Re: Annual report, 2007

The year 2007 has been filled with interesting days for ministry at the Divinity School Library, Duke Memorial UMC, and beyond. I continue to believe that God calls me into ministry, and to value the conference's appointment to my work as Director of the Divinity School Library.

I preached once (at a Divinity School worship service), had no baptisms or weddings, and served the sacrament of Holy Communion two times. I taught Sunday school classes three times.

My work in the library has been exciting and interesting. I have been fully involved in the faculty of the school as well as in professional meetings of librarians locally and nationally; during fall 2007, I serve as secretary to the faculty, taking minutes at its meetings. I continue to chair the Endowment Fund Committee for the American Theological Library Association, a rewarding job.

My involvement in Duke Memorial has continued. I continue to coordinate the Interfaith Hospitality Network ministries (four weeks in 2007), to sing in the adult choir, and to participate actively in the life of the congregation. I also am a member and secretary of the Durham Interfaith Hospitality Network board.

My continuing education in the past year has been varied. I participated in the American Theological Library Association conference in Philadelphia, and attended many lectures and events in Duke University, including several events related to the use of technology in teaching and learning.

Thank you for your interest in my ministry. I'm sorry to miss the Charge Conference, but I will be in Atlanta doing SACS accreditation reviews for three seminaries.
