Introduction:

1. "Angel unaware," by Dale Evans Rogers, illustrates how death of one we love, for whom we have done much, can point us to deeper understanding and better way of life. Reading it, one can almost see the mother living, suffering, dying, talking with God, as the child does so.

2. The Creator of all that is, God in the flesh as Jesus Christ, lived, suffered, died, talked with God, as God's human children do. In so doing He gave an example of earthly life that is supreme. In so doing He made it possible for believers to be "alive to God" in 2 ways:

(1) Through Christ we may become aware of God and come into His presence, as one becomes aware of a new, interesting and seemingly all-powerful science through a noted professor or scientist.

(2) Through the divine Christ-fellowship, or through spiritual birth, one may come to the specific notice of God as God's son in heavenly immortality, much as a worthy, loving, human father notices his newborn child ~~in~~ and in loving care takes him home and into the family for all the earthly life of the family.

3. To follow these 2 great christian ideas as stated and presented in our text and scripture, is our task.

I. "Alive to God" implies seeking to share Christ's life.

1. The child who has reached even the smallest degree of perception can quickly note and react to pleasure of displeasure on the part of mother and father. He shares, as it were, their pain and suffering and is much afflicted or grieved by the death.

2. The Christian is likewise sensistive to the fate of Christ when He was on earth, and in his love for Christ suffers vicariously (by substitute or in sympathy) with Him.

3. This attitude, or suffering and death in heart, brings a new realization, a resurrection like Christ's, a presence of God in one's heart. v. 5.

4. As the grieving parent or child resolves to right disappointments & injustices to the suffering or dead, the Christian resolves to put away for Christ the crucified all that Christ would want him to put away. Christ disapproves sin, so the Christian doesn't really want to sin.

5. v. 6 & v. 7.

6. Death is a disappointing, meaningless end. Just to "die to sin," to stop wrongdoing, is pretty poor stuff. A positive way is needed. What, then, follows?

7. v. 8. To live with Him means activity, compassion, devotion to duty, love of God & neighbor, courage.

8. To live with Him also means:
v. 9. Eternal life beyond sin and the grave.

II. "Alive to God" implies God's awareness of the Christian.

1. A child sharing a large & varied lot of experiences with a parent over a long period of time becomes much like that parent in attitudes, and also dearer to the parent.

2. A christian living close to the heart of Christ is also close to God, and knows in his heart that God knows him and loves him.

3. v. 10, applies to the christian today.

4. Not perfection, but not a strong desire to do wrong, because stronger awareness of God's will is present, not just awareness of own will. Truly, alive to God, in both senses.

Conclusion: x.

1. v. 11 (text): "You also must consider yourself dead to sin and alive to God in Christ Jesus."

2. Because of Christ (or in Christ Jesus) a christian will feel himself dead to wrongdoing and alive to God -
