Dear Bob:

This is just to express a very sincere word of gratitude for your allowing us to share in the Harris Seminar this week-end. It has already meant a lot to us and I am sure it will continue to be important for us.

I think you know that as a professional critic I have lots of misgivings, as you probably do, about some of the things that developed; but these criticisms are not the most important thing I am concerned about. What is important is that people were really responding humanly to each other and I appreciate what you have done to make this possible. Your sermon on Sunday morning was brilliant and very much to the point.

Very sincerely yours,
