah's call to the prophetic office. Dr. Skinner says, "The vision is undoubtedly an actual experience, not the mere embodiment of an idea." We do not mean to suggest that Isaiah saw God with his bodily eyes; it was rather in a prophetic trance, in which the ordinary operations of the mind were suspended and spiritual realities assumed concrete and visible forms. It was in the year that King Uzziah died, i. e., about 740 B. C. Uzziah had been one of the strongest kings that Judah had possessed. He had brought the kingdom to a higher pitch of prosperity than it had known since the days of the division. "Whether the event happened before or after the king's death cannot be determined. It lends an additional interest to the vision if we adopt the latter view, and regard this as the divine answer to the anxious foreboding thoughts which naturally arose in a susceptible mind at the death of a strong and successful ruler. The earthly king had passed away, and now Isaiah sees the true King in His glory." The vision unrolled itself before him while he was in the temple. Probably he was alone, thinking of the needs of his nation, agonizing in prayer before the altar. Then suddenly he passed off into his prophetic trance.

1. The Vision. It seems that God appeared to Isaiah in human form, seated as a King upon a throne, which was suspended in the air. The skirts of His vesture filled the whole temple space, and on these alone, not on the person of Jehovah Isaiah allowed his eyes to rest. The Seraphim were standing about Him in the attitude of service. Nowhere in the Bible do we have a description of the Seraphim. We know that they were winged creatures. We judge that they were human or at least partly human in form. "Their symbolic function in this vision is in the main obvious. They are the attendants of Jehovah's court or the ministers of the invisible sanctuary—perhaps guardians of the threshold, whose office was to repel intruders or (as in vs. 6) to admit the initiated to the presence of deity; they reflect the glory of God, and by their presence and actions suggest new and fuller conceptions of His ineffable majesty." We cannot be quite certain what impression the three pairs of wings were intended to convey. Probably the sense is expressed by the old Jewish Targum: "With two he covered his face that he might not see; and with two he covered his body that he might not be seen." The third pair suggests perhaps his readiness to speed away in the service of the Lord. It is the words of the Seraphim, however, that gives us the point of the vision, the one dominant impression made upon Isaiah. The vision impressed him, and was intended to impress him with the holiness of God. "One cried to another and said, Holy, holy, holy is Jehovah of Hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory." "The general notion of holiness is too complex to be analyzed here. The root idea appears to be that of distance or separation. As a predicate of deity it expresses first of all the awful contrast between the divine and the human, and then those positive attributes of God which constitute true divinity, and call for the religious emotions of awe, reverence and adoration. What Isaiah here receives therefore is a new and overpowering impression of the supreme Godhead of Jehovah; the whole impact of the vision on his mind is concentrated in the word which he hears from the lips of the Seraphim with that of moral purity, it is clear from Isaiah's immediate sense of guilt that ethical perfection is included among the attributes which make up the holiness or Godhead of Jehovah." As the Seraphim called to one another the temple rocked on its foundations, and the house was filled with smoke. The rocking temple and the smoke symbolized the dark side of God's self-manifestation, the reaction of His holy nature against sin. It answered to the rising consciousness of alienation and impurity in the prophet's mind, expressed in the next verse.

2. The Consciousness of Guilt. The first element in Isaiah's experience was an overwhelming sense of God's sovereignty, God's majesty, God's moral purity. This awakening in its turn a deep consciousness of guilt. The prophet was overwhelmed by a sense of his own personal unworthiness, and the unworthiness of his people. He felt that he was cut off by a spiritual defect from participation in the holy mystery which had been revealed to him. He could not join in the praises of the Seraphim because of the uncleanness of his lips, which was the impurity of his whole nature concentrated as it were in the organs of expression. The same vision which brought his own sin to light, revealed to him also the sinfulness of the people among whom he dwelled. They too were a people of unclean lips, unworthy therefore to take the holy name of Jehovah upon their lips.

3. The experience of Pardon and Purification. Isaiah's confession of his guilt led to a symbolic act of forgiveness. One of the Seraphim took a live coal in his hands, and touched it to Isaiah's lips, saying at the same time, "Thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin forgiven." Fire is both a symbol of holiness and an agent of purification. Applied to Isaiah's lips it signifies the removal from the prophet of all in him which is incompatible with the holiness of Jehovah. The whole scene indicates the immediate response of God to the sense of guilt (Lk. 18:14); "It is an act of God's free grace, conditioned by no offering or ritual presentation or moral achievement on the part of Isaiah."

4. The Call. The next step in order is the Call. In order because the purification of his lips fitted Isaiah for personal converse with God, and spiritual sympathy with His purpose. Now then for the first time Isaiah heard the voice of God. And it proved to be a call to service. "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?"

5. The Surrender. Isaiah did not yet know the nature of the service that God had in mind. But whatever it was he was ready to accept it. "Here am I; send me." Those words marked his full surrender to God's will for his life, whatever that will might be, wherever it might lead, whatever it might cost.

6. The Commission. God then gave Isaiah his commission. In brief he was to declare to the people the word of God. At the same time God told him what the effect of his preaching would be. (1) It would increase the spiritual insensibility of the mass of the nation. vs. 9-10; (2) It would continue till the land had been laid waste by a series of exterminating judgments, leaving only a remnant to form the nucleus of the future people of God, vs. 11-13. First, it would increase the spiritual insensibility of the mass of the nation. Vss. 9-10 are ironical of course. God did not wish the people to turn away from His message. Nevertheless he warned Isaiah that they would refuse to heed the words which he spoke. He told him that he could not look forward to a popular ministry. He would not be successful in the eyes of the world. And it is a tribute to Isaiah's consecration to the will of God that he entered upon his career as a prophet with this outcome of his career plainly in mind. Second, it would continue till the land had been laid waste by a series of exterminating judgments. The prophet felt that the nation must respond at last to the divine message. He asked God how long the messages would be rejected. Then God disillusioned him. The message must continue till the nation had been destroyed. But that did not mean that God's purpose was to be frustrated. The last verse is very obscurely translated, but the meaning is plain. "As the terebinth and oak when cut down retain the principle of vitality in their roots, which will again spring up into a great tree, so the ruined Israel contains the indestructible germ of the future kingdom of God." The nation as a whole would be destroyed, but a remnant of the people would cherish the Word of God, and through them the divine purpose would at last be realized. The great life work of Isaiah was to be the gathering and the training of this remnant. He was not a success perhaps in the eyes of the world, but through him God was working out His plans for the universe.

God needs men today just as he needed men in Isaiah's day. What kind of men can he use? We believe that he can only use men perfectly who have had an experience somewhat akin to that of Isaiah. We do not mean to suggest for a moment that any of us must have a vision like that of Isaiah's in its details. As a matter of fact no two men have an experience exactly alike, and prophetic trances do not often occur. But the man whom God can use should have an overwhelming sense of the Divine Sovereignty, the Divine Purity, he should realize his own unworthiness, his moral imperfections in the sight of God; he should have found that pardoning, saving grace of God, that new way opened to us through Jesus Christ;

he should be able to enter into the divine communion, sympathize with the divine purposes, to receive the voice of God as it comes to him, however it may come to him; he should be ready to respond as Isaiah did, "Here am I, send me." The work that God has for us to do is not the same as that he had for Isaiah. But we should be ready to accept it whatever it may be, wherever it may lead, even if it means failure in the eyes of the world. Probably Isaiah feels that God is accomplishing something through him. He would like to accomplish. What is the work, and how may we remedy it? Is it because we do not think enough on God, His sovereignty over the universe, His holiness? Is it because we are well satisfied with ourselves, our moral achievements, because we have taken the standards of men as normal rather than the holier standards of God? Because we have never found the pardon and grace of God in Jesus Christ? Is it because we have never listened to the Divine Voice, or received it when it came? Is it because we have never been willing to surrender ourselves fully to the divine will, we have followed where it was easy to follow, we have held back where it meant loss of popularity, of income, loss of "success?" We are interested in Isaiah's vision because we too have visions, and He can use only those men who follow the

II. The Ministry of Isaiah

The ministry of Isaiah was a long and fruitful one. We glance briefly at just three episodes.

1. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz 7:1-7. This is an interesting one because it marks Isaiah as a practical statesman seeking to shape the destinies of his country by a definite policy urged upon King and his advisers. The great world power of the time was Assyria. This cruel, militaristic nation was marching westward, crushing relentlessly the nations that stood in its way. Under these circumstances Israel (the northern nation, sometimes called Ephraim) and Syria, to the northeast, were drawn into an alliance to withstand the advance of the Assyrian foe. Judah refused to enter the alliance, and Syria then proceeded to march against Judah, intending to overthrow her king, and put in the place of their own in his place who would fit into their own. Ahaz, the King of Judah, preferred to appeal to Assyria for help. He was not wise enough to see that this was a mistake. An alliance with Assyria would prove in the end a disaster to Judah. Moreover it was unnecessary. The nations of Israel and Judah were two tails of smoking brands, i. e., their enterprise was but the last gasp of two expiring torches. Their respective destinies were on their last legs. The threat they held out to Assyria was an empty one. Real interest in a religious one. He was "opposed on religious grounds to all compacts with heathen powers as involving a loyalty to Jehovah and distrust of His power. Isaiah presented itself to him as a test of the mind of the people, of its capacity for exercising fearless trust in Jehovah's word which alone could guide it safely through the complication of the immediate future to the felicity that lay beyond." The great object of this encounter with Assyria was to bring around the king to Isaiah's own attitude of calm reliance on the help of God, and to dissuade him from compromising his position by entering into relations with Assyria." He failed in his purpose, but his prophecy in time was vindicated.

2. Isaiah's Symbolic Message concerning Egypt and Assyria 20:1-7. By this time the Assyrian empire had extended over the whole of Palestine and the surrounding nations. A revolt had sprung up in the old Philistine city of Ashdod. The Assyrian conspirators wished to throw off the Assyrian yoke, relying on the promised help of Egypt and Ethiopia. To prevent this occurrence Isaiah went about the city as a beggar or captive for three years, as a sign of astonishment and derision to the respect of the inhabitants of Jerusalem. At the end of the three years he published this explanation of his strange course: "It was a public protest against the false hopes entertained of a speedy deliverance from the Assyrian tyranny through the help of Egypt and Ethiopia. These nations would go into captivity with the same garb he had worn for the last three years."

3. Isaiah's cure of Hezekiah 38:1-22. Hezekiah was one of the best kings that Judah ever had. During the most of his reign he had leaned heavily upon Isaiah for advice. The time came when Isaiah had to announce to him that the time had come for him to die—he would not recover from his illness. Hezekiah did not accept the words as final. He pleaded earnestly to God that his life might be spared. Isaiah returned and announced that God would spare him for 15 more years, and that in addition would save Jerusalem from spoliation by the Babylonians. In II Kings 20 we read that the king was given a sign. Isaiah allowed him to choose between going forward, or a going backward of the shadow of the day. The shadow could be seen through the sick man's window on the "Steps of Hezekiah." Hezekiah chose the going back of the shadow, and according to the story it went back ten steps. According to Isaiah's directions the sign of figs was then applied, and the king recovered.

These episodes from the life of Isaiah, chosen most at random, make us think of the prophet. What sort of person will he be, and what will he do? Isaiah was intensely interested in the political and social problems (which he saw rightly were also moral problems) of his day. What part should the individual Christian take in the church, the individual Christian take in the Christian principles to problems of state? What attitude would he take toward Prohibition, the Pact to Outlaw War, the Construction of the Panama Canal, the entrance of America into the World Cou-

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING—WILMINGTON PRESBYTERY

The annual meeting of the Presbyterian Young People of the Wilmington Presbytery will be held at the First Presbyterian Church of Wilmington on Saturday the twenty-seventh of April. All young people are urged to be present.

PERSONAL

We are sure the sympathies of the Church will be with Mrs. E. L. Russell, in the death of her mother, Mrs. Jane Tarleton Billips, who passed from this earth, March 11, 1929.

Mrs. Russell, by her work in every part of the Church is not only widely known, but beloved.

NORTH CAROLINA

Mecklenburg Presbytery — Rev. J. M. Walker, whose congregation at Steel Creek is to entertain Presbytery on April 9, beginning at 8 p. m., desires to announce to all who expect to attend that Parks Brown is the chairman of the reception committee and he will be glad to get in touch with all who wish accommodations out to the Church which is ten miles from Charlotte. Mr. Brown may be found at the Commercial Bank Building, first suite on the second floor, No. 200. His office will be the bureau of information as to routes to the Church. His telephone number is Hemlock 3278. He will also provide transportation for all who arrive on trains or buses so that they may get from the city to the Church. Mr. Brown hopes all who expect to use the facilities he can provide will write him so he may know how many to arrange for to transport them out to the Church. He also will be glad to answer all inquiries as to the Presbytery's meeting, insofar as the entertainment is concerned.

Laurinburg—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church held its annual March meeting Monday afternoon, closing the Church year of 1928-1929. After the formal opening of the meeting Mrs. M. J. McGuire expressed the appreciation of the Auxiliary for the fine work of its president, Mrs. G. F. Avenger, who has so willingly and capably led the organization in the most successful year of its history.

Mrs. D. C. McNeill, treasurer, gave her report, which showed total contributions for the year of $5,966, and increase of $2,329 over the preceding year and an increase of $716 over any previous year since the organization of the Auxiliary in 1920. The sum given to the Sunday school building fund amounted to $2,000 and to Foreign Missions, $927.

The secretaries of the different causes and the circle leaders made their reports. Circle No. 6 was the banner circle for the year, having had the largest attendance at circle and auxiliary meetings. $25 was awarded this circle and was included in its contributions for the year.

Rev. A. R. McQueen gave a most inspiring talk which was a challenge to service. Rev. Carl B. Craig had charge of the installation of the new Auxiliary officers. They are: Mrs. Peter McLean, president; Mrs. M. J. McGuire, vice-president; Mrs. Quinn Covington, secretary; Mrs. D. C. McNeill, treasurer.

The total attendance was 90. The average attendance at the meetings for the year was 79.

Rev. A. R. McQueen held a meeting here last week in our Church, which was well attended, and much interest shown. The congregations enjoyed the strong gospel sermons. Fuller reports of the meeting will published.

Rock Branch Church, Fayetteville Presbytery—We have lately held a good meeting at Rock Branch Church, Fayetteville Presbytery. Rev. A. T. Lassiter, Synod's Evangelist, did the preaching. Good congregations attended all the services and toward the latter part of the meeting the Church was crowded to almost overflowing. The people heard our brother with eager earnestness, and the preaching of the simple gospel truth was with power and good effect. Eight young people united with the Rock Branch Church, at least fifty re-consecrated themselves, fifty promised to pray and read the Bible every day, and, we believe, there was a sincere purpose to live better Christian lives on the part of many. A contribution of $77.00 was made to Synodical Home Missions by this little Church at the close of the meeting. There were no high pressure methods. Bro. Lassiter is doing a great work for the great cause he represents and is accomplishing much in the fine service he renders. The people where he goes want him back again. We thank God for the service of such an earnest, hard-working servant, and bid him God-speed in his noble work.

Charlotte—The Ministerial Union arranged special union services this week. Beginning Monday and continuing through Thursday there was a noon service in the Second Presbyterian Church, starting at 12:05 and concluding promptly at 12:35. The speaker at these services was Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

On Friday there was a three-hour service, from 12 m. to 3.00 p. m. These hours, of course, are those during which our Lord bore our sins on the cross. This service was held in the First Methodist Church, all denominations participating.

Caldwell Memorial—We had the privilege of having Dr. E. R. Kellersberger, of Bibanga Station, in Belge Congo, Africa, who spoke at the morning service, March 24. Dr. Kellersberger went as a medical missionary to the foreign field, but on a furlough to America was ordained to the Gospel ministry by the Presbytery of Upper Missouri. He has been greatly blessed of God not only in treating the bodies, but especially ministering to the souls of thousands of the natives. An untiring worker and efficient doctor and an effective preacher, as well as a zealous personal worker. He is one of the most effective missionaries sent out by our Presbyterian Church. He is a warm personal friend of the pastor who took peculiar pleasure in presenting him to this Church. He went to Lincolnton, N. C., for the evening service.

Flora Macdonald College—Friends and students of Flora Macdonald College were given a rare treat Thursday night, March 14th, when the School of Music, sponsored by the Rotary Club of Red Springs, N. C., presented a delightful program from Station WBT, Charlotte. Before the program was even nearly over, radio listeners in the city telephoned the station that the program was being enjoyed and coming in clearly. In and around Red Springs the static was very bad, yet many messages have been received from distant points thanking the college for the splendid program.

Taking advantage of the opportunity to show his interest in Flora Macdonald College and his personal friendship for Dr. C. G. Vardell, Mr. Parker, of Parker-Gardner Co., Charlotte, gave a five course dinner in the main dining room of the Hotel Charlotte, previous to the broadcast, in compliment to the sixteen young ladies, who represented Flora Macdonald College on this program, and other friends, numbering twenty-eight in all.

The table was beautifully decorated in yellow tulips and each girl received a corsage of pink roses, a gift of Mr. Parker.

Dr. Vardell, in behalf of the college, thanked Mr. Parker for his kindness, and in his inimitable manner reminded him of the many years of friendship that had existed between them.

It was a most enjoyable occasion.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Spartanburg, Second Church—The spring revival in our Church has started ahead of time. It is scheduled to begin Easter, but yesterday morning three united with the Church at the close of the morning service, and at the close of the evening service six more united. This was just two weeks before the revival is scheduled.

For the past two months the officers of the Church have been making a canvass every Sunday afternoon visiting those who are not attending any Church and inviting them to services in an effort to fill the Church. As a result the Church is pretty well filled at both the morning and the evening services.

The pastor, the Rev. John D. Henderson, at the request of the session, is to do the preaching in the revival. He has a wonderful hold in the people of the northern section of the city and the session felt that he was the man to do the preaching, and after considering the matter for a time, he consented. He has the entire congregation behind him in the effort.

"Gift Day" was observed on March 10 with the result that the budget was subscribed with the exception of the amount of interest the Church is paying on the indebtedness. Yesterday the officers called on about 35 who did not come to the Church and make their pledges. The budget carries interest on the Church debt of $1,890 a year. The congregation is carrying 270 shares of building and loan beside the budget.

Officers of the Men-of-the-Church and of the Auxiliary are to be installed at a joint meeting tonight. The event will be a social occasion.

S. F. Parrott.

Due West—One of the most inspiring addresses delivered in Due West in recent months was that of Dr. C. H. Nabers of Pensacola, Fla. Dr. Nabers took "Leadership" as his subject. He treated it in a charming way, fresh, eloquent, inspiring. It was delivered without manuscript, with freedom and forcefulness. It addressed mainly to young people. There were no moments in the address. Dr. Nabers marshalled personalities and high achievements and held them as worthy examples to the young people before him in order that they might be inspired thereby to a leadership in a world that sorely needs worthwhile leadership today.

Dr. Nabers was accompanied by Dr. J. W. Jacks of the Presbyterian Church of Greenwood. They were guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Grier while here. Nabers came by from Pittsburgh, where he had as a member of the committee on union with the Southern Presbyterians and The United Presbyterians, delivered this address as one of the series to college students. Dr. Snyder of Wofford college delivered one of his addresses here a short time ago. They are very constructive.

APPALACHIA

Morristown, Tenn.—The congregation of the Presbyterian Church of Morristown pledged itself Sunday to the support of Mr. C. C. Knight of Brazil, to the same extent to which it had been supporting Rev. S. R. Gammon, now deceased.

Mr. Knight is Dr. Gammon's successor as the head of the Boy's School at the East Brazil Mission, Brazil.

This Church already has in addition the support of Lillian Wells, North Kiangu Mission, Hwaiianfu, also two native African workers and a part of the Lersberger Fund.

Our Church just closed its annual revival, the Dr. S. H. Hay, preaching, with twenty additions to the Church.

The Presbytery of Holston will meet in its spring session in the First Presbyterian Church, Son City, Tennessee, at 4:00 p. m., Monday, April 1, 1929. The Presbytery of Holston, U. S. A., will meet at the same time and place, and all open meetings of two Presbyteries will be union meetings.

ARKANSAS

Fort Smith—History was made at First Church the week of February 25 to March 1, for one thousand was held the fifth annual Standard Teacher Training School. Eighty-six people attended at least one full class period; several others attended one or two of the worship services, and thirty persons received certificates. When one looks at the names of the graduates who received credit one is thrilled, for among them are 14 mothers, two fathers, nineteen Church school teachers, five departmental Church School Superintendents, Senior Christian Endeavor officers, and two adult officers. An outstanding group of leaders! Eighty-three of the thirty received their first Standard Teacher Training Certificate and all thirty have resolved to get diplomas as soon as possible. Four of them entered Methodist School three days after our school closed. Of the four had already received two credits this year.

Just a few of the plans which helped to make this year such a glorious success. First the Telling Class was held from two to four o'clock afternoon. Mothers of small children were thus enabled to attend the school who could not be away from home at night. Most of the teachers in the Cradle Roll and Primary departments are young mothers, the twenty-eight who took the course, fifteen were mothers, and of the sixteen who received credit, nine mothers.

Since no specialization units for departments were offered this year, the worship services both afternoon and evening were planned to meet this need. The morning day's programs and the closing afternoon's programs were general consecration services which were led by the dean; but on Tuesday afternoon there was a Bible service, in the evening a Senior Service; one Wednesday afternoon a Primary and in the evening an Intermediate service; on Thursday afternoon two birthday services, one for a Beginner or Primary girl and one for a Junior boy; on Friday night, Harry Robinson, Jr., president of the Washburn Presbytery's Young People's League, led a model Young People's Service. The services gave a chance for all the instructors to be before the school.

On the opening night the Department of Christian Life for Youth which includes the Intermediate, Junior and Young People's Departments of the Church and the Christian Endeavor Societies for these departments, gave a banquet in honor of the Training School teachers, all of whom are connected very definitely with young people's work. All persons who attended the school were invited to the banquet. (Plates were provided.) This created a social atmosphere before the school opened, and also gave opportunity for organization of classes.

Several simple social affairs were given during the week to enable everybody to know each other and particularly the teachers of the school. The Church held an informal reception following the first evening class periods; the Beginner and Primary departments entertained at a luncheon at one of the tea rooms in honor of the women instructors on Tuesday; Mrs. Deitsch Barton, entertained the faculty one afternoon and the Woman's Auxiliary gave an informal tea last afternoon. These social functions added much to the success of the school.

Then each evening between class periods, Mrs. Deitsch Barton, former Secretary of Young People's Work and Pastor's Assistant in our Church, who has her own home in Fort Smith, conducted a recreation period. This relaxation period was invaluable.

Commencement was held at nine o'clock the last recognition of the awards was also made during Church service March third.

Department award for the highest per cent of officers receiving credit in the school was the Cradle Roll—Beginner Department, Mrs. W. Fleeter and Mrs. T. C. Fleeman, Superintendents. Department will receive a picture which they will themselves. This department had 71.3 per are wanting to know who taught in our school. Most important and is left for the last. Dr. R. E. pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Arkansas, taught "The Life of Christ" (Study); Mr. W. K. Spilman, Director of Religion for the Synod of Arkansas, taught "In Worship and the Devotional Life"; Miss E. of Fort Worth, Texas, taught "Story Tell—our own Emma Deitsch Barton taught "Social Leadership."

Frank P. Anderson, pastor of the Church, was of the Board of Directors and Miss Mamie Director of Religious Education, was Dean.

GEORGIA

Friday, March 15, marked the close of most enthusiastic and valuable experience that has had in months.

Monday evening March 11, a Standard Training School opened with an attendance of fifty men and women. These officers, teachers, departmental superintendents and rested in religious education, represented the Associate Reform Presbyterian and Southern Church of Newton County.

Following standard courses were given: Teaching the Old Testament (Psalms) taught by Dr. Mark of Columbia Theological Seminary; Organization and Administration of the Church School Miss Sarah Lee Vinson; Principles of Teaching by Dr. Wm. Huck of Atlanta.

Interest, attention and enthusiasm of the first night lit by night until it reached its climax in the evening. Approximately thirty requirements of attendance and written assignments will receive their certificates at their re-union Schools Sunday, March 24.

There should be more of such schools in our small rural sections as there are in our larger cities. Here our Churches would be better equipped to responsibility that they have been neglecting, extent, in the past. We owe it to our young people to give them the best methods and advantages possible would train them for future leadership in the world.

They had the privilege of attending the Standard School wish to express their appreciation to taught in it.

It is full of entertaining information about church music and its development in the church in the Bible times to our own day. Its reverent of hymnody, with frequent illustration by reference to grand old hymns and tunes which have been with the development of the church and most of souls, arouses the deepest emotions of gratitude and praise as the mind recalls the music which has been its own heritage too precious to part with.

"Behind the Scenes"—It is said that Dr. S. H. Chester has lifted the curtain and given the whole Church a "peep" in to its own official efforts to Christianize the world. Several years ago there was sent out over the Church a chart with the simple request that it be posted where it would be seen. These were the conspicuous words of the poster: "If the people knew, they would do." Dr. Chester has endeavored to let them know what goes on in their own foreign mission office. It should be very convincing and assure the Church that its Foreign Mission Department is a big thing, deals with big problems, and in a big way, out of high and holy motives.

The Church needs just such information right NOW to steady its faith and to encourage it to lay out its full strength. Our task is great, our methods are wise and sound, our fruits are abundant, and we may safely commit ourselves and our all to God and go straight forward. If you don't believe it, read, "Behind the Scenes." Send to the Foreign Mission Committee, Box 330, Nashville, Tenn., and get a copy. Pastor take your men clear through it and you will find some men's questions and men's problems to discuss.

"The Book in the Light of its Books," by William Ray Dobyns, D.D., LL.D. Fleming H. Revell Company. 188 pp. $1.75.

It was my good fortune to read "The Book in the Light of Its Books" in manuscript. I was profoundly impressed with the importance of it for the reading public of our generation. It gripped me as few books have done, and I predicted for it wide acceptance. The style is simple and pleasing which commends it to the reader of average literary appreciation, its message is challenging and arresting to the student of Biblical literature.

Doctor Dobyns writes with a certitude which is very refreshing, and while all of us may not agree with some details of his discussion we cannot but be impressed with his mastery of the subject, and the value of the volume for those who would know the Bible as it reveals its own truths to us.

"The Riddle of Life"—Neville S. Talbot, D.D., Bishop of Pretoria, South Africa. Longman Green & Co., New York. Price $1.00.

Bishop Talbot lost his wife soon on their arrival at his field in Africa, and writes this book out of an heart of anguish. It is a reverent spiritual, incisive study of the problem of evil, and the author turns at last to Jesus Christ for the only answer to the riddle of life.

The books replete with strong and beautiful sentiments, and abounds in much illustrative material derived from history and literature. The quotations are very instructive as well as the body of the author's opinions.

The book will be suggestive to ministers and illuminating to all who seek the solution to the mystery of pain.

"Administering God's Gifts," by George Louis Rinkliff, the United Lutheran Press, Philadelphia. 50 cents. This is a most readable book of 100 pages in which the deeper phases of the stewardship of life and life's realities are discussed in five chapters. It is suitable for a study book in summer conferences and will throw new light on this great principle of stewardship. Dr. Rinkliff after his first chapter on the meaning of stewardship talks of the stewardship of success, the stewardship of the Church as an organization, the stewardship of money and the stewardship of love. He warns us against overlooking the chief purpose of our stewardship as Christians,—the promotion of the Gospel of love. He presents the truth that we are not only stewards of something but that we are also stewards for something.

The Church Year is Nearing Its

PRESBYTERIANS SHOULD PAY UP

Rev. W. M. Anderson, D.D.

1. Because of the need. We have never faced a more compelling challenge than this one. At home and abroad compelling needs call us. Mountain work, medical missions, ministerial relief, young people, evangelism—our hearts are filled with the pressing anxiety of the needs.

2. Because of our name. We have the reputation of doing what we promise. Our good name is at stake. Shall Presbyterians present to the other denominations the sad spectacle of failure to pay? We have never been without pride. Presbyterians pay their obligations.

2. Because it is right. We have set our hands to great tasks. Large undertakings demand large support. We are committed to our work. We do not face a debate. We face a duty. Not to pay up is wrong. To pay up is simply right.

4. Because of the honor of our Lord. What we do reflects upon Him. How we do gives some indication of our regard for Him. Presbyterians will pay for His sake. Pay now. Pay all. Pay up.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

The new catalogue which has just recently come out shows something of the ideals of the General Assembly's Training School. Our experience has taught us that there is a demand for three strong departments in the Training School; The Department of English Bible. The Department of Religious Education, and The Department of Missions. The new catalogue shows that each of these departments has been greatly strengthened. If you will take the pains to study the curriculum in each of these departments, you will probably be surprised to see how rich and full it is. There is no longer any reason why young people of our Church should go to institutions outside of our church, and maybe out of sympathy with our church, to take courses in any of these three great departments. The catalogue also shows that elective courses and graduate courses are being added to the curriculum.

It was necessary to enlarge our curriculum and necessary to add graduate work in order to give our students the training which they need and which they will seek outside the church if they cannot find it inside. You can readily see that the enlargement of our curriculum calls for a large budget for current expenses.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

When the General Assembly directed the Executive Committee of Christian Education in Louisville to have a survey of schools and colleges made last year, Dr. W. O. Thompson, for twenty-five years president of the University of Ohio, was secured to make the survey of our Theological Seminaries and of the General Assembly's Training School. Here is a part of what Dr. Thompson says about the Training School in his survey:

"A visit to this institution for the education and training of lay workers for the church cannot fail to bring a glow of enthusiasm to the visitor. Just across the way from the campus of the Union Theological Seminary, situated on ample and beautiful grounds, the Assembly's Training School finds itself admirably located for an important service to the church. The buildings already provided are of the best modern construction, with intelligent consideration of the services to be rendered. The living facilities, including an up-to-date equipment of kitchen and dining room, are entirely satisfying to the most critical observer. The assembly room is adequate and a very satisfactory auditorium. The class rooms are well equipped. There is a modest but well-selected library. From the standpoint of location, there could be nothing but warm approval. From the standpoint of the physical equipment, the church is to be congratulated upon the opportunity afforded.

"There is abundant reason for the confidence of the church in the management of the Training School and in the type of education and instruction given. This type of institution should greatly assist in providing lay workers whose courses of study, whose point of view, and whose intelligent loyalty to the church would be of great value to the present day pastor and the Christian social service so much needed in our great city centers."

WE CAN'T FAIL

L. H. Lancaster

Following March 31 the news from the home land most eagerly sought by the missionary is the report of Mr. Willis on the year's gifts of the church. Sometimes a cable brings the news, but more frequently we await the church papers, which in this particular mail are operated even before the home letters.

What has been done? Why can't the church see the need? Why is there so little realization of what it means to have appropriations cut?

Christ has graciously made it possible for all His followers to share in the work of His Kingdom through their gifts. When these gifts fail, by just that much is His work retarded. For then schools must be closed or reduced, boys and girls cannot be aided in their efforts to get an education, the sick and suffering must be turned away from hospitals for lack of medicine and equipment, preachers and Bible women cannot be sent out, and needed missionary recruits are not supplied.

On the other hand there have been times like last year, when a report from Mr. Willis has occasioned rejoicing and prayer meetings of thanksgiving—praise to God for the loyalty of His people, for their gifts to His work, and for what can be done through these gifts.

May God grant that this year too may be a year of fuller consecration and of greater progress—a year in which every member will pay in full his privileged share pledged in the Every Member Canvass.

We can't fail Him.

MUTOTO'S HILARIOUS GIVING

If as Paul says, "The Lord loveth a hilarious giver," how dear to him must be the Christians at Mutoto, Africa. Their self-denial offering and Every Member Canvass was a hilarious occasion.

And because it was a joyful occasion, because the gifts truly represented their love for God, Mutoto, has set an example in giving which should thrill every lover of Foreign Missions, and challenge every Christian, every church, and every Presbytery in America to equal their record.

Their local goal for 1928-29 was 10,000 francs. At the end of December with only four months to go they were 8,000 francs short of the goal. (So far this might be in America.) The outlook was dark. Villages had been disorganized by having to move their sites. Christians were scattered.

But the responsibility was placed upon the session. They went to work. And they certainly did work!

They divided the village, Kankalenge, into sections, placed a superintendent over each section and a sheet of paper in his hands, telling him to canvass every person in his section and report the results. They really divided by "Beku," the family tribes. In some instances only two or three were in a "Diku" (Every Member Canvass) and in one instance there was only one man. By Christmas Eve they had collected about all the offerings expected. I doubt if there was a person in Kankalenge who refused to give something. The cooks and personal boys were all full of it and could hardly do their work for telling about the expectations.

There was a union service in Kankalenge. There was a sermon and the Bible School students sang two lovely Christmas songs. After the service the report of the offering was called for and as each section reported it was written on the board in full view of every one. Can you imagine that splendid roll call? Kankalenge. Kanyonyu, Nbote, Muyemble, Basanga, Tshiombe, on and on, church after church, outstation after outstation, reporting!

What was the result? A total of 8711.85 francs was received in this one offering. The entire gift of these churches for the whole year of 1927-28 was only 3747.25 francs. In one self-denial offering these local folks exceeded the offerings for the entire year of 1927!

The local goal for 1928-29 of francs 10,000. To December 31 they had given 10,970.20, with still three months to go.

Writes Rev. R. D. Bedinger who was an eye witness:

"I do wish you could have been here to see the enthusiasm when the total sums were added up. It was thrilling. I have never seen such happiness. Just as we were about to dismiss, here came the chief, Kabanza, running as hard as he could, right into the shed, and up to the pulpit, with his right hand held aloft clutching a bag of money. The perspiration was streaming down his face, and his shirt was wringing wet. He cried out, 'Hold on, here's our offerings, count it in!' I will never forget the eagerness and joy on his face. His is one of the disorganized villages, and the people are rebuilding, most of them living in temporary grass huts until they can build more permanently.

"At the Morrison Bible School they had built a half dozen palm branch sheds, 'bisambasamba,' and were congregated in them eating goats they had killed in celebration of the glorious offering. Faces were beaming. The Boys' Home alone gave 230 francs, and the Girls' 40. This inspired the Bible students and they went to work. They said each class must at least equal what the Boys' Home gave, and they did. In Kankalenge the boys and girls were dancing and playing other games, all radiant. I stepped into Elder Samba's grass hut—his house burned two months ago and he is having a time getting it replaced. Every one was supremely happy. One fellow took off his new galatea coat and gave it to the offering. Another gave his Sunday breeches, galatea, that he had just bought for 50 francs, almost two months' salary. There was real self-denial giving."

The end of the Church year is upon our Southern Presbyterian Church in America. May it be a joyful occasion for every church here. It will be, if they catch the vision which our Mutoto brethren have caught of the joy of sacrificial giving and the blessing which from duty faithfully performed.

THE MASTER'S MARCHING ORDER

Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

The marching orders to the Church are simple direct: "Go ye into all the world," "Disciple all nations," "Preach the gospel to every creature." That it been said:—

"Obeying, the Church and its people may be Christian; disregarding that supreme command, if they may be called, they cannot claim the name who inquired, 'Why call Me Lord, and do not the which I say?' Missions are the supreme business of the Church. It is the supreme business of any person who calls himself a Christian. In this crusade to make Christ reign in every nook and corner of this world we can do nothing back. It demands the utmost sacrifice of our treasure."

For this supreme cause and all the other vital that constitute our Church's complete budget let us be best by prayer, by sacrifice, by heroic giving. Shut out the conveniences, the comforts, the luxuries which tempt the average Church member enjoys be swift witnesses for Christ at the bar of God in proof of what he might do for the advancement of his Saviour's Kingdom.

It is as true now as it was in Jerusalem that Jesus over against the treasury and beholds how the people are using their money therein.

It is also as true now as it was in Galilee that Jesus of love is upon each of His disciples and to each saying, "Lovest thou Me?"

LEST WE NEGLECT

Rev. J. W. Skinner, D.D.

It avails naught to cry "All's well" when all is well. He who will examine the Church curve in England and Home Missions will find small nourishment in Church pride or spiritual exultation. It reveals a declining number of people won to Church membership, a decreasing revenues for our exclusive evangelistic agency, the General Assembly's Executive Committee of Missions.

In some spots the Church has touched high water marks. Most Church houses are beautiful and of ample capacity for attendants. The homes of Church members rank the choicest in every community. The people have subscribed $12,000,000 to enlarge our A grade Churches. Our pastors receive record salaries for pre-Young lives are offered for service until our Extension agencies have passed the saturation point. The Church has touched some "high water marks."

And yet . . . and yet . . . and yet! Deduct those entering Church membership from Sunday School and there remains only a handful from the outside multitudes. Examine the treasury of our chief evangelistic agency—Home Missions. Empty and harassed with large overdrafts. There is something wrong in the Church.

Some would locate the trouble outside and in the extravagant customs of society and the rampant wickedness in city life. But there is nothing new in the world of sin. People are selfish and sordid and bad smash the laws of God and man. They are jealous, envious. They covet and lie and hate and steal and murder. But none of these things are new. Evolution has slipped a cog. There are forty centuries of the monotonous repetition of the history of sin.

Such conditions existed when Jesus came to the world. The supreme mission of His Church is to tackle these conditions and produce a change. The mad whirl in the outside world is nothing to daunt a Christian. He cannot explain the apathy of the Church. The head of those who love the Saviour is caused by conditions within the Church. The trouble is in our own hearts. There is something missing.

Have men forgotten other days? There have been days of joy and buoyance and spiritual fervor. They were days of Evangelism, of Home Missionary activity. A forgotten of the pit from whence we were digged, the presence of the Home Missionary illumines every page of American history. Each mile of territory reclaimed, every development undertaken, found a Home Missionary in the thickest of the fray.

A Home Missionary prevented Daniel Webster from bartering our Northwest territory for a mess of pottage. A Home Missionary helped make Alabama a cold storage plant of meat for the hungry. Home Missionaries serve in the shadows of the Alabama smelter in the tophet of Virginia mines, and follow the creeks and trails in the highlands of Kentucky, Tennessee and the Carolinas.

From the ports of entry on the seaboard and the along the tortuous windings of the Rio Grande; through the alkali plains and the wind swept lands to the handle, where things are in making and men are rough, where God would be forgotten, goes the herald of salvation with the story of the Cross.

And yet . . . and yet . . . and yet! The Executive Committee of Home Missions faces an empty barrel—not even one handful of meal! It portends an order to "Retreat?" Home Missionaries do not sing that dirge. Our backs are against the wall. We do not believe that the great, loving, loyal Presbyterian Church desires us to retreat. We are waiting and expecting to hear an awakened and Spirit-endowed shout to all Home Mission agencies "prepare to advance." Kingsville, Texas.

Old Ford is ready to die," writes one of the great helpers who distribute the Scriptures for the American Bible Society in many lands. He has driven Ford 150,000 miles visiting regularly the home territory totaling 36,000 square miles. He speaks a dozen languages and has distributed Scriptures in many tongues.

Two days," writes another worker, "I have been in these Great Smoky Mountains travelling from house to house giving the books you sent me to those who have none. This territory is so extensive much of it has never been gone over but once. I find hundreds of people who know nothing about Jesus."

In Bangkok one of the Society's native workers was surprised by a man when he learned that the man was Siamese as well as English and American. He supposed it exclusively foreign until given a copy of the Bible written in a language which he could understand.

A porteur of the Society in the Argentine sold a copy of the Bible to an elderly man after informing him that it was the message of God with God's message of salvation through the old man seemed very glad to get the Bible. He remarked significantly: "It has taken you a long time to get me with this good news." And this occurred thirty years of portage work and of constant travel to the main railroad station of the old man's town. He still has many homes in the Argentine which the message has not reached.

A porteur entering a small town in northern Argentina found lodging at a certain dwelling. The response brought the man of the house who after inquiry very abruptly said to him: "No." The porteur, turned away, hesitatingly said: "Sir, I will give you a Bible for a bed." The statement seemed to amuse the man and he invited him in. Then he accepted the Bible and on the following morning gave the porteur a breakfast thanking him for the Bible and that before he went to bed the night before he had with gratification in the tenth chapter of St. Paul's letter: "And in whatsoever city and town ye shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy, and there abide till ye be sent forth."

When serving with the Board of National Missions the Presbyterian Church is doing her bit far from the "back woods" where she has gone at the call of the Lord. She writes: "I find that few of the people in these parts have Bibles in the homes and none for the children. Last week I organized Sunday School. Last week I visited the community where they had not had a religious service of any kind for six months."

A little Indian boy on a reservation in New Mexico received through the National Mission Board a copy of the Bible. He wrote to the officers of the American Bible Society expressing his gratitude for the gift. In his letter he said: "I am reading my Testament every day and it is helping me to be more like Jesus. Putting the Bible within the reach of all without regard to age or race so that its readers are enabled to become like the Lord Christ is the Bible's greatest work at its best."

One-half tons was the weight of the first shipment of Bibles, Testaments and Portions sent to Latin America a few weeks ago by the American Bible Society. The fifty-one boxes comprising this shipment contained 2,460 Bibles, 4,410 Testaments and 8,606 Portions of 15,476 volumes of Scriptures.

In 1929 the agency secretary in Rio de Janeiro made additional shipments as these boxes contain less than half the Testaments and about one-third of the Portions of the number of Portions to be distributed within the year. On the same day this shipment left New York City twenty-five boxes containing 37,000 volumes of Scriptures were shipped to Cristobal for distribution in Central America, Canal Zone, Venezuela and the upper part of South America.

Shipments will be made to other cities in Latin America throughout 1929 for besides Rio de Janeiro the American Bible Society has points for Bible distribution in many cities. The main agencies are at Havana, Santiago, Cristobal, Lima, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires. During 1928 these agencies put 675,651 copies of Scriptures into circulation.

In 1928 the American Bible Society issued over 1,000,000 volumes of Scriptures in 182 different languages. This colossal figure is a decided advance over 1927 which in turn was a record breaking one. For successive years the number of volumes distributed has been greater than that of the previous year. The following commentary upon the decline of the distribution of Scriptures!

AS ONE WHO SERVES

Henry H. Sweets, Secretary

The great Head of the Church, our leader and example, "took upon Himself the form of a servant," and declared, "I am among you as He that serveth." The purpose of the Church is not to build up some great organization. The Master says "as the Father has sent me even so send I you." As the Church catches the mind and spirit of the Master it will bring the world to Him and unite His followers in life and worship and service so that His Church may go on conquering and to conquer. The Department of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief is a Service Department. We are serving the young people in helping them to discover God's plan for their personal lives. We are serving the candidates for the ministry and mission service in guiding them in their education and assisting the needy ones in a financial way. We are serving our schools and colleges and seminaries in helping to interest the Church in them and secure the right students for them. We are helping the young people, through the Student Loan Fund, to get a higher education in these institutions. We are helping the other agencies of the Church in recruiting and training suitable workers for them. We are caring for the faithful servants of Christ and the Church who, on account of sickness or old age, have been forced to retire both from labor and from income, and for the needy widows and orphans of the ministers and missionaries who have died. These are great human ministries in which every member of the Presbyterian family should be most deeply interested. All of these groups are in need of our sympathetic touch, of our prayers and of our financial help. "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his heart of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" Full information concerning all these groups may be had by writing 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

A WORD FOR THE REVISED VERSION

To the Editor of the Presbyterian Standard:

Will you let me put in a word of testimony on the other side of a matter recently discussed in your columns?

At the close of an article on Moffatt's translation of the New Testament, with much of which article the present writer is in agreement, the following statement is made:

"When one is studying the English text (of the Bible) he should use the American Standard or this (Moffatt's) translation. But when one is reading as a personal means of grace, or publicly in the sanctuary, he should by all means read the Established Version for it is vastly sweeter and richer."

This statement is typical of many I have heard and seen, but my own experience convinces me that the superiority in "sweetness and richness" of the 1611 version over that of 1901 is largely a matter of early training and habit.

When I was thirteen years old, shortly after I had joined the church, I was encouraged by a wise Sunday School teacher to invest some of my own earnings in an American Standard version of the Bible. Since that time I have never used the version of 1611 at all, except now and then for purposes of comparison. Hence I became much more familiar with the new than with the old.

What is the consequence? The American Standard, not the older version, is the one which to me is melodious and pleasing, "sweeter and richer." The older version is, by comparison, awkward and archaic. My own conclusion is that the real reason why most people prefer the "authorized" version is not its inherent beauty; it is chiefly that they were accustomed to it from childhood.

Now since it is just as easy to accustom a child to the (admittedly) more accurate version, and since, once thus accustomed, one naturally loves it more than the older and less correct rendering, why should not parents and teachers see to it that their children are supplied with the most faithful translation of the Bible instead of one which is agreed to be less accurate?

In short, why not enlist habit and sentiment on the side of Biblical scholarship instead of against it? Davidson, N. C. Kenneth J. Foreman.

THE AUTOMOBILE PARISH

An Open Letter to Our Ministers

My dear Brethren:

In a letter recently received from one of the wisest men in our Church he suggests "that we select some country community sufficiently thickly populated to justify the location of a church in its midst and place some man in charge who will undertake to visit by automobile the surrounding country, perhaps the whole county, and invite people unattached to any denomination to attend services; occasionally bringing their lunches for a social repast. It will perhaps be best to begin on a small scale and try out the experiment in some place recommended by yourself or the Home Missions Committee of some Synod."

In this machine age one church and its minister can serve a very much larger area than formerly. Country people will not go to the city to church, but will gather in large numbers at some designated center in the county or agricultural village, if they have a qualified resident pastor.

It is proposed that we designate certain communities in which we can maintain demonstration parishes for a period covering at least five years. There is a strong probability that we can secure at least $1,000 per year for each experiment to help support such a program. The selections will be upon the basis of facts revealed by surveys made by the Synodical or Presbyterial authorities. The idea is to secure men of outstanding ability and gifts of leadership who have had the Country Church courses in our theological seminaries. The salary should be about $2,500 and $500 additional for the purpose of promotion in the field. We hope to secure money enough to put on at least two demonstrations in each Synod.

What do you think of the idea? If you are interested write for application blanks.

Please let me hear from you.

Cordially yours,

Henry W. McLaughlin,
 Country Church Director.

"FEED MY SHEEP"

(A Modern Apostle to the Master)

Send them away! Cut down the overhead!
 How in the world may all the world be fed
 From this collection-basket? Can be done, You say?

You are not up on methods of to-day.

This is a desert place we're living in;
 Scarce can we saints escape the searing sin.
 Let these outsiders seek their proper god,—
 Buddha or Shiva, reptile, beast or clod.

We, from our rightful places in the sun,
 Calculate comfortably just what can be done,—
 So much per cap, no pleas to wring the heart!
 And You stand saying, "They need not depart."

Budgets, know You, are inelastic at the best;
 We've just raised ours, and won a little rest,
 When in You lead this woe on human feet,
 Demand of the budgeters, "Give ye them to eat."

Spiritual food has shrunk regrettably.
 Strange, what a morsel modern prayers will buy.

There is a lad here, offering his all.
 Rather amusing! Says he heard You call!

"Blind leaders! Hypocrites! Bring the lad to Me.

Of such as this shall My salvation be.
 Make them sit down—My flock, in pastures green;

Bearing the Bread of Life, go ye in between.
 Father, I thank Thee for the stores of heaven,
 Thou Who all power unto Me hast given.
 Thy Word is life, now cleanse them by Thy word!"

O Lord, how long? How long, how long,
 O Lord! S. H.

In Christ Jesus the end of the commandment is love out of a pure heart, and a good conscience, and faith unfeigned. Nothing can exceed the absolute plainness, the reiterated simplicity, of Christ's teaching. A child, a way-faring man, a fool, can understand it. "If ye love me," he says—what? go into the desert? shut yourself up in a monastery? spend your days in the vain repetition of formal prayers? No! but—"If ye love me, keep my commandments." "How commonplace!" you will say; "how elementary! how extremely ordinary! Why, I learned all that years ago by my mother's knee; I have got quite beyond all that." Ah! but have you? Like the Pharisee. you may not be an extortioner, unjust, an adulterer; but have you, even in man's judgment, kept in all their divine breadth, the law of kindness, the law of purity, the law of honesty, the law of truth, the law of contentment? Have you loved God with all the heart? Have you loved your neighbor as yourself?—Canon Farrar.

BACKGROUND OF THE MINISTER'S ANNUITY FUND

Presbyterian Church in the United States

1. The present unsatisfactory method of caring for the aged and disabled ministers and missionaries of our Church. The fact, which has been clearly demonstrated in our own and other churches that annual offerings, even increased by income from endowment funds, cannot adequately care for a growing class of annuitants.

2. The experience of our Church dating back to 1717, during which time scores of various methods have been evolved, tried and found insufficient to solve the one outstanding problem of the Church.

3. The consciousness of the demand for a just and sure and reasonable method of dealing with the disability or retirement of our ministers. Their coming need is certain; the ability of the Church to meet the need must be made less uncertain. The recognition of the business principle that as the Church begins to use up the energies of its servants it should begin to make adequate provision for their days of disability.

4. The desirability of having the annuity or pension benefits come automatically so that no individuals or committees must sit in judgment on what a retired or the dependent members of the household of a deceased minister should receive.

5. The expressed Will of God that those who preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel, and the demand on the children of Israel that those who ministered in spiritual things should be abundantly cared for in material things and as a permanent guarantee of this should have whole cities set aside for their use.

6. The growing recognition by secular interests that when a man has spent his fruitful years in the service of any organization, he has a right to receive adequate and honorable support from that organization when his fruitful years are over, and further, that it is good business to do so. Social justice decrees that he has a moral claim upon the wealth he has helped to build up for a decent living in old age.

7. The awakening of the conscience, of the Church, which, from its very nature, should be the most sensitive and noble of all. One of its cardinal functions is to preach righteousness to all men. In a business way it deals with only one group of men—its own ministers; and yet it has not dealt justly or in accordance with its own preachments with these. This has doubtless been due more to thoughtless indifference and to the modest reticence of its ministers and not to wilful injustice—but the result to the minister has been the same.

8. The nature of the obligation assumed by the Church when it takes a man from civil life and sets him apart for a definite function, which he cannot well combine with other and remunerative activities, nor from which he has either the will, as a rule, or the opportunity to pass into any other occupation. This definite function of the minister requires a long period of general and specialized education. In this it is like the profession of the physician, of the lawyer, and of the engineer, but unlike those professions, the activities of the clergyman are part of an organism and largely regulated by the authority of the session and Presbytery, and the large financial prizes possible to them are not open to him.

9. A fuller recognition of the fact that the minister is the indispensable man, that a great economic waste is caused when an adequate living has not been provided for him, that the Presbyteries, in which inheres the authority, have not given efficient oversight to the minister's salary, that the investment of millions of dollars in church buildings and institutions, however desirable and needed, and the lavish gifts to other organizations either closely or very remotely related to the Kingdom of God, cannot clear the Church of the sin and folly of sending men called of God and the Church, into difficult fields of labor and denying them the things absolutely necessary for their comfort and the honor of religion.

10. The need to remove the natural solicitude of the minister for the years of his old age and for his dependent ones who may be left by him without adequate protection and the anxiety of the local church, lest it have left to its support alone a minister who is approaching the years of retirement.

11. The present demand on minister and layman. "If the Christ Whom we worship still lives; if His final command to make Him known to all men is still in force; if the method of executing it through men's preaching is still the scriptural way, then it is the vital duty of the laymen to make this method effective. This means in this age of almost universal education, of engrossing business interests, of manifold pleasures and amusements, and of easy-going skepticism, that if the religion of Christ is to draw and hold the people, those charged with presenting its claims must be men of high type, spiritual of course, for that is an absolute essential, but also intellectual, tactful and forceful—men of ability, personality, power, humility and leadership. Such can successfully cope with modern conditions and, despite them, with God's help, win men to Christ and hold them in His love and service."

12. The confidence that the Church has both the ability and the willingness to provide adequate pensions for its ministers and their families. No church has ever done this except through such a plan as the one now proposed. "A pension once granted must be paid for life. The cost of this is great and in a growing organization must be ever increasing. A payment of a specific pension each year is a very different thing from a single payment, hence, the obligations of a pension system are vastly more than its yearly pension roll. If the receipts each year were equal to the disbursements for that year, the amount required would begin by being very small and it would end by being at a very high figure. Actuarial science enables the increasing costs to be equated during active service. In other words, the pension of every man is provided for, with the aid of compound interest by small payments during all his period of service. When he receives a sufficient sum has been paid in by him and on his account, augmented by the marvelous working of compound interest, to provide his pension during the expectation he has of life and to secure benefits for widow and minor orphan children. This is the reserve principal, keeping the Church from the uncertain and costly cash disbursement. It makes a pension system absolutely sound and the pension cost. It is the most economical plan. No other way has yet been discovered.

13. The inadequate results of the labor of many years to find a just and honorable method of dealing with the disability or retirement of our ministers and meet the demands of social justice and our own conscience and secure and hold in service a worthy ministry according to the solemn promise, to keep them free from "worldly cares and avocations."

14. The determination to put the whole service pension plan on a sound, actuarial basis. The estimate of the probable cost of a pension plan must take into account not only (1) the amount needed to pension those who on account of age or disability should receive pension at the present time and the effect of mortality rates upon them, but also (2) the cost due to pensions already partly earned and to be earned in later years—technically known as "accrued liabilities"—and in addition (3) the cost of pensions for those who are later to join the group for which provision is being made. Unless a thorough estimate of future costs is made, sufficient funds made available to meet the same, and the whole plan erected on an actuarial basis, disaster and disappointment are sure to follow. When Mr. Andrew Carnegie wanted to pension a certain class of teachers in American colleges, it was estimated that $10,000,000 was sufficient. He contributed that sum to "The Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching." It soon discovered the resources were not sufficient. $5,000,000 more was added. This addition proved inadequate and the management declared that no reasonable static fund will provide for a growing number of annuitants. Participation in the benefits of the fund is now being provided on a contributory relationship of college and teacher.

15. The scientific accuracy and the positive assurance that the success of the Ministers' Annuity Fund will more than balance the expenditures. Unless the increase in costs which must invariably come with the years is anticipated and the burden of it distributed through the years, it may soon grow too heavy. Necessity will then arise (1) revising the benefits downward, (2) increasing the charges on those participating, or (3) of abandoning the plan altogether.

16. The assurance, confirmed by the experience of other churches, that the plan will not only not work a hardship on the pastor of a small church, but that such men will profit by it more than any other in the Church. The one inglorious mark of our Church's history has been the failure to provide for the men in the small, hard, and unfruitful fields, a living that would keep them free from worldly cares and avocations and give a decent support to those who were forced to retire both from labor and from income. The Church needs to be aroused to the seriousness of this situation. We are fully persuaded when the official representatives of the Church explain this matter to the officers and to the membership of the churches, they will see the need and act immediately. As a matter of justice and good Church business, the boards of foreign missions increase the financial support of their missionaries as the costs of living increase. Presbyteries, Synods and General Assembly must see that their Home Mission committees deal as justly as this.

17. We cannot expect a pension system to adjust the inequity of salary, any more than it is fair to expect a pension system to provide a remedy for unemployment in the Church. The salary problem will be adjusted when our people have their consciences quickened to the needs of our ministers and missionaries, and the duty to provide more adequate salaries.

18. The fact that the Ministers' Annuity Fund brings no new principle in proposing a pension system for its ministers and missionaries. And why not? "Your homes and churches are insured against fire, your boilers against explosion, your property against earthquake, your automobiles against loss of use and occupancy, your employees against industrial accidents, your valuables against burglary and theft, your lives against accident and death, your windows against breakage, your cars against damage, etc. Why not the ministers, and why not, if we are about it, turn the usual order of insurance upside down? Start, not with property and life insurance for the benefit of business enterprise and for beneficiaries, however deserving they may be, but rather start with living assurance, assurance of an income to depend upon while living and for dependent living members of the household upon the death of the minister?"

19. The amount of study, research, conference and observation and experience behind the plan proposed, which has been far more than appears on the surface—extending over a quarter of a century.

The task of working out a pension scheme is a complicated one, requiring highly specialized knowledge, and unless some fundamental principles are observed, every such plan must sooner or later come to grief.

20. It seems strange that great business corporations, governments and all kinds of ecclesiastical, fraternal and benevolent organizations, without a careful forecast of the increasing cost, should not have pension schemes. And yet the large number of failures of such schemes bears sad and convincing proof in this respect.

and you may go to Mrs. Turner's if you get lonesome.

"With love. Mother." Tommy stared at the note in dismay. They had planned this trip to Sternesville, with its shopping and lunch at the restaurant, its ice cream and moving picture shows, for a long time, and now he had missed it. And he was very sure it was not because they had been in an undue hurry, but because he had stayed so long after refusing to listen to Twina.

A lump rose in his throat, and he had to blink very hard to keep the tears from overflowing.

What a long day it was! He would not go to Mrs. Turner's, because she was a woman who would have understood at once that there was something more to his being left behind that he wished to tell her. He could ride Crazy all he wished, but instead of spending the long hours rambling over the farm on the pony's back he went to the stable and turned him into the pasture.

There was plenty to eat, and his heavy heart did not affect his appetite. But one cannot eat all the time. And even the diversion of watching the oldest Turner boy do the chores did not last long or arouse much interest. He went to bed early.

But he had not yet fallen asleep when he heard mother's step on the stair and hurrying along the hall into his room. She stopped over his bed.

"Tommy, dear." "O, mother." There was a break in Tommy's voice as his arms went around her neck.

"I could not enjoy the day with you here alone and so disappointed, dear." Mother's arms clasped the small boy very tightly.

"It was my own fault," he sobbed. "If I hadn't been so mean to Twina, I would have been here to go with the rest of you."

"I know, dear. But you had a nice time riding, all day?" There was a question in mother's voice, though if it had not been dark he would have seen an understanding little smile tugging at the corners of her mouth.

"It was no fun to ride any more. I felt so mean about—the way I had acted."

Then the smile spread to mother's eyes, and she gave him a kiss and took him downstairs to see what they had brought him.—Christian Advocate.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom on December 27 has called from his labors here to his reward, our beloved brother and co-worker, Joseph Miller Sloan, who, whereas Brother Sloan was sixty-seven years of age at the time of his death and was a charter member of the Men's Bible Class organized April 1, 1889, and through all the intervening years was a loyal member and co-worker, Brother Sloan had served as deacon of the church and at the time of his death was clerk of the session.

Therefore, this Session in session assembled resolved: That we bear willing testimony to his fidelity and Christian character.

That this Session feels the loss we have sustained through his death.

That a page in the record of this Session be inscribed in his memory and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased Brother, tendering our deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement and praying that God may grant to each of them His blessing and peace.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On the sudden death of Mr. P. A. Sloan, March 6th, 1929, Trinity Avenue Presbyterian Church has lost one of its most valued and best loved members.

Passing from earth of this esteemed man of God, we in Trinity Avenue Presbyterian Church, a host of members are saddened and the Church sustains a great loss.

While we have lost the presence of a friend, but life has been made richer because of him who while among us walked with us.

NINETY-THREE TO SEVEN

From Morelia, Mrs. Ross writes of Catalina, an Indian Mexican, uneducated, suspicious, yet one whom Jesus loves.

"When Catalina came to us, a typical Indian, her face and actions were full of suspicion and distrust. There was always a covert look of holding herself in readiness to repulse my attack on her, which she was sure must come sooner or later."

"She soon consented to come into family prayers, and thus she was brought into contact with the Word. Catalina soon became a changed being. The dread and suspicion died out of her eyes, and little by little a light began to shine there. We said reverently to ourselves, 'She is being led by the Spirit.'"

"When our Jewish evangelist was with us some months ago she came forward one night among those who were seeking Christ. She and we felt, however, that there was much to learn before she joined the Church. For instance, she told us that she was haunted by a feeling of condemnation because she was not confessing to the priest. So we waited, teaching her of Christ, our Priest, and the full entrance we have through Him to the presence of God the Father. Three weeks ago she made a public profession of her faith in Christ. She is tithing her wages and we feel convinced that she has entered the service of the King of Kings."

"There is one sad feature of Catalina's case. She cannot read and her mind is dulled by disuse. She is learning a little and we have hopes that she will at length be able to read the Bible."

"Can you imagine how great is our joy in the Birthday Gift of the Auxiliary to Mexico, which will make possible the better education of Mexican girls. Since, for every seven girls or women in our field who can read there are ninety-three Catalinas to whom the Bible is a sealed book, open only when some passing friend can read it to them."

Through our Birthday gift this year there will be many Catalinas who will learn to read the messages of God through His Book of Books. We may help through the schools at Chilpancingo and Zitacuaro. Will we give of our knowledge to Mexico's Catalinas?

PRESBYTERIAL PRESIDENTS, ATTENTION!

To each Presbyterial President has been sent a copy of the Birthday pageant "Our Neighbor's Need." Here are some necessary additional suggestions and information.

This short presentation will make a beautiful opening for your evening program. It lasts only fifteen or twenty minutes and can easily precede the evening address.

To make your staging more effective use the red, green and white of the Mexican flag. The flag should be in evidence for good effect. Mexican Womanhood might carry out the color note with red skirt, green waist, many cheap beads and spangles, and the ever-present "robosa" or scarf over the head. She may look and dress Spanish.

Our Great Opportunity lies in the educated Christian Mexican girls. They found the Christian homes, they nurse the sick and bring knowledge of Him who cures the sin-sick soul, but the work of the majority is in the leading of the children of Mexico's schoolrooms to Christ. The Mexican nation will advance towards Christ on the feet of its children. Shall we neglect this open door?

Last year our gifts decreased. They were small indeed. Let us rally our forces. Let us recover our retreat.

For the sake of our two schools at Zitacuaro and Chilpancingo who teach of Jesus Christ let us live up to our slogan—
DOUBLE YOUR OFFERING!!

Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

AUXILIARY AT FORT MILL

The annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Unity Presbyterian Church at Fort Mill, S. C., was marked by a deep sense of gratification among the 45 members present when the reports of Mrs. Elva Harris, president, and Mrs. J. L. Spratt, treasurer, reciting unexpected gains during the year past, were read. The reports indicated a sustained interest throughout the year, with meetings of the committees, the circles, and the body regularly held, and on the whole well attended. Gifts to the benevolent causes were greater than last year, and included the response generally made to the call for special support of Assembly's causes. The reports which will be carried up to Bethel Presbyterial show a membership of 81, and per capita contributions of about $9.00. The Auxiliary has given substantial support to the general Church budget, including a number of shares of building and loan stock which at maturity will be used for building improvement. Additional work contemplated for the coming year will include the organization of a business women's circle.

FLORIDA PRESBYTERIAL GROUP CONFERENCES

Just after the Presbyterial meeting in April, two one-day Schools of Instruction were conducted, one at Monticello by the District Chairman, Mrs. J. O. Wade, with a 100 per cent representation of all the Auxiliaries in the District. The other one was in Marianna, conducted by Chairman of District No. 3, Mrs. W. N. McCrary. Good programs were given and much interest shown.

In November, Group Conferences were held in Pensacola, Laurel Hill, Panama City, Madison and Chattahoochee.

Mrs. M. M. Owen, Chairman of District No. 1, presided at Pensacola and inspiring talks were given by Mrs. H. A. Love, on Palmer College, Florida's greatest Presbyterian Asset, Miss Cornelia Engle, on Christian Education, and Mrs. Love Gregory on Our Goals, and Hopes and Aims of the Year. The attendance was 100 per cent, 68 being present.

Mrs. A. G. Campbell, Chairman of District No. 2, presided at Laurel Hill, the same speakers being present, but we were greatly favored by having with us, Mrs. Wallace, President of Dothan, Alabama Presbyterial, who gave us a most inspiring talk. This District was 100 per cent with attendance, 48.

In the absence of the Chairman, Mrs. Love Gregory presided at Panama City. At this meeting the same speakers were present and in addition Mrs. W. J. Phillips, President of St. Andrews Auxiliary, gave us a good talk. Only one Auxiliary was not represented. The attendance was 42.

Mrs. Paul Thomas, Chairman of District No. 4, presided at Chattahoochee. She had a very interesting program and one of the most interesting features of the program was the part given by representatives from Palmer College. Only one Auxiliary in this district was not represented and the attendance was 58.

Mrs. J. O. Wade, Chairman of District No. 5, presided at Madison. They closed their Home Mission Study Week with an all day Group Conference, stressing Home Missions and Christian Education. This Conference was 100 per cent attendance and 63 were present.

Our goal was 100 per cent in Presbyterial, but we missed it by two. Hope to reach it next year.

Florida Presbyterial will meet April 3-4-5 in the First Presbyterian Church, Pensacola, Fla.

Mrs. John W. Woodward.

"An interesting article appeared in the Presbyterian Standard under date of February 6, announcing the state convention of the Georgia Union. This was written by Rev. W. A. Gamble, Pinetops, N. YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC

C. G. A.

Sunday, April 7—The Bible a Daily Guide Book.—Psalm 19:4-7; Rom. 15:4-7; Heb. 4:12.

Introduction

During the month of April our general theme will be Bible study. Today our topic is The Bible, a Daily Guide Book; April 14 the topic will be The Bible, An Up-to-date Text Book; April 21, The Bible, A Wonder Book; April 28, The Bible, A Mission Book. Studying about the Bible does not compare with studying the Bible itself. You remember when the Samaritan woman told the people in the city about Jesus and they came out and saw Jesus themselves, they said, "Now we believe, not because of thy speaking; for we have heard for ourselves and know that this indeed the Savior of the world." If the topics of this month lead us to the Bible itself we shall not have spent our time in vain.

Superstition

Not long ago there was a Bible race—a race to see how quickly the whole Bible could be read. It was that, with several people taking turns, the Bible read from Genesis through Revelation in an hour or a few hours. It was something to put in the news and the news reel of the movies showed the "racers." It was something sensational. We know that there is no virtue in hurrying through the Bible like that. There is no virtue at all in hurrying the Bible, and it is nothing but superstition that there is. Among certain non-Christians it is believed that mere repetition brings salvation, and are wound on little machines. The faster the machine goes, the more the prayer is turned over, and the greater the reward for the devotee. The devotee said "And in praying us not vain repetitions as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their many words." The same may be said for Bible reading. It isn't the number of chapters you read that counts, but the amount of real joy and comfort you get from the Bible with the help of the Holy Spirit.

A Daily Guide

On Sundays some people try to read the Bible through to last them through the rest of the week. It is likely because they have time on Sundays that they do not have on other days. Our physical bodies need every day to keep well and active. We do not need to read the Bible on one day to last us through the week. It would be indiscreet to try it. Our souls need to be renewed every day just as our bodies do to keep well and active. We can not see our souls—we can only feel them when they have strength from God they stand up when temptations come, and when they are weak, they yield to temptations. The Bible is the daily bread for our souls—we can apply its message and promises to our lives for they are meant for us. Let us taste and see that the Lord is gracious.

Familiarity With the Book

You have no doubt heard the expression "Familiarity breeds contempt." The beauty of the most flowers fails to attract our attention when we see them constantly. We accept the beauty as a part of our life and a stranger must open our eyes again and wonder at wonders and beauties that are not on the surface. The Bible is like that with the Bible. As Dr. Campbell says, we have an unsanctified familiarity with the Bible without a prayerful attitude. We are blind to its profound meaning and beauty. The Bible is the dull side of familiarity. There is a brightness about the Bible. He must be familiar with the promises of God. He must be familiar with the promises of God. He has promised, but a promise necessarily involves a person. If you and I know the promises of God we can worry and ourselves no end of trouble. But when we do not know the promises we can rest assured that if we do our duty "is able to do exceeding, abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us." It has been said that those who know the Bible of William Shakespeare's writings need no further education. They are familiar with the best that English literature has to offer.

The Whole Book

Do you find yourself reading only parts of the Bible? The Testament and the Psalms when you read your Bible. Of course, you may have your favorite passages. Do you read only those favorite chapters or verses? Do you do, why not broaden out a little and read the whole Bible? The Jewish people and the prophecies? Don't you read the Old Testament away. Read the fortieth chapter of Isaiah some time when you are alone and feel that the Lord will help you tremendously, because it makes you feel yourself in the bigness of God.

There are some other suggestions about the Bible. These suggestions have helped others. You may find that they will help you. These leaflets are out by the American Bible Society free of charge.

How to Use the Bible

When in sorrow, read John 14.
When men fail you, read Psalm 27.
When you have sinned, read Psalm 51.
When you worry, read Matthew 6:19-34.
Before Church service, read Psalm 84.
When you are in danger, read Psalm 91.
When you have the blues, read Psalm 34.
When God seems far away, read Psalm 139.
When you are discouraged, read Isaiah 40.
If you want to be fruitful, read John 15.
When doubts come upon you, try John 7:17.
When you are lonely or fearful, read Psalm 27.
When you forget your blessings, read Psalm 103.
For Jesus' idea of a Christian, read Matthew 23.
For James' idea of religion, read James 1:19-21.
When your faith needs stirring, read Hebrews 12:1-2.
When you feel down and out, read Romans 8:1-4.
When you want courage for your task, read Psalm 124.
When the world seems bigger than God, read Psalm 124.
When you want rest and peace, read Matthew 11:28-30.
When you want Christian assurance, read Romans 8:1-4.
For Paul's secret of happiness, read Col. 3:12-14.
When you leave home for labor or travel, read Psalm 121.
When you grow bitter or critical, read 1 Cor. 13:1-3.
When your prayers grow narrow or selfish, read Luke 11:9-13.
For Paul's idea of Christianity, read 2 Cor. 5:14-21.
For Paul's rules on how to get along with men, read 1 Cor. 13:1-3.

When you think of investments and return, read Psalm 127:1-3.

For a great invitation and a great opportunity for Jesus' idea of prayer, Luke 11:1-13, Matthew 7:7-11.
For the prophet's picture of worship that counts, read Isaiah 66:1-2.

For the prophet's idea of religion, Isaiah 1:10-17.

Why not follow Psalm 119:11 and hide some of the Bible in your memory? PROF. HARRIS FRANKLIN

SYLVIA MAKES A DISCOVERY

"I'm going home, Mary. Aren't you?" Sylvia Gray walked to the door of the little club room and looked back at her chum.

"Not quite yet," replied Mary. "There are all these dishes to do, and the food must be put away and"—

"Well, why can't the other girls do it?" interrupted Sylvia impatiently. "You and I planned the supper and did the biggest share of the work in getting it ready. Let the others do the cleaning up."

"The others helped a good deal, too," reminded Mary. "Anyway, I won't want to leave until everything is completely finished."

"I'm going," said Sylvia. "I think I've done my share, and there isn't any use in letting other people think they can shirk their share. You're foolish, Mary." And the door closed behind her with a bang.

Eileen Hunter had entered as Sylvia made her last speech, and now she remarked: "Sometimes I wonder how you two girls can be chums. You're so different! Sylvia always seems afraid that she is going to be asked to do more than her share, and you are just the opposite."

"Oh, no, I'm not," said Mary flushing. "I do wish, though, that Sylvia weren't quite so afraid some one was going to impose on her. She's such a dear girl in other ways! We all like her."

"Yes, she is," agreed Eileen. "She's clever and efficient, too. Our Nominating Committee was thinking of asking her to be club president for the coming year. But it would never do to have a president who was always afraid she'd do too much. We've decided, Mary, to ask you if you would take that job."

"I?" gasped Mary. "Why, do you think I could? I don't see what I've done to deserve it!"

"Nothing much!" laughed Eileen. "Only plunged right in and worked from start to finish on whatever we have had to do, so willingly and enthusiastically that you've inspired most of us to follow your example!"

As Mary walked home, she was surprised to find a very flushed and embarrassed Sylvia waiting for her at the corner. "I heard you and Eileen talking," Sylvia began at once. "I waited at the door a minute, hoping you'd come, and when I heard my name mentioned, I couldn't seem to move. They say listeners never hear anything good of themselves, but I'm glad, anyway, that I overheard you. I've always thought people had to look out for their rights, and be careful not to do more than their share, and all that. But I've come to the conclusion that it's much better to do more than your share than to slide out of things as I've been doing. I'm so glad, Mary, that you are to be president. You certainly deserve it."

"And you are going to be my right-hand man," said Mary, "for you are clever and efficient, as Eileen said, and have ever so many other good qualities besides."—Alice Saunders, in Queen's Gardens.

Beware of growing covetousness, for of all sins this is one of the most insidious. It is like the silting up of a river. As the stream comes down from the land it brings with it sand and earth, and deposits these at its mouth; so that by degrees, unless it be carefully watched, it will block itself up, and leave no channel for ships of great burden. By daily deposit, it imperceptibly creates a bar which is dangerous to navigation. Many a man, when he begins to accumulate wealth, commences at the same moment to ruin his own soul; and the more he acquires, the more closely he blocks up his liberality. Instead of doing more for God he does less, and the more he wants of this world, the less he cares for the world to come.—C. H. Spurgeon.

I will rejoice in Jehovah, I will joy in the God of my salvation.—Hab. 3:18.

God is a kind Father. He sets us in all places where he wishes us to be employed, and that employment is truly "our Father's business." He chooses work for every creature which will be delightful to them, if they do it simply and humbly. He gives us always strength and sense enough for what he wants us to do; if we either tire ourselves or puzzle ourselves, it is our own fault. And we may be sure, whatever we are doing, that we cannot be pleasing him if we are not happy ourselves.—Ruskin.

THE JOB TOO LITTLE

A committee representing the Standard Oil Company had an all-night session. The main task was to secure a manager for a new division of operation which the company hoped to open in China. The chairman insisted that the manager must have four qualifications: He must be under thirty years old, he must be thoroughly trained, he must have proved generalship, he must be able to speak the Chinese language. Many good men had been considered, but each was found to be lacking.

It appeared that the meeting would fail of its object. But finally a young man rose, addressed the chairman, and declared that he knew one man who would meet all the requirements. He added that the man was at that time in China, living in the very city where the company was planning to establish headquarters.

Some one asked how much this young man was getting, and his friend startled the committee by answering: "Six hundred dollars a year."

The chairman said: "There must be something wrong."

The young man's friend replied: "I know there is. But the wrong is not with my friend; it is with the system that employs him. He is a missionary."

After thorough questioning regarding the missionary, the chairman said to the committeeman: "You go to China and offer him the place." The committeeman was to offer $10,000 a year. If that failed to secure him, was to offer $12,000 or $15,000.

The young agent crossed the ocean and half of China, found his friend, and offered him the situation at $10,000 a year. He raised to $12,000; then to $15,000, but young missionary declined. The offer was rejected.

Finally the agent asked: "What will you take?"

The missionary replied: "It is not a question of salary. The salary is magnificent. The trouble is not with the salary, it is with the job. The job is too little. You offer me a big salary, but a small job. I get a small salary, but I have a big job, and I would rather have a big job with a small salary than a small job with a big salary. I thank you for the confidence expressed in your offer, but I feel that I should be a fool to quit winning souls to sell oil."—Selected.

A little boy in a city school refused to sew, thinking it beneath his dignity.

"George Washington sewed," said the principal, taking it for granted that a soldier must. "Do you consider yourself better than George Washington?"

"I don't know; time will tell," said the boy seriously.—Good Hardware.

The teacher was trying to impress upon her pupils the importance of doing right at all times, and to bring out the answer. "Bad habits." "What is it we find so easy to get into and so hard to get out of?" she asked.

There was silence for a moment and then one little fellow answered, "Bed!"—Boston Transcript.

LAYING THE CORNERSTONE IN WASHINGTON

(Continued from page 1) ter of a million dollars to the enterprise, urging them to dedicate themselves afresh to the enlarging opportunities of service which God in His Providence was offering them.

The invocation was offered by Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor emeritus of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, North. The Scripture lesson from the Old Testament, II Chronicles 6:12-42, was read by Dr. James H. Taylor, of the Central Presbyterian Church.

The actual laying of the cornerstone involved a procedure perhaps unique in the annals of church history and full of significance to the spirit of this people. They were led to invite a minister of another denomination to lay the cornerstone of this Presbyterian Church built by thousands of Presbyterian families throughout the South.

Nine years ago, when the duty of calling the attention of the country at large to the importance of a vigorous witness for Christ at Washington, was felt by this church, and in connection therewith the necessity of gaining co-operation in the erection of an adequate church building, the pastor had earnestly sought the guidance of God.

After about six weeks of waiting on God for guidance Mr. Bird, who had supposed that if God opened the way it would be through a Presbyterian, was amazed to have Rev. John B. Frazier, at that time chief chaplain of the U. S. Navy, say to him, "I have been watching your church for the last two years, though you did not know it. I am not a Presbyterian, but a Methodist.

It was the guidance of Chaplain Frazier by the Holy Spirit, while the pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims was waiting upon God in prayer, that both indicated to Mr. Bird the will of God and made it practically possible for the church to attempt the undertaking.

After a prayer of thanksgiving and consecration by Rev. Frank T. McFaden, D.D., of Winchester, Va., and a solo, "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings, O Lord of Hosts," by Mrs. Wilson, wife of Col. Walter K. Wilson, teacher of the "Men of the Church" Bible Class, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. L. Darby, D.D., Secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches.

The inscription on the cornerstone follows:

Jesus Christus Via, Veritas, Vita, Salvator Dominus A. D. MCMXXVIII.

One could not but wish that the many thousands, whose faith and generosity have made this work possible, might have been present on this day of thanksgiving for the progress of the undertaking. I am glad to be able to bear testimony to those partners in this enterprise who, because they live so far away from Washington, may never see this beautiful and impressive witness to their devotion to our Saviour.

While you can see from the picture that they are all beautiful designs, you cannot appreciate their full attraction as we are unable to show in the newspaper the charming color schemes in which the trays are decorated.

One of them for instance is burnt gold with a dark red ground, the figures and decoration being of oriental design, blending myriads of soft shades and coloring similar to the Persian rugs.

Another is gold and black; very, very rich and a tray you would be proud of.

The tray with the fruit basket on it is in the natural colors of the fruit.

ate in the union, every province and in many foreign countries have representatives at the In-convention. One subject that certain to come up this year is the inevitable cleavage in all directions.

ent tendency is in the direction that shall eventuate in unity. As this may sound, it is even more charged now with having four and four different denominations. It is more and more to be seen that three names cover all these branches of Christianity and near-Christianity; namely, Liberalism and Fundamentalism. The whole trend of things at this time is in the direction of a merging of the old denominational lines with new alliances formed on simpler and more easily accepted bases.

In the mind of many, the time has come for the World's Christian Fundamentals Association to declare itself an organization as well as a movement, and to begin to build in every city and to send missionaries to every country, in the name of Fundamentalism. Already many of the larger cities have Fundamentalist churches and Fundamentalist tabernacles; and even in small towns and villages such organized movements are known. The very length to which Modernism has gone, in its denial of all the essentials, is lending impetus to the Fundamentalist movement, and is forcing out of apostate churches the true believers. It is most natural, therefore, that these true believers should forget their minor differences and unite on the major program of the World's Christian Fundamentals Association.

At this March meeting, reports were considered indicating that the obstacles were not insuperable; and there was practically unanimous agreement that such union was most desirable, if an acceptable basis of union could be devised, and the practical matters pertaining to administration and executive agencies could be arranged satisfactorily to both churches. A partial report to each Assembly was adopted, indicating progress, and containing two requests; one for the exchange of fraternal delegates; and the other a request for the enlargement of each committee by addition of representatives of the Women's Organizations of the two churches.

The report to each assembly was most cordially received, and Rev. R. M. Kerr, D.D., and Rev. E. C. McCown, D.D., were heard most appreciatively as fraternal delegates by the assembly of the Presbyterian Church U. S., at El Dorado, Arkansas, while Rev. Wm. Crowe, D.D., and S. L. Morris, D.D., were graciously received by the assembly of the United Presbyterian Church at Washington, D. C. Each assembly continued the committee which was enlarged by the addition of Rev. R. F. Campbell, D.D., moderator, Mrs. W. C. Winsborough and Mrs. W. K. Armstrong from the Presbyterian Church U. S.; and Rev. M. G. Kyle, moderator, Mrs. J. D. Sands and Mrs. J. P. White from the United Presbyterian Church, greatly strengthening each delegation.

The Joint Committee held its third meeting at Cincinnati, September 6, 1927, attended by practically the entire membership. After hearing reports of sub-committees and full discussion, it unanimously and heartily adopted a basis of union which it recommended for favorable consideration by the respective assemblies—not for immediate adoption, but tentative, to be submitted to the constituencies of the two assemblies for amendments before being presented for final action.

The Assembly of the Presbyterian Church U. S. meeting in Atlanta May, 1928, and the Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church meeting at St. Louis, Mo., received and considered the report of the Joint Ad Interim Committee. Drs. Chas. H. Robinson and A. H. Baldinger were heard as fraternal delegates from the United Presbyterian Church at Atlanta; and Drs. W. R. Dobyns and C. H. Nabers as fraternal delegates to the United Presbyterian Assembly at St. Louis. Each assembly continued the Ad Interim Committee, and at the same time gave opportunity for their respective Presbyteries to consider and make suggestions in the way of advice or amendments for the benefit of the Joint Committee on Closer Relations.

To the Assembly in Atlanta there was submitted an overture from Muhlenburg Presbytery, Kentucky, asking that the assembly appoint a committee to confer with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church looking to Closer Relations. The overture was answered by referring it to the present Ad Interim Committee, which action was telegraphed the Cumberland Assembly in session at the time.

As promptly as possible, Rev. S. L. Morris, chairman, took up the matter with Rev. J. L. Hudgins, moderator of the Cumberland Presbyterian Assembly, and with Rev. D. W. Fooks, its stated clerk. The following official reply was received, declining to consider the question of union: "The Cumberland Presbyterian Church at all times stands ready to cooperate in spirit in the world-wide program, but at no time and under no conditions would the Cumberland Presbyterian Church look with favor upon any move towards organic union with the Presbyterian Church U. S., or any other denominations."

The Joint Committee on Closer Relations met at Pittsburgh February 28, 1929, for hearing suggestions from the Presbyteries and completing the basis of union. Answers received were presented by the respective chairman with the following result:

Presbyterian Church U. S., 32 Presbyteries approved and eight were unfavorable.

United Presbyterian Church, 29 Presbyteries approved and eight were unfavorable.

The other Presbyteries either took no action or else referred the matter to their spring meetings.

In the light of the amendments and suggestions submitted, the Joint Committee took under consideration the perfecting of the basis of union, which was amended and is hereby unanimously submitted for the favorable consideration of the respective assemblies.

Believing in the essential oneness of the Church of Christ; remembering the historic lines that bind us to revered ancestors who witnessed valiantly for the truth as it is in Jesus and through whom has come to us a common heritage of Christian faith and doctrine; desiring to prove faithful in the custodianship of this inheritance, and aiming only for the glory of God in the higher advancement and wider extension of His Kingdom on earth, we, the members of the Presbyterian Church U. S. and the United Presbyterian Church of North America, through our accredited representatives, do find a common standing ground in the following statements; and upon the basis of these fundamental truths we covenant to join our ecclesiastical bodies in organic union:

Creedal Statement

1. The doctrinal standards held in common by these two churches, viz: the Westminster Confession of Faith and the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, and in addition the Confessional Statement of the United Presbyterian Church, shall be the doctrinal standards of the United Church.

2. The standards are to be interpreted in their natural and obvious meaning, and no one shall be authorized to teach or preach in the United Church who cannot give an unqualified assent to the doctrinal system contained in these standards.

3. The United Church would bear testimony to—

(1) The evangelistic mission of the church. We believe that the Gospel of the Son of God is the only hope of a sinful and dying world. We recognize in the command of Christ the urgent call to the evangelization of the world, and we bow before the imperative duty of obedience.

(2) The spiritual character of the church's mission. This union is based on the statement of the Confession of Faith, that "Synods and councils are to handle or conclude nothing but that which is ecclesiastical; and are not to intermeddle with civil affairs, which concern the commonwealth, unless by way of humble petition, in cases extraordinary, or by way of advice for satisfaction of conscience, if they thereunto required by the civil magistrate."

4. In the ordinance of praise it is agreed that, while the Psalms of the Bible are accredited for permanent use, other songs or hymns true to the spirit and teaching of Scripture are properly employed. Each church in the united body shall be allowed the same liberty which it now enjoys in the matter of congregational singing.

Constitution and Agencies

1. The Supreme Judicatory of the United Church shall be a General Assembly, the official title of which shall be the United Presbyterian Church of the United States.

2. The general assemblies of the two churches at the time of union, shall convene separately in the same city, and shall be constituted on the basis of the representation now obtaining in each Church respectively. The United Assembly thus constituted shall make the following provisions which shall remain in force until the adoption of a permanent book of church order:

(1) The basis of Presbyterial representation in the General Assembly.

(2) Rules of procedure to govern the sessions of assembly.

(3) A policy concerning the appointment of special ad interim committees.

3. The first United Assembly shall appoint a commission whose duty it shall be to prepare suitable manuscript of a permanent book of church order and submit it to a subsequent assembly to be over-tured to the constituent Presbyteries for their adoption.

The subordinate courts of the church shall continue to use provisionally the books of rules under which they have hitherto been governed.

4. The merger of the Executive Committees deriving from the Presbyterian Church in the U. S., and the boards deriving from the United Presbyterian Church of North America, shall be brought about as expeditiously as possible, under the direction of the United Assembly.

With a view to facilitating the aforesaid merger, the first United Assembly shall appoint a special committee on merger whose duty it shall be, (1) To make a thorough study of all the boards and committees to be merged—their organization, aims and activities; and (2) to devise ways and means for the complete amalgamation of corresponding agencies.

"THE BUGGIEST OF THEM ALL"

Egbert W. Smith

I do wish that those ignorant folks who are so concerned about the "luxurious lives" that missionaries are living could all read the following letter written by our missionary, Rev. A. S. Maxwell, of Brazil, to his wife. It presents in such a striking and amusing way one of the many trials of the itinerating missionary's life that I must share it with as many as possible of our constituency. It was written on Sunday night and runs as follows:
 My dear Mate:

"I am beginning my letter at 2 a. m. Do not jump at the conclusion that I am falling suddenly into the habit of starting the day so early. You know I am still young enough to feel the need of a good eight hours' sleep in each twenty-four, and I usually get it. So there is a reason.
 'Bugs'!!

"I was invited to spend the night in a kind friend's home. When I was shown my room and had examined my bed I had visions of what this night was going to be, and lo, the vision is now a stern reality.
 I have been the rounds and had my ups and downs in this land of my adoption, but tonight has been just a little the 'buggiest' of them all. You are doubtless thinking of bed-bugs. Well, they were there, but something worse—Fleas! The bed is literally speckled with them and more on the floor to come and take their turn at the banquet. On the sheets are many signs of the last victim's bloodshed (whether he was a leper or a victim of itch remains to be seen). Many times already I have turned my 'nighties' and shaken the contents on the floor, but they all seem well trained on the 'high-jump' stunt and soon each is back with a half dozen neighbors. I ventured to put my feet on the floor just a minute, and to get rid of the little pests which clung to them, I had to wash them off, and after this process was finished I still counted forty which failed to make their escape. I decided that these were old rheumatic grandfathers and were unable to jump. There! My pencil needs sharpening but I haven't the courage to cross this room to get my knife. I suppose you think that this is a 'buggy' place sure enough. Well, you are right. I've been into them worse once before when we were traveling by canoe up the Guapare River. My boatman and I were setting camp to spend the night in an old abandoned ranch. Well, we soon abandoned it too—and had to take our clothes off and let them drift in the water behind the canoe to get rid of the thousands of fleas which covered them.

"With me on this trip I brought that old box of Rose-bud salve we've had so long. At the sight of this my hopes kindled. ('Tis said that everything comes in useful in seven years.) So seizing the salve I resolved to at least give the beasts a slippery time—but alas! No results. They put on their non-skid chains and continued to travel. Last night I preached on the 'Importance of Little Things.' Tonight, I am realizing it by a practical lesson. When all hope for sleep was gone, I opened Dr. Gordon's 'Quiet Talks on Service.' I had previously read a part of his talk on 'Worry' and what a comforting promise the first line I read brought to me! These are the words:
 'There is a morning coming, always a morning coming with the sunshine and the chorus of the birds' I said, 'Thank you, Mr. Gordon for this comforting hope.
 It is 3:30 now. The rooster is crowing!
 What a joyful sound: At the first peep of the dawn I shall flee this 'flea'y' room.
 I am afraid that from the tone of this letter you will think I am over pessimistic

(I guess I am somewhat so now) but with the coming of the 'blessed morning' promised by Dr. Gordon I think I can then be a real 'Polly-ana.'

"You know for a long time I have been talking of a sleeping sack—sewed up all around with a draw-string at the neck.
 I am convinced of the good it could do for my weary flea-bitten body, now. I am resolved that the first request that I shall make on reaching my dear mate will be that she make me that wonderful sack.

"Rejoice with me: 'Tis four 'o'clock.
 I think I see the first rays of dawn and almost hear the day 'breaking!'

So long, "Max."

"I forgot to say that there are only ten dogs in this poor man's house."

Mrs. Maxwell adds: "This is some flea story, but I never saw such raw-

Eleventh Davidson Conference in June

Carolina Synod is Arranging for Annual Young People's Meeting June 11 to 18

The Eleventh Annual Young People's Conference of the Synod of North Carolina will be held as usual at Davidson College from the evening of June 11 to the morning of June 18, that is, from the beginning of one week until Tuesday of the next. The announcement is made by the various committees of the Synod and of the college who have control and management of this conference. This is the eleventh meeting, the first one having been held at Davidson in June, 1919, at Queen's College, where the attendance was over 200 boys and girls. Last year there were over 300 boys and girls who responded to the invitation to attend the conference better than ever before.

The principal officers guiding the conference are: Rev. J. H. Henderlite, D.D., Moderator; J. P. Carr, of Mooresville, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Religious Education; Miss Margaret McElwee, of Statesville, Chairman of the Synodical Committee of Religious Education; and Miss McElwee, of Statesville, Chairman of the Synodical Committee of Religious Education. Churches of two hundred members will send two delegates and one additional delegate may come from the larger churches, for each one hundred members above 200. The age limit is 15 to 25. Delegates are asked to make a careful selection of young people to attend the conference, choosing only those who will spend their time well, and submit to the Synodical Committee of Religious Education. All delegates should arrive in time for supper on the evening of June 11, and remain continuously until the morning of June 18. Visiting of friends of delegates is discouraged, and no one is allowed to leave the campus without permission.

The expense of the conference is $10, which includes room and board. There is a registration fee. Books are extra, but may be bought at the conference at a discount.

There will be four Bible classes. Delegates of 17 years of age and over will be instructed by Dr. Samuel M. Glasgow, of Statesville, Tenn., and Dr. Ernest Thompson, of Union Seminary, Richmond, Va. Under 17 will enter the classes of the Young People's Union of the Assembly's School.

Missions will be taught by Rev. J. H. Richards, of Clarksville, Ga. There will also be a foreign mission program. Dr. C. M. Richards, of Davidson College, will lead in the study of our own country, while Miss Atha Bowman, of the Children's Division of Religious Education, Richmond, will instruct pupils in the study of the world.

Charlotte Calls Rev. W. W. Akers

of Lincolnton, N. C., Receives Vote of Congregation of West Avenue Church

Rev. W. W. Akers, of Lincolnton, N. C., has been called by the congregation of the West Avenue Church, Charlotte, to be their pastor. The vote was taken on the evening of March 31. The West Avenue Church has had a successful pastorate under Mr. Akers who has had a successful pastorate at Lincolnton, having built up the congregation and its work. He has taken part in Kings Mountain Presbyterian Home Mission work, and is the president of the Board of Trustees of Queen's College, with which Kings Mountain Presbytery is associated in connection with Mecklenburg and Grand Divisions.

Presbyterians in Pay-Up Campaign

This Year Expected to be Banner Year by the Stewardship Office at Atlanta—Books of Treasurers Remain Open Until April 5 for Late Returns

Officials and members of all Protestant Churches in the United States are watching with keen interest the result of the drive in the Southern Presbyterian Church for a complete pay-up of all subscriptions to the Annual Budget. The Church year closed March 31. The United Stewardship Council recently announced, through the Associated Press, that the Southern Presbyterian Church, for the last year, led all Protestant denominations in the United States and Canada in per capita gifts to budget benevolences. The total contributed for all purposes was $15,826,473.00.

It is expected that contributions this year shall exceed last year's total, and by order of the Assembly, the highest court of the Southern Presbyterian Church, the books of the treasurers of executive committees and agencies will remain open until April 5th to receive contributions made through March 31. The treasurers of the several committees are: E. F. Willis, Foreign Missions Committee, Nashville, Tenn.; A. N. Sharp, Assembly's Home Missions Committee, Atlanta, Ga.; John Stites, Christian Education and Ministerial Relief Committee, Louisville, Ky.; R. E. Magill, Religious Education Committee, Richmond, Va.; George Call, Assembly's Training School, Richmond, Va.; Gilbert Darlington, Bible Cause, New York City.

In addition to these causes the Church supports, through its Synods and Presbyteries, enterprises which total in their requirements of the Church, more than two million dollars. These include schools, colleges, orphanages, mountain and city missions and similar enterprises.

The last week in March was officially designated as "Pay-Up-Week," and the idea set before the Church by the Stewardship Department of Atlanta, Ga., is that all Churches should "pay-up," "stay-up" and "step-up."

A Unique Experiment in Foreign Missions

Soonchun, in Korea, Supported by Endowment of the Late George W. Watts, Reports Successful Year

Soonchun station, located in the south east corner of the South Chulla province, furnishes an experiment in Missions unique in several particulars. In 1912 Mr. Geo. W. Watts, of Durham, N. C., met the challenge to assume the support of an entire station and see what God could do in a field adequately occupied and equipped. Almost simultaneously the contribution of $25,000 for the erection of the first units of the station as planned, was secured, and four residences, two schools and a hospital were erected and the station opened with thirteen missionaries in 1913. The endowment donated by Mr. Watts provided only the basic salaries, the current budget being left to the committee, and is received on the same pro rata basis as that of other stations.

This year the station reports twelve missionaries (the nurse recently having been transferred to another station). 100,000 population, 1,350 communicants, 13 organized churches, 24 helpers, 93 porteurs and five evangelists including five colporteurs; eight native preachers; 3,492 in reported attendance, 149 added on during the year, eight new converts.

Dr. Deissman Arrives For Addresses

Famous German Leader to Lecture in American Schools and Colleges

Rev. Charles Stelzle announces for the Federal Council that Prof. Adolf Deissman, one of the outstanding Christian scholars of Germany, arrived in New York Saturday, March 16th on the S. S. Berlin from Bremen, to fulfill a series of engagements throughout the United States arranged by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Dr. Deissman, who is a distinguished scholar in the field of the New Testament and early church history, is a professor in the University of Berlin. He holds honorary degrees from some of the leading universities of the world, including Marburg, Aberdeen, St. Andrews and Manchester.

As a member of the Universal Conference on Life and Work and of the World Conference on Faith and Order, of which he is one of the vice-presidents, Dr. Deissman is intimately in touch with the movement for a more united Church. In addition to his many other interests, he has a distinguished standing among archaeologists, especially for his excavations at Ephesus. He is the author of many widely known volumes, including "Light from the Ancient East," "Paul," and "The Religion of Jesus and the Faith of Paul."

While in this country, Dr. Deissman will lecture at the General Theological Seminary, New York; the Union Theological Seminary, New York; the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa.; Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J.; Harvard Divinity School, Cambridge, Mass.; Boston University School of Theology, Boston, Mass.; the Divinity School of the University of Chicago; Oberlin College and the College of Wooster. On March 22nd, Dr. Deissman was given a special reception by the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council, at 2 p. m., at their headquarters; and on the same evening, he was tendered a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel by the Federal Council, the Church Peace Union, and the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches.

Colportage Association Reports for Year

500,000 Neglected People Given the Gospel in Print

A splendid, philanthropic, Christian work is done each year by the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago, founded in 1894 by the noted evangelist, D. L. Moody, which is not generally known. It consists of the free distribution of evangelical Christian literature to various classes who are in great need, but are neglected—such as prisoners, often negro mountaineers, seafarers, lumber-jacks, men, pioneers, soldiers, fire-city hospital patients in our large cities, and the peoples of Alaska, Canada, America, Africa, India, and the Philippine Islands.

During the past fiscal year, ending February 28, the Association has distributed Bible portions, consisting of Testaments, Gospels and Pocket Treasuries, Moody Colportage books, Evangelical booklets, and Gospel tracts to the extent of 681,995 copies. As a result of this wide distribution many hardened criminals have been saved, undesirables reformed.

Davidson College Selects Next Year's Leaders

Students Who have Distinguished Themselves for Leadership Are Selected to Guide Various Activities—Plans for Summer School

Just before the Easter holidays Davidson College students chose leaders for the different organizations, who will guide these various forms of student activities next fall and the ensuing college year. All of these young men have made places for themselves in the college life among their fellows, and by the merit of their characters and gifts were almost unanimously chosen to fill these outstanding offices. The following accounts are published by the Alumni Secretary, Ernest Milton, who furnishes publicity for the press as well as promotes the interest of alumni groups, seeking to cultivate a closer affiliation of old students with their alma mater. Mr. Milton is executive secretary of the General Alumni Association of Davidson.

Carl R. Pritchett, of Reidsville, will head the student body of Davidson College and the student council of that institution next year, having been elected president by his fellow-students in the recent voting. Associated with him as officers will be Thad Brock and Walter Fraley, both of Barium Springs, vice-presidents, and R. A. Norton, Rome, Ga., secretary-treasurer.

Pritchett won on the first ballot over three prominent members of the student body who had been nominated for this important position. Brock and Fraley were elected on the second ballot, and Norton on the third.

The new Davidson student body president has been a leader in many fields of activity since his entrance as a freshman in the fall of 1926. He captained the Davidson basketball team during the past season, was an intercollegiate debater for two years, and is an active worker in the Y. M. C. A. organization.

Davidson College students have chosen Frank R. Brown, of Greensboro, as president of the Y. M. C. A. for the scholastic year, 1929-1930, and have elected as vice-presidents Dean Rush, of Atlanta, Ga., and John F. Preston, Jr., of Korea.

Zeb V. Long, Jr., of Statesville, will next year edit The Davidsonian, weekly publication issued by the students of Davidson.

The Davidsonian is the principal organ of expression by the Davidson students, and is a six-column six-page paper published each Thursday, and is printed by the Presbyterian Standard Publishing Co., of Charlotte. During the year just closing the paper was edited by Audrey N. Brown, Jr., of Mineral Wells, Texas.

on the Daily Vacation Bible School. A class of Methods in young people's societies will be led by Miss Lillian Curtis, of Banner Elk, N. C. Miss Curtis is matron at Lees McRae Institute.

Rev. Edgar Woods, of the First Church, Salisbury, N. C., will have charge of vespers, while Miss Margaret Engle, of Agnes Scott College, will lead the recreation periods. Miss Neta Sheping, of Richmond, Va., will act as trained nurse.

An hour will be devoted each day to the interests of the Presbyterian Young People's League, which associates all the the young people's organizations of the Synod. The young people will have charge of this period under the leadership of Mr. Archie Williford, the president. Reports will be made by the different organizations of the Presbyteries. Albemarle Presbytery has won the highest distinction for work done for the last two years. The leader for the current year will be determined by reports made.

The conference will be constantly under the supervision of counsellors chosen from the ministers and other leaders of the Presbyteries and Presbyterials. Mr. Claude T. Carr will have charge of the boys while Miss Margaret McQueen and Miss Mamie McElwee will be head chaperones for the girls.

able citizens have been transformed, and the young people and boys and girls in the schools of the mountains and the western frontiers have been given a new and better outlook upon life. It is estimated that about 500,000 neglected have thus been reached during the year with the Gospel in print.

The Association would like to get in touch with more Christian workers who can co-operate in the distribution of Gospel literature to prisoners, hospital patients and other neglected classes. It also invites correspondence from those who would like to assist in making possible a larger distribution of evangelical literature to those classes included in its missionary book funds.

church buildings, or a gain of from 15 per cent to 40 per cent, with less than 40 per cent increase in the native force, all the gains being on native support.

In comparing these figures to discover the growth of the work one must remember that poverty, restlessness, educational zeal, etc., are responsible for the losing of at least 30 per cent of the membership to other fields, but so far as we can discover a large majority of those leaving attend Church. The isolation from educational facilities, railroad and other advantages tends to draw our people to better developed sections of the country. Nevertheless, we believe we have the youngest station to support an entire Presbytery of its own, and healthy growth in every direction that has placed us in many respects ahead of similar sized stations in the same section of country—our statistics often taking third place in the mission, or just after the larger, five evangelist stations.

Mrs. Cameron Morrison, of Charlotte, N. C., who was formerly Mrs. G. W. Watts, has provided for a ten years' program to complete the physical equipment, and the girls' school and the hospital have received material enlargement, the boys' school a good dormitory, two residences for missionaries added, one within the year, and a Bible Class Building is under construction being a memorial for girls by Mr. Watt's home Church, Durham, N. C.

This year our boys' school has shown a marked improvement, enrolling 90 new pupils out of a total of 160. This is due to two factors: first, a first class Christian faculty, harmonious and efficient, turning out boys who have had no trouble in passing entrance examinations into registered schools; and second, the addition of an industrial department (brass-making), enabling poor Christian boys to earn a part of their expenses.

In the face of a general decline in our Mission of enrollment in boys' school and the insistence that an unregistered school cannot survive, these facts are interesting to say the least. Our girls' school has constantly maintained a place of high regard among the Korean constituency, and the steady growing in attendance and efficiency, together with the success of its industrial work (now caring in part for 50 girls) has amply rewarded the efforts of those who are operating on a budget of $1,600 a year for 160 girls or from one-tenth to one thirtieth the cost in Church schools in America!

This year has seen the practical completion of the Leper settlement, so far as residences are concerned, and a large part of the lepers from Kwangju have been transferred, as well as many new patients received. The cottages of gray stone bid fair to make it a model leper colony.

The medical work has grown to be one of the largest one doctor plants in the entire country, though it continues to require a subsidy of $1,800 and handles 60 per cent charity out of a total of about 12,000 cases!

Increasing poverty is largely responsible for a decided decline in native contributions, and the struggle for existence is more acute, probably, in this rich farming district because, in competition with thirty Japanese, more numerous in the South, Koreans are losing their land the only source of income! In spite of this fact, experiments of loaning 10 per cent of the cost of the larger new church buildings in strategic points, (made possible by the interest from a few thousand dollars, given by Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. J. S. Hill, heirs), for the purpose, has not only supplied pastors with manses, and increased the standard of church building, but has stimulated building of better Churches, and has met a remarkable response in meeting the repayment notes, which keep the fund floating within the Presbytery.

It is needless to add that the growth and success of the work is not directly due to the monetary support, but entirely to the blessing of the Spirit upon consecrated prayer and often developed from a misuse of funds, as is invariably true so long as "to err is human," and the human factor is not infallible. Nevertheless we believe the experiment has fully justified the continued confidence imposed; i. e. that an adequate number of workers, with an adequate physical equipment, will under the providence of God, produce stimulated spiritual fruit which fully justifies the investment and glorifies His Name.

J. C. Crane, D.D.
R. T. Coit.

DAVIDSON COLLEGE CHOOSES NEXT YEAR'S LEADERS

Billy Woods, five-year-old son of Prof. and Mrs. W. W. Woods, of Davidson, has been chosen by the class which graduates from Davidson College next June as their mascot during the commencement exercises. He will accordingly accompany the president of the class to all of the activities. The lad's father is a member of the Davidson faculty.

Over 50 per cent of the Davidson College alumni residing in or near five of the large eastern cities attended local alumni club meetings last week. These cities were Richmond, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. Exactly 130 of a possible 240 men attended the dinner-meetings.

Mr. Milton reported that the largest meeting was in New York, when 44 former students of the institution heard an address on "The Davidson of Tomorrow" by Dr. J. M. McConnell, of the Davidson faculty, who was attending that meeting at a special invitation of the New York chapter. Capt. Geo. H. Weems, former head of the R. O. T. C. department at Davidson, but now stationed at West Point, was also an honored guest and extended an invitation to Davidson alumni in that section to the Army-Davidson game at West Point on October 12.

Miss Mamie Epps, who at present is in charge of the teachers' training work at the Farm Life School in Iredell county, has been secured by Davidson College to supervise and direct the primary work for secondary school teachers at the summer school session of Davidson this year. This announcement has followed closely the statement that Miss Estelle Rawls, supervisor of the grammar grades in Charlotte, had been employed for the grammar school phase.

PLAYING THE PARASITE

David Page

Two business men going down to work on the elevated train one morning were discussing office affairs. One, evidently an executive, told the other about a young man under his direction. "I have talked to him again and again," he said earnestly. "I have said to him: 'You have ability, but you do not use it. You do not perform your work satisfactorily; yet you still want to hang on.'"

The executive did not call the young man a "parasite," but he mentioned the chief characteristic of this pest: it hangs on, drawing out but giving nothing in return.

We are familiar with parasitic forms of vegetable and animal life. In the study of botany we make the acquaintance of the dodder that strikes its roots into the trunk of a tree and saps the life out of its host. Several months ago officials and nurserymen of eight states met in Washington to discuss with heads of the Bureau of Entomology, of the Department of Agriculture, methods whereby the Japanese beetle might be fought. Experts at the Pennsylvania State College have co-operated with a railroad company in sending a special train through the state to aid farmers in the control of wheat smut. The two types of parasite, one insect, one fungus, have caused incalculable damage to the growing food supplies throughout the country.

The word "parasite," in its original sense, means one who eats at the table of another, and in times past the term has denoted men who feasted at the tables of the rich, and who paid their board bill in flattery. They were mere hangers-on, living at the expense of others.

The young man who was the topic of the conversation on the elevated trains was probably unconscious that he belonged to the undesirable company of the parasites. But if all that was said of him was true, he could not be classed otherwise. If he was taking his pay envelope without giving an equivalent return in service, he was an unprofitable guest sitting at the table of society.

We may not agree entirely with all that Elbert Hubbard said, but there is food for thought in the following somewhat exaggerated statement: "To a great degree, so-called society is made up of parasites who fatten and feed upon the industrious and methodical." When a nation becomes overcrowded with unproductive people, there is trouble ahead. For instance, Persia, once a great nation, suffered because too many whose hands were never stained by toil, built luxurious palaces at the expense of the down-trodden laboring classes.

Spurgeon has expressed his splendid contempt for the good-for-nothing: "As vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke to the eyes," so is the sluggard to every man who is spending his sweat to earn an honest living, while their fellows let the grass grow up to their ankles, and stand cumbering the ground, as the Bible says."

Playing the parasite in the economic and social world is full of peril, but the dangers of this are more subtle in the spiritual life. In an English religious monthly a writer who was discussing "Christ's Secret of Peace" said that if a man craves for relief from the torture of an anxious heart, to be set free for better things, Jesus says to him, "Come unto me, . . . and I will give you rest." "But if a man be merely querulous," the writer continues, "and fretting to be rid of disciplinary cares, that he may give himself to the repose of an ignoble sloth, he will find no answer to his quest in Christ. And it is just here that the idle

Miss Eppes is a graduate of the Harrisonburg Normal School in Virginia and Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn. Her postgraduate work was done at Columbia University in New York. Her principal work in the Davidson summer school session will be a primary demonstration class in drawing, penmanship and physical training. Obtaining the services of Miss Eppes and Miss Rawls followed a demand for a practical course in school teachers. The theoretical branch will be in charge of Prof. L. B. Henderson, member of the Davidson faculty:

Charles C. Orr, Jr., of Asheville, was selected president of the Davidson College Glee Club for 1929-1930, with J. H. Ramsenr, of Lincolnton, and J. A. Cannon, Jr., of Concord, as vice-presidents, and R. W. McDermid, of Charleston, S. C., as business manager.

parasites of religion come literally grief. They are disappointed and ease because the faith of Christ has so little to them. In truth, it has given them what they sought—discipline from duty and a lazy rest. Christ no such soul-destroying gifts to give. When Amos, the prophet, exclaimed: "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion he was thinking of those who were ing the parasite. He predicted punishment for men who lived in luxurious and who wished to escape the duties of life laid upon them.—Forward.

"... FOR THAT WHICH SAITH FIETH NOT"

The high cost of living is driving people mad. We are making more than ever before, and spending it faster than we make it. That would be enough within itself, but the worst of the story comes in the fact that we spend our money "for that which fieth not," to use the words of I. Pastor O. C. S. Wallace, of Eutaw Church, Baltimore, tells this story:

My hair stood on end when I read the daily papers that each guest who present at the opening dinner of a hotel in Baltimore would pay ten dollars for the privilege of eating, drinking and wearing his best clothes on that occasion. Why this sudden, tingling, perpendicular activity on the part of the white that usually recline so peacefully on the pate? Because I instantly wondered many Baptists would invest ten, twenty, thirty, forty or fifty dollars in the music and fellowship of that luxurious hour. I had spent an hour or two long before discussing with State Secretary Watts the needs of the work of the Lord and the giving of some of the best saints of the Lord, and perhaps nerves were in an especially lively condition. This may account for the trouble with my hair when I read the aforementioned advertisement.

It is not hard to spend freely or carelessly what we love fondly—pictures or diamonds, dinners, missions or churches.

Such newspaper stories appear every community every day. We do not condemn the mere gathering of our people in delightful social fellowship, but it would be better, we guess, if we return to the good old custom of taining in our homes, about our own sides, rather than almost exclusively expensive hotels and restaurants, often is the case today; but what regret to observe is the wanton with which church people spend money for banquets and dances, gambling bouts, and the steadily decreasing receipts of many so-called churches towards missions, benevolence and Christian education.—Christian

THE NEW DIRECTORY OF WORSHIP

One of the vital matters to come before the General Assembly is the consideration of the new Directory for Worship."

In 1924 the Ad Interim Committee on Amendments to the Book of Church Order directed "to consider a revision of the Directory of Worship."

In 1925, at the request of the former committee a new committee was appointed "On the Revision of the Directory of Worship." In 1926 the report of the Ad Interim Committee on Amendments to the Directory of Worship was received and the committee for continuation for the next year was granted.

The committee presented its report. The General Assembly approved the revised 'Directory of Worship' as amended and recommends it to the Presbyteries."

In 1928 "The vote of the Presbyteries on the revision of the Directory for Worship was taken and referred to a select committee for consideration."

The committee reported back that a large majority had voted approval, but recommended the following action:

"That the enactment of the Directory of Worship be postponed for one year, and that the matter of the Directory for Worship be recommitted to the Ad Interim Committee on 'Optional Forms' for final report in 1929."

The recommendation was adopted. This year the General Assembly took range action. An Assembly can postpone action on amendments to the Book of Church Order that have received the advice and consent of a majority of the Presbyterians, but cannot postpone enactment, because it must know whether the next Assembly will enact and enact" or "disapprove and refuse to enact."

The Assembly of 1928 postponed, it in effect failed to approve and enact.

It is also hard to see just what the Assembly did by recommitting to the Ad Interim Committee.

It was for further perfecting and amending which recommitting usually means, the changes on the part of the committee to take all that has gone before. For the Assembly of 1927 approved a certain paper, and recommended that paper to the Presbyteries.

The Presbyteries gave their advice and consent on that very paper.

The Assembly of 1928 failed or declined to enact that very paper. They then recommended that paper or report to the same committee.

That committee changes or revises the report, it ceases to be the report or paper approved and recommended by the Assembly of 1927, and then receiving the advice and consent of a majority of the Presbyteries. The committee cannot change a word of that report, but they make final report this year. But the recommitting of the report instead of giving its approval and enactment, really wipe out all that had been done before? Dr. Smoot in his "Parliamentary Principles" says: "If a report is recommitted before it has been adopted by the Court, what has passed in the Committee has no validity, and the whole question comes again before the Committee, as if nothing had transpired concerning it." If the Assembly of 1928 had postponed action then the Assembly of 1929 or any subsequent Assembly could have considered the report with a view to approval and enactment. But when that Assembly recommitted it; that action wiped out the approval of the Assembly of 1927 and the advice and consent of the Presbyteries.

The Committee should bring in a revised and improved report. Then the Assembly of 1929 can study, and if it sees fit, can approve and recommend the revised report.

Then if this received the advice and consent of a majority of the Presbyteries, the Assembly of 1930, if it sees fit, can finally approve and enact.

While we doubt that the Assembly of 1928 realized fully what they were doing, a closer study of the "Revised Directory" shows that it needs further consideration and perhaps revision.

The Committee wrought well. Many of the changes are admirable. But there are some that should be more carefully considered.

When in paragraph 346 and 354 they add in regard to the baptism of infants "some other responsible person" instead of saying some one who has the right to stand "in loco parentis," they open the way for the whole abuse of godparents. That is how the custom of having godparents started. "Some responsible person, not the parent, brought the child for baptism." That clause ought to be changed.

In paragraph 341 pageants go to prayer meeting. When we recall the puerile piffle that is being put off as pageants, we resent a prayer meeting being littered with such stuff.

In 340 and 342 the way is opened wide for our good women to pray in our prayer meetings. If the Church wants this, all right, but did the Church know that it was doing this?

In chapter VIII, while they have introduced much that is admirable, they have put too much of petty detail into our constitution.

We may want to change the name of our "Committee on Religious Education." We may want to abolish our "Workers' Council," without having to amend our standards.

Principles, not petty details, should be found in our Constitution. And then they have taken out here two of the noblest and most useful things in the old Directory where soul-winning and visiting as duties of the teachers go out. And while we are wooing our United Presbyterian Churches, is no time to throw out Sabbath School and replace it with Sunday School.

The lost vestige of "fencing the tables" goes out of paragraph 358.

Any teaching of our baptized children in Creed and Catechism, by way of preparation for admission to sealing ordinances, is left out. They are not even to be taught to pray, for that charge in the old Directory is left out.

Many other defects, most of them of a minor nature might be pointed out.

The New Directory has been recommitted to the Committee. We trust that Committee will bring us in such a Directory, as the great ability of the men having the matter in charge gives us a right to expect. J. M. W.

THE GOAL FOR APRIL

Now that April has come, it is hoped that no one of our Sunday Schools and our organizations for Young People shall be allowed to forget that this is the month for their contribution to the Student Loan Fund. New literature, which has come from our Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, furnishes material, the reading of which, will warm the heart and brain of any boy or girl who loves the Master's kingdom. For—ignorance begets lack of interest. Living pictures of what boys and girls feel, suffer, yearn for, must be presented in detail.

Years ago, a story telling woman gathered each Sunday afternoon a group of boys and girls of the junior ages and told them missionary stories. The telling of these stories naturally involved a vivid color scheme of the customs and religions of heathendom. Some of the children went home and told their mothers. One mother, the wife of a fairly prosperous business man, said "Where in the kingdom did she find out about that?" at the same time sending a request to be permitted to attend these narrative gatherings.

The question, "Where in the kingdom, etc?" was easily answered by the advice to read her missionary magazine, study-books and some biographies of missionary heroes. So let us read, think and pray.

Just now a strong presentation of the educational work of our church is being made. The need of trained leaders has never been more pressing. Young People's organizations should avail themselves freely of the literature sent out by the Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief. Programs of beauty and power can be made from such leaflets as "To the Uttermost Parts of the Earth," which shows how one radiant spirit, compelled to stay at home, was used to send light and healing to remotest regions. It is in the form of a playlet and can be presented with few rehearsals.

There are many others, too numerous to mention. "What a Man's Hand is to Man," is a story of gripping and tender interest; it shows how bereavement so wrought upon a man's heart that the veil of a self-centered life was torn away and his sturdy manhood flung itself into the field of Christian education, giving it freely to boys and girls who were longing for a larger horizon. Among the most enlightening and convincing leaflets are those from the pen of Dr. Henry H. Sweets himself, setting forth the present needs, giving figures and other cogent facts.

At this writing, news has come of a great flood in the south where three hundred and fifty school children are marooned on the second floor of a building, panic stricken and beyond the control of their teachers. The thought of their terror and of the suspense of their parents finds an answered pang in the hearts of all, not utterly indifferent. To-day we can visualize a far greater number of boys and girls, who are summoning us to open for them the avenues of knowledge and training in the realm of preparation for the service of the great Head of the church. Shall we bar from this realm any of the applicants already enrolled and begging for opportunity?

May the Young People and the Sunday Schools sound a call so piercing that the whole church may be aroused to its privilege of sending them forth to a world of thought and effort.

Hard times? Yes, but miracles of giving have been achieved by a vision of beauty and an inflexible purpose. This kind of purpose looks toward the goal and spurns obstacles out of the path. As another writer has said, suppose we should find that we have excluded from service a Livingstone of a Mary Slessor! By our own selfish absorption, too! At least let our gifts be somewhat in proportion to what all of us, young and old, spend on ourselves and our indulgences. And—don't let's call it the widow's mite!

THE ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

The General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers has a catalogue that is a fine piece of work, just as the students they turn out each year.

The story of this school, its wonderful growth since 1914, reads like a fairy story, but as in life's fairy stories it never ends, but goes on each year growing larger and doing better work.

It has a fine faculty, and its graduates scattered over the Church, are adding to its reputation.

These are great days in which we live, and each year we are the more impressed by what study in Church work this age is witnessing.

PROPOSED ANNUITY PLAN—I

Rev. R. W. Jopling

a copy of the Annuity Plan which has been prepared and sent out by the Executive Committee of Ministerial Relief. The authors invite "constructive suggestions." I have accordingly made my suggestions in private to the home office. They have produced the desired results. Therefore I now voice criticisms before the whole church. I am proceeding to do this, but I cannot in good conscience keep silent. If the plan is sound, no criticism can harm it; if it is not sound, it ought to be criticised until its defects are discovered and corrected. In that belief I proceed.

What is the Proposed Annuity Plan? Omitting technical details it is this: Each minister of our church is to contribute into the treasury of the fund two and one-half per cent of his annual salary and each church is to contribute into the treasury seven and one-half per cent of the annual salary paid each minister. When a minister shall have completed 35 years of active ministry, when ten per cent of his salary shall have been paid into the treasury for 35 years, and when the minister shall have reached the age of 65 years, then he may retire on an annuity of one-half of his average salary for the 35 years of his active ministry. If his salary has averaged $1,000 a year, his annuity will be $500; if his salary has averaged $1,200 a year, his annuity will be $600.

What if there is any default in the payments to the fund, the annuity shall be proportionately reduced.

What if the minimum annuity shall not be less than $200 a year?

What if those in charge of the fund shall have authorized a maximum annuity which shall not be more than $2,000 a year?

What if a minister, whose dues have been paid for a year or more, is permanently disabled before he has served in the active ministry for thirty-five years, shall he receive a minimum annuity of $600 a year? If his salary shall not be over 40 per cent of his average salary for the last five years, or 50 per cent thereof, he has served, next preceding his retirement. If his salary was $4,000 per year, his annuity will be forty per cent of this, or $1,600, whereas the annuity of a minister who has served on for 35 years and fulfilled the other conditions, will be 50 per cent of his, or $2,000.

What if a minister retired on 40 per cent of his previous salary and another minister retired on 50 per cent of his previous salary, with no other conditions? Why is one minister to receive more than another? Why is one minister to receive more than another? That is what I do not understand about this plan. That is what its sponsors have failed to explain to me. That is what with all my disapproval. It seems to me to provide the least for those who would naturally need the least, and the most for those who would naturally need the most.

What if the reasons which have been presented in favor of the plan. They claim:

1. It is "practically impossible" to guarantee a minister the same annuity. I do not remember the same annuity for all, though I think that preferable to an annuity in proportion to salary, as provided in this plan. Why is it impossible to guarantee the same annuity to all? Mathematically or actuarially practically? By no means. Others do it, as we shall see. Do our churches balk at it? No. Do ministers of small or medium salary object to it? It would increase the annuity of the former and decrease that of the latter. Then the only ones who object to it are those ministers who receive large salaries. Do they object? I cannot believe they would not object to receiving an annuity of something less than $2,000 so that their aged brother ministers might receive an annuity of something more than $600. The Anglican Church has adopted an annuity plan whereby every minister upon retirement shall receive a flat annuity of £100 sterling. I have a clipping from the Times which states that the California Teachers' Association has adopted an annuity plan whereby every teacher pays into the treasury a percentage of his salary, and every teacher upon retirement receives the same annuity. It was that every teacher upon retirement should receive an annuity in proportion to previous salary, and the proposal was voted down on the ground that it was adopted primarily for the benefit of those in the country whose salaries were small and needs were therefore greater. Shall ministers of the gospel have less consideration for their aged fellow ministers than school teachers for their aged fellow teachers? If we are to hang our heads in shame, let us be able and consecrated men have approved the plan and that similar plans have been adopted by most of the leading churches in America. That is true. I have a copy of the plans of these other churches. These facts are only presumptively in favor of the plan, not at all conclusive. We follow no man or set of men blindly. The plan no matter by whom approved or adopted must stand or fall solely upon its merits. I shall consider it upon its merits later.

2. That when similar plans have been adopted by other churches, they have led to a great "leveling up of salaries." The only church in America which has a plan like this in full operation is the Protestant Episcopal. They inaugurated their annuity plan in 1917. In 1925 they put on an entirely separate and distinct drive to increase the salaries of their poorly paid ministers. According to a letter from one of their number the salaries now paid their ministers vary from $1,600 (without manse) to $20,000 (with manse) per year. Not much leveling up of salaries there. We have been trying to level up salaries for some years, yet there seems to be greater disparity between the salaries paid our ministers today than ever before. The sponsors for this plan have informed me that the salaries now paid our ministers range from $800 to $12,000 per year. I fail to see anything in this plan calculated to level up salaries. In any event it will be time enough to consider the adoption of an annuity plan which provides that each minister shall receive an annuity in proportion to previous salary, AFTER the salaries have been leveled up, not before.

3. That the salaries of our ministers are unequal, then "why should not annuities be unequal, too?" The sponsors for this plan agree that the present disparity in the salaries is an evil and speak favorably of "leveling up salaries." Is it right to make an acknowledged evil the ground for perpetrating another evil? It is quite a different matter for one church, being rich, to pay its pastor a large salary and another church, being poor, to pay its pastor a small salary, on one hand, and on the other hand, for the General Assembly, which is over the whole church of which all our ministers are members, to deliberately plan to hand out one of her ministers in old age an annuity of $2,000 and to cut off another of her ministers equally faithful and equally or more needy with an annuity of $600. Each church is a corporate entity, free to pay its own minister as much as it will or can, and Presbytery concurring. Some churches are able to pay more, others less; some ministers having more dependents need more, others less; it costs more to live in some places than in others; the scale of living demanded in some pastorate is more expensive than in others. But the difference between the needs of our aged ministers does not vary in proportion to previous salary, or in proportion of $2,000 to $600 per year. The General Assembly, as a corporate entity over all our churches and all our ministers, must make an equitable distribution of the funds in her treasury, from whatever source derived, and must see to it that the needs of every minister are supplied before she distributes largesses to others above their needs. Everybody knows that $600 is not enough to supply the barest needs of a minister and family in these times.

4. That the cost of living varies in different places, so that the salaries and the annuities should vary too. This argument has been practically answered in 4, above. The cost of living does not vary in direct proportion to the salaries received and the annuities should not do so either.

5. That all sorts of plans for the care of our aged ministers have been tried and have failed, that our pathway is strewn with their wrecks; that this plan is business-like, has been approved by the ablest actuaries in America and will succeed. Therefore it ought to be adopted. Other plans have not been a signal success, but it was not the fault of the plan, but of the manner in which we operated it. We never pushed the plan with sustained zeal and determination. The purpose of the plan being to care for aged ministers our ministers felt a natural hesitancy in pushing it, our laymen did not take the lead, and so the cause suffered for want of leadership. This much is true of the old plans: The funds received through them were equitably disbursed to the beneficiaries in proportion to their respective needs. That is more than this plan proposes to do, and the fact that it does not propose to do that ought to kill it.

6. These six reasons have been advanced in favor of this plan by its sponsors. Note the fact that in so far as support for this plan is concerned, the Bible might as well never have been written. It is not so much as mentioned even once. Why? I do not know, unless it be that no support for it can be found there.

I have tried in vain to find some passage of Scripture with which to bolster up this plan. A recent writer in cold blooded fashion applies the saying of Jesus, "Unto him that hath shall be given. . . but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that he hath," to the inequalities in the salaries paid our ministers. He says that God calls all sorts of men into the ministry, that the church ordains them and sends them forth, that every one has a fair chance, that every one finds his own level, that if one's salary is small, it is proof that one is a poor preacher and he has no one to blame but himself, that the church has no further responsibility. Jesus wherever He uses this saying applies it to people who had the opportunity and the duty to believe and serve God and be saved, but who were unfaithful, and so lost both salvation and the opportunity of obtaining it.

Our poorly paid ministers stand not in the place of the one-talent man, but in the place of the two-talent man who was as highly commended as the five-talent man. There is nothing to show that our poorly paid ministers are not as consecrated and as faithful in the use of their gifts for God as the most talented among us. I mention this lest some one might try to apply this Scripture in support of this annuity plan.

So much for the arguments used in favor of the plan. In our next paper we take up the plan on its merits.

THE PROPOSED ANNUITY PLAN—II

Up to this point we have been considering the arguments presented in favor of the annuity plan. We now consider the plan on its merits.

Our church gets its creed, polity, life, everything from the Bible. We accept it as, "The only infallible rule of faith and practice." We are strong on the headship of Jesus Christ over all things to the church." It follows therefore that any plan, annuity or other sort, adopted by the church, must be in harmony with the Bible, and that the burden of proof that this plan is in harmony with the Bible rests squarely upon its sponsors. This they have been urged to do, but so far no attempt has been made in this direction.

We now take up some of the underlying principles involved in this plan. What are they? They are:

1. That the need of an aged and infirm minister has nothing to do with the annuity he should receive; that it is right for the General Assembly to retire two aged ministers equally needy, one on $2,000 per year and the other on $600 per year.

2. That the church as a corporate entity after guaranteeing to some of its ministers an annuity of $600, has no further responsibility for them.

3. That each minister himself and the particular churches he serves during his active ministry are (above $600 per year) alone responsible for his maintenance in age and infirmity.

4. That a minister's worth to the church is in direct proportion to the salary he receives during his active ministry, and hence the church's obligation to him is in the same proportion.

These principles are clearly seen in this plan. Are they all or any one of them in harmony with the Bible? No, not one.

We next note some doctrines taught in the Bible which seem to bear on the subject in hand.

The Bible tells us (1 Sam. 30:21-25) that David, some 3,000 years ago, decreed that men who started in pursuit of the enemy and fainted by the way, should receive of the spoils share and share alike with those who pressed on, defeated the enemy and captured the spoils. That would seem to teach that a minister whose strength failed before he had served for 35 years, should be treated in the same manner as one who had served on to that limit. He gave his all, whether God gave him strength for 3 or 35 years; no man can give more. The Bible does not countenance discrimination against him because his strength failed, but this plan does.

The Bible further teaches us that we are each one part of one organism, that we are members one of another, that when one member rejoices, all rejoice; when one suffers, all suffer; that the strong should help the weak, the rich should help the poor; that those who have should give to relieve the distress of those who have not. The Bible certainly seems to make a man's NEED the measure of the care the church should take of him. Jesus in the parable of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10:30-37) shows the Samaritan rendering first aid on the spot, taking the unfortunate man to an inn, caring for him in person until he must needs depart, on leaving, giving money to the inn-keeper and saying to him, "Take care of him, and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee." Take what sort of care of him? Adequate care, whatever care he needs. Certainly that is the meaning. At Pentecost when distress arose among the early Christians, and those who had possession sold them and brought the money to the apostles, what did they do with it? Distribute to every one in proportion to previous salary? No. Distribution was made unto every man according as he had need. Acts 4:35. "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" 1 John 3:17. The NEED! the NEED!! the NEED!!! That is the Bible basis and measure of the aid to be rendered to every man. That is the spirit of the whole book. Yet this annuity plan does not consider a man's need at all.

Three ministers of the Presbyterian Church in the United States went down from Jerusalem to Jericho. One fell by the wayside permanently disabled. Along came the Secretary of Ministerial Relief, representative of the whole church, and saw him. Whereupon the secretary took out his books and looking up the poor fellow's record, noted the fact that he had not served for 35 years and had not reached the age of 65, also that his dues had all been paid to date. He then calculated his average salary for the past five years and

A Prayer

O, little bird that knows no strife
Teach me to live a peaceful life.
In work, in play, in leisure hours
Your song is heard in leafy bowers,

O, little bird, teach me to sing
Forgetting what the day may bring,
Help me to live and love and be Calm, hopeful, through adversity.

I met God in the morning
When the day was at its best,
And His presence came like sunrise,
Like a glory within my breast.

All day long the presence lingered;
All day long He stayed with me;
And we sailed in perfect calmness
O'er a very troubled sea.

Other ships were blown and battered:
Other ships were sore distressed;
But the winds that seemed to drive them
Brought to us a peace and rest.

Then I thought of other mornings
With a keen remorse of mind,
When I too had loosed the moorings
With the Presence left behind.

So I think I know the secret
Learned from many a troubled way
You must seek Him in the morning
If you want Him through the day.

GROUP CONFERENCE—FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY

The Group Conference of District No. 7 of the Fayetteville Presbytery was held at Elise, N. C., Church and a large delegation of women represented the Auxiliaries of the different Churches of the District.

Miss Sara Williams, Secretary of Elise High School, asked that each delegate contribute toward a pantry shower for the school and a generous response was made to this appeal.

In addition to the general offering; which is usually used to defray the expenses of the Foreign Missionary's journey to the Conference, but upon this occasion that was paid by our president, Mrs. W. M. Fairly, in order that the general offering be given to the school. Three purses were sent to the School from the Auxiliary at Carthage, and at Cameron and from one of the school's best friends, Mr. M. McL. McKeithen, of Cameron.

The welcome address was made by Miss Flora MacDonald, president of the hostess Auxiliary in her wholehearted cordial way with words most fitting.

Miss Isabelle MacLeod conducted a beautiful devotional. The lesson taught by our Saviour to Mary and Martha, setting forth the value of hospitality in the home without "Much Serving."

Mrs. W. M. Fairley gave a fine address on the work and explained many problems.

Miss Mary Sherwood MacDonald of the Elise faculty gave one of the most helpful talks of the day on "The Duties of the Circle Chairman."

Mrs. R. A. MacLeod, Miss Aureade Fry and Mrs. Grissom favored the Conference with a beautiful song.

Mrs. G. H. West, made a fine talk on "Assembly's Home Missions."

Miss Lucile Purcell told of her work as Secretary of Foreign Missions the subject which was interesting to all and at the closing she asked that prayer be made for Rev. and Mrs. Charles W. Worth and their three children. Mr. Worth until recently was pastor of the Carthage Church. It was with deep regret that they gave them up to return to their work in China.

Mrs. Lacy Buie made a fine appeal for "The White Cross Work."

The ladies served our lunch in the dining room of the school and as we entered we felt that we were at a dinner party, so attractive were the tables with their linen and silver and center pieces of beautiful nasturtiums glowing with color.

Such as feast as we had! Chicken salad, pickles, wafers, sandwiches and coffee and cake, all was delicious and we ate like school boys. It was hard for Mrs. Fairley to get us back to the Church, but she finally did, when Miss Elizabeth Ray played a couple of selections.

Rev. R. A. McLeod, pastor of the hostess Church and Bible teacher at Elise school conducted the devotional, which was very fine. The subject was "Religion in the home." The family altar was the paramount thought of his message.

Miss Kate Sutton and Mrs. A. S. Cromartie made reports on their work, for lack of time Mrs. J. A. Jones' talk was not given and Mrs. Suttentfield and Mrs. W. M. McLeod could not be with us on account of sickness.

Miss Lena Fountain, of Korea, a lovely blonde in her twenties, was as beautiful in her Korean costume of blue and white silk, as was her message. Surely her radiant face was lighted with that light of Jesus, as she made her appeal.

Mr. Stuart Evans made a fine appeal for Elise High School. The hour had grown late and many of the delegates had to start home so failed to hear it, we regret to say.

A report of the Conference was given by Mrs. Edwin A. West, chairman of the registration committee.

We hope that some good was wrought for the Master on that day, but there is not a woman in the District who does not remember the day with a heartache, as it brought sorrow to two of our most outstanding and best loved members.

At noon the beautiful old home of Miss Isabelle McLeod, lady principal of Elise High School, was burned to the ground.

Just as the day was fading into night a dense fog settled over the country and there was an automobile accident, the result of which the beloved brother of Miss MacDonald, of the faculty of Elise School, Mr. C. N. MacDonald, was taken to be forever with his Saviour.

It is only when we remember that God's wisdom is infinite that we can bow in submission to his mysterious way.

(Mrs. C. A., Jr.) Mary K. Prevost,
Chairman of District No. 7.

LIFE CHALLENGES FROM THE RISEN CHRIST

Bible Study for 1929-30

This little book is just what the name implies, real challenges from our Risen Lord, challenges that will stir our women to greater things in His name. Miss McCaughey has divided the book of Acts into 12 lessons. The division is based upon "Pivotal Events," and in this way the whole book is covered in a complete and most interesting way. The outlines are clear, to the point, and very easy to follow. They are practical in every way, still the spiritual appeal is strong indeed. I feel confident that the "personal application messages" at the close of each lesson will long be cherished in the hearts of our women for the practical and real uplift they bring.

LAURINBURG AUXILIARY REPORTS

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church of Laurinburg, N. C., held its annual March meeting Monday afternoon, March 18, which closed the church year 1928-1929. After the minutes were read and a few preliminary arrangements were made relative to the Presbyterial, Mrs. M. J. McQuire most fittingly expressed the appreciation of the Auxiliary to our president, Mrs. George F. Avinger, who has so willingly and capably led the Auxiliary through its most successful year.

The treasurer, Mrs. D. C. McNeill's report, surpassed any in previous years. The total contributions for the Auxiliary were $5,966. This amount shows an increase of $2,329 over the preceding year and an increase of $716 over any previous year since its organization in 1920. The sum given to the Sunday School building amounted to $2,000, and to foreign missions $927. The Auxiliary is very grateful for this excellent report.

Each secretary of the different causes gave a most interesting report of their work during the past year. They stated what had been accomplished in their particular fields.

The circle leaders also made a report of their work. Each leader gave an account of any outside activity in which they had been engaged. They reported their average attendance at the circle meetings and thanked their members for co-operating so splendidly.

It was announced that circle number 6 was the banner circle, having had the largest average attendance at the circle and Auxiliary meetings. Twenty-five dollars was awarded them which was included in their contributions.

Mr. A. R. McQueen gave a most inspiring talk to the Auxiliary which was a challenge to service. He congratulated the Auxiliary on their reports and pointed out not only the possibilities of service in our contributions but the fact that the members themselves had been benefitted. Through service he stated there is spiritual growth.

Mr. Craig was in charge of the installation services for all the new officers. In a short talk he impressed them with their responsibility as leaders and their privileges for service. He asked the officers to stand and pledge their loyalty to the church and to their new leadership. The other members of the Auxiliary pledged to co-operate with these leaders in every possible way. This simple ceremony was most impressive, inspiring each leader to earnestly serve.

The Auxiliary officers for the coming year are: President, Mrs. Peter McLean; vice-president, Mrs. M. J. McGuire; secretary, Mrs. Quinn Covington; treasurer, Mrs. D. C. McNeill.

The total attendance was ninety. The average attendance at these meetings during the year was 79.

The meeting was dismissed with a prayer by Mr. McQueen, which concluded the record for this church year. Every member may justly be proud of the record made and grateful for her privilege in making this report possible.

The Laurinburg Presbyterian Church will entertain the Fayetteville Presbyterial April 9th and 10th. The delegates are asked to send their names to Mrs. D. McNeill, Jr., as soon as possible.

Secretary of Auxiliary.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY AT SALISBURY

The Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church of Salisbury, N. C., for the past year has presented a blue ribbon at each meeting to the circle having the largest attendance with the promise of a party at the end of the year in honor of the circle winning the most blue ribbons. Circle 5, Mrs. R. W. Walker, chairman, proved the winner, having secured five blue ribbons. On Friday evening, March 8th, a party was given in their honor, which proved one of the most enjoyable affairs ever held by the Auxiliary.

In the church hut, which was a bower of green and yellow, the arriving guests passed down the receiving line of circle five and each took her seat in the section of chairs reserved for her circle. The program opened with a clever group song written in honor of circle 5, after which Mrs. F. B. Gwin, Auxiliary president, congratulated the honorees in a witty little speech and Mrs. Walker responded. Each circle then contributed something to the entertainment of circle five. Circle one read a sonnet, after which the small daughter of one of the members, in a cunning, old-fashioned costume stepped out, bearing a huge hat box. From this she presented each member of circle five with a bright colored crepe-paper Easter bonnet and an old-fashioned nosegay.

The high school girls' circle put on an amusing stunt: "The Smith Family Crosses the R. R. Tracks" and a beautiful reading by one of their members.

Circle six contributed an amusing reading, "It's nothing to laugh at as I can see," by a tiny tot and a St. Patrick's day dance by another little girl.

Circle four gave a toast to number five and the business girls' circle had the honorees run a relay race, in which they donned coat, hat and Bible, walked to the Auxiliary and removed them, amid much laughter and excitement.

The home circle conferred upon each member of circle five the order of "The Golden Daffodil," and the college girls' contributed a piano solo.

Circle five closed the program with two eloquent tributes to the loyalty and faithfulness of No. five.

After more songs and a general mix-up, delicious refreshments were served. Circle five were served at a beautiful decorated honor table, where, with their bright bonnets and bouquets they looked like a bed of radiant flowers.

This party not only closed the year with a splendid spirit of good fellowship, but over and over members were heard to remark, "One thing sure, my circle is going to win in attendance next year."

CHILDREN

EASTER VISITORS

Easter Eve and Mr. Appleby, the pet shop, was closing up for the day. It was a good thing for the owner because he was not a prophet, because he did not know what was going to happen on the dusk of Easter Eve and on the morning of Easter Morning, he would not have been quite so cheerfully.

It had been a very brisk business and Mr. Appleby had sold a number of furry little bunnies, yellow chicks and ducklings. But bunnies were popular for their large families and he had a windowful of little and big bunnies about nibbling at carrots.

Mr. Appleby was getting into a bad light, all innocent and ignorant as he was going on at his shop, a taxi-cab touring car right on its radiator was really more like a smack on the nose. The touring car was surprised. It bounced away from the taxi, turned completely around and drove backwards into the big window of the pet shop belonging to poor Mr. Appleby.

In a minute a very frightened rabbit came limping out of the cab, followed by two or three or four angry bunnies of the touring car. A cop who had just seen the crash came running to the scene and blew his whistle as he ran. But the children were not interested in what they saw.

The legs of the rabbits are far more interesting than while. There were four large rabbits, six middle-sized rabbits and fourteen little rabbits. When the touring car crashed into the window, the rabbits scattered in all directions, but they all got into the pet shop as there was a partition. They dodged the chairs and burrowed in the straw, and when the cop arrived, they had a good whiff of fresh spring air and then jumped out of the broken window.

In Pittsburg, from the Mayor's office that there were twenty-four rabbits running the city streets.

In excitement, the rabbits all got to the corner where the accident happened, and following Old Granddaddy Lopear they all went hippity-hop.

Old Granddaddy Lopear wasn't exactly a highbrow, in fact, he was any more sense than he looked for. He went solemnly up the street in the direction of a nice lawn around the corner of the house, where the grass was green. The other rabbits followed him because that was easier than thinking of going to go.

It happened that the house on the corner belonged to a family named the Joneses. Nancy Jones was eight and too young to be in the Easter rabbit. Billy was five and still believed. Nancy was thirsty that night, and being a child, she got up and got herself a drink, not disturbing anybody else. There was a little balcony outside her room and after her drink, Nancy stepped out on her balcony.

She looked up at the sky. Then she looked up and down the dim quiet street and there was a street light right in front of the house and something under it caught her eyes. She leaned over and stared. Lots and lots of rabbits were marching along the street! She had never heard that child gasp while she just stood and stared, and Old Granddaddy Lopear turned around on the lawn (of course, she didn't see Granddaddy Lopear), when she turned in, she ran swiftly into the house.

She got into a crib in the corner of the room and Nancy rushed over to him and pulled him by the arm.

"Quick! Wake up! Wake up! Wake up! Easter Rabbits!" she said, "quick! Wake up! Wake up! Wake up! Easter Rabbits!"

He was half asleep as he tumbled out of bed and padded behind his sister's door. "My, how he rubbed his eyes when he saw the lawn dotted with white rabbits!" said Nancy softly to her hands. "I saw 'em marching down the street!"

"Down and catch some," said Billy, and he replied his sister anxiously.

They were even supposed to be seeing the rabbits. They'd go away without leaving any tracks. Children watched in silence for the rabbits to creep happily to bed.

Next morning, of course, they told their mother and Big Sister Ann about the rabbits they had seen, but Nancy could see Susie May has a PINK frock banded with light GREEN ribbon. Her slippers are PINK also and the string of beads about her neck.

Teddy wears a TAN (use BROWN and YELLOW mixed, lightly) blouse with White collar and cuffs and a RED tie. His trousers are dark BROWN so are his shoes.

the lilies are White with YELLOW centers and GREEN leaves; the tulip comes next, it is RED with GREEN leaves; the next flower is PURPLE with GREEN leaves and the last tulip is YELLOW with GREEN leaves. The floor is made of GREEN and White tiles and you can see the BLUE sky out of the window almost to the floor, for it is the sun parlor.

CHURCH NEWS

SAD DEATH OF MRS. E. C. CALDWELL

Mrs. E. C. Caldwell, wife of Dr. E. C. Caldwell, of Union Seminary, was accidentally killed on April 2, when their car was struck by a fast express. Dr. Caldwell was also seriously injured. The car was demolished.

The Standard offers its deepest sympathy to Dr. Caldwell with prayer that he may recover without permanent injuries.

PERSONAL

The Standard extends sympathy to Dr. D. Clay Lilly, of Reynolda Church, near Winston-Salem, N. C., in the accidental death of his five-year-old grandson, James Foster. The child was riding with a young lady guest in Dr. Lilly's home, when their car collided at a street intersection with a public cab.

Mr. J. M. Allardyce, of San Antonio, Texas, is visiting in Mecklenburg Presbytery. Mr. Allardyce, who is a retired merchant of San Antonio, visited our Mexican fields at his own expense, and is travelling through the churches in the south giving accounts of his observations. He has already been in the Tenth Avenue Church and the Sharon Church, and has engagements in several others around Charlotte.

Mr. Allardyce is also interested in personal evangelism, and by the use of prayer lists in connection with his talks on individual work with individuals, he seeks to awaken the laymen to a deeper concern for this important feature of Christian service.

Mr. Allardyce will attend the meeting of Mecklenburg Presbytery at Steele Creek, April 9, where he will make a short address on the subjects he is so deeply interested in.

NORTH CAROLINA

Durham, Trinity Avenue Church—The pastor of this church, Rev. Geo. L. Cooper, announced eight members received Easter Sunday. Thirty-nine were received the past year. A few weeks ago this church had a special service arranged for the young people and were fortunate in securing Mrs. Hazen Smith, of Duke University, as speaker. She brought a helpful and inspiring message.

Fayetteville First—In this church, of which Rev. F. C. Symonds is pastor, the Auxiliary report for the year tabulated 278 women as members, 658 trays sent to homes of sickness, 693 gifts of flowers, a budget of $3,300.00 subscribed, and 4,547 visits made in interest of the church.

The Men of the Church were used as the canvassers for church pledges recently made and during the preliminary meeting held Thursday night, March 21, they made their own personal pledges which totalled $6,000.00.

Virginia Smith, Church Secretary.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet in its two hundred and thirty-second stated meeting in the First Presbyterian Church, Red Springs, N. C., on April 23, 1929, at 8:00 p. m. R. A. McLeod, S. C.

Tarboro — The Howard Memorial Presbyterian Church has just closed a year of progress and many blessings. Our pastor, Rev. T. L. Harnsberger has delighted our hearts and he has been able to see the work prosper in his hands. There has been no special series of services for bringing in a harvest of souls, but a steady increase in membership is noticed. Twenty additions on profession of faith and twenty by letter from other churches during the year. There has been a remarkable growth in numbers as well as zeal and interest in the Sabbath School. It is well graded with a fine corps of teachers under a consecrated young superintendent who is putting real life and spirit into it. Each Sabbath morning fifteen minutes before the opening hour, the teachers and officers with the pastor meet for prayer and this has proven an energizing force in the work. The local mission points have splendid, live Sabbath Schools carried on by representatives from our church. There is also enthusiastic attendance at the preaching services of these missions.

The Young People's Work is in a thriving condition. Attendance is much larger than ever before and each member takes an active part in the splendid programs, showing genuine interest. The young people of our church are developing a wonderful Christian spirit which is telling in their daily life.

The Junior Choir which is being directed by the capable wife of the pastor, is rendering a real service to the church now and they are being trained for greater usefulness in the future.

The Woman's Auxiliary which has always been a power for good in this church has had a most excellent co-operation in accomplishing the best year they have ever had. They are a noble band rendering an unselfish service to the church and their Master. In the fall a home mission study class was held and a liberal offering was given to the great cause of Assembly's Home Missions. A beautiful pageant was given at Christmas showing the work and the need of ministerial relief. A generous offering was sent to this cause from this effort. The usual Christmas White Gift Service was observed and many homes in our community were made brighter and more comfortable. In January the pastor taught a foreign mission study class using as the textbook "The Desire of All Nations." From his own experience on the foreign field he was able to teach in a vital way which caused hearts to burn within us. We saw missions in a new light and were drawn closer to the Desire of All Nations—Jesus Christ.

As we look back over the year that has passed, we give thanks to the Great Head of the Church for the splendid spirit in our church, and for the delightful co-operation and helpful fellowship which has existed between pastor and people. God has been good to us and blessed us. We give Him the glory, and enter upon a new year of service—a thankful, happy people.

Presbyterian Orphans' Home, Barium Springs — A far reaching series of meetings have just been conducted at Little Joe's Church here by Rev. W. S. Wilson, D.D., of Montreat, N. C. The meeting began Wednesday night, March 20th and closed Sunday night, March 24th. There were 22 additions to the church, 19 on confession of faith and three by letter. We were delighted to have Dr. Wilson with us. He is no stranger here at Barium. All who know Dr. Wilson, know that he brought us a great blessing. It is an inspiration to know him. At the close of the service Sunday morning the communion of the Lord's supper was observed, Dr. Wilson in charge.

Gastonia—The Annual Standard Training School for Church and Sunday School Workers, sponsored by the Presbyterian Churches of Gaston County, came to a close Friday evening. More than one hundred certificates were awarded. Of this number fifty-three were from our own church. The others going to Belmont, Lowell, Cherryville, Bessemer City, Olney, Union, Armstrong Memorial, West Avenue, First and Second A. R. P., and Main Street Methodist.

Every one seemed to be unusually well pleased with the high grade of teaching and benefit received from the courses. The faculty was outstanding and we all look forward to having them with us another year.

Charlotte—The First Church has just concluded, very successfully, a Church School of Missions for the Junior, Intermediate and Senior Departments of the Sunday School.

Play and good fellowship was combined with instruction, and supper was served by Miss Harriet Orr and her teachers in the Beginner Department every Friday night at 6 o'clock.

The pastor of the church delivered illustrated lectures on one of our mission fields each week, covering a period of four weeks. It has been determined to make this a monthly feature of the Young People's Work, and the other fields will be taken up for study. The attendance was fine from the start and had nearly doubled at the last meeting.

Mr. R. K. Axson, who has been associated with Dr. Campbell in the First Church at Asheville for six years, has accepted a place as pastor's assistant and Sunday School Executive here and begins his work on April 15th. Mr. Axson is an experienced layman and has been greatly blessed in his work.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Spartanburg First—With contributions amounting to $71,659.00, and with 108 accessions to its membership, this congregation has closed the church year with a record of quiet but steady progress. Of the accessions, 45 were by confession of faith in Christ. Of the amount contributed $28,411.00 was for benevolences, and $16,335.00 to clear the church of obligations connected with the improvement of its property.

The Volunteer Day observed on March 10th was the best in the history of the church, which enters the new year with a larger benevolent budget subscribed than ever before. To this method of making their pledges the people have responded with real enthusiasm. They like the idea of coming to the house of the Lord to make their offerings on a day dedicated to that privilege. All afternoon they were coming, and in the beautiful social hall where elders and deacons sat about the tables to assist the subscribers, many lingered to mingle with others in happy fellowship. It was a blessed day, resulting in 500 subscriptions, which number has been increased to 675 by the subsequent canvass of those who did not come on volunteer day.

Careful preparation was made for the special day from the pulpit and by each officer explaining it all in advance, by visit or letter, to the families of the district that he supervises.

Dr. DuBose, this church's pastor, during the latter part of March conducted a twelve days' meeting in the Caldwell Memorial Church of Charlotte, N. C.

FLORIDA

Pensacola, First Church—Good congregations were present at the First Presbyterian Church each night of the last week in March when the pastor, Dr. Charles Haddon Nabers, preached on various adjectives applied to the Saviour. The themes were as follows: The Eternal Christ, The Wonderful Christ, The Live-Giving Christ, The Serving Christ, The Divine Christ.

On March 24th, the auditorium of the First Church was well filled for a union communion service held at 4:45 in the afternoon. Five ministers took part in the sacrament. Three denominations were officially represented in the service, and members of three other denominations participated. This is the first union communion service to be held in Pensacola.

Catarrhal Dyspepsia and Indigestion

Chronic gastric catarrh and intestinal catarrh are the most common causes of chronic dyspepsia and indigestion. They are attended by an excessive secretion of mucus or phlegm, which, being indigestible, envelops the food and prevents the digestive juices from getting at the food. The food lies in the stomach for hours without being digested, then begins to ferment. Gases are formed and distend the stomach, causing belching, interference with heart action, palpitation, a feeling of fullness after eating and sometimes nausea and even pain.

A most effective treatment for catarrh of the digestive organs is to wash out the accumulated mucus before each meal by filling the stomach full of Shivar Mineral Water about one-half hour before each meal. Shivar is a very mild and agreeable alkaline water which quickly dissolves and washes out the mucus thus leaving the digestive organs clean at the time the food arrives. When chilled, Shivar is a most delightful palatable water, especially appreciated by those who suffer with chronic catarrhal indigestion, as it does not interfere with the physician's medication.

Write for a descriptive booklet or send three dollars for ten gallons (a three weeks' supply). By loaning you the carboys (2), the expense is made very moderate. Terms f. o. b.

"WHAT THE DOLLAR SAID AT THE JUDGMENT"

J. J. Stowe, D.D.

A man came to the Judgment and was surprised to find there a silver dollar in the witness chair. When he was called to the bar of high heaven, the Judge of all the earth said to the dollar, "Do you know this man?"

"Yes," replied the dollar, "I know him very well."

"Tell us what you know about him," said the Judge.

"Well," replied the dollar, "I came into his possession by means of a crooked business deal. His shrewdness and long practice enabled him to escape the penalty of earthly courts, but it was a crooked deal, crooked as a rail fence, crooked as the trail of a moccasin snake in the mud. One time he held me in his hand and read upon my shining face, 'In God We Trust.' He smiled cynically, and sardonically remarked, 'That should be changed to read, The God We Trust.' Soon he said to me, 'Dollar, go out and get another dollar; don't be gone long, and don't come back telling me why you did not succeed; you need not report on the methods you employ—I am not concerned with methods; I am concerned only with results.' Since he absolutely controlled my conduct, I was forced to do his bidding, and it was thus that I gained the evil name of the dirty dollar. When I returned with another 'dollar' that I had secured by dark and devious ways, an evil smile took form upon his face, and he said, 'Take this dollar with you and go out and bring back other dollars.' 'But,' I told him in protest, 'I have left behind me a trail of pain and sorrow. In order to obey your command it was necessary for me to lead the young astray, to oppress the hireling in his wages, to take from a hungry child half of his scanty meal. I have seen young men and maidens debauched. I have seen the weak tempted to enter the paths of wrong. I have seen the poor oppressed'—He interrupted me to say, 'All this concerns me not. One thing and one thing alone concerns me, and that is, to increase my bank balance. Do as I have told you—go out with that dollar you have made and by hook or crook make two dollars more.' So, with my companion dollar, I went forth into the channels of trade."

"Is that all you know about him?" asked the Judge.

"Yes, that is all I know about him," replied the dollar, "for while I was gone God had said to him, 'Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee. Then whose shall these things be?' When I returned from my evil work another filled his place and administered on his estate." Then, for the first time, the man at the bar—this lover of money, this one who had placed the almighty dollar upon the throne of Almighty God, understood the awful dividends paid by ill-gotten gain and unable longer to face the dollar he had debased, or endure the white light that beats about the judgment throne, said to an angel, "Can you tell me the shortest road to hell? I am anxious to be on my way." And the Judge said, "What shall it profit man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or, what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Another came to the bar of eternal justice.

Again the Judge turned to the dollar in the witness chair and said, "Do you know this man?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

"Then, tell us what you know about him."

"This man," said the dollar, "was scrupulously honest, judged by the standards of the market place. Seeing what money could do and realizing that a dollar would work wonders more marvelous than the miracles performed by the genii which came forth when Aladdin rubbed his lamp; knowing that pleasure and position and power all lay hidden under the shining surface of a dollar, he set himself to the one task of making money, and all unknown to him the insidious sin of avarice entered his heart, occupying every year a larger and larger place, until at last there was no room left for tender sympathy for the suffering or unselfish regard for the needy. He was an official in the church, he was prominent in his community, but to good causes he gave only what he was compelled to give, and each gift caused him great

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. HEZEKIAH LEADS HIS PEOPLE BACK TO GOD

II Chronicles 30:1-27

I. The Need of Hezekiah's Revival

We spent most of our time last week in studying how God called Isaiah to the prophetic office. The call came to him while he was worshipping in the Temple, in the year that King Uzziah died. Isaiah carried on his prophetic ministry during the reign of Jotham (16 years), the reign of Ahaz (16 years), the reign of Hezekiah (29 years), and on into the reign of Manasseh when according to tradition he was finally martyred. Jotham was a good king on the whole, though we read curiously enough "that he entered not into the temple of Jehovah." 2 Chron. 27:2. His son, Ahaz, who succeeded him, however, was one of the worst kings ever to sit on the throne of David. He forsook the worship of Jehovah, the God of Israel, for the worship of the gods of the surrounding nations. He followed them in causing his children and the children of his people to be burnt alive to propitiate these heathen deities. He broke up and sold the furniture of the temple which Solomon had dedicated unto Jehovah; he closed up its doors and barricaded them that the people might be driven to worship at the heathen shrines which he caused to be erected in very convenient place throughout the land. (Read 2 Chron. 28:1-4, 22-27). Hezekiah who succeeded him on the throne, was strongly influenced throughout his whole reign by Isaiah, who now for the first time began to be a real power in the land. His first project was to win back the peoples' allegiance to Jehovah, the God of Israel. He was concerned moreover not only for the people of Judah, the southern kingdom, but also for the remnant of Israel, the northern nation. The people of Israel during its last days had sunk even deeper into idolatry than the people of Judah. At last, just as the reign of Hezekiah opened, Assyria, the great world power of the day, swooped down upon the ten northern tribes, and carried practically the entire nation into captivity. A remnant of the nation, however, was left, the poorer people, the tillers of the soil. It seemed to Hezekiah that this was the opportune time to win them back too to the God of their fathers. So much for the need of the revival.

II. The Method of Hezekiah's Revival

Read 2 Chron. 29:1-30:9. What were the various steps in Hezekiah's program? How did he seek to persuade the people to attend the great religious services that he had planned in Jerusalem? Why did he not content himself with the bare proclamation of the Passover? What other means of persuasion do you suppose that Hezekiah would have used if he had lived in our day? What was the gist of the message that he had his messengers deliver to the people?

1. First step: The Purification of the Temple.—29:1-19. In the very first year of Hezekiah's reign, the first month, Hezekiah took his first step. He opened the doors of God's house, and set about preparing it for use. This reform was put into the hands of the Levites. It was their special duty to care for the temple and its appurtenances, just as in the Presbyterian church the deacons are especially entrusted with that responsibility. Hezekiah called the whole group together, and urged them first to get their own hearts right with God, and then to go about putting the building in proper order. He reminded them that Ahaz's apostasy had brought great disasters upon the land, and that it was in his heart to renew the national covenant with Jehovah, that so the people might once more enjoy his favor. The Levites gave themselves right zealously to the task. It took them eight days to cleanse away the refuse from the temple courts, eight more days to purify the Temple itself.

2. Second step: The Rededication of the Temple.—29:20-30. As soon as the temple was cleansed Hezekiah called together the leading men of the city, the princes, and the people, and proceeded to reopen the worship of the sanctuary with dedicatory sacrifices. In addition to the sacrifices prescribed in Levit. 1-6 there was a special musical service led by the Levites. There was no pipe organ to peal out its mighty notes, but the musicians blew their trumpets lustily, and there were the other instruments provided by David, such as the harp, the psaltery, and the cymbals. The writer calls our attention especially to the fact that the people sang, not perfunctorily as we often do today, but with gladness in their hearts. And they bowed their heads and worshipped.

3. Third step: The Public Offerings.—29:31-36. The royal dedication ceremony was followed by an appeal from Hezekiah for a national and voluntary consecration. The response was such that the priests could not undertake the necessary sacrificial duties, and had to accept the aid of the more zealous Levites.

4. Fourth step: The Great Passover.—30:1-9. The Purification of the Temple had been accomplished by the Levitic and priestly clans; the rededication of the temple and the public offerings had mainly concerned the inhabitants of Jerusalem. The people outside of Jerusalem, the natives of Judah, the remnant of Israel still needed to be won. In order to win them, and also to make permanent the revival of religious interest that had begun among the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Hezekiah decided to revive the great religious festivals, beginning with the Passover. According to the Law the Passover was supposed to be observed in the first month of the year (March-April for the Hebrews), the very month that the other reforms were accomplished. It seemed impossible to celebrate the Passover, however, at this time, first because there were not a sufficient number of priests ready to carry out the prescribed ceremonies, and second, because the people would not be given time to assemble in sufficient numbers. Hezekiah was anxious to have the entire nation take part in the festival, and to renew their allegiance to Jehovah. He, therefore, caused a proclamation to be made to the entire nation that the Passover, after the lapse of many years, would be observed once more in Jerusalem, during the second month. Not content merely with issuing the proclamation he sent posts through his own dominions and also to Ephraim and Manasseh with letters urging the people to attend. He reminded them that apostasy from the God of their fathers had brought disaster upon the land, but that Jehovah was a merciful God and would be merciful and gracious unto them if only they would return to their rightful Lord.

III. The Results of Hezekiah's Revival

Read 30:10-31:1. What response was made to Hezekiah's invitation? In Israel? In Judah? What was done by those who kept the feast before the Passover was begun? How was the Passover itself observed? What were the after effects of the Passover?

1. There were some who rejected Hezekiah's invitation. Not only did they reject the invitation, but they laughed the messengers to scorn, and mocked them.

2. There were a great multitude who accepted the invitation. Some few from the northern tribes humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem. It did require humility to acknowledge their own error, and the error of their fathers, and to worship at the shrine of another nation—nonetheless they came. The people of Judah seemed to have responded en masse. With one heart they responded to the invitation of their king.

(1) Their first act was to cleanse Jerusalem itself. They demolished the altars which Ahaz had erected throughout the city for the worship of the heathen gods. They believed that the Passover could not be observed properly in the city until the last remnants of the old allegiance were swept away. Old loyalties must be extirpated. The people who were to enter into a covenant with their God, must not allow old altars to remain standing in their midst, to distract them by their appeals.

(2) The priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves. The priests and the Levites had not made the spiritual and ceremonial preparation for the Feast that they should have made. They found themselves spurred on to their duties by the superior zeal of the people. The people did not quit their worship because the leaders were not as well prepared as they should have been. They deepened the spiritual life of the priests. Like priests, like people is the saying. Sometimes it seems it is the other way. Like people, like priests.

(3) The people celebrated the Feast with great joy. It was the duty of the head of each household to slay the lamb and hand the blood to the priests. Many of the people, however, had not made the necessary ceremonial preparation, and the Levites performed the duty in their stead. Hezekiah prayed that the good God might pardon everyone that had set his heart on finding God, whether or not he had made the prescribed preparation. And the writer tells us that God hearkened unto Hezekiah and healed the people. He means perhaps that God refrained from punishing the people, or else that he stopped the plague which had begun to appear. Three things especially strike us about the observance of this passover. First the people really set their hearts to seek Jehovah. (vs. 19). Their worship was something more than a mere form. Second, they confessed their sins unto God, vs. 22. Third, they kept the feast with great gladness. They did not believe in a gloomy religion. vs. 21, 23. Because of these facts perhaps they got so much good out of their worship that they determined to continue it for another week. This was rendered possible by the lavish gifts made by king and princes for the sacrificial meals, and by the readiness of the priests to undertake the labor involved. At the close of the fortnight's rejoicing the assembly was dismissed with the Levitic benediction, and the divine blessing rested upon the people.

(4) The people proceeded to extirpate idolatry from the whole land. 31:1. Hezekiah's great revival did not end merely with the Great Passover. The people did not go back from the Church to their old lives of indifference and compromise with sin. The sacred pillars or obelisks, the groves or Asherim (R. V.), the high places where the heathen gods were worshipped, and all the altars were completely destroyed. The revival was complete.

IV. The Significance of Hezekiah's Revival

We have studied Hezekiah's attempt to bring the people back to God. It was necessary in his own day. Is such a revival necessary in our own day? Why do you think so? Do the people in your community attend church as well as they did a year, or ten years ago? Do they have the same interest in religion? Do you? If not, why not? What classes of people does the church most need to get hold of today? Why are these classes not more interested than they are?

We spent some time in studying the methods which Hezekiah used in bringing the people back to God. They were successful methods in his day. We must use other methods in our own day. What methods? Do we need the old fashioned revival? What are its advantages, its defects? What do you think about the new plan of visitation evangelization? "Under this plan, lay committees, working under men and women devoting their lives to the work, begin a campaign with a community canvass to ascertain church preferences. There is no proselyting. The visitors of the various churches, in pairs, go to the homes where their faith has been indicated as the natural choice, if any, and in quiet, earnest, personal interviews seek to implant or restore Christian convictions. Conversion or reconsecration is always decisive. It means uniting with the Church." This method of evangelization has been carefully tried in recent years, and with remarkable results. It costs less than the old revival, it seems to give more permanent results. Do you believe that the revival (more details can be secured from the Council of Churches of Christ in America) worked in your community? Would you be helped? Do you think that the church should rely on its regular services? How can they be made more effective? How can you help? Had you ever thought about it that the attitude of the people has a great effect on the preacher? In Hezekiah's day the people stirred up the zeal of the priests, both ways. It is very hard for a minister to win an unresponsive people, to retain his zeal when he is ministering to an indifferent people. What do you think the effect of your attitude is on your minister? Do you think of the various phases of the church's activities? Do you think the church should engage in more personal work? Who should do it? The pastor only? Have you any responsibility in this connection? Hezekiah called the people to his meeting. He sent the Gospel message throughout the land. What more could we do? Are we doing to bring the Gospel home to more people? Can you better advertise the services of the church?

We spent some time looking at the results of Hezekiah's revival. We noted that some rejected the invitation. Should we be discouraged that some reject the invitation? Should we give up any men as hopeless? Who accepted the invitation in Hezekiah's day? Who accepted it in our own day? We ourselves are among the men of Judah who came to Jerusalem to dedicate themselves to God began by destroying the heathen altars in Jerusalem. What heathen altars are there remaining in our own hearts, the life of the church that prevents us from worshipping God fully and joyfully as we should? The worship of the heathen gods in Hezekiah's day meant something to them because they really sought God, because they confessed their sins, because they celebrated the feast with joy. We should go to church to do we really seek God, His will for us? Do we confess our sins? Do we rejoice in our salvation? Could it after all be our fault that we do not get out of the service than we do. We saw that the real worship had on the men of Hezekiah's day. They went out to destroy the idols in the national life. Are the idols in our American life that Christ should set themselves against? Is worship of the idols less it does set us to destroy the things in our life, our national life that are against God? If not, what is its true end?

"THAT LITTLE PROTESTANT I"

Egbert W. Smith

Whoever thinks our foreign missionaries pampered and carried to heaven on flowery beds is certainly the victim of the young lady population as Miss Information. Though our missionaries do not hear the epithet "foreign devil" once in thirty years ago they heard it fifty times, yet in our American lands our missionaries are by no means popular. The more evangelical religion the bitterer becomes the opposition. Mrs. J. Stricker writes from Oliveira, Brazil.

"Ever since the visit of the archbishop, there has been no end of petty persecutions. It happened (and had tried to avoid the co-incidence) that the archbishop, Dr. Hippolyto Campos, an ex-vicar of the Church of whom many of you have heard, was same time for a series of services. There was a great revival in his preaching or in the invitations that could have offended, for only the Gospel in its simplicity was preached. At once, however, a memorial bulletin of 'protest' was gotten out by the Catholic League. The archbishop slandered especially Dr. Hippolyto, and threatened to excommunicate anyone who set feet into the preaching. It was a special procession to 'appease the saint' said Dr. Hippolyto had insulted them. The archbishop didn't even mention them. My German friend, studying with me for three years, was forbidden to do with me. The girl was much chagrined and took drastic measures. This was the only one of the Church canon was able to influence, however he made personal visits to all my R. C. friends to persuade them to cut my friendship.

"One of the three priests here appealed to from the pulpit one Sunday morning, begging to let their daughters go to the home of that 'protestant devil'—referring to your missionary!

"All of the above only helped the Cause, for intelligent, serious-minded people were disgusted and took sides with us in private discussions, we were not one of our good friends and none of the five persons in town took part in the process, perhaps, but nevertheless surely the Gospel will "Soon after this it was a great relief to go to a conference in the state of Sao Paulo, a four day conference, where I was invited to take a part in the conference, talking on women's work and Daughters of Bible Schools. The Church there has a beautiful building and is getting wonderful results. The services were splendid and it was a joy to be there. Recent letters from various Churches in the state denied my heart with news of prayer bands, mission study classes, tithe leagues, etc., that were formed since our meeting in June. All of our auxiliaries use the circle plan. They are also planning over plans for Daily Vacation Bible in Decem-

How To Get

HEALTH

And How To Keep It

If the reading of this article teaches you only this one lesson about your own body it may be worth more than millions of dollars to you; for of what use is money without health, or after you are dead?

The lesson is this:—"Keep your system pure and you will have health and strength to gain and enjoy happiness, success and length of years."

But you may ask:—

How Can I Keep My System Pure?

That is not a hard question to answer, for physiology plainly teaches you that your liver, which is larger than all of the other glands of the body combined, has the special work of purifying your blood and thereby your entire system and of keeping it pure and healthy.

How Does the Liver Purify?

Physicians tell us that the liver has several functions, one of which is to manufacture a greenish-yellow, bitter fluid called bile, which, between meals, is stored up in the gall-bladder, but after each meal is poured out into the intestines. The bile is purgative and antiseptic or prophylactic. In health it is your bile that makes your bowels act regularly and freely every day,—it is Nature's purgative. It is your bile that keeps your bowels pure, sweet, clean and free from fermentation (gas) putrefaction and decay. Remember that germs do not thrive where there is fresh bile and there can therefore be no fermentation to cause gas, nor putrefaction or decay to produce poisons or toxins. Also, as bile is Nature's purgative, there can be no constipation if the bile is flowing naturally and freely from the gall-bladder into the bowels after each meal.

But when the bile becomes stagnant and stops flowing freely, your bowels stop acting regularly and the contents become a stagnant breeding bed for the germs of fermentation (gas) decay and disease. These poisons, (called toxins) are gradually absorbed into your blood and circulate all over your body, poisoning, irritating or inflaming your brain and nerves, your muscles and joints, your heart, lungs, skin, kidneys, bladder, spleen and every vital organ of your body, including your liver, stomach and bowels. Your doctor calls this "intestinal toxæmia."

Functions of Gall-Bladder

In 24 hours your liver secretes about 25 to 30 ounces (5 to 6 teacupfuls) of bile, which flows through millions of minute canals, or ducts, uniting to make a large tube which empties into the gall-bladder, as creeks and rivulets unit to form a river that flows into a lake. Your gall-bladder is a hollow muscle that serves the double purpose of a reservoir and a pump. Its functions are similar to those of the urinary bladder. About two hours after eating, when the food is passing from the stomach into the intestines, your gall-bladder should begin its peristaltic contractions, thus pumping the bile into the small intestine where it is mixed with your food. (Bile is also a very important digestive fluid, aiding in the digestion and absorption of fats and oils. But that is too long a story to relate here.)

Nature's Danger Signals

When your car gets out of fix you can tell it. It is the same way with your bile. Nature gives you warning—not by words, but by signals or symptoms. Your doctor recognizes these danger signals and you should also know them and instantly heed them. It may save you much pain, serious illness and perhaps big repair bills.

When the bile becomes stagnant in your gall-bladder and is dammed back into your liver instead of flowing freely into your bowels you, sooner or later, begin to feel some of the following symptoms:—Your breath may become unpleasant, your tongue coated, a bad taste in your mouth, your food (and tobacco) lose their natural flavor, your food does not agree with you; you may have heartburn, gas, or fluttering around the heart, dizziness or blind spell; you may be troubled with belching or frequent passages of gas from the bowels: the gas "balloons" your bowels and presses so hard on the kidneys that it gives you pain, soreness, stiffness in the small of your back over your kidneys, making you think you have kidney trouble; at night the gas in your bowels presses upon your bladder making you get up frequently, thus breaking into your sleep. In the morning you are tired instead of refreshed. Gradually your health is injured. Your complexion becomes sallow, muddy or yellow—your skin may be disfigured with liver spots or pimples; dark rings may appear under your eyes, you may become sleepless, restless and irritable or blue and melancholic. You may have frequent colds or dull headache; your bowels stop their free, full and natural action; you have constipation, gas putrefaction and self-poisoning or "intestinal toxæmia," as the doctors call it. High blood pressure, with headache and swooning spells, may result from continued neglect.

How to Make the Bile Flow

But when the bile stops flowing freely, how can we start it up again? The answer is: Take Calotabs at bedtime and drink water freely the next day. This formula represents the best thought and experience of the best physicians in every civilized country in the world. No other purgative will do. If you take oils, salts, cascara, or the many other simple-laxative syrups, powders and candy laxatives, you are merely wasting valuable time. They only make you feel better for a day or two. They do not remove the cause, for they do not promote the expulsion of the bile which is Nature's only purgative and intestinal antiseptic. When you take Calotabs you know that you have taken a real doctor's medicine. It cleans you out thoroughly. Every inch of your twenty-five foot canal, including your stomach, small intestines and large intestines, is thoroughly cleared and washed clean and pure and your bile is flowing freely. Next morning your system feels purified and refreshed and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please and go about your work;—there is no danger, for Calotabs are perfectly safe and create no habit, except the habit of healthy bowel actions.

What Are Calotabs—How Do They Act?

Calotabs are sugar-coated tablets, containing the minimum effective dose of a thoroughly purified and refined calomel combined with assistants and correctives. The calomel facilitates the expulsion of the bile from the gall-bladder into the intestines and also serves as a mild intestinal antiseptic and diuretic. Every physician knows that no other medicine can take its place; there is no such thing as a substitute for calomel. The assistants act like salts, washing the calomel out of the system and preventing its accumulation and any possibility of danger. The correctives settle the stomach and bowels, preventing nausea, sickening and griping effects. Calotabs, (and water) therefore, give you the combined effects of calomel and salts without the nausea, griping and disagreeable taste.

The medicine chest of every home should be supplied with Calotabs, one of the most important of all family medicines. It is needed in many cases of sickness, and, if used occasionally, as needed, may assist Nature to correct conditions which, if neglected may lead to serious illness.

Avoid disappointment by refusing imitations and substitutes. Your druggist can supply you with genuine Calotabs if you insist. For your protection, Calotabs are marketed in original packages only, bearing the copyrighted trademark. Family package, containing full directions, only 35 cents.

WHAT THE DOLLAR SAID

 anguish. He looked upon what he held as his very own—his personal property. He refused to accept the principles of Christian stewardship. He said and believed that he had worked hard for the money that he had, and that it was his to do with as he pleased.

"When I came into his possession it was through clean channels of trade, and while in his possession I was never put to any dirty or dishonest task.

"One day as he held me in his hand and looked upon me, the light of the only love that was left in his hard heart burned brightly in his eyes; I said to him, 'I hear the measured tread of marching men, I see the gleam of the sun on burnished guns, the young men of the nation are going to do their part to save Europe—yes, to save America from the Hun. Men are needed and they are going to the front by the millions. Money also is needed. You are too old to go to the front. Let me go and represent you there. If you will send me I will help to kindle a fire in some "Y" hut, so that the boys just back from the front-line trenches, all covered with mud and blood—these who fight your fight for you, these defenders of civilization—may be warmed and fed.' 'No,' he replied, 'a great deal of money is being wasted; I need you in my business; never before were there such opportunities for big legitimate profits.' I said to him, 'Let me go, for even the young women serve at the front, and I will enable some nurse to serve a wounded soldier or make easier the last hours of some man who has laid his all upon the altar of his country.' For a moment I thought that I would be permitted to do my bit, to play my part at the front. But, hesitating only a moment, he said, 'Let the government pay those bills—let the rich make their donations. I cannot spare you; I need you in my business. Hard times may follow the war. You can't go.' Then I said to him, 'There is a poor widow with thinly clad and hungry children just a few blocks away. May I go for you and kindle a fire upon the cold hearth, and spread a meal upon the bare table, and put warm garments upon those children, and bring a smile once more to the wan face of the mother, to lips that have forgotten how to laugh?' 'No,' he said; 'charity begins at home. I must provide for my own family. There are always improvident people who are poor. You can't go.'

"Is that all you know about him?"
 "Yes, that is all that I know about him."

Then the Judge looked upon the man who had been rich but was now so poor, and said, "Inasmuch as you have not done it unto one of these My brethren, you have not done it unto Me."

And so this one who had been "honest" and industrious and honored upon earth, turned away to find his place among those idolaters who had loved gold more than they had loved God.

Another took his place at the judgment bar, and to the face of the dollar came a welcoming smile.

"Tell us what you know of this man," said the Judge.

"Him, also, I know quite intimately," replied the dollar. "He was a man of ability, a man of energy and a man to whom came opportunities to make money. I came into his possession and found many other dollars whom I had met in the course of my life, and one day this man said to me, 'Dollar, I am a follower of John Wesley, who said with his lips and life, 'Make all you can, save all you can, give all you can.' I am a disciple of Him who though He was rich yet for our sakes became poor, that we, through Him, might be rich. I am holding in trust; men say that I own you, but I read in the Bible, 'The silver is Mine and the gold is Mine, saith the Lord,' and so, dollar, I am handling you not as an owner, but as a steward, and I want you and many of your companions now in my possession to help God build up his kingdom in the world. I want you, in God's name and mine, to lift the burden from bending age, to open the door of opportunity to ambitious youth, to lay the healing hand upon some of earth's afflicted, to assist in bringing backward nations to 'know God, whom to know aright is everlasting life.'" "This is all that I know about him, for with many other dollars he sent me out to assist in saving men from sorrow and from sin."

To the man at the bar the Judge said, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Next, a woman stood up to answer for the deeds done in the body.

"Tell us," said the Judge, "what you know of this woman."

"When I first knew her," said the dollar, "she was fair to look upon and a social favorite, but all unseen the deadly moral disease of avarice was developing in her soul. Her suitors she measured by the dollar-mark, and gave herself in marriage to a man whom she did not love, but whose wealth she coveted. He had neither brains nor character—he had nothing but money. She fawned upon the rich and despised the poor. She never really lived, but on earth merely existed, unloving and unloved, and she went to her grave unwept, unhonored and unsung."

The Judge said, "How hard it is for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!"

The place of this poor creature who had lived for money alone was taken by a young man who bore upon his naked soul the marks of his dissipated life.

"Tell us," said the Judge, "what you know of this young man."

"I was not long in his possession," said the miser. "He did not hide me away like the miser, nor employ me to get other dollars, like the unrighteous rich. He saw in me only the possibility of 'pleasure.' When first, as part of an inheritance, I came into his possession, there were many of us, but our ranks were rapidly thinned. Some went across the green table in gambling games. Some went for wine, and he gave me to a woman who was lost to decency and dead to any sense of shame. That is all that I know about him."

The prodigal who never came to himself, who never turned his face toward his father's house, who was content to dwell with the swine, left the judgment to go to his own place.

Another came forward.

"Tell us," said the Judge, "what you know of this man?"

"I led a rather lonely existence," replied the miser, "the short time I was in this man's purse. One night, at family prayers, he sang: 'I have neither silver nor gold, but riches untold, riches of grace, in Christ Jesus.'"

"When I came into his possession he acknowledged God's ownership, and though he knew little of comforts and nothing of luxuries, he sent me forth upon the King's service, praying that I might be blessed as I broke the bread of life to starving peoples in heathen lands. The world did not call him great, but for him I kindled a light in dark places, for him I helped others preach Christ to despairing men."

To the man at the bar the Judge said, "He that is faithful over a little is faithful also over much. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Next came a woman.

"Tell us," said the Judge, "what you know of this one?"

"Not a great deal," replied the miser, "for I remained with her but a few days. On January 31, 1919, she sent me to the treasurer of the centenary commission, and said in the letter, 'I am a member of the _____ Church, here in L____. Brother F_____ is my pastor. I am an inmate of the Old Ladies' Home. A friend gave this dollar and, as I might be tempted to spend it before the drive I send it to you for the centenary.'"

Then the Judge said, "This poor widow cast in more more than all they that are casting into the treasury; for they all did cast in of their superfluity; but she of her want did cast in all that she had." —United Presbyterian.

AN EASTERN LEGEND

A little banyan seed once said to a lofty palm tree: "I am so tired of being tossed hither and thither by the wind. Let me shelter awhile among your great leaves."

"O, yes," said the palm tree; "come and welcome. Stay as long as you wish."

So the banyan seed nestled down among the leaves of the palm tree, which very soon quite forgot the presence of the little stranger.

But the tiny seed was not idle. It sent out little roots and fibers, which crept around the mighty trunk and under the bark of the palm tree itself until at last the tree in alarm cried out, "What is this?"

The banyan replied, "It is only the little seed you allowed to rest among your leaves."

"But now you must leave me," said the palm tree. "You are growing too large and strong. You sap my strength."

"I cannot leave you now," replied the banyan, "for we have grown together. I should kill you if I tore myself away."

The palm tree rustled its great leaves and tried with might and main to throw off the banyan, but it could not, and gradually the palm leaves withered and the great trunk shriveled until at last only the banyan tree could be found.

So it is with little sins that come creeping in. They at last smother all the good in the heart and destroy its true growth —Exchange.

Sign to be Waged in Thirty-two Cities in Two Carolinas

Signs in 35 cities and towns outside Charlotte, but within the limits of Mecklenburg and Kings Mountain counties, are scheduled to start simultaneously with the inauguration of the college here Sunday, April 14, seeking an endowment fund for Queen's College. It was announced April 4 by Mrs. C. Hook, director of the campaign. The campaign will last one week. Plans were discussed at a meeting at the college of the college workers, at which 18 captains were named to have charge of the campaign. Each captain will have in charge ten or more members. Towns of Charlotte are to be well organized for the campaign. Chairmen of these town committees attended.

Monday's meeting was the first call for the campaign. A feature of the meeting was an inspirational talk by Dr. C. Frazier, president of the college.

E. Brown, president of the association, presided. Mrs. Hook outlined the campaign plans. After the meeting, the campaign workers were entertained at a social hour in Burwell hall. Queen's choral club under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Starr. This club will enter the state contest at the celebration of Music Clubs on April 14.

McLaughlin At Louisville Seminary

Church Director Delivers Series to Students

On March 26 to 29, Dr. H. W. McLaughlin delivered a remarkable course of lectures at the Louisville Seminary. The faculty and students alike were impressed by the breadth of vision, the force of argument, mastery of statistics and spirituality of interpretation of the subject. The subject of the lectures was "The Country Church and Rural Ministry Related Thereto." The lectures were entitled, (1) "The Task," (2) "The Leadership," (3) "The Goal,"

Recent Lectures At Austin, Tex.

Dr. A. A. Little and Rev. J. C. Cavazos Each Gives a Series to Students of the Seminary

Two courses of lectures have been delivered to the students and faculty of the Theological Seminary within the past few weeks. One was by Rev. J. C. Cavazos, of the Texas-Mexican Presbytery, and pastor of the Houston Mexican Church. This course dealt with the many of the modernisms which prevail today and with which their propagandists have specially plied the great mass of Mexican people living in Texas, such as Russellism and the like. It was given for the special benefit of the Mexican students of the Seminary, and, of course, was in the Spanish language. The other course of lectures was by Rev. Dr. A. A. Little, of Meridian, Miss., and was a repetition of the admirable series given by him some months ago to the students of Union Seminary, Va. It dealt with such subjects as The Preacher's Background, The Psychology of the Pulpit, The Psychology of the People, The Preparation and Delivery of Sermons, The Objective of the Sermon. The substance of the last named lecture has been published, in the last issue of the Union Seminary Magazine. Both of the courses named were keenly enjoyed and listened to, especially Doctor Little's, by many others besides the students and professors, a number of ministers from outside of Austin coming in, by invitation of the Seminary and as its guests.

Dr. Tigert To Be At Davidson

President of University of Florida Will Make Address at 93rd Commencement

Dr. John J. Tigert, lecturer, educator and author, and now president of the University of Florida, has been secured to deliver the literary address at the ninety-third commencement of Davidson College, according to an announcement made April 4 by Dr. W. J. Martin, president of Davidson. Doctor Martin has previously announced that Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J., had accepted an invitation to deliver the baccalaureate sermon.

Doctor Tigert is one of the most widely known educators in America today, having at one time been head of the department of education in the United States with headquarters at Washington, D. C. After graduating from Vanderbilt University he was chosen as the first Rhodes scholar from Tennessee, and when he had completed his work at Oxford he studied at the University of Minnesota.

Institutions which have conferred honorary degrees upon Doctor Tigert are the University of Kentucky, Bates College and University of New Mexico. During his lifetime he has been connected with the University of Kentucky, Central College and Kentucky Wesleyan, and in addition to his education work he is the author of several books dealing with philosophical and psychological subjects, and is much in demand as a lecturer.

(4) "The Program." It is safe to predict and has already developed, that some of the choicest young ministers will experience a desire and a call to serve at some strategic center in the country. It is evident that Doctor McLaughlin has become one of the leading specialists in the Church of our whole country in this most important field today of the Country Church.

Accident of Dr. Caldwell

Wife of Professor of Union Seminary Killed and Her Husband Seriously Injured

In last week's paper we had a short notice of the fatal accident which occurred April 2, near Richmond, Va., in which Mrs. E. C. Caldwell was killed and Doctor Caldwell seriously injured. We give below the account printed in the Richmond Dispatch the day after the accident, as friends all over the Church will wish to know the details. We hope we may have later news about Doctor Caldwell in our last form in this paper in the Church news section:

Mrs. Margaret Beverly Caldwell, 45, of 1006 Westwood Avenue, Ginter Park, was almost instantly killed, and her husband, the Rev. Eugene C. Caldwell, member of the faculty of the Union Theological Seminary, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon, when their automobile was struck by the second section of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad train, No. 71, Southbound, at Greendale crossing, a short distance north of Dumbarton.

Mrs. Caldwell was badly mangled and was dead when she was extricated from the wreckage of the automobile. Doctor Caldwell was brought to Richmond and taken to the Retreat for the Sick, where his condition was announced last night as serious. He suffered fractures of the left leg, left arm and jaw.

There was only one witness to the collision, and this man is said to have reported that the machine stalled just as it reached the crossing, with the front wheels on the tracks. It is thought the occupants of the car did not have time to leave the machine before the engine was upon them.

The light automobile was carried about thirty yards down the track and hurled against the side of the Greendale station, the body of the car being torn from the chassis, with parts of the wreckage shattering the station window. Doctor Caldwell was thrown from the machine at this point, and Mrs. Caldwell was carried about twenty-five yards further down the track.

Doctor and Mrs. Caldwell left their home about five o'clock for a short drive in the country. Although Mrs. Caldwell was said to have been driving when they left home, Doctor Caldwell was reported to have been at the wheel of the car when the accident occurred.

The train which figured in the collision was "The Miamian," running through from New York to Florida. It is taken over in Richmond by the Atlantic Coast Line and was due at the Broad Street Station at 5:35 o'clock, the time of the accident.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Caldwell is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Carl Fritsch, of Detroit, and Miss Carolin Caldwell, of Richmond; one son, Eugene C. Caldwell, Jr., of Richmond, and one sister, Mrs. Edward S. Evans, of Detroit.

Both Doctor and Mrs. Caldwell have been prominently identified with activities at Union Theological Seminary since 1915. Mrs. Caldwell before her marriage was Miss Margaret Beverley McCormick, of Nottoway.

Doctor Caldwell, Professor of New Testament Interpretation at the seminary, is also editor of the Union Seminary Review. A graduate of Hampden-Sidney College and the Union Theological Seminary, Dr. Caldwell holds A.B., A.M., D.D., and LL.D. degrees.

Before becoming a member of the faculty of the local institution, he was a professor at Hampden-Sidney, at Blackstone Military Academy, at the Texas Theological Seminary, and was pastor at Leaksville and at Wentworth, N. C.

Passing of Woodbine Willie

Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennedy, of London, Died on March 8

Perhaps no figure in the world war took the unique place as chaplain as did G. A. Studdert Kennedy. He was lovingly and familiarly known to the British soldiers as "Woodbine Willie," and this sobriquet clung to him to the end of his life. It may be safely said that no world preacher was as much quoted for sentimental sayings as Studdert Kennedy. There is universal grief at his untimely death at the age of 46 in London on March 8.

In view of the popular interest taken in this striking figure, we are printing below the following paragraphs from the British Weekly in regard to Mr. Kennedy's death, the first being, we take it, from the pen of the distinguished editor of the paper, Rev. John A. Hutton, who is universally known and admired in America.

It is not by his own Communion only that the passing of this wonderful man will be lamented. Every Church claimed him, and so far as he could make it possible he was ready to share his vision and his suffering with them all. He was called "Woodbine Willie," not because he smoked excessively, but because in grim and desolate conditions he was not above taking part with soldiers in the trenches (Continued on Page Two)

Christian Education In April

Southern Presbyterians to Observe Special Day in All Sunday Schools

"Wings of Eagles" is the title of an interesting program for use in all Presbyterian Sunday Schools on the second Sunday in April. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States set April 14 as the day for the presentation and study of the "Student Loan Fund." This program is so arranged as to be presented to Sunday Schools as a whole, or adapted to departments, societies and auxiliaries. Dr. Henry H. Sweets, executive secretary of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief Committee, suggests a story, "Born for the Skies," for general use in all program presentations. Accompanying this program an offering is to be taken for the "Student Loan Fund," with the understanding that the church or Sunday School may have its contribution credited toward a memorial in memory of pastor, teacher, superintendent, or a pupil in the school, at a cost of $8.00 for each scholarship.

The entire month of April is devoted to Christian Education and Ministerial Relief for Southern Presbyterians. This Church has a total of 639 candidates for ministry and mission service; 328 candidates, according to the last report, were aided to the extent of $47,478.07; 273 students were aided from the Loan Fund to the extent of $39,330, distributed among the boys and girls of 23 colleges in 11 states. Under the direction of Dr. Sweets, the Church now administers 269 scholarships, totaling $252,950.12. The Presbyterian Church has 14,008 students in its 87 educational institutions and perhaps double that number of students in state institutions of higher education. During the month of April, Presbyterians are taking a great interest in the new Ministers' Annuity Plan, which has been endorsed by the Assembly, and will go before the membership of the Church for a total contribution of $3,000,000 in the year 1930, in order to launch the new plan. C. F. Huhlein, Louisville, Ky., is chairman of the Committee on Christian Education and Ministerial Relief.

or in camp, and contenting himself with such little amenities as they had. The name was none of his seeking. It was bestowed upon him by men who intended by it something which it is a rare achievement for any of us to secure.

He died at what seems to us the untimely age of forty-six. Had the war begun a dozen years earlier he also might have died about the age of thirty-three. The zeal of God's House devoured him.

No one who ever heard Studdert Kennedy and saw him at close quarters when he was preaching will ever forget the impression. It was a man in travail. One understood the saying of Origen of Alexandria, "Love is an agony!" In my own view, there is only one real heresy in a preacher or hearer: it is the absence of depth! It is frivolity. It is jauntiness! It is, in the base sense of the word, optimism! It is superficiality! It is the unearned and spurious confidence about life—unrelated to the tragedy on Calvary!

Studdert Kennedy was altogether above suspicion there. Everything he wrote or said, every gesture, every tone, rested upon that tragic sense of life which is the Christian background.

And what a gentle voice was his in a private talk! How friendly he was! How diffident even!

"I know what I need," he once said to me as we differed genially on the old issue of "vision and authority."

Dante, with his infinite charity, conceives of the many mansions of the heavenly life as being under the control of the several planets—Mars, Venus and the rest. And it is true that we have, one by one, our total circumstances and conditions which mark off the field or platform in which we have severally to fight the good fight of faith.

It will be more tolerable in the day of judgment for men like Studdert Kennedy than for those to whom God gave only the one talent of tame and evenly-flowing blood. For here was a man loaded with temperament, one of those who can never be satisfied with half measures; for whom faith, when it comes to them, is, above everything, deliverance and victory; though in his case the deliverance must always be in the process of being achieved, and the victory must be for ever in jeopardy; that is, must for ever be in process of being won.

We thank God upon every remembrance of this good soldier of Jesus Christ. J. A. H.

II.

Tens of thousands, from His Majesty (who has lost a chaplain to whom he and the Queen always listened intently) to the "man in the street," felt the news of the death of the Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennedy last Friday as a personal sorrow and loss.

The last time I heard "Woodbine Willie" (as he loved to be known) his frail physique impressed me painfully. He was only forty-six, but the tremendous and incessant strain under which he laboured for the last fourteen years had left their mark. He spoke with an urgent note in his voice, as one who realised that "the King's business" demanded haste. It was in a Parish Church, where night after night for a week he addressed two thousand people with a copious freshness that was wonderful. His sermons were over an hour long, but no one complained. His engagements were made for him, as he had no gift for businesslike detail. I remember his going to Coventry under the impression he was due there, while another town beginning with C was waiting for him! His sense of humour was very keen, and he bent double with mirth on facing a hall packed with elderly ladies when he had expected to address "men only." On another occasion, far away from London, he said meekly after a meeting, "I should be very glad if someone could lend me ten shillings, as I find I have only 3d., and I am rather hungry."

No clergyman in the Church of England since the late Canon Knox-Little, whom he resembled in his ruthless denunciation of evil, has commanded such audiences as "Woodbine Willie." His addresses were always reconstructive as well as denunciatory, and that was why young people "heard him gladly." And he had a loving heart, as countless men in the war discovered. Knowing war's horrors, he waged a strenuous campaign for international peace.

His biography in brief is: Born in Ireland, he graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, and was ordained in 1908. He was a curate at Rugby and Leeds. For seven years he was vicar of St. Paul's, Worcester. His war service as a chaplain gained him the Military Cross. Latterly he had been rector of St. Edmund, King and Martyr, a City living given to him to enable him to preach all over the land. His books include "Rough Rhymes of a Padre," "Food for the Fed-up," "The Hardest Part," "The Wicket Gate," and "The Word and the Work." But he was greater than all his books, and many thank God for his tireless service of the Master. D. W.

We take also the following from the N. C. Christian Advocate:

The death of the Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennedy, known and loved as "Woodbine Willie" by the thousands of World War veterans he visited under fire, occurred in England the same day his last book, "The Warrior, the Woman and the Christ," was published in America. Studdert Kennedy, who visited this country in 1923, 1926, and 1927, was chaplain to the King of England and rector of St. Paul's, Worcester, where his fearless post-war messages were heard by throngs of rich and poor alike. While his widest reputation rests upon his war activities, during which he was severely gassed, he was a bitter and relentless opponent of the whole war scheme in international life and his last book puts his implacable hatred of destructive conflict into stark and realistic language. His other books, all of which have gone into many editions, include "Lies!" "I Pronounce Them," "The Sorrows of God and Other Poems," "The Wicket Gates," "I Believe."

SYNOD-WIDE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN TEXAS

The Synod of Texas at its meeting in Lubbock last fall, appointed an Executive Committee of nineteen of its members, to plan and direct an Evangelistic Campaign throughout its bounds. At an adjourned meeting in Austin in February, the date adopted for this Campaign was January to April, 1930.

This movement is the result of an extended period of united prayer. For some years, a large number of the members of this Synod have been in a covenant of daily prayer for the outpouring of God's Spirit upon the ministers and churches in their efforts to win souls for Christ.

The Committee has adopted a plan which is at once spiritual and simple. A four-fold spiritual method will be employed, namely, to call the Synod to prayer and to a re consecration of its Christian life, to conduct a series of Gospel preaching services in the field of every functioning Presbyterian Church in Texas, and to enlist the working force of every Church in a movement of Individual Evangelism.

To accomplish its task, the Synod's Committee has divided itself into five sub-committees. A sub-committee on Prayer and Re consecration of Christian life, of which Dr. C. T. Caldwell is Chairman, has issued a call to prayer and will promote these two methods of preparation throughout the year. A sub-committee on Education, of which Dr. H. S. Springall is Chairman, is through its established agencies in the church providing for study and training in Evangelism. A sub-committee on Gospel Preaching, of which Dr. T. W. Currie is Chairman, is now setting up a schedule for the preaching services in every church. This is being worked out in each Presbytery as a unit. The purpose is to enlist every minister in the Synod, and all move together in this great ministry of Gospel Preaching. This sub-committee will work in close co-operation with the Home Mission and Evangelistic agencies of each Presbytery. A sub-committee on Individual Evangelism, of which Dr. Wm. M. Anderson is Chairman, has prepared a plan of personal Evangelism which will be submitted for use in every co-operating Church. A sub-committee on finance, of which Dr. L. E. Selfridge is Chairman, plans to finance the movement by a free-will offering from every church where a meeting is held. The preachers will volunteer their services as a labor of love without compensation except for expenses. Some of the larger churches of the Synod are now under-writing the preliminary expenses of this extensive Campaign. Rev. B. K. Tenney, Secretary of Synod's Work, 1521 Kirby Bldg., Dallas, Texas, is the Secretary of this Committee, and through his office communications and literature touching this movement are being mailed throughout the Synod.

The Committee rejoices in the fine response which is coming from every part of the Synod. The ministers seem eager to take the field. The women's organizations are pledging their prayer. Men's

THE SPADE THE FRIEND OF THE BIBLE

And still the spade is the friend of the Bible as it turns up the remains of the most ancient civilization and finds confirmation of the historicity of its record. Professor C. Leonard Woolley, an archaeologist recently returned from excavating at ancient Ur of the Chaldees, in an interview says that the only actual reference to Ur contained in the Bible (Gen. 11:28-29) is that it was the land of Abraham and his excavations makes it "necessary for the world completely to revise its estimate of Abraham." It has been and is a theory with some scholars that Abraham was not the name of a person but of a tribe, but Professor Woolley finds that "Ur, his native city, was one of the most civilized centers of all Mesopotamia." "You see," said Professor Woolley, "Abraham was a trader and a prosperous one. He had a large camel trade and about the time that he decided to leave Ur, war had cut off the principal trade routes which were his livelihood. As a consequence, he left Ur and headed into Northern Mesopotamia where the routes were affected by tribal turbulence." In a like manner, according to Professor Woolley, history must purge Abraham of any cruelty in the manner in which, according to Biblical account, he permitted his wife, Sarai, to drive her Egyptian handmaiden, Hagar, into the wilderness, where she bore Ishmael. Professor Woolley explained that Abraham was acting in accordance with ancient Sumerian law, which was that if a man's wife bore him no children, he was permitted to have children of a servant; but if the servant, having borne children, displayed any rancor, she should be dealt with as the wife saw fit. Ur as a city came to an end about 536 B. C., when it was conquered by the Persians under Cyrus the Great, and the first written record of Cyrus found in Mesopotamia was discovered by the expedition in the bricks of an Ur gate socket, which were stamped with Cyrus's name. Such unbiased confirmation, dug up out of these ancient ruins, of the truth of this part of Genesis extends this confirmation to other parts and gives us assurance that we are not trusting to cunningly devised fables but are resting on reality. These old bricks can still speak and tell us facts that cannot be denied.—Presbyterian Banner.

THE MAKING OF "BEN HUR"

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, the agnostic, was riding along in a train. Gen. Lew Wallace, happening to pass the compartment of Ingersoll, was invited to come in and sit for a chat. General Wallace answered, "All right, colonel, what shall we chat about?"

"Lot's of things," answered Ingersoll. "Is there a future life? I don't know, do you? Is there a God? I don't know, do you?"

Ingersoll paused and looked keenly at General Wallace. The general was embarrassed by the abruptness of the question. He replied, "Really, Ingersoll, I have never given much thought or study to the questions you propound. I had a Christian training and I have always accepted them tacitly."

"Indeed!" answered Colonel Ingersoll. "Why man, you surprise me! They are vital issues. I have studied the subject thoroughly. Every man ought to. Now, take my advice and look into the matter. You will find that you will agree with me."

General Wallace says: "I went from this interview embarrassed and mortified. I had not felt competent to discuss such an important matter with such a learned thinker. I made up my mind that I would never place myself in such an embarrassing position again. I plunged into study, reading every authority available. After years of study, instead of agreeing with the great agnostic, I wrote 'Ben Hur.' It is my reply to him."

THE VISION

Ruby Holzhouse

Alone, but not alone,
For God was there.
And through the glass, and Young People's groups are being enlisted. The Synod of Texas has turned in faith and hope to this great task in the Savior's name and asks the prayer of the entire Church in its effort.

E. M. Munroe, Chairman of the Executive Committee, Taylor, Texas.

Stained so artistically,
Such colors spread
As never artist hand
Could re-produce.
It was a church;
Far back the empty seats
Stretched into darkness,
But as the sun went down
In glory rare, it seemed
That it must leave some beauty
It lit the church with wondrous
And shone down on the cross upon Altar.

One soul alone sat speechless,
Gazing on the vision.

It seemed as though he saw the
A look of pain across his brow,
Not mortal pain such as we know
But sorrow for an erring soul.
He stood there and a halo
about His head,

His arms outstretched
As though to call a tired soul
Angel voices seemed to call,
And, as the room grew darker,
Alone he knelt there, but he felt
The presence of that One divine
And so I found him,
With his head upon the rail,
And in his eyes a light that could fail.

What vision for a tired soul,
What rest, and calm, sweet peace
And oh! that we could see a vision
Such as this! Perhaps we could If we, too, sat alone and let ture

And the feeling enter in.
Perhaps we too may see
A vision such as this,
And rise to do our best.—M

BOUGHT AND PAID FOR

In these days when so many things are bought on the installment plan, it is for one to understand some things in a spiritual way better than otherwise. All the installments have been paid, the title remains in the seller; when payment has been made, the title is transferred to the buyer. The article is and paid for, and then is the property of the buyer, and not until then. If he can do with it as he pleases, then he has to observe certain restrictions that were imposed upon him at the time of the sale. But when it has been BOUGHT AND PAID FOR, it is his to do with as he pleases.

It is here that the great spiritual lesson lies. Jesus Christ came into the world when we were slaves to sin and He bought us out of the market, we are no longer for sale at an auction. He did not buy us on the installment plan but paid the price in full at the purchase, and the title is in His hands then. We are not our own; we have been bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot. We have been BOUGHT AND PAID FOR.

Since, then, He has bought us, we are not our own. As his property we have a right to demand of us whatever He pleases. When we buy an article for a definite purpose, and we enter into a contract to do what we have had in mind when the purchase was made. Even so, Christ had a purpose in mind when He bought and paid for us. Here are some of the things that He has told us we are to do: "Forasmuch as ye have been redeemed with precious blood and gold—but with the precious blood of Christ—see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently." "Abstain from fleshly lusts that war against the soul." "Being dead to sins, live unto righteousness." (That is, not being at the mercy of sin, live righteously, for the body is the temple of the "Holy Spirit" therefore keep the temple clean.)

There is another thing that the Bible tells us about our relationship to Christ. Slaves had no right of property; all that they had belonged to their masters and owners. The same is true of us. We have been bought and paid for by Christ, and we have in our possession but one thing, His right of purchase. We are merely entrusted to us as stewards.

How much are we recognizing of this right of ownership that Christ has ever since He bought and paid for us? Think this through for yourself. You confessed Him as the right owner of your life? If not, will you do so today? Have you been using His name as a way that He would approve? Will you not begin today to do what that talent that He has entrusted to you has been used for Him, or for some other motives? He has BOUGHT AND PAID FOR you; shall He be cheated of His possession?—N. Ave. News.

REVERSION TO TYPE

"Reversion to type" is a well known phrase in the theory of Evolution. It expresses the fact that while the different orders of life are steadily advancing to a higher type, there is nevertheless a tendency in all to fall back to their original type.

The huge strawberry of to-day has been produced by careful cultivation from the small berry that fruits in the hedges; yet if left to itself will gradually fall back to its original type. Our finest flowers and fruits have to be carefully guarded else they too will revert to their original beginnings from which they came. Breeders of animals, whether dogs, chickens, horses, realize this danger, and therefore bend every effort, not only to keep the stock pure, but also to infuse new blood and tend to make it permanent.

Evil did not come from any lower order, but from the image in God's image, according to his plan. Sin entered and sent him downward, and of us to-day find it a struggle to rise upward toward God.

It is said that there is a tendency to go back to primitive morals. The Bible gives us the sad story of man's downfall when he sank so low as to be repented that He had made him. He was ashamed of His own handiwork. Sin not only brought man to the bottom morally, but physically, which is seen in the low order of such as we call the primitive races.

Primitive man are found in the South Sea Islands and the wilds of Africa, and history pictures our ancestors wearing skins and leading a primitive existence. Certain marks have distinguished these primitive races.

Primitive man, with no clothes, save a breech cloth, they have gradually covered themselves with garments, till with their descendants, the wearing has become a question overruling all other questions, at least with the men of the present generation.

The use of bright colors is another mark of primitive man, the color being some-thing like his face and sometimes in his clothing.

Even this in the savage of the plains, who is as black as his face or struts around in blazing red clothing.

As civilization advances, he selects the most sober colors, till we judge the refinement of the men by the soberness of the colors.

The refined lady seeks harmony of colors, and a soft loudness.

This tendency to revert to type is clearly shown in the present day; when following the edict of fashion, are reverting to the original type of man, the clothing was used in the most abbreviated form.

Good people of this day are becoming more and more to recover this rapid reversion to the original simplicity of dress, to use no harsher colors.

Nothing in the present time is more alarming than this backward step to the scanty clothing of the early man. In addition to the tendency to revert to the clothes of the primitive man we are also confronted by a tendency to revert in our taste for coloring.

Our savage ancestors revelled in bright colors, and now their descendants are going back to the same colors and the same abundance of pigment. Nature has generously endowed the females with the soft tints of the apple blossom; but the modern woman tries to outshine nature, both on her cheeks and lips. Nearly 80 per cent of the young women one meets on the streets to-day could be called "the painted women" which in other days was applied to those whose reputation was soiled.

In this age the term no longer carries reproach, because the exception has become the rule, and few of the young women can be found who do not resemble a barber shop pole.

We have no idea where this reversion will end. As far as clothing is concerned, it has nearly reached its limit. Let parents arouse themselves and try to stem the current.

The human race has been climbing up in civilization and refinement, and we can only pray that they may be saved from reverting to the savage life from which their ancestors have risen.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE RADIO

We live in a wonderful age, so wonderful that we never question the report of any discovery of Science. The phonograph, the automobile, the air-plane, the radio, each one, at first, taxed our credulity with its claims, yet each one in turn eventually established that claim.

When we compare what life was before their introduction and what it is now, we wonder how men ever lived without them. By means of these inventions we annihilate distances, whether on land or in the air, and we talk face to face, as far as distance is concerned. We congratulate ourselves that we live in this age when so many inventions add to the comfort of man.

But we find that as every sweet is said to have its bitter, so every invention has its drawbacks. The auto, useful as it is, gives to crime so many advantages that sometimes men question whether, on the whole, the world has been benefited.

Our friends, the Romanists, find that the radio is presenting a puzzling problem, and is neutralizing age-old plans for suppressing the truth.

Heretofore, in order to keep their people in ignorance of Protestant teaching, it was only necessary to keep them from Protestant books and Protestant preaching, or sometimes frighten them with the displeasure of the Church.

For many years this has been so effective that workers in Catholic countries have found nearly every door closed to them.

The radio, however, has "spiked" that gun. You may close the door to men, but you cannot close the ear to the human voice coming over the radio. To help this mode of entrance to homes, there is that curiosity that is natural to the human race.

Forbidden fruits are notoriously sweet, and the very fact that they are forbidden by the Church to listen is found to arouse the desire to listen, in order to find wherein is the danger.

So serious has become the practice of "listening in" that one of their theological professors has been called upon to lay down rules for the faithful. We give the four rules of conduct laid down for their guidance. They are as follows:

(1) To listen when one feels that his faith is being endangered is sinful and forbidden.

(2) To listen occasionally out of curiosity, when there is no danger of faith being shaken may be allowed.

(3) To listen frequently, or to follow the sermons of any one person or sect closely is always forbidden.

(4) To listen to heretical sermons in the presence of children or adults whose faith is not strong is a scandal and must never be practiced.

We have an idea that every descendant of Eve will wish to find out the secret evil.

WHAT IS AHEAD OF US?

Students of the Bible as well as students of the times see many signs of the culmination of the struggle of good with evil.

The Bible points more than once to "perilous times" in the last days, when men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, etc., having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. This is a dark picture, yet it well describes much that we find in the world and in the Church of God.

These are not the gloomy forebodings of some depressed Christian, but they find an echo in the views of some of our ablest and sanest leaders.

In 1891 in a memorial address for Dr. Casper Hodge, Dr. Francis Patton makes this prophecy: "I may be wrong; but it seems to me that American Christianity is about to pass through a severe ordeal."

"It may be a ten years' conflict, it may be a thirty years' war; but it is a conflict in which all Christian Churches are concerned."

"The war will come. The Presbyterian Church must take part in it; and Princeton, unless her glory is departed, must lead the van in the great fight for fundamental Christianity. It is not amendment, it is not revision, it is not restraint, it is a revolution that we shall have to face."

"The issue will be joined by and by on the essential truth of a miraculous and God-given revelation, and then we must be ready to fight, and, if needs be, to die, in defense of the blood-bought truths of common salvation."

These words deserve serious consideration. They are not the raving of a fanatic, but the serious warnings of a conservative man in his old age, when he had retired from active work, and had given himself to thought and study.

The sad feature of the present period in the history of man is the general apathy and blindness, not to say indifference, of the ministry and Christian leaders.

Wherever we look, in every Church there is this spirit of indifference, this willingness to let things go, if the defenders of that view will let them alone. Like a plague this spirit is spreading. It is seen in the preaching of the day, in the life of the Church, and in the literature that is coming from the press.

The spirit of the Laodicean Church possesses us, and therefore we may look for the judgment of that Church to be pronounced upon us.

Dr. Patton was never an alarmist. With the prophetic eye of old age he saw into the future and he called upon the Church to prepare for battle.

The battle is coming, and the question for every man is, "Where shall I stand?"

A VALUABLE BOOK ON CHINA

"The Church in China," by Rev. Donald W. Richardson, D.D. The author of this most informing book on the work in China had a brilliant career in College and has since spent 18 years in mission work in China. At present he is the Professor of Christian Missions in Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va. Besides fine mental training, he brings to the work of discussing the missions in China, an acquaintance based upon long experience.

His style is pleasant and his reasoning clear. There are 225 pages, clear type and especially readable.

We predict that it will stand high in the estimation of all who study the history of missions as a science, because they will recognize in it the pen of a master mind.

He says that the Church in China is not denominational, but the membership is held together by love for a common God.

It is a gathering together in sympathy, and they are recognized by this spirit of a common love. They are ready to prove their faith by their lives.

This book can be ordered from our Richmond Publication Committee at the following prices: Paper, 50 cents; Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

UNION WITH THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. S. L. Morris, D.D.

In the Church papers appears the suggested basis of Union with the U. P. Church in its final form for the consideration of the two Assemblies, which we are publishing, with the consent of the Rev. J. D. Leslie, D. D., Stated Clerk, in order that the Church may have time for its careful study before the meeting of the Assembly.

At its first meeting, the Joint Committee on Closer Relations agreed to investigate and study the case, report its findings and refrain from conducting any propaganda for or against union. It has hitherto contented itself with reporting its findings from time to time as to the differences between the two Churches, the difficulties in the way of union, and whether they are minor or insuperable. It has reached a conclusion practically unanimous based upon the following considerations briefly stated:

Brief Statement of Reasons

1. The two churches agree absolutely in remarkable unity of doctrine, having the same standards, the same traditions of the past, the same historic antecedents, practically the same ecclesiastical machinery, and the same methods of work. The agreements are fundamental; the differences are infinitesimal—no greater than those existing in each communion among its own constituency.

2. Their union would be a tremendous step toward healing the breaches of Protestantism, whose chief weakness is in its unfortunate divisions—arrayed against each other instead of presenting a common front to a formidable foe.

3. It would result in strengthening the forces of evangelical Christianity by presenting a sound, Calvinistic basis, which should challenge all the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches of America to come together in one organization for the spiritual conquest of America, and in the interest of world evangelization.

4. It would furnish opportunity and a nation-wide testimony to our common evangelical faith and fundamental principles. Each denomination at present is somewhat the complement of the other. They need us in a wider evangelical effort, and we need them in an enlargement of our sphere of service to the whole nation.

5. It would tremendously stimulate the missionary spirit of both Churches. It is quite a coincidence that their foreign mission work is in Egypt, India, Abyssinia, and countries where we have no missions, while our operations are in the great countries of China, Korea, Japan, Africa and South America, where they have no work. The union would give each a world task, already undertaken, with missions practically covering the globe, which would undoubtedly fire the imagination, as nothing else could, with a godly enthusiasm for winning the world for Christ.

6. Union would eventually result in economy of administration and thereby liberate large amounts for missionary operations—not at first perhaps as it would take time to consolidate forces and merge administrative agencies—but it would come inevitably.

Objections to Union Answered

Very naturally in some quarters objections to union are to be expected, as the best of men with equally high motives are so constituted that they are conscientiously compelled to differ. With regard to such we have no controversy, and must leave their arguments to exert such influence as their weight and force merit.

May we be permitted, however, to call attention to such objections as are based on misapprehensions and misstatements of alleged facts for the benefit of those who may not be informed.

1. The statement has been made that the U. P. Church has changed its Confession of Faith. This grows out of the fact that it has issued a Confessional Statement corresponding to our Brief Statement, which, however, is a much larger document than ours. Inasmuch as it has been officially adopted by its Presbyteries—while not taking its place and leaving the Westminster Confession untouched—it carries the statement that being the more recent document in any supposed difference it has the preference.

Careful examination by some of the ablest men of our Church enable them to testify that there are no real differences, and that this Confessional Statement is the greatest modern interpretation of our Calvinistic creed ever written.

Consider the following as a specimen and say whether it modifies its testimony to the inspiration and authority of the Word of God: "We believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are the Word of God and are inspired throughout, in language as well as thought; that their writers, though moved by the Holy Spirit, wrought in accordance with the laws of the human mind; that they faithfully record God's gracious revelation of Himself and bear witness of Christ; and that they are an infallible rule of faith and practice and the supreme source of authority in spiritual truth."

The only article where men have tried to discover a difference, is the following: "We believe that the Eternal Father, before the foundation of the world, in His own good pleasure gave to His Son a people, an innumerable multitude, chosen in Christ unto salvation, holiness, and service; that all of these who come to years of discretion receive this salvation through faith and repentance; and that all who die in infancy, and all others who are given by the Father to the Son and are beyond the reach of the outward means of grace, are regenerated and saved by Christ through the Holy Spirit, Who works when and where and how He pleases."

The only difference is that it incorporates our "footnote" as to the belief in the salvation of infants; and it leaves out the most objectionable clause in our whole Confession where the assertion is made that the number of the elect is so fixed and certain that it can neither be increased or diminished.

In the judgment of competent Presbyterians this article is as strong as the Westminster Confession and is greatly improved by omitting the unnecessary and objectionable inference from the scriptural statement of election.

2. The objection is raised that the U. P. Church has mixt Presbyteries of white and colored, and so have we; but the colored element in these mixt Presbyteries of both denominations is so small that it is negligible. It is also objected that the U. P. Church licenses women to preach. Upon investigation we find that this is a mistaken statement—at least the membership of the U. P. Church know nothing of any such alleged fact. Inquiry brings the information that many years ago one of its Presbyteries temporarily licensed a woman evangelist, but it has been so long ago that the ministers of the U. P. Church consulted on the subject cannot even remember the name and the Presbytery which took this action.

It is a misrepresentation of the attitude of the U. P. Church. The writer on various occasions has heard women make addresses to promiscuous audiences at Montreat, and remembers on one occasion when a woman stood in the pulpit, read the scripture, took a text and preached a regular sermon. If anyone should make use of some such incident to prove that the Presbyterian Church U. S. allows women to preach, it would be the same kind of a misrepresentation as that which is brought against the U. P. Church.

It was our General Assembly that invited this conference as to Closer Relations, and the members of our Church should not violate the proprieties by making attacks upon our sister Church based upon misunderstandings.

3. The statement has been published that the U. P. Church has abrogated the office of Deacon and now uses Trustees instead. On the contrary, their Book of Church Order devotes nearly half a page to the office of Deacon, beginning with the statement: "The office of the deacon is set forth in the New Testament as one of perpetual appointments in the Christian Church."

4. It is argued that they differ materially from our Church on the subject of Social Service. The following article in their Confessional Statement embodies their position on the subject: "We believe that the Divine plan for mankind includes a social order in harmony with the ideals and spirit of Jesus Christ; that the truth of the Kingdom of God in its present aspect would mean not only its establishment in the hearts of men individually, but a world in which righteousness and brotherhood should prevail; and that a primary duty of the Church is to give positive witness that the Christian principles of justice and love should have full expression in all relationships whatsoever—personal, industrial, business, civic, national, and international."

If any suppose this is fundamental error, then may we remind them that fifteen years ago our Church was called upon to formulate its views on this subject; and a Joint Committee was appointed by the Presbyterian Bodies of the U. S., Dr. J. Spole Lyons of our Church being Chairman. This Committee dealing with the wrongs and evils of modern society, presented a very able report which was adopted by our Assembly, and from which we have space to copy only one paragraph: "We believe that the Church, holding the Gospel of Jesus Christ, is not only the appointed means to salvation from eternal death, but that, with the State and family, she has a distinctive work to do in bettering the social relations of men in this present world. The power given to the Church is spiritual, ministerial and declarative, and her function, through the Word and Holy Spirit, is to inculcate and apply those principles and to quicken those motives which are essential to all true and lasting reform."

Will the objectors examine the two statements and inform us wherein they differ?

Surely it is not necessary to pursue the subject, as the intelligence of our ministry and membership will answer for themselves other charges which are based on misapprehensions.

While the members of our Ad Interim Committee are practically unanimous for union, we are making no recommendation to the Assembly, but having discharged our responsibility, we submit our work to the Church and leave the disposition of our Report to the wise decision of our General Assembly.

"THE PROPOSED ANNUITY PLAN"

Henry H. Sweets

There appeared in the Presbyterian Standard of April 3 two articles by Rev. R. W. Jopling, giving his interpretation of the Ministers' Annuity Fund which has been approved by the General Assembly and is now before the Presbyteries and will soon be before the sessions and congregations of the Churches.

It would be almost impossible for any one to more thoroughly misinterpret the spirit and the method of the purpose of this plan. The only answer needed to his article is a clear presentation of the plan itself, and the reading, without prejudice of "The Background of the Plan," and the "Answers and Questions," which appeared in the Standard of March 27. Mr. Jopling has misconceived the purpose of the plan. It was never in the mind or the heart of any one who had anything to do with development of the Ministers' Annuity Fund that should rob that Church of its love and compassion statement has been constantly made that there always be a place for Ministerial Relief, but that would be a diminishing place. The purpose of this is to help each minister to safe-guard his future in this way we are building a fence at the top of the hill. We believe that there will be much less use thereof the ambulance but it will always be in service and ministers or widows be in need the whole Church be summoned, with all the power of this Department to come to their relief.

The Church cannot make of itself a general elderly institution. It cannot care for all of the poor in the ranks of the ministry. It has, however, sacred and solemn obligation to minister to the have ministered in spiritual things in the Church could not be morally justified to establish a Ministers' Annuity Fund that would simply give out its money every one regardless of the responsibility of the for him. In this plan the minister begins at once some small provision for himself. The Church ages him in this matter by putting in $7.50 even he puts in $2.50. Through the marvelous work compound interest, in a series of years, the disability old age retirement of all of the ministers will be aided for.

If there is any reason why the salaries of ministerial active service should be different, this reason carries over into the period of retirement. As I stated each time the plan has been presented, ever is going to be made from this time forth to see that minister is provided a living that will keep him from worldly care and avocation." The Church is slow and late in understanding the critical situation regard to its ministers. It will take many years come the negligence of the past, but surely the reason why the Church should not awake from its slumber and arise to action.

To meet in part the accrued liability for prior and to pay a small percentage of the deferred salaries which the men who have served the Church long are clearly entitled, a fund of three million dollars be raised. Every minister who has served the will share alike in this fund. He will receive a year of service one-seventieth of a hypothetical salary of $1,200. It makes no difference whether his salary been $1,600 or $16,000. All share alike.

Mr. Jopling seems to think he has discovered underlying principles of this plan. He is wrong in his application of every one of them.

1. The Ministers' Annuity Fund is not to be used to meet need. Need will still be met for from the Funds of Ministerial Relief.

2. It is certainly not necessary to say one who anyone who has read the plan and its explanation the second principle "that the Church as a entity after guaranteeing to some of its ministers annuity of $600, has no further responsibility for I wonder if Mr. Jopling's pen didn't slip when he that. It is, of course, wholly contrary to the elements of the plan.

3. His third principle is equally without any tion in the plan. The minister, himself, and the ular Church he serves are not alone responsible maintenance in age and in infirmity. The minister treated in this matter as a group. Those who the small salary during years of service will be immeasurably by the Churches which pay the salaries. Surely no one could read the plan clearly understood that $600 is the minimum of annuity, which will be increased as the reserve mature.

4. There is no basis in the plan for the fourth principle enunciated. The Church is under sacred obligation to provide a sufficient amount of salary for each and missionary to live in a manner that will his development and efficiency. It is clearly evident many of the salaries now paid must be greatly reduced to meet this obligation. The increasing of the automatically increases the amount of annuity guaranteed on a contractual basis.

The sentimental appeal about "need" may possibly the minds of some from the essence of this plan careful reading, however, would easily dissipate prejudice.

The picture of the three ministers of the Presbyterian Church in the United States going down from Jericho and having an infelicitous contact with the hearted Secretary of Ministerial Relief of course nothing in the discussion of this plan. The Secretary of Ministerial Relief does not determine the need minister's home. This is done by the Presbyterian Committee of Ministerial Relief of the same name.

For twenty-five years this Committee and the Secretary have served the Church in administering the of Ministerial Relief. If anyone has been overlooked was not because we have not diligently endeavored to assist our Chairmen to locate cases of need. Many need is real have declined the proffered aid because have felt there might be someone who "needs them more."

Our Church today is giving more to its infirm ministers and missionaries and widows and from the funds of Ministerial Relief than any other Church (with the single exception of one Church in North America and yet the average sent to each home for this year, 1928-1929, was to each home for the entire year.

Ofttimes the Presbyterian Chairman is greatly in requesting an adequate appropriation because some who express the fear that some brother getting more than his share. There always is be this lurking apprehension in the minds of some. The Jerusalem-Jerico cases that trouble Mr. Jopling are not ones that come under the

CHURCH AND ITS MINISTERS AND MISSIONARIES

Henry H. Sweets, Secretary

Who studies carefully the method of Christ's teachings of both the Old and the New Testament doubt the importance of the minister, whether "priest," "levite," "pastor," "preacher," "evangelist," "minister."

Records reveal the fact that Jesus gave the most importance to the training of the Twelve. He impressed authority upon them and sent them to teach others and to change other lives by their personalities.

Of course, essential that we have churches and that but it will be a sad thing for the Kingdom of God to emphasize buildings and institutions that the aspects of the Gospel do not receive proper seriousness in the situation with regard to the Presbyterian Church (and possibly other churches of the world) which is probably not shared by many people. The Church calls men away from sources of worldly gain. It demands a high education that costs a large amount of money. Four years of high school, four years in college, three years of theological seminary, drain the resources of many of them go out into the work of the world from two to four thousand dollars. When we call a man to become its minister, it promises him support which will make for his comfort and honor of religion in the community. It specifies an amount of salary to be paid with this addition that the minister may be free from worldly avocations."

Does the Church done along this line? We have turned into the mission fields with wholly inadequate preparation. They have seen a wife and children deny the loss of health and education and culture. The injunction of the Word of God, "He that is not for his own is worse than an infidel," has become troubled and perplexed and many of them have been forced to leave needy and promising fields where they were not supported.

Scarcely a day passes that there does not come the statement from one of our ministers: "I have borrowed to the very limit on insurance policies. The premium and interest due. I have had to surrender the policy." One hundred in the past two years have written me saying: "I cannot get a support from my Home Mission Committee. I am writing you could find a place where I could teach in which I might support my family." While actual salaries have been increased in the past ten years to a certain extent, they have not, on the whole been able to keep up with the rise in the cost of living and the fall in the value of money during recent years has worked great hardships on these dwellers in the manse. Salaries now paid in our Church range from about $1,000 a year. They are much more equal than salaries for the cost of living in some communities and the excess of the cost in other localities. As the Home Mission Committee is now studying the Ministers' Annuity Fund for a period of thirty-five years, will practically solve the problem caused by disability and old age of our missionaries, every effort is going to be put to arouse the Church to a sense of its obligation for all of the ministers in such a way that their salary may be conserved and the development of the Church enlarged. Why should not every Presbyterian take this matter and solve it as one of the Presbytery's foremost problems to solve it?

The Home Mission Committee has adopted a business plan of conserving the strength and usefulness of our missionaries sent out. They first discover what it will cost to maintain each minister in each country. The salary is fixed at that sum. Child allowance ranging from $150 to $350 is provided for each child up to 21 years of age. Each missionary is provided with a home in which to live. All medical expenses are paid and one-half of the dental expenses are paid. Expense funds are also given to those who meet incidental expenses in their mission work. A missionary has been on the field for many years and discovers a need for study, incident to his education for the work, the expense at the university is borne by the Church. No one can criticize any part of this plan. Every one who is good, sound, Christian business man will support such a plan as this. Why should we not do this for every minister and missionary who serves the Church?

A few misapprehensions concerning the Annuity Fund which will doubtless be corrected by any one who reads the publication "Ministers' Annuity Fund," the backbone of the fund, answering 81 questions concerning the plan.

The Ministers' Annuity Fund is not an effort to equalize salaries equal or to provide the same retiring allowance for every worker. We do not believe this is possible to do. So far as we know, no Church is attempting to do this. The Church of God were the contributions can be enforced by act and will make available in 1942 to every active clergyman at seventy or over and upon resigning his cure, a pension of 200 pounds a year.

Everyone appreciates the fact that the living in some communities is much greater than in others, that when one has pitched his living on a certain scale it is exceedingly difficult to lower. There is no question whatever that the minister with the big salary will be properly cared for. Scores of our ministers of large churches who have served long and well have been made "pastor emeritus," and have received from one-half to the entire amount of salary which was enjoyed during the active years of service.

2. Some have asked about other plans, such as teachers' pensions, etc., which seem to make better provision. Before you draw any inferences from such statements, be sure to find out how long these pension schemes have continued and discover something about the amount of reserve behind their promises.

3. There is no question of lack of heart or of Christian spirit in the Ministers' Annuity Fund. It is simply a well wrought out plan for the Church to help its ministers and missionaries to make provision for the days of disability or old age. The fund of Ministerial Relief will always be available to those who are in real need. The offerings of the Church will continue to do this for many years. After that the Endowment Fund will probably be able to take care of the necessitous cases.

4. If there is any reason why the retiring allowance should be the same, there is exactly the same reason why all the present salaries should be the same. Any charge that the discrimination in retiring allowance counteracts the parity of the ministry could not be sustained. Any argument for the same retirement allowance would hold absolutely with regard to the salary for the active period of service. The "parity of the ministry" is not one of financial consideration, as is abundantly proved by the schedule of salaries today. There is every reason why the lower salaries should be brought up to a living scale. The bringing up of the salaries immediately begins the work of making the retirement allowance equal. As the minister and the Church make larger contributions to the Fund they are guaranteed larger returns from it. To increase the salaries immediately to a point where the embarrassing needs of the minister's homes may be met, is the Christian way to solve the great problem we are facing.

5. As has been so carefully explained, the ministers who have served our Church will all share absolutely in the same ratio from the funds raised to cover the accrued liabilities for prior service. Each minister will be entitled to draw from this for each year of service prior to January 1, 1931, one-seventieth of a hypothetical salary of $1,200. For future service, i. e., after the fund is established, he will draw one-seventieth of his salary for each year of service. No servant of the Church whose future service pension will equal $600 will draw anything at all from the prior service fund. No minister will draw more than a $2,000 pension and, of course, none could ever qualify for even this sum until after the lapse of many years.

It would be exceedingly easy to work out a plan that would seem a little better than this and many such plans have been worked out, but all of them have been discarded and, so far as we know, no more equitable principle than this has ever been brought into a pension system that has endured for any length of time. We are fully persuaded that the conscience of the Church is going to be aroused; that there will be a leveling up of salaries; that the Church is not going to make a mockery of its promise that its ministers and missionaries shall be kept "free from worldly cares and avocations."

6. The proposed annuity fund is the result of most careful and earnest and prayerful study. It has been adopted by the General Assembly. It must now be approved by the Presbyteries and the local Churches. We believe when misapprehensions have been removed; that it will be accepted practically universally by the Church. The Executive Committee of Ministerial Relief has done its best. It is possible for the General Assembly to order any changes, but surely no changes should be made except those that would stand the test of actuarial accuracy and of financial stability.

It would be a sad thing to promise help to our ministers and missionaries in safeguarding their investments and helping them during the years of inactivity and in later years discover that we could not fulfill the contract into which they had entered with the Church. The minimum pension has been set at $600. There is every reason to believe that the actual amount available will be far in excess of this. After three years of trial, the Protestant Episcopal Church was able to make a flat addition of $1,000, paid to the widow on the death of her husband. After seven years of trial, the minimum is being raised from $600 to $750 a year.

7. The General Assembly, in session in Atlanta in May, 1928, directed "That the Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief put before the Church the plan of the Ministers' Annuity Fund; the Presbyteries, Churches and agencies, and all the ministers and missionaries be urged to give the full measure of their support to this sane and needed effort to secure proper pensions for the servants of the Church; and that the whole Church make its plans, beginning January 1, 1930, to raise the amount of $3,000,000 required to inaugurate the plan.

THE STEWARDSHIP OF EDUCATION AND VOCATION

Henry H. Sweets

By order of the General Assembly the year, 1929, has been set apart as "Stewardship Year."

In this year the whole Church is thinking of its responsibility and accountability to Almighty God. Surely there is no greater responsibility and no higher opportunity than in helping to guide the young people of the Church in their efforts to discover the will of God concerning their lives and in helping them to secure such training as will qualify them for the largest usefulness in the home, the Church, the school, the state, and the world. A great responsibility rests upon parents and pastors and teachers. There is much confusion in the minds of youth today. It sometimes seems as though many men and women have thought that a perfect scheme of education would solve the problems of the world and develop a character that could withstand the increasing strain of the marvelous development in the modern world.

We should be slow in accepting such a conclusion. John Quincy Adams said: "It is infinitely more important what we cause our children to love and desire than what we cause them to know." There is a great truth underlying this statement. As the youth see the older generation what ideas of value do they receive? Someone has said "many parents are training their children to know the price of everything and the value of nothing." Our Presbyterian schools and colleges have one ideal before them, that is, the development of dependable Christian character. Our work among the students in the state and independent institutions of higher education is dominated by the motive to keep Christian ideals before the Presbyterian youth in their student days. We want the very best education that can be secured, but we must ever remember that conduct is not conditioned alone by knowledge.

Many choice boys and girls in poor Presbyterian homes have been denied the privilege of thorough preparation for life's duties. The Student Loan Fund has been a wonderful help to hundreds of these. Loans to a maximum of $150 are made to both boys and girls of approved character and ability who desire to attend our own colleges for each of the four years of the college course. This Loan Fund which is now $433,013 has been built up chiefly through scholarship funds. Scholarships from $400 to $10,000 are being erected by Churches, Auxiliaries, Presbyteries, Synodicals, Leagues, Christian Endeavor Societies and individuals as memorials to a relative, a faithful pastor or teacher or others who have given their lives in unselfish service. A beautiful booklet, "Monuments in Living Leaders," may be had on request of the Louisville office. A helpful program for the Sunday School, "Wings of Eagles," by Mildred Welch, other programs by Julia Lake Skinner for the Young People's and Christian Endeavor Societies, and helpful leaflets for the use of the Men-of-the-Church and the Women's Auxiliary may also be had for the asking. Much helpful material has been printed through the months of March and April in the Presbyterian Survey, the Church papers, The Program Builder and Onward. Attractive envelopes for the offering will be sent free of charge.

SLUMP IN GIFTS DUE TO WILFUL IGNORANCE

C. R. Harding

In these days of crisis, of stress and distress in regard to contributions to the benevolent causes of the Church many of us are tempted to make suggestions of one kind or another that might possibly serve in helping to relieve the present situation.

I have this thought—it would be a good thing, if our ministers would in larger measure urge upon their congregations both the privilege and duty of reading carefully and sympathetically the various articles in the church papers dealing with the Every Member Canvass and the lamentable shortage in contributions to the benevolent agencies of our Church.

My limited observation is that an overwhelmingly large fraction of the Church membership never thinks of reading the Church papers. It never occurs to them that they have any responsibility to keep themselves not simply informed but alive and alert to conditions confronting the Assembly's causes.

What with the Sunday newspaper, morning service, the radio, the afternoon automobile outing, etc., the religious newspapers get little consideration on the Sabbath day.

I am sure that conditions would be very different if our Christian people could or would read prayerfully the plain statement of facts appearing in whole page advertisement, the editorial comments, the eloquent appeals, the startling presentation of the needs, the clamant and clarion calls to 'come over and help us' that are found in the columns of our religious press—contributions from the flaming pens of our outstanding ministers and laymen and winged words that drive their way into the hearts

MATERIAL FOR MAY PROGRAM

Educational Department Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, Box 330, Nashville, Tenn.

Foreword

The facts given in this article concerning the life and work of that master missionary, William McCutchan Morrison, have been taken from the book "William McCutchan Morrison," by Vinson. Everyone who has a part in this program should first read the book. Then he will come to the meeting full of enthusiasm for his subject. Order this book now from the Educational Department, Foreign Mission Committee, Box 330, Nashville, Tennessee, or from the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Virginia. The cost is fifty cents. Read it as soon as it reaches you. The facts which follow are not intended to be read in the meeting, or given as a "set speech" but to be "gotten into the systems" of the speakers.

WILLIAM McCUTCHAN MORRISON

A young man from the South went into the heart of Africa when a journey there was a thrilling adventure. He travelled on foot, literally, thousands of miles. He conversed with kings and cannibals. He fearlessly exposed to the world the unspeakable cruelties being inflicted on the natives by Belgian-controlled rubber companies. He so awakened the conscience of Christian people to these atrocities that, when he was tried for libel by the Kasai Rubber Company, his trial became a matter of inter-national interest. His acquittal, received throughout the civilized world with enthusiasm, was regarded as a triumph of righteousness, and resulted in radically changing the attitude of the Belgian government toward the people of the Congo.

This young man gave to a nation which had not a single word in writing, a written language. He translated into their language the Word of God. This youthful adventurer, statesman, and scholar, who in the brief space of twenty years accomplished these things, was William McCutchan Morrison, a representative of our own Southern Presbyterian Church in the Belgian Congo.

SLUMP IN GIFTS DUE TO IGNORANCE of all who will listen to them, coming as they do from those on the firing line and the far flung battle front of the home and foreign mission field. With the facts before them, with the cry of distress echoing in their ears, with need so urgent and the path of duty so plain surely our people would respond in a way they are not doing. They would not, they could not so coldly and unsympathetically refuse to give and then to give again in this work of trying to bring in the Kingdom of God in our own and in pagan lands.

Painful as this fact may be, many a minister knows that he endangers his popularity and thereby his influence, nay he knows that his place is at stake, if he talks too much about, or takes too seriously such matters as Stewardship of Life and Possessions, Contributions to the Benevolent Causes, the question of Tithing, the Sin of Covetousness.

And there are at least three types of Christians that he easily offends or brings by degrees to absolute indifference to all that he says about these things:

First, there is the Christian that covers himself as with a coat of mail with the text: I Tim. 5:8: But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel, and in so covering himself he makes an absolute misinterpretation and misapplication of the writer's meaning.

Did I not believe in the inspiration of the Scriptures, I would feel that it is a great pity that this verse is in the Bible. It is a verse that the close-fisted Christian uses as a 'man-covering' shield wherewith he quenches many a sharp dart of his enemy, the pastor or the Church. It is a panoply whose steel few arrows or sword thrusts from God's Word or from God's servants can pierce.

Secondly, there is the Christian whose conscience troubles him, he fears he is not giving as he should, indeed he is rather convinced that he falls far short, but he has neither the courage, nor the will power nor the grace to come up bravely to the help of the Lord.

Thirdly, there is the Christian (?) who is well aware that he is in the wrong, that he is niggardly and stingy in his contributions, but he is hard and callous and indifferent. He is determined that duty or no duty, privilege or no privilege he will give what he wishes to give and no more.

With the Church in such large part living at this poor dying rate what greater proof on the one hand could one have that it is a vine of God's own planting, else it had died long ago. And what greater proof on the other hand could one have that it is not of God, when people by the tens of thousands, calling themselves God's people, His redeemed people, refuse in such large measure to give the Gospel of the Son of God to a waiting, lost world?

EARLY LIFE

Heritage

Back of a great man one is apt to find good ancestors, and William Morrison was no exception to this rule. His father and mother were of Scotch Presbyterian stock and in his family one finds a long list of preachers and elders. His father and grandfather were both elders in the Monmouth Presbyterian Church, Virginia, and his mother who was noted for her beautiful character, was a vital influence in the life of that church.

Education

William grew up on the family farm in the famous Valley of Virginia and here, with his parents and seven younger brothers and sisters, he learned to do hard work and to get along with folks—two valuable assets in his subsequent career. After graduating from the country school, where he organized a "debating club" and a "singing class," he entered Washington and Lee University. Here he did faithful, though not remarkable work, for the next four years. A fellow student says of him, "He was always loyal to truth and conscience, full of common sense, and happy in his work and play."

Decision

His parents had dedicated him to the gospel ministry in infancy but he planned to study law. To secure the money necessary for his legal preparation, after his graduation from college, he accepted a position to teach in Searcy, Arkansas. At some time during the six years he spent here he definitely heard God's call to the ministry so he entered the Louisville Theological Seminary. Near the end of his last year there he read an article in "The Missionary," the predecessor of the "Presbyterian Survey," setting forth the great need and opportunities of the Congo. It came to him as a direct call from God and he immediately announced his decision to offer his services for work in this field. Back of both of these great decisions we find prayers of Christian people. His father and mother prayed earnestly that he might be led into the ministry, and a Sunday school class in his Church in Louisville were praying, when he reached his decision, that he might be called to Africa. Things do not "just happen" in the lives of God's children!

He volunteered, was accepted, and on November 5, 1896, left his home in America to find a new one in the heart of Africa.

To the Congo

Six months from the day he sailed from Philadelphia, William Morrison arrived at Luebo, Africa, having travelled by ocean liner, train, river steamer, in hammocks carried by natives, and on foot nearly ten thousand miles. His trip to the Congo had been full of difficulties, delays, and dangers. Down-hearted? Never. On the day of his arrival he wrote: "Luebo, Hallelujah! All well and all here. The work is in a flourishing condition. Oh, for a full demonstration of the Spirit's power! I am delighted with the surroundings. Praise the Lord for bringing me here in peace and safety!"

HIGH POINTS IN MISSIONARY EXPERIENCE IN THE CONGO

Life in Africa

After reaching Africa, the further preparation which William Morrison received for his future service was exactly in line with modern principles of education. He was forced to "learn by doing." He had to build a house in which to live. Of this palatial residence, made of sticks and grass, only 12x15 feet, he wrote: "Pretty close quarters, but more than my Master had."

Soon after his arrival he settled a dispute between two tribes whose warfare had closed the road between Luebo and Ibanche, the new station at which Mr. Morrison had been located. Hence, he acquired his new name, "Kuonyi Nshila," which means "Don't let the path get closed again." By this name the natives ever afterwards called him.

A home and a name were essential, and equally important was a means of communication with the people; hence we find our young missionary starting out not to hunt "big game" but words. Imagine settling down among a nation, of whose language he knew not a word, with the purpose of giving them the Bible in their own language. This hunt for words required skill and patience. Of the process Morrison said: "The key words to any language are the questions, 'What is this?' and 'What did you say?' With these phrases the language begins to unlock. Our plan was to sit down in a group of people and take out a knife and listen with all ears. Someone in the crowd uttered the mystic words, 'What is that?' We tried this with several other objects till we were sure we had it. Then through firing their own question, 'What is that?' back at them we learned the names of all sorts of familiar objects. By intent listening and looking, the verbs began to come and afterwards, adjectives and adverbs. Some of the happiest moments of my life were those in which I discovered some new word for which I had been hunting for years, but which had baffled me. Often I have jumped up, leaving my astonished language teacher behind, and run across the station crying out, 'Eureka,' in order to announce to my colleagues the discovery of such a word as, 'Saviour,' 'Redeemer,' or 'Comforter.' This word which I had unearthed was far more valuable than a diamond for it would be a gem through which could flash new light and beauty into benighted souls.

How an alphabet was given to this nation, which had none, and their language reduced to writing, is a fascinating story. They had for generations had a spoken language with adequate grammatical rules which even the children observed most carefully, but not a word in writing. Through the twenty years of life in the Congo, Morrison was continually working that these people might have access to the Bible in their own language. His death put a stop to his translation before it was finished, and only recently was it completed by his friend and associate, Doctor Vinson. Last summer the whole Bible was printed in the Baluba language for the first time.

Doctor Morrison came to Africa with an understanding of, and a love for, colored people which he had acquired in his childhood in the South. Through all the years, when his life was such a busy one, he lived of people and continued to study their customs and characteristics. He settled their disputes, taught and preached to them. He was never too busy to who were in trouble, bringing comfort and

Trial at Leopoldville

For a missionary to be indicted by a court and to trial is most unusual. When Dr. Morrison Sheppard were indicted for libel against the Kasai Company, the attention of the whole Christ was focused on their trial. Through articles in papers and periodicals, and by addresses in England, Doctor Morrison had informed the the atrocities to natives being committed by the Rubber Company which was controlled by the government. Realizing the danger to their having the public know the true conditions, the Company retaliated by the indictment for libel two missionaries. The place for the trial, the the trial officials chosen were all unfair to the natives. It was impossible for them even to reach ville in the Congo by the time set for the trial immediately got in touch with our Executive of Foreign Missions through whom appeal to the United States, British, and Belgian government see that justice was administered. Mr. Van leading lawyer of Belgium, became so interested came to the Congo at his own expense and to case for the defense. Despite unfair treatment turn by the officials, Doctor Morrison and Doctor Sheppard were completely vindicated and the Kasai condemned to pay the cost of the trial. On dramatic trial came far-reaching reforms.

Subsequent Events in His Life

Immediately after this trial, Doctor Morrison turned to Ibanche and completed paraphrasing the Bible. Next, he and his wife, a truly kind whom he had married on his first furlough, marched on foot into the heart of the Baluba country. They located prospective sites for stations. Mrs. Morrison contracted fever which proved fatal. Doctor Sheppard showed the power of God in the lives of the utterly forgetful of self, he comforted the native gave them an entirely new conception of death.

As the leader of the mission he directed its progress carried on a voluminous correspondence. He and trained fellow missionaries, and with rare infinite patience, developed native leadership. He leader of all Protestant mission work in the Congo, adviser to the Methodist mission, he was called Lambuth, "Our African Bishop."

He "Died in the Harness"

He was twice elected president of the Congo Protestant Missions in the Congo composed of denominations. As president and host to the Congo which met at Luebo in February, 1918, he worked day and sometimes all night for ten days. His presence was immediately followed by the annual of our mission. He was taken ill during this time worn out by twenty years of constant work, he reserve strength to combat disease. Although the best possible attention, he only lived a longer. The investment of his life in the Congo for twenty years has paid, and continues to pay, which can only be adequately calculated in eternity.

Dr. S. H. Chester wrote of him: "Morrison, consecration, and the scope and influence of ranks as the greatest of modern missionaries in

MORRISON, THE MISSIONARY The Missionary Statesman

From the beginning of his work until his death Morrison was the recognized leader of the mission possessed a statesman-like grasp of conditions, genius for administration. Through the force of personality, rather than by selection, Luebo became the headquarters of the entire mission and became the head of all Protestant mission work in Congo.

In his life one finds a practical demonstration whose ruling passion is the fulfillment of the Gospel.

The case is not unusual. Scotch Churches have retired their pastors on half a times on full salary and have honored them with the title "pastor emeritus." Ought it to be considered for constant agitation and humiliating criticism the whole Church has seen fit to honor itself as two of its servants in this way?

I would not presume to answer the three questions in summing up Mr. Jopling's personal opinion of the Ministers' Annuity Fund, where he charges (1) unjust, (2) un-Presbyterian and (3) un-Every one of these questions is answered so clearly in the material that is now before the entire Church. ary. Love for God and love for his fellowman. A missionary said: "Two deep impressions of him in me. First, the calm assurance of his soul, the plan of the Father things will come out right and grace sorely needed in view of certain conditions in the Congo. The other impression was the gentleness of his soul. He was the defender of the Congo had a right to be proud; the poor and down-trodden, a mighty friend, but into battle with confidence not in weapons of war. As one watched him in his dealing with the 'gentle' and realized the tender love of him and them, it was easy to see how much he had the power of gentleness. In him were blended the measure the strength of faith and the gentleness."

He believed in the power of gentleness and was not afraid to bring force to bear on those who refused to respond to higher appeals. In all of his legal representative of the mission, he showed himself with absolute fearlessness. His courtesy to the Belgian officials was unflinching, yet not for a moment he hesitated to expose, through written and oral, the cruel injustice of the government to the natives. It was largely through his efforts the Christian world was aroused and that conditions changed.

The Author and Translator

Dr. Morrison found time, in addition to his other duties, too numerous to mention, to be a prolific writer. It is difficult to understand. Yet we find that he was only a regular contributor to the "Missionary Review" and other church papers, but as well to the leading papers and magazines of America and Europe. He was also editor of the "Kasai Herald." His greatest work, however, was in connection with giving to his beloved people. He mastered the details of the Baluba language, reduced it to writing and published the first Baluba Grammar and dictionary. He also wrote the paraphrases and other Christian literature, and well under way a translation of the entire Bible which was completed and published after his death.

The Christian

The secret of the greatness of William McCutchan's life is found in his personal relation to Christ. His duties were never allowed to encroach on his time set apart for prayer and study of God's word. The channel connecting with the source of power was always kept open. Through Morrison, God was able to illustrate what He could do with a life wholly given to Him. We become like those with whom he ministered. Through constant association with Christ, prayer and in the fellowship of labor, William became Christ-like. He was willing to pay the price of true greatness—he first lived the things he preached. Lambuth, who was intimately associated with him on a journey which covered thousands of miles and weeks, says: "The springs of this great life were in the depths of a conscious realization of the presence of God. New forces were released during his time of intercession. There comes to my memory of a candle burning an hour before day, every day in a humble home, as he devoted the first hour of his day to the study of God's Word and prayer. He realized it, but he was keeping the soul of religion in the mission and the native church." He brought the problem of the mission daily before the throne of God in a verse which he quoted daily, we find that that wonderful courage which enabled him to stand alone and protest against the oppression of the natives—"Fear not, for I am with thee." He had faith in the promises of God. Expecting great things from God, he attempted great things for God. Nothing was back—all he had of time, talent, and strength, was dedicated to the service of the Master.

Christ, or in some other form of whole-time employed Christian service.

Sunday, April 21—The Bible a Wonder Book —
Isaiah 55:8-13; II Peter 1:19-21; II Tim. 3:15.

C. G. A.

The Bible a Book of Beginnings

"And Jehovah God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Dust—the breath of God—and a living soul. There is the beginning of man. But man chose Death and Time rather than Life and Eternity. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." There is the curse of sin. But God did not leave man to die without hope. If the Bible told only of the beginning of man and the beginning of sin and Death, it would not be a Wonder Book—it would be a Doomsday Book. The Bible also tells of the beginning of the race through which the Redeemer should come, the Israelites. "Now Jehovah said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great; and be thou a blessing; and I will bless them that bless thee and him that curseth thee

I will curse; and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Then the Bible tells of the beginning of the Gospel—the beginning of good news: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "For as in Adam all died, so also in Christ shall all be made alive." There is the Wonder of the Bible.

The Bible a Supernatural Book

To the drab realist the Bible as a supernatural Book is closed. Things that cannot be reasoned out are not to be accepted by him. To believe such things are counted as foolishness and childishness. The human race, says the realist, has grown beyond such things. When the race was in its childhood and there was no way to explain phenomena, they attributed the unusual to a deity. But in this enlightened age let us put away childish things. Thus does the realist explain away the supernatural.

We cannot explain and give reasons for prophecies and miracles; we can only say what we believe. "Our hearts have reasons that our reasons do not know." It is not hard to say, "I do not believe"—It is a gift from God to say, "I believe." "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jonah, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee but my Father who is in heaven." Through believing our hearts learn to know. "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and at last He will stand up upon the earth, and after my skin, even this body is destroyed, then without my flesh shall I see God" (Job 19:25, 26). "For I know him whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to guard that which I have committed unto him against that day" (II Tim. 1:12). "We know that all things work together for good to them who love God" (Rom. 8:28). "We know that if the earthly house of our tabernacle be destroyed, we have a building from God, a house not made with hands, eternal, in the heaven" (II Cor. 5:1).

The Bible a Book of One Mind*

Try to imagine for a moment a volume consisting of a number of books written, one by King Alfred in Anglo-Saxon times; another by a man who lived at the time of William the Conqueror; another by a shepherd on the hills of Scotland in the time of Henry VIII; another by Oliver Cromwell; others by humble and ignorant fishermen on the coasts of Yorkshire in the sixteenth century; another by a great English administrator who had governed India as viceroy in the nineteenth century; another by a medical man in the present day—all breathing the highest spiritual truths and giving either a history of God's dealing with English people or setting out the claims that the Creator of the world has upon His creatures; or reviewing the sins of the nations and of individuals; or containing the noblest devotional songs; or foretelling future events. Imagine such books to have been written, gathered together and bound into one large volume. What kind of book would that volume be? The most of its parts would have no connection whatever with the rest. The mere conception of such a preponderous publication strikes one as unreal and ridiculous. Nevertheless the Bible, although composed of the writing of men of far more widely diverging types, is a perfectly homogeneous whole.

The Book is God's Word to man given by special and direct inspiration. When this view of it is taken, what would otherwise be incomprehensible becomes easily intelligible and we at once realize how it is that the Bible stands alone among all the books of the world in this marvel of its unity.

The Bible the Best Seller

One of the most remarkable facts about the Bible is that it is the best seller, and has been for all these years. No book has ever approached it in sales. The British Bible Society had just completed its 125th year, and has issued over 325 million Bibles, and publishes the Bible in 600 languages.

The American Bible Society is printing 11 million Bibles per month, which will sum up over 132 millions every year. Nearly five million Bibles are sold annually in China, and over one million in Japan. In the United States probably six million Bibles are sold every year.

In the light of these facts, there is little use to compare other books. And yet Voltaire said a century ago that by now the Bible would be out of print, and assigned to museums, and if you wanted to see one you have to go where they kept curiosities.

The Bible a Wonderful Comfort

While all these facts are astonishing, the most wonderful thing about the Bible is that it brings the most marvelous comfort to those in trouble, it offers salvation from sin to the sinner, it provides a way of life to the young, it offers the most satisfactory advice to all who need it. It teaches us that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and savior of men, and that he is working to bring to this old world a new life that will be free from the sadness and sorrows of this world.

LET HIM FIRST CAST A STONE

They dragged her! harlot! to the Christ one day,
Stained, branded, and profane,
And sought His judgment on the wretch, ere they Would have her slain,
Battered, and stoned, and slain.

Said Christ, "He who himself from sin is free,
Let him first cast a stone."
And one by one they slunk away, till she Was left alone
With Him, the Christ, alone.

"O where are thine accusers, woman, now,
Who vengeance on thee swore?
Hath none condemned thee? Nor do I: go thou
And sin no more;
O woman, sin no more."

Lesson for April 21

COMFORT FOR GOD'S PEOPLE'S

Isaiah 40:1-11.

Our study for this week is taken from the 40th chapter of the book of Isaiah. The question comes up whether this chapter and the succeeding ones (Is. 40-66) were written by Isaiah whose call is recorded in Is. 6, or by a subsequent prophet or prophets. The Bible itself does not tell us. It does not state in any place that these chapters were actually the words of Isaiah. Almost all modern students of the Bible have come to the conclusion the Is. 40-55 were written by a later prophet, spoken of for convenience as the second Isaiah (perhaps a disciple of the actual Isaiah), and the section 56-66 by still a third prophet. The chief reason for holding this conviction is that the original Isaiah prophesied during the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, 150 years before Judah was finally carried captive by the Babylonians. The second Isaiah seems to have written after the captivity. If we are not willing to accept the theory of a second Isaiah then we must imagine that Isaiah himself wrote a message that was unintelligible for a century and a half, that he projected himself into a historical setting that was still far in the future, and prophesied as though that future were the present. At any rate we cannot understand this portion of God's word unless we keep in mind that it was written for a people who had suffered in captivity for many years. The first generation was passing away. The people as a whole were losing faith in the promises of deliverance that had been delivered by the earlier prophets. Under these circumstances a new prophet, probably a disciple of Isaiah, comes to the fore and delivers the message recorded in Is. 40-55. The aim of the whole prophecy is to console and hearten the exiles in Babylon, and also the dejected inhabitants who had not been deported from Judah. Chapter 40:1-11 contains the first proclamation of the glad tidings that the prophet has to deliver. Probably it is the story of his call. Four divine voices give him the gist of the message that he is to deliver to the people.

I. 1st Voice: The Proclamation of Pardon and Deliverance

Read Is. 40:1-2. Whose is the voice? What obligation does it lay upon those to whom it is addressed? Who is it that is commanded to comfort God's people? What is the basis of the divine comfort?

The speaker here is God. He addresses the prophet and all those who hear His voice. They are to comfort His people. The word translated 'comfortably' in verse 3 means literally "to speak to the heart of." It is the ordinary Hebrew expression for wooing. As from man to woman when he courts and wins her, the Old Testament uses it several times. It is significant as George Adam Smith points out that "of all human language they might use, God bids his messengers take and plead with the words with which a man will plead at a maiden's heart, knowing that he has nothing but love to offer as right of entrance, and waiting until love and trust come out to welcome him." The messengers of God then are to comfort the desolate people, speaking home to their hearts the words of the Divine Lover. The ground of their comfort is three-fold. 1st. Their warfare is accomplished. The word translated warfare means properly a term of military service; then figuratively any period of irksome toil or endurance which a man longs to reach the end of. The reference here is, of course, to the exile. It would be better to translate as in the margin of the R. V. "the time of her service is fulfilled," i. e., the period of the exile has been completed. 2nd. Her iniquity, or guilt, is pardoned, or absolved. 3rd. She has received of Jehovah's hand double for all her sins. That is, her punishment is more than adequate for her offense. George Adam Smith remarks in this connection: "This is not a way of regarding either sin or atonement which theologically speaking is accurate. What of its relation to our articles that man cannot give satisfaction for his sins by the work of his hands or the pains of his flesh? No, it would scarcely pass some of our creeds today. But all the more, that it thus bursts forth from strict terms of dealing, does it reveal the generosity of Him who utters it. How full of pity God is to take so much account of the sufferings sinners have brought upon themselves. How full of grace to reckon those sufferings 'double the sins' that had earned them. It is as when we have seen gracious men make us a free gift, and in their courtesy insist that we have worked for it. It is grace masked by grace. As the height of art is to conceal art, so the height of grace is to conceal grace, which it does in this verse."

We might pause here to note that God is still a God of comfort. He still bids his messengers, all those who hear His voice, to speak to the hearts of his people, bringing them the message of divine love, seeking to win and woo them to God, somewhat as a man woos the maiden of his choice. Perhaps some who study these words of Isaiah, some young men, some young women will hear through them the call of God to give their whole lives to the winning of men to God. How does such a call come to men today? Does it come only to those who enter the ministry? What are the words of comfort, the words of love, that God would have His messengers speak today. The circumstances of Christians today are quite different from those of the Jews of the second Isaiah's day. Is pardon still a part of the message? Pardon for what? Pardon under what circumstances? Is deliverance still a part of the message? Deliverance when? Deliverance from what? Deliverance under what circumstances? This is not all the message of course. But it is a part of the message. It is a message that the world still needs? It is a message that we need? Perhaps the part of the message that many of us need to hear the most of all is that God is not a God of hate, hating us because of our sins, but a God of love, loving us in spite of our sins, never willing to give us up, pleading with us in accents of tender love to accept His pardon, to take advantage of the deliverance that is offered to us in the Gospel. And this is a message that we are bidden to give to other men.

II. Second Voice: The Call to Prepare God's Way

Read 40:3-5. Whose is the voice? To whom is it addressed? What is the gist of the message—put it in your own words? What is the figure that the prophet has in mind? Why does there need to be a road through the desert?

The voice here is not that of God, for it speaks of God (verse 5) in the third person. Neither is it a human voice. It comes from one of the angelic ministers of Jehovah. It is addressed probably in the first place to beings of the same order. They are to prepare in the wilderness the way of Jehovah. Babylon was separated from Jerusalem by a broad desert. The prophet sees the Lord leading His people back to the promised land through the very midst of this wilderness country. It was an old custom, still continued in some oriental countries, for workmen to prepare the road along which royal personages were to travel. So here the heavenly workmen are called upon to prepare the way for Jehovah and His people, prepare the way, i. e. clear it from all obstacles; to make a level highway through the desert, building up the valleys, cutting down the hills, filling up the ditches, straightening the curves.

The voice is addressed we say in the first place to angelic beings. As such it serves to remind the people that the divine providence is enlisted in their behalf. They have become dishearted. It seems to them that their captivity is an unending one. The difficulties in the way of returning are insuperable. The prophet would have them know that even now divine forces are preparing the way for the return to take place. But though the voice is addressed first of all to angelic beings, we cannot say that it is addressed solely to them. The prophet feels that it is a voice from on high addressed to him, and to the people, not that they are literally to go out and build a road through the desert, but that they are to co-operate with God in tackling the difficulties that lie in the way, they are to do their bit too in preparing the way. So John the Baptist applies the text in Mt. 3:3.

Though our circumstances are entirely different from those of the Jews to whom this message originally came those whose spirits are sensitive to the divine spirit still hear that call to prepare the way of the Lord. They hear it as a call to the hosts of heaven. It assures them of the working of the divine providence. But it also comes as a voice to them as individuals to do their part in preparing the road, for God works through men, and not apart from men. Bertrand Russel is an English sceptic. This is his view of life: "Brief and powerless is man's life. On him and all his race the slow sure doom falls pitiless and dark. Blind to good and evil, reckless of destruction, omnipotent matter rolls on its relentless way; for man condemned today to lose his dearest, tomorrow himself to pass through the gates of darkness, it remains only to cherish ere yet the blow falls the lofty thoughts that ennoble his little day, proudly defiant of the irresistible forces that tolerate for a moment his knowledge and his condemnation, to sustain alone a weary but unyielding Atlas, the world that his own ideals have fashioned despite the trampling march of unconscious power." But the Christian amid the crash of stars, the reign of law, the vicissitudes of human history, the griefs that drive their plowshares in the human heart, sees the love of God, His purpose running through it all like a golden thread, man called to be a fellow-worker with God in an unfinished world. That faith makes a tremendous difference in life. For all of life is a conflict between good and evil. Often wrong seems to triumph. We look out upon the world today and we see greed and hatred and avarice enthroned in the hearts of men, and everywhere man's inhumanity to man. Sometimes the kingdom of God seems immeasurably in the distance. And yet we throw ourselves again and again in the fight, we dream again our dreams of human brotherhood. Why? Because we believe that we are not alone in this fight, hopelessly pitted against the dull apathy of cosmic forces that will in the end crush us in some solar wreck and bring all our work to nought. We are fellow-workers with God, God is in us and ahead of us. More than that God Himself is with us in the fight. He is a consuming fire against all wickedness. He is laboring for the establishment of the right. So in spite of reactions and defeats, we labor on, cherishing the exultant hopes of a new heaven and a new earth. For the kingdom will not come unless we too help to prepare the way.

But building a road through the desert is arduous work. It calls for engineers to plot the route, but for a greater host of laborers, who will toil, sacrificially, without recognition, at very humble tasks. Has the call to prepare the way of Jehovah come to us? Are we willing to prepare our bit of the road? What is that bit? How can we prepare the way for God to come and take possession our national life. Think of your home, school, church, community, state, nation. What is the particular bit of work that needs most to be done, what obstacles leveled, what depressions filled, what that is crooked made straight?

III. Third Voice: The Guarantee of Success

Read 40:6-18. Whose is the first voice? Whose is the second voice? Which voice is speaking in 6b, 7, 8? What is the significance of this colloquy? What relation it have to that which has gone before?

The third voice is again that of some angelic. He bids the prophet, Cry, that is, proclaim or prophesy. The prophet asks in return, What shall I cry? The angelic voice then directs him to proclaim the truth that all earthly might is transitory, the word of God is eternal. The thought here is not so much men are creatures of a day, as that the great king are doomed when Jehovah intervenes. The might of Babylon was so great that it seemed to the people any hope of deliverance was absolutely futile. The heavenly voice reminds the prophet that the great Babylonian empire was after all only a human creation that all flesh is grass, and all its goodness, i. e. its glory or splendor is like the flower of the field. The withereth, the flower fadeth, when the breath of the Lord, i. e. the wind, specially the scorching east wind which blows chiefly in the spring, blighting the vegetation, blows upon it. Surely, says the divine messenger, the people, not Israel here, but the enemies of Israel, are grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever.

When Israel grew despondent they were bidden to think of God, and to trust in His word, which never fail. Do we ever grow discouraged regarding God's purpose for us as individuals, regarding God's purposes for the world? Does such discouragement mean a lack of faith in God? What is its cure? Does that God has pledged Himself to the final victory that we are freed from our responsibility? Why? Do men find great comfort in Browning's couplet, criticize it severely:

God's in His Heaven,
All's right with the world.

What is your idea of the thought expressed here? What sense is it true? In what sense is it false?

IV. Fourth Voice: The Summons to Welcome the Redeemer

Read 40:9-11. Whose is the voice? To whom is it addressed? What is the gist of the message? What is the character of the Redeemer that is here set forth?

Again it is an angelic voice that is speaking. According to the translation in the A. V. it addresses Zion, Jerusalem, i. e. the wretched little remnant left in the city. The R. V. translates the verse better: "Cry, that tellest good tidings to Zion, get thee up on the mountain; O thou that tellest good tidings to Jerusalem, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not silent; say unto the cities of Judah behold your God." The heralds of good news, those who have heard the voice, are bidden here ascend the hills to wait for Jehovah's coming, and proclaim it as they see the approach along the wondrous way through the desert. "Look," cries the prophet, "He comes in might and arm, long inactive, has displayed His power. Before He goes the booty His arm has won, His delivered. Gently he cares for them on the journey as a shepherd for his sheep." At the first the prophet pictures the Redeemer here as a warrior king, who has delivered His people from their enemies. But as the procession draws near the herald sees not only the strong and vigorous company, but also the herd of mixed and feeble lambs and women, in need of carriage and leading. And the figure changes from a warrior to the Good Shepherd. "With his right arm He leads the lambs and in His bosom bears them. Ewe after ewe he gently leads." It is the power of the Redeemer that he has in mind, and the tenderness that ministers to the needs of every individual.

As we read the words of the prophet we think of Jesus, who was anointed with the Holy Spirit and power, who spoke of Himself as the Good Shepherd. The prophet saw the Shepherd King coming back to the holy city with the eyes of faith. And Jehovah directed His people back to the promised land, even as He promised. But since Isaiah's day the Lord has come in even more notable fashion. He is leading His people on to greater goals. It is not the might of Babylon from which He delivers men, but from the power that enslaves the will, and impairs the spirit, that He arrays itself against the people's good. He is leading those who follow him not to an earthly Jerusalem, but to the heavenly city not made with hands. He ministers to those who are weak and needy, He preaches a cause that challenges the strong, and vigorous. He is willing to go out with Him from modern Babylon to the heavenly City? What is required of those who follow in His train? What can we expect to receive in return?

A GRADELY PRAYER

Billy Ward and his eight sisters and father and mother moved out to the old Hancock place. He was the first to discover where the tenants were ahead of

Mr. and Mrs. Bird had built themselves a home, but there they were with the nest you could imagine, under the little hood-like mail box. Inside that nest cunning little eggs all day and Billy was quite sure, which into hungry little birds, "I am to take that nest down," he remarked, "for it will be a way. And besides, I'm sure but what there may be for me in that letter box bought this farm a couple of years ago, you know." "Too bad," remarked Billy's father, "to disturb Mr. and Mrs. Bird, they were here first you his sister Fannie went out to see the situation together, and her bird sat on her eggs, calmly as if to say, "I am sure you would not disturb our home!" Billy found the key of the letter box in the house, and he went very cautiously. But Mrs. Bird became frightened away, chattering quite as she lighted on a branch tree.

Worried. "Yes, Mrs. Bird," he pleaded. "I will get cold and perhaps the birds will not hatch out of the nest to come back!

Fannie went away, and soon Billy had the satisfaction of seeing the birds return to her nest. Billy was doing a lot of thinking about the account, and when Billy talked about things, it usually something. That morning he kept watch to see when Mrs. Bird had a little exercise, and he went to run down to the mail key into the lock and try to open it a little tiny bit. The farther it would have to be from the nest. But even a little crack he had managed to see letters lying on the ground. He couldn't tell how many, but at least two, and perhaps were important. Well, it was important too, that little birds were to hatch and sing and not an idea. Clara before he moved down, had given him a box of gum. It was very nice once it was chewed up or it came in little lumps up in the Adirondack and his Auntie Clara had it was Spruce gum. Billy had his mother's sewing table back of one of the drawers some long, bendy pieces with a little steel tip on here, his mother told him, and in dresses and undergarments that clothing would fit

She said she had them a girl. One of these pieces of gum and then he waited the about the same time that he had quite a lot of gum all chewed up into a nice,

(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

Susie May has a RED raincoat and cap on. Her YELLOW hair shows about her face. BROWN-haired Teddy, walking beside Susie May has a GREEN raincoat and hat on.

"We are quite prepared for rain or shine!" says Susie May, "and so let us sing even if it showers, Teddy!"

"Sure," says Teddy. "Shall it be 'April Showers bring May Flowers?'"

"Yes!" says Susie May. Then the sun shines behind a big White cloud in the GRAY-BLUE (use BLACK lightly and BLUE lightly mixed) and see a rainbow appears! Take RED, YELLOW, GREEN, PURPLE and then make them overlap each other—to make the blended colors like ORANGE color (RED and YELLOW). The earth is BROWN with GREEN shoots coming up! And the road is GRAY.

The border of this picture is GRAY and the lettering can be bright YELLOW.

The children have PINK (use RED lightly) cheeks and RED lips.

gone long enough that Billy managed to get one letter pulled out safely, for it had stuck to the gum as he hoped it would do. Then he had to fish quite a while to get the second letter. But he knew what he had done before he ought to be able to do again. And he did!

The third letter bothered, for it was long and thin, but Billy wasn't going to be discouraged, and he kept right on working quickly for fear Mr. and Mrs. Bird would return. And just as he was successful in getting the third letter, he heard a scolding chirrup in the tree overhead, and there four little black eyes regarding him anxiously.

"Don't worry," called Billy, "I'm all through!"—and he locked the door of the mail box and ran down the road to meet the rural delivery man who was talking to his father.

"I've got your mail, Daddy! I've got it!" he called before he got very near them.

"Well, well!" exclaimed his father, "this is the important letter I was talking to you about. How did you get it, Son?"

Billy explained. "Well, after all that trouble not to disturb your bird family," laughed the postman, "I reckon you'll have to put up a wooden box on that maple tree down by the driveway, until your bird family grows up and flies away."

"Oh, that'll be fine," cried Billy, hopping up and down gleefully. "And the birds can stay, and we'll get our mail without my having to go fishing for it!"

And so it was arranged, and Billy and his brothers and sisters had the pleasure of seeing the bird family grow up without being disturbed at all.

We thank most heartily those listed above for their generous donations to assist in finishing and furnishing Assembly Inn. The Assembly meets here May 16th.

It would be great to present this wonderful building to the Assembly without debt.

The Management has earnestly desired to be able to do this and it will be a keen disappointment for the Church and the many friends of Montreat to fail us at this time. Furnishings have been ordered for about sixty-eight rooms in addition to those which have been subscribed for. We are trusting that money or subscriptions will be in hand by the time these bills fall due. The need extremely urgent.

Covington—This Church has just closed a very suc- cessful revival. Rev. Ernest Lowrey Barber, of Carroll- ton, Ga., was with us March 20 to 29, preaching twice each day and leading the singing, and also engaging with the pastor in visitation and personal work.

Our people were greatly blessed and there were twenty- five additions to the Church membership.

KENTUCKY

Fulton—Rev. John Goff, Ph.D., has been with is in a meeting, which began last Sunday and closed, with splendid results, Thursday evening, preaching at 3:30 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. each day.

Though lasting but five days we feel that great things were accomplished. Six were added on profession of faith, one by letter, and four little girls were received into covenant relations with the Father through baptism. These added to those previously received makes our number three times as great as when we came into the field something over ten months ago. This makes our hearts happy. There is, however, another reason why we are rejoicing. For some time we have been worshipping in the Chamber of Commerce, but this morning we closed a deal for a church building. It is a brick church, having a splendid auditorium, heated with a good furnace, and well lighted, having ample Sunday School rooms, which may be converted into a great auditorium by lifting the folding doors. This is the church that was used by the Methodist Church people until they moved into their $150,000.00 new church a little over one year ago. This building is the answer of prayer, and is the gift of God. Sometime ago we made it our daily prayer at the evening time of worship, and many others have been praying, and, praise God, the deal was closed this morning, and we now have a church building that is really our own. We shall now need some good contributions to help us make necessary repairs, and purchase the pews. We shall also need a good piano, and for these things we shall now pray. Who will help us make these repairs? Who will help us, and make it possible for us to get the seats? Who will help us to win lost souls by giving us a good piano? We shall labor and pray and wait, believing that God will soon move some one, or many to help us secure these needful things. Yours in His work. J. T. Wade.

Fort Thomas—This church has the best record in its history of six years. It started with 30 members six years ago and now has 175. The Easter service was one that will be remembered for a long time. The choir under the leadership of Mr. A. J. McClintock rendered four very beautiful anthems, and six were added to the Church. This makes the record for the year 20 on pro- fession of faith and 16 by letter. The Church will be self-supporting from this month on. More than $2,000.00 was paid on the debt of the lot for the new church, and the quota of $700.00 to benevolences was overpaid. The pastor, Rev. Benjamin Andres, will celebrate the fifth anniversary of his pastorate on the first Sunday in May. The congregation is still worshipping in the City Build- ing, but hopes to be in its new home within the year. The city continues to grow at a rapid rate. Since the Church was organized six years ago the city has in- creased in population from 7,500 to more than 13,000. All the organizations in the Church are working along modern methods and are accomplishing great things for Christ.

MONTREAT AUXILIARY

More than seventy persons had a happy evening to- gether, when the annual meeting of the Montreat Auxil- iary was held in the dining room of the Alba Hotel. Supper was served by a capable committee ably assisted by a member of the school girls.

The reports show that this is a gold seal auxiliary. Over two hundred garments were sent to the Mountain Orphanage and bags of clothing to clothing to Blakey, Ky., and Crossnore, N. C. They contributed $2,196.00 to the work of the Church. Mrs. Frank Wilson, the consecrated president, and her earnest officers look forward to better service for this year. The meeting was dismissed with prayer by the pastor, Rev. Willis S. Wilson.

MATERIAL AVAILABLE FOR YOUR BIRTHDAY PARTY

Invitation Cards—Attractive Invitation Cards printed in the Mexican colors of white, green and red may be order at 50c per hundred. Send an invitation to each member of your Auxiliary. They are both interesting and informing.

Pageants—"Hand Across the Rio Grande" is an im- pressive dramatization in two scenes, presenting force- fully the needs of Mexican womanhood and how we can help to meet those needs. This would prove valuable for a Wednesday evening service as well as for the Birthday meeting. Its two scenes require twelve characters.

"Our Neighbor's Need" is shorter and simpler, re- quiring only three characters and little stage setting.

Two copies of each of the pageants come with the Year Book literature but additional copies may be ordered for 2c each.

Leaflets—Informing and inspirational leaflets have been prepared for your use. Order what you need for your Auxiliary.

"Visible Results of Our Birthday Gifts" tells of the past Birthday objectives and gives a picture of each. Price 10c.

Two leaflets give the plans for the new-buildings at Chilpancingo and Zitacuaro and through their wages we may catch a glimpse of the ideals of the past which have led on in their splendid work, and the growth in the future which will be made possible through the Birthday gift. Free.

Decorations will be made more effective and Mexican if the Mexican flag is used.

Flags may be ordered at 15c apiece.

STORY

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS

Joel Chandler Harris was born on a farm in Putnam County, Georgia, December 9, 1848. His father was an Irishman, "and from him the boy inherited his blue eyes and his sense of humor." But he was a man lacking in courage and loyalty and deserted his family soon after his child's birth. Joel's mother has been described as a woman of rare mental qualities. She was also one of the smartest women who ever lived. "Her strength of character," says one writer, "equaled her strength of intellect, and when she awakened to her mistake in casting in her lot with a man so lacking in courage and loyalty, she put aside all romantic notions, took up her burden, and staked all on her boy. She discarded his father's name and gave her family name to Joel, and no one ever heard her mention his father again."

Although Joel's mother spent the day-time with her needle, her spinning-wheel, or her pots or pans and with her flowers, she found time to read to her son before the woodfire in the long winter evenings.

In after years her son was able to write: "My desire to write—to give expression to my thoughts—grew out of hearing my mother read The Vicar of Wakefield. I was too young to appreciate the story, but there was something in the style or something in the humor of that remarkable little book that struck my fancy, and I straightway fell to composing little tales, in which the principal character, whether hero or heroine, silenced the other characters by crying 'Fudge!' at every possible opportunity. None of these little tales have been preserved, but I am convinced that since their keynote was 'Fudge!' they must have been very close to human nature."

"At this time," writes his biographer, "Joel was a small, wiry lad, undersized and frail-looking behind his veil of freckles, but he was as sound and supple as a peach-tree switch and bursting with vitality and mischief. He loved animals and learned to manage horses when he was only a midget by the side of the smallest of them." He, with some of his friends used to hang around Mr. McDad's livery stable all day for a chance to see the fine horses the drovers of that day would bring to Eatonton, and to get a chance to ride one of these horses, even if it were only across the street to the blacksmith shop, or to water at a nearby branch. He enjoyed spinning the tops, shooting marbles, and jumping poles. "Though he was a fun-loving, joke-playing lad, rough and tumble on the surface," wrote a friend years afterwards, "he had a tender heart. It is said he never forgot a kindness and that in after years he was wont to refer to those who, in days long past, showed favors to the red-haired lad."

Joel received a meager education in the rural schools of his county, and later at the Eatonton Academy. Says Henry Stiles Bradley: "I need not mention his rural genesis, because one can smell the clover and the cows, see the birds and wild blossoms and hear the sough of the pines and the shiver of the owl as he reads Uncle Remus. He was an ordinary boy, born in ordinary times, in an ordinary county, of an ordinary state. His praise today is that he glorified the commonplace and made the ordinary resplendent. There seems to be nothing worth telling about his childhood and youth, until he had reached twelve years of age, except he had had the advantage of a few terms in the Academy at Eatonton and had improved his opportunities. But at the age of twelve he saw a timent in a newspaper called (men for a bright boy who wished the printer's trade. He answered advertisement in person. "Country continues the same writer, "was on a farm a few miles from Eatonton a cultured but eccentric man, by the name of Turner, who prided himself was the only newspaper in the published on a plantation. Harris accepted, and being found bright and appreciative, he was allowed liberties of Coloned Turner's remarkably fine collection of books in a few years he had made him acquainted with the world's best, and having sprung his own imagination to write under a nom de plume Countrymen.

"Here we find the first thing that ferentiates Harris from the ordinary who does not succeed. He had an opportunity in the printing office of library of Mr. Turner to make something more than a tolerable living, unwilling merely to get along, of being content to set the regular of type and take the balance of for idling, he aspired to the literature up of the paper." Referring to a period of his life, Mr. Harris once that, "While setting type for the men I contributed surreptitiously columns of that paper, setting my from the 'case' instead of con them to paper, thus leaving no of authorship. I supposed that a huge joke; but as Mr. Turner the proof of every line that was his paper, it is probable that he stood the situation and abetted it.

"Later on in his stay at Eatonton writes his biographer, "the young plucked up sufficient courage to contributions to the editor, and Turner became his literary mentor, frank and uncompromising critic boy's efforts. Between the leaves Joel's old scrapbook is the following written precisely, and in ink, on a of an old court summons (for paper scarce then): For the first time you sent in this article, I have found to examine it, and though it had I regret that I have to reject it, it is not up to the standard of Countrymen. In the first place, you have had bad selection in the article you chosen for a subject. That an contemptible and beneath criticism borders on idiocy. Captain Flash his paper injustice in publishing the next place, there is want of and condensation in your article headed, 'Irishmen—Tom Moore,' goes off on a variety of subjects, too diffuse on everything it touches.

"In writing hereafter," continues the critic, "first select a good—a worthy subject."

"Second, stick to the subject."

"Third, say what you have to say as few words as possible. Stop 'nervous condensation' which you admire in Captain Flash."

"All this is for your good.—J. J. Turner."

"The ambitious apprentice did not heart under the severity of such criticism, but continued his experiment he produced something worthy of select little sheet." Not only did he for Countrymen, but the bashful "confined his thoughts freely to a few low pages of the little old book, and finds there a fantastic medley of melodrama, sentimental verse, manifestoes, didactic essays, and little skits, full of the rough fun boy in his early teens."

At the age of seventeen young Harris began work with the Mason Telegraph. At this time he weighed about 100 pounds. He was silent and attentively determined to familiarize himself with the mechanical side of this (to him) and important city newspaper. "he was not busy with taking proof, and providing the foreman," adds one well-known writer, "he was either reading or writing." In the office he was known as "Pink Top," because of his hair. The man loved him. He had a slight accent in his speech which remained with him through life. In moments of excitement or excitement he would

Winnsboro Granite Monuments Maintain Memories

*"Thou turnest man to destruction * * * They are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth."*

How these words have been impressed upon us. There are some losses we will never forget; some memories we will always cherish.

Visits to the cemeteries where graves are marked reveal that many of the markers and monuments are also of few days, some discolored, others cracking and crumbling, as the ravages of time take their toll.

What a consolation to know that Mother's monument has been cut from a more lasting stone—genuine Winnsboro Granite. How the very rock itself brings back the tender memories of her. One can almost see a vision of childhood days in the stone itself.

OF ALL THE GRAY GRANITES, Winnsboro Granite "The Silk of the Trade" stands preeminently the most lasting, the most beautiful and inscriptions on it most legible.

Be sure that "Winnsboro Granite" is specified in your contract for monuments. Like other high quality materials, there are many inferior substitutes, which resemble this granite on first appearance, but do not possess its lasting qualities and permanent beauty, because they contain more deleterious elements, such as water, lime and iron. These elements tend to disintegration and discoloration.

Have your monument dealer furnish you with a personal guarantee from the quarries that the monument you purchase is cut in genuine Winnsboro Granite.

badly." Later he worked with the New Orleans Crescent, Forsyth, Georgia, Advertiser, Savannah Daily News, and in 1876 began work with the Atlanta Constitution.

"Father," once wrote his daughter, Miss Julia Collier Harris, "was in the habit of saying that his career as a writer was wholly 'accidental.' . . . After the enthusiastic reception by the public of two volumes of 'Uncle Remus' stories, their author was asked to contribute to an 'experience meeting' of writers in Lippincott's Magazine. Under the title of 'An Accident Author,' this is what he wrote, in part: 'Countrymen was published on a plantation and it was on this and neighboring plantations that I became familiar with the curious myths and animal stories that form the basis of the volumes accredited to 'Uncle Remus.' I absorbed the stories, songs and myths that I heard, but had no idea of their literary value until, sometime in the seventies, Lippincott's magazine published an article on the subject of Negro folklore, containing some rough outlines of some of the stories. This article gave me my cue, and the legends told by 'Uncle Remus' are the result. . . . This was the accidental beginning of a career that has been accidental throughout. It was accidental that I went to the Countrymen, an accident that I wrote Uncle Remus, an accident that the stories put forth under the name struck the popular fancy."

President Theodore Roosevelt is quoted as having said in one of his public addresses in Atlanta, "While Mr. Harris seems to me to have done one of the greatest services in that he has written what exalts the South in the mind of every man who reads it, and yet has not a flavor of bitterness toward any other part of the union. . . . There is not an American anywhere who, on reading his writings, does not rise up with a more earnest desire to do his part in solving the American problems aright." Writing to Mrs. Harris from Sagamore Hill, Mr. Roosevelt said: "From the moment I first saw his writing, I was an ardent admirer of Joel Chandler Harris. . . . The writings of Joel Chandler Harris gave to me, as they gave to many thousands of others, something that we got nowhere else. . . . I certainly do not care for books that do not have what I regard as literary worth, the quality which entitles them to literature proper. But neither do I care for them greatly, as a rule, unless they have something else also; unless one feels moved by something high and fine, so that one feels braver and gentler, with a keener indignation against wrong, and more sensitive sympathy for suffering; because of having read them. . . . Joel Chandler Harris gave all this to me and my family."—G. C. Hedgepeth, in Kind Words.

WHEN TWO WERE COMPANY

J. L. Glover

"Where are you going, Gladys?" asked Tom, as his sister came out of her room, "all dressed up," as he expressed it. "You look like a party or something."

"I'm glad to hear it," replied Gladys. "I'm going by for Nellie, and we are going on to Margaret's birthday party together."

"Good-bye! Bring me some of the ice cream," was Tom's farewell, to which Gladys deigned no reply.

An hour or two later she came quietly back. Tom looked surprised to see her. "Why, is the party over already? Where's my ice cream?" he demanded.

"I haven't been to it—at least, I've been to another," said Gladys, which puzzled him more than ever.

"Is it a conundrum?" he inquired. "If so I can't guess it. I never could. You'll have to tell me."

"Well," Gladys sat down beside him on the steps, "you see, I did go by for Nellie, and I found she couldn't possibly go. She had fallen down the steps and sprained her ankle so badly and her mother was just at her wits' end to know what to do. Nellie was crying with the pain, and the baby was crying for his bottle, and she was nearly distracted between the two, and she hadn't anybody even to send for the doctor for Gladys' ankle. So what could I do? I just had to stop and help them."

"Well, I went for the doctor, and then I helped Mrs. Walton. I held the baby while the doctor was bandaging Nellie's ankle. He says she can't go back to school for a long time, and she was fretting dreadfully about losing time from school, so I promised her I'd come every day and study my lessons with her, so she would not lose time in her classes. She can keep up that way. And then I read to her awhile, till she dropped asleep, and by that time it was too late to go to the party. I was sorry to miss it, but I think Nellie needed me most."

"And you are going every day to keep her company," Tom approved. "I might go sometimes and help, if the two of us wouldn't be considered 'a crowd'."

"Two are company, three are a crowd," laughed Gladys. "I don't believe they would think so, Tom, You know they haven't any phone, and it would be a lot of help to Mrs. Walton to have some errands done some times. It's good of you, Tom."

"Not any more than of you," returned Tom a little gruffly. "All right, then, let's organize ourselves. We'll be Gladys, Tom & Co., Inc., Good Samaritans."

Gladys laughed. "And we'll have some good times, too. Let's give her a surprise party some evening, to make up for the party she and I both missed."

"All right! All the crowd will be glad to join," said Tom.

And the party organized by Gladys, Tom & Co. was one of the merriest "the crowd" had ever enjoyed.— Southern Christian Advocate.

STEWARDSHIP YEAR

STEWARDSHIP OF EDUCATION AND VOCATION MONTH

For theme for church-wide study and public emphasis during the month of April is "The Stewardship of Education and Vocation."

This Department of the Church is working at the roots of the tree whose fruit and flower is personal consecration and the missionary activity of the Church.

Well directed efforts are put forth to help the youth of the Church to discover God's plan for their lives and to secure the proper training to fit them for the work to which they are called. Special emphasis is now also being put on the Student Loan Fund which has already enabled 1,670 choice boys and girls from poor Presbyterian homes to secure a higher education in our Presbyterian Colleges that has fitted them for larger service in life.

Read the articles in this paper by the Secretary, Dr. Henry H. Sweets, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky., and write for literature and information concerning this fundamental work.

Church School Closes at Vanderbilt

Annual Period of Study for Ministers Attended by 360 Pastors and Twenty-two of Our Preachers Were Present

Sessions of the Rural Church School were held for a period of two weeks at Vanderbilt University by the Presbyterian Religion. The School closed September 11. The special students returned to the rural churches to bring to the rural churches the benefits of the special sessions they have received.

One hundred sixty pastors, from various denominations and twenty-two of our preachers attended together on the Vanderbilt campus and together attended lectures by experts in many rural church problems. The courses included rural church problems as well as religious education. In addition to the many courses of community life studied by the whole, denominational adaptation was also considered by the groups in their own churches.

Vanderbilt University has the only non-denominational School of Religion in the South in addition to conducting this short course Rural School, the Presbyterian Religion conducts through the year a series of short courses on rural church problems, the students being men and women highly trained in religious work, at colleges and seminaries. The school is at present engaged in a campaign to perpetuate this movement of raising a total endowment of several denominations were represented by pastors attending the Rural School as follows:

Preach on Endowment

of Mecklenburg, Kings Mt., and Asheville Presbyteries Begin Campaign in Their Pulpits

The college's campaign for $200,000 additional endowment to insure the school's A-rating was given an official start Sunday when Presbyterian ministers of the three presbyteries—Mecklenburg, Kings Mountain and Asheville, preached sermons stressing the importance of Christian education and urging support of the campanignation for pledges to the endowment fund was started Monday afternoon. Mrs. C. C. Hook, the first trustee of the college and director of the campaign, announced the campaign Monday at a luncheon. The campaign workers made the morning's work. About 100 were present, representing the various churches and many of the work-teams. The address of the day was made by Mr. David Ivey of the Ivey's store, who is a member of the Myers Park Presbyterian Church. Mr. Owens pointed out that the college which has survived 62 years is entitled to the support of the church and all others who wish to see the Christian institution established on a permanent basis it must have if it is to survive.

Reports of the half day's work showed a total of $12,000 in pledges in which there was one subscription and 14 one hundred dollar amounts. (Continued on Page Two)

Junior College For Men Opens Sept. 11

New Institution of N. C. Synod Is Getting Ready for Students

The first bulletin of the Presbyterian Junior College for Men at Maxton, N. C., has just been issued by the trustees. September 11 is given as the opening date.

Among other valuable and interesting information, the bulletin states that there will be two departments in the institution, the academic and the college. The former will offer courses covering the third and fourth years of standard high school work; the college will offer courses required for completion of first and second year standard college work, and will lead toward the A. B. and B. S. degrees.

English Bible will be required in both departments of the institution and only students who can show good moral character will be admitted.

The faculty is being chosen with great care; only men with required scholarship and proven ability will be employed. It is especially emphasized that all teachers in this college must be positive Christians. "Prospective students and patrons may rest assured," the bulletin states, "that the institution will open as an accredited junior college."

The total expenses per quarter for a student in the college is set at $81.25, while a student in the academic department will pay only $76.25 per quarter. This includes board, room, heat, lights and water, medical and library fees. Day pupils may attend the college at a tuition fee of only $25.00 per quarter.

Every reasonable effort will be made to develop strong intelligent Christian character, the bulletin states.

Also due consideration will be given to athletics. A friend of the college has given a beautiful tract of seven acres adjoining the college property for an athletic field and all the usual athletics may be enjoyed by students. Selection of the athletic director is considered to be one of the most important positions to be filled in making up the faculty for this new institution.

The Presbyterian Junior College for Men is owned by the Synod of North Carolina, Presbyterian Church in the United States. The governing body is a Board of eighteen trustees elected by Synod and distributed as follows: one from each of the nine Presbyteries and nine "at large."

The College is located in Maxton, N. C., an attractive little city of fifteen hundred inhabitants and surrounded by one of the best farming sections in the State.

Maxton is a town known for its culture and deep religious life. Four denominations are represented by well organized and progressive churches, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Episcopal. The surrounding country is dotted with active churches, a number of them employing full time pastors. Flora Macdonald College, an institution famous for its cultural and religious influence, is just twelve miles from the Presbyterian Junior College and connected by a hard-surfaced highway. Laurinburg, a thriving little city of three thousand inhabitants, the county seat of Scotland County, is located about six miles from the college. The Presbyterian Junior College is thus happily located in the center of an environment of enterprise, culture and religious influence.

The Administration Hall is a handsome and commodious structure, finished in pressed brick with stone trimmings. It contains the administrative offices, a large reception room, library, reading room, an auditorium with a seating capacity of five hundred, two laboratories, a study hall, eight class rooms, a chapel for morning exercises, a book and supply

Davidson Announces Other Speakers

Dr. Richardson to Address Student Body on Missions, Dr. Hill, Y Speaker at Commencement. Several Students Receive Appointments

Rev. Donald W. Richardson, D.D., of the faculty of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., came to Davidson Saturday, for a four-day stay, during which time he will deliver several addresses and speak before a number of the classes on the subjects, "Missions." Doctor Richardson filled the local pulpit Sunday morning, spoke to two of the religious bodies at Davidson in joint session in the afternoon, and talked at "Y" vesper later in the afternoon.

Rev. W. E. Hill, D.D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Richmond, Va., has accepted an invitation of the Davidson College Y. M. C. A. to deliver the annual "Y" sermon at the 93rd commencement of this institution. Doctor Hill will be the second speaker on the program of four days, and will preach his sermon on Sunday night, June 2.

Doctor Hill is a graduate of Davidson in the class of 1900. He was at Davidson last commencement to deliver an address before the General Alumni Association of the college. Before going to Richmond two years ago, Doctor Hill was pastor of the First Church, of Fayetteville, N. C.

Doctor Richardson returned to this country from China about two years ago, after working in that field for many years. He has only recently published a book entitled, "The Church in China," which is a historical sketch of the Christians efforts in that country, and shows the possibilities.

The senior class of Davidson College has selected R. O. Flinn, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga., as class valedictorian; H. A. Knox, Jr., of Liberty, S. C., class salutatorian, and W. L. Dumas, Jr., of Talladega, Ala., as class orator. These men will be the principal speakers at the class day exercises on June 3rd of commencement, and were chosen from the future graduates by a popular vote of their classmates. The valedictorian and salutatorian thus selected should not be confused with the ones who are automatically chosen by virtue of their records in the class room studies.

The new student council of Davidson College, composed of 14 members, has assumed control of the student body affairs at this institution, having been formally inducted into office by R. E. Kell, of Pascagoula, Miss., retiring president.

The head of the new council is Carl R. Pritchett, of Reidsville, president of the student body. Associated with him in the enforcing of the student body constitution and government will be 13 others. Three of this number are presidents of the three upper classes.

The new building, with capacity for one hundred and fifty, kitchen, store room, besides a number of smaller rooms for offices, consultation rooms and special work. The furniture in these various departments is of superior quality and in accordance with standard requirements. The building is steam heated, lighted with electricity and supplied with hot and cold water and has ample toilet facilities.

The Dormitory is a two story brick structure with fifty bed rooms designed to accommodate two students to each room. A large parlor on the first floor with a big, open fireplace furnishes an ideal lounging room and gives the building a touch of home life. There are shower baths and toilets on both floors. The building is steam heated and lighted with electricity. The rooms are equipped with beds, bureaus, table, chairs and two closets.

Doctor Smith Urges Flora Macdonald Fund

President of Washington and Lee Speaks Near Laurinburg to Union Audience for College Endowment

Dr. Henry Louis Smith, native son of North Carolina and member of a distinguished family, former president of Davidson College and now president of Washington and Lee University, came to Gibson near Laurinburg, N. C., on Sunday evening, as he said, to bring a message in behalf of Christian education and Flora Macdonald College in particular. Doctor Smith came to Gibson under the auspices of the Scotland county committee which is conducting the Flora Macdonald endowment campaign. He spoke at the Methodist Church there, of which Rev. Edgar B. Fisher is pastor. It was a union service in which all the Christian churches of the community joined.

Doctor Smith's subject was "God's Answer to the present day peril of American Civilization." He reassured his hearers that he was not in despair of the future, for haven't we seen serious times before and hasn't God always shown the way out?

Doctor Smith defined the purpose of this gathering was to lift Flora Macdonald College up to a new standard, to make it an A grade college, so that accrediting agencies east, west, north and south, would recognize it as such.

He described "the present-day peril of our civilization" as "an epidemic of rebellion against all forms of authority." Rebellion against the authority of the church, of the school, of the home, and of the state. There is, he said, a national and world-wide epidemic of lawlessness and rebellion. Crime is rampant. Inventive genius and the power to make money have (Continued on Page Two)

Assembly's Training School Commencement

Dr. Hardie, of Charlotte, to Preach Sermon—Dr. Richardson to Address the Forty Graduates

The commencement exercises of the General Assembly's Training School, Richmond, Va., will begin on Saturday, May 4, at 8 p. m., with a pageant by the senior class. This has come to be one of the most interesting and impressive features of our commencement exercises.

Rev. James F. Hardie, D.D., of the Second Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, N. C., will preach the commencement sermon on Sunday, May 5, at 8 p. m.

The graduating exercises will take place on Monday, May 6, at 8 p. m. There will be about forty graduates. Rev. Donald W. Richardson, D.D., professor of Missions in Union Theological Seminary, will make the address to the graduating class.

The annual alumni luncheon will be held on Tuesday, May 7th, at 1 p. m.

This has been a good year at the General Assembly's Training School. The most notable event during the year has been the coming of Dr. E. B. Paisley as full-time professor of Religious Education. There is probably no Presbyterian institution in America that now offers a fuller course in Religious Education than the General Assembly's Training School.

Another outstanding event of the year has been the return of Dr. M. R. Turnbull to his classroom, where he has been teaching the Bible during the year with his old-time enthusiasm and power.

The registration of students for next year is going forward at about the normal rate.

far outrun culture, morality and religion, and the present state of peril which confronts the nation is mainly a lack of self-control, due to the fact that men have advanced wonderfully in a material way but are backward in morals, in purity and in religion. He scored the influence of the motion picture and the manner in which they invariably portray the Protestant minister as "a driveling fool."

God's answer to this national peril, said Doctor Smith, is "a national zeal for Christian education." A spirit that is finding expression in the building and the endowment of Christian private schools and colleges all over America. He told of some of the marvelous strides made in the Southern states in the last decade and noted also the fact that the State of North Carolina is spending millions for education. The private, or Christian, college is compelled to enlarge its facilities and raise its standards, or it will be limping behind the procession and will give up its position of leadership in education.

Doctor Smith preached practicality and common sense in his appeal for Flora Macdonald College. He said that the influence of an educated mother is greater than that of a father. The mother in that home moulds the lives and characters of her children. If she is low-grade, amusement-loving, a fool about fashion, and careless of the real values of life, her children will be the sufferers.

Girls' colleges, he said, are more crowded than men's colleges. The income from tuition and fees collected from students is surer and larger. There are comparatively few A grade colleges for girls. Try to get a girl admitted as a student at Smith, Wellesley or Bryn-Mawr, and you will see how difficult it is. It costs twelve to fifteen hundred dollars a year to send a girl to one of these schools, but the same high standard education might be given at Flora Macdonald for half as much money. As a business proposition it will pay the people of this section of the state to give Flora Macdonald a great endowment.

PASTORS PREACH ON QUEENS ENDOWMENT

One of the unique features of this campaign, which distinguishes it from the average drive, is the fact that it is being conducted entirely by women, a great majority of whom are alumnae of the college. Most of these are Presbyterians, but there are also members of the various other denominations assisting. The president of the association is a Methodist. The fact that all denominations are aiding in the drive serves to demonstrate how popular the institution is in this community.

Requests have been sent out by the campaign committee to each of the 86 Presbyterian ministers in the three presbyteries and a great majority of these were expected to preach sermons on the theme suggested. Dr. William H. Frazer, president of the institution, spoke Sunday at the morning services at the First Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, and again at night at Mt. Gilead to present the cause of the institution.

The campaign closes next Sunday. Each day at 12:30 o'clock the campaign workers are scheduled to meet at Ivey's to hear reports as to the progress of the drive and to discuss further plans toward making it successful.

The slogan during the week, Mrs. Hook announces, will be "$1,000 men to give $100 each." Throughout the section in which the campaign is to be conducted strong efforts will be made to enlist contributors of this kind.

"If the Church is going to keep up with this new era of woman's rights, she must make her women Christian idealists, and not such as the educated college woman leader of the communists recently sent into this section who cried out against God and religion, against the churches and their moral teaching, against chastity and marriage, and would destroy all that we hold dear," said Julian Miller, editor of the Charlotte News, Tuesday at Ivey's, where the Queens Campaign workers met for lunch to hear the report of the day's work since their meeting at noon the day before.

Mr. Miller quoted H. G. Wells as saying that the race of our times is between education and chaos. The speaker said he would revise that expression by saying it is a race not between chaos and education, but correctly interpreted it is between the right sort of education and the wrong sort, between an education which emphasizes ideals and that which stresses temporal progress.

"I want to commend you for the work you are doing," said Mr. Miller. "I wish for Queens College all success. Our city must quit thinking only of armories, incinerators and public halls, and exalt our schools. We demand the production of Christian characters and not merely material commodities. Christian homes mean more to us than material welfare. And Queens proposes to train our Christian mothers and wives to make our Christian homes."

Mr. Miller referred to the recent campaign for Erskine College in Due West, S. C., put over by the Associate Reformed Presbyterians. A small denomination, but they put over a big program. "They started out to raise $250,000," said Mr. Miller, "and before they quit they had $340,000 subscribed. But how did they do it? By waiting for rich men to give it? No; they didn't have any rich men to speak of. They had 2,900 subscriptions and each one averaged $115. There were two large subscriptions, one of $25,000 and one for $20,000. The first came from an old preacher whose salary had been $400 per year, old Dr. G. R. White whom many of us know. The other was from a millionaire in Florida.

"If Queens campaign goes over it will be by the sacrificial giving of the men and women of small means who know the need of Christian education."

The reports of the sixteen teams showed an encouraging response to their solicitations, since the Monday's gathering. The whole amount subscribed as reported was $10,449, which with Monday's figures makes the total for the two days, $23,395. There have been 40 subscriptions of $100.

There are four more days in the campaign. It is expected that on Thursday, reports will be coming in from the other presbyteries of King's Mountain and Granville.

The workers will gather every day this week for lunch at Ivey's to report on the daily activities.

DR. CARSON AT KINGS MOUNTAIN, N. C.

Dr. C. C. Carson, one of the General Evangelists of our Assembly, has been with Dr. I. S. McElroy, in a two weeks meeting that was greatly blessed to the church and the community. He preached each day, morning and evening, to large and deeply interested congregations. He gave us an exceptionally fine series of fine sermons. "No finer series of sermons was ever delivered in this community" was the verdict of a man of excellent judgment, "No better meeting held since I can remember." Members of other Churches were attracted to these services by the superior quality of these sermons, and by the chaste diction, and impressive delivery of the preacher. A number of these sermons are found in Doctor Carson's book, "The Glorious Gospel," of which Dr. Timothy Stone said he could not lay the book down until he had read the last sermon.

This was Doctor Carson's first meeting in the past three months. His experience "in the valley" with the fiery trial and nine weeks in the hospital has added to his spiritual power. There were a number of confessions and reconsecrations and a general uplift of spiritual life in the church and community

ONLY ONE LIGHT

Standing on a corner one early evening recently waiting for a friend's car I counted 14 cars pass which only had one of their two lights lighted. It seemed incredible but nevertheless was true. It set me to thinking. Traffic statistics tell us that many accidents result from this carelessness, and any one who drives, especially on a dark highway, knows the annoyance and bewilderment of one-lighted cars. Personally I once narrowly escaped a terrific crash with a huge truck simply because it had but one fore light and the driver was almost in the center of the road at that.

But there is more involved in our thought than the automobile. How many go through life partially lighted? The danger is not only one which faces others, but the one-lighted persons have their own safety and vision impaired. They see clearly but a part of the road before them, and cause others as well to misjudge.

For instance, there is the light of "self" and the light of "others." These should both give clear direction ahead. If one alone is lighted and "self" gleams out, others are not seen nor considered. On the other hand, if "others" shines and "self" is totally dark, disaster may result. These two should light the way together, so that self-interest and unselfish service may equalize and help one another. "Number one" can never realize life's full blessings until he lives to help "number two" as well.

Again, "Justice" and "Mercy" should be lighted together. If one is bright and the other dark, injustice and bitterness result, and discipline and order become a joke. The old Scriptural admonition, "To do justly, love mercy and walk humbly," can never be followed unless justice and mercy both are lighted and complement one another.

Still further, "Jest" and "Earnest" need each other's mutual light. How many serious and even worried lives would lose their wrinkles and nervous tension if mirth and humor could shine out along life's way!—Many a man or woman grows old prematurely simply because the rays of fun and humor never shine. This leads us to another mutual relation in life, usually called "secular and religious."

Kingsley once said that the life which separated religious and secular was failing in both, and surely both should be lighted and shining together. Consistent living is the first essential testimony of a Christian life. Genuine piety can never cast a single light, for the religious light will ever gleam alongside of the light of character. Men see the "light of life" when beside it they see the life of light. A man's life lights or puts out his profession.

This last pair of lights leads us to the consideration of the old pair which the writer James so practically coupled, "faith and works." "Show me your faith without your works," he said, "and I will show you my faith by my works." He later added, "So faith without works is dead." In other words, if both be not lighted and working together, both go out. We will admit that one light is better than no light, but to light life's highway aright, both must shine. It is worth while in everything in life to be sure both lights are shining.—John Timothy Stone in Presbyterian Advance.

THE DAISY

Dr. Lyman Abbott once tried his hand at a parable, with the following result: A certain prince went out into his vineyard to examine it, and he came to the peach tree and said, "What are you doing for me?"

And the tree said: "In the spring I give my blossoms and fill the air with fragrance, and on my boughs the fruit which presently men will gather and carry into the palace for you."

And the prince said: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

And he came to the maple, and the tree said: "I am making nests for the birds, and shelter the cattle with my leaves and spreading branches."

And the prince said: "Well done, good and faithful servant."

And he went down into the meadow, and said to the waving grass: "What are you doing?"

And the grass said: "We are giving our lives for others—for your sheep and cattle, that they may be nourished."

And the prince said: "Well done, good and faithful servants, that give up your lives for others."

And then he came to a little daisy was growing in the hedgerow, and "What are you doing?"

And the daisy said: "Nothing! ing! I cannot make a nesting place for the birds, and I cannot give shelter to the cattle, and I cannot send food for the sheep and cows; I do not want me in the meadow. All do is to be the best little daisy be."—The Christian World.

I will govern my life, and my fate as if the whole world were to see one and to read the other; for what it signify to make anything a secret to my neighbor when to God (who searcher of our hearts) all our secrets are open?—Seneca.

The Anti-God Society was one of the products of Soviet Russia. That is revolutionary enough even for the revolution of Russia and many no doubt expect this to mark the beginning of the end of the Eternal. But God does not act at the behests of frail mortals.

Once upon a time a man came to a wise old king and asked him for a way to overcome temptation. He told him that he had tried to do right, but again and again he had yielded to temptation. The king ordered a bowl filled with oil to the very brim. The bowl was filled till it could not hold another drop. Then he sent for the man. Next he commanded the man to take up the bowl of oil and walk through the streets of the town, spilling a single drop. But the man objected. "I would willingly do that," he said, "but it will be impossible." "That has still to be done," replied the king, "for those two will march behind you with swords, and if you spill a single drop they have orders to cut off your head immediately."

So the man took up the bowl of oil and in fear and trembling set out on his journey through the city. There were many interesting things going on around him, but he had no eyes to see them. Many of his friends greeted him as he passed, and they laughed at him, but he had no ears to listen to them. All his attention was fixed on preventing the oil from flowing from the bowl. At length he reached the palace again without having spilled a drop. When he returned, the king inquired how he had fared, what he had seen, and to how many people he had spoken to. But the man replied that he had seen and heard nothing. He was thinking only of how to keep the oil from overflowing. "Then," said the king, "you have discovered the charm for overcoming temptation. Fix your mind on overcoming as you fixed your mind on the bowl, and you will win."

WAR IS WASTE

"Woodbine Willie," as the "Times" lovingly called him in the days of the World War, but known in the circles as Studdert Kennedy, said as sheer waste and hurled against him in the following short poem that it is—

Waste of Muscle, waste of Blood,
Waste of Patience, waste of Power,
Waste of Manhood, waste of Honor,
Waste of Beauty, waste of Wealth,
Waste of Blood, and waste of Youth,
Waste of Youth's most precious hours,
Waste of ways the Saints have trod,
Waste of Glory, waste of God—War!

QUEENS COLLEGE DRIVE

Queens College drive is now under way. The women have taken it in hand, we are encouraged. From every point of view, from the advantage to this city, in the culture it brings; and in the culture it implants in the hearts of the citizens through the pupils of the college; and the college is one of the most valuable assets of the city. As one who has been connected with the college for 30 years, we know that it is not overstating its value when we say that among all the advantages Charlotte has to offer to new-comers, there is none so valuable in real value with the fact that it is a high-class college, equipped with capable teachers and headed by a man of high ability and character of W. H. Frazer.

At the recent meeting of the Synod of the Presbyterian Church in the South, the Bible teacher, examined the primary graduates, his examination was a revelation to us all, as it was such an illustration of the Queen's pupils receive. On Monday last, we heard Dr. Frazer at the Synod of the Presbyterian Church. We wish that all the friends of education could have heard him.

His address was not a conglomeration of generalities as is so often the case, but a worked-out study of the subject of education, showing that it lies at the foundation of civil and social morality. Dr. Frazer's task has been a heavy one, and his success has been wonderful, yet we must remember that there is a limit to every effort by man, and that the most successful needs encouragement to prove that he is doing more than a voice crying in the wilderness.

We hope that this effort will be crowned with success, and that a greater Queens will bless our children and our children's children to remote generations.

MINISTERS' ANNUITY FUND

One of the tremendously vital questions before the Church to-day is that of the Ministers' Annuity Fund.

The laborer is worthy of his hire—that the minister is worthy of a living support, every respectable Christian will acknowledge. When a man turns from those businesses or professions that promise a living support and follows the Word, he deserves a living while working; and an adequate pension when retired.

The sad fact remains that the Church has not adequately provided for its ministers. The majority of cases the salaries paid are pitifully inadequate.

It is required to live up to a certain standard or he is criticized if he does not do so. He must take the lead generously in all benevolent and philanthropic movements. He must educate his children. How many live at all on a meagre stipend has always been a wonder.

When he breaks down, or reaches old age, instead of a living pension or adequate annuity, he receives a most meagre stipend from the Ministerial Relief Fund.

This failure to provide is a standing reproach to the Church. Real Christian men and women bow themselves in shame when they are brought face to face with existing conditions.

For some years the Church has been studying the problems and seeking to find some practical plan to provide adequate protection for our ministers in old age or dependency.

It has been found by sad experience not only in our own Church but in practically all others, that gifts and endowments cannot be secured in sufficient amount to provide an adequate pension for the retired or disabled minister. Something more needs to be done.

Those investigating the matter feel that they have found such a practical plan in the proposed Ministers' Annuity Fund.

What is this Fund? It is not a phase or reform of Ministerial Relief. These are two separate things.

It is really a form of old age pension where-by a minister, and the church he serves or the committee he works for, by payments through a term of years, lay up against the time of his retiring an annual annuity or pension.

If this is borne in mind it will do away with much of the loose thinking and talking about the plan.

The man and his church that pay in large annual payments through many years will secure for the man a larger pension; and the man and his church that pay in small annual payments through those years will secure for the man a smaller pension.

There is nothing unfair in this. There is nothing unjust in this. There is nothing un-Presbyterian in this. There is nothing un-Christian in this.

We would like to see all our ministers receive a salary of $10,000. But somehow we can't work it. And the fact that some receive that sum, while the rest of us do not is neither unjust nor un-Christian. Nor does it disprove or destroy the "parity of the ministry."

And when that church and that minister pay into the Fund ten per cent of that salary for a term of years and in return he receives a larger annuity than some of the rest of us do; no injustice is done us.

Just as we would like to see all our ministers receive a large salary, so we would like to see them all receive a large pension. But no church has been able to secure that ideal result. Human nature is human nature. The large church will give a large annual payment toward the pension of its own pastor, when it would not give that large sum toward the pension of some other church's pastor. Here is the crux of the whole matter. Whatever may be the beautiful ideal, what we will have to take is the plan that will work. It is the plan that other churches have found will work. Such is the plan proposed to our church.

What saddens me about the opposition to the plan is that such opposition will hurt the very men it seeks to help. The good and able men who are opposing it may secure its rejection. Then the man with a large salary will still be provided for as pastor emeritus or in some such way; while the man with a small or medium salary will still have his sickness or old age unprovided for, save by the inadequate help of the Ministerial Relief Fund. Let us remember:

1. That the Annuity Fund provides for a pension and not a form of Ministerial Relief.
2. That the $3,000,000 Fund to be raised by the Church will be divided in absolutely the same ratio among all the ministers to cover the accrued liabilities for prior service. There is no inequality here.
3. The only inequality comes from what men and their churches pay in. The more they pay the more their pensions will be. The man who pays an Insurance Company premiums for a $1,000 annuity at 65, can't expect a $2,000 annuity at the end of his term of payments. It is so as to the Annuity Fund.
4. Let us beware how we defeat the one constructive and helpful thing proposed for the old age of our ministers.
- Those who don't like this, can still push Ministerial Relief and look to that on the basis of their need, when they retire.
5. This no more destroys the true parity of the ministry, than the fact that we receive different salaries from the church that we serve. The fact that another minister carries $10,000 of insurance in the Presbyterian Ministers' Fund while I am only able to carry $5,000, does not lift him above me. I am his equal on the floor of a church court and in the eyes of the church.

Our parity is not based on salary, nor will it be destroyed by a pension.

Finally, let us grasp the practical and helpful that presents itself now; and pursue the ideal we dream in the years to come.

PRESBYTERY AT STEELE CREEK

It is the custom of Presbytery to meet somewhere within its bounds twice annually, but it is not the custom of Presbytery to meet at Steele Creek oftener than at long intervals.

When, however, that time does roll around, however much terror it brings to the good people of that historic old Church, it at least, brings joy to the members of Presbytery who recall their past experience and the hospitality of those good people.

As all things are said to come to him who waits, so in progress of time when Presbytery decided to meet at Steele Creek, the preachers and elders rejoiced, though it is possible that the housewives did not rejoice as much as the preachers and elders.

However that may have been, at the appointed time all things were ready, and it was by no means necessary to send out into the highways and hedges to compel those invited to come in.

They came from every section of the Presbytery, their faces shining with joy, and their appetites, both mental and physical, whetted for the feast of reason and of good food for which the people are famous.

There were present 99 ministers and elders, while the visitors, male and female, were numerous.

Thirty odd years ago we made our first visit to Steele Creek. When we compare it now with what it was then, the transformation seems marvelous.

Then the manse was dilapidated. The paper hung in festoons from the walls, and the surroundings were unattractive.

The congregation seemed to lack enterprise and the benevolent causes were neglected. Now they have a modern manse with modern conveniences, the church building will compare favorably with any country church within our knowledge, and the contributions to the various causes will compare favorably with those of many city churches.

They have a modern Sunday School building suited for modern Sunday School work, and where the old session house once stood they have a large community building, where, on this occasion, they spread each day of Presbytery a dinner that spoke volumes for the welfare of the people and their success in cooking.

This is one of the largest Presbyteries in the Southern Assembly, and it will report correspondingly large in the way of benevolences and addition of members.

Our ministers are not only sound in the faith, holding fast to the faith of the fathers, but they are very aggressive.

Under the wise and energetic leadership of Rev. A. A. Walker, our superintendent of Home Missions, we have lengthened our stakes and manned our vacant pulpits, and are pushing on to possess the land.

Two of the most important subjects coming before the Church at this Spring meeting were the Annuity Fund and Union with the United Presbyterian Church.

The Annuity Fund, on its face, would seem to make a strong appeal to the ministry, and so it does to many, but there are those who find difficulties ahead in its working. To them it is "like the Dead Sea fruits, that tempt the eye, but may turn to ashes on the lips."

These preachers are now at home, but, like the Hebrews in their flight to Canaan, they will recall those tables laden with the good things of life, and will yearn after the flesh pots of Egypt.

Our advice is that we forget the past, and gracefully come down to bacon and greens.

CONTRIBUTED

WHEN JESUS RODE

Rev. Wm. C. Cumming

Jno. 12:14, "And Jesus, when He had found a young ass, sat thereon."

I want to ask you to look at a strange sight this morning—the Lord on a donkey!

We all admire a fine horse. It is not only that he is the tallest of the animals that has been widely used by man, it is not only that his strength is so much greater than the strength of a man, but there is a beauty in his arching neck, and flowing mane and he has an intelligence and spirit that draws us to him.

Job said (39:23-25), "The glory of his nostrils is terrible. He paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his strength: he goeth on to meet the armed men. He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the sword. The quiver rattleth against him, the glittering spear and the shield. He swalloweth up the ground with the fierceness of his rage. He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting." Even today when the King of England goes out in state, he does not ride in an automobile, but in a royal carriage drawn by four magnificent horses, and he is attended by nobles on horses.

In comparison with a horse we feel that a donkey is a disgrace. He is small and he is stubborn, with large ears, and scraggy hair and a stubby mane. If you were planning to make a triumphal entry into any city you would never decide on a donkey. If the gospels were man-made, and the product of human imagination, they would never have depicted Jesus on an Ass! Who is Jesus? Why, He is the King, the Lord of Glory—more than ten legions of angels wait at His beck and call. And what is a donkey? "The tattered outlaw of the earth, of ancient crooked will." He is a beast of burden used in China and all across Asia as a poor man's steed. He is steady maybe, and sure-footed, but he is ugly and stubborn and slow. Imagine offering President Hoover a donkey to ride about Washington! Imagine offering one to the King of England! How then could you offer one to the King of Kings! And yet—Jesus rode on a donkey.

Jesus Chooses a Donkey

There is something to wonder at in this picture of Jesus on the Donkey. He has entered Jerusalem many times before—He came as a boy, He came as a young man, and He came over and over again during His ministry. He has entered the city many times, but this is the only time that the entrance itself is significant. This is the only time that He enters in triumph, the only time that He enters in the eyes of the people and with shouts of acclamation. This is the great hour of His whole life when He shall publicly be hailed as Messiah. Why then, of all times, should He come in this way? Couldn't Jesus have borrowed a nobler steed? Why, surely He could have! As the owner's who lent the donkey, and as another who lent his large upper room, and Zaccheus who gave the half of his goods, so there were many who would gladly have lent Him a horse. But He did not ask for a horse! Knowing that there would be crowds going to the Feast, and knowing that the crowds would see Him, and knowing that they would hail Him as Messiah, He asked for a donkey,—and there He sits upon that lowly beast!

As you look at Him, what is the thought that flashes through your mind? Is it not that this is a part of His humiliation! Though He was in the form of God, He laid aside the majesty of His high estate, He "stripped himself of His glory!"—and how completely did He humble Himself! To be born in a stable! to have a feed-trough for His bed! to be reared in a poor man's home? to earn His living as a Carpenter! to go into a ministry without where to lay His Head! to walk from city to city—and now, when He does ride, to ride on a donkey! As you see Him sitting there, you know that it is not in pride that He comes, but in meekness, in lowliness and in true humility. "Let this mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus," for He "humbled Himself and made Himself of no reputation."

The Donkey a Steed of Royalty

As the people see Him riding there, there is something else that they see that our eyes may miss: The donkey has had nobler associations in the East than he has had in the West, and while he is widely used by the poor, he has also been used by royalty. With a "rich saddle, and dangling tassels, and bridle studded with silver," he makes a much more handsome appearance than we have ever seen him make. "When kings went forth to war they rode horses, when they went on peaceful errands they rode upon asses" (says David Smith), and so He comes, riding upon a donkey—a young colt that had never been ridden before. The mother animal was led along in front no doubt and they formed a small procession.

As they saw Him the thought of some of the people may have gone to the prophecy made by Zechariah (9:9), "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold thy King cometh unto thee; he is just and having salvation, lowly, and riding upon an ass, even upon a colt the foal of an ass." It may have flashed through their heads that He was fulfilling prophecy right before their eyes, and that after five hundred and fifty years of waiting He who was to come has come. They said, "Our King has come!" and as Zechariah had exhorted, they did rejoice greatly, and they shouted for joy: "Hosannah, hosannah, hosannah to the Son of David! Blessed is He that comes in the name of Lord!" The crowds that went before and the crowds that followed after took up the chant of "Hosannah" and praise and there,—in the midst of the shouting,—went a small white donkey, with Jesus on his back.

A Contrast to Earthly Conquerors

Palm branches are waved. Strips of green leaves are laid in the way for a carpet. Men pulled off their coats and spread them in the way for the donkey to walk over, and while green branches wave the enthusiasm grows: "Hosannah, hosannah, Blessed is He that comes in the name of the Lord. Peace on earth and glory in the highest!" A poet has said:

"I saw the conquerors riding by
With cruel lips and faces wan;
Musing on kingdoms sacked and burned—
There rode the Mongol, Ghengis Khan.

"An Alexander, like a god
Who sought to weld the world in one,
And Caesar with his laurel wreath;
And, leaping full of hell, the Hun:
And, leading like a star the van Inscrutable Napoleon went.

"Then all they perished from the earth
As fleeting shadow from a glass,
And, conquering down the centuries,
Came Christ, the Swordless, on an ass."

The time is coming when He will have a sword, when He will ride on a great white horse, and the armies which are in heaven shall follow Him upon horses—the time when He will lead the hosts of heaven in the final war and conquest of the earth—but now He comes in peace, without a sword, and riding on a donkey. Will you be one to receive Him no matter how He comes? Will you too shout Hosannah! and accept Him as your Lord?

Having seen the Lord, let us look again at the donkey! He may be plain, he may be inexperienced and he may be ill-favored, but there is "a shout about his ears and palms before his feet." He is a "blessed beast, on which the Savior rode" on that memorable day.

We, too, may be plain, and ill-favored and inexperienced, but friends, the Lord has need of us—more need than He had of the donkey—and if we're willing, we also may bear the Lord of glory, on His way!

Henderson, N. C.

A CRITIQUE OF A RECENT SERMON

Kenneth McCaskill

Although I am now a minister in the Presbyterian Church in Canada, I still read the Standard and have a real interest in what goes on in the Southern Presbyterian Church in whose bounds I labored for twenty-eight years. I have always been grateful for the orthodoxy of that Church. May she ever be true to the doctrines of our standards which we believe to be the doctrines of God's word.

In the Standard bearing date of March 6th, you have a sermon from the pen of Rev. W. D. Moss, D.D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Chapel Hill, N. C. I note that it was printed at the request of friends. Is it permissible for one to utter a protest in the columns of the Standard against the promulgation of such views as the sermon contains?

I seriously object to this sermon because it is, to a great extent, contrary to the teachings of the Scripture. In the first place the sermon is a misinterpretation of the text upon which it is based. The text is taken from Phil. 2:9. The whole verse reads, "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name." The minister takes these words, "God hath given Him a name which is above every name," as his text. The subject which he adduces from the text, "The uniqueness of Jesus" is itself a compromise, for the text sets forth in no uncertain way the preeminence of Jesus. That would have a more reverential sound, to begin with. Then if the minister had studied the force of the "wherefore" which introduces the verse he could not have so completely ignored the content which mentions his being "in the form of God" and being "equal with God" before his humiliation and then goes on to speak of his emptying Himself by "taking upon Him the form of a servant," being made "in the likeness of men" and becoming "obedient unto death even the death of the cross." It was because of these things that God exalted Jesus and gave Him a name which is above every name. The sermon has no reference to the pre-existence of Jesus nor to his being made "in the likeness of men" (which means his being born of woman,) nor to His death on the cross.

What followed the text should have been noted also. "That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow . . . and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Doctor Moss's sermon does not exalt Jesus as the pre-existent Son of God and as the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world who has redeemed His people "by His blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."

The whole import of the sermon seems to be to exalt the Man of Nazareth. There are about twenty-five references in the sermon to Jesus as the man and only one reference to Him as the Son of God and the connection is such that the meaning is not clear in that instance.

Now we wish to call attention to and refute by Scripture quotations some of the points in the sermon under discussion. The minister claims that the uniqueness of Jesus was not due to his origin. We quote, "And it is significant that He never refers to His origin as set forth by His biographers. He asks us to believe in Him as divine but does so because He lived divinely and not because He had divine origin. And two of His biographers, fascinated by the manner of His presence, made no reference whatever to His origin." This statement does not accord with what Jesus said of Himself or with what the sacred biographers said of Him. In John 7:28, 29, we read, "Then cried Jesus in the temple as He taught, saying 'Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am; and I am not come of myself but He that sent Me is true, whom ye know not. But I know Him, from Him, and He hath sent Me.'" Again Jesus said unto them, 'If God were your Father, ye would love Me, for I proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but He sent Me.'" Quotations show that Jesus makes much of His origin.

Now as to Doctor Moss's statement that two biographers make no reference whatever to His origin. We will show by direct quotations that he is that. All four of the sacred biographers refer to His origin. Matthew 1:18, "Before they came together (Mary) was found with child of the Holy Ghost." Luke 1:33, "Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped Him saying, Of a truth Thou art the Son of God." Mark 1:1, "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." Luke 1:35, "And the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." John 1:14, "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth."

Another quotation from the sermon "Revelation has always referred to the superiority of Jesus' miracles. He makes no such claim." In reference to John 2:11, "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee and manifested forth His glory; and His disciples believed on Him." Also John 5:36, "The Father hath sent me to finish the works which the Father hath sent me to finish, works that I do bear witness of Me that the Father hath sent Me."

Another quotation from the sermon, "And in His ministry, He not only refused to work miracles, but expressed the wish that His followers should not base His claim on the miraculous." How many of the records show that Jesus refused to work miracles? Not more than two or three, if that many. On the other hand how many hundreds of miracles He wrought! We have nothing to show that any man was sick or afflicted with bodily troubles even Jesus in vain. And as to his not wanting His claim on the miraculous, He even Himself, as when He healed the paralytic in Capernaum, show that He had power on earth to forgive sins. When the disciples of John the Baptist came with the question, "Art Thou He that should come, or do we look for another?" every Bible student knows His answer, "Go your way and tell John what ye have seen and heard: the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, the poor have the gospel preached to them."

When, we would like to know, did Jesus ever express the wish, "that His followers would not base their faith on the miraculous?" Doctor Moss makes light of it for he says, "Moreover other men in other ages have been associated with the miraculous. One man turned a rod into a snake and another to make a man float on the water. In India today the miracle is on every street corner, and in every avenue. And to claim for the uniqueness of Jesus his work miracles is to place Him in rivalry with the works of other men instead of stressing his originality." In preface to this skeptical utterance I take my stand with the demus, the ruler. "Master, we know that thou art the Son of God: for no man can do these things that Thou doest except God be with him."

Then look at these statements from the sermon which do not need to comment upon them, "And in the world we mean that by His insight for which He forfeited His life, I mean civilization to go forward."

"The human and divine, He declared, were one, and My Father are one, and I am come that the world may know the Father and the Son, and the Son of Man, He called Himself. But by the Son of Man He meant a Son of God. Look long at the Son of man and in him you are obliged to find the place, preeminently to find God is in the statement is not very illuminating."

The sermon is not what people need today. It is out of the cross, it makes light of miracles and of the idea of the divine Sonship of Jesus. Should like this be preached to our Young Men in the Standard? Then published in pamphlet form or in the Standard? No word of protest? Can a minister of the Southern Presbyterian Church make light of things which were taught to hold sacred, his erroneous views be promulgated, and no one raise his voice? I have determined by the editor to whom I have addressed this correspondence.

THE EMPTY PEW

The empty pew has an eloquent tongue. Its message is unpleasant, it is one that all may learn. TO THE PREACHER, the empty pew says, "Your sermon is not worth while."

TO THE VISITOR, it whispers, "You are not quite holding our own."

TO THE TREASURER, it shouts, "Look at that deficit!"

TO THE STRANGER, who is looking for a home, it suggests, "You had better wait awhile."

TO THE MEMBERS who are present it says, "Don't you go visiting next Sabbath, too?"

The empty pew speaks against the service. It kills inspiration and smothers hope. It dulls the fine edge of zeal.

The empty pew is a weight. The occupied pew is a wing.

"Thou wilt be misled because thy seat will be empty."

A SLUMP IN EVANGELISM

Herman C. Weber, D.D.

Herman C. Weber, author of this article, is of Every Member Mobilization of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. In his book "Statistics of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.," he presents some charts about Evangelism as applying to our own Church. In a recent conference with Doctor Weber, I put these facts in chart form and they were published by an article suitable for release to the papers. The article and accompanying graphic are herewith reproduced.—Roswell C. Long, General Assembly of the Presbyterian U. S. A. discovered a serious slump in evangelism in the North which were submitted at San Francisco in 1927. Proportion of new members on confession in the total membership was only 4.6 per cent. The average annual represent some kind of insulation between pastors with their communicant-member groups and the young people of the community. The reason should be sought in the year 1927-28 and it might be well to further localize—in Presbyteries or other areas—the exceptionably low marks which have gone into the forming of low averages.

A study of Pennsylvania, for example, in the U. S. A. Church, revealed that the only levels, and these were really high, were discoverable in Presbyteries which had had visitation evangelism movements. This was true of Ohio, as well, and other synods.

Presbyterians in general are rather keen on facts. Known situations can be handled whether emperors, princes, philosophies, armies or isms bar the way. There is doubtless, in addition to the grace of God, reserve strength in Presbyterian organization both North and South, to face the current slump, analyze its characteristics or its locale, and pray and work the way out.

AN ANSWER TO DR. SWEETS

Rev. R. W. Jopling Replies to Dr. H. H. Sweets' Article and "The Proposed Annuity Plan"

There are a few things in Dr. Sweets' criticisms of my criticisms of his annuity plan, that deserve my attention.

In a letter from the editor of the Christian Observer of April 2 and in an article of April 10 in the Presbyterian Standard, Dr. H. H. Sweets informs me that I have grievously misinterpreted his annuity plan.

I was under the impression that the present endowment of Ministerial Relief amounted to $1,000,000.00, which with $3,000,000.00 yet to be raised, was to be used up in taking care of our present ministers in old age, before the annuity plan comes into full operation. These brethren inform me that I am mistaken; that only the interest of the endowment fund is to be so used; that the endowment proper will be kept intact, and that when the annuity plan comes into full operation, the interest from this endowment fund of $1,000,000.00 will be used in supplementing the annuities "where there is real need." (I quote the editor of the Observer). I am delighted to get that information. Of course it renders some of my criticisms too severe. I am sorry now that I made some of them in the language used.

But who is responsible for my mistake? Why was I not properly informed? I have several copies of the annuity plan, sent me from time to time by Dr. Sweets since last summer. In no one of them does he mention any funds from Ministerial Relief as a supplement to the small $600 annuities "where there is real need." Early last fall I wrote Dr. Sweets substantially the same criticisms of his plan as are found in my articles. I hoped to have him explain the seeming defects or remedy them in private. I have had two letters from him in reply, in neither of which does he mention any supplement to the small $600-annuities from the endowment fund of Ministerial Relief or from any other source. Last November I wrote him a third time repeating and amplifying my criticisms and requested him to refer me to the Scriptures on which he based his plan. I have had no reply to that to date. From last summer on he has been dispensing propaganda in favor of his plan. I take all three of our church papers. I have observed them closely and I have kept everything on the subject that I have seen from his pen, and yet not until his questions and answers appeared in our papers on March 27—two days after my criticisms were mailed to the papers—did I see one word about any supplement to the small annuities from the endowment fund of ministerial Relief. In his two letters to me he stoutly defended the plan just as it is written, on the ground that it will level up salaries, other churches have adopted similar plans, able and consecrated men have approved it, if salaries are unequal, why should not annuities be unequal too?—and the like, but never any supplement to the small annuities from any source whatever. I submit therefore that if I misunderstood the plan and criticised it accordingly, Dr. Sweets has no one to blame for it but himself. Now a few questions, Dr. Sweets:

1. If it was your purpose from the beginning to supplement the small annuities with additional funds from the interest on the endowment fund of Ministerial Relief, why did you not write it into the annuity plan?

2. Is it your purpose in framing the annuity, to make adequate provision for the real needs of all our aged and infirm ministers?

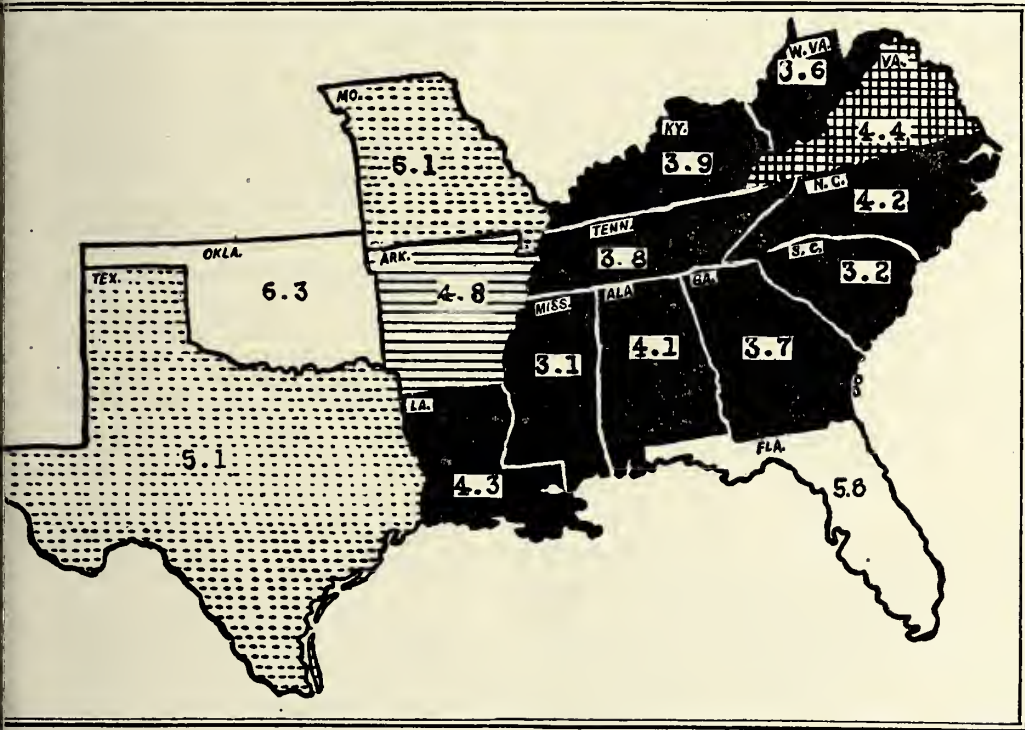

3. You speak with high favor of the plan adopted by our Executive Committee of Foreign Missions in fixing the salaries of our foreign missionaries. You tell us that this committee ascertains the cost of living in the various countries, takes note of the number of children in each family, estimates the cost of reaching appointments and other incidentals and fixes the missionary's salary accordingly. These are the very principles I contend for. If you approve them in fixing the salaries of foreign missionaries, why do you not employ them in your annuity plan in fixing the annuities of our aged and infirm ministers?

4. Our church operates on a charter from the Bible, every plan we adopt ought to be in harmony with the Bible. Will you point out to me and to the church at large just those Scriptures which show your annuity plan to be in harmony with the Bible? In private I have challenged you to do this, and promised you that if you would, then I on my part would withdraw all opposition to your plan and apologize for all the things I have said against it. I repeat the invitation and the promise.

Now a few statements of my belief in this matter and I am done.

I believe:

1. That our ministers ought not to be required to pay anything into the treasury of the annuity fund, but that the churches (laity) ought to be required to pay into the treasury of the fund a sufficient sum to provide adequately for the needs of our aged and infirm ministers. God has decreed that "they who labor in the gospel should live of the gospel." That means that they should live of the gospel when they are old and infirm as well as when they are young and for one hundred years was known to have that the low 1927 percentage deeply impressed. As a result of a greater emphasis on in the Assembly at Tulsa found a rise to 5.3 not satisfactory but is considerably better than passing these indexes in the conferences built Moderator Hugh K. Walker, who served one in the U. S. Church, questions were frequently to the indexes of the Southern Presbyterian. At the close of the series of conferences, the index into this matter and discovered what seems a serious situation with reference to the proportion as on confession to total membership in the Southern Church. The figures mere made two years ago in the General Council publication appendix, PRESBYTERIAN STATISTICS FORTY HUNDRED YEARS, but they have not such interpretation or consideration as yet.

Southern index for 1927 was 4.6 and for 1928 there has been a steady drop from 1925. Accompanying chart of the synods of the Southern may help in the study of these figures which are reassuring. They are also dubious in the other the Church. In the great majority of the index is not sufficient to assure the incorporation into communicant membership of the children families. The Census figures suggest five per cent would assure this. In the U. S. A. Branch emphasis on evangelism and the current very great young people's problems seem to have stopped and started the churches upward. The South with its very strong inclination towards and its greatly improved benevolence spirit registering better indexes than the heterogeneous S. A. group.

Index of the Southern Church from 1863 to 1928 is 5.5 per cent which might serve as a rough and ready for average Presbyterian production. The leading figure for the U. S. A. Branch from 1928 is 6.3 a good part of which in the early mission days was the contribution of the Southern synodal levels between three and four per cent

HOME MISSION RECEIPTS

Assembly's Committee

The books were closed and balanced April 5, revealing the following results:

BUDGET receipts from Churches, Societies, and individuals, including interest on invested funds	$492,444.21
DECREASE	$ 14,459.99
MISCELLANEOUS receipts from legacies and designated gifts not in the budget	54,064.08
DECREASE	6,634.62
SPECIAL receipts from Birthday Offerings of the Auxiliaries for Nurses Training School at Stillman	41,500.00
Grand Total	$588,008.29

This was a decrease from the grand total receipts of the previous year of $9,580. This would be very encouraging if it were not for the fact that $95,564 were designated and could not be used for current expenses. As the Assembly instructs its Executive Committees not to exceed the average of actual receipts of the previous two years, it has compelled the Committee of Home Missions to cut $46,572, from last year's appropriations.

The indebtedness with which we began the year just closed was $41,000. Notwithstanding the cut in appropriations in our last year's budget, this decrease in receipts for the closing year has prevented any reduction, but instead a slight increase in the indebtedness with which we begin the new year, totaling now $49,000.

This means further curtailment of the operations of the Executive Committee and a consequent loss in results which will unfavorably affect the growth of the whole Church.

Is the Church satisfied to see its work suffer by this steadily declining support year by year; or will it awake to the necessity of making adequate provision for this vital Cause and source of increase in its denominational life?

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

W. A. Gamble, Pinetops, N. C.

On Easter morning at 6:30 forty-seven Arkansas young people of the Fort Smith-Van Buren Christian Endeavor Union met on Wild Cat Mountain for a Sunrise Prayer Meeting. The beauty of the scenery, the glory of the day, and the inspiration of the program, kindled sacred emotions in the spirits of the crusaders who gathered there for their "Love Watch." The program was led by Miss Ann Louise Powell, Treasurer of the Young People's C. E. Society in First Presbyterian Church of Ft. Smith.

Dr. Wallace Bacon, Pastor of the First Christian Church, offered the invocation. After this Miss Nannie Ruth Hunt and Miss Ann Louise Powell sang a beautiful duet. The address was given by Rev. Frank P. Anderson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Ft. Smith. Then Miss Mamie Gene Cole, Director of Religious Education at First Presbyterian Church, read "From Night to Light" by Frank L. Stanton. The Missions benediction closed the program and the young people filed down the mountain to return to the responsibilities of the day in their respective Churches.

The Fort Smith First Church held during the week of March 18-23 four preparation classes for the young people planning to enter the Church membership at Easter time. These classes were for Junior Girls, Junior Boys, Intermediate and Senior Girls, Intermediate and Senior Boys. Then on Friday afternoon before Easter Sunday all the boys and girls of the Junior, Intermediate and Senior ages who were already members of the Church were asked to meet the pastor for a special consecration service to renew their vows to Christ. This attention to the young people is proving valuable to this Church, as it will to any Church that thus prepares for its future leadership.

Suggestions for Taking Part

- I. Why should we consider these people our friends?
 1. All people are friends.
 2. We are all Americans.
- II. How and why do the people differ?
 1. Climatic conditions.
 2. The settling by the Spanish and English differed greatly.
 3. Products are different because of climate.
- III. What does United States obtain from South America?

United States is greatly benefitted by these friends. How is South America helped by United States?

 1. United States sends machinery, manufactured goods.
 2. Skilled workmen, professional people.
 3. Mission schools and churches.

Impress the Juniors with the importance of Christian missions, and show that the Juniors as friends of Jesus should help to carry on his work.

Our missionaries have gone to South America urged by a love for Christ and a desire to do His will. As they have worked with these people, they have found them, in many ways, folks like themselves. It is this discovery of things in common that has led many of our missionaries to form some of their deepest friendships. If we think of the things that we have in common with our friends in South America and not of the differences, the ideal of Christian brotherhood will not be so hard to attain.

Ask each member of the Junior society to find out the name and residence of one missionary in South America and learn all he can about him and the work he is trying to do.

Get a sheet of cardboard and cut it into cards about three by five inches in size. The children should press some flowers, and paste them neatly on the cards, leaving room to write a pretty verse or a kind message, and a Junior's name.

If possible, get a kodak picture of your Juniors. Have this for the cover. Have two holes punched in one end of each card. Have each Junior write a greeting and his name on a card; then tie all the cards together with a fluffy bunch of baby ribbon.

This will form a pretty autograph album, and may be sent to a missionary. Several of these albums may be made and sent to as many missionaries.

April 28—The Bible, a Mission Book
 Matt. 28:19, 20; Rom. 1:16, 17

The Cleansing Effect of the Bible

A kindergarten teacher in the slums of one of our large American cities one morning gathered a bunch of ragged, dirty children and took them to kindergarten. On her table she had placed a beautiful white lily in a bowl, and when she brought the children into the room where the lily was, the flower had a decided effect on one of the little girls. She looked at the whiteness of the lily and then looked down at her hands, which were dirty, she felt her hair, which was unkempt and tangled, and then she quietly left the room. When she came back her hands were clean, her face washed, and her hair combed. She could not bear to be dirty where there was such a white clean flower.

The Bible has an effect similar to that of the white lily. We see people living in sin and filth—for sin always attends filth—and then we see them living clean, honest, helpful lives. The Bible has been called a mirror in which we see ourselves with all our imperfections. "For if anyone is a hearer of the Word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a mirror: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth away, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But he that looketh into the perfect law, that law of liberty, and so continueth, being not a hearer that forgetteth but a doer that worketh, this man shall be blessed in his doing."

Let us observe the cleansing effect of the Bible on ourselves.

Our Ancestors Without the Bible

Before we look at any nation of the present day that we call non-Christian, let us look at the condition of our own ancestors before they had the Bible. In Caesar's "Commentaries" we find some very uncomplimentary remarks about our ancestors, the Britons. He describes them not only as heathen but as savages. "Most of the inland inhabitants do not sow corn, but live on milk and flesh, and are clad with skins. All the Britons, indeed, dye themselves with wood, which occasions a bluish colour, and thereby have a more terrible appearance in fight. They wear their hair long, and have every part of their body shaved except their head and upper lip. Ten or even a dozen men have their wives in common, and particularly brothers among brothers."

And this is what Caesar had to say about the French of his day. "All the Gauls are extremely devoted to superstitious rites; and, therefore, they who are afflicted with usually severe diseases, and they who are engaged in battles and involved in dangers either offer in sacrifice men as victims, or vow that they will sacrifice them, and employ druids to make the offerings. They think that the minds of the immortal gods cannot be made propitious, unless the life of a man be offered for the life of a man; and they have sacrifices of that kind also for national purposes. Others have figures of vast size, the limbs of which, formed of osiers, they fill with living men. These they set on fire, and the men surrounded by the flames perish. They think that the offering of men taken in theft, or in robbery, or in any other offense is more acceptable to the immortal gods; but when a supply of that class is wanting, they have recourse to the offering of even the innocent."

Today we are what we are because of foreign missions—and the Bible.

Ourselves With the Bible

"And you did he make alive, when ye were dead through your trespasses and sins, wherein ye once walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the powers of the air, of the spirit that now worketh in the sons of disobedience; among whom we also once lived in the lusts of our flesh, doing the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, even as the rest."

Our forefathers were Gentiles, barbarians, outsiders. They were looked upon as we now look upon the African savage. If seeing now from our vantage ground, we thank our God that we are not as the Chinamen or the Africans, we also become Pharisees—hypocrites. We show an assumed superiority and a provincial snobbery. We owe the Bible to others. It is not a piece of philanthropy to give the Bible to other nations, but it is paying our honest debts. We are "debtors to the barbarians." Freely, we have received from those who once thought of us as "far-off," freely we must give to those today who do not know the Word.

The Bible a Source of Missions

One of the mysteries of the ancient world was the source of the river Nile. The river was worshipped because it gave life to the fields by its periodic overflow. In modern times, through explorations, the sources of the river have been discovered. It is now known that the primary sources of the Nile are in the mountains along the equator whose snow-covered peaks send down streams of water to fertilize the fields. Just so is the Bible the source of missions, for by the Bible the heart of God is revealed. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have eternal life."

PROTESTANT GRADUATES IN MEXICO

J. M. Allardyce

To The Womans Auxiliary:

You cannot realize what a happy hour came to the lives of Miss Lettie Beaty, Mr. and Mrs. Z. Mr. I. C. Murray, your missionaries, and Mr. Morrow and myself one day last summer at Mexico, when we received information that given this year's birthday gift to the girls' Mexico. It will mean much not only to our work, but to the National Government. They to supply all public schools with as many teachers as possible, claiming they are superior as they build up character as well as brains. The Government accepts graduates of protestant schools; available. Our school building at Chilpancingo a church dormitory, missionary resident and purpose, rooms are small, dark and dreary, polluted and equipped, built during the time they keep out bandits and bullets. Building at Zimapan even worse, being an old adobe residence like a prison than a home. Miss Lettie Beaty renting several small shacks, with rooms ten by ten for classrooms, always overcrowded. I doubt will ever point with pride to their childhood Protestant schoolhouse.

Miss Alice McClelland and Miss Lettie Beaty done a wonderful work, turning out many fine young women who have carried the Christ life to their own people and become leaders for the people. Miss Alice McClelland has had conferred upon her the highest honors ever conferred upon an educator in Mexico. She was elected president of the federation of school in the State of Guerrero. Lettie Beaty has a state-wide reputation for having finished the government with many of their teachers in the public schools.

I wish everyone could see our mission work as I have seen it. You would realize what a glowing block we are to the advancement of the Christ at home and abroad by under financing and foreign work.

Let me plead with you to make this building the largest in the history of your organization. A hundred thousand dollars would be none too much for the equipment at Chilpancingo and Zitacuapán, a dollar planted in Mexico in educational work by leaps and bounds, and produce a great harvest.

If there ever was a time you should be a neighbor, it is now, while they are striving night to lift themselves up and out of the ignominious superstition they have been held in for the hundred years. May God help us to build Mexico, that any girl scholar may point with pride to their childhood Presbyterian schoolhouse.

from the first page to the last, is the outcome of the missionary impulse which came from the heart in the person of his Son, to reach and to save which he loved. Rightly considered, you might try to estimate Beethoven, excluding music study, as to estimate the New Testament, excluding missionary idea. Leave out that missionary and study the book without the zeal and enthusiasm the eager conquest of the world in the name and all becomes dark and confused; but take the missionary idea, frankly recognize that you are a missionary book, a book which is brief and encumbered, as a missionary bent on travel should be, and all its pages become luminous, parts fall into their places, and even its greatest ties solve themselves." After the luncheon recess, Mrs. J. A. Brown, of Chad- bourn, conducted the beautiful memorial service for our blessed dead, who have gone on before during the past year. For each name on that roll of members of the Presbyterian or missionaries of the church a flower was placed in a silver vase, purple and white iris, fresh from the gardens. When the names of Mrs. Jackson Johnson, of Winnabow, and Mrs. Wm. C. Cumming, of Kiang-yin, China, were reached, brief memorials of their lovely lives were read.

Three memorials have been erected by the Presbyterian this year, a tablet to Mrs. B. F. Hall, in the First Church of Wilmington, a gift of pulpit furniture and a pulpit Bible to the Church at Winnabow, in honor of Mrs. Johnson, and a room in the North Carolina Building at Mission Court, Richmond, endowed in memory of Mrs. George C. Worth, of Kiang-yin, China.

Other reports, election of officers, an inspired address from the Young People's friend, Miss Julia Lake Skinner, and two addresses from the heads of two of our women's colleges, featured the close of the first day's session. Dr. C. G. Vardell, representing Flora Macdonald College, and Dr. W. C. Pressly, Peace Institute, brought the claims of these two colleges for women before the Presbyterian, and each college was voted a special gift this year of $250.

In the evening, after the Devotional led by Rev. D. H. Dulin, Chairman of Woman's Work of the Presbytery, and special music. Dr. George C. Worth gave a very fine address on conditions in China, and the Lord's Supper was celebrated by all the assembly which packed the church.

Friday mornings session opened at 9:30 with the Devotional led by Mrs. W. P. M. Currie. Following this and certain reports Doctor Worth spoke again, on the White Cross work undertaken by the women of the Presby- terial for his hospital in China. He said we could never know the feeling of comfort and security that he feels on contemplating the store-room full of well prepared bandages and supplies of all kinds, which the women's hands have made according to his own specifications, and without which he would not know how to carry on. He told also of the place of affection and great influence the hospital has among the Chinese, even in the midst of greatest political disturbances.

Following his talk, Miss Eliza Murphy, of Wilmington, offered an earnest prayer for this hospital. This is the Presbyterian's own hospital, as twenty-five years ago Miss Murphy was appointed agent for the Fund which brought it into being, and she carried out the work faithfully and efficiently till it was an accomplished fact.

Mrs. Barden read for Mrs. A. J. Howell the report of the Committee for the Memorial Room in honor of Mrs. C. Worth, and stated that the whole amount of $1,000, has been subscribed. Mrs. Bessie Sasser Williams read most beautifully a brief dramatic sketch setting forth the purposes of our birthday offering for this year to our two Mexican Schools. Miss Skinner gave the second of her inspiring Bible studies. Reports were heard from the meeting of Synodical and Mrs. G. V. Patterson, as the newly elected president of the North Carolina Synodical, brought a fine message expressing the need of prayer and of love.

Mrs. John L. Fairly, of Wilmington, led the afternoon's inspiring devotional, which was followed by omer very interesting reports, with earest prayers for each cause presented. Rev. R. C. Clontz then made the subject of Home Missions in Wilmington Presbytery a living and vital thing for these women, many of whom are working beside him in the neglected places.

Mrs. Patterson inducted the new officers into office, final reports were heard, and the Presbyterian closed a wonderful meeting.

The Chairmen of the various local committees deserve unlimited praises: Miss Winifred Faison, Mrs. Marshall Williams, and Miss Sallie Hill, and many others, who served in the homes, the Church, the choir, the kitchen and with their cars, to make this meeting a complete success. The newly elected officers are:

Vice-President—Mrs. A. J. Howell, Wilmington.
Recording Secy.—Mrs. L. D. Latta, Wilmington.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. T. Carroll, Wilmington.
Historian—Mrs. Z. A. Gibson, Faison.

Madam President, loved ones of Mrs. Johnson's Church, and co-workers:

We are gathered here this afternoon to honor the mem- ory of one whom we all knew and loved. To undertake to enumerate to you the many beautiful qualities of char- acter of our mutual friend, Mrs. Johnson, would be more than superfluous, so we will confine ourselves to a brief tribute of love.

Few women are blessed with so many personal gifts and graces; love, devotion, faith, and leadership. We see these qualities expressed in every relationship of her life, her home, her community, her Church and the cause of Christ everywhere. She loved her family, and gave herself to them in a sacrificial way. She was devoted to the cause of Christ, wherever need constituted a call. She had an abiding faith in her Savior and in the good- ness of her fellowmen. She believed implicitly that Christ's kingdom would come in this world, and His will be done in the hearts and lives of His children. With such love, devotion and faith, is it any wonder that she was called to high places of responsibility and leadership. First President of North Carolina Synodical Auxiliary, President of Wilmington Presbyterian Auxiliary for 12 years, and an inspiration to all others who followed her. Truly her life was a sweet benediction to all of us.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of Wil- mington Presbyterian last September, just a short time after her death, it was decided to place a memorial in this Church to honor her memory. A committee consisting of Mrs. W. M. Baker, Chairman, Mrs. W. M. Cumming, Mrs. J. N. Southerland, Mrs. W. T. Bannerman, Mrs. W. H. Sprunt, Mrs. W. P. M. Currie, and Miss Jane Hall were appointed by executive committee to decide what memorial should be, raise the money, purchase it and place it here. Our committee decided to take love offerings at Days of Prayer for this, and the executive committee approved of this.

There was a ready response on the part of the people everywhere. All wanted to have a part in this gift.

After much correspondence, mostly with Miss Kate Johnson in regard to gifts most needed in the Church, we decided to get three pulpit chairs, a communion table with bronze tablet on it for suitable inscription and a pulpit Bible.

Mr. B. F. Hall generously donated the large center pulpit chair, and Mrs. P. Pearsall kindly offered the committee the two side chairs. The communion table, the pulpit Bible, and the bronze tablet were purchased with love gifts from Days of Prayer.

In behalf of our Presbyterian, it gives me genuine pleasure to present these tokens of love and esteem to this Church. On the bronze tablet and on the front cover the pulpit Bible you find this inscription, "Pre- sented by Wilmington Presbyterian in Memory of Mrs. Jackson Johnson."

May the ministers who sit in these chairs break to you the bread of life, and lead you to higher planes of noble living and broader fields of Christian Service.

Every time you gather around this table of the Lord, and partake of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, may you like her, who has gone on before renew your vow for a greater allegiance to your Master.

May this Bible be a real lamp for your feet and a light to your pathway. "Hide its words in your heart, and live its truths out in your lives."

Lesson for April 28

THE SUFFERING SERVANT OF JEHOVAH

Rev. Ernest Trice Thompson, D.D.

Isaiah 52:13-53:12.

As we saw last week the later part of the book of Isaiah was probably written by an unknown disciple of the great Isaiah whose ministry is described in Is. 1-39. Isaiah himself lived during the days of Hezekiah 150 years before Judah was carried captive. The second Isaiah, as he is often called, wrote after the captivity, for a people who had begun to despair of the providence of God, and to lose hopes in the great promises given by the prophets of an earlier day. He began his ministry with a message of encouragement: "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God." 40:1. There was ground for encouragement because God would soon lead His people back to the promised land. Even then he heard "the voice of one that crieth, Prepare ye in the wilderness the way of Jehovah; make level in the desert a highway for our God." 40:3. As the prophecy unfolds the prophet enters more and more deeply into God's purpose for His chosen people, not only in the immediate future, but in all the days to come. This purpose it seems is identified with a Minister or Servant, whom He commissions to carry it out in the world, cf 42:1-7; 43:5-10; 44:1-5; 49:1-9; 50:4-10. The Hebrew word for servant means a person at the disposal of another to perform his will, do his work, represent his interests. The Servant of the Lord then of whom the second Isaiah speaks over and over again is to be the one through whom God's purpose is to be executed. The question immediately arises, Who then is this servant? At the first it seems to be identified in the prophet's mind with the nation as a whole. Cf. 41:8f. This is not at all strange for God had chosen the people as a whole to be His own peculiar people, and had promised to work out His will for the universe through them. But as a matter of fact the nation as a whole did not respond to God's will at any time in its history. The greater prophets soon began to identify God's purpose therefore with that group within the nation which actually responded to His Spirit. It is not strange therefore as we read through the Servant passages in Isaiah to find that after awhile when he speaks of the Servant of Jehovah he seems to be thinking not of the entire nation but of the smaller group of true Israelites who are amenable to the Divine Will. The change is first clearly noticeable perhaps in 43:1-7. But as we read on there are more and more indications that the prophet sees that the Servant of the Lord who is ultimately to accomplish His will is not the nation in its entirety, not even a group within the nation, but rather a single individual who has identified himself completely with the Divine purpose. That is most evidently the case in the passage which brings the message regarding the Servant of God to a climax, Is. 52:13-53:12. God's purpose for Israel, God's purpose for the universe is to be accomplished through an individual so thoroughly devoted to the divine will that he and he alone can be spoken of in the highest sense as the Servant of the Lord. It is this climactic passage that we are to study for our present lesson. The first thing that strikes us is that the Servant is a Suffering Servant. The prophet knew that it would be hard for people to understand why the Servant of God, the one whom He would commission to carry out His purpose in the world, had to suffer in the execution of that task, and, therefore, he seeks to prepare the nation by setting forth first the wisdom of the Servant's suffering, second the nature of the Servant's suffering, and last the result of the Servant's suffering. It is a little hard for us to follow him at times, partly because he speaks at times retrospectively as though he were looking back on the scene, and at other times prophetically, as though he were looking ahead to the future. But with all its difficulties the passage is infinitely precious to Christians. They all agree that the ideal has been fulfilled but once in history, and that in the person of Jesus Christ. We cannot help but read it with that in mind.

I. The Wisdom of the Servant's Suffering

Read Is. 52:13-15. What evidence does the prophet give that the Servant who is to suffer will be acting wisely or prudently? Will this evidence of his prudence or wisdom be available before or after his suffering? To whom will it become evident? What does the prophet mean by the marring of his visage, the sprinkling of many nations, kings shutting their mouths at him?

Before the prophet describes the nature of the Servant's suffering he points out that he will be wise, prudent, well advised in all that he does. "Behold my servant shall deal wisely (R. V.)." As Dr. George Adam Smith says of this phrase: "The Hebrew verb is the most practical in the whole language, for this is precisely the point which the prophecy seeks to bring out about the Servant's sufferings. They are practical. He is practical in them. He endures them, not for their own sake, but for some practical end of which he is aware and to which they must assuredly bring him. His failure to convince men by his word (of which Isaiah has spoke in previous passages), the pain and spite which seem to be his only wage, are not the last of him, but the beginning and the way to what is higher." As a result of his suffering "he shall be exalted, and lifted up, and shall be very high. The suffering, which in chapter 50 seemed to be the servant's misfortune is here seen as his wisdom which shall issue in his glory."

The prophet however realizes that this will not be immediately evident. The Servant's sufferings will be so unparalleled, his whole being so cruelly tortured, that his contemporaries will be astonished, i. e., amazed or appalled. But the time will come when the wisdom of his course has become apparent to the whole world. He shall sprinkle many nations. If this is a correct translation the reference is to the washings of the O. T. (Cf. Lev. 4:6; Num. 19:18), and the phrase means that he will purify, or cleanse many nations. It is the same idea that Jesus had in mind when he said: Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you. More than that, kings representing the powerful of the world, shall shut their mouths because of him, i. e., shall hold him in the deepest reverence. We may compare with this Job's touching description of the respect paid to him in the days of his prosperity: "The princes refrained talking, and laid their hands on their mouth. The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth." 29:9f. Kings will give him this reverence because the exaltation of the servant will be one the like of which had never before been seen or heard.

With this whole passage we may compare Jn. 12:32; I Cor. 1:18-31; Phil. 2:5-11. Jesus could have avoided the cross. Was he wise in allowing his enemies to put him to death? How has the wisdom of his course been vindicated? To what extent have the words of Isaiah been fulfilled? But Jesus who suffered himself said that we too must be willing to suffer in his behalf, that we must be prepared to make any sacrifice in order to carry out the Father's will for our own lives. It was wise for Jesus to make such a sacrifice, but is it wise for us? Why do you think so?

II. The Nature of the Servant's Sufferings

Read carefully 53:1-9. What sufferings did Isaiah foretell that the servant would undergo? Try to get down into the meaning of every clause. What for example is the exact meaning of vs. 1, 4b, etc? What sufferings did Isaiah foretell that the Servant would undergo? How would he be regarded by the men of his own time? What was the true explanation of his sufferings?

1. Despised 1-3. Before the prophet begins to describe the nature of the Servant's sufferings he calls attention to the universal unbelief which explained why he would be so grievously misunderstood. He saw that when the Servant actually came there would be very few who would accept the prophetic message concerning him, such passages for example as 42:1-4; 49:1-6; 50:4-9, and the present one. The arm of the Lord is a metaphor for God's operation in history or providence. It was He who raised up the Servant, and all through his tragic history God was working by him for the redemption of his people and the inbringing of eternal salvation. But this divine power would not be recognized by the majority of the nation; they would neither perceive it for themselves nor believe it when declared unto them. They would be deceived on the other hand (vs. 2) by the Servant's humble origin. He would grow up as a tender plant, that is a sapling, or as a root out of a dry ground. In other words he would come from what seemed to be unpromising soil. He would be handicapped by his origin. And men would not find in him the beauty, the attractiveness which they anticipated. Because men then would be blind to the revelations of the prophets, and disappointed in the actual appearance of the Servant he would be despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.

This paragraph may be grievously misunderstood. Is it true that Jesus had no form nor comeliness, no beauty that men should desire him? In what sense is it true? In what sense is it false? In what sense was Jesus a man of sorrows? Many Christians form their picture of Jesus from this verse rather than from the Gospels themselves, and think of Jesus as a man constantly borne down by the burden of sin or of suffering. Is this the real Jesus?

As a matter of fact Jesus was tremendously popular with the common people from the beginning of his ministry till the end. He was tremendously attractive in his whole personality, and these words of Isaiah must not blind us to the actual historic facts. He was rejected however by the leaders of the nation, and despised by them as he hung helpless on the cross, and ultimately for the reasons suggested here by Isaiah. First, they did not understand or appreciate the message that came to them from Isaiah regarding a suffering Messiah. Other prophecies seemed to suggest a conquering King. They simply did not recognize in Jesus the divine ideal. Secondly, Jesus with all his attractiveness did not measure up to their expectations. They felt that every religious teacher must conform to their traditions. Jesus set himself against many of these traditions because they corrupted true religion. The result was that he had no form or comeliness for the Pharisees; no beauty that they should desire him. We must understand these words of Isaiah in some such sense.

There are men today who are not attracted by the character of Jesus. Is that a reflection upon the character of Jesus or upon that of his opponents? Why do not men believe "our message" today? Are intellectual difficulties to blame? Is it because of a lack of moral sympathy with the aims of Jesus? or what? How can these difficulties be removed? Do our prejudices prevent us from seeing the real Jesus?

2. Afflicted 4-6. In this paragraph Isaiah contrasts the people's estimate of the afflictions of the Servant with the true estimate, or their enlightened judgment after the event. Their original judgment or estimation was that God had stricken him because of his own wickedness. Now however they see their mistake. They realize that he had borne their griefs and carried their sorrows, in other words that he had endured in his own person the penal consequences of the people's guilt. In the next verse they penetrate further into the meaning of his sufferings. They have come to understand not only that he was wounded on account of their transgressions, and bruised on account of their iniquities, but also that the chastisement needful to procure peace or well being for them was upon him. What the verse teaches is that the people could not be healed by their own. It was only because the Servant suffered untarably the consequences of their sin, and by an extraordinary degree that they could find with God. With his stripes, (i. e. welts, scourging), writes Isaiah, we are healed. A is need for this atoning ministry, for all we li have gone astray; we have turned everyon own way.

Isaiah tell us that Jesus' sufferings were What does he mean? How has Jesus b griefs and carried our sorrows? In what s he wounded for our transgressions, and br our iniquities?

Isaiah tells us that Jesus' sufferings were In him we find peace and spiritual health. I that his chastisement serves to bring us pe with his stripes we are healed?

3. Slain 7-9. The narrative of the Serva ferings is in these verses brought to its co after enduring violence and injustice at the men, his life was cut short and he was laid honored grave. This is the sense of the though the translation is sometimes diffic R. V. is much cleared here than the A. V. pression of vs. 7 may "summarize the prec count of the Servant's affliction, but more it introduces a feature not previously adv namely, the outrages inflicted on the Serva contemporaries in consequence of their false upon him. It denotes harsh, cruel, and treatment." The thought is continued in vs A. V. here is hopelessly obscure. The R. V. t "By oppression and judgment (in other wor pressive judicial procedure) he was taken a as for his generation, who among them c that he was cut off out of the land of the l the transgression of my people to whom tl was due." Vs. 9 tells us that the unrela tipathy which the Servant experienced thr is continued even after his death, and expres in manner of his burial. They made h with the wicked. Such persons were buried niously and away from the family sepulchre, salom (II Sam. 18:6). It is rather strange same clause speaks of a grave with the wic with the rich. Perhaps it was fulfilled in tl was crucified between two thieves, and final in the grave of Joseph of Arimathea. The prophet concludes, rather than "because" as V. he had done no violence, neither was any his mouth.

This description of the Servant's death plished by legal injustice, was so completely in the life of Jesus that it hardly calls for One verse only it seems is liable to be wrong hended. Isaiah says "as a lamb that is sl slaughter and as a sheep that before its sh dumb, so he opened not his mouth." Wha sion does that make upon your mind as a titude in the presence of death? Is it bor the facts? In what sense is it wrong? sense is it true? The words if they were c apart from the Gospels might suggest that l led an unwilling victim to his death, or that a purely passive role that last week in J submitting without a word to his fat as a matter of fact it did not happen in t Jesus took an aggressive role the last we earthly life. He indicted the Sadducees, Pharisees in their strongholds. He offer to the people as their Messiah, and appea to choose his program rather than that of th It was because the rulers perceived that against them that they plotted his death. T maintained a noble reticence when charged before the Sanhedrim, and when questione Herod, but it was his ringing declaration th indeed the Messiah that finally sealed b Jesus could have escaped death only by bet cause. He went like a lamb to the slaught he did not thus cowardly evade his fate. He like a sheep before its shearers only in the s he never lost control of himself, met his resolutely, and on the whole in silence.

III. The Results of the Servant's Suffering

Read 53:10-12. Who is speaking in vs. 1 is speaking in vss. 11-12? Try to unde meaning of every clause. For example what prophet mean when he says he shall see his shall prolong his days, he shall see of the his soul, etc., in your own words what are results of the Servant's Sufferings?

Isaiah begins by telling us that the Servan in accordance with the will of God. Th translation suggests that God found pleast suffering. The Hebrews does not convey t It merely indicates that it was in accord God's purpose. What this purpose is is ex the rest of the verse. It was that having off self as a sin offering he might see his seed his days, and accomplish the pleasure of He sees his seed in the innumerable thr through the ages have confessed his nam prolonged his days through the resurrectio completed the pleasure of God in establishi versal religion. Verse 11 amplifies the m vs. 10. It tells us that the Servant shall b with the results of the sufferings, and shall God's pleasure by removing the burden of g men, and by bringing many to righteousness here means "to make righteous" rather count righteous"). As the reward of his sufferings and his mediatorial work the Ser attain an influence equal to that of the gr tates of the world. "To divide spoil" is a and proverbial expression for victory or suc

We are back here with the thought with began. How has Isaiah's prophecy been On the basis of this passage is it correct to appeasing an angry God? Or is it better with Paul that God was in Christ reconciling all unto himself? On the basis of the whole does Jesus simply bear the penalty of our sin or does he at the same time cure us of our sin so that the one be separated from the other. Does the suffering servant demand of us?

A minister is not required or expected to pay his salary, and should not be required or expected to pay a part of his annuity. The Episcopal requires all the payments to their annuity be paid by the laity, and I think they are right. Their ministers may voluntarily pay such sums as they please as an investment, but will be kept as a separate account and subject to the minister's call at any time.

But a minister's annuity ought not to be retained by the Church of which is pastor defaults in the annuity fund. He is not responsible for the Church's fault and should not be punished for it.

Neither the size of the previous salary a minister has received nor the length of time he has served should be considered at all in fixing the annuity he should receive. If a young man gives his life to his Church in the ministry, whether in the providence of God he falls helplessly in 100 years, the Church should take adequate care of him.

The Church is under the most solemn obligation to see to it that her ministers are paid a salary that they can themselves make provision for old age, or failing in this to make adequate provision for them herself.

The Bible makes the need the sole ground for the assistance the Church should give her aged and infirm ministers. No Church is less for her aged ministers and no minister asks more of his Church. If a minister does not receive an annuity, the Church should not pay him any; if he does need, the Church should supply it.

In arriving at a minister's need, account should be taken of the cost of living, the state of his health, the number of dependents and the amount of income from other sources, and his annuity accordingly.

In any plan the Church adopts as a whole and any part should be in harmony with the Bible. —S. C.

CHALLENGE TO THE PRESBYTERIES OF THE ASSEMBLY

Two successive years Winchester Presbytery has recorded which we believe is not surpassed, if not equaled, by any Presbytery in the Assembly.

At the end of the third quarter of the present year the Presbytery had paid in 81.2 per cent of promises made in the E. M. C. for benevolences per cent of askings; the record for last year, 78.5 per cent of promises and 48 per cent of askings. In the Presbytery adopted "A New Plan for Benevolences," now known as the Winchester Plan, has been carried on consistently ever since and 100 per cent of the Churches are co-operating. At the beginning of each year, booklets of Remittance are furnished the treasurers of all the Churches and are requested to send to the Presbyterial Treasurer, not later than the 8th of each month all their hands for benevolences. Presbytery recognizes the right of contributors to designate gifts but the Churches to send the large bulk of their contributions "undesignated" to be disbursed to all the causes according to the percentages adopted by the Presbytery insuring each cause its just share of total from the Presbytery. Immediately after the end of each month, the Presbyterial Treasurer makes a statement of funds on hand, crediting each cause with contributions made to it and disbursing all undesignated strictly according to the percentages adopted by the Presbytery, and makes remittances to all the Churches by the 15th of each month thus maintaining a flow of funds to all the causes as they come in.

At the end of each quarter, the Presbytery Treasurer makes a statement (which is also a receipt and a quarterly statement ordered by Presbytery to be read to the congregation) to each Church treasurer (and a copy to each pastor) giving the amount contributed by each Church; amount previously acknowledged; amount due to date; askings from the Church; the amount promised by the Church; the classification of each (+, A, B, etc., to G. A+ indicates that the amount is up to date on "Asking"; A on Promises etc., indicating that nothing has been received during the quarter. Accompanying this statement is a Bulletin giving reports from the Presbytery; the classification of Churches; the Honor Roll churches i. e., those whose hands have made monthly remittances on or before the 15th of each month (there were 28 churches on the Honor Roll for the third quarter; 21 for the year). The action of the pastors and the response of the Churches to the method has been remarkable. I know of treasurers who, on realizing near the close of the quarter their churches were in danger of falling down on their classification, have gone out and collected from their members an amount sufficient to put their churches in the Honor Roll. The Synod of Virginia has adopted a uniform system of bookkeeping and accounting for Presbyterial treasurers and has gotten out a Manual showing every detail of the system. The Presbyterial Treasurer makes reports to Presbytery each year, is bonded and his books audited twice a year.

To the Conference of Synod's Chairmen and Field Workers, Atlanta, Ga., April 3, 4, 1929

(We feel sure that the readers of this column will be interested in the following report of Mr. J. A. Naff, Field Worker of the Department of Men's Work. It not only shows the fine work which he is doing, but also the interest in the Men's Work, for Mr. Naff has only visited those Churches, Presbyteries and Synods where he has had a special invitation. We hope later on to have the report of Mr. L. A. Coulter, the other field worker, and, of course, the report of Doctor Purcell to the General Assembly.—Editor.)

Since making my 1928 report, it has been my privilege to spend a full Church year, from the first of April, 1928, to the 31st of March, 1929, in "Men-of-the-Church" Work as Field Worker. Under the direction of the Department of Men's Work, I have done definite service in each of 33 Presbyteries, in ten of the Synods of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. This has necessitated nearly 24,000 miles of travel, as follows:

23,500 Total Miles of Travel:

This includes, 16,000 miles, driving my own car; 2,000 miles, riding in cars of others; 300 miles, on public bus lines; 5,200 miles, by rail.

In the prosecution of this work, I have called personally on more than 300 pastors and men in 223 different Churches. Within the year I have made 145 addresses, each of which has dealt with some phase of Men's Work. These addresses have been heard by a total of more than 4,000 men.

Within the year I have promoted in one way or another eight Men's Work Conferences, and have attended sixteen Men's Work Conferences, in all of which I have taken some part. This number includes the two summer conferences at Massanetta and Montreat in August of 1928. In addition to these public gatherings, I have been in at least eight Conferences for planning the general work, or the work in Synods and Presbyteries. In a number of these and some other cases, I have also helped in planning the arrangement of the program used at the Conferences.

It has been my very great privilege to use the speaking time at 60 regular Church services in 50 different congregations, and a total of 1800 men have been present at these services. I have also had the privilege of speaking through the regular study period to eleven Bible classes. These classes were attended by a total of 330 men. Between 15 and 20 Men's Organizations were either completed or set up under my aid and supervision.

Another privilege I have enjoyed has been that of presenting Men's Work at four stated meetings of as many Presbyteries.

Two and one-third months of the year have been spent in the office at Atlanta. Doctor Purcell may make some report of ways he has used me while I have been in the office. Among the other things in the round of office duties, I have been able to study a large number of reports sent by Churches to their respective Presbyteries, prior to the Stated Meetings last April. I want to give you a brief account of some of my findings.

Reports from a total of 394 Churches were studied. Of these 71 have no Men's Work. Men have been organized according to Assembly's plan in 240 of the Churches, and the total male membership in these Churches aggregates 26,450 men above 18 years of age.

About five or six other forms of organizations are reported by 83 of these Churches, having a total male membership of 10,900 men above 18 years of age. The reports show that 30 per cent of all the men in the Churches organized on the Assembly's Plan are active, whereas only 25 per cent of the men in the other Churches are active. These reports also show that the Churches organized on the General Assembly's Plan accomplished one definite service for each nine of their total number of men. The Churches organized on the other plans report only one definite service for each 44 men. The Churches organized on the Assembly's Plan report training in personal work from 66 per cent of their total number. The Churches organized on other plans report training in personal work in 49 per cent of their number. Of the total number organized on the General Assembly's Plan one Church out of every ten reports definite outpost Sunday School work. Of the Churches organized on other plans definite outpost Sunday School work is reported by only one out of every 16 of their total number. It is interesting to note in this connection that a large percentage of the Churches organized on the General Assembly's Plan, but reporting no activities, do not use the Monthly Programs. While the active Churches organized on other plans

Until some Presbytery produces the actual figures to match here, Winchester Presbytery sets up the claim of leading, at close of the third quarter, all the Presbyteries of the Assembly in the promptness with which she has met and sent in her promises to benevolences.

We have a fine bunch of treasurers in the Presbytery and to their activity and fidelity a large measure of the credit for the above record is due.

report a number using our regular Monthly Programs.

A great deal of encouragement has been found in the contacts and observations of the year's work. Among the definite evidences of growth, a few things stand out convincingly. The foremost of these, and one that means much to the future of our Church, is the spiritual awakening and growth of men in Church where the Plans and Programs of the Assembly are fully set up and used by the Men-of-the-Church. Some of these Churches have been greatly surprised to see numbers of their men grow from timid and shrinking inactivity into helpers ready at any time to undertake whatever assignment the pastor may give them. They have seen men apparently indifferent to every call of the Church, and seldom at its services, become regular in Church going and eager soul-winners, ready to follow as the ways open and the Spirit leads. These men are daily finding more in Jesus to love, and more of desire to know him better.

A second matter, and almost equally far-reaching in the future of the Church, is the number of outpost Sabbath Schools conducted by the "Men-of-the-Church." Judging from what has been seen, we readily estimate enormous growth, if this type of work were established in every needy place in the territory served by our Church. Another like development is that of Cottage and Outpost prayer meetings. Churches are being organized in new fields, and long lines of new members are coming into our Churches where these forms of service are rendered by "The Men-of-the-Church?"

A third encouragement is found in the fact that pastors and men in a great number of our Churches testify to deeper spiritual interest manifest in larger pledges and contributions to the Church and its Benevolences, as a result of study and activity through Monthly Programs and Service Suggestions of "The Men-of-the-Church;" and another favorable revelation in similar vein is seen in the increased number of men reading the Church papers and studying the causes of the Church.

A fourth encouragement is in the almost universal interest in the Plans and Programs of "The Men-of-the-Church" among the pastors over the whole of the territory I have covered, and a growing recognition on their part of the inadequacy of other forms and plans of organization. Some of these have tried the Men-of-the-Church once and failed. Many of them have tried other plans and failed. All of them are coming to realize the value of a deeply spiritual Plan, one that teaches the full program of the Church with the appeal it makes to the whole man-power of the Church. Their former failures are being carefully reviewed in search for reasons for failure. Busy as all of them are, they are coming to see, in the possibilities dormant within the unused man-power of our Church, the urgent call to this greatest task of our Church, and are growing in their willingness to throw their strength and energy into this new call—the call to Reach and Teach and Lead and Use the men of our Church. The testimony as to results by pastors who have given themselves to this task, greatly enlarges the encouragement seen in this fourth source. Reward with large dividends, many of them say, has followed practically every such investment.

A fifth encouragement is in the enlarged call from Chairmen appointed by Presbyteries and Synods to head up Men's Work in their respective fields. There have been fully as many calls of this type as we have been able to care for. In this connection I may also refer to the increased number of Presbyteries and Synods giving space to definite reports and their discussion at regular stated meetings. Perhaps, in no other way is Men's Work getting more effectively into the attention and thought of the whole church. In most cases these Presbyteries and Synods are ready to have conferences and Schools of Methods, and a number of Churches are seeking literature and other help toward organization following every clear and full presentation Chairmen have made through such help as could be given them.

Better Stewardship ideas and practice; larger budgets, increased interest and knowledge of the great causes of the Church; better Church attendance; wiser use and distribution of finances; more attractive churches and grounds; a keener appreciation of the Church and its place among institutions; truer expressions of Christian living and fellowship; and a long list of similar developments, make up a most inspiring source of encouragement. A declaration of the pastor at Spruce Pine, N. C., is abundantly applicable in numbers of other Churches. He says, "My men think about the Church, pray about the Church, work for the Church, and more than all, they love it."

And for the last, I have reserved that which fills the measure of the ultimate test: Men are going out seeking the lost and winning them to Christ.

UP, MY HEART!

Walk in the light! In darkness there is fear;
The path is dim, and evil shapes appear.
Choose thou the sunshine, for it is thy right!
He knows no fear whose life is in the light.

Build on the heights! Below, in every breath,
Lurk germs of listlessness, disease and death.
Life-giving air, bright days, and starlight nights,
These are for him whose home is on the heights.

Live near to God! In Him is life and peace, Strength that endures, and joys that will not cease.
Full long thy feet the paths of doubt have trod;
Leave thy low life! Rise up, and live with God!

REDUCED RATES TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, MONTREAT, N. C.

May 16-23, 1929

The railroads have granted reduced rates to the General Assembly meeting at Montreat, N. C., May 16-23, on the following conditions:

1. The ROUND TRIP TICKET PLAN is to be used. The rate is one and one-half fare for the round trip, tickets to be purchased on the Identification Certificate Plan. It is necessary that the railroads be used instead of Bus Lines and Automobiles or Clergy Permit tickets in order to have at least 250 tickets purchased. Reduced rates on the railroads may not be available for future Assemblies if the Identification Certificate Tickets are not used this year.

2. The Stated Clerk of your Presbytery will give you an Identification Certificate duly signed which will enable you to buy the round trip ticket. You cannot purchase the ticket without this Identification Certificate. The Ticket Agent will take up this Certificate as his authority for selling you the round trip ticket. These tickets will be sold only to Commissioners, Assembly officials and members of their families.

3. The dates for the sale of these tickets will be May 13-18 inclusive.

4. The date for final return home will be May 29, tickets to be validated by regular ticket agents at Black Mountain before return journey is commenced.

5. A round trip ticket can be purchased on the Identification Certificate for one and three-fifths fare good for thirty days, selling dates the same as the other ticket.

6. The Railroads will furnish through Pullman cars to Black Mountain, N. C., from the following points: Richmond, Va., Atlanta, Ga., Memphis, Tenn., Dallas, Tex., and other points, provided as many as 20 or more make applications for reservations at these points.

7. You should consult your local Railroad Agent at once about your ticket and Pullman reservation. The Stated Clerk has no authority to select routes or say which way any Commissioner shall go, except that each one must travel the most direct route. For your information I am giving schedule which shows time of arrival at Black Mountain from principal junction points.

8. We must have at least 250 tickets purchased in this way in order to insure a continuation of this plan for another year. BOTH MINISTERS AND RULING ELDERS MUST use this plan.

J. D. Leslie,
Stated Clerk.

MINUTES OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

It has been my desire for sometime to increase the circulation of the Minutes of the General Assembly and the General Assembly Reports which is composed of the Annual Reports of all the Executive Committees. Three thousand copies of Minutes are printed and about 2600 are sent to Ministers and others, leaving about 400 to be sold. The most of these are sold.

It is my judgment that 300 or 400 more copies should be sold to members, elders, deacons and auxiliary societies. The desire for the information in the Minutes and in the volume of Reports is great. If pastors would mention this matter to their Churches and urge them to purchase copies, I rather think quite a number could be sold. If this is done and the order for Minutes at $1.00 and the volume of Reports at 50c per copy were sent me promptly I could mail the Minutes as soon as they come off the press. The volume of Reports is mailed by the Committee of Publication at Richmond, Va. I should have these ordered by the time the General Assembly meets. I am hoping that the number sold in this way shall be so large that in a year or two the price of the Minutes can be reduced to 75c per copy. Mr. R. E. Magill, Secretary of the Publication Committee, is anxious to have the circulation increased and approves of this method of getting the orders for them.

Order blanks will be available at the Assembly for the convenience of Lay Commissioners and visitors.

J. D. Leslie, Stated Clerk.

DR. CALDWELL IMPROVING

Mr. William Miller, treasurer of Union Seminary, Richmond, Va., reports that Dr. E. C. Caldwell's situation since his accident is improving. Mr. Miller says that Doctor Blanton, the attending physician, assures him that he is getting more comfortable; the fractures of the shoulder, wrist and knee have been reduced and there has been no indication of trouble from two slight fractures of the skull. He is making progress toward recovery and the doctors are very hopeful.

The Board of Trustees of the Seminary will meet on Tuesday, May 7, at Richmond.

HONOR ROLL GRANVILLE CHURCHES

The Tuesday Evening Session of Granville Presbytery, which met at Kenly, N. C., was in charge of the Committee on the Spiritual Life of the Churches. The Committee presented an Honor Roll of the Churches in Granville Presbytery that have had as many as ten or more additions upon Profession of Faith during the past year. The names were written upon a blackboard in front of the congregation and are as follows:

Raleigh, First, 98; Durham, First, 21; Spring Hill, 21; Mt. Pleasant, 17; Oakland, 14; First Vanguard, 14; Earnest Myatt, 12; Trinity Avenue, 11; Roxboro, 11; Smithfield, 10; Selma, 10.

The Raleigh First Church was especially commended for the large lead that it held over the other Churches of the Presbytery in the matter of additions upon Profession of Faith. Doctor White explained that about half of this number had come as a result of a very excellent evangelistic meeting that was held in the Church by Rev. Ernest Thacker.

It was discovered that all of the eleven Churches upon the Presbytery's Honor Roll had had evangelistic meetings during the past year with the exception of the Durham First Church. Doctor Scanlon stated that about half of the additions to that church had been as the result of a Communicant's Class that was held during the past year. He recommended the formation of classes for those considering joining the Church as an excellent preparation for church membership.

In some of the churches on the Honor Roll the evangelistic meeting held during the year had produced no visible results at the time of the meeting, but Mr. Landrum, pastor of the Spring Hill Church, which tied for the second place, stated that all of the 21 additions to that Church came as a result of an evangelistic meeting. This result was all the more interesting to the Presbytery since the meeting was conducted by the Church's own pastor, who was also the host of Presbytery. In tying with the Durham First Church for the second place on the honor roll it was made evident that the country churches can compare favorably with the city churches in this matter of soul winning.

Four of the Churches on the Honor Roll are distinctly country Churches. Three are located in small towns and four are located in Raleigh and Durham.

The leader of the discussion asked the pastors of a number of the Churches on the Honor Roll to tell the Presbytery what means God used most in giving the results shown in the report, and some very interesting and helpful talks were made. While recognizing the value of evangelistic meetings in most cases, all laid emphasis on the importance of the work of the Sunday School and of Sunday School teachers in soul-winning. A number of pastors mentioned specific and earnest prayer for individuals until they were won and a number told interesting incidents of their experiences in soul-winning. It was recognized that individual personal work, accompanied by prayer, is essential to winning men for Christ.

The total report for the Presbytery was 292 additions upon Profession of Faith for the past year. In addition to the eleven churches on the Honor Roll the following seven churches were given honorable mention as having from five to ten additions during the year: Gruver Memorial, White Oak, Progressive, Henderson, Blacknall Memorial, Varina and Fuller Memorial. There were four churches with three additions each during the year, three with two and six with one each. Ten or more Churches in the Presbytery reported no additions at all upon Profession of Faith during the past year.

While the total report for the year was not so good as is desired, it showed a gain of 101 over the report for the previous year.

Following the report and the discussion, prayers were offered for greater progress during the coming year and for success in this most vital of all of the Church's work.

It is hoped that other Presbyteries will publish the Honor Roll of their Churches in this matter of the number of professions, and that someone will follow the matter up by working out an Honor Roll of Presbyteries in regard to the number of additions upon Professions. The whole Church is called upon to be much in prayer over this subject during the coming year, so that we may not be barren nor unfruitful in the work of the Lord, but that we as a Church may have "souls for our hire."

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE, LEXINGTON PRESBYTERY Synod of Virginia

The Fifteenth Annual Sunday School Institute of Lexington Presbytery met at New Providence Church on April 2nd and 3rd. This is the largest annual gathering of the Presbytery.

Scores of Sunday School Workers' Conferences are held throughout the Presbytery in preparation for it. The whole Presbytery, including teachers, officers and pastors, are thoroughly aroused on the subject of Religious Education, and the Sunday School Institute is the climax of a three months' campaign.

Historic Church

The institute met in the old, historic New Providence Church, Rev. C. Morton Hanna, pastor. Dr. Archibald Alexander, founder of Princeton Theological Seminary, Dr. Samuel Brown and others, were members of this old church. Mary Moore, the captive of Abb's Valley, was the wife of Rev. Samuel Brown. Five of her seven sons entered the ministry. Mary Moore is buried in the grave yard of New Providence Church.

The new, commodious Sunday School plant, neatly furnished, was an object lesson to the delegates.

The hospitality of New Providence Church was unbounded. Everything that any one could imagine was done for the happiness and comfort of the guests. Among the persons named in the rising vote of thanks for their painstaking efforts in ministering to the comfort of the delegates were Mrs. Richard Hogs-head, the chairman of the entertainment committee, Miss Faith Thompson, chairman of the dinner committee, and Rev. C. Morton Hanna, pastor church.

Attendance

The attendance, as usual, was most gratifying as follows:

Number of schools represented, 84; minister present, 33; teachers present, 150; superintendent, 50; officers present, 28; attendance, 400; present at night service, 600.

One of the interesting features of the day was the awarding of twenty-eight banners to schools a grade of 100 per cent during the past year. These schools, namely, Buena Vista and Springs, have made this grade for a period of seven years and deserve special commendation.

High Lights of the Institute

The Institution closed in a grand climax address by Dr. Walter B. Greenway, former of Bethany Temple Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa. Among other things he said, "The which is not winning souls is either dead or He made a passionate appeal for personal gelism."

Rev. Robert W. Miles, pastor of the West Presbyterian Church, Lynchburg, Va., one of the interesting speakers in Virginia to young stated in his address on the Fifth Commandment that parents should give their children some honor. "Young peoples should profit by the experience of their elders. When love is in the heart, he said, "there is beauty and confidence."

Dr. J. J. Murray, of Lexington, Va., spoke the subject of Leadership Training, stated, other things, "An education without religion means cultivated skeptics. Religion without education just means people of emotional feelings. The only heaven today able to save the world from destruction. The business of the Sunday School is to teach. It has other high aims—evangelism, etc.—but the principal purpose of the School is teaching. The equipment of the teacher, said Dr. Murray, "has two parts: The training of the heart by the Spirit of God. The flow of will never rise any higher than the springs in your heart. The second part of the training is the training of the mind, the knowledge of your task. The training of the mind depends as much on God as the training of the heart. The grace of God will make you a good Christian, a good teacher. God will supplement this, will not replace hard work in the preparation of the task with the gift of grace." Dr. Murray said, "There are three elements in the training of the teacher. Know your message, Know your pupil. Know your technique. Why is a Sunday School teacher a camel?" asked Dr. Murray. "Because he carries a long load without knowing how dry he is. It costs a great deal of time and thought to go through teacher training courses and the study of you. It costs effort and time to have a close contact with the boys and girls in your class. It is worthwhile, because we are making Christ's character."

Dr. Marion McH. Hull, Superintendent of the Lexington School of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga., made an address on the "Importance of Bible Study," centering his remarks mainly on Twenty-third Psalm. His exposition of the psalm was unique and wonderfully helpful, making a profound impression.

Dr. F. E. Brininstool, Secretary of the West Virginia Council of Religious Education, Charleston, gave several fine addresses. Among other things he said, "Christ in God is the dynamic of the Kingdom of God. Education is the attempt to discover the dynamics of the universe. Christian education is the process of discovering God in all of His relations to man."

Among other speakers outside of the Presbytery was Rev. Wilbur M. Smith, of Covington, Va. He gave a most inspiring address on the text, "Thou shalt have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against God."

Inspiring echo meetings were held in many schools on the Sunday following the institute, carrying the messages to every part of the territory.

TSINKIANGPU GENERAL HOSPITAL,

"This work has simply bounded forward in a few weeks and the spring rush has not really yet. All available space in the large building, you remember, is packed with men, including rooms formerly a chapel and the section above the old operating room was. In addition, the woman's building is two-thirds full and the increasing daily and we did not expect to build for years.

"In order to care for the surplus of men in the Boys' School buildings and putting Azar patients over there. We never dreamed an increase as we are now having. Every room in the chapel is packed with people hearing the message and each afternoon the clinic chapel is also packed with clinic patients hearing the message. We are averaging selling 25 gospel tracts out there each afternoon in addition to giving several hundred tracts. The opportunity is unlimited."

WINGS OF EAGLES

The department of Christian Education of the Southern Presbyterian Church has prepared a splendid program on the needs of Christian Education of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

This program is one of the best I have ever seen and is being presented by every branch of our Church.

a Presbyterian Church will use this program the last Sunday in April.

we realize the aim we hope to attain in our School work I am sure many engaged in this could feel a keen disappointment should our teachers and officers fail to create in the some of the scholars of our schools a desire to devote their life to some Christian work.

It would hardly be fair to our church if we are turning young people to a decision for Christianity and turning them over to our church to aid them in preparing themselves for Christian life when we have had little or no part in creating with which to make their education possible. We are sure that every school which has a part in creating and for Christian Education and Ministerial will not only strive to prepare young people for the Sunday School to avail themselves of which their school has helped to provide, but to receive God's blessings on the part the Sunday School has had in taking care of our aged members and their families who have given their lives to His work.

I earnestly hoped that as many of our Sunday School as possible will make a special effort and have a part in this most important branch of our work.

J. S. Kuykendall,
Superintendent Reynolda Sunday School.

NORTH CAROLINA

Creek—Our call to Mr. Leroy P. Burney of Columbia Seminary, Decatur, Ga., has been accepted and Mr. and Mrs. Burney expect to begin work with us about June 1. Mr. Burney will be installed at the same time. The manse made ready for their occupancy. We are looking forward to their coming.

Our supply pastor, Rev. J. G. Garth, one of the editors of the Presbyterian Standard, will conduct the services on next Friday, and the communion on Saturday. Mr. Garth has been serving us since October, 1927, which will make a term of 21 months. The congregation has appreciated his services, and he has done us as much time as possible in his numerous services, visiting the sick, burying the young couples of the church, and otherwise directing the affairs of the church.

The burial committee has cleaned the cemetery near the church, and placed a new fence around it, and new walkways and walks. The cemetery has been improved also. Any persons interested in this old ground are invited to share in the expense of recent improvements, and may send the same to Neal, Jr., Charlotte, N. C.

Hopewell—This Church has been supplied with the Bibles and hymns, the gift of Miss Sallie Davidson.

Officers and teachers of the Sabbath School installed April 14. Plans have been laid for a new school of the all-Bible type, also, it is hoped, a new singing school. The Woman's Auxiliary has been reorganized with eight circles instead of five. Mrs. Joe Davidson is president.

Our Sabbath Dr. Somerville presented Queens Campaign, and Mrs. Davidson at once had eight in the field. The church reported 250 members, and a total expenditure for the year of $1,200, including the cost of many improvements. Dr. McLarty, of the Hawthorne Lane Methodist Church is expected to preach the Long Creek sermon, April 21, 3:30 p. m. The morning service at Hopewell is to be by the Rev. J. Ranson, formerly to India, A. R. P.

Presbyterian Orphans' Home, Barium Springs — The Easter service at Little Joe's Church was conducted by Mr. George Howard of Salisbury. The Sunday in April we had Dr. Archibald Currie of the University College to preach for us. Both these men are well known among our people, and we have had assurance of having them speak to us a number of times. We are thankful to report that our beloved Rev. W. C. Brown, continues to improve and strengthen.

The pulpits at Little Joe's Church were supplied the last Sunday in April by a deputation from Davidson College. Y. M. C. A. Mr. Monroe Gilmour of the class brought the message, and was assisted by Mr. Christenbury of the class of 30. Young Mr. Gilmour is the son of Dr. Gilmour of Wilmington. The message was along the line of selecting the best life, and was especially fitting for the young members of our congregation. He is a fluent and strong speaker and made a splendid impression on all who heard him. We are always delighted to have young men. The mid-week prayer service for the past two weeks has been conducted by Dr. Eller of the First Baptist Church, Statesville, and Rev. J. L. Mans of Old Prospect Church near Mooresville.

Wilmington—The First Church had a fine program of Easter music with a cantata in the evening, "The Last Words of Christ," which was rendered in solo duets and choruses in a wonderful way. We have moved into our new church in about three weeks.

Nashville Presbytery, which consists of representatives from more than forty Presbyterian churches, met in the Presbyterian church of Kenly on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

Rev. Ben R. Lacy, D.D., was elected moderator of the meeting and Rev. Chester Alexander, permanent clerk. A popular meeting in the interest of evangelism was held on Tuesday night and a communion service and doctrinal sermon were the order of the day for Wednesday night. One of the important things discussed at Presbytery was the proposal for union with the United Presbyterian Church. Presbytery voted in favor of this union, but a majority of presbyteries must favor such a step before it can be consummated. Dr. D. H. Scanlon, of Durham, spoke strongly in favor of the proposed union. Dr. Lacy preached the devotional sermon on Wednesday evening on "Immortality of the Soul" and his sermon was well received by a large audience.

At the request of Elder K. G. Hudson, the retiring Moderator, Rev. W. Mc. White, D.D., preached the opening sermon.

Rev. A. G. Link of Nashville Presbytery was received and elected to the office of Superintendent of Presbytery's Home Missions, succeeding Rev. J. H. Gruver, resigned.

Presbytery endorsed "The Ministers' Annuity Fund" and appointed a special committee on this fund of which Rev. D. H. Scanlon, D.D., is chairman.

Blacknall Memorial Church was chosen as place for the next stated meeting. The time of this meeting is October 22, 1929, at 11 o'clock, a. m.

The ladies of the church served most excellent dinners in the Sunday school rooms each day. Many visitors were present to enjoy the hospitality of the Kenly church, of which Rev. C. Logan Landrum is pastor.

J. S. Kennison, S. C.

Mecklenburg Presbytery met in 119th regular session at Steele Creek Church April 9-11. The church royally entertained the body, having dinner in the club room of the church each day. About 100 ministers and elders were present. Rev. W. H. Frazer, president of Queens College was chosen moderator, and Rev. C. G. Long, temporary clerk.

Reports showed the membership of the 94 churches had increased to over 16,000. Four new ministers were added to the roll, Rev. A. T. Taylor from Asheville Presbytery, and three candidates were licensed, M. B. Prince, J. S. McFall and W. C. Cooper, from Columbia Seminary. These young men will be ordained this spring and will take charge of the following groups respectively: M. B. Prince, Peachland and Polkton, J. S. McFall, Morven, Lilesville and Camden, W. C. Cooper, Oakboro, Stanfield and Locust. Mr. Taylor has Marston, Mark's Creek, McLean's Memorial and Rourk's Chapel. Rev. J. B. Reily will be received at the adjourned meeting May 6. He is already working at Roberdell, Cameronian, Midway and Brainard. Brainard will entertain the fall meeting on October 22.

The Home Mission Committee reported great progress in the churches, with practically all the fields occupied.

Benevolence to all the causes was $197,111, which was only $886 short of the apportionment. In view of the financial stringency of the past year this is regarded as a remarkable record, and reflects credit on our Stewardship Committee as well as the churches.

Queens Campaign was announced to begin April 14, when ministers will present the endowment of $200,000, so as to assure the institution of the standing as a A grade college for women.

Presbytery postponed to May 6 the business of the Annuity Fund and the union with the United Presbyterians. Also action on the Albemarle School.

Ten representatives were elected to the Assembly. Their names will appear in the lists to be published.

Marion—Dr. J. E. Flowe conducted a week's meeting in the First Church, March 31. Seldom has it been the privilege of our people to hear such a clear, forceful presentation of the Gospel as preached by Dr. Flowe.

Many remarked about his faithfulness in presenting the plan of salvation. Our people were greatly edified and strengthened. There were several professions of faith and many reconsecrations. An offering for the home mission work at Concord Presbytery was made amounting to $44.

The First Church this year has contributed almost $10,000 for all purposes. The church debt is being steadily reduced, more than $30,000 having been paid on the church debt within the past six years. The report of the Sabbath School, the Christian Endeavor, and Woman's Auxiliary to Presbytery is very encouraging. The new church year is full of promise and hope of a better year's work than the past.

Laurel Hill—The choir of the Church in the Pines presented the cantata, "The Thorn-crowned King," by Fred B. Holton, at the Sunday evening service as a special Easter program. It was a most excellent and creditable exercise, and was largely attended. A number of people from Laurinburg and other towns were attracted by the occasion.

The church was beautifully decorated and the Easter spirit was dominant throughout the program.

Marston—This group of churches, including Mark's Creek, McLean's Memorial, Rourk's Chapel and Marston have extended a call to Rev. A. T. Taylor, of Hazelwood, N. C. The call has been accepted and the people are looking forward to having Mr. and Mrs. Taylor in their midst. This field has been without a pastor since last September.

APPALACHIA

Hendersonville — This church reports forty-nine new members received during the past year, twenty-nine of these on profession of faith in Jesus Christ.

The construction of the new Sunday School building is well under way. It will be known as "The James Adger Smyth Memorial Sunday School Building." Mr. Smyth was an honored and faithful and consecrated elder of this Church and a superintendent of its Sunday School.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Columbia, Shandon — With simple and impressive exercises, the cornerstone of the new Shandon Presbyterian Church was laid Sunday, April 14.

The principal address was delivered by the Rev. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., pastor of the First Church; the Rev. F. R. Riddle, pastor of the Church presided and a short statement was made by R. F. Deschamps, chairman of the building committee.

In the cornerstone was placed a list of the charter members of the congregation; brief histories of the Church, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Sunday School and the Christian Endeavor Society; also a list of the members of the present congregation; names of the members of the session and of the board of deacons, both when the Church was organized and at the present time; a Bible and parts of copies of the two daily papers of Columbia.

The first service in the church, not yet ready for occupancy, will be held on the first Sunday in May.

The new church building cost about $60,000, which figure does not include the cost of pews nor of the organ now being installed. The church has a resident membership of 368 and a total membership of 421. The Sunday School, of which W. A. Harrison is superintendent, has an enrollment of 300.

The congregation's present place of worship was erected in 1916. The congregation was organized by the Rev. R. B. Grinnan, who was pastor of the Woodrow Memorial Church. The first regular pastor of the Shandon Church was the Rev. W. S. Harden who served from October, 1916, to April, 1923.

APPALACHIA

Cedar Springs, Tenn.—This church recently extended a most hearty and unanimous call to the Rev. M. L. Clemens, student pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, to become their pastor. Mr. Clemens has indicated his purpose to accept this call subject to the approval of Knoxville Presbytery and will assume responsibility for the pastorate on April 1st. He will serve Cedar Springs for one-half his time and will serve the remaining two Sundays in nearby churches under the direction of Presbytery's Home Mission Committee.

OKLAHOMA

Duncan—Rev. William Rolle, D.D., superintendent of Home Missions in the Synod of Oklahoma assisted the pastor of the Duncan Presbyterian Church in a revival meeting during February. Usually this month is a bright and bracing month in southwestern Oklahoma. However this meeting met with snow and freezing weather during the whole period. It put the membership to the test and many of them to their great advantage met the test heroically. Eight members were received into the church. Six on confession and two by letter. The church was wonderfully blessed by the strong sermons and the amiable personality of the evangelist. Since the closing of the meeting the night congregations have increased and a junior choir has been organized. For two weeks before the meeting Miss Dorothy Fincher in a winsome way prepared the church by visitation and neighborhood prayer meetings.

KENTUCKY

Stuart Robinson School, Blackey—On Sunday evening, March 24, a revival meeting was begun at Stuart Robinson School, services being held in the chapel twice daily by Rev. H. L. Cockerham, pastor of the Blackey Presbyterian Church. Then plain, heart-searching gospel messages presented by Mr. Cockerham could not but make a lasting impression upon the minds of his hearers. Throughout the week a deep spiritual interest was manifested by our young people and this grew in intensity until the closing service on the evening of March 31, conversions occurring almost every day. As a result of this series of services eighteen of our boys and girls made profession of their faith in Jesus Christ and after the ordinance of baptism had been administered to them they were received into the Presbyterian Church. Two other students and the heads of a neighboring family were received from other churches, making a total of twenty-two accessions. Just previous to this meeting two little girls from one of our extension Sunday Schools came into the Presbyterian Church upon profession of their faith in Christ. Our hearts are full of praise and thanksgiving to the great Head of the Church for these visible results of our work.

Mr. I. T. Axton has made it possible for us to put down the concrete floor in the basement of our gymnasium. This generous gift of Mr. Axton's is going to mean much to the improvement and progress of our work, relieving the rather crowded condition which now exists. When this basement is completed it will provide space for the clothing sales, the boy's industrial work and the Home Economics department for the girls. An interesting feature is that the labor is being done in a very efficient way by our own boys.

THE PARACHUTE DROP

Ted Morgan heard that they wanted a boy out at the airport, but when he got out there he learned that what they really wanted was an aviator. But while he was near the office, he decided to go in and see the Major about being a pilot. As he stood in front of the tall, square-shouldered man who was the commander of the airport, he felt more than ever that he had to be a man of the air.

"You're only a boy," said Major Stearns. "Yet you want to be an aviator?"

"Yes, sir," answered Ted.

"Think you've got the spunk?" asked the Major.

"I think so," was the reply.

"Everybody thinks so," responded the Major.

"Before I let any boy come to this airport to study aviation, I always make sure. And I have a way of finding out. Would you like me to test you?"

"Yes, sir," answered Ted, wonderingly.

"Then come outside with me and put on a helmet and a parachute. We're going up into the air for a trial spin."

Ted did as he was told, and as soon as he was ready, the Major strapped him in the cockpit of a plane and started out for the clouds. They climbed steadily until the plane was about ten thousand feet above the airport. Then, without any warning, the aviator at the controls threw the plane into a tail spin, which is the most dangerous of all tricks in stunt flying.

At five thousand feet, the Major brought the plane out of the stunt and put her on an even keel. Turning to Ted, he asked:

"Were you scared?"

Ted nodded.

"You bet I was."

"Honest boy," thought the Major, approvingly. "That's point number one in his favor. Who wouldn't be afraid?"

Aloud he asked:

"What did you do?"

"I watched you," was Ted's answer. "Point number two," thought the aviator, as he began to climb up into the clouds again. "This boy looks like good material."

Ten thousand feet seemed to be the Major's favorite altitude, for at that level he straightened the plane out again and turned once more toward the boy he was "testing."

"If anything happens, and you have to use the parachute," he instructed. "Don't forget to wait until you are clear of the plane before you release the catch."

"Yes, sir," replied Ted. "I understand about that."

"I'm not going to do any more stunts, so you can unstrap yourself from the seat."

While Ted unbuckled and cast off the straps, the Major watched him carefully. If there was any nervousness in Ted's behavior, the expert airman could not detect it.

"Climb out on the wing," was the next command.

Ted Morgan looked at the pilot to see if he were in earnest. In answer, Major Stearns repeated his order.

"Don't do it if you don't want to," he added. "After all, this is just a test to determine whether you will ever feel at home in the air."

For a moment, Ted was undecided. Then, carefully testing his grips and his footholds, he swung himself up between the singing wires of the wing framework. Then he looked back for instructions.

"What would you do if the plane suddenly got out of control?" shouted the Major.

Ted looked at the distant earth beneath him. He was over a flat section of the country, with a river winding through to the sea.

"I'd jump!" he answered.

"Then jump! And if you still want to be an aviator when you reach the ground, come back to the airport and walk in my office without knocking."

And with these final words, the Major turned all his attention to the business of flying. For another moment Ted hesitated, hoping that the aviator was jesting, and that soon he would retract his orders. But Major Stearns ignored him completely. It was to do or not to do; and with that limited choice, Ted Morgan made his decision. Clutching the rope by which the para-

Here is a picture of Susie May's Grandma and Susie May's Grandpa, too. Grandma's hair was YELLOW and Grandpa's was BROWN. Grandma wore a RED bonnet with a GRAY (use BLACK lightly) ruffle about her face and RED ribbons to tie under her chin. Her coat was RED, too with a cape of GRAY to match the ruffle on her bonnet. Her slippers were BLACK and her socks were PINK (use RED lightly). Grandpa's suit was bright BLUE and so were his cap and his socks. His cap had a RED ball at the top and his tie was RED too, so were the buttons down the front of his blouse and his belt. His slippers were BROWN like Rover, his Chesapeake Bay hound. Rover would fetch sticks for Grandpa when Grandpa tossed the YELLOW chute was released, he closed his eyes and jumped off into space!

He fell for a thousand feet before he gave the jerk and let a long thin column of white cloth rise from his shoulders like heavy smoke from a fire. He felt the drag at once, and in a few minutes was infinitely relieved to hear the cloth snap open like an umbrella, and to feel himself floating in the air as though supported by the most comfortable of cushions.

He dropped to earth in an awkward heap, but did not hurt himself excepting for a few scratches which he got when he was dragged along the ground four or five feet by the falling parachute, which in its turn was being dragged along by the wind. Ted freed himself almost at once, however, and bundling up the parachute as best he could, set out for a farmhouse which he saw in the distance. There the farmer's wife gave him milk and bread, and told him the way back to the airport.

"So you did come back, after all?" exclaimed the Major, as Ted walked into his office three hours later.

"Yes, sir."

"How far did you have to come?"

"Nine miles, sir."

"By trolley?"

"No, sir. I was on the back road and had to walk."

"How did you get the parachute in?"

"I carried it on my back, sir."

"Umm! Well, let's see. Three out of every five boys whom I test are still holding on to the wires when I land the plane fifteen minutes later. They get sent home. The other two jump. One of them comes back to the airport, and I start him in cleaning the aerodrome and polishing the brass. The one who doesn't come back just disappears. I never hear of him again, excepting to find out that he landed safely and ran home at once. But you are the first boy who has ever brought back the parachute."

For a moment the Major was silent. Then, with the trace of a smile on his lips, he said:

"So I'm going to start you in at once with the real thing."

Ted put out his hand and took a typewritten sheet of paper offered to him by the Major. On it were Ted Morgan's first orders from the Flying Service of the United States. They read:

"You are to report at once to the Commander of the Pocono Airport for special instruction as an officer of the flying corps."

"The Commander of the Pocono Airport," said Major Stearns. "That means me. And as for you, you have just completed your first lesson, and so far, your mark is one hundred per cent."

WHAT IT COST
Myra A. Wingate

"The honor lists are out. Posted on the bulletin board in the main corridor! Team lists; too. Basketball, tennis, and debating!"

The news flashed from room to room of the State Normal dormitory, through classrooms, and over campus and playground. Pushing, crowding, laughing, the girls came to see. Here and there was an anxious face in the crowd, here and there a reckless toss of the head, but most of the girls were frankly eager and hopeful.

It was the custom at State Normal to publish at the end of each term lists of those who had won honors in scholarship and debating and of those who were entitled to wear for the next term the letters showing athletic excellence.

"Hi, Teddy!" cried Polly Shea, reaching back from the front rank to drag up beside her, the tall, good-looking girl whose bronze-red hair showed above the other heads about her. "Teddy Clay! First on the scholarship list and heads the basketball team! Stand up, my blushing young friend, and receive the plaudits of the multitude!"

"Oh, hush, Polly, please!" begged Teddy, blushing in good earnest. "Whether we do well or not, somebody pays and that's a sobering thought for a giddy head. O—oh! I don't see Jinny Wheeler's name on the basketball list."

"And Jinny Wheeler being right behind you, that double-barrelled remark was no doubt intended for her ears," said a third voice tartly.

"It's just like this, Teddy Clay. Her scholarship didn't warrant it. More than that, she's having one grand time at Normal, and means to keep on having it. These years are mine to spend as I please, and my good time doesn't cost anyone anything."

"D—doesn't it?" stammered Teddy. "Oh, Jinny, I'm sorry. I didn't mean what I said as it sounded to you. I was only surprised and sorry that we'd lost you from the team when we need you so in the big game. Truly, Jinny."

Declining the apology with a shake of the head, Jinny turned unforgivingly away.

"Never mind, Teddy," Polly caught her dismayed classmate by the arm. "Forget it. Walk right up, ladies—behold the famous paid, head of the list, Teddy Clay—foot of the list, Polly Shea—and it's lucky she is to be there."

Laughter and applause attested the popularity of the two. Teddy gave Polly a despairing shake and fled, followed by a long State Normal cheer, to take refuge in the library where her duties as assistant called her.

Jinny stalked moodily across the snowy campus, a sullen cloud on her usually sunny face. Being dropped from the basketball team did cut her pride and dim her pleasure, but that would pass. There were many things to enjoy besides basketball. What really rankled was the idea that she did not have a perfect right to rollick through her school days if she chose. Time enough to set standards and bring herself up to them when she was older. Scholarship involved too much effort.

"I beg your pardon," said a pleasant, slightly-anxious voice.

Jinny stopped quickly. She had just time to decide that the sweet face framed in waving dark hair threaded with gray was most attractive before the lady continued:

"I wonder if you could help me. My daughter, Theodore Clay, is a student here. Could you tell me where I might find her? I went to the dormitory but she was not there."

It was not in Jinny to be discourteous to an older person.

"Surely," she answered promptly, "There is the main entrance. Teddy was in the corridor near it, less than five minutes ago. Here is Mary Jaques, going your way. This is Teddy Clay's mother, Mary. Will you pilot her to the Assembly Hall and help her find Teddy? You're welcome, Mrs. Clay. No trouble at all."

"Pretty, isn't she?" said Clara Jones, joining Jinny on the cement walk. "She and Teddy are going to have a little home here and Mrs. Clay means to do dress-making while Teddy is in school."

So that was why Teddy thought she had to make top rank Jinny stood considering. There was something in the idea after all, but of course it did not apply to her. Her mother wasn't pricking her fingers and paying out money on her daughter's account—though of course if grandfather hadn't thought of her education and left a sum especially for it—money wasn't always too plentiful in the Wheeler family—pshaw! She was chairman of the class supper committee and couldn't idle along thinking of anything so unimportant. She turned and hurried back with Cora to meet her committee in one of the classrooms.

Jinny couldn't play at the big game, but she could and did act as cheer leader and whip the school to such a pitch of enthusiasm that they cheered their team to victory.

She couldn't make the tennis team, but she played innumerable games for sheer love and sport, and grew brown and lithe and strong the while her weekly average dropped lower and lower. Once it started on the down grade, fun-loving Jinny found it easy to let it go while she followed livelier pursuits.

The end of the year found her actually conditioned in two subjects, which occasioned her but slight uneasiness.

Teddy Clay had sought her out and attempted an explanation of that unfortunate remark. Jinny listened politely, but answered coldly:

"It probably is as you say, but in any case we don't agree, so let's not pretend."

Mrs. Clay listened sympathetically to Teddy's dejected account of her failure.

"I believe it will work out right yet, Teddy," she insisted. "Jinny was angry with you when she met me, yet she spoke pleasantly of you and was careful to be courteous to me. I'm sure she is sound at heart, so don't lose hope."

Thus matters stood at the end of the school year. Teddy and her mother were remaining in the little home they had made, Mrs. Clay to continue her dress-making while Teddy acted as assistant in the village library for the summer months.

Jinny also lived in town, and Teddy often saw her speeding by in the battered runabout she was allowed to use. Their meetings and greetings were so few that Jinny was surprised to be signaled by Teddy when she passed the library one morning. She immediately stopped at the curb, her surprise plainly written on her face.

"This little book," explained Teddy, "came with some others that your mother donated to the library shelves a few days ago. It's a sort of diary. I think it may be valuable to your family and perhaps was sent by mistake. Would you mind taking it along to ask your mother about it?"

Jinny took the book and turned it over curiously. It was bound in some sort of roughly tanned hide, and its pages were stained and yellow with age, the writing faded but still legible.

"Mahala and Icabod Wheeler, their book," read Jinny. "Why, those were my great-great grandparents' names. I have never seen this but it must be something my father would want to keep. Thank you."

She hardened her heart to the appeal in the other girl's eyes and sat still looking through the pages, while Teddy turned away.

The date at the top of the first page was 1760. Why that was the year that great-great grandfather Wheeler had built the first log cabin at the top of Wheeler Hill! With a sudden impulse, Jinny turned the car and went whizzing along Main Street and up, up, up to the top of Wheeler Hill. She parked her car by the roadside, plunged through a fringe of bushes and came out into the open field. Here an old cellar hole, hollow, marked the site of the first Wheeler home, now scarcely more than a grassy wall.

Sitting on the grassy wall, Jinny read Mahala Wheeler's slanting lines. She was only a young girl-bride when she and great-great grandfather came into this unsettled land "to secure" she quaintly wrote, "a home for ourselves and our descendants."

Jinny's breath came shorter and her cheeks grew pink as she read the short paragraphs that told of the struggle to wrest a living from the forest, clearing, burning, building, hunting, trapping, planting, spinning, weaving, cooking at the fireplace.

She read of wolves howling in the forest at night, of bears that prowled the clearing by day, of the terrible sickness that fell upon the settlers, of the dearth of food that followed when great-great grandmother, herself, was so weak that she could hardly stand, had saved the lives of all the families by going into the woods and shooting a deer which served them until the men were strong again. All this to secure "a home for their descendants."

Cheerfully they had given up to the purpose everything that Jinny thought made life worth living.

Her eyes traveled down the slope of the great valley and across the opposite hill. As far as she could see, the land had once been Wheeler land, divided and sub-divided among the many descendants. She saw her own comfortable home, surrounded by orchards and green fields made smooth and productive by the hard work of four generations of Wheelers.

"And I said," she marvelled, "that my education didn't cost anyone anything! I hate like poison to eat my words to Teddy Clay but it looks as if she was right."

She cupped her chin in her palms and scowled intently down the stubby field where the track of the mowing machine still showed.

"No other way," she said dismally, at last. "It must be done."

Teddy was alone in the library. It was so nearly closing time that she was surprised to hear footsteps on the walk leading from the street, and still more surprised when Jinny Wheeler appeared in the open door.

Jinny walked straight up to the desk and laid the scuffed and faded little book before the young assistant.

"I take it all back, Teddy," she said. "My chance at education cost someone a lot. I found it out from this diary. I'll be back on the team next year, now mark my word. And that," she added with a wry face, "means work off those conditions this summer."

"Oh, yes, I know you'd like to help me," she went on, reading the eagerness in Teddy's eyes. "But I'm going to do this myself. The only thing you can do for me is to let me make an appointment to see you at the library every forenoon. If I know someone expects me, that will hold me to it, don't you see?"

Teddy laughed for sheer gladness. "Of course. There are always vacant chairs here. Your appointment is at ten, Miss Wheeler. Now, do something for me, please. Mother and I have a special supper planned because it's my birthday. Come and share it with us."

"Sure your mother wouldn't mind?" asked Jinny. "I'll come with pleasure. Tell you, Teddy," she continued with a twinkle. "I may never crowd you for first place on the honor list, but I feel it in my bones that Polly Shea is going to have a hard time to keep her place at the foot."—The Leader.

THE USE OF LEISURE HOURS

A mother recently wrote Dr. S. Parkes Cadman as follows:

"Can you tell an anxious mother what to do for her children's leisure hours? Mine are all right as yet, but the way some older youngsters spend their spare time makes me concerned for two girls and a boy who are now in their early teens. Isn't work a good thing? Keeping them busy keeps them out of mischief."

"Do not needlessly disquiet yourself," Dr. Cadman replied. "You will be wise not to insist too strongly that the discipline of time-consuming work is the best remedy for social evils or for the insurance of your children's safety."

"This theory was preached when I

PRESCRIPTION
HE WROTE IN 1892

Dr. Caldwell started to practice in 1875, the needs for a medicine were not as great as today. He led normal lives, ate plain food, and got plenty of fresh air. He even that early there were medicines and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did were good for human beings. His prescription for constipation that he used in his practice, and which is sold in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a vegetable remedy, intended for children and elderly people, is just such a mild, safe, and pleasant.

This prescription has proven its worth by the largest selling liquid medicine. It has won the confidence of the world. It is needed to get relief from biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad digestion, colds, fevers. At your doctor's or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for free.

was young, and its practice mutilated countless lives. It is as old as the moralists of Rome, one of whose emperors declared, 'a man ought to die standing.'

"Yet no nation needs to study the wise use of leisure more than our own. Your two girls and boy, and anybody else's children, for that matter, cannot attain the fullness of their powers without interludes freed from the demands of their daily routine. If this is conceded, is not Dean Inge quite right in his assertion that how to employ spare time profitably is no doubt a harder problem than the best use of our working hours? I think so, and I further believe the problem can be measurably solved by teaching youngsters to multiply their gainful interests. Body, mind and spirit should have pursuits subordinate to our primary activities and so contributory to their efficiency.

"To be concrete, does the boy feel any relish for nature, or do the girls care for art in any of its manifold forms? If so, the gates of opportunity are wide open to them. Let them select what they will in any of these realms, so long as what they choose broadens their sympathies, puts a keener edge on their humane desires, and makes them more responsive to the beauty and the wonder of the world. Bid them turn on full steam and go ahead. You, too, will find great joy in their enthusiasm for such ventures."

—From Playground and Recreation Association of America.

THE HORSE AND ITS NAME

A large perissodactyl ungulate mammal, says the scientist—most of us call it a horse. Perissodactyl means having an odd number of toes unevenly developed. Ungulate means that the animal has hoofs.

The horse has been domesticated by man from prehistoric times, and is no longer believed to exist in a truly wild state. So called wild horses are runaways from domestication. Because of its antiquity, the name of the horse is wide-spread—its Anglo-Saxon form has various counterparts in several European languages. For this reason, also, the horse has had a large influence on the English language in a variety of ways.

For example, whenever we wish to say, "That is a different matter altogether," we find a ready figurative phrase in, "That's a horse of another color."

Another expression is "a horse on one," meaning a turn of fortune against one, especially a joke or trick at one's expense. This saying may be compared to "horse and horse," a form of gaming, says Webster's New International Dictionary, particularly the throwing of dice. The winner is required to win a certain number of rounds. When both players have the same number to their credit, the game is said to stand "horse and horse."

Horse, as an adjective, often means large or coarse. This use is familiar in such combinations as horse balm, horse mackerel, horse bean, horse mussel, and horse nettle. The "large and coarse" significance is particularly forceful in the two words horselaugh and horseplay. The first is a loud, boisterous laugh; the second is rude, noisy play.

Everyday speech utilizes the well known "horse sense" to mean that common sense which is required for practical daily living. A man must have horse sense, or he simply cannot get along in life.

Approval

"Do you think they approved of my sermon?" asked the newly appointed vicar, hopeful that he had made a good impression.

"Yes, I think so," replied his wife; they were all nodding." — Christian Register.

The schoolmaster had just met little Leslie, whom he very much wanted to see.

"I am writing to your father, my boy," began the schoolmaster. "Now, what is his Christian name?"

"Daddie," replied the small boy.

Leslie thought quickly for a moment or two, and then he looked up at the kindly face above him.

"She doesn't call him anything," he answered proudly. "She likes him."

Mrs. Ramsay to Head Mitchell College

Former President of Synodical Has Accepted the Presidency of Girls' School at Statesville

Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, of Hickory, N. C., has been elected president of Mitchell College, located at Statesville, N. C., succeeding Rev. G. H. Elmore, who recently resigned.

The formal announcement, made by Rev. C. M. Richards, D.D., of Davidson, N. C., Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Mitchell College, says that "the trustees of Mitchell College are greatly pleased to be able to announce to the friends of the college and the public generally that Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, of Hickory, has been elected president of Mitchell College and that she has accepted the position.

"Her term of office begins June 1, 1929, but she will at once take up the matter of securing a faculty for the coming year and making plans for the future of the college."

Among the four schools for girls supported by the Synod of North Carolina, Mitchell College will have the distinction of being the only one headed by a woman.

Mrs. Ramsay is a native of Mecklenburg County, N. C., daughter of Rev. A. G. Kirkpatrick, who did noted work as an educator during the reconstruction period. He mother is Mrs. Lizzie Gary Kirkpatrick, a descendant of Adam Alexander, a signer of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

She is an honor graduate of Winthrop College, and was professor of mathematics in the Woman's College, of Due West, 1904 to 1907, and in 1907 to 1908 was dean of Claremont College (now merged into Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C.). In 1908, she was married to Dr. W. B. Ramsay, making her home in Hickory until Dr. Ramsay's death in 1924.

Mrs. Ramsay is best known in the State through her leadership in the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church. For five years she served as president of Concord Presbyterial Auxiliary and in 1915 to 1920 was president of the Synodical Auxiliary. Mrs. Ramsay's leadership brought both these woman's organizations out of a more or less chaotic condition up to a high degree of efficiency.

Business Men's Clubs to Meet

State Associations Will Hold Annual Conventions

The Association of Business Men's Evangelistic Clubs are holding two state conventions this month. The South Carolina Convention met in Columbia, April 20-21. North Carolina will hold its meeting at Winston-Salem, April 26-28. A recent bulletin issued by the headquarters of this association at Atlanta gives the following statement:

The request has been made that the early history of the Club Movement be printed in the Bulletin and in response a short resume follows:

During the Fall of 1917, after an evangelistic campaign in Atlanta, under the leadership of Billy Sunday, a group of the workers of that meeting, with other interested laymen, decided to organize themselves into a Club that they might perpetuate the work they had been privileged to enjoy during this series of services, M. M. Davies was made president.

Object of the club: "To lead men to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ and to enlist them in Christian activity."

In 1921 the Atlanta Club sent out invitations to other similar clubs, many of which had been organized by the Atlanta Club, to meet in Atlanta October 22-23 for the purpose of organizing an Association of clubs. Nineteen clubs representing seven states sent delegates to this meeting, and thus was launched the Association of Business Men's Evangelistic Clubs that has been so richly used of the Lord. Fred L. Willis of Atlanta, was made president. Subsequent conventions with their presidents have been held as follows:

Signal Mountain, Tenn., 1922, Fred L. Willis, Atlanta, Ga.; Columbia, S. C., 1923, Alex Long, Rock Hill, S. C.; Columbus, Ga., 1924, M. L. Thrower, Atlanta, Ga.; Charlotte, N. C., 1925, M. L. Thrower, Atlanta, Ga.; Atlanta, Ga., 1926, M. L. Thrower, Ga.; Blue Ridge, N. C., 1927, C. M. Norfleet, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Blue Ridge, N. C., 1928, C. M. Norfleet, Winston-Salem, N. C.

We are now organized in eight of the Southeastern States, and through the years these Clubs have served in churches, camps, homes, prisons, tents, and sought through individuals to individuals to win the lost to Christ. God has richly rewarded this service by turning thousands to the Lord.

The clubs are interdenominational and any layman may become a member who belongs to an evangelical church, and who will enter into obligations to (1) perform any assignment made by the club and (2) to seek opportunities to lead others to Christ.

A complete story of the Club Movement could not be written without recounting the individual activity of some of the pioneers in the work. How they have given themselves, their time and their money, that they might honor the Lord. Men who had faith and vision, and the courage to "Launch out into the deep" as "fishers of men," but these have served that they might glorify Christ and He will write their names and their deeds in the Glory Land.

The following are officers of the Association of Business Men's Evangelistic Clubs, April 12, 1929: C. M. Norfleet, President, Box 850, Winston-Salem, N. C.; W. H. Stansell, Richmond, and O. C. Holland, Montgomery, Vice-Presidents; and James Morton, Secretary-Treasurer, 609 Thrower Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

A former radio teacher, Rev. Harold L. Lundquist, of the Institute faculty, will be back on the air Tuesday afternoons at 3 o'clock, beginning May 7, with a series of studies of high value and interest on "The Bible Doctrine of Faith."

The usual enrollment plan will be observed, a remittance of one dollar for each subject chosen, which entitles the student to a printed outline of studies, an examination and certificate of the Radio School of the Bible when the subject is successfully concluded.

Those who are not able to enroll are cordially invited to set their dials at the WMBI wave length and derive as much good from the courses as possible.

MONTREAT CONFERENCES FOR SUMMER ANNOUNCED

Auditorium, community singing will have no small place in the program of this next season. We confidently look forward to another fine summer of music at Montreat.

The Young People's Clubs

That young people have a large place in the life of Montreat is shown not only by the conferences held for them from year to year but by the additional fact that the Association enlisted the help of friends, donated two splendid building sites and erected two splendidly equipped club buildings, one for girls and one for boys, at a total cost of $15,000. Each summer hundreds of young people enjoy the privileges of these clubs. Professor J. P. Moore, Principal of the Public Schools, of Mebane, N. C. a lover of young people and a most successful worker with them, is to be Director of Young Peoples' Activities at Montreat for the entire season. Miss Mary Cunningham, of Decatur, Ga., of wide and successful experience with young people is again to be hostess at the Girl's Club and have special charge of the Girl's Work. Mr. A. T. Hickin, of New Jersey, and Miss Daisy Southerland, of Mobile, Alabama, each an experienced worker, will be the assistant for 1929.

School and Camp

For years the Montreat Summer School and the Montreat Girl's Camp have been fine features of the Montreat season. The Association, under whose auspices these institutions are conducted, has been exceedingly fortunate in securing for the work Professor and Mrs. S. L. Woodward, who have had years of successful experience in dealing with young people. They are highly cultured, refined Christian leaders of charming personalities.

For information concerning the Summer School or Camp Montreat, address Prof. S. L. Woodward, Montreat, N. C.

Assembly Inn

This hotel partly in use last summer, will be completed and furnished in time for the meeting of our General Assembly, at Montreat, May 16-23, and therefore, in ample time for the opening of the Montreat season of 1929. Built of Montreat stone by native labor and without contractor, solid, spacious and beautiful, this hotel is unique among structures of its kind, architects and builders coming long distances to see it and wondering how such a structure could be gotten for the price. Many of the rooms have been furnished as special memorials to pastors or other friends, to local auxiliaries or to synodicals. Others, at this writing, remain to be provided for in this way. The cost of furnishing a room is $350.00. Why not furnish one of these rooms? President R. C. Anderson, of Montreat, would be glad to take up the matter with you.

Reduced Railway Tickets

Return railway tickets to Black Mountain, N. C., the Montreat railway station, can be had at reduced rates for the season by applying for such tickets at your railway station. These tickets are good over the various roads enroute to Black Mountain, N. C., from May the 15th to September the 15th.

Special Excursion Tickets

In addition to these usual summer rates, all the roads of the South (east of the Mississippi) will offer on special days each month a rate of one fare plus $1.00 for the round trip, these tickets being good for twenty days.

For further information and copies of the folder, write Rev. R. C. Anderson, Montreat, N. C.

MRS. RAMSAY TO HEAD MITCHELL COLLEGE

For five years she represented the Synodical of North Carolina in the Woman's advisory Committee of the Church. Her outstanding work in this organization, which gave her churchwide recognition, was her leadership in developing the young people's conferences.

She was Synod's first woman representative on the Board of Regents of Barium Springs Orphanage, serving as Secretary for four years.

Mrs. Ramsay, as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Hickory City Schools, and as president of the local Woman's Club, has done splendid work in the civic life of her town.

In all these fields, civic, educational and religious, Mrs. Ramsay has shown ability as an organizer and executive.

Doctor Richards continues: "Some of the finest services ever rendered by any college in North Carolina was by this college under the leadership of women, Mrs. Grant and later, Miss Everett. Under this equally splendid woman, who has consented to undertake its leadership, the same sort of service and though amplified and magnified will be extended.

It seems rather to be supposed that other things being equal, a woman would make the best head of a school for girls. The Trustees would call the attention of parents to this distinction Michell College will enjoy next year. If they have daughters of High School or College age to send away to school, they may feel sure with the whole organization and life at Mitchell College will be found built along the lines of sympathy with and understanding of girls for they will be built by a most cultured and Christian woman."

The new President's term of office does not begin until June 1, 1929, but she will at once take up the work of organizing for work in the next school year. For the present she may be addressed at 211 East Boulevard, Charlotte, N. C.

DEVOTION

THE COST OF CHRIST'S ADVENTURE

"When Jesus came to Golgotha, he changed him to a tree, they drove great nails through feet and made a Calvary. They crowned him with a thorns, red were his wounds. For those were crude and and human flesh was cheap. When Jesus came to Rome they simply passed him by. They never hurt a hair of his head, only let him die. For men had grown more sure they would not give him. They only just passed down and left him—in the rain. Still Jesus cried "Forgive them, they know not what they do." And still it rained the winter drenched him through and through. The crowds went home across the streets without a soul to stay. And Jesus crouched against the wall and cried for Galvary."

"Men become eminent in paying heed to little things; grate the smallest good, watchful over the smallest error, fearful of the smallest truth. The careful of the smallest truth, come great, through counting little but themselves; great in through studying the least serious, treasuring the least fragment of faith through noting God's hair incidents, and going to Him in rows; great in holiness, throwing little faults, and being exact in duties."

"Ask daily grace as you bread. Attempt not the least your own strength."

"When a man begins in conviction of sin, and his neighbor, conspire to the urging of unto God for assistance and But when he has made some is fear of his forgetting the which alone he is indebted to And, if he does not forget the comes to expect it as a matter."

"Beware, then, of taking that mercies will continue to the order, and at the times, have long been observed. This such likely way of stopping as the failing to recognize that, ain is with God. God descends self as a "jealous God"; and it Him to jealousy, whensoever, gree, we substitute His instrument Himself, or look to the charm were the spring. The long of a mercy at a particular indeed be said to involve promise—for God has so contracted that we naturally expect who often experienced; and a devil is not only that which is registered divine Word, but that also veiled through, the moral conceived at God's hands. But let bared that divine promise so proving it unnecessary that we itself be our great reason for God's promises are the woman's prayers. What God has may be asked for in the persistence that it is according to and since the promises are their fulfillment being made on our seeking, or inquiring for enanted blessings, we may not encouraged in our prayers by Ges, but ought in no degree to promises, except as we make donations for prayers."

"There may be many things Christian liberty permits us to do individually, but from which Christian piety requires us to abstain. Members of a Christian society."

THE TEST

How deep and abiding are the tests and how much do they mean? Many will weep over the orphan child left alone and unfeeling world, and yet turn a hand to relieve the new few grow ecstatic over a Saviour save a world, but they are no lay themselves out in the effort of the story of redemption around. A fine test is the collection plan much goes to the orphanage ready is the response to the cautions? The testing day is upon us.—N. C. Advocate.

LOCATION OF ASSEMBLY'S COMMITTEES

The last General Assembly recommended a committee of three members of the Synod on Assembly's Work be authorized to employ a person or firm of business experts not to exceed $2,500, who, together with a sub-committee, shall make an investigation, survey, and report as to the feasibility of a central treasury, and of relocating administrative and Promotional agencies at one or more points with a view to economy and efficiency, the cost of such survey to be borne by the Committee on the Assembly's Work. We understand that an able sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Albert S. Huhns of Richmond, Va., Charles F. Huhns of Louisville, Ky., and Dr. James Ross McCatur of Ga., was appointed; that the committee employed a firm of Certified Accountants to make a survey and report on the matter; and also sent out a questionnaire to the leading men and women of the Synod.

It is so rumored that they have prepared a report based on the data secured, and will present that report to the Committee on the Assembly's Work at its meeting just before the next Assembly. Adopted by the Committee recommended by them to the Assembly, the Synod will have no opportunity to study the report and even the members of the General Assembly will probably have no opportunity to discuss the plan.

It will come before the Assembly backed by the influence and power of the able and influential Committee of 44, and will be passed by the average member of the Assembly without what has happened.

The report will of course be an able one, and will be wise and proper and right one; but that the Church at large, through its representatives, be allowed to have some little say in shaping the policies of the Church.

The subject is inviting and alluring. It is a general proposition, for the benefit of the Synod (not been made public), to point to the economy and team-work. It is in line with the tendencies of the day. Big business consolidating—centralizing, therefore the Church should follow its example.

Encourage the men who are going to attend the next General Assembly to carefully and thoughtfully consider the following objections before they are caught in the current of the Assembly.

Our Church is now giving more per capita for the causes of benevolence than any other Church in the country. When God is blessing our work as conducted, why do we clutter our machinery? Let us stop tinkering with the machinery of our benevolent causes.

It is beautiful to picture the harmony of the Synod under one roof.

Our Secretaries with all their great experience are still very human, and might there be some little bickering and jealousy under the roof? The whisper comes to me from the other Churches that this is the case. And there are few residences big enough for two families.

3. I do not believe it will decrease our expenses. There will be the initial cost of moving. There will be the breaking in of a new force, and the inefficiency of untrained workers. Committee expenses will be greater. Consolidation in many lines of business has not brought decreased cost. This has been notably true in the fertilizer business.

4. I greatly fear that it will decrease our income.

Different locations diffuse the interest through the Church.

Withdrawing from cities and Synods may kindle resentment and lessen gifts.

Consolidation will blunt the clearness of each appeal.

People won't continue long putting money into a barrel.

5. Simplifying machinery does not necessarily increase spiritual power. More praying and less "pottering" may be what our Church needs.

6. Centralization has dangers. Let the bank fail with a great central treasury, and we would be ruined. Let the new treasurer take a million or so dollars. Such things have happened. Consolidation then would spell ruin.

7. We believe that the proposed changes would mean a very decided and unwise step toward the centralization of power in the hands of a few in our Church. Such a tendency our Church has always feared and fought. To purchase increased efficiency at the price of centralized power is at too great a cost.

And even though the feeling against such centralization be regarded as largely imaginary and unwarranted, we know that it exists, and such consolidation, while it exists, would, we believe, injure the causes.

8. Our Assembly Causes are just now, about to be put out of business by our local causes. Move these causes further away; take them out of all our Synods but one; and our schools and colleges will profit mightily, with all other purely local causes.

Ponder these objections. Go to the Assembly and hear the report. And then give the Church a year or so in which to ponder so vital and important a matter.

A FINE INVESTMENT

Recently all over our land and among all classes of people, rich and poor, old and young, there has been a mania for investment. The result has been such as attends all similar performances. Sore hearts and empty purses are left.

Every Christian worthy of the name, must confront this question, Am I wisely handling the money committed to me as a steward of the Lord's money?

Every man who has succeeded in life in accumulating means, will testify that the most difficult part of his work has been the proper and safe investment of his money, after he has made it. Thoughtful men will testify that money invested in the education of young men and women brings the largest returns, whether that education be mental or physical, because it puts those educated where they can earn their own living.

When we stand at the beginning of the ministry of a consecrated young man, and in imagination he passes to his reward, our mind staggers when we try to calculate the good he has done during his long life.

When we once grasp the possibilities of such a life, we can easily believe that there is no investment equal to investing in a young man going into the ministry.

We are not referring to beneficiary education, because, except in rare cases, we doubt whether such education always helps.

We mean money invested in our Seminaries and Colleges for young men and women, whence trained men and women are sent out in life for efficient service.

At the close of the "War between the States," when fortunes had been wiped out, someone asked one of the rich men of West Virginia, "What is the best and safest investment?"

He having lost much of his fortune, replied: "The first mortgage on real estate is the only investment that will stand the crash of matter and the wreck of time."

We would add that there is still a better investment than just mortgage on real estate.

Money put in the education of a boy or girl, or a young man for the ministry will endure after the real estate has vanished and the world has ended.

At present nearly all of our Colleges and Seminaries are trying to add to their endowment. The money in your hands, belonging to the Lord, could be put into no investment that will yield a larger return.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE OF PRESBYTERY

At the recent meeting of Presbytery one of our most active pastors proposed to the editor the question why ministers fail to get much spiritual blessing from the meetings of Presbytery.

The day after our return home we had an article from Rev. W. C. Cumming, of Granville Presbytery, giving an account of the valuation of churches receiving the most additions during the year, this article we propose to publish.

It is true that meetings of Presbytery are for the transaction of business, yet they are also for the development of the spiritual life of the churches and ministers.

The King's business requires haste, yet it also requires prayer, and the churches can only revive in life and spirituality in proportion as the ministers develop along that line.

It is not easy to develop one without in a measure neglecting the other. We find this true in our daily life—because, we are so constituted that attention to one thing seems to shut out the other, yet men have been blessed by such meetings.

Let us lay more emphasis upon souls brought into the Church and less upon the growth of the contributions, though the latter must not be neglected.

We need to keep in mind in preparing our reports to Presbytery that the standing of our Church depends as much upon the number brought into the fold as upon the amount given to the causes.

In truth we should get back to the fact that the chief design of the Church, founded by our Lord, was to bring men to God.

Of course there is a business side to the work of the Church and its success from a worldly point of view depends upon that phase of its work being safeguarded. Let us try to make our meetings, whether of Presbytery, Synod or Assembly, meetings for the development of our spiritual life, yet keeping always in mind the business side.

A NATIONAL CHURCH

As we have no State religion we do not need a National Church—but it seems from the utterances of Bishop James E. Freeman that we have one that should be made a National Church, with all the rights and emoluments that go with such institutions.

Sometime ago, according to one of our contemporaries, he publicly expressed regrets that other denominations should build great cathedrals in Washington City. He insists that the Episcopal Cathedral, now in process of erection should be made the National Church, and that for other denominations to build great structures is infringing upon the rights of the Episcopalians.

If we believed that he is expressing the views of the good people of that Church we would be indignant; but we have no idea that his views find any sympathy with the Episcopal Church of this country.

The Episcopal Church seems peculiarly unfortunate in the public expressions of some of its members, and it may well pray to be delivered from its friends, whose claims more than once have placed that great old Church in a false light before the public—as shown by these unwelcome views of this bishop, and also by an organization opposed to the 18th Amendment, that claims to represent a large number of Episcopal clergymen.

 CONTRIBUTED

MOSES

Rev. W. H. Hopper, D. D.

Moses was a successful man. He made good although his success led along a strange pathway. At the age of 40, a young man of striking physique, vigorous health, and captivating personality, he found himself the heir to fame, to wealth and to power. Yet he refused each of them. Strange though it may seem, he selected a nobler and higher career in life. In this day when the ambitions of men center in one or more of these three alluring ideals, we are slow to understand the conduct of such a man. However, we look upon him and behold a man whose success towered above those of his generation and which has been equalled by few in the entire history of the world. Who is not happy when he finds himself famous? Whether he is a Wilson, or a Ford, or a Gladstone or a Shakespeare; whether his fame lies in personality, romance or achievement; whether it is the fruitage of a life work like Darwin, or a sudden blaze of daring like Lindberg; who would not welcome it?

Refusing a Crown but Winning Power

Moses' opportunity was to be a king—a Pharaoh of Egypt—at a time when that ancient nation was at a height that entranced and dazzled. He could be a monarch in control of the country's wealth which provided luxury, display and influence, he could be one whose sceptre wielded unopposed dominion over areas of territory and over the lives of his subjects. He refused his opportunity.

Yet in refusing fame, he became famous, in refusing riches he became wealthy, in refusing power, he became mighty. In the realms of law, government, warfare, national leadership, ethics, health and religion, who today has his name written higher in the hall of fame than Moses? In the realm of riches who could clothe, feed, educate a nation of over 2,000,000 people for 40 years. Who could muster and equip an army of 600,000 men from slavery and support them in a victorious campaign over their oppressors, overcome all the enemies of progress and then possess a land occupied by giants of military exploits and training? In the realm of power, who as an unknown and unwelcomed shepherd in the hills could assume the command of a nation, meet and conquer an oriental king in his royal splendor and power, force him to yield to his demands, completely overthrow his famous and powerful army by one stroke of complete extermination without the loss of a single man? Who could secure the unanimous support of two millions of slaves, lead and direct them through a travelling experience of tent life for 40 years and bring them finally to a land flowing with milk and honey, having made them a trained, disciplined prosperous people, having accomplished the most tremendous stride in development in minds, morals and spirit of all the ages?

Choosing Reproach instead of Renown

Two thoughts impress us. First, his decision. He made his decision when 40 years of age. He was a mature man. His first youthful idealism had been sobered. He was not building an air castle or blowing a beautiful soap bubble. He made his decision at a period of life when a man is thoughtful, serious and sane as well as optimistic. He made his decision when the attractions of Egypt were at their height and the outlook of Israel was at its depth. Egypt was rich, strong, alluring; Israel was suffering, beaten down, poor. World opportunities were offered to Egypt's king, no opportunity appeared to challenge the champion of Israel. There was a charm, a magnificence, a satisfaction offered to Moses, the son of Pharaoh's daughter; there were many and heavy and grievous burdens in giving sympathy and a helping hand to downtrodden Israel. Who would even consider leaving Egypt for Israel? At least a compromise could be effected. Why not hold on to Egypt and still be an emancipator of Israel. Was it necessary to become so intense, so in earnest? Certainly there must be a way to enjoy the attractions of glorious Egypt and still be a benefactor to an oppressed people. Was Moses too hasty in his decision? Did he act with immature thought, with rashness and impetuosity? His decision was a complete break with Egypt. It led to a separation from all that had contributed to his life of royalty. There were some heartaches as to the disappointment to the daughter of Pharaoh whose material ambition and affection centered in him. There was a break with all of the friendly alliances that had been formed from his youth up, his decision was costly in sentiment as well as opportunity. Farewell to loved ones, farewell to Egypt's fame, to Egypt's wealth, and to Egypt's power.

A Vital Dominating Faith

The new testament writers let us into the basic principle of the decision of Moses and his entire career. There are two words—by faith. It was his conquering, vital, dominating faith in God that was the urge of his life. As a child he was surrounded by these principles of belief in God as taught and lived by his parents. Through the few years of the direct influence of father and mother and the other years at the royal court and through 40 years as a shepherd his faith in God grew, till in Moses we have that momentous display of his life and deeds. Consider the faith required to make his life's decision, to assume the leadership of an unwilling people, to stand before the king through the period of the ten plagues, at the Red Sea, all along the wilderness journey. The fundamental idea in it all was his faith in the Eternal God. Faith rejects, faith receives, and faith rejected the pleasures of Egypt, faith received the call of God for his life. Moses could have been a Pharaoh. Today his body could have been on display in a British Museum, along with other Egyptian kings after being preserved 3000 years, or his name written upon a monument in Egypt among the mighty and read by the tourist. Instead his soul is with Him whom he met on the Mount of Transfiguration and who was the object of his faith, his name along with his good and righteous is written in the hearts and conduct of countless others who exercised faith in the same eternal God.

Here he is—by faith in God. He is the world's great law-giver, the writer of the world's history from its beginning to his own age, the interpreter of God to a needy nation and their leader and builder up from slavery to the conquest of Canaan and within 40 years. Moses the servant of God—by faith. Birmingham, Ala.

SHALL WE BE A REGIONAL CHURCH?

Rev. W. C. Cumming

The question of whether or not we shall unite with the United Presbyterian Church brings up necessarily the whole question of whether or not we shall be a Regional Church?

Our policy, ever since our organization as a separate denomination, has been to confine ourselves to a certain definite and, in general, homogeneous territory. We have not organized churches north of Baltimore or the Ohio River, nor have we planted any organizations west of Missouri or Texas. When members of our church have moved to New York or to Los Angeles, or to other points outside of our "bounds", we have freely given them their letters to the Presbyterian churches located there, and we have not tried to follow them up with organizations connected with our Assembly:

The U. S. A. Church, which we still call the "Northern" Presbyterian Church, has not followed this policy. It has organized churches not only in "border" states, such as Kentucky and Missouri, but it has carried its organization into Texas, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma and even Florida and Georgia. While we have desired a "Gentleman's agreement" to respect each other's territory, and to avoid competition between the two leading Presbyterian bodies in this country, our brethren of the U. S. A., Assembly have never been willing to it. They have prided themselves upon having what they call a "National" Church, and have been pleased to designate us as a "Regional" Church. They have changed the name of their Board of Home Missions to the "Board of National Missions," and have attempted to demonstrate its "National" character by adding to their Home Mission work in Montana, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and points west the Home Mission work in Western North Carolina and other sections of the South. We have never fully appreciated the work of the U. S. A. Church in the South because of the spirit of rivalry and competition with our own work in which it has often been carried on, and also because we have felt that the 33 states which we have left to them as their territory constituted a big enough field for their activities, without their seeking to enter the fifteen states which are recognized as the bounds of our Assembly.

While we realize that we could have organized churches in New York City, and in other territory outside of our bounds, and could have built them up largely out of our own constituency that have moved there, just as the U. S. A. Church has done in Florida, we have always refused to do so. We have felt that it is a distinct disadvantage to cover too much territory. Not only is homogeneity lost and the sense of unity impaired by such a course, but the Church is removed to a much greater distance from its leaders, and it is impossible for them to know the Church and for the church to know them in anything like the intimate way that we regard as essential to the best results.

After watching the unsatisfactory character of the huge General Assembly of the U. S. A. Church, which can only be convened at tremendous expense because of the great distances involved, and after observing how they have felt obliged to set up a central Council which is entrusted with more and more power and which is removed from the direct control of the membership of the church, we have often felt thankful that ours is a regional church. We have always preferred to have our territory limited rather than to have our knowledge of our church leaders limited. We have felt it more important to know the Moderator of our General Assembly, the Secretaries of our Executive Committees, the heads of our educational institutions and the missionaries on our foreign fields, rather than to be known as a "National" Church.

Since the question of doctrine is not involved in the matter of our uniting with the United Presbyterian Church it seems to me that the most important question for us to consider is this one of policy. As I understand it the U. P. Church is especially strong in Pennsylvania and Ohio, but extends as far away as California and Washington. If we unite with them we will definitely give up our historic policy of confining ourselves to a well-defined and district territory. We will do towards the U. S. A. Church what we have always protested at their doing toward us, namely we shall invade their territory and compete with them in the same cities where they are working. (Of course this competition is going on today, but it is because of what they have done, and not because of what we have done. It is also much more limited than it would be after the proposed union.)

Of course there are some advantages in our ceasing to be a regional church. It would greatly increase the total membership of the church of which we are members, and so would make a more impressive showing. It would give us a more cosmopolitan church, with a greater proportion of homogeneous elements, and a wider variety of problems with which to deal. It would of the principal objections that we have with the U. S. A. Church, namely, working in a different territory from that which is big enough and needy enough to give us the best use of our energies.

The matter of Foreign Mission work be considered. Since the United Presbyterian Church has confined itself to the two mission fields of India and China, and since we are now confined to the six mission fields of Mexico, Brazil, China, Korea, and Japan, it would give our church a widened missionary obligation it would be regarded as an advantage, to bring us into contact with lands of which we know little, and might result in an increase of vision. By others it will be regarded as a disadvantage, since we have patently failed to give people to any real understanding of the problems of the six fields which we now have. This education would be made just that difficult by the scattering of our interest.

In conclusion, it would seem that the uniting with the United Presbyterian Church be settled largely in connection with the question of whether or not it is better for our church to have a policy of concentration, or a policy of scattering our interests and endeavors. Henderson, N. C.

THE SUNDAY RADIOHas a Christian Done His Religious Duty If He Listens to a Sermon Over the Radio?

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of Broad Street Church, New York, answers this question.

Dr. Jefferson says:

No. To the aged and infirm and to all who are disabled by disease or by duty the radio is a precious gift from God. Everyone rejoices in the new privilege which it offers to a vast company of the unfortunate who have hitherto been deprived of the uplift and inspiration of public worship. But to many others the radio is a seductive temptation and may prove to be a blighting influence. No man or woman of able body can substitute the radio for attendance on public worship without spiritual loss. To hold aloof from the radio is to lose some of the richest blessings which the Lord has to give. Public worship is something more than listening to hymns and prayers and sermons. It is a communion with our fellow Christians. We commune with God but with men.

Everyone has an immense stock of selfishness. The heart and the radio is ministering to the ungodly and to the human nature. Many persons are incorrigible on Sunday mornings. They have not grit enough to prepare themselves for a church service. They have a chance to hear a sermon while lying in bed, and they will snap up the opportunity with alacrity. It is as well as a lazy thing to do. It cuts one off from the companionship of his fellowmen. We hearten ourselves by meeting together. We can encourage by the face of one another's faces. We are comforted by the presence of our friends at the close of the church service. We learn by singing and praying together what we cannot learn by the family of God. "Blessed be the man who means little to a torpid slacker who is content with a few religious ideas from the radio, utterly indifferent to the spiritual needs of his brethren. To curl up in a chair and listen to a sermon, isolated from a man beings, is no doubt comfortable but it is unworthy.

A Christian owes it to the community to be on the streets on Sunday morning toward the home. Every face turned churchward Sunday morning impresses on the life of the town. If no one were to do this and everyone glued his ear to the radio, public worship would vanish and spiritual Christianity would fade away. Religion is a social thing and it cannot be maintained in its true form if it is impossible for it to survive in a community. "Forsake not the assembly yourselves together" is an old exhortation which generations will do well to heed.

Not only does the radio break down the joy of worship, but it undermines the sense of personal responsibility. A man stretched on a lounge in his drinking in a sermon may, of course, send in his contribution to the church as his share toward the expense of service, but he is not likely to do it. The major part of the sermon tasters over the radio get their religion for nothing. The radio dispenses sermons free, and it banishes the contribution box. Every shirker free to escape the financial appeal of the church is always making. In a way it converts the church to parasites and beggars. What is a man but if he visits church after church on the air, not giving a cent for anything he receives? If it is more to give than to receive, then the radio fans are the most fortunate.

But it is not financial obligations alone that are evaded. All responsibility of every sort for the maintenance of religious ordinances is shaken off and nobler temper are left to shoulder the full weight of responsibility which should be shared by all. Thus becomes a subtle and deadly temptation, the most mischievous and paralyzing which have ever befallen our generation. It is making havoc of the spirit of multitudes and what final effect it will have on the church it is too early yet to predict. The radio is a new toy and the novelty of it gives it an irresistible power. It is fun just now to loll in a rocking-chair taking the trouble to put on a collar and tie, and what the preacher has to say, but the charm of it wears out after a season and many may again turn to the good old-fashioned and sensible custom of church"—The Congregationalist.

PERCENTAGES FOR BENEVOLENCES

Applying to N. C. Synod's Benevolences
The confusion seems to be in the minds of a large number of persons relative to the percentages of our benevolences for the coming year, 1929-30. There has been a change made in the old percentages of the Assembly as follows:

Missions	55 %
Home Missions	27 %
Education and Ministerial	12½ %
School Extension and Publication	3½ %
Training School	1 %

The Assembly took 2 per cent from Foreign Missions to Assemble's Home Missions 1 per cent, and to Christian Education and Ministerial 1 per cent; so, the changes are in 3 per cent, Assembly's Home Missions 28 per cent, Assembly's Home Missions 28 per cent, and Christian Education 13.1-2 per cent, instead of 12.5 per cent.

The Assembly's Budget of $540,000, the local budget of Synod of $360,000.00, as our Synodical Budget, including the percentages are given below, along with that each percentage will call for, respectively.

Adopted by Synod
Benevolent Askings of the Synod, ministerial Home Missions, for the Church, be $900,000, and that this amount be divided between the Assembly's and local causes on a 40-60 per cent or $540,000 and $360,000.

The Budget of $900,000 be distributed among as follows:

Missions	31.8%	$286,200
Home Mis.	16.8	151,200
Ed. & Min. R.	8.1	72,900
S. Work	2.1	18,900
Training School	.6	5,400

Assembly	60. %	$540,000
LOCAL:
Home Mis.	10. %	$ 90,000

NEEDED THE DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGE?

Rev. J. Keir Fraser

It is necessary at this late day to be told that the moral and religious nature of the present part of an ideal education. The conscience is as important parts of man's endowment; they constitute an integral part of the intellect; hence no system of education which fails to provide for their training during the plastic years of life can claim to be complete.

It ought not to be necessary to say that it is a truism. And yet the fact is that our day is probably more defective in this respect than in any other. In the State schools, both higher and lower, little if any attention is given to the subject of moral and religious instruction. In many of the great universities under State management, and even in some of the colleges where the religious purpose is supposed to predominate, the students are treated practically as if they were nothing but intellect. Little attention is given to their morals and still less to their religious instruction. The consequence is that many of the young men in these institutions on graduating are scarcely more than educated heathen.

I am not talking at random here; I know from personal experience as well as from a wide observation whereof I speak. Nor am I blaming the colleges, which, under existing conditions are powerless to remedy matters. The teachers in these institutions are, I believe, as a general rule men of high character. Many of them are consistent members of Christian churches, and they are doing all they can to meet the defect. We gladly recognize the fact, too, that conditions are much better than they were several generations ago, when, we are told, scarcely a professed religious student could be found in the best colleges of the time. But the fact remains that our education today is suffering more from weakness on this side than on any other; and if it be true as we hear it hinted in certain quarters, that our church colleges are being tempted to sacrifice their denominational connection for increased endowments, the danger is growing greater instead of less.

I cannot help believing that some day when the meaning of religion is better understood than it is today, religious instruction will be given as a matter of course in all the state schools. If education is one of the chief functions of the state—as all leading educators agree that it is—and if education is radically incomplete without the careful training of the religious faculty, it is inevitable that the state for the sake of its own welfare will have to provide in some way for the elementary religious instruction of its youth. This does not mean that the real function of the Church will ever be encroached upon by the State; on the contrary it means that the separation of Church and State will grow more complete.

But religion on its practical side—the knowledge and fear of God, respect of His laws, the practical duties of the religious life enjoined by the Bible—this the State will have to provide for, or else go to pieces, because no civilized State can maintain itself and go on developing unless all its children are taught the ways of God. When that time comes the church college will be able to hand over the work of ordinary undergraduate instruction to the State, and she will be free to devote her time and funds to specific lines of religious training, such as ministerial, missionary, Sunday school, social service, Y. M. C. A., etc., and both Church and State will be gainers. The Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago, is a fairly good illustration of what I mean.

But this day, I fear, is a long way off, and meantime our salvation is in the denominational college as it now stands. In preparing the coming of the time when the State will be sufficiently Christian to be entrusted with the entire work of general education, the church college has a large field to occupy. She is, in fact, the chief agency which will bring it about, as she was originally the chief agency in the inauguration of general education. And when that time comes, as I have said, our church colleges will not close their doors; on the contrary they will be more important than ever, as they will become powerful centers of specific education along all lines of religious work.

In my judgment this is to be the ultimate outcome of the contest for supremacy—if such a thing exists—between the state college and the church college. Meantime the place the church college ought to fill in the estimation of every one who believes in the power of religion and in the final establishment of the Kingdom of Righteousness is clear. If she is to hold her own she must be as thoroughly equipped and maintain as high educational standards as the state college; and to enable her to do this the men and women of our churches whom God has blessed with material wealth must rally to her support. In doing this they may have the satisfaction of knowing that they are making an investment which, I believe, will count for more in the hastening of the Kingdom of God than any other investment they could make at the present time.

Only a small proportion of our candidates for the Christian ministry come from state schools. Ninety per cent., of the graduates of the church college who do not enter the ministry become active workers as laymen in the church. If, therefore, the church college were to close its doors tomorrow, humanly speaking, it looks as if the Church of Jesus Christ would be compelled to go out of business. These are alarming facts, but cold logic drives us to them. It looks to me as if the big question that is facing the church today is the church college. If the Church is to save herself as well as the State she must awaken to a new interest in this vital question.

CHURCH CO-OPERATION AND UNION Assembly's Committee's Report

The Ad Interim Committee of Survey of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. and the Department of Church Cooperation and Union of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., in joint meeting assembled, unanimously agree to report to their respective supreme judicatories as follows:

1. We would remind our respective General Assemblies that no new registration is needed to accomplish the ends sought by our joint conference.

2. We recommend that our respective General Assemblies call the attention of all of our Synods and Presbyteries to the Comity Rules and agreements already entered into by our respective General Assemblies, and enjoin them to act in the strictest accordance therewith. In particular we call attention to the following:

Adopted in 1911

(1.) Where Presbyteries or classes belonging to the General Assemblies or General Synods cover the same ground they are advised to endeavor, either as presbyteries or classes or through their committees, to agree, as brethren, to have the efforts of one church expended in certain fields and the efforts of the other churches expended in certain other fields, within their common bounds so as to prevent hurtful rivalry or antagonism.

(2.) Where there are weak churches, which standing each alone, cannot support a minister, but which can be grouped with other churches with some other assembly or synod so as to form one ministerial charge, the Presbyteries or classes having jurisdiction are advised to allow such churches to be grouped under a minister from either body, to whom their respective presbyteries or classes are willing to give them in charge, the contributions of such churches to the general benevolent funds to pass through the channel appointed by their respective assemblies or synods.

(3.) In towns of less than 5000 inhabitants, where any church is already at work, the others shall not enter without conference and agreement with the church occupying the field.

(4.) In a community where any one of the constituent churches has a church, and the community is not capable of supporting more than one church of the Reformed faith, the people of the community should be encouraged to connect themselves with the existing church, with the understanding that a fair exchange will be encouraged in other communities.

(5.) That the Supreme Judicatories of the several churches recommend their church members, when moving into new communities in which there are no congregations of their own church, to unite, for the time being, with some other Presbyterian or Reformed Church, if such there be.

Adopted in 1914

(6.) That the Synods are hereby directed to appoint three representatives to act with representatives of other Presbyterian and Reformed bodies in constituting a joint Advisory Committee of Comity for the purpose of effecting a fair exchange of churches, to discourage overlapping of home missions forces, to settle cases of friction, and promote other phases of cooperation in home missions work, the Joint Advisory Committee to report to each of the appointing synods.

(7.) That in any city of less than 100,000 where any Presbyterian or Reformed church is at work among foreign people, no other Presbyterian or Reformed church shall open a work for the same people in that city, until other cities and towns, where such work is needed have been occupied.

(8.) That in case of any denomination contemplating opening work for foreigners in such cities already occupied by one of the constituent churches of this council, the matter shall be referred to the Committees of Comity.

3. We recommend to our General Assemblies that they direct their respective Home Missionary Agencies to make immediately such a general survey as will reveal the various situations with which our respective churches should deal both in missionary and non-missionary territory.

4. We recommend that in missionary territory, our Home Mission Agencies shall, in cooperation with those of our synods and presbyteries involved, eliminate as rapidly as possible all duplication in expenditure of money or effort.

5. We recommend that in non-missionary territory, our synods and presbyteries be enjoined to take immediate and joint measures to end all local competition and friction where such exists.

6. We recommend that our Home Mission Agencies be direct to make joint reports to our General Assemblies, annually and in detail, as to the progress made to date in the accomplishment of the purposes above set forth.

Three years ago a custom started of holding the books open after the thirty-first of March, for belated receipts from the Church, and each year, this has meant more and more money in April applying on March, and less and less applying on the new Church year. The figures for these years are as follows: In 1926, we received in April applying on the new Church year, $1,175.91; in 1927, we received $585.70; in 1928, $1,176.26.

Lesson for May 5

WHAT HILKIAH FOUND IN THE TEMPLE

II Chronicles 34:1-33

Our lessons for the last two weeks have been taken from the second Isaiah, a prophet who wrote during the period of Judah's exile. We go back this week to the reign of the good king Josiah, a hundred years or more before the exile. Hezekiah, whom the first Isaiah had so strongly influenced, was succeeded on the throne by Manasseh and Amon. Manasseh reigned 55 years in Jerusalem, and was by all odds the worst king that ever disgraced the throne of David. He rebuilt the heathen altars that Hezekiah had destroyed; he set up again the licentious worship of the Phoenician Baal; he introduced as an innovation from Babylon the worship of the sun and the moon and the stars; he carried on his idolatrous worship even in the temple that had been dedicated to the worship of Jehovah, the God of Israel. He burnt his own sons alive in order to win the favor of his pagan deities. Most of the people followed the lead of the court. Those who refused to do so were severely persecuted.

According to tradition Isaiah was one of the first of his victims. Amon, the son of Manasseh, started out to follow in his father's footsteps, but was killed after a short reign of just two years by his own servants. He was succeeded by his son, Josiah, who was at the time of his accession only eight years of age. We judge that Josiah's mother remained true to her ancestral faith, and brought her son up to know Jehovah, the God of Israel. At any rate when Josiah was 16 years old he began to seek after the God of David his father; and when he was 20 years old, probably just when he took over the throne for himself, he began the series of religious reforms with which we are concerned at the present time.

Stop here and read over II Chronicles 34:1-7. What was the first reform that Josiah set himself to carry out? Was this the logical place to begin? Why? How thoroughly was the work carried out? Why do you suppose Josiah scattered the ashes of the altars over the graves of the worshippers? Why did he burn the bones of the priests upon their altars? Read 34:8-13. What was Josiah's second reform? Was this the next logical step to take? In what spirit was the work carried out? Read 14-21. How did the Book come to be found? How could it have been lost? Why was Josiah so disturbed? Read 22-33. What action did the finding of the book lead to? Who was Huldah? What was her advice? What was the King's response? What was the significance of the Covenant? We come now to the discussion of the lesson.

I. The Reformation of the Worship—34:1-13

1. Idolatry destroyed 34:1-7. The reformation that Josiah carried out was in two parts. First of all he determined to destroy every trace of idolatry in the land, not only in the actual borders of Judah, but also in the territory that had formerly belonged to the kingdom of Israel, and that now since the captivity of the northern nation was partially dependent upon Judah. We note the thoroughness with which he went about the work. He was not satisfied merely to give the orders to his subordinates. He himself took charge of the campaign. The altars of the Baalim we read were broken down in his presence. Manasseh and Amon had erected a variety of shrines, but they all met the same fate. The high places were the hill tops covered over with heathen altars, high places being considered the most sacred. The Asherim (R.V.) groves (A.V.) were the clumps of trees held sacred to the heathen deities beneath whose shade the licentious practices common to so many of the Eastern cults were practised. Molten images were metallic images, fashioned by running melted metal into a mold. The graven or carved images consisted of plates of metal over a wooden frame or over a molten body, or else were images carved out of wood or stone. Baalim is a plural noun, the plural of Baal. The word means Lord, and when used in the plural applies to the local gods who were supposed to preside over the various localities, a be very little.

This year is different from the other years. Owing to the fact that the Thanksgiving offering fell so much short of the average—some $14,000—and that this is the year our big insurance bill comes due, some $8,000. We ended our Church year $22,000.00 behind and for this reason, we have not been able to pay up our obligations at the banks, although we have cleared up most of our obligations for materials. It means then, that in this month of April, we have no money and no credit, when it comes to borrowing money, for we have been unable to repay our loans so far.

The pay roll at the end of the April, over $3,000.00, and that many other cash obligations that mature at this time, will have to be met out of receipts, if they are met at all.

The First Churches of Winston, Gastonia and Wilmington send us each month, one-twelfth of their quota, and this is a big help. If it is possible, we want this year, more of the Churches to adopt this plan, and in addition to that, the special collections taken in Sunday Schools and at Church to be emphasized. We really face a rather serious situation right now. We need cash by the end of this month, and we cannot go to the bank and borrow it, as we have been accustomed to do in the past.

With best wishes and thanks for your help.

field, or a town, or a mountain. The images that were on high above them are spoken of in the R.V. more accurately as sun images. The worship of the sun was one of the new features that had been introduced into the religious syncretism by Manasseh.

Josiah strewed the dust of the altars upon the graves of the worshippers as a symbolic act to indicate that the worship had been completely extirpated, it was as dead as the worshippers themselves. He exhumed and then burned the bones of the priests upon the altars to defile the place where the sacrifices had been offered. People used to be a little superstitious about graveyards, especially after nightfall, and some still are. Ancient people used to be a little shy about plots of ground where bodies had been disposed of. Josiah wanted to make sure that these particular spots, regarded as sacred spots, would not attract worshippers in the future. We gather from verse 8 that this work of purgation did not take place in a day. It seems that six years went by before Josiah felt that the land was really free from the curse of idolatry. No thorough reform of this sort can be carried out in a moment, not even "prohibition."

2. The Temple Repaired. In the 18th year of his reign, the 26th year of his life Josiah felt that he was ready to take the second step in his great reform. It was not enough to destroy the idols in the land. The people must be won back to the worship of Jehovah. During the long reign of Manasseh the temple had fallen into disrepair. And though it had been open for worship since Josiah came to the throne yet it had never been overhauled or put into the shape that would insure its best use. The mention of the workmen in vs. 10 and 11, and of the work which they found it necessary to do shows how the very fabric of the building had decayed. Josiah was thorough here as before. He entrusted the repairs of the temple to three state officials, Shaphan, the Secretary, Maaseiah, the Mayor of Jerusalem, and Joah the Recorder. He appealed to the people for support, and the money which the Levites collected was turned over by the Commission to Hilkiah the High Priest. The writer of the account thinks it worthy of note that the men in actual charge of the work performed their tasks faithfully.

II. The Discovery of the Book—34:14-28

While the workmen were at work on the temple Hilkiah the High Priest discovered a copy of the Book of the law of Jehovah given by Moses. Scholars are pretty well agreed that this book was the Book of Deuteronomy. It seems rather strange to us at first that such a book could ever have been lost. But then we remember that there were no printing presses in those days; there were few books, and not many copies of those. Deuteronomy had been preserved no doubt by the priests, but there is little likelihood that was ever found in the homes of the people. And then came the long apostasy beginning with Manasseh lasting in all for about 70 years. The persecution in II Kings 21:16 probably included the destruction of the law books. One copy however was hidden away in the temple, probably by some martyr or persecuted prophet. And it was this copy that Hilkiah had accidentally stumbled upon. Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan the King's secretary. He carried it at once to the king, but seemingly did not think it was so important, because he did not mention it until he had first given a complete account of the work and the finances involved. Then he remarked rather casually, "Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book." The king bade him read, and he proceeded to do so. The book as a whole, or some part of it, probably Dt. 28-29, describing the penalties attached to irregularities of worship, filled the king with grief and fear. Impulsively, as Orientals were accustomed to do in times of great emotional stress, he tore his garments asunder. He realized that something must be done at once. So he appointed a commission to seek prophetic guidance as to the possibility of escape from the divine anger which he felt to be impending over the erring nation. This commission sought out Huldah, evidently a prophetess of note in the nation. Jeremiah, one of the greatest of the prophets had begun his ministry by this time, but evidently he was not so well known at this time as Huldah. Josiah seemed to feel that God could speak through a woman just as well as through a man. Huldah replied in effect that God's judgment could not be averted from the nation, idolatry had sunk too far into the national life (and as a matter of fact Josiah's reform was only a temporary one; the people remained idolatrous in heart, and went back to their old gods as soon as a new king came upon the throne). Josiah however who had returned to Jehovah, and had humbled himself before Him, should not see the evil days that were coming upon the nation; he would go down to his grave in peace. Huldah's prophecy we may note was only partially correct. Josiah met a violent death (35:23-24), but it was true that the divine judgment was delayed till after his day.

III. The Renewal of the Covenant—34:29-33

When Moses led the Children of Israel out of Egypt he took them straight to Mt. Sinai in the southern tip of the Arabian peninsula. There it was that God entered into his first covenant with the nation. He said to them through Moses: "Now therefore if ye will obey my voice indeed and keep my covenant then ye shall be mine own possession from among all peoples; for all the earth is mine; and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." The people had agreed to the terms of this covenant, and it had been solemnly sealed and ratified. The Covenant was renewed as recorded in the Book of Deuteronomy by Moses and the people just before they passed over into the Promised Land. It was renewed again by Joshua after he had settled the people in the promised land, and just before he passed on to his reward (Joshua 24:25). It was only natural therefore that when Josiah read again the Book of the Covenant, and thought of the 70 year apostasy he should have desired once again to renew the covenant. Accordingly he called together all the people in the land, both the small and the great. He read to them the words of the Covenant as they are recorded in Deuteronomy—especially we may suppose chapter 28. Then he stood in his place and pledged himself publicly to walk after Jehovah and to keep his commandments. The people then stood after him, and took the same vow for themselves. And for thirteen years, so long as Josiah lived they were true to Jehovah.

Questions That Come to Us

1. The first step that Josiah took was a personal one. When he was 16 years old he began to seek the face of his God. We presume that all who ponder these words already taken that step. We began to seek the face of our God years ago perhaps. Have we continued that search? We are to find God in all of His fullness we must continue to seek Him day after day, year after year. Our knowledge of Him must grow as our other knowledge grows. Is that true of us? And as we learn more of His will for our lives in increasing measure we are led into fuller service for him as Josiah was. Is that true of us?

2. Josiah's second step was to destroy the idols in the land. The idols were God's rivals for the affection of the people. We do not have molten images and images. But God still has rivals. What would be the greatest rivals that God faces in our world today? What are the greatest rivals that he faces as far as we are concerned? Does popularity ever become an idol? Has a young girl made popularity her idol? Does she outrages her conscience to keep the favor of young men on whom she feels herself dependent? Does pleasure ever become an idol? Does a young man made pleasure his idol when he indulges in recreations that destroy his love for spiritual things? Does the desire for profits ever become an idol? Does a man deliberately unload some worthless stock unsuspecting public has he made Mammon his god? How can we smash the idols that infest our world? How do we turn the nation away from God?

3. Josiah's third step was to repair the temple. The people probably thought it was a waste of money to do so. How old would do for a long time yet. Should we build beautiful churches? How can we justify the expenditure? Does your own church need to be beautified, rebuilt?

4. Josiah's fourth step was to acquaint himself with the people with the Book. At first glance, it might seem that we do not need this lesson with its emphasis on the lost book. There never was a time when the Bible was so widely distributed. But are people really acquainted with the book? Every test that has ever been made indicates that our young people, even those who attend Christian homes, do not really know the Bible. Servative judges have estimated that two-thirds of the members of the churches do not look at their Bibles more than once a month. The Bible is available, but thousands, millions of people have never discovered its value. What does the Bible mean to us? How do we read it? How well do we know it? How do we learn to know it, and to love it? The church has its duty, and certainly the Sunday School has its duty, and certainly the Sunday School has its duty, and doesn't teach its members how to use the Bible, doesn't teach its members how to enjoy the Bible, doesn't teach its members how to use the Bible, doesn't teach its members how to enjoy the Bible. Perhaps it will be worth the entire effort to discuss in your class this one point.

5. Josiah's fifth step was to solemnly covenant with Jehovah, and to keep His commandments. What value did this public covenant have? Why did Josiah take his vow in secret? Why should any man stand up before the people and promise to walk after Jesus Christ, and to keep His commandments? Is there any value in such a covenant? Is it a covenant that we should take? Is it a covenant that we should renew?

TRUE SPIRIT OF CHRISTIAN WAR

God never intended for the world to be ruled by Jesus Christ by people who hold the attitude of the ordinary church member. It can never be by those who imagine that their whole Christianity lies in attending the worship and giving due attention to the collection plate, any more than the war for the defense of the country can be won by citizens going to the polls to vote and pay taxes.

Something more than mere recognition of the church is necessary. There must be some statesmanlike understanding of the world-wide movement of the Kingdom of God, plus a soldier-like determination of personal endeavor to the campaign.

The war for righteousness in this world is the issue is in the balance. Some must stand front and some must fall in the conflict. There is utterly useless unless there is the war spirit in the hearts of those who are left at home. Prayer and heart consecration must be provided; the sinews of war must be provided; even though the home people go hunting for interest in what is happening on the world stage, the must evince a care for the outcome of the movement for God. Not until the church has some such attitude as this will the world be conquered by the army of the Lord. Church members who are merely ordinary will not affect the issue very much.—Exchange.

DR. PEAKE'S HYMN

Addressing ministers and some fellow-workers, Dr. A. S. Peake, President of the Primitive Methodist Conference, said he liked to close a Sunday service with a hymn about heaven. "We know much about heaven," he added, "and I would like to leave the people home with high idealism, to leave immortality out of your preaching, for it makes all the difference to a man who believes this life is all or only a prelude."

"Some day you will read in the papers that Moody, of East Northfield, is dead. Do a word of it! At that moment I shall be more than I am now. . . . That which is born may die. That which is born of the Spirit is forever."—D. L. Moody.

THE REVOLUTION IN MEXICO AT THE BIRTHDAY OBJECTIVES?

Following is a communication from our Mexican have not heard that the zeal and enthusiasm of the members of our Church, and especially the Auxiliary for the Birthday Gift for a year, has in the least diminished on account of the rebellion here; still we can understand why this might be the case; and in the Progressive Program Committee this year we wish to use to write to you that we might be better prepared for the present situation here, and the Mission feels about it.

in Mexico has not abated in the least. In fact it grows stronger. The revolution is not from our field and has only hindered there and has not changed any general policy.

The revolution was breaking out the Methodist Church held their annual conference. The same from five or six different states and no way away on account of it. It has not even any Church here to, in the least, change action that had been formed. If interrupted they have been very temporary.

like to add that not only was the Methodist undisturbed by the revolution which was first stages, but that our own Presbytery, just closed its annual session in Toluca, had no disturbance. Monterey was held by the for a few days at the beginning of the trouble, and evacuated the town and now that whole get again and trains are running from Mexico through to San Potosi, Saltillo and Monterey and next week, on April 10th the National Presbytery is to meet in Monterey. Through the period of revolution there has not been the least or the least necessity for the change of any policy.

course, the government is spending its energy and its money in putting down revolution success has been very marked, it has not lessened in carrying on their general policy both Education and Industrial Progress. On the 1st of the Secretary of Education—a member of the cabinet, addressed a group of fifty people in Mexico City studying the "Rural Education," and in his remarks he said—"the first thing you will divide up into seven groups going out on a nine months' campaign for rural groups went. They have gone and are their work among the rural teachers—calling for an institute that will last one month. Meetings will be held throughout the whole different sections. And what is true of education is true of road building and other civic and enterprises. It has not occurred to the government to change its policies.

is this week announce the signal defeat of the revolutionary forces in the state of Chihuahua, and it seems to us that the backbone of the revolution is broken. We do not see how it can continue longer. It was an abortive effort on the part of the ambitious men, and we believe that the revolution is practically over. But should it continue to come, not a reason for allowing our zeal to wane, but a cause for redoubling our efforts and for emphasizing the condition of the situation should call for larger gifts.

PEE DEE, S. C., PRESBYTERIAL AUXILIARY

At this meeting held last week at Marion, S. C., the following women from the Hartsville Presbyterian Auxiliary attended: Mesdames T. E. and J. R. McAlpine, V. Tatum, Harry Frampton, Richard Cathcart, William Miller, Leslie McNair, and James Richardson. Mrs. T. E. McAlpine, President of the local Auxiliary and Mrs. Harry Frampton as the representative of same organization.

It will be of interest that two of these women were elected officers of the Pee Dee Presbyterial Auxiliary. Mrs. Richardson as Secretary of Home Missions.

For three years Mrs. Jas. Richardson served as Treasurer and Mrs. Brooks Sumner, also of Hartsville as Recording Secretary of this body. Mrs. T. E. McAlpine was an officer also for three years as Historian, giving up the work at this meeting. She now serves most ably as the President of the local Auxiliary.

Mrs. V. Tatum the Ex-President of the local organization is the retiring head and under her efficient leadership the Auxiliary has had wonderful growth in every way. It is most gratifying to know that at the fiscal closing of our Church year on March 31st that more than the budget had been pledged and paid by the local Auxiliary.

Mrs. M. S. McKinnon, Publicity Chairman.

IMPORTANT!

Our Birthday month of May is nearly here and I know you are already planning to make our party a great success, but I want you to tell the members of your Auxiliary some reasons why we must bring an unusually generous gift this year for our two Schools in Mexico.

You know how great is the illiteracy of the Mexican girls—in some locations scarcely twenty percent of them can read. Now the Government is establishing schools in many places and they have trouble finding teachers for these new schools. They are very anxious to employ as teachers, girls who have been trained in our Mission Schools. They recognize the fine, moral character and literary fitness in these Christian girls. But we have had so little room in our schools they have not nearly enough girls to supply the demand.

Again, we should bring an especially generous gift this year because we are going to build two schools instead of one! Never before have we tried to build two school buildings with one Birthday gift. Let our slogan be "Double your Offering—Two for One"—that is, two schools for one offering, so this offering will have to be a generous one.

The schools at Zitacuaro and Chilpancingo have been so long hampered by lack of equipment they are looking forward eagerly to our gift. The missionaries there are praying earnestly that the offering will be sufficient for both of these schools which so sorely need it. Let's deny ourselves something for these fine girls and send its cost to aid them in getting a Christian education!

At your Auxiliary meeting do not collect your Birthday offering until after the program has been given. This is very important. Of course your treasurer will send the offering promptly to her Presbyterial treasurer as in former years.

The enclosed leaflets regarding the two schools, their plans and needs, might be read before the pageant since they form a background and add to the appeal. Please see that someone orders promptly all they will need. Send invitations to every woman in your congregation and others interested. Mexican flags and colors of red, green and white should be used profusely in your decorations.

Will you officers not cooperate in planning the greatest birthday celebration you have ever known? Do let's make this year's gift at least as large as the gift to Kwangju, Korea—$56,000. The Mexican girl is our nearest neighbor. Let's help our schools to give them the living Christ.

FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERIAL

The Fortieth Annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Fayetteville Presbytery was held Tuesday and Wednesday, April 9-10, at the First Church, Laurinburg. Tuesday morning the meeting convened with the devotional service by Mrs. W. M. McLeod. Mrs. M. J. McGuire made the address of welcome. The response was by Mrs. K. N. Page. Then followed the reports of the officers and committees.

At 12 o'clock the Rev. E. T. Thompson, professor of church history at Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Va., conducted a Bible study for 30 minutes. Then followed the report of the secretary of church literature, Mrs. J. H. Suttinfield.

The afternoon session was devoted to reports of delegates to the Synodical, the Auxiliary training school at Montreat, mission study classes by Mrs. E. B. Paisley, Richmond, Va., address by the Synodical president, Mrs. G. V. Patterson, reports of auxiliaries and district chairman. At 3:30 Dr. Thompson conducted another Bible study class.

The Tuesday evening session, a chorus class from Flora Macdonald College, added to the delight of the Auxiliary.

The outstanding feature Tuesday night was an address by Dr. E. B. Paisley, of the department of religious education at the Assembly's Training School, Richmond, Va., Doctor Paisley's theme was "Christian Religious Education."

Following Doctor Paisley's address, Mrs. Lauchlin McDonald, of Hope Mills, historian, conducted the anniversary program. Papers were read as follows: Account and minutes of the called meeting, Mrs. Katie Clark Robertson, Raleigh. The Two Years of Organization, Mrs. D. P. McEachin, Red Springs. The 23 Years of Growth and Endeavor, Miss Katie Fairley, Wilmington. The 15 Years of Achievement, Mrs. Z. A. Gibson, Faison.

At this point a huge birthday cake bearing 40 candles, was brought in by a committee of girls from the Laurinburg Church. They sang "Happy birthday to all." The cake was most beautiful in its decoration of sprays of pink roses.

Mrs. John G. Shaw, of Fayetteville, was asked by the program leader, Mrs. McLaughlin, to cut the cake. The president announced the normal meeting at an end and there followed a period of fellowship when all were invited to eat of the great birthday cake.

The second day session convened Wednesday at 9 a. m. Speakers on the program for Wednesday morning were, Mrs. W. M. McLeod, Mrs. A. S. Cromartie, Mrs. G. H. West, Mrs. Jas. A. Jones, Miss L. A. McGoogan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. B. Rowland, recording secretary; Miss Mary McLaughlin, treasurer; Mrs. Lauchlin McDonald, historian.

The total number of delegates registered to Wednesday morning was 305. Entertainment for all visitors and delegates was provided by the Auxiliary of the Laurinburg Church, of which Mrs. G. F. Avinger is president.

THE ELIZABETHTOWN AUXILIARY

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Elizabethtown Presbyterian Church held its first meeting of the new year, April 8th, with a good attendance. The following program was carried out; Opening Hymn; Lead Kindly Light; Scripture, Habakkuk, Chapter 11; Lord's Prayer repeated in concert; roll call by circles and reading of the minutes. The delegation to the meet of Wilmington Presbyterial held at Faison consisted of Mesdames Conrad Clark, D. L. Blue, Sam Cromartie, W. R. Whitted and Newton Robinson who is secretary of the Young People's Work in the Wilmington Presbyterial. These delegates gave interesting reports of the work done at that meeting.

The Auxiliary won the banner and also gold circle for the highest standard of excellence in the Wilmington Presbyterial. This is the second time the Elizabethtown Auxiliary has won the banner.

The Birthday celebration which is held in May was discussed and plans were mapped out for the program. There was also a discussion of a circle for the girls over the age of 18 and as there are so few they were asked to join with the ladies. A new committee was appointed to arrange to have flowers in the church for services. Pledge cards were distributed; signed and returned to the treasurer. The meeting closed with a chain of prayer.

The Auxiliary feels that it has closed a very successful year under the efficient leadership of Mrs. D. L. Blue as president.

The officers for 1929-30 are; Mesdames W. R. Whitted; Pres., David Johnson Treas. Mrs. K. V. Lyon resigned as Vice Pres. and Mrs. J. H. Clark was elected to take her place.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The "Trumpet Call Convention" of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Union will be held at Montreat, June 26-29. Four days of inspiration and Christian fellowship are being planned by the state Endeavor officers, headed by Stokes S. Rawlins, president, Greensboro.

The Endeavor officials have been given the privilege of using the entire Assembly Grounds of the Southern Presbyterian Church. The usual denomination young people's conference will not be held this year, and advice has been given that the Montreat program for the summer will show the C. E. convention as part of the summer attractions.

Reduced railroad rates will be available for tickets purchased and used on June 24 or 25, tickets providing for return twenty days later. Registration fee for the convention is one dollar for senior society members, fifty cents for all others. The Alba Hotel will be used as convention headquarters. Rooms and meals for all delegates will be available here. The hotel rates will be $2.25 per day for room without bath, $2.75 for rooms with bath, two to a room.

Registration must be made in advance, being secured from Miss Gladys Routh, P. O. Box 1027, Greensboro, N. C. Special awards are offered for enrollments. To the first society enrolling its full active membership and pastor the State Union will present a beautiful banner during the convention, and special recognition will be given all societies doing this. The State Union will pay the transportation expense of the president or other representative of the district union registering the largest percentage of the district's goal.

The Presbytery of Albemarle, Synod of North Carolina, decided at its spring meeting to promote a week's conference for the young people of the Presbytery. The conference will be in charge of the Presbytery's committee on young people's work, and will be held a few weeks after the Davidson conference of June 11-18. The geographical location of this Presbytery tends to keep down the attendance at Davidson from this section, and it was felt that a meeting within the Presbyterial bounds was needed to supplement the synodical young people's conference. Thus this Presbytery takes its place with an increasing list of others.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC

Sunday, May 5—Topic: "Leaders Who Carry the Light Across the Sea."—Ref.: Isa. 42:10; Acts 16:9, 10. Program Prepared by Foreign Mission Committee Nashville, Tenn.

The Motive Which Impels the Leaders Who Carry the Light Across the Sea

The leaders who carry the light feel a call to take the Gospel to far away lands. What constitutes this call? "The knowledge of a need and the consciousness of the ability to meet that need," has been given by someone as the definition of a call.

The Need—"There is no other name under Heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12. In Africa, Brazil, Mexico, China, Japan, and Korea, the six countries in which we have missions, there are literally millions who have never even heard the name of Christ, which is the only name whereby men must be saved! Do these people really need Christ in their every day lives? They have their own religions, some of which have high ethical standards. Christianity differs from all other religions in that it not only shows people how to live, but gives them the power to live like Christ. But not all religions hold up high standards—many of them actually teach practices which are disgusting and wicked. (See reference leaflet, "Are the Non-Christian Religions Good Enough?" Free.)

The Methods Employed by the Leaders Who Carry the Light Across the Sea

How best to meet the great need has led to carefully thought out plans of work and division of the task into three great heads.

1. Medical Work.
2. Educational Work.
3. Evangelistic Work.

1. Medical Work. Of Christ's miracles, as recorded by Luke, we find 17 out of 20 are healing miracles. Christ was intensely interested in men's bodies and physical welfare and those who "Bear the Light" must be so interested, too. We have forty-seven medical missionaries in the foreign fields. This includes twenty-eight doctors and nineteen nurses, not counting the native workers.

See reference leaflets:

- (1) "The Medical Missionary's Job," free.
- (2) "Hospital Evangelism," free.

A resume of "Conscripts of Conscience," by Caroline Atwater Mason, would make an interesting addition to this program.

2. Educational Work—The old idea that education is just the acquiring of knowledge has changed and now we believe that true education is that which fits one to put most into and get most out of life. Christ said, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it abundantly." Through educational work our missionaries are opening doors and leading the people with whom they work into the abundant life.

Health education is essential if they are to have the fullness of life which God intended. That they may acquire practical efficiency their curriculum should include in addition to reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, and history, industrial art and agriculture.

Of course, the type of education in each country must be adapted to the particular need of those people, and these needs vary as widely as the climate. The educational work being done by our missionaries ranges from kindergarten through college and seminary. We have 929 Christian schools in which most of the students belong to the in-between class—primary, grammar, and high school grades. We have 138 missionaries who are doing educational work besides hundreds of native teachers. In all of these schools, the Bible is not only being taught as a text-book, but its principles are being lived by the teachers and are thus being forcibly impressed.

Read reference leaflets:

(1) "Evangelism Through Educational and Industrial Missions," free.

(2) "Five Days at McCallie School for Girls," free.

3. Evangelistic Work—This might be called the heart of all our mission work. Permeating the medical and educational work, its principal aim is to lead those healed and taught into a vital relation to Christ. When they Accept Him as their personal Saviour and Lord of their lives, He gives them the power to become like Him. Because the Light has been carried by the true Light Bearers, people all over the world are learning to say, "For me to live is Christ."

This evangelistic work is being carried on in various ways. We have 141 ministers—not very many among the thirty-six million who are looking to us for the Gospel—331 organized churches, and 1,316 Sunday Schools. In addition there are 1,414 outstations where regular services are held. The missionaries and native workers bring the light to many through their personal work as they visit in the homes, much of the most effective evangelistic work being done in this informal way through personal contacts.

Marvelous Results of Labors of Leaders Who Carry the Light Across the Sea

We have talked of why the Light Bearers went to other lands, and of how they carried on their work. Now let us see what the results are.

From all of our fields come stories of transformed lives. Mrs. Wray writes from Toluca, Mexico, where she and Mr. Wray are in charge of a Students' Home. "As we remember how these boys and girls came to us and then think of them now, it is like comparing a diamond to the dull piece of carbon from which it came. They have made splendid grades in school; they have learned to care for their bodies and they have learned how to get along with people. Recently thirty-one of them have been received into the church."

From Mr. Porter, in North Brazil, comes this message: "The outlook here is most encouraging. Wherever a preacher goes, eager congregations gather to hear the word of Life."

In Nagoya, we have our Golden Castle College for girls which is the next to the largest educational institution under the control of the Southern Presbyterian Church. In a nearby town, where a few years ago no one would rent property for the use by Christians, we now have a native Christian teacher, who besides teaching, often tells the Gospel message in Buddhist temples and through a Buddhist paper to which he contributes evangelistic sermons. Has the day of marvels ceased?

Our Responsibility

Each of us has a very definite responsibility toward the work of our Church across the sea, a responsibility which every true Christian must face.

First, we should learn about the need and the way in which our representatives are meeting that need. Then, and then only, can we pray intelligently for the work and workers. And as we learn and pray we will gladly give—thus having a share in establishing the Kingdom of Christ around the world. God will call some of us to go. Let us be sure that we are living so close to Him that we will hear the call and be ready to go when and where He leads us.

"Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations—and lo, I am with you always."

seasons. It makes us feel that we have much to

As Spring approaches and the flowers appear trees begin to look as they do in the picture,

So many glorious things are here,

Bright as the sun as it shines o'er the sea,
Silent as dew drops over the lea,
Lovely as flowers just opened at dawn,
As sweet as the new-mown hay on the lawn,
This is the secret life whispers to me
As I lovingly rest in God's mystery.

Strong as the mountain that towers on the plain,
Loud as the thunder of storms passing by,
Swiftly as years go passing along,
While deep in my heart is a heavenly song,
This is the glory life whispers to me
As I journey along to eternity.

MEETING OF SYNODICAL CHAIRMEN

Annual meeting of the Synodical Chairmen on New York, The Assembly's Sub-committee on Men's Work, the Field Workers Executive Secretary, was held in Atlanta, Ga., Henry Grady Hotel, April 3rd, and 4th. There were present fourteen Synodical Chairmen, three of the Sub-committee, two Field Workers Executive Secretaries. This meeting was considered the most important meeting of the Men-of-the-Church Work. Reports from the various Synods, the successes and failures of the year are discussed, and plans for pursuing are made.

The opening period was led by Rev. J. H. Hendrix, D., of Gastonia, N. C. His theme was "The Men-of-the-Church Work" and his talk gave the direction to the think-whole conference.

Dr. Purcell, Executive Secretary, in an introductory address, pointed out four outstanding features of the past year: 1. The functioning of the Synodical Committees. 2. The appropriation of funds for promoting Men's Work. 3. The growth of Men's Work in small churches of the South. 4. The progress of our program to all types of churches.

Dr. Hendrix, member of the Sub-committee on Men's Work, followed Dr. Purcell and emphasized the progress made in the work during the year. He spoke especially of the fine work of the field men, and of the splendid programs now in use.

The conference progressed it was noted that never present had that same fine spirit of cooperation. From one border of the church to the other were encouraging signs. This does not mean every church has been organized and that all are functioning efficiently, but it does mean every Synod has seen a practical demonstration of the plan and of its worth-whileness.

An interesting discussion concerned the Monthlies. Very gratifying statements were read from the denominations than our own. In many instances our church is doing pioneer work in promoting. Of such vital importance is the progressive work of the men that we feel that some of the suggestions of the conference would be of interest to our church generally.

Worship and dinner hour are indispensable in churches, while others are working successfully at this feature. Entertainment should be simple; i. e., instrumental, solos, quartettes. Anything having reasonable dignity which will lift the spirit of the meeting.

Reports Period. Reports from Group leaders should be a stimulus to work when they have something definite and worthwhile to report. Copies of the service program for the groups in the month should be type written and distributed clearly so that group leaders and men are able to do.

Worship Service originality should be used to make it attractive and impressive. It may be assigned to a group. Men should be trained to pray by themselves, numbered slips or designated members prevent awkward pauses and confusion.

Practical Program is now being used by 350 churches. Use as many men as seems best. Be firm and in a polite but firm manner speak to it. Use your own men as far as possible with occasional outside speakers at the Department Chairman should plan this well in advance and outline plan at Council meetings two weeks before general meeting. Material may be secured from church papers, Synodical Committees and Department of Men's Work.

Open Forum two or three men might be allowed to lead without delay. Careful guidance and adherence to time limit. The pastor should be brief, pointed, and suggestive. Pastor should attend all meetings but be careful not to talk too much.

Activities. The object is to put men to work on something definite and worthwhile. Some things may be done all through the year in connection with monthly programs occasionally. Much careful thought has been given to the Service Suggestions in the back of the Program booklet.

An interesting discussion was the promotion of Men's Work in the various Synods. Virginia, Texas and Carolina reported meetings of the Synodical Chairmen. At these meetings detailed plans were laid out and sent down to the Presbyterian or Southern Synod. More and more is the feeling that the success or the failure of the Men's Work rests, and will rest for some time, on the Synodical Chairmen. If the chairman will be enthused, he has the power and the ability to put the work across.

The general sentiment of the meeting that there should be complete accord between the Commission on Men's Work in the Presbytery and the officers of the Men-of-the-Presbytery. In order to secure this it was suggested that the Presbyteries be organized with only three officers—President, Secretary and Treasurer—for a time at least—and that these three officers be invited to sit with the Presbyterial Committee when it makes out plans for the promotion of the work.

A third discussion was on the group and was led by Mr. L. A. Coulter. It was decided that, if possible, at least dependable men should be in each group. Possibly half of the men in each church are not in touch with the Church, Bible Class or Men-of-the-Church. There should be a new alignment of the men each year, which should be based upon a fair discussion of the interest and ability among the men.

A fourth discussion was on the council. This was led by Mr. F. L. Temple. The Council Meeting is vital in success of the Men-of-the-Church. Most important feature of Men's Work. This is a small group for instruction and council upon which rests the responsibility for the whole male membership of the church.

A member spoke of his council meetings when he has a supper, suggestions from Department Chairmen for work to be done, group leaders to hear the plans and make suggestions. If too much is proposed, the Council decides what shall be assigned to the group leaders for execution.

Rev. G. A. Wilson, for the Committee previously appointed, presented the following findings and recommendations, which were adopted and ordered forwarded to the Sub-Committee on Stewardship and Men's Work:

The Chairmen of Men's Work of the Synods met at the Henry Grady Hotel for a two days session, April 3rd and 4th. Fourteen of the sixteen white Synods were represented by their respective Chairmen. This meeting was a demonstration of the value of the Men-of-the-Church and of the very great and substantial progress made during the past year.

The reports of the Synods, without exception, showed at least a nucleus of men not only fully convinced of the practicability and wisdom of the Assembly's Plan, but determined to give of their time and effort to promote the work. Perhaps the outstanding development of the year is the building up of a working personnel within the Synods. The reports show a church-wide, vital and growing interest in Men's Work, and that the men of the church is a vital and increasing power in the life of our beloved church.

Dr. Purcell's years of hard, constructive work are bearing fruit. He is the right man in the right place. The discussions brought out many interesting and important facts. We mention particularly these: 1. Every Synod's Chairman heartily endorses and cordially recommends the use of the Monthly Programs prepared by the Committee. 2. There is an increased demand to the office for literature and other helps for instituting and developing local organizations, which indicates an enlarged interest. 3. The body was unanimously of the opinion that promotional work should be carried forward by the Synods and Presbyteries, which is being done more and more. 4. The value of Annual Presbyterial Group Meetings of men was clearly brought out. 5. It was deemed advisable for the Synod to hold delegated conferences, study of the work. 6. The field work done by Messrs. Naff and Coulter was shown to be invaluable by the testimony of these men from the Synods in which they have worked. 7. This body approves the action of the Assembly's Committee in asking an appropriation of at least $20,000 and recommends that, if possible, this appropriation be increased to $25,000.—Signed—G. A. Wilson, Jr., H. G. Bedinger, F. L. Temple, J. E. Potts.

One of the most delightful parts of the conference was a dinner given Wednesday evening with Dr. Purcell presiding. Besides the Chairmen, a number of the pastors and men from churches of Atlanta and environs were present. Rev. Wm. Anderson, D. D., of Dallas, Texas made a splendid talk on "Men and the Church." A number of interesting testimonies from men were heard on what the Men's Work has meant to them personally.

DR. CHESTER'S BOOK, "BEHIND THE SCENES"

As usual Dr. Chester has told in a charming way the story. It is that of our Foreign Work, with which no one is so familiar as he. Coming to the Secretaryship at a time when things were critical, and when it was needed that a man of exceptional gifts should take the helm—he fully justified his selection, and "made his calling and election sure," by an administration of marked efficiency.

A Secretary, of another church board, once said to the writer, concerning the complications of the great work, "When we want information on matters involving the history of Foreign Missions we call on Chester."

His little book gives an inner view of the difficulties of our great work, and how well they are met by our Executive Committee, and should stimulate absolute confidence in our administration.

Also it reveals the depth of devotion of our home management as well as that of our on-the-field representatives.

Written in his usual clear and trenchant style, the book brings the whole church under obligations to a servant whose long service marks him among our executives. BE SURE TO READ IT.

"Behind the Scenes" is a valuable contribution to present day missionary literature. It is unique in that it depicts the work from the inside, and acquaints the reader, not only with the development of the work of foreign missions in a great denomination during the past sixty-five years, but it also introduces him to many of the perplexing administrative problems which confront the officials of this divinely imposed task.

The author speaks out of a sane administrative experience of thirty-five years, and he writes with sympathetic understanding and from first hand knowledge of the men who shaped policies, and the events which formed this interesting history. It is a book which will appeal to everyone—pastor and layman alike—who is interested in the greatest work of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and in the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Dr. Chas. E. Diehl.

Behind the Scenes: An Administrative History of Southern Presbyterian Foreign Missions, by Samuel H. Chester. Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va., p.p. 145. Dr. Chester has been intimately connected with our Foreign Mission work since 1893. No one is better qualified than he to write the history of its administrative development. He describes here the principles which have been developed, the problems which have been encountered, the important decisions which have been made from the beginning down to the present. We feel that everyone who is interested in the history of our Church will want to read this book, and will be repaid for doing so. But the book is more than history, it is a story that has points of interest and instruction for every member of the Southern Presbyterian Church. For one thing the author has the gifts of writing—no one would have imagined that an administrative history of Southern Presbyterian missions could have been told so entertainingly. Then in addition Dr. Chester writes of the past in such a way that it throws light on the future. As we read his book, bearing witness on almost every page of the author's own fine Christian character and reflecting his vision, it seems to us that his words are those of an "elder statesman" in the Kingdom of God, words which the church should ponder, and from which it may drink wisdom for the days that are ahead. Most of the material of this book was first delivered in a series of lectures at Austin Theological Seminary. We are indebted to this institution for furnishing an occasion for the writing of this valuable addition to the literature of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

OBITUARIES

MISS MARY CATHERINE BRIDGES

She was born in Richmond, Virginia, March 6, 1836, the daughter of James R. and Mary Dandridge, Bridges. At the age of 22, she was left the head of the house, both parents having died, leaving in her charge seven brothers and sisters younger than she.

From that day she laid her life out in an unselfish service rarely equaled. It was always, not what I desire, but what is best for these children! And it could not have been truer of any mother, that "her children rise up and call her blessed."

Miss Bridges, as may be seen from what is said above, was a character of unusual strength. Her judgment was strong, and when made up was, not easily reversed. Her Christian walk was measured by the teaching of the Bible and it was final to her, admitting of no debate. She had a reason for the hope that was in her, and never hesitated about giving it. Her will was little less than imperial. She was not given to receding from any course or purpose determined upon. Nothing less could have brought her safe through the many trying experiences of an almost century life. What a blessing it would be to this forward generation if her like were multiplied!

Her latest years were spent in great frailty of body, and often suffering much. But through it all she manifested that vigor of mind and soul which had so marked all her years. During her illness, incident to the end, she suffered little, but wanted to go home. "The captive Exile hasteneth to be loosed." In hours of death she laid her soul and her all in the hands of Him, whom she had honored for over 80 years, and we laid her body in the dust, waiting that blessed hope—the coming of the Lord.

After a life marked by faithfulness and toil, she fell asleep March 7, 1929—a day after she had reached her 93rd birthday. Eighty years of activity in the church all of which were given to unselfish work, and faithful testimony. Her body rests in beautiful Elmwood, Birmingham, along side that of a sister who knew and felt her tender care. Her brother, Dr. J. R. Bridges of the Standard was present at the funeral, realizing how great was his loss and how rich her gain. Such a life needs little said about it—it speaks for itself.

"Needs there the praise of the love-written record,
The name and the epitaph graved on the stone?
The things we have lived for, let them be our story,
We ourselves but remembered by what we have done."

Not myself, but the truth that in life I have spoken,
Not myself, but the seed that in life I have sown,
Shall pass on to ages—all about me forgotten,
Save the truth I have spoken, the things I have done."

"She hath done what she could", was our Lord's highest encomium, and this may of truth be said of Miss Bridges.

The Second Presbyterian Church; Burlington—Beginning March 17th, and closing Easter Sunday a revival was held in this church, simultaneously with all other churches in the city. Rev. W. Redd Turner, of Greensboro, N. C. conducted the services, bringing to his hearers clear-cut and searching Gospel messages. Miss Anna Kimball, of Springfield, Ky. conducted the singing and added much to the spiritual atmosphere of the services. Eleven new members were received into the church on Profession of Faith, and by letter.

Piedmont Presbyterian Church; Burlington—This church recently enjoyed a spiritual revival which began March 17th, and closed on Easter Sunday morning. Rev. Ora. C. Huston, the pastor, brought the message each night in most powerful and heart-searching manner. Mr. J. H. Randolph, of Belmont conducted the singing. An unusual feature of the music during the meeting was the singing of gospel songs each night by a group of ten men of the Church.

Eighteen new members were taken in the church on Easter Sunday morning, on Profession of Faith, and by letter. A beautiful and impressive service for the reception of new members was held at the close of the morning worship hour. Following up work after the revival added ten more new members to the list, making a total of 28 new members being taken in since the first of the year.

All services of the Church are well attended, and interest is growing daily in the upbuilding of the church.

First Presbyterian Church; Thomasville—The report covering the Church Year April 1, 1928 to March 31, 1929 represents in many respects the best year's work in the history of this Church. Gifts to Benevolent Causes were three hundred and forty nine dollars as against two hundred and thirty-eight dollars to Benevolent Causes during the previous year. Total contributions to all purposes were two thousand and four hundred and ninety dollars. Of this amount, two hundred and forty three dollars were contributed through the Woman's Auxiliary, four hundred and sixty five dollars through the Sabbath School, and one thousand seven hundred and eighty two dollars through the Church Treasurer. Twenty eight members were added to the Church roll during the year, and two were dismissed by letter. This brings the resident Church membership to one hundred and four. The total Sabbath School enrollment is now one hundred and forty four. The report when compared with the figures of previous years, shows that the Church has had a remarkable growth in all phases of its work. The Sabbath School enrollment one year ago was one hundred and fifteen. Three years ago it was only sixty seven. The Church membership three years ago was sixty two. Total contributions three years ago were one thousand and forty five dollars.

CHILDREN

THE KING OF THE MAY

Molly Davis had been chosen Queen of the May and she was the happiest girl in town. George McGuire had been chosen King of the May and he was the most miserable boy.

The girls all did homage to the chosen Queen, but the boys treated the King to whoops and jeers and called him Queen.

"It's a fine thing to be able to laugh at yourself," said his mother. "Don't let them make you lose your temper or your poise. Afterwards nobody will remember. But I consider it quite an honor to be chosen King."

"There isn't much honor," her son assured her.

"A King is supposed to be the finest, a leader, noble and brave as well as just and merciful," replied his mother.

"Well," said George. "If I had some of those qualities maybe it wouldn't be so funny, me being chosen King."

His mother glanced up from her book and saw a tall slender lad with sunny curly hair, lovely classic features and a complexion of peaches and cream, eyes of deepest blue fringed with long curving lashes.

"I think they chose me for a good joke," he was saying.

"Oh, they probably had some other idea in mind too," she answered, her eyes lingering on his beauty of which he was ashamed.

"Maybe it's because I look like a girl," he muttered.

"There are lots of—er—fair-complexioned men," replied his mother. "I believe one of the prize-fighters, a champion, was quite—er—good-looking."

George's dimple appeared in his silken cheek.

"Gee," he said, "I love boxing. Boxers often have their noses broken and get cauliflower ears, don't they?"

"Rather painful and unpleasant, I should think," said his mother.

When George was gone, Mrs. McGuire had a caller, Miss Raymond the teacher.

"We want to have a very pretty May Day Festival this year," she said. "Some of the girls and boys have learned some lovely steps and are going to do a spring dance for us. We are going to have the Maypole near the fountain in the Park. Won't that be lovely?"

"Lovely!" echoed Mrs. McGuire.

"Now, I wonder if you can't manage to get a pale blue velvet suit for George," said Miss Raymond. "It should have long pants and a big taffeta sash tied around the waist with a bow in the back. Won't he look adorable?"

Mrs. McGuire looked a little uneasy, and well she might, for when George heard of the velvet suit he was pretty near crushed.

"He doesn't have to make a monkey of himself to please the others," was his father's verdict. "They can get some other boy who isn't a McGuire."

Miss Raymond was at first in despair, then she said:

"I'll let the children decide their own costumes. After all this is their party."

George became almost cheerful.

"Maybe I better go and see what Molly is going to wear," he said. "I s'pose we ought to sort of match."

Molly was as lovely as George, only she was dark.

"I did want to be a real queen with a long train and everything," she told George. "Why can't you wear your Indian suit and I'll be a queen from the fairies visiting you?"

"Well, I thought I'd like to dress up like an aviator," said George. "I could be Lindy and you could be Amelia Earhart."

"Oh, that would be fun!" cried Molly.

"Or I could be a policeman and you could be a robber or something I'd caught," suggested George.

If Miss Raymond and the children's parents were anxious they did not show it, only Miss Raymond warned several times:

"Remember this is to be the most lovely May Day we've ever had. One that is worthy of our school."

George and Molly were very mystifying and refused to tell their friends how they were going to appear when they headed the May Day parade through their native city. Miss Raymond began to have a line down the middle of her forehead, but she did not question them.

Well, the first of May dawned fresh and clear. It was still a little cool in

BROWN-haired Teddy was the May King but, of course, Susie May got the most attention, and she had a little girl with YELLOW hair to hold up her long train. The little girl's name was Polly, and she wore a dainty light YELLOW organdy frock trimmed with bands of light GREEN. Her socks were YELLOW, so were her slippers and she wore a pretty PINK necklace and bracelet. Susie May, the Queen, wore a PINK silk dress with a wide light GREEN sash that matched her long train. The train was PINK on one side and light GREEN on the other. The crown of flowers on Queen of the May's head were PINK and white with GREEN leaves and YEL-LOW centers. The staff Susie carried was YELLOW with GREEN and light PURPLE flowers. The King wore a white blouse and BROWN trousers. Susie May wore PINK, so were her slippers. The King wore light BROWN shoes. All the children have PINK and RED lips. The border of this picture is PINK and the lettering is GREEN.

the shade, but there was a breath of summer in the air for all that. There wasn't a cloud in the sky. The children with their Maypole with streamers and their costumes of pale rose, blue, yellow, green and lavender waited in the school yard for their king and queen to appear and lead them to the fountain in the park.

They were not kept waiting long. Two little figures were seen coming.

"Why, what's Molly got on?" the children asked each other, and Miss Raymond asked herself: "What HAS she got on?"

It was a long green cape which touched the ground all around, just a plain green cape made of green sateen. George had one on just like it. The two had been made by the children themselves and were gathered around their necks with heavy thread sewed in big stitches.

"Let's see underneath!" shouted the children. But the royal pair loftily refused.

The march to the park was a merry affair and at the fountain the Maypole was raised and the dancers skipped on the soft new grass. Suddenly a man with a camera came out of a car.

"I'm from the News," he said.

"Now, we must pose and get a good picture," said Miss Raymond. "George and Molly, couldn't you take off your capes now?"

"I'll photograph the king and queen first," said the news man.

Molly and George stepped forward and dropped off their capes. A gasp of admiration went up. Molly wore a white dress with a train trimmed with pink artificial flowers. She was the picture of dainty loveliness. George wore a light blue velvet suit, with long pants and a sash.

"The King! The Queen!" proudly shouted their friends and Miss Raymond clasped her hands with delight.

Afterwards George was telling his father.

"Dad, I got to thinking it over," he said. "Molly wanted to be a fairy queen and I thought it was worth while making a monkey of myself to please her and Miss Raymond and the rest of them. So Molly's Aunt Priss, who used to be on the stage, said she'd fix up our costumes and we could surprise everybody. I even let her use curling irons on my hair and make it worse than it was. Gee, I thought I'd die, I was so ashamed of myself, but when the time came I didn't mind it a bit. After all my true friends know I'm not a sissy."

"Sure, and your old Dad knows it too," said Mr. McGuire. "That took real courage, that did!"

"I'd rather have taken a licking or been ducked in ice-water and hung up by my toes than have to stand up there in that crazy suit of clothes. Gosh!" said George.

"Your mother is awful pleased," said his Dad.

"Then I am too," said George, smiling bashfully.

VEGETABLE SOUP

"I've a lot of things to deliver over at Olney, and I'll be pretty late getting home to lunch. Don't bother trying to keep anything hot for me, Mary," said Roger Bates as he left the breakfast table.

"I'm going to have vegetable soup. It's a good day for it, so rainy and blustery. It will keep hot on the back of the stove," returned his sister.

"That will be good," said Roger as he hurried away.

"And make some apple dumplings, too," clamored the two little boys, Davy and Ned.

Mary looked at them and laughed. "Well, I'll have to think about it," she said.

"Please think you will," urged Ned.

"Just now I think you boys would better hurry off to school. Put on your thick coats so you won't get wet."

Mary hastily cleared away the breakfast table and washed the dishes. She had decided that she would make the soup after her grandmother's recipe. It took longer, but then it was so good. Fortunately she had everything she needed for it in the house. She would prepare it at once and let it boil slowly. And of course she must make the dumplings for the little boys, but Roger was also fond of apple dumplings.

As she went about her work there was a little anxious frown on her forehead. It took a lot of careful planning to keep their living expenses within their income, which consisted of the meager sum inherited from their parents, and the wages which Roger earned as clerk at Thompson's General Store. How she wished that she could earn money in some way! If there were only some work that she could do at home. She could not do anything that would take her away from home. She must be there to keep it comfortable for her brothers. How fortunate it was that she and Roger had finished high school before the death of their parents. They had had hopes of college, hopes which in the duty before them of rearing and educating the little brothers they had to give up.

The soup put on to boil, and the dumplings ready to be put into the oven in time for the boy's coming in for their lunch, Mary put the little house in order and sat down in the spotless kitchen with her mending basket. The number of socks to be darned for her brothers was rather discouraging, and she found that she was out of darning cotton. She saw by a glance out of the window that it was not raining, and she hastily put on her coat and hat to run to the shop to buy some. The shop was near the corner of the street where several lines of Interurban cars came into the village.

Mary noticed that a house across the street which had been empty for several months was being remodeled. She asked Mrs. Smith, the shopkeeper, who had taken the house.

"Some people from over at Carthage. They are going to start a sort of eating place. I guess it is needed, for there isn't anything around of that kind, and so many people coming and going on the cars all the time. I wonder some one didn't do it long ago," Mrs. Smith informed her.

"I'd like to do something of that kind," Mary thought as she hurried back to her home.

After the little boys had come in from school, eaten their lunch, declaring that the apple dumplings were "great" and that Mary was the "best ever" for making them, and gone again to school, Mary resumed the darning of their socks.

Presently Roger came in, a little sooner than he had expected to come.

"But I have to eat in a rush," he said. "I have to go over to Olney again. My, that soup smells good!"

"And it will taste good, too," laughed his sister. "And so will the apple dumplings."

"Apple dumplings? Good for you, Mary!"

When Roger was about to go out again after his meal, he turned back to say, "Old Mrs. Hall would like some of that soup, I guess. Living alone as she does, and so feeble, I don't think she has much nourishing food. Put some in a pitcher and I'll hand it in to her. I guess I have time."

"Oh, I'll take her some. You run on to your work."

"It's raining pretty hard again."

"I don't mind the rain, run along."

With the soup in a covered tin bucket and her rain coat and rubbers on, Mary hastened to Mrs. Hall's house around the corner from the shop where she had bought the darning cotton in the morning. After receiving the old woman's voluble thanks, and chatting with her for a few minutes, Mary started to return home. It was raining more heavily and a wind had risen. A woman standing nearby and looking irresolutely around accosted her.

"Do you know of any place where I can get something to eat?" she asked. "I don't see a restaurant anywhere about."

"There isn't any at this end of the village," returned Mary.

"Then I'll have to go without anything. I am too tired to walk to the other end. Thank you," and the stranger turned to walk away.

She was a frail-looking, elderly woman and she looked as tired as she had said she was.

"If you will come with me, I can give you some hot soup," offered Mary, obeying a sudden impulse. "I live but a short distance from here."

The woman hesitated, then said simply, "You are very kind. I accept your offer gratefully."

"A friend of mine told me she was to establish a delicatessen near the place where the Interurban comes in. I had business at Milford, and being so near, I thought I'd just come on and see how she was getting on. I found that the place is not ready for her yet," the stranger explained as they walked alone.

When they reached Mary's home the young girl said, "I'll take you into the kitchen, if you do not mind. It is cosier there this kind of a day."

"Indeed, I do not mind," declared the woman, as she glanced about the well-kept room. Removing her wraps, she seated herself in the rocking chair Mary placed for her.

Mary soon had a bowl of steaming soup and slices of bread and butter daintily arranged on a tray for her guest, and while the latter was eating she took up her darning.

When the bowl was empty the woman leaned back with a little sigh of satisfaction. "It was delicious. I never ate such good soup before," she said emphatically.

"I am glad you like it," smiled Mary. "We had apple dumplings, too, but the boys didn't leave any. I have three brothers."

The stranger laughed lightly. "I know what boys will do to apple dumplings, especially if the dumplings were as good as your soup, and I do not doubt that they were."

"Will you have more soup?" invited Mary.

"No, thank you, my dear. I feel like another person now, and after a little longer rest I'll have to be on my way home."

During a little chat which followed, Mary learned that her guest was a Mrs. Gray and that she was the wife of a farmer living near Carthage.

When the rain had lessened and Mrs. Gray declared herself fully rested, she prepared to leave. She opened her hand bag and took out her purse. "You must let me pay you for my lunch," she said.

"Oh, no, no," returned Mary decidedly, and flushing. "I am so glad I could be of service to you. I couldn't take pay for it."

"I thank you very much, and I shall not forget you. I hope I shall see you before long."

When once more Mary took up the much interrupted darning, she thought, "I am glad I made soup today. Mrs.

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc. show they need a good purging. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

Gray surely enjoyed it, and then poor old Mrs. Hall had some, too."

Mary had forgotten the incident, until a few weeks later when she was out on an errand she saw that the delicatessen shop seemed to have been opened. There were dainty white curtains in the windows, and a tempting array of food was displayed. It made her think of Mrs. Gray. She wondered if she would ever see her again. "But I don't suppose that I shall," she decided.

But she was mistaken. A few days later Mrs. Gray came to call, and at once stated her reason for coming. "I have thought a lot about you and that delicious soup, and I have told my friend, Mrs. Wilson, who has that delicatessen shop over on the square. She thinks she would like to have you make some for her several times a week. She will furnish the materials, and send for it, and of course pay for a fair price for your work. I thought perhaps you would like a chance of earning some money at home."

"Oh, I would! How nice and kind of you to think of it for me!" exclaimed Mary. "I have often wished that I had a way of earning something to help along."

"Then you must go and see Mrs. Wilson as soon as you can. She will want you to cook other things for her, too."

"Oh, I'll be glad to do it, if I can please her," said Mary. "If your other cooking is as good as that soup, you will please her all right," smiled Mrs. Gray. "Her shop is already a success. She cannot attend to it and cook too. She is going to have more and more trade as time goes on and people know about it. You will like to work with her. She is a very kind and just woman. I feel sure you will make a success of it."

Mrs. Gray's words proved true. Mary's cooking pleased Mrs. Wilson and her patrons. She was a happy girl, doing work that she liked, which she did at home, and for which she was well paid. —Emily S. Winsor in Kind Words.

WHEN "UNCLE" GEORGE JOINED

"There ought to be peace atween you an' me. We won't neither of us live long. An' we can't face judgment as we aire." So I'm comin'. I've jest joined at Bethel."

All who knew him were able to judge how hard it was for "Uncle" George to dictate this verbal message to the boy who was to carry it across the mountain to the man on Bending Fork.

There had been bad blood between the two for years, and the cause was trivial. They argued, over their cups, as to which had the best saddle mule, and it ended in a wrangle. They parted, each vowing that he would kill the other on sight, if ever they met again. Then came an election in which the two espoused the cause of rival candidates for the circuit court bench, and the feud was irrevocable.

Even the most ardent lovers of peace ceased to intercede. Finally, it settled down to this—there would be peace so long as both men remained each on his own side of the mountain. The only neutral ground was the tiny village five miles up the creek, where they had to go for grocery supplies and mail. Years passed.

There is preaching in the log "church house" on Janet's creek every fourth Sunday. Just a week before his seventy-second birthday, "Uncle" George—for so all called him—left his seat abruptly at the morning service and stalked down the aisle during the singing of the last hymn. He was received into membership.

What a surprise it was to all! "Uncle" George was considered an "infidel" by all. Only "Aunt" Betty, his wife, had continued hoping.

"I took him fer better or fer worse, fer richer or fer poorer, in sickness or in health till he is dead or till I am," "Aunt" Betty had often remarked. "He's been a good man to me."

PRESCRIPTION WE WROTE IN 1892

Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine in 1875, the needs for a remedy were not as great as today. In normal lives, ate plain food, and got plenty of fresh air. Even that early there were ailments and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did find were good for human beings. His prescription for constipation that he used in his practice, and which he sold in stores in 1892 under the name of Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a vegetable remedy, intended for children and elderly people, proved just such a mild, safe remedy.

His prescription has proven its worth as the largest selling liquid remedy. It has won the confidence of the people who needed it to get relief from biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad stomach, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your doctor's office write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for free trial.

But even "Aunt" Betty was not "figurin' on George gettin' sech a dose of religion." Hardly had the benediction been pronounced, when the mountaineer declared his purpose to cross the mountain forthwith and seek peace with his enemy. Friends expostulated.

"I hain't never no infidel!" protested Uncle George. "I been staying out o' church because o' that fight. Now I'm goin' to make it right."

By way of compromise the man agreed to wait half an hour while a boy carried a verbal message of explanation across the mountain.

After thirty minutes had passed the mountaineer swung into the saddle. "If he hain't willin' to make peace, let him shoot. The trouble with most people is they want a religion that don't cost nothing."

Hands folded over the horn of his Texas saddle, "Uncle" George, back erect—he was thin and wiry and nimble in spite of his seventy-two years—permitted his mule to pick its way up the steep trail. At any instant might come the crack of a rifle. To pick the old man out of the saddle from ambush would indeed be easy. But his face showed no emotion.

At last—and it seemed ages to those watching in the valley—the mule reached the tip and started down the opposite side.

The tension ended abruptly. A man, rifle under arm, stepped from the bushes. The two graybeards eyed one another closely. "Uncle" George was the first one to speak.

"I'm here. I jest joined at Bethel. I reckon I'm more to blame than you. I reckon you was a perfec' fool when I was drinkin'."

The other's face beamed. He reached up his hand.

"Pears to me I orter be ashamed. I been a church member fer years, but I never figured on makin' peace a-cause o' that."

On the creek below was a log home, smoke curling from the chimney of the lean-to kitchen. In the front yard stood a woman, stooped and gray, screening her eyes with her hand, her intent gaze on the trail. Her face wreathed with smiles when she saw the two coming side by side, her husband leading "Uncle" George's mule.

At the woman's feet a flock of chickens clustered, looking for food. She stooped and caught a chicken. A deft motion and twist and the chicken flopped on the earth.

"Who-e-ee! Who-e-ee!" It was the mountain call. Her voice was joyous, vibrant. "Hurry, you all. We'll have fried chicken." She stooped and caught up another young fowl. "An' we'll send ter fetch Betty. We'll have 'er here by the time dinner's ready. Hurry, you all."—John Harrison Allen, in The Congregationalist.

Nervous Women Praise Capudine

Delicately poised women who suffer from high nerve strain and nervous pains, such as periodic pains, headache and pains in the back and sides are high in their praise of Capudine because it quickly soothes the tense nerves and relieves the pain. Being liquid, Capudine acts almost instantly,—does not upset the stomach. Sold by druggists in 30c and 60c sizes. (adv.)

Girls, don't worry about middle age

Lots to recommend it, if you keep fit

TELL a sensible woman of 50 that she looks like the older sister rather than the mother of her children, and she just laughs at you.

"I'm middle-aged," she'll declare, "and not trying to hide the fact. Why should I? Middle age has a lot in its favor—that is, if you're well and healthy.

"Sick? Never had a doctor in my life except when my babies came. Never had the habit of dosing myself with pills and medicines, either. I just took Nujol—all the time my babies were coming, and in between times, too. I'll always depend on Nujol.

"Even the healthiest woman is better off by taking Nujol—especially at times when her system is apt to be thrown off balance and her regular functions upset. This pure substance keeps your system functioning normally and naturally even under abnormal conditions. It not only prevents an excess of body poisons (we all have them) from forming, but

Commencement At Southwestern

Alumnus, Dr. Moldenhawer, and Dr.

This year the commencement address will be delivered by an alumnus of Southwestern. He is the Rev. J. V.
Moldenhawer, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New York City.

The sermon before the Southwestern Christian Union, which consists of the various religious organizations among the students, will be preached by Dr.

president of the college will, as is the custom, deliver the baccalaureate ser-

the graduation exercises on Tuesday morning, June 11.

The debt on Southwestern has been reduced by the payment of the only bonds that have as yet fallen due and some that were surrendered before maturity. There is on hand a fund to make a similar payment when the next bonds fall due, i. e., in October, so that the debt has been reduced, in effect, by one hundred thousand dollars.

A friend has offered to give one hundred thousand dollars on condition that three hundred thousand besides be given by June of this year. This offer

Doctor Thacker At Roanoke

Assembly Evangelist, Assisted by Mrs.
Thacker, Holds 15-Day Series

The Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D.D., has just concluded a fifteen days' meeting in Raleigh Court Presbyterian Church, Roanoke, Va. The special services began on Easter Sunday, March 31 and concluded April 14. The first week Dr. Thacker spoke each afternoon at 3:30 and each night at 7:45.
The second week of the meeting Mrs.
Thacker spoke at the afternoon service and Dr. Thacker preached at night.
These services elicited the interest of all of our community and also drew large numbers from other parts of the city. Various churches sent special delegations to the services. The pastor and the officers of the church are in unanimous agreement that Dr.
Thacker has done a splendid piece of constructive work for the congregation. There were a great number of reconsecration cards signed, and many signed cards confessing Christ for the first time. This church will receive a number of additions from the services, and it is expected that the wide influence of the services will be felt in all the churches about us. The music for the services was conducted by Mr.
Henry A. Backemeyer, of Indianapolis.

Church notes and announcements from church bulletin for April 21:

"As we come to worship on this Sunday the spirit of the special services conducted by Dr. J. Ernest Thacker lingers with us. The deep, heart-searching, soul-stirring messages from the Gospel which Dr. Thacker brought to the large congregations which heard him will abide in the memory and bring forth fruit in the lives of the hearers throughout the years. The seven afternoon addresses which Mrs. Thacker delivered the second week of the meeting reached women and men from all parts of our city and made a very definite contribution to the impression which the series as a whole left on the life of our church. Now that Dr. and Mrs. Thacker have gone from us let us remember the resolutions that we made during their stay with us, let us practice the substance of those resolutions in our daily lives. If that be done then the preacher will feel that in that fact he has his greatest reward.
May our church find new strength in those who come into fellowship with Christ for the first time and in the renewed devotion of those who have definitely reconsecrated themselves to Him."

Religious Census Shows Gains

Christian Herald Announces Results of Statistics Gathered Showing Additions to Various Churches

The Associated Press reports that the Christian Herald has made a census of the additions to the churches in the United States during 1928. Of course the figures for the Southern Presbyterian Church will not be available for 1928 until the meeting of the General Assembly May 16. The figures used must have been those of 1927. However we give the report as printed in the daily press:

The Christian Herald's annual religious census shows that churches in the United States gained 1,115,000 new members in 1928, almost twice as many as they gained in 1927.

The Baptist Church leads in the gains, its 14 branches showing a combined increase of 375,842 new members; the Roman Catholic Church comes second, with 360,153 new members; and the Disciples of Christ third, with 173,093. All other gains were under 100,000.

Three denominations showed decreases in membership, the Evangelical Synod of North America, the Evangelical Church, and the Friends. All the others showed gains ranging from 500 reported by the 10 bodies of the Oriental Catholic Church up to the more than 360,000 gained by the Roman Catholic Church.

"This high conquest comes of our a-period of mixed hope and fear," Dr.
H. K. Carroll of the publication said.
"Just after the World War churches were uncomfortably near the edge of actual defeat. A few years ago a few of the most hopeful ones reported net losses. Unusual losses assailed them, losses by excessive pruning, by wandering sheep, by irresponsible members."

The publication lists the total memberships in the leading denominations as follows: Roman Catholic, 17,095,844;
Methodist Episcopal, 4,614,097;
Southern Baptist, 3,823,660; National Baptist (colored), 3,515,542; Methodist Episcopal South, 2,580,835; Presbyterian, 1,918,974; Disciples of Christ, 1,528,692;
Northern Baptist, 1,419,883;
Protestant Episcopal, 1,215,383.

Queens Endowment Has Successful Week

Women's Teams Work for Six Days
Under High Pressure and Raise
$77,000

The week of April 14-22, the women of Charlotte, under the leadership of Mrs. C. C. Hook, campaign director for the Alumnae, spent six intensive days soliciting subscriptions to the $200,000 endowment fund, which they hoped to raise to complete the sum needed to put Queens College on the
"A" grade list of accredited colleges.

Queens now has an invested endowment of $132,000, the Synod of North Carolina gives them $10,000, which is recognized as five per cent on $200,000 and acknowledged as equivalent to that sum in endowment funds. The college needs the sum of about $160,000 to complete the required $500,000 stipulated by the Southern Association of Colleges to grant the rating for an accredited college.

The second week in April, 16 teams from the churches of Charlotte and surrounding territory canvassed every day except Saturday and Sunday.
They met daily at Ivey's dining room for a luncheon, where reports of the activities were made and displayed on

Doctor Whaling's Engagements

Dr. Dr. Thornton Whaling, professor of theology in Louisville Theological Seminary, will deliver the "Griffith Thomas" lectures, before the Evangelical Theological College, Dallas, Texas, April 29th to May 5th. His subject will be "Truth in Jesus." The lectures will be published in book form after delivery.

He also will preach the opening sermon before the National Congress of Sons of the American Revolution in Springfield, Ill., on May 19th and will serve as chaplain General of said Congress May 20th to 24th.

His McNair lectures at the University of North Carolina on "Science and Religion Today" are just out and publishers report that unusual advance sale has greeted the volume which treats the vexed subjects of the relations of religion and science.

MONTREAT PREPARES FOR GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Interesting Reports to be Made

Reports to the Assembly will be made by the following: The Committee on the Assembly's Work, Executive Committees of Foreign Missions, of Home Missions, of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, of Religious Education, the Department of Stewardship, of Men's Work, and of Woman's Work. Permanent Committees to report will include those on Protestant Relief, Bible Cause, and Judicial Matters. Trustees of the Assembly and Presbyterian Foundation, and of the Assembly's Training School will report.

Ad Interim Committees to make reports include those on Correspondence Course for Ministers, Closer Relations with other Presbyterian Bodies, Directory for Worship, and Optional Forms, Divorce, and Survey of Fields occupied by both Presbyterian Church U. S. and Presbyterian Church U. S. A.

There will be ample space for all the meetings and business details of the Assembly. The great Anderson Auditorium will be the place of assemblage for public meetings and parliamentary proceedings. Class rooms will offer committees private apartments for their discussions. While the grounds and hotel lobbies will provide many opportunities for personal conferences and the reunions of old friends of college days and former pastorates. The mountains will afford relaxation from business in the walks and ever changing scenery visible from the roads and porches in the Montreat grounds.

The Press and the Assembly

It is a satisfaction to know that we can follow the deliberations of the General Assembly, the highest court of the Southern Presbyterian Church, through reliable information given to the secular press. The Assembly has an authorized publicity agent, the Stewardship Department, which will release to the Associated Press, the daily proceedings of the meeting.

In addition to these releases by the Associated Press the papers of the state will have special correspondents to supply details the more limited stories cannot provide.

Dr. Anderson's Invitation

Dr. R. C. Anderson, president of Montreat Association, issues the following invitation and cordial welcome to all who will attend the General Assembly, together with valuable information commissioners will be glad to receive.

He announces that nothing has been left undone looking to the comfort of the commissioners for the effectiveness of the whole work of the Assembly.

"We anticipate with pleasure the meeting of the General Assembly in Montreat May 16th. It now appears that Assembly Inn will be ready for use though not entirely finished. This building will be reserved for the commissioners as nearly as possible, but in a few exceptional cases others than commissioners will be entertained in the building.

All commissioners entertained in Assembly Inn and in other buildings in Montreat will be entertained at the very low cost of $2.00 each per day. Visitors will be charged the same rates, excepting those who are entertained in Assembly Inn. These will pay the regular hotel rates which vary according to the room occupied. To avoid crowding, some of the commissioners will be roomed at Geneva Hall, Conkey Place and one or two of the best boarding houses. We will endeavor to have the menus in all of the houses about the same or equally as good. In most cases commissioners bringing their wives will be entertained in the Conkey Homes, Geneva Hall and the boarding houses to make room in Assembly Inn. All will have comfortable and good entertainment.

Let all commissioners inquire of the railway agents the best route to Asheville and then purchase their tickets to Black Mountain, N. C.

On arriving in Black Mountain tell the taxi driver where you wish to go. All commissioners will be assigned as indicated on a card that will be sent to each of them, stating where they will be entertained. If any commissioner finds that he can not attend the meeting he will please forward to his alternate the card indicating where he will stop on arriving at Montreat.

The Montreat Management will be at the service of the General Assembly to render the meeting a most delightful and profitable one, and all will please be free to make their wants known.

R. C. Anderson, President.

QUEENS ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN HAS SUCCESSFUL WEEK

the blackboard. The successes of the different teams, combined with the fellowship and the inspiring addresses from various men interested in the welfare of the college and in Christian Education served to greatly stimulate the women in their solicitation for the endowment fund.

The goal was a thousand $100 subscriptions from men and women for the $200,000 fund, and while they did not expect to reach the goal during this week, they have rolled up a total of over $77,000. The work of solicitation will continue, with campaigns in Granville and Kings Mountain Presbyteries, until the desired amount has been collected.

This time limit of obtaining this endowment is quite short now, and Dr. W. H. Frazer, the president and his aides will be very active until the goal is reached.

DR. BLAKELEY SPEAKS AT VESPERS

from the Metropolitan Opera company.

Dr. Blakeley used as greatly contrasting texts, the statements of the men who followed two different "Roads." Solomon who tried to find the key to earth's happiness by following his own way, wrote in Ecclesiastes, "Vanity of vanities, saith the preacher; all is vanity." He thought life was not worth living after he had tried to gain happiness through the pursuit of wisdom, losing himself in business, and riches.

But Christ had not yet died on Calvary. Let us look into the New Testament. Paul shows us Christ as the great and supreme guiding star of life. After following this star he writes, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Paul found the true road to happiness.

Dr. Blakeley also addressed the group of students who are preparing for the ministry at Davidson.

COMMENCEMENT AT SOUTH WESTERN

has greatly heartened the four Synods. It should, by all means, be met. For with it and the subscriptions already made and collectible, Southwestern's debt can be paid in full and the assets of two million dollars which it now owns be freed from encumbrance.

STATE C. E. CONVENTION AT MONTREAT

North Carolina Christian Endeavor Society will hold its annual convention at Montreat, N. C., Wednesday and Thursday, June 26-29. This convention will call together large numbers of the finest young people of North Carolina. The convention will be held under its own officers and not under the direction of the Montreat Program Committee.

DEVOTIONAL

THIS PERSONALITY

One of the interesting things about life is the way people find their level. For example, a boy was born in an Ohio town. But he was not destined to live there always. He had a talent, and that talent was bigger than his native town, and bigger than Chicago, where he settled after being graduated from Yale.

His talent was for finance, and it landed him in Washington as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury a few years ago. Poland needed financial counsel and this man was paged. A little over a year ago he became financial advisor to this republic, and a director of the Bank of Poland, charged with the oversight of the funds that were lent to Poland by the United States Government.

This sweep of life is one of the elements which make the stories of men like Joseph, of the Old Testament, Abraham Lincoln, and the thirty-first President of the United States so fascinating. Born in obscure communities, they advanced by the force of personality to high places.

There is something in us that makes us admire the man who lives up to the possibilities within himself. Often a boy or a girl possesses talents that are hidden to parents and teachers. Even those who are closest to us are not able to understand us. We are, indeed, a puzzle to ourselves. But if a person is willing to submit to discipline, so that this infinite something which we call personality may be refined and developed in the proper direction, he will gloriously fulfill his mission on earth.

One of the delights in studying biography is to notice how men and women have become great characters—often from humble beginnings up through the stern and rigorous buffetings of life. The wife of Thomas Hardy, the famous English poet and novelist, has written that he managed to survive infancy by the skin of his teeth. "At his birth," writes Mrs. Hardy, "he was thrown aside as dead until rescued by her (a nurse) as she exclaimed to the surgeon: 'Dead! Stop a minute; he's alive enough sure.'" Such was the start in life that Hardy had, and what use he made of his powers!

If tombstones always bore truthful epitaphs, we might sometimes read words such as these: "Here lies John, son of William and Mary Smith, born January 3, 1825; died April 20, 1886. He might have made the world better by having lived in it, but he failed to stir up the gift within him. He was satisfied to eat three meals a day, to dress in the styles of his time, and to conform to the customs of his community. Yes his life was a tragedy. He did not heed the call to separate himself from the crowd and to be different; to strike his own stride in the spiritual life."

Nothing presents a finer, nobler challenge to youth than life itself. In various ways God is speaking to us and urging us to develop these personalities of ours to the highest degree. Into our hands is laid the free gift, full of mystery and potent for good. Let us lay hold on it prayerfully, purposefully, and hopefully. We may realize our own highest individuality through the personality of Jesus Christ.

CHILDISH, OR CHILDLIKE?

In a letter received from a missionary in India occur these words: "To be childish is a token of decay, but to be childlike is a Divine principle which leads us ever deeper in the wonderland of Divine Grace."

A second reading of that sentence, relating it to one's own life, is well worthwhile.

Childishness manifests itself in petulance, in selfishness, in lack of self-control, in foolish acts and in reckless disregard of the things of others. Childishness insists on having its own way even when that way is harmful. Childishness thinks only of its own desires. Childishness pouts when re-trip rates, special excursion rates of one fare plus one dollar for the round trip will be on sale June 24 and 25. These tickets, which are good for 20 days, must be validated at Montreat before the return trip.

sistance is offered to the effect of its desires and Childishness shows no com time.

One expects these things of a child. We excuse them on account of their inexperience and lack of training. Bad as they are, we expect that they will later on. But when they themselves in adult years, it should know and show that it is the most charitable that we can put on it when it is a token of decay."

But to be childlike is different from being childish. The child is a sense of wonder, something new—and everything new at some time—cause delightful surprise. Every new unveiling as childhood opens into the future.

Is it a sign of weakness in Christians today that we have lost our sense of wonder? We hear of many things happen—in our time, the telephone, the electric light, the radio, the flying machine, —that we take things rather for granted.

There are wonderful things in the world, particularly in the spiritual realm. The radio is not compared in wonderfulness to prayer; by radio the voice is heard around the world in a second; but "before I will answer, and while thou art speaking I will hear."

There is nothing in the world as wonderful as that takes place in a life when Christ comes in and takes hold. Words have never yet been spoken that will give any adequate conception of the wonderful love of God since His name shall be confessed, "there are riches of the grace of Christ Jesus for you and me, which we have never yet even begun to explore."

Be childlike enough to receive the new revelation of Him even now. He reveals Himself to the eyes of your spirit until it blossoms into the flower of maturity, and to the eyes in amazement at the beautiful things He will show.

Love bade me welcome:
Drew back,
Guilty of dust and sin,
But quick-eyed love, observing
My growl, grew slack,
And to my first entrance in,
Drew nearer to me, sweetening
ing, If I lacked anything.

Love took my hand, and

And heard the anvil ring

There looking in I saw up

Old hammers worn with

"How many anvils have

"To wear and batter all

"Just one," said he; then

GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF 1929

The next General Assembly will meet at Charlotte, N. C., on May 16, 1929.

The meeting at Montreat will enable the Commission to see two things of great interest. One is the Assembly Inn. This building is a monument to the tireless energy and good business judgment of Dr. R. C. Tenney.

It increases the usefulness of Montreat. It will furnish an excellent refuge for the General Assembly when no church invites a guest.

Second is the Presbyterian Historical Foundation.

The General Assembly took this action: "That the scope of the Church be extended to the Association for providing on a permanent basis, ample, convenient, and fireproof housing of the records, library and papers of the Historical Foundation."

Dr. J. Tenney, the Curator, has gathered a collection that is conservatively estimated to be worth $25,000 and that is increasing in value all the time.

The meeting of the Assembly promises to be of great interest and importance as several matters will come up for consideration.

Interim Committees.

There are five of these Committees to report.

The Committee on Closer Relations of the S. L. Morris is chairman is probably the most important.

This committee was first appointed in 1926. Its relations with the United Presbyterian Church and the Associate Reformed Church in the South. The latter body "made a mistake," but in fact "declined the invitation."

The United Presbyterian Church through the action of the General Assembly "appointed a similar committee." Several committees have had several joint meetings.

All will have a report before the Assembly. The question of a Basis of Union; but of course the matter is entirely to the Assembly to decide whether to send it down to the Presbyteries for consideration for another year.

The lack of interest and enthusiasm in these negotiations. The movement is observed however to launch a movement on the part of those in the Northern and Southern Churches, interested in the union of all Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in the South. And this latter movement will be projected into this Assembly from the North and shove aside the present situation.

Another committee to report is that on the Field Occupied by the Presbyterian Churches U. S., and U. S. A." The report of this committee has been already published wisely, in that report, they call attention of the two Assemblies to the fact that no new legislation is needed to accomplish the ends sought by our joint conference." Existing Correcting Rules are all that are needed.

3. Another committee is that "On Optional Forms." This committee has the task of bringing in a revision of the Optional Forms found in our Book of Church Order. To them was also recommended by the last Assembly their revision of our "Directory for Worship." This latter is more important than the "Forms," and should receive the most careful consideration by the Assembly.

4. A fourth of these "Ad Interim Committees" is that on Divorce. It is charged "to study carefully the whole subject of divorce." Their report changes the whole position of our Church on this vital question; and should be carefully studied by Commissioners before the meeting of the Assembly.

5. The last of these committees is that "On Correspondence Courses for Ministers."

This committee, of which Dr. R. T. Gillespie is chairman, was originally appointed in 1925 and should be ready by this time to make a report.

II. Special Sub-Committees of the Assembly's Work Committee.

1. The last Assembly adopted this: "In the matter of 'housing the various sub-committees of the Committee on the Assembly's Work in one building at some central point and with one accounting system,' we recommend that the request for further time in which to consider this important matter be granted. Also we would recommend that this Assembly advise the Committee on the Assembly's Work not to decide this matter on purely financial considerations."

The sub-committee of three has prepared its report, and will submit same to the Work Committee on April 30th. We have heard it rumored that they suggest consolidation. If the Work Committee approves, the Church will have scant time to think over and discuss so radical a change. It would be a great mistake for the coming Assembly to adopt this report before the Church at large has an opportunity to speak. But such "snap judgment" seems to be the fashion. And this seems to be the next step in that centralization of power that is going on in our Church to-day.

2. The second sub-committee is that on the "Recall of Missionaries."

The Assembly of 1926 had before it several overtures from Presbyteries, "with reference to the Rule in the Manual of the Executive Committee for recall of missionaries."

The able Standing Committee on Foreign Missions of which Dr. Edward Mack was chairman made this recommendation which was adopted:

"That an Ad Interim Committee be appointed to study the whole situation, and to prepare a rule for report to the next General Assembly."

A strong committee was appointed of which Dr. W. L. Carson of Richmond, Va., was chairman.

This committee presented a report to the Assembly of 1927 but asked to be continued another year. This request was granted.

The Committee then presented a report to the Assembly of 1928 that in the judgment of many who studied it, was very satisfactory and thoroughly protected the rights of the individual missionaries.

This report was considered by the Assembly—or rather was "taken up for consideration," and without much consideration was "referred to the Permanent Committee on Assembly's Work to be presented by them to all the Missions for their advice, and the Committee was instructed to report to the next Assembly their findings in the matter with recommendations."

This Committee referred the matter to a sub-committee. The sub-committee's report will, we judge, come to the Committee of Forty-Four on April 30th, and that Committee will present a report to the General Assembly. As there will be scant time, if any, for the study of this report, the writer would venture to suggest to all Commissioners that they carefully study the report of the Ad Interim Committee found on page 156 of the Minutes of the General Assembly of 1928.

It will repay study, and place a commissioner in a position to understand such report as may come to the Assembly from the Committee of Forty-Four.

III. An amendment to the Book of Church Order is to be voted on.

The last General Assembly in answer to an overture from Memphis Presbytery "seeking the establishment of a Permanent Judicial Commission of the Assembly," approved the overture and recommended to the Presbyteries for their advice and consent, an amendment found on page 43 of the Minutes of 1928.

This overture had already been approved by the Assembly's Permanent Judicial Committee and Bills and Overtures Committee. Many of the Presbyteries have given already their advice and consent. And wherever it is carefully studied it will meet with hearty approval.

IV. The Assembly's Work Committee will present what is really its first report of a full year's work. The Church is watching with interest this experiment in the hands of a few. The experiment will be judged largely by this report. Will the Committee be able to show an increase in gifts? Will they be able to show a larger number of souls won at home and abroad? Will they be able to show that the work has been done with finer co-ordination and less harmful rivalry?

These are the fruits the Church is looking for, and that we trust they can show.

V. There are several miscellaneous matters to come up that will be of interest.

1. The Assembly of 1928 adopted this resolution presented by Dr. W. S. Jacobs:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Program, viz: Moderator, Stated Clerk and Rev. R. C. Anderson secure some outstanding speaker to address the Assembly of 1929 on the office of the Eldership and Duties and Privileges thereof." With the many distinguished Ruling Elders in our Church who are gifted speakers, to choose from, we feel sure that the Committee will have a rich treat in store for those who are fortunate enough to be present at this Assembly.

2. A resolution offered by Dr. G. T. Bourne, providing for an additional column in our statistics, so that direct and indirect funds paid to the Church's pastors and workers may be separately noted. As this has been in substance asked for in overtures a number of times, there must be a demand for and merit in this resolution beyond what the writer is able to see.

VI. But the outstanding matter before the Assembly, so far as our ministers are concerned is the Ministers' Annuity Fund. The Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief is to present plans for raising during the year 1930 the sum of $3,000,000 which is necessary to launch the Fund. This plan has behind it the best actuarial skill to be secured. It has the endorsement of some of the best business men in our Church. It will make possible a retiring annuity for every minister in our Church. And it is not intended to take the place of Ministerial Relief. That cause will still continue to assist special cases that are not properly cared for by the Annuity Fund.

It is a great undertaking and will mark an epoch in the life of our Church.

The Sixty-Ninth General Assembly promises to be a gathering of great interest. And the Commissioners to it, have a great responsibility to the Church in solving aright the important matters that come before it.

UNION WITH THE UNITED PRESBYTERIANS

Just now we are about to take a step that we may regret in coming years, when instead of building up the kingdom of God, we find ourselves involved in strife and heart burning.

Let us say in the beginning that our opposition is not based upon any conviction that this Church is not as sound as our own.

We have no criticism on that score.

We can see the force of the plea that it is well to prove to men that the Church is not divided, and that a National Church will exert a greater influence.

FIGHT THE GOOD FIGHT OF FAITH

A Sermon preached in the Chapel of Princeton Theological Seminary on Sunday morning, March 10, 1929.

A Stenographic Report

J. Gresham Machen, D.D.

Phil. iv. 7. "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ." I. Tim. vi. 12. (part)
"Fight the good fight of faith."

The apostle Paul was a great fighter. His fighting was partly against external enemies—against hardships of all kinds. Five times he was scourged by the Jews, three times by the Romans; he suffered shipwreck four times; and was in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by his own countryman, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren. And finally he came to the logical end of such a life, by the headman's axe. It was hardly a peaceful life, but was rather a life of wild adventure. Lindbergh, I suppose, got a thrill when he hopped off to Paris, and people are in search of thrills today; but if you wanted a really unbroken succession of thrills, I think you could hardly do better than try knocking around the Roman Empire of the first century with the apostle Paul, engaged in the unpopular business of turning the world upside down.

But these physical hardships were not the chief battle in which Paul was engaged. Far more trying was the battle that he fought against enemies in his own camp. Everywhere his rear was threatened by an all-engulfing paganism, or by perverted Judaism that had missed the real purpose of the Old Testament law. Read the Epistles with care, and you see Paul always in conflict. At one time he fights paganism in life, the notion that all kinds of conduct are lawful to the Christian man, a philosophy that makes Christian liberty a mere aid to pagan license. At another time he fights paganism in thought, the sublimation of the Christian doctrine of the resurrection of the body into the pagan doctrine of the immortality of the soul. At still another time, he fights the effort of human pride to substitute man's merit as the means of salvation for divine grace; he fights the subtle propaganda of the Judaizers with its misleading appeal to the Word of God. Everywhere we see the great apostle in conflict for the preservation of the Church. It is as though a mighty flood were seeking to engulf the Church's life; dam the break at one point in the levee, and another break appears somewhere else. Everywhere paganism was seeping through; not for one moment does Paul have peace; always he was called upon to fight.

Paul a True Fighter

Fortunately he was a true fighter; and by God's grace he not only fought, but he won. At first sight, indeed, he might have seemed to have lost. The lofty doctrine of divine grace, the centre and core of the gospel that Paul preached, did not always dominate the mind and heart of the subsequent Church. The Christianity of the Apostolic Fathers, of the Apologists, or Irenaeus, is very different from the Christianity of Paul. The Church meant to be faithful to the apostle; but the pure doctrine of the Cross runs counter to the natural man, and not always, even in the Church, was it fully understood. Read the Epistle to the Romans first, and then read Irenaeus, and you are conscious of a mighty decline. No longer does the gospel stand out sharp and clear; there is a large admixture of human error; and it might seem as

EDITORIAL (Continued)

In this question let us consider facts and not yield to sentiment.

The first fact is that there seems to be no insistent demand for it in either Church. We occupy fields so far apart that there can be no clashing of interests.

They reach far North and West, while we reach from Pennsylvania to Mexico.

This scattered position would make it almost impossible to have a representative Assembly, as the expense would preclude it.

Then the two Churches hold different views on sectional questions.

We cherish in sentiment the lost Cause, and in politics we are generally democratic, while they are of the opposite party, and this would some time cause friction.

We do not defend this fact, but merely recognize it as something to be reckoned with.

We are doing a great work as a homogeneous people, and peace reigns within our borders; let us not take any step that will endanger that peace.

The Lord forbade His people to plough an ox or ass together, because there would be a lack of harmony in their efforts.

We are afraid that if we try to work the two Churches together, it will be doing what the Lord advised against.

This Committee is not entirely unanimous. A level-headed elder dissents, and will probably present a minority report.

We hope that the Assembly will let this matter rest another year.

We are too prone to go ahead without due consideration of questions in all their bearings.

though Christian freedom after all were to be entangled in the meshes of a new law.

But even Irenaeus is very different from the Judaizers; something had been gained even in his day; and God had greater things than Irenaeus in store for the Church. The Epistles which Paul struck forth in conflict with the opponents in his own day remained in the New Testament as a perennial source of life for the people of God. Augustine, on the basis of the Epistles, set forth the Pauline doctrine of sin and grace; and then, after centuries of compromise with the natural man, the Reformation rediscovered the great liberating Pauline doctrine of Justification by Faith. So it has always been with Paul. Just when he seems to be defeated, his greatest triumphs, by God's grace, are in store.

The human instruments, however, which God uses in those triumphs are no pacifists but great fighters like Paul himself. Little affinity for the great apostle has the whole tribe of considerers of consequences, the whole tribe of the compromisers ancient and modern. The companions of Paul are the heroes of the faith. But who are those heroes? Are they not true fighters, one and all? Tertullian fought a mighty battle against Marcion; Athanasius fought against the Arians; Augustine fought against Pelagius; and as for Luther, he fought a brave battle against kings and princes and popes for the liberty of the people of God. Luther was a great fighter; and we love him for it. So was Calvin; so were John Knox and all the rest. It is impossible to be a true soldier of Jesus Christ and not fight.

A Battle is on in Our Own Times

God grant that you—students in this Seminary—may be fighters, too! Probably you have your battles even now: you have to contend against sins gross or sins refined; you have to contend against the sin of slothfulness and inertia; you have many of you, I know very well, a mighty battle on your hands against doubt and despair. Do not think it strange if you fall thus into divers temptations. The Christian life is a warfare after all. John Bunyan rightly set it forth under the allegory of a Holy War; and when he set it forth, in his greater book, under the figure of a pilgrimage, the pilgrimage too was full of battles. There are, indeed, places of refreshment on the Christian way; the House Beautiful was provided by the King at the top of the Hill Difficulty, for the entertainment of pilgrims, and from the Delectable Mountains could sometimes be discerned the shining towers of the City of God. But just after the descent from the House Beautiful, there was the battle with Apollyon and the Valley of the Shadow of Death. No, the Christian faces a mighty conflict in this world. Pray God that in that conflict you may be true men; good soldiers of Jesus Christ, not willing to compromise with your great enemy, not easily cast down, and seeking ever the renewing of your strength in the Word and sacraments and prayer!

You will have a battle, too, when you go forth as ministers into the Church. The Church is now in a period of deadly conflict. The redemptive religion known as Christianity is contending, in our own Presbyterian Church and in all the larger churches in the world, against a totally alien type of religion. As always, the enemy conceals his most dangerous assaults under pious phrases and half truths. The shibboleths of the adversary have sometimes a very deceptive sound. "Let us propagate Christianity," the adversary says, "but let us not always be engaged in arguing in defense of it; let us make our preaching positive and not negative; let us avoid controversy; let us hold to a Person and not to a dogma; let us sink small doctrinal differences and seek the unity of the Church of Christ; let us drop doctrinal accretions and interpret Christ for ourselves; let us look for our knowledge of Christ not to ancient books but to the living Christ in our hearts; let us not impose Western creeds on the Eastern mind; let us be tolerant of opposing views." Such are some of the shibboleths of that agonistic Modernism which is the deadliest enemy of the Christian religion today. They deceive some of God's people some of the time; they are heard sometimes from the lips of good Christian people, who have not the slightest inkling of what they mean. But their true meaning, to thinking men, is becoming increasingly clear. Increasingly it is becoming necessary for a man to decide whether he is going to stand or not to stand for the Lord Jesus Christ as He is presented to us in the Word of God.

Christianity an Intolerant Religion

If you decide to stand for Christ, you will not have an easy life in the ministry. Of course you may try to evade the conflict. All men will speak of you if, after preaching no matter how unpopular a gospel on Sunday, you will only vote against that gospel in the councils of the Church the next day; you will graciously be permitted to believe in supernatural Christianity all you please if you will only act as though you did not believe in it, if you will only make common cause with its opponents. Such is the program that will win the favor of the Church. A man may believe what he pleases, provided he does not believe anything strongly enough to risk his life on it and fight for it. "Tolerance" is the great word. Men even ask for tolerance when they look to God in prayer. But how can any Christian possibly pray such a prayer as that? What a terrible prayer it is, how full of disloyalty to the Lord Jesus Christ! There is a sense, of course, in which tolerance is a virtue. If by it you mean tolerance on the part of the state, the forbearance of majorities toward minorities, the resolute rejection of any measures of physical compulsion in propagating either what is true or what is false, then of course the Christian ought to favor tolerance with all his might and main, and ought to lament the widespread growth of intolerance in America today. Of if you mean by tolerance forbearance toward personal attacks upon yourself, or courtesy and patience and fairness in dealing with all errors of whatever kind, then again tolerance is a virtue. But to pray for tolerance apart from such qualifications, in particular to pray for tolerance without careful definition of that of which you are to be tolerant is just to pray for the best of the Christian religion; for the Christian religion is tolerant to the core. There lies the whole of the Cross—and also the whole power of it. It would be received with favor by the world if it had been sent merely as one way of salvation; the Cross because it was presented as the only way, and made relentless war upon all other ways. (Then, from this "tolerance" of which we hear, God deliver us from the sin of making common cause with those who deny or ignore the blessed gospel of Christ! God save us from the deadly guilt of the presence as our representatives in the world of those who lead Christ's little ones astray! God whatever else we are, just faithful messengers, sent, without fear or favor, not our word but the word of God.

A Search for Courage to Fight

But if you are such messengers, you will be in a position, not only of the world, but increasing of the Church. I cannot tell you that your position will be light. No doubt it would be noble to do whatever about the judgment of our fellow men to such nobility I confess that I for my part have quite attained, and I cannot expect you to have it to it. I confess that academic preferments, great libraries, the society of cultured people, the great thousand advantages that come from being regarded as respectable people in a respectable community, these things seem to me to be in good and desirable things. Yet the servant of Christ, to an increasing extent, is being obliged to give them up. Certainly in making that sacrifice you will complain; for we have something with which we have lost is not worthy to be compared.

It is hard to say that any unworthy motives that can lead us to adopt a course which brings but reproach. Where, then, shall we find a motive for such a course as that. Where shall we find courage to stand against the whole current of the world where shall we find courage for this fight of ours?

I do think that we shall obtain courage by the way of conflict. In some battles that means a little of blood. Soldiers in bayonet practice were and for all I know still are, taught to give a bayonet thrust their bayonets at imaginary enemies, and they do it even long after the armistice. That serves, I suppose, to overcome the natural tendency of civilized man against sticking a knife in the back of his neighbor. It is thought to develop the proper spirit of conflict. Perhaps it may be necessary in some cases. But it will hardly serve in this Christian conflict. This conflict I do not think we can be good fighters unless we are resolved to fight. For this is a battle and nothing ruins a man's service in it so much as a little of hate.

Paul's Secret of Warfare

No, if we want to learn the secret of this warfare, we shall have to look deeper; and we can hardly do that than turn again to that great fighter, the apostle Paul. What was the secret of his power in the midst of such a conflict? How did he learn to fight?

The answer is paradoxical; but it is very simple.

Paul was a great fighter because he was at peace with himself. "Fight the good fight of faith," says the apostle, "because the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ." The peace of God which passeth all understanding was the peace of God which Paul had in his heart; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his life; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his soul; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his spirit; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his heart; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his life; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his soul; it was the peace of God which Paul had in his spirit.

But if you are at peace with One, then you will be at peace with all. You can say with Paul, "We must obey God rather than men"; you can say with Luther: "Here I stand, I cannot do otherwise"; you can say with Elisha, "They will be against us, but we will be for the Lord"; you can say with Paul, "It is God that justifieth, who is he that condemneth?" Without that peace of God in your heart, you will strike little terror into the enemies of the Christian. You may amass mighty resources for the fight; you may be great masters of ecclesiastical machinery; you may be very clever and very zealous too; but that it will be of little avail. There may be a victory; but when the din is over, the Lord's will be in possession of the field. No, there is no other way to be a really good fighter. You cannot fight against God's enemies unless you are at peace with God.

How Peace May be Attained

But how shall you be at peace with Him? How have been tried. How pathetic is the age-long struggle of the sinful man to become right with God: sacrifices, almsgiving, morality, penance, confession, alas, it is all of no avail. Still there is that which is the gulf. It may be temporarily concealed: Spiritism may conceal it for a time; penance or the works of the law may give a temporary and a false relief. But the real trouble remains; the burden of sin upon the soul is still ready to burst forth in flames; the soul is still not at peace with God. Then shall peace be obtained?

My friends, it cannot be attained by anything else, that that truth could be written in the heart of one of you! If it could be written in the heart of one of you, the main purpose of this Seminary would be attained. Oh, that it could be written in letters for all the world to read. Peace with God cannot be attained by any act or any mere experience of it; it can only be attained by good works, neither can it be a confession of sin, neither can it be attained by the psychological results of an act of faith. We can be at peace with God unless God first be at peace with us.

LOUISVILLE TRAINING SCHOOL

Our school opened on the afternoon of February 24th, at the Highland Presbyterian Church, with 76 men from 12 churches in attendance. Mr. Fred L. Temple of Roanoke, Va., Chairman of Men's Work for the Synod of Virginia, addressed the meeting. Because of death in Dr. Purcell's family, he was not able to be with us at that meeting. Mr. Temple's address was excellent and inspired the men very greatly, because he gave them his own personal experience and the experience of the men of his church in his address. That same evening he spoke of the special Men's meeting at the Buechel Presbyterian Church to 250 people, at least half of them men. On Monday evening, February 25th, Dr. Purcell was with us and began his School of Methods. Forty-two men from nine churches were present, and on the following evening Dr. Purcell completed his work, and forty-one men from these churches were present.

The men of our city have been greatly blessed and inspired by the work of Dr. Purcell and Mr. Temple while with us. Several of the churches have already requested help in organizing their men according to Assembly's plan.

Mr. J. A. Naff, assistant to Dr. Purcell, will speak to the Presbytery of Louisville on April 22nd, and then will spend two weeks in intensive work in our Presbytery.

CLASS IN MEN'S WORK, BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

The class was not a Presbyterian affair, but was sponsored by the directors of our Southern Presbyterian Men's League, Inc., which includes about eight churches in Baltimore and vicinity. Of these churches only Maryland Avenue was previously using the full plan of the Men-of-the-Church, though one other church was following the program in small part.

We asked each church to select about three men and delegate them to attend the meetings. Four meetings were held on successive Sunday afternoons, the meeting lasting from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. We followed the "Outline of Suggestions," except that two of the periods were combined. The studies were conducted alternately by F. Howard Smith and myself. Mr. Smith has just retired from the presidency of the Men of Maryland Avenue Church, having been enthusiastically associated with me in the four years past.

A combination of circumstances, mostly illness, interfered with the attendance of some of the men. Four churches, however, had representatives present sufficiently to get the idea and take it home with them. Maryland Avenue had five men every Sunday, including the newly elected President, William E. Harn.

Towson and Dickey Memorial were two of the churches taking part. Towson I know is just on the point of going ahead with the plan, but I have been unable to get a report from Dickey Memorial, whose leader has been critically ill. Mt. Washington, immediately after the class, adopted the full plan of the Men-of-the-Church, instead of the small part they had previously used.

To complete the demonstration, the mid-winter meeting of the Men's League was turned into a Men-of-the-Church meeting, which was held at Maryland Avenue Church. One of the regular monthly programs was put on by selected men, followed by light refreshments and a fellowship hour. The meeting was a great help to the outsiders in showing them just what the plan involves, and they all seemed to enjoy the evening very much.

There was nothing spectacular about our class, but up here we are on the edge of things, and it will take a long period of education before we can get some of the people entirely in sympathy with the idea. I am sure, however, that the effort was not wasted.

MEN-OF-THE-CHURCH, LINCOLNTON, NORTH CAROLINA

The Men-of-the-Church at Lincolnton, N. C., was organized last June. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Akers, gives the following fine account of results:

"We had a fine meeting of the Men-of-the-Church last night and a splendid program. Every man in attendance was on the floor sometime in the meeting and said a few words. This is a wonderful record considering the timidity of so many of them. In my few remarks I said, 'What a revelation this movement has been to me in discovering men who are competent to make good leaders, and also able to speak if they only get up and make the effort.'

We have had some splendid meetings since organization, and believe the movement is going to work fine in this church. Our meeting in January was unusual in interest. We had the ladies of the church present and our men made several excellent addresses on Missions. Rev. H. N. McDiarmid of Shelby addressed this meeting on Men's Work, basing his talk on a part of the fifth chapter of Luke.

The men have not undertaken anything of much importance except the attendance of the Men's Bible Class and the Monthly Meetings. They voted last night to take up Dr. Smith's book, 'The Desire of all Nations' and study it and for some one to lead and teach it, either in a regular or called meeting. I am pleased with this movement and feel it will do lots of good."

A MESSAGE FROM MRS. J. W. MCJANNET

"Will you please express to the friend Auxiliary who sent messages to us of your death of our son, that we appreciate the kindness and sympathy very much? Sympathy of deep sorrow is a great help—just to know we have loving friends who remember us in prayer for us.

"The winter is past, spring is here, and so these people are not saved! We need missionaries. How can we keep things moving with Christ, but He gave this work to us. We need more of them out here to help people."

OUR BIBLE STUDY FOR THIS CHARACTER STUDY

In the book "Life Challenges from the Bible" by Junie W. McGaughey, there is included a chart plan for character study as it was used in class at Montreat last summer.

This plan was so popular with the women who have asked that it be put in print. Thus has prepared the chart and description of the plan which has been included in the "Life Challenges from the Bible."

Extra charts may be ordered for 25c each. Those who are using this plan for their Bible study will be glad to know that they can secure the printed form.

If you have not sent in your order before, please do so at once. "Life Challenges from the Bible" Charts for Miss Engle's Character Study 1929. Order from Department of Woman's Work, Field Building, St. Louis, Mo.

DATA FOR YOUR BIRTHDAY PROGRAM

Dear Friends:
In my last letter I mentioned the fact that boys were planning to do evangelistic work during the summer. . . . I didn't mention the fact that some of the girls also were given vacation work. . . . young people had to lead services with practical aid; few, if any, had song books, or Bible but their own, no Sunday School literature, musical instrument. Picture their having to program without any way of teaching the "out of their own heads."

Before Christmas two of these girls went miles from the village where they were working to teach them some hymns which they had in their program. Most Mexicans . . . love to sing and converts tell us that the singing first drew them to the Church. Every gospel song that the girls know that much help in doing evangelistic work. It is how far they can make a little go. On account of the lack of equipment it has been impossible to give the full training that they should have. . . .

The evangelistic elements of our schools is (Continued on page 12)

TRACT OF REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND MINISTERIAL RELIEF

the Year Ending March 31, 1929.

Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief presents its second report as committee of the Committee on the Assembly's side. This is the nineteenth report of the Committee on Christian Education and Ministerial Relief and the fifth report as the Committee on Ministerial Relief.

The committee is deeply grateful to God for His work for the year ending March 31.

In Memoriam

Members are deeply grieved when the Great Church called Dr. Alex. J. A. Alexander to his final Home. Dr. Alexander was elected to this committee by the General Assembly a little while he hesitated about accepting the position. He finally decided so and no man could have appreciated the responsibility and opportunity placed on him by the church. He was faithful in attendance at all meetings. He exhibited at all times a winning affection and confidence of his members.

His business ability, his clear insight into the problem faced, his just judgments, utterances of humility and consideration, his business experience made him of estimable value in the business of the church. We will miss his winning personality and the efficient service he gave in this department of the church's work. It is our earnest prayer that some of the members of the church may catch something of the spirit of men like Dr. Alexander and receive the same motive for service which has given him his deep appreciation of the love of God.

The Outlook

Reports that have come to our office from all quarters indicate that there is again an increase in the number of candidates for the ministry for service. This should be a matter of encouragement to our hearts. The decline in the number of candidates has been a serious problem because of the churches of America and of the year that has just closed aid has been given to candidates for the ministry and mission in the amount of $42,564. This is an increase of candidates and a decrease of amounts forwarded, of $4,914. On account of the heavy debt with which we closed the work of the previous year, it became necessary to scale the amounts sent from $150 to $125.

Aid from the funds of Ministerial Relief to the amount of $193,596, was sent to 466 ministers' homes. This is an increase of six homes over the previous year and of $5,277.

Loans from the Student Loan Fund were made to 271 students to the amount of $39,615. As compared with last year this is a decrease of two students but an increase of $615 loaned. Fifty-three applications from worthy students from poor Presbyterian homes, who desired to attend our Presbyterian Colleges had to be denied on account of lack of funds.

Possibly no more useful service has been rendered to the church than that which accrued from the Survey of the Educational Work and Responsibility of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, made by Dr. B. Warren Brown and Dr. W. O. Thompson. This report was studied with greatest care by the Presbyterian Educational Association of the South and the Assembly's Permanent Advisory Committee on Education. It was then referred to a Special Survey Committee in each Synod where it was carefully studied and in most instances also considered by a pre-Synodical Conference called to digest the material. The Survey was prominently before every one of the Synods and has already resulted in shedding much light on the various serious problems which the Synods are facing with regard to their educational institutions.

The committee has been able to challenge fifteen Synods to a larger support of the work among the Presbyterian students at forty-three of the state and independent institutions of higher education. We were able to contribute only $13,958 to this work last year. However, this meant the securing of a much larger amount both from the local congregations and from the Synods. This is a decrease of $2,547 as compared with the amount used last year. We should immediately have at least $50,000 for this important and far-reaching work. We are inducing the Synods to take this work over with increasing interest and liberality. The students are gathered at these institutions from all parts of the state and should receive the support of the Synod. They are preparing for leadership—whither will they lead?

The last Assembly urged that we increase our efforts to keep the students of the Church in vital contact with the life and worship and work of the Church. We have had in the field this year in the work Miss Cornelia D. Engle, Miss Julia Lake Skinner, Miss Irene Hope Hudson, and Rev. John H. Powell, Jr. Their messages and influence have been a wonderful help. They have given information and guidance that has been deeply appreciated and that will result in an abounding spiritual harvest in the years to come.

At the direction of the General Assembly the Committee has diligently put before the entire church the Ministers' Annuity Fund. The plan has been cordially received and is being carefully studied. Its purpose is not wholly to relieve need among the ministers, but as far as possible to abolish need. It is an effort to help the minister to safe-guard his investments and to provide for the years of age or disability. The plan is now before all of the Presbyteries and will soon come before the session, the board of deacons and the various congregations of the Church.

Much effort has been put forth to convince the church of the sin and folly of letting our missionaries work on insufficient salaries. It is almost a hollow mockery to pay to some of these men the salaries that are now provided and add to the call, "this amount is to be paid you in order that you may be free from worldly cares and avocations." The matter of proper support of every minister in every field should be of concern not only to the local church but to the entire Presbyterian Church.

Financial

The work of the Committee has been seriously hampered because of insufficient funds. For several years this department has received from the budget of the churches a smaller proportion of the amounts asked by the General Assembly than any other Assembly's cause. We earnestly hope the entire church will respond to the call of the General Assembly and increase the amount in the budget for this work. It is now asked that 13 1-2 percent of all the money contributed for the Assembly's work shall go to this department.

During the year we received from living donors for current use $235,118, an increase of $24,420 as compared with last year; from interest, rent, refunds, legacies, etc., $117,794. Inasmuch as we did not take out the $20,000 for the sinking fund of the Graham Building, this provided an increase for current use of $18,411 as compared with last year.

We carried over a bank debt of $48,286 into the year 1928-1929 and to the "Special Forward Movement Educational Fund," a total of $54,336. We are happy to report to the church that this debt has now been reduced to $26,235. We thank God and take courage.

E. Pearcy, Secretary.

OUR STEWARDSHIP OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

This is Stewardship Year through the Southern Presbyterian Church by action of the Assembly, and the month of April assigned to the theme, "Our Stewardship of Foreign Missions." If we are to achieve the holy ambition of our Lord to do her part in saving the world for Christ, we must be concerned about, pray for and give to this great cause regularly and systematically and sacrificially.

The Stewardship Department is asked to emphasize throughout the Church the importance of making "Stewardship Year" a time when the local church will adopt as its plan which was recently written up in the Presbyterian Survey, namely: "Pay-up, stay-up and step-up." With the coming of Children's Day on May 5th, and periodic opportunities throughout the year to make additional gifts, we will have a multitude of opportunities to educate our people systematically rather than to agitate them periodically. We are establishing an honor roll of churches who "pay-up" monthly one-fourth of their pledge to benevolences. It is hoped that an increasing number of them will not only "pay-up" monthly, but "stay-up" to the standard and refuse to violate the financial honor of the local church; and will "step-up" a little higher contributions. This applies not only to the local church, but to the individual member within the local church.

A Churchman, a paper that occupies a conspicuous place among religious journals, has reached its 125th birthday and to be prepared for the work ahead is seeking to raise an endowment of $5,000. Why should not church papers with education as their primary talk stand on a par with colleges. If church colleges must be endowed to succeed, why not church papers? The one is not more a more money making enterprise than the other. If it be expected to make a first class paper by a subscription of $2 or $3 per annum, why not maintain a college by tuition fees of $50 to $75 per annum? One is as truly in the bounds of possibility as the other.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

Henry M. Woods

In a recent article published in the Christian Observer, Dr. Walter Lingle referred to a personal letter written by the undersigned, which some friend, (unknown), published in the Presbyterian Standard. In the letter mention was made of a paragraph in a book written by the President of the Federal Council, called "The Christlike God," which seemed to deny the deity of our Lord. Doctor Lingle also spoke of having received an unsigned typewritten sheet, calling attention to the same paragraph. As he twice mentioned the unsigned sheet and the letter together, one might infer there was some connection between them. The undersigned knows nothing about the unsigned sheet.

The paragraph referred to was not considered separately from its context, as our brother seemed to think, but was taken with it, and an honest effort was made to get at the author's real meaning. Two bookstores were visited, and two editions of the book were examined, and nothing was found either in the passage itself, or in the preceding sentence, to indicate that it was a quotation. In the Philadelphia Presbyterian, which is noted for its ability and fairness, a well known writer of high character thought that the passage expressed the opinions of the author of the book, several other writers, in letters to that paper, took the same view. These writers were intelligent and fair-minded men. It is exceedingly regrettable that while the objectionable passage in the book is set forth in plain, unmistakable language, the supposed refutation of it was not set forth in equally unmistakable terms.

One regrets that he must differ from Doctor Lingle in thinking that the style of the book and the heading of the chapters necessarily indicate the author's belief in the deity of Christ. Works like Channing's show that Unitarians can discuss such topics and yet reject His deity, for does not Modernism hold that there is "divinity" in all men, and that salvation means, not cleansing by the precious blood of Calvary, but the development by self-culture of the divinity in man?

As to the Federal Council, many people in our Southern Church believe, and we think rightly believe, that the evil attendant upon the Council far outweighs the good. There is the dangerous tendency to substitute social service for the Gospel. The Federal Council constantly suggests themes for the pulpit, like child labor, international relations, industrial matters, etc., and too much ground is often given for the charge of interference in the political sphere.

More serious still, is not the name and the influence of the Council, professing to represent more than 20 million Christians, being constantly used to broadcast teachings which discredit the Word of God, and will destroy the faith of multitudes, especially of young people? The Presbyterian of the South of March 13th admirably states some of the grounds which evangelical churches have to protest against the bold and persistent attacks made on the fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith by a resident of the Council; and by others also, using the name of the Council. The Federal Council cannot evade its grave responsibility for this.

Another grave assault on true religion is the union of Evangelical and the Unitarian Church, promoted by the leaders of the Federal Council. About a year ago it was publicly announced that a bishop of the Methodist Church, North, together with the President of the Federal Council, sponsored the union of Congregational, Methodist and Unitarian Churches in New England. At that time the President of the Council publicly declared, in substance, that the merging of these Evangelical Churches with Unitarianism was but the beginning of a movement which would sweep with irresistible force over the Churches of our land!

The Unitarian denies the deity of our Lord, and utterly rejects His Atonement. Some of its leaders have not hesitated to denounce, and pour contempt upon the most precious truth of our Christian Faith, saying that salvation by the blood of the Cross is "a doctrine of the shambles!" But do not Churches which unite with Unitarians thereby consent to their teachings, and deny their Lord? Did the President of the Federal Council, the author of the book in question, publicly disown and oppose this union, or did he by silence give his consent and approval? If he did not publicly repudiate and oppose it, he shares the grave responsibility of their denial of Christ before the world, for it is a fundamental principle of law of general application that "silence gives consent." If he gave his tacit consent and approval to the union with Unitarians, has he not thereby given reasonable ground for inferring that he is not opposed to Unitarian belief?

In considering any movement, ought we not to look at it from every side, get its real bearings, and see not only the good, but also the harm connected with it? The purposes of the Federal Council as stated in the Constitution are one thing; the actual workings of the Council are a totally different thing, as the facts mentioned above show. It is not an alarmist view to say that continued union with this body is a perilous thing, and in view of the immense issues at stake,—the welfare of God's Church and the honor of Christ,—we have no right to run risk, no matter how good our intentions may be. God's Word warns of "sowing the wind, and reaping the whirlwind." The wind of doubt and disparagement of God's Word is now being sown broadcast. If we do not avoid entanglements which are unfriendly to all we hold dear, our Churches will surely reap the whirlwind of apostasy and spiritual death. God promises to care for His Church; but His promises are conditioned an obedience to His commands. Two important commands are "Come out from among them, and be ye separate;" and "Earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints."

A YEAR IN ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS

Homer McMillan, Secretary

During the year ending March 31, 1929, the Executive Committee of Home Missions assisted in the support of 663 Home Missionaries, who served 722 organized mission enterprises, and carried the Gospel, either as teacher or evangelist, to 298 other communities.

There were 5,188 additions upon profession of faith and 2,810 by certificate. Except for the ministry of these heroic men and women thousands of persons living on the highways and by ways of our country would never hear the Gospel.

The regular Home Mission contributions were $546,507, which is $21,086 less than was received last year.

The total receipts, including the special Auxiliary Birthday gift of $41,500 for the Nurses' Training School, were $588,008, which is $9,580 less than the total received in 1928, which included the special Flood Relief Fund of $29,994.

Because of the decrease in budget receipts and the special emergency caused by the disastrous hurricane in Florida, for which no funds were available, the bank debt was increased to $49,000.

Crop failures and business depression in many parts of the Assembly, resulting in suspension of banks and severe financial losses to our membership, have brought many appeals for assistance. Presbyteries that have heretofore not only supported their own Home Missions, but made generous contributions to this Committee, requested help to enable them to meet a crisis in their work. Presbyteries having large city and suburban developments; those with large industrial centers; the Home Mission Presbyteries in Oklahoma and Texas with oil developments bringing thousands of new people into the communities without church privileges; all are calling for larger appropriations both for equipment and for pastoral support.

The following is a brief review of the various departments of the committee's work:

Evangelism

The number of evangelists aided or directed by the committee are four Assembly, three Synodical, nineteen Presbyterial, and six evangelists for special classes, namely, one for Indians, one for Negroes, two for mountain people, one for Mexicans and one for prisoners.

A noteworthy evangelistic work assisted by the Assembly's Committee is that conducted for prisoners in the penal institutions of Virginia. The evangelist preaches twice every Sunday at some center of prison population. In the central prison, through which all the men pass, there is an average of 775 inmates; the state farm has 250 prisoners, and another farm has 300 prisoners. There are twenty-six aggregations of men in road building camps, ranging in number from 45 to 115. Through local help all of these places are provided with services with a degree of regularity. The support of this work rests entirely upon the churches, seven denominations sharing in it.

Church Extension

The committee aided during the year 294 ministers and evangelists who served 482 churches and missions with 245 outposts and preaching points. Nineteen churches and thirty-six Sunday Schools were organized. Ten churches were brought to self-support. Applications for assistance in church erection were received from twenty-nine churches and fifteen churches were granted small loans or donations from church erection funds.

Work for Indians

Indian Presbytery might well be taken as a model for other Presbyteries to follow. How many white Presbyteries can repeat every church holding a special evangelistic service, and every church making an Every Member Canvass for local support and benevolences.

The Southern Presbyterian Church has a major responsibility for mission work for the Choctaws and Chickasaws in southwest Oklahoma and the sole responsibility for the Alabamas in Texas. There are two evangelists and seven pastors serving twenty-one churches and nineteen Sunday Schools. Four Daily Vacation Bible Schools were held during the summer with a total enrollment of more than 200.

Two of our faithful missionaries died during the year. While the workers are diminishing, the number of Indians are increasing. There is an immediate need for four additional trained workers who are able to interest the young Indians who have attended the state and denominational schools. Should not the needs of the Indian people, the passing of these two veterans of the Cross, the thinning ranks of the oldest mission work of our Church, make an appeal to the young men and women in our Seminaries and in the Training School who are volunteers for missionary service?

Work for Negroes

Bad farm conditions, bank failures and lack of employment have made it a trying year for our colored workers. Two of our most faithful ministers have been called to their reward. In Snedecor Memorial Synod there are forty-two ministers and fifty-nine churches; 167 were received upon profession of faith and 76 by letter. There are fifty-three Sunday Schools with a total enrollment of 804. These colored Presbyterians, out of their meager incomes, gave $3.65 per member to benevolences and for their own support. When we remember that the givers are laborers, washerwomen and children, we know that this is sacrificial giving.

In Stillman Institute there are 301 students with sixteen teachers, seven of which are white and nine colored. The Nurses' Training School, made possible by the Auxiliary Birthday gift will open in September.

Work for Mountain People

In the administration of the Mountain Work there are two divisions:

(a) Assembly's Work. This is principally the work of the Soul Winners Society, transferred to by Dr. E. O. Guerrant. There are eighty-six parishes, serving seven schools with 1,004 students, four churches with 1,475 members, forty-four schools with 3,311 pupils, one physician and (b) Co-operative Work. The Assembly co-operates in mission schools for mountain six Presbyteries in the Appalachian region and with two Presbyteries in the Ozark West. In the co-operative work there are with ninety-two teachers and 1,722 pupils.

The mountain work is not only wonderful in the number of people reached, but it is laying the foundation for a great church untold material wealth.

Work for Foreign-Speaking Peoples

In co-operation with the Presbyteries and Executive Committee is preaching and teaching to the Cubans, Czecho-Slovakians, Chinese, Italian, French, Mexicans and Syrians in the support of forty-seven workers, fifty and sixty-five Sunday Schools, two mission one Theological Seminary.

The work for Mexicans is the oldest and one of our Foreign-speaking work. It includes departments of a fully organized mission on Sunday School to Theological Seminary. Churches received 393 persons upon profession of faith and 165 by letter. There are eleven Mexican in the Spanish Department of Austin Theological Seminary.

The Italian work in Kansas City stands within the bounds of the Assembly in its Christian work among immigrant peoples. There is an organization with a membership of 160, rescued from atheism and Romanism; a well organized Sunday School and the first Italian Auxiliary in our Assembly. Mission is helping four young men through of whom are preparing for the Gospel ministry, the distinction of taking under the care of the first two young men of Italian extraction and within the bounds of our Assembly.

Work for Jews

Great and far-reaching changes are now in Jewish life and thought. According to Jewish leader of the four million Jews in more than ten per cent observe Rabbinic Law, number is diminishing daily. Other Jewish leaders estimate that from 50 to 80 per cent of their religiously lost their way. By means of the possible that more Jews are hearing the Gospel than ever before. It is estimated that more have entered the Presbyterian churches of

The Committee co-operates with the National Board of Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the support of work for Jews in Baltimore and in Washington, D. C. In these two missions six workers. It is their earnest plea that contributions from our people for Jewish evangelism be the treasurer of the Assembly's Committee for of our own missions, and that the habit of to undenominational and irresponsible Jewish discontinued.

Every year the Home Mission task becomes its scope and more insistent in its demand growing country and the church must extend simply to hold its own. While during a quarter of the Assembly's Home Mission receipts have increased, the Executive Committee is less able to meet the Home Mission need of today than it was years ago.

If the Church is to meet the spiritual needs of a growing and changing South, the needs of Home Mission giving will not sufficient. Home Mission provision is wholly inadequate for new day and its demands. Many new churches built. Many old churches must be enlarged and adequate ministry must be maintained.

Unless the Church makes provision for records and strengthening its stakes, we will face the tragedy of obligations unmet, of ground and of opportunities lost.

A FRIEND'S VIEW OF UNITARIANISM

William T. Ellis

It has been my privilege—and a high privilege—to come into somewhat close association with the Southern Presbyterian Church, on many occasions and in many places; including nearly all south of the old Mason and Dixon Line; Korea, and China. In print and on platform I have repeatedly paid my tribute of admiration to the Church, her work and her workers.

This is my warrant for intruding a few suggestions upon the pending question of Presbyterian reunion. I was born into the United Presbyterian Church, and have since childhood been a member of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. I love the three outstanding Presbyterian Countries may become one. I see no valid reason why they should permanently remain separate.

Nevertheless, there is peril in precipitant Church Union to become a great controversy. The issue would be incongruous, and the orderly ongoing of the work of all bodies would be endangered. This marriage cannot be "arranged," European by the fathers in Israel; it must be a love marriage. It will be a failure. I am old enough to know that it is not wholly pleasant, of church unions forced upon nations by the ecclesiastical leaders. Mutual association and co-operation are essential for a full and abiding union.

In the meantime, let it be remembered that formal union is less important than in-

in real oneness appears in life and in work, earth can forbid the bans.

characteristics of the Southern Presbyterian in large degree by the United Presbyterians—must be taken into full consideration in relation of union. The body is homogeneous. In degree, Southern Presbyterians are likewise know one another and they understand illustrate by a somewhat embarrassingly pertinent. Several years ago a party of Southern missionaries, mostly recruits, en route to sailing from Philadelphia. Naturally, as to anybody who had enjoyed the hospitality of Presbyterians over a large part of the globe's seemed to Mrs. Ellis and myself that these could not be allowed to spend their last night in a hotel; so we invited them all to dine, supplemented by the homes of neighbors. When we gave a group of Philadelphia missionaries the privilege of meeting our guests. The dinner, delightful in itself, was, after all, a small affair as we were concerned. Lo! the reaction had entertained the entire General Assembly at home! For years following, wherever we went South, somebody was forever bringing us to the African missionaries, as if we had a member of the Southern Presbyterian Church with us. To this day I occasionally hear of the incident.

The Church's common enterprises, notably missions, are a matter of personal interest and to every congregation. Missionaries are the same. Every new baby born to a missionary event to be recorded and rejoiced over by the constituency. The welfare of each missionary is of the whole Church.

of denominational solidarity—or real unity and loyalty—would be hard to find elsewhere. Southern Presbyterians are enriched by a ship and "folksiness" and common responsibility not usual in churches. With this goes a relation to all Church causes and interests that is unique. It is a vital part of the equipment of the denomination. Only the most over-zealous of compensating benefits should make Presbyterians ready to sacrifice this peculiar privilege into a larger body whose very size and unusual intimacy between the members and their foreign workers.

also a certain doctrinal solidarity in the Presbyterian Church which merits safeguarding. I am a progressive person, with a spirit open to what may break forth from the Word of God in unmistakable Providence; yet I confess to a humility as I behold the clear faith and open preaching of the Southern Church. Her pulpits have been converted into forums and question boxes. Devotion and individual holiness are still her essentials. Piety is more of a concern than polemics. Perhaps she is "old fashioned"; but she knows what she believes and is bent upon a Gospel which begets new life.

active qualities as I have intimated should be. I am sure they are coveted by many members of other Presbyterian families who desire union with the Southern Church. They notably characterize Presbyterians also. If my own denomination is conspicuously marked by these traits, the fault is not our size. Perhaps the Southern Church has all the way into the sort of compact and responsible church life which is hers. At the unique heritage which I have indicated may be looked in any pursuit of the larger and wholly new life of Christian unity.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR REV. R. W. JOP-LING'S ERRORS

Presbyterian Standard" of April 3, the "Presbyterian South" of April 17, and the "Christian" of April 24, Rev. R. W. Jopling gave the Ministers' Annuity Fund that completely betrays the spirit, the method and the purpose. In an article in the "Presbyterian Standard" of April 17, he charges the writer with responsibility for errors.

is my friend. I have not charged him with misrepresentation. I am not going to enter into controversy with him. But I do think it is my duty to try to allay some of the prejudice he has cast upon the M. A. F. Probably all of us, at times, are thinking when we are simply rearranging old prejudices.

gave me three letters after he had read the Ministers' Annuity Fund. Each one of these letters was intemperate and seemed to me to be wholly untrue. They had numerous expressions such as; "I believe any of them are dumb enough to place their hands on the altar;" "demand the pound of flesh;" "such monstrous and in my judgement the Church in this thing has apostatized from the Lord and has written Ichabod over its doors;" "I do not think one in reading your Plan would suspect that its author had ever heard of the M. A. F.;" "that to me is pusillanimous and contemptible." Two of the letters were answered. When I was more violent than the others, the only answer I received was this: "What's the use?" I thought I was discussing the Plan which the General Assembly had approved—not until I read his articles in the "Standard" did I discover he was wholly confused, and was talking about Ministerial Relief, that he had not comprehended the essence of the new plan. Now he says he overlooked the fact that the Ministers' Relief would continue. He did not know that the Fund was so to stabilize the support of ministers and missionaries, offerings will continue, for all time the Endowment Fund which he incorrectly states it $1,000,000—but which is almost $1,600,000 will minister to necessitous cases as it now doing.

I shall answer his four questions in order.

1. It was always the purpose of the Church to use this Endowment—in fact it could be used in no other way. Why should we "write it into the annuity plan?" In every presentation of the plan it has been expressly stated that offerings to Relief must be continued for quite a while and that the income from the Endowment Fund will be needed throughout the years.

2. It is our "purpose in framing the annuity, to make adequate provision for the real needs of all our aged and infirm ministers." We believe this is the only plan that will accomplish that much needed thing. Right now we are giving an average of $415 a year to each needy minister's home. The maximum was $801—it has now been reduced to $720 and other reductions must soon be made. This is a larger amount than is provided by any other Church in the United States from Relief Funds. That is why all of the Churches have erected or are now erecting pension systems—in which small deposits are regularly made at the time the energies of the laborers are being used up, which by the marvelous working of compound interest, will enable the Churches to do what they have never been able to do in the past.

3. It seems to me everybody ought to speak, as I have, in high favor of the plan adopted by our Executive Committee of Foreign Missions in fixing the salaries of our foreign missionaries. Again you seem much confused—now it is salaries that have taken your mind off the Fund. The Foreign Mission Boards of America have not arranged for pensioning their workers—taking care of them in their days of retirement—and they are facing heavy accrued liabilities for prior service. All these boards are heartily entering the pension systems. The missionaries do not all get the same salary—salary is decided by the relative cost in the mission of each country. Some such plan as this should certainly be employed in the home mission fields. When the salaries are made equal, the pensions will automatically become equal and will become proportionate to the need. Each increase in salary increases the future pension. Of course all salaries cannot be equal and all pensions cannot be equal. They should not be equal. This is made plain in an editorial in the "Standard" of April 17, on page 3, signed "J. M. W."

4. "Our Church operates on a charter from the Bible" but there are many details of administration and methods of work that are not recorded. The Master walked, the parson rode in a "one horse shay," we have recently cancelled notes to the amount of $35,000 given by candor for the ministry chiefly on the plea of the Presbyterian Chairman that a Ford or an automobile was necessary at the very beginning of their ministry for their work and that its original cost, its upkeep and operating expense was so great they could not pay the notes given while in college or seminary. This is no more a serious, unjust, un-Christian, un-Presbyterian departure from the Bible than is the adoption of approved, Christian business methods for accomplishing the work of the Kingdom and removing from the Church the one inglorious mark of its history.

Paul, in writing to the Corinthian Christians about the collection for the saints in need, said, "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." Now certainly there is no word in the Word prohibiting either minister or church from laying by in store on the first day of the month to insure that the saints do not come to need. Mr. Jopling, knowest thou not the Book? I think I have recollections of your oft quoting it; I know that thou knowest how it says: "The whole counsel of God concerning all things necessary for His own glory, man's salvation, faith and life is either expressly set down in Scripture or by good and necessary consequence may be deduced from Scripture."

The plan is based on such Scripture as is clearly set forth in the "Background of the Plans," which was printed in all the Church papers of March 27, 1929, and may be had from Room 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky. If you read this understandingly I believe you will "withdraw all opposition to the plan and apologize for all the things you have said against it"—as you suggest.

I will briefly note the "few statements of your belief in this matter" as you have made them.

1. In this I think you are wholly wrong. One of the strong points about our plan is that the minister participates in providing his own pension. This does not in any wise prohibit him from the injunction to "live of the gospel." The little he puts in comes "of the gospel," and will come back to him as "of the gospel." It makes him more independent, it brings more system into his finances, it conserves his savings, it develops a group spirit in the ministry, it follows the best theory and practice of modern pension systems which are practically all contributory. Your objections to this probably come largely from misconceptions and your arguments will not hold. You say "a minister is not required or expected to pay a part of his salary"—and yet they gladly do so. In many churches the ministers and his family contribute, of his funds, much more in proportion than any others. The Episcopal Church was the pioneer in plans like the M. A. F. but all that I know of that have followed the lead of that Church, have erected "contributory" pension systems, and the participation principle is a most important element in securing much larger benefits for himself and family than are provided by that Church.

2. "No minister's annuity ought to be reduced if the Church he serves defaults in its payments." The Presbytery should see that the Churches become more careful in providing for the pastor. Recent letters to our office complain of the failure of Church to meet the salary. Is not this a duty of Presbytery? If the Church is unable, the stronger Churches must help. Because they have not done this as they should, is there no hope that they may be led to see their duty in the sight of God and man?

3. You are in this statement again confusing relief and pension. Please remember that the Church (in a most inadequate way) has ministered to need as you suggest and will continue to do so. Twenty-two years ago a minister was received into the ministry of our Church from another denomination. He had not proper educational qualifications to acceptably serve a Church. He actually served less than six months. For more than twenty years he was on the roll of ministerial relief. When you fully comprehend the purpose of the M. A. F., I am sure you will understand why service and the amount deposited fix the pension. Our Annuity Fund is in line with modern business methods, built on Christian principles, affording a means of helping our ministers to prepare against the days of need and our Church to keep in the line of Christian, social justice. A pension system can not regulate the salaries, nor provide against unemployment, but it does offer the only hope so far discovered by the various church, civic, fraternal and industrial groups, to provide for the days of inactivity in a Christian way. It would sound well to speak of alluring, ideal prospects and benefits, but it would bring reproach on the Church—as it has brought shame to many organizations—to promise benefits that cannot materialize.

4. You are right this time—except it has been proved to be wise for the minister and the church to make adequate provision for old age. Why must you say "either" —"or"—let us say both and all work together to "make provision for their old age."

5. The work of Ministerial Relief is to minister to declared need. The work of the Annuity Fund is to prevent need. Who knows who is going to be in need. Three hundred men, at least, who have been on the roll of relief in the past twenty-five years have written, "I never had a thought of coming on the roll of relief."

6. Salaries certainly should take into account "the cost of living, the state of health, the number of dependents"—if this is done the annuity automatically will correspond to all requirements. In relief we must take into account "income from other sources"—which in the case of most ministers is not much. If this should be taken into account in the pension, certainly it should also in the salary—and thus the pension will be regulated also. I do not see how any man can contend for equal pensions without at the same time contending for equal salaries.

7. The plan proposed as a whole and in every part is in harmony with the Bible. It is in obedience to the command "Diligent in business," and has been approved by millions of Christians of every name in America.

Mr. Jopling says, "From last summer on we have been dispensing propaganda in favor of his plan," and then he reprimands us for not saying more. Again Mr. Jopling is mistaken. There has been no "propaganda." Only facts have been put before the Church. I wish we had been more insistent on having these understood. There is danger that misapprehensions published so broadly may seriously delay or defeat the adoption of the plan. We have tried to answer every question (see 81 answers in the Church papers of March 27). We have done what the Assembly directed us to do. We believe the plan proposed is the only plan yet evolved that will meet the awfully serious condition faced by our own and other Churches. We submit our best efforts to the Church. If the plan is not wise and Christian and safe and just we hope it will fail.

With no heat or malice we will try to throw light on the subject and to see that the Ministers' Annuity Fund, and not misconception of it is considered by the Church. We have studied and conferred and secured the services of foremost actuaries and prayed and worked. The results are left to God and the Church. But, brethren, the situation is serious and each year it becomes more critical.

OVERTURES

I. The Presbytery of Upper Missouri respectfully and earnestly overtures the Generally Assembly in session at Montreat, N. C., to suspend or discontinue the operation of the Assembly's Work Committee of the General Assembly for the work of the Assembly until such time as the erection of the Assembly's Work Committee shall have been submitted to the Presbyteries for their advice and consent and approved by them.

This Overture is submitted on these grounds:

1. Because of the wide unrest throughout the bounds of the Church due to the belief in the minds of an increasing number of our people that the Assembly's Work Committee is in fact a continuing-Assembly, or super-Court, and, therefore, if not illegal, at least wholly foreign to the traditional policy of our church.

2. In the interest of economy.

3. In the adoption of the recommendations of the Ad-Interim Committee, upon which the Work Committee was created, sufficient time had not been given to the Church at large to know and digest the radical, and well nigh revolutionary principles involved in its establishment and its continuation, in the light of this fact, tends to hurt the work of our church immeasurably through the impaired confidence of the people in the Assembly's loyalty to the distinctive principles upon which our Church was founded.

II. The Presbytery of Upper Missouri respectfully and earnestly overtures the General Assembly, in session at Montreat, N. C., to defer any action on the proposed consolidation of the Assembly's Agencies until all the facts involved have been submitted to the Presbyteries for discussion and advice.

This Overture is based on these grounds:

1. While there may be advantages incident to such consolidation, the Church at large has not had the proposed advantages before it for discussion; and, action at this time would not be the action of the Church but merely of that group of men who chance to constitute the Montreat Assembly.

2. The Presbytery of Upper Missouri believes that any of the supposed advantages may be, and probably are, more than counter balanced by the certain disadvantages and dangers with which the movement is pregnant, to-wit: (a) The certain large financial loss, especially in the case of the Publication Committee, with no assurance of an opportunity to recoup this loss through the consolidation; (b) The loss of local contact of the work of the Church in the communities and Synods in which these Agencies are now located without compensatory gain in the location of the consolidated Agency; (c) The dangers, and un-Presbyterian, tendency to centralization of power.

III. The Presbytery would call to the attention of our Commissioners-elect its action upon the foregoing matters and express the hope, without in any sense seeking to instruct them, that it may be their wisdom and pleasure to give these overtures their hearty support.

Signed: John W. Rowe,
I. Cochran Hunt.

IV. The Presbytery of Upper Missouri respectfully overtures our General Assembly in session at Montreat, N. C., to direct the Treasurers of our Executive Committees to fix April 5 as the date for the closing of their books instead of March 31.

We would urge the Assembly to push the matter of union with the United Presbyterian Church. To this end a careful and prayerful investigation be made until the union is happily consummated or investigation proves it un-wise.

Touching the Amendment to our Book of Church Order, referred to the Presbyteries for their advice and consent, as to the establishment of a Permanent Judicial Commission, we recommend that this Presbytery decline its consent to such change.

understood by many people. One so often hears such expressions as "evangelistic work" and "educational work" that he is prone to put the two things in separate classes and overlook the fact that bringing our students to Christ and training them up for Christian service is the very heart of our schools. In the boarding departments we have the best opportunity for this training. At the morning and evening devotions the spiritual life of the student is strengthened and they get regular and specific Bible study, experience in leading meetings and in leading in prayer. . . . Without exception, our boarding pupils have become Christians before they graduated.

This training made it possible for the girls to do the gratifying vacation work that they did this year. . . .

They were able to render this service because they had been trained in a Christian boarding school. Nowhere else in the state could they have gotten it. . . . There is not another boarding school in the state of Michoacan. . . . What would our village girls do for an education, Christian or otherwise, after they finish the two, three or four grades in their home towns, (when they are fortunate to have that much); if we did not have our boarding department? Where would we get our Christians teachers, educated nurses, Christian workers and home makers?

The one school in the state of Guerrero is the Chilpancingo school where girls have a Christian environment and training. These two institutions, the Southern Presbyterian women will bless with their Birthday offering in May. In so doing they may know that they are giving renewed life to two of the few boarding schools for girls in Mexico. These two have struggled along unequipped for the large task set before them, have already done heroic service and when properly equipped will have unlimited possibilities to serve the Master in Mexico. . . .

We cannot neglect so great an opportunity! Come over and help us!

Very sincerely yours,
Mrs. Z. V. Myers.

TWO NEW LEAFLETS FOR YOUR BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Two new leaflets have been written concerning the Birthday objectives, the Wallace Institute at Chilpancingo, and the Centenarista School at Zitacuaro.

"Needs and Opportunities" by Mrs. R. C. Morrow is a thrilling tale of courage and work under almost overing handicaps. With almost no equipment, Miss Beaty and her staff have labored and accomplished much because always before them was the vision of their opportunities for service.

"A Blue Print for the Chilpancingo School," by Miss Alice McClelland presents the plans for the enlarged work, original, complete and inspiring, of a scope such as is rarely conceived.

These two leaflets will be sent to each Auxiliary President, but additional copies will be sent free upon request.

Do not fail to use both leaflets just before the Pageant at your Birthday party. They are of unusual inspiration. Appalling is the need presented; boundless the opportunity; and inspiring are the plans. Let your Auxiliary catch the vision splendid, that joy may come to each heart as it moves forward to service. Order from The Department of Woman's Work, 270-277 Field Building, St. Louis, Mo.

MECKLENBURG PRESBYTERIAL

The 25th annual meeting of the Woman's Presbyterial of Mecklenburg Presbytery was held in the Presbyterian Church, at Hamlet, N. C., on April 25th and 26th.

The motto of the meeting was Eph. 5:2, "Walk in love, as Christ hath also loved us."

The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs.

A. A. Walker. After the singing of a hymn, "O could I speak the Matchless Worth," followed by prayer, greetings were given to the body by Mrs. Pegues of the Hamlet Auxiliary. This was responded to by Mrs. L. T. Lindsay, of Charlotte.

Reports were then given by the various officers of the Presbyterial along with reports of the district chairmen.

Rev. J. G. Garth, of the Presbyterian Standard, then presented the cause of The Presbyterian Standard, our Church paper, urging all present to stand back of this splendid paper.

A very impressive sermon was then preached by Rev. J. F. Hardie, of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Charlotte, followed by a communion service.

Rev. W. B. McIwaine, of Westminster Presbyterian Church, of Charlotte, and Chairman of Woman's Work in Mecklenburg Presbytery, spoke in words of highest praise of the splendid work of the women which had been reported at the recent meeting of Mecklenburg Presbytery.

Mrs. C. C. Hook, of Charlotte, presented Queens College. One statement made by Mrs. Hook: The Presbyterians, along with the Episcopalians, is the only denomination of any size not having a grade "A" college for women in North Carolina.

Two splendid pageants were given by the Business Women's Circle of the Hamlet Church.

On Thursday night one of the most outstanding features of the meeting was held. It was an impressive memorial service presided over by Mrs. A. A. Walker, at which time 56 candles were lighted, representing that number of the Presbyterial members who had passed to their reward since the previous Presbyterial meeting.

Mr. J. B. Johnston, Superintendent of Barium Springs Orphanage, made an address on Orphanage work in which the splendid work of our orphanage at Barium Springs was described to the delegates.

Rev. A. A. Walker, Superintendent Mecklenburg Presbytery Home Missions, gave the delegates a keen insight into the worth while work being done by this part of the church.

Mrs. J. B. Spillman conducted a Bible study for 30 minutes on Friday afternoon. All who heard her realized her wonderful ability as a teacher of the Bible.

Reports showed that the 67 Auxiliaries of Mecklenburg Presbyterial have a membership of 4,785 and this membership was well represented at this meeting.

The women of Hamlet Presbyterian Church are to be highly commended for their gracious hospitality; both for its efficiency and cordiality.

The following officers for the coming year were installed by the Synodical President, Mrs. G. V. Patterson, of Gastonia, N. C.; Secretary of Young Peoples, Work, Mrs. Sidney Alverson, Charlotte, N. C.; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Flora Grady, Charlotte, N. C.; Secretary Foreign Missions, Mrs. W. A. Henderson, Monroe, N. C.; Secretary Home Missions, Mrs. Flynn Wolfe, Charlotte, N. C.; Historian, Mrs. John R. Irwin, Charlotte, N. C.; Secretary Christian Social Service, Mrs. H. B. Hunter, Charlotte, N. C.

It was pointed out that other officers will continue in their positions until next year as they were elected to serve for two years.

FIGHT THE GOOD FIGHT OF FAITH

us by ignoring the guilt of sin, by descending from His throne, by throwing the universe into chaos, by making wrong to be the same as right, by making a dead letter of his holy law, "The soul that sinneth it shall die", by treating His eternal laws as though they were the changeable laws of man? Oh, what an abyss were the universe if that were done, what a mad anarchy, what a wild demon-riot! Where could there be peace if God were thus at war with Himself; where could there be a foundation if God's laws were not sure? Oh no, my friends, peace cannot be attained for man by the great modern method of dragging God down to men's level; peace cannot be attained by denying that right is right and wrong is wrong; peace can nowhere be attained if the awful justice of God stands not forever sure.

Peace in the Cross of Jesus

How then can we sinners stand before that throne? How can there be peace for us in the presence of the justice of God? How can He be just and yet justify the ungodly? There is one answer to these questions not our answer. Our wisdom could never cover it. It is God's answer. It is found in the Cross. We deserved eternal death because the eternal Son of God, because He loved us, because He was sent by the Father who loved us in our stead for our sins, upon the cross. The Cross is despised today; upon it the visible Christ as the world pours out the vials of its scorn, it even honor by paying it lip-service and then by. Men dismiss it as a "theory of the atonement," fall back upon the customary commonplaces of self-sacrifice, or the culmination of the law, or a revelation of the love of God, or the suffering, or the similarity between Christ's death of soldiers who perished in the great presence of such blindness, our words offend. We may tell men something of what we think of the Cross of Christ, but it is hard to tell them what we think of the Cross. We pour forth our tears of gratitude and love to the multitude the depths of our souls; we are so mystery so tender, so holy, that we might think of softening even a heart of stone. But all to no purpose. The Cross remains foolishness to the world, men turn away, and our preaching seems but vain. And the wonders of wonders! The hour comes for the soul, even through the simplest and poorest of messengers, the message is honored, not the messenger; there is a flash of light into the soul, and all is as clear. "He loved me and gave Himself for me," says at last, as he contemplates the Saviour in the burden of sin falls from the back, and a soul finds the peace of God.

Have you yourselves that peace, my friends, have you will not be deceived by the propagation of a disloyal church. If you have the peace of God in your hearts, you will never shrink from controversy, you will never be afraid to contend earnestly for the truth, for the peace in the present deadly peril of the Church. You show, unless you be strangely ignorant of the conditions that exist, that you have little inkling of the peace of God. Those who have been at the Cross will not be afraid to go forth under the banner of the Cross to a holy war of love.

Resisting Depression

I know that it is hard to live on the heights of Christian experience. We have had flashes of the glory of the Cross of Christ; but then come long periods of dullness. What shall we do in those dull times? Shall we witness for Christ; shall we make common cause with the dull days, with those who would destroy the witness of the Church? Perhaps we may be able to do so. When there are such enemies in our midst we may be tempted to say, what time have we opponents without? Such reasoning is plausible, all the same it is false. We are not saved by ourselves constantly in the proper frame of mind, we were saved by Christ once for all when we again by God's Spirit and were enabled by His grace to trust in the Saviour. And the gospel message will not cease to be true because we for the moment are in the shadow of the full glory of it. Sad will it be for us if we let our changing moods determine the terminative of the message that at any moment we may claim, or if we let our changing moods determine the question whether we shall or shall not stand for the rampant forces of unbelief in the Church. We must look not within, but without, for the content of our message; and for the determination of our bearing; not to our changing feelings and emotions, but to the Bible as the Word of God. There is only one way to stand for Christ, and that is to witness only shall we preach not ourselves but Christ Lord.

Finding Our Place in the Battle Line

Where are you going to stand in the great battle now raging in the Church? Are you going to stand with the world by standing aloof; are you going to stand with the "conservative liberals" or "liberal conservatives"? "Christians who do not believe in controversy" is a thing else so self-contradictory and absurd? Are you going to be Christians but not Christians over your own heads? Are you going to stand coldly aloof when God's people are fighting against ecclesiastical tyranny at home and abroad? Are you going to excuse yourselves by pointing out defects in those who contend for the faith to those who are going to be disloyal to Christ in external things until you can make all well within your own heads? Assured, you will never accomplish your purpose unless you adopt such a program as that. Witness bravely for the truth that you already understand, and more will be added to you; but make a common cause with those who ignore the gospel of Christ, and the enemy will run riot in your life.

There are many hopes that I cherish for you whom I am united by such ties of affection. I hope that you may be gifted preachers; I hope that you may have happy lives; I hope that you may have adequate resources for yourselves and for your families; I hope that you may have good churches. But I hope something more than all that. I hope above all that, that you are and however your preaching may be received, may be true witnesses for the Lord Jesus Christ. That there may never be any doubt where you stand, that always you may stand squarely for Jesus Christ. He is offered to us, not in the experience of the world, but in the blessed written Word of God.

I do not mean that the great issue of the day is polemically presented in every sermon that is preached. No doubt that would be exceedingly unwise. We should always endeavor to build the people up by simple and positive instruction in the Word. But never will we be able to do this unless we have a firm foundation and such positive instruction in the Word has the blessing of God, if, when the occasion does arise, you stand, you shrink back. God hardly honors was commercialized—that is, it was brought down to the basis of business or trade. Now the stores try to make one think that to show real affection for one's mother, one must give her a fountain pen or a box of candy. We have pulled sentiment down to the level of sentimentality.

 Sentiment is real feeling, but sentimentality is a cheap imitation of sentiment that is mawkish and emotional. Our mothers and fathers would much rather have our real love and respect than all the gifts in the world, because "the gift without the giver is bare." One can not make up on one day of the year for all the undone things of the other 364 days. Though we call only one day "Mother's Day," we know that all the rest are hers by right, too.

"The Dear Inquisitive Home Folks"

A visitor to a new section of our country was inclined to smile, when she found her entertainers saying, "I want to know!" very frequently. Wherever she went in the hospitable homes people used the expression. At first she thought it meant what the few words imply, and that they really did want to know, but she soon discovered it was an exclamatory sentence to show surprise or interest. Of course, when she reached home, she told her various experiences and added with a half smile and a half sigh, that she wished the home folks would learn to use the expression, "I want to know!" merely in a surprised way without actually meaning the words.

The dear inquisitive home folks! How many young people are losing the keen edge of daily enjoyment because they feel humiliated at having to give an account of their actions, their places of entertainment, their friends and their associates! How humiliated they feel when Father investigates the standing of the young man who wishes to escort Jayne to the party, and Mother carefully scrutinizes the manners and morals of the new girl next door! The home folks want to know, and they want to know the last detail. "How would you like to have a microscope held over your little excursions and parties," sobs Jayne while Brother Harold, who is almost ready for college, thinks he is perfectly competent to select his own associates.

But, if the young folks could only realize it, that loving inquisitiveness is the greatest asset they have. A young girl went visiting a few years ago, to a home where everything was carefully supervised and the best of care given the gay, happy young folks. But one afternoon the guest and her young hostess accepted a little ride with a boy who was known to be a reckless driver, thinking there could be no harm, even though the girl host knew the family ban on the youth. In spirit of girlish recklessness the guest asked to be taught how to drive and the youth readily consented. The result was that the machine went into the ditch and the girl, a lovely only daughter, was instantly killed. The others were injured, but recovered.
 Of course, the mother of the girl who had disobeyed was overwhelmed with grief, and the girl herself feels responsible for the death of the friend, but all this only goes to show that parents have every right to be inquisitive, and to hold the microscope over the doings of their children.

Not all acts of disobedience result in death, but there are enough dangers on every hand to make people careful and cautious. It takes years of effort and sacrifice and toil to rear fine boys and girls, and besides, parents are responsible to Almighty God for the safe keeping of the children He has given them. Think it over, young people!
 It is love that prompts the tender care that seems like a burden to youth. Some day you may be grappling with the problems of protecting boys and girls, and it will give you much strength and courage if you can look back to a youth of obedience and lack of complaining, because your parents were on the alert to help you. You have not the worldly wisdom to choose wisely, and you do not see the necessity for looking closely at conduct. Surface manners, a fine appearance, high spirits, and plenty of spending money often seem more desirable to young people than real character, but parents are not so easily deceived. The fifth commandment was not placed in the decalogue to be a dead letter. It is real, vital, living and essential. Obey its teaching and the blessing of God will be upon you.—Hilda Richmond in Onward.

"According to His Way"

Train up a child according to his way and even when he is old he will not depart from it (Proverbs 22:6).
 You cannot think of any two people you know who are exactly alike, can you? Each of us has a "way"—a nature.
 The problems of our parents is to train us up "according to our way." Now, that does not mean that our parents are to let us have our way about everything! In many cases such a thing would be cruelty. But our parents have to try to bring out the best that is in us and develop the nature that each of us has. You see, that is no easy job.
 We can best help them and ourselves by yielding to their training. Yielding is not always the easiest thing to do, of course. If it were, there would be no more wars.

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I felt as a child, I thought as a child; now that I have become a man I have put away childish things." But there is one thing we cannot put away—that is our nature or our way, and our parents are trying to develop that way for the good of all.

Benediction.

The idea of Mother's Day, originating in Philadelphia, soon became a popular one. It was made public through the press, and was adopted by the various States of our country. A short time later a bill was passed by Congress, ordering that our Flag be officially displayed on this day, a national tribute to American womanhood.

And so, Mother's Day has become not only nationwide, but many of the other countries are now celebrating it as we do. How fine it is to think that this noble idea, originating in America, has crossed the oceans, and found a home in the hearts of the English, Japanese, Germans, Irish, Belgians and other peoples.

Poem:
Nobody Knows—But Mother
 Nobody knows of the work it makes
 To keep the home together,
 Nobody knows of the steps it takes,
 Nobody knows—but mother.

Nobody listens to childish woes,
 Which kisses only smother;
 Nobody's pained by naughty blows,
 Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the sleepless care,
 Bestowed on baby brother;
 Nobody knows of the tender prayer,
 Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the lessons taught,
 Of loving one another;
 Nobody knows of the patience sought,
 Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the anxious fears,
 Lest darlings may not weather
 The storm of life in after years,
 Nobody knows—but mother.

Nobody kneels at the throne above,
 To thank the Heavenly Father
 For that sweetest gift—a mother's love;
 Nobody can—but mother.

CHILDREN

TREE PLANTINGS

"Dick," said his sister Eleanor, "today's Arbor Day. You and I are going to plant a tree."

Dick dropped the little train of cars he was playing with, and ran willingly after his sister.

"Where's the tree?" he demanded. Eleanor held up a small shoot attached to a long curly root.

"That isn't a tree," objected Dick. "That's a seedling."

"From little acorns great oaks grow," said Eleanor, who had just come back from school and was full of the spirit of Arbor Day. Dick rubbed his eyebrow as he was apt to do when he was puzzled.

"Where're we going to plant it?" he inquired.

"Well now," said Eleanor thoughtfully, "where do you think would be nice?"

"How about near the back porch?" said Dick. "The Sappsywine apple tree doesn't make enough shade for all of us. I usually get squeezed out. But then if we planted a tree down by the old well it would make a nice one to hide behind when we play hide and seek."

"Let's plant it by the well," decided Eleanor.

They got a big spade and rake and hoe and the watering can and set to work. The hole they must dig would have to be pretty deep as their seedling was mostly root.

In the midst of their labors they heard wheels, and looking up they saw a neighbor Mr. Crawford driving in.

"Your Pappy in?" asked Mr. Crawford.

"He's down in the wood lot, said Eleanor. Memmer's in the kitchen."

"Wall, I'll set and wait a bit," said Mr. Crawford. "Reckon your pappy will be back soon."

"He's not our pappy," said Dick with great scorn.

"No," said Mr. Crawford. "Well, you look quite a heap like him."

"He means," said Eleanor, "we don't call our father pappy. We call him Daddy."

"Oh, I see," smiled Mr. Crawford good naturedly. "Digging for worms, be you?"

"Ugh, no!" cried Eleanor.

"Einer's 'fraid of worms," explained Dick. "I'm not. I bit one in two once."

"I have never kissed him on the mouth since," said Eleanor, "and I never shall."

Mr. Crawford laughed loudly at that, then he asked:

"Maybe you're figuring on digging another well, be you?"

"Oh, no," said Eleanor. "You see this is Arbor Day."

"Sure," agreed Mr. Crawford, wagging his white beard. "Reckon he was one of the Ginerals in the last War. I don't recall hearing about him when I was young."

"Oh, I didn't know there was a General Arbor," said Eleanor. "Nobody ever said who the Day was named for in school."

Mr. Crawford frowned and shook his old head.

"In my day, there warn't a child what couldn't name all the Ginerals. Be you going to plant a flag post thar, eh?"

"Oh, no," said Eleanor. "We're planting a tree."

"No!" exclaimed Mr. Crawford. Then he began looking all around him. Everywhere as far as the eye could reach were trees, trees, trees.

"Planting a tree!" he cried, and throwing back his head he burst into loud peals of laughter. "Why, you could go twenty miles up yonder mountain and see nothing but trees," he said, pointing with his whip. "Me, I've been a-fighting trees all my life. Wish I had a dollar for every one I've felled and every tough stump I've pulled. Planting a tree! Ha-ha!"

"We couldn't get along without trees," said Eleanor indignantly. "My teacher said so."

"That's right, me gal," replied the old farmer. "Thar's the sugar maple gives us syrup and sugar, thar's the pine for boards and thar's hardwood trees for firewood. Yes, sir, your teacher warn't far from right when she says we can't get on without trees. Not far from right."

"Well," said Dick, "that's why we're planting a tree right now."

"An while you're a-planting, your pappy's a-fellin, he said.

"We have our wood lot," explained Eleanor eagerly, "and besides Daddy probably isn't felling. He goes all through the trees and cuts up branches that have fallen and trees blown over by winds or by lightning. You You see, he was in France during the War and saw how the French have to save. They cut the live branches off their shade trees up to a certain place on the trunk and use the wood for fires. They even pick up twigs for kindling. He says a French family could live well on what most American families waste. Every time he cuts down a tree, Daddy plants another one."

"Wall, he'll do some waiting fer his trees," said the old farmer. "Where'll he or I be in forty years?"

"We plant for the future," said Eleanor.

The farmer seemed to be thinking, then he said:

"Wall, I dunno, but you're right Planting for the future, eh? Now I've been cutting down our trees fast's my old arms could saw them up. You see, when I figure on retiring, I'm getting old, you see. My pappy cut down our wood lot and I have to go into the woods for my wood. It's a powerful lot of work. I figure on living to be a hundred, and I've got a lot more firewood to cut before I can retire."

Eleanor pulled her little Arbor Day tree from the hole and held it up to the old farmer.

"Oh, please take this little tree and plant it," she said. "Even if you don't live to sit under its shade somebody else will."

Mr. Crawford took the seedling and looked at it.

"I reckon it'll have to be somebody littler than me to be a-setting under this tree," he said. "This here's a pipsissiwa root."

"Oh!" said Eleanor. "I found it just outside the yard in that dry sort of patch of woods."

"Wall, I wouldn't git firewood enough out of a pipsissiwa root to retire on," grinned Mr. Crawford. "But thank you just the same. I'll plant it good."

"Can you tell the different plants just by the roots?" asked Dick.

"I can tell a pipsissiwa," said the old farmer. "Now, if you want to plant a nice tree, come over to my place and I'll give you a nice cutting of my early apple tree. 'Taint no better apple grows anywhere in this section."

"Oh, thank you!" cried Eleanor. "Then we'll celebrate Arbor Day right."

MRS. E. S. KELLY

Again the old Mother Church, Buffalo, Lee County, is called upon to mourn the loss of one of its most faithful and consecrated members, Mrs. Adelaide Kelly, who passed away February 14, 1929.

This sad dispensation brings to each of us a feeling of deep sorrow as in the death of our beloved friend we as individuals, our Church, and the community at large have lost a true and loyal friend.

Her life was an example of piety and faithful attend- ance upon Church duties, devotion to husband and chil- dren, and kindness to neighbors and friends.

To the loved ones whom she has left behind we extend our sincere sympathy, and, pray that our Heavenly Father will encircle them in the arms of His love and comfort them.

"They never quite leave us, the friends who have passed Through the shadow of death to the sunlight above; A thousand sweet memories are holding them fast To the places they blessed with their presence and love.

"They are passing away, these dear old friends, Like leaves on the current cast; With never a break in the rapid flow, We watch them as one by one they go Into the solemn past.

"Passing out of the shadow Into a purer light, Stepping behind the curtain Getting a clearer sight; Laying aside the burden, This weary mortal coil; Done with this world's vexations, Done with its tears and toils." Sanford, N. C.

THOMAS M. ROSE

The undersigned Committee appointed by a joint meet- ing of the elders and deacons of the First Presbyterian Church, of Hamlet, N. C., to prepare resolutions upon the death of Mr. Thomas M. Rose, submits the following:

At his home in Hamlet, N. C. on February 9, 1929, in his seventy-first year, our brother Thomas M. Rose, a ruling elder, and previous to his ordination to the eldership, a deacon of the Hamlet Church, entered upon his eternal rest.

He was born in Fayetteville, N. C., and was the son of John M. Rose, Sr., for many years secretary and treasurer of the old Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. His mother was before her marriage Miss Jane Strange McNeill. Both parents were representatives of distinguished North Carolina families. Thomas M. was one of eight children and the youngest of four brothers. One of his brothers was the late beloved Presbyterian Minister, Dr. John M. Rose, Jr.

Coming to Hamlet thirty-five years ago a young man, he brought to the then straggling village the fine qualifi- cations of a good citizen. He identified himself with the interests of the growing community. He has gone to his reward to the sorrow of all, and is especially mourned by the older citizenship of Hamlet. He was worthy of the high esteem and affection in which he was held and leaves a name worthy of emulation.

When the Presbyterian Church of Hamlet was organ- ized, Mr. Rose was made a member of the building com- mittee, and again a member of the Committee when the present handsome church building was erected. He was made a deacon and served faithfully in that office until elected a ruling elder three years ago. He was ever pre- sent at the regular meetings and though a man of few words, wise in counsel. He was especially helpful to the pastor in his knowledge of and interest in the members of the Church. Quiet and unassuming by nature, he un- ostentatiously lived his religion in his business, his com- munity, his home and his Church. If he had an enemy, he did not deserve one.

Therefore, Be It Resolved:

(1) That a life of faithful and useful service both to the community and Church came to a close with the going home of Thomas M. Rose.

(2) That we, the members of the Session and Diacon- ate do hereby acknowledge our loss with profound sor- row and a deep sense of appreciation of his fine character and life of service.

(3) That we extend to his beloved wife to whom he was so tenderly devoted, and to the son in whom he found so much help and satisfaction, our deepest sympathy in their bereavement, commending them to the keeping of our Heavenly Father who is able to do for them "ex- ceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think."

(4) That we devote a portion of the Minutes of the Session to the recording of these resolutions, that his family be supplied with a copy, and that they be published in the Presbyterian Standard and the Hamlet News-Messenger.

WILLIAM J. CURRIE

The Session of the Maxton Presbyterian Church would put on record its great sense of loss in the departure from this life of our senior ruling elder, William J. Currie, who, for fifty years has held this office in our Church, and who, during all these years, has magnified his office and has been faithful to every trust committed to him and faithful in every relation of life.

Wonderfully versed in the scriptures and familiar with the great doctrines of our Church, he was gifted in ex- pounding scripture and explaining the precious doctrines which were dear to his heart. He not only had true reli- gion, but lived it consistently every day as he walked among his fellowmen. It would be hard indeed to esti- mate the value of his long and useful life in this com- munity.

As we think of our great loss, these words of scripture seem eminently appropriate: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?" He was always on the side of righteousness and ever ready to lend his support to every good cause or institution. He was great in the opinion of his fellow citizens in his community, great in his humility and consecration, great in the strength of his robust Christian character, and, we believe, also great in the sight of the Lord.

While his health had been failing for some time, it was nevertheless a shock to the community to hear last Saturday morning, March 16th, that he had passed away. He was 83 years of age, and had been a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church for over 60 years, first in old Sandy Grove Church, then for a few years in Centre Church, and for over fifty years in the First Presbyterian Church of Maxton—since its organization fifty years ago last December.

For a long term of years he had been clerk of the Session, still holding this office at the time of his death, though for several years the work has been done by an "Acting Clerk." In May 1924 he represented this Pres- bytery in the General Assembly at San Antonio, Texas, making the long trip there and return with no discom- fort, and thoroughly enjoying both the trip and the meet- ing of our highest church court.

He was born in Robeson county in 1846, the son of John Calvin Currie and Margaret K. Currie. He en- listed in the Confederate Army at the age of 18 and served throughout the war.

To his beloved wife, who has been his constant com- panion and helpmate for 53 years, and to his children and other relatives we extend our sincere sympathy and commend them to the God of all grace, whom their loved one served so faithfully and long, he is able and willing to do for each of you "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think," and we pray that His grace may be sufficient for you.

We direct that a copy of this brief sketch be given the family, that it be offered for publication in the Scottish Chief and the Presbyterian Standard, and that it be made a part of our Sessional Records.

MRS. JOHN McLEAN

Our congregation has been deeply saddened by the death of Mrs. John McLean who passed to her reward on the morning of December 16, 1928.

Mrs. McLean was born in Robeson County, December 3, 1863. Her maiden name was Dora Inman; her father being a substantial farmer of the community. She was married to Mr. John McLean, January 29, 1881. Eight children were born of this union all of whom are still living.

At the age of fourteen she gave her heart to Christ, uniting with the Presbyterian Church at Philadelphia. She retained her membership there until a church was organized at Red Springs, when she became one of the sixteen charter members of this new organization. Through the whole of her life she loved her Church, taking a deep interest in every department of the work but especially was she devoted to the Sunday School.

Mrs. McLean was an exceptional Christian woman. She had an abiding faith in Jesus Christ as the Divine Saviour of her soul. She delighted in the study of the Bible, finding help and comfort in the precious promises of God. She was a good wife, a tender mother, a loyal friend, a consistent Christian. She bore patiently and cheerfully the years of sickness which preceded her death, never murmuring nor questioning because she knew that it was the will of God, and that here earthly suffering was but the prelude to her eternal glory. Nothing could have been more beautiful during her last illness than the care and devotion of her children. And when the end came they were gathered about her bedside to close her eyes for the last sleep. Then with loving hands they laid her to rest in the quietness of the old home ceme- tery where she awaits the voice of Him who is the Resur- rection and our Life.

GOING HOME

I am going home with Jesus
And there is nothing that I fear,
For his blessed, holy presence
Will be always sweetly near.

I am safe in his dear keeping.
And when I rest above,
With the angel throng forever
I shall praise my Savior's love.

Going home with my Redeemer,
Led by his loving hand,
I shall safely reach my home in glory,
I shall live again in that beautiful land."

The above poem was by one of the members of the First Church, Salisbury, N. C. who passed away a year ago.

OUTRAGEOUS ANN

Pris had a clever pencil. While her mother by the desk was writing a cordial invitation for the summer to her Arizona cousin—second removed, or fourth; Pris did not know and did not care which—she by the window drew with flourishing impetuous strokes an imaginary portrait of this same Ann for the benefit of her dearest chum Olivia, who leaned over her shoulder and cheered her on. The Ann conceived by Pris was gangling; awkwardness branched in every dot and line; she slouched and swaggered; uneven whisks of hair stuck out from under a foolish cowboy hat; her freckles were masterpieces of boldness and irregularity. She carried a shotgun in one hand and in the other an object which might have been a coiled lasso or possibly a rattlesnake in its death throes.

Olivia giggled, fascinated. "I suppose she'll say, 'Howdy, stranger!' and, 'I could not get heah afore sun up!' Pris added another freckle. "Sweet prospect, isn't it? I've implored mother to put it off, but she says that now is the time. I should think so indeed! Here I've just been taken into the Country Club—what I'm to do about that I don't know."

"It's a real problem," Olivia assented, with a thoughtful, grown-up air. "You won't mind if I say, dearest, that it wasn't altogether easy to get you in,—you being younger than our set and all,—and when it comes to the idea of introducing a crude Western girl—" Olivia pursed too-red lips and shook a modishly shingled head.

Pris touched up the snake. "It'll be a blessing if she's even heard of tennis," she said morosely.

"Or a golf course!" Olivia humorously added.

(Neither girl really knew how to play golf.)

Pris enlarged the toes of the boots and put hob nails on the heels. "She'll probably guffaw with merriment at the idea of afternoon tea!"

"And eat pie with a knife," elaborated Olivia.

Even though it came from her admired Olivia's lips, Pris thought that extreme. "See here, Olly," she said slowly. "You know she may not be—"

"Oh, don't go easy on Outrageous Ann!" Olivia broke in somewhat rudely. "That's rather good, isn't it, if I did say it! Outrageous Ann! There, name the portrait and sign it as an artist should."

Pris obeyed, as she was prone to obey Olivia's biddings; it was part of the price she paid for the society of her friend.

"OUTRAGEOUS ANN" straggled across the top of the page in Pris's best capitals, and at the bottom in vigorous shaded writings,—very distinguished, Olivia assured her,—"Priscilla Alden Maybury." She finished with the date as Mrs. Maybury came forward with her letter in her hand. Pris hastily turned Ann's face to the table. There was possibility that her mother might not appreciate all its points. She liked to see Priscilla's caricatures, but she betrayed a certain weakness, the artist felt, in urging amiability in the treatment of the victims.

"Give me the letter" said Olivia, "I'm going now, and I'll mail it. And present me with 'Outrageous Ann' won't you, Maybury? It's one of your best—'I'll frame it when you're famous!"

Pris's sixteen years had been spent in a small city in the Mississippi Valley, a city that had once played an important part in the lumber industry of the state and had seen the founding of great fortunes. As a child and young girl Priscilla had loved the woods and water and the outdoor life to which they invited. Priscilla had not been in the habit of envying the rich girls who rode in the high-powered cars or the yachts, who travel to private schools and dreary, expensive sport with the coming of fifteen; Priscilla's acquaintance of Olivia, who had more experienced and grown up with envy in her had taken place. Olivia cilla that it was "old-fashioned," even a little "nutty," she pointed out those favorite tunes who sprinkled the or lounged on the club-das.. Olivia had by long endeavor succeeded in at fringe at least of this fat Pris was ripe for patronage, meant, generously enough, a social rung or two.

If you KNEW it would RESTORE HEALTH would you ?

If you knew of a routine, a method of treatment that positively would restore the regularity of your habits; that would improve your digestion; renew your health beyond question, would you hesitate?

Much of your health depends upon the regular functioning of the organs of assimilation, digestion and elimination. Troubles resulting from an infraction of the rules of nature; disruption of nature's schedule, can best be remedied by a process of treatment that will eliminate impurities, reinvigorate the organs and in time steadily train them back into their accustomed regularity of habits.

Physicians Think

Physicians frequently prescribe the drinking of quantiles of water, not only because they know it is a non-drastring aid to some troubles and mildly regulative in effect, but also because every tissue and organ of the body possesses high water content, and a decrease in water content is accompanied by a decrease in functional efficiency.

Water is the basis of all secretions and excretions of the body. Waste products of the body must be in solution to be expelled. Digestion and absorption are carried out more efficiently in dilution of water, and ingested food in more economically utilized when water is taken in abundance.

Hence the foundation of efficiency of Glenn Springs mineral water.

Used for Centuries

There is shown in the analysis of Glenn Springs water a well rounded, helpful combination of salts that renders it an effective method of restoring functional efficiency. In its analysis will be found a natural solution of:

Potassium Salts to furnish neutralization of free acids, promotion of oxidation; an increase of saliva, and to serve as a diuretic.

Sodium Salts to excite active secretion in stomach and intestines and thus materially aid in bilious disorders, gouty affections, chronic constipation, obesity and diabetes mellitus, and to neutralize acidity.

Lithium Salts for the same general purpose and additionally to aid in gout and rheumatic affections and bladder troubles caused from excessive acidity.

Calcium Salts to aid body metabolism; to serve as an astringent and sedative locally; and to act internally as an absorbent and antacid.

Strontium Salts for its anti-purrescent and antiseptic effect.

The Sulphates for its mild laxative properties.

The Calcium Carbonate for its use in hyperacidity, of stomach, and intestinal diseases.

The Magnesium Carbonate on account of its mildly laxative and antacid effect.

The Ammonium Carbonate for its stimulation of gastric secretion and assistance to the digestion.

Helpful for These Troubles

Glenn Springs water has been found by physicians to be helpful in cases of chronic constipation; biliousness; auto-intoxication, and other intestinal toxemias; obesity; acid dyspepsia; kidney disorders (including Bright's disease); bladder troubles resulting from excessive acidity; intestinal putrefaction; rheumatism and gouty diathesis, and other diseases of metabolism such as eczema, rickets, anemia, etc.. It has been found indirectly helpful in the treatment of pellagra, for suppressed menstruations and in conjunction with quinine a very efficient treatment for malaria. It has been in general use for such purposes for over a century.

We would suggest that there is no better method of regaining your health and regularity of habits than by keeping a supply on hand for every day use.

It will be expressed you if desired in two 5 gallon carboys regularly each month, that you may use it steadily and most effectively in your own home or office.

Give your system a chance. Allow nature to take its course under favorable conditions. Renew your health with the delightful, helpful Glenn Springs mineral water. It is pure, delightfully easy to drink and sparkling.

ing were almost too severe to bear. Priss swallowed again. "That's the courthouse," was what she said aloud. "And there's the library."

"That?" Again the slightly incredulous intonation. Priss felt hot all over. "It was designed by a New York architect," she said stiffly.

Mrs. Maybury covered her surprise at what she had to greet rather better than Priss had done. She hugged Ann cordially, while Priss, said, "Jelly-fish!" to herself, and Ruthie sat on Ann's suitcase and chuckled at the flurry.

Ann with her veil off was exactly what Ann with that veil on led you to expect. She had reddish-brown eyes which might have been warm and keen had it not been for her absurd fashion of dropping the eyelashes. Were there freckles? Impossible to tell, her skin was so delicately powdered; her hair was tightly netted, and her clothes were awesomely good.

"Mother," Priss whispered as soon as she could get her by herself, "is that what our Western civilization is coming to?"

Her mother laughed, but it wasn't quite whole-heartedly. "It may really be that she's tired out by the journey."

"Tired!" Priss voice trembled with her sense of outrage. "I never dreamed that Ann would be tired;" She felt the strongest, strangest pride in the hip-booted, stalwart Ann she had once created; such an Ann might have eaten with a knife, but she could have stood a little jolting.

"Aunt Sarah," said a sweet, drawing voice from the depths of the largest, softest chair in the living-room, "would the maid show me to my room? I think it would be well to get a little nap; and usually before sleeping I read for fifteen or twenty minutes, some dear old favorite. What have you? Jane Austen perhaps?"

"We have no maid, Cousin Ann, and no Jane Austen," Priss said curtly, emerging. "I'll take up your suitcase myself."

"Oh don't you mind—really? Thanks so much. I hope it isn't too heavy for you."

So was ushered in a period that Priss called weird. She felt a pang of sorrow over the Ann that seemed to have lived but to die. Did Ann want to drive the car? "Oh, no!" with a shudder. She was too nervous altogether; she was sure it would upset her; she would not be able to sleep, and if she could not get her sleep—eloquent pause. Then, too, she'd noticed—well, delicately said, wasn't there something not, not quite nice in using big men's tools and getting mussed and grimy like a man? Priss couldn't get over feeling enraged by these digs at the little car.

Would Ann enjoy fresh-water bathing in their municipal "plunge"? Did she swim or row? Ann was obliged to remind her that, whatever the advantages Arizona boasted, the possession of large bodies of water was not one of them. She had, besides,—and seemed proud of it,—a perfect horror of water. As for joining Priss and Olivia in their amateur efforts on the golf course, Ann pointed out that she could not do anything that was likely to produce freckles.

What remained, Priss bitterly inquired of her mother, but to sit in stuffed chairs that were easy on your back and murmur vapidity? The one thing Ann seemed capable of doing was to sit on the club-house veranda and drink afternoon tea.

It might be thought that Ann and Olivia would be sympathetic, but they were not. Invisible sparks seemed to fly whenever they met, and Priss found that she was happier when she had not to act the part of innocent bystander at these verbal encounters. In vain Olivia tried to draw out details of raw Western life; Ann was blandly, irritatingly blank. At such times disloyal thoughts flashed across Priss: could it be that Olivia was jealous of Ann—would she have liked it better had she been able to make fun of her?

That Country Club dance! It was to be the most elaborate affair to which she had ever been invited. Olivia was providing the escorts, would introduce her to those whose names she had read in the society column; she did not doubt Olivia's word as to the importance of the occasion. A minor brightness in the affair was that she and Olivia were working members of the decoration committee. In the afternoon she was to drive down with the girls, bearing roses and snowballs from the garden.

Olivia and Ann had waited in the car for some time before Priss appeared from the house. She had baby Ruth by the hand.

"Sorry, girls, but I must take Ruthie. Mother has a headache, and there is no one to leave her with."

"What on earth will we do with that child!" Olivia ejaculated tartly.

"Not—a chil!" said Ruthie, with lip quivering.

Priss started the car silently but with unnecessary energy.

The clubhouse was set at the opening of a lovely valley that commanded a view of the roofs and spires of the city. A low ridge separated buildings and grounds from the river, which at that point swept away in a majestic curve, leaving a maze of islands and sloughs behind. The golf course, intersected by a delightful brook, crept into the valley and up the smooth green slopes.

After delivering her load of garden flowers, Priss felt that there was a thirst within her still unsatisfied.

"What a shame they have nothing wild! Everything seems so tame—like the canna beds in front. Country Club! Sometimes it does make me laugh."

"What a peculiar sense of humor you must have, Priss Maybury!" Olivia said stiffly, but in Ann's brown eyes Priss thought she caught a gleam, and encouraged to go on. "I know—and no one else does—that lotus lilies grow in one of the sloughs beyond the ridge. And there used to be a landing somewhere over yonder, and a boat—let's go and see!"

Priss boldly steered her car over slopes that had once been pasture land, found a dirt road full of ruts but passable, and made the curve round the hill with a sense of triumph. There was a landing—there was a boat, flat-bottomed, dirty, old, but still a boat. The water of the slough was quiet, reflecting a fringe of alders and willows on the other side; where the girls stood, the hill ran steeply to the road, the sandstone bank breaking abruptly; beneath it the sand had been hollowed out, mak-

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

A DOZEN different things may cause a headache, but there's just one thing you need ever do to get relief. Bayer Aspirin is an absolute antidote for such pain. Keep it at the office. Have it handy in the home. Those subject to frequent or sudden headaches should carry Bayer Aspirin in the pocket-tin. Until you have used it for headaches, colds, neuralgia, etc., you've no idea how Bayer Aspirin can help. It means quick, complete relief to millions of men and women who use it every year. And it does not depress the heart.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monaceticacidester of Salicylicacid ing a delightful curve, lined with bright-colored sand.

Olivia eyed the wet and muddy bottom of the boat with disfavor. Ruthie squatted down under the bank with an immediate absorption in the business at hand, which was one of her charms, and began to scoop out the sand and make hills and forts and winding walks with all the zeal of a landscape gardener.

After a slight dispute, Olivia was left on the shore to preserve her silk-knitted, lavender skirt and to keep an eye on Ruthie, while Priscilla summarily forced Ann into the boat, regardless of her clinging crepe de chine, and promised to be as expeditious as possible. In spite of Olivia, in spite of Ann, the July air was so full of sun and sparkle that Priscilla's heart felt as young as Ruthie's.

They did not say much. Priscilla pulled quietly but easily. The little slough was narrow; they could see Olivia strolling impatiently up and down the road; they could see the white pique sunbonnet on the intent child's head; if they had wished, they could easily have shouted back and forth.

The boat neared the opposite shore—no lilies at this point, but a glint of orange over in the swampy land caught Priscilla's eye. "O Ann! Wild tiger lilies—see how thick they are! Let's land and get some!"

"Let's!" said Ann, with quite unladylike eagerness.

It took some time to find a bit of ground firm enough to step on; pausing only to draw the boat up after them, they plunged into the shaded depths of swampy woods. "Now not too many," Priscilla warned. "It's easy to be greedy and exterminate lilies. We'll just pick stalks here and there."

"What's that?" said Ann alertly, after perhaps ten delightful minutes. "Is it Olivia calling?"

Priscilla halted, listening. "She's frightened—something's happened!" she said, her heart beginning to pound and plunge. Ann had already turned toward the slough, and she hurried after her.

They came out of the woods at a point higher than where they had left their boat but more nearly opposite the spot from which they had started. Now they could see Olivia waving her handkerchief and shrieking at the top of her voice; they could see the shabby, little car standing in the road; they could see the bank—but they could not see any white pique sunbonnet. Where was Ruthie? Priscilla was in the warm sunshine, but cold shudders were passing over her. She turned and began to run stumbly in the direction of their boat. She found Ann running at her side.

"Ruthie's fallen in—she's drowned!" Priscilla gasped, lips ashen.

"No," said Ann sharply. "Didn't you see? The bank caved in! Why hasn't that fool Olivia gone for help?"

They made ready to jump into the boat, but the boat was not there. The gentle wash of the quiet water had borne it out of their sight.

"You can swim?" said Ann. "Across the plunge—that's all. I could never get across!"

Priscilla leaned against a tree, covering her face to sob. There was a moment's silence—then a splash. Ann had kicked off her shoes and was in the water. The Ann who had refused to go in bathing was now rapidly cleaving the running stream.

Priscilla did not waste time in watching her. She scrambled along the edge, splashing through mud and water—sure the boat could not have gone far. And there it was, caught on a snag, not two hundred feet below. Priscilla waded out, climbed in, sent herself flying across at a rate of speed never before attained. She drew up in time to see a dropping figure jump from the great heap of sand that spilled ominously down to the water's edge.

race to the car, plunge in and start off almost on the instant. Olivia was in a heap on the ground, saying hysterically over and over, "It slid! It slid! Oh! Oh!"

The heart inside Priscilla went cold and sick. That tumbled bank—that heap of sand—and Ruthie? She went at it desperately with her hands. Olivia stopped crying for a moment to watch her.

"That's no good—I tried it—Ann tried—we can never reach her" But like a frantic gopher Priscilla dug on, and was clawing away blindly when they heard the car again. Ann leaped out with a shovel.

"Get away from there!" she ordered, and Priscilla obeyed, standing back while Ann got to work. Ann's hair was tumbled on her shoulders, her face was red and streaked with mud, her sodden garments clung to her; but she labored with the strength of a man; great spadefuls of sand flew back. Soon she was digging more carefully; now she was on her knees, using her hands. "Pris!" she gasped loudly, and Priscilla was down too, helping. A bit of white showed through, and Priscilla felt her strength go out of her.

It was Ann who brushed away the last layer of sand and uncovered the small crouched figure.

"She's dead—dead!" shrieked Olivia. "Shut up!" said Ann. She straightened the little form and put her ear over the heart, then looked up with radiant face. "Blessed be sunbonnets!" she cried. "Ruthie's saved her life! It made a tent round her face and kept her from smothering. She'll come to in a minute."

Very gently she moved the child's arms up and down.

After what seemed an interminable period, Priscilla saw the child's breast heave and her eyelids flutter. Now she could believe—Ruthie was not dead! She gave way utterly then, kissing the stubby little shoes and crying as if her heart would break. Ruthie stirred vigorously, threw out her arms, kicked—a blessed kick right in Priscilla's face,—caught her breath, began to cry.

Priscilla climbed into the back seat,—as soon as her knees would hold her,—and Ann deposited Ruthie in her lap. "You take care of her—I'll drive." "Yes, you drive," Priscilla meekly. "Shall we stop at the clubhouse? they may be sending out a party for an escaped lunatic. I had almost to knock a man down in order to get that shovel!"

"Home," said Priscilla, her grasp tightening about Ruthie's darling form. "You're a fraud, Ann."

"Well, you haven't suffered half as much as I! But didn't I do it well? And now—" Ann's eyes danced—"shan't go to your old dance tonight—I'll have a sprain or something. I hate formal parties almost as much—not quite—as afternoon tea!"

It could not be supposed that Olivia would stand this. "Ann, you're a sight," she put in vengefully.

"Outrageous, I suppose?" inquired Ann, with a cheerful grin.

Priscilla gave a violent start. "Wh-what? H-how?" she stammered. "I never—you never—Ann, but she looked at Olivia, and Olivia was blushing. "Olly, how could you? she opened her lips to say, but shut them again, knowing it would not do to give Olivia away.

But Olivia gave herself away; although feebly, she did rise to the occasion. "I put it in—it was a joke, Ann."

"But I drew it!" cried Priscilla. Remorse bit hard. Would Ann—splendid Ann—ever forgive her?

"And a very good drawing it was," Ann assured her genially. But after that, do you blame me for hiding my hip boots? I really am outrageous, you know!"

"Oh, Ann!" And since Ann was out of reach, Priscilla hugged Ruthie.

PRESCRIPTION

HE WROTE IN 1892

Caldwell started to practice medicine in 1875, the needs for a doctor were not as great as today. Normal lives, ate plain food, and got plenty of fresh air. Even that early there were medicines and purges for the relief of which Dr. Caldwell did believe were good for human beings. His prescription for constipation that he used in his practice, and which he sold in stores in 1892 under the name of Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a vegetable remedy, intended for children and elderly people, had just such a mild, safe effect. The prescription has proven its worth as the largest selling liquid medicine has won the confidence of those who needed it to get relief from biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad colds, fevers. THROUGH AIR BY DAYS; IN PULLMAN BY NIGHT

The latest reports of plans for trans-continental travel at high speed include routes which permit passengers to travel in Pullmans at night, while sleeping, and during the day, to cover great distances in the shortest possible time by airplanes. Perhaps few people recall, when reading the name of the Pullman car, how this word came to be applied to it.
 The Pullman car was named, according to Webster's New International Dictionary, after George M. Pullman, born in 1831, died in 1897, who introduced this form of sleeping car into railroad use. Pullman is thus another of the many words which have come into the language from proper names. These words include mackintosh (after Charles Macintosh, the inventor), maverick (after Samuel Maverick, cattleman), fuchsia (after Leonard Fuchs, botanist), volt (after Alessandro Volta, electrician), blucher (after the Prussian general, Blucher), etc.

ARKANSAS PLANS YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE

chorus choir and orchestra will be under the instruction of Rev. R. S. Schuster.

Each evening the conference will enjoy programs of worship and inspiration. Annual events such as Talent Night, Stunt Night, Arkansas College Night and Missionary Night will be observed.

An enrollment of three hundred is expected at this conference. A new and outstanding feature of the 1929 conference will be the Pageants organized and directed by Miss Ione Goff, of Mena, Ark., former director of Religious Education of Prescott, Ark., and student of the Assembly's Training School of Richmond, Va. Rev. Stuart R. Oglesby of Hot Springs, Ark., is Director of Study Courses and Scholarships.

The Conference began in a very small way at the grounds of the Arkansas College at Batesville, Ark., as a combination of Adult and Young Peoples' Conference. After two years it was made into two conferences and moved to the more convenient location of Hardy, Ark. As the groups grew in size larger and more commodious accommodations were sought and the conference was then moved to the State Y. M. C. A. grounds "On the Point" of Petit Jean Mountain, Morrilton, Arkansas. Mr. John Hunter, of Little Rock Arkansas, and State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. is in personal charge of the grounds. The Adult Conference now named the Ozark Assembly will meet at the same place June 23-28 of this year.

BISHOP MOUZON DELIVERS BEECHER LECTURES

than the external authority of any organization such as is claimed by the Roman Catholic Church. "The one regal voice that sounds down through history," said he, "is the voice of the Man of Galilee." "The time has come to be done with negative preaching and appeal to the word of authority." "The Word of God to the soul of man" was declared to be the real spiritual authority and as such was upheld as self-authenticating.

In dealing with "Traditionalism and Tradition," Doctor Mouzon warned against the tendency to rest satisfied with "creeds without experiencing the reality of the thought of the formulators of those creeds," and of an excessive loyalty to customs, at the expense of "originality to meet the needs of today."

Under the subject, "Authority and the Bible," The Book was exalted in such affirmations as, "In the entire Bible I hear the voice of God." "God's Word and the human soul need no third party." "The Word's Divine Message will win its own way." This Book was acclaimed as a History of the Hebrews from Abraham, the Literature of a highly gifted people, and an Account of the Religion of this People. The Authority of the Bible lies in "the truth it teaches, validated by human experience." "There is no authority outside the Bible."

The Basis of Authority in History, was found in the historical Christ and the record of God's dealings with men. History becomes rather "the acts of God than the deeds of men," said Doctor Mouzon, and the "redemptive deeds of Jesus are the Acts of God." The outstanding features of the historical revelation of God in Christ are, the Incarnation, the Atonement through the Crucifixion, and the Resurrection.

The Basis of Authority in Experience, was a plea to preachers to translate the historical Christ in terms of Christian experience, with the warning that personal experience is necessary before this can be done. "The deeper meanings of the Cross reveal themselves only in evangelical experience in the closet on our knees and out in a sinful world." The most practical way this experience is manifested is in the "restoration of a personal relationship of men with God," through the forgiveness of sins. "It may be," continued the Bishop, "that too many Modernists have been too much interested in the love of truth rather than the love of men."

Authority from the Cross, the sixth lecture, commended "The Cross and The Atonement" as the center of all preaching. It was pictured as "The sacrament of the larger faith." A plea was made for the pulpit to present "Christ and Him crucified rather than to let it become a 'lecture platform,' or an 'open forum.'" The Cross "shows what it costs God to save men from the sin of the world." It is a "revelation of the way God has from the beginning of time been dealing with sins." And, its method, that of sacrifice, forgiveness and service, must be the road for Christians to follow.

Throughout the lectures, Doctor Mouzon, was pleading for preaching with authority without dogmatism, and in his last lecture, he declared that the preacher must have a Creed, not necessarily a long one, but certainly a strong one. He must preach a positive faith, leaving "his doubts and his critical investigations on his study desk. He must be true to the church for to her he owes his very opportunity to preach. At the same time, the church must be true to the preacher and beware lest she muzzle her prophets, whose sole responsibility is to proclaim the Word of God."

The many friends of Bishop Mouzon will doubtless learn with pleasure of the lectures here and will await with interest their publication. The lecturer for next year was announced as Bishop Francis McConnell, D.D., President of the Federal Council of Churches.

DEVOTIONAL

BEGINNING

One of the most striking things in one of the most striking books of the Bible is the statement that is made in Malachi, when the people were complaining that God seemed to be taking a delight in those who did evil. God's reply was that it was only that He was gracious to them, for when He came who would be able to abide the day of His coming; for he is like a refiner's fire and like a fuller's soap. "And He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and He shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant to the Lord as in the days of old."

This is a wonderful picture of our God. When the refiner of silver works he takes the ore, which is crude and ugly and thoroughly unfit for any use to which it is put, and puts it in a crucible after having heated it up into as small bits as possible. Then the furnace is heated to white heat, and the crucible put into the flame. First, it begins to get hot; then the ore gets white hot; then it begins to get soft; then to melt enough to be poured. What was solid and hard when it was put into the flame is now so soft that it is liquid. But gradually it begins to change in appearance; it is no longer the dull black thing that was put into the crucible; it begins to be shimmery and silvery—the dross is being burned out and the white metal, which can stand any amount of heat, is being left in its purity.

But where is the refiner all of this time? Ah, he has not left the precious metal. He has been there all the time watching it change from the dull ore to the pure silver. And now that it is at white heat, he watches it all the more closely; for he is looking for something; he is watching to observe when he can see the reflections of his own face in the melted ore, for then, at that very moment, is the time when all of the dross has been burned out, and it is time to take the metal, purified now, out as fit for use. If he leaves it in longer it will oxidize, and will not be as valuable.

Just so it is with our God. Providences come into our lives that are strange; we cannot understand them; we know He is a God of love and does not willingly afflict the children of men; but we do not know why these things have come into our lives. Sometimes it is the taking of a loved one; sometimes it is his business trouble and care beyond our strength, it seems; sometimes it is as though God did not hear any prayer that we make, that the heavens above us are brass; sometimes it is misunderstanding and opposition of those from whom we might rightly expect just the opposite—oh, there are so many things that come into our lives that are just as hot as any furnace fire ever was to a crucible of ore. We feel the heat of it; we felt the blows that break us up; and we are very prone to wonder why, to be restive under the heat of it, to be bitter against God, to doubt His love. Oh, soul, be patient and trust. The Great Refiner is there watching until He can see the reflection of His own face in our lives; then, at that very moment, He will take us out of the fire, for we are then fit for His use. All the dross has been burned out; the silver is ready for service!

Break me; melt me; mould me; fill me!

THE REAR GUARD

"Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."—Psalm xxiii.

But why "follow" me? Why not "go before"? Because some of my enemies are in the rear; they attack me from behind. There are foes in my yesterdays which can give me fatal wounds. They can stab me in the back! If I could only get away from the past! Its guilt dogs my steps. Its sins are ever at my heels. I have turned my face toward the Lord, but my yesterdays pursue me like a relentless hound! So I have an enemy in the rear.

But, blessed be His name, my mighty God is in the rear as well as my foe. "Goodness and mercy shall follow me!" No hound can break through that defence. Between me and my guilt there is the infinite love of the Lord. The loving Lord will not permit my past to destroy my soul. I may sorrow for my past, but my very sorrow shall be a minister of moral and spiritual health. My Lord is Lord of the past as well as of the morrow, and so today, "I will trust and not be afraid."—First Church Bulletin, Greensboro, N. C.

A NEW LEAF

He came to my desk with quivering lip,
The lesson was done.

"Dear teacher, I want a new leaf," he said,

"I've spoiled this one."

I took the old leaf so stained and blotted,
And gave him a new one, all unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled,
"Do better now, my child."

I came to the throne with a quivering heart,
The old year was done.

"Dear Master, I want a new leaf," I said,

"I've spoiled this one."

He took the old year so stained and blotted,

And gave me a new one all unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled,

"Do better now, my child."

VALUE OF ONE SOUL

"I believe that if an angel were to wing his way from earth up to heaven, and were to say that there was one poor, ragged boy, without father or mother, with no one to care for him and teach him the way of life; and, if God were to ask who among them were willing to come down to this earth and live here for fifty years and lead that one to Jesus Christ, every angel in heaven would volunteer to go. Even Gabriel, who stands in the presence of the Almighty, would say, 'Let me leave my high and lofty position, and let me have the luxury of leading one soul to Jesus Christ.' There is no greater honor than to be the instrument in God's hand of leading one person out of the kingdom of Satan into the glorious light of Heaven."—D. L. Moody.

"AS A TALE THAT IS TOLD"

Under the inspiration of the Spirit of God, Moses wrote these words: "We spend our years as a tale that is told." The tale of our last year has been told; what is it? How did we spend the days that were given us? Are we pleased with the record that has been sealed now?

When the record of this present year of grace, 1929, is written, will it be similar to that of the last year? Now is the time to face the situation, and plan for the things that we shall do. Not that we are going to make any New Year's resolutions; that is not productive of results; but that we may take stock of ourselves, and think things out, and live as we would like to live, let us ask ourselves some questions that will help us face the situation.

My Reading—shall my mind be filled with the gutter stuff of the modern novel; or the crimes of the modern newspaper; or the froths of the average periodical? Solomon said: "Of making books there is no end, and much study is a weariness of the flesh." What would he have said if he had lived in this day? There is a great deal of very helpful material that is available; and there is so little time to do anything that we would not it be well to eliminate; best in our reading, and fill only with that which will be certainly, a good part of the time should be given to the very best that has ever been—the precious Word of God.

My Pleasures—some time is essential to the good every mind and body and so, before, every one should have a time, or what we speak of as a time. But in choosing our sensible person will decide for will help and not hinder. The show today has something in it, in spite of the censor's supposed to be exercised. The is as bad or worse. Gambling too often the result of other games. Honestly, as Christian men and women, what part shall in these things and similar this year, if the record of our close of the year is to be shall be glad to have perm corded against us?

My Strength—to what shall this year? Into the making Yes, if you are going to use for God and for the extens work; but NO, if you are g to accumulate a fortune for be a curse to your descendant put my strength into the ser or of others? How a m I goin, time, for myself or for God going to be my aim, the adv self or the service of God?

WOMEN SCARCE IN SODOM

Our friends think that our outlook on the spiritual condition is not only too pessimistic but even so pessimistic that it amounts to a prediction of disaster.

As we are tempted to agree with our pessimists more than once we have been led to think that we see through a glass into the future.

We have concluded that our first impressions were correct, and that the condition of the ministry in the United States is not so bad as we had supposed.

The report entitled "The Belief of 700 Ministers as to the Meaning for Religious Education," which attracted the attention of the Secular and Religious Press and what it shows not only our own impressions of the religious condition of the Christian Church, but opens up a hopeless future for the human race. We remember the assurance of our Lord that the gates of hell shall not prevail against His Church.

In a questionnaire, embracing 56 churches, belief, was sent 1,500 pastors of 20 churches in the vicinity of Chicago. We do not have the space to give the list in full but will give the following replies.

As to belief in God, but that is the question that received a unanimous answer. 99 per cent of the Lutherans and 95 per cent of the Episcopalians believe that God is one. More than one-fourth of the Methodist preachers answering this question object to the doctrine of the Trinity.

In birth failed to receive the vote of 100 ministers of any of the denominations—90 per cent of the Lutherans score 90 per cent. 75 per cent of the Congregationalists received one-half of the Methodists accept the doctrine of the Atonement for sin. The following denominations stand as follows: 100 per cent of the Congregational preachers, 100 per cent of the Methodists, and three-fourths of the Baptist hold the death of Jesus to be the pardon of sin.

As to whether we exhibit our Presbyterians of the North to make a good showing.

We are sure that our Southern Church would do better.

Do not remember that these preachers in the vicinity of Chicago, where all seem to be in a state of flux.

There can be any truth in the saying that you cannot know the direction of the wind, then the day is not promising.

Can the righteous scarcely be saved, where will the godly and the sinner appear?"

SIN IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

In his Epistle, defines sin as lawlessness. Every student of this age realizes that we are in sin because it spurns all law, human or divine.

As lawbreakers in every grade of life, from the gangster of the city who murders in order to maintain his supremacy, to the gentlemanly gentleman who mingles with the best of the Church we have men who despise law when it conflicts with their human desires, and they either openly defy it, or else reason it away.

Among men of high character from whom we have a right to expect better things, we find this tendency to reason away these plain prohibitions of Scripture, especially in connection with woman's work in the Church.

Until recent years in the Presbyterian Church women as usual were the mainstay in raising money and sustaining the general work of the Church.

While it was acknowledged that she was more spiritual than man, it was thought that the Scripture plainly forbade her exercising the teaching function.

When in political life the right of suffrage was extended to women, at once they began to ask that all restrictions on her Church activities be removed.

Our brethren of the Northern Church, being more radical in their views than we of the South, will have before them at the approaching Assembly, a report recommending making women eligible to all the offices of the Church; and if we may judge the outcome by the expressed opinion of their religious press, it will be adopted.

Two of these papers have pronounced in favor of it.

We of the Southern Church, though more conservative than they, generally follow in their steps, if given time enough.

The Scriptures are very explicit in forbidding this assumption on the part of woman, as evidenced by these two texts:

I Cor. 14:34: Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the Lord. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

I Tim. 2:12-14: But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence. For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.

This last passage from Timothy would seem to forbid the public preaching of woman, for it is stated in language clear as could be used.

One would think that anyone with proper reverence for God's Word would yield obedience.

Those who find a difficulty here dispose of the first text by saying that Paul did not mean to teach that there was anything inherently wrong in woman, but only that it was against the social custom of Corinth, as only the women of the streets made themselves so conspicuous.

While there is only presumptive proof that such was Paul's motive, it suffices for those who are anxious for some valid reason for ignoring this plain command.

In two of the Northern Church papers we have recently read this excuse for going contrary to Paul.

The text from I Timothy they pass by in silence, because Paul gives his reasons for forbidding woman to preach or teach—or they would wrest this text and make it teach otherwise. He says, "I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over a man."

Nothing could be plainer than this, and then to give it force and make it universal in its application he gives a reason for restricting woman, and this reason is based upon what woman did in the beginning of the race. She was not only after man in creation, but by being deceived she fell into transgression and thus brought sin into the world.

By reason of her being deceived and falling into transgression, she has ever paid a penalty. Whenever she brings a child into the world and also whenever she comes into competition with man in the preaching of the Gospel, she is reminded of Eve's transgression.

If the social customs of Corinth be a reason for this restriction, as contended by the advocates of the preaching of women, there surely can not be found a reason why this passage from I Timothy be ignored.

Paul gives a reason that must be of force as long as the world remains and the story of the creation is told.

The transgression of the woman is the cause, and as that is a fact accomplished, it must ever carry the penalty of subordination to man. We may reason that it is not just, as we reason about sin descending from parents to children. However unjust we may deem it, we can not alter the law, but must pay the penalty.

The restriction should not be pressed beyond what Paul evidently meant, which was the preaching of the Gospel.

The pulpit is no place for women. The Scripture plainly forbids it, and nature, by bestowing upon her a weak voice evidently supports Paul's views. Let us not go against both nature and the Bible.

CANNED SERMONS

The Woman's Home Companion is one of those papers dear to the heart of the ladies, and therefore it can figure as an expert on fashion. We would never think of questioning its views on that puzzling topic.

However when it enters the field of preaching we hoped to be pardoned, if we question its right.

It recently sent out a sermon expert who scoured the land and sampled the sermons "from Dan to Beersheba," and upon his return he decided that preaching a sermon was wasted energy upon which no adequate return was received, and that the same force might be used with more benefit to the Church if directed along other lines, and that instead of employing a man to write and deliver sermons, it would be better to buy them in quantities and have them written by those especially gifted along that line.

He evidently is in earnest, as is shown by his plan of work.

He presents five suggestions in order to make effective his plan, as follows:

(1). That the average minister be relieved of the necessity of sermon-writing.

(2). That the task be assigned to men and women who are conspicuously able to perform it.

(3). That each denomination solicit and pay for an annual supply of the finest sermons that can possibly be written.

(4). That the number selected be sufficiently large to permit a wide choice of subjects by the local pastor.

(5). That each minister select the kind of sermon that best suits the need of his particular congregation, and deliver it on Sunday, either by reading it, or by committing it to memory.

This scheme is well-thought-out, and upon its face it ought to work.

This "Expert," however, has overlooked the most important factor in sermonizing, the reaction that comes through the personality of the man, that subtle magnetism that goes from the speaker to the hearer, and moves his will and arouses his interest. Something that no machine can evoke.

I may listen to the finest sermon ever written when it comes through a phonograph or over the radio; but it can never move me as when it comes from a living soul.

There is something in the brightness of the eye, in the tone of the voice, in the magnetism of the man that can never be found in the radio.

This sermonic expert, in his investigations only considered the external features of sermonizing.

He failed to take into account the personal element, in either writing or delivering sermons.

However much the congregations may enjoy fine sermons—they will never cry out, "What must we do to be saved?"

The preacher in the Bowery Mission hall may be illiterate and his crude attempt at preaching would never edify an average audience, yet he gathers a more abundant harvest of souls than the most polished speaker in a stained-glass cathedral.

Science has succeeded in canning every manner of fruit and retaining its natural flavor, but no art of Science can ever succeed in canning a sermon alive with the personality of its author.

"THINK ON THESE THINGS"

 Philippians 4:8
 Jas. A. McLaughlin

Paul never exhibited a keener insight into the workings of the human mind than when he gave this admonition to the Philippian church and so to the followers of Christ of all time. "Think on these things." What things did he commend to them and to us as proper subjects for thought? The true, the honest, the just, the pure, the lovely, the good report, the virtuous, the praiseworthy. By the same token he would have us shun those things which are of a contrary nature. Thus, he would admonish us: "Love the truth, speak the truth, encourage the truth; and turn from deception and all forms of lying. Extoll honesty, think honesty, practice honesty; and steer far away from stealing, cheating and grafting. Be just and fair and kind to our neighbors; and in all our dealings with them, show no spirit of cruelty, prejudice, jealousy, or injustice. Paul would have us pure in mind, pure in thought, pure in conduct in all our social relations—shunning immorality and vice and unclean thinking. Strive for the lofty ideals of beauty and loveliness, and maintain a spirit of charity and good will to all. Encourage the good report, and oppose vigorously all types of slander and evil speaking. Enthroned virtue, and set praiseworthy aims as our highest ideals; at the same time turning our thoughts resolutely away from fear and worry, failure, disease and poverty. "Think," he says, "Think on these things." Do we realize, friends, that we are constantly thinking, thinking, thinking? During waking hours, our minds are ever active, always thinking. And about what? We are continually thinking about the things we are most interested in. Do we realize this: that what we think about is what we are most interested in? That is the very nature of the human mind. Now, what have you and I been interested in today, or last Sunday? That golf game, the bridge party, the dance, or about your good looks and which powder and paint and cologne is best suited to your particular style of beauty? About making more money—honestly or otherwise? About that new car, or that fine home, or may how to get even with somebody?

No, friends, such thoughts are not for you. You more probably have been thinking how to become a better man or woman, or how to help someone in distress, or how to increase the efficiency and helpfulness of your business, or to improve the opportunities of your children, or to promote the efficiency of your church. You know what your thoughts have been about—I do not, course. But you have been thinking and you are thinking now. You may be sure that your thoughts are now centered upon that thing in which you are most interested, for "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Thinking Prompts Action

But there is more yet to this thinking business. Not only do you think about the thing you are most interested in, but you will sooner or later do that thing. You will become what you think about. Your thoughts will soon be a part of your character, and your life. Read Proverbs 23:7, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Your thoughts determine, or at least indicate the set of your soul. It is said that Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox was once standing by a lake when the wind was blowing hard from the North. She noticed that many sail boats were on the lake, and some were going East and some West, many South and a few North against the wind. Then she wrote this little poem:

"One ship drives East and another drives West,
 With the selfsame winds that blow.
 'Tis the set of the sails, and not the gales
 Which tell us the way they go.

"Like the waves of the sea are the ways of fate
 As we voyage along through life.
 'Tis the set of the soul which decides its goal,
 And not the calm or the strife."

There are many faithful followers of Jesus who do actually and truly enjoy the prayer meeting, the Sunday school, the preaching services, the auxiliary meetings, the men's meetings, the young people's meetings; these take delight in visiting and helping the aged and the sick, assisting the needy; for such is the set of their souls. They really enjoy the hard labor connected with various forms of church work, far more than others enjoy the theater, the dance, the golf links, the bridge tables, and other social functions which occupy the serious thoughts of some men and women. Thus, these people, in their turn, show the set of their souls. I will readily admit that there is probably no harm in some of these things when taken in moderation. But some people make a business of these diversions, and those who do not devote much time to such things are at a great disadvantage in playing the social game. Much precious time is wasted. And you, my friends, cannot afford—as Christians—to let these trivial matters get a grip on you. You really have not the time. So don't become a slave to any of these things; but do become slaves to your church work. Let your service to the church be so constant and full, that people will say: "He is a slave, she is a slave, to the church." That is the ideal towards which we should aim. That should be the set of every Christian's soul.

Paul said in I Cor. 9:19, "I have made myself servant to all, that I might gain the more." And I Cor. 9:22, "I am made all things to all men that I might save some." Be watchful, then, ever so watchful that your mind and soul do not set in the wrong direction. For, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Take the case of young Hickman, out in California. Because of the unhappy relations between his father and mother, he did not have the best start in life. His intellectual ability was probably better than the average boy, but with no moral anchor to hold him to the great principles of truth, honesty and purity, he drifted. He was gripped by the blatant newspaper accounts of the murder in Chicago of little Bobby Franks who was kidnapped and slain by Loeb and Leopold. The evil thought lodged in his mind. It would be great—thought he—to get his name in all the big dailies. But he must do the thing in a different way. He would be original. So he kidnapped a little girl, instead of a boy, little Marion Parker. Took her to his room; and treated her kindly that first evening. Next day he placed her in a chair, blindfolded her, put a towel about her throat, but did not choke her on this occasion. Possibly he desired to play with her, as a cat would play with a mouse. On the following day, he repeated the performance, but this time drew the towel tighter and tighter until the little girl was choked to death. Then he cut her body in pieces, and for a reward delivered the dead body to her father, Mr. Parker, who had been promised that his little daughter would be returned alive and unharmed. Let us never entertain wicked thoughts, but drive them out. We can and must drive them out; else sooner or later we will do the things we think about. How very necessary, then, that we think about high and noble things—the true, the honest, the just, the pure.

Great Reserves of Mental Force

As followers of Christ, we should live the full life, and the Bible points the way. The human mind, the deathless soul, is the greatest gift of God to man. It is made in the image of God. How did God create man? You know the answer. "God created man male and female, after his own image, in knowledge, righteousness and holiness, with dominion over the creatures." After his own image, therefore, not in body, but in mind. Someone said: "There is nothing great on earth but man, there is nothing great in man but mind." Shakespeare said: "It is the mind that makes the body rich." Spencer said: "It is the mind that maketh good or ill, that maketh wretched or happy, rich or poor." Milton said: "The mind is its own place, and in itself can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven." Many wise students of the human intellect claim that very few of us ever use more than one-tenth of this God-given mind; and yet, to live the full life, it is necessary that we use much more of it. This condition may be compared to the iceberg which you sometimes see rising high in the Atlantic and perchance bearing down on some hapless vessel as in case of the Titanic. You can see only one-eighth or one-tenth of that iceberg rising above the water. Its greater bulk (7-8 to 9-10 of it) is below the water. So with your mind. The conscious part—about one-tenth—is all that we ordinarily use; while the greater part, the subconscious mind,—the nine-tenth—that part below the surface of consciousness, is seldom used by most of us. Only in some great crisis do people commonly draw on the power of the subconscious mind. Let us note a few examples:

1. The invalid mother, tired and weak, has found when her baby is sick, that she has gained from some source strength and endurance. She works and watches—faithfully, constantly, persistently—day and night, caring for her sick child; and when the ordeal is over, she finds herself stronger than when the vigil started.

2. Mr. W. L. Cain, of Oakland, Oregon, states that he saw two boys, 16 and 18 years of age, lift an enormous tree off their brother who had been caught under it. The next day, the same two boys with the help of two men could not lift the log.

3. You, perhaps, have studied a difficult problem in geometry, or calculus, or physics, or in business; you have gotten clearly before you all the available facts and figures and principles, but still could not solve the problem. You fall to sleep with the thought of the problem clearly outlined in your conscious mind. You wake up the next morning, or maybe during the night and find the problem solved. You can now readily set down all the steps clearly on paper. Your subconscious mind solved the difficulty for you while you slept. There are several other well authenticated cases which I could mention. In each case, it was the subconscious mind that gave power and endurance, both mental and physical. Prof. Wm. James said that the discovery of the power of the subconscious mind is the greatest discovery in the history of the world. This subconscious mind is busy every minute, night and day. It is performing stupendous tasks—directing the heart beats, the digestive system, and all the other functions of the body. It picks out just the right elements for the liver, and takes them to it. It sends to the kidneys just what they need. So, likewise, it regulates and nourishes the brain, the bones, the hair, the muscles, and every other part of our bodies. When anyone is wounded, it sends just what is needed in the blood to heal the hurt. It is always busy, always active, never sleeps. It stores away for future use all that we learn in a lifetime, and possibly much that our ancestors learned. It is a veritable treasure-house of information, and power. But how are we to reach this all powerful subconscious mind? Through the conscious mind by suggestion. The conscious mind is like the surface of a stream—flowing steadily on during waking hours. When we drop to sleep, this stream of consciousness dips below the surface and mingles with the great ocean of the subconscious mind. Many a thoughtful teacher, mother and father have talked with their incorrigible boys and girls just before they go to sleep—impressed upon them the beauties of clean living and right thinking—the true, the honest, the pure—and finally joined with them in a prayer for God's guidance and blessing. The children drop to sleep with these thoughts of truth, honesty, justice, purity and loveliness mirrored on their souls, and during sleep these noble ideas take root in the conscious mind and become a living part of the character. Then, on waking, these happy thoughts naturally come to the surface of consciousness themselves in the conversation and conduct of the child. It has been said that whatever thought ever problem you can get across to your subconscious mind at the time of dropping off to sleep, it will be worked out for you by this inner power. It is necessary that you know all the details of the study them diligently, have them clear in the conscious mind, and then definitely and purposefully burden the unsolved problem upon the conscious mind with a silent or spoken command to solve it. We believe, friends, that this subconscious mind is the seat of the soul, and that the Spirit of God finds its home there, when devoted to the service of the Master. The subconscious mind is the source of the subconscious wisdom. Many passages in the Bible, I refer to this power of God within us. Job: "knowledge or fear of God is the beginning of wisdom." The Proverbs, especially the third full of it. Read it.

Submitting Our Subconscious Mind to God

It should be our principle business in life to have constant contact with God through this inner power, this soul consecrated to Him. It is the Kingdom of God within you. That is the meaning when he said: (Luke 17:21, "For the Kingdom of God is within you." And Paul's words—1 Cor. 6:19, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you?" I Cor. 3:16, "Know ye not that ye are the temple and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?"

There is no limit, friends, to this Inner Power. The Kingdom of God within, just as there is no limit to God's power. Hence we read in Matt. 21:22, "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believe ye shall receive." And in John 15:7, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Stonewall Jackson furnishes an outstanding example of one who had close contact with this power, this Kingdom of God within. Before every battle, he wrestled with God in prayer and claimed these promises. And he never lost a battle when in command. Humanly speaking, we might well imagine that a council of war would have defeated him. But he never was defeated while Jackson lives, for the promises of God and must win. It was not for him, a man of such abiding faith, to be defeated in battle. What can be done? For it is God's power that the Great Western Republic shall not be defeated. The dilemma confronts them. Then another man, General Sherman, suggested: "Let Jackson be killed accidentally by his own men." And so this plan was followed. The South soon went down for the count. The simple method stated in the Bible is to have contact with this Inner Power, this Kingdom of God within, we might take the case of two classes in Agricultural and Mechanical college. One student completed the Freshman class and went to a farm where he was making an indifferent living. The other graduated and soon became an industrial leader. He produced large quantities of electricity with his machinery run by water, and supplied all the nearby cities and towns of the progressive farmers near whose land the High Line passed. When supervising the construction of the High Line near the farm of his old acquaintance renewed their acquaintance and invited him to plead with him to tap this High Line and supply power he wanted free of charge. But his friend would not make the effort. He might have had a fine house and barn, poultry houses, milk house and all brilliantly lighted with electricity, and all machinery run by it, the heating, cooking, sweetening in his home done by electricity. Such a man and use of his generous offer would have made him a rich friend supremely happy. But the farmer was too indifferent to make the necessary effort to tap the power so freely offered. Just so with the Line of God's power is within easy reach of all His followers, of each soul consecrated to God. And this power of God is as free as the air we breathe. But it takes effort, faith and vision to make it effective. We must come in contact with this power of God within us through prayer. The first step is to want something earnestly, to desire something with all the heart, soul, strength and mind, and to have vision of this thing you desire as if it had already been obtained, and then work with might and vigor to bring it about, laying the burden of the problem on your subconscious mind. Read R. 11:24: "Whatever things ye desire, when ye shall believe that ye shall receive them, and ye shall have them." The thing desired may be of a spiritual nature or of a temporal nature; but always it should be something that is right, helpful to you and yet helpful to any other person: else you could not expect blessing on it. And friends, don't be niggardly in your desires. Demand great things of life. Demand of your Creator by being satisfied with a mere "Thank you." This poem points out the limitations we place upon ourselves:

"I bargained with Life for a penny,
 And Life would pay no more,
 However I begged at evening,
 When I counted my scanty store.

"For Life is a just employer;
 He gives you what you ask,
 But once you have set the wages,
 Why, you must bear the task.

"I worked for a menial's hire,
 Only to learn dismayed,
 That any wage I had asked of Life,
 Life would have paid."

MOTHER

Jas. D. Dean

Sitting in my study, amid the sunshine which pours in at the windows, I can see away to the south, the east, and the west. How beautiful the trees in their different coloured garb—for it is Spring! But I am not thinking of this day, no, memory goes away back, back to thirty-five years ago, and to different scenery. What different vicissitudes have come and gone since then? What hopes have come and blown up like bubbles! What fears have made the spirit tremble like a thing of china! And what joy has thrilled and illuminated life! What mighty battles have been fought, some lost, and some won. But our Father through them all has been good and kind, bringing the soul into ripe fruitage willing to cast aside the dirt and pleasures of this world, with a strange hunger for the next. But let me go back to that other day—and
MOTHER.

It was Sunday, and the hum of the many mills had passed into silence. Many whistles and bells lay silent on this day, but the church bells and chimes took their place.
But rest of body does not always mean rest of soul. At least in one house in old Galashiels there were troubled hearts.

Home! what a dear world is home! We never know the value of water until the well goes dry; and we never know the value of home until space comes in between and it seems only a thing of memory. We know not how precious is life until the heart almost ceases to beat. And home ah! "be it ever so humble there's no place like home."

Where a happier scene than a father and mother with their children about them: We may tread upon a mother's skirts then, but many a mother longs for that day gone by, for she would rather have her children tread upon her skirts than upon her heart. But there is another moment when a sickening throb goes through her bosom, that is, when the family circle is about to be broken, and a vacant chair must be seen.

The Scottish people are big-hearted people, with all the stories to the contrary. They have hearts of compassion, are sturdy and strong, know a task when they see it, and are not afraid to tackle it. Porridge and the Catechism gives one a wonderful foundation, and a tremendous stictuity. Poverty has often proved a blessing, and been the basis for much hardihood. And this was a home where riches dwelt not, compelling the oldest lad around twelve years to leave home and mother and go out—out—out into a cold, cold world. How innocent he was then! and how little he knew! But he knew enough to know that this was a frightful moment in his life.

"Wife," said the father, "John and I will go on the way with the laddie's trunk. He need nae leave for fifteen meenites yet. We'll gang on our way, and wait doon the road."

How easy it is to find an excuse when we do not wish to face a painful situation. And doubtless many a father today would do the same under like circumstances.

"My laddie," said the mother, "a year claithes are clean and white in yer trunk. And when they get dirty, lay them aside and bring them hame again wi' ye, and yer mither will make them white once more."

And the trunk! The father and brother each took a handle and left the house. That trunk had left before, many many years before, and as they could not afford another it had come back from the uncle in Glasgow.
Its lock was broken, and its top had a dimple so deep that almost a gallon of water could have found rest therein. But what clothes lay within was blest with a mother's prayer, and watered with her tears.

Did you ever notice how heartless our clocks are, and how compassionless at certain times! Fifteen minutes, and how certain the hands moved.

"Mother, I maun awa, I'll be—late—for the train."

"My laddie, how can I let ye gang! and the world is so big and cold!"

No matter how many might be left, and no matter how big the burden may be, and how hard the struggle to make ends meet, just one gone from a mother's heart makes a mighty vacancy. Oh, who can tell that mother's heart, torn between hopes and fears! Well she knew about the world's wickedness, and well she knew how innocent her boy. But experience must teach him many things.

"Mother, I maun awa, I'll be late for the train, for trains winna wait."

"Oh, my laddie, my laddie! Write tae me every day, every day, mind ye, for I shall hunger tae get yer message."

Write every day, when all the money he possessed was thirty cents: fourteen to take him to his destination, fourteen to bring him back at the end of two weeks and only two for one stamp! But love scorns arithmetic. She had forgotten he was to receive no wages, only his bed and board.

She clung to him, what mother will not under such circumstances? He finally tore himself away, and while going through the door called out: "Guidbye, mother, guidbye!"

As the oldest of the family, twelve years of age, passed the window he heard his little three-year old brother say:
"Dinna greet (cry) mother, dinna greet." But how could she otherwise but greet.

The church bells were chiming forth their wondrous sounds, such as only a Scottish Sabbath can send forth.
I can hear them now clashing and clanging forth the hour of worship. Thousands were going toward the house of the Lord, each with their Bible in their hand. Oh yes, some were going toward Buckholm Hill, but they were sweethearts, and it was Spring. But neither lovers nor saints took notice of a wee lad hurrying down Magdalla Terrace wiping the tears from his eyes. Yes, it was the Lord's Day, but how could he have left his mother sooner? Love must rule the Sabbath. He met up with his father and brother, who were waiting in the distance.

"Jamie, lad, did yer Mither greet?"

"Ay."

"Did she greet sair?—did she take on much?"

"Ay."

The father turned his head away, and while doing so,

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The seventeenth annual convention of the Georgia Christian Endeavor Union was held in Savannah, the "City by the Sea," April 18-21, 1929. There was not a hitch in the program which began on Thursday afternoon and ran through Sunday night. Nearly all of the 175 out-of-town registered delegates were in attendance.
"Crusade with Christ" was used as the convention theme and this was featured in all of the addresses at night and on Sunday afternoon.

Outstanding speakers on the program included Dr. W.
Knighton Bloom, Washington, D. C., Rev. Richard Orme
Flinn, D.D., Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. Stanley B. Vandersall, Boston, Mass.; Rev. Neil L. Anderson, D.D., Savannah, and W. Roy Breg, Chattanooga, Tenn. A large number of other leading denominational leaders and speakers from throughout the South had important places on the program.

The Savannah convention committee, led by Miss Phebe W. Folger, who is also president of the Savannah City Union, together with 11 other active Endeavorers headed up the different committees and did a splendid piece of work in entertaining the convention.

The outstanding social event of the convention was a boat trip down the Savannah River on the Steamer Clivedon, a triple-decked 400-passenger boat. About three hundred delegates enjoyed this trip as guests of the convention committee. Following the boat ride the delegates assembled at the Y. M. C. A. for the annual fellowship banquet. This was under the direct supervision of Miss Estella Bowles, director of religious education of the First Christian Church, and, according to W. Roy Breg and Stanley B. Vandersall, was the best banquet ever pulled out his handkerchief, for even his heart was heavy.

They went on their way. The birds sang sweetly, as only old country birds can sing. The skylark sung its vesper hymn; but Jamie did not hear. He passed a few churches as the people hurried inside, little thinking that years and years he would thrill his own town folks with the preaching of the Gospel in those same churches. And ultimately they reached the station.

Now old country stations are different from ours. No one can get upon the platform without having a pull, or without paying for a platform ticket. Knowing this the stationmaster Jamie's father and brother were allowed inside. Galashiels station is a large affair. Here passengers changed for Pebbles and Abbotsford, for Melrose and Selkirk. It had and has today a mighty roof, all glass.
It has its bridge from one platform to another. And on this Sunday mighty crowds swarmed the gates, for old country people do love their home towns, and are tremendously passionate for their own. A large crowd walked up and down the platform, some in their kilts, some in their frock coats, some in their shepherd garb with their collies at their feet. There was a shrill cry of a whistle, a mighty roar of a train, the bell of the porter ringing as he said: "Galashiels, change for Selkirk, In-nerleithen, Peebles and Abbotsford." The baggage was hoisted aboard, along with them Jamie's old tin trunk.
Farewells were spoken, there was a shunt, shunt of the engine, and the train left with many faces looking from the windows; and among them wee Jamie hanging out more and more until the train had entered the tunnel.
Oh, yes, he was to come back to that same station over thirty years later, he was to leave it again, but with a mighty host of men and women gathered about him showering him with tokens of love, and hundreds singing out:
"God be you till we meet again." But, he did not know then, he just thought of home and mother.

Far across the roaring sea, there once lived one who thought of me.

With tear drops standin' in e'e, my big kind-hearted
mother.

She nursed me as a bairnie sma' and wiped the tears ere they could fa'.

The kindest friend that man e'er saw is ever loving mother.

She'd gaze into my hazel e'en and think there future greatness seen,

And proud was she as any queen, and happy then was
mother.

When there was little in the board, and no more could she afford.

She'd sacrifice at our accord,—oh, sacrificing mother!
I mind when first I left my hame, a wee bit laddie sad and lane.

She cried! and oh the parting pain in leaving hame and
mother.

My box though dimpled in the lid, and tied with rope for loose its snip,

My clothes so clean it snugly hid, all made sae clean wi' mother.

Her heart was deeper than the sea, and higher than the sky o'er me.

And wider than the birds could flee, oh what a heart had
mother!

But many years hae passed awa, I've felt the world's rain and snaw,

And a' the bitter winds that blaw, since leaving hame and
mother.

Come fear and woe, come hope and joy, come peace of mind or dark alloy,

I'll ne'er forget when I'd employ my time in helping
mother.

For across Death's silent sea, there's one who fondly thinks o' me;

She is na dead, faith dries my e'e,—I'm coming, loving Mother!

Lesson for May 19

JEREMIAH CALLS TO OBEDIENCE

Jer. 7:1-26. Print vs. 1:11, 21-23

We saw last week that Jeremiah, "the healthiest, strongest, bravest, grandest man of Old Testament History," began his ministry during the reign of King Josiah. He threw himself into the reform movement that the young king, about the age of Jeremiah, had instituted, with all the ardor of youth. Nineteen years later however Josiah was tragically killed at the battle of Megiddo, and the reform program came to an abrupt end. Jehoahaz, his son, reigned only three months and was deposed by Pharaoh-Necho, the king of Egypt. He was succeeded by Jehoiakim, his older brother, a man totally unfit to guide the destinies of the kingdom at such a crucial period of Judah's history. Egypt and Babylon were contending at the time for world mastery. There was grave danger lest Judah, a tiny country comparatively, yet important because it guarded the bridge that connected Asia and Africa, should be crushed between the contending forces. The people, however, and their rulers, had a strange sense of security. Almost a hundred years before this time Judah had faced extinction at the hands of Assyria, the cruelest and mightiest power of antiquity. Isaiah had steadied the people by assuring them that they were in God's hand, and that He would not suffer Jerusalem to fall into the hands of the invader. At the time the prophecy seemed almost absurd. And yet as Sennacherib and his invincible host lay facing the Egyptians some great calamity overtook them, probably a great plague which swept through the army. The fact of the calamity is mentioned in II Kings 19:35, and in secular history by Herodotus. The great king slunk back to Nineveh with the miserable remnant of his army, and not long afterwards Assyria passed off the stage of the world's history. That marvelous deliverance caused a superstitious veneration to gather about the temple. It was a kind of fetish which guaranteed the security of the city and the people. Naturally this superstition was encouraged by the priests. It bound the people to the worship of Jehovah and stimulated their gifts. Jeremiah, however, saw that this whole attitude led to a false notion of religion, and induced a sense of security that was dangerous in the extreme. Under these circumstances he delivered the address that we are to study at the present time. Most students of Jeremiah think that this is the same address which is very briefly summarized in Jer. 26. We read there that after the address was finished Jeremiah was arrested, and tried for high treason against the state, and for blasphemy against God. He was released, but it was only the influence of powerful friends at court that saved him finally from death. We are interested at this time not in the results of the speech, but in the speech itself.

Study Jeremiah 7:1-26. Where did Jeremiah stand when addressing the people? Why this position? In what did the people of those times trust? What was their character as indicated by this address? What conception of religion did they have? What conception of religion did Jeremiah have? What was to happen to the Temple? Why was Jeremiah told not to pray for the people? What great sin is cited as committed in Jerusalem? Cf. Jer. 44:15-26. What had God done for His people from the time of their coming from Egypt? What had been the people's response? What words of Jeremiah in this address apply most pointedly to our own time?

I. The True Way to God's Blessing—7:1-7

Comparing the account in Chapter 26 with the account in Chapter 7, it is evident that Jeremiah delivered his address on a great feast day, when the Temple was crowded with worshippers from Jerusalem, and all the surrounding countryside. He took his stand at the gate which admitted the throngs to the outer court, and arrested them shouting: "Hear the word of Jehovah, all ye of Judah, that enter in at these gates to worship Jehovah." He proceeded to point out to them the true way to God's blessing then the false way and then just where the ways parted. We look first at the true way.

It is a very simple way, and yet a fundamental way: Amend your ways and your doings. Jeremiah was not the first prophet nor the last to point out that this is the only way that can lead to the blessing of God. Isaiah for example, a hundred years earlier had cried: "Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil in your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well." Is. 1:16-17. And six hundred years later, John the Baptist had come preaching in the wilderness, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," Math. 3:2. The blessing of which Jeremiah speaks is the one which concerned the people particularly at this time, their continued possession of the Holy Land. "Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place."

To make his meaning plainer Jeremiah contrasts for a moment the true way with the false way. "Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. Trust ye not in lying words saying, the temple of Jehovah, the temple of Jehovah, the temple of Jehovah, are these." As we read these words we can almost see the gesture with which Jeremiah turned and indicated the group of buildings which together made up the Temple. The lying words to which he refers are, of course, the words of the false prophets, who maintained that the Temple was a sufficient guarantee of God's protection. They doubtless relied on such passages as Is. 37:22-35. The threefold repetition was probably frequently used by the people who thought it gave a certain magical force to the formula. Of course, Jeremiah did not mean to deny that the Temple was God's house; he did wish them to understand that in itself it gave His worshippers no immunity from disaster.

Having indicated the true way more clearly by contrasting it with the false way Jeremiah went on to explain more definitely what is involved in that amendment of life which God requires. He told them for example that it meant a thorough execution of justice between a man and his neighbor. Of course we have here only a summary of Jeremiah's address. We imagine that he applied all of these injunctions to the actual situation in the nation at that particular time. Almost certainly he pointed out that justice meant justice in the courts, justice for the poor man as well as justice for the rich man, justice for the man who could hire no lawyer as well as for the man who could hire the most brilliant lawyers practising before the bar. And we suppose too that he pointed out that justice meant justice in the economic relations of life, justice for the farmers, and justice for the poor tenants. And if he followed in the footsteps of the other prophets he pointed out that the responsibility for securing justice for all classes of the population lay not only upon the civil rulers and upon the business magnates but also upon the people as a whole. If they were to amend their ways, Jeremiah continued, they must cease oppressing the sojourner, the fatherless, and the widow. The sojourner, or stranger, was the foreigner, temporarily resident in the land, a man who had no legal status, and who at that time had no government to demand that he receive fair treatment, a man who specially needed commendation to the kindness of those around him; we get something of the same idea if we translate, "if ye oppress not the immigrant."

The fatherless and the widows were those who had lost their natural protectors and who have been in all lands and at all times the easy prey of designing men. We may be wrong but we imagine that if Jeremiah were living in our own day he would include other helpless classes in this same category, men and women who because of economic pressure are forced to labor under unwholesome conditions, boys and girls who to eke out the family budget and in spite of state school laws are kept at home, equally to their own detriment and the detriment of the state, to help their parents prepare the fields and harvest the crops, or else are sent too early to labor in the factories. By a thorough amendment of life Jeremiah continued God meant a stoppage of the shedding of innocent blood, not in the temple, but in Jerusalem. We may suppose that he did not refer merely to cold blooded murder, which his hearers would also condemn, but to judicial murders, the slaying of men by unjust court decisions and the like. If he were speaking in our own day we might suppose that he would refer to the prevalence of crime in our land, for it seems as President Hoover has recently pointed out that life and property are less secure in America than in any other civilized nation; to the deaths caused by bootleg whiskey (nor is it fair to blame such results on prohibition, for it was the toll of life and money and happiness that whiskey took that led to the adoption of the prohibition amendment); to the increasing number of accidents, many of them at least due to reckless and careless driving; to the conditions that still exist in some industries shortening the lives of the laborers, and by the failure to adopt safety devices taking an annual toll of death 'by accident.'

Finally, said Jeremiah, if they were to amend their ways, they must cease walking after other gods to their own hurt. To walk after other gods meant to live according to heathen customs. It meant more than bowing down to idols, it meant for example sensual and immoral modes of living, a gratifying of all of one's appetites, a blind following of one's instincts such as an increasing number of our literary men, and some psychologists are contending for in the present day.

This way to the blessing of God that Jeremiah held out to the people of his day is rather suggestive for our own day. Is it still the way to God's blessing? Or is there some other way? Can we secure the blessing for example simply by believing in Jesus and going to Church? Do we still have to amend our lives, and amend them in the ways suggested by Jeremiah. Jeremiah had an idea that religion was concerned with man's relations to his fellow man, not only in one's personal relations, but also in his political relations, and his social relations, and his economic relations, he believed in what is called today, 'the social gospel.' Was he right, or was Senator Stanley of Kentucky right, who said recently in Richmond, disturbed seemingly because the Church has shown increasing desire in recent years to apply the Gospel to just such areas of life, "It is the sole mission of the church to enable men by the grace of God to control themselves." A recent writer in the Christian Observer argued that the Southern Presbyterian Church should have no relations with the Federal Council. He said: "There is a dangerous tendency to substitute social service for the Gospel. The Federal Council constantly suggests subjects for the pulpit like child labor, international relations, capital and labor, etc., which leave little room for Gospel preaching; and too much ground is often given for the charge of interference in the political sphere." Why not face the question frankly this week, in the light of Jeremiah's preaching (and that of the other prophets which is on the same line), is the Church interested, or should it be interested in 'child labor, international relations, capital and labor, etc.' In other words, is the church concerned in political, economic, and social problems that have moral issues at stake? If so, how should it show its interest? How can the Church insist today that it is as individuals and as a nation are to find the way to God's blessing we must amend our ways and our doings, which means that today as yesterday we must execute justice between a man and his neighbor; that we must end the oppression of the sojourner and the fatherless and the widow; and the waste of human life; and end the practise of heathen ways that work to our own hurt?

II. The Wrong Way to God's Blessing—7:8-20

The people of Jeremiah's day put their trust in the Temple. They thought that so long as they believed in God and worshipped him in the traditional way everything would be well. Jeremiah said that kind of religion had no value. "Behold ye trust in lying referring to the words of those preachers, them that if they supported the worship of God was enough) that cannot profit." They act that they could break all the articles in the law and still find forgiveness by formally worshipping their heathen deities and entering into a covenant with them.

They thought they could come fresh from the worship of their heathen deities and enter into a covenant with Jehovah and worship Him in a way that was acceptable. "Will ye steal, murder, and covet, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal after other gods," asked Jeremiah, "and come before me in this house that is called by my name, say we are delivered (from all danger)?" that follows gives the prophet's indignant retort. "Delivered? From what? That ye have done these abominations?" He adds that such a kind of religion really makes the temple a den of thieves, i. e. a place of retreat in the intervals between acts of violence. Caves in Palestine were often used for the same purpose. God's temple sunk so low in our estimation that you value it most as a refuge from robbers such as other robbers find in their caves?

To destroy their confidence he reminds them of the fate of Shiloh the town which for many years had been the ark. The ark had been carried into the battle of Ebenezer (I Sam. 4:11). The ark was the city is nowhere described in the Bible to have and in Jeremiah 26:6 and in Ps. 78:60 miah then told them plainly that in spite of their worship God would destroy just as he had destroyed Shiloh, that Jerusalem carried out of the land into captivity just as Ephraim) the northern nation had been a before.

Very likely vs. 16-20 were not actually added by Jeremiah to the people. If they were he would have made it plain to him that it was worthwhile to pray for the people. Most words were added by Jeremiah when he delivered his message down. He has borne the persecution of his heart to God, but he sees now that such a prayer is useless. The people have not heeded his voice, and all ages have united in the publication of God's name by shameless idolatries. I which Jeremiah refers here is that of the 'golden calf.' "We have a fuller description of the calf in Chapter 44 from which it is clear that while the children assisted in the preparations, the king was especially active in the service of the goddess. The Queen of Heaven is dispossessed by the goddess Ishtar, who bore this name in the Bible, and who is to be regarded as the planet Venus and the moon. The cult was of Babylonian origin, probably imported into Judah in the reign of Manasse. From 44:19 we learn that the cakes portended by this is meant, either that they were to represent her, or that her image was stamped on them." Because of such practices the Temple would be poured out upon the nation.

At first glance it may seem that the false way by the people of Jeremiah's time to securing God's blessing has no analogy in our own day. A fact is one of the most persistent dangers of our age faces in every age. Today, just as in the days of old, there are people who are tempted to worship for example has value per se, they do not secure God's blessing for the present or for the future, they engage in the formal exercises of worship which is valuable for the effect it has on the mind, a matter of fact worship has no value except as it enables us to come into touch with God, and his will for our lives. If we could accomplish our engaging in worship then we might be able to attain to uninterrupted communion with God. But as a recent writer points out that "Even if we are and always will be necessary because we cannot attain to uninterrupted communion with God, worship is necessary because without it we are not capable of feeling that communion at all, and less we need to remind ourselves continually of God's presence even as a means. In the first place we remind ourselves that it is external and fail of its effect, that it may become lifeless, a matter of routine, and so become a mimic. There it ought to stir us to an awe and reverence of God, to an authentic sense of the fulness of the Supreme Reality, it may be that the customary performance of a pious act, we attribute some virtue on its own account, and real danger of our religious life today? avoided?"

III. Where the Ways Part—7:21-26

Jeremiah begins this part of his discourse by telling the people that their formal worship had no value in his sight. It will help us to understand this if we remember that burnt offerings were made upon the altar, while of sacrifices certain were reserved to be eaten by the priest and the Levites. The idea here is that they may add one type of sacrifice to another, Jehovah regards them all as nothing but flesh. Or else that they eat all the flesh of the sacrifice to God, it would have just as much value as if they had. Jeremiah, when God entered into a covenant with Israel he was not concerned with sacrifice, one thing which He insisted on was that Israel should be true to God (Cf. Ex. 19:5-6). Israel had taken the way of the Lord's favor because "they hearkened not to their ear, but walked in their own counsel, and their stubbornness of their evil heart." They were not in God's favor and not forward.

And just there we still find the parting of the ways. We may be members of the Church, we may be orthodox according to the teachings of the Bible, we are not on the way that leads to God's blessing, we submit ourselves to God's will. In the Bible Jesus: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in Heaven." 7:21.

Department of Family Religion and Sabbath Observance

In 1923 the General Assembly abolished its permanent committee on the Sabbath and Family Religion as no funds were available for its functioning between meetings of the Assembly. The task of stimulating an interest in these vital subjects was given to the Publication Committee, in view of the fact that the expense of all publications on these causes, and their distribution, had been borne by this Committee.

While no special funds were made available for the prosecution of this work, a persistent campaign of education has been carried forward and a sustained effort made to persuade the homes of our Church to establish Family Altars. More than 100,000 leaflets have been issued annually since 1923, and a large expense has been incurred in promoting this work. According to Chief Justice Taft, the weakest spot in present day civilization is the homes of the land. The spirit of lawlessness, the appalling increase in juvenile crime, the growth in the divorce evil, the spread of Sabbath desecration, the lowering of moral standards, and the loss of belief in the existence of a God, have their roots in homes where parents are delinquent in asserting authority over their children, and fail to set them an example of righteousness.

The Church cannot fully overcome the failure of the home to function as a center of righteous influence, but her responsibility is greatly increased by the delinquency of parents.

One hundred and sixty thousand leaflets were issued during the year in an effort to meet the responsibilities of our Church.

Co-operative Efforts

Following the policy of the past, we co-operated with the other Executive Committees in promoting the interests of every agency of the Assembly, and paid our quota of the expense budget of the Committee on Assembly's Work, the Survey of the Agencies, the Stewardship Department, Men's Work, Country Church Department, and Woman's Work. This required a fund totaling $3,309.89.

Work in the Field

The requests for aid in the support of field workers increase each year, and it is discreditable to our Church that funds are not available to enter these open doors of opportunity. Due to operating with- out two directors during the year, we were able to place workers in a few new fields.

We now have full-time Synodical workers in the following Synods: Appalachia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. Workers are also employed in thirty-one Presbyteries. Thirty-eight special workers were employed for from six to twelve week periods during the summer of 1928 in promoting Vacation Bible School work.

The efforts of the entire corps of workers were fruitful in training leaders, in stimulating better work in existing schools, in the organization of new Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies and in evangelistic activities.

Leadership Training Division

Church leaders are unanimous in declaring that training workers is one of the major tasks of the Church, and that a staff of adequately trained teachers is the first requisite of a successful Sunday School. The work of Leadership Training has had the most vigorous promotion throughout the year with the help of our officient office secretary, Mrs. Clinevell, and our trained Editorial and Educational staff. The number of Leadership Training Schools held was the largest yet recorded, and the papers submitted by students indicate that we are enlisting a superior staff of teachers and enrolling a serious minded body of students. 9,604 certificates for the completion of units and 50 diplomas for the completion of the teacher training course were issued during the year. The literature for the help of leaders and students was carefully revised and simplified to the end that the course of training might be effectively used in our smallest churches.

Vacation Bible Schools

Probably no phase of training work adopted by the evangelical churches has made so rapid an advance as the work of gathering children into Vacation Bible Schools. The record of the growth of this activity in our Church is very encouraging. In 1927 we reported 227 Vacation Bible Schools held with an enrollment of about 16,000. This year we have reports from over 450 schools with an enrollment of over 40,000. Most of the schools follow the standard curriculum and register for credit as standard schools.

Young People's Division

The interests of the young people of our Church have had a large place in our thinking and planning during the past year than any activity committed to us.

With the help of the capable office secretary, Miss Nellie D. Chester, and the aid of our willing and efficient editorial staff, all of whom are authorities in their field, a comprehensive, educational, and promotional program was projected and carried through.

We are in intimate touch with every agency and organization which has for its end the spiritual, mental, social and physical well-being of young people. Profiting by these contacts, we endeavor to suggest activities and studies that will interest our young people, give them a right outlook on life, encourage them to live wholesome, happy, Christian lives, and enlist them in the support of the activities of their own Church.

We prepared a list of topics for 1929 for Senior and Intermediate Societies, selecting themes which touch the daily life problems of young people. The activities of our own Church were worked into the topic list, according to the time schedule approved by our Assembly. The other agencies present their programs in "The Program Builder," thus giving our young people a unified view of the whole work of our Church.

A Year Book was published giving full instruction about organization details and the correlation of the work of the Sunday School with that of the Young People's Societies.

The treatment of the topics and the presentation of activities and worship programs is provided for in "The Program Builder" and "Onward."

The leaflet literature was revised and enriched by the addition of much new matter. The literature dealing with the activities of classes and departments of the Sunday School is rated as among the best in America.

Our reports show the church now has 2,647 young people's societies, with an enrollment of 66,922. This is the largest total ever reported.

The Children's Division

The Needs of Our Children:

The children of our church under twelve years of age have certain definite needs. If these needs are met in childhood, year by year, or rather, day by day, in complete dependence on God's Holy Spirit, our children will take their places naturally in the kingdom of God and develop into young people and adults whose ideals and conduct are truly Christian.

It is well to remind our Church, ever and again that "what we put into the first of life, we put into all of life."

Some of the needs of our children, briefly stated are:

1. A wholesome, right and therefore beautiful conception of God.
2. Opportunities for real communion with God.
3. A knowledge of what constitutes the Christian conduct that is possible and desirable at each stage of growth as the children reach these various stages of development.
4. Frequent opportunities for practicing Christian conduct as it may be lived naturally by a child.

Perhaps in these few brief statements we have sensed all of a child's true needs, as he finds himself in God's world with other people.

How the Children's Division Endeavors to Meet the Needs of Children:

The Children's Division of our Committee of Religious Education has tried in some measure to help our Church to meet these needs by helping those who touch the lives of children to gain a better understanding of their possibilities for development. We have planned definitely to reach leaders in the home and Church School.

Realizing that the home is the most important influence in religious education we are endeavoring to meet the problems in the home by putting within the reach of parents a series of Parent Training pamphlets at a nominal price. We have added four to the series this year. We are endeavoring, through these leaflets, to show parents how to deal with practical problems, knowing that by so doing the four stated needs of childhood will be met.

While the parents of our church should be most vitally concerned with the training of their children, in many cases the Church School teacher has taken this responsibility more seriously. For this reason, and because the Church School teacher has looked to us for assistance and guidance as the home has not, most of the plans of our Division have been plans to help the teachers of little children to understand the best methods of dealing with the problems of childhood and to put within the reach of these leaders the best available materials.

Perhaps we have felt during the past year more keenly than ever before a burning desire to help teachers to an understanding of the need of "frequent opportunities for practicing Christian conduct as it may be lived naturally by a child."

We have had ample opportunity to measure the mechanical, rote method of teaching children to say things against the more educational and Christian method of giving children chances to practice the things they are saying. We have learned that children will repeat most heartily and understandingly a verse from the Bible that they have learned to do, and so, much of our teaching has been concerned with the guidance of children as they live together in Sunday sessions, week-day sessions, or vacation sessions of the Church School. Perhaps next to the home the vacation session furnishes the most natural group experience of living together.

Editorial Department

Editorial Policy:

The editorial department is controlled and animated in all its work by zealous devotion to the evangelical doctrines and traditions of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and is also committed to a discriminating application of approved principles and methods in Religious Education. The circulation of single copies of our periodicals reached the fine total of 17,443,883 copies last year. This is a gain of 345,469 over the previous year.

Our Material Used by Other Denominations:

The continued use of our Sunday-school periodicals and of portions of Sunday-school lesson material by the Sunday School Boards of other Churches is again reported as an indication of the character of literature that is prepared by our lesson writers. The following Churches are using portions of our Sunday-school lesson materials and teachers' helps: The Canadian Presbyterian, The United Presbyterian, The Associate Reform Presbyterian, The German Reformed Church, and the Dutch Reformed Church.

Warning Against Ungraded Literature:

All literature published by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication is thoroughly safeguarded in the matter of doctrinal teachings. In this connection we must again call the attention of our Sunday schools to the danger of using alien and unguarded literature for the training of the sensitive minds and hearts of the children of the Church. Many of our smaller schools are constantly being tempted to order their Sunday-school lesson literature and story papers from commercial houses that are under no church control, and that must, because of their widely distributed and variegated constituencies, make their lessons doctrinally colorless at vital points. There are also a few schools, particularly among the larger churches, that turn to the so-called Closely Graded lessons for the use of one or more departments of the school. It should be thoroughly understood that there are no Closely Graded lessons available which are written from the doctrinal view point of our Church.

Receipts and Disbursements for Benevolent Work

The Assembly lays new responsibilities and increased financial obligations on our Committee each year, without providing new sources of revenue. Our quota of three and one-half per cent of the Assembly's Benevolent Budget, and the total have remained practically stationary for six years. In the face of expanding needs, the Church decreased its offering for our work last year. Our receipts were $79,137.56, or a decrease of $20,958.79, as compared with the previous year. We spent for the Benevolent and Educational work entrusted to us by the Assembly, $91,286.76. The deficit of $12,149.20 was contributed by the Business department and not held as a charge against receipts of the next year.

For the carrying forward of an expanding and an adequate educational program, and to place a force of workers in the field where the need is most pressing, we should have a budget of at least $116,500.00 for 1930-31. Double this sum could be wisely used, but it is our policy to ask for only what there is reasonable expectation of getting from the churches. This fund is needed for the following purposes: Support of Field Workers, Expenses of Promotional Agencies, Printed matter for the Extension and Benevolent work, and expenses of Department of Religious Education. This cause should be put in the budget of every Synod, Presbytery, and local church for the full quota assigned it by the Assembly.

CHURCH NEWS

NORTH CAROLINA SYNOD TO MEET

The constitutional requirements having been met, I hereby call the Synod of North Carolina, Presbyterian Church in the United States, to meet in special session in the Anderson Auditorium, Montreat, N. C., on May 21, 1929, at 12 o'clock, to transact the following business, if the way be clear:

1. To take such action as may be necessary to correct a defect in the Synod's deed transferring the property of the Colored Industrial and Mechanical School of North Wilkesboro, N. C., to the Trustees of the General Assembly.

2. To transact any business growing out of the above item.

Signed, Lacy L. Little, Moderator.

DR. ARTHUR GRAY JONES IS DEAD

Rev. Arthur Gray Jones, D.D., L.L.D., of Austin Seminary, Texas, died on May 1, after a long illness. He was buried May 2. We will have a fuller statement next week.

NOTICE CONCERNING CHANGES OF ADDRESS

Ministers and licentiates who have changed their post office address since the reports of Presbyteries have been made, may have their address corrected to June 15 in the Alphabetical List of Ministers and Licentiates in the Minutes of the Assembly if sent promptly. Changes cannot be made in statistical tables. Address, Rev. J. D. Leslie, Stated Clerk, 1521 Kirby Building, Dallas, Texas.

NORTH CAROLINA

Presbyterian Orphans' Home, Barium Springs

Our friends continue to respond heartily to our call for help during the illness of our pastor. Recent visiting ministers have been Rev. John Cline, pastor of the Methodist Church in Troutman, who conducted our mid-week prayer service, and Rev. Eugene Alexander of the Second Church, Salisbury, who preached the last Sunday in April. Both these men are staunch friends of the institution, and we were delighted to have them.

Wilson—The session's reports to Presbytery for the past year are very gratifying and encouraging. The Sabbath School reports a total enrollment of 338 officers, teachers and pupils. The Woman's Auxiliary reports a membership of 150, and contributions totaling $2,274. The Church reports a total membership of 314; members added during the year by profession, 26; by certificate, 35; adult baptisms, 11; infant baptisms, 34.

Grand total of contributions for all purposes, $11,197.00.

Mecklenburg Presbytery—The Albemarle Normal and Industrial School for Girls at Albemarle will be discontinued at the end of the present session, according to a decision reached by Presbytery in its adjourned meeting at the First Church, Charlotte, March 6.

All equipment and real estate owned by the school will be sold by J. L. Choate, of Huntersville, H. C. Alexander and Hunter Marshall, Jr., of Charlotte, trustees of the Presbytery.

The institution was established about 25 years ago by a group of northern women. Later, it was taken over by the Mecklenburg Presbytery. During the past several years, however, it has been impossible for the school to make running expenses and the number of students has not been sufficient to warrant its continuance.

A rising vote of thanks was given by those present to Miss Katie Pridgen, who has been in charge of the school for a number of years.

Dr. Henry H. Sweets, of Louisville, Ky., secretary of the Church's education and ministerial relief boards, discussed the annuity fund for ministers and the plan for raising $3,000,000 next year to establish the foundation for the fund. This address brought much discussion and resulted in almost unanimous decision favoring the plan.

Another question coming before the Presbytery was that of union with the United Presbyterian Church. Dr. A. R. Shaw introduced a resolution against union of the two churches, which was adopted by a safe majority.

Rev. E. A. Dillard was made chairman of a committee to organize a new church at Nevins school-house, about one and one-half miles from the Ford Motor company plant on the Statesville road. Forty names were signed to the petition requesting organization of the church.

Rev. W. W. Akers was received into the Mecklenburg Presbytery from Kings Mountain Presbytery and will be installed June 9. He will be pastor of the West Avenue Church, of Charlotte. The Presbytery also received Rev. John L. Caldwell, D.D., from Muhlenburg Presbytery, and Rev. John B. Reily, who comes from El Paso, Texas. Mr. Reily will have charge of Roberdell, Cameronian, Midway and Brainard churches and will be installed May 26.

A call was read for L. P. Burney from the Sugaw Church and it was arranged to receive him at an adjourned meeting to be held at the First Church here on May 31.

This meeting was attended by about 60 pastors and elders from churches in the Presbytery, with Dr. W. H. Frazer, president of Queens College, presiding as moderator.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Presbytery of Congaree met in Batesburg, S. C., April 22, and was attended by 17 ministers, 16 ruling elders and three visitors. Rev. S. K. Phillips was made moderator and Rev. J. E. Henderson as usual recorded the minutes.

A most interesting conference of evangelism, featured the meeting. Educational institutions held a prominent place in the discussion. President McSween brought a most encouraging report from the Presbyterian College. Doctor Byrd was re-assuring about Chicora. The one need of all these institutions was a larger financial income. Presbytery adjourned to meet in St. Matthews, June 13 at 4 p. m. to receive, ordain and install a young man pastor of the church there, if the way be clear, and in Stated Session with the Shandon Church, October 7, at 8:00 p. m. G. C. Mayes, Stated Clerk.

APPALACHIA

Presbytery of Holston met in regular spring session in the First Presbyterian Church, of Johnson City, Tennessee, on Monday, April 15, 1929. The Rev. Robert Yost, D. D., Professor of Bible at King College, was elected moderator. Meeting in the same church and at the same time, was the Presbytery of Holston, U. S. A., which embraces practically the same territory. All public meetings of the two Presbyteries were union meetings and there was a wonderful spirit of fellowship and Christian brotherhood throughout the sessions. Featuring the union meetings were addresses by the Rev. Frederick N. McMillan, D.D., pastor of the Walnut Hills Presbyterian Church, of Cincinnati, Rev. R. A. Torrey, Jr., D.D., of the China Mission of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. Our own Dr. Egbert Smith preached two most inspiring sermons. There was also a union Home Mission conference, reviewing the work of the two Presbyteries. The following items of business were transacted by our Presbytery. Rev. J. J. Douglass was dismissed to the Presbytery of Winston-Salem. Mr. John Rhea of the Blountville was received under the care of the Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry, bringing our list of candidates to fourteen. Presbytery sent to the General Assembly two overtures: (1) Concerning the distribution of free books by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication; and (2) concerning the right of the Committee on Religious Education to examine ordained ministers as to their ability to teach the Life of Christ and kindred subjects in teacher training schools.

The evangelistic report showed 601 accessions to the churches of the Presbytery on confession. This is the largest number in the history of the Presbytery and encourages us to make the coming year another evangelistic year. Presbytery adjourned to meet in the Pineola, N. C. Presbyterian Church, October 7, 1929, at 7:30 p. m. T. P. Johnston, S. C.

ALABAMA

The Presbytery of Birmingham met in the Third Presbyterian Church of Birmingham at 7:30 p. m., Monday, April 8th. There were 24 ministers and 23 elders in attendance. Every pastor was present except one and he was too sick to attend. Every church supplied with regular preaching had an elder present. Rev. Wistor R. Smith, pastor of the Second Church of Birmingham was unanimously elected moderator. Rev. James L. Jackson, a native of Birmingham, was received from the Presbytery of Orange. He sailed a few days later for the Belgian Congo to take up his work in the foreign missionary service.

Rev. Arturo d'Albergo was dismissed to Brazos Presbytery. Candidate Harry H. Bryan, was ordained as an evangelist for the foreign field. He was dismissed to Cherokee Presbytery where he will labor until he is sent out to the foreign field. Rev. T. O. Perrin, D.D., pastor of Woodlawn Church preached the Presbyterian sermon on "the Kingdom of God." Rev. Trevor Mordecai, D.D., pastor of the First Church of Birmingham, was appointed the next meeting of the Presbytery, to be held in Fairfield Highlands Church in C.

Rev. Edward G. Lilly, pastor of Vine Street Church, presided over the Conference on the Synod. Special attention was given to ministerial relief in this conference. Rev. Hunter D.D., of the faculty of Columbia Theological Seminary, spoke on "Evangelism."

Presbytery overtured the General Assembly to formulate a plan for the rotation of elders and deacon. It also adopted a resolution requesting the sessions to consider the inviting a representative of the Woman's Missionary Society to sit with the sessions at their regular stated meetings.

A resolution to change the standing rules providing for a number of permanent committees and a committee for all of Presbytery's women on this committee was approved.

An ad interim committee composed of men was appointed to study the General Assembly's proposed Annuity Fund.

Rev. Alfred A. Higgins, D.D., was made moderator of Presbytery's Home Mission Committee. Rev. T. J. Wharton, who was unable to count of his health.

Fairchild—A successful pre-Easter evangelistic campaign was carried out by the Fairchild Church. A survey was made of the community and committees made up of representatives of the Church, Woman's Auxiliary, People's Society, made an intensive canvass for six weeks prior to Easter.

During this period the following were heard in week night services: Rev. Chas. D.D., pastor of the First Church of Tusculum; Elder C. P. Loranz, of Vine Street Church; Elder W. K. Schanz, of the First Church of Kingsport; Rev. W. H. Hopper D.D., pastor of the First Church of Memphis; Rev. Alfred A. Higgins of the First Church of Enslay, Rev. E. J. Ray Dobyns, D.D., pastor of South High Street Church. The entire membership of the Church was added to the church and twenty-three new members were added to the church.

GEORGIA

Moultrie Church has just closed an evangelistic year's work. It was a very helpful year's work. It was an evangelistic meeting with Dr. J. Blanton King. A Vacation Bible School was held during the week of Bible study with Dr. F. G. Gan in the fall, and a Teacher Training School with Miss Dovie Stewart, of Thomasville, as Bellingrath, Synod's Director of Religious Education, as visiting teachers, was held in February.

The total membership of the church at the end of the year was 1,000, of whom came into the church during the year. The year's contributions to all causes amounted to $12,649.00. This church is entirely new and owns a beautiful lot at the rear of the building on which a Sunday School building is being built.

The church is very fortunate in having a fine orchestra, under the splendid leadership of Mrs. W. E. Hipsman, which plays during the day evening services. The attendance at the services is excellent, especially noticeable is the interest of the young people.

Rev. Anthony W. Dick is pastor of the church by his sincerity both in his personal relations and in his sermons from the pulpit, his earnestness for the cause of Christ, and his personality has endeared himself to the hearts of only of the Presbyterians but, of the hearts of the two years of his pastorate here.

Atlanta, Gordon Street—The closing year of the church was marked by a gracious and joyful year. Thirty-one people united with the church, and many others joined on profession of faith. The year came largely through the carrying out of a plan of visitation on the part of the officers of the church. Four of those who joined during the year were adults. The remaining seven were children.

The Sunday School, having been prepared for the year in a class taught by the pastor, J. Shields. The year that has just closed was the most fruitful of any of the past years. The reports to Presbytery show that the church has received during the year, $1,000.00 for all causes $14,831.00. This is more than for any other four-year period in the history of the church. During the past year, the church have contributed, $65,835.00 for all causes.

This is more than for any other four-year period in the history of the church. During the past year, the church have contributed, $65,835.00 for all causes. This is more than for any other four-year period in the history of the church. During the past year, the church have contributed, $65,835.00 for all causes.

Since the beginning of the new church year, there has been a surplus in the treasury of the Work. From last year's budget, the church has been refurnished entirely and with a few dollars more, presents a most inviting appearance. It is with a deep sense of gratitude to God for His blessings of grace and peace, that we push into the new church year with confidence.

FLORIDA

Presbytery of Florida met in Milton on April 7:30 p. m. of the retiring Moderator, Mr. H. E. the opening sermon was preached by Dr. in of Thornwell Orphanage. ministers and 14 elders. Blackwell was elected Moderator and Rev. ell was elected Recording Clerk. approved of union with the U. P. Church Ministers' Annuity Fund.

The Presbyterian Discourse on "The Mission of the Church" was given by Rev. W. P. Chalmers, and Rev. C. B. Ratchford was appointed to speak at the fall meeting, on "The Immutability of the Master."

Presbytery sent up to the General Assembly an overture asking for a permanent committee to report to the Assembly matters looking toward closer relations between our Church and other Presbyterian and Reformed Churches.

Rev. A. C. Windham was received from Suwannee Presbytery and steps were taken to install him pastor of the Marianna Church.

The reports from the churches were somewhat discouraging, there being a decrease of $13,000 in the contributions as compared with the previous year, and with more than 100 fewer members received than during the preceding year.

But the weather was grand and the hospitality of the Milton and Bagdad people was abundant.

According to a late custom begun by the Presbytery, the history of the Milton Church, in which we met was read by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Young.

Presbytery appointed a permanent Historical Committee to collect and preserve useful and interesting matters pertaining to Presbyterianism within the bounds of the Presbytery.

An adjourned meeting will be held at Chattahoochee, Fla., at 11:00 a. m., on June 11, 1929.

The stated fall meeting will convene at Marianna, Fla., at 7:30 p. m., on November 12, 1929.

The Presbytery of Tampa was convened by Rev. T. W. Raymond, D.D., who was appointed by the Synod of Florida for that purpose, on April 9, 1929, in the First Presbyterian Church of Tampa.

The organization was effected by electing Doctor Raymond as Moderator, Rev. T. P. Walton as Stated Clerk, and Rev. C. W. Latham as Permanent Clerk.

The Moderator ruled that no business could be transacted at this meeting, except such as concerned the future of Tampa Presbytery, so the principal business transacted was the election of Permanent Committees. Rev. A. R. Larrick, who was elected last fall as Chairman (Continued page 12)

How To Get HEALTH And How To Keep It

If the reading of this article teaches you only this one lesson about your own body it may be worth more than millions of dollars to you; for of what use is money without health, or after you are dead?

The lesson is this:—"Keep your system pure and you will have health and strength to gain and enjoy happiness, success and length of years."

But you may ask:—

How Can I Keep My System Pure?

That is not a hard question to answer, for physiology plainly teaches you that your liver, which is larger than all of the other glands of the body combined, does the special work of purifying your blood and thereby your entire system and of keeping it pure and healthy.

How Does the Liver Purify?

Physicians tell us that the liver has several functions, one of which is to manufacture a greenish-yellow, bitter fluid called bile, which, between meals, is stored up in the gall-bladder, but after each meal is poured out into the intestines. The bile is purgative and antiseptic or prophylactic. In health it is your bile that makes your bowels act regularly and freely every day,—it is Nature's purgative. It is your bile that keeps your bowels pure, sweet, clean and free from fermentation (gas) and putrefaction and decay. Remember that germs do not thrive where there is fresh bile and there can therefore be no fermentation to cause gas, nor putrefaction or decay to produce poisons or toxins. Also, as bile is Nature's purgative, there can be no constipation if the bile is flowing naturally and freely from the gall-bladder into the bowels after each meal.

But when the bile becomes stagnant and stops flowing freely, your bowels stop acting regularly and the contents become a stagnant breeding bed for the germs of fermentation (gas) decay and disease. These poisons, (called toxins) are gradually absorbed into your blood and circulate all over your body, poisoning, irritating or inflaming your brain and nerves, your muscles and joints, your heart, lungs, skin, kidneys, bladder, spleen and every vital organ of your body, including your liver, stomach and bowels. Your doctor calls this "intestinal toxæmia."

Functions of Gall-Bladder

In 24 hours your liver secretes about 5 to 30 ounces (5 to 6 teacupfuls) of bile, which flows through millions of minute canals, or ducts, uniting to make a large tube which empties into the gall-bladder, as creeks and rivulets unit to form a river that flows into a lake. Your gall-bladder is a hollow muscle that serves the double purpose of a reservoir and a pump. Its functions are similar to those of the urinary bladder. About two hours after eating, when the food is passing from the stomach into the intestines, your gall-bladder should begin its peristaltic contractions, thus pumping the bile into the small intestine where it is mixed with your food. (Bile is also a very important digestive fluid, aiding in the digestion and absorption of fats and oils. But that is too long a story to relate here.)

Nature's Danger Signals

When your car gets out of fix you can tell it. It is the same way with your bile. Nature gives you warning—not by words, but by signals or symptoms. Your doctor recognizes these danger signals and you should also know them and instantly heed them. It may save you much pain, serious illness and perhaps big repair bills.

When the bile becomes stagnant in your gall-bladder and is dammed back into your liver instead of flowing freely into your bowels you, sooner or later, begin to feel some of the following symptoms:—Your breath may become unpleasant, your tongue coated, a bad taste in your mouth, your food (and tobacco) lose their natural flavor, your food does not agree with you; you may have heartburn, gas, or fluttering around the heart, dizziness or blind spell; you may be troubled with belching or frequent passages of gas from the bowels: the gas "balloons" your bowels and presses so hard on the kidneys that it gives you pain, soreness, stiffness in the small of your back over your kidneys, making you think you have kidney trouble; at night the gas in your bowels presses upon your bladder making you get up frequently, thus breaking into your sleep. In the morning you are tired instead of refreshed. Gradually your health is injured. Your complexion becomes sallow, muddy or yellow—your skin may be disfigured with liver spots or pimples; dark rings may appear under your eyes, you may become sleepless, restless and irritable or blue and melancholic. You may have frequent colds or dull headache; your bowels stop their free, full and natural action; you have constipation, gas putrefaction and self-poisoning or "intestinal toxæmia," as the doctors call it. High blood pressure, with headache and swooning spells, may result from continued neglect.

How to Make the Bile Flow

But when the bile stops flowing freely, how can we start it up again? The answer is: Take Calotabs at bedtime and drink water freely the next day. This formula represents the best thought and experience of the best physicians in every civilized country in the world. No other purgative will do. If you take oils, salts, cascara, or the many other simple-laxative syrups, powders and candy laxatives, you are merely wasting valuable time. They only make you feel better for a day or two. They do not remove the cause, for they do not promote the expulsion of the bile which is Nature's only purgative and intestinal antiseptic. When you take Calotabs you know that you have taken a real doctor's medicine. It cleans you out thoroughly. Every inch of your twenty-five foot canal, including your stomach, small intestines and large intestines, is thoroughly cleared and washed clean and pure and your bile is flowing freely. Next morning your system feels purified and refreshed and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please and go about your work;—there is no danger, for Calotabs are perfectly safe and create no habit, except the habit of healthy bowel actions.

What Are Calotabs—How Do They Act?

Calotabs are sugar-coated tablets, containing the minimum effective dose of a thoroughly purified and refined calomel combined with assistants and correctives. The calomel facilitates the expulsion of the bile from the gall-bladder into the intestines and also serves as a mild intestinal antiseptic and diuretic. Every physician knows that no other medicine can take its place; there is no such thing as a substitute for calomel. The assistants act like salts, washing the calomel out of the system and preventing its accumulation and any possibility of danger. The correctives settle the stomach and bowels, preventing nausea, sickening and griping effects. Calotabs, (and water) therefore, give you the combined effects of calomel and salts without the nausea, griping and disagreeable taste.

The medicine chest of every home should be supplied with Calotabs, one of the most important of all family medicines. It is needed in many cases of sickness, and, if used occasionally, as needed, may assist Nature to correct conditions which, if neglected may lead to serious illness.

Avoid disappointment by refusing imitations and substitutes. Your druggist can supply you with genuine Calotabs if you insist. For your protection, Calotabs are marketed in original packages only, bearing the copyrighted trademark. Family package, containing full directions, only 35 cents.

Sunday, May 19—Jesus the Light of the World
References: John 10:1-18; Mt. 16:21-27 I Peter 1:18

Introduction

We have been studying this month about Light-bearers. First, we studied about carrying the Light across the sea, and then about bearing the Light in the home. Today, we shall study the Light itself—Jesus, the Light of the world. Just as the planets reflect the light of the sun, so the Light-bearers reflect the true Light. As a piece of smoky glass does not reflect the light of the sun—just so dull Christians cannot reflect Christ. There is nothing the matter with the Light, but there may be a great deal the matter with the reflectors. Let us polish our lives so that they may "shine before men," and they, seeing our good works, may glorify our Father who is in heaven.

In the Dark

When we were children very few of us, if any, escaped being afraid of the dark. A room without a light was fearful thing, even though we knew that there was nothing unfamiliar in the room. Darkness alone was enough to frighten us. We can imagine nothing worse than life without light. Plants kept in the dark are bleached and sickly and will never fully mature. Dungeons for prisoners have been among the most drastic of the persecutions or punishments. And we regard blindness—a physical darkness—as one of the most lamentable afflictions. We love life, but if we should be deprived of light we would almost willingly forfeit life. Even if we would not willingly give up life without light, it would go from us. Darkness results in death. Light results in life.

Because we have no more forceful way of saying it, we call sin darkness and death. The world of nature may be bright and full of beauty, and we may feel physically well and strong, but where there is sin there is blindness to real beauty—the beauty which cannot be seen, but is felt, and is known as God.

Jesus, the Light

"But for you, my worshippers, the saving Sun shall rise with healing in his rays." (Mal. 4:2).

"In him life lay, and this life was the Light for men: amid the darkness the Light shone, but the darkness did not master it." (John 1:4, 5).

"Here is the message we learned from him and announce to you: 'God is light and in him there is no darkness, none.' If we say, 'We have fellowship with him,' when we live and move in darkness, then we are lying, we are not practising the truth; but if we live and move within the light, as he is within the light, then we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus, his Son cleanses us from every sin. Beloved, I am not writing you a new command, but an old command which you have had from the very beginning: the old command is the word you have heard. And yet it is a new command I am writing to you—realized in him and also in yourselves, because the darkness is passing away and the true light is already shining. He who says he is 'in the light' and hates his brother, is in the darkness still. He who loves his brother remains in the light—and in the light there is no pitfall; but he who hates his brother is in darkness, he walks in darkness and does not know where he is going, for the darkness has blinded his eyes." (I John 1:5-7, 2:7-11.) (Moffat's translation used above.)

The Sick World

"The world is sick. It has always been sick. In the days of Isaiah it was sick. This is his description of his own nation: 'The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and fresh stripes.' In the days of Jeremiah humanity was sick. The disease had progressed so far that a cure seemed quite hopeless. The prophet summed up his conception of the situation in his famous saying, 'The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately sick.' The world today is in sore need of a doctor. Society in many sections is anaemic. The blood is impoverished. The vitality of the central organ is reduced. There are muscles which are paralyzed. Many a nerve is unstrung. Civilization is like a man affected with a high fever. It tosses restlessly on its bed. It is occasionally delirious. Now and then it is disturbed in its sleep by frightful dreams. Sometimes it raves and foams as though seven devils had entered into it. Its spiritual condition is distressing. Its faith has been shattered. Its hope has been darkened. Its love has been cooled. Multitudes are confused and bewildered.

The world was an invalid in Jesus' day, and Jesus looked on with the eyes of a physician. One of his proudest titles through sixty generations has been "the great Physician." Himself a physician, he sent his disciples out to heal." (Excerpt from a sermon by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson.)

In winter time you hear of numerous epidemics of contagious diseases—flu, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles, and so on down the list. We stay indoors and huddle around the fire to keep warm. The sun does not have a chance to keep us well. In spring and summer we stay out and bask in the warmth of the sun and in so doing we do more than merely keep warm—we keep well. The rays of the sun are healing and life-giving. Our bodies thrive because of the sun.

Our souls require healing, too. "But for you, my worshippers, the saving Sun shall rise with healing in his rays." If we stay away from the Light—as we stay out of the sun in the winter time, we have soulsickness, one of the most contagious diseases.

"Sun of my soul, Thou Savior dear,
It is not night if Thou be near.
O, may no earth-born cloud arise
To hide Thee from Thy servants eyes."

WHEN BOOKS ARE FRIENDS

Margaret E. Sangster

When lonely in some strange place,
When love and home seem far away;
When we walk, searching, day by day,
For some familiar, smiling face—
Oh, then it is that books can bring
A sense of comfort and of rest,
And little dreams that we love best,
And memories that laugh and sing.

Old books and new—they never fail
To answer the unspoken need;
They give contentment, as we read,
They point to heights that we can see,
Adventure, romance, roads that lead
To lands sun-swept with youth's warm
When lonely, in some strange place,
Then books can fill the heart's great need.

Suppose There Were No Books

Suppose there were no books!
No books to read in cozy nooks,
No books to fill the hungry mind
And teach the art of being kind.
No books to while an hour away,
To link today with yesterday;
No books to charm us for awhile,
To bring a tear or lure a smile.
But there are books, praise God above
If we have books and we have love—
We can dispense with other things—
'Tis books, not crowns, that make men brave.

Quotations

"Some books are our servants. They tell us news; they keep us informed; they tell us news; they keep us equipped for our trade. But the great books are our masters; we sit and learn. 'Look,' they say, and looking, we learn of life's significance. 'Consider,' they say, and we are captured by a new truth. Power is multiplied. A man's life is made when great ideas lay hold upon him and of living persons there is no channel. Ideas come oftener into human lives through books. Said Charles Kingsley, 'Save a life is so wonderful as a book.'—Harry Emerson Trumbull.
Books are our most faithful friends, deserting us, never growing cold, never of their treasures and their priceless wisdom as freely as to the rich, to the small helping us by disciplining our minds and higher futures. "For the Bible's sake, for others' sake, one cannot read too many good books. It ought to be good, the very best, and the most."—Robert Speer.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK ON HONOR ROLL

Miss Kate DuBse, Director of Religious Education

At the beginning of the Church year, the Young People's League of Orange Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina, determined to put the young people's work in the Presbyterian Honor Roll by March 31, 1929. They see that by faithful work had the joy of seeing their work realized. Nor for a self-motive in doing, but that the Master's work might be glorified.

The Honor Roll points which they find up at the Davidson Young People's Conference, thirds of the active organizations in a make a rating of ninety per cent to reach work went beyond the two-thirds. Seventy rated 100 per cent. A number between the majority 90 per cent. By attaining the of the Presbytery will be engraved on the Davidson Conference in June.

The purpose of the Honor Roll is to characterize, and to train for efficient service of the four-fold life, that is Spiritual, Social, and Service. For the attainment of programs offered covers Worship, Instruction, and Service, and are so arranged to people to pray, to study to play, and to work, is the purpose of the development of peoples societies through the Presbyterian Program. The Young People's League in departments of our Church's program, a many of the local organizations to develop the same way. The Presbyterian Young People's League is becoming very popular as an organization in the local churches, and is fact of Christian Endeavor, especially where for the work to be reorganized.

At a recent meeting of Orange Young People's Work was reported by representing one of the seven departments of the Presbyterian Progressive Program, which is of Works in their League. After making a report of the causes, each girl platform until the seven departments large map of the Presbytery which had one of the girls, Miss Ruth Abbott, Secretary of the Synodical Young People's League displayed illuminated showing the field seemed a more effective way to present Young People's Work by having the young people themselves, than the ordinary way of the report for them.

The new Church Year is begun with enthusiasm on the part of the young people in carrying out the meaning of their League of Works in their League, and in their motto, "To know Christ and to love Him." Greensboro, N. C.

MRS. WINNSBOROUGH RESIGNS

Mrs. Winnsborough, of St. Louis, secretary of the department of women's work in the Presbyterian Standard has received a message sent in Bratton, chairman of the committee on resignation, who said that Miss Janie W. McGaughey had resigned as Mrs. Winnsborough's successor, submission by the General Assembly.

At the meeting of Mrs. Bratton who had been attending the committee of assembly's work in Nashville, Tenn., the committee on assembly work announce through Mrs. Winnsborough the retirement, through continued ill health, of Mrs. W. C.
Hicks, secretary of the department of women's work, subject to confirmation by the General Assembly, of Miss Janie W. McGaughey to that position, who formerly resided in Knoxville, Tenn., and was an assistant to Mrs. Winnsborough in the past. The announcement of Mrs. Winnsborough's resigning with deep regret and genuine sympathy from the church. Mrs. Winnsborough has been a pionner in the Women's Work, and has brought it to a high level. In many respects, it stands premier activities, and has been admired by other departments. If imitation is the sincerest flattery, the work of the Auxiliary of our church as put Mrs. Winnsborough and adopted by other churches as the most effective plan for woman's work, an encomium for the retiring secretary.

Miss McGaughey will find a warm welcome as the successor of Mrs. Winnsborough as her successor. She has a place in the esteem of all who know her as a worker and a leader. She became Mrs. Winnsborough's assistant last fall.—J. G. G.

DEPARTMENTS OF EULALIA THROUGH THE BIRTHDAY GIFT

At the home of the pastor of Morelia went out fifteen miles to the village sprawling among the hills through the Mexican railroad runs. There, in an humble, but, he held a service to which a young girl, in spite of the threats of her mother. That was Eulalia.

Half a day later, the "Mexican Emergency" made it possible for the Mission to buy a small house in the center of the village and set it apart for service. The Spirit of God had been working and so it came about that in 1928, Eulalia, daughter and mother and fifty-one other adults of the congregation, stood up and made their profession of Christ.

Parents were only able to send her through the school work for they are poor farmers and send her on to town for the grades beyond the school had to offer. Eulalia had made the arrangements and had become a leader in her church, the daughter of a poor farmer, carrying the message to the men in the fields, and teaching the little children in the village as they gathered for Sunday School.
The Woman's Society of Morelia and other friends contributed $30.00 and helped with expenses for a course in the Bible Training School in Mexico for three grades and six weeks of study Eulalia was equipped. I wish that you might see her and be proud of her and understand more fully she appreciates this preparation which the Mission had to have. She is carrying on the message, bringing the "good news" to others. You can see her as I saw her last with a group of other boys and girls about her as she taught
"Our Heavenly Father," and with her clear voice in singing before the whole school,
"The Corner Where You Are."

The congregation has made up half the cost of a small house. Mrs. Will Harris, of Fordyce, Ark., has pledged, and so the church is proud of their organ, and she wants to learn to play the hymns, and assure you that the next time that you hear her will be doing that very thing.

Such limited instruction one of God's dear messengers can do so much for her people; as the Birthday Gift you can visualize hundreds of them through the ranches and mountain coves teaching the Way of Life.

and Secretaries of Causes, and officers for the coming

MEETING OF ALBEMARLE PRESBYTERIAL AUXILIARY

The thirty-first annual meeting of Albemarle Presby-terial Auxiliary was held in the Howard Memorial Presbyterian Church, Tarboro, N. C., on April 11 and 12, with Mrs. W. T. Clark, presiding. Fourteen secretaries and officers of the Presbyterial Auxiliary, and a large —Ephesians 5:2.

Mrs. J. M. Baker, "Mother of Albemarle Presbyterial Auxiliary, gave the visitors a warm welcome. The reports of officers and delegates were given, evidencing growth in the churches of the Presbytery. Mrs. H. L.
Hicks of Rocky Mount spoke on Bariums Springs Orphanage, a subject always near to the hearts of the Auxiliary members. Devotionals were conducted by Misses Eleanor Belk and Catherine Marrow, two young women of the Howard Memorial Church.

The women of the Tarboro Church were then hostesses at a tea.

The feature of the night session was an inspirational address by Rev. W. E. Hill, D.D., of Richmond, Va.
He took as his theme, "Devotion to the Church," and his text from the 84th Psalm, "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts." This devotion, said Doctor Hill, is not so much to the church building as to the experiences enjoyed in relationship with the church.

The devotional services were conducted by Rev. T. L.
Harnsberger, pastor of the Howard Memorial Church, after which Mr. Harnsberger, and Doctor Hill administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The morning session of the second day was opened with a devotional service led by Mrs. H. B. Smith of the New Bern Church. Mr. H. B. Whitlark sang, "Just for Today." Reports by groups were given. Mrs. G. V.
Patterson, Gastonia, president of the Synodical Auxiliary, delivered a fine message.

Mrs. H. G. Connor, Wilson, made report upon the meeting of the Synodical Auxiliary. Mrs. J. B. Woods, of China, gave a most interesting account of the work in that great and needy foreign mission field. Peace Institute was presented by President W. C. Pressly, who urged that more Presbyterian girls be sent to this junior college. Mrs. S. N. Harrell led an interesting and informing round table discussion.

A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess church.
The afternoon session was taken up with reports of committees, unfinished business and installation of new officers. Rev. T. L. Harnsberger installed the officers with an impressive ceremony.

The Presbyterial Auxiliary accepted the cordial invitation of the New Bern Church to meet there next spring.

BIRTHDAY DECORATIONS AND REFRESHMENTS

Mrs. Z. V. Meyers

In Mexico much is made over the birthday. Flowers are nearly always sent with good wishes to the one to be honored and music plays a large part in the celebration.
There are a number of Victrola records of Mexican music which would add to the program. "Mananitas" would be especially fine.

Decorations

The colors of the Mexican flag, green and white, much loved and used colors in Mexico. For the Birthday Party, in the decorations of room and table, use palms, ferns and green stuff in abundance, with plenty of colorful flowers such as cactus, wanderingjew, and begonias.
Geraniums are most appropriate. Roses, carnations, tuberoses, callalilies, express the cut flower, love of the Mexican heart.

A number of birds, especially parrots, would add a Mexican touch. These could be made by cutting paper birds from a roll of Dennison crepe paper, and mounting these birds on cardboard. They may swing from cardboard rings or be suspended from branches and ceiling by thread.

Mexican flags should be used abundantly. These may be obtained from the Auxiliary Office for 15c per flag.

Refreshments

Cakes—Birthday cakes are not Mexican, but in spite of this a white cake with seventeen red and green candles would be very effective in the center of the table. Cookies are served with the drinks. These cookies are fancy in shape, very short, usually decorated with granulated sugar or colored ornament. Hard candies would make them gay and colorful.

Sandwiches—Our kind of sandwich is not Mexican, but a ginger roll with egg and lettuce between get very close to the local sandwich. These are not so much used as sweetbread with which chicken and meat could make a delicious sandwich. Lettuce is always used.

Nuts—Peanuts and almonds are always used. Hard candies are also popular.

Drinks—For afternoon "tea" hot chocolate is served with fancy cookies. The chocolate should have a touch of vanilla milled with cinnamon until the chocolate is foamy.
Coffee may be served, with doughnuts. Fruit punch is also quite Mexican, served with a light cookie. The fruits used are lemons, limes, oranges, pineapples, cherries. Water ices are more Mexican than our kind of ice cream. Any flavor, lemon, orange, lime, blackberry or even watermelon is used.

AUXILIARY BIRTHDAY

The seventeenth birthday of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Presbyterian Church, South, and the eighth on which special gifts have been made for institutions in the Church, offered sometime this month. This year the Birthday Gift goes to two schools in Mexico—the Centenarista School at Zitacuaro, where our Miss Lettie Beaty, supported by Second Church, is principal, and Wallace Institute, at Chilpancingo. The women of the Auxiliary of the entire denomination are asked to double their Birthday Gifts this year because of the fact that two schools are the recipients, and because of the great need of giving Christian education to the Mexican girls. The Mexican Government is using our graduates in rural schools, which are being established at the rate of one thousand schools a year, in order to reduce the 80 per cent illiteracy in that country. Our Mission Schools in Mexico are producing fine results in Christian character and standards of living.

of the Home Mission Committee of Synod, asked that he be not elected Chairman of the Home Mission Committee of Presbytery, and Dr. J. A. McClure was made Chairman of that Committee.

The Session of the Dunedin Church sent an overture, asking that Tampa Presbytery send a request to each Sunday School within its bounds to set aside the offering of one Sunday in each month for one year in order to relieve the distressed financial condition of Thornwell Orphanage. This was adopted and Rev. Charles Kingsley volunteered to convey this overture to the Churches and Sessions of Presbytery. His offer was accepted.

Presbytery accepted an invitation from the Lakeland Church to meet with them at the fall meeting and adjourning to meet at Lakeland on October 29, 1929.

T. P. Walton, Stated Clerk.

Pensacola, First Church—The Men's Council of this Church is composed of the elders and deacons of the congregation. For a number of years this council, organized under the plans of the Presbyterian Progressive Program, has been meeting each second Tuesday evening of the month in the church parlors for the transaction of the church business. The meetings commence at 7:30 when the board of deacons meets separately. At the close of this board meeting the council holds its session, and afterwards the session convenes.

While the plans of the Presbyterian Progressive Program have proven in the main satisfactory, the officers deemed a different system of organization advisable in order that the local work might be watched more closely.
Consequently at the opening meeting of the present church year, Mr. C. A. Weis, the president of the Men's Council, announced the appointment of three committees, which shall as council members co-operate with and not interfere with tasks which belong peculiarly either to the session or the diaconate.

The deacons will deal exclusively with matters of church finance, and problems growing out of financial matters. The session will keep within its jurisdiction all questions and problems pertaining to the spiritual welfare and progress of the congregation.

The first of the three Council Committees, under the chairmanship of Sam Pasco, is known as the Church Attendance Committee. The two objectives before this committee are as follows:

"To maintain a record of attendance in all departments for the information of the Council.

"To devise means towards increasing attendance both on the part of members, and those outside the church."

The second committee, under the chairmanship of William Fisher, is known as the Church Membership Committee. Its objectives are as follows:

"To be diligently and continuously on the alert for prospects for church membership.

"To work effectively and prayerfully with these prospects until the objective has been obtained."

The third committee, G. V. Patterson, Chairman, is known as the Church Fellowship Committee. It has for its objectives the following:

"To promote a better acquaintance and Christian fellowship among members and a spirit of friendliness towards all visitors.

"To report all social activities of the Church and to have general oversight over the same."

The pastor, Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, D.D., is a member ex-officio of each of these committees.

Orlando, First Church—Rev. J. Blanton Belk, D.D., for nearly five years the beloved pastor of this Church, has taken up his new work in Huntington, W. Va. During his ministry here 935 members were added to our membership, and the Park Lane Presbyterian Church organized with 448 new members. On Easter Sunday, at Doctor Belk's last service as pastor, forty-two people were received on profession of faith.

On April 7, Rev. S. W. Huffer, pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian Church of this city preached, and declared the pulpit formally vacant. Among those serving on the committee are Elder W. R. O'Neal; Deacons, Phil Slemmons and D. E. Fishback.

CHILDREN

THE TOMB ROBBERS

When they carried the man away from the spot where they had been digging, all the Egyptian workmen came with them. That didn't seem strange, because everybody is curious and likes to crowd around when anybody gets hurt. But when they came to Mr. Higgins and demanded their money, Jim Higgins and his friend, Tom Powers, knew that something more than usual was the matter.

"There's the Egyptain boss," said Jim, pointing to a dark, surly-looking man with a red fez on his head. "He appears to be quite excited."

"I don't know what is wrong with you, Hassim," Jim's father was saying. "Ever since we began cutting in toward the side of that hill you have been a hindrance to me rather than a help."

"Mr. Higgins," replied Hassim El Dur. "You are blaming me because the men are superstitious? They say that the King's curse is on this tomb, and if they break into it, all of them will die within the next year."

"What's the King's Curse?" asked Tom in an undertone to Jim.

"That's a belief these Egyptians have about the tombs of their ancient kings. They think there is a curse upon the heads of the ones who open them up for study," answered Jim.

"But I'm not asking you to break into it," protested Mr. Higgins. "All I want you fellows to do is to dig as far as the door. Then I'll do the rest."

"My men won't do it," answered the Egyptian. "Already three men have been hurt, and this one makes the fourth."

"Accidents," replied Jim's father. "Surely they can understand that?"

"Just the same," was the Egyptian's answer. "We don't like it, and so we're quitting."

And they did quit, leaving Mr. Higgins and his small party of Americans alone with the immense cavity they had dug in the sand in an attempt to find the tomb of the second King of Egypt.

"I don't trust that man, Hassim," said Jim, when he was alone with Tom again. "As my father says, there is something funny about the way he is acting. Do you know, Tom, I have a feeling that he doesn't want us to find that tomb!"

"What makes you think so?"

"Well, for one thing, he was all right until we gave him orders to stop digging the big hole and start on the little one, off to the side. That makes me think that the little one is going in the right direction, and for some reason or other, Hassim doesn't want to dig it any deeper."

"Maybe you're right," agreed Tom. "It certainly does look funny."

For a moment both boys were silent. Then Jim said:

"Let's you and I take shovels and keep on digging where his men left off. Perhaps we can find the tomb!"

Tom was willing, so they each found a shovel and began digging. They didn't keep on in exactly the same direction as before, because if their theory was correct, Hassim wouldn't encourage his men to dig toward the tomb. So they chose a spot which seemed to have been neglected by the Egyptian foreman. They worked steadily for an hour—stopping only to wipe the sweat from their faces, and to look at what they had done. In one of these pauses, Tom said:

"How about the King's Curse?"

"What about it?" asked Jim.

"Do you believe in it?"

"Of course, I don't. Do you?"

"Well, I guess I don't at that. But it's spooky to think about it, just the same."

With that remark, he turned back to his work, and at the moment he dug his shovel into the sand again, the accident occurred. Jim yelled out as he felt the ground fall out from under his feet; but Tom was too surprised to yell. They fell about 10 feet, and the sand poured down on top of them until they were almost buried.

"What happened?" sputtered Tom. "The ground gave away, and we're in some sort of a cave. No, Tom, it isn't a cave. It's the tomb!"

Both boys got to their feet and looked around the place into which they had been dropped. There was enough sunlight coming in through the hole for them to see at once that they were not in the tomb, but in a long narrow passageway that disappeared into darkness at both ends.

"It's a tunnel!" exclaimed Jim. "And I'll bet—" He paused for a moment. "I'll bet it leads to the door of the tomb. Come one, Tom, let's look and see."

They struck matches and began to walk down the tunnel, holding the flickering lights ahead of them, so that they could see. Tom didn't like it a bit—it was too much like being in a graveyard at midnight.

Suddenly he caught his breath and stood stock still.

"Voices!" he whispered to Jim. "I thought I heard voices!"

Jim blew out the match and said:

"So did I. Let's go back to the opening and yell for my father."

But before they could turn and run, more than six men came out of blackness and grabbed them. Hassim El Dur was the leader.

"Tie them up," he said, "and leave them in the tunnel. We still have time to reach the river before the men on top find out that the boys are missing."

"How can we tie them up?" asked one of the men. "We haven't got any rope."

"Then put them in the tomb and roll the stone in front of the door."

As three men were carrying out the Egyptian's orders, some others were lifting great chests of gold and silver ornaments and carrying them out of the tomb. When they had taken out all they wanted, they rolled the stone in front of the door and began to carry the loot away.

"Just as I thought," said Jim. "Hassim knew where the tomb was all the time, and now he is robbing it. I never did trust that man."

"Neither did I," answered Tom. "And I don't think much of his brains either. Look! I can see light coming in through the wall! I believe it is only sand and I can put my fist through it!"

But before he could do it, the small hole he had seen suddenly got bigger, and he saw the end of a shovel come through. Then he shouted and so did Jim, and in another minute they were telling Mr. Higgins about Hassim El Dur and his chests full of stolen articles.

"His tunnel must lead to the river!" exclaimed Mr. Higgins. "Quick, men. Let's go to the embankment!"

And sure enough, when they got there, they saw Hassim and his men loading the chests into a boat by which they hoped to make their escape. But Mr. Higgins persuaded them, at the point of a gun, that they had better give themselves up, which they did.

"Whatever is found inside that tomb," said Mr. Higgins, "belongs to science. That is why Jim, my son, and Tom, his friend, have done such a service to the world in catching these robbers. As for you, Hassim, how did you ever expect to get away with thievery of this nature?"

"I would have gotten away with it all right if it wasn't for—for the King's Curse!"

And when Jim heard that, he looked at Tom, and Tom couldn't help but smile. He was thinking that the King's Curse was just like a bad wind. It had to be pretty evil to blow nobody some good.

REV. JAMES S. WEBSTER, M.D.

James S. Webster, M.D., for the past 27 years of the Presbyterian Church of Hancock, Md., died in hospital in Martinsburg, W. Va., at noon, February 28, aged 58 years, 8 months and 6

Webster was born in the town of Peterhead, Scotland, and was educated in Scotland and England, receiving medical education, which was received at the University of Maryland, from which he graduated in the same year he went to China, under the auspices of the English Presbyterian Church, as a medical missionary.

His health failing there, he returned to this country in 1900 to be with his father and mother, Rev. W. J. Webster, who were located at Capon Springs, Va. There he met and married Miss Sarah in 1902 he was called to the Hancock Church to begin a faithful and successful ministry on which was terminated by his recent death.

Webster is survived by his wife and two children, Ethel T., a member of the faculty of the High School, and James W., who is engaged in the business of Winchester, Va., and a sister, Mrs. Burden. He was buried in the family lot in Hanover, Va., on Monday, March 4, the school and local business being suspended for several hours for the service, which was attended by several out of town ministers, as well as local pastors.

He has evidenced the gentleness and kindness, especially to the poor as was witnessed in the life and death of this servant of God. He did much medical and ministerial duties, and was a charge except for the actual cost of medical services necessary to know him intimately to truly appreciate his fineness and worth of his character.

WILLIAM HENRY DOWNS

Resolution of Respect on the death of the Senior Member of Providence Presbyterian Church Adopted by the Session

On February 11, 1928, Mr. William Henry Downs, member of Providence Presbyterian Church, departed and passed that bourne from which none return. We are sure that he entered into that rest which is prepared for the people of God for he loved His score years Mr. Downs served Providence as an Elder. He was a wise ruler, safe counsellor, faithful and loyal to his Church and the Kingdom on earth.

In every congregation we find one or more men recognized as super-men in the life of the Church who hold up to the world a high standard of character and righteous integrity; men whose exalted piety and consistent Christian living make them a blessing to the Church. Mr. Downs was such a man in Providence Church. Since his death at the age of 84 years, one of the oldest members of the Church said of him, "No home in which there was trouble or sorrow or need, was too humble for Billy Downs to enter in the ministry of service as a Christian or neighbor." Such a tribute is a rich heritage to his family and Church. His example still lives.

Therefore, Resolved, by the Session of the Church, that in the death of Mr. Downs, our Church has lost not only her oldest official but one who was as a shining light and a tower of strength in his day and generation, attesting by his consistent Christian living the power of the Gospel of Christ to give light and strength through the Church to all mankind.

Resolved, Second, That this memorial of respect to our brother officer be inscribed on the Church records and a copy sent to his family and the Press with request for publication.

Adopted by rising vote, April 6, 1929.
