The Trinity Avenue Presbyterian Church, one block away at N. Gregson St., was the direct outgrowth of a Sunday School for children of mill workers which began onsite at the mill and met briefly in a house on Washington St. Prior to 1898, a frame chapel, called the Pearl Mill Chapel, was built at the southeast corner of N. Duke and W. Trinity. By 1913, this congregation and structure had become known as the 2nd Presbyterian Church.

It appears that the church may have been moved offsite to Gregson and Trinity in 1917.
