ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold and the Household of Faith:

For sometime I have been impressed to write you, from a spirit of love I trust, and duty, and acknowledge to you my gratefulness and thankfulness to God for the many manifestations of love and forbearance towards me. Indeed the joys and pleasures have been so many and great since I have been with you that it has brought me into an indebtedness that I can never repay. I have nothing to offer but my poor vile self, this sinful nature clings to me wherever I go. I am still a sinner saved by grace if saved at all Jesus is my only hope of heaven and immortal glory.

It is in much weakness and fear that I attempt to write you, yet I love you and would be glad to tell my appreciation of your forbearance and tender love shown me, how with all my unworthiness, faults and imperfections you have sheltered, clothed, fed and comforted me. So many times I have been to you feeling destitute, forsaken, despairing of hope, tempted by an evil spirit to believe there is no reality in my profession, being hedged in by the impenetrable clouds of Providence and blind unbelief, ye took me in, spoke words of comfort and good cheer, bid me partake of your solemn feasts, and go on my way rejoicing.

I have been blessed to minole with the Lord's people very much this summer and they have lavished their kindness and manifested such love for me so abundantly until it distresses me at times to know that I have nothing to give in return. It is indeed humiliating to be brought to acknowledge just indebtedness without a farthing to pay.

I can only in a very weak way add my testimony to the love of God and Father of mercy for poor fallen sinners who gave His life freely and fully for His bride, cancelling with His his precious blood all her indebtedness.

By this love and mercy we are brought into a sacred nearness and dearness to each other, and the most binding obligation to serve one another in meekness, gentleness and loving forbearance, striving for those things which make for peace and stands aloof and apart from the idols and vain things of this world, living by the faith of the Son of God and trusting Him who is the author and finisher of it. If we do not live in that faith how are we to prove that we possess it.

There is nothing too hard for the Lord, and if we wait upon Him deliverance is sure, if we come to where two ways meet trouble on either side, He is the same God as of old when ancient Israel was delivered out of Egypt and brought to a place of refuge and safety, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He alone is able to separate the good from the bad, truth from error, the just from the unjust, and has declared that his word "is quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Is he not then a perfect Savior? The great power and glory and beauty in the gospel of the Son of God is to whole sinners is preached a whole Savior, then fear not, beloved ones to trust Him and cast every care upon Him, for He has promised never to leave or forsake thee.

All the principles of the flesh dwell in us and we are children of wrath even as others hence this great warfare, when we would do good, evil is present.

The apostle prayed thrice that the thorn, sin, might be removed, but the Savior says, "My grace is sufficient for thee." Sin and wickedness is strong, but Christ and His righteousness is stronger and is conqueror over all things. We are commanded to love one another, and if we love another for Christ's sake we will endure much, and sacrifice our pleasures if needful and abstain from things that are hurtful or offensive, for "charity suffereth long and is kind in deed there is nothing that this love will not enable us to bear, if necessary for the welfare of Zion.

And we are taught that there is no power that is able to separate us from this love: then it is impossible for the Lord's people here, to be separated in the unity, and openness of spirit, when under the reign and influence of God's love.

Strife and confusion and dissensions and discord arise from the fleshly or carnal nature, this bondage of sin which clings so persistently to us all through life is so misleading and which the great apostle so often warns us to watch. To the Galatian brethren he says, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

It is not the law of eternal condemnation we are to fear, that is done away with when Christ reveals Himself, and is the one altogether lovely, but it is the law of the flesh and sin for the same apostle says, "I find then a law that when I would do good, evil is present with me." "I delight in the law of God after the inward man." But I see another law in my members warring against the law of my mind and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members."

O! the terror of this indwelling sin to a child of God; I do rejoice that the great inspired apostle Paul wrote and left on record so much concerning this law of sin, as well as the victory over it all through Jesus Christ the mighty conqueror.

O! glorious Redeemer, how wonderful thy goodness, mercy and judgments, they are past finding out, the rich, grand and sublime truths of Jehovah cannot be attained unto by man, and only when it pleases Him are we permitted by an eye of faith to view him in glory, while on earth through a glass darkly, but when we behold Him we shall see Him as He is and be like Him.

Unworthily,
BETTIE G. WILLIAMS.

Fremont, N. C., Sept. 7, 1907.
Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I feel like you have an experience of grace. In fact I have not a doubt but that you have; and that is why I feel you are a competent judge to tell whether I have an experience. I am wrought up this morning over the thought whether it is an experience of grace or not. I have suffered severe pain for the last week or more, with all that, I have had many trials and temptations. At times I felt like they were more than

I could bear. I became irritable and sinned and I was made to cry out, O, Lord, forgive, I am nothing, and worse than nothing. I would often think all these things were against me. O, that I had never been born. Nobody's sorrows like unto my sorrows. I did not feel the strong arm underneath me. That is why I failed in the battle. It takes the Lord Jesus to fight my battles. When I am left alone I fail. I know that in me, that is in my flesh dwells no good thing, therefore, I hate my own life.

I often feel like if I were a child of God I would not have so many sore trials and afflictions. To my mind it is to show us our weakness and His power, so it is for our good and to His glory. If we receive not chastisements we are bastards, and not sons or heirs. So in all these hope springs up, and we are made to glory in tribulation. For tribulation worketh patience, patience experience, experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed. I do feel there is a sincere desire in my heart to want to live a Christian life, and to the honor and glory of God. I do not want tribulation, and yet I am praying for tribulation, and rejoice in tribulation. I am a strange being.

Brother Gold, you are so useful and comforting in every way. It looks like you are a blessing on earth. I feel like I am no good in the world, and a burden to my family. I often feel it would be better for me to depart, and be at rest. But God knows best.

Brother Frank Smith has a very sweet and comforting piece in the Landmark. How I do love to visit him, and to see his lovely, Christ-like face and to hear him talk of Jesus. And how I do sympathize with him in his afflictions and lonely hours. Elder Jimmie Woodard, I would like so much to hear from him. I think of him often. It does seem to me some time I can almost hear his voice. I often think of many grand sermons he has preached to me, and a great many times he has comforted me by the fireside.

Brother Gold, I would be glad to see you and hear you preach, and talk; you have been a great comfort to me. Remember me to Sister Gold. Remember me and mine at a throne of grace.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
MRS. FOREST YELVERTON.

I have read, with no little interest, R. M. Farthing's article, published in the Biblical Recorder, of the 6th instant. I have carefully pondered this writing because it deals with a subject vital to the progress of the kingdom of God. The important theme with which it, in fact, deals, but somewhat superficially, is this: The relation of salvation or grace to good works. The relation subsisting between salvation and good works is not very clearly marked in this communication. Indeed, it hardly touches the hem of the garment of salvation by grace through faith. This treatise professes to believe in salvation by grace alone, but taking hold of the doctrine somewhat like the little boy of the fable took hold of the thistle. This article starts out with this question: "Does man have a part to do in his salvation?" This question is answered in the affirmative. In other words, this query is answered in such wise as to teach that the natural man has ability to take the first step in the matter of his salvation. The writer labors to substantiate this theory by this scripture, to wit: Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure. Phil 2:12. The doctrine which R. M. Farthing deduces from this scripture is this: Salvation is man's, if he works for it. His argument is based upon this premise, hence his concluions are away from the system of salvation by grace. Clearly, if man must work for salvation, it is not of grace, and if by grace, then it is no more of works; otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then it is no more grace; otherwise work is no more work, Rom. 11:6. Salvation is either of grace or of works. It cannot be of both systems. It is not part of works and part of grace. Such a theory is wholly at war with the Bible doctrine, to-wit, For by grace ye are saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest any man should boast. Eph. 2:8. If man has a part in his salvation upon the ground of his work or earning, then evidently he merits, he purchases his salvation. Such a theory frustrates the grace of God, makes Christ die in vain, and renders his finished work a nonentity. Emphatically, the least shred of works, either legal or evangelical, cannot, as a basis, ground, or reason of man's salvation, be considered in the system of salvation by grace through faith at all. Such a doctrine robs God of his glory, and exalts corrupt humanity. This false idea has been the bane of the kingdom of truth for ages; and is still the most subtle and deadly enemy with which it has to do. Notwithstanding this fact, the false, Judaistic theory of self-righteousness is so deeply imbedded in the corrupt human heart that it is perpetually lifting up its serpent-like head against the doctrine of God.

There is an inveterate prejudice in the corrupt fleshly heart of man against this doctrine, and the world, the flesh and the devil take advantage of this prejudice to overthrow the throne of truth set up in the hearts of God's little ones. Let the doctrine of salvation by grace be brought out in bold relief. Don't be afraid to swing out on it. This doctrine is able to hold up the churches of God. No other is. This doctrine is the ponderous weapon with which we can put to flight the armies of the aliens. It is mighty to the pulling down the strongholds of sin. Let us become rooted and grounded in the faith of salvation by grace alone. This is the rock upon which all wise men build. All other ground is sinking sand. That salvation is by grace through faith, from the beginning to the end of it, is the clear and emphatic declaration of the holy scriptures. The beginning, the middle, and the end of salvation is because of the sovereign, everlasting and sure grace of Almighty God. Their glorious salvation includes the electing love of God the Father; the redeeming love of Christ the Savior; the regenerating and sanctifying love of God the Holy Spirit. Their salvation is all of a piece. There is no break in it. It started in eternity; bridges all time; and returns to the throne of God. Minerva like it dropped from the hand of God complete. If you would find an epitome of this excellent salvation read Roman 8:29-30. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son that he might be the first born among many brethren; moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. In these two verses of Holy Writ, we have the golden chain of salvation by grace. This eternal chain has four indissoluble links in it, viz.: 1. Redemption or election of grace. 2. Effectually calling or regeneration by the Holy Spirit. 3. Justification with full and free pardon through the faith of God's elect. Glorification, including sanctification or final perseverance of all the saints. This is the long and short of it. Grace supplies all of it, cause, conditions, and what not. Salvation in its conditions, means, and process in the work of the divine God because of His sovereign grace. It is a free gift and work of God to the elect, in the elect, and for the elect. And the elect are not as R. M. Farthing in his article asserts. All who claim to be Christians. God, according to his eternal purpose of grace, elected, predestinated, chose to complete salvation, rebellious sinful and corrupt men, out of the fallen race of Adam, and "not all who claim to be Christian." If none only those who claim to be Christians are included in the election of grace we might as well stop building church houses, stop using means to instruct in gospel light and all such work. God elected sinners to salvation, not Christians, and not because of any foresene faith or good works as Arminianism and Semi Pelagian vanities teach; but of his free and unmerited favor given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. Again, it is not true as R. M. Farthing in his treatise states, "That the elect cannot have the assurance of their election." If they cannot have the assurance of their election, then the Apostle Peter was wrong in exhorting immature Christians make their calling and election sure, 2 Peter 1:10. They should seek this, for the assurance of faith is the assurance of election. They do have it, for the Spirit beareth witness, proof, evidence, with our spirit that we are the children of God. Rom. 8:16. Now good works are in fullest accord with the doctrine of salvation by grace. The salvation subsisting between salvation and works is that of cause and effect, Grace or life, which imparts salvation, is the cause; the good works or the effects are fruit. The good tree of grace will produce good fruit. The tree is not made good because it bears good fruit, because the root, trunk or branches are good. Every tree that the heavenly Father planteth bears this fruit as readily as water floweth adown the hill. Similarly, the child of God bringeth forth good works, not in order to be saved but because he is saved. As it is a scientific impossibility for a corrupt tree to bring forth good fruit, so it is a spiritual impossibility for an unregenerate one to produce good works. Had he the inclination, I will grant for arguments sake, his work, while in a natural unregenerate state, would not be accepted of God for the sacrifices of the wicked are an abomination in His sight. They that are in the flesh cannot please God. The works or all such characters are bad works. Utterly impossible it is for dead men to walk, talk, see or hear. The unregenerate soul is dead in trespasses and sin and must be quickened, or made spiritually alive before he can work. This quickening the Almighty God does because of His sovereign grace. With this mighty operation, the dead natural man has nothing nor can have anything to do. The spiritually dead soul is utterly passive in and before this great change. After this divine quickening man has power to act spiritually and not until then. He is created in Christ Jesus, not because of good works, nor for good works; but unto or in order to good works. The good works are the results, evidence, fruits of this spiritual creation. The one created anew in Christ Jesus has salvation virtually, essentially, eternally. Such souls have salvation in the embryo and a virtual consummation thereof, made certain, sure to all the elect in the great covenant of grace. In no sense does the salvation of a single soul depend upon his works. The incontrovertible doctrine of salvation by grace sweeps away every vestige of works, either legal or evangelical, to the four winds. Not the least shadow of a remnant of works as a reason, ground or cause of salvation enters into the covenant of grace. Works are absolutely ruled out in that sense. We walk in newness of the spirit. We do good work because we are alive and because we love God, not because we thereby merit or buy salvation. We are exhorted to good works simply because they are the law of our growth in grace, and because they glorify our God. They are urged upon these grounds only. The position herein taken in the attitude of the Apostle Paul, the great expounder of the gospel of grace. The relation of salvation and works is clearly and strongly set forth in all his epistles, and he authoritatively commands to maintain and contend for this relation. He nowhere exhorts saints to good works only upon the ground of the salvation they already possess. Note the following scripture in proof of this point: 1 Thes. 2:2; 2 Thes. 2:13-15; Rom. 6:2; 2 Cor. 5:14; Phil. 1:21; Phil. 2:12-13. Phil., 2:12-13, we have the most precise appeal to saints to do good works. This text, "Wherefore my beloved, as ye have always obeyed not as in my presence, but much more in my absence work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure," is addressed wholly to saints in Christ Jesus. This scripture in no sense applies to the unregenerate. I have heard it so applied however. The apostles in their epistles are exhorting those who have an evident token of salvation, and that of God. Phil. 1:28. He also tells them that he is confident that he which began a good work in them will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ, Phil. 1:6. He moreover, in the text above referred to urges them to work out their own salvation. It is very evident, then, both from these scriptures and the foregoing argument that these Phillipians had salvation. Now he is exhorting these saints to work out a salvation which they already have. Surely he cannot be exhorting them to work for salvation, for that they clearly possess, but simply work out, manifest, demonstrate, prove what which

God has, and is working in them.

It is only another way of telling saints to grow in the grace and knowledge of God, or run the race set before them. This they can now do, for God has made them alive in quickening them and will continue to work within them to will and to do for their complete sanctification and glorification.

In Elder Farthing's article, the word, "salvation" and the verb, "work out" are not at all used in accordance with the doctrine of grace.

Farthing's exegesis and application of these terms are decided by work, for his use thereof makes salvation depend upon the work of man. Salvation is applied to us, as we have manifestly shown, in regeneration before we can work at all. The whole of salvation is made over to the elect in the eternal will of God, and becomes actually and essentially theirs when applied to them through faith in virtue of the obedience and righteousness of Christ Jesus. Now, if this is the gospel way of salvation the expression "work out" does not refer to the obtaining of salvation, but to the attaining of complete spiritual development. Elder Farthing says: "It will not do to say that the salvation here referred to is something you already have." Why not? You must admit that the salvation here referred to is something you already have or do violence to scripture and reason. It is true that the field of salvation already exists, but a dead soul can not work in, nor out that field; and when once put in this field by the Holy Ghost, he is in it forever, works or no works. The expression, "Fear and Trembling," is not rightly interpreted and used by Elder Farthing either. The apostle does not endeavor to excite within us fear and dread of losing our salvation; but rather inculcates reverence, submission and obedience, by this expression: he does not urge us to use every effort for salvation, lest we lose it. He urges us to reverently, submissively work out, make manifest, prove our own salvation. True it is that power is all around us, but it also is equally true that a dead man cannot use this power. Things suited to a natural man in the natural sphere do not apply to dead unregenerate souls. The natural realm and the spiritual world are two distinct worlds. As it is necessary for the natural man to be born into the natural world before he can use the means of natural life; so it is just as essential for the dead soul to be born into the kingdom of God before he can receive the food of spiritual substance. Though the water is upon the mountains, a dead man cannot turn the faucet, adjust the pipes or drink the sparkling liquid. Though the balmy air is all around dead men cannot throw open the windows; nor could they breathe the invigorating draughts, if the windows were all open. Elder Farthing's reference to the rich young man and Zaccheus is not in accordance with salvation without merit either. The rich young man giving his riches to the poor was not a condition of his obtaining salvation, but rather a test of the condition within him. The conditions of this young man's salvation, and every other souls for that matter, is repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus. The conditions are internal not external. The external works are only the evidence of the condition within one. The condition, conviction, repentance, faith and what not are in wrought by the Holy Ghost. In the process of salvation, the causes, conditions, are the mighty operations of the Holy Spirit solely for and upon the basis of the covenant of grace. He surely is not, at the least, very deeply rooted in the doctrine of grace. But Elder Farthing is not the only one at sea on these things. The whole modern religions are impregnated with this deadly mias-

ma. With Mr. Drummond I would say "that a thousand modern pulpits every seventh day are preaching the doctrine of spontaneous generation. The finest and best of recent poetry is colored with this same error. Spontaneous generation is the leading theology of the modern religious or irreligious world, and much of the most serious and cultivated writings of today devotes itself to earnest preaching of this impossible gospel. The current conception of the Christian religion is short—the conception which is held not only popularly but by men of culture—is founded upon a view of its origin which if it were true would render the whole scheme abortive.

Written for truth's sake,

J. A. SHAW.

Elder L. H. Hardy:

Dear Brother—I do enjoy reading the Landmark and your writings upon certain passages of scripture.

I heard you preach at the Association at Flatty Creek last October. Dear brother, I would be glad for you to give your views through the Landmark on Acts 8:27, and on Gen. 9:25. The reason why I ask so particularly I have had an argument with a man about the negro. Do you believe that Noah put a curse on Canaan? And is that where the negro sprang from? And do you believe the negro has a soul to be saved or lost as much so as the white man and the Ethiopian? The eunuch, I believe, wa a negro, but I want your views on it.

From your affectionate brother,

T. C. WEST.

I will try to comply as best I may with the above request, but feel my lack of historical information as well as spiritual weakness.

I find by teaching that there is a difference in the Ethiopian and the Canaanite. They were both of the descendants of Ham, son of Noah.

The Ethiopians descended from Cush, son of Ham, and the Canaanites descended from Canaan, son of Ham. The Canaanites settled in the land of Palestine or Canaan and were the people who were destroyed by Joshua and David. However, they were not all destroyed. Some remained to be thorns in the sides of Israel to try them.

Cush seems to have been Ham's eldest son, and he or his descendants settled Ethiopia. Cush in his name or the name of the country in Hebrew; Ethiopia in Greek, and Eltaush is their native name. The name signifies the land of the sunburnt or black. The name Ham, means black also. No doubt but that all of the dark races, the Chinese, the Japanese, the Indian, the Malays, the negro, etc., came from Ham. The negro, it appears to me, is the proper Ethiopian. Simon Zelotes, one of twelve and one of the eleven faithful ones was a Canaanite, and therefore of the descendants of Ham. The Ethiopian eunuch doubtless was a negro. The Holy Ghost first recognized him as having a soul to be saved and washed him in the blood of Christ. This brought him to Jerusalem to worship the true God, the God of Jesus. The Jews recognized him in their worship. This proves that they believed him to be a human being and an accountable being. This he could not be without a soul and spirit. He must be a full man as other men are or he is no man at all.

When he was going on his way home he shows his interest in the teachings of the Holy Ghost by reading and inquiring therein. He was perplexed as Christians often are, to know the meaning of God's word. The same Holy Spirit who had given that word sent an interpreter there. Phillip came by that same spirit and preached Jesus just as Isaiah had done seven hundred years before and that negro, whose heart the Lord had prepared, heard the word, confessed his faith and asked baptism of at the hands of this Jewish (white man) preacher. He, in answer to the faith, the fruit of which he had tasted, unhesitatingly went down with him into the water and baptized (dipped) him in that certain water. The spirit of God recognized the act by giving the eunuch joy in the heart to make him rejoice in his way while He took Phillip to an altar place where he should preach the gospel.

This is scriptural testimony that the negro is not a beast but a man just as we are and that he is accountable to the same Judge, must pass through the same judgment, and be saved by the same Lord Jesus Christ. To deny this is a religious heresy. Then it is unreasonable and dangerous in our government. If the negro is not a man why do we bring him into our courts? If a horse kicks and kills a man no one thinks of indicting that horse because he is not an intelligent being. Will we let the negro go free as we would the horse or other beast? If he is a beast why not?

Yes, my brother, the negro is just as much a human being as you or I, and he is just as accountable to the same God who made him and us all in the same federal head. They are a people, they have kindred, they have language, a tongue and can learn others as well as we can and can speak them.

The Hamites appear to have been first in building cities and founding governments. Egypt is an example of their governments and of their mechanical genius. They were the first to organize deep and hidden societies from which Free Masonry and every other secret society sprang. They owe all due praise to the negro and their lighter colored brethren for origin and not those who builded the temple in Jerusalem nor to Enoch the 7th from Adam.

My brother, I cannot tell you the effect the curse of Noah had on Canaan. We see that his descendants settled on the very land that God had given to Abraham and his seed so that they had to be nearly all destroyed before that land could be settled by the rightful owner.

I imagine that it was something like this country when the first white visitors came here. They found the same people here, or the descendants of those whom the Lord has sent here to possess this land and the Indians as well as the Canaanites had to be nearly all killed out.

Thus the blessings of civilization and the peace of nations come through Japheth and Shem. Through Shem Christ came, and Japheth is dwelling in the tents of Shem just according to the prophetic blessings which was spoken by Noah.

I hope you will understand my meaning and that God may bless you to love and praise Him.

Your brother in Hope,

L. H. HARDY,
Redsville, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother Gold—I wrote you an article on the reception of my wife in the church. I failed to ask you if you saw fit to publish it to send me a copy as a matter of future reference. Now if you will allow space I would like to write out a few thoughts on the language of Paul, "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." 1 Cor. 2:2. Paul was a nurse as well as a teacher and a preacher, and he was qualified as such to preach and teach the things of the kingdom of God. The church was already divided as he said, over preachers and it is sad to see the church go apart on preachers doctrine or order, or from any other cause. He knows this and as a lover of the church and its services, its union, he used the only divinely given remedy to heal the breaches and bring their minds back to the one central thought "Christ." This is the balm in Gilead and the true Physician there. Paul therefore determined to know nothing else among them. We know that when brethren go apart if they can just have time to think and the proper object is presented the trouble ends. What but that Christ, their life, their light, their hope, their joy, their salvation? I have been misjudged by brethren. Once old Brother Thorne of Baltimore, when I visited the first time the Eastern Associations met some one who had attended one of the meetings and asked if I preached on predestination, as though I had made a hobby of it which is a sad mistake. I have witnesses both of Montgomery and of Andersonville, Ga., after serving these churches fifteen or twenty years who will tell you it was not my theme. No more than three times during my whole ministry at each church did I preach exclusively on that subject, and others would bear witness of the same. Having also learned from the Apostle and I hope taught of God that this is God's own sovereign remedy not only for our sins but all the ills that we are subject to in this life the name and authority, life and spirit of Jesus is for the edification of the saints. And I hope I do know, as I am led to see the fullness of Jesus that he is all we need for time and eternity, and if we should preach every day and every night and preach two hours each time, and preach for ninety years we could only tell a part of his abounding perfections which dwell in him. Who has ever read his wonderful sermon on the Mount, so replete with the highest order of wisdom, bringing out the glorious will of God and unfolding the glorious principles of the words of him who taught as never man taught. I have preached, as I hope, guided by the spirit, and utterance offered, for three hours and when I closed I could see how far short I came of preaching the fullness and abounding perfections which shine in His illustrious character in the man God and the God man. Emmanuel, God with us. John wrote that if all that Jesus had said and done should be written that the world itself could not contain the books. They told me at the theological seminary that this was Hyperbole, an extravagant expression. I don't believe such bosh, because there is an eternity and an infinite God, and all could never be put in books. I take God's testimony as the truth.

The height, the depth and breadth which is infinite sustains John's testimony to the child of God who has the true faith of God's elect. What else can we know among the brethren for their good and our comfort and the glory of God, but Christ, the anointed of God, our high Priest, Redeemer Savior, Captain, Lord, King, only potentate King of kings and Lord of lords, our Head, Husband, Friend, elder Brother, yea, our all and in all. Well may we say like Paul in view of him, who is sufficient for these things? But for the answer we might despair. "Our sufficiency is of God who has made us able ministers of the New Testament, not of the letter but of the Spirit; for the letter killeth but the spirit maketh alive." Christ God's anointed or the High Priest of our profession who entered in once for us and secured our redemption, and having purged our sins sat down on the right hand of the majesty on high, Christ that blessed name that brings comfort to the soul, God's elect servant to serve for us and to make intercession for us at His right hand. Christ stands for everything that is high and holy and lovely and great and marvelous and glorious to the whole household of faith. What more do we need? He is our advocate at God's right hand, our counsellor, to see to our matters both in law and grace. He was faithful in life, faithful in death, and will be faithful in glory. The child Christ Jesus, the Man Christ Jesus, the God Christ Jesus.

Excellency means Christ, glory means Christ, salvation means Christ. Oh, what a boundless theme, my heart and my affections go out after Him while I sit and wonder and worship Him that liveth and was dead and behold he is alive forever more, and has the keys of death and hell, crucified for us. It was in the great economy of grace, and was needful in the infinite wisdom of God, He must suffer the ignominious death of the cross, must bleed and die, and be buried and rise again for us.

Wonder, oh, heavens, and be astonished, oh, earth, at the marvelous work and wisdom of God in our salvation. Oh, may we indeed know what His crucifixion means to us. May we rejoice to be accounted worthy to suffer with him here that we may appreciate His glorious reign hereafter is my sincere desire. God grant us the true vision of Him that walketh in the midst of the golden candle sticks, holding the seven stars in his right hand.

Yours in hope,

WM. LIVELY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

I will this evening make an attempt to write and tell you some of my past life if God will help me. About six years ago I had a dream. I was at one of my brother's homes, and all of his family were going to the association, and my wife was gone to her father's and I was alone.

It seemed to me like I was in some low valley and was going to die and go down to hell. It seemed like I was sinking in a marshy place, and these words came to me, "Put one of your feet on a rock and the other on a cup of flowing honey, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against you." I awoke from my slumber rejoicing. I could not help from shedding tears of joy, and then I thought that it was only a dream and that was nothing, and I would not notice that, for I did not want to tell anyone, and I did not. I was uneasy. I did not want my friends to know anything about it. I enjoyed card playing, and I knew if I said anything about it they would laugh at me. I went on as usual but could not forget my dream. After playing cards I would go off and try to pray and promise to never again would I play, and when we would get together they would say, come let us have a game and I would say no, then they would laugh at me and say he is no good. I would go off and shed tears and ask God to have mercy on me, a poor sinner. I kept on in this way and my wife asked me what was my trouble and I would say nothing. She would insist on me, and ask me if I was not insulted, and at last I told her and that seemed to give me some relief, and later she joined the church and I could hardly keep from offering myself. I went on in this way until my good wife was taken sick and died and I thought that I soon would go too, and all I asked of God was to have mercy on me, a poor sinner. Two years ago I was mowing and broke my machine, and Mr. W. T. Broadway had an appointment at Lexington and I wanted to go, so I told my brother I was compelled to go to Lexington and have my machine fixed. I wanted to hear Mr. Broadway preach, and I never will forget his text: "On this rock I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." It seemed like some one had told him my feelings. It looked like he set his eyes on me and no one else. I thought I could not keep from shedding tears. I did not want any one to see me, and all at once I burst out and I could scarcely keep from shouting. I never have enjoyed such a time. I wanted to shake everybody's hand and that night I spent the night with Mr. Gallimore and in the room were three preachers, James Monstes, W. T. Broadway and Mr. Gallimore and when I lay down I thought that I was too mean to stay with such good people as they were, and I never spent such a restless night as I did that night and sometimes I tried to pray to God to have mercy on me, a sinner, and if I were fit to join the church show me that night, and if I could get any evidence I would offer to the church the next day. Miss Jennie Foster was to be baptised, and I wanted to be baptised too, and some time in the night I went off to sleep and when I awoke I thought I was compelled to die. I was choking to death it seemed to me, and my mother appeared to me smiling and called my name saying "You will never be any better until you join the church," and I could not speak. I promised God if He would have mercy on me and spare me until the next day I would offer at the River, and let the church be the judge, and I could get my breath as good as ever, and the next morning. Mr. Gallmore called me for breakfast. He said to me, "Come over brother," and called my name. I never had anything to get away with me so. I cannot tell my feelings I had rather he had slighted me and not asked me at all, and Mr. Broadway says, "He is not a brother yet, but will be," then said, "he is but has not manifested it yet." and I asked Mr. Broadway to ride with me to the river, and I talked to him, and he advised me to join the church, and I promised him that I would. I then thought that I would read some in the Bible and I did not know where to read, and I just opened and the first thing I read was, "Be not deceived," and I said I never intend to join any church, and I tried to go back to my old acquaintance and they seemed like they did not enjoy my company, and I am not fit to be in church. I made up my mind to go where there is not anybody that knows me, and if possible where there are no old Baptist preachers. They seem to condemn me. Sometimes I go for relief but none do I find, and then sometimes I quit going to preaching, thinking I can forget my troubles and live like I once did. I am no enjoyment to myself or any one else, cannot live or cannot die. I have tried to pray and think sometimes if I do not quit making such attempts I will die and go to hell. I try to quit. I stop my mouth and hold my teeth together and every thought is have mercy on me, and last week I had another dream. I thought I was going along and I came to a pine tree, and the tree about four feet from the ground, had four branches grown out, and every one went straight up and I went to the tree to pray and mother appeared again, and I saw my grave as plain as I ever saw any natural grave, and something said to me "this tree represents the four faces," and I cannot get any understanding out of the last dream at all, so if it will not be any burden on you after reading this this please give me your idea on all I have written you.

I will not give you my name nor address, if you wish to answer this, spare a space in the good Landmark and I will see it. I cannot tell half with pencil. I wanted to get a talk with you at the Association but could not conveniently.

A FRIEND.

... . . . REMARKS.

The tree represents the Lord Jesus—the four faces set forth the coming of God's people from the four corners of the earth, North, South, East and West to the salvation of the tree of Life.

Our unknown friend seems to have had experience of the rock that is solid, the sure foundation stone, and has tasted of the honey that flows from that rock.

He has attempted to hide or disown the Lord's work, and the Lord does not own him before his Father and before men. "For he that confesses Jesus before men will Jesus confess before his Father and the holy angels. But he that confesses not or denies the Lord before men cannot receive the approbation of the obedient child of God." Where the Lord has this wonderful work and we neglect it how shall we escape? This is a great salvation, and we should sanctify the Lord God in our own hearts, and be ready to give to every one that asks us a reason of the hope that is in us with meekness and with fear.

P. D. G.

Danville, Va., June 25, 1907

Dear Brother Gold:

It has come into my mind to write a little concerning the death of my dear little baby boy which occurred the 2nd day of June, 1907. He was just eight months and two days old. He died with cholera infantum. He had two doctors to see him but all the medicine and attention we gave him couldn't save him. It seems he was just lent to us long enough for all the family to become attached to him. He was a bright sweet little babe. Took so much notice of things. I tried to ask the Lord to spare him to me, but I could only say the words,

I could not feel them. The day he died I was sitting at the table when these words were presented to my mind: "These people have I fromed for myself, they shall show forth my praise." And I thought these little people who feel little are the ones that belong to him and he has taken him to himself. I have four children left but miss my dear little baby wherever I go. It seems so lonesome, so lonesome here. Perhaps he was taken to wean my affections from the things of earth that are so perishable. I know that none of us are put here to stay nor do I wish to stay here always, yet when one gets old and feeble he can't expect them to stay here long, but they must go the way of all the earth and the times and places that once knew them know them no more, yet we cherish their memory. I believe that God has a purpose in all of his works though we can't always understand them. By and by we will have to try the realities of eternity, and may we be enabled to say that we have fought a good fight, have kept the faith and that there is a crown of righteousness laid up for us and not us only but all that love His appearing. My little babe knew nothing of the troubles and trials of this life, having been here such a short time. It will have to wait until the appointed time for me. We named him Archer Vernon. Dear babe with God remain, grief cannot bring him back I know so: I will try to be submissive to the will of God.

His mother,
ANNIE ASTEN.

FEED THE HUNGRY, CLOTHE THE POOR.

For sometime this subject has been upon my mind. I trust the Lord will enlighten my understanding, if it is His will, for I am vain and vile. "Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Do you feel to be poor and needy, feel the need of Jesus? So you are blessed for all the fitness he requireth is to feel your need of Him, need of Jesus. He is a shield unto them that put their trust in Him. Praise His name. When a sinner is quickened and made alive to his lost condition, he feels helpless, dependent upon the Lord for life and salvation. They mourn and grieve but no relief can they find until Jesus comforts them and pardons them of their sins and transgressions. Then they are made to rejoice and praise the Lord. Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Mourning over your lost and helpless condition. He has promised to hear the cries and prayers of the destitute. He binds up the broken hearts and sets the prisoner free. How often the children of God feel cast down, but not destroyed. They feel brokenhearted, sorrowful. But Jesus has a healing balm for every wound and sweetly whispers all is well, peace be still. My promised grace receive. Jesus can make the storm a calm, and cause the most wretched sinner's heart to melt, when his grace is bestowed upon any and their hearts made to rejoice, they sing praise to the Lord and glorify His name. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled. It is good to feel hungry spiritually, feel that so plainly you are more apt to be strong in the spirit. It is better to feel poor and in the valley of humiliation than it is to be exalted in the mountain top, for he that exalts himself shall be abased.

But he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. Only notice for a moment what a contrast there is in the two believers. My experience teaches me the mountain top is very dangerous place for weakly children, even if they feel strong, because that is a dry place I imagine, and there is danger of falling, and when one is low in the valley of sorrow and humiliation he is more apt to esteem the brethren and sisters higher than himself. They are not fasting all the time neither. They shall go in and out and find pasture, so hence it is needful to go out and find pasture, lest we should get exalted above measure. That makes us feel our helpless and dependent state. It also causes us to beg Him more fervently to teach us our duty and enable us to perform it. Deliver us oh, Lord from the hands of our enemies and keep our feet in that straight and narrow way that leads to life everlasting if it can be consistent with thy will. Jesus died to redeem his people from under the curse of the law, and it is by his stripes they are healed. He was crucified for our offences. He also rose for their justification. Salvation is of the Lord, praise his holy name, for we are poor, frail mortals, sinful worms of the dust of the earth.

I see and feel my imperfection more plainly the longer I live and the more I desire to live near my Savior. So if we desire to live near him we must deny ourselves of many things that would be gratifying to the flesh. Confess your faults one to another. That is the most I have to tell it seems. If others see me as I view myself I don't feel like they could fellowship such a sinful being as I am. The scripture teaches us, "If ye be risen with Christ seek those things which are above. Lord bless truth. Pardon errors.

MARY MELISSA BROOKS.

Mount Airy, N. C.,

Dear Brother Gold:

I certainly do appreciate any kindness bestowed. My health is moderately good. My youngest son makes his home with me. Two daughters unmarried, they make this their home during vacation. Carrie is at Atlanta, Ga., the youngest is music teacher at Mars Hill college, N. C.

Brother Gold, I think I have more reason to praise God for his blessings and Fatherly care than any one. I am not allowed to gather the manna only as I need it. I think God set the seal of poverty on me for my good. I don't grieve over my poor situation. If in the flesh I feel blessed in the Spirit. God has so wonderfully made manifest his love to me that I cannot make manifest to others, the great benefit I have received from Him. He has been my husband, my daily companion, the sweet communion none can know but the humble Christian who daily feels his poverty and dependence on Him. I wish I could make every one know how wonderfully He has made manifest His love to me. What a wreck, what a failure I had been without Him. It makes me feel so unworthy, I don't want to think of that. My only hope is in Him—who is able to save to the uttermost them that put their trust in Him.

I hope to meet you again in life but while I can get your paper and read it is preaching to me; yes I imagine I see your very expression in the language. May every needed blessing for yourself and family be added. I hope we will meet in the sweet by and by.

In the strongest tie of Christian love I hope I am your sister, MRS. N. J. BROOKER.

Dear Brother Gold:

I hope that you are enjoying yourself at the Associations. I would like to have visited some of them up the country but have recently returned from my tour up in South Carolina and over to Philadelphia Church and to Charlotte, Mooresville, Pleasant Hill, Salisbury, Pine, Lexington, High Point, Greensboro and Burlington. I feel that the good Lord blessed me all the way over the tour as I believe He always does, when we go in obedience—preaching Jesus and peace by him. That is what I desire to do, so far as He enables me. I noticed in the last Landmark your remarks Preachers and Opposites. Your comments on the scriptural gifts and qualifications of Bishops, Pastors and Teachers were timely and so much to the purpose. I think all churches should consider well and heed your suggestions and teaching, for I am sure serious mistakes have been made along this line. It is a very solemn and important matter. I mean the ordination of men to highest office and full functions of the gospel ministry of Jesus Christ. It is so solemn, serious, such a responsible position or office, it often makes me tremble, that the church made a mistake in my case. I feel so imperfect and unqualified, but I have been so kept and blessed for thirty-six years as not to bring any reproach upon the Sacred Cause of our blessed Redeemer. Hope He will still keep me the remaining few days of my pilgrimage that I may hold out faithful to the end and receive the crown of Rightousness.

The Lord bless you and All His people,

J. E. ADAMS.

FOR ALL MEN HAVE NOT FAITH.

What does the above scripture mean? Does this mean that no man has faith? Does it mean that the people born of God have not faith? It is true that in nature no man has faith. But what does Paul mean when he says in 2nd Thess. 3:2, "for all men have not faith." He desires the brethren to pray that he and those with him may be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men, "for all men have not faith." None of these unreasonable and wicked men have faith. But those born of God do have faith. One says men in nature have not faith which is true, but to prove this by asserting all men have not faith would be to say that all men are in nature, but the truth of God is that those born of God are spiritual and therefore not in nature or natural.

We should search the scriptures and ask counsel or understanding of God so that we do not misapply the word of God, but seek to speak the truth in Christ and be found faithful witnesses of the truth. Look at and consider what is meant by a scripture. There are men that do not have faith. What sort of men are they? Why such as are unreasonable and wicked. None of that class have faith, hence all such men as those have not faith.

We embark on the stream of Time which is gliding along through hills and valleys, now shut in by projecting, threatening cliffs, again greeted by pleasing vistas of fruitful plains and smiling fields of plenty.

We should be sensible of something of our infirmities, and need of enough to desire and rely upon Providence whose smile is the feast of the soul, and the leader in all that is good. The chords and stakes of Zion cannot be loosed or removed. No enemy can ever enter the peaceful dwelling of Zion. Kings of the earth flee apace at the sight of Zion. While we have no desire to change, have no power nor wish to add to nor take from her perfect beauty, if we are favored to walk about her, and her palaces, and view her bulwarks, and call the attention of the daughters of Zion to her glorious Prince, and proclaim that he reigns, that is enough for me. Should it please the Lord to direct my labor for the peace and profit of Zion that is my glory. I bespeak the prayers of Zion's friends and that they aid me in the publication of Zion's Landmark by obtaining new subscribers as well as renewing old subscriptions. P. D. G.

 WHEN WERE OR ARE THE PEOPLE OF GOD SAVED.

I have heard and read expressions like this, that the people of God were saved before the foundation of the world. Now we do well to consider what the scripture says about that, It is true that grace was given us in Christ before the world began according to God's purpose. That is clearly taught in the scripture. But if all the saving or actual saving was effected before why did Jesus come into the world? What did Jesus come into the world for? The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost. But if the people of God's choice were saved before the world are they saved a second time by Christ coming and suffering in the flesh?

His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. This was said by the angel to Joseph before Jesus was born. This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom said Paul, "I am chief." Jesus saved and called his people with a holy calling not according to their works, but according to God's purpose. How was this done? According to God's mercy by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures. He was delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification. He put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory? God sending his own son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh.

But why argue this matter? It is to set things in their proper order. There is no need in defending election and predestination to so argue as though it was not needful for Christ to die, or to contend that the people of God would have been saved if Christ had not died for them. It was certain from the beginning that Christ would appear in (the end) of the world (the legal world by which is the knowledge of sin) to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. Yea, he was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you who by him do believe in God who raised him from the dead, and gave him glory that your faith and hope might be in God. The merit and certainty of the death of Christ saved all his people whether they lived before or after the coming of the Christ Jesus—who was a minister of the circumcision or was under the law to fulfill the law and confirm the promises of God made to the fathers, and that the offering up of the Gentiles, might be acceptable unto God. All the promises of God are yea and amen to the glory of God the Father in Christ Jesus.

There is great beauty in rightly dividing the word of truth and declaring all the counsel of God. To set forth things in the order which the Holy Ghost sets them forth shows a workman that needs not be ashamed of his work. To set forth these great matters as the Holy Ghost has done shows God is in the workman. It also encourages the distressed soul to seek the Lord. We should so preach the word that it cannot be gainsaid, so that when the seeking soul searches the scripture to see whether these things are so that soul will see that we are preaching the truth.

When we preach the necessity of repentance toward God, and faith in the Lord Jesus, and that Jesus is exalted to give repentance and is the author and finisher of our own faith then we encourage all such as are truly desirous to be saved to call on the name of the Lord.

When we preach the necessity of those that have believed to be careful to maintain good works which are profitable to men, then we glorify God, and are a help to his people.

We should search the scriptures to see what they teach and we should contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. P. D. G.

.. RIGHTLY DIVIDING.

It is wise to place apples of gold in pictures of silver. We should aim to make proper distinctions. No theory of ours can change or make void the law of God. We may hurt ourselves by extreme positions.

Granting that the one talented man was a servant of the Lord, is he such a one as a faithful servant? Let the Lord answer. Jesus said "Well done good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things. Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. But he said to the one talent man, "Thou wicked and slothful servants," etc. Did he have the will of his lord? I say not Those that disregard or trespass the laws of God do not serve him as a true servant does.

While no man or devil can defeat the will of God, yet if we do not respect the teachings of scripture why have a Bible? P. D. G.

"Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection?"

1. The gospel, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day. This is what the Apostles preached, and what all God's preachers have preached ever since then, and what those he calls to preach will preach to the end of time. It is also what the prophets foretold must come to pass.

It was prophesied that one should die for all—that they that live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him that died for them and rose again. The law and the prophets set that forth. The law showed the necessity of the death of Jesus, the surety. The prophets declared he would die.

Why should it be in Hosea said, "After two days he will revive us, and in the third day we will live in his sight," Hosea 6:2. Jesus said as Jonah was in the deep three days and three nights so should the Son of Man be three days and nights in the heart of the earth? Martha said: "Lord he has been dead four days, by this time he stinketh."

So that decomposition would begin on a corpse by the third day. Jesus must lie in the grave until all doubt of his not being dead shall be removed, and so that when he rises from the dead it is proven that he was holy and saw no corruption in the grave.

2. The Apostles preached his death and resurrection as eye witnesses of both. He was seen of them all after he rose from the dead and was seen of many others—above five hundred at once. No event could be more fully proven. Nor is there a doubt in the heart of the believer that Jesus rose from the dead.

This then is what is delivered that Christ died for our sins, and that he was buried, and that he arose from the dead the third day, according to the scriptures. This is definite, nor can any one part of this be surrendered. This is what is preached or delivered by every God-sent preacher that preaches the word of God, that preaches the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Can I deliver a thing to you and you not receive it? No indeed.

Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead, for if there is resurrection of the dead there is no Christ risen, and if he is not risen you are yet in your sins, and our preaching is all in vain, and we are false witnesses. If Christ did rise for my justification then he has made an end of my sins. He was raised from the dead for my justification. Then shall I not rise from the dead? To say that there is no resurrection, or that I will not rise is to deny that Christ died for my sins, or rose for my justification. As is Christ so are those for whom Jesus died and rose again. We are one with him, for as he is so are we in this world. To deny this would be to deny Christ or the merit of his death and resurrection. They that deny the resurrection of the dead deny Christ.

3. The resurrection of the dead is the consummation of salvation. For if the dead rise not then is not Christ risen. He is the head, and if the head is risen then the body of those for whom he died and rose again shall also rise. For since by man came death by man also came the resurrection of the dead. By Adam the first man death came, by Jesus the Second man the Lord from heaven came the resurrection of the dead. Christ is the first born from the dead, and afterward they that are his shall rise. Are not all men Christ's? No. He says he lays down his life for his sheep.

The believer is passed from death into life and shall never die. The first man was made a living soul. The second Adam was made a quickening Spirit, and he quickens the dead. So that he that believes in Jesus shall die no more. But about his mortal body? That shall die.

4. When a man dies that is a believer in Jesus his body goes back to the dust from whence it came. For dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return said God unto Adam. But what becomes of the spirit? It goes at once to God who gave it. Returns when? When one dies his soul and body separate. The soul does not go down into the grave. What did Stephen a man full of the Holy Ghost and of faith say and pray for when they were stoning him to death? He said, "Lord Jesus receive my spirit. Devout men took his body and buried it. But he fell asleep in Jesus who then received his spirit, even as the thief was with Jesus in Paradise the very day he was crucified. So Paul says to depart and be with Christ is far better—not to be in the grave, but to be with Jesus.

5. It is the body Paul is talking or writing about—not the spirit or soul. It is the body that is to be raised from the dead when Christ shall come or appear again. Some man will say how are the dead raised and with what body do they come? This mortal (mortal body) shall put on immortality. It is the body that will be redeemed from death or raised from the dead the last day. The believer is already past from death into life, and has part in the first resurrection which is the resurrection of Jesus, and he is blest and holy. But this vile body must go back to dust, this earthly house must be dissolved, but Jesus shall change our vile body and fashion it like unto his glorious body. Then we shall bear the image of the heavenly who now in the flesh bear the image of the earthly.

Brethren, this is the glorious doctrine of the Bible which we must contend for. Are you called in question for the hope of the resurrection of the dead?

We should preach the things that are plainly set forth in the scriptures, and not theories. The truth will do us good and bind us together; falsehood will confuse and divide us.

P. D. G.

Remarks were made on Jer. 19: 5 in the last issue of Zion's Landmark where it is said Israel had built high places unto Baal and burnt their sons as burnt offerings which the Lord commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into his mind.

People that deny the foreknowledge of God and his predestination say that here is a case of a state of things unknown to God as Israel did something that He did not command, and that never came into his mind. While we cannot find out the Almighty by searching, yet His revealed word of Scripture is our authority in all matters. Man shall live by every word of God, for every word of God is good.

There is not a word of God that does not condemn wickedness. Every word of God is good. Wickedness proceeds from the wicked—not from God. He is the fountain of truth, and nothing impure proceeds from Him. Wickedness cannot dwell with Him. There is no darkness in Him, nor of Him. Such a thing as sin could not come into His mind, nor dwell in Him, as no darkness naturally could approach the natural sun, nor dwell in its presence. God's thoughts are as high above ours as the heavens are above the earth.

Jesus knew what was in man, saw man's thoughts afar off. Nothing was hid from him while he was in the flesh, yet he knew no sin. No guile was in his lips. Such a holy mystery we cannot comprehend, yet we know the Bible proves it. How it is according to the will of God for Jesus the Just one to suffer for the unjust, and that Jesus came into the world to drink the cup his Father had given him, and that men should be gathered to kill the Prince of life with wicked hands as murderers, and yet be doing the very thing that God declared in scripture, yet in our darkened minds we cannot see or understand the infinite distance between God's purpose and man's deeds. The holiness of God is in everything he purposes or does, so that no wickedness or sin can dwell with him nor in him, and therefore cannot proceed from Him.

The people therefore that say that they are delivered to do evil, or that God's foreknowledge or predestination causes them or others to do wickedly blaspheme the holy name of God. Could these Israelites that burnt their sons on the altar of Baal offer any defense, apology, or excuse that they were predestined to do this, and therefore were excusable? No, indeed. When the strong hand of conviction comes upon us this refuge of lies, this covenant with death and hell is swept away and naked are we before God who is holy and we are vile. Our mouth is then shut. Let God be true but every man a liar.

Still there is nothing that can be hid from God, The darkness and the light are both alike to Him. How could prophets foretell events if God did not move them to speak them before hand, and how could God move them to foretell these events if God has not knowledge. There is never any guessing or conjecture, or thinking so and so about these things foretold, nor is there ever any failure in their coming to pass as foretold.

If God foresees that these things will come to pass is it not certain that they will come to pass? Shall not things be as God foresees or declares before hand that they shall be? Then is it not wise to fear this holy, everlasting God in whose hand is our breath, who has made us and not we ourselves. God will bring every thing into judgment whether it be good or evil. Hence the whole duty of man is to fear God, and keep His commandments.

According to scripture there is a special meaning in the use of God's foreknowledge. The wicked He does not foreknow as he does the righteous. He said Moses you only have I known of all the nations of the earth. Jesus says to some, "depart from me ye workers of iniquity, I know you not.. Now in what sense is this true? To know is to approve of to own. Jesus says "I know my sheep." In that sense he does not know goats. The Lord knows the righteous. In that sense he does not know the wicked. The foundation of God stands sure having the seal, the Lord knows them that are his. yet the wicked are not hid from God, while the righteous are hid in Him.

So the word foreknowledge has a special meaning in the Bible in harmony with its use of knowledge concerning God and His people. "For whom he did foreknow he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that he might be the first born among many brethren." All that God foreknew, and no others, he did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son. "Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called them he also justified; and whom he ustified them he also glorified," Rom. 8:28-29. Then predestination as here explained is limited only to God's people. Other scriptures show that all events; good in themselves or meant for evil by wicked men, are limited, restrained, controlled and appointed by the Lord who makes the wrath or wickedness of man to praise Him, and restrains the remainder of that wrath or wickedness, (though he does not make man's wrath, so that we know (those who love his predestination know) that all things work together for good to them who love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. Nor is there any better evidence that we are called of God than that we love Him. For he that loveth is born of God, for God is love. Nor is there any sin or death in the love of God, nor ignorance, nor blindness, nor enmity.

Man is free in doing what is in his heart, and is controlled by that which seems to him to be right. If it is in his heart to do right this he will do; and if it is in his heart to do wrong this he will do. Make the tree good and the fruit will be good. But an evil tree cannot bring forth good fruit.

LIFE INSURANCE.

I have been requested to give my opinion of life insurance and of the propriety of Primitive Baptists and their friends investing in policies therein. "There is a time to every purpose under the heaven, and to every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon him." It would be well for us to consider the times, whether this is not the time to life insurance and to the judgment of it, and if so, whether or not we might not also suspect it to be true for the misery of man therefore to be great upon him, and whether we are the man.

The drift of thought seems to be that it is a business proposition and ought to be so considered, and therefore ought not to be allowed to affect fellowship among the brethren. It seems to me that the probable effect of a consideration should largely indicate and determine its character and propriety. The determination of a question when primarily considered might appear to be well and properly defined, the effect of a righteous or just cause, but that same effect, though righteous in itself, might go further and effected by other considerations lead to results not primarily contemplated and become in itself the real and logical effect of the first cause. Sometimes that which seems to be differs materially from that which really is, therefore realities are preferable to appearances. A consideration which does not apprehend and respect the ultimate conclusion to which it leads is not well made. In purely business affairs every one is supposed to attend to his own business and to let other people's business alone, but unless your business in some way comes in contact with other people's business beyond a mere individual selfish living it is of no profit. You must divide the territory and share the benefits. A man ought to and does have the right to do as he pleases, but not to such an extent as to incur the righteous displeasure of his neighbor. Scold must be the character of the man whose pleasure consist only in pleasing himself, but how exalted the character of him who seeks the pleasure of others especially when it necessarily limits what might otherwise be his privilege and right. To live for his brethren is the privilege of a brother, but to die for them is gain.

Jesus died for them. How should one deport himself toward him for whom Christ died? Christ died to everything but his brethren—that is their good and theirs only constituted the purpose of his death, and in such regard we should live for them. The Christ-like life is purely an unselfish life. If we consider the question on our part purely from a business standpoint, and the brethren or some of them—one of them—considers it from the standpoint of fellowship, and action upon our consideration whether by us or them could but serve as a cause for serious consequences. Granting that it is a mere secular matter the conclusion is readily formed that the fellowship of the brethren has nothing to do with their fellowship. But if notwithstanding our granted assumption, we find that the fellowship of the brethren is nevertheless involved, we shall have to determine, which shall prevail business which is of the world and perisheth or fellowship which is of the kingdom of heaven and endureth forever.

I have no doubt but that the people at large regard our objections to life insurance as a matter of superstition and ignorance, and shall some of us seem to agree with them in this opinion? Let us grant for a moment that their opinion of us, at least in this respect is true what are we going to do about it? Shall we presume that therefore we are not what we profess to be, that we have not been taught of God? Is it true that when a man is born again, born from above, born of God that he is thence forth an educated man as pertaining to things of earth? Is it true that men who favor life insurance are therefore born of God? Are any of them thus born? Do we know that even one of them is verily taught of God? There is nothing in nature by which God's people may be identified, nor is there anything in nature inconsistent with good morals by which we may determine who are not his people. Therefore I conclude that one may be ignorant and even superstitious and yet may have been taught of God. We should regard our brethren as having been born of God and taught of him as he would that they should be taught, and as having been cleansed of him and made clean as he would have them be clean, and we should not call that common which he has cleansed, nor should we call him ignorant whom God has taught, nor superstitious in whom is the faith which God by Jesus Christ has himself authorized and finished. We do not deny that some of us are ignorant and unlearned as were some of our fathers in the gospel, even some of the Apostles of Jesus Christ, but there were those then who though they perceived that Peter and John were unlearned and ignorant men, yet took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus, and this is true with respect to God's people today, which abiding truth should not be overlooked nor underestimated.

The Primitive Baptists are a peculiar people in doctrine, discipline and order, as well with respect to their covenant relations as members of the church visible as in their relations by virtue of the everlasting covenant ordered in all things and sure, and hitherto their aversion as a people, to investing in life insurance has not been the least among the peculiar features which have all over this country distinctively marked them as differing from all other denominations or people, not as a thing assumed for the purpose of being different but because of an underlying innate principle constituting a difference.

I have always admired those things which are generally held by the Primitive Baptists for which nor against which there are no direct scriptural rules nor injunctions. They are unwritten principles as of an inherent law.

In this part of the country it is common for a life insurance agent when he fails to induce one to take a policy to remark as a final retort: "You must be a hardshell," and he is most generally correct. Now I like that which establishes in the mind of the world the identity of the people of God, let the name by which they are designated be what it may. And whether the peculiarity be worthy of blame or praise the difference is thereby confessed. I do not regard these outward things as constituting any worth in themselves, but as mere incidental marks of difference which somehow serve as ear marks indicating as by association the inward existence of heart marks which are essential and abiding indicating the true believers in Him by whose stripes they are healed.

I look at this matter as Paul regarded the eating of meat which had been offered to idols. He knew that an idol was nothing, and that meat was in no way effected thereby, and that he could eat it without any effect of conscience, but there were those of the brethren who could not but feel that there was a difference in this from other meats and Paul had respect for their feelings in the matter, and denied himself the exercise of a privilege which was to him a mere matter of business or in part the legitimate conclusion of business. "Having food and raiment be therewith content." Paul saw that if the brethren ate of this meat, affected as they thought it to be, they would do so because he did, and would thereby defile and offend their own consciences, therefore instead of trying to assure them that it was only a matter of business, or that it was superstition and ignorance in them he would not eat, nor did he declare non-fellowship nor allow them to consider the question, but forthwith resolved that if meat made his brother to offend he would eat no more flesh as long as the world stands.

I have never favored life insurance and never expect to, and for the peace of the Zion of our God, I would to God that every Primitive Baptist in all the land were in this respect as I am. My fellowship is not strengthened with the brother who carries a policy, and especially is it not weakened with the one who does not carry one.

The fellowship of the brethren is worth more to me than present substance or what life insurance might bring, therefore let me live to them, for and with them. Let my present life and last end be like theirs, and let me consider them to provoke them to love and good works, and with them pray for the peace of Zion.

OBITUARIES

BABY OWEN.

Baby Owen, infant daughter of W. F. and M. E. Owens, was born May 27th, 1907, and died July 27, 1907. We know how impossible it is to utter our grief with words. The heart pleads for utterance in tears. Let it speak them. We bow in sorrow at the taking of our little one, feeling that while it is natural to gather the ripened fruit it is trying that the bud is taken before it has opportunity to unfold into blossom." But in nature fruit falls and so do buds and blossoms. In way of kind nature perhaps this is best. In the taking away from our arms our little one we accept the cross and bear it believing that the bud will yet blossom and bear fruit in the angel land where the spirit of our little one has so early flown. Perhaps it is best that our babe's life on earth went out so soon. With her the trials that meet struggling mortals on every side, with the sorrows that line the pathway from childhood to old age, who can contemplate the passing of one knowing so little of the sorrows of earth into the wonderful beyond without feeling that our loss is her gain. We do not know the future life fully. It is well that we do not. We could not in our darkened state. We must content ourselves here until we are called to go. A cloud hangs between this land and eternity. Or we are in the darkness. Out of this cloud we cannot see clearly. But we may hope and we do hope and trust that we feel that the resurrection of Jesus and his people in him brings an unclouded day. Resignation calms our heart. We shall go to the child for it cannot come back to us.

There is no flesh however watched and tended.

But one dear lamb is there.

There is no home however defended,
But has a vacant chair.

Let us be patient; these severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise.

But oft mes celestials

Assume the dark disguise.

We see but dimly through the mist and vapor,

Amid these earthy damps.

What seems to us but sad funeral tapers,
May be heaven's distant lamps.

She is not dead the child of our affection
But gone unto the school

Where she no longer needs our protection
And Christ himself doth rule.

We will be patient and assuage the feelin

It may not wholly stay,
 Absence sanctifying not concealing
 The grief that must have way.
 This lovely bud, so young, so fair, so tender.

Called hence by earthly doom,
 Just come to show how sweet a flower,
 In Paradise would bloom,
 And may the Holy Spirit guide father, mother
 To that angelic land.
 And there with friends, sisters and brothers,
 Eternity we'll spend.

By father and mother,
 W. F. AND M. E. OWEN.

It urges the people to search the Scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Editor of the Landmark:

I desire to write a little more for your good paper should you think enough of what I write to publish it.

For some time my mind has been on the "atonement," and yet I shudder at the attempt to express my views on this subject on which there is such a vast difference of opinion. I suppose all Christians believe that Jesus made the atonement, but do they all understand for whom it was made alike? I think all the Baptists believe it was made for the church, God's people, for the Angel said to Joseph, "Fear not to take unto thee, Mary, thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost, and she shall bear a son, his name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins."

We are told that he was made of a woman, made under the law that he might redeem them that were under the law. Now whatsoever the law saith, it saith to them that are under the law, and one of the things that the law saith is "the soul that sins shall die," but this could not refer to Jesus as an individual, but as the representative of his people who had sinned, it could say to him you shall die, and as the surety of his people he must die, must atone as no one else could. He was the only just one, the only one upon whom the law had no claim, for "he had done no violence nor was there any deceit in his mouth yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him.

He hath put him to grief, when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands."

We have to die for ourselves for we are sinners and death justly claims us as its victims, but the thief said this man hath done nothing amiss.

When the priests anciently made their offerings under the law they made for themselves and for the people for they were sinners alike, but in this particular Jesus was unlike them. He did not make any offering for he was the offering. He was God's offering for sin, for his people, and in this one offering he has forever perfected them that are sanctified. Jesus was the offering to which all the others pointed. He was not a priest after a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life, and his offering was just like himself, perfect and everlasting and well pleasing in the sight of God, hence the pleasure of God prospered in his hand.

Sacrifices and offerings for sin under the law offered by men did not please God. But in the volume of the book it was written of Jesus and he said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God."

He taketh away the first that he may He taketh away the first that he may establish the second. Now what was this will that he did? "And this is the Father's will which has sent me that of all that he has given me I should lose nothing but raise them up again at the last day." For this Holy nation, chosen generation, Royal priesthood, this offering once for all was made.

Now if God is well pleased, and he is of course, or Jesus would not have been exalted at his own right hand. No wonder Paul asked the question, "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" "If God be for us who can be against us?" I am so glad the apostle went on with his blessed story of Jesus and his love and said, "He that spared not his own but delivered him up for us all (all that the Father giveth) how shall he not with him freely give us all things.

So far it is clearly seen that he did die for his people and made an end of their sins and by his power to rise above sin and the devil, he has justified and glorified his people. Now are they in danger of being ensnared again, going back in sin again and being lost? Listen further: "Who shall separate us from the love of God? Shall tribulation, or distress, or famine, or peril, or sword, etc.?"

He says, "I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angles, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from our Lord.

Very truly,
W. A. SIMPKINS.

Southampton, Pa., Oct. 5, 1907.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother in the Truth: It was a rare pleasure for us to once more have a visit from you and dear Sister Gold, and to again hear you preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. It was lovely also, at the same time, to have with us Sister Laura A. Reed and your daughter, Bessie, whom I had never before met. But how soon we can become acquainted when we love the same things, and how pleasant to mingle with those of like precious faith.

Elder Lester was here later, but I was ill in bed at the time, and could not attend his appointments, which I sincerely regretted, as I so sweetly enjoyed his preaching when he was here years ago, and the visit with him and his dear wife—our beloved sister.

Dear brother, I have been thinking of the suggestion of you and Sister Gold that I send to the Landmark some extracts from the letters of our dear departed sister and mother in Israel, M. M. Hassell.

I have been looking them over with this thought in mind. It was refreshing to read again her expressions of love and sweet fellowship, and realize anew her faithfulness in the things that pertain to the kingdom of Christ.

I find that if I should select all that would be of sweet interest to the great household who read the Landmark, it would cover more space than I would like to occupy, as our correspondence extended through quite a number of years. My first letter from her was in 1870, soon after we first met. This was while our dear mother and sisters were still with us, who enjoyed her touching messages as well as I. She often gave wings to her thoughts, and, though so far away, she participated in our joys and sympathized in our sorrows, and sad bereavements. She has long since entered into the glorious reality of her hope and is partaking of the never failing fountain of eternal bliss.

What a beautiful life was hers, "entering into the fold with believers enrolled," at the early age of twelve years, and always walking in the footsteps of the flock—a true follower of Him who was meek and lowly in heart. Many blessings and much joy blossomed into her life, given by the Father of all our mercies. Yet they were mingled with sore trials, deep sorrows and great bereavements. But the Lord gave her "Beauty for ashes—the oil of joy for mourning, and a garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." Humility seemed to shine in every act and word, always esteeming others better than herself. Truly the fragrance of myrrh perfumed all her years.

It might be encouraging to some, who are writing bitter things against themselves to know that she was often beset with doubts and fears. She many times expressed a deep sense of her unworthiness and unlikeness to the blessed Immanuel, and some times heavy clouds obscured her spiritual sky. And more afflictions than any pain 's it when our hope in Jesus is hidden by dark lowering clouds. But how good to know there is a power that can clear the darkest sky, and raise the heaviest burden, causing the Sun of righteousness to chase away all the gloom. Truly, the Lord maketh the clouds His Chariot." We feel an assurance that our dear sister has entered into eternal joys, beyond this fading scene, and is now singing praises with the white robed throng who came out of great tribulation, saying, "Blessing and glory and honor to Him who sitteth on the throne and to the Lamb for ever and ever."

I trust that some afflicted one who is walking in great sorrow, feeling cast out from all that is most dear, will find comfort in her words. And I am sure that those who knew and loved her will be pleased to see her name once more among those who write to you of the choice things of the Kingdom. I will only select from three letters, though I feel that I would like to gather all her precious thoughts and choice expressions into a little book.

Williamston, N. C., Sept. 16, 1895.
Miss Bessie Durand:

My Dear Sister in Christ—Although quite feeble this morning I desire to drop you a few lines. Your dear letter of July 22d came to me like a refreshing stream of cool water to a weary traveler in a desert land. I was feeling lonely and sad. Your letter was so full of the manifestation of the Spirit of Jesus—full of love and tenderness and sweet fellowship which is so dear and precious to be realized by a weary pilgrim in this wilderness land. I feel unworthily of such blessed tokens, but the Lord is to be praised, for I feel that all comes from Him; and the fruits of His Spirit are made manifest in His dear children to the praise and glory of His grace. I desired to write you as soon as I received your letter, but I felt that it would be folly for me to write for I could not respond to such a rich letter, yet my heart was full and I fed upon it, and shouted and tried to praise the Lord. How sweet is the memory of bygone days, and the dear ones with whom we live in love and sweet companionship. So many are gone and I almost feel that I am one alone. I feel it more and more daily, and I weep in solitude, which is at times a relief. My last dear departed one I miss more and more. And your dear letter brought him still more fresh to my memory. It cheered my heart to think that he was remembered and cherished in his grave by others. I tell you he is greatly missed in this country where he lived and labored. I realize that his work was done, and the blessed Master called him home. I do, at times, feel an assurance that "The Lord is my Shepherd, and I shall not want." My mind is greatly exercised on faith. Do Is possess it? is a question with me. We know that the things seen are temporal, and the things not seen are eternal. So many wonderful and great mysteries in God's Word. Great indeed is the mystery of godliness and great is the mystery of iniquity. Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised in the mountain of His holiness. Finite man need not try to fathom the deep things of God. His dear people can only know anything truly as it is revealed to them. Vain speculation will not unfold these great mysteries.

We may well exclaim, "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty, just and true are Thy ways Thou King of saints." It is blessed to dwell on the perfections of God, His works and His ways. Everything else is tarnished. All His works praise Him, and should not His saints bless Him. That blessed home for the redeemed is beyond this dark vale of tears, where we have reason to believe is a land of unclouded day. No sickness, sorrows, pain or death will ever reach that blissful shore. The great mysteries connected with eternal realities we cannot understand, but if we rest in God and believe His word it is enough. When we sink into His will all is well. Trials and tribulations, my sister, we all will have, as this is the only road to glory. So may grace make us patient until our change comes. I trust that you are sustained amid all your changes and anxieties, and realize that the Lord is ever near. He is so good and merciful.

Tell Brother Durand that we desire to thank the Lord that He is spared to speak and write. His last two articles in the Signs were so full and they have cheered and comforted more hearts than one. I read the article of the goodness of God twice over. I do desire to be dead to sin, and alive to Holiness, but I feel that I am far from it. My dear sister, I would love to see you one time more, and the dear ones with you, but I hardly expect to. I do hope Brother Durand will come South again, the Lord willing. I would again love to hear him preach the gospel of God's dear Son. My love to all your family, and you will accept my love, and warm appreciation of our kind remembrance. Your aged sister in hope of rest. M. M HASSELL.

Williamston, N. C., 1896.

Beloved Sister—I will try to respond to your letter of sympathy and precious fellowship so dear to my heart in those days of trial and affliction. Your words came perfumed with the Rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valley. I feel that you are made to drink of those streams that make glad the city of our God. I would love to be by your side where we could freely talk of our joys and our sorrows. But this cannot be, my dear, for many miles are between us, yet it is a comfort to know that distance cannot separate fellowship in thought and feeling. I cannot tell you how dear to my heart is communion with saints, although I feel so utterly unworthy of their love. I feel that I am far from what I should be as a professed follower of Jesus. No pleasure in looking at self, no gold can be found digging within. When by faith we are enabled to turn our eyes to Jesus, we see perfection and beauty, and His righteousness covers all our deformity. He is mighty Savior our, all glorious in his apparel. I am oppressed in spirit this morning, the waves and billows are rolling over me, yet there is a little calm herewith so that I do not quite sink. I still hope in God, who has, for so many years upheld me by His Almighty power. I do believe His dear tried people are the only ones who can truly sympathize with each other in outward or inward troubles. Yet some are better prepared than others, as all do not pass through the same trials. Our dear Lord deals them out in weight and measure as seems good in His sight, and no defects, however trying the strokes may be, I can but think, my dear sister, that we are living in the last days and trying times are to be realized. There seems to be divisions and sub-divisions in the church of God. But trials and persecutions will drive them together, for the adorable Saviour has prayed that his people shall be one, and that prayer will prevail. How blessed to see the dear children of God united in love on earth, it is surely a heaven below. How good those meetings you described in your letter; far better than all the riches in this perishing world. I would love to be with you in some of your social gatherings. I have, in years that are passed realized them to be such rich blessings. Soon all these gatherings will end and may we meet where parting is unknown. I long for rest, yet desire to be patient. Do not the loins of the mind need to be girded up? May we all realize this heavenly girding of truth, and each esteem others better than themselves. A sifting time is coming and the disciples of Jesus must be fully separated from this ungodly world. I am a poor wanderer in thought and word and mind, so pardon me.

The clouds are dark and heavy, yet we believe that underneath them all there is a silver lining. How we do keep missing our dear ones that are gone, yet we would not call them back, but humbly wait the heavenly call to join them.

I hope your brother's family are well, dear Sister Durand and her little pledges. You must kiss them for me. I feel greatly strengthened by such dear letters as yours.

May the Lord greatly enrich your soul by the sweet communication of His Spirit to cheer and comfort your heart while treading this thorny road. His love in our souls enables us to rejoice in tribulation. When I feel cast down, as I often do, my heart cries out for living faith to draw nigh to God, and I feel that He is a hearer and answerer of prayer.

I feel so lonely without the companionship of my last beloved one, but I trust that Jesus is my heavenly husband, and He is ever near even when I do not realize it. I have been away from home several weeks, and attended three associations. I visited Wilson and spent some time at Elder Gold's, meeting many dear faithful ones who know and love the truth. I came home greatly refreshed, but I soon got faint and weary. Elder Gold is a most excellent preacher. I heard him several times in my absence, and enjoyed it so much.

You will see, my dear sister, that my mind is drawn out to you. I wrote to you on Sunday evening after coming from meeting, but have hesitated about sending it, but believe I will. The heavenly influence I then realized was delightful.

Write to me again, my sister, and I will be so glad. My eyesight is so poor that I fear I shall not be able to write much more but you must not forget me, for I shall want to hear from you. With love and Christian fellowship for Brother and Sister Durand, and tender love to the little ones.

Affectionately your sister,

M. M. HASSELL.

Miss Bessie Durand:

My Precious Sister—This is Sunday evening, and I am all alone in the house. Cornelia and her husband have gone out for a walk, and perhaps may call on some afflicted one before they return. I thought I would drop you a few lines, as I have been thinking of you ever since I came home from our meeting at Skewarky today. It was our regular meeting, and the first time we have heard our pastor in three months. I would have been glad could you have heard him yesterday and today. Truly, God was with him both of these days. Such comfort does the gospel give to the weary child of grace.

Today Sylvester's text was, "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bazrak, traveling in the greatness of his strength, mighty to save." I cannot tell you, my dear sister, how the power of the Spirit led him into the wondrous plan of redemption; the mighty power of Jesus to save his people from all their foes. I am only able to tell you it was wonderful. I felt that my whole soul and body was electrified. It was so transcendantly glorious to think of the mighty power of the dear Saviour, our all conquering Redeemer, who trod the wine press alone, and of the people there was none to help. Jesus alone does all the work from beginning to end. Jesus, most glorious Jesus. Let us exalt Him and bless His holy name. He is the king eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, our Saviour. How blest are they who are called to be ambassadors for Jesus, the precious Son of God. Tell Brother Durand to continue to preach Jesus in all His mighty power to save His church—His chosen—to still declare in the holy mountain, the wonderful work of redemption.

How mysteriously glorious is the work of this high and holy one. I am lost in thought and cannot reach these mighty things, full redemption for all God's people, both soul and body. And when all in glory is complete, will not the triumphant song be sung, "Unto Him who loved us, and washed us in His own blood from all our sins. The untold ages of eternity will roll on, and this song will continue to be sung, "Worthy the Lamb that was slain that liveth again, to intercede for His own precious ones. O, my dear sister, what love beyond degree. Have we truly a hope in this Mighty One. What matchless grace I feel it to be to save a sinner like me. I inquire daily, "Can it be that Jesus is mine and I am His?" I do desire to trust in this all conquering Redeemer, and may he bring us safe to glory where love and perfection will ever reign, and all will be lost in Jesus who will ever be adored.

How I would love to visit you all once more, but do not expect to, as I am so feeble, all the while, and so weary, and when I walk am soon exhausted. This all goes to show me that I am nearing the eternal shore. This world is not my home. I cannot forget your brother's kindness in coming to see us when he did. It was a season long to be remembered. Cordelia has often spoken of how she enjoyed the visit. She joins me in love to you all, so does my son, Walter, who has such a pleasant remembrance of his visit at your home.

My dear sister, will you pardon my trespass on your time to make out this rambling letter, but I reckon you would wonder that I could do even as well, could you know how poorly I see. My sight is no better. I shall soon hope to hear from you again.

Much love to Brother and Sister Durand, and the dear little girls. With sweet affections, your afflicted sister in Christ.

M. M. HASSELL.

My Dear Brother Gold:

The enclosed good letter from Sister Mary Moore is too good for me and therefore I send it to you. It is full of truth and praise to God. She is a precious sister I spent a most pleasant night at here father's home during my visit to Black Creek Association. I found them a very spiritually mingled family.

Very truly,

W. A. SIMPKINS.

My Dear Brother in Christ:

I take the pleasure this evening to write you a few lines. I would like to write a few things concerning my mind, but I feel too unworthy. I have doubts and fears whether I am one of the children of God or not, for I feel to be the chiefest of sinners. It seems wonderful that Christ should love us at all, but to love us with such pure and holy love, when we were at enmity against him, trampling his divine commandments under our feet is more than we can understand.

"The ways of Zion do mourn." This is strikingly manifest whenever we look. Coldness, worldly-mindedness, and covetousness seem to have taken hold of many of the household of faith; but alas! such things ought not to be; and each of us should stop and think what the love of Christ has done. He alone has "redeemed us from all iniquity and purified unto Himself a people zealous of good works." In him all fullness dwells. "The same yesterday, today and forever." Oh! can we not trust him, love him, and serve him as we did in our first love? Surely we are fed on the sincere milk of the word. His loving kindness changes not. His promises are true and never failing. Can any of us who by our seeming indifference to the discharge of our Christian duties forget the imperative command? "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you" so far as to neglect the assembling of ourselves together for filthy lucre's sake Satan with malicious art watches each unguarded part and man is by nature prone to put his trust in his own efforts but. "Cursed is man that trusteth in man." Obedience is better than sacrifice, and the answer of a good conscience is sure to follow obedience to the law of our heavenly King. O, let us sweetly sing praises to His great name, rejoice in Him as our Saviour, Priest and King and tell to all around what a dear faithful, loving friend he is. Let our daily walk and conversation show that we are followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, and have learned of Him. How glorious it is to see the children of God living up to duty, and in the beauty of holiness, and certainly it is one of the debts of home gratitude, and in obedience to the command, "Pay that thou owest." I verily believe we old Baptists have the doctrine of the Bible as ours, but we are sadly deficient in practice. The church our blessed Redeemer bought with his own precious blood is the sweetest abode on earth, and the love to him and his dear little lambs bind our hearts so closely that death itself cannot break the link.

You do not know how refreshing your visit was, the words of comfort as they fell from your lips still abide. I feel sure my dear brother that you belong to that kingdom which is not of this world, and that you are a called and sent servant of God, placed upon the walls of Zion to cry aloud and spare not. You are fighting under the banner of Jesus. He is the king of glory who sways the scepter in righteousness and truth. How sweet and dear is the fellowship of Saints, it ought to be cherished and guarded with sacred devotion by all who know its value, it does not grow on earthly soil. The fellowship of Saints is far beyond all earthly good. I feel to bless the Lord for the rich blessings he bestowed upon me, a poor, unworthy sinner. For over ten years I have been made to realize the preciousness of the fellowship of God's dear people. I have found among the poor old despised Baptists this heavenly principle of holy fellowship. There will be no fear of losing a safe retreat when we are sheltered under this bloodstained banner. We are a tried and afflicted people. Our dear Lord knows how to sift and try his dear people and servants, and he will do it. They cannot escape the furnace, for all have got to be purified. So let us bless his holy name. The cause of Zion is precious to every child of grace, and when the ways of Zion mourn they mourn. There is a true religion in the world and there is a false religion; there are true ministers Christ and there are false ones, and blessed are all those who know the true from the false, and who love the truth. I believe that you my dear brother, are one of the true servants of the sanctuary, and may the Holy Spirit rest upon you with power and strengthen you to preach Jesus in all his fullness. May he strengthen you and make you mighty in the scriptures in all of your labors. May truth, peace, and righteousness more fully prevail in the household of faith.

Will your pardon me for sending you such a scrawl of a letter as you will find. You will see how badly it is done without my telling you. You will see and know by my poor letter that I appreciate you as a dear servant of Christ. May great grace still rest upon you, and may the Holy Spirit uphold, teach, and strengthen you. I am sure dear brother, your mantle of charity is large enough to cover all my imperfections. We would be very glad to have you visit us again. Pray for me, I am poor and needy.

Your humble sister in the fellowship of the gospel I hope,

MARY C. MOORE.

R. F. D. No. 1, Bethel N. C.
Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother, and to the household of faith; I will again come before you, feeling to be the least of all.

Last Saturday Sunday, and Monday the body of our Kehukee association met in the name of the Lord to worship Him.

Oh, how I wish I could have been with you all to worship Him in the beauty of holiness, and to sit under the droppings of the sanctuary, and to glean as Ruth did and to meet my many dear kindred in Christ whose hands I long to shake and to mingle my voice with theirs, but the Lord would not have it so, and I want resignation to His will knowing that he does best, but dear kindred my spirit was with you all if my body was absent. Oh, how I did long to go and be with the Lord's dear people: on the following day he sent one to see us. Oh, how glad I was. I felt that he had a purpose in it. You were all blest with fine weather and I hope good preaching. I tried to ask the Lord to bless you all with a good association, for without him we can do nothing. How comforting our dear Brother Rowe's lecture in the last Landmark. Surely the Lord gave him that for the afflicted. I read and reread it, and would shed tears as I would read. A am afflicted and have been ever since I was five lears old. I had an attack of typhoid fever which almost left me helpless. I cannot walk without a stick and chair and someone to help me, but in the midst of my afflictions I have been greatly blest in attending church.

I left home the second Sunday in June to visit around some and to visit my sister in Hallifax county, returned the second Sunday in September. I was blest to attend church every Sunday excepting while I was gone and sometimes on Saturday. I also attended four yearly meetings: Tarboro, Lawrence, Kehukee, and Cross Roads. Cross Roads is where I hold my membership and O, what a feast I did receive from our dear pastor Elder A. L. Harrison, he preached the best sermon I ever heard fall from his lips; his text was: "My speech is not with enticing words of man's wisdom but with power and demonstration of the Spirit." And I felt that it was of the spirit. I greatly desired to attend the yearly meeting at Great Swamp and to hear our dear brother Hassel, but the way not opened in the midst of my afflictions.

I have been blessed to attend nine associations which I feel greatly thankful and greatly enjoyed; on one occasion our dear Brother Rowe did so feed my hungry soul with the loaves and the fishes from heaven, it pleased God to send them through and by him, it is one of the greatest pleasures of my life to sit under the droppings of the sanctuaries and to hear the gospel of the Son of God proclaimed in its power and its beauty. I can but say bless the Lord, O, my soul, and all that is within me, bless his Holy name, surely goodness and mercy has followed me all the days of my life, it is good to be afflicted. I have been made to rejoice and glory in mine. I feel that I can witness with David when he said it is good to be afflicted. O, beloved Zion won't you turn to the true and living God and He will bless you with a three-fold blessing. O, let us labor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, strive for peace, and contend for the old and ancient landmark our fore-fathers have set and practice them, and the Lord will bless us and preserve us. When the salt has lost its savor where is the preserving, there is a decay. O Lord, revive thy church everywhere, let thy light shine, enable thy dear people to see eye to eye and speak one and the same thing as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord. O, it is hurtful to me to hear of a decayed limb and fear worse. O, Lord, unite us in prayer, to Almighty God.

I have been requested to write my trip out around this summer but did not think I could and refused but the Lord is our keeper. I want to say to all of those who have been so good and kind in taking me to church I kindly thank you for your kindness, and hope the Lord will bless you, for it is all of Him and let his name be praised.

Whether many or few, all my years are his due. May they all be devoted to Him.

I will close, unless this be too lengthy I desire an interest in your prayer, From your afflicted sister, trusting in that sweet abiding hope in Jesus that the world cannot give nor take away.

MAGGIE A. STATON.

Fremont, N. C.

The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. There is a Godly fear and a slavish fear, but the scripture teaches us the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. What a blessing to all that that fear God in deed and in truth, for they that even trust Him shall be as Mount Zion, that shall not be shaken. But the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. So it is the quickened soul, knowing his lost condition that fears Him right, God is just as well as wise, and kind are all his ways. The bud may have a bitter taste, often consoled me when I was in darkness and my pathway hedged with obstacles, and the billows of sin seemingly would overflow me. Then those words of comfort would be presented forcibly to my mind:

God's purpose will ripen fast unfolding every hour,

The bud may have a bitter taste.
But sweet will be the flower.

Dear children of God be of good cheer, for Jesus has overcome the world. He is our captain. He bids us not to fear. Do not fear man nor the world, for man in his best estate is altogether vanity, and the world loves its own. So you see the church of God is not loved by the world. Jesus was persecuted; he was mocked and spit upon; he was a stumbling stone; a rock of offence, and all manner of evil was spoken against him for truth's sake. And he bore it all patiently and opened not his mouth. Praise his holy name. But we are at best poor frail mortals; sinful worms of the dust of the earth, often ready to give railing for railing when it is forbidden. Paul an apostle of Jesus Christ said the spirit is indeed willing, but the flesh is weak. I understand it to be those who have been born again of the Holy Spirit, the regenerated, those quickened and made alive that have that Godly fear. God writes his law in the minds of the children. He prints His law in their hearts. He promised to be a God unto them, and they shall be to Him a people. Is not that enough? For by the law is the knowledge of sin. So the sinner's blind eyes have to be opened, and his deaf ears unstopped before they can see, feel or understand those hidden mysteries. For great is the mystery of Godliness, and who can know it? None only to whom it is revealed. So the true religion of Jesus Christ our redeemer is revealed by his spirit in the hearts of his people. Revealing things to man, but hidden things to God, so we live by hope, and walk by faith and not by sight.

Fear not man for he can only kill the body, but fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body, for the fear of man is a fatal snare.

The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, for the Lord is merciful and kind. He says in His word in a little wrath I hid my face, yet with great mercy I will gather thee. He also promised to be with his people in the sixth trouble and forsake them not in the seventh. So by the law is knowledge of sin, and it takes the blood of Jesus to cleanse the hearts of his people from their sins. Christ Jesus learned obedience by the things he suffered, and it is by his stripes, we are healed of our wounds, if indeed we have been born of the holy spirit.

Fear not man for the fear of man is a fatal snare, and I fear I am in that snare as well as many others, fearing what the world will say about us. Let them persecute us, it is only the fulfilling of the scripture, for it is a blessing to be persecuted for righteousness sake, and theirs is the kingdom of heaven. The people of God are marked out as a despised and peculiar people, zealous of good works, the good work of faith. Let your light so shine that others may see our good works and glorify our father which is in heaven. By the law is the knowledge of sin, and when sin is finished it brings death.

The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. This secret is the love of God revealed in the heart, and to love the Lord is to fear Him, so saith the scripture. Oh, how rich and how free. The grace of God is a free gift from the heavenly Father. Surely He is worthy to be loved by me, and all mankind. Praise the Lord, O, my soul, and all that is within me praise his holy name. Not one drop of his blood was shed in vain. The foundation of God standeth sure having this seal. He knoweth them that are His.

MARY MELISSA BROOKS.

Martins Mill, N. C.
Elders Gold and Lester:

For some cause I am confined to the house today. Perhaps it may interest some one to see how I have stumbled along for more than 77 years.

I have surely been wonderfully blest. I was born in Moore County, N. C., May 1st, 1830, and desire to say the Lord has taken care of me being sure it is nothing good I have done.

My life has been one of danger in building cotton presses and large bridges with heavy timbers of different kinds. I have had scarcely any personal hurt in building and repairing twelve large bridges, forty-five mills, and many houses. As I have worked at low prices I am a poor man. With the help of a companion I have raised twelve children to be nearly grown. One boy and his mother are in the glory land I have not the least doubt.

I am near the end of my life and will so go the way of all the earth. I have been wonderfully blest. I feel that I should be the most humble man for the Lord has given me the kindest wife of this generation, one that lived with me over fifty years. She never gave me a cross word, always trying to make me happy and bore her own troubles with much patience, never complaining about her lot.

Mary Leach was born April the 9th, 1834, and died March the 9th, 1907. She was united with the church at Suggs Creek with myself April 19, 1856. She attended her church meetings as often as she could until she became disabled. She always fixed for me to go. She has four daughters that are church members. We hope others will come. May the Lord give them strength to come.

I have kept the books of the Abbotts Creek Association for 37 years, and have not lost one hour from my duty in that line.

I desire that I may finish my course in the faith and in peace with God and all men. May we live in peace and love is the desire of one that has for more than 48 years been trying in some way to serve as an humble Baptist.

A. P. LEACH.

REMARKS.

It has been a favor to me that I have known Brother Leach for many years. What a remarkable record to have attended his association for 37 years without failure. P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold,

My Dear Sir: I have been thinking for some time that I would write you, but feel so unworthy that I don't know whether I am doing right or not. I am a young man 22 years old and if my heart does not deceive me I desire the prayers of all Christian people. I go to the forest where none can see or hear me, and I fall on my knees and try to ask God to have mercy on me, a sinner, and it seems as if my prayers are not heard. Though I know that God has been merciful to me. I am tempted in so many ways that instead of doing better I do worse. I have a Christian papa and mamma at home, if there are any, and I try to pray God to put it into the minds of them to pray for me which I know they do. I have not heard a Primitive Baptist preach in so long a time. I go to the others but cannot agree with them.

Elder Gold, do pray for me that I may some day be an honor to my name. I read the Landmark and see where some of the people have written, and oh, if I could write as they can. But I know without God's help and mercy I cannot. I ask you to pray for my dear people at home that when I return I may find all well. . .

If my heart deceives me not I feel that I am trusting in the blessed Redeemer. I love to hear the hymn sung, "Tis so sweet to trust in Jesus."

Do pray for me a weak and vile sinner is my heart's desire and prayer,

Sincerely,

An Earnest Friend.

REMARKS.

The promises of the Bible are to the poor and needy, those who feel and know they are helpless—who know they are sinners. Jesus came to call sinners to repentance.

It is a precious truth that God is faithful by whom we are called to the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ and Christ came in the flesh to do his Father's will in saving them.

It shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

You can publish in the Landmark for the benefit of all the subscribers in my club that I cannot save them any money in club rates more than to send their money for them.

Brethren and sisters, and friends if any of you are behind with your subscriptions please send Brother Gold $1.50 a year, or hand over to me and I will send the money for you.

Your brother in hope.

Dear Brother Gold:

Just a line to let you know that I enjoyed your editorial in the August number of the Landmark, and most heartily endorse it. If such sound and Godly admonitions were heeded more less confusion and strife would exist in the church of God. Nothing can do more harm in the church of God than a man ordained whom God never called to preach.

I have for years enjoyed your writings, but never thought it would do you any good for me to tell you so.

The Lord bless you in all your labors.

YEARS AGO.

Such were the effects of newly planted grace in our souls—Christ was all in all, and the world was as a dead weight. We were both in our first love, and young and tender were our minds, and quite susceptible of divine impressions, and free from pomp and vain parade, and hypocrisy was far from us. We loved each other because both of us loved the Lord, and we loved him because he first loved us. Each one told his simple tale of joy and sorrow. While our souls melted down in thankfulness while our hearts overflowed with tears. Aloof from the giddy multitude we stood, and in the cool of the evening to the lonesome fields we retired, and and in yonder by-path we halted, and there in undissembled strains we sung the praises of God and made Christ the topic of our discourse, and the theme of our tongue; and rejoice we did that we had found a pearl of so great a price.

The long remembered days of the gladness of our hearts, days in which we took delight in the Lord our God, and in each other.

Our religious subjects were not studied and so of course not starched and formal. What came uppermost came out and each one was ready to catch the broken accents as they fell perfumed from the lips, and as soon received, joy in the soul flushed in the countenance, and all around us looked like heaven shining below. So in these happy times we lived and who more blest than we? We were brethren and lived together in unity; but we were not members of any visible church and yet blest of the Lord, and our communion with Him, and with each other was sweet to amazement, and the fields were mostly our meeting places, and there did we rejoice in him who is Lord of all. My soul has these things and places still in remembrance with feelings which I cannot describe. I now fancy ourselves together in such a corner, at such a gate, or under yon hedge, telling to each other what has passed through our minds since we last met. As we advanced along in the divine life, all places that we came to, and everything tasted, handled, was new to us, and well worthy our plain and simple scrutiny.

The Bible appeared to us like a new charter from heaven, and its folded leaves disclosed things as strange and wonderful as they were pleasant and suitable to our feelings. This ample volume was constantly referred to by us in our discussions of points relating to a world to come and the road leading to it. Yes, we consulted its contents carefully and with prayer, and onward we moved with cautious steps. If we were wrong we wanted to be put right, but if right we wished to be kept so; yet still we knew that no power could do this, but that which we felt and confided in, and which we were persuaded was all divine. Of free and unmerited grace we became admirers from a deep sense of our own misery, and joyfully received of Christ's righteousness from a discovery of the wretchedness of our own, and gladly did we leap in the bosom of the Savior from a full conviction of there being no safety elsewhere, and at the feet of Jesus we were willing to be found and there to be taught the way to God, and to sing of mercy on a lofty key. In this way became followers of the dear Lord as children, and we fed on the sincere milk of the word, and like calves of the stall we went forth in the dances of them that make merry. Jer. 4. Yea, did we not rejoice exceedingly? and did not the gospel bring glad tidings to our ears and was not the spirit of adoption afforded us? and did we not enter in the year of jubilee with love raptures? and was not our pardon sealed in a very satisfactory way? and did not Christ unbosom himself to us in a marvelous manner and did not our heaven born souls burn within us while he talked to us in the way? and did we not tell to each other long stories of a Savior's love to us.

My brethren have ye not these things still in remembrance? and were they not just about as I have now stated them to have been? But doubtless you have experienced many changes since then, and have known some clouds, and darkness, and trouble, without and trouble within. I have felt and found and seen and know much of these things since we parted, but having obtained help of God I continue unto this day; and much am I indebted to my Maker for his continued goodness and mercy to me and mine. And to the praise of God's grace I now tell you that Christ is still my only trust, my only refuge, my only hope, my only boast and my only Savior. In the days of trouble and in the days of peace, I go to him. I hope all things are well with you and yours. L

Affectionately yours,

WHAT DOES CONDUCT SHOW

One's conduct or deeds shows what kind of principle controls or actuates him. One whose words are truthful shows that truth dwells in him. One that tells lies proves that falsehood dwells in him.

A man whose words are peaceful illustrates the indwelling of peace in him.

The person of a violent temper or rash in speech proves him to be a violent inconsiderate man. Make the tree good and the fruit will be good. For the tree is known by the fruit it bears. We know that indisputable evidence of the quality of a tree is established and known by the fruit it bears.

So it is a righteous law or rule that every one is to receive according to his works.

A man who is careful of his own conduct desires that he may not wrong another. To be slow to speak ill of another, and careful of the rights of another, is a mark of wisdom in one.

"Why do the Heathen rage and, and the people imagine a vain thing?"
P^s. 1. 2:1.

One reason is because they do not know the Lord. Another is they love that which is opposed to God. Every one is turned to his own way which seems right in his own eyes.

The greatest opposition of men is against that which is most surely accomplished, and that for which all other things were created that are made. All that God made was good. He does not make the action wicked. All he made was good, and they are all made for His own glory. Jesus Christ is the appointed heir of all things, therefore all that God made was for the exaltation of Jesus. He commands all the angels of God to worship Him, and he has decreed that every knee shall bow to Jesus, and every tongue shall confess that he is Lord to the glory of God the Father.

Now the kings and rulers of the heathen were raging and opposing Jesus, and endeavoring to prevent the very thing that God purposed to be done, and the most glorious thing that the Lord proposed to be done. The decree of God was the setting of His King the Lord Jesus on his holy hill of Zion. But this was the thing that they endeavored most furiously to prevent. Hence they fought against that very thing they determined should not be done but was the very thing they were gathered with wicked hands to do. Joseph's brethren determined he should not be promoted so that they would bow the knee to him, but the very method they adopted to prevent this was God's way by which it was accomplished. This is the stone rejected by the builders, but it is marvelous in our eyes. To us he is the one altogether lovely.

This shows that men in nature do not know the Lord Jesus. If they knew him they would love him, for there is none so glorious. But men cannot as long as they walk in the light of their own eyes ever know Jesus whom to know is eternal life. P. D. G.

ELDER JAMES DAMERON.

Many of our older brethren remember Elder James S. Dameron, a preacher that labored unceasingly as perhaps any preacher I have known preaching almost every day, and gifted as a teacher and preacher, and in conduct and teaching. His churches were blest with peace and prosperity.

In the year 1900 he was deprived of his reason, and was placed in an asylum at Morganton, N. C., where he remained until his death November 15, 1907.

Sad have been the days to his wife—a devoted, faithful Baptist—and it was sorrowful to his children. Sister Dameron I have thought wore the most crucified expression of any person I have ever seen. Not one word of murmuring have I ever heard escape her lips.

Truly the ways of God are above us, nor does he give to man any account of his matters. We know that He rules in righteousness and in truth, mercy and faithfulness. May he give us grace to love and worship the Almighty One. P. D. G.

PANICS

There have been a number of panics since my birth. In 1837, 1847, 1857, all during the Civil War—1869, 1873, 1893, and what is upon us now, were panics in various forms.

During the Civil War there was worthless money because of want of basis of credit. We do not need what is called money that does not pay debts, nor is able to make purchases.

In ordinary panics there is not enough money in circulation to serve. Strangely they creep on people. There is a period of prosperity.

Man's temptation to accumulate is stimulated. People over purchase or contract debts beyond their power to pay. They are flattered that times will still grow better. But pay day must come. Somehow there is a day of reckoning when settlements must be made. Some leaders in commerce fail to pay, that cripples others who are thus rendered unable to meet obligations. Distrust want of confidence spreads. The cry of short funds is sounded. Fabulous rates of interest are offered by debtors for cash, but that increases the distrust until the panic is on. What is it? The proverb is "Capital is timid." But it is the man that has it is timid and tightens his grip on it, or hoards it. If he has money in banks he withdraws it. Then stops buying property. They prefer money to property then, because they cannot sell property for want of buyers. Their love of money is never more manifest, and this cursed love of money becomes the punisher of its own victims.

There is as much money in the country at one time as there is at another, but it is not at work—not put to the exchangers. The remedy is for every man to pay his debts as far as he can—sell his money crops for this purpose and thus stimulate business. But instead of this the fright will cause each one to lock up his money and thus withhold the money from circulation which is the needful thing to overcome and end the panic.

Wrong doing is its own punishment and rebounds with crushing force and cruelty on the offender. The very methods adopted to protect selfish man is the rod of punishment laid on him to make him feel the folly of the love of money.

If each man will pay his debts as far as he can this will help others. It is more important to pay a debt now than it is in ordinary times. The use of money is not to hoard or bury or hide in a napkin but to be put to work and pay debts and thus help mankind. You cannot take a cent with you when you die. The important thing is to use it right while you are living.

The panic will soon be over. Trust in the Lord and do good and verily thou shalt be fed.

P. D. G.

A SINNER.

Who needs a Redeemer? The man not in the bondage of sin does not feel the need of a Redeemer for he has no burden to distress him. The one who feels burdened with sin is the one that needs help. Every time a pang of guilt smites the soul there is a cry for mercy. To such a soul the truth that the blood of Jesus cleanses from all sin is the sweetest knowledge for there is hope for that soul. The door of heaven is closed against every man who feels he is a sinner unless there is forgiveness: it is not for or because of any works but purely of grace for it is the forgiveness of sin. By grace through faith this salvation comes to those who feel that they are sinners. This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, and none that feel and know they are sinners are ever too great sinners for the blood of Jesus to cleanse them.

Then for one to know that he is a sinner is as necessary as it is to seek Jesus, or to believe him. Because none ever believe on Him who do not feel or know that they are sinners.

P. D. G.

THE PEACE OF GOD.

Freedom in Jesus brings the sweetest peace to the soul that man has ever known, for it is the peace that passeth knowledge or understanding. Indeed any communion of the heart of man with the Lord, any token of his love to us, or our love to Him transcends all earthly joy. Forgiveness of sin through the blood of Jesus gives a joy the world knows not of. Faith in the Lord Jesus grants one joy and love to God that no natural man has ever felt. The indwelling of Jesus by faith in one brings a joy and comfort unknown to any man who has not tasted that the Lord is gracious. One day in His courts is better than a thousand elsewhere. The smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul. The witness of the Holy Ghost that testifies the love of God is so great that he who has this blessing is afraid of any intruders that would mar this peace of God. So he that has this comfort is afraid of any enemy that would rob him of this joy and hope in the Lord. How careful he will watch that no man take away his joy. For there is no earthly pleasure that can supply its place; and when this joy is gone none but the God of heaven can restore that peace to the soul.

P. D. G.

WHY ARE YOU NOT BAPTISED.

This is intended to be addressed to such as have a reason of the hope that is within them which is Christ in you the hope of glory. Such people feel that they are not what they once were, and yet are not what it seems to them that they ought to be. They have felt that they were sinners and have received some comfort in the knowledge given them of the forgiveness of their sins. They have been taught that there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, and Jesus is precious to them, which proves that they are believers in him. They also love the Primitive Baptist people, and love what they love; yet when one speaks to them about being baptised they say I am not worthy. We do not want you to feel you are worthy. If Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin. Hence you feel you are vile, helpless and as a dead man in the sense that you cannot do anything good. What should be done with the dead? Bury them is the only proper thing.

Do you believe that Jesus is worthy? Then go in his name—not in your name. He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved. When a believer is baptised he receives the answer of a good conscience toward God, and goes on his way rejoicing. When the eunuch said to Phillip, See here is water. What doth hinder me to be baptised? Phillip saith, If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest. The eunuch answered, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. At once he was baptised. He that believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God. It is not that you feel worthy, or good, or fit, but you believe in Jesus. You feel he is worthy. You come in his name and are baptised in his name. This is all that is required. If thou shalt believe in thine heart that God has raised Christ from the dead thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

Faith cometh by hearing—not by doing—and hearing cometh by the word of God, not by man's word or by man's doing. Do you believe that Jesus is worthy? Do you wish to serve him? Then put your trust under the shadow of his wings for he is able to save you.

This is a serious matter. I entreat that all that have this precious faith put on Christ by baptism and wear the yoke of Jesus which is light. There is no more wonderful thing than to find that Jesus is your friend and that you are enrolled with believers to live and to die. If we suffer with Jesus we shall also reign with him.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

Please give your views through the Landmark on 1st Corinthians 15:29. "Else what shall they do which are baptised for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptised for the dead?" In this chapter Paul was treating upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ the Lord. I hope the good Lord has given me a little understanding of the necessity of the once crucified and risen Redeemer, but I feel like there is something in the above verse that I would gladly receive, if it can be the Lord's will to put it into your heart to hand me down from the Masters' table a little of the sincere milk of the Word, that I may drink and grow thereby, for I am too weak to eat meat, if indeed I am one at all.

Who are they that are baptised for the dead? Who are the dead that they are baptised for? Is Jesus the one Paul referred to when he said, "If the dead rise not at all?"

A poor sinner,
W. B. KEARNEY.
Snow Hill, N. C.

This chapter devoted to the resurrection of the dead argues that if the dead rise not then is not Christ risen for that if Christ is risen it is clear proof of the resurrection of the dead. It may as well be held in memory that death precedes resurrection, or it is only the dead that can be raised from the dead. No stronger argument could be advanced in proof of the resurrection of the dead than to declare if there is no resurrection then it is not Christ risen. Of course then it follows if Christ is risen there shall be a resurrection of his people. For if the head is risen then the body must also rise from the dead. Such is the unity of Christ and the many for whom he died then must that many also rise and live with him.

Another argument is also used. If the dead rise not then why are they baptised for the dead? We bury dead people. As soon as one dies the thought is forced on the living friends to bury the dead out of their sight. Abraham rises up to seek a burying place to bury his beloved Sarah out of his sight. It would be sin not to bury them—as it would be sin to bury one not dead.

First. Who are they that are baptised for the dead? Believers in Jesus have the witness they are dead to the law by the body of Christ. If Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin. Then if one is thus dead or crucified with Christ should he not be buried for the dead or as one that is dead? Buried with Christ by baptism into the likeness of his death. Like Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father even so we also should walk in newness of life, or in the new, risen life. For if we have been planted together with him in the likeness of his death even so we also shall be in the likeness of his resurrection.

Then how important for those dead to human works or to man's works or dead to the law to be baptised or buried with Christ to show forth the death to sin, and the risen life by faith of Jesus in order that we should be married to him that is risen from the dead, and walk in newness of life.

If there is no resurrection then why should the dead be buried or baptised? Why should we care for the body of the naturally dead enough to bury them if there is no resurrection of the dead? But if we believe there is a resurrection of the dead then we set it forth in burying or caring for the body in hope of its rising again. There is peace and comfort in setting forth our faith in a crucified and risen Redeemer. The like figure of baptism doth also now save us, typified by the ark rising above the elements of death or the water. It does not put away the filth of the flesh, but it does bring the answer of a good conscience to those that are risen with Jesus.

2nd. Those that baptise the dead are the living of Jerusalem, or such as are sent to baptise, for some are thus sent. Those dead in trespasses and in sins can bury their dead, but those who are quickened from the dead are to be baptised or buried by their friends of the household of faith sent to preach and to baptise.

But why should we do any baptising if there is no resurrection? Why are they then baptized for the dead or as dead if the dead rise not. P. D. G.

Friend George Chamlee of Atlanta, Ga., requests my view of Psa. 76.10, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee; the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain."

The wrath means the madness, the wickedness, the enmity, the purpose of man to do evil, or to carry out and accomplish his own desires. When in wrath man puts forth his strength to accomplish that which he pleases to do Let it be here stated that God never works wickedness in man. For God's purpose is pure and holy in all he does. No wrath or wickedness of man can influence, change, disturb or control the purpose of God in any thing. Nor does God make or cause the wrath of man, yet he controls or uses it for His glory. For instance in the notable instance of Joseph and his brethren this may well be illustrated. Joseph is a most lovely, notable character without reproach. His brothers exhibit the ordinary base passions and cunning of vile man. For his dreams they envied and hated him. How could he help having them. They were good because God gave them to him. They determined to destroy him and thus defeat the very thing God purposed. They meant it for evil. It was the wrath of man or the wickedness of man, cruelty to innocent people, deception practiced on their unsuspecting father, the violation of every principle of natural affection and humanity practiced by these men.

The hand of God is clearly seen in preserving Joseph and bringing him to the governorship of Egypt, and the saving of much life. God makes or controls the wrath of men so that it praiseth him. What they meant for evil or wickedness God meant for good. So fully were they restrained in their wicked purpose that all that was enured to the glory of God. The selling of Joseph to defeat his dreams was so controlled that it did nothing beyond what God purposed. The remainder of their wrath was restrained.

The most notable instance in Bible record of illustrating this subject is the crucifixion of Jesus. Men with wicked hands and murderous intent or in wrath were gathered to do what God has determined to be done. The purpose of men was wicked, the deed was wicked, it was full of wrath, it was violative of every principle of righteousness, it was putting to death him who knew no sin, and was without guile, but full of mercy and truth.

Surely God makes their wrath praise Him. What glory comes of this evil? There is nothing in all the glorious work of God in which he is so glorified as in this work, and the remainder of wrath He restrains. Iniquity is finished, Peace follows. Where God begins the work of salvation it is performed by Him to the praise of the glory of his grace, and to man's abhorrence of his own conduct. The tongue of the Egyptian sea is dried up. Death is swallowed up in victory. God is glorified, His providence clean and holy, His justice shines in glory, and man is abased, and iniquity stops her mouth. Let God be true but every man a liar.

The sinner so fully glories in the Lord that in all things he praises Him. Sin is shown in its depravity, mercy rejoices, the wisdom of God shows in perfection. The remainder of wrath is restrained and God so works in the sinner that in all things he is praised. Even the wrath of man praises God. P. D. G.

JACOB—ISRAEL

"He took his brother by the heel in the womb, and by his strength he had power with God." Hos. 12:3.

Jacob is one of the mysterious characters of the Bible—a typical one that is always victorious in the end, but much oppressed and distressed, though his triumphs are best displayed in his deepest troubles.

He has his plans and methods which show his power and skill, but he cannot ascribe his success to any of his efforts. Rebuke rather than commendation comes to him as the results of his efforts.

The Lord will punish Jacob according to his ways: according to his doings will he recompense him, Hos. 12:2. He took his brother by the heel in the womb, and by his strength he had power with God. Before he was born God loved him and gave him strength before he was born. Grace is given the Lord's people which are his portion before they are born. If after their birth they do good it is of God who showeth mercy.

Why should wisdom and strength appear in Jacob while in the womb? Why should he take hold of his brother by the heel before either was born? Why should he have power with God? The power he had was with God, not against Him. It was all given him of the Lord and there must be failure in Jacob in order to show the power he had not in himself but with God. When years afterward he meets his brother he was in a great strait, fearing his brother. There wrestled with him an angel all night. At break of day the Lord said, "Let me go. Jacob said, "I cannot unless thou bless me." "What is thy name?" said the Lord. Jacob feels his sinful character and confesses I am a sinner. Jacob name—Jacob means a sinner, a supplanter. Esau had long known his name. Twice his power over Esau had been shown. But now the name in which there is no sin must appear and must be given to this afflicted, wretched one. A new name of power with God and men and with prevalence is now named upon him, and that which was indicated and foreshadowed before the birth is manifested. But Jacob the supplanter is recompensed according to his ways.

How wonderful is God in his dealings with his people bringing their sins into judgment, yet where sin abounds grace much more abounds. Jacob limping but Israel prevailing in God's power revealed in him: Jacob saying all is against me, Israel saying it is enough.

Jacob coming in the name of the first born and Isaac thinking he is the first born, obtains the blessing. The sinner brought in the name of the truly first born of God, while sin is not seen but is hid, and the sinner stands in the divine right of the first born from the dead without guile, his sin all being put away.

If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature, old things are passed away, and befold all things are become new. The Lord saves his people but he takes vengeance on their inventions. P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

To the Readers of Zions Landmark:

Dear Brethren, Sisters and Friends: Being appointed by the members of Buffalo church in Stokes county, N. C. to write an obituary notice of Brother J. H. Hutchens for publication in Zions Landmark by the help of the Lord I do in my weak way undertake the duty through love and respect we have for our dear brother and his family, and the family of God; but it is with a sad heart I undertake to write.

Brother Joseph H. Hutchens was born in Surry county, N. C., June 4th, 1849 and departed this life January 24th 1906, making his stay on earth 57 years,, seven months and twenty days. He was happily united in marriage to a lady of the same name, Mrs. Martha Hutchens, They lived happily together to the day of his death, but there is now left a desolate widow, sorrowful and lone'y, and their three dear children with a host of relations and friends to mourn their loss.

Yet we hope their loss is his eternal gain, for we believe that while his body sleeps in the dust his spirit is now resting in the paradise of God.

He was blest with a good hope in Jesus and joined the Primitive Baptist church at Buffalo about seventeen years ago, and was led by the unworthy writer down into the water in obedience to the command of our dear Savior, and was baptised and was made to feel that I had indeed baptised a child of God, which he has proved by an orderly walk and a Godly conversation.

He was after a while chosen and ordained a deacon of said church which office he filled well to the day of his death. He was a faithful member to all duties assigned to him in the church. He was a good neighbor, kind husband, and a faithful father. He was truthful and highly esteemed among his acquaintances.

We miss such a useful and lovely one. He was cut down by that dreadful disease consumption—suffered greatly, yet he bore all with great fortitude.

I visited him just a few days before his death and saw the tears flow down his cheeks. The poor pale frame that could scarcely be heard above a whisper began to talk. He was led to talk of the sufferings of his mortal body, and of the joys of the soul after death. He was led back to the time he received a hope, talked of how he suffered for sin, and how happy he was when the burden left him, and that he was made to feel and believe that salvation is by grace alone; and that he was coming to the brink of death, and that he was willing to go, though he regretted leaving dear ones; but felt it would be a happy exchange for him.

He desired the writer to preach his funeral, and that his mind was impressed with two favorite hymns he wished used. One is, "Why do we mourn Departing Friends." The other is "Why should we start and fear to die." When the writer bade him the las farewell he reached out his emaciated, trembling hand, saying it is the last time I shall ever see you in this world.

On Tuesday the 23rd he said to his son that would not live to see the sun rise next morning. On the next morning just before the sun arose he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus and was released from all his sufferings. He appeared to be in his right mind to the last.

On the morning of the 26th, a large gathering of people assembled at his house, and by the help of the Lord the writer held a funeral service as the last tribute of respect, after which his remains were laid in the family burying ground to await the resurrection where his body with all the saints will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air to ever be with the Lord. May the Lord bless the bereaved, and prepare them to meet him in heaven is the prayer of the writer.

ELDER ALBERT BLALOCK.

Elder P. D. Godd:

By the request of his wife and children, I will try to write a short sketch of the life of our beloved father in Israel, Elder Albert Blalock. He was born October 30, 1831. He died September 5, 1907. So his stay on earth was 75 years, 10 months and 28 days. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Upchurch, November 30, 1854. Eight children were born to them, three of them are dead and five are living. My wife being his oldest daughter. He obtained a hope in Christ September 4, 1852. He and his sister Luetta Lawson, united with the Primitive Baptists at Camp Creek Church and were baptised by Elder George Coggins on the second Sunday in August, 1853. A short time after this his gift was discovered and he commenced preaching the gospel of the Son of God. After a while he was ordained to the work of the ministry by Elders A. N. Hall and D. R. Moore. He very soon became pastor of Camp Creek, Tar River and Stories Creek churches, which he held until his death. He was also Moderator of the Lower Country Line Association at the time of his death. During the last year of his life he was too feeble to attend his churches regularly, though they did not call another pastor. He preached his last sermon, although he was quite feeble, at Stories Creek on the third Sunday in July, 1907. Notwithstanding he was not confined to his bed, yet he was very unwell during his last hours, and he passed away almost suddenly. Peace to his remains. And may peace of God which passeth all understanding, cause his lonely companion together with all the family to feel resigned to His will. He was buried at the old family burying ground in Person county, N. C.

I have heard him preach many times and his doctrine was always sound according to the way I felt and believed it. One of his favorite subjects was this, "My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me." We may say of him as Paul did he has finished his course, henceforth there is a crown of righteousness laid up for him. He was much loved and esteemed by the Primitive Baptists.

Though I feel my incompetency to do this subject justice, yet I can say that the subject of this sketch has oftentimes been a great comfort to me.

Yours truly,

J. R. BLALOCK.

ELDER W. R. CUMMINS.

He preached his last sermon at Shady Grove, Patrick county, Va., on the fourth Sunday in October, 1906, and it is said that he preached very ably. On Friday following at his home he was struck speechless and so remained until his death which occurred the 20th of May 1907. He was buried on the 22nd, witnessed by a large assemblage of brothers and friends who came to condole with his wife and children, and pay their respects to one they loved so much.

The funeral services were conducted by Elder Peter Via and myself. The presence of the Lord seemed to be there. He leaves a wife and six children, five little daughters and one little son, children of his surviving wife, also six sons and four daughters of a former wife, to lament the death of their dear father. These grown children are all of excellent character. May the Lord bless them all to bear with grace and fortitude the loss they have sustained.

Elder Cummins received all the attention needful during his sickness, both in medical service and nursing. Dr. Will Cummins, one of the most eminent phy-cians in this section, gave him all possible attention, together with other noted physicians, Drs. Martin, Perkins and Tatum, also his faithful wife ministered to him untiringly and others also served him lovingly. But his time of departure had arrived and he was translated out of the weakness and sorrows, pain and death of mortality, his soul going to God and his body going to the dust from whence it came.

He was born and reared in Monroe county, W. Va. He received a good hope through grace when he was young and united with the Indian Creek church, and was baptised by Elder Hubbard, a grand son of old Elder John Connor of this county. Soon after uniting with the church in early life he began exercising in the ministry. The brethren perceiving a preaching gift in him was manifested ordained him to the gospel ministry perhaps more than forty years ago. He also studied and practiced medicine successfully. He was highly esteemed by his acquaintances and was useful in his day and generation. He was an amiable man in disposition, possessed of an humble, meek and quiet spirit.

He was a loving husband and a good father, and an ornament to mankind. He loved his brethren and contended earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. His desire to feed the hungry was manifest. He sought to relieve poor suffering humanity day and night, in cold and heat, and to preach the gospel and finish his course in faithfulness.

He has passed away that he might go to his eternal home embalmed in the love of God. So weep not for one so useful here but gone home to glory.

JOHN TRENT.

Elder P. D. Go'd:

Dear Brother in Christ: It is with a sad heart I make an attempt to write out the obituary of my dear old father and mother. I know I can't do the subject justice without the help of the Lord. Mrs. E. M. I. A. Huff was the oldest child of Silas and Sarah Norton. She was born July 4, 1821 in Clark county, Ga. She had five brothers and two sisters, all of them died before she did. She was married to Thomas Wells August 20, 1843. Unto this union were born two sons and one daughter. One son is yet living, M. M. Wells. Mr. Thomas Wells died December 8th, 1847. On the 18th of March 1848 she bought her home where she had lived until she d'ed. On November 6th, 1853 she was married to Jer'miah C. Huff. Unto this union four children born, three daughters and one son, one daughter died when an infant, the others are yet living.

She received a hope in Christ several years before she joined the church. She joined the Primitive Baptist church June 1st, 1878, and was baptised next day by Elder J. H. Cook. She lived a true and faithful member as long as she lived. She died November 26, 1906, making her stay on earth 85 years, 4 month and 2 days. She died with pneumonia. Everything was done for her that could have been done but her time had come and she was carried home to rest as we feel to hope in heaven wit' Christ her Lord. Few if any can be found who leave a brighter record for truth and honesty in all her dealings with her fellowmen during her natural life. She came as near following the golden rule as any person I ever saw. But oh, she is gone and will not return. She has left us here mourning but we have every reason to believe she has gone to rest.

Elder D. M. Matthews preached her funeral next day in the presence of a great many people. Than her dear body was carried to Oakland cemetery to wait for Christ's second coming to carry her home to heaven.

LAURA.

Wife of A. J. Sanders and daughter of M. C. Parker and wife, sister Rebecca Parker, was born October 4th, 1878 and died July 8th, 1907, she being 26 years, 9 months and 4 days old. She leaves a father mother one sister, three brothers, husband and three children to mourn their loss together with many friends.

Laura had been in bad health for some time but being of a very industrious disposition she kept at her work until the night of July 2, when she was taken down with bilious fever, and though her physician and loving hands nursed and administered to her the best they could, the time had come when the Lord would call her from earth.

On the first day of July I spoke at a school house near her home and she was there and appeared to be enjoying the meeting. She loved to read Zions Landmark and often borrowed them from her mother for that purpose. She appeared to feel that there was some comfort in death and told her mother and sister that she did not fear dying but she didn't want to leave her little children. Thus she must have seen death as a going out of a world of sorrow and trouble to the place of joy and peace. She had never made any open profession of religion but the Lord knows who are His and He is able to save unto the uttermost them that come unto God by him for he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

I want to say to the bereaved ones, may we not rest in this hope that the Lord has and will do justly and that not one sorrow has come to you by chance. The Lord has ordered it, done it and it is well.

Hope then in God for He is able to save you and comfort you for He is the rock of our salvation.

Their loving brother and friend,

L. H. HARDY.

Jeremiah C. Huff was one of thirteen children who was born unto Clayton and Elizabeth Huff. He was born in Newton county, Ga. March 4, 1831. He had five brothers and seven sisters, all of which are dead but one sister Mrs. Lizzie Crawford. He was first married to Matilda Cunard December 5 1850. Unto this union one son was born. His wife died November 1852. He then married Mrs. E. M. I. A. Wells. Unto this union three daughters and one son were born. One daughter died when an infant, the others are yet living. He served three years in the war between the States. He was a true and faithful soldier to the Confederate cause.

"On the first Sunday in August 1847, when in my eighteenth year at Lanes meeting house in Newton county, Ga., I saw myself a lost sinner in the sight of God and a voice said to me, ye must be born again, which caused me to go to the lonesome grove and there try to pray to the good Lord to have mercy on me a lost sinner. On the Wednesday following about 3:00 p. m., that load of sin and guilt was removed, that fear of the devil and torment was taken away and I was made to rejoice in Jesus my Savior, O, that day. Then the light of glorious divine grace shined into my poor heart and caused me to love and fear Him whose goodness and mercy has kept me to the present time. In August 1849 I joined the Methodists at Starrsville, Newton county, Ga. They told me I could live a holiness and sinless life. I soon found out it was a sad mistake which caused me a great deal of trouble. The impression on my mind was that their baptism was not right, and that I could not do and get good. I was blinded and caused to persecute the true church of God for some years. In May 1855 I went to Nance's Creek church to meeting. Elder Shaw preached the doctrine of salvation by grace, and that was according to my experience. In August the same year I went to Utoy church. They washed each other's feet. There I saw the true church of God I believe. On the 1st Saturday in October, 1855, I was received by experience by Utoy church and was baptised on the first Sunday in November following by Elder Johnson Pate. The church at Utoy had him ordained to the office of deacon August 30th, 1878. The Presbytery was Elders W. H. Gullege, Elijah Webb and J. H. Cook. He lived a true and faithful member of and deacon of Utoy church as long as he lived. He was sick a long time and suffered a great deal before he died. He begged to die and be at rest with his Lord in heaven. He died with Bright's disease

June 1st, 1907. Everything was done for him that could have been done; but the Lord's time had come for him to be carried home to rest as we hope in heaven with Christ his Lord. Few if any can be found who leave a brighter record for truth and honesty in all his dealings with his fellow-during his natural life. He came the nearest following the golden rule of any person I ever saw. But he is gone from us and will not return. He has left us here mourning but we have every reason to believe that he is gone to rest. Elder D. M. Matthews preached his funeral from Psalms 37-37 next day in the presence of a great many people. Then his dear body was carried to Oakland cemetery to wait for Christ's second coming.

Resolved that we, the members of Utoy Primitive Baptist church now in conference August 3rd, 1907, desire to return our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family of our Brother J. C. and E. M. I. A. Huff deceased, and pray God's blessing upon them while here on earth, and when the time shall come when their spirits shall be separated from this earthly tabernacle in which it dwells that it may be wafted by the angels of heaven to that beautiful home, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, there to dwell through all eternity with all the redeemed of God at his right hand in Glory.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Southampton, Pa., Nov. 10, 1907.

Dear Brother Gold:

I am impressed to write to you some of my thoughts and experiences upon Rom. 8:8-12. "So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwells in you. Now if any man has not the Spirit of Christ he is none of His." Here the distinction between the flesh and the Spirit is presented with reference to our standing in the sight of God. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Faith deals entirely with spiritual things, and by that faith which is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, we stand before God in Christ, his Son, and are therefore "holy and unblameable before him in love."

Now the apostle tells the Roman brethren, and us, how we know that this is true of us; how we experience it; what the effect upon one in His feelings is, to be in the spirit in the meaning of the apostle here.

He says, "And if Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin, but the spirit is life because of righteousness. The truth here declared was first made known to me in this wise: On a Sunday morning I was walking toward the meeting house where I had an appointment to preach. I was in a terrible state of mind because I felt unfit to preach on account of a special sense of the depravity of my heart. I seemed to be altogether vile, and the thought of standing up before the Lord's people when I knew myself to be so vile and sinful was terrible to me, and brought me to the borders of despair. While I was wondering what I would do, and what would become of me, all at once these words were in my mind with wonderful power, "If Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin." This was many years ago, but how well I remember the strong emotions of wonder and praise that awoke at once in my soul as these words came to me. I was saying, "Lord is it because Christ is in me that I feel this deadness of my body?" I had felt as unable to do a spiritual act, to do anything acceptable to God, as a dead man would be to do a natural act. And now in one instant I saw what the apostle meant, showing to the Lord's people the effects on them of the Spirit of Christ dwelling in them. From that time they must lose all confidence in the flesh. It is henceforth dead in their esteem so far as spiritual work is concerned. It can of itself do nothing good.

But is there then no righteousness to be manifested through the flesh? Is there no good work which these hands can do? Cannot these feet walk in paths of righteousness? Cannot these tongues speak gospel truth, and sing the praises of God? Yes. Hear the apostle farther: "But the Spirit is life because of righteousness. Here, then, is the life which the saints live here in the flesh. It is not the life of the flesh that they live, but a new life in the flesh, as the apostle says in another place: "Nevertheless, I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

But how can truth and righteousness be manifested in the world if the bodies of the saints are dead because of sin? How can a child of God do a good work, his body being dead because of sin? This the apostle sweetly and gloriously answers: "But if the spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal body by his spirit that dwelleth in you." Now these bodies, which we felt and feared were unable to do anything to please God because sin had so defiled them and made them dead to everything good are quickened by the spirit of Him who raised Christ from the dead which spirit dwelleth in us. Being thus quickened the work which they do is a good work. The character of any work depends upon the spirit which moves us to do it. If we are moved to do it by the carnal mind it is a dead work, if the Spirit quickens us to do it is a good work.

Notice that the first name in the 11th verse is Jesus. "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you." "If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his." Jesus is the name that speaks of salvation. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Now if that spirit dwell in one it has already been declared that the body is dead. Of course no one could think that the apostle means that the body is destitute of natural life, but that it is dead in the sense of the same apostle when he said, "In me.. that is in my flesh, dwells no good thing."

Now the second name is used,

Christ which means anointed, and includes head and body. "As the body is one and hath many members and these members being many, are one body, so also is Christ." Now follows the declaration concerning the quickening power that shall cause these poor sinners to live not after the flesh but after the spirit. He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you." This spirit by which we are quickened to run in the way of God's commandment, and obey the gospel, we must notice, dwells in us at the time of the quickening. The language of the apostle means that very clearly and plainly.

We are to notice also that this quickening must be now, here in time in this gospel day, for because of this quickening of our mortal bodies by the spirit of Christ that dwelleth in us we become debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh. The word therefore with which the twelfth verse begins shows the declaration in this verse to be a consequence of the preceding, and that the quickening by the spirit that dwells in the people of God is experienced here in time, and does not refer to the appearing of the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ from heaven, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. Again I must call attention to the word therefore showing the twelfth and following verses to be consequent upon what is declared in the 11th verse, and that the apostle has been, and is, showing by what power the Saints, quickened to live after the spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body, and live as becometh the gospel of Christ.

To quicken not only means to give life but to excite, to stimulate, to move by the power of that life. To read the whole chapter appears to me to show clearly that in our experience it is the same body which is dead because of sin in which the spirit is not because of righteousness, and that it is in the and through the same body that the quickening power of the spirit which is life, is manifested. It is only in and through our body that the spirit of life can be seen and felt. To those only who have felt that the body is dead because of sin, and who have been sweetly surprised to feel the quickening power of the spirit moving them as their life because of the righteousness of Jesus Christ, can the declaration of the apostle in the succeeding verses come with power and authority. Now by the quickening power of this new life, the spirit of Christ dwelling in them, they desire to be led and controlled by the Spirit of God so as to mortify the deeds of the body. They desire not only to have this assurance that they are sons of God, but they wish to live as sons of God, and do those things that are becoming in sons of God. It is only by the quickening power of the spirit that they can thus mortify the deeds of the body and live.

Brother Gold, I think that when we get the true meaning of any portion of the written word of God, it will be found in some sense to answer to our experience. I may write some more concerning the following part of of this chapter, if the Lord will.

Your brother in hope,
 SILAS H. DURAND.

CHARLOTTE GAZETTE,
 Charlotte C. H., Va., Nov. 24th, 1907
 Elder P. D. Gold.

Dear Sir: I am an old man in my 87th year, an old Baptist by profession baptised in 1835, ordained in 1847. I knew of no difference among Baptists until some four or five years after uniting with the church which professed to take the scriptures as a creed, independant in its organization, holding the principles of God's sovereignty, man's condemnation under the law, the necessity of regeneration, the vicarious redemption of Christ, the impartation of divine life by the Holy Spirit, effectual calling, and divine preservation by a living faith to eternal salvation.

The essential ideas were that man by nature is destitute of the knowledge of God, condemned under the law and redeemed only by the blood of Christ, the knowledge of which facts revealed in the gospel is made known to and made personal to the individual soul by the teaching or virtues of the Holy Spirit.

Such was and still is my creed today, and these facts I have endeavored to set forth or preach, as embodied in the injunction to every one called of God, to "preach not himself but Christ Jesus the Lord." This is first taught to every believing soul by the spirit of God, and a dispensation of the word of God is given to every one taught of God and commissioned by Him to preach Christ only as evidence and witnessed by the authority of the church.

I had some peculiar experiences and trials as regarded preaching but was somewhat aided by the advice of my first wife's father who was told by her that I was in some trouble. He said, "Leonard don't worry about this matter. "If the Lord wants you to preach the church will find it out." I did not tell the church but they told me and called for my ordination.

But of this I had not designed to write to you. All the actors of those days have long since gone home. For of the church in those days it could be said, "How these Christians love one another." From all I see in the Lantern, "Footprints," "Signs of the Times," and other prints I am often led to cry "How these Christians hate one another!"

Love is the great peculiarity of the Gospel. "God's name is Love." "God so loved the world," etc. "The love of God—not for—is shed abroad in our hearts." "Not that we loved God, but He loved us." "If a man love not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" I do not expect every one to think as I think, or feel exactly as I feel. "There are diversities of operations by the same spirit."

What do we know of God's purposes or designs, save as He reveals them. Why quarrel about "The absolute predestination of all things" or "Eternal generation of Christ," or "Time Salvation."

It is enough for us to know that God governs in all things, and we are not His counselor, nor can we teach Him. What we don't know now, we shall know hereafter.

I have felt moved to write to you, my brother. Forgive me if I have said what is wrong. I desire the prosperity of Zion. Oh! that God would revive His work, in the hearts of His people or in His church.

When it is well with you remember your aged brother.

LEONARD COX.

Elders Gold and Lester, and to the Household of Faith:

My mind being burdened, I hope with the word of the Lord, and not having liberty to speak in public I will try to write a few lines to the Landmark. I will take as a foundation for my remarks Luke 6:22: "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil for the Son of man's sake." Members of the church and especially preachers often refer to the above scripture when evil is spoken of them, as an evidence that they are following Christ, but the truth of the case is they are walking after the flesh instead of Christ. We should never handle the Word of the Lord deceitfully, but endeavor to present the Word in its true meaning, and if we are reproached, we should examine ourselves to find out if it is for His sake or for some other cause; the people of God are taught to let their light so shine that others may glorify God.

Christ said the church is the salt of the earth, if the salt or church has lost its savor wherewith shall it be salted, if it has no savor it is only fit to be trod on under the foot of man.

Paul tells us in the 13th of 1st Cor. how useless a preacher becomes when his life and conduct does not correspond with his preaching. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal."

The truth of the scriptures is often verified by circumstances, and yet we are loath to rightly apply them. What profit is a man's preaching when his walk does not correspond with his preaching. Charity does not consist only in giving gifts. Charity is love, it covers a multitude of faults, it does not justify any wrong, but it will forgive—he who has the love of God in his heart is ready to forgive.

May the spirit of meekness and longsuffering dwell in the hearts of all God's children.

Your unworthy brother,
M. P. SMITH.

Dear Brother Gold:

I am sitting here this beautiful morning thinking of the coldness that is among the Baptists in this part of the country.

Where is that sweet communion? Where is the brotherly love that we were told to let continue? Brother Gold, what is the matter? I used to go to meeting and could hear the brethren telling of the dealings of the Lord with them. So many times when driving on the church ground I have heard them singing "What wondrous love is this, O! my soul," but it seems they have lost those precious hymns, and have to talk about their cotton and tobacco. And when the preacher gets in the stand, some of the brethren are out of doors. Many times we hear them say they can't go to meeting; it is too far, or too hot, and they are not able. And if they can go by rail, they haven't the money, but spend much of their time and money on unnecessary amusements. If you ask for help to improve the church, they can't spare a dollar.

Bro. Gold, I can't tell why these things trouble my mind, but they do, and I can't help looking for the judgments, for we are told in God's word, that if we are faithful over a few things, He will make us ruler over many things.

Please excuse mistakes and pardon all error.

Your brother in hope.

JERIA JENKINS.

Elder P. D. Gold:

My Dear Brother—I can hardly express my feelings this morning. Last night I dreamed of seeing the house in which I live afire, and I was very much disturbed to see it in flames, though I felt no heat, and the contents were saved, which was a great comfort to me. If I am one of God's little ones this body of flesh will be consumed, but the soul or spirit that dwells within can never be hurt. We have many sore trials to bear, which are for our good, for it takes troubles and afflictions to keep us humble, although at times they seem severe. I believe I can say some of the sweetest moments of my life have been in affliction, and I feel this morning if I am one of the Lord's little ones, and my life is hid with Christ in God, no flame or fire can ever harm it. He gave His only Son to suffer and die on the cross, to save vile sinners, and if we feel in our hearts He died and rose for us, what manner of persons ought we to be. I feel we ought not to fail to thank and praise His holy name, for being so merciful to us. How I wish I could thank and praise Him as I ought for His tender mercy to me, a vile sinner.

When we can feel His presence all is joy, peace and love, and what a sweet dwelling place. Why can't we so live as to enjoy this glorious privilege? If we could, our meeting together would always be in sweet accord.

The Lord knows my heart and I am glad he does, though I feel that in my flesh dwells no good thing; but my trust is in the Lord who doeth all things well, and is able to save us through Christ. I feel like I can today for a little while, sing with the poet.

"The cross of Christ inspires my heart To sing redeeming grace."

I hope it is my desire to do and live right if I fail. Won't you remember me at a throne of grace, one who feels to be the least of the Lord's little ones, if one at all.

ANNIE DAUGHTRIDGE.

Rocky Mount, N. C.

Stokesdale, N. C., Nov. 19 1907.
Elders Gold and Lester:

As I have had some impressions of mind for perhaps fifteen years to write what I hope to be some of the dealings of the Lord with me, I will try in my weak and imperfect manner to do so; but the delay of fifteen years has not caused me to feel any more worthy, or any better prepared to write now than then; for I am nothing yet but a poor vile sinner. I never did believe much in a doctrine of works for salvation as I hear a great many say they did. I only believed there would be a time when I could do better, and when that time came I would know it was the time for me to amend my ways. My dear father died when I was about eleven years old, and a few minutes before he died he called me to his bedside and told me to be a good boy and always obey my mother. "Honor thy father and forsake not the law of thy mother." Those were the last words he said to me in this world, and they left a lasting impression on my mind, and oh, how often I thought as I grew up to manhood among the wild, reckless and dissipated company that I was often thrown into, that if my father were living I would not be compelled to be thrown into such company so much, but I was compelled to work away from home until I was 20 years of age in order to help my mother support herself and three children younger than myself. Therefore I was not blessed to share the company, presence, or daily counsel and advice of either father or mother that a great many are but in justice to my dear mother, who is now in her 78th year, I wish to say that she never failed to give me good advice when I was at home. I think I believed I was a sinner from my earliest recollection, or in other words, I did not believe I was a fit subject for the kingdom of heaven, for I believed when I was quite young that there was a place of peace and rest for good people, and a place of torment for the wicked: and I remember how I would shudder sometimes, thinking of the awful consequences of dying and being cast off; and then I would think no one would ever be sent to torment without first having a special warning and opportunity to do good, and I thought it would be plainly manifested when that time came with me; but I don't think I ever believed that men had power to convert sinners. I went to hear the different denominations preach, and when they would have what they called revivals I would sometimes try to believe that they were right: yet I could not trust in such works for life and salvation. As I grew older I became more and more convinced that it was not well with me, but I have never been able to tell just when and how conviction for sin set in with me; and that perhaps has often caused me to doubt whether I have really ever known the depths of sin, or the height of love, and riches of grace, and blessings of mercy and pardon, pity and compassion. Sometimes I would think I had heart trouble because I felt such a heavy weight and burden about my heart, and sometimes a choking sensation, and sometimes I would wonder how any one felt under conviction of sin, and thought if I knew I was convicted for sin I would feel much better satisfied, for I believed then that the Lord had all power, and that his work was perfect, and that if he ever convicted one for sin that he would finish the work, but the greatest fear with me was that the Lord was not in the matter, and that I might die and be forever banished from his peaceful presence; but I would try to keep these things off of my mind as much as possible through the day but after I would retire at night it would return and I would think sometimes I would never see the light of another day. I was never so suddenly terrified with sin as to cause me to go to any special place and kneel down and try to pray as I have heard a great many speak of, but it often seemed to me that my sins were more secret and silent than others were; and often I have been made to shudder and to feel within my poor heart, oh, that there never had been any sin. Lord have mercy on me. The time passed on with me thus until I was about 23 years old. I then began to feel a special interest in hearing the true gospel preached, and I began to look forward to the time of the Association to be held with the church at Cross Roads in Guilford county, N. C., embracing the third Sunday in May, 1873, and when I arrived at the meeting place on Sunday morning I thought it was the loveliest congregation I had ever seen in my life, especially the old brethren and sisters near the stand where the preachers were. Elder S. J. Lackey opened services and I know I had never before heard such a sweet, lovely prayer as he prayed.

It seemed to me that every word of his prayer was as the voice of an angel from heaven, and during the time of his preaching I was so enjoying the sweetness of the prayer that I did not remember much about his sermon, but after he was through Elder L. I. Bødenhammer arose and read for a text, "Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come into him, and will sup with him and he with me." He had not been preaching long before I was in such a condition that I scarcely knew where I was, whether I was on the earth or above the earth, so to speak. I was filled with wonder and amazement. It was a wonder to me that I was in that condition. I could not understand why it was that the preaching of the gospel had appeared to me to sound the praises of Jehovah to the everlasting hills. I tried to question these things by asking why is all this? Surely this blessed state of happiness, this great joy and love that is thrilling my poor soul is not for me, and the next words or voices as it seemed to be in and around my ears, and it seemed the voices were legion saying is this religion? is this religion? and by this time it had not only become to be wonderful and amazing, but also lovely and joyful and full of glory. I had to place my hand on my mouth to keep from giving vent to my feelings openly; but I have never been able to express it just as I felt it, and after the morning services closed as we were all leaving the stand my dear old school teacher R. Henderson, asked me how I enjoyed the preaching. I said to him it was a day I never would forget. He shook my hand and said he was glad of it. I then very soon started for home, a distance of ten miles, on foot, although I desired to stay and hear Elder P. D. Gold preach in the afternoon as I never had heard him, but I had promised to go home that evening, so I left the meeting and as I went on for about two miles the meditations and enquiries in my mind were more than I have ever been able to tell, for I could not tell why I had been so strangely wrought upon, and it all so suddenly and unexpectedly. When about two miles from the meeting place I looked off from the road to a thick bunch of bushes and thought of going there and praying to the Lord to show me my true condition, but just at that moment my prayer was turned to praise, my tongue was loosed and I began to thank and praise the God of heaven for His great love, his tender mercy, pity and compassion. I just praised His holy name right there in the road by myself. I then had the greatest desire to see the children of the heavenly king that I ever had before, and to see my folks at home, for I then felt like I could tell to all around what a dear Savior I had found; but before I reached home I had resolved not to tell any one, for I thought no one knew anything about it but myself, but just one week from then Uncle William Neal said to me he heard that I had professed a hope, was it so? It shocked me and surprised me also, for I did not think any one had taken notice of any thing of the kind except Mr. R. B. Henderson, and I had not said a word to him only as above stated, but I only said to my uncle that I knew there had been a change with me some way, but in a few weeks I met with him again and he seemed to understand my case better than I did myself, and led me out in such a way that I could not keep from telling him in substance what I have written though it has been more than 34 years ago, yet it is just the same now that it was then, but I remained out of the church 7 years, thinking I would get more to tell, but the longer I delayed the heavier the stripes, and the more the tears.

On Saturday before the fourth Sunday in February, 1881, myself and wife and Brother W. W. Bennett and wife were received into the fellowship of the Primitive Baptist church at Sardis and were baptised the 4th Sunday in March 1881 by Elder R. W. Hill Elder J. M. Harris had the care of the church at that time, but had not been ordained. The church elected or appointed me as clerk the same meeting that I was baptised and I served the best I could until I got so deaf that I could not understand what was said in conference, and I requested the brethren to release me which they willingly did. I have had a name among them nearly 27 years, but have never felt worthy of their love and fellowship, and often feel like if they saw me as I see myself surely they could not put up with me. But it is a great comfort to me to meet with them and see love manifested among them, though it is with great difficulty that I can hear a word they say. I feel to say from the depths of my heart I want their people to be my people, and their God my God.

Now if this is ever published I wish to say to all those that have a hope in Christ as their Savior, go home to your friends and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you. It will not only do you good, but it will comfort, strengthen and edify the brethren. Today if you will hear his voice harden not your hearts. Are there any that claim a hope that do not hear his voice? Are there any that hear his voice that do not obey? Let each one ask himself that question. The very same power that spoke peace to your troubled soul said, "Come unto me ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart and you shall find rest unto your soul, for my yoke is easy and thy burden light.

I never heard anyone say that they regretted doing their duty in regard to joining the church and being baptised but have heard them say they regretted not doing their duty. I remain your poor afflicted brother saved by grace, if saved at all.

W. A. GOURLEY.

Dear Brother Gold:

It has been in mind for the last few days to write some of what I believe to be the dealings of the Lord with me in revealing to me some things that strengthen and encourage me, without which it seems to me that I could not hold out, and by which my faith is so much strengthened that I am enabled to feel the blessed assurance that I am in His service, and that I am His. "There are times I am burdened with a sense of unworthiness, failures and shortcomings, that I feel to be discharged from the warfare would be sweet relief, especially as a minister of the gospel so small and weak. When I am with you brother ministers I feel less than any, and if one the very weakest, and without these precious manifestations from our heavenly Father I would be bound to fall out by the way.

One of these which is on my mind was in a dream several months ago. In that dream I saw myself with the apostles. We were standing in the road talking together, and after we had been there some time all the aposbles except Mark walked on, and left Mark and myself standing together. After a little while we were moved to go on the same way they went. But before starting I looked back the other way from which we were going and saw Moses. He seemed to be behind us, but his face turned the same way, and we were going to leave him behind, and I stepped back to him and offered him my hand and said good-by, Moses, and I and Mark then walked on our way. I did not see Moses any more. I yet remember well the favor and appearance of Mark and Moses, and how they wore their beard and how old they looked to be. The others I only remember as the apostles.

I then awoke from sleep and I believe with all my heart that He who gave me the vision also gave me insight to its interpretation. When I awoke the first thought was, that I know I am not an apostle, and in answer I was told: No, you are not an apostle, but you are with the apostles. Joy then came to me and I received the sweet assurance that I was on the same foundation, traveling the same road, going the same way, and preaching the same doctrine. And I do believe that Mark greatly felt his weakness and entire dependence on our heavenly Father, for it seems that he like me, followed behind and I now felt that one must so feel to be able to make allowance for me. As for Moses, he looked as humble and meek as the apostles did. But it came to me as it is written, that the law came by Moses. But we were not under the law, therefore we must leave Moses behind and go forward onward. This dream or vision has been a great comfort to me and afforded me much peace of mind and encouragement.

Now I will tell of another visitation of the blessed word to me. Last Saturday and Sunday was our regular monthly meeting at Sappony, and two joined the church on Saturday. One very old and infirm, partly paralyzed. So she could scarcely walk, so I felt some what fearful that I would not be able to baptise her. But the Lord, I believe gave me to trust His strength, and I was not disappointed.

After we came out of the water and I had put my clothes on, as I often do I suppose, I caught hold of the front of my coat with each hand and pulled it closely down around my shoulders and as I did, these words came forcibly and effectively in my heart, "Well done thou good and faithful servant." Up to that time I had been feeling all day like one carrying a yoke and pulling through with much weakness. But oh, how light and easy the yoke became and I felt that the Lord sealed my weak efforts with sweet and precious assurance that I was his and his servant.

Immediately almost it came on my mind, perhaps this is a thought of your own imagination but I knew it could not be, for it never at any time entered my mind that I was a good and faithful servant. It was too different from what I had ever thought of myself.

Now, dear brother, I verily believe what I have written was shown me by my heavenly Father, and I cannot express how thankful I do feel to my dear Lord and Master to speak so kindly, so lovingly to me, and send with His word power to enable me to believe it was He, and believe Him.

Now, Brother Gold, if you think this will afford any comfort to our dear people you may publish it in Zions Landmark.

Your brother in hope,

M. B. WILLIFORD.

CONVERT THE HEATHEN.

I wonder if any of the various Missionary denomination were at the Upper Country Line Association to-

Friday August 14th? Were any of their preachers and Sunday School teachers there? If so I wonder if they saw any missionary work to do? There must have been some thousands of people there who acted in much more uncivilized manner than the heathen nations would have done. I feel pretty sure that the wild cowboys of the West, or the miners would not have acted in so uncivilized a manner as that awful congregation or I might say crowd.

People up in the country are used to speaking of sailors as wicked and uncivilized but I have been speaking for sailors for near thirty two years and have been serving a church for thirty years that is a church of sailors and I have never had such awful behavior among them as I saw in this awful crowd who consider themselves civilized and Christianized.

I will not pretend to say that there were none of the children of Primitive Baptists parents in that awful crowd but if there were they showed no respect for themselves nor their parents who raised them.

Sometimes Primitive Baptists turn their children over to the Arminian denominations to raise them up in their Sunday schools and it turns out nearly every time that they have enemies raised up in their own houses to scoff and mock at their religion. This is not obeying the word of God to bring up the child in the virtue and admonition of the Lord, nor to train up the child in the way he should go.

The scriptures teach "Children obey your parents in the Lord for this is right." But soon after you turn your children over to Sunday Schools they are hedy and don't care any thing for your company nor conversation and when they go to your associations they join the rabble of disturbers instead of the congregation of attentive listeners to the truth.

One of the most disrespectful things that ever occurred at a baptism that I was to administer was by a Methodist minister.

While I was at prayer he drove his horse in the baptizing place and stopped for him to drink and then drove out between me and a part of the audience and drove off at a swift trot. When I went in the water it was stirred up with mud from the bottom.

Now Primitive Baptists is that man or such as he fit to teach you or your children? If they do you may expect them to disrespect you and the religion you profess.

I have been in the ministry thirty-three years and have never yet invited any person to go hear me preach. I want to do this: Go to our associations on Sunday, to any of them they will be held if you will ask (and I will tell you when and where they will be held at if you will ask me) and watch and see your members, your children and their teachers walking, laughing, talking, etc., during the time the preaching is going on.

Some years ago at a session of the White Oak Association at Newport, a very prominent Methodist preacher stood around the outskirts of the congregation during preaching and tickled the young ladies necks with a straw. Was he a fit character to teach your children? Think of it. If Arminian preaching and teaching trains up people to misbehave here in our own country can it do any better in heathen lands.

One very prominent missionary who visited a number of missionary fields and said that while his baggage was in the hands of the heathen he lost nothing that he entrusted to their care, but when it was in the hands of professed Christians he lost several hundred dollars worth. Would it not be better to let them alone to live honestly than to convert them to be thieves?

I believe that if we were to hold an association in a section where there had never been an Arminian teaching among the people we would have good order and attention in our congregation. They go to our meetings as they would to a picnic. They walk and laugh and talk and keep up all the disturbance they will can during the preaching but as soon as dinner is spread they push themselves in uninvited to the tables ahead of the regular company that the brethren and friends are entertaining and often eating everything until the host is embarrassed because he has nothing left for his company.

I consider that such conduct as this is uncivilized and heathenish. Now, if your mission system can accomplish anything here is work for you to do.

We teach our children that if they go to hear you preach to go up where they can hear and sit and hear what is said whether they like it or not. We teach them to not disgrace themselves nor us by misbehaving in in company. We teach them that if they can't do these things to stay away altogether. This is exactly what we want other people to do. If you want to come to our meetings we are glad to see you as long as you will act like gentlemen and ladies and behave and show respect for yourselves and for us in our worship but when you don't do this you are not welcome in our congregations nor at our tables. We don't have picnics at our meetings and we don't thank any people to treat us in any such style and then go off and talk about what a big time they had and what disorder Primitive Baptists have at their meetings.

Prethren I am and shall ever be in favor of our associations being held in the middle of the week.

L. H. HARDY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother: I have had an impression to write the dealings of the the Lord with my poor soul. It has been on my mind day and night, so will make the attempt; although we are strangers in the flesh, I hope not in the spirit. May the Lord be my helper: without Him I can do nothing.

When I was a child I would have serious thoughts of death, especially when some one would die. I would think I would do better, but that feeling would not last long. I would determine to throw it aside until I got older. I went on enjoying things of the world until I was 17 or 18 years of age, when I hope it pleased the good Lord to shew me my lost and ruined condition. I could not enjoy the company of young people as I once did: it seemed I had committed more sin than any one else in the world. My cry was "Lord have mercy on me a poor sinner." I felt like I had not a friend on earth or in heaven, and that I was the meanest child my parents had, and even they had forsaken me. I did not want anyone to know that I was studying about my sins, and would slip the Bible out and read, but did not want my people to know it. I could not see how God could be just and save such a vile sinner as I. I would cry to the Lord for mercy, but it seemed my prayers did not go higher than my head, but would fall from my lips to the ground. I felt that torment was my doom and it seemed that everything was a sign of my death. I would bid farewell to each setting sun, expecting never to see it rise again. I thought the Primitive Baptists the prettiest people I ever saw. Before I saw my lost condition I would go to preaching and see the people shedding tears, but I could not see anything to cry for until May 10th, 1004, if not mistaken, Elder W. T. Broadway preached at W. M.

Almonds. The first thing I knew the tears were running down my cheeks, then I could hear as I never heard before. I came home with my eyes filled with tears. I could not sleep for thinking about preaching. I would go to preaching every chance I had, and would think, "Oh, if I were as those people are; they looked so kind and I loved them, but did not think they loved me. I could not see how they could love such a sinner as I.

I went to Bear Creek one Sunday, and Elder J. E. Williams preached, and when they were singing the last hymn he began shaking hands with the people. I was sitting about half way down the house, and I wanted to shake hands with him, for I didn't think I should live to see him again. I went and shook hands with him, never expecting to see him again. I didn't think I would live till night. I would go to preaching and when I started home would think "farewell to you all, I will never see you again." I cannot tell how I felt, I could enjoy my young friends. I wanted to be alone, and pray the Lord for mercy, but it seemed the Lord did not hear my cry. Yet I could not help crying for mercy. It seemed that every breath was, "Lord have mercy on me a sinner"

I went on for a while and at a time unexpected, I hope the Lord forgave my sins. It was a happy day with me. I could say, "Bless the Lord, oh, my soul. and all that is within me, bless his holy name." I had a desire to offer myself to the church, although I felt so unfit. I was so afraid I was deceived and would deceive others. At night I would lie and beg the Lord to show me in some way, whether I was fit to go to the church or not.

I dreamed my sister and I were at the spring drawing up water to be baptized in, and I was pouring it in a large hole. As I poured it in there would rise a white foam on it. The water was clear and blue. After carrying a while I asked my sister if that was enough, she said it was. I started to get another turn, and began slapping my hands and rising. I thought I was dressed in white. When I awoke I felt better for a while and thought I would offer myself to the church the next meeting, but failed. When the door of the church was opened I would stand and tremble. It seemed I could neither go or stay away. Something seemed to say, "If you love me keep my commandments."

September 2nd, 1905, Elder J. E. Williams preached at Bear Creek; while they were singing the last hymn a cousin of mine went forward and was received. The first I knew I went before the church and was received, ~~and~~ I couldn't talk much. We were baptised by Elder Williams. That was a happy day with me: I went on my way rejoicing. If I could just feel when I come to to die as I did then, I don't think I would mind leaving this unfriendly world. I thought my troubles were ended, but how mistaken I was. It seems I see more trouble than any poor girl in the world, though I am better satisfied since I went to the church. "I am so vile, so prone to sin, I fear that I am not born again."

I am but a young member (if I am one). I united with the church at the age of 19, when I was made willing to leave my young friends to go with those good people. Oh, if I was only as good as my brothers and sisters, but if I am one at all, I am the least of all. I have now moved my membership to Running Creek, a new church. There are only eight members but the Lord has promised where two or three are gathered together in his name, he will be in their midst. Elder Williams is our pastor and always comes with good news to our poor, hungry souls.

I must come to a close. I did not think when I began that I would write much. Am afraid I will annoy some one, my letter is so imperfect, like myself. I have written for relief of mind, but whether it is of the Lord, I know not. I humbly beg you to pardon all errors and pray for me, for I feel the need of the prayers of all God's people.

Your unworthy sister in hope.

RHODA LAMBERT.

Mt. Pleasant, N. C. Route 1

Dear Brother Gold:

Enclosed is a very rich letter from sister Robbins. I would like to see it in print if you see fit; she is a worthy sister and I dearly love her. She is far away from us all, but the good Lord knows where she is, I hope. She asked me if I ever had a low down feeling as she expressed. Yes, Brother Gold, I get as low down and miserable as any poor soul ever can get, and stay so a good portion of my time. If it were not for the sweet promises from the Lord, I would have sunk beneath the waves. Such blessed promises as these, "Child stand up, I am with you." These words came when I was bowed down in body and in mind. I arose and said aloud "Lord I will stand with thy help." When the storm raged and it seemed that I would be destroyed these words came back to my mind, "Stand up, I am with you," and I believe from the depths of my heart that he has been with me, his everlasting arms beneath, bearing me up. I can witness with my dear sister in carrying a heavy load.

So much of my time, I am so heavily burdened that it seems a little more weight would sink me to the earth. If I could know it was for Christ's sake, it seems I would rejoice in suffering. These words have been in my mind so much of late. "In the world ye shall have tribulations but in me peace." I do not expect rest, nor much peace of mind here, for I have learned the older I get, the less I find. But I am looking forward to a day of peace, love and happiness, then my dear sister and I will never know any more sorrow, shed any more tears, nor have any evil spoken of us, or to us, because we will be happy in the Lord, sweetly resting in his embrace. I sometimes crave to go. I felt so tired and can find no rest here, only in the Lord. When he speaks it is sweet rest to my soul, no other word can give such rest.

Brother Gold, I have wanted so much to see you and hear you preach, and hope I may before long. I have passed through many trials since I saw you last, but hope they have worked for my good, and strengthened my faith in the Lord. We are told that "all things work together for good to them that love God," but I fear I do not love him as I ought. I know it is my desire to love and serve him as I should, and live in honor to his name, but I don't feel that I live as becometh a Christian. My thoughts have given me a lot of trouble of late. I know he knows them but no one else does, and I know that he it is that punishes my sins. I am not so afraid of man, but hope I will trust the Lord, and believe I do. He has promised to punish sin whenever he finds it, and his promises are sure. May the Lord continue to bless you, is my desire. Pray for me and mine.

Your humble sister I hope.

MATTIE LUPER.

Dear Sister in Christ:

If I could only feel worthy to call you thus. I have a great love in my heart for the dear children of God, the wide world over, and wish I could pray for them as I want to.

I feel very low and cast down today as though I did not have a friend on earth or in heaven. As if I want to be off in some lonely place, and bow my face to the earth, and point out my feeble prayers to God in behalf of the saints of the most high God. It seems my poor heart is pressed down with a burden that it can't carry much longer. Will you pray for me that I may be relieved in some way. I know it is only the power of God that can relieve us of these heavy burdens, and it seems that I have a great desire to pray, but how to pray I know not, so I am sitting here with tears dropping from my eyes, begging the Lord to have mercy on a poor sinner like me. It seems my heart today desires above all things to be with you all, and hear you talk of the goodness and mercy of our heavenly Father, and that peace and love may be with us.

I feel that if we have the right kind of love in our hearts we can pray earnestly for Zion the world over, and find more fault in ourselves than in any one else. I feel now that I can look upon all God's little ones as being better than myself. I want to be at their feet and if one among them, the very least of all. Dear sister do you ever get so low down that you feel you have not a friend? If so, you can sympathize with me. But I can't see how you could ever feel as I do, for you know I have very little to encourage me in a spiritual way. I hear no preaching and see no one who believes as I do. I truly hope it may never fall to your lot to live away from your church and those you love. It would make you so discontented.

With love and best wishes to you all, I remain your sister in Christ, I hope.

In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." 1st. Thess. 5:18.

So full and complete in the redemption in Christ Jesus, so great is the deliverance from evil of all that are in the spirit, so universal is the working of all things together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose, so needful is the exercise over and in us of things that seem to be against us, and so needed is the chastening and correction of the Father toward all that he loves, that nothing can be excluded from the everything in which we should give thanks. But does it not need grace with precious faith in the Lord to enable one to give thanks in everything. We have no difficulty in feeling that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose, for we see in them such marks that the Lord loves them. But when we are chained down in doubting castle and giant despair has his whip raised over us, then to give thanks is above our power. Then it is the cry of the wretched for mercy.

Observe the reading of the text, "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." The will of God is perfect we know. When the desire of heart is for his will to be done we are in a blessed state. The limitation of that field so blest is "in Christ Jesus." The will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. Then what could be better? It is not that we observe public days of thanksgiving for natural prosperity or plenty. No, it is the every day, every hour rejoicing in spirit of such as are in Christ Jesus. Submission to the powers that be is commanded, but the higher spiritual service of the children of God in Christ Jesus is altogether above natural expressions of thanksgiving for health and crops. It is good to give thanks to God for food, raiment, health and every other natural blessing—not merely one day in the year but every day of the year, for all these blessings come from Him. Every good gift and every perfect gift comes down from above, from the Father of lights with whom is neither variableness nor shadow of turning. Every day, not one more than another, should we render thanks to him.

It is not from any call of legal authority that we render praise to God. It is the high and holy calling of God that awakens in us the spirit of praise to God. It is not that we may agree to write to make this service harmonious that we are collected together by public proclamation to render praise unto God. But it is that heaven born love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost that constrains us to give thanks unto Him that loves us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto Christ and his Father. In this holy realm of Mount Zion every thing in Christ is rendered: for in this holy Mount every thing is in Christ Jesus, and every thing is to the praise of the glory of God's grace. This is in the holy of holies where no intruder can enter, and where no man can command or order the song of praise to God. When the saints are gathered in the solemn and joyful assemblies of praise, gathered by the Shiloh, they render praise and thanksgiving unto God. For in Jesus nothing unholy can enter, no enemy can disturb.

We desire to dwell in this holy tabernacle not made with hands. We desire to lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race that is set before us, looking with Jesus, the author and finisher of \circ . We feel then that none but Jesus reigns in Zion, and that his rest is glorious. No man is found here. Jesus alone rules. Even Moses and Elias are withdrawn, and the Lord alone reigns. Then we cannot desire anything to be otherwise than as it is. For to be reconciled to God in Christ Jesus yields the peaceable fruit of righteousness which is sown in peace of them that make peace. Then every thing praises God and in everything we give thanks unto his holy name.

P. D. G.

END OF THE YEAR.

This issue is the last one of Zion's Landmark for 1907. The landmarks set by the fathers whom God directed in fixing these stakes and declaring the boundaries of this field which the Lord has blest shall never be removed. The survey is from eternity. The corner stone is from eternity. A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary. When God divided to the nations of the earth their portions, and gave them metes and bounds, he reserved the choice portion for the children of Israel. A survey must begin at the right corner. No engineer can run his lines correctly, and cause them to end well, unless he commences at the beginning corner. The foundation or the beginning of the boundary of Zion is from eternity. Glorious things are spoken of Zion the city of our God. Jesus is the beginning of the creation of God, and he is the first born from the dead. As Creator, without him nothing was made that was made. In the beginning was the word. That word was made flesh. He abolished death and led captivity captive. Then God's choice of his people is in Jesus the head. Not only are they chosen in Him, but grace and truth are given us in him, and we are created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. When we follow this chief corner, out of whom comes the corner, out of whom comes the nail, out of whom the battle bow, out of whom every oppressor together, we run to the beginning and the end, our sorrow, for we are complete in him. In him we begin, in him we end, all is to the praise of the glory of his grace.

Nothing can throw down or destroy the foundations which God hath laid in Zion. What should concern us is to write or set forth that declared in Zion. We desire no new ways, no new gods, no new devices of men. All scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. What need then have we for anything else? Cursed is the man that removes the ancient Landmark, or attempts to do so, or that attempts to add to what God has done.

We note dates for our convenience here in our sojourn through time. This is the near the end of 1907. We say we write to speak the year of our Lord 1907. His years grow not old. We cannot conceive of that. We cannot by searching find out God. But He knows us. That is our comfort. All our times are in his hands. Having obtained mercy of the Lord we continue to this present time. His mercy has been over us this year fast closing. The Lord requires that which is past. Nothing ever lags behind him. He measures, judges and disposes of all things according to His good pleasure. May we be thankful to him for his mercy on the writer and readers of Zions Landmark, finding mercy of the Lord.

P. D. G.

NONE LIKE HIM.

The character of Jesus is so worthy of constant meditation upon, and is so worthy of being considered and sought after that the man that thinks not upon his name nor desires him, is utterly blind to the most important things, and is entirely devoid of wisdom.

There is nothing about Jesus that is of the earth earthly, yet he was formed in fashion as a man

1st. He came from heaven though born of a woman. Behold a virgin shall conceive and bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus for he shall save his people from their sins. For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and his name shall be called wonderful, the mighty God the everlasting Father the Prince of Peace.

2nd. Hence he comes into the world without sin, the only one ever born of woman that thus came into the world. He was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners.

3rd. The law required this kind of an offering—a lamb without spot or blemish. How peculiar was Jesus. He did not offer any sacrifices under the law of Moses. He brought no lambs or bullocks to offer on Jewish alters. He never owned a lamb or bullock. One common objection to him was that he labored on the Sabbath day. For many of his miracles were performed on that day. Seeming in the eye of a carnal Jew to be transgressing the Sabbath, yet he came not to destroy the law or the prophets, but to fulfill the law in every jot and tittle, and he only could do this. No man before him or since that has appeared on earth has kept the law, but Jesus has fulfilled it in every jot and tittle. To fulfill the law is an impossibility by any son of man. Every thing the law demands is satisfied, honored, fulfilled in the Lord Jesus, good measure pressed down, running over. He was instructed of his Father, "Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire; mine ear hast thou opened; burnt offering and sin offering hast thou not required. Then said I, Lo I come, in the volume of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart." Psa. 40:6-8. If all the men that ever lived had been as good as Noah, Daniel and Job they would not have satisfied or fulfilled the law that came by Moses. Another kind of man must be made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law. Jesus was spiritual. He understood the spirit of the law. He delighted to do the law for it was within him. He loved it as no man could.

He did not serve unto the example and shadow of things to come. He was substance and life. Priests under the law of Moses were sinners, and must make offerings for their own sins and of others, yet all this did not take away sin. There must be an offering that would not bring sin to remembrance again. There must be an offering that would bring everlasting righteousness. There must be an obedience that would magnify the law and make it honorable.

4th. Therefore Jesus offers himself a living, holy, perfect, everlasting sacrifice to God. He did not offer a dead sacrifice, but he offered himself a living sacrifice. He had power to lay down his life, and he had power to take it again. This sacrifice remains,

It is as good today as it was when offered. It will be as good at the end of time as it is now, Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever. He has perfected forever them that are sacrificed by him. He offered himself without spot to God. He delighted to do the will of his Father in earth and is brought up from the dead by the blood of the new or everlasting covenant; having made an end of sin and abolished death, and brought life and immortality to life through the gospel. He worked on the Sabbath day to fulfill the law, not to transgress it. God ended his work on the Sabbath day, and Jesus proved the Sabbath was made for man by doing works of healing, of making well on the Sabbath day. The law is not satisfied nor honored with any thing short of this. He that believeth hath ceased from his own work as God did from His work when He finished the work of creation and blest it. When Jesus ended his work he rested on the Sabbath in the grave.

Man's work under the law is all sinful. There is no rest for him in law work. What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh God send-own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. Now if any man has not the spirit of Christ he is none of his.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

The principle of secret societies is wrong and the tendency is evil.

Jesus said he did nothing in secret and that he spake openly to all. It is doing others wrong for you to hold sentiments you are not willing to avow publicly or to use secret means to accomplish your aims. It carries on its brow the suspicion of wrong if one is not willing for his conduct to come to the light. It is cowardly and snake like. Ye love darkness rather than light because your deeds are evil. He that doeth truth cometh to the light that it may be manifest that his deeds are wrought in God.

Honest men seek to do openly, fairly and squarely what they are engaged in. But corrupt men seek the covert of secrecy for what they are doing.

God will bring everything to the light however much men may seek to hide their corrupt works. The fact that God will bring every secret thing to light shows that it is wrong to attempt to hide wicked conduct in secret. It is wrong to act wickedly, aggravates its intention and manner when it is done in secret. It is considered the more wicked the murderer to waylay and secretly kill his unsuspecting victim, than it is if he openly kills him after giving him opportunity to defend himself. To betray one with a kiss or with flattering is worse than to tell him what you design to do.

The Primitive Baptists have always been opposed to secret underhanded works of plotters and hidden, deceitful dealing. Hence they do not fellowship any that belong to corrupt secret societies. By this we mean societies that have it in view to damage others. We are commanded to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, that is such secret devils.

But satan and his emissaries are busy and now and then they decoy off and ensnare an unsuspecting Baptist, catching him off his guard, and they make him a prisoner. It is strange to see how this one will justify his course until he dies to the fellowship of his brethren, and even the world loses respect for him, and his joys are gone and like a starved, wretched prodigal he comes back to his father's house if he comes back at all.

There is but one example of an oath-bound society that is named, as far as I call to mind, in the Bible, and that is where a clan of more than forty men banded themselves together with an oath to neither eat nor sleep until they had killed Paul: Acts 23:22. That such a society or band is corrupt, and its purpose wicked, there is no woubt in the mind of any honest man. A conspiracy is combination of two or more persons to do an unlawful thing, and when such men assume an oath they are so emboldened.

A combination of men to oppress others in business by exorbitant prices is corrupt. A corporation gathering great power by reason of its wealth is hurtful to the country and wrong.

The interest and good of all should be the purpose of all. Peace and good will, honest dealing and helpful service towards others, should be the aim of Baptists.

They should set an example of fair, square, open, honest dealing with every one and cherish peace and kindly feelings toward all classes of men, for God made them all

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

What did the carrying of the bones of Joseph from Egypt by the Israelites typify in the gospel day? Please give us your views on this subject in the next issue of the Landmark. I ask you because I see you are ever ready to answer all questions of like nature, and I believe the Lord is with you, as your answers or views are so clear and satisfactory.

Yours in hope,

JOHN W. GREEN.

The old Testament presents the law by which is the knowledge of sin and need of a Redeemer. The new Testament deals in, reveals and sets forth that the Savior has come in the flesh and as fulfilling and verifying or making real every promise of the old Testament, and holds forth the promise of mercy, so that the new is the performance or blessed fulfillment of all ^{is} told in the old. Hence Jesus was a minister of the circumcision or came to confirm the promises made unto the fathers, and that the Gentiles also might glorify God for his mercy; Rom. 15:8-9.

The new Testament makes good or fulfills what the old promised, or Jesus is all that Moses requires, and as much more as grace is above works, or as Jesus is above Moses.

Joseph is a type of Jesus in Egypt. How he gathers up the bread that lasts through the famine, and saves much people alive and nourishes all his father's house.

Here Joseph dies, but before his death he gives commandment for carrying up his bones. See Gen. 50:25. He took an oath of the children of Israel saying, God will surely visit you and ye shall carry my bones. We are told (Joshua 24:32.) that they were carried up and where they were buried and in Heb. we are told (Heb. 11:22) that Joseph by faith made mention of their departing out of Egypt and gave commandment concerning my bones. We are told (Joshua 24:32) Joseph's bones represent good things to come. They tell that Israel shall be delivered out of Egypt. Not a bone of Joseph was left behind in Egypt. Not a bone of Jesus is broken. Not a member of Christ is ever lost.

It proclaims the resurrection from the dead, and entrance into heaven, or that Jesus is the resurrection.

Jesus is the Shiloh and to him shall the gathering of the people be, for where he is shall they all be. The best place for Israel during the famine was with Joseph. The best place for the church is with Jesus, Joseph said, I die, but God will surely visit you. Jesus died for the people and in consequence of this God surely visits his brethren.

"Son of man can these bones live? They are the whole house of Israel. But God loves them and shall surely visit them, and these dry bones shall live.

All through the wilderness Jesus by promise, or as bones, was with his people, but in the gospel he is meat and drink, life and light to them. He is the one by and in whom they live. He is our life and because he lives we also live.—Republished.

P. D. G.

Mr. P. D. Gold,

Dear Sir: A Free Will Baptist told me if I sat on a stool of do-nothing I never would get religion. I told her that if I got it myself I would be on a stool of do-nothing. Another one said, "they must make the first step toward God." But we differ there. I request your views on this through the Landmark provided you can give room in your valuable paper; for I think if there are any right it is the Primitive Baptists.

REMARKS.

A nothing called the stool of do-nothing is a piece of furniture unknown to me. There is no man without a master, though no man can serve two masters. Here is one, we will suppose that does not serve God, but he serves himself, or seeks to please and gratify himself. What is his god? It is himself. Here are moral people, but they serve not the Lord Jesus Christ. How far is one from serving the devil as he serves himself?

There are more differences of opinion among men about the way of salvation than on any other subject. There are many ways, so men say, of being saved, many things which or anyone of which, if you neglect you will be lost: but there is to me but one way of being saved and that way is Jesus. All the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid in him. He is exalted a prince and a Savior to grant or give (not to offer) repentance unto Israel. Mark that, to Israel, nor is there any name but his whereby we must be saved, neither is there salvation in any other or all the forgivings of sins, and by him that believe are justified from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses. Then it is by or through Jesus that we believe in God and have access by the faith of Jesus into this grace wherein we stand and rejoice in the hope of the Glory of God. Then what is there not in Jesus that is needful to our salvation?

It is said that we must come to Jesus. But whoever goes to Jesus that does not have faith in him before he goes and when he goes? He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. But it is said that if we never seek the Lord we will never find him. It is true that God's people truly seek him. Does God leave himself without witness? Who begins the work of grace? Is it God or the dead sinner? Suppose we say the grace of work, instead of the work of men. If it be of grace then the work of grace means the work that is caused or produced by grace. If salvation is by grace then it is of God, for he is the God of all grace, that is there is no grace which is not of him.

No part of grace comes from man. If salvation be of works then it is of man and he could boast. But boasting is excluded by the law of grace.

But the grace of God bringeth salvation sufficient to set the sinner to seek the Lord while he may be found; to call on him while he is near? If that is not sufficient then the very best thing that brings salvation to sinners is not sufficient to cause them to seek that salvation, and if it is not sufficient to cause them to seek it or desire it what can it do? Paul said by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace which was bestowed on me was not in vain. It caused him to labor more abundantly than they all. for it was the grace of God with him that caused it. Grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord. The elect people are also given to Christ. Will all that the Father gives to Jesus come to him? Jesus says they will: All that the Father giveth to me shall come to me and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37.

Can one come to Christ unless the Father draw him? Jesus said, "no man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:44. Then why advocate a system that bears a lie on its very front? Why not hold that which is true, and preach and believe in the Lord Jesus that has power over all flesh to give eternal life to as many as the Father has given him?

On the other hand those that desire salvation are exhorted to seek the Lord with their whole heart and call on him while he may be found.

We should trust, fear and worship that God who has all power in heaven and in earth, and who is able to save and able to destroy. The more one feels his weakness and knows his own vile, guilty helplessness the more he feels the need of that God who is able to save sinners, and the more he will seek him. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him. We are to trust Him at all times. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee because he trusteth in thee."

How could one who says God strives with every man and has done all he can to save him, and therefore will not do anything more until the sinner makes a start or takes the first step, hold that the scripture is true which says, "Being confident of this very thing that he who hath begun a good work in you will perform it to the day of Jesus Christ? Will he not save them? If Jesus reconciled them to God by his death when they were enemies, will they not after being reconciled by his death be saved by his life.

They that believe are to be careful to maintain good works. Let every one that names the name of Christ depart from iniquity. If ye call on the Father who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work pass the time of your sojourning here in fear.

What evidence have those that are not truly seeking the Lord, or departing from iniquity that they are or ever will be saved? Every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as Jesus is pure. For it is Jesus Christ in him. Instantly, immediately after the Lord calls one with that holy calling, he begins to seek the Lord, and as Saul prays, Lord what wilt thou have me to do, or God be merciful to me a sinner. So as long as one is unconcerned about his salvation and is not seeking the Lord, there is no evidence that he is saved or that there is mercy for him.

As long as a man thinks he can begin this matter of salvation whenever he pleases he is not troubled or distressed about his salvation. What has he to trouble him? It is when one deeply feels that there is no mercy for him that he earnestly seeks the Lord. When their tongue faileth for thirst and there is no water then the Lord is manifested as the living fountain of waters. P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM WESLEY BASHAM.

William Wesley Basham, son of Elijah and Nancy Basham, was born April 24th, 1827, and departed this life February 15th, 1901 making his stay on earth 73 years, 9 months and 21 days. He was married to Susan Julia Wright November 27th 1851. He was not a member of the visible church fearing his unfitness for so sacred a place, feared he did not have the evidence of the new birth, which he ought to have to be baptised, and would say that he had rather be right out of the church than be wrong in it.

He was a firm believer in salvation by grace from first to last, both for time and eternity. He believed in Predestination in the full sense of the word as he thought the Bible taught it. If he heard any one trying to subvert that doctrine he would often, in suitable, voluntarily try to prove that doctrine to be right by the scriptures of divine truth, which he not only read but studied much, taking reference from one verse to another to understand aright. He was a very attentive listener to preaching whether he believed what was being said was the true gospel or not. So attentive was he that I have often felt when he would come home and tell me the text or texts and how they were explained almost as though I had been present.

He much loved to hear the Primitive Baptists preach, and when in reach he would go if he could make arrangements that he thought suitable to do so. We loved their company and for them to visit us, and wished his house to be their home when traveling near. He was one of the kindest, truest, and most devoted of husbands, ever trying to render me happy if in his power, and being of a cheerful disposition he did not fail to lighten my burden of affliction, and although much of the time he was in adverse circumstances he did not fail to spend money freely if he thought by it I could be benefited. So untiring and faithful was he that he never did say to me that he was tired to wait on me when asked or needed, but seemed ever willing, notwithstanding, he, too, was much afflicted much of our married life. He bore it all with patience and resignation, often saying to me there is a better day coming—to look at the bright side. Oh, how I do miss him no words can express, none living that can so sweetly comfort and encourage me now. The days pass a most comfortless by. The light of our home is gone out and my loss falls heavily on me; but I desire to neither murmur or complain, but bow in humble submission to the dear Lord's will, and my prayer is for him to enable me, for without him I can do nothing aright. The time will be short, though it seems long, when I trust we will meet again to part no more, but ever be with the Lord and praise His holy name, world without end. My husband went into the army 1861 (October.) He soon after took the measles and was critically ill. He then took cold which settled on his lungs, had a very hard attack of typhoid pneumonia, and was never after a well man, though he attended to much business, being naturally very persevering and industrious.

On the morning of the 6th of February, though very unwell, but feeling about as well as he had for some time, he was helping to get the wagon ready for the men to use and they go to work, he almost suddenly became chilly and weak and found he would have to get to the house. Upon arriving he lay down by the fire but continued chilly and gradually grew weaker until called home. The doctors said he had a slight attack of lagrippe, but heart disease was the main trouble. He said he was suffering nearly all the time, but not severely. He was calm, patient and nearly if not all the time conscious. He knew in whom he trusted, said many times he was trusting in the Lord, or in the once crucified Savior, and like sentences. On the morning of the 10th several persons including myself were at his bedside when he said, if something occurred I cannot remember just what, he could not live until night, then added, "I may not any way," and held out his hand taking hold of mine with a gentle pressure saying, "If it were not for you I feel like I had about as soon go on now as any time." I replied I hope you can stay here as long as I. Trust in the Lord. He replied, "I am trusting in the Lord, I have no other to trust in." Seeing I was grieving, he said to me don't grieve so soon, as though he thought he might get better. On Thursday morning the 14th, he asked me if his clothes were ready. I told him I was afraid he was too weak to change, he replied that he would be in no better that evening than then, and seemed anxious to change, though he might have meant were his clothes ready for the last. I do not know. Friday evening he looked at me as smilingly and sweetly as I ever saw him for some little bit, then raised his eyes toward the joist, in the direction he had selected to be buried, and looked much in that direction to the last, also placed his hands nicely so they were let be at the last. He gradually but quietly grew weaker until 7:20 p. m., then departed as though he was going to sleep, and I verily believe fell asleep in Jesus. He was laid to rest on the 17th of February in a beautiful spot selected by himself not far from our house on his own premises.

We had no preaching as no Primitive Baptist could be obtained on time, and sang at the house "Asleep in Jesus, Blessed Sleep." I was bereft and left an afflicted invalid unable to pay the sad tribute of love in following his remains to the grave. He also left one brother and one sister with a host of relatives and friends to mourn our great loss, but we mourn not as those without hope, firmly believing it is great gain to him. I miss him so much, no tongue can tell; but hope by the mercy of God to soon be with him, sweetly resting in Jesus, if the Lord wills.

SUSAN J. BASHAM.

ELDER JAMES SAMUEL DAMERON.

The subject of this obituary was born on September 27th, 1836, and died November 15th, 1907, making his stay on earth 71 years, one month and eighteen days.

On August 1st, 1860 he was married to Miss Kate Roberts. The fruits of this union were six children, four boys and two girls. Two of the sons preceded him to the grave, both of whom died in young manhood. On the second Sunday in May, 1860 brother Dameron was baptised into the fellowship of the Primitive Baptist church at Bush Arbor, Caswell county, N. C., by Elder Wilson. Prior to that time he was a Methodist and was very self-righteous. At one time he threatened to punish one of his schoolmates at school because he came in and disturbed during his devotional hour. He would not stop and eat wild grapes along the road when he was hungry if he had not asked for them, but the Lord showed him that all of his righteousness was as filthy rags and that he must be clothed in the righteousness of faith to see God in peace.

He was impressed with the gospel ministry in his early Christian life and his impressions weighted him heavily all during the Civil War. If memory serves me rightly his first effort to exercise publicly was during his soldier days.

In his younger days he acquired a classical education and after his return home from the war he became a teacher and many will remember him in that capacity. He owned farm lands but neither the school nor the farm could hold him for his mater had required him to feed His flock. His labors in the ministry were confined to the churches of the Country Line and Stanton River Association but he made several visits to churches and association east north and south.

It was at the Contentnea Association at Lower Town Creek in Edgecombe county when I was about nineteen years old that he break the bread of life to my poor tempest tossed soul. Preaching the first sermon that I ever heard understandingly. After the beginning of my ministry Brother Dameron and I became fast friends, and many times have I been blessed to drink of the water of life as he ministered in heavenly things.

He was a man of much force and always did what he felt to be his duty with his might. During the Civil War he held some responsible positions and always in such a satisfactory manner that I have never heard of any one who found cause to complain. That was a time that tried men but the Lord blessed him so that he made no shipwreck of the faith even in such trying hours.

His life was such as to command respect from those in the church and out of the church so that his friends were very many.

From the time of his ordination in the summer of 1868, he continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine, comforting the mourner, strengthening the weak, encouraging the diffident, for more than thirty years. But the servants of God, as well as others, are flesh and blood. Paul was at one time, nigh unto death; and all of us must die and return to the dust. His nervous system gave way and he was deprived of his reason. His last effort towards the public ministry was at Lickfork on the first Sunday in July, 1900. Soon after that he was taken to the State hospital at Morganton. I have been informed that even there when his mind could be diverted from his nervous condition he would break out in preaching the blessed gospel. How good is the Lord and how greatly to be praised in all his holy mountain

He continued in the hospital until the 15th instant when death came to his relief when he very gently fell asleep and went home to his beloved whom he delighted to serve for so many years. He leaves a true and loving companion, two sons, two daughters, all very faithful and devoted children, with a great host of relatives and friends to mourn, but with hope and joy that his sufferings are over and that he has entered forever into rest.

On the night of the 15th his remains were brought home, where on the 16th his many friends went and took the last view of one whom they knew but to love, and on the afternoon of the 17th his body was laid to rest in the cemetery to wait the will of God to call him forth together with all the blood brought there.

Our dear brother, Elder C. W. Dunny of Greensboro was present and made some appropriate remarks and prayed at the grave just as Brother Dameron used to do.

"Rest from thy labors, rest,
Soul of the just set free;
Blest be thy memory and blessing,
Thy bright example be!

"Now toil and conflict o'er,
Go take with saints thy place;
But go as each has gone before:
A sinner saved by grace."

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A GRACIOUS PEACE AND SPIRITUAL PROSPERITY.

"Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces. For my brethren and companions sake I will now say peace be within thee."
Psalm cxviii.8.

This Psalm has a special reference to the church of God, and you know the church of God, dear friends, from the beginning of the world down to the end of the world is all one. God has only one church and she has many palaces or meeting places. Palaces are where royalty meet, kings, judges and senators. Zion has a great many palaces in this lower world, but never had one, only what God did dwell in. It is a palace to contemplate in what God did do; these be palaces. "Peace be within thy walls." And you know this, some of you do, what a peculiar thing is the peace of God, what a mysterious, peculiar thing is the peace of God; the Holy Ghost says, "It passeth all understanding." You might say, "I could understand it." No, you could not. The peace of God! When the peace of God comes into a man's heart nothing can make him unhappy. "Peace be within thy walls." How many poor saints have had trouble in their families, trouble in their souls, trouble among enemies, and come into these palaces and get the peace. My poor mother was called by grace when a young woman. All her family belonged to the Church of England, and all good singers, but in the midst of all that God called her by His grace, and she could not sing with them, and they could not understand her.

After a few weeks the Lord set her at liberty, and when the clergyman called to ask what was the matter she said, "Don't you see sir, the peace of God which passeth all understanding that is what I have got, it passeth all understanding and it will keep the heart and mind through Christ Jesus." And though the poor minister read it and preached it, he could not understand it. This is a certain truth that Paul and Silas had more peace in the stocks than Adam and Eve had in Eden when they fell. They were all fallen sinners, Adam and Eve, and Paul and Silas, yet I say that Paul and Silas had more peace in the prison with stripes on their backs than Adam and Eve in Eden. I dare say you have proved this, some of you. God lets us have some good things for a little while and I dare say you have walked through these pleasant places like Solomon; he planted him orchards and made him pools of water and had instruments of music, and men singers and women singers, and he walked through it all, and said, "All is vanity." And you mark, if a man or woman lie down in vanity they are not wise. Solomon did not, you know. I believe one of the first marks of God's great mercy and grace to us is this: as soon as life enters into the soul, and the Holy Ghost illuminates the understanding and renews the will of a poor sinner, that poor sinner begins to find the world a very empty, miserable place, and wants something more than that. All the goodness of the whole globe can't satisfy his poor soul after God has put a spirit of wisdom in him. He longs for Zion. There are only these two—the church of God and the world, and we are, all of us in one of them, either in the church or in the world, profession don't alter it at all, nominal religion will not, but grace will. Whether profane or professing, they are all in the world—but the church of God is not. (I don't mean the Romish church, she is in the world.) God has called her the church out of the world, illuminated her. In this Psalm we read, "I was glad when they said unto me let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet shall stand within thy gates O, Jerusalem. Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together; whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of house of David. Pray for the peace Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee." Then our text "peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces. For my brethren's and companions' sake, I will now say peace be within thee."

Now to just make a few remarks on the words of our text. We must first make a few remarks on the preceeding verses. You know this, it don't matter what society or what class we belong to, if there is no judgment among them, we shall not profit much, there will never be any solidity. Therefore you read, "God is a God of judgment," and "Justice and judgment is the habitation of his throne," and nothing can push them out of it. After all the sins and satans that ever exist, God's holy throne will stand just the same. I be glad that is true, and there is never a wrong act with God, all his works are judgments, not a wrong motive or work. Never, never, never. That is the God we adore, glorious immutable, unsearchable, everlasting. He rules on his royal throne. That discovers another thing. You know you recollect this, every feeling in your heart and mine that is against God's way is wrong.

..Don't you nurse it then, you that call yourselves Christians; don't you nurse it like a woman nurses her babe. What! nurse a wrong feeling against God! Who can say, "I have not had it." Every wrong feeling against God is wrong, and if it does not cause you trouble it will me. I have proved this; I could not make my own heart right; some people think they can. What is the use of man trying to manage his hand, his foot, his tongue, if he cannot manage his heart; for as the fountain is, so are the streams.

I believe this, that God has a special regard, always did, always will have for his own courts, his own grace, his own order, his own glory. He will have a special regard for these things and nothing will alter it. Our text says "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. You say, Well there is the spirit of God, there is divine grace. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O, Jerusalem." Then she saw the stability of Zion. "Jerusalem is builded as a city compact together"—not disjointed. When the sons of Noah, his offspring, dwelt in the plain of Shinar, they said: "Let us build us a city and a tower lest we be scattered." They went quite a wrong way not to be scattered: they went to work with their own hands to keep themselves together. You never knew a people that went that way that did right. Since man fell, man has lost all wisdom, and how could his way lead to stability. And that very way they labored to make themselves compact together, scattered them over the world, and they have been like that to this day. That is what the wise means when he says, "Trust ye not in a guide." "Put not your trust in princes." A minister has to preach down everything and preach up everything—to preach down what is wrong and to preach up what is right. Some people do not like that, they say you preach Christ and let that be." But dear friends, a minister has to preach up and down too; and the Lord says: "If they take forth the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth." You know real religion begins in a man's heart in eternal love, and it never ends. This love existed in God towards us before all worlds, and until it reached our poor blinded, callous and infidel hearts, we loved sins and the ways of it, we loved satan and his service for the courts of the Lord's house. I recollect how it was with me. I lived all the week for the Lord's day. This is your jubilee, and so it is mine. It is 50 years this month since I was raised to a gospel hope. I was in a sad state before that time. I lived all the week for the Lord's day. I longed to get to the house and that thing has lived in me for 50 years. I could not tell you what deaths, what misery, what carnality my poor soul has waded through, yet this principle has lived to this day. When I came into this place I thought these people had been careful for the meeting with great care and attention. When God calls a sinner out of an ungodly world he calls him un'o Zion, that is his home, and God never turned one of the children out—no, never. He said, "If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments; then will I visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless my loving kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail." Once in—always in—is not that a mercy? And you know it is one of the great struggles of faith to hold this thing firm. You will have some work in your heart about it, that you will; but you know this, dear friends, when God calls a soul by grace it existed in his mind in purpose before all worlds. This immutable love is stronger than death, it is the strongest element there is. "If a man would give all the substance of his house for love it would utterly be condemned." It is the free flowing of God's love in a man's soul, and when it takes place, that poor soul is always in the Church of God, and he will have something longing in his heart, and will not rest till he get there. It says, "The kingdom of God is within you." And who could manage it? Could you manage it? It is of God.—and therefore God's authority, God's power, God's infinite mercy are in that people, and therefore he says, "There are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David." I think it is in Isaiah, 1st chapter, the Lord speaking says: "I will restore their judges as at the first, and their counselors as at the beginning." And at the beginning when God created man, he created him in all the uprightness, honesty, equity of his nature and all the whole man stood in that judgment, the Lord, Jehovah and the law had the pre-eminence. Adam was created in that judgment, and every thought and act of that was for the glory and honor of God, and the creatures were in their proper place. That first man had good judgment. The Lord says, "I will restore it again." They lost it at the fall and you know it is universally true, the fall of man lifts the man up, and puts God down, that is the fall of man all over the whole world, in all societies, religious or not. Hart says, "We sorely feel the fall." David says, "Be thou exalted, O, God in Thine own strength." When God restores these judges, up goes the great Jehovah and his holiness, and majesty, down goes the creature. The poor prodigal said "I have sinned against heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy son." The centurion when he sent about his servant, said, "I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof."

That is what it is when God restores the judges in a man's conscience, up goes the great Jehovah, down goes the man, all the world through. And where this don't take place a man is in ignorance, darkness, and bondage to sin and satan; and profession won't alter it. Paul says: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity (the love of God) I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gifts of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." That is true. Now, this I say to my people some times, it is really true. I should like to die with the Almighty enthroned in my affections in all his holiness and majesty, and me a poor, penitent sinner; and to say, "What! me, Lord! What! me, Lord!" with a face wet with tears of penitence.

The text says, "Peace be within thy walls," not outside of them. You people that profess his great and halloved name, do you expect to find peace with your religion in the world? Do you find it? That is the point. I never did, I never did. I was going to say, if you did I should be afraid there is something wrong. The world does not mind a rush about a false religion, nor does the devil; but, if you get the life of God, and his peace in your heart, there will soon be a stir.

"Let your light so shine before men." "Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you." "It hated me before it hated you." He never did any harm at all, and there was no person hated and persecuted as he. My text does not say "Peace be outside your walls," for his people to walk about in the world: but it says, "There s no peace saith my God to the wicked." There is no particle of real peace with God outside of Zion's walls. And all those people who die outside of Zion's walls are at enmity with God. Not one text in the Bible says "Peace be to the world." "In the world ye shall have tribulation," and "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." "Whosoever therefore will be a friend to the world is the enemy of God." Therefore he calls them out of the world. Let me make a few remarks upon these walls. He says, "Thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates praise." John says, "He showed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God. Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone clear as crystal: and had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates (to go through into this city out of the world) and at the gates twelve angels, to keep guard. And the walls of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb." You see, this wall being large and high, I understand this, that the wall that separates the world from the church is as high and large as God's ancient decrees, and it is above the heavens. You know there are no heights go higher than God's ancient decrees and purposes. The wall is a great wall; that is— I understand, it is too great for any to move it or alter it, and it is where God has put it—between the church and the world, and the wall being great and high, and having twelve foundations, were down deep, as deep as God's immutable purposes, and as high as he is and as great as his ancient decrees. And "all in are in." O, how sweet to find yourself in Zion! You know this, God's heart was there long before yours and mine; then your heart and God's heart are in one place. Then you have the same persons in

God has in his heart. He had them in his heart by election, you have them by sovereign grace. puts the same people, the same blessing in your heart that are in his heart, and that is godliness. The Psalmist says, "He taketh not pleasure in the legs of man. The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy."

Then you read that in these foundations were "the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb." Then they were registered, filed up, registered in heaven. You know he said to Peter, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall lose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." He meant this in his ministraton, as an apostle he was immutable; what he said was "Yea." Therefore whatever the apostles loose so it will be down to the end of the world. If you can find that in the writings of the apostles that brings liberty in your conscience, it is so in heaven, it is registered in heaven, you have the witness of the Spirit of truth in your conscience. He said, "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." Then he says "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem, they shall prosper that love thee. Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces." Just for a minute or two in this peace. It is not a peace that goods and chattels and riches bring into a man's head. I say no. A man may have all these, and yet be as far from God as possible. I have walked in my garden and seen it all right and smooth, and yet have been miserable, poor and wretched. What is the matter? I have not got peace in my conscience not got peace in my soul. If I had got peace, I should not have all this anguish. I have proved that garden, nor business nor family won't bring my soul into real peace. And if it could I should be afraid to trust it. Why? say you. It does not stand deep enough. You know your woes and mine are deeper than the creature; the wrath of God and our sins are deeper than the creature; and if we have real peace we must have it deeper than the creature as deep as Jehovah, it must go to the bottom of it, and the peace of God covers it all. And if you have that peace then you have peace. Then, according to the words of the text, God really has a good will to his people, for that is where his people are—in Zion. He says "Peace be within thy walls." Let me say a word here of admonition, I hope neither you nor I will ever try to find peace in the world and wordly region. I have tried, I have tried, and lo! and behold I have suffered exceedingly on account of it. it is no peace. On the other hand, you know, some of you I trust, as well as me. O! the peace you have had in the church of God! Perhaps you go out in the morning, not very happy, and perhaps meet a friend or two, and they begin to talk, and speak of the dealings of God on their souls and it is in heaven, and all the terrible feelings pass away and you feel so peaceful and comfortable, and feel, "I be so glad I met that friend." On my fiftieth birthday I woke early in the morning at 3 o'clock, and O, the anguish I felt in my soul. I thought I had gone all these years to the chapel, and preaching too, and yet what religion had I in my soul? And I thought I should not live long, and what should I come to? I got up and walked about three hundred yards and saw three good men at a corner talking, and we all talked together of the things of God for about half an hour, and when I left how happy I felt. He says, "A spring shut up," and when God, the Spirit opens that well, how sweet it is! The princes of Israel digged a well, they digged it by the direction of the law-giver; and when they digged it they sang, "Spring up, O, well, sing ye unto it."

"Prosperity within thy palaces"

Perhaps there is nothing where there is more variety of feeling than in this thing, some say one thing, some another. You know what is prosperity in business, when the thing a man enters into brings good substantial returns. That is what I understand in a spiritual sense. "Prosperity within thy palaces." You know this of all places under heaven God has enriched his courts with the best of gifts. Hart says:

"The highest heavens are short of this 'Tis deeper than the vast abyss:

'Tis more than thought can ever conceive

Or hope expect, or faith believe.

Almighty God (in Zion) sighed human breath:

The Lord of life experienced death! How it was done we can't discuss, But this we know, 'twas done for us."

Now I call this prosperity.—If a poor worm like you or me, of necessity seek after, long after, crave after an interest in his person, righteousness and blood, and find it, I call that prosperity—myself, I should not wish for a better prosperity than that.

"Prosperity within thy palaces." And let me tell you another thing to illustrate this point. When I was a lad and went to chapel with my father and mother to hear the truth, a good old man named Barton used often to visit my father and mother. Well one Sunday during the service this poor man seemed to lose all confidence in God. And at dinner time my mother said where is he? and she went to find him, and boy-like, I went with her, and she tried to get him to take some cake and tea. He said, "Mr. B.—has made clean work of me, I have ~~no~~ religion at all." During the service in the afternoon the Lord blessed the poor man, and he said, O, I be right, I be right as sure as I have been in the chapel," and he walked all the way home with my father and mother talking to them. I call that prosperity. "Prosperity within thy palaces." Let me ask you a question, you that have any hope in your souls. Are you satisfied with finding this thing? Could you put your hand on your heart before God and say, "O, I am satisfied with my religion?" I would not like to be in your place. He says, "For the sighing of the needy, for the groaning of the prisoners." Then ~~new~~ people want to feel prosperity, and hundreds and thousands of poor Gentile sinners in this country since the Reformation have found it. Nathaniel said, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip said unto him, "Come and see!" The Lord saw him coming, and he said, "Behold an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile." Nathaniel saith unto him, "Whence knowest thou me?" Jesus answered and said unto him, "Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee." Nathaniel answered and said unto him, "Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the king of Israel," Jesus answered and said unto him, "Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these." And he saith unto him, "Verily, verily I say unto you hereafter ye shall see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man." And you recollect this, this is the Pearl of great Price, and it is the free gift of Almighty God to every elect vessel, and there is not a vessel of mercy, but will embrace this great gift. I went for nearly thirty years before I found him to be the pardon of sins and the joy of my heart; and I walked miles to hear dear Mr. Tiptaft and others, and at last Satan said, "It is of no use, it will all come to an end," and to my feelings it did: and then Satan brought against me the great decrees of election and predestination, and I felt I was on the wrong side. If God would but make a new Bible. But I went on and one morning in the mill the Lord broke in on me, took all away, and peace, pardon, and joy flowed in my palaces. For my brethren and companion's sake I will now say, peace be within thee." Therefore God's people, they have brethren, they have companions. "For my brethren and companion's sake." There is dear friends, existing between the family of God, that divine, unquenchable, unalterable relationship. What could control the relation of a father to his family? Could troubles alter it? Could years alter it? Nothing can alter it, it is an unalterable union. This union is unlike that of a man to his family—that will end when death comes, but this union is an endless thing, and the Lord Jesus Christ is the author of that relationship which will exist between every saint, and he says, "Father I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am." They are brethren in the faith, they are believers. No sensible man that has a conscience worth having, could go and shake hands with a man that did not believe, and call him brother. But if you meet a man that has divine faith, and you converse with him what is better? what is sweeter? Then I say we are companions in a three fold point of view. We become companions in tribulation. If you meet a man though you do not know much of him, and he seems full of joy, and full of peace you say, "It may be true but I don't know, he tells us nothing of how he got it. But if he can trace out the sorrows of his soul under the chastening hand of God, the struggles of his poor soul, his fears, doubts and conflicts, and says, "God helped me there," you say, "Give me your hand we are companions." They are companions in tribulation. When David went to Saul about the giant, Saul said, "Thou art not able to fight him." David said, "Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion and a bear and took a lamb out of the flock." The Lord helped his servant to slay both the lion and the bear and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of them. And Jonathan heard it and it went right into his heart. And when David came back with the giant's head in his hand, it went to Jonathan's heart. He felt here is a man, not only in trouble, but rightly out of it, and it knit his soul to the soul of David, and they became companions. Secondly, they are companions in comforts; and thirdly, they are companions in the precepts, doctrine and commandments of the everlasting Gospel. And if they find a people that don't think much about it, they say what! what! what! the blessed sufferings of the Lamb of God! His holy ordinances. If a church in this lower world be anywhere, anyhow, without following in the church or judgment you say, "I could not walk with you." I have heard people say if you do not walk with us you will be a narrow man—but not narrower than the scriptures. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Therefore I don't believe in faith without works. No, that I don't. Like a body without soul, it is dead. Then you see this companionship and brotherhood is in the great and blessed principles and doctrine of the everlasting Gospel, and blessed principles and ordinances you will walk with them. They won't give way. People say, "Open the door wide enough; don't speak so much about election." As I have heard people say they get more people But they do not get more saints. As one of your hymns says,

There my best friends, my kindred
- dwell.

There God, my Savior reigns.

I have very little confidence in that man where grace does not reign in the heart. God save us from that, where they say they have grace but it does not reign. They are companions in the everlasting Gospel of the Son of God. May God add his blessings. Amen.

Polkton, N. C., Sept. 19, 1907.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Very Dear Brother: I have just received my Landmark for September 15th. I see in it the letter I wrote you while at Brother Rowe's in which I find several mistakes made, I suppose by the printers. Will you please kindly correct them? The first one is in the second line of the first column. It should read "precious hope" instead of "people." In the same column down towards the bottom this is what I said instead of the way it reads: "And I began to realize that I was on the mountain top—not the mountain of self-exaltation, but the mountain of transfiguration, upon which we must be carried, or never be blessed to get there—upon which there is no danger," &c. The way it reads destroys the sense of what I intended. I do not think self could have been where I was on that memorable occasion, but I hope I was in the "Spirit on the Lord's day" where self is forgotten and where I had a feast, such as vile nature cannot partake of, and has no desire to.

My writing always looks so imperfect to me at best, because I cannot truly express myself so that others can realize it as I feel it; because of the broken manner in which I express myself.

There are a few little mistakes in the punctuation but none so bad as those above mentioned.

While I was in Baltimore I went with Brother and Sister Rowe up to Harford Church about thirty miles North of Baltimore to attend the yearly meeting which I enjoyed so much. I was blessed to hear Elder John McConnell, of New York, at this meeting; also Elder Wm. Grafton who is pastor of that church and in his eighty-third year Elder J. T. Rowe also preached both days. One comforting and consoling thought to me while there was that they preached the same doctrine I had been made to love, and which has been a feast to me so many times in North Carolina, and the greatest blessing this is to me I was made to know the joyful sound. I do sometimes believe I know the blessed doctrine of the gospel of the dear Son of God when I hear it proclaimed from the walls of Zion, and from the mountain of the Lord. And how beautiful upon the mountain are the feet of them that publish these glad tidings.

On my way back from Baltimore I stopped and attended the Silver Creek Association where I was made to feel that the blessings of God still attended me; though in a peculiar way. At times I would fear that the way was going away entirely from me and all would be darkness; but in a mysterious way I believe the dear Lord was my strength and support that his strong arm was underneath me which kept me from going down into the depth of the valley, and I could still praise his glorious name. How sweet and soul cheering are these things when we are given to realize all is gloom and darkness, and like the shadow of death, for so long a time. Truly I have had a feast of fat things since the first of July up un-til the present time—such as I had not had for many days past; and oh, how pleasant and sweet to be once more thus favored, to have all my gloomy feelings, my doubts and fears removed and to be enabled to trust so sweetly and implicitly in Jesus as my Savior and Redeemer. And, Brother Gold, I have been in this rejoicing state so long until I am beginning to wonder if there is some fearful thing going to befall me. I scarcely know anything but a heart full of joy, praise and thanksgiving almost continually.

On my return home I found an accumulation of work for me; but it seems I can perform it and hardly realize how I get it done; so enraptured is my soul in the mercies and goodness of God to a vile sinner like me. There is, right within me, such a feeling sense of the nearness of the presence of my dear Savior, which makes rough places smooth and crooked ways straight. And he gives me to trust so sweetly in him. He stands by me and answers me so sweetly too of his kind and protecting care, and softly whispers that he will provide—the sweet promise which gave me such comfort and joy in the beginning of my pilgrimage, soon after my deliverance from the bondage of sin and death.

Why should I, or how can I, be filled with fear, doubt or dread while there is such a friend so manifestly near?

Brother Gold, I was disappointed in not seeing you at Silver Creek Association. I hope you were not sick. I had hoped you would stop with us if you came. Elders Henry Taylor and J. A. Shaw stopped with us Tuesday night, last, on their way down to Seven Mile Association.

With much love to you and Sister

Gold, I remain yours in sweet fellowship,

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

Snow Hill, N. C., March 22, 1907.
Mr. P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother: It has been bearing on my mind to write you ever since I saw the correction of the mistakes that I made in the communication I sent you printed in the Landmark November 1st 1905.

But I don't know whether the impression is from the right source or not, but I hope so.

It seems to me the only way to get rid of the impression is to write. So I will make the attempt.

First I feel to say that it is so with me like Jesus told his apostles when he was about to be crucified, the spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak. Now Brother Gold, I feel like I was imposing on your valuable time and too much of a trouble for you to even read such a poor, imperfect scribble as mine, much more to publish. If you had laid it aside I would but only said all is right, it was in such a scattered and broken way I wonder how you could think enough of it to give it space in your highly esteemed paper. I know that if I had a good education I could not tell my experience just like I felt it. But as it is my education being very poor it caused me to make blunders in trying to form words to express my feelings. Paul told my experience when he used the expression and said I know in me, that is in my flesh there dwells no good thing. Jesus says without me ye can do nothing. So as the poet said I can also say, by experience I do know there is nothing good that I can do, I cannot satisfy the law, nor hope, nor comfort from it draw. My nature is so prone to sin which makes my duty so unclean, that when I count up all the cost, if not free grace then I am lost. Jesus is all and in all to his people. So if I am his it is by the grace and mercy of God and not by anything I have ever merited. Sometimes I fear that I am not one of that number and I feel that though some strange thing has took place with me, and may be that I have not tasted of the good word of God, and the power of the world to come. for I cannot look back over my past life and not see so many wrong things that I have done.

Now Brother Gold, I beg you to pardon and forgive me. Pray for me that I may be reconciled to God. I have written this to relieve my mind and not for publication, for I do not wish to burden any one.

I desire to be your brother in Christ
W. B. KEARNEY

Fitch, N. C. April 1, 1907.

Dear Brother P. D. Gold:

Today is what we call a holiday. Yesterday was Easter Sunday, and it snowed beautifully for four or five hours. It just looked wonderful to see the snow falling and the trees all in blossoms.

And the vegetation growing. Oh, is it not wonderful to see this great change. The day before it was so extremely warm we had to have the doors and windows all open. Now so cold, less than twenty-four hours all closed up.

Who made this great change, was it man? Surely not. This brings to my mind many wonderful things which I shall not attempt to write now. Indeed, too great, too wonderful for me a poor vile finite creature of the earth. I began to write to tell you a dream I had four or five months ago: in my dream I thought I opened the Bible at the 66th chapter of Isaiah and I commenced to read and it turned to a barrel of grape wine, and I commenced to draw the wine out of the barrel and I awoke.

The wine was a live wine and full of little branches growing out from it, and as I drew it out it did not seem to get less in the barrel.

Does this 66th chapter represent the whole Bible or scriptures throughout the Bible?

Does the wine show how the scripture links together? And does the wine and the little branches growing out from it represent Christ and his people, or Christ and the church, showing how they link together?

This was some of my thoughts about it when I awoke.

Your well Wisher.

REMARKS.

The 66th chapter of Isaiah is inexpressibly full of gospel glory when the Lord appears in the new Dispensation.

The barrel full of grape wine shadows forth the new wine of the kingdom of heaven.

The new wine was found in the cluster. This saved the people of God from the beginning. The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpents' head. The reason instant and final destruction did not fall on Adam in the day of his transgression there was the word of the Lord saying the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. God will bring a seed out of Jacob that shall inherit his holy mountain.

Christ declared the nature of his kingdom in his first miracle. The six water pots empty he commanded to be filled with water, and as they drew out it was wine. Here is the blood of the grape setting forth the foundation of life opened in his death and resurrection. Such is the life of Jesus manifested in the wine that it is alive and full of little branches growing out of it, for the life of Jesus is in every one that drinks of this cup of blessing. And drink as much as you may, and let all the redeemed drink, and yet it still flows,

Wendell, N. C., July 7, 1907.
Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother: I have for some weeks been deprived of my dear old Landmark on account of changing my postoffice and feeling so much comforted by getting the one of July 1st, I have felt to be destitute of God's rich and pure divine love, and while others have been blessed to get theirs I hope. Notwithstanding, I do not hold anything against you dear brother, for I am the cause of my not getting it any sooner myself. I feel that it's all for my own good in this way, it I feel will keep me from being too smart in my own church at home, so the dear brethren and sisters I hope and trust will not have to exclude me from the church to keep peace among themselves, but oh, may the good Lord enable us to meet Satan with a two edged sword that turneth every way to keep the way of the tree of life. As he has said rise up my love, my fair one and come away, for the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.

Oh, dear children, there are many things represented in this wonderful voice of the dove. Do we ever hear the dove mourn but three times, not once for self? The dove never mingles with other birds or mates with other birds. We should notice our own mourning when we hunger and thirst after righteousness. We are continually mourning until we are filled. Then as the blessed little doves are kept to themselves we should keep ourselves unspotted from the world. What birds have a voice like a dove? Not one. Even the mocking bird has not the tone or the voice of the dove. Then we realize it is wrong to make mock of God's dear people, for we know not the contents of a hidden heart that may some day tell us something that will give us a shining light at some midnight hour.

Just here while it has been presented to my mind, young ladies, a word to the readers of the Landmark, if Brother Gold can see fit to put this letter in your reach. Do you know or have you ever given it the slightest thought that young men's conduct is under your control? Why? Are you not keeping company with them while the breath smells like strong drink? Are you not allowing them to befog your parlor with tobacco smoke without first asking your consent? Then are you esteeming them only for their style? Because he wears a round top hat and uses a top buggy and his pocket filled with smoking tobacco. Then if a poor, well behaved boy calls on you, one who obeys and honors his father and mother, and strews flowers along life's pathway, are you guilty of pointing the finger of scorn at him, saying my parlor is too good for him. I wish he had stayed away from here. Here is your influence if you meet such as mentioned above, if you will tell him you don't wish to entertain him while he keeps up those habits, and if he loves you and esteems you as a lady he will soon depart from all such habits that are only upheld by the carnal ways and a very poor style of the world. Now I will call your attention to a Psalm of David. "And I said oh, that I had wings like a dove; for then would I fly away and be at rest, then would I wonder far off and remain in the wilderness. Selah. We learn here that David was wishing to have wings like a dove to set him free from the hands of his enemies. He prays against his enemies, of whose wickedness and treachery he complains, and he sang songs of praise to God and gave him all the praise of Lord of Lords and king of kings, for he was led by the spirit and taught to fear God. Save me O, God, by thy name, and judge me by thy strength. Hear my prayer, O, God. give ear to the words of my mouth. What does a prayer profit if it be not heard? Then what does it take to be prayed? The prayer is prayed by the saints of God. Lord be merciful to me a poor sinner. This shows that the prayer of the righteous prevaileth much, those that are led by a way that they know not, and feel themselves altogether dependent on the Lord. While those that are led by the carnal ways of the world, I feel like they are dependent people in their own ways. That they hold apostasy and falling from grace. Brethren how does a sermon of that kind sound? It just sounds like man wants the honor of making the world and knowing too that man was the last thing made, and the Lord repented that he had made man, but yet God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, the Savior of sinners, put to death upon the rugged tree of the cross to redeem his people, Israel. Now does this not show the doctrine? Those that preach salvation by grace are developed in Jesus Christ and him crucified, and now we can compare the true mourn of the dove to the tree of the cross, saying, Father why should this bitter cup pass, but not my will be done but thine, O dear saints this bitter cup is the sting of death that we are bound to taste before we cross over the river of Jordan, to enter into the blessed gates of eternal happiness and sing praises to the God of all truth.

Elder P. D. Gold.

Dear Brother: I think of you and your wife and your daughter Mary very often. I think Mary as a lovely school girl in Hope well Seminary. But she is a woman with her own family around her. How much I would like to have a letter from her! This evening I received the Landmark for November 15th, and I feel that I can say to the writers, that here in the far off rockies, I experience the same feelings that they tell us of.

I feel that I am the recipient of unnumbered blessings. Every day I feel that new mercies and blessings are showered on me. I seem to lack but one thing, a thankful heart. I do desire to be filled with gratitude, but I am so prone to forget. Last fall I had the privilege of attending a meeting at Lamar, Colorado, and at Hatton and Syracuse, Kansas, there I met Elder Purdue and Elder Nowels. Elder Purdue had met you, and we had a delightful meeting or rather, series of meetings. You know Elder Purdue is a grand preacher and so is Elder Nowels. Brother Fetter had been with them at several meetings this fall.

We expect Elder Fetter will be in Raton very soon. It is wonderful to me as I read the names of writers, scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf, and I remember how this development of country came about.

Joseph told his brethren ye meant it for evil, but the Lord meant it for good to save alive much people. When I call to mind how the sovereignty of the king of England with his heavy taxation on the colonists settled in America, brought about the war of the Revolution, it looks to the casual observer as if the king meant his treatment of the colonies for evil, but it brought a new government in the wilderness of America, making a land of religious freedom, a land where we each and all can enjoy our own religious views, so to me it seems that our Lord overruled it for good. We know he does over rule all our paths; but this great country is to me a very clearly marked and plainly manifested example, so closely resembling what Joseph told his brethren that I often think of it.

This present generation have had no experience of religious persecution. My ancestors three generations back fled from the persecutions of the Stuart kings of England, and a great many people that I know in New Jersey are descended from ancestors who fled from religious persecution.

I will weary you with my long letter. Elder Fetter left with me kind Christian love to you and all the friends who may remember him. Remember me most kindly to your wife and Mary and any of my North Carolina friends you may see. May the blessings of the Lord rest on you and strengthen you in the arduous labors that devolve on you in your editorial work.

Very truly your sister in hope.

Dear Brothers Gold and Lester: -

As I promised while I was East to write my people through the Landmark so with your permission I will say that I left home September 14th and returned November 23rd, and found all well for which I am thankful to the God that declared the end from the beginning, saying "My counsel shall stand and I will do all my pleasure." O, how good and merciful He is to me a poor sinner. I feel so little, poor and unworthy that I often think if my Father's children know me as well as I know myself they would not want to hear from me at all. I thought while I was with them in the East that surely I had deceived them, they were so good and kind to me in every respect, and I so unworthy, not one good thing in me. I could not see how they could have fellowship for me, yet I feel like I was with the children of God.

The preaching in Virginia did not give any uncertain sound so I was made to rejoice when I heard them preach just what I tried to preach. I attempted to preach thirty times out there and as far as I know the brethren endorsed what I preached.

O, the many good words of encouragement did I receive from the children of God, I can not call names as it would take up too much space, but I hold all the people in sweet memory. "O, how I love the sons of grace, the heirs of bliss divine."

Remember me at the throne of grace dear brethren. Yours to serve,

Wm. C. PERDUE.

GOD'S PEOPLE AS SHINING LIGHTS.

We are told by some, if this doctrine be true, just do as you please, if you are saved you are saved, no matter what you do and if you are lost you are lost, no matter what you do. People who talk this way know nothing of the word of God that calls them out of darkness into his marvelous light and causes them to show forth His praise.

In the beginning of time God made the sun, moon and stars and set them in the firmament and commanded as to the amount of light they should give and that is glorious indeed to meditate on these great things in creation, if so then is it not more glorious to meditate on the Great Light, the Spiritual Light, in the Spiritual heaven, which is Jesus. "He is the true light" which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. The light of the sun that rules the day only shines on the surface, but this light shines in our hearts and gives us the light of the knowledge of the Glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

This light we are told shines in darkness and the darkness comprehended it not. When Jesus commenced his work in you no one could have caused you to believe it was to save you, and yet it was the work of salvation begun. We thought it was to destroy, the application of the law by the spirit reveals to us our guilt, yet this is the light for whatsoever doth make manifest is light, but flesh (darkness) can't comprehend it, it grows darker and darker until it is so dark without that every ray of hope is gone, your prayers have all failed, our friends all gone, everything gone but your sins, but they are before you mountain high. But salvation draws nigh, Jesus appears to your astonishment and says, "Son or Daughter, be of good cheer, thy sins which are many are all forgiven thee." The light of this spiritual body (the church) is the eye, Jesus and God looks through His own eye at His church and says:

"Thou art all fair my love, thou hast dove's eyes." She is without spot, wrinkle or blame or any such thing before Him in love.

Now as she is the bride or wife, the object of His great love and mercy, she is to reverence her husband. This is her daily study. But there is so much self-loathing and mourning because she feels she comes short in every way; she is so weak she has to lean upon her beloved for strength, she is so sinful she has to beg him for His mercy; she is so foolish she has to beg him for wisdom, but he has plenty to give, and the beautiful thought is, it makes no difference how much he gives, he still has no less. He is just as able to keep us from falling now as he was the first time he lifted us up. "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever." And notwithstanding all our infirmity, we must still remember we are His workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. What kind of good works? Is it not a good work to confess our sins continually and to beg for mercy and grace to save? Is it not a good work to believe God is able to save us to the utmost? Is it not a good work to praise Him for His salvation?

Now if these things are not felt by saved sinners, I am lost forever, but if they are, I hope I am saved forever, with them.

So instead of doing as we please, we want to do as the Lord pleases and mourn because we feel we do not.

THE YEAR 1908.

Luke 1:1-4.

The subject matter of this address to the readers of Zion's Landmark may be collected from an expression contained in the above scripture, "A declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us."

Luke was an eye witness of the things, having had full knowledge or perfect understanding of all things from the first.

The doctrine of this book written by Luke is the life, death, resurrection and glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ, or as Paul declares it, "Christ and him crucified" is the subject matter of his writings. What else does Paul preach? Nothing else. That is there is nothing that Paul wrote or preached that is not of Jesus, and the fulfillment of his life as exemplified in the conduct and conversation of those believing in Jesus is manifest.

In addressing our readers at the beginning of a new year we have in mind writing only of the life, death and resurrection of Jesus, or the doctrine of Christ. What he said was a divine expression of what he came to do. What he did was the fulfillment of all that had been written concerning him. These are the things most surely believed "among us" or by the family of God. They are most surely believed in the sense that they are believed in the heart, for with the heart man believeth unto righteousness.

They are most surely believed as things that are truth, and therefore cannot fail or disappoint the believer. They are most surely believed as causing great peace of mind, and as manifesting the unity of oneness of the people of God who love each other. No distracting or confusing things grow out of this blessed state of things.

Jesus Christ was born as the scriptures declare. A virgin conceives and brings forth a Son who is named Jesus, because he shall save his people from their sins. His character as Mediator and Redeemer is set forth. He is God manifest in the flesh. He shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, Jacob the vessel of mercy, the sinner in whom is revealed the Israelite, in whom there is no guile, is the one Jesus reigns in and over.

Now what do we need beside Jesus? Are we his people? The Lord's portion is his people. Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. Then we are chosen in him and redeemed by him, elect according to the foreknowledge of God through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ, and begotten again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ unto an inheritance incorruptable, undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last times.

Jesus is exalted a prince and a Savior at the right hand of God to grant repentance and the forgiveness of sins unto Israel. He is full of grace and truth, and of his fulness have all we received. Then we are complete in Him. Now what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation? How should we live? How should we behave ourselves in the house of God which is the pillar and the ground of truth? We should abide in the doctrine of Christ—not seeking the doctrine of Christ—not seeking some new thing. There is nothing so new or perfect as Jesus is. What else is there worth preaching, or believing, or writing about, or cotending for?

Those that bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that brought them do it to their own shame and to the hurt of God's people. Let us who are of the day speak and write the things that make for peace, and whereby we may serve each other. Love is the bond of unity in the household of faith.

Why such coldness among us? Why so careless about going to our preachings, visiting the sick, helping the needy? Why such cares of the world? Where is your faith? Do you most earnestly contend for the faith delivered to the saints? It is good to have your conversation seasoned with salt, but is it we most surely believe the things make manifest in our conduct and conversation that we have been with Jesus and have learned of him how is it we must surely believe the things declared unto us by them that were eye witnesses of the sufferings, death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus? Do we prove that we have fellowship with the apostles? We must prove all things, and make manifest by our life and conversation that we have been with Jesus and have learned of him. No greater joy is to us than that we all walk in and by the faith of the Lord Jesus. ay grace, mercy and peace be upon you all. P. D. G.

FAITH.

The lever that raises all that it dwells in is faith. Does that faith dwell in any? See 2nd Tim. 1:5 The house in which one dwells is not the author of its inhabitant, nor is man the author of this blessed faith that dwells in the vessel of mercy. It is the evidence of things not seen. Then the scriptures are not its author for it existed before the scriptures were written. By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, and he had the witness and testimony from God himself that he was righteous.

Faith is the evidence of things not seen. The scriptures are not the evidence although they testify of Christ, but faith is the evidence itself or the substance of things hoped for. The scriptures testify of Christ but ye receive not their witness. They do not control the heart, but faith does. It is the power by which we believe and by which the scriptures become assuring to us. Faith works, performs, does wonderfully.

Faith is the victory that overcomes the world because it is born of God. Through faith we are kept by the power of God. Faith then is of God. It cometh by hearing and hearing cometh by the word of God. How closely and precisely this faith is of God, and stands in the power and wisdom of God. It perceives and conveys the divine righteousness by which the sinner is justified by and before God. The righteousness which is of faith is to and upon all that believe. What a wonderful blessing to have faith in God. Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him.

P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Sir: Please explain Matthew 16:18-19. Did Christ give Peter the keys to the kingdom? If so, where did Peter first use them? Also explain Leviticus 24:8. Where in the new testament do we find the anti-type of this passage? Please explain the above scriptures in Zion's Landmark, and oblige an earnest enquirer. T. J. MOFFIT. Villisca, Iowa

REMARKS.

It is my mind and purpose to write and speak of things as they appear to me. If God has given me any understanding of the scriptures then I should show that which he has given me. It is not good to handle a borrowed axe.

What Jesus here said to Peter he in other scriptures also said to other apostles with Peter. Here he said to Peter he would give him the keys to the kingdom of heaven and whatsoever he should bind on earth should be bound in heaven, and whatsoever he should loose on earth should be loosed in heaven. Jesus said to his disciples (Matt. 18-18,) Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. This is said to more than one of them. The pronoun ye always means more than one. As the pronoun thee or thou means only one. In John 20: 23 the same power is given to the apostles at large. "Whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them and whosoever sins ye retained they are retained." Peter began to bind and loose on the day of Pentecost when he preached the gospel with the holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

So also John and James and Paul, and others as they preached and wrote declaring as twelve judges in Israel what is the law of Zion, loosed on earth and therefore in heaven all that believed through their word, and also bound all that were disobedient unto the heavenly vision. For it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear Jesus, the great prophet, shall be cut off from among the people.

The twelve apostles of the Lamb sit now (and will to the end of time, as judges in Israel. As men they are dead, but as apostles or judges they still live. That is their word which God inspired them to declare, as the word and will of God, is as good, true and powerful today as it was when they first declared it. When that word binds one on earth it binds him also in heaven. When that word looses him on earth it also looses him in heaven. Peter has no more and no less of this preeminence than Paul, James, John or Jude. All have it equally.

We have the proof and witness of this in ourselves. When the word of God declared by any one of these judges condemns us we are shut out of the comforts of heaven, and bound here, everywhere: nor have we any doubt they are right, and that we are wrong, and we know that they are of God. When the word of any of them, one being as precious as that of another, (what Paul wrote being as good as what Peter wrote,) is open unto us, it frees us, or looses us here on earth, and we feel to be loosed in heaven also, or everywhere, and glorify God in Paul as well as in Peter.

The other question is where do we find in the New Testament the Ante type of Lev. 24: 8? "Every Sabbath he shall set in order before the Lord continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant."

We believe that everything under the law is a pattern of what is the body or reality in the gospel, that the law is a shadow good things to come and the substance is in the gospel. Hence we have the right to look for fulfillment of all which the law as a prophecy foreshadowed and therefore should be in the gospel. It is good to hear a preacher that starts in the old Testament with the spirit of the new and lands in the new as the fulfillment of the old, or the good wine. This is bringing out things new and old—old or first in the types, and new or perfect in the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth.

Moses is the type of Jesus as the lawgiver. What Moses said must be done Jesus has done. The law came by Moses the servant faithful as a pattern; grace and truth came by Jesus Christ as the Son over his own house, the church. Oil, olive, beaten and true, for the light must be brought by the children of Israel to cause the lamps to burn continually. Without the veil of witness or testimony must it burn from evening until morning continually, and this shall be as a statute forever, in your generations. Aaron the high priest shall order the lamps upon them continually. This is the type. What is the substance? Jesus is the pure light, oil pure and beaten. He is the Christ, the true olive tree, the anointed one standing before the Lord continually. He was tried, oppressed, pressed between the upper and nether millstones, and was holy, pure and undefiled. Hence he is the true light. The candlestick is the church into which this pure beaten oil is poured and shines, and shines burning in the candlestick. He lighteth every man that cometh into the world. This lamp or candlestick is here in the world, or without the veil of the testimony. Within the veil of the testimony of holy of holies is type where the church or candlestick (lamp) is now shining or it is here in the flesh where the church is to put the candlestick or light on the bushel that it may shine. As Jesus the High Priest therefore is in you the light shines. God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

Also fine flour is taken of which cakes are baked, and set as show bread with pure frankincense thereon, as a memorial or offering made by fire unto the Lord every sabbath, bread before the Lord continually for the children of Israel for an everlasting covenant.

And see frequently in reading the law and service of the priesthood therein that the covenant is everlasting. Yet the law covenant is passed away or filled and rolled together as a scroll vanishing away as the gospel comes in its glorious, unfading, eternal reality. Now as a type the law abides forever, because it sets forth that which is everlasting. To see therefore that which abides forever as an everlasting covenant we must behold the gospel covenant or covenant of grace, which is what the law foreshews, and is typical of. In the new Testament or gospel dispensation therefore we see Jesus the true high priest, the shew bread, as his body of the finest wheat is ground between the upper and nether millstones, as that is nether which is lower, as requiring of the transgressor on earth holiness, and the law coming from heaven or above requiring of Jesus as the new man from heaven that he should be sin for us, and therefore bruised for our iniquities. Therefore Jesus is the fine flour as the one of his brethren, of the people whom God made strong for himself and he is that true bread, that came from heaven of which if a man eat he shall live forever. Pure frankincense is put on the bread or Jesus is anointed with all the fulness of the Holy Spirit, and is full of grace and truth. This is holy incense to the Lord, and this bread is to be eaten before the Lord in the holy place by Aaron the high priest and his sons. Jesus our High Priest and his people or sons eat this before the Lord continually, that is baked on coals of divine wrath kindled against sin. He eats it new with his people in his Father's kingdom.

P. D. G.

Brother L. G. Perry requests my view of Rev. 2:21 "And I gave her space to repent of her fornication and she repented not.

Solomon says wherefore is there the price of wisdom in the hand of a fool seeing he hath no heart to it. A man has an opportunity every day to keep sober, but what is that if he gets drunk every opportunity that is presented. It is the man that denies himself of ungodliness, of worldly lusts, and lives soberly that shows the principle that hates drunkenness. He that endures in temptation, he that overcomes shall be saved. It is held that because God gave Jezebel space to repent therefore it was in her power to repent. No doubt every one has space to repent that is living. Time and chance happen to all men. The liar has plenty of opportunities to tell the truth. The thief has plenty of opportunities to live honestly and defraud no one.

But how about men that love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil? They will not come to the light because they love darkness rather than light.

Jezebel, the wife of King Akab, was one of the most wicked women named in the Bible. She supported false worship lavishly out of the public funds. She corrupted Israel—had a righteous man put to death and confiscated his property. She was guilty of whoredom. She claimed to be a prophetess and seduced God's servants to commit fornication. Now all this leaven of wickedness was at work there and this lewd character guilty of all this had space to repent but what did it amount to? Unless grace intervenes, unless God quickens the dead and grants them, not merely space to repent, but repentance itself, what does it all amount to? It leaves them without excuse, it proves their guilt, it shows God's long suffering. Men certainly have no right to do wrong, and no excuse for their sin. But man is so placed that he has no cloak or excuse for his sin, but will certainly be punished for it. But if he repents and finds mercy he feels the Lord has blessed him in turning him away from his iniquities. By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves. It is the gift of God, not of works lest any man should boast, for we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God has before ordained that we should walk in them.

He to whom the Lord has revealed His doctrine, the doctrine of God our Savior, every one that contends earnestly for the faith one delivered to the saints and abides in Jesus, every one that overcomes in Jesus shall surely be saved. He that keeps the work of Christ to the end shall be saved.

OBITUARIES

SUSAN J. BASHAM.

Sister Susan J. Basham passed away at her home near Stuartsville, Bedford county, Va., July 2nd, 1907 in her 72nd year. She was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Wm. W. Basham November 27th 1851. They at first settled in Franklin county, Va., near Redwood. She being an educated lady, for several years taught school. She professed a good hope in Christ and united with the Primitive Baptist church at Bethel, April meeting 1857, was baptised by the late Elder John R. Martin, and lived up to her profession more than any it was my privilege to know. She became an invalid about 30 years ago. She and her husband sold out in Franklin county and moved to Bedford county, Va. Her friends carried her on a cot by hands. In all her afflictions she seemed to bear them with Christian fortitude. She and her husband lived happily together about 50 years. They were both Primitive Baptists in sentiment and being blessed with this world's goods they made sacrifices by inviting their friends and brethren and entertaining them at their hospitable home.

The writer had appointments there and held communion for the last several years, and when commemorating that solemn feast her mind seemed to be carried back to Calvary in remembrance of her gracious Lord. After she was afflicted a great many of her preaching brethren called on her and preached for her.

This she seemed to enjoy so much. She left a good estate, having no bodily heir, she dictated and wrote her own will, giving to the Primitive Baptists 2 acres of land right of way to spring, and $1,800 in cash to build and complete a meeting house, and donated $200 to her nephew, Mr. Ellis Wright, who was made her executor to superintend the construction of this house by her will, and in it she appointed the following a building committee for this deed to be made to for the benefit of the old school Primitive Baptists: C. M. Turner, Randolph Perdue, and J. P. Dudley, and I feel the brethren should appreciate this kind favor. When the house is completed a church should be constituted and regular meetings appointed at that point in remembrance of her. This lot is situated on the Roanoke and Bedford Pike. I feel to recommend to the brethren if possible that they secure the ministerial labors of Elders J. C. and S. N. Hurst to preach for them at that point.

She further remembered in her will her other relatives and a young man and lady that are not related to her, who had lived with her for the last several years.

She has finished her course, laid down her armour, and gone to her reward where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never go. By her request I was summoned by telegram, went and preached her funeral in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives. After which her poor body was carried to the grave and placed beside her dear husband to await a glorious resurrection when that body shall come forth fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body. For we are to be raised from the dead in his likeness and see him as he is, and be satisfied.

Dear relatives remember this dear one trusted in Him who was too wise to err and too good to do wrong.

MRS. NANCY SMITH.

Sister Smith of Caswell county, N. C., was born February 11th, 1840, and died June 7th, 1907, making her stay on earth 67 years, 3 months and 26 days. She was the daughter of John and Nancy Miles. Her mother died when she was an infant and she was raised by her uncle and Aunt Jeremiah and Susan Budd, and married to William B. Smith by Elder John Stadler some forty years 47 years ago. She proved to be a wife indeed and lived happily with her afflicted husband until his death many years ago. They were blessed with four children, two sons and two daughters, one daughter having died in the bloom of youth. She leaves 18 grand children. After her husband's death she lived with her youngest son until death. She joined the church at Arbor about 14 years ago, and adorned her profession by a well ordered life and Godly conversations. She went to her meeting at Arbor the second Sunday in May for her last time, and on the way home remarked it was a good place to go to.

She was a woman of strong resolution and perseverance. Although her husband was sorely afflicted with rheumatism for many years she managed to raise her children in a creditable manner, and they have risen up and call her blessed.

She was not confined to her bed but one day, though unwell for about a month with heart trouble. Seemed conscious that the time of her departure was at hand saying, "a few more days and I shall be gone." The day before death came she was taken suddenly ill and went to the bed saying she was dying and, "she hoped the Lord would be with her in that trying hour," and calling for the children and sister Mary Simmons she embraced them, feeling that she was "going home to die no more," and calmly passed away about 1 o'clock at night. She was joyful in the prospects of death, saying the world had no charms for her. While suffering she said Christ suffered, and repeated, "O, land of rest for thee I sigh, when will the moment come when I shall lay my armor by and dwell with Christ at Home? and again, "There's no night there."

Thus a noble, truthful, kind and affectionate sister, wife, mother and friend passed out of time into the rest that remains for the people of God. Her body was laid to rest in the burial ground to await the resurrection of the just.

DEATH OF A GOOD MAN.

Last Monday, August 26th, Mr. J. Elmon Page died at his home in Clayton. He had been sick only a few weeks, but during that time had visited Panacea and Fuquay Springs hoping to regain his health. By advice of his faithful physicians he went to Baltimore for treatment, but soon learned that he could never be well again.

Last Friday he came home and all his friends knew he could live only a few days. He died on Monday about midday and was buried on Tuesday at the Penny burial ground beside his mother and children. Funeral services were conducted at his home by Elders Gardner and Simpkins.

He was a worthy member of the Primitive Baptist church, having done much to establish a church in Clayton and was always ready to entertain his friends and brethren. He was never too busy to attend church, he lived a consistent christian life and died without an enemy.

He was one of our best citizens and the entire town feels the loss of a true friend. He ever spoke in kindness and every word came from a clear conscience, and no evil motive was ever imputed to him. He worked hard and by his energy and management accumulated a fair estate.

He was attentive to business, ready to relieve the distressed, sympathized with obliging, loved and helped his church, took an active interest and gave a hearty support to every good movement in his town and community. He left a noble wife, a dutiful and hopeful son, surrounded by true friends. He has gone to the home of the faithful and holy influence entwines his name. G.

Resolutions of Respect and Brotherly Love

We, the church at Camp Creek, Durham county, N. C., assembled in conference, this 12th day of October, 1907, do hereby express our grief, and fully realize what a loss we have sustained in the death of our beloved brother and pastor, Elder Albert Blalock, who united with us on the 13th of August, 1853, and was ordained to the full work of the gospel ministry on the 13th of December, 1873 by a presbytery composed of Elders A. N. Hall and D. R. Moore, and fell asleep in Jesus September 5th, 1907. Since his ordination he has served us (with the exception of a few years) as our pastor, satisfactory to the church and the brethren generally.

Therefore, be it resolved,

1st. That we bow in humble submission to the will of the Great Head of the church, who doeth all things well, as we firmly believe our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved 2nd,

That as a token of friendship and brotherly love, which we hope is everlasting and stronger than death we erect a slab or monument to his grave, suitable to the wishes of his family, and that our treasurer be instructed to pay for same out of the funds belonging to the church.

Resolved 3rd,

That a copy of these resolutions be put upon our church record and a copy sent to the editor of Zion's Landmark with a request that he publish same.

Signed by order of the church in conference this 12th day of October, 1907,

GEORGE A. TRAVIS.

Dear Brother Gold:

It is the request of friends that I write and send you for publication in Zion's Landmark the obituary notice of a dear friend and brother in hope of eternal life, Mr. George A. Travis, who departed this life on April 26th, 1907, having been blessed to live nearly 81 years. Too much cannot be said of this law-abiding and God-fearing man. He leaves not an enemy that is known of. Oh, for more such men. He has had a hope for years, but for some cause never joined the church until one week before he died, which was Friday. A few of the members from Moons Creek church were to see him, and he asked for an opportunity to join the church, the privilege was granted by opening the church doors, and he related some of the Lord's dealings with him to the satisfaction of all present and was received into the fellowship of the church Friday, one week before he died the next Friday, and was baptised Sunday one week before he was buried the next Sunday. He had been declining in health for four or five years, had several strokes of paralysis which disabled him from getting about much the few months of his life. He did not try to go far, and could scarcely get about when he was baptised. His friends fixed a box with water on his front porch, and he had to be helped in and out to be baptised. I have never seen any one so anxious to obey this command, and after he obeyed he seemed to be perfectly blessed with peace and resignation. He leaves one son two brothers and two sisters to mourn their loss. May it please the good Lord that when the summons comes, they may be as ready as he was, I hope is my prayer

BIDDIE C. BURCH.

It is with much sadness that I attempt to write in memory of my dear mother, a subject of which I am not capable of writing upon, but feel impressed to write a notice of her death for publication.

:Mamma was one of sixteen children of J.

J. Scoggins, a noted Primitive Baptist. She was born November 29, 1845, and fell asleep November 22, 1906, lacking one week of reaching her sixty-first birthday.

Mamma was married to Thomas B. Burch on March 20, 1872 by Elder James A. Burch. Of this union were born nine children, two dying in infancy and seven surviving, four boys and three girls.

Mamma's many excellent traits of character won high respect and admiration for her by all who knew her. She was an exception of a woman, her friends were many, every one that knew her loved her. Mamma was not a member of any church but loved the Primitive Baptists dearly, and had a sweet hope for years but never did unite with the church. Dear mamma was afflicted with rheumatism. I have no recollection of ever seeing her well. She was afflicted from my earliest recollection. Her disease grew worse and worse until about three years before she died. She was stricken with a very severe attack of rheumatic affliction, causing her to have to be confined to the bed. The pain she suffered is untold, she tried most everything she heard of good for the dreadful disease rheumatism, yet it seemed no relief could be found. In the fall after she was stricken down in the spring she suffered so much day and night she decided to go to another climate for her health; so papa carried her to Hot Springs, Arkansas, a very noted place for rheumatism. After spending three months there she came home very much improved. She was able to be in her room most of the time. She was so thankful of her improvement she hardly knew how to express herself.

In the midst of sickness she was the most patient person I ever saw. She was not heard to murmur or complain at anything. She talked lots of her affliction, but would always say it is all right—it is for the best, and say it is the will of our heavenly Father and not ours. She loved her children dearly. I so often heard her praying for her dear children while she was in her room alone, asking the Lord to guide and direct us. I can't describe dear mamma's character she possessed so many beautiful traits of life.

Each of us did everything in our power to relieve her of her suffering, but there was no relief for her until God called her home where there is no pain and no sorrow, where all is joy and peace.

I let me say to those whose parents yet survive, honor your aged parents, be kind and gentle to them, for they too, will be called away sooner or later, and we find when dear mother is gone never to return, our best and dearest friend has left us.

Funreal services were conducted by Elders Gold and Simpkins who were her favorite ministers. She was laid to rest in the town cemetery to await the resurrection morn. We miss mamma in every way and everything, yet my hope is to some day meet her in that home not prepared by hands. I hope our merciful Father will prepare each one of her dear children to go to her when we are called from this world.

Brother Gold please pray for her heart broken children.

COY KNOX.

By the request of his dear wife I make the attempt to write the obituary of Coy Knox, who died on the fourth Sunday in October, 1907. He was the son of Brother Redden Knox and wife of Martin county, N. C. He was married to Miss Nora D. Taylor on the fourth Sunday in September 1907, thus making his short stay with his dear young wife only one month and four days. He was not well when they married and on Wednesday after took his bed. His sickness proved to be typhoid fever and afterwards he went into pneumonia, from which he died. He suffered very much during his short illness.

He was a young man who had a good name which is Solomon says says is better than great riches. His wife had some dreams which impressed her that he would not live, and she says she had no hope of his recovery from the first. We hope from evidences left us that he has gone to the rest of the blessed. His young and devoted wife 's sad and in great trouble over his death, and feels her loss severely. May the Lord comfort her and the other loved ones he has left to mourn for him. Such is life and the midst of it we are in death.

Affectionately,

M. T. LAWRENCE.

R. T. WILLIAMS.

Brother R T. Williams, of Reidsville recently fell asleep in Jesus. He was a most lovely, noble and useful citizen and church member. Reidsville loved to honor him for he was worthy. He was useful and faithful as a church member, and is much missed by us. May the Lord remember us.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

My attention has been called to a mistake of mine in the article which I wrote in answer to Brother West. On a fuller search I find that Simon the Cananite was a Jew not a Canaanite by native. The word Canaanite in that instance means Cananaeran or zealous. It was his zeal for piety that gave him the name Cananaeran or Canaanite.

I would like for you to publish this correction for I do not want to publish or tell any thing but the sacred truth.

Yours in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Elder P. D. old;

Dear Brother: Being requested to write my experience with Elder J. A. Ashburn during his sickness. I will say that sometime about Christmas in 1889 I heard that he was very sick. I felt impressed to visit him, and on my way there felt an impression that it would be our duty to send for elders of the church to come and pray for him, but when I arrived I was informed that he had sent for his wife's father and grandfather who arrived about an hour after I did. In the meantime Elders W. H. Atkinson and R. H. Key arrivcd also not having been sent for. Prayer was held at night. He suffered intensely all night long until about day break the following morning when prayer was again offered for his recovery by Elder Atkinson. During the time of prayer there was great manifestation of power, and he at once revived. I feel to testify that I believe his recovery was due to the direct presence of the holy spirit of Almighty God.

Yours in love.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A SERMON.

Preached by John Youmans at the Ararat Baptist Church in Fairfield District, S. C., Before a Large Congregation; for the Introduction of the Primitive Baptist Association, Oct. 24th, A. D., 1840.

St. John, 7th chapter, 37th, latter part. "Jesus stood and cried, saying, if any man thirst let him come unto me and drink."

This Jesus that stood and cried was the son of the virgin Mary, the Son of God. God man. Emmanuel, messenger of the new covenant, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the prince of peace, the advocate, intercessor, redeemer, and salvation of his church. He cried with inviting voice saying, if any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. If you place where this was done, was at a feast of the tabernacles; where the Jews kept a feast eight days.

A holy convocation was observed in the first, and eight days thereof. And on the last day thereof, the figure of the purifying spirit, Jesus being the object looked for, at that time. While the water was pouring Jesus stood and cried, If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink. If you drink of the water I give you shall never thirst again. John 4:10-15. Jesus say come unto me; not to any other man, nor school, who have no water to spare. Jesus coming into this world to answer the great and glorious end. To give dying sinners the water of life, that they might drink and live to God purified. Therefore he earnestly cried in the gospel, come unto me; I am the giver of that water; I do not sell it, but freely give it to the thirsty, and none else. They that can obtain it anywhere else, will not come to me. I am the way, truth and life; no man cometh to the Father, but by me. John 14:6. No man can come to me, except the Father that sent me draw him. John 6:44. Therefore. Jesus the only way, truth and life, stood and cried, saying if any man thirst, let him come unto me [the river of life, the fountain opened in the house of Judea.] and drink, and never die. This word let, is not used amongst our late school boys, they say you may go if you will, at any time. But we do not believe their doctrines for they are many. One says, if I go to Jesus I shall by all wise, great and learned men of this world be despised and laughed at. But I will go to school and learn the arts and sciences of men, then I shall be made welcome in society; and they will give me something to eat and wear, another says, it is time enough yet, I have a dancing floor to attend. Another I have a race in hand. When all these things are ended, and I get plenty of money I will go. For there is such a cry for money to convert the world they make me think that Jesus would not accept of me without a pocket full of money. But my dear hearers, there are worse things to hinder you than all these follies. For you love this world and all these vanities, more than you do this despised Jesus; therefore, you have no will to come to the crying Jesus.

Now, it will be good to give the character of them: Jesus, cried to [thirsty.]) Man in his natural state does not thirst, or desire the things Jesus has to give; he like Esau, has enough. Therefore he must be made to know himself, what he is by nature, before he will know Jesus. Man must be made to know his misery and his self destroyed condition before he desires any of the blessings Jesus hath to give. There must be internal work of the spirit to make man know this. When the spirit enters in a man to work this internal work it brings the man or woman down to yield to its divine influence. The Holy Ghost is come to reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment, [the world of the heart Eccl. 3:11.]) When this spirit enters in a man, its aim is to go to the inner man where the soul lies dead in sin and trespasses, to make the soul alive to himself, and the Father. And when the spirit enters in the carnal mind, there is much opposition against it; there Mr. Pride meets the spirit in great resentment. But the spirit being the power of the Son and love of the Father, he forces pride, which is the devil himself, to give way. The next enemy is obstinacy. This Bunyan calls in the holy war, loth to stoop. But the spirit taketh him and flings him out; when this is done, there is the appearance of reformation, and humility in the man. The spirit going on conquering and to conquer all before him, till he comes to the heart of this spiritual celestial inner man. And when the spirit comes to the heart there lies a great rock of unbelief; this is the sin the Lamb of God came to take away. John 1:29. The power of the spirit takes it away and casts it into the great deep. Micah 7:19. This opens the heart like the veil of the temple from the top to the bottom, and there lies the soul dead, the spirit says to the soul live, John 6:63. The soul being quickened and made alive, the soul sees now its horrible and dreadful situation, that sin has brought it to, and sees no way to escape; it is made to believe itself the worst of all, and acknowledges its error, and lamentably cries for help and mercy, but none comes! The soul is in court of justice where mercy never comes. Justice stands sword in hand waiting for the command, cut it down. The soul owns its doom just. For I have consented to every evil, and disobedience to all the commands of God.

The soul is brought to a reconciliation with the God of justice. If he cuts me off and appoints my portion in this gasping pit beneath my feet I justly deserve it; if he saves me from it, it is an act of his free choice, therefore I cheerfully submit to his divine pleasure. In the midst of this woeful case, the soul thought he heard a cry, come to me and drink; but the soul fain would go, but knew not where, nor who it was. My tongue cleaveth to the roof of my mouth with the thirst for relief, I am confined in the prison of justice; my feet fast in chains of inability, I cannot go! O, that I had a friend to comfort me, or give me some relief. I cry, I promise never to do again as I have done, but it remains. The spirit moves to the soul to cry to Jesus, for none but He do you any good. Acts. 4:12.

As the spirit gave direction, so the soul cried to Jesus, and Jesus came. For the spirit knew where Jesus was and Jesus knew what the spirit was doing. When Jesus came to the soul, the spirit made the soul know who he was. And Jesus stood and cried, if any man thirst let him come unto me and drink. The soul then leaped for joy, but said, I cannot come for the law curses me, justice condemns me, truth saith the soul that sinneth shall surely die' Jesus then went to the soul and saith, be of good cheer, your sins shall be forgiven. This gave the poor soul some encouragement of hope. but it is not done; yet sin hangs heavy on that distressed soul! The soul seeing the majestic authority of Jesus it is made to cry to him for relief. O Jesus, thou canst save me if thou wilt. The devil made me do all this evil, and will make me do worse, if you do not take me out of his cruel hands. When the soul is completely conquered, and gives all up for loss and entirely dependent on Jesus for its salvation this spirit takes the love of the Father and sheds abroad in that heart, Rom. 5:5. The spirit then takes the faith of Jesus and gives it to the soul. Eph. 2:8-9. Jesus then taketh possession of that heart, and is in the soul, the hope of glory, and becomes the life of that soul. Colos. 1:27. Jesus Christ drives out of that heart all the abominations of sin and the devil; and prepares it as a dwelling place for himself and his Father. Grants a free and full pardon for all sins; whatever. Jesus then washes that soul from all sin and guilt in his own blood. 1 John 1:7. Rev. 1:5. And all recommends it into his Father's court without spot or wrinkle. Eph. 5:26:27. The Father adopts it into his family and says, I will be a Father unto you and you shall be my son and daughter. 2 Cor. 6:18.

Before this work was done in and for the sinner, he had inexpressible pain and misery. Now he is filled with inexpressible joy and love. When the sinner experiences and believes Jesus did all this for his own joy and salvation and finds Jesus a friend, the best of friends, and a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. Prov. 18:24. When the man or woman was brought to feel and believe all this and that it was the work of grace it cut him down to ashes, and to lament his folly for having lived all his lifetime in sin and rebellion against the best of friends; this godly sorrow leads him to evangelical repentance, never to be repented of. This I call a repentance unto life.

I have given a little of the character of them the Jesus calls unto him to drink. Jesus goes to them. Ezek. 16:1-15. Next how Jesus bids all opposers to let the sinner drink of the water of life, none giveth the water of life but himself.

Jesus subdued this proud obstinate rebellious, and unbelieving will, and made a will to do the will of God. Before the rebel wanted God to do his will; but now he is willing to do God's will in all cases. Jesus takes these regenerate ones to himself, and under his care, to lead them through the gates into his reign of grace. First Jesus leads him to the gate of God's righteous law, when about to enter the law objects; this sinner disobeyed all my lawful commands, therefore I curse him every way. Deut. 27:14-26. And without a personal, continual and perfect obedience he shall not enter. Jesus says, you were very right, but I have done all this for him; I honoured, and magnified you in all points, whatever was required. I have done this for him, let him come. The law and all thy curses were laid on me at Mount Calvary, and I turned them into blessings, therefore let him come. The law take him by the hand and invites him and welcome.

Second Jesus leads him to the gate of justice, and asks for entrance. Justice says, I am the basis of the law and the law cursed him and I will have his heart's blood before he passed my gate. True, says Jesus, I have honoured the law and opened my bosom for you to plunge in your sword into my side and you did so, and there came out blood and water, the water proved it to be the heart's blood. I did this for him, let him come in. Justice takes him by the hand and leads him through the gate.

Third, Jesus leads him to the gate of truth and asks for admittance. Truth answered, the soul that sinneth shall surely die. Truth, says, Jesus on Mount Calvary I did die; I died for him, therefore let him come.

Then Truth taketh and leads them through the gate and welcome into the kingdom of grace. Jesus says, without me ye can do nothing.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear brother in hope of everlasting life, rest and peace, in the kingdom of heaven. . . .

Althought too sick and nervous to try to write a letter, I feel that I must not longer delay acknowledging the receipt of, and thanking you for your precious and highly prized gift, Zion's Landmark. The first number of the present month came to hand a few days after your brief visit to me. How much like the return of some dear loved one it seems, after six years absence from my mail, or place of abode; during which time I have seen only a few numbers. While I find some new names among its contributors, I am glad to see a few of the old ones, from whose gifted pens I have often found strength, comfort and encouragement to cheer and help me along this earth's dark, dreary wilderness; and have spent many delightful moments in gathering up the mellow, golden grain after the reapers in the harvest field of our spiritual Boaz. Verily, we do sometimes find handfuls here and there, dropped of purpose for us, the poor and needy. I am but little, if any better, than when you saw me, and continue to have those paroxysms of severe pain, too acute and intense, it really does seem for my mortal to endure and live. Oh! it is indeed too wonderful and mysterious for me to understand, how I continue to live on and am suffering for hours at a time beyond the power of medical knowledge or skill to comprehend or relieve, save through the use of powerful opiates; of which I am so tired, sick and disgusted as to detest the very name.

Not till after hours of severest pain, when this poor body, and weary tired nature seems ready to collapse; exhausted and ready to succumb to hard convulsions will I take or consent for the doctor to administer, the deadly poison. Oh, how wonderful are the ways and works of our God, who does all his good pleasure on earth, as well as in heaven. How powerless and helpless we are in his hands. The hard, rugged road, the dark meandering way my feet have been led, the past years sore trial, long continual sufferings and disappointments of the bitterest kind, have fully demonstrated to me that "it is not in the powers of man that walketh to his steps," to order his course, to go contrary to the "shalls and wills" of the great Creator and Ruler of the universe. In thy hands are all my times, says poor Job, when the Lord was performing all his will in his severe dealings with his servant, that the power of divine grace might be magnified and his name glorified before the sons of men, in the life of his peerless saint. As no one can tell why God should give Job over to all manner of severe trial and temptation, when he had pronounced him superior to his fellowmen in spiritual attainments, so I, nor any other finite being can understand why he should suddenly cut me down, and off from the path and course I thought right to follow and best for my temporal welfare and success; to blight all my youthful hopes, aspirations and ambitions, by the heavy hand of affliction, which has rendered me a useless lumberer of the ground; and with the various trials, sorrows, disappointments and hardships, amid poverty and anxiety to make my life so bitter, wretched and miserable at times, as to make me crave death in preference to such a hopeless state of existence.

Like poor old Job in his bitter wails, I see no end to these earthly trials and sufferings, save in death, which at times seems slow in coming. My humanity is weak and cries out under the chastenings of the Lord till he give me reconciliation to his blessed will. What great grace it does take to keep a poor vile sinner and a continual sufferer from murmuring when the cup is placed to unwilling lips.

Yesterday evening about 5 o'clock I felt one of my bad spells coming on, and knew it meant another night of unbearable pain, followed by great exhaustion. Oh, that it would please the dear Father to call me home, to deliver me from this pain-racked body of sin, sorrow and death. My dear son has been unable to work for more than a month. A bad rising on the hand and then a cut finger resulted in blood poisoning, so the doctor pronounced it, he writes for me. Naturally, it is impossible for me to refrain from worrying over such afflictions; but my own sufferings have been so intense that I really have not had much time, or mind to think of anything else; not even my own child's sickness, the worst of which I am sure he has kept from me, because he knows a little of what I have to bear when suffering from this mysterious stomach trouble. Living all these months in such paroxysms of pain, makes me feel that something could be done to relieve, if not remove, the cause. I have said I would never go to the hospital, but continued misery has made me willing to go anywhere, and be treated as the doctor thinks best. The Lord alone knows when, and what, the end will be. To Him, and the power of His abounding goodness I must cling, "while the raging billows o'er me roll," and for strength and patience to bear, and wait all the appointed days, till my change shall come.

Reidsville, N. C., Dec. 20, 1907.

Dear Brother Gold:

For the past three months several requests have been made for me to write something on the relation between a church and her pastor and I have often had a mind to comply with those requests but three things have held me back. First and least is the lengthy article that I will be compelled to write. Second, it is a very delicate subject to take hold of, and third, I feel very incompetent for such a task.

As to the first of these things, if I am blessed to write and you think good to publish the brethren can read or let alone. The reason for my drawing back on the second reason is because if one speaks faithfully on this subject the cry, "Missionary, money hunter," soon goes up. But, as you said, if all were living in their duty it would be as pleasant to speak or write on this subject as on any other subject in the Bible. I feel that we should not shirk our duty because some one will deride and backbite us for being faithful unto God. I remember that I once made an appeal to a church to help support their poor, some of whom were carrying paupers and ever since some at that place have said that I was talking for my own pocket. In this of course, the Lord is the Judge. Now, if I write what is in my mind some one may be ready to say the same but that makes very little difference to me for the Lord knoweth and I want to be faithful to Him. Besides such a thing cannot be consistently said for I am now in the regular monthly service of four churches and the occasional service of one other and those churches with their congregation and others whom I visit with the little I receive from other sources keep me and my family from the wolf's den. Therefore I have not one word of complaint to raise against those whom I serve. And I say it to their credit, I never have had to bring the matter to their minds, they seemed to know it before they called me to serve them. So to the third objection I know I must leave this in the hand of Him who will supply all our needs.

Before a church calls for the service of a preacher as her pastor there are several things for her to consider. First, she should not call a preacher for convenience. There should be a congenial feeling between a pastor and his flock and they should be sure that this feeling exists from them to him before they call him. Eloquence and oratory never make a preacher, but the call and qualification by the spirit of God. When one has this and there is in him that degree of humility which makes him a servant to and not a lord over the brethren, and his gift unites and brings together the church and there is that love in them to him and in him to them then they may call him to serve her as her pastor. His feeling of congeniality will make them feel free with each other; make the pastor feel as one of the members of that same church and not as a minister who just stops in as he passes by. Thus his interest and their interest become one and he is as much grieved at a wrong in the church as any other member and will be ready to labor as faithfully to keep things in peace. Second, The church should consider how much of that preacher's time she is going to require for she has no right to even expect that he ought to be out anything financially because of the service he is to render to her. She must be willing to bear her own burdens and not require that preacher to bear the burden of the word of the Lord and financial burden of family's necessities. The burden of the word of the Lord is very great to every called minister of God's word, and the care of his family is just as great as any other family in the same circumstances. These things are to be considered and if the church does not expect to bear her part of this burden she has no right to make the call for his services.

Money is often hard for people to get hold of and they have a delicacy in offering anything else to their pastor. But pastors and their families have to live like other people. Elder Bodenhamer once said that he visited a brother preacher at his home and actually caught him and his family eating bacon and beans. This he said to show that bacon and beans was the table food and a supply of such things is just as good as so much money. In caring for us here our people send to us such things as they use in their own families and a pastor who is not willing to accept such things is not worthy the name of a pastor.

I know of a brother minister who has raised a large family of children and drove long distances to serve churches and he has done it at his own expenses. When he has asked the brethren to visit him in his own home they have said, "It is so far and we must remain at home and look out for our affairs. We can't spare the time." Was there any right or justice in that? Did not that preacher's affairs need attention as well as theirs? Where is the equality in this? The pastor and his flock should live together, that is on the same plane. He has likely got as much business sense as they, and, if let loose to spend his time in secular affairs, could make as good a living but he can't do it and serve churches too. An old sister boasted of the faithfulness of their old pastor, she said he walked sixteen miles for a number of years and served their church. One of the members of that church is worth thousands of dollars and allowed that old pastor to be as faithful as that at his own charges. Where is the equality there? Where is the appreciation of that faithful service. Two brethren in the ministry had been solicited to visit a certain church with the view of establishing appointments there; after they had preached very acceptably a well to do member who had done the inviting said, "I don't know whether I ought to give you anything or not." One of the preachers said, "That is entirely with you." They received twenty-five cents each. A brother deacon once said to me, "Our old pastor is going to sell his horse in his old age." I asked how he was going to meet his appointments at his four churches? With the answer, "Walk or depend on somebody else." I asked why he was going to take this course and he said, "Because he is not able to feed him." I said how many male members have you in your church? He said twenty-two. I asked if they were able to give the old pastor a barrel of corn each, he said all of us but two are. I asked if he was not able to give him two barrels and he said yes and so were several other brethren. Besides that church he served three others and they let him sell his horse after having worn him out in their service. Is that having all things common? A sister told me some time ago that her husband served four churches and outside of one of them, he didn't receive enough in a year to buy himself a decent suit of clothes. One of the members of one of those churches told me that they had now only quarterly meetings but that they wanted monthly meetings. I asked that sister how they did to live and she said, "Why me and my two little girls go out there and work that crop, for when Mr. ——— comes home he is so so worn out he has to go to bed." Brethren is that right? Think of it. No wonder that the ways of Zion do mourn.

When a church calls a pastor there are certain obligations that come in between them. He is to go not even considering what he is to receive. This has been the way from the first and should be yet. But because he does this is this any reason that the people whom he serves should not see that he receives compensation for his services to them? Should they say "He charges nothing, and I will give him nothing? How about that?"

When the Lord first sent out His disciples he told them to carry neither purse, nor scrip, &c. For the laborer is worthy of his hire. Luke 10:4. The word scrip does not mean a written sermon but a bag to carry victuals in. Thus you see the principles on which they then went out. Not providing for themselves but dependent and filled with the gospel of repentance. They confessed that they lacked nothing on that trip. Then the Lord sent them out again and commanded them to take both purse and scrip, and their sword also because he was to be taken from them as he then was and they were to go forth as lambs among wolves. Yet this did not relieve the churches of their responsibility to their pastors. "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labor in word and doctrine. For the scriptures saith, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, the laborer is worthy of his reward." 1st

Tim. 5:17-18. Thus Paul tells us how he understood this matter and his understanding was right for it was inspired by the Holy Ghost. Let us hear him again, "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." 1st Cor. 9:14. Even so. How? Why just as those who ministered about the holy things of the temple lived of the offerings which were brought there. It appears to me that any reasonable mind is able to comprehend that much if they would read that chapter and consider it. Why try to spiritualize away the true word of the Lord? Can we do this and be faultless. Therefore, while it is actually required of God's minister's to go and preach without money and without price, having freely received to freely give, it is also required of those who are made partakers of their spiritual things to minister to them of their natural things. Thus in both the spiritual and the natural they are to have all things common.

When the Lord said, Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you He was speaking especially for and to His ministers.

I know that preachers are no better to work than other men nor are their families better than other families but they are just as good and should not be slaved above others in order that the preacher should have time to go and preach.

It is the pastor's duty to go to his appointments as he has engaged and if he does not do this he should be admonished, exhorted and rebuked. He has no right to remain at home to entertain company, to work his farm, to go fishing nor to do any other servile work. Then the obligations of the members to their pastor is the same. It is their indispensable duty to meet him on church meeting days and encourage him with their presence, their cheering words and such means as the Lord has put in their hands. Nor is this a deed of charity so that you are not to let your left hand know what your right hand doeth. That was the word of the Lord to you when you did your alms but it is not an alms that you should do for your pastor, it is an obligation that you came under when you agreed to call him as your pastor. No one has the right to treat their pastor as a pauper but as a faithful servant of Jesus Christ. Brethren, don't be afraid to declare the plain truth of the gospel. It is just as much a duty as it is to preach predestination, election, etc. It is a part of the inheritance of the saints and we must possess the land. These tender footed principles in us are all Canaanites that are yet in the land and they are here to try us as thorns in our sides. Make them be hewers of wood and drawers of water and not masters to dictate to us what we shall do in this good land of ours. If some one persecute you receive it for Jesus' sake for so suffered both our Lord and his apostles. Speak the truth in righteousness, cry aloud and spare not. Show my people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins.

I feel to bless the Lord for putting me with such brethren, sisters and friends as he has and made them feel the obligation of turning me loose from the cares of this life so that I may go unencumbered [only with my unworthiness and preach His everlasting gospel. Sister churches, rise up from your slumbers and do the same by your pastors and see if they can not give you regular service.

Your loving brother in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Dear old father in Israel: I have just been reading your comment on close of the 40th volume of the Landmark which brought to mind some of the things that took place in my boyhood days. My father was a subscriber when you first edited it, and I was a reader and enjoyed it very much but could not witness the things there in; yet I believed they were true because my father and others in whom I had confidence witnessed them. I now read it for my meat and drink. It seems to nourish the life that I now live which I hope is like Paul's, by the faith of the Son of God. Oh, what a desire to speak often one to another, and when we read from a far off place, as I did from yours, what a glow of love and fellowship flows out, and we feel desirous to express our feelings for encouragement to those like self that we believe are planted in the house of the Lord, and that flourish in the courts of our God, and still bring forth fruit in old age. You spoke of Primitive Baptists bearing with your imperfections. They did not see them as you felt them. The building is fitly framed, each piece strengthens and supports the other. If Peter had said oh wretched man that I am, or that when I would do good evil is present, and groaned under a burden of imperfections we might not have thought strange, but Paul, a man who seemed always to be in the faith of duty could comfort Peter and tell him that in his flesh dwelt no good things, thereby proving that all flesh is grass, causing all that glorified to glory in the Lord. I believe the child of grace feels his failures to live up to the commands of God, and knows without His mercy he is lost, so that he looks forth out of his empty self and feels that he is dead, so that the life he has is entirely hid with Christ in God. How strange that every thing as pertaining to his life is hid with Christ and he himself feels to be dead when he tries to perform or fulfill the commandments or laws that are within his heart, he does not feel to be a living sinner, but is some how made alive to the fact that he is dead, so that the truth being in him causes him to deny himself and confess his sins. He feels that outward performances only leave him an unprofitable servant, and have nothing to do with his salvation and he draws no comfort therefrom, though he does feel that Christ did not destroy the law, and that it still exists, but is fulfilled in Him and the creature is no longer condemned by it. He is now under grace and feels that by the grace of God he is what he is. He is now troubled but not distressed, when one is condemned he is indeed distressed but after he has been delivered from under condemnation he is only troubled, he is cast down but not destroyed.

Yours in hope,

H. V. COLE.

Mr. P. D. Gold,

I have been taking Zion's Landmark for several years, don't think I have ever failed to read any of them. I am always glad to get them; don't see how I could give it up, as it is always full of good food for poor, hungry sinners that they can feast on the good things that they find in it. See all of the dear brethren so earnestly contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints, and they are not turned by every wind of doctrine, that they give God all the praise and glory, for he has all power in heaven and earth, and works all things after the counsel of his will, and it is of him that we are what we are. It is through him we live, move and have our being. Why not give him all praise. He has done all things for us, we cannot exalt him too high, and abase man too low. Guile was never found in his mouth, and man is all over defiled. He is full of wounds and putrified sores, and as filthy rags in the sight of God. Oh, how thankful we should be to our God that his mercies have followed us all the days of our lives, and he continues his mercies and blessings upon us.

May he spare you for many years yet to publish this dear Landmark, to comfort the many readers all over the world who get it.

Affectionately,

J. L. PERDUE.

Elders Gold and Lester,

Dear brethren in Christ: If you will allow me so unworthy as me space in your columns I will write of what to me is laden with good things. I have just finished reading February 15. number and I find many things contained in it to make one rejoice and glorify God, such as your wonderful instructive editorials and the corresponding letters. Then again we find many things to make us mourn. Such as the afflictions of sister Ashuba Ann Lee, and of the wonderful dreams of Sister Slusher and her recovery. Our hard impenitent heart goes out to them in sympathy. Then we turn to the obituary column and read of M. C. Powers' rescue on Siuzania Isand from the flames and we are made to proclaim, how wonderful are God's judgments and His ways past finding out. Then we turn to Sister Edwards' beautiful letter of condolence to the bereaved sister, then to Brother Adams' letter of instruction in regard to the ordination of one to the ministry.

We are made to rejoice and glorify God in behalf of all these communications. What a feast it would be to this poor, unworthy scribe to meet and converse with all the correspondents of the Landmark, but I fear that it will not be in this world. Though I do not hope that we will meet in the land of the blessed where parting will be no more.

Polkton, N. C., Nov. 25, 1907.

"Let brotherly love continue." Heb. 13:1. These words have been on my mind for some time and especially since I feel to see such a sad decline in that love and sweet fellowship which once existed in our beloved Zion, and I feel like I want to say continually "Let brotherly love continue." Seeing the manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons and daughters of God, and knowing that all things here will soon perish and pass away, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking forward to that day when we shall be freed from all the sins and sorrow, toil and strife of this poor world.

Our humble, loving compassionate, meek and lowly Master, just after he had set forth that great and wonderful example of love and sweet fellowship to the disciples, said to them, "Ye say well, for so I am. If I, then your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example that you should do as I have done to you." He addresses them as little children and says unto them, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye also love one another." He displayed his love and taught it to them in the most touching and loving manner and yet in the simplest and most child-like form, in stooping to wash their feet. Was that not the deepest, and sweetest fellowship that ever existed when their dear Lord and Master, the lowly Lamb of God, thus condescended not only to teach them his love, but to show them how he loved them and how they should love each other? And then he commanded them to love one another as he had loved them. What a lovely sight that must have been! No wonder David could exclaim in language like this, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." When there is this sweet peace, love and union abounding; Each can his brother's feelings hide, and with him bear a part; sorrow flows from eye to eye, and joy from heart to heart.

Malice and evil surmisings; contentions and back-bitings; evil speaking and devouring each other are done away, and each can in love wash his brother's feet. How we should seek to obey that great commandment, "Love one another." Now strive as he said to "Let brotherly love continue, not sow the seed of discord among our brethren if we love them. Dear Brother Burch used to say, Brethren don't give me any seed of discord and I'll not sow any." Then again let us not render evil for evil, but when our brethren treat us wrong instead of going talking to others about them, let us bear it if we can and a great many times we can, even though it may burden us to do so, but "charity suffereth long and is kind." It beareth all things, endureth all things, and in so doing we can live down malice and envy, and thereby "Let brotherly love continue." Again we should not hunt for the errors, slips and failing of our brethren for their ives are far too precious for us to try to drag them down to perdition, but we should rather consider and confess our own faults one to another, preferring one another in love, and thus "let brotherly love continue." Life is too short and the cause of heavenly Father too precious for us to waste our time in wrangling and tangling over things that do not profit, but only tend to strife and confusion. We have no continuing city here, but we seek one to come, therefore let us love each other and fall not out by the way. We would not have long to stay here if we were to live a hundred years, and if we destroy ourselves, our timely enjoyment—"O, Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but in me is thine help," whither we live what will we have lived for when we come to die. So let us strive to "let brotherly love continue," if we fall out and quarrel by the way, where is the evidence of our having been with Jesus? For it is to be known that we are His disciples if we have love one to another and he that loveth is born of God. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. And there is more than one way by which we may manifest that we love each other. We do not only manifest this love in attending our church meetings but also in visiting the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and in keeping ourselves unspotted from the world, which is pure and undefiled religion. We manifest that we love each other and the cause of our Master as much by keeping ourselves unspotted from the world as in any other one way; for if we conform ourselves to the world and follow after its vain glories, partaking of and with its orders and societies, it proves that we do not love our brethren and the cause of our Master as we should; and should we pursue a course of this kind we cease to "let brotherly love continue." Another way in which we manifest our love to and for each other, is in speaking oft one to another of the goodness and mercies of our God; if it is in communications, for even this is a sacrifice with which God is well pleased.

I have only hinted in a very feeble way at what I would love to have expressed; but if I was capable of giving the dear children of God advice in any way, I feel confident that I could not give them better than to "let brotherly love continue."

Your little sister in hope.

Wilson, N. C., . Jan. 15, 1908

Entered at the Post Office at Wilson, N. C., as Second-class matter.

Dear Brother Gold:

Please give your views on the prodigal son, the older one also and when the younger was born again, [if at all].

Very truly,

W. A. SIMPKINS.

Luke 15:11-32. What led to the use of this scripture, or what called it forth? No doubt but that all the answers of Jesus met the cases fully that called them forth. Jesus the perfect teacher taught that which is always true and always will be true. Hence when we consider the occasion and the persons to whom he is replying, and remember that there is no deceit in his answers we are helped at least to feel profoundly to respect the whole matter. The question what does Jesus teach is always to be considered.

The objection was made to him that he received sinners and ate with them." The Pharisees and Scribes murmured at him because he did receive sinners and eat with them. To murmur is to find fault vehemently and with bitterness. To receive sinners and to eat with them is to endorse them fully, is to approve them as friends socially and in all other ways. It was so grave an offense in the eyes of the Pharisees that they entirely rejected him, and would have no toleration for him. In their judgment that made Jesus the endorser of all kinds of wickedness, hence they cast out his name as evil and his doctrine as wicked.

How did Jesus answer this? In another conversation under a similar charge he said, "The whole need not a physician but they that be sick. I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. In the present case he uses parables to the same intent. He said, what man among you having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness and go after that one which is lost until he find it? When he has found it he lays on his shoulders rejoicing. And when he comes home he calls together his friends and neighbors saying, rejoice with me for I have found my sheep which was lost. Jesus said likewise I say unto you, joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance.

So he uses the case of a woman having ten pieces of silver and losing one. She lights a candle and sweeps the house diligently until she finds it. Then she calls her friends and neighbors with much rejoicing. Likewise there is rejoicing among the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

Notice in each case it is the owner of the sheep and the silver that searches for the lost till they are found. It is the nature of sheep to stray off and not return unless brought back. It is an easy matter to lose silver, and it is recovered by finding it. In each case behold the rejoicing over the lost that is found. So there is great rejoicing in heaven over one sinner that repenteth.

These two examples are of things—not men—sheep and silver. Sheep are not held responsible for straying. Silver is not held accountable for being lost. It is the pleasure of the owner in each case to find the lost property and bring it home.

Jesus uses another case in answer to the same objection against himself for receiving sinners and eating with them. A certain man had two sons. The younger said to his father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. Soon he leaves his father with all of his portion, leaving none of it with his father, and took his journey into a far country. He gets far off from his father, and showing great waywardness, and there wastes his goods in riotous living. There is the depravity of vile nature shown without any excuse for his shameful conduct. When he had spent all there arose a mighty famine in that land, and he began to be in want. He does all he can to keep away from home. But starvation threatens him. He hires himself to a citizen of that country to feed swine, a degrading occupation for a Jew. But no man pitied him even after he would gladly have filled himself with the husks the swine did eat. In the bitterness of his wretched condition, when about to perish, he came to himself. It certainly requires much anguish and remorse to bring a sinner to himself. How far off from himself is a blind man? He that sins wrongs his own soul, but how much he suffers before he comes to himself. But when he does come to himself he is near his father. When one is in his right mind in the sense here meant he is near the truth, near home, coming to his father repenting. The younger son said, how many hired servants in my father's house have bread enough and to spare, and I perish here with hunger? I will arise and go to my father and will say, father, I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. Make me as one of thy hired servants. What a change has been wrought in him? He is now brought back to first principles and his father. Did he intend this when he went off? No, he remained away so long as he could, and returned to keep from starvation. If he could have had his choice would he have returned? No. But when he comes to himself he said, I will arise and go to my father, etc. What brought him to himself? The mighty famine. He did not send that famine but it arose right where he was. When the circumstances work in one to bring him to himself he remembers his father's house and his vile conduct.

But was he not a son all this time that he was acting so shamefully? Yes. Was he born again before he went off? Is there any sense in which one is a son before he receives the spirit of adoption? Because ye are sons God hath sent forth the Spirit of adoption. Because ye are sons. While under the law the heir as long as he is a child differs nothing from a servant though he is Lord of all. The children of God were scattered abroad before Christ died for them, and he by his death gathered them into one.

It seems to me when the younger son returns home then and there is the manifestation of the birth of the Spirit whereby the fulness of adoption with all that follows is brought out and received by him.

The great rejoicing of the father sets forth the joy of heaven over the repenting sinner. In the heart of the father dwells pure and righteous love, and at the repenting of the erring son it is called forth. We know there is more anxiety in the heart of the father for the wayward and erring child than there is toward such as have never gone astray. If one of the family is sick all are anxious about that sick one. If one is in danger or has gone wrong the concern is for that one, and not for the well behaved. When the one that is gone wrong returns or repents the father with all the right-minded members of the family rejoice more over the repenting one than they do over those that have no need of repentance, or that went not astray. This is so in the church and in heaven, and is in harmony with the principles of truth and righteousness.

But how about the first born son that never left home, nor transgressed his father's command, yet the father had never so much as given him a kid to make merry with his friends? Was he in heaven rejoicing at the return of the younger brother? Does not this show forth the self righteous spirit of the elder brother who feels that he is better than the younger one. Is it not true that the one who feels he has not sinned is quick to show a bitter feeling toward the poor sinner who is sensible of his wrong doing? But the father is always equal to the emergency. Son, this thy brother was dead and is alive again. It was meet to rejoice at his return. But you are always with me, and all that I have is yours.

The Jew is the elder and beloved of God, but what has the Jew now? He has not a kid even to make merry with his friends. How about the Gentile, the younger son? He has the fatted calf, the ring and the robe, and the rejoicing is over him in heaven.

Those who feel they have never transgressed at any time are hard hearted, unforgetting, without thankfulness or gratitude have not love for the sinner who is vile in his own eyes, feeling he is not worthy of the least blessing. But he need not speak a word: the father will defend him. He has the fatted calf, the best robe, the feast of love, the joy of hating none, for he feels every one is better than he is.

Brother Gold:

Will you give your view of 1st Cor 7:14, "For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband."

The teaching of the Lord is that every man should abide in the same calling wherein he was called. Marriage is ordained of God, but Paul was not married and says, I would that all men were even as I myself. But every man hath his proper gift of God. Jesus said, some men are eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake, but no man can receive anything except it be given him of God. Paul says every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner and another after that. While Paul says to the unmarried, it is good for them, even if they abide as he does unmarried. There is much less care and labor, much more freedom to serve the Lord to one unmarried who is devoted to the Lord. However it is better to marry than to sin as he here refers to. For marriage is right and honorable as Paul elsewhere states.

Now if one is married let him or her abide where the Lord has called such. Are you married, then seek not to be loosed from your husband or wife, but render due benevolence to each other. Let the husband love the wife as he loves himself, and the wife see that she reverence her husband. Marriage is a peculiar relationship, and love is one to serve as he or she should. Where they walk blameless as unto the Lord then they glorify the Lord in marriage, setting forth the figure of Christ and the church which is a great mystery.

But suppose the wife leave the husband and will not live with him, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband and not commit fornication or adultery by marrying another. One of the ways in which ungodliness is shown in this evil day is walking after the lust of the flesh in dishonorable marriage. Men become wise in their own eyes and trample on God's law. His word commands that we should be sober, godly and righteous in our conduct and conversation. How? By abstaining from the appearance of evil. In these days men want prohibition—put away all intoxicants, and then we cannot get drunk. Kill all unclean women then we cannot commit whoredom. You had better keep your own body under. Mortify your own members. Deny yourself. If your right eye offend pluck it out. Cleanse yourselves ye ungodly sinners.

Let not the husband put away his wife. Let him honor the wife as the weaker vessel, and love and protect her as the head.

But suppose the believing wife has an unbelieving husband, now if he is pleased to live with her let her not leave him. The believing wife sanctifies the unbelieving husband in the sense that the marriage is proper, and the children are clean or holy, that is lawful and proper. If the husband is a believer and the wife an unbeliever but she is content to remain with him, let him dwell in love with her, for the marital relation is preserved, is honored, and the children are clean and holy, that is lawful and proper.

The gospel puts no burden on any one. The wisdom of God has fitly formed together all the relations of life ordained of God, and as we are in harmony with his revealed will and abide where He has called we find deliverance and peace.

How do you know but being faithful as God has called you there may also be deliverance and blessing to others? Many a husband, once an unbeliever has been won or brought to have good will to the doctrine and people of God as he has noticed the chaste conversation and meekness of his believing wife. P. D. G.

NECESSITY OF FAITH.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. 11:6.

There is no coming to God without faith, and every one that has faith is sure to come to Him. Faith never misleads any that have it. Nor is there any sin in it. But whatsoever is not of faith is sin. It is the victory always, for it is born of God and therefore overcomes the world. It is faith that borrows nothing of man, nor does it receive any help from man, yet it always helps the one that has it. "Thy faith has saved thee." It is so substantial that it will allow of nothing but the Lord Jesus as its author and finisher. It leads its possessor to believe in the Lord God. It has the knowledge to choose that which is sure to possess the greatest blessings. It sees nothing good in the things of time and sense and therefore rejects them all. It deals with things not seen, and they only are the eternal things. Those that have it walk by faith not by sight; for the things which are seen are temporal. Faith is the substance of things hoped for, and hope always deals with what is not in sight. He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. The existence of God in his infinite greatness and goodness must be believed by the one that comes to him. One must believe that he is able or has the power to bless. Also he must feel that without that blessing he is undone forever, but that if he has that blessing he is blest forevermore. Blessed are all they that trust in the Lord. Faith is that by which we disclaim any merit in the creature, but believe that all power is in the Lord, therefore the one that has no power of his own, nor does he claim that he has done anything of himself but he trusts in God.

There was no performing or doing by Jonah when he was swallowed by the whale, nor was there any effort of Jonah to deliver himself from the whale, but there was a wonderful feeling of the folly of man in observing lying vanities, and there was no un-just crying by Jonah for help from the Lord. The word of the Lord caused the whale to cast Jonah on dry ground. God spake to the whale and it obeyed him.

What ailed the burning, fiery furnace that it could not even scorch the garments of the three Hebrews? Was the faith the three men had controled by them, or by the God of heaven? Who kept the lion's mouth shut? Was it Daniel or did God cause it?

Faith is as far from creature work as it can be placed. We do not admit that creature works ever causes faith, or that one man tells another how to have faith, or what to do when he has it. It is God's work that we believe on Jesus, therefore it is that the work of faith is so wonderful. This is the work of God that ye believe in him whom he hath sent. God purifies the hearts of his people by faith. It is not that faith must be purified, for that is already precious and it works. That it causes the man in whom it dwells to work we have no question. Faith is the greatest worker I have ever read of. It never encounters any thing it fails to overcome has mounted above death. It opened the Red Sea. It puts to flight the armies of the aliens. It slew Goliath, quenched the violence of fire. It saves the soul, because we are kept by the power of God through faith. By faith God purifies the heart. Faith is trust in God that is in harmony with God's character for the infinite God of truth and holiness, grace and power is felt in the hearts of those that have faith in God. Hence it is precious. As the light of the sun and its heat are seen and felt as it shines so the light of Jesus, the Son of Righteousness, shines in the believer in him enlivening him in divine life, and beautifying him with the glory of the Lord.

Naturally men have a slavish fear of God, and would and do shun any contact with Him, and will not come to Him because their deeds are evil, and because they love darkness rather than light. But when God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, and under His creating and forming hand a world springs into existence with beauty and goodness everywhere, so when the light above the brightness of the sun shines in our hearts then the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ shines in our hearts. Then we draw right to God in faith and grow up into Him in all things.

Faith that works by love charms us with the glorious beauty of God, and the fruit of faith is shown in blessed works of obedience to the Lord. For faith is the most perfect worker that ever acted in the life of man. Faith proves its divine origin by what it does. By works faith is made perfect, or shows and proves it is perfect, and all its work is owned in heaven and approved by the faithful in Christ Jesus.

Faith is in harmony with grace. It is of faith that it might be by grace to the intent or end that the promise might be sure to all the seed.

Dear Brother:

I would like to have your views of Eccl. 7:15-17. All things have I seen in the days of my vanity; there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness and there is a wicked man that longeth his life in his wickedness. Be not righteous over much; neither make thyself overwise, why shouldst thou destroy thyself?

Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish; why shouldst thou die before thy time?"

I understand that the righteousness in which he perishes is his own righteousness, and not the righteousness of Christ; but I desire to have your views fully on the three verses.

W. A. GOURLEY.

Solomon appears as an utterer of Proverbs. This he does as king in Israel. Then he appears in this book of Eccl. as preacher in Jerusalem. His text as preacher is vanity of vanities, saith the preacher, a text that spreads, extends, widens, deepens as one knows more of the things under the sun. Solomon is the proper man to preach it. His wisdom exceeded that of any other man and it requires wisdom to explore the world of vanity and he cleaves to his text. He limits the range of vanity to all that is beneath the sun. He explores every supposed avenue of pleasure, sips or tastes at every fountain of imaginary joy. His wealth enables him to use the means within man's ability to see where happiness is. He leaves no stone unturned, no fountain untasted. He lives to old age, tries what there is in wealth, woman, daughters of music, mental and intellectual resources, making of books, communing with the learned, eating and drinking, building, planting, ornamenting, telling difficult things to people, answering hard questions, and every thing that man has ever sought as a means of obtaining happiness, and pronouncing them all vanity.

All things had he seen in the days of his vanity. It is the man of wisdom that knows that things of this life are vanity, and the more he knows of this world the more he knows it is vanity.

"There is a just man that perishes in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that longeth his life in his wickedness." What is the vanity in this? Why if one depends upon his righteousness to save him he finds it is not sufficient, but he dies like another man. If you think that because another is wicked while you are righteous that therefore you will outlive him you will be disappointed. Man is not able from any rule by which to judge these things. God has set the world so fully in the heart of men that they cannot see beyond the world, and their judgments are blinded.

One event happeneth to all—death, disappointment, failure. There is only one man that fails not, nor is discouraged and that one is the Lord Jesus.

You look in the place of judgment where there should be righteousness, and behold iniquity is there. You see a man that is righteous yet he perishes in his righteousness. It is only the righteousness of a man and cannot deliver, for it is not equal to that which is required to deliver. Died Abner as the fool dieth said David; but the more princely he was the more Joab despised him; his righteousness did not deliver him.

Here is a young man of good parts and very serviceable to his neighborhood. All that love good living and usefulness are glad of a man with such parts, yet he falls early and the people mourn the death of this Jonathan. His valor; his love of David; his unselfishness could not save him to come into David's kingdom. Here is a wicked Joab who slew men better than himself and was very valient in fighting and outlived David for whom he fought and prolonged his life until the reign of wisdom began; yet he was a wicked man.

We think if a child will obey his parents it will live to old age; but how often does it appear to be otherwise? We see children that are disobedient to their parents, yet they at times live to old age. Is this vanity? It is in such a case that we can't understand it, yet we know it is not a vain thing to serve the Lord and though a wicked man should prolong his life in his old age yet his life is a failure and he is cursed.

We often think 't was better in former times than it is now and that children were good and obedient in former generations, and politicians were pure then and publishers of news sought only to tell the truth then and all preachers were model saints then. But looking into history there we find children that so misbehaved as to cause deep sorrows to their parents in Absalom's day and that there were deceitful and wicked rulers and false prophets then; and lovers of money then, and whoremongers and murderers, and false teachers then as well as now, and that there is nothing new under the sun.

Be not overmuch righteous. Do not consider yourself more righteous or wiser than other men. This would lead to presumption and pride goes before a fall and you will destroy yourself. Do not think you can steady the ark as Uzzah did, for he thought he was wise enough to steady and help out matters. Be not overmuch righteous or you will want to become the judge and manager. Remember that while you claim to be very progressive and wiser than your father, it yet is true and shall come that men shall be fierce, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, and will claim righteousness and goodness. It is not good to be righteous overmuch. That is to think yourself to be better than you are, for you will destroy yourself, your peace and your usefulness.

Do not become self-willed and because some other wicked man flourishes and spreads himself as a green bay tree. Do not think you can do something with impunity that another poor, weak brother failed in. Here is a weak brother that is fond of whiskey and drinks until the church must withdraw from him in his disorder. Now do not think you are stronger than he is, and that you can control your thirst for liquor by gratifying it. You starve or restrain it only by denying. Now do not become a drunkard and destroy yourself by your wickedness. Let him that thinks he stands take heed lest he fall. Watch shun the appearance of evil. Let your moderation be known to all by abhorring that which is evil, and cleaving to that which is good.

So'mon says there is nothing new under the sun. It is all vanity. That which is above the brightness of the sun.—the revelation of Jesus—is new and that will never perish. P. D. G.

TO AN ELECT LADY.

Prayer is the supplication of one to whom has been give eternal life by the divine nature and arises from a sense of the need of something not to be found in carnal nature—but that which comes alone from the giver of every good and perfect gift—and is produced in the heart by the spirit of the Son of God. None but the children of God are in possession of eternal life, and as the life must determine that upon which the creature possessing it consists, so eternal life determines the need and the source whence cometh that which only can supply it hence the spirit emanating from eternal life makes the intercession, the end designed, and gives God the praise—"For we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the spirit itself maketh intercessions for us." This Spirit of intercession in one humbles him, and gives him confidence in him who heareth prayer and gives him faith to believe that is the thing for just such needy creatures as he feels himself to be.

Prayer is ordained of God, not as a means by which blessings are obtained, nor as a cause for their being bestowed, but as an evidence to the suppliant of the need of them, and that they are treasured in Christ, and that in the blessings of God he is blessed with all Spiritual blessings in Christ and that all things are his and that he is Christ's and Christ is God's and therefore he comes boldly and yet humbly to the throne of grace to help in time of need. In a very precious sense we are not to understand that in answer to prayer the blessings is transmitted from some store-house situated somewhere which is very far away, but that as all fulness is in Jesus and Christ is in us the hope of glory, so is the thing for which we ask in us, as "He that spared not His own Son but delivered him up for us all how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." hence if we have him we have the thing desired, which has ut to be revealed and we are satisfied.

It is not possible for one to truly pray for a thing which he does not really feel to need, nor is he sensible of that apart from the spirit of Christ, which must be in him; neither can he really and truly pray for a thing which does not exist, and that too for him nor does he pray and receive not.

We are not to understand that the spirit so makes intercessions for us that we are not at the same time exercised in the same work nor is the spirit a kind of helper which aids us wherein we fail, but it helps our infirmities by making the intercession for us in such a way as that by it we effectively intercede—as by it we cry Abba, Father.

Isaiah in speaking of the blessedness of the people of God in the gospel day which it nows says, "and it shall come to pass that before they call I will answer; and while they are yet speaking I will hear."—65-24. It seems from this and other texts that in the presentation of the blessing the subject is inclined to ask, and while it is being bestowed he speaks, and can but believe the ear of the Lord is open to his cry, and hears and answers it. I do not believe one could be turned from the throne of grace unsatisfied when he comes in faith which is according to the will of God, but will receive that which he needs whether it is that which he had thought he needed or not. He knows what we need and supplies only that need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus our Lord.

I will now notice briefly a few texts of scripture, "And he shall be entreated of them and shall heal them." Isa. 47:22. This seems to refer to the vessels of mercy among the Gentiles as they are manifested as under the law, and are being taught by the law, as a school master, in which exercise they are slain as was Saul who was alive without the law once, but when the commandment came sin revived and he died "and the commandment which was ordained unto life I found to be death. For sin taking occasion by the commandment deceived me, and by it slew me." Thus are all the subjects of salvation smitten because of sin, and in the fullness of the times are healed, because of the mercy and grace of God. All the promises of God in Christ are Yea and Amen, and are to his people who are declared to be afflicted and poor and needy, and hungry and thirsty, and naked, sick and in prison, and broken hearted—all because of sin, but the Lord shows unto them His covenant and heals them of their afflictions and blesses them with the riches of His grace thus supplying their need, and feeds them with the bread and water of life, and clothes them with the righteousness of His Son and heals them by the virtue of Jesus Christ, both in mind and heart. Binds up their hearts with the cords of His love, makes the prison house a palace by dwelling with them here; thus teaching them that though he was rich yet became poor that they through his poverty might be made rich, and thus have all things and abound.

And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up.' It seems to me we are authorized to believe that the Lord does restore health to one who is sick or afflicted who by faith prays unto Him for his healing virtue and power, and that if one is sick and is minded of the Lord, as doubtless he may be, to send for the Elders of the church, the same spirit which inclines him to send for them will prepare them to go unto him like it did Peter to go unto Cornelius, and that while they pray over him and anoint him with oil in the name of the Lord, the supplications of the spirit through faith will be made at the throne of Grace for healing, as with the language of James fully assures me that as it was in the days of Christ, so it is now that one may be blessed of the Lord with the prayer of faith and he healed and raised up and forgiven his sins—both naturally and spiritually. I do not believe in temporal healing is wrought, but that where one is spiritually healed literal effects may reasonably be expected at the same time.

If a brother or sister who is sick, should send for me as one to pray over and anoint him or her in the name of the Lord and I should have a mind to like I sometimes have to go and preach the gospel, I should go and do what I could according to the scriptures, regardless of what any one might think or say, feeling assured that if the work was of the Lord the prayer of faith would undoubtedly save the sick, and the Lord would be praised.

"Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another that ye may be healed." James would have us understand that one must be righteous before his prayers can avail anything either for himself or any one else. If one has no mind to confess his faults and pray for others he may not expect to have the prayers of his brethren, nor of faith, neither the forgiveness of his sins. The prayer that availeth anything must be fervent and the fervent prayers must be effectual and the effectual must be the prayer of a righteous man, and his righteousness must be of God; and his prayer of faith, then it must and will be effectual, fervent and availing.

Just as one may believe on the name of the Son of God and not know that he has eternal life, so one may have a certain thing which accompanies salvation and not know he has it, and yet by virtue of the thing or of him who gave it, he has implicit confidence in God to believe that when anything is asked for according to his will, it is in his immediate presence and hearing that such supplication is and must be made, and therefore he hears that to granting the petition and that supplies and that hearing is equivalent to granting the petition and that therefore he has the petition, and did have it before he asked for it, but it was not made manifest unto him. When one through the spirit cries Abba-Father his cry implies that he is the child of that Father and therefore all the relations between a father and son exist between them, and the relationship guarantees the existence of all blessings accruing from such state and that they are of the Father "who has blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." It seems to me a better evidence of sonship could not exist than that which indicates complete submission to and perfect desire for the will of the Father to be done, therefore when one feels fully reconciled unto God and desirous for his will to be done, or loves his will he must be assured of his sonship and that he has his Father's blessings even in the fullness of life forevermore.

As in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established, so if two shall agree as touching anything they might mutually desire according to the unity of the spirit by faith it is a conclusive evidence that there is for them such things for which they asked, and that their supplication is of the spirit which knows our needs and the riches of His grace and that therefore it shall be granted. This agreement is not as if two should first agree to ask for the same thing and then determine from what they would ask, and the time when it should be done and the manner of asking, but it is an agreement in which they are brought by the Spirit which is for harmony with their needs and all the circumstances connected with their condition, and each may not know of the wants and exercises of the other until the moment the petition is made, if indeed they should know it then.

If one feels the need of anything which he believes is among the good gifts or perfect gifts which are from above and come from God and him only, it is his privilege to ask for it in the best manner he can, and though he ask not in faith, and therefore receive not, I think of no scripture to condemn him, but in the working together of all things for his good his failure to receive may be so applied to his mind by the spirit as to give him a profitable exercise in meditation of heart and show him the contrast between an exercise by faith wherein the thing desired is to ultimately rebound to the praise of the glory of the grace of God, and that exercise of the flesh wherein the thing desired is to be consumed on the lusts thereof, that he may know of what manner of spirit he is, and know of a truth that "if ye live after the flesh ye shall die, but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live."

It seems evident to my mind that one can no more engage in the true exercise of prayer without the spirit of the Lord in his heart than he can preach the gospel except the spirit of the Lord be upon him, or can worship God in any other respect in spirit and in truth, without the spirit of the Lord, "Without me ye can do nothing"—and again: "I can do all things by Christ who strengthened me."

As the Lord is one mind and none can turn him and as his mind is infinite it seems evident that prayer and the answer to prayer can only be according to that mind and not that mind according to prayer. He could not be of one mind and be influenced by prayer to do a thing which was not his mind to do before the prayer was made, besides he says, "I am the Lord; I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed."

The Lord has not only ordained prayer, but he has also ordained the answer to prayer, therefore, he always answers prayer; if we pray, and if not answered, it is conclusive evidence that we have not been truly exercised in prayer; it has not been of faith. I mean that exercise in which we ask for something.

One great reason why we do not properly understand the true character of prayer is because we are too much inclined to regard the form in a devotional sense, yet we may place much stress upon the form and order of prayer as to exclude the real spirit and substance of it. If one is possessed of the spirit of prayer it will undoubtedly be in order for him to pray then and there, and if he has a mind to manifest outwardly the inward emotions of his heart the form necessary to maintain decency and order will suggest itself. If one has a mind to pray and then preach let him do so, but if another has a mind to preach and then pray let him do so, if another has a mind to pray but not to preach, or to preach and not to pray let him freely enjoy the gift and exercise thereof according to the spirit of grace which is in him.

Much that is termed prayer consists in form and words, and the one thus exercising can give no gospel reason for observing such a course. Many things are asked for that are not needed, and some that the Lord never gave nor promised to any one.

To have prayer at each meal or at retiring is without warrant, in either time or order, except the one to exercise has a mind to engage in praise or prayer at such a time, which may be true of him at any other time, and under different circumstances. If one is entertaining a minister it is not out of place to ask him if he has a mind to worship God in his house but one has no right to establish rules and customs for the government of preachers nor any one else.

There is a species of cranks going through the country posing as preachers, who ask to pray in your house, and for you, and sometimes do so without asking, all of which is neither decent nor in order, but is presumptuous, deceptive and hypocritical.

There is a species of prayer which has the form of prayer but there is nothing in it of a supplicating character and therefore it should not be regarded as either supplication or intercession but as adoration and thanksgiving.

Much more might be said upon the subject, but I will submit these thoughts with the hope that they may be sufficient, and that the Lord may lead my dear friend into all truth and give her the desire of her heart that she may show forth the praise due to his great name, and be found in health and strength in body and in spirit, that she may bear the yoke of Jesus and learn of him and find that his yoke is easy and his burden is light.

OBITUARIES

AMY O. LEMMONS.

Stokesdale, N. C., Nov. 14 1907

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Prethier: By request of Cousin Mary Barham, daughter of this notice, I will try to write a few lines for publication in Zion's Landmark of the life and death of my dear aunt, Amy O. Lemmons. She was a daughter of William York and Sarah, his wife, of Rockingham county, N. C. She was born June 15 1831, was married to Franklin H. Lemmons October 30th 1851, and departed this life September 29th 1907, aged 76 years, three months and fourteen days.

Unto her and her husband were born seven children two sons and five daughters, three of her daughters preceded her to the tomb several years, also her husband died over 20 years ago, leaving her alone in the world with children to raise; but by the mercy and blessings of Him who knoweth how to temper the wind to the shorn lamb, she was enabled to keep her children together, all except one that died in youth, until they all married and she lived with her youngest son and his wife till the day of her death.

She never united with the church but she made it manifest by an orderly walk and godly conversation that she was a partaker of the faith by which the Lord's people are saved. I remember hearing her tell her experience more than thirty years ago, soon after I obtained a hope. It was a great feast to me and she said if she was a Christian she was the very least of all. She possessed a quiet, gentle, peaceable disposition, kind and friendly to all, and seemed always to do unto others as she would have them do to her. She bore the infirmities of age with cheeful patience, often expressing her desire for the mercy and blessings of the Lord on her children, relatives and friends. She told me a few weeks before her death that all her hope and trust was in Jesus.

In conclusion I want to say to her children and grandchildren, though she is dead, she yet speaketh. Remember her example, and try to follow in the paths she trod as near as you can; and may the Lord enable you all, if it is according to his divine will, to say as she did that your hope and trust is in Jesus.

Her loving niece,

AMY F. GOURLEY.

LOUISA KEESEE.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother: I will send the obituary notice of mother, Mrs. Louisa Keesee who was born April the 25th, 1822 and died November 5th, 1907, making her stay on earth near'y 86 years.

She was married to Jesse Keesee, and to them were born nine children. As I think there is often more said said the dead than is necessary, therefore I will be short as possible; yet it is hard to say too much about a good mother which I claim we were blest with. I know she was a good wife, a good mother, a good neighbor, industrious in trying to bring up her children right, not aiming to obey us, but requiring us to obey her. She was a great sufferer for the last twenty five years, had been an invalid for twenty years, not able to walk, but bore her afflictions with as much patience as any one could.

I have never heard her murmur or complain of her sad lot. She loved to see the Baptists come. I would often get the preachers to come with us home to preach for her. This she seemed to enjoy very much and yet she never united with the church.

About six months before her death she was taken entirely helpless, and had to be fed and nursed as a babe, and gradually grew worse until death relieved her.

It was hard to gaze upon dear mother lying cold in death but I have tried to faithfully discharge my duty, not forgetting the many unpleasant hours she had spent waiting on me when I could not care for myself. I believe our loss is her eternal gain, and she is now reaping the reward that now awaits the people of .

Brothr Gold, I have some little hope of meeting her ere long when there is no more sickness, sorrow, pain nor death, where the redeemed of the Lord walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem there to set down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom; so with David I would say when I awake with the likeness I shall be satisfied; yes I trust God will be my helper to lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset me, and run with patience the race set before me looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of my faith.

Mother had a favorite song she often asked us to sing, and requested it to be sung at her grave. Durand & Lester's Hymn's and Tune Book, No. 528, "Death is no more a frightful foe." She would talk and pray until exhausted for about a month before her death.

Her neighbors were good and kind to her and would often bring her some refreshments to eat. She seemed to think any thing her neighbors brought her was better than anything at home. When I returned home from the funeral for the first time in 20 years I found no mother. This was a sad feeling indeed.

Affectionately,

A. B. KEESEE.

Dear Brother Gold:

By copying the statistics from another paper there is a wrong in the obituary of Elder James S. Dameron. He was baptised into the fellowship of the Primitive Baptists by Elder Wilder and not by Elder Wilson.

Please make this correction and oblige.

A recent order from the Postoffice Department requires extra postage paid for each subscriber that is behind in payments. This is an additional reason why our subscribers should keep their papers paid up. This is meant only for such as are behind. Look at the date after your name and each one can tell whether he is behind or not.

In every way it is better for subscribers to keep paid up. It is better for them and better for the editor also. P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

I feel like I want to write a few lines for the Landmark that some of my friends may know where I am, or how I am getting along at present. My health is good and I wish to feel thankful to the Lord for his many blessings.

I farmed last year, had very good success, and taught one singing school at Autry's Creek, N. C., which I enjoyed very much indeed.

I desire that the class I have taught will keep up the singing and cultivate their voice for I consider that one of the most pleasant gifts God has given to man. I want to praise him on earth and in earth, in song and in heart, and hope to praise after the death of this mortal body where singing will never end.

With love and good wishes to each student that attends my school, and a happy new year, I am sincerely yours,

Bigger Cotton Yields Per Acre

The value of commercial fertilizers has been demonstrated over and over again by both government and private comparative tests. We stand ready to demonstrate to you at any time that the surest way to "increase your yields per acre" is to use

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

Hon. R. J. Redding, former Director of the Georgia Exp. Station, is authority for the statement that "experiments made at this station show that well balanced commercial fertilizer applied to one acre of land, and well cultivated, may be reasonably expected to produce an increase of yield of seed cotton. At the present price of cotton this would mean a large extra profit (for both lint and seed), after deducting the price for fertilizer."

You'll find reports of many other comparative tests, together with much valuable information concerning land culture in the new Virginia-Carolina Year Book or Almanac. Ask your local fertilizer dealer for a copy—or we'll send you one free, if you write our nearest sales office.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Miss Azubah Lee,

My dear afflicted sister who has a precious hope in Jesus:

A loving and abiding hope that we shall one day be like him, and as he is, what more do we want, what more can we ask for?

He says "I will leave in the midst of thee, a poor and afflicted people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord." Blessed are all they that trust in Him for he will never leave. He will care for them and administer unto their every need, because he gave his own dear life for them; spilled his own precious blood for them.

Surely if he gave his dear life for them, will he not much more freely give them all things needful.

"Ask and it shall be given unto thee," in the name of Jesus."

My dear sister he was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, like unto. He bears all our grief, hears all our groans and pleadings to him for mercy, bottles up all our tears and will ere long receive us into glory, when there will be no more pain, sickness, nor sorrow for all will be love, joy and peace forevermore. "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted." Oh, my dear sister let us suffer on for Jesus' sake; he suffered the ignominious death of the cross for us. Where there is no cross there is no crown. If we walk in his footsteps we have a part in his life and we do this by suffering. If we suffer with him we shall reign with him.

So let us press onward to gain the prize, for there are only "a few more days on earth to spend and all our toil and care shall be ended."

Paul says our light afflictions "work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Oh, my dear sister there is a hidden mystery in your suffering but you cannot see it, yet it is working out for your good, and ere long you will reap your reward. We see through a glass darkly here, but some sweet day we hope to meet our dear Savior on that bright shining shore, where parting is no more. The viler you feel the more light you have. The indication of your dream to my mind is that there is no strength in your own arm; but the strong arm of Jesus brought salvation and it ever understandeth us, raising us up day by day. Your strength lies in him. Your words were as apples of gold in pictures of silver, and went up to him and in due time he will receive your spirit. So cast all your care on Jesus, for he is ever watching over you, with his loving care, and neither slumbers nor sleeps.

Your dear letter reached me full of ecstatic joy and comfort, mingled with sadness. May I send it to be published for I feel it will be reviving to others who are heartbroken, and faint by the way.

May our covenant keeping God richly bless you in every needed way and preserve you unto the day of Jesus Christ, is my wish for you uppermost in my mind.

Let me hear from you soon. From your afflicted sister, trusting in that sweet abiding hope in Jesus.

MAGGIE H. STATON.

Having received your most welcome letter of July 22, with a willing mind I now attempt to reply, although without any news worthy mentioning, or of encouragement to others. I feel blank in attempting to inspire others as I am so lowly and poor. I think of you as the widow's vessel of oil, always ready to supply others empty ones, or your letters seem to be always full and as strong and abundant is the supply at the end as the beginning. Your wisdom so greatly excelleth mine that I feel beneath existence; but take encouragement in believing such would be too much, too good for poor me. As you know some of us are vain, and full of pride ready to be puffed up.

I think I would be vain and proud of such spiritual wisdom, and perhaps spend it on the lust of the flesh which would be only destruction in the end. Naturally you know some people who have but little of this world's goods are many times prouder and vain over the little they have than others who are worth much more. So to keep such an one under he must be kept very low. But I am thankful that I was never puffed up but surely have fallen and the higher I had been the more I would have fallen too low in pride to care for my appearance as much as I should, and am glad I never scorned less fortunate people, when I was well. I will tell you a little story of an act of charity before I was taken sick, which I think will prove to you whether or not I was proud.

Without money or price at the age of 20 or 22 I took my washtubs on a wheelbarrow to the home of a poor crippled club footed man whose wife was sick. He offered to pay me but I refused to take pay as they were poor. I did it because I thought it my duty, for I did not need to do such work from home, and never did as I was able to live without doing such labor. I did not do the work for pay, but as a duty and I am glad until this day for we never regret doing our duty, but oh, how much do we regret the neglect of it. Now where could you find many who would perform such a task unless necessity compelled them?

Some are fearful of such being against character, but I do not believe duty mars the character, especially with those who know enough to consider such and the opinion of others is not worthy of notice as we are generally known and our ability to live also, and need not fear but that our name and character are known much more distantly than we are seen.

Oh! If I felt my spirit as blameless as my character is before the world how white I would feel. People often look on the outward appearance but God looks upon the heart. Oh! That fountain called my heart, in which I see so much impurity, making me feel so lean, as Paul when he said, "O wretched man that I am." I look upon my heart as a pool of muddy water and I am helpless to cleanse it. But the relief I feel would be more could I view it cleansed, oh, peace unspeakable. Yet there is a silent witness within acknowledging that. Even after suffering four years agony, being tempted until the day of my birth is beheld by me as Job did his, yet I had rather suffer on the rest of my days if God's will is not to deliver than to have my pleasures in this world and here only. If suffering needs to be done, oh, Lord! may mine be done on earth, is my desire. Well I can't write much of worth. I have been in more feeble health this week than last having taken cold, throwing me into a fever. I think my sister is a little stronger as she can walk about the room. Hope your health is as good as usual, and trust it may remain so. Suffering as I am, my great desire is if I can't get better I may not be worse. There is much sickness in the community and many incurable invalids. I must stop as writing imposes on my strength.

I have no objection to you sending my last letter for publication if you think it would be any encouragement to others who are in distress. Yet I can't see how it could be filled as all my letters are with cries of distress. I desire you to send yours which I enclose. There is beauty in it, to encourage those whose hearts are not so troubled as mine, in that they refuse to be comforted.

I think your letter would be a balm to many a poor soul, rich as it is in glad tidings of a precious Savior. May you still be enabled to inspire others as they make their pilgrimage through this cold unfriendly world of sorrow and affliction. May God's mercy be with us both in our afflictions, I ask for Christ's sake.

Your unworthy sister in hope,

AZUBAH LEE.

Dunn., N. C. R. F. D. No. 2.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Very dear Brother: I wish to say a few words to you this morning, though I do not feel worthy to address you as brother, and am persuaded that I am not competent to write anything for publication, still I have an impression at times to let the dear people of God (with whom I have my name,) hear from me and know some thing about my journey here in this life, and see if they think one with so many disappointments, fears and ups and downs as I have can be an heir with the blessed family of God.

There is nothing good in my walk. I believe I have been shown how to walk and taught my Master's will, but I cannot do it, and oh the stripes I bear. I have been trying for forty long years, or more, to do good and serve my heavenly Father, but feel as far from it today as when I first began. I find myself out of the way. My thoughts are often gone astray. Like one alone I seem to be.

Oh! is there any one like me? Dear ones, you can find my feelings described in this hymn, No. 380. If the gracious Lord through tender mercy does not save me without anything that I have done to bring him near, or cause him to love me, I shall be forever lost. I hate my sins yet cannot turn from them.

I know the Lord has blessed me all along through life for which I want to be thankful. He is merciful unto our unrighteousness.

I am feeling low down in spirit and desire the prayers of all the people of God. I am your sister I hope through the electing grace of God.

MRS. PHEBE A. LEE.

Dunn, N. C.

"Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all." The people of God are an afflicted and poor people, so saith the scripture, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord. Poor in spirit, mourning his love to know. The poet describes them in this language, the doubting souls are in his hands, and he will supply precious food for all his lambs." So little children, do not fear, for Jesus lives to answer prayer. Pray without ceasing lest ye enter into temptation. Resist the devil and he will flee from you, for he is a liar from the beginning, and the father of it. Dear children of God, when satan persuades you to believe you are deceived about your hope, fight him with the sword of truth, and tell him it is a lie for the Lord is not slack concerning his promises. He says his counsel shall stand and he will do all his pleasure. All his promises shall be fulfilled; not one jot or tittle of his word shall fail. "Oh! The depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out. He afflicts us in mercy to make us know our helpless and dependent condition for life and salvation. Praise his holy name forever and forever.

He that knoweth his Master's will and does it not shall receive many stripes of trouble and affliction. I feel it is right and just that I should suffer for I disobeyed his word. I have quenched the spirit till I cannot utter what I feel within. I am a mere blank and almost blush to speak the Savior's name, yet I love to hear him praised above all others for his mercy endureth forever. Whosoever loveth is born of God." We love Jesus because he first loved us. He corrects our souls to refine. To make us at length in his likeness to shine."

If ye receive not chastisement then are ye bastards and not sons, for the scripture teaches there is a woe upon them that are at ease on Zion. If no cross, no crown. But I have a heavy cross to bear daily, if its not the right kind. I afraid I am a professor and not a possessor. I fear I have missed the substance and only caught the shadow. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all. What a wonderful God is this to deliver his people out of all their afflictions. We should bear these as patiently as possible, for they will work out for our good and his glory. Remembr too, dear children of God, the more we toil and suffer here, the sweeter rest will be. Jesus was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." He was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death. He was holy and without blame, cradled in a manger, and had nowhere to lay his head.

"What manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. What manner of people ought we to be, true and faithful, watching over each other for good, not for evil, and watch self first. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Fall from the steadfastness of faith, not fall from grace. There is no such doctrine as that. If we have had the grace of God bestowed upon us, it is like a nail fastened in a sure place. It is sure to stand the trying hour of death. Lord grant us living faith and dying grace, be our shield and portion.

"Oh do not be discouraged for Jesus is your friend, and if you lack for knowledge. He'll guide you to the end."

"Trust ye in the Lord, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength" He is my song and joy. My afflictions for several months have been of such nature as to strengthen my hope, for it is only in obedience that I get relief. I was promised in obedience I should have health and peace of mind, but in disobedience, trouble and afflictions, and it has been heaped upon me, and it seemed I could neither get well or die. I beg the Lord to direct me aright, not as I will, but as he would have me go. I desire to be submissive to his will, for he knows best, praise his holy name. I am so vain and vile, so prone to wander. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

Should not this encourage the poor, wayworn pilgrims, traveling through this thorny desert? Jesus has also promised when the poor and needy seek water and their tongues fail for thirst that "I the Lord will hear them" They shall be satisfied. He knows the cry of a hungry soul, and promises to supply its need.

MARY MELISSA BROOKS.

Fremont, N. C.

Oriental, N. C., Nov. 18, 1907.

My dear Brother Lawrence and Brethren:

I feel his morning to some extent about as I have thought preachers sometimes feel. My mind has been aroused in some way and I have been wandering around in devious ways to find something. Why this feeling should come upon me, I cannot tell. What I desire I know not, more than this; I think and hope that I am hungering for that food which satisfies the hungry soul. The food which the servants of God bring to the little ones of the kingdom.

It seems that it is mostly my lot to be in desert places. This may be because I am so unfaithful to duty, and so vile and sinful in all my walks of life. I know not. God's mysteries are too deep for me. I sometimes think I understand some of them when they are explained by His ministering servants, but I hear so little preaching and I am so far away from the flock that my hope grows to be very small and my faith extremely weak.

Are not thy mercies large and free, May not a sinner trust in thee?"

But that blessed good paper, the Landmark pays me regular visits, and it is always laden with precious truths and sweet messages of love from the dear good brethren and sisters who speak to us through its wonderful columns. What a privilege we have through this medium of communication, and what a blessings to us all in that great and good man whom God has chosen to manage the beautiful and lovable expressions of its contributors.

Brethren, do we realize and appreciate the blessings which God is bestowing upon us? I, for one, fear that I do not. Do we contribute of our carnal means to whom we should and in amounts worthy the name? Do we attend our meetings as we should? Are we present on Saturdays as well as on Sundays? Does our pastor attend? Are we more excusable than he? Do we look after those who need our attention? It is more blessed to give than to receive. I know that I fall short of all these duties and many others, but I would that I could stir up the purer and nobler minds of our brethren that they may through the impression and direction of our heavenly Father act accordingly and generously as we are blessed.

It is a blessed privilege to be able to meet with our dear brethren and sisters at least once a month and to hear from them the sweet expression of love and harmony, and to sit under the droppings of the sanctuary where we are built up and sustained by the holy gospel. I fear we do not always appreciate this privilege until we are deprived of it. Then we mourn because we did not realize the beauty and the joy thereof. May our heavenly Father help us to be more dutiful and more appreciate.

Your affectionate brother, I hope,
G. W. MEWBORN.

"Blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power."

I have seen much writing the context of which implied that the eternal or second death spoken of in Rev. was the death which would have no power over God's people, that death was in no way prepared for his people they have never had any part or lot in it; they have never in any way whatever had any fear of it; and it is perfectly evident from the reading of the scripture, that it is in the past tense therefore the blessings had already been bestowed; yes, even before the foundation of the world, then it was necessary that time should put in its appearance, in order that the subjects of this blessing should be made manifest; partly in time but wholly in the resurrection, when it would be declared that time was no longer. Now what is the first evidence of the bestowal of this blessing? "The death to sin," which is their first death, and oh, if the poor creature could absolutely know and fully realize that he had died the first death; he could with perfect surety and certainly rejoice that his second death, to wit, his natural death, could not hold him because its power had been taken away, but alas! poor creature, he has to plod along through this vale of tears and only when allowed to do so, he casts a backward glance to the memorable time, when he wrestled in the most intense agony, with what he does trust and hope, was his first death, over which he came off more than conqueror, when it is that he is "again begotten into a lively hope," which for a moment illusions and makes smooth that once seemingly fearful and rugged pathway, but alas! How soon does he find himself again, (this time) on a real rough, uneven road, black with darkness, no hand to lead, no voice to cheer. Once again, he is allowed to cast a backward glance to that ever memorable time, when with a halo of glory, he is once more enveloped in that resplendent light, which never fails to make smooth, which never fails to make straight. Thus it is through life, and our only hope and trust is that we have died the first death and for that reason or rather the evidence of the power of the second (or natural) death has been destroyed. It is perfectly clear to my mind that the Adam's family are each subjects of two deaths; God's people die twice in this life, the first to sin, the second, their natural death or sleep, which fully fits them and entitles them to the resurrection of life eternal. The wicked die but once in this life, and their second death is reserved for them in that awful lake of fire and brimstone; never dying but never die; hence we have the first or God's people "who die to sin," and are dying daily, but are brought to life eternal by the resurrection. While the wicked, because of sin are brought to their first or natural death, and never realize the death, for and because of sin until they hear in that vast eternity that awful sentence, "depart ye cursed, into that lake of fire prepared for them which is the second death.

A. L. HOLDEN.

Hillsboro, N. C.

Dear sir: I have a letter from a young lady sister, Hallie Meads, a daughter of Elder Meads. I want to send to you for publication. She was left at my house at the windup of the Association sick. Since she got home she wrote me, she is a lovely girl and a Baptist. I feel like I cannot say enough of her.

Yours truly,

W. H. DANIELS.

Weeksville, N. C. Nov. 10, 1907
Mr. W. H. Daniel,

My very dear brother: If you will pardon me for not writing to you before I will try to make the attempt in a weak way to write you a few words of thanks, also your dear good family, for your kindness to me while I was sick at your home. I have been very sick since I saw you. The night I stayed in Plymouth I was real sick. Papa waited for me at Plymouth so we went up to Sister Clifton's and spent the night. She and Mrs. Clifton her daughter in law were very, very kind to me. Sister Clifton was a mother to me, although I appreciated their kindness so much I wanted to get home, for there is no place like home when we are sick. I love to sing the dear old hymn "Home, Sweet Home," I can say I met many dear good friends. Everybody was so good to me, and I did so much appreciate it. May the Lord be their stay and if we never meet on earth of course we can't I hope we may meet in heaven at Jesus' feet. O, I can't tell you how sad it made me feel when dear brother J. C. Robertson and family came in to bid me goodbye. I felt as though I never would see them again which I may never, but if it be the Lord's will, I hope to meet them all again. I dearly do love them, and oh how un- been so kind and loving to me, I never can forget them, and oh how unworthy I feel sometimes when I am lying on my bed at night, I think of my weakness. I am made to cry out, Oh, God what can a poor sinner do to be saved. There is nothing I can do. If I am to be saved by my good works I am lost forever. Oh, God have mercy on a poor dying sinner. If I am ever saved it is by the mercy and grace of God. For I am just as helpless as a dear little infant in its mothers arms. Jesus, blessed Jesus, how sweet is the name of Jesus that died on Calvary's rugged tree, for a sinner as me. Brother Daniel, I did so much enjoy the association Saturday and Sunday. I would love to have heard dear Brother Williard's sermon on Monday. But sickness prevented me. The dear Lord works all things for the best. I only wish you could have heard Elder Williard's sermon on Sunday night. It is so sweet, I did so much enjoy it. It was just a feast to my soul. While he was preaching, I felt like, O, if I only could kneel at his feet and ask him would he humble himself to pray for such an unworthy sinner as I. Oh! ask all of God's people to pray for me, for I feel the need of every one, I love to be with the Lord's dear little children, and hope to be one of the same family. But if I am I feel to be the least of all. I think of dear Elder Hassel, how good and kind he is, and if I only was one third as good as I believe he is I would not feel weak. I believe he is a child of God. I often think of my dear father, (Elder Charles Meads) Of course you know him I know, he is getting old and can't be with us long, also my dear mother; they are both nearing their last days. It seems so hard to think of having to part forever, if it would be the Lord's will that I might only go first. I feel some times what was I spared here for, why could it not have been his will to have taken me when I was but a little baby. Then I think some time maybe it was a blessing I should live to be with my dear mother and father in their old age I know that he knows best always and never does his work wrong and if we only could be reconciled to his will.

Brother Daniel, I wish to extend to you again many thanks to you all. I feel under many obligations to you. Mama and papa also thank you so much. I believe the Lord will bless you all. I hope you will always remember me. After you read this, if you think it fit to be published why forward it to dear Brother Gold and if he thinks it unworthy of a little place why it is all well with me. I ask again for all of the dear little one to pray remember me as a poor sinner in their prayers. I close with love to all.

Please excuse mistakes. I wish to remain your little sister in hope.

Dear Brother Gold:

Years have elapsed since it was my privilege to listen to you proclaim the precious gospel of Jesus in the salvation of poor lost and ruined sinners yet its sweetness is still lingering in our memory; and how I would enjoy that privilege once again. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace for they move straight forward, turning neither to the right nor the left, that is they do not preach man's power or wisdom, the instrumentality of the gospel as a means by which sinners are brought to Christ. They preach an exalted Savior, a name which is above every name which dwells in the hearts of His humble servants; and the Lord has exalted the servant above the world as he stands upon the mountain, high above the institutions of men and the things of the world. So the man of God should not leave this elevated position which the Lord has placed him in to accept a civil office to win the favors or applause of men and thereby place the blessed cause of God on a level with the affairs of this life. No preacher who desires to be a good soldier of the cross should entangle himself with the affairs of this life; but stand upon the wall and cry aloud, preach the gospel of peace by Jesus Christ, for no gospel peace can come to us only through Christ and this peace passeth all understanding, for the world cannot understand how the saints enjoy such peace of soul as to cause them to greatly love and rejoice in the assemblies of the saints as to cause them to leave their secular affairs and ride miles to meet their brethren and engage in the public worship of their precious Savior. If this service in these general assemblies of the saints on earth is so much enjoyed by us while fettered with the imperfections of our natures, oh, how much sweeter in the world of perfect bliss where all our service will be rendered in perfect praise to our blessed Redeemer. In the hope of this blessed state.

Dear Brother Gold:

I have lately received a letter from sister Sallie Ballance of Clayton, N.

C., which is very sweet to me, and I feel too unworthy to share it all to myself, so I pass it on to you, and if you think it proper you may let the readers of the Landmark share it also, I feel sure her letter would touch a responsive chord in some fond mother's heart as well as others who know what it is to feel sad and depressed. I feel to be destitute, and not able to write our dear sister a comforting reply as I would wish to. If there is any gift I covet, I think it is to be able to comfort those who are distressed, but ah me, I am not worthy of any thing. Oh how often does our merciful God "stay his rough wind in the day of the East wind." Surely he is merciful to our unrighteousness! I often feel to say "In the midst of deserved wrath thou hast remembered mercy." I feel a tender sympathy for any one that suffers any bereavement, having been well nigh swamped by the waves myself several times, yet the Lord is good.

He is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind. And though He has bereft me of earthly parents, he has not left me comfortless, for I have the sweet little hope that the heavenly Father is mine. And though my pathway seems rough and thorny, and I am often foot sore and weary, yet occasionally I find a place to rest long enough to gain strength to go a little farther, for He has promised that "as thy days shall thy strength be."

Often I think I stumble over obstacles and am easier to become discouraged than any one else, and sometimes it seems to me the light is just about extinguished, that I am a false professor, and ought not to claim any hope at all, for all evidences seem to be gone for a while. Then it seems like a reaction comes, and I can say "I know in whom I have trusted." "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

We all are as well as usual, and I hope you and yours are the same. The old year is nearing its close, and a new one will soon be ushered in. May it be filled with blessings and good cheer for you is my wish.

With love, I am I hope your little sister, he might redeem them from all sin and corruption. What a glorious thought. As the poet says, "O glorious hope of perfect love. It lifts my soul to things above."

In hope of this glorious waking, I remain your little sister, one in love and sweet fellowship.

Dear Brother Gold:

I was again favored and blessed to attend the Mill Branch association, where I believe I heard the truth proclaimed in its purity by the watchmen upon the walls of Zion. It was a feast to me to meet those dear brethren and sisters again, though I felt my unworthiness to dwell with them. I heard, in all, seventeen sermons.

I have been highly favored this year for which I hope, I have been given a thankful heart. I have had the privilege of attending three associations this year; and have heard, since the first of July about fifty five sermons; have heard preachers from different States, all proclaiming the same glorious doctrine: salvation by grace and grace alone. What a wonder that I was ever made to know the joyful sound. I hope I do know it, but it was not because of anything I have ever done or can do; for if I had been left alone I know I would have remained in the total blindness to my real condition as a sinner before a pure and holy God.

I have just read in the county paper the sad news of the death of Cousin Coleman Stewart. I last saw him at the Silver Creek association. He was feeble then, but little did I think he would so soon depart this life. While he was not a member, many will remember his kindness and hospitality to the Baptists, and that his house was always a home for them. But he is gone from time and timely things, and we hope he sleeps in Jesus; that blessed sleep from which there is a glorious waking in the image and likeness of Him who gave Himself for them that

Dear Brother Gold:

A few days ago I wrote to you on recognition in heaven, I said I thought we should know the prophets and apostles just as we know each other here. I would have said we would know them in spirit which is far better. Down here we fall out with each other, love some better than we do others, and all these kinds of things. But in heaven our wills will be swallowed up in God's or in other words His will will be ours. We will be perfect is the idea. I don't wish to force my views on any one; I do not make a hobby of this. I seldom speak of it to any one, but I have believed this for sixteen years. My health is very poor. I have bronchitis, and sometimes feel my time is short. If you think what I wrote will cause trouble among the Baptists you can just lay it aside and write privately to me. Some contend that to know each other would mar the happiness of heaven. Not at all I think for we shall be satisfied and reconciled to the will of God. Down here are not only as God makes us so.

Unworthily your sister in hope,

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Sir: I avail myself of the opportunity to offer a few thoughts for publication in the Landmark for the Durham Primitive Baptists (colored) I make the attempt to do so from a feeling of duty, being identified with them as I am even from the time of its organization in the Year of our Lord, 1888, and as one of the pastors with my white brethren (if I know myself) I want to adhere to the rule of government started with. I have labored for the progress and peace of the association in every way possible and for the betterment of our association I now make the following suggestions to abolish camping, reason, 1st: To obtain better order. 2nd: To reduce the congregation to those who go expressly to be benefitted by its teaching. 3rd: To cut off that crowd who go to speculate off the people who go to see and be seen. 4th: To curtail expenses. For example the Durham association convened for about five years without the cost of a dollar for officers, but after that, this class I now speak of, saw their opportunity to come not to strengthen nor build, up but as they have made it manifest to pull down. Hence the association was compelled for its protection to resort to means of authority to suppress disorder. Men shooting, some being shot, some cursing and using all kinds of profane language, by which the peace of the association was broken up. To obtain peace and order at night the officers have to do it at the peril of their own life. Dear brethren, peace is all that a Christian hopes for in this present evil world, in a religious way. As it is now to get a little peace and comfort out of our association we have to hire officers of the law come and stay day and night and the cost of which has been ranging all the way between eighteen and twenty dollars per session. Now that is unnecessary and useless and of no benefit to the association, and worse to the discredit of the race.

Some will say that cost can be collected out of those who come to sell stuff. My answer to that is this, there are several places set apart every year expressly for people to sell and exhibit their stuff, called fairs, let them go there and not to the place of worship. I ask all orderloving Christians will you not say amen to it? You have only to raise your voice in the next association and say we will for the good of the association and good of the people as a race. "Abolish camping." And the association will heed you. Brethren there will be so many objections offered, but you must remember one thing: you are responsible for all disorder and to that end you should do your best to retain good order and peace; another thing you know, our association has not grown better but worse for you cannot control the people. They have proven to you that they do not respect themselves, much less you.

It lies with the leaders to reform and remodel the minds and conduct of our race in our midst. If we don't who do you expect to? We must take one thing at a time to bring about a reform. We cannot affect this at once. It will take time to do so. Just like it took the conduct of the people to grow to the present pitch where we cannot control them. It may cause a little inconvenience and trouble to do so, but let us by God's help persevere and the desired result will be gained. We correspond with associations now that do not camp. We brethren who visit them know how they get along. Our condition and circumstances are no better than theirs.

Camping is a practice that has been kept up ever since you or I can remember. Then men and women respected the place appointed for worship, but now they do not. Why not rid ourselves of that disorderly gang? A prudent man foreseeth the evil, but the simple pass on and are punished. Proverbs 27:12. Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks, and look well to thy herds. Proverbs 27:23.

I cheerfully submit what I have written to the consideration of those who feel to have some responsibility resting upon them as guides for those who cannot see and as helps to the helpless—both naturally and spiritually.

I remain yours in obedience to the truth,

Jubilee, N. C., Sept. 11, 1907.

Miss Louisa Edwards,

Dear Sister in Christ I hope: I will now make the attempt to write you again after a long delay. I desire to write you something about how I felt about going to the association at High Point.

After I had made all necessary arrangements to go there was a sad feeling came over me that I am not able to describe. I became afraid to start for fear that I might not be doing my duty towards my helpless brother. I was constrained to bow down on my knees to ask the Lord if it was not right for me to go, to cause something to come in the way to keep me from going but I got no comfort at all. I wept and tried to pray, but no comfort could I find. The time came for me to start, and I got in my buggy to go a distance of thirteen miles all alone, a sad and lonely travel to me, until I finally decided that I would go to Brother Monroe William's and stay all night and go back home next day, and all of a sudden this scripture came in my mind, "Trust ye in the Lord forever, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." Isaiah 26:4. With many others that was sweet to me at the time, but none so lasting as this. The first thing I knew I was in a state of rejoicing, and as the poet says, The toils of the road seemed nothing, when I got to the end of the way. I spent the night with brother and he and I boarded he train for High Point and arrived there alright; and I hope that I was thankful that I was blessed with the privilege of being there and to mix and mingle with the people of God.

I felt that I was doubly paid for my trip before I heard any preaching in meeting so many dear brethren and sisters. I can't pass on without mentioning sister Eula Whitley and Bettie Williams whom I had never met before. I hope I love them for Christ's sake. Sister Annie Lee and yourself greeted me so kindly that I don't think I will ever forget the warm handshake you gave me when I met you. I felt then that I could trust in the Lord forever. As Brother Simpkins' text was, "What a word is this," when you can feel it and apply it to yourself and feel satisfied that you can trust Him in all things. After I felt that I could trust him I had nothing to fear. I had left behind, for I felt that I could trust him I had nothing to fear. In circumstances, even my own life, for I know my life is in His hands, and whatever He does with me will be right.

I go most of my time groping in the dark, seeking some one to lead me forth by the right way. I believe this proud nature of mine gives me more trouble than any one thing I have to contend with. I have a disposition about me to be something in the sight of other people; for it is so pleasing to carnal nature to have people speak words of praise about us; but I know this is dangerous for if we hear very much of it we will become exalted and forget to look to the hills from whence cometh our help; and then very soon we can adopt the language of 3:1 of Solomon's song, "By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth; I sought him but I found him not." Oh! yes dear sister how often have I been made to lay and groan on my bed at night, for I am sure it was night with me, for it was all dark because the sun was hid, when I could not utter one word of prayer and longed to see the sun rise with healing in his wings. Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning. When morning comes with the child of God, we find them basking in the sunshine of God's everlasting love. Then they think their troubles are all over; but not so.

Dear sister, while we tread along in this unfriendly world, we are subject to changes, for this world is not our home. Here we have no continuing city; but we seek one to come; and my hope is when time is no more to see the King in His beauty with all the elect family of God, and hear the welcome sound, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." There will be no more sorrow, sighing or shedding of tears. We will never more hear the sad farewell; but with the angels of God we will join in singing eternal praise. When we've been there ten thousand years. Bright shining as the sun; we've no less days to sing God's praise than when we first begun. The above is the sweetest verse to me I ever read in the hymn book.

If it is God's will we will meet again, and if not I hope to meet you in that bright and happy land. So, dear sister, press on with courage, follow on, our captain's gone before. He was crucified for us, lay in the grave, arose and ascended the high heaven for us, if we be his children. And he has told us in his word that he would come and receive us unto himself, that where he is there we may be also. When we awake in his likeness we will be satisfied, for we shall see him as he is, or be like him.

Please remember me at the throne of grace, and write when you have a moment to do so.

Your unworthy sister,

CYNTHIA L. WILLIAMS.

Clayton, N. C., Dec. 9, 1907.

Miss Hattie Hines,

Very dear Sister: I have tried to put my mind on some work or other all day and not write to you, but it seems I can't do it. I have not done any thing today except cooking and sweeping, &c., and the day is almost gone, and it seems that I can't think or do anything but write to you, so in a very weak way I have now begun, not feeling that my writing will be of any comfort to you, unless the good Lord is guiding my pen; for of myself I can do nothing, not even breathe, talk or write. So if the Lord has put it in my mind to write, had I ought to shrink back? No but the trouble is with me. I am not worthy of the notice of a Christian.

"I am so vile, so prone to sin;
I fear that I am not born again."

Sister Hines, I have been through many hard storms, trials and sad bereavements since I heard from you. I guess Brother Gilbert told you something about it. It is not worth while for me to go back and try to tell you all, time and space would forbid. My dear little darling babe was sick over four months and if I were to try I could not tell you half what I passed through in the time. Oh, he was so bright and sensible, so playful and smart. Before he was taken sick he could crawl and try to pull up to any thing, but was sick so long and could not even sit up. It seems almost like a precious dream. He had an abscess the last of April and first of May. The second Sunday in May it was lan-:ed, and what he suffered in that time is unknown. Kidney and bow-: trouble set in until death which occurred the fourth Sunday night in September. Oh th patience he did have to bear so much pain, he was so quiet and sensible, he became the poorest human my eyes have ever seen; he was over a year old and not as heavy as when he was born.

Sister, I get so full and nervous when I go to write I can't gather my thoughts and feelings and pen them down, and when I reread it is scattered and written so badly, I am tempted to throw it in the fire, then a question will arise Can you do any better? Then I am made to feel my imperfections, my nothingness, and so on.

Well, I enjoyed the association very much more than I expected, was blessed to be able to help wait on my company, and they all seemed to be satisfied with their fare, and seemed to enjoy themselves well.

Since that time I have been very low in feelings, but better in health than usual. I feel cast down but not destroyed quite. I do feel so sad and lonely. Go where I will, see who I may, engage in anything I choose, there is something gone, and my arms empty, and my heart aches. My children that are living look lonely and desolate, I have to let God's will be done, and suffer death to enter, and break the number he has sent to such a wretched sinner.

Only three are left on earth, and three are gone to heaven, and one step-son left here with us, and two step sons in heaven. My husband here to help me sigh, and often we do weep and cry; and no names on earth so dear to me as my dead children. which is three. Eight years ago lived Isaac dear, and croup was his disease, and hard it was to give him up, he was so hale and steady. The next that died was a little girl of 5 months. She was our idol; and God saw fit to take her from her suffering. Naomi was her dear sweet name, and meningetis was her complaint. She was so near and dear to me; her death you know was hard to see, And now here comes the last of all, sweet and dear but very small, David Uriah was his full name. He suffered long and bore much pain. Severe pain seized him and by his side I often stood.

His dear sweet face no more I see. But he is fresh in memory. Their voices here no more are heard. But with this I am often cheered; to think that God has loved them more and took them on to Canaan's shore; where there's no sorrow, toil and pain; no parting there will ever reign, but all is joy, peace and love, I hope to meet them all above. My three that's left are dear you know; and to their bed I often go and spread the cover neat and smooth; and their little hearts I try to soothe.

Well little did I think of writing what I have, or drifting off in the way I did when I began to write this letter but hope you will pardon me for worrying you to read this much. Please excuse mistakes and take all bad writing and spelling as a mantle of love, and write to a poor and almost heart-broken mother, that is if you can find it is in your heart to do so, for I feel like it would be a source of comfort to poor me. My husband sends his regards, and much love to brother Gilbert and family, so do I. For we did enjoy his stay with us at the association; hope he will come again, and you too. Give my love to all enquiring friends if any, and accept a good portion for your dear self, and pray for us when it goes well with you. So I am as ever. Your little sister, if one at all.

WORK.

"I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work."

When a lad I was taught that the day was made for labor, and the night for sleep. But as men progress in wickedness they turn a day into night and night into day, not being satisfied with the way the Lord has arranged matters. However the Lord has not left himself without a witness. Jesus the one perfect man, and the only perfect man has done all things well and left nothing undone, but has finished the work his Father gave him to do. Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace. Surely it is peace to the soul to receive him and what he has done.

Jesus came from heaven to do his Father's will—to work the works of Him that sent him. He knew what that work is, and how to do it, and it was his delight; his meat and his drink to do that work, and he knew when to do it—while it was day. The body his Father prepared him was perfect. While it was in the likeness of sinful flesh yet it was without sin, and was holy and his work was perfect.

He said he must work the works of Him that sent him while it was day, for the night cometh when no man can work. Jesus was obedient unto death. He had no moments of play or rest. He sought no diversion. The day was all employed in doing good. If he was teaching only one he was as diligent as if he were teaching a thousand. He slighted no case.

Men seek rest, diversion or recreation. How many go to watering places, incuntains or seaside resorts—not so with Jesus. All his times were in the Lord's hand. He had not a minute to trifle away.

Nothing was postponed an hour or minute. There was with Jesus a time to every purpose—a time to fulfill every purpose. When all that was written concerning him was fulfilled he was offered up according to the purpose of God to finish transgression and to make an end of sin, and to bring in everlasting righteousness.

What a beauty and glory in the character of Jesus. Perfect submission to his lot; never seeking but to do and suffer just as his Father pleased and appointed for him. He resisted unto blood; unto death; striving against sin. He said my Father worketh hitherto and I work. This work of Jesus was the fulfillment or doing of his Father's will. When all things concerning him had been accomplished men with wicked hands crucified him, but he offered himself to God without spot, and perfected forever them that are sanctified by the one offering up himself once. Then his work was finished—the work of redemption—and he rested, ceased from his work, and it is blest and the Sabbath of rest follows.

This is what is preached, Christ and him crucified, the way, the truth and the life; and this is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent. The work of faith, the labor of love, and the patience of hope is abounding in the work of the Lord. Why should we seek to do any thing else? Whatsoever ye do let it all be to the Lord Jesus, doing all in his name. What your hands find to do let it be in the name of the Lord Jesus. This brief life when spent in his name or Christ living in you by faith is a glorious life. Wherever the Lord places you, whatever he works in you both to will and to do, let it be while it is day, for the night of sleep or death comes when no man can work. The day is for labor and the night for rest.

I do not remember that I have ever heard of a gospel preacher wanting a vacation, play time or spell of rest from doing the work of the Lord.

There will be enough of that in the grave.
P. D. G.

Friend H. C. Phillips requests my view of Deut. 5:9, "Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them," &c.

It is the likeness, or graven image, or image of any thing that the people of God are forbidden to worship or bow down to. The Lord God saith, "thou shalt have no other gods before me, nor bow down to them, nor worship them." There cannot be anything to whom the God of Israel can be likened unto. Therefore nothing can be likened unto Him," Ex. 20:3-6. When the Lord God spake to Israel on the Mount in the midst of the fire there was no similitude or likeness of any thing. Only they heard the voice of the Lord God, Deut. 4:12. So great, unspeakably great and glorious is the Lord. His glory he does not give to graven images. Man cannot have a thought that is worthy of him. Hence we are not to bow down to any image or likeness of Him.

God is a spirit and dwells everywhere yet is invisible. How can we know anything of Him except by revelation or in his light only?

God visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate him. Our friend desired my view of Eze. 18:14-16. In this scripture it is said that if the son of a wicked man does not approve of the sins of his father he shall not be counted guilty or die in his father's guilt, but shall live.

There is no contradiction in these scriptures, nor in any other scriptures. The limitations, contradictions and enmity are in the flesh. In the spiritual reign of Jesus there is no sin, nor contradiction, enmity or death.

Observe it says in Deut. God visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the child of a wicked man but if he does not hate God the sin of the father is not visited upon him.

When and where grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord there the natural child of Adam does not hate the Lord, and that soul is passed from death unto life and shall live forever, or has everlasting life. Also in our dealings with men we do not hold the obedient and well behaved child of a wicked man's guilt for his wicked father's misconduct. But if the wicked father has a child wicked as himself we do not excuse him but hold him guilty as his father. P. D. G.

A THOUSAND YEARS.

Man is altogether unable to find out God by searching. If man should live to be four score years old yet it is labor and sorrow, for he is soon cut off, and he flies away. His life is as a vapor, quickly ended and gone, and he is forgotten. He walks in a vain show and is disquieted in vain, for though he may restlessly seek for health and longevity yet he fails to find it.

The secret of happiness or joyful days is hid from him. His supposed prudence procures him nothing. Happiness is beyond his reach. The lights cannot supply it, nor can the depths tell him where it is. Imagination knows not the way that leads to it. One thinks if I can accomplish such and such an object then I shall be happy, but no, he is no nearer happiness than he was before. I disappointments line, bound and fence him do what he may.

Wherein is man like the Almighty? A thousand years in God's sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night. It is as nothing. God is without beginning of days or end of time. His years grow not old. He inhabits eternity. He is every where present at the same time. Nothing is hid from him. He does all his pleasure. He is never disappointed. He declares the end from the beginning. He is perfection of power, wisdom and glory, goodness and truth, infinitely happy within himself, nor is he dependent on man for anything. He is the fountain of rest. He is unsearchable and past finding out. Who by searching can find out God? Who ever instructed him in anything?

Now wherein is man like God? To what will you liken him? When man was created in the image of his maker there was much knowledge in him. Adam gave names to all animals. His knowledge was great. He was upright. He was ruler over the beasts of the field and fowls of the air. There was no sickness, defect or pain in him, no unclean thought in him, no dissatisfaction with his lot, no jealousy or envy, no hatred or malice, no desire for what he did not have, no want, no wish for more. There was no depth of lust raging in him, no dark emotion of wickedness. There was no guilty sense of danger that he feared lurking near him.

What is man now? He is a bundle of contradiction thinking he is some great one when he is nothing but sin and vanity. If any man thinks he knows any thing of himself he knows nothing yet as he ought to know.

P. D. G.

Mr. P. D. Gold,

Dear Sir: Will you please give me through the Landmark your view on the 37th Psalm and 25th verse, if it is not asking too much of you.

Very respectfully,

A FRIEND.

"I have been young and am old: yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging for bread."

The writer of this Psalm tells what an old man had never seen, namely "The righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." In the Jewish kingdom there were temporal rewards bestowed on such as observed the law of Moses, and evils visited on its transgressions. The obedient eat the good of the land of Canaan in a natural or literal sense; while the transgressors suffered the penalties of the disobedient, and this was manifest to the eye and understanding of the observant.

The rewards of industry and economy are received by such as observe these healthy rules of life. The benefit of sobriety is reached by the temperate man.

The law of Moses dealt with the life that the Jews then lived, and visited the rewards of faithful conduct, and brought the consequences of evil doing on violations of the law speedily.

In the deeper and higher sense of spiritual living or in the kingdom of heaven Christ is the righteous one who was never forsaken of his Father, nor do his seed ever starve or perish or in that sense lack their bread. On the cross Jesus said, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? He could not die until the divine nature was withdrawn from him, but he died at the will of God, and that obtained life for all his seed. Hence none of them shall ever perish, or in that sense beg their bread. Yet they often hunger and thirst after righteousness, and are begging for mercy, but this is great evidence that they are the children of God, and each one is surely satisfied with the bread of heaven.

P. D. G.

Brother S. R. Gardner requests my view of Mat. 7:13-14, also of verses 24, 27 of same chapter.

Two gates and two ways are here presented, the wide gates and the strait gate, and the broad way and the narrow way. Many enter the wide gate and the broad way, while few find the strait gate and the narrow way. One leads to destruction, while the other leads to life. Thus it appears that these gates are very different. And these ways lead in opposite directions. The wide gate and the broad gate are easily entered. There is no crowding or squeezing one. There is plenty of room, although many go in thereat, and many travel it. There is no need of striving to enter this gate or travel this road. One enters this gate and travels this way without even intending to do so. It requires no effort, no care or striving to do so. It is the natural way and direction. It requires no preparation, wealth or knowledge, or intellect. Every sort and class that has no concern or carefulness about where he is going is traveling this way

It is the most fashionable way and altogether popular requiring no effort no labor or pains, has no alarms while you are going. It is easy and the gate is rapid, requiring no effort in the world. The fool, the dunce, the drunkard, lover of gain, will find room here, and one keeps up with another. No class is outmarched by another. None miss the end which is destruction.

The opposite, the strait gate and the narrow way are so hard to find and to enter that few there be that find it. It requires striving from the very first and to the end. It is not natural to seek it, or to find it, or to travel in it. Those that find it and enter that narrow way are exceedingly careful how they act and what they do. They are sober and watch unto prayer. They are very choice of their company esteeming the righteous far better than themselves. While they feel vile they desire the company of the best people. Nor do they feel that they can find the strait gate or enter this narrow way by their own strength or wisdom. They dig deep and build upon the rock for a foundation and that rock is Christ. Eternal life is the great desire of their hearts. They seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. Nor can the storms nor waves nor any power of destruction overthrow them, for they are in the narrow way which is entered through the strait gate and they cannot carry any of this sinful world with them, for there is no room for it. There is always room enough in this strait gate and narrow way for those who feel that they are less than nothing and vanity.

There is a way that seems right to a man because it suits his nature and is pleasing to him, but the end thereof are the ways of death. He has built on the sand of human works and the storms and billows of wrath will overthrow his house, and destruction is the end of it. The fall is great to him for he has lost all and is destroyed. The things he carries with him are all inflammable and destructive and cannot stand the tests of danger and death.

P. D. G.

IT IS FINISHED.

Dying words and dying sentences are generally considered of great importance and are listened to with great attention by persons interested in such words and sentences. From the lip of a poor departing sinner what solemn and important words have sometimes fallen when on the brink of an eternal world the guilty soul has been sensibly conscious of the deserv ed hell into which it was about to enter. Truly awful and solemn is the state and condition of the unwashed, unclóthed, unpardoned, and unrenewed soul in the tremendous hour of death. What horrors sometimes have seized the guilty soul upon a dying bed!

Again, with what anxiety and conflicting feelings have parents, relatives and friends who have known the importance of eternal life and the worth of an immortal soul listened to the last accent falling from dying lips in order to satisfy themselves or to obtain a glimpse of hope respecting the eternal safety of the dear departing one.

And then again how sweet and precious are the last words of the saved sinner in the closing scene of this mortal life; the firm unshaken confidence expressed in the Apostle's words "I know whom I have believed," the calm and sweet repose contained in words like these: "On the Rock!" "All is well!" "None but Christ!" and the triumphant words of precious faith that have dropped from the lips of the saint dying sensibly in the embrace of eternal love: "Precious Jesus!" "Happy, happy!" "Hallelujah! Victory, victory!"—many, many have thus passed out of time into eternity and their dying words and dying looks will never be forgotten by survivors while here below.

But what are all dying words could they all be collected together in importance if once compared with the dying words of Jesus; the Great Son of God? These three precious words: "It is finished" rolled from the Savior's dying lips down to the gates of hell and closed them for ever against the objects of his eternal love; and these most precious words ascended up to heaven and were echoed through those blissful plains and will continue to run on in most melodious and transporting sounds for ever and ever; and what is included and involved in that little word of two letters 'it' will never be fully known but will be for ever and ever telling and yet untold. In contemplating these most solemn and blessed words we have to notice in the first place the fact that the vast importance of the words is derived from the speaker, the glorious Person who uttered them. In the second place let us ask and try to answer the question in two or three particulars—What was finished?

1. The great speaker—who is He? for from this is derived the vast importance of the sentence.

Were he but man however pure and spotless and only man the words would be of little importance to a guilty sinner, but they were words of God—none less than God's almighty Son was he who cried and that with a loud voice: "It is finished!" It was God manifest in the flesh; God in our nature; the great Jehovah; the self-existent I AM on whom all things in heaven and earth hung for their subsistence. It was He who to all gives breath and life; who closed His eyes in death and thus expired in blood. A deep mystery beyond the grasp of all united minds to fathom; a deep in which our most expanded thoughts will evermore be drowned but yet a blessed fact; a solid truth; on which it is the privilege of faith to feed and hope to rest secure. "Hereby" says the apostle John: "perceive we the love of God because he laid down His life for us." He (God) laid down his life. Well may Hart write "How it was done we can't discuss." But it is the privilege of believers to know and sweetly sing: "It was for us." The Word was God and the Word was made flesh: "and the bread that I give is My flesh." "I lay down my life." It was the life or blood which was the life of his person and His complex Person is composed of the two natures divine and human; indissoluble and yet distinct. He was man to suffer bleed and die and God to give those sufferings; blood and death; eternal validity and power. Rob the dead dying speaker of his deity and His death is unavailing as a surety. Rob him of his spotless humanity He could neither have suffered, bled nor died. But he is Jehovah's Shepherd; appointed by him to redeem the sheep; and His qualification was derived from the precious fact that He was at once Jehovah's equal and fellow and yet bone of His people's bone and flesh of their flesh—in all respects the Father's co equal Son and in all respects made like unto his brethren (sin only excepted;) so that these words were none less than the words of Him who spake all things into being first, the express image of his Father's person; and who upheld all things by the word of His power. His greatness and omnipotent power were more displayed; infinitely more so in His apparent weakness on the cross than in the fact of His creating all things with a word. Heaven and earth with all their teeming hosts were made by the breath of His mouth; but on the cross His holy arm was made bare and therefore:

*He ne'er appeared so good; so great
As when he bowed His head and died.*

Now what was finished? We reply the whole of his wonderful work was finished on earth and that work consisted of two parts. His active work of perfect obedience to the law and His passive work of suffering the full penalty of the law, the former namely his work of spotless righteousness He had completed when in His mediatorial prayer He said, 'Father I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do;' and when He uttered the words of our text on the cross, he had gloriously completed the great all. O what a work was accomplished! It was a measured work; a specific work none less than himself the great Immanuel—God with us; could perform; a work in which all his great heart and time and powers were engaged—the work of harmonizing all Jehovah's attributes of bringing God and man together in His wondrous atonement. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself; not imputing their trespasses unto them."

This stupendously great and glorious work was done; all the breaches of the law were not only repaired and filled up but magnified and honored. Every valley was raised, every mountain and hill made low! the crooked made straight and the rough places plain, and the glory of the Lord was thereby revealed; an everlasting righteousness finished without a stain, without a spot, without a flaw; perfect and in every respect commensurate with all the law required and sufficient to justify for ever the whole election of grace and to exalt them to shining splendor; to the very throne of God to be seated with him in unspotted purity and perfection outshining stars and sun in their divine array. The church shall be brought unto the king raiment of needlework, with gladness and rejoicing shall she be brought, she shall enter in the king's palace. This spotless robe was finished and complete by Zion's beloved Bridegroom alone—His words; His thoughts; His deeds; from Bethlehem's manger to Calvary's tree; all conspired to weave this glorious dress; the wedding garment of his spouse; a righteousness just suited to the naked sinner's back; a righteousness put into the hand of the Holy Ghost; revealed in the glorious gospel of his grace and imputed to the ungodly and to them without works. This great work was finished and can not be undone or added to; not even by the Spirit of God himself. He takes the robe the Savior wrought and casts it all around; He clothes the prodigal therewith and on the ground of this finished work the blessedness of the saved and justified sinner arises and in the name of the great justifier the saved soul rejoices and thus he sings: "I will rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God: for He hath clothed me with the garments of salvation."

From this glorious work of righteousness comes peace and the effect thereof is quietness and assurance for ever. O to be found in Him; wrapped up in this glorious dress! Bold shall we stand in the judgment and lift up our heads without fear when heaven and earth shall flee before the face of God.

"It is finished! O what pleasure Do these charming words afford!"

But not only was this part of His glorious work complete. His penal work; his atoning suffering work was done—the last mite was paid; the last drop of divine wrath was drained. The great captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering and being made perfect He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him. What a perfection is here! Herein lies the ability of our Jesus to save unto the uttermost the vilest transgressor because He had gone to the uttermost of His penal sorrows and sufferings and what were they? Ah what indeed! no tongue can tell or thought conceive; but he bare our sins in His own body on the tree and all the wrath due to all the crimes of his people; and they are said to be a number that no man out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. Well may the words follow, "He was oppressed;" The waters are come unto my soul. I sink in deep mire when there is no standing. I am come into deep waters where the floods overflow me." What was all this but the wrath we had incurred by sin, poured out on Him? Ah this was hell to the great Ransomer. He sank and sank beneath the mighty billows, until he had exhausted the last drop, extracted the last curse and found in his great and glorious person what the lost sinner never will and never can find—a standing place, a resting place. And where was this glorious standing? Here it is in this precious fact, "It is finished!" Here he stands triumphant conqueror over all; and here where our Christ found for himself a standing, he made a standing for his church. Here is faith's firm glorious Rock, her sure footing; and love and joy can shout and sing, "There is no condemnation!"

*"Now no more his wrath we dread,
He hath thus to Zion said—
Once thy surety paid thy score,
I behold thy sins no more."*

O what amazing love is discovered here! Love that all those floods of Almighty wrath could neither drown nor damp. O how sweet for faith pardoned, bloodwashed, grace saved sinners—is it not?—to sit beneath His bleeding feet and sing, "He loved me and gave himself for me!" Bless His precious name!

All his inconceivably great sufferings had now reached their end; the storm was over and gone, the morning now broke without a cloud; the Man of sorrows had now endured the last pang, the last tear had bedewed that sorrowful, marred and bleeding visage.

"No more shall trickling sorrows roll
Through the dear windows of his soul
Strong cries from his dear mouth, that mortal ears never heard or could understand, had frequently been poured into the ears of his Father and his God and bitter tears in constant succession rolled down his dear face for he was acquainted with grief. Grief was his most intimate acquaintance; when all his other companions and followers left him this acquaintance still remained by night and day; but now "it is finished"—His griefs are are complete; his penal sorrows are ended and Israel is saved with an everlasting salvation.

In consequence therefore of this untold work of our glorious Christ being finished; sin was finished—the sin of all whom he represented, the sins that were laid upon Him; that were transferred to him. The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all; the “us all” there being the sheep. “All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.” “I lay down my life for my sheep and they shall never perish.” There are many that will perish; and for such it is blasphemy to say the Savior laid down his precious life; for he shall see the travail of his soul and be satisfied.” By his one offering and he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified. Here is a finish—a God like finish! All his sufferings perfect and complete as a surety for ever and all his ransomed people perfected too, and that forever, their sins put away; cast in the depths of the sea; blotted out by his precious blood blotted out of God’s memory as well as out of his sight. Justice smiles on the whole transaction and welcomes the contrite sinner now equally with mercy. All conflicting attributes in the Divine mind now sweetly and eternally harmonize; mercy and ruth meet together; righteousness and peace embrace each other here in the finished work Jehovah’s great name appears complete. Here is the manifestation of his name—“It is finished.” Yes in the face of our dying Christ—

...“ a glory stands;
The noblest labor of God’s hands;
The pleasing lustre of whose eyes,
Ountshines the wonder of the skies.”

Here is faith’s repast, the wondrous feast of love prepared and complete. All is ready; no room for anything to be added, nothing wanting, blood for the guilty and filthy; the fountain opened and all the merit produced, the righteousness wrought and ready for the naked soul; the wells of salvation are now full and ready to be drawn from by the sensibly empty; the unsearchable riches are all here to be proclaimed to the poor; and to be freely given to the needy, the fruits are ripe on this precious tree of life—a bleeding Christ—and ready to drop into the mouth of faith; and here it is the privilege of the believer to sit beneath the shadow of the Rock in a weary land—this shady; fruitful apple tree in the midst of the forest—to sit and feast, to sit and weep; to sit and sing. Here is the cordial for a fainting heart—“It is finished.” O let God the Holy Ghost but apply it to the mouth of faith and the sinking soul is soon revived. How this cordial sustains, nourishes and strengthens the soul!

“O, what a cordial to my heart;
Are Jesus’ dying words!” ..

This is the wine for a heavy heart the drink that makes the poor insolvent forget his poverty and remember his misery no more. O, what music too is in this melodious sound to a believer’s ear! To the sensibly guilty condemned; pardon is in it—a full and complete pardon; pardon for all my black and heinous crimes; forgiveness full, free and everlasting.

To the rich gift of love divine;
‘Tis full outmeasuring every crime;
Unclouded shall its glories shine;
And feel no change by changing time.”

OBITUARIES

J. M. STILL.

We, as human beings ignorant of God’s purpose, cannot understand the workings of his mighty power and the wisdom of his hand which often brings us to the depths of sorrow, darkness and despair, causing us to feel that we are poor pilgrims traveling in a friendless world, stumbling in a thorny desert without hope. Such was the condition of the loved ones of Brother J. M. Still when the All-wise God saw fit to call him from this fleeting world to reign there with his angels in eternity.

The good man of whom we write was born March 15, 1845, and died June 4, 1907. He united with the Primitive Baptists at Sardis church, Walton county, Georgia, in June, 1880, and ever proved faithful and devoted member. His meek face, his humble Christ-like manner was always an inspiration to those, who like him, bore about in the body the death and suffering of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

It seemed that Brother Still must have had some warning of his death, for in March before he died he was at our home and showed us a song, 270 in Loyd's hymn book, which he wanted sung when he died. His mind did not dwell much on earthly things for several months before his death but on the eternal, so he found his greatest comfort in reading the Bible and singing hymns of praises. During his last sickness, dropsy, he was perfectly resigned to God's will and would say that he was only waiting for God to call him home. Saturday afternoon, about ten days before his death, he was sitting in his chair, suffering greatly; after a little he arose and walked across the room a few times, then sat down, clapped his hands, laughed heartily and said, "I need no doctor now—all is so pretty." Those who were there around him believe that then he had a view of the glory beyond and saw the entrance to the pearly gates. Yes he was looking beyond the dark valley, the river of death, into the blissful land which knows no suffering or sorrow. Thus patient and resigned he peacefully waited to go to his eternal home to leave this dying world which when the last came he died without a murmur.

Brother Still leaves a sorrowing wife, three children and several grandchildren together with hosts of friends to mourn for him, yet we should not so grieve but rejoice with him in glory, knowing that he has conquered all, even the last enemy which is death, and has entered in that peaceful valley where angels dwell.

On the next day after his death the mortal body of this dear man was carried to his church, Sardis, where in the presence of a large congregation, the funeral services were held; then afterwards the body was laid away to its last resting place to there await the glorious time when His saints shall rise to awake in the likeness of Him, the Prince of Peace, the precious Christ!

By a friend who hopes to be a little sister.

Dear Brother Gold:

Am glad to inform you that I am steadily improving, for which I trust I feel thankful to the Lord for his mercy and wonderful blessings bestowed on me. I feel so worthless and undeserving of anything good, yet I desire to do right, and love the Lord more, and serve him better. I try to pray him to teach me my duty, both naturally and spiritually, and enable me by his power to perform my duty in an acceptable manner.

Often I am made to cry aloud, "Lord if I am deceived undeceive me. If I am not deceived, strengthen my hope and increase my faith, for I feel the need of thy hand to guide my wandering footsteps right. "Let me live nearer to thee." This language of the poet often consoles me, when I am weak and weary. "Like one alone I seem to be; Oh, is there any one like me, thus filled with doubts I ask to know, come tell me is it thus with you?" I was blest with the privilege of attending the yearly meeting at Red Banks, and enjoyed it so much for it was the first preaching I had heard since May. It was a source of comfort to me. Oh, how my heart rejoiced to hear the love and power of God proclaimed once more. The same joyful sound, saved by grace. Grace is my hope, and by grace my song. It seemed my soul was almost overwhelmed with joy, to think I was at home again, after an absence of about four months.

I was well cared for during that time by kind relatives and friends and hope the Lord will abundantly bless all that helped me on my weary journey.

God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform, He plants his footsteps in the sea and rides upon the storm." Praise his holy name for his mercy endureth forever.

I would be glad to attend the Association but do not think it prudent to venture to do so. I enjoy seeing and hearing of the Lord, adding testimony to testimony.

Unworthily pour sister in faith,
 MARY MELISSA BROOKS.

Elder W. B. Williams of Elm City writes me as follows: 'Dear Brother Gold: Margaret M. Williams, my dear wife, departed this life January 7th, 1908. She was a great sufferer, but I hope her suffering is over. I am in a sad condition. No woman at all at my house. May the Lord remember me

Yours in hope,
 W. B. WILLIAMS.

MISS NANCY JONES.

Only a few days before her death Sister Nancy Jones was stricken down with disease and fell asleep Nov. 15th, 1907. Nothing could be done by us to relieve her. She has been a member of the Primitive Baptist church for many years, and was devoted to her church and its members. Her humble, Christian spirit grew brighter as years passed by. Each year when renewing her subscription to the Landmark she would request at the close to be remembered by the church in their prayers.

She was preceeded to the grave by her parents, Edward and Matilda Jones, three brothers, Mr. G. W. Jones, Prof. R. H. Jones, and Lieut. E. A. Jones, and her sisters, Mrs. James Shelton, Mrs. Alexander, McAlpine and one half sister, Mrs. J. Wesley Garrett. She leaves one sister, Miss Bettie Jones, with many friends to mourn their loss.

She was laid to rest in the old family burial ground where with her loved ones she awaits the sound of the trumpet and life eternal.

N. M. PLEASANT.

ITHAMAR ARMFIELD.

Dear Brother Gold.

I have been requested to write the obituary of Brother Ithamar Armfield who was born October 25th, 1818, and died April 26th, 1906, making his stay on earth 87 years 5 months and 5 days. It has been a considerable time since his death but his daughter asked me to write something of his life and death. He was a member of Abbott's Creek church, joining in his old age.

I do not remember the exact date when he joined. He had been a lover of the truth for many years. I visited him many times at his home in the country near Walnut Grove, where his body was laid to await the resurrection morning.

He spent his last days in Greensboro with his daughter. Elder O. J. Denny held services at the house. The writer endeavored to preach at Walnut Grove here the body was laid beside his companion who had passed away December 11, 1897. She was 76 years, 9 months and 11 days old. She was not a member of any church, but was a lover of the Baptists, and claimed a hope, but was never united with the church. I was well acquainted with them both. They both lived the lives required of husband and wife, trying to live for the satisfaction of each other, and both lived to a good old age as a ripe shock of corn gathered in its season.

Brother Armfield served as justice of the peace for many years, and was well known in his country. He was a cancer doctor and treated many cases. He had a large acquaintance in Guilford county and adjoining counties. If he had any enemies on earth when he passed away I know not of it. So he and his dear companion lived in peace together and toward others, and both left good evidence that they died in peace with their Lord and Master. It is said Blessed are dead that die in the Lord, in the faith of God's elect. They leave one daughter and grand children, and two sisters to bid the long farewell to the aged ones that lived long on earth, and at last fell asleep in Jesus, to sleep the blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep.

P. W. WILLIARD.

ELDER F. L. OAKLEY.

Elder F. L. Oakley departed from this world a few days ago. He was nearly 80 years old, and had been preaching nearly 50 years. He was beloved by the churches that knew him and was faithful during his long and useful life. Such brethren are much missed.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother: Please publish in the Landmark that some one has made a mistake of the place of our next term of Smithfield Union in the Landmark. Notice the next term of Smithfield union is appointed to be held with the church at Little Creek, Johnson county, N. C., on Saturday and 5th Sunday in March, 1908. Brethren and sisters, especially writers, are cordially invited.

J. A. BATTEN, Union Clerk.

Dear Brother Gold:

In giving the notice of the place where the next Contentnea Union is to be held I would have been glad you had made it a little fuller for Brother Bland's sake, for he is so anxious for the brethren to visit them. They are good lovely brethren and good community, but they are so situated they are deprived of asking for the Association. They are hemmed in so close they have not land enough to entertain an association.

I hope every church will be represented and our sister unions also. Nearly every church can reach there by railway. This church is only about two miles from Ayden. If the brethren will write Brother C. C. Bland or Brother B. Smith at Ayden, N. C. they will gladly see that you are taken care of and conveyed to and from the church. It will be pleasant weather, not too cold or too hot. I hope to go if the Lord will and want to see an old fashioned union. Every church fully represented.

That Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are far superior to any other fertilizers is proved by the experience of Mr. D. M. Griffin, D. D. S. of Plant City, Fla., who says: "I was trucking on a small scale, and decided I would try a few sacks of your fertilizer, as it was cheap and said to be good. I put it under some tomatoes by the side of some other high grade fertilizer which cost me $15 a ton more, and in the same proportion per acre. I don't think I exaggerate in the least in saying that the yield where I used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers was three times that of where I used the other brand of so-called high-grade fertilizer."

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

TEN VIRGINS.

Dear Brother Gold:

I am forcibly impressed to write on the above subject. The subject Parables has been specially impressel on my mind. While I am ignorant so far as natural education is concerned, having gone to school but a short time so I hope good scholars will bear with my imperfections on that score.

A dream was given to me in 1902 and another in the spring of 1904. The dream is this: In the spring of 1902 a man with a clean shaved face, about 30 years of age, came to me while asleep and touched me and said, "Come, go with me, and I arose and went with him. He took me into an open field where nothing grew, and there was a strait road leading from east to west. At the end of his road was a great gulf as dark as the hour of midnight. I could not see beyond this gulf, and the man said, "look yonder!" I looked at the east end of the road and saw two of my sons standing, both dressed alike, and both the same size. My older son stood on the left side, their faces pointing towards the gulf. The clear shaved man gave command to run, and the boys ran side by side until they reached the great gulf. Suddenly lightning came down and killed the older one. I saw the younger son pass right through this great gulf into a beautiful place. I awoke with fear and trembling, and the scriptures were opened up before me and they began this way, "For as the lightning cometh out of the East and shineth even unto the West, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. 24:27. "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." (40th verse.) "Two women shall be grinding at the mill. The one shall be taken and the other left." (41st verse.) "Watch therefore for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come," etc., unto the parable of the ten virgins, Matt. 25th chapter.

When these scriptures ceased coming to me I was trembling from head to foot. I did not expect to see that summer pass without seeing my oldest son killed by lightning. But that summer passed off and the burden with it. But in the Spring of 1904 the same man returned and the same scripture began to come with power, and I awoke with fear and trembling. I said, O Lord, what does all this mean? The interpretation of these scriptures was given to me.

This large open field represents the law dispensation. My two sons represent the Jew and the Gentile—the old covenant and the new one, law and grace. The older son is the Jew God's people under the law dispensation or old covenant which was faulty. The younger son is the Gentile; the people under grace, the new covenant, the kingdom of heaven. Now one must be taken and the other left— not taken into eternal heaven, but into the gospel kingdom, (the church under the new covenant, the gospel day.) The Jews were first and had only the law to feast upon, and shall be the last to enter the gospel kingdom, for if they continue not in unbelief they they shall be grafted in. The Gentiles were the last therefore they were the first to enter the new covenant, the kingdom of heaven—salvation by grace, and not of works.

Now brethren, why was one taken and the other left? Because the Jews counted themselves unworthy of everlasting life, so Jesus turns to the Gentiles. God today has a people outside of the church that are saying to themselves we are unworthy of everlasting life, while those on the inside of the church are enjoying the blessings of the gospel. My older son represents God's people going to the end of the law, and here is where we all die. When the commandment came sin revived and I died. This lightning coming out of the East or law service shows that Jesus came from under the law and shining unto the West the gospel day, the new covenant, salvation by grace.

When we reach the end of the law this great gulf we die. We call see the poor beggar in Abraham's bosom, the church, but we are tormented in these flames. Here is the first time the poor sinner ever saw his lost condition. Here is the first time we ever began to beg. Then it is too late with us, but not with God. Here is where the foolish virgins come before they begin to beg. When their lamps went out, (the law service,) they began to beg. So when the poor sinner tries all he can do and the hour of midnight comes (all that dark and lonesome time when we are without God and without hope in the world,) then we beg. Then we go to the Christian in the church but he has none to give, but tells us to go to them that sell and buy for ourselves. Who has the eternal grace of God to sell? No one. Who has practical godliness to sell? Jesus. When do we find it? In His blessed word. How can the poor sinner purchase it? By taking up his cross and following his Lord in baptism.

There are two women grinding or at the mill, the law service representing the church under the law, and grace—on grinding or teaching the law to feed God's people under the old testament, the other preaching the gospel to feed God's people under grace. Here the Jewish kingdom must be left and the kingdom of heaven taken.

Now the command is watch for your Lord's coming (not the final coming in closing up all things,) but coming from under the law to the gospel day. The command was given to the foolish to watch, the wise were already watching, for wherever the carcass is (the slain body of Jesus) there will the eagles, (God's people under grace) be gathered together. This all took place at the day of Pentecost. Here is where the slain body of Jesus was made known. Here the first gospel sermon was preached. These eagles were God's people from every nation, kindred and tongue under heaven, and they feasted on the crucifixion or slain body of Jesus.

He says there shall be famines and earthquakes and pestilences in divers places. Did not this take place with you brethren when you saw your lost and ruined condition? Then this old earth, (our bodies) began to shake and tremble. The famine commences then, and we are in a foreign land feeding swine. This is the first time we ever think of our Father's house. Then we would gladly have eaten husks but no one cared for us.

As I write this I am made to look back at my own case, and the tears drop down my cheeks and I wonder is there any one like me. Prone to wonder Lord, I feel it, prone to leave the God I love.

All these things are the beginning of sorrows. Before this we have our good things, (the flesh,) but now the old man is tormented and the new man is comforted in yonder world. Under the law we had our good things, but now the new man under grace is comforted, and the Jew or old man is tormented.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world. Then shall the end come." What end? The law or old covenant is at an end and the first day of the week (gospel day) has come. Here is where the poor soul is set at liberty. Here is where the honey is eaten out of the carcass of the lion. Sampson represents Jesus, the lion sin, the honey, the gospel, his father and mother, God's people, the eating took place on the day of Pentecost. This honey is never eaten but under grace, the gospel day. (Then let them which be in Judea flee to the mountains.) What for if it is the final winding up of all things? They would be destroyed then in the mountains. What must they flee to the mountains for, and who are the people that are to flee? John came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. John did not come to make a people, but to make them ready, ready for what? For eternal glory? No. But to make them ready for setting up the gospel kingdom, (the first church on earth.) What did John do to these people to make them ready for setting up the gospel kingdom? He baptised them unto repentance. Where did John baptise? In Judea. Let them that John baptised in Judea flee to the mountains, what for? To be there in readiness to set up the gospel kingdom, for it must be set up with believers. Here is where the wedding supper took place. The wedding took place on earth where the bride was. And leaving the law service or old covenant, and entering into the new covenant constituted the marriage supper of the lamb. The marriage took place under grace, so the marriage took place where the bride was. Now brethren this was not in the eternal heaven, for there was one in there that did not have on a wedding garment. How could one get into the eternal heaven without having on a wedding garment? Now brethren, if I were to start out today to set up a gospel church, and we should take ten persons, nine of whom had been baptised, and one that had not, and we set up a church would it be a gospel church? No. Here is one that is not baptised—has not a wedding garment on. Then what must the servants or preachers do? Cast him out in outer darkness, not into eternal punishment, but out of the gospel or marriage supper of the lamb into outer darkness where every one of God's people is today that has a hope and is not in the church. Such are in outer darkness. Suppose today we met together to take the sacrament and wash feet, and there is one in the body that has not been baptised, you know we cannot commune with him. Why? because he has not been baptised or has not on a wedding garment. A garment is not the person, but the covering of the person. If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. A naked person would not be decent at a marriage. We are commanded to put on the new man. Jesus told the church at Sardis that there were a few that had not defiled their garments. But there were some that had, so this garment is not our eternal life: for the soul that is born of God cannot commit sin.

We come now to the ten virgins where God's people are, the only people that differ on the parables. All other professors on earth are agreed, and they all say the foolish virgins are not God's people, and never were, but are mere professors. I used to think so too, and if this clean shaved face man had not shown me I would believe it today. I am sorry to hear some of the Primitive Baptists say that the foolish virgins never were God's people, and were only professors. What does it take to make a foolish woman out of a man, or some other creature? She must first be woman before you can make a foolish woman out of her. Then all those virgins must have been wise virgins or at least, virgins. Now a virgin means pure, chaste, a maid. Now we want to separate the law from grace. The wise virgins had oil with their vessels in their lamps, but the foolish did not have it. Did any of God's people under the law have grace in their hearts? If you put new wine or grace in their hearts under the law it would burst, the foolish virgins are God's people under the law. The hour of midnight is passing from law unto grace.

That was the door that was shut and not the eternal door of mercy. Jesus has accepted the true bride while the foolish virgins, the Jews, under the law are left out. Is a person that has a hope and is on the outside of the church a virgin? If so is he wise or foolish? I say he is foolish. Why? Because he does not come in. One day our God will bring them in His own good time. I believe that God will bring His people with eternal rest at His own good time, but not into practical duty.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in and sup with him and he with me." You know that Jesus is not standing at the door of the dead sinners' heart knocking and wanting to save him. When you professed a hope and felt impressed to go to the church that is Jesus knocking for you to open the door by taking up your cross and following him in baptism. Jesus says, if you confess me before men I will confess you before my Father which is in heaven. But you deny me before men and I will deny you before my Father in heaven.

If Jesus brings us to the church at his own good time why does he not open the door? It is our duty to open the door. I once asked a preacher who held out the idea that God brought His people to the church at his own good time, how long he remained out of the church after he professed a hope. He said about four years. I said did you ever feel impressed to go to the church during that time? He said yes. I said how often? He said just as often as the church door was published open. I said where did those impressions come from? He said, "I believe they came from the Lord." I said why did the Lord trouble you for four years, and then bring you in at his own good time; and the man was speechless.

I now wish to ask a few questions, and then I am done. How many parables were written under grace or the new covenant? Not a single one. How many had the Holy Ghost under the law? Not one. How many were saved by grace under the law? Not one. For without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins. So when Jesus said it is finished the law was at an end. Under the law they were saved by faith. Under the new covenant they are saved by grace through faith. But in the eye of wisdom they were saved before the world began.

Pray for me and mine.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother: For some purpose that I know not these words have been presented and deeply impressed on my mind. Proverbs 26:18. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." As I feel that it will take both historical and spiritual learning to enter in the details of this subject, I feel that I am unprepared to go into the depth of it except

God be my leader. For some time it has been on my mind and feeling my nothingness in the flesh so plain, it has caused me to beg for relief of mind without writing, and as my mind has been centered on you to write to it, seems if I could only have a mind to write to some one else it would not be quite such a burden of shame to me, as I know you are so far my superior, and can see so many blunders in my imperfections, I have thought if I could live a Christian life without writing to any one it would be better for my name to be blank. Then the thought came. Do you want your name blotted out of the Lamb's book of life? God made all things for himself, yea, even the wicked for the day of evil. Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud. This now leads me in the present time as we hear the word spoken so often among the world what is the cause of this great money panic, not realizing the words I have written above being the cause, but wondering in the dark and saying to each other, "I can't see any cause at all, but the elevation of the business wheel of the government has gotten too high, and the people have forgot their Creator, and I feel have bursted through the door of destruction, and have got above the mountain top of pride, and now has it not started in the right direction to show itself to those that have their eyes open. Should it not be a great lesson to the pure in heart, for they shall see God. For I feel that the pure in heart can see that such elevation as that is is not the teachings of the wisdom of God. Pride and haughty spirits are not to be divided in the love of the wisdom of God, but are divided in the spoil of the proud. Those that have spoiled them selves in pride in extremes, and have become haughty in spirit in the sight of God, those I feel will reap their reward by falling in destruction, and the poor in spirit are to show the photograph of Jesus, and to hold to the candlestick and walk in the light thereof, and show the test of those that prove faithful that worship the true and living God, instead of golden images.

As it appears now that the people of the world have been living so fast that the commandment of the good Lord has halted us, and we are now commanded to stand still and see our nothingness; but the children of Israel were commanded to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord. It brings to my mind now that the world is now almost like Nebuchadnezzar was when he had such a wonderful dream that he could not in any way interpret his dream. This we can see for ourselves by reading the 4th verse, first chapter of the book of Daniel and by reading we will see who was the faithful, and the God fearing man, and who would not fall down and worship the golden image set up by King Nebuchadnezzar, and the three that suffered to be bound and cast into the fiery furnace before they would fall down and worship idol's at the sound of the music, but oh dear children, we have been warned from the times of old, from generation to generation as we can see by reading the scriptures, that it is dangerous to worship things of this world, and when we sit and wonder over the cause of the great panic we will a good many times get a newspaper to learn the cause by reading it, instead of getting our Bible and reading that, for a newspaper is of the world and always tries to hide self to find some one else, and by it the secret is with that God of heaven who knows all things and saw the end from beginning and he will condemn all things that are not a safe guide, but his word is sanctified and God is love; and never tells us wrong, but tells us what pride and haughty spirits bring about pride brings destruction, and a haughty spirit a fall. Then we are "just as dependent as the birds of the air," and I don't feel like I would say too much if I were to say more, for the scriptures say, foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head. For where God has put a bird he hath planted a berry, but by the cause of sin, the fallen race of Adam have to till the ground and eat bread by the sweat of their face. Then the cause of speculation in traffic in some ways has caused the forgetfulness and unthankfulness that we owe to our true and living God, and by so much of such has caused, I do feel, the idols of the world to be worshipped to the extreme, for some time everything has been so flourishing to the eyes of the world that it appears to me that fear and trembling are almost unregarded, that which works out our salvation, but it now seems that we could view it in this way, that the world has had a dream and can't interpret it, and is wondering and troubled over it, and is looking and seeking for the interpreter as the king Nebuchadrezzar did, but I hope it is all for our good, and we can see it is to change the ways of worshipping the carnal ways of things of the world, and to show the unbelievers that there is a Superior Being that is greater than all this world combined, and that he rules his nation with a rod of iron and now we can hear some say everything happens for the best, but all things work well to them that love the Lord. I can't say it is happiness, for we learn that the Lord had a purpose in the king's dream, and showed him that he could preserve and comfort the three children in the fiery furnace, without a single hair being singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them, but read for yourself and see what became of the men that cast them in the fiery furnace. You can find that the fire was exceeding hot, the flame of fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshack and Abednego, and the king said, lo I see four loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God. This was Jesus the true vine, and he has the keys of death and hell, and to him he has promised to leave or forsake them not, for he says, "I will be with thee in the sixth trouble and in the seventh forsake thee not." O, is it not a precious hope to trust and worship that blessed one that is able to lead us through fiery trials and deliver our souls from the furnace that we may receive no hurt, Those I feel that are meek and lowly are the dear ones that mingle with God.

Better it is to be of a humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud, and oh, dear brethren and sisters, may it be our lot to mingle with such is my prayer for Christ's sake. We should remember that he says, For I will be unto you a God, and ye shall be unto me a people.

I feel that he has now shown and will show us that he is God, and I feel that poverty will be the introduction to the interpreter of this great panic, and God has prepared Daniel to interpret the king's dream, and I feel that God is able to interpret the great wonder of the world, by a Daniel in poverty and splendor, if it takes it to make us remember his word and power, and I feel that pride and destruction so much of it will be wiped out in splendor, and that will bring him in remembrance to us, and in this our Bible, and to kindle the little spark of Christianity that is so near gone out, and to bring fresh to our minds that he said, "On this rock I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud.

Unworthily,

Elder P. D. Gold,

My Dear Brother: With your permission I want to write a few words to my dear and much esteemed brethren and friends especially in N C. I have had a very sore attack of lagrippe this winter, and have not been permitted to get out among the dear Baptists for the past three weeks, but hope to be able to get out soon. I often think of God's dear children in the dear old "North State." and wish that I could associate with them as in sweet by-gone days, but as I trust, God has been pleased to direct me to another portion of his vineyard and with my lot I hope to be content.

My dear brethren, I hope that you will send up your petitions in my behalf that I may be submissive to God's holy providences, that I may rest in the shadow of his great wings, walk out in the beams of his radiant countenance and enjoy the approving smiles of the blessed Master.

The cause of Christ is still the dearest cause on earth to me, and oh, how I long to see the dear cause prosper. I want to see the Light of the dear old church shine so conspicuously, that God's little lambs may see and admire, and come to the fold seeking admittance in order to shelter from the pelting darts of the enemy. We so often hear the plaintive sighs of the sweet little harmless lambs expressing their interest in the cause of the Master. but "I am so unworthy, so sinful and vile, that I can't see how that the church could maintain her long-standing dignity and fellowship me." while, my dear afflicted fellow-traveler, I feel to sympathize with you in such trials, and while wading through such ordeals, yet I know it requires such afflictions, self-loathing, bitterness of soul to qualify us for the Master's cause. "Through great tribulations we enter the kingdom." This is the way the tried, tempest tossed, persecuted and afflicted apostles found the very much desired interior of this blessed, peaceful, restful city, and I am persuaded, dear child, that you are going to find it very much the same in your experience.

My dear ministering brethren, will you come and go with me to a confession? Is it not a fact that we have been too negligent in advising and instructing such characters as mentioned above, to a faithful, loving, active, and dutiful life in Christ Jesus? Perhaps the cause of this neglect is due largely to the fact that this is the Arminian's fort and great stronghold, but they are exhorting aliens to savingly repent and to be born again, while we should advise, instruct and exhort living new-born characters to "repent, and do works meet for repentance." And, too, the doctrine of "election," "predestination," "atonement," and "final preservation of the saints," so glorious, upbuilding and soothing to the learned and more confirmed in the doctrine of grace, that we frequently neglect to notice the little lambs who are not strong enough to endure strong meat. Let us, then, more seriously consider this very important fact, and be more careful about embracing every available opportunity to advise God's hungry children to repent and come home to their friends. Let me suggest that we turn our attention—all of it—that we spend in talking about the faults and defects of our neighbors and friends and especially our brethren and I am sure it will not be long before you will find it one of the sweetest changes you have ever made, and God will unquestionably bless you with His sweet, approving smiles. This is "bringing the tithes into the storehouse," and

ZION'S LANDMARK.

God will certainly open the window of heaven and pour all blessings upon you, so voluminous that there is not room to receive it. I had rather my brother have the sweet approving smiles of Lord than all the honor, wealth and advantages that are possible to attain to in this life.

I hope to have the privilege of meeting at least some of the dear Baptists or my native land soon, but God only knows what the future will unfold for us. I am, however, very pleasantly situated among honorable, God-fearing people, who are good to me, but so often I long to meet with those of the first part of my Baptist life, who nursed and cared for me so tenderly. My chances for traveling are generally restricted. I am trying to serve two churches regularly, and have another regular appointment, at which place we hope to organize a church soon, and, too, I am now actively engaged in the real estate business, so it is absolutely impossible for me to visit as usual, but trust God will kindly afford me his sweet spirit to lead me to fountains of living water, together with all His afflicted saints. I would be glad to receive a communication at any time from some of or any of the brethren that I have met in the Old North State.

Yours in sweet hope.

J. A. MONSEES.

Elder Gold.

Dear Brother: My mind is much exercised of late on obedience. God loves a people that will obey Him, no matter what the outcome may be. When Stephen preached that wonderful sermon recorded in Acts, 7th chap. God gave him a rugged message, but he was obedient though it cost him his life. As the stones struck him he looked into heaven and saw Jesus standing on the right hand of the Father. This is the only case in the Bible where Jesus is mentioned as standing in heaven. He saw something in Stephen that would obey at any cost and this caused him to be interested in Stephen.

Disobedience is a terrible sin as is seen in the life of the children of Israel, for when they were guilty of this sin they were punished by being stoned to death. Yet in these days the vast majority of people go on apparently indifferent as if thinking it will not make much difference even if they do disobey on some lines. There are others who say I will do these things when God's show me. God does not always speak directly to a person, in fact very frequently uses human instruments through whom to see the light.

If a person really loves God he will instantly obey him even if the message may come through some insignificant channel, for at times God might reveal His will to some child. When you can disobey God and compromise without doubt about which side to take as a general rule the safe course is to do the things that is naturally the hardest. The flesh like, the easy way, but when the spirit of God is in the heart one will take the hard things and obey God no matter what he may be asked to do. There is one thing in which we disobey, we are told to pray without ceasing. We may not always be in an attitude of prayer or able to pray audibly but we can as Christians, so live in the divine presence of God that we will always be in a prayerful spirit thus being able to meet and repel all the fiery darts of the enemy on short notice. In his word he has told us who to pray for, pray for our enemies for those who wrong us, and despitefully use us.

Let not our enemies taunts and injuries be the means of putting into our hearts resentment or retaliation, but a reminder that that enemy is the one who is calling for our love and prayers and let them see the old time healing power manifested and forgiveness of sins extended to every one who repents.

Pray for the household of faith daily, hold up God's children to the throne. Each one in these awful days of toil and danger needs our prayers and help from Jesus. There are no failures with God. When Zion travaileth she shall bring forth. Woe unto them that are at ease. There is far too much indifference, shrinking and failure on every hand. Christians arouse to your duty. Behold a record of praying saints and they were powerful to just the degree they were prayerful.

I sincerely desire the prayers of every one who may chance to read this imperfect scribble.

Your poor, ignorant sister,
PENCIE MAYHEW.

Elba, Va.

Reidsville, N. C. Jan. 27, 1908.

My dear sister Shields:

Your letter came in due time and it did me much good. The subject on which I wote is so neglected among our people that a large majority of them are so tender that it galls them to hear it mentioned, and when I find that there are a few who are faithful enough to speak out and tell the duty of the church it does my soul good. Your letter is of such importance to the church generally that I will send it and copy a copy of what I am about to write to Brother Gold and I hope that you will not object to its publication.

The deacons of the church are really the finance committee of the church. There is not a place in the New Testament referring to the duties of deacons that does not fully prove this. Deacons that do not take hold of all the financial matters in church affairs are of little use in the church. Of this number they should choose one as their treasurer, and the church should endorse his appointment. To be sure a church would not have one in the dea-con's office whom she is afraid to trust with her finances.

There should always be something kept in the hands of the treasurer to be disposed of by the deacons as the church directed. The treasurer should keep a book in which his receipts should be entered, and the name of the brother, sister or friend who gave into that treasury should be entered in the book with the amount given. This book should be open at all times for the inspection of the membership. Also all of the disbursements should be entered in the same book.

The Lord when he saw the people casting into the treasury, did not condemn it but justified it and the poor widow who did not withhold even her last farthing. The twelve apostles had a treasurer and after the all of Judas Iscariot the gift was given to Paul who wote of the financial duties of the church.

The churches in the old Kehukee and other associations have treasurers and keep something in their hands. I want to tell you of a thing I saw once in one of the churches of the Kehukee association of which Elder Gold was pastor. The treasury had gotten empty and the treasurer had given notice that at the next meeting he would take up a collection to replenish the treasury. When he spoke of it in conference he called the list of names and as a name was called the person went and gave in as he or she felt to do and the name with the amount given was entered in a little book. There were thirty-five names of white members called and fifteen responded with their gifts, there were twenty-seven names of the colored members called and twenty-five responded with their gifts, I say this to their credit. The whole amount received was eighty-five dollars. It has been near twenty years ago and I remember it as well as if it had been on yesterday.

Now, as to the common objections,

"that it is too much like Missionaries," &c, I say it is really cowardly in our people to try to shun plain duty because others imitate it. The Missionaries and others read their texts in the Bible, shall we quit reading ours there? They baptise their members in the water, shall we quit that? They hold meetings on Sunday, shall we not? There are many counterfeits in the United States, is that a reason for the government to not make any more money? I say that if the Missionaries do right let us commend them for so doing, and if we have not been doing right let us begin at once. Not as emulating them, but because it is right for us to do right.

The church of God has a close place to live in to do just right and not fall into the wrongs of others. Truly it is a strait (difficult) gate and a narrow way that we are to travel.

Let us remember to never shrink from our own duty because some body else does the same thing.

Dear sister, I pray the Lord to bless you and all his people and guide us in the way of His truth that we may ever hear His voice saying, "well done thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord."

Your brother, I hope, in Christ.

L. H. HARDY.

Danville, Va., Jan. 25, 1908

Dear Brother Hardy, in Christ:

If you will allow one so unworthy as I am to call you brother, I feel I am so cast down, so unworthy to write to such a noted Christian as you are that can't write as I want to. I have just read your writing in the Landmark on the relation between the church and the pastor, and I have often thought of what you have wrote, and have tried to tell it, but did not have sense enough to explain it. You have told it just as I believe it and and certainly did enjoy reading it.

Brother Hardy, what do you think about a Primitive Baptist church having a treasurer and each member giving what they feel like each month to him and he pay for the full house-keeping, etc.? and for the benefit of needy members, if there be any, instead of making it up when needed.

This has been spoken of here and some say it would be too much like Missionaries. I don't see it that way; I don't see any more harm in having a treasurer than in getting up the money when needed.

If I am wrong I hope you will be plain enough to tell me so, for I want to be right but sometimes I don't feel like I am doing right to stay with the Baptists, I don't feel that I am worthy to be with them, yet I love them, and love to be with them and see them do right.

Hoping you will pardon me for disturbing you, I am

Your sister in hope,

MRS. R. A. SHIELDS.

Mr. Robert Nash requests my view of Matt. 22:1-14. It is the case of a certain king which made a marriage for his son, and sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding and they would not come.

Now here is a case pleasing to natural man. All things are ready. He can come if he will. That is acceptable to man's nature. Yes, he can come if he will. But will he come? But they would not come. However free an invitation is if man will not accept it what is it worth to them? Ye will not come said Jesus because your deeds are evil, because ye love darkness rather than light. The love that men have for the opposite of what Jesus presents keeps them from coming. Because men love darkness rather than light is what keeps them from the service of the Lord.

Again the king sent forth other servants saying tell them which are bidden behold I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready. Come unto the marriage. What more could be done to suit free agency. But according to men they must be left free to come or not to come as it suits them. Now how did these men act? "But they made light of it and went their ways, one to his farm and another to his merchandise. In one case they said have me excused. I have bought a piece of land, I must go and prove it. I have bought a yoke of oxen said another. Therefore I pray thee have me excused. Another had married a wife and hence he could not come.

Now did any of those characters taste that supper? No, not one. They what is gained by using the doctrines of men? What good is there in it? Not one of them. They had their own contentions according to their own contentions there is nothing for them. It was stated in Luke 14th chapter that not one to whom the bidding was made, and all of whom refused to come, should taste of that supper.

He before whom the test of our religion is made. Now I know but one standard to work by in this thing. If a thing is presented before me what is my duty? It appears to me that I should see if the Lord would engage be once was. Would the Lord go to a card party or a dance? Then I must not. Would he drink strong wine or drink in a barroom where the drunken loiter? Then I must not. Would he visit meetings and take part in religious services where his power to save was being denied? Then I must not. Would he endorse institutions professing to raise up children and fit them for heaven? Would not this be denying the efficacy of his own blood? Then I must not. Would he endorse an institution that is claiming to save men's souls by keeping alcohol out of their stomachs? Then I must not. Would he endorse or belong to institutions that claim to gain favor with men in foreign countries and in which his name is denied even in prayer? Then I must not.

All these and many, many more things are of the world and "Pure religion," is to keep yourself unspotted from them. One might say that we must engage in these things or we will not have any friends. Better loose all our friends and feel the "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," than to have every body for friends and have our Lord's condemnation. Fear not man who has power only to kill the body and after that there is nothing he can do, but fear God who has power to cast both soul and body into hell-fire.

It is right for us to try to live humbly with all men and to try to please them when we may do so and not sin but that must be manifested even if the world hate us therefor. Keep yourselves unspotted from the world. Don't fear the world; don't fear to speak the truth and to speak it boldly in the spirit of the Lord. The preacher receive it nor believe it, is all that can be of any benefit to any one. The Lord hear the truth, and bless those who faithfully preach it, and those who love it and walk in it.

Dear Brother Gold:

I copy and send you a good letter which was written to me by Brother P. G. Deaton. I send it to be published along with Sister Shield's and my reply to hers for my reply treats on the same thing that Brother Deaton asked to write on.

I feel to rejoice that so many brethren and sisters have spoken approvingly to me about my letter. I feared so much to write it but I felt that there was a need for it and it appears that others think so too.

Affectionately,

L. H. HARDY.

Elder L. H. Hardy,

Dear Brother: I have read with interest your article in the Landmark of January 15th and feel to thank the Lord that there are ministers yet among the Baptists who are not afraid to speak the truth; to cry aloud and spare not; to show His people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins.

It is not because I feel or claim that I have always done my whole duty to the ministering brethren but I hope it is because I love the truth.

I have thought of you many times since you preached at Ahboro and was looking for your article in the Landmark, for I was informed that a certain brother had requested you to explain through that paper the duties of a pastor. How glad I am that you admonished the very people that need it: the church.

If there is any class of people that are sorry for it as the minister and his family. I know they are often neglected. Now Brother Hardy, I have one earnest request to make of you and that is that you write through the Landmark on the duties of deacons to their church, etc.

I know one poor sister whose husband has been sick for months and at last he died and left a widow, a dear sister with a family of children and I am satisfied that she had a heavy doctor bill to pay and I am satisfied that she is not able to pay all the debts and save property, the little she has and feed and clothe her children as they should be. I sometimes visit that church and there are two deacons there any thirty or forty members and I don't hear one thing being done with regards to this sister's condition.

Now my dear brother in the Lord, as I humbly hope, I have not written what I have through malice toward any one; neither made the request of you. I have not sought to get some brother or sisters beat to death but I hope for the good of God's people and the honor and upbuilding of the church.

Hoping to hear from you soon through the Landmark I remain your unworthy brother in hope of eternal life.

P. G. DEATON.

"While he answered for himself, neither against the law of the Jews neither against the temple, nor yet against Cesar have I offended anything at all." Acts 25:8.

This is the language of Paul before Festus the governor, when the Jews had accused him of transgressing the law of Moses, and being a ring leader of the sect of Nazzaresenes, and a general offender. The charges included offenses in general such as that he was a pestilent fellow, a mover of sedition, a profaner of the temple etc. These were ugly and grievous charges made against an apostle of Jesus Christ.

Paul said they were false charges, neither could they be proven. He makes a general statement of great value and of much importance, indeed it is a clear and wonderful setting forth of the truth of the true conditions of one who is a Jew, as not only giving no offense to Jew, nor Gentile, nor to the church of God, nor is he a violator of any law of the land nor an offender against good morals. The man that is a follower of Jesus violates no law against Moses, or the Jews, or temple, nor against Cesar or the Roman government. But the believer in Jesus is a quiet, peaceable and obedient citizen of the land. He is subject to the powers that be, for they are ordained of God for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well. Laws of the state or government are not made for good men, but they are enacted to restrain evil minded men from doing wrong, or punishing them after they have done wrong. That is, of course, some protection to men that obey the laws. But honest men do not need a law to compel them to do right. There is a law in their conscience that requires this of them. But the law is not made for good men, but for the lawless and disobedient or for the wicked.

There is no call on any follower of Jesus to withhold any service from any individual, state or government that he ought to render. But the spirit of Jesus prompts him to render obedience to the powers that be, and it exercises him to do this in the most cheerful spirit. So that the more one is led by the Spirit of Christ the more perfect is his service to those he seeks to serve and the more useful he is and the greater the freedom he enjoys. For if Jesus makes one free he is free indeed. The more truly and faithfully one serves his state or government, his neighbor, his family, his church or his neighborhood the more he honors Jesus if this is done unto the Lord. Truly the fullest service to Jesus includes every obligation we owe to every one. Hence there was not a shadow of truth in any charge the Jews brought against Paul. He had lived in all good conscience toward God and man. The most blessed and perfect freedom is enjoyed by the follower of Jesus, for if one is born of God that implants within him the principles to love, serve and honor all men as the creatures of God and to respect all the relations of life as created by Him.

If the government licenses men to sell intoxicants the sober-minded man does not become a drunkard, for the law does not require him to drink. His freedom is not infringed. Should the state become prohibitory it does not infringe on his right which is to keep sober. He is not required to vote unless he chooses to do so, and if he does vote it is an expression of his love of honest living. He abstains from the bitterness of politics which arrays one man against another. The Lord is his lawgiver. He is not active in framing political laws. The law that rules and guides him is already enacted and declared by the Lord Jesus. He is under law to Christ. We do not find a single apostle stating that Christians should be active in the schemes and plots of earthly governments, nor seek to frame laws, but that we should obey the laws that are in force.

Whenever men called followers of Jesus, preachers and others, aim to legislate for the country evil in general, and corruption enters into the ranks of such people. Political preachers are amongst the most corrupt demagogues of the land.

Does Paul instruct Timothy to seek a seat in the halls, or to become a lobbyist in order to influence legislation? Not a trace of such a thing can be inferred from any of his teaching. We are lights to others when we so act toward them that we seek peace and not their property, when we attend to our own affairs honestly and seek no power over others, when the truth of Jesus so shines in us that we give no offence to any one. This is the freedom of doing right to all men, not regarding men as in classes or parties or arrayed against another. It is glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will toward men. P. D. G.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1:27.

When I was at Williamston in October our dear sister Slade asked me for some expressions on the above text.

The word "religion" is used but about five times. I think in the Bible. In Acts 26:5 the Pharisees' religion is spoken of Galatians 1:13-14 the Jews religion is spoken of. In all of these places the original shows that it is the religion of the law that is spoken of. That is a religion that one has by the works of the law.

In James 1:26 it is shown that a man's religion is vain if he bridle not his tongue. This shows that a Christian should not give himself over to vain and foolish conversation, nor to gossiping about his neighbors nor brethren, joining with the world in traducing their character. Sometimes they give vent to the envy of jealousy of heart to the injury of a brother or sister. One to do such things shows that his religion is vain. For religion to be valued at one hundred cents in the dollar it must be pure before God our Father. This is a very high standard by which our religion is tried. The eye of the Lord never looks on the outward appearance as man does but He pondereth the heart. There is no place there so secret that He does not know it altogether. If I have enmity or evil in my heart against any it is altogether known by Him and I need not hide it from man. To try to please men is to render ones self unfit for the work of God. To do anything religiously for money or because I expect to realize any worldly advantage to myself by it is to worship or serve for filthy lucre and not to serve the Lord. These are contrary to the principles of true religion and in following this course I cannot expect anything but the Lord's rebuke.

A minister must first take heed to himself and then to the doctrine. To be sound in doctrine will do me no good if my walk is contrary to that which I preach. Therefore I must live out my preaching or I had best to not preach. Unless I do this I am not fit to have the oversight of the flock of God nor to pretend to teach them.

The children of God should try what they hear and see by the word of God for only such as is according to that word is worthy to be received. Remember always that he that liveth after the flesh shall die. On the other hand, one may crush truth to the earth but it will rise as sure as Jesus, our Lord rose from the dead.

True religion never looks for self interest but always goes out to the poor and needy. The very life of our Lord is evidence for He came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. He is the friend of publicans and sinners. Mary Magdalene was a very sinful woman but the Lord forgave her all. This the self-righteous Pharisees didn't receive. Instead of trying to rise up to suit the opinions and gain the favors of the great and the rich pure religion condescends to men of low estate. It does not say to the one wearing gold and fine apparel, sit here by my side and to one of more humble means and ways, sit there on my footstool. In selecting those who shall lodge with us and partake of our hospitality it selects the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind. Luke 14th chapter. It does not go into the fine houses (of self-righteousness and good works) but in the highway and hedges to compel the poor and the needy to come to the supper of the Lord.

One may be fatherless and yet not have afflictions or be needy. One may be a widow and have plenty and suffer no afflictions. Some widows wax wanton and marry. They do well, but they are not those to whom the apostles refer.

Paul is very clear on this: a widow must be threescore or sixty years old. That is she must be unable to take care of herself. Then she must be without sons or grandsons to care for her before she shall be taken in the daily ministration of the church.

To simply go to see these poor and talk with them is good but if we go and consume what they have we have made a poor visit to them. To visit them in the sense of the text is to give them such things as they need. Once two preachers, Elders J. S. Dameron and B. P. Pitt visited my father's house; there was there with us a poor sister who desired to minister to them; she divided what she had between them. They received her offering just as if it had been much more and they they gave her many times more than they had received of her. Thus they visited her in her afflictions and she had also cleared her mind in ministering of her natural things to those who had ministered her in spiritual things.

We may be sure that if we keep ourselves unspotted from the world the world cannot spot us. Man may lie on us and persecute but the to come in. Does not the very letter and plain language of the word forbid the claims of those who boast so much of the moral free agency? Surely, this is high sounding language: moral free agency. Men assume to themselves great titles and flatter themselves with their own doings. But when they are shown the nature of their freedom which is to do evil only then they are glad that grace is free to cause the sinner to come to Jesus Christ. For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; for it is the gift of God. Not of works lest any man should boast, for we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. P. D. G.

Sister Chamblee requests my view of Acts 1:24-25. This concerns the casting of lots between Justus and Matthias to determine which of them should succeed Judas as one of the twelve apostles: for it was said his "bishopricks let another take."

The Lord told the eleven to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endowed with power from on high. But the Holy Ghost had not then fallen on them; nor were they yet endowed with power from on high.

It seems to me after they were endowed with that power they did not think of arranging who should be an apostle. Nor is there any evidence Matthias was an apostle. Paul was the apostle that was honored of the Lord as the five talent servants who also received the talent that Judas had not well used. For his bishopricks was taken from him and given to another. Though as one born out of due time Paul stands not a whit behind the chief apostle. Nor had he accompanied with the apostles a day before the resurrection of Jesus, but was breathing out threatening and slaughter against the followers of Jesus until the moment he was struck down to the ground by the light above the brightness of the sun that shone on him. He received the gifts of revelation all in a lump and could truly say he received it not of man nor by man, but it came by the revelation of Jesus in him the hope of glory. There cannot be a more notable example of success than was Paul's case. No man had greater gifts, none labored more, nor was more patient than he was, so that Paul shows wonderfully what gifts and callings of God will accomplish. Grace did all this for Paul said by the grace of God I am what I am.

TWELVE JUDGES.

Jesus said when the Son of Man in the regeneration shall sit upon the throne of his glory that the twelve apostles should sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. This began after the resurrection of Jesus and his exaltation at the right hand of God as prince and Saviour. Behold a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment.

The order of gospel worship is set forth in the church of God wherein Jesus is king, and the twelve apostles are inspired to expound or declare the meaning of the law of the Lord. Judges of courts do not enact laws, but they are the constitutional medium for declaring what is the meaning of such and such a law. Now the apostles have this authority, and as apostles they still live, though as men they are dead. They cannot have any successors inasmuch as they never die as apostles. Their word is as good today as it was when first uttered. Jesus did not write any part of the New Testament, but the apostles wrote it all. Hence their word is final. The Lord gave to them the keys of the kingdom of heaven, hence, whatsoever they bound in heaven is bound on earth, and whatsoever they loosed on earth is loosed in heaven. Nothing can be added to the scriptures, nor any thing subtracted from them without peril to him who attempts to add to or take from.

Jesus also prays that all that believe through the word of these twelve apostles shall be saved. No manners or custom can allow, require, call for, nor admit of any thing further in the way of new doctrine or new discovery or new demand. The wisdom from above has hewn out her seven pillars, and slain her fatlings, mingled her wine, spread her feast, and behold all things are ready. No new doctrine can be received. No new necessities or change can tolerate any new order. However great the developments the wisdom of heaven has declared the end from the beginning.

Such a presumptuous woman as claims a new dispensation of healing of which she is the mother must be a daring rejection of the completeness of Jesus, and the divine order of gospel worship. If any man preach any other doctrine than that which Paul preached let him be accursed when the Lord cometh, and the coming or revelation of the Lord Jesus does cast down every such presumptuous, high thought and the Lord alone is exalted in that day.

The apostles were empowered to fully declare the will of God in the salvation of his people. The glorious saving power of his word was preached by the apostles of the Lamb that causes the believers in Jesus to feed upon that word published, which is Christ crucified and risen, for this word endures forever, but all flesh is as grass. How glorious is this doctrine and worship of God in the order of his house. The Lord is in his holy temple, let all the earth keep silence. P. D. G.

Dunn, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:

Please give your view of Gal. 5:19-20. Specially on the word "lasciviousness" and "sedition," and oblige your brother in hope.

JOSIAH ELDRIDGE

The word "lasciviousness" is one of a lustful, lecherous meaning, lewd, unclean, unlawful desires after the opposite sex, sly, cunning, mean, corrupt. There is scarcely a worse desire than that of lasciviousness, and it is one of the most unclean of the works of the flesh.

The word sedition is one of the active kind that stirs up rebellion against the government, or against lawful authority. When joined with others of like spirit it causes commotions, conspiracies, armed resistance to law, bloodshed, murder and very serious violations of law where a mob or several are banded together for an unlawful purpose. Sedition is of a more dangerous nature than lasciviousness when it involves many persons banded together for an unlawful purpose: but it is not more vicious, revolting or unclean in its lewd and corrupting spirit.

Both are the works of the flesh and are lumped with every other ungodly and wicked trait and motive causing all kinds of wicked and evil perpetrated by mankind.

If one is led of the spirit—the holy spirit — he is not under the law, and hence not walking in the lusts of the flesh. The apostle sums up the works of the flesh including every thing abominable. He also recounts the fruit of the spirit which is so free from sin, mischief or uncleanness, and so useful and lovely, so desirable and praiseworthy.

Those guilty of the deeds of the flesh shall not inherit the kingdom of God. This is very plain talk, but not too much so for those that abhor evil and hate the lusts of the flesh. While such as walk after the flesh are ready to excuse or apologize for the work of the flesh. But nothing unclean shall inherit the kingdom of God.

They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affection and lusts. If one is crucified to the flesh he is dead to sin. A crucified man is a dead man to that he is crucified to, and therefore he cannot walk in that any more.

Paul says I, through the law and dead to the law. I am crucified with Christ. This is the most blessed estate one can be found in while in the flesh. He is dead to the law by the body of Christ, and hence free from sin that being dead wherein he was held. He is also risen from the dead, and married to another even to him who is risen from the dead in order that the fruit might be until holiness and the end everlasting life.

Hence the fruit of the spirit of God, or fruit unto holiness follows. Hence there is now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit.

If we live in the spirit let us also walk in the spirit. P. D. G.

EGYPTIAN GODS.

According to the history of Egypt the King was the god the Egyptians worshipped. There was no earthly kingdom known so completely possessed of the notion that the king was god, and there was no higher god than he was. The notion was that he could not do wrong, being incorruptible.

The judgements the God of heaven poured out upon Egypt taught Pharaoh that he was no god and had no power. The Egyptians were also taught that there is no god like the God of heaven and earth.

Never, perhaps, has an earthly king been more fully shown the justly helplessness of man.

Small things, such as frogs, flies, lice, dust of the earth, drinking water, the elements, all are turned to fight against Egypt. Every thing is against Egypt, but every thing is for Israel.

Never, perhaps, was a country more stripped, impoverished than Egypt was. Never was a people so enriched as Israel was, not merely in being loaded with the wealth of the spoiled Egyptians: but Israel had seen, heard and learned so much of the Lord's wonderful ways, and he put a difference between Egypt and Israel. P. D. G.

DAVID IN THE CAVE.

When fleeing from Saul David dwelt in the cave Adullam. A cave is in the earth, where one is hid and shut out from the light and the joy of the day. It is a place of darkness and a place of humiliation. David thus was hid from Saul's wrath. He was greatly distressed and his brethren and his father's house also went down thither to him. Every one also who was in distress and every one that was in debt, and every one that was discontented gathered themselves unto him, and he became a captain over them. All the band was a small one in comparison with Saul's army. What a figure they cut in the eye of Saul and his men who had the flower, the wealth and the glory of the army, the revenues and the letter and appearance of the kingdom of Israel. Every one that was fat and full, and free from trouble came to Saul, and countenanced David as a pretender, an interloper without honor or right. His followers also were no honor to him or the eyes of men. It was a disgrace to have such followers. It was a reproach to be under such a captain. But affliction, shame, distress and poverty brought these men together and kept them together.

How surprising was the humiliation of Jesus, found in fashion as a man, in the likeness of sinful flesh, hid in a dark cave beneath the earth or in the earth. None of the great believed on him, only the lowly and distressed and afflicted. God hath chosen base things, and things that are not to bring to naught things that are, that no flesh should glory in his presence.

But those that suffer with him in the flesh shall reign with him in glory. Those that are persecuted for his name's sake shall reign with him. Through much tribulation we enter the kingdom.

Those in distress, in debt and discontented are not such as are dishonest, and are seeking to shun the payment of a just debt: but they are such as feel they are ten thousand talents in debt and not a cent to pay with. They know the debt is just, but they have spent all and cannot pay a cent. This distresses them so much. Jesus receives such sinners, for the Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all, and with his stripes we are healed.

Also his brethren—all his Father's house came to him and he received every one of them. He was never too poor to show mercy. He is our captain made perfect through suffering, and is the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him—that followe! him. P. D. G.

Sister J. H. Hardy requests my view of Matt. 8:15, "And he touched her hand and the fever left her: and she arose and ministered unto them." It was the mother of Peter's wife that lay sick of a fever. When Jesus came into Peter's house he saw the woman thus sick, and he touched her hand and the fever left her, and she arose and ministered unto them.

Much has been written and spoken about healing diseases. But all the healing is in Jesus who never failed to heal.

He touched the woman and the fever left her. The touch of Jesus casts out disease. The word of Jesus is all that is needful to cure. The look of Jesus drives off sorrow, and his smile is the feast of the soul.

When a woman said, if I may but touch his garment I shall be made whole it was faith speaking in her of his almighty healing power to save. The mystery of the faith of Christ dwelling in a sinner—in an afflicted one who is sorely tried I cannot understand.

There is a deep sense of vilness in the one that has this faith which seems to find its way to Jesus pressing through a throng of people, yet saying nothing, and even attempting to conceal the trouble from all mankind. Faith honors Jesus and seeks him as the blessed one that has all power and comfort. It will also bear burdens and endure. It faints not by the way, but presses forward against all opposition.

Does one that has faith ever fail to go to Jesus? Shall one have faith in him and yet that one fail to receive the healing or saving of Jesus? Can so great a thing as faith in Jesus be a failure, and the soul that has it be cast away, and come short of salvation? It seems to me that could not be.

Jesus loves his people. Will that love fail to reach and relieve the soul in need? His touch, his look, his word, his will to save, his prayer Father, I will that they whom thou hast given me be with me where I am to behold my glory will cause them all to come to him.

Whether he goes where they are, or whether they come or are brought where he is it is all the same in effect. He heals and saves them all.

There is not only no disease or sickness, death or sin in him but there is life eternal in him, and he comes that we may have life and have it more abundantly. It is eternal life to know the Father and the Lord Jesus.

The mother of Peter's wife arose when Jesus touched her and waited on the people or served them—ministered to them in the house as women do, such as house work which is useful and honorable. Her strength was restored to her instantly. Jesus rebukes fever which is an enemy, as diseases of all sorts are enemies, and they depart.

If Jesus dwells in our house or enters into our house how will the servants behave, and how we all wish to serve and help each other, and minister to each other. How good it is to be well and disposed to minister to each other.

P. D. S.

DAVID AND JONATHAN.

Where will you find a sweeter, more touching, affectionate, loving, endearing exhibition of love among men than that of David and Jonathan? David means beloved, Jonathan means whom the Lord has sent.

Naturally one would say that Jonathan had cause to be on his father's side—that he would espouse the cause of his father being the prospective heir of the kingdom of Israel at his father's death, and therefore if David prevailed over Saul Jonathan would be the loser, hence that all natural affection of flesh and blood, and all selfish interests would compel him to cleave to his father, and thus oppose David. In Jonathan's life there is a renunciation of every natural principle of the flesh. What caused all this? It was jonathan's love for David, for he loved David as he loved his own soul. There is in scripture cases furnishing a model or example of every perfection required of the God of heaven showing that what the holy word of God requires the holy power of God supplies. The law says thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Hence we see this set forth in Jonathan. Also there are illustrations of depravity that exhibit the horrors of corrupt principles and vile passions which the Bible condemns.

These things good and evil are worked out and displayed in the character and conduct of men named in the Bible.

The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, for he loved David as he loved his own soul. He stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments even to his sword and his bow and his girdle. They made a covenant with each other before the Lord. What a glorious love is this flowing from God. The more noble David's character is the purer is this love. It meets the storms of wrath of Saul, and pleads David's innocence and worthiness before the raging, envious wrathful King Saul. He thus lays down his life for David.

When it is manifest that Saul designs to kill David Jonathan informs him of the bloody intent of his father. They meet in the field and commune. Jonathan tells David how he may know that his father plots David's death. He tells him where to conceal himself, and he will shoot three arrows, and will send a lad to gather them up, and bring them back to Jonathan. If Jonathan shall say to the lad, Behold the arrows are on this side of thee, take them, then come thou: for there is peace to thee, and no hurt. But if I say unto the young man, Behold the arrows are beyond thee; go thy way, for the Lord hath sent thee away.

The lad did not shoot the arrows, nor know the business between Jonathan and David. The matter was appointed of the Lord. Deliverance comes to David through the loving Jonathan. The arrows go beyond what man sees, plans, thinks or comprehends. The preacher, the lad with a few barley loaves and two or three small fishes did not know how these loaves and fishes would be multiplied, shoots—beyond all he had ever thought of or heard. When one is preaching the gospel he draws the bow at a venture so far as he is exercised. He knows not what he is going to say, nor where the arrow in the king's hand will strike. It is always beyond what he can see or think. Jonathan's love will seek David's safety. Though weeping follows safety of David is guaranteed. While these men commune, weep together in the field and David's weeping exceeds Jonathan's, for the sorrow of Jesus must exceed the sorrow of any other and David must flee away as one leaving home, and chased and pursued without a place to lay his head, yet the loving Jonathan is faithful.

There are good things in Israel, but not of Saul's dictation who shadows forth the flesh with its enmity must be slain. But David loves the kingdom of Israel and its king, and is true, hence in Jonathan and David the covenant of salt is preserved and fulfilled.

When Jonathan falls in battle fighting for Israel the touching lament of David for his brother Jonathan whose love passed that of woman is one of the pleasant things that befalls to the Saviour in his sorrowful days of sojourn in the flesh.

The covenant between Jonathan and David lives after Jonathan had fallen in battle, and when David is enthroned as the bright king of Israel he remembers that covenant and enquires if there is any of Jonathan's offspring to whom he may show kindnesses for Jonathan's sake. Mephibosheth, a poor man, lame in both his feet, is found, and David sends for him and commands him to dwell with the king and eat bread at the king's table all his life. Mephibosheth says I am a dead dog. How poor and vile he feels. It is not for his sake, nor for any thing he has ever done, nor because he is lame, that he finds favor of David; but it is because of the covenant between Jonathan and David, or for Jonathan's sake this favor is shown to him. For Jesus' sake the Father shows mercy to sinners embraced in the covenant of grace. The son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost. P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

ELDER JAMES SAMUEL DAMERON.

This faithful servant of the Lord was one among the first to preach the glorious gospel of our God in the town of Reidsville. He traveled much and preached as he went. In his travels the Lord cast his lot in with us.

He was chosen pastor of our mother church at Lickfork at her April meeting 1875. In his service in that capacity, we became very familiarly acquainted with him, and as we learned him more we loved him better.

The Lord blessed him to marry many, and baptise many among us, and his labors were a loving service.

In April 1892 the church at Lickfork extended an arm to Reidsville. This was the labor from which our church was born.

Over this arm, Elder Dameron watched with the eye of a tender, loving shepherd, and nursed the tender babes while he led the sheep with the food from the Father's table. In the fruits of these labors several members were added to their tender branch, and he nursed them until the Lord saw fit to take his reason from him. This ended his ministerial labors on earth, but it did not impair our remembrance of his faithfulness among us, and to us, for he was dearly loved by us, and all the people among whom we live.

The Lord grant that his faithful footsteps which he left pure may never be stained by the pollutions of sin by those who have been and who may hereafter be chosen to walk therein as His servants among our people and the church.

Done in conference at Reidsville, North Carolina on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in January, 1908.

SARAH WILLIAMSTON.

Sister Sarah Williamston, the wife of L. T. Williamston, was about 62 years old at her death. Sarah Mercer was her maiden name. She died October 31, 1907, after nineteen months of sickness. She was a faithful member of Contentnea Church, and a kind and beloved neighbor, a good wife and useful in her neighborhood. We miss such members much, but the Lord's way is right, while it is not in keeping with our own poor, short-sighted will. P. D. G.

MARGARET M. WILLIAMS.

Dear Brother Gold—I am requested by our dead afflicted brother and elder, W. B. Williams, to write an obituary notice of his dear companion, Margaret M. Williams. She was born May 30, 1838, and was relieved of all her sorrows here January 7, 1908. She was married to Elder W. B. Williams July 30, 1857, and there were born unto them nine children—four survive their mother. Sister Williams united with the Primitive Baptist Church about thirty years ago, and always filled her seat when not providentially hindered. She was (as a great many of us) acquainted with many troubles and trials of this life, and suffered more than tongue can express, and she often had to bear her grief and sorrows all alone as her companion was a faithful minister of God and felt it his duty to go when the Lord bled him. But I have been told that she held out faithful in her duties at home until her health became so bad that she had to give up every thing. Her mind also gave way and she was perfectly miserable all the time. She has been a very great sufferer, but we feel to hope and de-lieve that she is now resting from all her toils and trials. She was called a very good and quiet woman, and was a great blessing to her afflicted husband, who feels the loss of her, but his loss we hope is her gain. She cannot come back to him, but a few more days and he will go to her, when they will be at rest forever and ever. She leaves behind two boys and two girls, and a great many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. One of her sons is greatly afflicted with rheumatism and cannot walk a step. I have thought it the most afflicted family I ever saw. But the Lord has been with them and greatly blest them. Her daughter (sister Mary Luper) had a dream of meeting her mother (since her death) and she had a long white robe on and she looked to be perfectly happy. She embraced her in her arms and was happy to. May the Lord comfort the bereaved and cause them to feel that he doeth all things well, and may they by the grace of God meet their loved one in that bright and happy world above.

Much love to you all.

Ridgeway, Va., Jan. 11, 1908.

Dear Brother Gold—As my subscription for the Landmark is about to close I write to renew it, as I do not feel I could get along without it. I am always glad when the time comes to get it, and I am not content until I have read all its contents, as it seems to build me up and strengthen my faith, which I think is the object of preaching, writing or talking when it is of the spirit of God, for what is of the flesh profits nothing. We are commanded to mortify flesh through the spirit, and this we have to do daily, and we are commanded to watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation. Our duty is plain, yet the world, the flesh and satan get in the way and cause us to be forgetful of our duty and that causes us to repent and learn our weakness, which forces us to flee to that rock that shields us from all harm. Brother Gold, as our Mayo Association comes off in May next, commencing on Tuesday before the second Sunday to be held at Ridgeway, Henry county, Va., I wish to say to all who have a mind to come to do so. I do not expect to live to see another association at our church, and I hope I love to meet with the brethren and sisters at all times. I hope if it is the will of God you may live long on earth, and as dear sister Edwards wrote that love and peace may abound, forbearance for each other, and endeavoring to conduct ourselves in such a way as to be an example to the flock. I feel to ask all who may read this to pray for me that I may not fall at the hands of Saul.

MARY ELIZABETH LAWRENCE.

Departed this life on the 1st day of May, 1907, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Lawrence.

She was born in Southampton county, Va., August 1, 1825, where she lived until she married Joseph J. Lawrence, of Nansemond county, Va., and in the Lawrence homestead near South Quay, she lived out a long and useful life, being 81 years old and 9 months old when she died, leaving four children, one foster son and ten grandchildren.

Early in her young womanhood she obeyed the commands of her saviour and was baptized after uniting with the Primitive Baptist Church of Old South Quay, Va. She loved her church and was never happier than when worshipping with those of her faith. To her, her church and her home, were the most cherished and loved institutions on earth. She was left a widow with four small children and naturally her life was full of care, but when troubles came, she leaned heavily on the Lord. Her faith in him at all times was beautiful, and when sickness came in her last days her child-like trust and patience never faltered.

Her's was a quiet, unassuming life. Full of energy and strength, mentally and physically. She lived for the welfare of her children and the good of others. The poor never left her door empty handed and her neighbors found in her a true friend. Her good deeds live after her and surely the world is better after such as she has lived and died.

Mother was an invalid for three years, the last year being confined to her bed.

I have often heard her say in her well days, that she hoped all of her sufferings would be on this earth.

During her last sickness she suffered intensely, at times, but through it all she never complained. All that loving hearts and willing hands could do to comfort and relieve her was done, but her mission was over, and God called her.

The beautiful expression that brightened her face the last night of her earthly existence, assured us "It was well with her soul."

Just as the light of early dawn was stealing over the earth, her sweet spirit left its tenement of clay and winged its flight to a better home where it is enjoying the sweet peace of the redeemed. The day following her death, all that was mortal of dear mother was placed in the family cemetery, there to await the resurrection morn.

Funeral services were conducted by Elder Hassell. Her daughter,

MRS. JAS. T. RAWLES.

Crystal River, Fla., Jan. 20, 1908.

JOSEH CLARENCE BODWINE.

The subject of this obituary was born December 23rd, 1903 and departed this life November 17th, 1907. He was the son of Gilbert and Jenetain Taylor Bodwine, and was a bright and pleasant child. He was like a ray of sunshine in our house that is gone out. He often made our hearts glad with his presence.

He died with pneumonia. His sufferings were intense. All was done that mother and other loving hands could do but this could not stay the hand of death. God had called this little one home to come and dwell with Him where sufferings can never come. Weep not father, mother, relatives and friends, for little Joe has left a world woe for a home in heaven. Ask God to prepare you to enter there too, where parting will never come.

FOR SALE

Simpkins' Prolific Cotton Seed.

Resembles the "KING" but is earlier by ten days and bolls larger and gives much larger yield both in the field and at the gin. The superiority of this cotton over all others consists in its extreme earliness and heavy fruiting. Makes long limbs which come out at ground, close joints and small seed, giving 40 per cent lint. I originated this cotton by a careful selection of stalks in a field of "KING's improved." For sale at $1.50 per bushel, or five bushels or more at $1.00 per bushel, by

of the best possible quality, is the aim of every enterprising cotton planter. And "it is as easy as rolling down hill" if you only use enough

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

Is there any reason why you cannot do just as well as Mr. James M. Swint, of Chipley, Ga., who used 600 lbs. per acre of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers on his cotton crop? He gathered one and a half bales of cotton per acre, and there were more bolls yet to open.

This is the experience of hundreds of other cotton planters. Careful preparation of your soil, and liberal use of high grade Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers will surely "increase your yields per acre." Numerous unprejudiced authorities tell how it is done in the new Virginia-Carolina Farmers' Year Book or Almanac, a copy of which may be secured from your fertilizer dealer, or from our nearest sales-office.

An interesting picture of Mr. Swint's cotton will be found in this Year Book.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elder E. E. Lundy,

My Dear Brother: Your most welcome letter at hand, and should have been answered long ago. My acquaintance and association with you on your last trip, will be remembered by me as long as memory lasts.

My brother, I have so often tried to cipher, or figure out what life is. We are born into the world infants, and grow up to manhood and womanhood; some are spared to old age. If such should be my lot, what would I have then that would cause me to wish to spend more days, knowing that all of this world is vanity, and shall perish. Our families shall pass away, one by one. Must I experience broken ties and sorrow, and see my loved ones meet with bitter disappointments and reverses? I rejoice when they are happy, and my aim is to make their lives happy, and to shield and protect them from all dangerous paths. I read of th great wealth and possession of men of old, and where is it all? Then what are worldly possessions but to use for our travel in this earthly pilgrimage.

What goes to make up life? Is it not a little joy mixed with much sorrow, a getting together of some of this world's goods, and seeing them slip away from one? Is it getting all and giving more in return.

When a child my mind ran into the future, when I would get a pair of goats, then when I would get a pair of and conductor of a train, or anything else equally desirable, I could wear brass buttons, I suppose.

When I was married, I looked forward to honor, and having a house furnished, and children about me. Soon I went into business, and I looked forward to getting that in prosperous shape; always expecting to improve and have more tomorrow than today.

When I was married, I had serious concern as to my soul's eternal welfare, so joined the Presbyterian denomination, although my mother, father and relatives were Old School Baptists. I never hated the Old Baptists; I revered them, but felt they were wrong in their interpretation of the Bible, for they continually said salvation was not by works, and I could read works all the way through, but never did I once argue it, to my recollection.

My wife was a Presbyterian before our marriage, and I felt she was about right, so I offered myself to them, and they took me in. I was never satisfied with the sprinkling part, and told them so. I said being buried with Him by baptism into death, etc., did not mean sprinkling. They gave me the name of a book on the subject, and the gist of the matter it set forth was, that it was in the spirit, and not in the form and I finally got easy in my mind, that it might be so.

This was some eighteen years ago, and I started in on my good behavior, and works, to win favor of God, and Heaven as my final home.

I was zealous in attendance, and ready to do anything bidden me, expecting, of course, to rise from a plain member to some one of the more important offices, but I never got beyond a plain member, and soon grew cold in the profession I had made. My wife went on regularly, and I would stay home, or go off somewhere else. I have wondered if I saw myself getting worse, in the reformation of my wicked life, and became disgusted, or was it because they did not promote me.

However it did not turn out as I had anticipated, and I went from bad to worse, and still worse; in fact I felt no conscience at all, only seemed to think (when I was somewhat pricked in my head, as to what I was), that I might be favored as was the thief on the cross who said "when thou comest into thy kingdom," or "God, be merciful to me a sinner." and it might be I would fare as did the thief. I could not see any use in beginning to live a godly life now, when I was sure the day of my death was at some remote period, it seemed to me years and years hence, so why need bother about the kingdom of Heaven, until I got nearer to it? Thus would I reason my salvation with myself, for I felt it was between God and myself anyway, and whenever I would be minded about it, I would seek to evade it by thinking there was time enough to be bothered about being good. How could I give up all these sinful acts and pleasures, and associations I now enjoyed? If I were to forsake them how would my friends and the world in general look upon me?

Now it came that I felt a desire to pray to the God of Heaven and the heavens were shut up, and I found myself so vile and wicked and my whole life in direct opposition to what I felt that God had wished me to be. It seemed the height of folly to ask God to even remember me. I had serious doubts about the Bible being inspired. I know there were science and art which had been lost, and why could not great minds have written the Bible and so worded it, that we in this day were foolish enough to believe it.

I do not recollect ever having thought there was no God, but I had serious doubts if there was any hereafter.

In my first exercise when I joined the Presbyterians, I was fearful of hell, and desirous of going to Heaven and so set to work. In my last experience hell never loomed up before me, although I know I was in it then, but not aware of it at the time. After having a thorough light, in a sense, of the utter foolishness of praying to God, I did not utter a word in prayer (and if ever I prayed to God I did then).

I ran along in this shape for some time, and then the blessing and goodness of God were made known to my soul. I saw that my very existence depended on him; that my success in business, my wife, children, home, in everything, God had blessed me in giving them to me, while my life was sin and corruption. This is what broke me up; I wanted to thank him and could not for I felt that God had cast me off.

My troubles, one and all, were kept to myself, and I never for one moment thought of any church or any help, nor did I feel that God would even look with favor on me. Neither did I try to find consolation in the Bible; I read it sometimes, but never was anything applied to my soul.

I went by a sect called the Palatinah Reformed Church, some two weeks before I was received by the Old Baptists, and heard them singing, and felt if I only dared go in and help them sing, but I felt it would be hypocrisy, and went on. This is only one of the many incidents, I look over, and see, I trust, the hand of the Lord.

Well, the Old Baptists at Southampton meet Saturday afternoon before communion, and on second Saturday in June, 1905, father and mother (being members) went up, and father said we will go up to Elias Hogeland's Saturday night and Sunday, as it is communion at the meeting house, and you had better go along." I felt I would like to go to Elias' and see the folks, so I went up.

Two wagons met the train; one for the farm, and one to take people to meeting. I got in the one that went to the farm, and that proves to me the Lord had hid my path from me, for had I felt to go to hear preaching, I should have hesitated about going direct to the farm. As the team went to the farm, they passed by the meeting house. I saw two or three outside I knew, and I remarked to those with me, "I believe I will go in and hear the preaching."

Elder Durand was preaching when I went in. I sat and listened; heard the sermon with the hearing ear, and saw the church of God. After the sermon, one and another would talk as they felt, and each one seemed to tell something I knew about. My whole desire was to be with this people for I felt they were the people of God.

After all were through speaking of their experiences, Elder Durand asked me if I had anything to say. I said somewhat as my mind was led, and I remember saying that if ever I was saved, it would be by the mercy of God. And will say now, that I never get any beyond this, but that it is by the grace of God, I am what I am, and if I am one for whom Christ died, it is by the mercy of God, having chosen me in Christ Jesus, before the foundation of the world.

The church voted to receive me as a candidate for baptism, and time was set, 9:45 next morning (Sunday), I now wondered whether I had not told things a little different from what they were. Had I told the church the truth? and did they know me? If they did surely they would regret the step they had taken in receiving me. I felt anxious to be baptized, if I only was right in my words to the church, if not, I hoped something would prevent me entering the water, if I was not right in the step I was to take. I had serious prayers to God to lead me aright in this matter. My only thought was, "am I doing what is right and honest?" I had no felt sense of my sins being washed away, only it seemed that I was now to follow the dear Savior who was baptized in Jordan, and I seemed to be lifted away from the character I was and made to look forward to the baptism. My associates did not enter my mind, as to what they would think, nor did I think of the coming week. It was the baptism, and was I right to let them go? had I not better go over and rehearse something of what I was before they received me? for I felt if they knew me they surely could not receive me: at the same time I desired to be baptized. The time came, and I was anxious to go right down in the water. Some of them tried to fix up the clothes I had borrowed for the occasion, but I felt they were all right; it did not make any difference to me if they fit, or if anything looked right or not, my main thought was to be baptized. I waded down in the water, and as Elder Durand raised me out the water, my sins and past life remained buried, and if ever I felt a new creature, I did then: I had not a care or trouble about anything.

I thought now I will see how I hear preaching. Elder took for his text, "I was glad when they said, "Let us go into the house of the Lord." If I had not charged my mind with the words, I never would have remembered the text. I was at ease with everything and everybody, and happy.

What is life? It is a looking and hoping to possess something not yet attained to. As we go along in our earthly pilgrimage we are engrosed with whatever the heart desire is into. If the Lord guides us by his spirit to seek a city not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, our soul will look forward to that. In our earthly desires we will often meet disappointments, but whom the Lord has sealed with the earnest of his spirit shall come into the full possession of more than poor finite minds can comprehend. Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard the things that God has prepared for them that love him, but God hath revealed them to us by his spirit, yea, the deep things of God.

So, then my dear brother, life must be that which is your life, that which is your meat and drink. If your desire is to know the Lord and his righteousness, to inquire in his temple, God, by his word, has told us these things shall be granted. It may be in ways we do not understand at the time, but can see after the Lord has passed by. May you be blessed to proclaim the rich gospel tidings to God's dear children, and may the Lord give you an unction of the spirit, and finally when he has fulfilled his purpose in you, receive you to himself.

I am, I hope, Your brother,

J. M. FENTON.

5128 Master street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Heb. 3:4: "For every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God." My mind seems to be impressed with a few thoughts on this Scripture, and I trust the Lord is directing me in the attempt. There is a great deal of preaching in this day about building: how to build, and upon what to build.

This is a great subject, and it is only the feeling that the Lord has prompted me, and if of him, will accomplish whatsoever he wishes, that leads me to attempt to write upon it.

"Every house is builded of some man." Let us consider first a man building himself a home to dwell in here in the world, and notice how very careful, and particular he is in earthly things, and how careless and unconcerned he often is concerning spiritual things. When a man begins to build he selects the nicest and most convenient place he has, and then begins to gather together the best materials he is able to secure. He wants first a good solid foundation, so he digs down into the earth to what he considers a good solid place to start on. Then he wants good, sound brick, or rock, to build the pillars.

You offer him something rotten or worthless, and see if he will use it. Why, no, he would cast it out; it would be most unwise to use worthless material in the foundation. After having built the best pillars he could, offer him a rotten sill, and see what he will do. That, too, will be cast aside. You cannot make him believe that an unsound sill is as good as any. He would think the one a fool who suggested a rotten sill, he wants the best he can procure. One might offer him unsound framing, weather boarding or shingles, no, he does not want them and will not use them in his home. Just think now for a moment of these things and let us consider the last clause in the verse. "Every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God." Man in his building does not always consider the last clause; that God has created all things, all the material which he uses in his house, and the mind also which planned the building, but will say when he has finished the house "Look what a nice house I have built myself to live in," and often forgets it is God who is the builder of all things. "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God." I Cor. 3:5.

The sons and daughters of Zion realize the truth of this Scripture. They are looking for a city that has foundations, whose builder and maker is God, not for a building made by man.

We ought to be more careful about heavenly and divine things. I sometimes wonder at the difference man makes in carefulness, between earthly and heavenly things.

Many times he will receive the most worthless kind of doctrine offered by the devil through men who are his agents, who are of their father, the devil.

Then I think of the words of our Lord and Master, John 10; 27:28, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I will give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." This Scripture ought to be of great consolation to the children of God. How wonderful that we are the building of God, and that we are on the sure foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." ICor. 3:11.

Now Brethren, let us take heed to the foundation and to the doctrine. For if we are the children of God we are laborers together with him, we are his building, we are his husbandry. "Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." There is no corrupt or spurious doctrine that can stand this trial, or test.

Baptists are often spoken ill of, and persecuted, and looked upon with scorn, on account of the material they use, or in other words, the doctrine they believe and preach. But we should not be discouraged for our Lord has said, "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own." He was persecuted, and all who follow him will be. We should not think this strange, it ought to strengthen our hope, for it is plain we are not of the world, or they would not treat us so badly. We believe we are God's building and he worketh in us to will and to do of his good pleasure, therefore we work out what he has worked within us. We can't claim any merit of our own, for we can do nothing in the way of good works unless the Father has first worked in our hearts. Let us give the Lord all the praise and glory, for it belongs to him, for if we are saved it is by free grace. We did not buy or inherit it, but it is absolutely free. We believe we are his workmanship, that is, God's workmanship, chosen in Christ Jesus before the world was. If this be so, we are saved with an everlasting salvation, world without end: it began in the beginning and will never end. This is the kind of salvation the world has never received, neither can it be obtained by them, for it is not bought with money, or earned by labor. There is none for sale, or to lend: it is only for the chosen of God.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love."

A great many who are preachers say these things are too deep for men to think on, that they can't fathom them. But I thank God he did not write anything in his word that he does not reveal to his babes in Christ Jesus. Therefore if we are his, there is nothing in his word that is too deep for us to study, and that the Lord will not, at the proper time, reveal to us of his will. I do not think he wants his children to fail to look into all the scripture, even if the world does not think it can be understood. Let us take heed to the doctrine and to ourselves, that we be not led about by every kind of doctrine set up by men. Let us contend earnestly for the sure foundation, and the pure doctrine that is set forth in the word of God. How wonderful and safe this sure foundation is; there is no other like it; and we the building of God are set upon it, which cannot fail, or be removed, for it is God's building, and no one is able to destroy what he has built. The world and the devil have tried in vain to do so.

We believe God will do all his pleasure, not a part of it.

Let us always look to Jesus the author and finisher of our faith, regardless of what others says about us. We need not worry over false teachers nor what they say about us.

The Lord has said in Mat. 24:24: "For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets and shall show great signs and wonders; inasmuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."

Thanks be to God that is impossible. If we are his, we cannot be deceived by false teachers or led astray, for we are safe in the Rock of Ages. It looks a little strange that one who claims to be a child of God will follow after these false teachers and their unsound doctrine. There is something wrong there. Let every one examine himself closely to see if he be in the faith once delivered to the saints. "Awake, thou that sleepest," and cast away all unsound doctrine. Why labor for that which is not meat? Why follow false teachers and dumb idols?

Isaiah 51:1: "Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the Lord: look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged."

We sometimes feel bowed down and weak in spirit, but let us cast all our care on Jesus, for he careth for us. Can a mother forget her child? So our blessed Master cannot forget his own. He will never forsake us, but will ~~ce~~, and go with us through all the trials and dangers in this life, and uphold us in the end.

Though we sometimes feel alone, and almost forsaken, and groan in spirit, yet the Lord will be our help in time of need. I cannot doubt the word of God; he will do all he has promised. I sometimes doubt I am a child of God, but do not doubt his word. I am sure that if I am hewn from the Rock, I am safe, and will fit the place from which I was hewn.

Jesus redeemed his Bride from her fallen state with his own precious blood, and she is made perfect in him.

"Therefore the redeemed of the Lord shall return and come with singing unto Zion; and everlasting joy shall be upon their head: they shall obtain gladness and joy; and sorrow and mourning shall flee away." Is. 57:11.

Brethren and sisters, I feel that I have felt and now know something of the real joy spoken of in the above text, and have obtained much of that gladness. There was not much joy or gladness in my life before I left the people among whom I ought not to have been. Thanks be to God, for the relief I have experienced since I offered to the church, and was received into its membership.

I was made to rejoice as I never had before. The joy of the Lord filled my heart, and I felt glad I had returned to Zion, the true church of Jesus Christ. I can say of a truth, the trials and burdens in life, are much lighter now than they were when I was out of Zion.

While I rejoice in the Lord's deliverance, yet I feel to be the most unworthy one in the church, and I desire the brethren and sisters to remember me in their prayers. If I am a child of God at all, I am less than all. I have a great desire for the sincere milk of the word, and hope to grow thereby. I hope I love the church more than all earthly store, and enjoy being in the assembly of brethren and sisters, and wish that I could oftener meet with them, but we cannot always have things as we would wish.

"All things work together for good, to them who are the called according to his purpose." So let us not fret at our surroundings, nor taint in well-doing, but submit all into the hands of the Lord, who having loved his own will love them to the end, and has saved them with an everlasting salvation.

Oh! what a strong, safe, and sure foundation for the Christian's hope. The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the anchor of this hope. He has taken away our sins, and washed us in his own blood. He leadeth his own sheep, they will not follow a stranger; will not follow unsound doctrine for long. Let us be careful, "wise as serpents, harmless as doves."

"He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were, our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." This is the sure foundation, the Prince of Peace. Look unto him all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and he will give you rest. This is the foundation laid by God, and the whole structure is the work of his hands. We see the results of man's building now, if we observe closely. I am acquainted with some who have made what they call a profession of religion, from one, to twenty times. Oh! you see this man-made Christian cant stand the test: the foundation is rotten. But the building of God abides forever, and does not have to be repaired, for he is a wise master-builder, and it is fitly joined together.

"For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height nor death nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

I will close in hope that I am your brother in Christ.

Dear Brother Gold:

I send you a good letter from Sister Basham for publication. She has gone home to glory, and is now rejoicing in the presence of the dear Savior in whom she trusted, and whom she so much loved. I believe many will be glad to see this in the Landmark.

Your brother in hope,

SILAS H. DURAND.

Stewartsville, Va., May 29, 1908.

Elder S. H. Durand,

Dear Brother: Your kind letter of March 30th, though short, came as a cup of coldwater to my thirsty soul. I was in need and you ministered unto me. I had been and was mourning over and regretting my imperfections, my short comings, and so on until I was in need of a healing balm if I may so speak. I was and am thankful that you could say my letter of February 22nd was interesting and comforting. After having it mailed I so much feared it would be neither. I felt that if I could write to the praise, honor and glory and grace of God as others do and as I at times think I feel it in my heart I would love to write, but I feel to fall so far short and I fear that I do not at all times use language that makes myself fairly understood.

I received the book alright. I have not read all of it but have read some pieces several times and enjoyed them very much. One morning while reading "Unto what and to whom the saints are come," it occurred to me and I felt to say that I know now why I wanted this book.

It is because it is so comforting and I am so much enjoying it. Before I ordered it, I wanted it, but could not see why I should as I have so much good reading more than I can read. I think I have read nearly all I have one time, but cannot retain what I read, very much of it. I often enjoy the second or third time reading more than the first.

The Bible and the writings of the Primitive Baptists are about all I read or have much desire to read. If my eyes were stronger I would read those much more. I am thankful to read what I can and to feel the witness within from heartfelt experience, to as much of what you and the brethren and sisters write as I think I do. I cannot write or tell my feelings or exercises of my mind so well as you all can for me.

The Pig River Primitive Baptist Association was held with Lynville church, Franklin county, commenced Friday before the first Sunday in this month and continued three days. Belen Philpot and Altie started here from there Saturday evening to return next morning, but the elder (our pastor) was taken so sick that after crossing Staunton river they stopped over with Mr. Morgan and returned next morning. The elder sent me word that he hoped to visit us sometime this year. His general health is not at all good. I have seen no member from the association, so do not know where the next will be held, the Lord willing, I suppose thirty or forty miles from here, to commence Friday before the fourth Sunday next August and continue three days, but of course I do not know. My strength has improved some since my last to you-s xTetaoihr some since my last letter to you. My little family consists of a quite, industrious man who tends a little crop and attends to the out things. I pay him yearly wages. He is not a professor of religion. I also have a kind, quite, cheerful suitable woman for my housework. I also pay her wages. She is a Methodist. They both as yet seem content to continue with me, and thus far I have been blessed with necessary temporal supplies. I feel that I have great cause to be thankful and hope I am. I try to manage economically that I may continue to have sufficient for my needs my few remaining days, if any, if the Lord will. He only knows my future and in him I hope I trust.

You said you wished you could be at one of the social meetings at my house. So do I, the Lord willing. Now I do not know whether you have any expectation of ever visiting Virginia or not or even pass through Roanoke city or not, but if you should one or both you come that near me while I be here and I am favored to do so I will willingly and gladly have you met and conveyed to my comfortable residence and returned to Roanoke or Vinton if the Lord will. I would esteem it a great privilege and blessing conferred on old unworthy me, to have your company to hear you preach. I have long so esteemed the coming of the ministers of the gospel who felt so impressed and desire to visit us. I have no idea when there will be preaching here again, if I live I hope there will be by the coming fall or sooner, the Lord willing. I feel all unworthy and undeserving but enjoy being so assembled and listening at word preached.

Elder Plyburn, pastor of Lynville church living about 11 miles from here has visited us yearly for several years, sometimes brings his wife, and generally preaches while here.

I hope you both had the pleasure of your anticipated visit and were blessed on your tour. Please remember me in love to your family. I would humbly ask you to pardon all amiss in this and my former letters and if you can feel to do so pray for old unworthy me who feels to be no better by age but often find myself groaning within myself waiting for the adoption, to wit: the redemption of the body.

Your weak little sister in hope,

Snow Camp, N. C., Dec. 8, 1907.

P. D. Gold,

Dear sir: I will send you the pay for my paper you have waited with me for which I am indeed very thankful as I can't well pay at the right time, but still I love to read it. The Landmark is about all of the old Baptist doctrine I can get now, but hope the time will come when I can meet them oftener if I have long to live. It seems to me that I enjoy going to their meetings so much. I wonder if those that go when they get ready enjoy the privilege as I do. I went to Big Meadows in July and went to Mrs. Johnson's and returned Saturday night, and oh, how nice and kind they were to me, and the preacher came and stayed there too. I was so glad to be there with them.

They had no idea how glad I felt. Wiley Jones was the preacher's name. Oh he does seem so humble and good. I wonder if the time ever will be that I will have another such privilege. I do hope so. I reckon the people got wearied hearing me tell about it. I felt so much at home at Mrs. Johnson's. Everything looked clean and so nice. I would visit her often if I could. I will close this scribble, for you don't care anything about so much of my talk of going to meeting. You may think I might go oftener but I can't go often as I have no way of my own. I do hope the Lord will spare you to live and send your good paper a long time yet. You are good to poor people to send your paper and they pay when they can.

Pray for me, your friend.

B. T. WILLIARD.

Mr. H. J. Worsley,

My dear brother and father in Israel: It was a very glad surprise the other day when my mail was brought in, and a dear, good comforting letter from you was handed me. I felt at once I was going to receive a feast from its contents, and I did. Yet there was sorrow mixed with it when I learned of your afflictions, but your letter was so rich and consoling I could not help but rejoice.

It did me good to know that such a good old father in Israel and one so Christ-like as you, should feel as you do about me, but I fear you are badly deceived in me. I was sick and felt very low down, but your letter lifted me up more than I can tell.

I often think of you and dear sister Worsley in your afflictions, and when I think of them, call to mind my own. I know I have passed through many trials, losses, crosses, and it seems great affliction but when I think of the sufferings of our blessed Savior, then I know that mine are light, compared to his. You say notwithstanding my affliction, I am always at my post of duty. My dear brother, I would be glad to do my duty if I could know what it is but I feel far from it. I feel a sweet rest now I hope I have done my duty. Before I was baptised, I felt it my duty to go before the church and relate the dealings of the Lord with me, and was impressed to follow him in baptism, and I found no rest until I discharged my duty and followed in the liquid grave. I will never forget the time when Elder Pitt raised me out of the water. It seemed I went away; the last thing I remembered was laying my head on his breast. I wanted to say something, and felt I did, tho' didn't know what, at the time, for I lost sight of everything in this world. Elder Pitt told me I said, "You don't know how I love you all." I had no thought of my words and it surprised me when he told me what I said. As I walked out of the water, I thought I never saw the sun shine brighter and everything seemed to be praising the Lord. I felt as if I had been asleep a long time and had just awaked. "How happy are they who their Savior obey." I felt I wanted to sing it aloud. How good one feels in obedience, but how guilty when one dishobeys. I would, could always live with a clear conscience toward the Lord and brethren, but I can't, for I so often do and say that I ought not. Then there is a guilty conscience when I think of the Lord's goodness to me, and how he has blessed me all my life, and know how disobedient and unfaithful I am. It often causes me to drop my head and groan within. He is a merciful God or he would long ago banished me from his presence. His loving kindness is caused by nothing good I have ever done; it is through and by his own sweet mercy I have been so wonderfully blessed all my life. I sometimes wonder what the world must think of me, when I say I am blessed, for they know I have mourned the loss of most all my nearest and dearest kindred and friends, but my brother, that has been one of the greatest blessings. It has drawn me nearer to him. He enabled me to say in it all, "Bless his holy name." I trust the good Lord will be with you and your dear companion in your afflictions, and bless you with loving smiles.

Your little sister, I hope.

MATTIE LUPER

Dear Brother Gold:

In looking in one of my books I found a letter which was written to me by the mother of the Elders, Rowe. I believe it will be very interesting to the household of faith, and especially to those whose privilege it was to hear these brethren preach and therefore I send you a copy for publication in Zion's Landmark. The original I will send to Elder J. T. Rowe, believing that it will be of comfort to him to have his mother's experience in her own handwriting. Sister Rowe has long since gone home but she being dead speaketh yet.

Yours in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Durham Creek, Beaufort Co, N. C.,

October 28, 1876.

My very dear Brother Hardy:

In reading your letter my heart was drawn in love to you and a merciful God towards poor rebellious man.

If you had been left to your own free will, where would you have been today? You would have been in the ball room and at the card table, even as others; but thank the Lord his people shall be willing in the day of his power. Oh, that we could live nearer up to our duty to him who is our life.

If I know my own heart I do desire to live nearer to my dear Lord and Master. Dear brother remember me in your prayers.

As I read your experience it run on my mind that I wanted to tell you a few of my feelings.

I was born January the 29th, 1829, I was raised by Baptist parents. At a very early age I would have very serious thoughts about dying and the day of judgment. I would be troubled for a short time but it would soon wear off until I was about seventeen years old. I was lying on the bed and and I suppose I was asleep. I thought that Brother James Griffin told me to turn to the 5th chapter and 32nd verse of Luke and see what I would find for I had the Bible in my hand but had not read a word. I got up and told mother what I had dreamed. She told me to look and I did. I found these words: "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." Then these words were on my mind nearly all the time. Soon I went to Blount's Creek to hear Brother Griffin preach and he took these same words for a text, and, as I thought, preached his sermon upon me. I thought mother had told him some of my feelings. From that time I was in great trouble at times, wishing to be alone, at other times in the company of young people trying to cast it off. I would go to the Methodist meetings and get down at my seat to be prayed for, for I really felt the need of prayer but learned that I could do nothing. They told me to come to the altar, come close to God and I went to the altar but there was no food there for my poor hungry soul for as a man met me and I fell on my knees I felt that I was worshiping man more than God. I would have given, oh, so much that I had been away from there. They prayed and told me to pray and I did pray the best I could to the Lord to forgive me for being there and I would go no more to worship man. I went on in this way until after I was married and left my mother. I was going to see her and my trouble was so great that I thought when I went I could not shake hands with them for I was not worthy. Oh how unworthy I felt! But a few nights before I was to go I could not sleep. I would get up and try to pray. You can better judge my feelings than I can tell. I felt as if I was shut up in a very dark place when all at once there appeared a light in one place when these words came so forcibly to my mind that it seemed as if I thought I heard it, "Behold the Savior cometh." My troubles were gone and I rejoiced for a while but soon began to doubt and say to myself, I heard a voice say, thy sins are all forgiven. I tried but in vain to get my burden back as it had been. That was in the summer of 1849 and I went on doubting and hoping until December when one day I was alone walking in the field when all of my hope was taken away from me and I felt lost both soul and body. Oh, that awful condition! Then these words sounded so forcible that I looked around me to see if some one was not near, "Put your trust in the Lord and all shall be well." Then oh, my soul, I felt like I was walking above the ground for a while. I felt then and hope I have ever since that I could trust him.

Brother, these words have ever been dear to me in all of my troubles for I look back to that time and find comfort. Then I wanted to be with the people I loved so well. Therefore in March 1850 I went to the church and was received but was not baptised until May. I was baptised by Elder James Griffin and I am never tired of them I love to be with. If I knew I should never hear another sermon preached I would want to go to the church and meet the brethren and sisters around the altar, but I often fear I am not as thankful as I should be for the mercies the Lord has bestowed on me and my family. I have prayed for my children and have a hope that my prayers were answered. Oh that I could love him more and serve him better the remainder of my days for his mercy endureth forever.

I have been blessed with the company of the Primitive Baptists and if there is anything on earth I do enjoy it is their company and to hear them preach and talk. I hope I shall always be blessed with their company while I stay on this earth and when I leave this earth I hope I shall meet them in heaven where our joy may be full and never end. My brother, when we meet and feel the love of God do you not look forward to the time when we shall meet to part no more? I hope I do for when we have a meeting and enjoy each others love and feel that the love of God is, with us we are grieved to part but our parting is needful and we must obey.

I have written this because I could not get it off my mind but that I must write something little as it is. But God has chosen the weak things to confound the strong and I hope I have written it through love.

Brother Lem, I hope you will come to see us as often as you can. Go forth in discharge of your duty ever looking unto Jesus as the author and finisher of our faith and may the Lord ever be with you for good of soul and body is the prayer of your poor unworthy sister if one at all. Pray for me and mine. Write to me when you can. It is soul cheering to read your letters. Oh, may we oft together meet, And stoop to wash the pilgrim's feet, Good bye, for this time.

ACCORDING TO YOUR FAITH.

Men's conduct shows what kind of a God they worship. For the principle in a man's heart is shown by the object of his worship.

Suppose a man is an idolater and love of money is the controlin, object of his life. Then the spirit that controls him will defile his life, and entering into his conduct will vitiate that. If one loves wickedness he cannot choose to worship the holy and eternal God who says be yet holy, for I am holy. The faith one has proclaims the character of the God he believes in.

If one loves the eternal and only true God so that he adores that foreknowledge that declares the end from the beginning, and rejoices in that gracious power that saves sinners and upholds all things by the word of that power, then the holy fear of God will be in that man causing him to depart from iniquity and love truth. If one loves wickedness he will hold a falsehood, and show there is sin in his god. If one loves self and thentaof YflAof If one loves then he will hold to works of the flesh, and will depend on what he can do and does perform, thus exalting self, and there will be no true faith in the Lord, but it will all be in himself and according to his own nature and character.

He that lives by the faith of Jesus is saved by the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus which is the power of God, and the wisdom of God unto salvation. It is the Lord Jesus working in the man both to will and to do of his own good pleasure, and that is always a holy work. Say ye to the righteous it shall go well with him. Why? Because the Lord is his righteousness.

It is by the revelation of the spirit of God that this wonderful knowledge is produced in a man. If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature: old things are passed away and behold all things are become new, and all things are of God. Being renewed in the spirit of our mind we have this understanding. Being born of incorruptible seed by the word of God that liveth and abideth forever we receive this knowledge.

As many as received him to them gave he the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, which were born not of blood nor of the will of man, nor of the flesh, but born of God, and this spiritual birth precedes receiving Christ.

P. D. G. . .

The expenses of publishing the Landmark have not been decreased. We tried publishing it at one dollar a year, and found we could not do so. I do not think our friends would want me to publish it at a price ruinous to me. He that will not work shall not eat. It is by the sweat of ones face that he eats bread, and the laborer is worthy of his reward. Make a case of it in which you are a loser all the time and would you like it?

One dollar and a half is as low as we can publish the Landmark and live. If brethren or friends should raise me twenty or fifty in clubs at one dollar it would be at a loss to me, for it costs more than one dollar to publish the Landmark.

The government requires publishers to pay extra postage on papers that are in arrears. Now if each subscriber to the Landmark will renew and keep his paper paid in advance that will help me and be better all around. Suppose a subscriber gets behind even a month then according to the recent rule of the government I must pay additional postage for him.

Look at the date and see if you have paid ahead of the present date. If you have not, please forward me enough money to keep the paper ahead and this will help me and not wrong you.

P. D. G.

Joseph said, I die, but God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones.

Though Joseph knew he must die and that soon, yet that did not discourage them. We should not despair of God, nor comfort ourself in being disheartened on account of the loss of friends.

We should rise up and worship God who gives life and takes, and in whose hand are all the issues from death, and who alone causes us to triumph. The cause is his, and we are his, and he that gives a Joseph, gives a Moses, a Joshua, a Gideon, a Sampson, a David and all other leaders and delivers and greatest of all gives us his well beloved son. When we have long enjoyed the labors of one that has been faithful and useful we are apt to think we cannot get along without him, and who can take his place, etc., but each one has his own place to fill, and will fill it. For no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live or die we are the Lord's. The work or cause is his, the kingdom is his, and so are his people.

Joseph had been so useful to Israel. His father was gone. They were in a land of strangers, and soon Joseph would be removed, but God he said would surely visit them. He would not forget them, and he is better than all. If he takes away all creature help but gives us himself then we have all. For he is all and in all his people.

Joseph further said, ye shall carry up my bones. Not a bone of Joseph should be left in Egypt—not a hoof even if one of the cattle should be left behind. If God care for oxen will he not deliver Israel? There shall not be the loss of a single one—not of the least member of the body of Jesus. So closely and vitally are God's people joined together that not one shall be left behind.

The loins of our mind should be girded to labor, to run, to endure, to hope, to wait with confidence, for he that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved. Why should we be cast down, or discouraged? Will not God do all his pleasure, and would anything else be right? What a field of rich harvest is there in the confidence of the Lord. This is a field which the Lord has blest, and there is always good ripe fruit in this field.

However, we must be tried for many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord will deliver him out of them all, and he that endures unto the end the same shall be saved.

P. D. G.

My Dear Brother—Yes, sir; I do think I love you as I do myself; that is in Jesus. David and Jonathan represent God and the Son, and David loved the descendants of Saul for Jonathan's sake, and God loves sinners for Jesus' sake. This is indeed a great mystery, "deeper than the depths beneath; free and faithful, strong as death," so says the poet, and so say we. The depth of sin is deep, but the depth of grace is so much deeper: for where sin abounded grace did much more abound. Very truly in love,

W. A. SIMPKINS.

Yes, brother, the figures of the Old Testament are rich as shadows that show the beauty of the sun. We have seen and admired the golden reflection of the setting sun as the brightness of its colors are imprinted on clouds that are so full of glorious beauty as they reflect the brightness of the sun high above us. They are not the substance but showy and emblematic of the unfolding splendors of the sun. The clouds on which these beauties are painted are above us. Clouds that drop down their fatness in showers that water the earth, and cause it to bring forth and yield its strength in plenteous harvests of food for man and beast. When the rainbow was circling the heavens and assuring Noah and all men through him, in the covenant that God made with all flesh, that he would never again destroy the earth with a flood of water, there was in this bow of promise the shining of the covenant of grace on the clouds and in the water. Were they such clouds and such water as had just before destroyed the earth? The elements of death when by the will of God are graced by the shining light and glory of the Son of God are made so beautiful that nothing on earth can be likened to them.

When we are enabled to suck honey from the rock, and find the desert a blooming and fruitful garden or a field which the Lord has blest, then we know this is the glorious power of God. When in the places that dragons lay reeds and rushes spring up, when to those that in the region and shadow of death a great light is springing up, then we know this is the Lord's work and it is marvelous in our eyes.

When David touches the harp and his tuned instrument of ten strings praises redeeming grace the new song is sung in our hearts, and as Israel on the shore of the Red Sea, after their marvelous deliverance from Pharaoh, sung a glorious song right to the Lord, and there was not a discord or jar of man's works in it, so when our spiritual Samson having slain the lion brings honey out of his carcass for his people, so when the wonderful interpreter brings things new and old out of this glorious hid treasure, and we see the beams of grace shining in the darkness and all is light in the Lord we see and feel that David remembers Jonathan, and for his sake finds poor, lame Mephibosheth and commands him to eat bread all the days of his life at the King's table.

Sin and death are the most distressing things to a child of God. When dreadful guilt is done away the sweetest feeling of praise stirs the soul with a new song of joy to the Lord. Where sin abounded grace did so much more abound.

The law is the ministration of death, and the strength of sin is the law. How it abounds and reaches to every thought of the heart, every faculty of the soul, deadening every part and defiling and poisoning every thought and every act. How deep, high and broad and complete this reign of sin unto death, but where sin abounded grace did much more abound, quickening the dead, raising them up to and in eternal life, and the sinner is taken out of the horrible pit and the miry clay, and his feet are placed on the rock, and a new song is put in his mouth even praise to our God. Then the man is a new creature—old things are passed away and behold all things are become new, and all things are of God. This is an everlasting wonder. It never can fade away. This sun shall never withdraw his light, nor his glory ever become dim, for grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus. Christ our Lord.

All these blessings come to us for and through Jesus. Jonathan loved David as he loved his own soul, but David out loved Jonathan, and David for Jonathan's sake showed kindness to the house of Saul who sought to destroy David. Was ever the love of woman as great as this?

When preachers like our dear brother Simpkins are given the harp of God on which they play and give forth a goodly sound in preaching it wonderfully quiets the restless, envious Saul even. P. D. G.

Exodus 19:5-6: "Now therefore if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and the holy nation."

All the earth is the Lord's, and of one blood he has made all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth which face is turned toward the sin in due season.

But Israel is his peculiar treasurer, a kingdom of priests unto the Lord, specially supported by the Lord, and devoted to his service continually. This peculiar treasure to the Lord is showing forth his praise in a well ordered walk and a goodly conversation. Priests minister in holy things and stand between the people and the Lord, and are ordained of the Lord to approach him in behalf of the people and make offerings to the Lord.

There was one condition that Israel was to perform and that was to obey the voice of the Lord indeed. But this he failed to. While it is a reasonable service to glorify God in our body and spirit which are his, yet we always fail in nature to do this because our carnal mind is enmity against God, and not subject to his law neither indeed can be. We being of the earth earthly seek and mind the things of earth, and forget our Maker.

But is God glorified? Has he done all his pleasure? Yes. He has done all his pleasure, but sinful men do not do all his pleasure. There is no unrighteousness with God, and no failure in him.

How has he done all his pleasure? He has ordained one from among the people whom he has made strong for himself—the Lord Jesus his only begotten son who is the apostle and High Priest of our profession. He is the Priest of his Father's throne, and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.

He appears at the end of the legal or Jewish world to fulfill all the law that came by Moses, and satisfy that law in every jot and tittle, so that by the faith of Jesus we feel assured that there is now no condemnation to them who walk in the faith of Jesus.

He is our glorious Priest having entered into heaven itself for us, where he ever liveth to make intercession for us, and because he lives we live also. In this glorious standing of Jesus we are accepted in the beloved, and are complete in him.

Jesus our High Priest has borne our judgment in his own heart, and God hath laid on our surety the guilt of us all, and hence because he lives we also live by the faith of him. This is because Jesus is a perfect and an everlasting righteousness. Of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who is made of God unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption, so that all our glorying is in the Lord.

When the Holy Ghost brings the things of Jesus to us we find grace whereby we have access to the Father and thus live by faith and walk by the faith of Jesus. In this faith of Jesus and by it we establish the law and are manifested as the peculiar nation, and a holy people that show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of the darkness into the marvelous light of the Lord. Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith we have hope toward God. By the faith of Jesus we stand complete in the Lord and are one with him who hath loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God.

How did we show forth our praise unto God? We praise him by the fruit of the lip and the obedience of the life. We live unto him and by the faith of him. He is the life and joy, the strength and the hope of his people. We belong to him. He has bought, hath redeemed us. We should glorify him in our body and spirit which are his.

God is the portion of his people. When we are right before him he is our life, our joy, our peace, and our all. When our heart is fixed we feel there is none in heaven we desire beside him. All this comes to us through Jesus the author and the finisher of our faith, who is glorious in holiness, the chief among ten thousand, and the one altogether glorious. P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Friend. If not asking too much of you will you please give your views on the following scripture: James 5:14, Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church and let them pray over him anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, etc., also James 2nd chapter on faith and works.

I think I want to know the truth and to believe it, if I only could be worthy to be one of the chosen, but I feel unworthy and a great sinner.

With kindest regards I am yours truly,

W. E. BOROUGHS.

Remarks.

Both the subjects presented by our friend illustrate that faith which is not dead being alone, but that faith of Jesus that works by love, and overcomes the world. Faith that does not work however much it may boast, is vain and worthless. The only way that faith can prove that it is the true faith of Jesus is to do the things that overcome the world. When Abraham offered Isaac he had the witness that his faith was not dead or alone. By what Abraham did it was shown that his faith was the true faith. When Rahab the harlot received and hid the spies, and sent them out another way, she did that work that justified her, or proved that her faith was genuine.

If one is a believer in Jesus, and has faith to believe in the healing power of the Lord, so that his faith causes him to call for the elders, and they come and pray for him, and anoint him with oil, the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him.

There is often a claiming faith, one saying, I have faith, yet that faith does not cause the one claiming it to obey the Lord. Now what is that faith worth? If it is the true faith it will cause the man having it to serve the Lord—call on him in truth.

When the spies came to Jericho Rahab believed they were God's people, and she loved them, and hid them because her faith led her to do this, or she hid them by faith, and sent them out another way. Her works or what she did justified her. Abraham loved the Lord so much that he withheld not Isaac whom he loved, but offered him by faith, and proved that his faith was genuine. By what faith leads one to do is its character shown. It is not the talker only but the doer that is justified. It is important to talk right, but if a man's walk does not support his talk then his talk is wrong, or not a reality.

James is showing the difference between a true faith and a pretended, vain faith. If one is afflicted and has faith in God he will pray to him, and his prayer will not be in vain. True faith proves what is true and what is not true.

Do we follow Jesus because we are worthy? No. Who requires us to feel that we are worthy? No one that feels that he is worthy calls on the Lord. The centurion who had more faith than any other said he was not worthy to come to Christ, nor for Christ to enter under his roof. Yet he was the man whose faith moved him to go to Jesus and obtain the victory.

If you tarry till you are better you will never come at all. The sinner comes to Jesus. Come unto me, said Jesus, all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest.

Why is it that so many that love the Primitive Baptists fail to follow Jesus in baptism? Were there not ten cleansed? where are the nine? Where the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth? P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

Hillsboro, Va., Feb. 10th, 1908.

My loving wife, Mary Ellen died Feb. 6th inst. She has been a great sufferer for the last eighteen months. I took her to Richmond, Virginia, last winter to the best surgeon, S. B. Johnson, and he performed a serious operation on her, but could not take away the tumor. I went with her and stayed with her and brought her back home, she suffered all the time. I have done all I could have done for her, for she has walked with me for 34 years, through all the trials and troubles for all this time, and I found no fault in her at all. I fully believe that God gave to me my good loving and kind wife, for she was faithful in all things. Ruling well her house, bade me go on in the high calling of God, which is in Christ Jesus. Kept watch for me many hours at night; met me lovingly at the door. Oh! what a precious gift from God she was to me. She was the mother of my children, fourteen in all: eight sons and three daughters are living, all motherless now. Can any thing be more sad? But this is not the things to talk about, here it is, after God gave me this dear wife, he blessed her with a good and precious hope and forthwith, she went to the church and my beloved father, Elder Isaac Webb, baptised her the fourth Sunday in September, 1875, and she kept good her profession, was a great lover of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Was wonderfully blessed with the presence of God during her afflictions. Her deceased father and son Jonas came to her and she talked with them, and we heard her part of the conversation, she said, "O, papa, your lost eye is restored, you have eyes now. Oh, Jonas, your lovely sweet smiles, and your spotless, white robes, and the halo of light encircling you around 's none other than God himself." She was then the happiest person I ever saw the face of. She retained her mental power to the very last. Near the last said, "turn me" I said to her, which way, she said "turn me over to the Lord, please hand me over to the Lord." She then said, "raise me up," we took hold to raise her up in the bed, and she said, "let me be, I was talking to Jesus then," then said to us, "raise me up straight up in the bed for I am dying." We raised her. She said, "Now lay me down and let me die." She then asked God to bless all her dear people and appeared limber and helpless. All at once she raised both hands as high as she could, and said, "Come Lord Jesus take me, raise me up, dear Jesus, take me sweet Jesus in thy loving arms." Then as though she had embraced the Lord (and I fully believe had) she folded her arms saying, "My loving sweet Jesus, and died, Surely the Lord gave me this good wife, and the Lord hath taken her away and blessed be the name of the Lord.

VESTER JANE BALLARD.

On January 6th just at sunrise the angel of death entered the home of Mr. M. W. Ballard and hovered over his beloved wife, Vesta. So softly and silently did death steal her soul away that her husband in the room writing a letter knew not when.

She was up that morning as usual, but soon began coughing and complained of feeling so very bad to her husband; he asked her to lie down and perhaps she would feel better, which she did. She talked to him a while after lying down. Soon she seemed to be asleep and he was cautious to not arouse her. After finishing his letter he went out to get it mailed; when he came back in the room and asked her what she would have for breakfast, and as she did not answer him he went to her and found her dead. Just imagine the shock, only a few minutes since she was talking to him. Now still and lifeless, though her pulse still beat but soon the lifeless form only was left. How sadly we miss her. Her place can never be filled, never to the man who claimed her as his wife.

How true she was to him! so devoted and thoughtful of him, and during her sickness in the summer her health has not been at all good. Then her husband was so thoughtful of her every wish and tried to make her days happy and pleasant in all he knew to do. There in the corner sits her empty chair, no more when you enter her room do you see the sweet face to greet you with a smile of welcome words as she always did, always cheerful and could see the bright side in life. No one looked upon that cold beautiful form wrapped in death's embrace but cried: "How we will miss her." She was a friend to all and all who knew her loved her. The needy never went to her in vain. She was always willing and ready to help poor, deserving creature; of her bounty she wasted nothing, but helped where it was needed.

When I see her husband looking so lonely in this cold world—no wife, no child to love or care for him or for him to care for it makes my heart ache in sympathy for him. How sadly he misses her day by day, as time grows on he will miss her more and more, he can't believe her gone forever, never to return. It will be a wound that will never heal, let life be what it may for him. Dear aunt, how sadly I do miss you, how hard you tried to be a mother to us when our precious mother died; yes, how hard you tried to be a mother to us. Now you, too, are gone. How my heart aches with grief. I know it was a glad greeting when you and she met around God's white throne.

Mrs. Vesta Jane Ballard was the daughter of James Albert and Permelia White, and was born November 28, 1847 and lived in Halifax county near Hobgood until her marriage to Mr. M. P. Ballard, December 24, 1872. Since then she has lived in Martin Co. After her death she was carried to her old home and buried in the family burying ground.

I write this so that her many friends and relatives who read your Landmark and feel anxious to know more about her death may read and know.

A NIECE.

MACCILLA EVERETT.

Died at her home near Williamson, N. C., Oct. 18, 1907, Sister Macilla Everett, in her 78th year. She was the daughter of William and Elizabeth Best of Edgecombe county and was born May 21st 1829. She was first married to Reuben Purvis of Martin county in February 1848. By him she had nine children only three of them survive her. He was killed in 1864 in the late war and she was left with the care of them all and had to struggle hard to raise them, but the Lord blessed her and she succeeded well through perseverance to make a good living. She was united in marriage to Elisha Everett in 1882 and by him she had no children and with whom she lived an affectionate and devoted wife until his death which occurred some years ago. Since that time she spent the most of her time at his home, sometimes visiting her children. She united with the church at Spring Green at their June meeting in the year 1878 and was baptised by Elder C. B. Hassel. She was a devoted and orderly member and showed her love for her church by punctually filling her seat when able to do so. She possessed many virtues which drew to her friends of all classes. Prominent among them was her kind motherly and friendly spirit which she manifested toward all.

I never knew a more industrious and energetic woman and as said by Solomon she looked well to her own household and I remarked at her burial that it might truly be said of her, "she hath done what she could." She was willing to die and perfectly resigned and happy and has gone to her long wished rest with her Savior. Her death was mourned deeply by those at her home and she leaves also three lovely and sorrowing sisters who miss her and are the only ones left of a large family. She also leaves as stated three children and twenty-eight grand-children. She has also left behind her a large circle of brethren, sisters and friends who though they sorrow for her would not wish her back in this world of sin and sorrow for we are sure our loss is her eternal gain. May the God of all grace comfort all who mourn for her and teach us to fill up the measure of our days as she did.

Affectionately,

MRS. SALLIE C ALLSBROOK.

It becomes my sad duty to write a few lines in memory of our precious sister and my most intimate friend, Sallie C. Allsbrook who departed this life September 20th, 1907. She was the daughter of James and Mamie Cobb, and was born in Edgecombe county, N. C., July 31st, 1877. She joined the Primitive Baptist church at La Grange, N. C., Saturday before the first Sunday in November, 1898, and was baptised the next day by Elder John Gardner.

On the 6th of September, 1906 she was married to Mr. J. R. Allsbrook of Sanford, S. C., where she died just one year and 11 days from the day she was married. She seemed to have persevered that she would not live long and when I was visiting her last winter, she would often speak of dying, and then I left her, she said, she had no idea that we would ever see each other again, and we never did. Her health was so wretched, and she suffered so much that she could not enjoy the comforts of life which surrounded her and she had as much to live for as anyone could desire. With a nice, comfortable home and a good kind husband who I believe provided every thing necessary for her comfort and pleasure. Yet with all these earthly blessings her afflictions were so severe life wasn't any pleasure and about two months before she died she wrote me she believed she had Bright's disease or diabetes and never would be any better off and asked me not to pray for her to get up again but that she might be willing and ready to go when the summons came, for as she was, life had no charms for her, nor death any terror, and she was anxious to cross the river and go home to her Savior where she felt that her parents were waiting for her and I believe she is there. She was a great sufferer up until about two hours before she died, when it seemed that all pain left her, and she leaned her head on Jesus' breast and breathed her life out sweetly there.

I believe she fell asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep, bore them patiently and was blessed with a sweet submissive spirit, and her death (like her life, was calm, peaceful and serene. Sister Sallie was the best girl I ever knew and was one of the few possessed with that meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of the Lord of great price. None knew her but to love her, none named her but to praise, for she was one that deserved praise.

She was conscious until the last, and the evening before she died bade her husband good-bye, saying, she only hated to leave him, and told him what to do with her things, and to tell her brother to be a good boy, and give him her Bible. She leaves a husband and two brothers to mourn her departure, but I feel that, with the exception of her husband (who of course realizes more than any other can, her great worth, and his great loss,) I miss her and mourn for her more than any one else, for she and respondents for the last nine years, and I miss her good letters beyond expression. I were very dear friends, and have been cor- Yet I feel that it is wrong for us to grieve for her, when we believe that our loss is her eternal gain, and she is now free from pain, and has at last reached her long sought home. Yes, I firmly believe she is at rest, for when thinking of her one day not long after she died, these words came to me, she is now reaping the fulness of which you only have a foretaste, and that gave me evidence that she was better off.

She was buried in the cemetery at Conway, S. C., there to await the great day of the second coming of our Lord, when I hope to meet her on that happy shore. At the request of her husband and impression I had on the day she died, if not received, I have written these lines but feel that Sister Sallie was too near and dear to me for such a task, and I can't do by it as I would like, but have written as it came in my mind, and hope I have said nothing amiss.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT TRULL.

Little son of Lattus C. and Mattie E. Trull was born April 29, 1904, and died December 1st, 1907; 3 years, 7 months and 2 days was his short stay on earth. He was taken very sick about November 21st, and though we did all in our power to keep him with us, his bright eyes were soon closed in death. Oh! how sad indeed to give him up, and hear his sweet little voice no more in our home that he once helped to make so happy and bright. We know that we can see our dear little darling no more on earth, but hope by the grace of God, to meet him in the New Jerusalem. May the God of all grace comfort us who are so bereft by his departure. May we be able to see that it is the work of an allwise Providence who can do no wrong, and be made to feel that it is for the best that he is taken from the evils of this world.

Thou art gone our precious darling,

Never more canst thou return;

Thou shalt sleep a peaceful slumber,

Till the resurrection morn.

Then beyond this vale of sorrow,

We'll awake from every care;

In a city bright, eternal,

And its joys we'll ever share.

Thou art gone, our precious darling,

Never more we'll see thy face!

Till we meet thee o'er the river,

In that happy dwelling place.

There we'll meet you, precious darling,

There we'll clasp hands once more;

When we've met, to part, no never,
On that happy, peaceful shore.

There we'll spend the countless ages,
Ever by our Savior's side.

There our tears will all be dried.

There we'll never know a sorrow,

Written by his father.

M. A. V. HUDSON.

Elder P. D. Gold

By request I will try to write an obituary of sister M. A. V. Hudson.

She was born Nov. 1st, 1829, and died Jan. 2nd, 1908, making her stay on earth 78 years, 2 months, and 1 day. She was the oldest child of Elder Robert Shreses. She professed a hope in Christ about 1859, and joined the Primitive Baptist church at Wolf Island, and was baptised by her father and remained a true and lovely member until her death.

She was married to A. J. Hudson in 1857 and from this union nine children were born five sons and four daughters. Her husband one son and one daughter preceded her to the grave. She loved her husband and honored him. She loved her children and tried to raise them to be virtuous, honest, and industrious, teaching them to do as they would be done by, and it seems the Lord blessed her with good children. In her old age she was very much afflicted and was confined at home. She could not go to her meetings, which she so much loved to do when she was able, but she would send letters to the church stating the cause and how she would love to be with them, and her love for the church, and the members would shed tears to hear her sweet letters of love read.

Sister Hudson was loved by her family and her neighbors and her church, never speaking a harmful word of any one, was quiet and peaceful. She was fully established in salvation by grace and grace alone. Her home was a home for preachers and she loved to see them come and hear them talk of the power of the Lord and of his goodness. She would want them to make prayer while they were there. Her mind seemed to be mostly on the goodness and mercy of the Lord, and the night just before she passed away, she asked those about her to sing the hymn "Why do we mourn departing friends, etc.," She seemed to be willing to die. She said near the last, "when sin is finished it brings forth death," and died, and we believe she has gone to rest.

THOMAS J. OWEN.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Brother Thomas J. Owen was born April 21, 1876, and died August 10, 1907, leaving a wife, three children, mother, four brothers, two sisters and a host of friends to mourn, and to await the summons from on high, when we too must follow.

Brother was only sick fifteen days and while on his death bed he had Elder Broadaway called in and told a beautiful experience of the Lord's dealings with him, leaving a sweet assurance that he has entered that rest that remaineth for the children of God. A few days before he died, he told his dear wife that he was going home; that he would love to take her and little babe he would love to take her and the little babes until they would follow. He was kind; no one could find fault with his life, so far as the natural eye could discern. To know him was to love him.

How feeble are words to carry consolation to hearts bereaved of a loving husband and father.

A tender clinging vine, interwoven in sweet memories from the hour the angel first gave him to the home: a gentle spirit of light that flitted in and out like a gleam of sunshine. No one can fill his place in the vacant chair; no one will take his place in our hearts. And we would not have the void filled, even if we could. It will be a sacred thought in years to come, to us all, that he shed radiance in the home as long as he did. It will be a blessed recollection that he grew up to love and be loved by those who will ever cherish his memory so tenderly. It is in such a home as this that hope spreads his pinions, and we rest our faith on the belief that our loved one is not dead. He is only gone from us for a little while; he has gone over the river a little in advance. Some one must go first; perhaps in the ways of a kind Providence it is best it should be he who is to welcome us on the other shore.

"Sometimes, when all life's lessons have been learned,

And sun and stars for evermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here have spurned—

The things o'er which we grieved, with lashes wet,

Will flash before us, out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deepest tints of blue,

And we shall see how all God's plans were right,

And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And if, sometimes, commingled with life's wine,

We find the wormwood, and rebel and shrink,

Be sure a wiser hand than your's or mine, Pours out this potion for our lips to drink,

And if the one we love is lying low,
Where human kisses cannot reach his face,

Oh! do not blame the loving Father so,
But wear your sorrow with obedient grace.

So look to him, and be content, poor heart,

God's plans, like lilies, pure and white unfold,

We must not wear the close shut leaves
apart,

Time will reveal the calyx of gold.
And if through patient toll, we reach the land,

Where tired feet, with sandals loose may rest,

When we shall clearly know and understand,

I think that we will say, "God knew the best."

Then let us wait with patience and murmur not; looking unto him who is the author and finisher of our faith, and when the summons comes, "child, come home," may we meet our dear departed one at the beautiful gate, and join with him in praises to him who has done so much for us.

MARY J. GOODWIN.

My beloved wife, Mary J. Goodwin, fell asleep in Jesus, February 7th, 1908. She was a good woman. She was baptised by Elder John Rowe, and was faithful in attending her meetings when able to do so. When she was unable to go our pastor would come and preach for her. This she enjoyed very much.

My loss is great, but I feel that she is at rest. May I be reconciled to the will of God. I am very lonely. Now there is a vacant place in my home. My 12 year old

In looking over the Landmark for Feb. 15th, on page 154 I found an article credited to me at the request of Mr. Robert Nash I could not remember having written such an article but in reading I saw it was your own composition down to the words on page 155, "He before whom the test of our religion is made." There I knew that one of my own articles was being read. I then began to look for the rest of it and found the beginning on page 158 with the words "Pure religion and undefiled before God," etc., and found my article down to the word "the" at the end of line 24 on page 159 and the words "to come in," at the beginning of line 25 your editorial began again. However I am not able to connect either your editorial nor my communication at those points so as to get the ideas advanced and therefore I think that something must have been left out of both.

Yours in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Remarks.

When the last issue of the Landmark was made up I was absent on some appointments. The matter was badly mixed. Imperfection is one of the things that belong to me.

More and Better Tobacco —Bigger Profits

The labor is as great to grow and harvest a poor crop as a good one. When you can so surely "increase your yields per acre" and get a far better quality of tobacco by using why not use them this season? There's no reason why you cannot accomplish the same as thousands of others. Mr. V. C. Love, of Tinkling, Va., says "As a producer of fine tobacco, I do not feel I can say enough for your fertilizer. It makes tobacco that brings me more money than any other fertilizer I can get. I have tried many other brands but none equaled yours. I believe Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers to be the best on the market for tobacco."

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers contain better and higher grade materials than any other brands of tobacco fertilizer. They will increase the yield per acre, and improve the texture and quality of the tobacco you grow, so you can get a better price per pound than ever before.

Much valuable information on tobacco-culture will be found in the new Virginia-Carolina Year Book or Almanac. Don't fail to ask your fertilizer dealer for a copy, or write our nearest sales office and one will be sent you free.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren: I have an impression of mind to write to the Landmark and I hope the impression is from above where there is no variableness neither shadow of turning. So I make the attempt this morning to write a few lines for publication as I have been reading and as I read my mind runs out to what God hath said in His Holy word; the way his people should live, act and talk and to see how they are living. It is no wonder we are in a cold state. Paul said, if ye live after the flesh ye shall die, but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live. Brethren, notice the 15th Psalm, 22 and 23 verses; now consider this ye that forget God lest I tear you in pieces and there be none to deliver. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me and to him that ordereth his conversation aright will I shew the salvation of God.

Brethren, when I go to meeting and see so much coldness and see the brethren talking about each other and saving hard words about each other, it makes my mind run back to the 9th Psalm and 17th verse: The wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God. Brethren it looks like some of them have forgot that they have been purged from their old sins. We cannot live as it reads but I take the ground to say that if we could not do as the Savior tells us to do it would not have been put there.

What about the 2nd chapter of Ephesians? And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins.

Notice the word, "were" which is in the past tense. Where in time past ye worked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the powers of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Again notice the word "where" which means before the quickening has taken place, and after the quickening as in the time of the quickening when the life came. The reason I mention the above scripture is to show how they lived before the change took place. So it looks like that those professing they have undergone this change would act and conduct themselves in a milder way.

I see brethren go to meeting and merely shake hands with each other and not ask how they are getting along. Brethren when I see anything like this it hurts me.

So brother Gold if you see anything in this worth publishing do so, if not throw it aside. This is from one that is saved by grace if saved at all.

H. T. TUCKER.
Lester, Montgomery Co., N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:

As my subscription to the dear old Landmark has expired you will find enclosed $1.50 for a renewal of the paper. I feel I can say truthfully the Landmark is so much comfort to me that I would find it very hard to get along without it as I am quite a distance from my home church and hardly ever have an opportunity to hear preaching. So about all I get is from the dear old paper which is so nourishing to my poor hungry soul.

Brother Gold, I hope the Lord will spare and prosper you in this glorious work and when you have finished the work assigned you, may you have a crown of righteousness eternal where all is peace, love and happiness, for God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love which you have shown toward his name. "In that ye have ministered to the saints and administer." Hebrews 6:10. Also in Paul writing to the Hebrews, 11 verse "And we desire that everyone of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance unto the end for the promised blessings of God are to those who do his will."

But I do feel cast down some time and I know his is a straight and narrow path and but for his help I would never be able to travel alone and if ever saved it will be by his grace alone.

As I have drifted farther than I expected will close. Yours in hope of eternal life.

JULIANA COLLINS.

Monroe, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:

I have just received such a sweet comforting letter from our dear old brother, Levi J. H. Mewborn, that I feel I can't be silent any longer. It has filled my soul with such joy I want all my dear brethren and sisters to know it. I feel, at times, to be the most blessed woman in the world. The most of my time I am in deep trouble and carry a heavy burden and there are many storms and trials to pass through, but bless my great Redeemer, he brings me safely through each time, and my faith grows stronger every time, therefore they work my good. I have never read a letter that more revived my drooping spirit, than Brother Mewborn's. He has so beautifully interpreted a dream I had a few weeks ago and to my great satisfaction.

I will write you the dream and send you his letter and hope you may have a mind to publish it, for it is so consoling to this poor, weary soul, I want others to enjoy it with me. I have had a mind to write it to you before, but felt like some would make little of it, and say "she is always telling her dreams," so would not, but have written it to several of my correspondents. Now I am at the place I don't care what the world says about it; I would that I could have more beautiful dreams than I do. The good Lord is able to comfort us in the dead hours of the night, when we are asleep, by giving us sweet dreams, and I am glad he is. I know I have been delivered of very deep troubles several times by dreams, just as I was by the one brother Mewborn interpreted. I can't ever tell what I had passed through, nor how miserable I had been for some time. At times I felt like I could not bear up under the burden. I wrote several letters while in this condition, and received some very rich, comforting replies, which would greatly revive me for a short while. But the same old burden would come again, and I would be so miserable I felt all pleasure was gone for me. The storm I passed through, I shall never be able to tell. Every breath was a prayer to my heavenly Father to guide me and direct me by his holy spirit. I was deeply impressed to go off in some secret place and bow down in prayer; to pour out my heart to God, to be with me, have mercy on me, and deliver me, if it could be his will.

My dear pastor, the brethren and sisters, seeing me so miserable would often comfort me with cheering words, but as soon as I was alone, I was as miserable as ever. It seemed death would be sweet to me, for I still held a little hope that I would then be free from all my troubles and sorrows. At times while in this great trouble a still small voice would whisper within. "You will be blest in the end," and a calm feeling would pass over me.

One night a few weeks ago, I retired and soon fell asleep. I dreamed that I was sick, and our family physician was standing in the room, preparing to leave. I began to talk to him, telling him of a dream I had about him a while before that. He looked very sad while I was talking to him, and when I was through, came to the bed and took great pains to put something in my hand. I looked at it and found it was a little locket and chain: the locket was about the size of the end of my little finger. He then put his hand in his pocket and took out something and put it in my hand which looked like a piece of money, and I thought was money. He had a piece of writing paper in his hand and he gave that to me. I thought he knew I was sick, and no one with me but little children, so he has given me all this, showing his sympathy. I felt so thankful I buried my face in the pillow and began to cry and thank him and he left me.

I unfolded the paper he gave me and there was written on it, "I know all your troubles and trials, and have given you this gold locket and chain for a keepsake. I was well immediately, and ran to where my sister was, to show her what the doctor had given me. My little locket and chain was so small and precious to me (I thought more of it, than any gift I ever received) that I kept it clasped tight in my right hand, so afraid I would lose it. When I got to her, I held it up, and said, "Mollie, look what the doctor has given me, and he says he gave it for a keepsake." I then took out the other piece which I thought was money, and to my great surprise it had enlarged until it was about half the size of my hand, and I never have been able to describe how it looked, nor the beauty of it. I said, "Mollie, I don't know what this is, but I know it is valuable for it looks to be and he would not have given it to me if it had not been." I then unfolded the letter to read to her, and had not noticed before how he addressed me in the letter. It began, "Mrs. Mattie Luper, dear sister in Christ" I said to her "I didn't know the doctor was a member of our church, but he has addressed me sister in Christ," I said to her the words I saw written at first. I awoke, felt better, and lay and thought over my dream. It came into my mind forcibly that it was your heavenly Physician that did all this for you. I felt so much revived the next morning that I wanted to tell my dream to everybody, so I told it to some of my children before breakfast. I wanted to see a dear sister in the neighborhood to whom I am much devoted, and tell her and did so and she said she felt it was the Lord. I also saw my dear pastor and told him, and he said it was my heavenly Physician. Before night I was in conversation with the doctor mentioned and felt like I must tell him. But I only told him a part of it. There was something in the dream that caused me to rejoice and sing praises to my great Redeemer. My burden was gone, trouble removed and I felt like saying "Bless the Lord, Oh, my soul; let all that is within me bless his holy name."

On Saturday night of the Upper Town Creek association I spent the night at Brother Whitehead's. There were several brethren and sisters there, among them Brother Levi Mewborn. After singing a while an impression came over me to 'tell my dream. I would not do so at first, thinking it would wear off, and asked myself why am I so impressed to tell the dream tonight? they will not care anything for it, and it will not interest them. But I could not get clear of it, and I felt a burden coming on me if I did not tell it, so we began to talk, and I related it.

I could see the next morning why

I had been so impressed to tell it for no one had ever interpreted it to my satisfaction and joy as he did, and it was a feast to my soul, and what a beautiful letter he has written me.

I had never met him before our association, but if I never meet him again he will be long remembered by me. "God moves in a mysterious way." He has promised never to leave or forsake us, and his promises are sure. We feel at times that he is afar off, but his watchful eye is ever over us, protecting us from all evil. I try to beg him daily to be with me, and protect me, and not let me go astray. If it takes trials and troubles to keep me near him, and at his feet I would rather have them than the pleasures of this life.

He knows my heart and that above all things I want to live near him and do his will as much as in me lies, and it takes the rod to keep me there.

I can't help believing sometimes, that I am one of his, from the chastisement I get; for if we are "without chastisement, then are we bastards and not sons.

I attended the Contentnea and Black Creek Associations and it was a feast to me to meet with the dear gospel preached by our dear ministers as I did.

May the grace of God be with us all. May love, joy and peace abound, and may you all remember me when you are brought to a throne of grace.

Your very humble sister, I hope in the Lord.

MATTIE LUPER.

BEHOLD THY MOTHER.

Brother Gold:

My Dear Brother in Christ:

I am not able to tell why, but from some cause my mind has been called to the saying of our Lord Jesus Christ while he was suspended upon the cross, "Behold thy mother." John 19:27. I had often read and thought upon this expression of Jesus', but never until a few days ago did I think of writing upon the subject. Now, I am well aware of the fact that if my mind is not directed by the spirit of God the attempt to write will be fruitless. God alone can open up the subject. The words were spoken under the most trying circumstances. The dear Son of God had been shamefully condemned to die the ignominious death of the cross between two thieves, and was then suffering the agonies of the cruel death. His body, no doubt, was racked with excruciating pain. Most of his followers had forsaken him and fled, but a few were present, and were beholding the dreadful agony which he suffered. No doubt but they were overwhelmed with grief, yet helpless. They were powerless; his hour had come when he must surrender up his life for sins that he never had committed, but must atone for. Grace never could reign through righteousness unto eternal life without his giving up his life to atone. While most of his followers had fled, the beloved disciple was then to behold his sufferings, together with his beloved and loving, heart-pierced mother, and his mother's sister, Mary, the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. No doubt but they all were overwhelmed with unutterable grief; "And when Jesus saw his mother and the disciple standing by whom he loved." the sight of them seemed to cause him to forget his anguish. "He saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son." O what a solemn appeal, which must have pierced her very soul. The sight doubtless aroused every passion of love, veneration and pity that her soul could be capable of.

The son of her love, appealing to her, and he in the very throes of the most cruel and painful death, must have pierced her heart with the keenest anguish and no doubt called forth the deepest and tenderest love and sympathy that mother's love could feel. Oh, now the heart sweats with love and pity when we look upon the face of one near and dear to us while death is preying upon all their vital powers. Truly in this case the truth of the Scriptures was made plain, for Simeon had told her before, while he held the child Jesus in his arms and blessed them, saying: "Yea, a soul also, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed." Luke 2:35. No doubt but she felt that this prophecy was being truly fulfilled, while she looked sorrowfully up the solemn scene. But I think Jesus meant something more wonderful than to merely call upon her to behold his sufferings. I think it cannot be shown that he was ever disobedient to his parents at any time, or to his divine Father. He never disobeyed either. He must have the honor of being a son that never was guilty of disobedience. In his dying hours he would show his love and veneration for her who had borne him and had watched over him in Bethlehem's manger. He was not ashamed of her in her poverty. While she had nothing wherewith to clothe him with at his birth, but "swaddling clothes," Luke 2:7, yet he honored and obeyed her. In his life he had lived for her in his death he atoned for her. By his grace she is saved, and in his resurrection she is justified. This is wonderful grace, saving grace, above all other honors; yet this is not enough to satisfy this dutiful son. Something else must be done. Her temporal comforts must be looked after before he left her. "Woman, behold thy son. Though the tortures of death are excruciating, I cannot forget thee. I cannot yield to death until I have made provision for thy earthly comfort." "Son behold thy mother." This is his dying charge or dying command. The mother, no doubt, though bowed down with sorrow, hears with astonishment these wonderful words.

John, who no doubt, is here addressed, is filled with love to her who is so stricken and forlorn, and to show his love for his divine Lord and Master, yea merciful Savior, and the tender regard he had for her, "from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home." John 19:27. This manifestation of the love and veneration of Jesus for his mother accomplished, his anxiety for her seems to be satisfied for next we have this upon record: "After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith I thirst. Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it in his mouth. When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head and gave up the ghost." John 19:28-29-30.

It seems to me that it must have been a part of the work that God had assigned to his Son that he should remember and provide for his mother. And that being my belief, I can but think that the example of Jesus in his last moments is commendable and binding upon the household of faith. Mother! Oh, what name sounds so sweet, so fraught with love? What a lesson is taught us by the dear Savior! Does it not carry with it the most binding obligation upon all to love, honor, protect and support mother? Certainly it does. The Lord commended the Rechabites for obedience to the example of Jesus. This commands itself to us? Does it not seem that it was well pleasing in the sight of God? It must have been, for an Apostle hath said, "Children obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor thy father and thy mother; which is the first commandment with promise. Eph. 6:1. Can one honor either father or mother by neglecting them and disobeying them? Certainly not. Let the apostle speak again, "Children obey your parents in all things; for this is well pleasing unto the Lord." Col. 3:20. This is enough. It must be offensive to God if these commands are disobeyed, and if our parents, especially our mother, is neglected or disgraced by us; yet some seem to disregard these divine injunctions, and go on to slight, disobey, neglect, and even forsake their mother, who bore them, and plead for an excuse that they are old-fashioned, uneducated unrefined, hard to please, peevish, selfish, childish and ill-bred. O shame, where is thy blush? Who suffered the pangs of my birth? Mother. From whose breast was I nurtured in my helpless infancy? Mother, who bent over my infant body in my infancy? Mother. Who bathed my infant brow in sickness. Mother. Who spent sleepless nights watching over me and put up with my crying, and fretting and crossness, when I was an helpless infant, unconscious of being even a human being? Mother. If she was a pious mother, how often has her earnest prayer gone up to God in my behalf. And now, shall I commit the dreadful sin of neglecting her because she has become old and childish. No never, while memory lasts, or I have a morsel of bread. Mother shall snare with me, says the dutiful child. Jesus set the pattern. I, by his help, will strive to imitate his example, so far as imperfection can imitate perfection, No dutiful child can ever be content to live in want. Neither can they live in fine mansions and see mother living in want in a hovel. It is a crying sin against her and against God. Some have dared to plead that mother is so hard to please, and she is untidy; my children are ashamed to have her present when they have fashionable and gay company. Mother must stay in the kitchen, or keep out of sight. Away with gay and fashionable company if mother is to be slighted because of them. King Solomon bowed himself to his mother, and had a seat set for her while he sat on his throne and she sat on his right hand. Ist Kins 2:19 While he seemed to be vexed at the request she made, yet he honored her, for he remembered her as his mother; thereby teaching us that our mothers should have a place at our right hand, not only in our affections, but also in our liberalities. And if we or our wives and our children are honored, mother must also share in our honors. Can a child of God be happy and obedient to God, and yet fail to respect and honor his parents most especially mother, she being the being the weaker vessel? I think not. What, mock at the distress of parents, and I have a plenty? They living in need and I living in luxury? No, no. This is not the way of grace. No, if any have to suffer privations let it be me, and not my mother. Hear Solomon "The eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother the ravens of the valley shall pick it and the young eagles shall eat it." Prov. 30:17. Fearful judgment; showing that God will revenge wrongs done to parents. Probably one who is guilty of unkindness to parents does not consider the enormity of the crime. How important that we should remember that if we neglect to respect; honor and obey and administer to the needs of our parents that we sin against the God of all comfort. If we have been guilty of this sin may the Lord forgive us and grant us repentance for Christ's sake for it is a crying sin and shame to the guilty. In old age our parents need our help. None can fully understand what a treasure they have in mother until she is gone. Oh what a solemn piercing thought: mother is dead. Have I strewn her way with flowers if not it will be useless to place them on her grave when she is dead; alas it is too late then. It may please the eye of the giddy but it can do her no good. I would humbly exhort the young to reverence and obey their mother; honor her as a precious jewel; yea as the best earthly gift that God has been pleased to give to the children of men. The unworthy writer thought that he was obedient to his mother while she lived and while he knows that he furnished her to the extent of his ability with the necessaries of life yet when she was laid in the cold silent grave; alas alas it was then that I felt that I had fallen short of my duty to one so deserving. I now feel that I wish to honor her memory. But while it is our bounden duty to honor our earthly mothers we should ever remember that if we have been born again that we have a spiritual mother: Jerusalem which is from above that is free who is the mother of us all spiritually and all children owe their highest allegiance to her. She should be honored above all. May the Lord for Christ's sake grant to all her children the spirit of humbleness and the grace to prepare us for an orderly walk and Godly conversation at all times. Without this we certainly will reproach her.

May he grant us a spirit to honor our earthly mothers while we live that we may be obedient to the divine in junction. "Children obey your parents in the Lord."

With love to the household of faith I remain your humble servant and fellow-laborer in the service of the Lord I hope.

STRENGTH WEAKENED

"He weakened my strength in the way; He shortened my days. Psalm. cii. 23.

Of all the burdens I have ever had—and I have more than—the burden of preaching is by far the heaviest and should there be anyone here who would like to take my place I would very willingly give way and let him occupy this pulpit instead of me. It is no light thing to stand up in the name of the great Jehovah; it is no light thing to trace the pathway a Christian walks; and oh! if it is a wrong one! If it a wrong one!! There is such a thing as prophesying or telling a dream or speaking a vision of one's own thing—they both shall fall into the ditch—the ditch of hell out of which there is no coming. It is therefore to me a serious matter to speak in the name of the God of heaven and earth; and then when we consider how much people often build upon what the preacher says it is truly solemn. I remember one when I had been preaching a person said to me: "Well I came in very dark but if what the minister says is right I am all right." And I thought what a solemn thing if you should build upon what I say and we both should be wrong. It is with feelings such as these that I stand before you tonight with these words for my text and I hope we shall not be barbarians to each other but that you will understand a little of the things which we hope the Holy Spirit will lead me to speak.

"He weakened my strength." We will look first at the word "strength" and then say something about the way and after that we will speak of the weakening. There are two kinds of strength: there is that strength which God imparts—which God gives to all his people. The Psalmist says: "The Lord is my strength;" and Samuel calls the Lord the "Strength of Israel." 1 Sam. xv. 20. Strength is imparted to the soul of God himself. The Apostle Paul prays for the Ephesians that they might "be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man." Eph. 3:16. The strength is of a spiritual nature, and comes from God and with it the soul contends for the things which are of God and wars against those things which are earthly, sensual and devilish. One says,

"No help in self I find,

*And yet have sought it well;
The native treasure of my mind
Is sin and death and hell."*

He did not learn that in a minute. How long Berridge had been traveling the way to heaven when he penned those words I cannot say, but it was probably years. To say feelingly, understanding the meaning of the words, "The native treasure of my mind is something supernatural; such knowledge comes not by reading books, not even our monthly periodicals. I am afraid some get religion in that way. There are people who can talk experience clearly but it is not their own, it is something they have learned, as a boy learns his lesson, and they know it is right; then their judgment embraces it and they contend for the doctrine of grace in an experimental way and yet have not experimentally and feelingly received the doctrine in the soul. I believe this statement is true, and if we can discern between these two things who made you and me to differ? What have we that we have not received? This strength which God imparts is of such a nature that it contends with principalities and powers and triumphs over the flesh, and all things which are of the flesh. "Yea," says the Apostle Paul, "I can do all things through Jesus Christ who strengthened me." In contra-distinction to this Divinely imparted strength there is a false strength which every religious man has by nature: and that strength every Christian at times feels the power of, and it often deceives him. It is a wonderful thing, that along with grace grows up something which is not humilitv. There is such a thing as being proud of our experience: and proud of our ability to talk of the depths of Satan, and of the paths of inquiry, that people may say, "Is not he or she a wonderfully well-taught person? With this strength a man may talk about religion that he may show others how much God has taught him. "Self hunts about for praise:" and I have sometimes questioned the motive when I have asked the Lord for something special for myself, whether it was that I might talk about it, that others might gaze and wonder. Pride lurks in the heart; but oh to have grace and spiritual eyesight to distinguish between these things, and humbly to watch what motive influences us when we pray for blessings! This strength which is false rests on a rotten foundation. It rest upon the keenness of our intellect; upon the reasoning faculties of our mind, and the clearness of our judgment. The Psalmist speaks thus of certain professors: "There are no bands in their death; but their strength is firm." Psalm lxxiii. 4. They go along through life without being the subjects of fears, or of doubt. Their strength is so strong that it shuts out all doubt. All the exercises of mind, and the ups and downs which a living soul has is shut out by this strength; and we have been truly grieved sometimes when we have heard some say that they did not mind how soon death came; if they died that minute they were prepared; and yet in their walk and conversation was manifested no humility or true lowliness of spirit.

Friends, we have to soberly consider these things, and if you think me too severe, I cannot help it, for death, hell and judgment are too solemn to trifle with. Where may we be before sunrise? We may be in eternity. If God were pleased to impress these things upon all our hearts yours and mine, we should hold the things of time and sense with a loose hand, a loose grasp; our affections would be sundered from the things of this life. How differently we should walk through this vale of tears. This false strength is delusive and dangerous and had I been left to go on in this strength, what should I be now? A high towering professor of religion. But we hope that we have the root of the matter: and if the root is in my soul, there will be a lit-the fruit appearing, and a little laying hold of that strength which God himself gives his people. He gives strength to lay hold upon strength. That is one of the paradoxes of the Christian religion, strength to lay hold of strength. "When I am weak, then I am strong." 2 Cor. xii. 10.

We will now speak a little of the way. Christ says, "I am the Way." Yes, all others lead to hell. No matter how fair and right they seem; all other ways lead to destruction. He is the Way from the city of Destruction to the heavenly Jerusalem. He is the Way that all the prophets traveled; the road that alone leads from banishment. He is the Way of holiness and all his people resolve humbly in his strength to go that Way, for all his paths are peace. There are many other ways which seem right unto men but the end of them all is death; and all the ways which a man by his natural judgment chooseth in religion, lead to destruction. Wide is the gate, broad is the way of natural religion that leadeth unto destruction. Yes, there is a way cast up by man; it is an easy road, and yet a dangerous one, and however much people may think that it is leading them to heaven, it is but leading them in the opposite direction. But the way which we think is here brought before us, is the way which the people walk in. The Psalmist when looking back over the history of his people, says that the Lord "led them forth by the right way that they might go to a city of habitation." Psalms cv:1 7. God leads his people from the city of destruction through a wilderness world unto that place which is prepared for those that love him. If we look at the ancient people of Israel we find that God led them out of Egypt into a narrow pass—mountains on each hand, the Red Sea in front and the enemy behind, and there was apparently no way of escape. Yet it was a right way, because God led them. He made a way for them through the sea, and when they saw the destruction of their enemies they sang praises to God. Then he led them—where to? into a garden? No. He led them to Marah where the waters were bitter. They marched through a sandy desert to get there, and the water which they carried in their bags being exhausted they went to drink of the waters and found them bitter. God led them—it was a right way. And he also led them farther to a place of seventy palm trees and twelve wells of water. They did not grumble when they were sitting under the shade of those lofty trees, and drinking the water from those wells. Then he led them to Mount Sinai, where they heard the thunders and saw the lightnings; where he instructed them in the law. Has he led you there? Led you to Mount Sinai, turned you about there, instructed you there, put the law deeply into thy soul, so that it dried up thy spirit? He led them farther, into the Wilderness of Sin, and there the fiery serpents bit them; yet it was a right way. He led them to Jordan's banks, and then back again; still it was a right way. Thus he led them about and instructed them in a marvelous way to fit them for and bring them to that land which he had promised their forefathers. It is in this way in which he leads us, spiritually considered that he weakens our strength.

He weakens our strength. Some would say it is sin that weakens. Well, sin does weaken. It brings trouble, and causes clouds to rise between God and the soul. Sin vexes and teases and oftentimes snares and entangles us, and we have guilt upon our souls and cannot approach unto God. Can you with a guilty conscience really approach Him? Not unless he gives you strength to do so. Then, when you have that strength imparted, you are strong enough to confess your sins. Until then there is no real confessing of our sin and our iniquity, however much we may talk about it. But some may say it is the devil that weakens. Well, so he does; and very quickly to, when he comes against us. He soon divests us of all our strength wherein we gloried, and if he is allowed to gain upon us, he will bring us down as Christian was brought down in the valley. His sword was gone, his armour did not enable him to stand much against the fierce attack of Apollyon, but Christian was given a little strength and he helped to grasp the sword, and making a lunge, his enemy flew. Resist the devil and he will flee from you but you cannot do this in your own strength. You may struggle hard to turn your mind to conquer him; but when God himself comes, then you come off more than conqueror.

But to our text: He weakens them. Here I would first remark that we have a lot of native strength. In years gone by I was very strong; and until the Lord began this weakening process in my heart, was so strong that I could not come down to the poor and feeble. No, I could not come down to the teaching of the Gospel Standard, for it depicted an experimental pathway that I did not understand. Its teaching was in this respect an enigma to me. This native strength which we possess has to be brought down: we appear able to read the Word of God, and to understand it, and to walk in such a way that we are pleased with ourselves. But this strength is to be brought down and God weakens it. The marginal reading is "He afflicted my strength." God afflicts them. There are many forms of affliction, and "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust." Job v. 6. and "Although God does cause grief, yet will he have compassion." Lam. iii. 32; and "shall there be evil in a city and the Lord hath not done it." Micah iii. 6. These texts all prove that God does afflict. He does not act from caprice, or even as parents often do, for they chastened us after their own pleasure, but he for our profit." Heb. xii. 10. He brings afflictions upon us for our good; they proceed from and are a proof or evidence of his love. One proverb says "spare the rod—spoil the child;" but God will not spare the rod for our much crying. Sometimes he brings upon us afflictions in the mind. A deep sense of God's majesty and justice, and of our unworthiness and hell-deservings. Who can bring this upon us if God does not? And this weakens that fancied strength of ours. As soon as we are brought into this affliction of mind, what do we feel? Perhaps a lack of spirit of prayer in the heart, and there seems nothing in the Bible but that which cuts and saddens us. Neither is there the will to read it as in former days. here is no ability or strength to lay hold upon promises which God has given his tried people. We often quoted them in the days of our strength but now we are brought into that place where we need God to apply them. Why? because we are weakened. We are sick and afflicted. Look at a man lying on a bed of suffering; not a pleasant experience to be forced to submit to everything being done for him, as if he were a child. But he is a sick man, and being a sick man he prizes the care of the nurse. This poor soul that I am now describing is afflicted and sick; he cannot feed himself; of course he cannot, he has no strength to do it; he cannot pray—he has no strength to pray. He cannot bring down the promises into his own heart; he has no strength. He cannot lift up a song of praise—he has no strength to do it. But he groans and sighs before the Lord, and mourns on account of those things with which God is weakening him. I ask, how could God teach us our need of his strength if he did not weaken our native strength? Another thing which God does—he weakens our hold on the world. We are carnal, our nature loves earthly things; we cling to those things which suit our nature, whatever they may be. Your disposition is not the same as mine; your tastes and temperaments may not be the same as mine; often what one person takes most delight in, is repugnant to, or at least possesses no attraction for another. But whatever it may be that we lean upon and hold tightly, God often weakens our attachment to it by causing this very thing to become a trouble and a trial to us. It becomes such a burden to us that we get sick of it. God said of Ephraim, he “is joined to idols; let him alone.” Hosea iv. 17. But Ephraim by the prophet is represented as saying, “I smote upon my thigh; I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.” Jer. xxxi. 19. He turned to the Lord and confessed to him, and the Lord graciously heard and blessed him. I often think of Ephraim; “When Ephraim spake trembling he exalted himself in Israel, but when he offended in Baal, he died.” Hosea xiii. 1. How often it is the case that we offend in Baal; some idol takes possession of our thoughts and runs away with the affections, and instead of them being Christward and heavenward, they are centred on things below. God sees it, and designs in His healings with us to weaken these affections. If we attain to or get possession of the thing upon which our heart is fixed, it does not bring the joy or the pleasure we anticipated, perhaps brings us a great deal of sorrow instead, and then in our distress we turn unto the Lord to Him that weakens us. He gives us the breath of prayer; we are able to lay our case before him to breathe out before him all our trouble and grief, acknowledge our transgression unto him and our iniquity we do not hide. Now there is a full confession. Ah! this weakening work, how precious it is! how sweet it is when we are able to look back and see what God accomplished in that particular trial, in that particular trouble! How he separated us from all carnal support, and brought us off from the sand upon which we were resting! How he has made us see that real religion is more than notion. He wants the whole heart; “Son, give me thine heart.” And when we have been thus weakened there is a complete surrender to Christ. Do you know what it is to open, as it were, the heart to receive Christ? Do you know what it is to make this surrender under the blessed power and sweet teaching and anointing of God the Holy Ghost? There is such an experience, and blessed be his name, His people are not ignorant of it, for their affections are brought from these things which keep them down to the earth to worship him who is a spirit in spirit and in truth.

“He weakened my strength in the way.” Now, we all naturally fear death and generally speaking, desire a long life; we all naturally postpone the evil day and set it as far away as possible from us, and if we were sure that we should not die until such a year our carnal heart would not trouble much about it until it drew very nigh. The Christian man, if left to himself, would be as carnal as ever. “But in the midst of life we are in death,” and as the tree falls so it lies; to the north or south; so the soul of man rises either to heaven or sinks to hell. The quickened man believing this is exercised about his everlasting welfare. “How will it be when I come into the swelling Jordan?” And this weakening process which God puts him through makes him so that he cannot rest upon a fleshly religion. He cannot rest upon his doubts. He cannot rest upon his fears, nor upon dreams or visions. Some people have visions and dreams and rest upon them. But away with such resting places! The Lord used to speak to his people in dreams, and I am not prepared to say but that he may speak sometimes to them now in like manner. The apostle Peter relates a vision which was a glorious one—the one he had on the top of a mountain, when he saw Christ transfigured, and heard a voice from heaven saying, “This is my beloved Son, hear him.” But he says, “We have also a more sure word of prophecy; wherunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn and the day star arise in your heart.” II Peter i. 19. I want something more than dreams—the sweet witnessing within that I am born of God, the blessed anointing of the Holy Spirit, an inflowing of His love into my heart as my Savior, as my Redeemer, as my God. Is that what you want? Anything short of this, what is it? Have we a hope in his name? Ah! it is well when, in humility, we are enabled to give a reason for that hope which is within us, and is as an anchor, sure and steadfast, entering into that which is within the veil even Christ Jesus. It is a comfortable hope, an encouraging hope, a hope which lifts the sinner up and brings him into sweet anticipation of that rest which remaineth for the people of God. I remember some time ago visiting one who had been ill and was not expected to recover, but he was getting better though still far from well. He said, “I am no visionary; what I want is a powerful application of God’s Word to my soul, then he may take me home.” This man was 80 years of age, and had been in the ways of God nigh 60 years, yet that was what he wanted, and what every living soul will want, for the comfort which man can give will never sustain a living soul. It must be that comfort which God himself gives. That is what we want, and I do not believe that any exercised child of God will rest satisfied short of a manifestation of Christ to his soul as his Savior.

No, because they do not spring from nature, from a proud heart, nor from Satan, but from the work of the Spirit within. What is Christ to the worldling? What was he to the ancient Jews? If you see anything in this Christ Jesus causing you to desire Him, it is because you have had the seeing eye given you, and you behold in Him something more than human nature—you behold him as the Son of God, in whom it pleased the Father that all fulness should dwell. Every temporal blessing that we enjoy while passing through this vale of tears comes through him. They are all decreed and not only the blessings but your afflictions too. John Kent says, “If he appoints the number ten, You ne’er shall have eleven.”

The time is gone, and I feel I have spoken but feebly. I hope the Lord will be pleased to bless you and to bless me; and if we never meet here again on earth, may we meet around his throne in heaven where there is peace and joy and blessedness, and where we shall cast our crowns at the feet of him who suffered, bled and died for us.

The Lord add his blessings. Amen.

Dear Brother Gold:

As I have been in the house for the last two days not feeling very well with the snow covering the ground and it raining, these words came to my mind: “For as the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven and returneth not thither but watereth the earth; and maketh it bring forth and bud that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it.” Isaiah 55:

10-11. This is a natural figure by which the prophet illustrates to us the independence and success of the word of the Lord. All intelligent minds will confess that the coming of the rain and snow is independent of man, and that it accomplishes the purpose of God, the watering of the earth. Also that it is in this way that the earth is made to produce its fruit for the sustenance of man. The snow is as necessary as the rain and the Lord knows when and where to send it, and I have noticed that the snow has a pulverizing and lightning effect upon the otherwise hard, lumpy soil. Walk over the ground after the snow is gone and see how soft and mellow it is, thus made ready for the reception of the seed. It never returns without having watered the earth and so the purpose and word of the Lord is accomplished in the bringing forth of its fruit. Can any one imagine that our God is any less a God of purpose in grace than in providence or that he is less able to accomplish the purpose of his grace than the purpose of his providence. If they do they are mistaken and dispute his word which says as in providence so in grace his word shall accomplish that which he please. Can any one suppose for one moment that the God of heaven and earth would send his word to the heart of a sinner calling him to repentance or to anything else for that matter unless it is his will that that sinner shall do that which he bids him. Then he says, "I am God, and I will do all my pleasure." Then as sure as God calls the sinner obeys. The Lord said unto my heart seek ye my face, and my heart said thy face Lord will I seek. The rain has come and the earth is made to bud not against its will but according to its nature. So when the word of God comes into the heart of the sinner he is made to love, serve, and adore his God, not against his will but according to his new nature for if any man be in Christ he is a new creature. This word canot return void, it is the word of God and he has a purpose in sending it, and he cannot be defeated or disappointed. Is there anything too hard for the Lord? Surely not, he is the maker and preserver of all things he speaks and it is done, he commands and it stands fast, his word must accomplish its purpose and the sinner is saved. It must prosper in the thing whereunto it is sent. So he is manifested in Zion and works in the vineyard, for the Lord has given him the ability and the loving desire, and instead of doing things in this kingdom against his will his constant and fervent prayer to God is that his spirit that makes these earthen vessels speak his praise and walk in his ways would more constantly manifest its presence for this is the object of his love and he mourns because he cannot love him more and serve him better. I think I am glad for these almighty, eternal, glorious and soul-cheering truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord.

But I do feel grieved when I see so often in our papers that in different sections of our country those who profess to believe these wonderful things are striving one against another. If any among us do not believe and have no experience of the mercy of God to a sinner let such get out and go where they can find more agreeable company, but as long as we agree in our experience let us bear with each other for we are all full of faults and must not look for perfection in the flesh. I hear views sometimes that I do not agree with, but I do not expect all to believe and say things just as I do. May the Lord give us more of his own spirit and "we shall be more loving and forbearing, one toward another.

Your brother, I hope,

Brother A. N. Surratt writes of a visit of a neighbor of his who endeavored to convert him to his views on Missionism. Failing to do this he said that P. D. Gold had left the Missionary Baptist and gone to the Primitive Baptists because they would not allow him to have the preaching places he wanted.

I think this is the first time I have ever heard of this charge. The brother who wrote me said the young man did not seem inclined to tell him how or where he heard this, but as he insisted on being informed he said he saw it published in the Biblical Recorder. He adds, "Now, Brother Gold, I would like to have an explanation of this from your own pen."

There is not a word of truth in this charge so far as I am conscious of. The Missionaries while I was with them treated me very kindly, and I have not a word of complaint to make against any of them.

While I was in trouble about the true church I felt a disposition to leave the country and go off as I was under great distress of mind, but the Missionaries, themselves visited me and endeavored to encourage me to remain with them.

Personally, I had no fault to find with any of them, nor have I now, nor have I any fault to find of any man as it concerns his personal treatment of me.

It was and is a matter of doctrine or fellowship that concerns me. When I united with the Missionary people I had no question in my mind about their holding the doctrine of Christ.

After being with them for some years I became exercised first of all about my vile and guilty condition before God. When I was shown my lost condition and the Lord Jesus appeared to me as my righteousness at once. I felt and knew that it is the truth—that Christ is the righteousness of his people, and for which I preached this doctrine as I had never seen, felt or believed it before. The Missionary people did not so view it and I began to seek a people that believed and held what had been shown to me. For more than five years I tried to remain with that people, but could not. When I went among the Primitive Baptists I found a people that believed and held what I loved. Often I am asked what is the difference between us and other denominations. Perhaps if the question were asked wherein are the things in which your people and the other denominations agree it might be said in nothing. The Primitive Baptists are diverse from all other people, nations, kindreds, languages or tongue. There is no one like they are. If the other denominations are right we are certainly wrong. If the great efforts to help the Lord by money, worldly learning, labors, institutions of a worldly sort, bringing in so many people into their numbers are right then we are all wrong. But suppose the despised, persecuted and hated people, the sect every where spoken against, the people that are few in number, that hold to the electing love of God, or that salvation is by grace through faith and that not of ourselves—not of works—then what? If we are right how about the other nominations? All cannot be right. If they are right we are not. If we are right then they are not. If God be for us who can be against us? If we are not on the Lord's side then who are we, and what are we?

Can two walk together except they be agreed? I read that they shall be all taught of God and great shall be their peace. God is not the author of confusion but of peace as in all churches of the saints. It was such questions and exercise of heart and mind that so distressed me that I could not remain where I was hence I left them. P. D. G.

A friend thinks if one is truly convicted of sin he will not persist in doing the wicked things he formerly did. For instance I will suppose one is a drunkard which is as beastly a thing as almost any bad habit causing so much distress and shame, and the scripture says no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven. Now if one that is a drunkard is convicted of sin will he repent of this wickedness, or will he persist in it still getting drunk?

I think like our friend it will be so hurtful to him to get drunk that he will turn away from it. Let the wicked forsake his way. He may try this thing in his desperation but it will soon become so distressing he cannot continue in it.

He may feel that he is becoming worse and worse, even when he repents of his former bad habits. For his thoughts and motives distress him without his committing outward acts of sin. Now it is what he is as well as what he does that troubles him.

He further says he does not think that Baptists ought to fall out about points that are not vital. If one is saved that ought to satisfy him. None of us understand much of the things we dispute about. Laying aside all anger, wrath and malice and as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby.

P. D. G.

Brother Thos H. Pearce requests my view of the following questions:

1st. Did not the serpent preach the first free-will sermon in the garden of Eden? Gen. 3.

2nd. If man is a free agent why did Christ die to save sinners?

The serpent's declarations to Eve tended to dethrone God, and flatter the creature man, so that he should become as gods. The poison injected into man filled him with notions of great human ability. It is the wisdom, though, that is from beneath, and is earthly, sensual, and devilish. Its nucleus, core, or seed, is the carnal mind, which is enmity against God—self will, or boasted free will, that a man is his own master, his own architect, his own keeper, wise in his own eyes, disposed to justify himself, and full of pride.

None of the things, nothing corrupt appeared in man until after the devil tempted Eve, and she hearkened unto him.

What is the opposite of the ministry of the serpent? Would it not be submission to God in all things? To trust in the Lord God at all times for all things, and to obey him in all things, is the very opposite of the devil's counsel. Is man a free agent, or has he freedom of will to do as he please? Man often does what he desires to do, and often is hindered from doing it. While Saul was persecuting the church he did what he desired. When Paul was feeding the flock of God, which he had purchased with his own blood, he was doing what he desired. Each man acted freely. But while Saul was persecuting the church he was serving the devil. While Paul was feeding the flock of God he was serving the Lord Jesus.

When a man does what he wishes to do he is free. Men serve sin freely while under its dominion. Men serve God freely when made willing in the day of his power, in the beauties of holiness.

But this is a limited freedom, for man has his bounds. If a natural man were free, absolutely, would he ever suffer for his deeds? Would he ever become old? Would he ever have any pain? Would he not become rich? Would he ever die? There is no freedom in sin, or, rather no exception from the consequences of sin. Until a man can have everything he does want, how can he say he is free? Where was Adam's wisdom or power to hide from God when the Lord God said, "Adam, where art thou?" If Adam was a free man to do all his pleasure, why did he appear naked? Why did he die? Why was he driven from the Garden of Eden?

There is not a greater delusion than the pretense that man is free. God alone is free in the blessed sense of that word.

If a man were free would he need any help? Why should Christ die for man, if the man is free to do as he pleases, why did he appear naked? Man is the most helpless of all creatures.

There is not a beast of the field as reedy as man is. For the beast has no soul, and is not exposed to eternal death, while man is, and is wholly dependent upon God to deliver him. The beasts of the field never fall; the beasts of the earth are not in a horrible pit as man is—utterly unable to deliver himself. The beasts of the earth are not sinners as men are, and dead in sins. When we were without strength Christ died for the ungodly. Man of himself has no power to come to Jesus. What power he has leads him away from Christ. Ye will not come to me that ye might have life, because your deeds are evil, because ye love darkness, love sin so that man's helplessness is the helplessness of guilt, and the greater his guilt the greater his helplessness of o tetaoinn greater his helplessness: so that man is without excuse, or is naked. P. D. G.

ONE THING.

"But one thing is needful." Luke 10:42. What is the one thing needful? It is Jesus Christ and him crucified. Paul the apostle of the Gentiles wrote, "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world," Gal-6:14. "For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified," 1st Cor. 2:2.

Now what is there needful that is not in Jesus Christ? "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." Rom. 8:32. Shall I go about and preach prohibition? Shall I leave the pure water of life and feast on the mud and filth of the stagnant waters of carnal reason or politics? I have lived long enough to see this craze rise up and the world follow it awhile and shout for it and then it dies. Politicians and political preachers are fond of getting up hobbies which they claim are a sure cure for ills. They study to get people inflamed and excited and their passions stirred up, and one would think a great reformation is accomplished; but soon the excitement cools down and men are hardened and left in no better condition than they were before.

Drunkenness is a cursed habit entailing great suffering upon mankind. All my life I have deplored and condemned it. Men have no excuse for it, and are far better off without intoxicants. But suppose the country could free itself from them, and that not another drop could be found in the State, would that destroy corruption, o r expel the devil? He is older than whiskey or brandy. If a man never tasted a drop of intoxicants of any sort, never told a falsehood, nor uttered an oath, nor defrauded another (but where is the man thus free?) Still it would be as needful for that man to be born again as if he had transgressed every precept of the law. Yet it is a great natural blessing to be moral.

"Except a man is born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." There is not another name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved. Then why preach any thing but Jesus Christ and him crucified we are to preach and nothing else. If you have Jesus you have temperance without hate to any class of men, you have sobriety, moderation, you have honesty and good will to man.

Notice what strife and bitterness are aroused by mankind in political campaigns. Where is the temperance of peace and good will in these political stripes in which men are bitterly arrayed against each other. Why not let each man vote or not vote as seems good to him? Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind and vote as it seems to him right, and let others do likewise.

It is sure that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. Be sober not only in abstaining from intemperance in every form, intemperance in hating others, in condemning others that do not see as you do in glutton, in smoking or chewing tobacco. Let your moderation be known to all men. If you have Jesus you have every principle of honesty and truth in you, for you are the Lord's freeman, and he whom Christ makes free is free indeed. You are under law to Christ. You are to submit to the powers that be as ordained of God. But the Lord is our lawgiving and king who will save us.

Drinking the new wine in the kingdom of God makes you sober, honest, obedient having good will to men.

When you vote let it be to rule yourself as well as others. If you vote for prohibition let it be to control your own conduct as well as that of others. Do not think I can send off out of the State and order liquors and drink at my own home, or with my friends, while the man that has not enough money to order it will be unable to get it at home. Whenever men vote to rule themselves voting will be more honest. If you think voting prohibition will stop drinking in North Carolina, you need a good drink of common sense to open your eyes to your own folly. If you want to vote for prohibition do so, but do not expect too much of it. Look at things soberly. P. D. G.

Brother J. H. Combs of Greensboro, N. C., requests my view of Isa. 45:7. "I form the light, and create darkness." I make peace, and create evil; I the Lord do all these things."

Among the greatest kingdoms of this world, beginning with Egypt, then Chaldea, then Assyria, then the Median the the Babylonian, and the Persian, the greatest of these was the Medo Persian until the rise of the Roman government. The Jews had been carried away by the king of Babylon, but God had delivered them into that power. In reading the history of these nations as man views it one see nothing beyond the national power of men, but if one reads as the Bible sets it forth it will be seen that God raises up one and sets down another, and gives the kingdoms to the basest of men as it pleases him.

These ancient kingdoms had their gods and alters, priests, temples, etc., or their religion. They had gods many and lords many. There were different phenomena in nature such as cold and heat, sickness and health, life and death prosperity and disaster, war and peace, sun-shine and shade-light and darkness literally and naturally. These ancient heathen nations would feel influences, events or occurrences. They could not understand that the power that caused the light would produce darkness. They were too much opposed to each other, or that the god that caused peace would allow so opposite a thing as war to occur, or that the god of health would suffer such an enemy as sickness to invade his people, or that the god that caused life would tolerate death its opposite, or that the god of good would permit the existence of evil, so in order to frame a theory long enough and broad enough to account for all these things they invented gods many and lords many.

Cyrus the great king of the Medes and the Persians, though the greatest ruler of his day on earth, did not know the Lord who had raised him up and given the kingdom of Babylon into his hand did not know the Lord yet God raised him up and strengthened him and gave such power as to destroy Babylon and liberate the people of God. The Lord did all for Israel's sake because of the love he had for Israel. He tells Cyrus that he knew him by name, though Cyrus had not known him. He says I am the Lord and there is no God besides him. There is no other God beside him. Hence the Lord declares I form the light and create darkness which is its opposite. He makes peace and creates evil. He does all these things. Evil is the opposite of peace, as darkness is the opposite of light. When God withdraws the light there is not another power that causes the darkness to come. God does it all. If the Lord does not control the darkness as much as he does the light then there is another God opposed to Him who rules the darkness, so that the God of heaven would be able to remove the darkness. The Lord says shall there be evil in the city and I have not caused it? If another God beside the Lord had put evil—the opposite of peace—in the city then the God of heaven could not remove that evil. If the God of heaven gives life and another God causes death, then the God of heaven could not raise the dead. These things are dwelt upon to prove that there is but one true and everlasting God, and beside him there is no god.

Job said, shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord and shall we not receive evil? What did he mean by evil? did he mean sin, did he mean transgression of the law? No, he meant suffering, pain, darkness, wretchedness such as Job was then suffering

Sin is defined to be transgression of the law, not something God has created, for every thing he created was good.

When we are exercised in darkness and distress, and cannot see the light, nor day, nor peace, but are in great darkness and distress to whom shall we look for deliverance? He rules above all and all things are under his power and there is no power but of God. P. D. G.

I have had but little mind to write for sometime, and have felt that perhaps my silence would not lessen the usefulness of the Landmark, nor the interest afforded its readers. I am often engaged in reviewing the pathway along which I have come, and the incidents by the way which have become fixed in my memory as the things of this life allotted to me, and I am made to stand, as it were, in their midst as a little child, and look upon each as a towering monument of the infinite mercies of God, and upon myself as a mere dust of the balance, and not worthy of the least of all his mercy, and therefore I should be still and know that he is God. But when I attempt to be still I find that even this is among the greatest of the gifts of his grace, for to be still is strength and salvation which only comes at the command of him whose words are spirit and life. I have found the sweetest moments of my life to be when I felt to be nothing, and yet to be followed continually by his goodness and mercy of God. O, how wonderfully amazing are the mercies of our God! What a blessed privilege it is to see ourselves as we really are, and to be humbled under that mighty and gracious hand from which cometh every good and perfect gift, and to feel that all our times are in his hands, and that he knoweth our frame and remembereth that we are dust.

How blessed the thought that in all our darkness, down sittings, conflicts and afflictions, he has the pre-eminence and that his everlasting arm is under neath, and his foundation standeth sure, having this seal, "The Lord knoweth them that are his." But these thoughts are so transient I can scarcely say they are here till they are gone, and if I am permitted to enjoy the sweet fragrance which lingers upon things made sacred by the heavenly touch, it is but for a moment, and I find myself rushing forth into the streets or ways enquiring, "Where is he whom my soul loveth? Tell me, O, ye daughters, if ye have seen him." And to one who would enquire, "What is your beloved more than another?" At times, I feel that I can give some description of his perfections and beauty, and declare with much assurance that he is mine and I am his, and then directly I feel that I could join with the poet and say,

... *'Do I love the Lord or no, ...
... Am I his or am I not.'*

Of all strangers, surely to me there is none stranger than myself, and of all the ways there is none to me more mysterious than the way along which, or in which, I have come. Sometimes the light falls upon it, and I see God's hand in all the incidents, over-ruling, turning this way and that way, guiding, directing, leading, keeping and saving, and I am made to wonder at the working together of all the things which vitally affect me, and I became glad, and for a moment feel assured that the goodness and mercy of God have followed me all the days of my life, and my heart bounds with gladness at the additional assurance that I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever, and for the time being, I feel strong in the faith, and feel fearless of the horse and his rider, and to know that my Redeemer liveth, and shall stand in the earth when all things shall have been put under him and see the travail of his soul and be satisfied.

In these triumphant moments I feel to stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made me free and while looking into the perfect law of liberty while dwelling upon its power and virtue, in preaching I have felt, and so declared, that I knew that I had preached the gospel of the Son of God. This is much to say, I know; but if I have ever had any truly spiritual revelations of the truth of the gospel of Christ, it has been while trying to preach that gospel.

"In thy light shall we see light." The gospel is preached 'in its own light and by its own power, so that oft'times the vessel in which the treasure is can but wonder at the wonderful exercises of his own mind, and the confirmations which bind him, as with three-fold cords, to the sufficiency of the righteousness of his Lord and King. To look upon this side of the picture of this life and admire its beauties, and draw from it the imagery of bright prospects of the life to come, is delightful indeed; but there is another side to this life, and it, too, has its pictures from which are drawn lessons in a mysterious sense essential to the perfect experience of the child of God, that he may not only realize the life and strength, and salvation of God, but may know as well the power of death, his weakness therein and his salvation therefrom. In the experience of salvation it is threefold—"Who hath delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver, and in whom we trust he will yet deliver." Therefore they do not forget but remember all the way which the Lord their God led them in their deliverance from the power of darkness and translation into the kingdom of his dear Son. God's people are so taught that the very darkness is made light unto them. As the light makes manifest the darkness, so also does the darkness prove the existence of light to them who see and feel the darkness. Dark, lifeless and comfortless would be my life in spiritual respects but for the light of what I am sometimes persuaded is eternal life. For days and weeks, and there have been times for months, I have traveled without the light of the sun or stars, and hope has seemed to have almost perished but the Lord has remembered me again, and for a moment the rays of the sun of righteousness as of the light of divine life, have pierced the riven clouds, and flashed with dazzling splendor in the face of Jesus Christ, and for the moment I have felt to be strong for the day of adversity, and to bless the Lord because he has said, "I will bring the blind by a way they knew not; I will lead them in paths they have not known I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. These things will I do unto them, and not forsake them." The Lord's people are blind, and to know it is a gift of his grace—the light of his life. The things which accompany salvation are contrary to men and crooked, and the way is dark, and none but the living children of God know it, because the Lord has revealed it unto them. For one to know he is a sinner is of God, I feel sometimes to know that I am a sinner, and am glad that I do, feeling that at least this much I have learned of the Lord. I could not say that I am glad I am a sinner, but being a sinner, even as all men are sinners, I am glad I know that I am. And I am glad to feel that at one time I was the servant of sin, and also feel sometimes to bless the name of our God that since that time I have felt in my heart at times a sweet assurance that form of doctrine or faith which God has been pleased to deliver me, or unto which I have by the grace of God been delivered. Feeling to be a dependent sinner I wait for the consolation of Israel.

"I wait for thy Salvation Lord.

With strong desire I wait.

Sometimes I am permitted to look into the heavens in the night time and behold the handiwork of God in the twinkling stars, and then again the night is shrouded in the thick cloud and the smallest star is hid from view. At times when looking into the face of the church, I feel to liken it to the heavens—now wrapped in clouds, and then standing forth as a glorious firmament studded with twinkling stars, each answering the other in brightness as the heavenly light falls in the sweetest rays upon them, and as the sons of God shout for joy these morning stars sing together and the "heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork," and "my heart breaks forth in unknown strains and sings surprising grace." In these heavenly visions I look abroad over the field which the Lord has blessed—the gospel field, the land of Canaan—and with the poet feel to say:

"All o'er these wide extended plains, Shines on eternal day."

*"O, the transporting rapturous scene,
That rises to my sight.*

*Sweet fields arrayed in living green,
And rivers of delight."*

How wonderfully varied, and in a sense contradictory is the pilgrimage of the children of God, and the fact that I find myself and the way I take that which the word sets forth as the way of these and the things which accompany them, gives me much assurance at times that I am of that blessed train that filled the temple, and I am glad that in connection with the revelation of the exaltation of Christ in the salvation of his people and his people seen therein, the presence of the sinners and vile conditions from which the Prophet had been, was being, and should be delivered. How precious the thought that these things were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope—blessed hope. P. G. L.

WHERE ARE THE NINE?

Brother H. V. Cole requests my view of the Ten Lepers, Luke 17:12-19.

The coming of Jesus into the world, and all that he did, and all the effects that result therefrom glorify God. While works of creation in general and God's operations in Providence praise him, it is especially true that the redeeming mercies of grace give glory to God, and the exaltation of Jesus the Lamb of God, as the Savior of sinners, reveals the gracious purpose of God's creation, and the perfect order and harmony of his character in the obedience of his Son unto death, and the revelation of his righteousness in the presentation of sinners to nature and practice in the glorious obedience of Jesus, without fault, before his throne.

In the case before us for consideration lepers are presented. Leprosy is a loathsome disease, transmissible by heredity and by contact, unyielding to any treatment within man's knowledge, and increases in its rage until death comes, and is a type of sin. Those afflicted with it are burdened with the painful consciousness of its incurable nature, and also of its defiling character and that it banishes its victims from the ranks of human society. How eagerly, therefore, would such wretches grasp at a hope of relief or cure.

The ten that stood afar off as banished because of their pestiferous disease, and lifted their voice and cried to him for mercy, show that they had heard of Jesus and of his power to save lepers, and of his merciful disposition towards such characters. Hence they cry unto him for mercy. It is never true that any that feel they are sinners, and loathe themselves as such, fail to cry unto Jesus for help, as they feel that he is near, or that hope in his mercy. Every such knee shall bow and every such tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God, the Father.

All that come to Jesus must acknowledge the righteousness of the law. They must feel that the law is holy, and be blessed with a desire to obey it, though they are conscious of their failure in every such particular. When saved they sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb. They own the justice of God in their condemnation, and the grace of God in their salvation to the Lord.

Jesus came to fulfill the law. One of the requirements of the law of Moses was that the leper, to be treated, must show himself to the priest, who was to consider the case and tell him what to do. Therefore Jesus said to these ten lepers that cried unto him for mercy, "Go and show yourselves to the priests." As they went to show themselves unto the priests they were cleansed, and one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back and with a loud voice glorified God, and fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks. He knew where the praise belonged.

Did he violate Moses' law? No. He honored the law. He showed that faith which is satisfying to the law and honors God.

Jesus said, "were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" There are not found to give God the glory save this stranger (a Samaritan,) And Jesus said unto him: "Arise; go thy way. Thy faith has made thee whole." It is evident there were ten cleansed. Jesus cleansed them all. Nine were Jews who seek a sign, who depend on, as to some extent, legalists. The Samaritan, the stranger, is not at all depending on his own works under the law or on the law. He is as one who feels there is nothing good in him, and therefore nothing good can come from him, nor is it expected of him. Hence he has greatly the advantage in that field of faith is cleared of all the undergrowth of weeds and briars that entangles the Jew in his worship. The old cry: "Ye must be circumcized and keep the law of Moses, or ye cannot be saved," entangles the Jew, but the Gentiles' condition is nearer free. By so much as one is depending on Moses or the law of works for salvation, by so much is he the opposer of Jesus Christ.

Are there not many cleansed who do not return and give God all the glory? Where are they? Oh, they say, I am not fit to go to the church. I have not a great experience as some others. Well, would it not be better to feel that you are vile and have no worthiness of your own?

If all that love the doctrine which the Old Baptists preach would be baptized, how it would increase the membership and spirit of the Church. How it would encourage them.

You are wrong in withholding or putting under a bushel that which God has given you. Glorify him in your conduct by going to the church and telling what he has done for you, and hath had mercy on you.

I often wonder why so many that love salvation by grace, and have a hope they would not part with for all this world, do not return and give God the glory. Is it unpopular? O, yes; it is exceedingly unpopular with the world. They would not join such a church for anything. Ye shall be hated of all men, said Jesus, for my name's sake. But he that endureth unto the end shall be saved. If a man does not hate his own life he cannot be the disciple of Jesus. How different that from joining a popular religion that the world speaks of and where there is no cross.

OBITUARIES

ELDER J. J. JOYCE.

This faithful brother Yell asleep on February 16th. It can truly be said a good man is gone to rest—that rest he so much desired to enter.

He had long and faithfully served the brethren and his ministerial service was in love and meekness, and he will be much missed.

Your brother I hope,

S. H. CREWS.

RUFUS ADAMS.

By request of his grandmother and mother, I will try and write the death of little Rufus Adams who was born June 1 1904 and died June 28 1907, which made his him three years and 27 days old. He died in great pain after suffering for three weeks with whooping cough.

He was a sweet child and everybody who saw him loved him. He has gone never more to return and a home has been made sad by the departure of one so lovely from it. No one knows how precious he was to his family who loved him so much, but the good Lord who doeth all things well took him home with Him where there is no more acting or pain, for he says "Suffer little children to come unto me for of such is the kingdom of heaven." He was the baby, the fifth child and a twin, the other one dying when quite young. He had always been sickly until this spring when he seemed to have much better health.

His father died when he was seven months old leaving his mother in a very poor condition. I pray God's blessing may rest upon her for he loved her so well also that His hand will sustain her so in the end there may be a sweet reunion.

This child was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus F. Adams brother of Elder J. G. Adams.

A little darling was plucked from earth for her baby church, but her apartment to heaven and is sitting just beyond the veil. Her life proved to be a golden gate where the angels wait to receive her. Dear husband and children, grieve not for her, for we have such precious hope, dear husband, to follow the example of your dear wife and try to be prepared to meet her in glory where you will be enabled to give praise to the Father who giveth good and perfect gifts, and is able to give peace and comfort to your grief.

HARRIETT PITT.

Rocky Mount, N. C., March 10th, 1908.

Brother Gold:

If it will not asking too much, will you please publish the death of Harriett Pitt in the Landmark. By the request of Mr. Jesse Pitt, her husband, it becomes my painful duty to make the attempt to write the obituary notice of my cousin Harriett Pitt. She was the daughter of William Spicer and Lucy Spicer. She was born the 1st of November, 1878, and died February 13th, 1908, asking her stay here on earth 29 years, 3 months and 12 days, "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth they may rest from their labor, and their works do follow them." The doctor pronounced her disease pneumonia, and consumption. She was not sick but a very short time, but her suffering was extremely great. All was done for her that doctors and loving hands could do for her, but the death angel had come for her, and she must yield to the righteous command of God who giveth and taketh away. I sympathize with the kind husband in the loss of such a good wife, always kind and obliging. I never knew her to speak an unkind word about any one. She was a good neighbor. She loved peace and was a loving and a kind mother. She leaves a sorrowing husband and two little children, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. The Lord gave him his good wife.

Grieve not for her. She sleepeth we hope in the arms of Jesus. She was a mem-

Will brother Hilliard or some one meet us at Richmond depot? W. T. BROADWAY

The next Session of the Bear Creek Association will convene with the church at High Hill, Union county, N. C., commencing on Saturday before first Sunday in May, 1908. High Hill is two miles from Monroe and in the midst of a thrifty Baptist community. A cordial invitation to Baptists. Those coming by rail drop a card in advance to either of the following brethren: J. J. Hill, W. E. Williams, S. A. Helms, A. M. Helms, Monroe N. C., and you will be cared for. J. W. Jones, clerk, Marshville, N. C.

The brethren and friends of Pleasant Grove and Country Line churches in Caswell County, N. C., have decided to build a Primitive Baptist house for worship about five miles west of Yanceyville. It is quite a distance from any place of worship for our people. A lot of land has been deeded for that purpose, and work is commenced on the house.

These people need some help, and desire it stated that any help will be thankfully received. They request that it be sent to T. J. Foster, Yanceyville, N. C.

Elder Joshua T. Rowe, pastor of the church at Baltimore, Md., has written a pamphlet giving a history of the meeting of the Old School Baptists at Black Rock, 1832. This was about the time of the separation of the new and the old school. The new school had departed from the faith once delivered to the saints, and were acting in disorder, and the brethren withdrew from them. I set forth the reasons for this course. It is a summary of the doctrine they hold.

The price of this pamphlet is 15 cents. Any one desiring this valuable work that will enclose 15 cents to Elder J. T. Rowe, 704 Linwood Ave., Station L. Baltimore, Md., will receive it. P. D. G.

The next session of the Contentnea Union is appointed to be held with the church at Hancocks Saturday and 5th Sunday in March. Elder T. B. Lancaster was appointed to preach the introductory sermon, and Elder D. A. Mewborn alternate.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren: I enclose a letter from my brother to the church of my membership which I think will be useful to the cause and so I have gained his consent to send to you for publication, if you approve. I think that the example set by him is a worthy one and when for any cause members living at such distances from their churches that some member cannot render good reasons for their absence and it is so that cannot be present they should write and let the brethren know how they do. Though I think it decidedly better that each one should have his membership at the nearest church to him so that as near as possible the brethren and sisters can know how he is. Brethren and sisters should always try to arrange worldly business so that it will not hinder them from attending their meetings regularly.

Your loving brother,

To the Primitive Baptist Church at Sandy Grove, Greetings:

Dearly beloved in the Lord: Since I began the services of churches nearly thirty years ago I have tried to teach them by precept and example. When sickness or anything else kept me from one of their meetings and the disappointments were known to me in time I have written letters they might know of my continued love for them.

Such is the case now. Notwithstanding this your communion meeting I shall not be able to be with you. For two weeks I fought this sickness as manfully as I knew how in order to be able to leave home today to visit you but on last Friday I was compelled to take my bed and call for a doctor and now for a few minutes for the first time I am sitting up.

Should we not feel that whatever comes to pass is right? Will our God suffer a wrong thing to befall us when the power is His to hinder it? None of us believe such a thing and therefore whatever befalls us we should praise the Lord.

I hope that my absence will not hinder you all from meeting together and therefore I write this note that you may feel that my mind is with you.

Beloved, speak to yourselves in Psalms, hymns and spiritual songs. In these Jesus Christ, our Lord, is exalted. You should not, in your meeting, nor in your homes, nor in the homes of your neighbors, nor friends sing songs in which Christ the Lord is not praised. "Lewd songs" should be an abomination to a true Christian. They are pleasing to the carnal mind but the carnal mind (or old man) should be crucified and must be ere we can serve the Lord in our bodies and spirits which are His. The singing of the songs of the religious world is the same. The Lord is not praised in them. The flesh must be denied and subdued and abased and Christ exaltted or God is not served.

I am sure that we woefully neglect talking of the goodness and mercy of God to us. Our minds are too easily diverted from the goodness of God to talk of worldly things. This is one reason that we are blinded to the harm that there is in them. The Lord gives us over to a hard heart and a reprobate mind until we learn what manner of people we are. Then the first we know we are complaining of darkness and that Satan is about to prevail over us. We look at our neighbors and think it strange that they deny our Lord Jesus Christ. Let us think: have we given them any reason to believe that He is any more than another god? If that neighbor has heard us singing has it been one of the songs of Zion in which the Lord is praised? Has that neighbor often heard us speaking of the goodness of the Lord our God in such a way as to distinguish ourselves from his neighbors who are of the world only? When the poor and the needy have been in our midst and in need of immediate help have we been first in seeing that necessity and forward in setting the helping wheel in motion and pushing with our own shoulder? If we have not shown ourselves patterns of good works in these things what right has our neighbor to believe in our Lord Jesus Christ? or to believe that our religion is a whit superior to any other religion? Beloved, let us so live that the name of our God be not blasphemed in our daily life and conversation. Let us be humble and chaste in our daily lives and prove by our works and conversation that we have been with Jesus and that we know Him for ourselves and not for others.

From one step to another error and falsehood creep in on us and we practice forbearance until we shield in our churches the very enemies of our God. One says that it is to the advantage of my business that I don't speak out so plainly on these close points for I would wound the feelings of my neighbors and he fails in word as the Lord gave to the churches in or in action declaring the whole council of God. Another says that I can travel anywhere and succeed better in obtaining labor by belonging to the Masonic Fraternity and the brethren have nothing to do with it. He is a good brother and useful in the church and is let to stay there pretending to worship the Lord God alone while just over there he has a dead god, one Hiram Abiff, whose death he is swearing to revenge and thus worshipping a god of heathenism. Another says it is in the interest of my business to belong to the Elks or the Odd Fellows and the churches not having recorded on their books anything against those good orders have no right now to raise any complaint, and so those are held with a profession of a worldly god in their right hand and Jesus in the left, held in the fellowship of the churches. Do we not need some such as the Lord gave to the church in the days of Andrew-Fullerism? A Joshua Lawrence, a Billy Hyman, a Parrot Mewborn, a Gilbert Beebe, to earnestly cry out and spare neither son nor deacon, nor preacher, nor anyone who has turned from the Lord to the service of idols?! "In secret have I said nothing," saith Christ. Oh that God would make us to show His people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins and to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Is there any peace between Christ and belial? God forbid. Why Go down to Egypt for help? The religion of our God is pure and will not in any sense mix with the filthy things of this world.

I pray God to be with you in your meeting and enable you to show love to love one another out of a pure heart fervently that you may have the true witness of His holy spirit testifying of His gift in you. Beloved, no child of our God should use meaningless expressions in his language, nor vain nor profane nor obscene words. These are all embraced in filthy communications and we are exhorted by the apostle to not let any of these proceed out of our mouths. Let us use such things as becometh holiness.

I have often thought of what is the best way to determine what is right for us to do? and I can have no better answer than this: Stop and consider, would the Lord do this under the same circumstances that now surround me? Would he say this word? Would He do this deed? If not then have we any right as being the temple wherein the Lord dwelleth to do or say those things. Have I any right to play cards? Oh, as for that, the society in which I have to circulate does it and I must or I will not be sociable. Which is better the society in which you circulate or the society of Jesus Christ who dwelleth in your heart? Can you grieve the Holy Spirit of God to save the feelings of a worldly society who are the very enemies of the truth? For God's sake leave those things behind. They cannot advance you in the fellowship of the spirit for which you do hunger if you are a child but will tend to sear your conscience with a hot iron and throw in the castle of giant despair to writhe and groan in the pain of your own sins.

Beloved, suffer the word of exhortation from one who loves you, and may the God of grace strengthen you to serve him with your soul and spirit which are His. Pray for one another in the fear of God and pray for me also that I may be released from this sickness and made stronger than before in the love, fear and service of the living God. I want to do His will fully and nothing more.

Your loving brother in hope,
L. H. HARDY.

Greenville, N. C., Nov. 13, 1907.
Elder P. D. Gold,

Beloved Brother in the faith of Christ I hope: I don't feel that I can interest you at all, but I would be glad to express a few of my thoughts and feelings towards you, as you have been so faithful and obedient to your heavenly calling.

I firmly believe you are a chosen vessels of God's mercy. You manifest the love of God so plainly to be sure the world can see the difference.

Dear brother you preach the gospel in its purity, I believe. You shun not to declare the whole council of God. I believe you are true servants of God, endowed with wisdom from on high. You are a brave soldier of the cross of Christ and your walk, talk and writing is complete in my understanding. You look meek, humble but firm and you look as near perfect as any one I ever met. But I know you are a human being and have your carnal properties, but haven't given way to the weakness of the flesh as some do. Your countenance shines like you are living in obedience to the Lord's commands. In obedience in peace and rest. For faithfulness becometh the house of God. Dear Brother, if I could only feel like you look to me I think I would be almost supremely happy, for I feel that you have been born again of the Holy Spirit and are following your Lord's example laid for his followers. Dear Brother Gold, I was enabled by the help of the Lord to attend the Black Creek association at Saratoga, when I had no idea of going at all. But this would roll through my mind, "go, I will be with you, fear not, go in the strength of the Lord," But I was feeble and afraid to venture when this came so forcibly to me, a venture on Him, venture Holy, hear him cry before he dies. It is finished, it is finished, hear him cry before he dies. My desire to go increased daily. I was misinformed. I understood it was to be held in Stauntonburg and went thinking I could walk to church and not be dependent for conveyance. That frustrated some but brother Jesse Moore and daughter met us and conveyed us so willingly it soothed my sorrow, but I thought they were robbed of their comfort spiritually. May God bless them all for their kindness to us in every way for we were well cared for and enjoyed the association well, especially on Friday. It was a source of comfort to me, all three of the sermons. I truly was satisfied, but was anxious to go Saturday and did when the brethren all preached good sound doctrine comforting and strengthening to the people of God.

My heart rejoiced in praising the king of kings and Lord of lords, for the gospel field was shown to me before I went there. The laborers were few. Lord grant more faithful laborers into thy vineyard if it can be thy holy will; enable them to lift up their voices like a trumpet, show thy people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins. Enable them to cry aloud and spare not; rightly dividing truth from error, that both saint and sinner may receive their portion in due season, for the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes.

Dear Brother Gold, during the association I was filled with praise and thanksgiving I hope in sincerity, for my heart that had been rebellious and hard as a rock apparently, was melted so the tears flowed from my eyes and I viewed as harmless as a dove. I wanted to fall at your feet also at the feet of the brethren and sisters and confess my nothingness, for I believe you are a true father in Israel, and I fear you as such. You bear so patiently with my poor scribbling it seems poor dry stuff; more like going over a big field to gather a few nubbins if any good at all. But I live by hope and I sow by an eye of faith at the foot of the cross of the Savior.

I believe prostrate on the ground, I shed tears freely for it was beyond my comprehension. The angels gathered near enough apparently to feel their presence near me and see the shadow of their wing. I felt the hovering was near me and there I was soothed on both sides with such promises I hope was of the Lord. How little do I know of thee or thy joys above.

Affectionately,

MARY MELISSA BROOKS.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother. I have been taking the Landmark for three months and in every number I see that many of the subscribers are behind, and you have kindly asked them to please send you some money. Now, I consider it a shame in the sight of God and man that any one professing to be a Primitive Baptist can boldly go on from year to year and get in debt to you and never pay. The world looking on and seeing your call for help from time to time will surely say, those old Baptists are not as good as some seem to think, for don't you see they will not even pay for their religious papers.

Now, would it not be a good thing to just stop all papers that are behind and when one takes the paper for a year when the time is out, if he does not renew just stop it at once. I am sure if the people cannot pay $1.50 for the paper one year, they do not intend to pay for it when it has gone on for longer.

Now, I think it would look much better to stop the paper, when the time is out than to be advertising them to the world as dishonest, for surely all honest people will try to pay their debts.

From one who loves the truth.

REMARKS.

We have Baptists that are poor in worldly goods, but love to read the Landmark. I wait on them thinking they will pay. Some do and some do not. There are many scattered and cannot hear preaching that desire to read this paper. May the Lord have mercy on us.

Dear Brother Gold:

I will send you this piece which was written sometime in 1907 but I don't remember the date. I feel that I can witness with the poet I am a stranger here below, and what I am tis hard to know. When I would think of sending this piece to you, Satan would suggest people will say you just took the Bible and quoted together passages of scripture. But how can one handle the scriptures except it be revealed unto him? For the letter killeth but the spirit giveth life." Brother Gold, I would love to hear you preach again. I so much enjoyed your sermon at the association. Do with this as you think best, as I have only written it for relief of mind. Your unworthy sister.

BESSIE BROOKS.

"And I looked and lo a lamb stood on the Mount Zion and with Him were an hundred, forty and four thousand having his Father's name written in their foreheads." Oh! wondrous lovely sight to behold the Lamb of God for sinners slain the chief among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely who sitteth on the right hand of the power of God, who is the faithful witness, the first begotten of the dead, the prince of the kings of the earth, unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, that we should be redeemed from among men and in our mouth to be found no guile and to appear without fault before the throne of God.

Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him, they also which pierced him and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending saith the Lord (which is and which was and which is to come the Almighty. I am the first and the last. I am he that liveth and was dead and behold I am alive forevermore and have the keys of hell and of death. Thou art worthy O Lord to receive glory and honor and power for Thou hast created all things and for thy pleasure they are and were created. Worthy is the Lamb, that was slain to receive power and riches and wisdom and strength and honor and glory and blessings. Oh! singing and praising when his chosen ones shall behold the Lamb of God coming in the clouds with power and great glory and he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds from one end of heaven to the other. For the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptable and we shall be changed. For this corruptable trust put on incorruption and this mortal must put immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: "Death is swallowed up in victory, oh, death where is thy sting? Oh, grave where is thy victory? But thanks be unto God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ and he is the wondrous lovely Lamb that stood upon the Mount Zion and with him were a hundred, forty and four thousand having his Father's name written in their foreheads.'

Brother Gold:

I am again driven to the task to write . O, how miserable and wretched I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death ; bitter tears and groans are my meat by day and by night. I thought I would get relief by writing, but I am as an empty blank. I fear I have missed the substance and caught the shadow. O Lord have mercy upon me a poor vile sinner. Where is the blessedness I knew when first I saw the Lord? Where the soul refreshing view of Jesus, and his word. In this world of sin and sorrow, how much longer have I got to go in pain and sorrow, I long to be delivered. The Lord is my strength, and my deliverer. O, Lord, open thine ear unto me, hear my feeble petitions. I am full of murmurings and sin. Thou art full of grace and mercy. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation. Be merciful to my unrighteousness, my sins and iniquities remember no more against me. I know thou art God and beside thee there is none else. Give me faith: faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, but I find myself wanting to go beyond hope, which would be sight, and sight wouldn't be hope. O Lord, give me strength to endure to the end ever looking to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. The sisters spoke of recognition in heaven. We shall know as we are known. We shall awake in his likeness, and shall be satisfied. Shall I awake in his likeness gives me more trouble, than recognition, all the redeemed will know whether I am one or not, and that will be sufficient. My husband's father, Hardy

Yelverton, wanted to know where his first wife was after she died, and in a dream or vision he went to a very pretty place, and all the people or angels were very pretty, and all alike, and one spoke to him, and says a fortune, he recognized her voice but did not know her from the rest of them, they were all alike, and he was satisfied. The world throws predestination and election at us that's all right, Thank God ,they can't change it, I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hates you, but remember it hated me, (Jesus) before it hated you. If they hate us, that's an evidence we are not of the world: so hope springs up. and we are made to rejoice. I believe there is a part of us they do love, that is the fleshly part, which is of the world, for the world will love its own, it is the spiritual part they hate, for the carnal mind is not subject to the law of God neither indeed can be; our own flesh hates spiritual things, for it always wants to go contrary to the spirit: that shows what we are, nothing and worse than nothing! so if of works its no more of grace, and if of grace its no more of works, the two can't mix. A little more and I must close. I fear I am already too lengthy. Brother Gold that sweet sermon you preached at Brother Frank Smith's funeral has ever been in my memory: you told of the many blessings, that came out of afflictions: afflictions sorrows, trials and all these things are blessings. Yet we can't at all times realize it. I often feel all these things are against me, and again, I am made to rejoice in them. Christ was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. If we suffer with him we shall reign with him in glory. When I am lifted above self and this world even in the midst of affliction, and trial I am made to glory in the Lord, and have no confidence in the flesh, so it is grace in the heart that makes us see our nothingness, and hate sin. Brother Gold, when I got up this morning in so much trouble it seemed I could see your lovely face, and thought then I would tell you how good I loved you, but I can't. With tears in my eyes, I will ask you to remember me and mine at the throne of grace. Just a few words from you I feel like would be a great comfort to me. Much love to you and sister Gold. I am as ever, your little sister, if one at all.

MRS. FOREST YELVERTON,
Freemont, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother in Christ: I was requested by some of the brethren in Virginia to write a short sketch of my trip to Tennessee and Virginia last fall, to be published in the Landmark, and by your permission I will try to comply. I left my home on the 11th day of September for Nebo, Ills., where I was joined by Elder C. C. Melton on the 19th. On Friday morning the 29th, we took the early morning train at Nebo for St. Louis and from there to Nashville, Tenn., to attend the Cumberland Association, which convened on Saturday the 21st, in Nashville and continued three days. At this place we met a goodly number of ministers, and heard some good preaching. Ministers from five different States were in attendance. Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia. From Nashville we visited Murfreesboro. On Friday 27th, we visited Providence church and preached Christ to a very attentive congregation who seemed to enjoy the preaching. At this church we met with Elder Agee. From there we returned to Nashville and preached at the church on Sunday the 29th and at night at the hall in the northern part of the city, near the home of brother Dr. George Hite, where some of our brethren hold their regular services. On Monday the 30th we boarded the train for the town of Franklin to attend a meeting at Big Harpeth church the 1st and 2nd days in October. At this church we met with Elders Hogan of Tennessee and Fleener, of Indiana. We had a good meeting and returned to Nashville the 3rd, stayed all night. Friday we took the train for Bridgeport, Alabama, from here to South Pittsburg, Tenn., and were met by Elder Raulston and taken to his home. The next morning the 5th, we went about nine miles up a small valley called Sweeten's Love where there is a Primitive Baptist church of 108 members. Here we preached Saturday and Sunday. On Sunday commemorated the death of the Savior, and washed feet. Elder Raulston was with us and led in this service. Sunday night we preached at the old Baptist church in South Pittsburg. On Monday morning we took the train for Chatanooga arriving about noon. In the afternoon we took the street car for East Chattanooga to the home of our young brother, D. W. Raulston who is in charge of the post office at that place. From this brother and a brother Martin, we learned there are some thirty Baptists in Chattanooga, which they think of trying to organize into a church in the near future to which we gave encouragement. We stayed all night with this young couple. The next morning we took a little trip upon the top of Lookout Mountain, and back to the city for the 11 o'clock train which we boarded for Bristol, Virginia, where we arrived a little after dark and stayed till morning and boarded the train October 9th for Pulasky city, where we arrived in time for dinner, but had to remain till the next morning to get a train to Betty Baker's in Carroll county. This county is the native home of Elder Melton. His father had moved to the State of Indiana, when he was a boy seven or eight years old, more than fifty years ago. He had never been back before.

After arriving at Betty Baker's we began inquiring for Primitive Baptists and brother Melton's relations. We soon learned that there was a church called Little Vine in one mile and a half from the place, and that their monthly meeting would be the next Saturday and Sunday, 12th and 13th. We felt like providence had directed us to this place as we did not purpose coming to this village. Here we met up with brother Isom Surratt, who kindly invited us to his home a mile distance to stay till Saturday morning when he would conduct us to the place of meeting. Saturday morning at 11 o'clock we met at the meeting house a goodly number of brethren and sisters. J. F. Sutton delivered the first discourse, followed by Elder Melton Sunday morning. Elder Melton was first and I followed. At the close a sister came to the church by experience and asked for a home which was granted. At this church we met for the first time Elder J. F. Sumner, who arranged appointments for us till the 30th of the month. On Monday the 14th in the afternoon, we preached at the home of a Mr. Beasley, who is a believer in the doctrine of grace. On Tuesday the 5th we were conveyed to Mt. Zion church where we preached to a good congregation of attentive hearers, and at night again in the neighborhood at the home of a Mr. Robinson. Here we met Elder Mat Jennings. On Wednesday the 16th we went to the home of a brother and sister Williams, took dinner with them and were conveyed from there in the afternoon to Elder Melton's aunt, who is living at his grandfather's old homestead. We spent the night with this aunt of his, and the next day, (Thursday) 17th, were conveyed to

Mt. Lebanon church where we met a good congregation and some more of Elder Melton's kindred in the flesh as well as in the spirit. We went to the home of our brother Ellis Melton and preached at night. The next day we were conveyed to Crooked Creek church where we preached Christ to an attentive congregation of believers. Here we met for the first time Elder Wesley Brindle. We went back to Brother Ellis Melton's for the night and were conveyed the next day the 19th, to Good Hope church, which was their monthly meeting Saturday and Sunday. At this church a good congregation gathered. We preached four discourses at this place and had some strong tokens that the word was received with joy, and we hope it will be remembered for many days to come. The 21st, and 22nd was spent in visiting some of Elder Melton's relations. On the 23rd we preached in the afternoon at the home of Mr. Israel Newman's for the benefit of a sick lady who had been afflicted for several months. This meeting was in the neighborhood of Good Hope church where we met Elder J. D. Vass who is their pastor. On Thursday the 24th we were conveyed to Elk Spurr church, where we met a house full of people to hear us. At this church as well as Good Hope shouts of joy were heard in the congregation, and many shed tears. Elder Garlan Allen was with us who is pastor of the church. At night we preached at the home of Mr. William Melton's, cousin of Elder Melton. On Friday the 25th we were conveyed to Snake Creek church, where we met a goodly number of brethren and sisters to hear what those strange preachers would have to say. Here the brethren and sisters gave us manifestations of Christian love and fellowship at the close of the service by a warm shake of the hand.

On Saturday the 26th we were conveyed to New Hope church, where we met a fairly good congregation, and had a good meeting. At this meeting we met Elder Isaac Webb, perhaps the oldest minister we met while in Virginia, whose praise is in the churches. Brother R. B. McPeak and Mr. Cox met us here and conveyed us to Elder Webb's sons for dinner. Elder Webb and wife going with us where we spent our short visit together very pleasantly. Brother McPeak and Mr. Cox conveyed us to brother McPeaks home where we spent the night. Sunday morning we were conveyed to Panther Creek church where we met a good congregation of believers, had another good meeting with those strange brethren and after dinner near the church with a brother and sister Marshall were conveyed by Brother J. L. Marshall to his home near Reed Island church, where we preached Christ on Monday. The brethren here seemed to enjoy the preaching very much. From here we were conveyed to Bethel church where we preached Tuesday and met with Elder John Hurst at this church who staid with us two days and nights. We had a pleasant meeting at Bethel. On Wednesday the 30th we went to Pilgrims Rest church, Elder John Hurst going with us. Here we had another good meeting. At this meeting a lady came to the church, telling what she hoped the Lord had done for her, the church received her into their fellowship. The church gave us the hand of fellowship. We bade the brethren and sisters farewell, and departed on our way to Roanoke city, where we were met by Dr. J. C. and his brother Sam Hurst at the depot, and conveyed to their church where Elder Melton preached. At eight o'clock Thursday night the 31st the people assembled again and the writer tried to preach

A good feeling seemed to prevail in the congregation. Elder J. C. Hurst is pastor of this church assisted by his brother. Next morning, November 1st we boarded the train for Rocky Mount, Franklin county and were met by brother Thomas Overfelt and conveyed to his pleasant home, where we expected to go to Little Creek church the next day (Saturday,) but it rained so hard we did not go till Sunday morning where we met a fairly good congregation. This church was the home church of the late Elder John C. Hall, but is now pastored by Elder E. L. Blankenship whom we met at this meeting but did not get to his home, as conveyance was ready to convey us a part of the way to Pig River church. We spent the night with Mr. Ches Akers and sister Akers. These people conveyed us Monday morning the 4th to Pig River church where we met a house full of people, who gave us marked attention. For the Lord's presence was felt among us. A good feeling seemed to prevail in the entire congregation. We went to the home of sister Jemison for the night, who is a daughter of the late Elder J. C. Hall. Tuesday the 5th we were conveyed to Republican church, where we met a good congregation and the pastor of the church, Elder Peter Corn. The people seemed to enjoy the preaching very much. Elder Corn took us to his home for dinner. From here we went to the home of brother George Ingram where we preached to a small congregation at night and stayed till morning. Wednesday the 6th was our appointment at Canton Creek church, but we did not get there on account of a very cold rain falling, and no covered conveyance to keep us from suffering. This is the only appointment made for us in all our trip that we failed to reach. Thursday the 7th we met with the brethren at Chestnut church where we preached the word to an attentive congregation, that seemed to enjoy what was preached in the Missionary Baptist church house in Rocky Mount to a mixed congregation. Friday 8th, we were conveyed to Old Bethel church the home of the late Elder John R. Martin. We met a house full of people at this place where we tried to preach how Christ came into the world to save sinners. Much good feeling seemed to prevail. A Mr. Lyle met us at this meeting and conveyed us to his home six or seven miles and cared for us two nights. Mr. Lyle is a Baptist believer and his wife a member. Saturday the 9th and also Sunday we met the brethren and sisters at a church called Cross roads, and had a good meeting each day. Here we met Elder Silas L. Plyon the pastor of the church and enjoyed his company very much. From here we were conveyed to the railroad, took the train for Roanoke and met the brethren again at their church house Sunday night and preached to a large and attentive audience, the brethren and sisters extending us the hand of fellowship. We bade them farewell and boarded the train at one o'clock a. m. for Norfolk, Va., reaching there the next day after 9 o'clock. We went from Norfolk to the ocean, in the afternoon then to the Jamestown exposition, next morning to Fortress Monroe and in the afternoon to the exposition again. Wednesday morning the 13th we boarded the train for Richmond, where we spent three hours and then boarded the train again for home passing through Staunton, Va., Winchester, Lexington, Franfort and Louisville, Ky., on to Saint Louis, arriving at home Friday evening the 15, at 7 o'clock where we found all well, but had to leave next morning for my regular appointment for Saturday and Sunday.

Elder Melton and myself delivered forty sermons a piece on this trip. As to their worth, those that heard us are better able to tell.

We will never forget those brethren with whom we met. They made us feel at home, we were no poorer financially than when we left home. Brothers and sisters if this should be published, remember a poor old sinner in your prayer.

Dear Brother Gold.

I enclosed please find $1.50 for the Landmark for the year 1908. I have been taking it for two years and I don't feel like I can give it up, especially now that I have to stay in the house all the time. It is all the preaching I get and I always look forward to its coming as there is sure to be sometime in it to cheer poor vile me, I am 68 years old and so afflicted I can not attend church. I have been very feeble for a long time, so I could just stay up and walk around in the house. About five weeks ago I lost all the use of my right side and had to be lifted in every way, could not even turn myself in bed. But I know God does all things well and I know that it is good for us to suffer and I hope that in his own good time he will restore me again if it is his precious will. I think at this time I am a little better as I can move my hand and foot more than I could a week ago, also I can stand up by some one holding me for which I am so thankful.

Brother Gold, I want to thank you for the picture of yourself that I received in the dear old Landmark some time ago. and I know it is very much like you as I was one of the lucky ones who has seen your face and heard you preach. Oh! how I wish I could hear your voice again.

I also want you to please, if its not asking too much, to send me your experience of grace. I read it a long time ago and I would be very glad to read it again.

Please pardon me for writing so much as I did no intend to have but a few lines written when I commenced. I will close by asking the prayers of all of God's people.

Your sister in Christ I hope.

PHEBE JSAWYER.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Very dear brother: Pardon me for addressing a few lines to you. Taking the word tongue for the subject of a few thoughts. You know St. James tells us the tongue is a little unruly member which if not guarded closely will do a great deal of harm and bring confusion among God's children and cause us to suffer many pains and sorrow. This being true we should be very careful how we talk about and with each other, we should be firm and unmovable not to say one thing today and say and do something else next week on account of some fleshly advantage or disadvantage but be on the side of truth and righteousness, willing to please others and not ourselves even as Christ did, seeking the good and happiness of others. If you are a preacher serve in your humble yet honored calling. Preach most where you are best fitted and can be of most use and best appreciated, with the humble feeling that I have no right to claim the pastorate of any sister church because it is near by if I am a member of that one but if the brethren and sisters of any church at home or abroad feel you in their hearts to be their pastor submit to them and do the best you can in the fear of God. This I feel to know by experience is a good rule and we should be very careful and tender as to how we speak of the dear old ministers and pastors, for the tongue is dangerous when the spirit of God is withdrawn from us and we become involved in the flesh and sin. Yes, at that moment the tongue becomes an enemy to all concerned, and taking the history of the past ages what has been the results? Grief and shame. Oftimes it has caused a wreck of communities, brought sorrow in families and sent wronged hearts to the grave in sorrow. Thus members have often taken high places in church affairs, shaping things and dictating how and what should be done but what a curse there was. No one is safe controlled by them. They feed upon the foul things of nature and desire of their own heart. They feed upon the sticks of corruption. The tongue and flesh following in nature is more dangerous than the beasts or reptile, but sweet when in the spirit of God and are like apples of gold and in pictures of silver.

Lovingly your little brother in tribulations I hope.

J. A. HERNDON

Dunn, N. C., March 1908.

Dear Brother Gold:

Feeling a crushing sense of my unworthiness to call you so, but I became suddenly impressed yesterday to write. Will you please pardon one so ignorant and weak as I am for intruding on your time and the space in penning these lines down in regard to my belief and condition, feeling that it cannot be of any interest to any one as I feel the crushing sense of my ignorance and weakness, believing I am the weakest and most ignorant that ever put lines before you, giving others liberty to criticise, and showing forth my ignorance.

But out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. It seems to me if the abundance of evil were to proceed forth from my mouth no one would dare fellowship me. For I feel the crushing sense of evil of my heart, my guilty sinful unthankful feelings so much, being also aware that God looks upon the heart. This fills me so full of guilt and condemnation that I cannot approach a just and most righteous Father in an effectual and fervent spirit of prayer with faith as required to obtain my greatest desires. I cannot realize how he can bless one as I am when I am so unthankful and undeserving, trampling on his mercies daily as I do. Therefore such causes me to abide in darkness and unbelief. My faith is weak. Although I trust he can strengthen that which is weak and bind together that which is broken. "Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyed the voice of his servant, that walketh in darkness and hath no light? Let him trust in the name of the Lord and stay himself upon his God. Let him trust in the name of the Lord." What name? "The Lord merciful and gracious, abundant in truth and mercy, forgiving iniquity and sin." But how can we trust in what we have not seen. We do not consider? Trust needs a broad foundation for repose, and for those to trust Him, those who walk in darkness and have no light to be guided by, I believe need more faith than those who have the light of his countenance and His peaceful presence to guide them. As we who walk in darkness only have His promises as a rod and a staff to lean upon, to comfort us, the promise is blessed are those who not seen yet have believed. Yet if I should be one who walks in darkness I am not only in darkness but also in the wilderness subject to the tempter in so many ways, and such little faith as I possess, indeed makes my way difficult and nothing but halting and at all little hindrances makes me the weakest and poorest in spirit, I am never allowed the loving presence of Him to enable me to run and not weary. But I am continually down in the valley of humiliation ready to faint with fear, suffering the loss of all things except a little hope and it seems to too little to claim, craving and desiring a better one, looking this way and that way, mourning as a lonesome dove looking for the return of its mate, waiting, watching for some signs or evidence, that I am not finally forsaken, trusting that He will yet appear and give me the desired light and strength, strength to make my hope stronger, yet I may have to go all the way mourning my absent Savior, even down to the very gates of death, and be compelled to cry out in my last moments as Jesus did, my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? In those last moments of his bearing the guilt and sins of us all, being in such great agony he cried out My God, why hast thou forsaken me; Oh how much suffering he was enduring, yet He knew no sin, having resisted all temptations and now in His last moments felt forsaken of his own Father whom he obeyed. So why should not some of His people here on earth partake of his suffering? Here I will go back to my lamentable condition, poor and afflicted beyond power of humanity to relieve, yet what did he say, I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the Lord. Who are they of whom he was speaking? Some can say, I am the poor, I own nothing of this world's goods, I have nothing but myself, penniless and poor, afflicted and poor, afflicted unable to work. But ah, my dear brethren and readers, I am one poorer than they. I do not so much as own my self for much of my time I am a servant owned by Satan, doing at his command. I must confess with shame, not able to controll the members of this body, as the apostle Paul exhorts us to, this works death within, making me almost despair. But with the poor of this world's goods there are supplies to be had by labors. But the poor in spirit, when we who are poor in spirit go to the Master we can only go with a load of guilt and sin, destitute of faith, which labor will not obtain as faith which is required to obtain our needs, is not to be had by labor, it being the gift of God. And if only the poor in spirit could possess this faith to confirm our hope enabling us to run and not be weary, working with patience, enabling us to look forward for the reward when our labor is ended, expecting to sit down at the king's right hand, and sing praises forevermore.

Dear Brother Gold, there is much more I would like to write of being afflicted, ignorant, I fear I say much that I need to have corrected, and which should of no interest or use to publish. So now I deliver this to you to do as you see fit to. I have written as my mind led me, only I have not finished which I desired to. But will finish with lines to you alone, and if you desire to add I have no objection and shall not find fault if you confine the whole of this to the flames leaving this matter to your own judgment. Now what I wish to say further on the subject of being poor and afflicted, my memory takes me back feeling poor in spirit. But how about the mind being afflicted, being sorely afflicted in body and past recovery? I remember in days passed years ago when I tried to pray in my feeble way to the Lord to afflict and punish me in the flesh for the great sins I had committed, feeling so full of guilt and condemnation, I believed I had to suffer for it, and I felt so well and healthy I knew no suffering but believed all of God's people were made partakers of much suffering to fit them for the Master's use, and felt that I desired so much to suffer in time instead of eternity. I prayed that I might do my suffering in time here. Surely I am sorely afflicted in body, but how about mind? I feel like my mental sufferings are only of a worldly nature caused by the binding and sufferings of the body. Oh, how mysterious to now think why was it that I offered up such a prayer, and is my suffering the answer to it, or is it only sufferings as befalls any other fallen creature of Adam. But when I was trying to pray as I did I at the same time was considering how and what suffering was, but seemed to feel then that my mind could never justify the punishment I deserved, that the body alone must bear it. So dear brother, this suffering condition of mine keeps me blinded and from resting on the promises given by our dear Savior for those who are afflicted, so by this I cannot rest on the rounds of the stairway that leads to heaven. But endeavour to keep climbing, hoping and striving to reach that shore where pain and death are felt nor feared no more. Asking to be remembered in your prayers to a High Priest who knoweth our infirmities and healeth all our diseases, if one at all, being the least of the least. I am,

Unworthily,

AZUBAH LEE.

REMARKS.

Sister Lee's desire was so great to follow Jesus that she prayed that she should have afflictions of body as well as of mind and spirit.

But when these bodily afflictions fall upon her even to extreme helplessness then there is an increase of affliction because she is afraid it is of chance, and not for Jesus sake. But suppose she could truly feel that this bodily affliction is for Jesus' sake, then it would turn her captivity to rejoicing, and her affliction would end, but she prayed that it might be for life.

The comfort to her is that the Lord heard her prayer, and has afflicted her because he loves her, and thus He is purifying her and so will sustain her to the end. P. D. G.

Dear Brother: I will write a short piece meeting will be the first Friday, Saturday and Sunday in May, and we hope as many of our brethren and sisters as can will visit us at that time. All that come will be met at the depot and kindly cared for while here. Brother Gold, can't you come? We are looking forward to a good meeting.

Volume XLl No. 11

Wilson, N. C., . Apr. 15, 1908

Entered at the Post Office at Wilson, N. C., as Second-class matter.

Brother J. H. M. Clitt of Georgia requests my view of Mark 16:15. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.

This was a personal command to the apostles and that was an enlargement of the first command he gave them when he said go not among the Gentiles, but go ye rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. But after the resurrection of Jesus when the middle wall of partition was removed and its iron gate by our Savior was carried away then there was no difference between Jew and Gentile but in every nation he that feared God and worked righteousness is accepted with him.

Prophets had foretold a day when there should arise and shine a great light for the Gentiles, and the Redeemer and Lord of the whole earth should rule from the river to the ends of the earth, and in his name should the Gentiles trust. For all the ends of the earth should look to him and be lightened. Jesus had come in the flesh and wrought and suffered all that was foretold of him, and he declared that all power in heaven and earth was delivered into his hand, and therefore he sent the apostles with the statement that signs should follow those that believed. In the name of Jesus those that believed should cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; and they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover. There are people now living that claim that they are going into all the world and preaching the gospel to every creature. But where are the signs that follow those that believe what these men preach? There are none of these signs following them, hence they have no right to claim that this command extend to them.

The gospel was preached to every creature under heaven, in the days of the apostles, for it is said they went every where preaching the gospel.

Jesus said the poor have the gospel preached to them. Indeed none but the poor in spirit do hear the gospel preached in the power of a resurrection life. Those the Lord calls to preach the gospel are to sow beside all the waters, and sow their seed with a liberal hand, though they know not which shall prosper, whether this or that, or both alike. We are to preach to every creature so far as we are sent, but as many as were ordained to eternal life believed and no more nor any less when the apostles preached, and it is so now as it was in the days of the apostles.

Those that believe and are baptised shall be saved. What a blessed answer is felt by him that forsakes all and follows Jesus. Those that do not believe when the gospel is preached give no proof that they are saved, but they shall be damned. It is the believer that receives the blessing, but the unbeliever or he that believes not shows that he is already condemned, and the wrath of God abides upon him. When the gospel is preached the elect of God hear and receive the word preached for it comes to them in demonstration of the Spirit and with power, and in much assurance. How beautiful are the feet of them that publish peace, that say unto Zion behold thy God reigneth.

P. D. G.

The leprous Samaritan—once leprous, now clean—shows by faith where his heart is. He acknowledges that Jesus is the Son of God. He glorifies God. His faith has made him whole. He proves his faith by his works, and he has the witness in himself, which is the best of evidence. If any man do the will of God he shall know of the doctrine, whether it is of God or not. He that believeth hath the witness in himself. Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

If Jesus did not say to the nine your faith has saved you, what right have I to say it? It is not every one that saith Lord, Lord! shall enter the kingdom, but he that does the will of God. They that obey the truth—that follow Jesus and thus return and give God the glory, are the ones that have the blessed evidence. He that is baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus glorifies God, has the answer of a good conscience, and goes on his way rejoicing. He that forsakes for Jesus finds all in him—and so much better all. But carnal ease, the love of popularity, fashionable religion, a good name with the world, and all such trash and gins as these that men give heed to and do not give glory to God by confessing Jesus as their Savior are among the snares and traps the devil uses to decoy mankind away from the glorious simplicity of the gospel. By their works ye shall know them. Every one is judged according to his works, and shall receive according to his works.
P. D. G.

Brother N. G. Greene requests my view of Joshua 24:15:

“And if it seems evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve: whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house we will serve the Lord."

There is no power equal to the power of God: yet men love to boast of their power to do as they please. There is no subject on which mankind that are not born of God are so agreed, and on which they so much dwell as their free-agency and responsibility. God sets good and evil before us they say, and tells us to decide whether we will choose the good or the evil. It is left to us to decide whether we will serve God or sin. They quote the above named text in Joshua as proof that it is just left with men to decide this matter. "Choose you this day whom you will serve." You should not postpone it till tomorrow, but choose you this day whom you will serve.

But is that what Joshua says to Israel? Look at the language and consider it. What is the use of language if we do not heed its plain meaning? Joshua says, "And if it seems evil unto you to serve the Lord choose you this day whom you will serve." If it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord then choose between false gods— not between the true God and false gods. If you have no mind to serve the true God, or if it seem evil to you to serve the true God, then you can choose between false gods—between two false gods, whether the gods which your fathers served before the flood, or in Egypt, or the gods of these Amorites in whose land ye dwell. The gods before the flood were no help to your fathers who served them. The gods that the Amorites served did them no good for you have their land. Then they were all false gods, but if it seem evil to you to serve the Lord God then you can choose between two things that are both false.

If it is evil to you to serve the true God that is proof you are not serving him, and it is proof that you are serving a false god. How can a man that is accustomed to do evil learn to do well while he is doing what seems right to him? We are born in sin and go astray from the womb. Then in order for us to refuse the evil and choose the good we must be born of God first. Then we will choose the good and refuse the evil.

The world holds that God can not take away the stony heart and give a heart of flesh—that he has no right or power to do this—that he cannot do violence to man's nature, but that the creature must decide all this himself, and hence they reject the predestination or election and choice of God. This false position sets them in array against God, and against his word. They have what they want, but what could be a greater calamity than for a man who is wrong, carnal, blind, dead in sins against God to be allowed to choose his own false god, when it seems evil to him to serve the Lord.

Joshua says as for me and my house we will serve the Lord. Joshua is a type of the Lord Jesus and his household is a type of God's chosen people who love God and love his truth, hence it is his delight to serve the Lord. Jesus is the perfect man and captain of the Lord's house and never was in sin or in bondage, but loved the Lord God with all his soul, mind and strength. He chooses his people, his house, and puts his laws in their inward parts, and they are willing in the beauties of holiness in the day of his power. After the inward man the child of God delights in the law of the Lord. He chooses the good part which shall not be taken from him. He is renewed in the spirit of his mind and hence he desires to serve the Lord, and it is as much the desire of him that is born of God to serve the Lord as it is the nature one dead in trespasses and in sins to serve false gods. Each one serves that which he loves, the child of God chooses to serve the Lord because he loves the Lord God, and he loves him because he is born of incorruptible seed by the word of God: while he that is after the flesh cannot serve God because he is controlled by a carnal mind which is enemy against God, and is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. All the nature and power of the carnal mind is opposed to God, while all the power of that which is born of God loves the Lord and desires to serve him.

P. D. G.

ABOVE.

The kingdom of heaven is higher than the world, and therefore higher above the kingdoms of this world. One man may be higher in location than another and yet be more corrupt. One may be low down in a valley and be healthy, while another may be elevated on a mountain top and be sickly. One may be lowly in situation as a peasant and still be honest as Naboth, while Ahab the king may be higher in position and yet be very wicked.

When we say the kingdom of heaven is above the kingdoms of this world we mean above in the sense of purify, holiness, power, goodness, glory, possesses every principle of enduring blessedness, while the kingdoms of this world are polluted with the elements of defilement, and therefore of weakness and decay. There is no sense in which these kingdoms coalesce with each other, or lap into each other. The kingdom of heaven is diverse from all other kingdoms. God's thoughts are not as man's thoughts, nor his ways as man's ways, but high as the heavens are above the earth so are his thoughts above man's thoughts, and his ways above man's ways.

If there were any affinity between them at times God's way would be in harmony to him, and man's ways at times would be in harmony with God's ways: but such it not the case. Man must die to live aright. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, they rest from the labors and their works do follow them. I am dead to the law by the body of Christ, and alive unto God through Jesus Christ and him crucified, and married to another even to him who is risen from the dead that I should bring forth fruit unto God. Such rest from the yoke of bondage and their works do follow them. They do not go before and introduce them to God. Make the tree good and the fruit will be good. God's people are new creatures created in Christ Jesus unto good works, ordained of God that they should walk in them.

He that is dead is freed from sin. He is risen risen with Christ where there is freedom. In the risen life where the affection is on things above there is no sin and therefore no death. This is the gospel kingdom that has no conditions and no limitation. Adam in the garden of Eden was in a state where his life was dependent on his obeying God, and hence he failed. When he sinned there was none to lift him up, under the law which is spiritual while he is carnal or enemy against that law. He does not love it, nor can he love it, because he is carnal and is sold under sin. In this kingdom his fruit is unto death. Men in nature's darkness read the law—covenant or the covenant of works with the veil of unbelief over their hearts, and think they can keep that law which is spiritual. They say all that God says to us we will do we, can do it and we will do it. It seems to them an easy thing. They read the Bible and see in it a covenant of works in which the law speaks to them that are under the law and they consider that their rule of life. But they do not know that the law which is the letter kills, and that there is no life nor power in the law to save a man, but that it is the ministration of death with no life giving power nor forgiveness of a transgressor. The law was added that the offense might abound, that sin by the commandment might become exceedingly sinful. Men read the Bible and say they see two ways of salvation, one by works and the other by grace, hence they try to preach both of them; but one is above the law. The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death, because what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. For a man thus to walk after the Spirit he must be a new creature, old things having passed away, and all things becoming new.

This man is not under law but under grace. He is made free from sin. His work is spiritual. He now lives the life of the faith of Jesus. It is Christ living in him. The kingdom of heaven is in him and he is in the kingdom of heaven. He does not serve in the oldness of the letter but in the newness of the Spirit. The food of this new man is not natural bread and meat. His drink is not natural water. His thoughts are not the natural thought of carnal man. He eats the flesh and drinks the blood of the Son of man and has eternal life in him. He that eats the flesh and drinks the blood of the Son man dwells in Jesus and Jesus dwells in him. This is not by natural power or natural knowledge. This food is the true bread of heaven which the Father gives. The earth yields natural food for the support of the Adam life of man, and we labor for it and eat it and die, but the true bread which the Father gives we labor not for. This is the gift of God. Jesus suffered, he labored and toiled that we might eat that bread and not die. Moses did not—could not give the true bread which is Jesus. He gives the true bread which is Jesus. He that eats this bread shall never die. The earth does not yield this bread nor can any power of earth or nation produce in us the desire for this bread. It is not according to the covenant of works nor by man's works. Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor have the things that God hath prepared for those that love him entered into the heart of man, or into the natural power and understanding of man, the things that God freely gives unto his chosen, people who love him and love his doctrine of grace.

All this is above the world, above every power and principle of the natural heart of a man. The way of life is above to the wise that he may depart from hell beneath. Hence they that are risen with Christ seek those things which are above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. They seek them by faith and not by the works of man. Jesus is their hope. They see Jesus made a little lower than the angels for suffering of death crowned with glory and honor that he might by the grace of God taste death for every one—every one sanctified by God the Father, preserved in Jesus Christ and called. For he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one, for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying behold I and the children which God hath given me.

These children of God are partakers of flesh and blood therefore Jesus likewise took part of the same that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. Then these children have the sentence of death in themselves that they should not trust in the flesh nor man's works, but in God who raises the dead. Walking after the flesh brings death spiritual joy. When we thought the Spirit mortify the deeds of the body we live. When we are cast down and have no strength nor confidence in the flesh, but die to all such things, then the Lord lifts us up by his redeeming power and we know by revelation that salvation is our works, but according to God's own purpose and grace that was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. We are to mortify our members which are on earth, put off the old man with his deeds, and put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him in righteousness and true holiness, and live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. P. D. G.

"But thou are the same, and thy years shall not fail," Heb. 1:12.

What is more changeable than man, and how brief is his career on earth? Man is of few days and full trouble. Since he is full of trouble it is a mercy that his days are few upon earth. His life is even a vapor that appeareth a little while and then vanisheth away. What is there in a vapor? It is not substantial, it does not abide, is not permanent. It is boastful, vain, a show or pretense, appearing to be something when it is nothing.

How unsubstantial is man in his feelings, his views, his thoughts, his resolutions. What does he control? Often moved about by winds of doctrine his judgment becomes confused.

Appearances control his decisions of matters. One day he may be loud in one notion, the next day he may cry for another.

The most reliable men are such as are steadfast in their views and principles, especially if such views are sound and such principles are righteous: but one of the snares of men is that the governing power in him seems to him to be right while from the truth Now can he convince himself that what appears to him to be right can be wrong. While he knows nothing of the future he does not say nor feel if the Lord will I will do so and so. He does not seek or love the dominion of God, and does not in his heart say, if the Lord will I will do so and so.

Then how brief is his life? Surely he walks in a vain show appearing to be full of days, healthy, active, while to-morrow he may be locked in the fetters of death. If by reason of his strength his days be four-score, yet is it labor and sorrow, and soon the place that knew him shall know him no more. He abideth not. He is dust, and until dust shall he return, and in that very day nothing more of him in the sense of his acting power. There is nothing to him left on earth. In Adam there is nothing but failure and death. In the day of death their thoughts perish. They may have been considered wise in their day and generation, but when they are dead it is all gone.

How different is the life and character of Jesus. He is without beginning of days or end of time. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. He is the everlasting Father, the I am that I am, the self-existent, perfect, unchangeable God. Who by searching can find him out? We cannot comprehend that which is infinite. Surely the less cannot comprehend the greater, nor can that which is less than nothing and vanity comprehend Him who made all things, and is greater than all things.

We cannot stay the wheels of time one moment. We cannot stop the movements of time a moment, nor turn them back for a day. Once time stood still for a day, once it moved back. These were miracles of God. We cannot halt time a moment, nor hasten it a moment, nor hold it a moment. With us it is always only the brief moment now. How unlike Jesus are we who is the eternal God. Once he was manifest in the flesh for about 33 years in order to reach and deliver his afflicted people. Nor could any or all of the charges, sufferings, and sorrows, or the opposition of satan which he felt in any sense effect or alter his perfect character.

While as a man he grew and increased in stature and knowledge yet as the mighty God he knows all things, and with him there is no past, present or future as we count time. No change, nor do his years grow old. He is from everlasting to everlasting, the same. Because he changes not we are not consumed. For in him every attribute of perfection dwells in such harmony that justice and judgement are the habitation of his throne, nor can he do wrong about anything. He can never be in confusion or doubt about anything. He is high above us and his way is high above us as the heavens are above the earth. Nor can man's wisdom ever by searching find out God. He reveals himself to babes while the greatest of the earthly intellect cannot by searching find out God. It requires not earthly training and teaching in human learning or worldly wisdom to enable one to understand God. This does not help in the least.

Yet the only true and real happiness, joy, and peace ever known by man is to know the Lord God in truth and the Lord Jesus his well beloved Son, for this is eternal life. By faith this is received and is known, for it is revealed to the faith of God's elect who hold the faith in pure conscience.

Lord what is man that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of man that thou visitest him?

Jesus was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. Who is this every man? "For both he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified the all of one (Father) for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying I will declare thy name unto my brethren. Then they were his brethren before he declared the name of his Father unto them. What makes or constitutes brethren? To have the same parentage.

Unless our faith lift us out of and above the limitations of worldly and natural relations we know not the Lord Jesus, nor the Father of all our mercies. Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Nor is it born in the natural heart of man, but it is born of God, and therefore it raises us above the world where there is no time, changes of season, nor decay, for the former things are done away. Time is no more.

OBITUARIES

On February 26th, 1908, Sister Nancy Caroline Farthing fell asleep in Jesus at her home in Durham, N. C.

We the Primitive Baptist church desire to put on record some fitting recognitions of her love and faithfulness to her church with our expression of our individual appreciation of her personal worth in a suitable memorial of the days when she was with us.

Her membership was held with the church at Eno, but after moving in town she always worshipped with our congregation unless providentially hindered.

Therefore be it resolved that we recognize a wise providence in all that pertains to life, and do not question God's wisdom. We bow our heads in grief and submission to his dispensation.

Resolved second, that we tender our deepest sympathy to the family and pray that God will bless them all. As our dear sister was wont to say, "My arm is too short."

Resolved third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, also that a copy be spread on the records of the church at Durham, and sent to Zion's Landmark for publication as a memorial of one who was lovely and faithful in all the relations of life.

NANNIE F. CARRINGTON
P. D. GOLD. Committee.

NANCY CAROLINE FARTHING.

This faithful, loving, noble sister was born February 26th, 1825, near where the town of Durham now stands, and died February 26th, 1908, making her 83 years old the day she fell asleep.

She was married to brother William Farthing February 12, 1843. She was received into the fellowship of the church at Eno near her home in 1848, baptised by Elder George Coggins, Elder Ferrill being the pastor but in feeble health then.

Sister Farthing remained a member at Eno while she lived. Her home was a home for Primitive Baptists and many others who loved good behavior. She and her husband were industrious and frugal, conscientious and loving in their lives. When her husband was taken away the first time after this I met her with uplifted hands and tearful face she exclaimed, "Brother Gold, my head is gone, my head is gone." It seems to me the lives of such people greatly display the riches of grace. For the righteous living of faith surely speaks loudly of the glory of Jesus.

Hers was a meek and quiet spirit which is of great price in the sight of God. In all her life she was meek and humble, faithful and gentle and greatly beloved by her people.

If she had faults they were hid under the mantle of charity so I did not see them. Of her virtues she possessed the full number. Many were gathered at her funeral, for she was greatly beloved, and my mind was directed in speaking to the last chapter of Proverbs from the 10th verse to the last of that chapter, as illustrating the virtues of a mother in Israel enriching her character by the adorning of the grace of God in her life. Her conversation was gifted and rich in Bible expressions of its holy principles. Her desire was to be reconciled to the will of the Lord God and her Lord, and she peacefully fell asleep in the rest of those asleep in Jesus.

Surviving her there are two sons and two daughters, all noble and loving people, and faithful children rising up to call their mother blessed. She set such a noble example of friendship and faithfulness in her relations of life, and her children are much devoted to each other. I have spent many hours in that family, but have never seen an act of any one of them towards another one but that of great kindness, nor have I ever heard from the lips of any of them any expression but that of kindness to all the others.

Brother G. C. Farthing, the oldest living member of the family, has been a member of the church at Durham many years, and is well known by our people as one of the most prompt, faithful and useful members of the Primitive Baptists, and one of the most devoted sons to his mother I have ever seen. Indeed all of them loved to obey and honor her while she lived, and love her memory after she is gone.

P. D. GOLD.

MARY E. WARREN.

Into the home of her brother in law Mr. P. Stille, Edward, N. C., February 28th, 1908, the Death Messenger came and bore the lovely spirit of Miss Mary A. E. Warren to the life beyond our finite conception. Just four short days she suffered intensely with congestion then serenely fell on sleep.

She was a faithful member of the Primitive Baptist church and loving her doctrine and her people, with unusual zeal. Mary's seat was never vacant when her health permitted presence there. To Zion's Landmark she was a regular subscriber for many years.

Our sister was the first born of Jesse and Georgia Warren of sacred memory, and lived her peaceful useful life of 68 years in their home save one short year faithfully nursing them in sickness, and caring for her father until he had reached his four score and ten. None could be more dutiful or self-sacrificing.

Just after the civil war she chose the vocation of teaching and loving the work taught many years with marked success.

Beautiful ideals formed the basis of her character, purity of thought, word and deed raised her high above the ordinary, the grace of sincerity and loyalty to the right. She loved all the grand and beautiful in nature, flowers were her friends and companions. Cheerful and vivacious, she won to herself many life-long friends who mourn with relatives for our loss. To these, in sympathy, we point the unfailing promises of the risen Lord. Dear heart we miss your glad merriment, your kindly sympathy, your cheery greetings but God knows best and sometime we will understand.

Brother William Brinson conducted burial service, and we laid her body beside the graves of loved ones gone before.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

"A BEAUTIFUL LIFE ENDS NOT IN DEATH."

I have been requested by some of the family to write obituary notice of the death of a dear friend of mine, Mrs. Latacia F. Dupree, (nee Summerell) wife of the late

W. T. Dupree of Edgecombe county, N. C.

The subject of this notice was born March 18, 1839 and departed this life March 21, 1908, making her stay on earth 69 years and two days.

She was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Wm. T. Dupree August 27 1863. Unto this union eight children were born five of whom are now living, J. W.; J. T.; and E. L. Dupree of Edgecombe county, Mrs. Margaret Dunford, Mrs. Ed. Norville, of Paikland.

Mrs. Dupree united with the Primitive Baptist church at Lower Town Creek Saturday before the second Sunday in July and was baptised the following day in 1901 by the pastor of said church Elder Amos Crisp of which church she lived a true devoted member until her death always filling her seat when she could conveniently do so, and if her health would permit.

She was confined to her room two months prior to her death with bronchial trouble of which she bore her suffering with patience and Christian fortitude. All was done that loving hands could do, but could not stay the hands of death. She was attended by one of Edgecombe's wisest known physicians, Dr. W. P. Mercer. She was rational until the last. Just before the end came she spoke several times of seeing such a pretty light, "Such a pretty light," Her children have the sweet assurance to believe she is now basking in the arms of eternal bliss, which is indeed consoling. I have known Mrs. Dupree ever since my early girlhood, and have known her to love her, She always seemed willing to lend a helping hand in time of need if she could do so. She was an intelligent and truthful lady, and lived a Christian life worthy of example. She dearly loved company, more especially the Baptist to hear them sing and tell of the goodness and mercy of God to poor sinners.

We all believe her faith in Jesus was strong and her hope sufficient to meet her God. She lived a widow's life about 16 years. The greater portion of that time she spent with her son Jim T. Dupree and family, at which place she was at the time of her death, which occurred on a beautiful moon light winter's night while the world was robed in a mantle of snow. It was then the death angles came and wafted her spirit away to the most high of whence it came there to put on the pure, white and spotless robe of immortal glory, and forever shine in the beautiful home prepared for the saints not made by hands, but eternal in the heavens.

Her remains were taken to her old home near Old Sparta and there laid beneath the sod to await the resurrection morn when the grave shall give up their dead, and she will come forth in the likeness of her Savior. May the good Lord in his alwise providence see fit to speak peace unto the troubled breast and make her children reconciled to the will of God is a sincere desire of a true friend,

CECLIA A. JENKINS.

Rocky Mount, N. C.

MRS. KATE BOAZE.

Mrs. Kate Boaze, wife of J. C. Boaze departed this life February 4, 1908 in her 60th year after being in bad health about four years. Her maiden name was Kate Murl. She was a faithful member of Strawberry church where she attended regularly until her illness. She was a good wife, kind mother and beloved by all who knew her. Her afflictions were borne with much patience and she never murmured.

All that loving hearts and willing hands could do was done to relieve her but the Lord saw fit to take her away from us.

She was conscious of her death as several days before she was confined to her bed she told us that she wouldn't be with us long. She was the mother of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, all of which survive her except one son. We feel she is on the right hand of God. Oh! how I hope to meet her in heaven where pleasure and happiness never cease. I do believe the Lord would smile upon this world oftener if more of us were trying to take up the cross and press on toward that blessed home. Written by her son, C. OCTAVIOUS BOAZE.

MRS. EUDORA W. WALKER.

This dear lady was born March 15th, 1860. On December 20th, 1883 she was married to Mr. J. H. Walker by our precious brother, Elder James S. Dameron. She was the mother of ten children, seven of whom survive her. She was a precious wife and mother, never tiring in her efforts to comfort and to provide for her children. She departed this life February 11th, 1908. Therefore she was forty-seven years, ten months and twenty-six days old.

On the night of February 5th she became very happy and told Mr. Walker that the Lord had answered her prayers. She wanted to see sister McKinney (who was down sick and died one week afterwards) saying "I want to talk to her now." She rejoiced that the Lord had given her rest in Christ and regretted that she could not unite with the visible church. On the day before her death she said to her husband, "I leave it all with you." Thus while she never was joined to the visible church, she leaves bright evidences that she has been joined to the church triumphant and where she will live forever in the arms of our dear Lord and Savior. She leaves behind her a dear loving husband, seven children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn, but their mourning is in the blessed hope that she is resting in the Lord.

Mrs. Walker was sentimentally a Primitive Baptist but her son being a member of the Presbyterian and others members of the family being of that faith her funeral was conducted by Mr. D. I. Craig, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, then her remains were laid to rest in Greenview cemetery to await the will of God to call her up, we believe, in his own likeness to dwell with him forever.

The Lord bless the bereaved to be submissive to his holy will and give them grace to be prepared to meet him at his coming is the prayer of their friend,

ELDER F. L. OAKLEY AND BROTHER
R. T. WILLIAMS.

We, the members of the church at Wolf Island, in conference assembled at the March meeting 1908, adopt the following.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst by death our beloved brethren Elder F. L. Oakley and brother R. T. Williams.

And Whereas, We bow in humble submission to His will, knowing He doeth all things well, is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind. Yet we feel in the death of Brother Oakley, that the church has lost a faithful pastor, a good adviser, and one worthy the name pastor in every respect. And in the death of Brother Williams we have lost a beloved and faithful brother, and the church a faithful and efficient clerk, one that will be missed among us. Their lives will be good examples for us to follow.

Resolved. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to the families of our deceased brethren, a copy to Zion's Landmark, and also to the Reidsville papers with the request that the same be published.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

THE SOWER AND THE SEED

Elders Gold and Lester, Dear Brethren:—I have been completely stirred up over the parable of the sower and the seeds. I want to tell you what appeared to me in June 1904. Ever since then the scriptures have been running in my mind continually and if this was not a vision I dont know what a vision is.

I went to my work one morning and this scripture came forcibly to me, "Behold a sower went forth to sow and when he sowed some seeds fell by the wayside and the fowls came and devoured them up. Some fell upon stony places where they had not much earth, and forthwith they sprang up because they had no deepness of earth, and some fell among thorns and the thorns sprang up with them and choked them. But others fell on good ground and brought forth fruit some an hundred fold, some sixty and some thirty fold.

Now I want to tell you how I understood this scripture. Previous to June 1904, I thought the wayside and thorny and stony ground bearers were mere professors. But the scripture came so forcibly to me that it changed me right about. I think I shed more tears that morning in two hours than I ever did before in the same length of time. The fifteenth verse of the thirteenth chapter of Matthew caused me to change my opinion. I thought I was preaching and the tears were flowing from my eyes so fast I could not see how to work, and while I was preaching one of the brethren in the church came in about ten steps of me and said, brother Jones if you don't mind you will get into arminianism. I said to him never mind I killed a man in Boazoe the other day and if you don't mind I will kill you, and the brother ran away as fast as he could. All this appeared to me while at work and I was made to laugh at the brother for running so fast. Now let us take up this parable. The parables were used under the law service for the law lasted up to the hour of midnight. For the sceptre shall not depart from Juda nor a lawgiver from between his feet 'till Shiloh come and to him shall the gathering of the people be, the law never was completely fulfilled until Jesus was crucified. That is what Jesus meant by saying "it is finished." The penalty of the law was satisfied. So God's people were all under the law service until Jesus was crucified. It was the law service that went out with the foolish virgins and as soon as it went out they began to beg. Just so with the convicted sinner when all his works fail and he goes to the end of the law or the hour of midnight. Then we see that the door of mercy is shut against us and then we begin to beg for mercy, and sometimes we call upon the christian to give oil, but the christian has none to spare, but they refer the poor one to Jesus who has it to sell and we can buy this by our obedience. Now I dont mean that we can buy our eternal inheritance but our inheritance in this Gospel Kingdom, for this was the door that was shut, the law door. Therefore we can't go into the law service anymore.

Therefore the virgins and one talent man and the goats in the 25th chapter of Matthew all represent the Lord's people under the law, and the three and the two talent men and the sheep represent the Lord's people under grace as the new covenant, the gospel day. Now if the goats were the wicked or dead sinner why did Jesus say to the dead sinner or mere professor, "I was a hungered and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger and ye took me not in; naked and ye clothed me not; sick and in prison and ye visited me not. Now how could Jesus expect the dead sinner or mere professor to feed, clothe or give him medicine or visit him in prison or give him drink? It would be foolish in us to expect such from the dead naturally or spiritually. Now if these goats were wicked they were always wicked, for a goat was never a sheep and a sheep was never a goat. This everlasting punishment only lasted until the law was fulfilled, or the hour of mid-night and is the same place as the outer darkness where the foolish virgins were cast.

But my mind has drifted somewhat from the subject. Now we will take up the wayside hearer first. Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower, when anyone heareth the word of the Kingdom. What Kingdom? That Kingdom that Jesus came to set up, the gospel kingdom. The church, not the eternal Kingdom, but the Kingdom of heaven here on earth. Now when one hears of that kingdom and understands it not, then cometh the wicked one and taketh away that which was sown in his heart. Now if the wayside was a mere professor then the devil took that seed out of his heart. How can satan take the good seed out of a person's heart and destroy it? Now in practical sense those wayside fellows and stony ground and thorny ground bearers are God's people under the law. They are by the way, not in the way but by the side of the way. They are not obeying what Jesus has commanded them to do, therefore the fowls came in this world not in an eternal sense but in a practical sense. Now these fowls of the air are very religious professors on the face of the earth outside the true and living way. Therefore the fowls have got many of the Lord's little ones, and they are destroying them too. Not eternally but destroying their peace and happiness in this world. Now the thorny ground fellow heard the word, but the leaders of this world and the deceitfulness of riches choked and he (the man) becomes unfruitful. Now how can a tree become unfruitful if it has never been fruitful.

Now the 15th verse,—For this people's heart is waxed gross and their ears are dull of hearing, which means they were once sharp of hearing. And their eyes they have closed. Did it themselves, lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears and should understand with their hearts and should be converted and I should heal them.

Mark says be converted and their sins should be forgiven them. Luke says, they by the wayside are they that hear. Then cometh the devil and takes away the word out of their heart lest they should believe and be saved. Now tell me how the devil can destroy the word of God in an eternal sense? He can destroy it in a practical sense but not in an eternal sense.

Well where shall we place the wayside and stony and thorny ground hearers in the gospel day. I am going to place some of them in the law service or among the different professors of the world and not in the true church er kingdom of heaven, and the doctrine they hear destroys their peace and happiness in this world. They will be saved eternally but their works will be burned up. Some of these characters are outside of the church and have their light under a bushel and have never been home to their friends and told them what great things the Lord has done for their souls. By not doing this they become unfruitful; by doing it they bring forth some thirty, some sixty and some an hundred fold, or a full enjoyment of their christian liberty here in this world. Luke, says, no man when he hath lighted a candle covereth it with a vessel, but setteth on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

Elder P. D. Gold. Highly esteemed brother in the Lord.

I feel impressed to write you this morning but whether it is of the Lord or not I cannot tell; neither do I know what I shall write. It came in my mind to write and I began to inquire what it should be about, when these words came to me, "think not what you shall say or write." So I got my paper feeling as blank as I ever did, trusting in One I hope who is able to help in time of need.

I have just finished the last Landmark, March 15, and did enjoy reading the letters of those that are scattered abroad and the editorials are always so rich and encouraging. I dont feel I could do without the good old Landmark and feel that every Baptist should take it. I can never tell the comfort I have received in reading it. Many times when I have felt so cast down, lonely and desolate, when the paper would come and I could read from others who expressed my feelings better than I could, I would forget my lonely feelings and the first thing I knew I would be praising the Lord and my love would go out to those dear ones more than I can express. And my dear brother whenever I get a Landmark there arises a prayer in my heart in your behalf. I try to ask the Lord in my weak way to continue his blessings upon you for sending it to me. I know brother Gold you don't have any idea how thankful I feel to the Lord and you for it, neither do I know how to show my appreciation, but there is a consolation that God knows all things and that he will bless us according to his own good will and purpose. I often think of you my dear brother and feel to know that you will not be upon the stage of action much longer and how we all (that are left behind) will miss you. I know I do not often see or hear you preach but I feel the loss would be great to me although it would be your great gain. I have not a doubt but when you hear that welcome voice, "child, your father calls, come home," that you will be ready and willing to go and can say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord a righteous Judge shall give me. He will take you in his lovely arms and gently carry you across the cold river of death when all will be over with you here. No more sighs or groans you will know and as I sit and write I can almost view you around the throne of God with all the loved ones that have gone before singing praises to your heavenly father.

But my dear brother, the thought arises, how will it be with this poor, weak, sinful creature. Will it ever be my happy lot to reach such a place? I have a little hope that I cling to, that Jesus also died for me, but I am often filled with so many doubts and fears I ask, do I love the Lord or not, am I his or am I not. I know he has been precious to me and the older I get the stronger is my love for him and his people and the more I am made to trust in him for all things.

May the Lord continue to be with, bless and spare you to us a long time, if it is his will, is my desire. Remember me in your prayers. Your sister I hope in a better world than this,

MATTIE LUPER,

Sharpsburg, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:-

Perhaps you will be surprised to receive a few lines from me; It has been so long since I have written you before, I rarely ever write a letter, so you needn't wonder if this is not interesting. I seem to be a different person or living in a different world, from what I used to. It seems that for a long time now I have been fed on afflictions, toils, trials and suffering, in mind, spirit, and body 'till I feel like there is but little life left in me. Joy seems a stranger, and I can hardly feel like I shall ever feel joyful again. None on earth knows what I have passed through, and it seems to me that the Lord has cast me down, and I am well nigh destroyed. I am just beginning to recover from nearly a three weeks attack of La-Grippe. All of us have been down with it but sister Hattie.

My health has been bad a long time though I usually carry enough flesh. I have had a lot of trouble with my children too, Ovid my oldest, 4 years old, has always been afflicted though I hope he is growing out of it now. Vesta May, my sweet little star, died at fifteen months old. Elsie, is now, nearly twenty months old is a thrifty looking, sweet baby, though I came near losing her a time or two. I do hope they will have good health now, for it seems to me I have seen so much trouble that my mind almost loses its balance at times. I don't get to hear preaching often and am not able to get out over the neighborhood much, so I lead a lonely life. It seems to me the Baptist's are getting cold anyway. The scripture says because iniquity abounds the love of many shall wax cold, and the Baptists are loving the world, and worldly gain and filthy lucre too much. They are growing intemperate in many ways and it will bring spiritual death, and destruction of peace. Oh! my heart grows so heavy it seems it can't bear its load. If I know anything I love the doctrine held by the Primitive Baptist and I desire to see them walk worthy the vocation where with they are called, and abstain from evil practise, and have a love and holy zeal for the cause of Christ. I can hardly call my self a Baptist or anything. I am nearly always at home and cast down in my feelings, I have sometimes thought seriously of having my name taken from the church book. I am such an unprofitable member and am so far from being what a christian should be, I am afraid that I have not the spirit of forbearance and charity that others seem to possess. There is one consolation to me, though I am full of sin and imperfection myself, I love purity and Godliness, and there are some sinful practises that I believe I hate with a perfect hatred. My life has been a struggle, a continual warfare, for I have always sought to live so I could look the world squarely in the face, and I have some little ones coming on and I pray Heaven that shame touch not their name, that they may live honorable and upright lives, and scorn the evils that befall so many. I desire to live, and that they should live open lives, with no evil practices hidden. I dont mean to advocate so-called "Holiness" doctrine, I simply mean that I want good morals upheld, and I fear it is not being done, even by some of our own Baptists, and I feel like saying to them "little children keep your selves from idols," and to honor your profession by an orderly walk and a Godly conversation.

Awake thou that sleepest, arise and shine." Dear Brother, I have wanted to write to you many times, when I could not. I wrote once after my little girl died, but failed to send it. I wish I could have a talk with you, like I used to, and I feel like I need it. I can't write what I want to, and fear what I have written will not be understood.

Sometimes I can sing "Cast down but not destroyed." But most of the time my harp is hung upon the willow, and how can I sing the songs of Zion in a strange land? I often think I am not a true soldier of the cross, for I grow so weary of the war-fare: it seems I can rarely ever even lean upon my staff to rest a little. "There is no discharge in that war." So we have no continuing city here, but are seeking one to come, even the New Jerusalem, where no sin enters and cast its shadow over one sweet joy. Sometimes I grow so despondent I feel bitter, and say in my heart it is no use to pray, the Lord has cast me off, then again I know if I don't trust in Him I have nothing in which to trust, and though He slay me I must trust Him.

"Sure I must fight if I would reign, Increase my courage Lord, for I can not bear the toil, endure the pain, unless supported by thy word."

Brother Gold, if you should see fit to put this before the public, I hope it will not cause any offense. I haven't written all I would like to, but must close, I hope the dear old Landmark will prosper, and that the subscribers will pay you up freely, and enable you to meet your requirements.

Brother Gold, pardon this intrusion, and pray for a poor sorrowing sinner, saved by grace if saved at all.

In christian love,

Dear Brother Gold, :—

My afflictions and surroundings are such that I get out among the brethren but little, but my greatest interest is in the things pertaining to the blessed Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the only way I have of communications with the saints is by writing. Hence I write you these lines which I hope you will publish in the Landmark with the understanding that I myself assume all responsibility for what I may write, trusting in the Lord to bless it to the comfort of his dear people who may read it. I think it has not been long since I wrote on the resurrection and etc., through the Landmark, and I have preached on the subject once since, but I am not satisfied yet. In fact the doctrine of the resurrection of the bodies of the saints is an all important doctrine, and one of the fundamental principles of the Gospel. In fact without it there is no Gospel.

In Paul's day the people were "grieved because they taught the people and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

Paul said in one place, "for the hope of the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question." Evidently Paul did not "hope" for the resurrection of Christ for he knew that had already taken place, but his hope was that the saints should be raised up in the "resurrection of the last day." Christ said "whoso eateth my flesh, drinketh my blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day!" It is a noticeable fact that the resurrection is always referred to in the Bible, as something that is to take place in the future. Still there were some in Paul's day that said the resurrection had past already and overthrew the faith of some. Without the doctrine of a future resurrection of the body, the doctrine of "adoption" as taught in the 8th chapter of Romans, would be meaningless. For there is no such thing as a parent adopting its own child, and the children of God are not his by adoption, but by birth. "Born of God," born of an incorruptible seed by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. "Born again," born of the spirit. This birth constitutes them the children of God and it is not the body that is thus born of the spirit, for Christ said; that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. How much plainer could language be? And now Paul says in the 8th, chapter of Romans; "And Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin, but the spirit is life because of righteousness." But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by his spirit that dwelleth in you. This declaration of the Apostle (viz) "shall also quicken your mortal bodies," evidently refers to the future resurrection of these bodies for he says: "the body is dead because of sin."

In the 15th, verse of this chapter he tells them they have received not adoption itself, but the spirit of adoption whereby they cry; Abba, Father. The 18th verse reads, for I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. 21st verse. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God." "Ourselves also which have the first fruits of the spirit; even we ourselves groan within ourselves; waiting for the adoption to-wit the redemption of our body." For we are saved by hope, but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for; but if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

Now in all this, there is a present experience coupled with a hope for the future, waiting for the adoption, to-wit the redemption of our body.

I could quote many passages of scriptures bearing on this glorious subject, all showing that the resurrection of the body is a fundamental principle of the Gospel, and that it is still in the future. If it were possible to destroy this doctrine it would destroy every vestige of the hope of any son of Adam and the fruition of this hope will never be realized in its fullness 'till the "last enemy" is destroyed, which is death. If there be no resurrection of the body why talk about the "victory" over the grave? "O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory" The Apostle says, for this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying; it is written; death is swallowed up in victory. Until this change shall have taken place death will never be swallowed up in victory.

The Apostle says in another place, for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ who is our life shall appear ye also shall appear with him in glory. Again, and as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the Judgment, so Christ was once offered, to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto Salvation. Again, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body.

Brethren I tell you upon the authority of divine truth, the Second Coming of Christ and the resurrection of the body is still in the future. Here we are waiting, watching, looking, hoping and we shall not be disappointed. In that day it shall be said, lo this is our God, we have waited for him. He will come and save us. The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout and with the voice of the Archangel.

I am often surprised at the declaration of some brethren about these things. Not long since a brother preacher said to me that he believed heaven was a condition, rather than a location. I came home and got to thinking over the matter, and I don't know how many places in the Bible occurred to my mind to show that heaven was a location and above. "I came down from heaven." "The Lord shall descend from heaven."

Space will not allow me to quote. Read for yourself. I tell you the Bible reads very differently from what some people talk, even some old Baptists. I noticed recently, some brother asked an editor what he meant by the use of the word soul, just as though the word soul was an unscriptural term, and that man had no soul. Man is certainly comprised of soul, spirit and body, and Paul prays in one place, that your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. This proves again the future second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the body. John saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the testimony of Christ and they said; How long Oh Lord dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? These were the souls not the bodies, of those who were slain. They were also in a conscious state. They know their environments, and they know why they had been slain. But the God I love, cannot be slain.

Brother Gold, I have written just what I have always, and am still preach ing, and have always understood to be Baptist doctrine. But I find that along with the coldness, carelessness, contentions, strife and unhappy and unscriptural divisions that now blight the progress and prosperity of our people, brain and delusive theories are also being advanced by some that minister questions rather than Godly edification. Hence the dear old Baptist's are scattered and torn asunder, and the ways of Zion do mourn.

May God enable us all to know and do the truth for Christ's—sake..

Oh Lord turn our hearts to thee and to thy word, and to each other. Brethren, my hearts desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved.

Dear Brother Gold, I find it impossible for me to put on paper the meditations of heart.

May God help us and bless us, for Christ's sake.

H. J. REDD.

WHAT CAN WE DO TO MERIT OUR SOUL'S SALVATION?

Dear Brother Gold:—I feel impressed to write you. On the fourth Sundays, Elder A. J. Moore, preached for us here, and at the last meeting it was his request that Brother J. E. Herndon (licentiate) open the meeting and have something to say. During Brother Herndon's remarks, I felt very forcibly the impression to write you upon the subject of the ability and the inability of man to work out his soul's salvation. Brother Moore followed Brother Herndon in a most able way, and the result of his sermon upon me was to impress me with the idea of writing. Why I know not, but the Lord knoweth.

If I know anything of the saving power of Jesus, I feel that it is all with Him, and I am assured of the fact that there is nothing that a child of God can do to merit his soul's salvation, and if there is nothing that a child of God can do, certainly there is nothing that a child of the devil can do to effect his presence in the Lord's kingdom. The component parts of the Adamic race are not all on one common level, as some would have us believe; neither are they all prepared alike to receive and understand God's holy word, for unless the hearing ear and the understanding heart has been supplied by our heavenly Father, we will not properly comprehend the scriptures; hence there is not in the reading of them, the comfort and consolation for one in darkness, that is afforded God's dear children. The food and nourishment is contained within the lids of the holy book, but the child must be alive to feast upon it.

Asserting most positively that there is nothing which we can do to merit our soul's salvation, I trust that I speak in the fear of the Lord, who I hope is the Captain of my salvation, and the rock upon which I stand; and though we can do nothing to merit our soul's salvation, I believe that every child of God realizes what he has imposed upon him duties far in excess of his Power-limit—far more than any sinful man of the dust can ever attain unto, to say nothing of assuming a task which the Lord, and the Lord only can perform.

Just here I would say one word to the child of God who is outside of the church; perhaps you feel that the Lord has been a merciful Father to you, in that he has made known to you as you hope, the pardon of your sins; that he has dealt kindly with you in your binding love for the brethren and the church of God, and yet in his mercy he permits you to stand afar off—just over the fence—but near enough for the blating of the sheep to be heard. What now is the trouble? You do not trust in that God who has been all to you, even when in your most sinful state; and though he has promised you that he will never leave or forsake you, you still hesitate in the performance of what you believe to be your duty. You are not willing to leave the world, and take up your cross and follow him through evil as well as good report. Then if this little word TRUST expresses so much more than you are able to do, tell me where is the authority for proclaiming from the pulpit, as is so often done, that by the free dispensing of money, the salvation of the entire world could be effected.

With all my weakness which I feel to be heir to, I thank God that I have as I believe, been enabled to properly discern this error, and that he has directed my love and confidence to him, who is my strength and my redeemer. And how much more precious to a child of God is such an assurance, than the thought that he must depend upon the strength of poor frail man. "Cursed is man that trusteth in man, or maketh flesh his arm."

To those children of God who have not united with the church, and yet who feel that their sins have been pardoned, and that they long to be one of God's chosen few; to you especially, I want to say that I thank God that I have been enabled to trust him sufficiently to take up my cross, and in my weak way, attempt to follow him through evil as well as good report. With all the troubles which have encompassed me in my trials through life (and they are many) I do as a result of the performance of my duty, enjoy many pleasant and happy moments which the world cannot give, or take away from me. As children of God, we have no secrets to retain from one another, and I feel that the Primitive Baptists as a people should of all people, express their love one to another freely. When I meet one whom I feel is one of God's little ones, I feel to love him for Christ's sake, whether he be in or out of the church, and if we feel that he is deserving of the love which we so freely bestow, let us as members of Christ's body, make the fact known to him. If Christ be in us the hope of glory, it may be that he is prompting us to throw out one crumb to some little child who is on the outside.

Their mournful cries and pleading looks bespeak for them their suffering condition, and show plainly that they are not at ease in Zion; hence they need every crumb of comfort which we may be in position to offer. These crumbs of comfort though sometimes seem to take with them their stinging pains, increasing the sufferings of the sufferer, all of which however result in good. I remember an incident which occurred when I was a boy: working in the field until I was tired, and for some time after I had decided that it was time to go home. I was cutting down a bunch of bushes, when to my surprise I disturbed a yellow jacket nest. Up to this time I had not known that such a thing as a yellow jacket was in existence. They however abruptly introduced themselves to me, and at the same time introduced their stings into me, and that in many places. After these stings had been injected into my body, I did not find it necessary to defer longer my going home, for I went with all my might. And after I had gotten home my dear Mother and Father lost no time in alleviating, so far as they could, my pain and suffering. And so it is loved ones some evil spirit may say to you do not go home and tell God's people what a sinner your saviour has found, and you may feel to defer until some more convenient season, but I tell you earnestly, the sting will be present with you. You may thus labor on for years in your efforts to serve two masters, but the rod will accompany you if you are one of his chosen vessels, until you are finally made willing in the day of his power, and like the boy fleeing to his parents for rest and ease, from trouble and pains, you come forth pleading for that rest which remaineth to the people of God. Then you can find sweet peace in the bosom of his love, in consequence of your obedience to his commands. Then let us as much as within us lie, trust in the Lord and be obedient to him, serving him to the best of our ability in our weak way, Thus we show forth that our trust is in him. The promise is to those who obey.

"If you love me keep my commandments."

"When we walk with the Lord, in the light of his word,

What a glory he sheds on our way;

While we do his good will, he abides with us still

And with all who will trust and obey.

Not a shadow can rise, not a cloud in the skies,

But his smile quickly drives it away;

Not a doubt nor a fear, not a sigh nor a tear,

Can abide while we trust and obey.

Then, in fellowship sweet, we will sit at his feet,

Or we'll walk by his side in the way;

What he says we will do, where he sends we will go,

Never fear, only trust and obey."

I feel that requisites contained in this poetry are too much for me to perform, and if I am a child of God, it would only be through the mercy and strength of the blessed saviour, that I exercise obedience, if indeed it is exercised at all. And if a child of God is so helpless in the exercise of obedience, which can only be the performance of a salvation? And if he were to work it out, it would be a merited salvation, and not free. The poor helpless sinner wants a free salvation like this "for by grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of boast" And now as the child of God can feel that he has been remembered by the saving hand of Jesus, how he rejoices to know that salvation is of the Lord, and of him only. This thought is precious to, and it is enough for every sin-sick soul. When we become weak, then are we through Christ made strong. Not strong in the sense that we feel to merit anything at the hands of the Lord, save banishment from his presence; yet through the hope which we have of his merciful providence towards us, we are enabled more fully to realize his love for us, and are therefore prompted with a desire to trust and obey him. "Though he slay me, yet will I trust." In the 125th psalm we find consolation for those that trust in the Lord. "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever." "Do good O Lord, unto those that be good, and to them that are upright in their hearts." David says our help is in the name of the Lord who made heaven and earth; and all throughout the scriptures we find the fact portrayed that Christ is all in all, and that except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it. So man cannot work out his soul's salvation, and he is blessed in that this work devolves upon one who is mighty to save. Let us then dear brethren rejoice in the hope which we have through Christ only, and let us try to trust and obey him. And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour." And be ye kind to one another, tender-hearted, and forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

When we can thus obey, we are in position to rejoice that salvation is of the Lord, and that however near unto perfection we may have attained, it is all in and through Christ for in him is our strength.

Your brother in bonds of love,
W. R. MOORE.
Manchester, Va.

Dear Brother Gold:—For some cause I know not what, nor why it is, I have had an impression for several years to write the Landmark. I dont know whether it is of God or not, I dont feel like it is for my worthiness or anything that I can write will be of any comfort to anyone, but if it is of God I feel like he has a purpose for it, so I hope he will guide my thoughts and pen so that some of ths dear readers will be comforted in reading it. For I know without his help we can do nothing, not even breathe.

I have made the attempt to write several times but I felt so unworthy and my writing so imperfect and scattered I would throw it aside and think I would not try any more but the impression grows stronger all of the time and I cant keep it off of my mind. I often catch myself composing something to write, I wake up at night and stay awake for hours thinking over what and how to write and whether it is of God or not.

If I could write like some of the dear ones that have such strong evidence of being a child of God, I feel like it would be a pleasure to take my pen in hand to write. Some can almost tell the very moment God began his good work in their hearts, but it is not so with me, it often makes me feel like he has never began it with me, but I know I am not like I once was for the things I once loved and enjoyed I now have no desire at all for, and often think how can any body enjoy such foolishness, and the things I once did not care anything for I now love.

These scriptures often come to my mind and gives me much comfort.

"The wind bloweth where it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth, so is every one that is born of the spirit," John 3rd chapter 8th verse.

"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren," 1st John 3rd chapter and 14th verse.

For I believe I love the brethren, for there is nothing that gives me any more pleasure than going to preaching and meeting with the people of God and conversing with them, time seems to slip so fast I always want to stay longer.

But I will try to tell (in my very weak way) some of what I hope to be the dealings of the Lord with me.

About nine years ago I began to think about the way I was living, thinking, suppose I was to die what would become of my poor soul. Why it would surely go to torment unless there was a change, thinking as good many others I had to take the first step or do my part before God would help me, so I went to work to do it. I would try to pray and all I could say was Lord have mercy on me a poor sinful creature, lead me in the way that I should live and prepare me for that eternal glory. I even asked my husband to lets have family prayer and he laughed at me and asked me who was going to pray? I told him I would do the best I could. He teased me so much about it I never said anything more to him about my troubles until a long time afterwards. I kept it all to myself, but sometimes my burden seemed to be so heavy I could hardly carry it and I would wonder to myself if I was going crazy. I was afraid I was losing my mind and all I could do was to try to call on the Lord for mercy. I also had an impression to try to pray for my husband too. I would often tell him we ought not to live as we were when he would say he knew it, but would go on in the same old way. I would try to do good and live a christian life but it seemed the more I tried the meaner I got. All was in vain, I had never read the Bible very much and did not know much about its teachings.

I would go to hear the different denominations preach, every one would preach that they were right and would try to prove it by the scriptures, so I did not know what to do nor which was right. I wanted to join the church and live with christian people, and I wanted to join the right one if I could learn which it was but I knew all could not be right.

I would try to pray to God to show me which was right and something said to me, trust in no man but search the scriptures. So I began to read the Bible more and try to compare what I heard preached with the scriptures and I could not find any pleasure or food anywhere except with the old Baptist for they preached just what I wanted to hear. I was raised by Baptist parents and heard them preach all my life, but could never understand until I believe the Lord showed me the true church, and gave me an understanding, for I believe with my whole heart the doctrine of the Baptist preach is the true doctrine and the more I read the Bible and learned of the more I believed and loved them. In July 1904 my husband and I went to a union meeting at Sandv Bottom Church. I never had heard such preaching in my life before, by Brothers C. C. Bland Flv and others. There were a good many visiting brethren and sisters and I thought they were the happiest looking people I ever saw.

Oh I just felt like if I could feel as good as they looked and could commune with them that day I would be happy and I could not help from giving vent to my feeling to save my life. After preaching some of the dear sisters asked me why I did not go to the church.

Oh dear reader you dont know how mean I felt to think I had deceived those dear good people of God. But that was just what I wanted to do, I wanted a home with them but I felt so unworthy I did not feel like they had a place small enough for me, I felt like if they had known me as I knew myself they would not have asked me that question. While my husband and I were returning home he said to me (in a joking way) if you don't quit crying when you go to preaching I am going to quit carrying you. I told him I was either going to quit going to hear the Baptists or I was going to offer to the church, but I felt so unworthy I did not feel like I ever could offer to the church. But the Lord makes us willing at his appointed time.

And to my surprise it was not long after this union before he was made to cry when he went to preaching too and no tongue can tell how it made me feel.

In the following October we went to an Association at Mewborn's church and it seemed that every preacher there knew our feelings better than I did myself, especially Brother L. H. Hardy who seemed to preach to us and no one else. I felt like some one had talked to him about us for he told my feelings far better than I could. I went on in this way until Saturday before the second Sunday in May 1905, when I believe the Lord made me willing to take up my cross and follow my blessed saviour.

We both went before the church at Sandy Bottom that day, were received and Bptized that afternoon by our dearly beloved pastor Brother J. W.

Gardner. I could not talk to the church, I knew it, and felt it, but did not know how to tell it, and all I could say was I want to join the church, I want a home with these people. I often wonder how can the brethren and sisters fellowship with me for surely it must be because they don't know me as I know my-self.

But after I was baptized I was almost happy and everything seemed to be praising God. I thought my troubles were all gone but I soon learned different for sometimes I feel like God has finally forsaken me, my hope is so little, my trials and temptations are so great, I am made to think as the poet "can a mortal be found surrounded with troubles like me.

I often read the 380th hymn in Lloyd's book. "I am a stranger here below," and what I am is hard to know. I am so vile so prone to sin I fear that I am not born again," and think how well it fits my case from beginning to the end, for I know if not free grace then I am lost, for if I had to obtain salvation by my good works I would surely miss it and it is a good comfort to me to believe it is free. My trouble is there any for me? Am I his or am I not? Oh! my greatest desire is to know more of him, love him better and serve him more. For if I am one of his surely I must be the least of all.

With much love to all of God's people I will stop for I feel like the readers will tire reading it, but the half has not been told. Your little sister in hope,

MRS. ANNIE ROUSE.

Kinston, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold:—As my subscription to the Landmark expired February 15 1908, I will renew for another year. I enjoy reading the paper so much I cannot be satisfied without it besides when I don't hear preaching for some time I can pick up the Landmark and find comfort in reading them for they teach what I believe.

There is only one way to be saved and that is by the mercy of God, for he has all the power in heaven and earth. I know I am a helpless sinner and if I am saved it is by grace as there is no other way.

The Primitive Baptists preach the only doctrine that I can believe in for they give God all the glory and say they are helpless, just as I know I am helpless and without God I can do nothing.

I will stop here as I don't want to worry any of God's people. I feel to believe I am writing to one of the very elect family of God.

I hope you may continue to publish the Landmark and be blessed with an everlasting blessing.

Yours truly,

JULIUS JOHNSON.

Four Oaks, N. C.

Elders Gold and Lester, Dear Brethren:—I have had an impression to write the dealings of the Lord with my poor soul, hoping he will be my helper, for without him I can do nothing.

I was born in Stanley county, N. C. in 1885, and was raised by good parents both being Primitive Baptists. When I was a child I had serious thoughts about death especially when I was sick at which time I thought I would do better but that feeling did not hold long. At last I determined not to think of it until I got older and went on enjoying the things of this world until I was fifteen years of age when I hope it pleased the good Lord to show me my lost and ruined condition. I could not enjoy the company of my playmates as I once could and it seemed I had committed more sin than anyone else in the world. My cry was, Lord have mercy on me a poor sinner. I felt like I had not a friend neither on earth or in heaven and that I was the meanest child my parents had and that even they had forsaken me. I didn't want anyone to know I was in so much trouble and I didn't see how God could be just and save such a sinner as I and then I would cry to him for mercy, but it didn't seem like my prayer went higher than my head. I would bid farewell to each setting sun never expecting to see it rise again. When I went to preaching and would see people shedding tears I could see nothing to cry for until Elder Gardner preached at Meadow Creek and the first thing I knew I too was shedding tears and I thought the Primitive Baptists were the prettiest people I had ever seen and oh, if I could only be as good as those people, but I couldn't see how they could love such a sinner as I.

I went on in this way until January 25th 1903, when I was married to Mr. Corneilus Benton and I thought then I could lay all my troubles aside, but it seemed they continued to follow me. I tried to keep them from my husband but couldn't and he would say to me, "Cora what is the matter," and I told him I was worried about what would become of me when I left this world.

I continued in this way for awhile when very unexpectedly I hope the Lord forgave my sins. It was a happy day for me and I could say "Bless the Lord, O my soul."

I had a desire to offer to the church although I felt too unfit—was afraid I was deceived and would deceive others. I begged the Lord to show me in a dream whether I was fit to go to the church or not, and he did. I dreamed Mother and I were at Old Crooked Creek church and brother Elias Williams was preaching when I went before the church, was received and was baptized in the prettiest water I had ever seen and there put into a crowd of pretty little children who were all dressed in white and who were singing the prettiest songs I had ever heard.

I was awakened and was very happy.

In March 1904, brother J. E. Williams preached at Crooked Creek and while the congregation were singing the last hymn the first thing I knew I went before the church, was received and the next meeting was baptized by brother Williams. That was a happy day for me and I went all my way rejoicing. If I could only feel that way when I come to die I wouldn't dread leaving this world. I supposed my troubles were ended but how mistaken I was. It seems I see more trouble now than any one else although I am better satisfied since I joined the church.

"I am so vile and full of sin,
I fear I am not born again."

Last August I had to give up my dear husband and it was heart-rending to me, so I am left alone waiting for my time to come.

Pray for me dear brethren and sisters that I may be kept by a higher power so when I come to die I will meet my God in peace. Since my husband's death I have moved my membership to Meadow Creek.

I must close as I have only written for my mind's relief, but whether it be of the Lord I know not. I humbly beg of you to pardon all errors and pray for poor me as I need the prayers of all of God's people.

Your little unworthy sister in hope of heaven,

PROHIBITION.

This word has been much in use of late. There is an effort being made to uproot the very damaging habit of drunkenness on intoxicating liquors in North Carolina. The effort is to suppress the liquor traffic and thus soberize the people by cutting off all opportunities of drinking.

All sober minded, thoughtful people admit that drunkenness is a sore evil entailing great damage on the State which desires that all its citizens be sober and industrious, great damage on the families of drunken married men, great damage on themselves whether married or not. What right has a man to become a drunkard, and wasting his time and damaging so many other people? The Bible declares that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.

Suppose our women should become drunkards like some men. What an intolerable burden that would be. Why do not women become drunkards too?

The effort to cure drunkenness, or better to prevent people becoming drunkards fifty years ago was by what they call suasion. Temperance societies were resorted to. Pledges were taken of men that they would drink no more. That failing and men getting no better but rather worse, now they aim to pass a prohibitory law forbidding any man to buy or sell intoxicants in the State unless with permission of a physician. They seem to think it has some value as a curative, hence they lodge the right to sell it in drug stores. This is a question we are to consider and see if there is a remedy for the evil of drunkenness.

My opinion of prohibition has been requested. This a question that often provokes intemperate feelings. I mean men that urge its adoption do not always display moderation in their judgment of condemnation against those who do not think as they do. If a man says I doubt the wisdom of the efforts of prohibitionists to eradicate drunkenness they at once accuse him of favoring drunkenness and opposing sobriety. Why not let each man exercise his own judgment and follow his own convictions? One may be a sober man, never having been drunk, and considering that drunkenness is a crime, and should be punished, yet unless he is voting to stop the sale of liquor under license he is charged with being opposed to temperance. It matters not how often one may be drunk with intoxicants, yet if he favors prohibition, and this often occurs, he is favoring sobriety. Yet men will judge more by what a man says than by what he does. For often men appear to favor prohibition, when they intend to sell by blind tigers blockading for it furnishes them with intoxicants illegally.

I heard recently of a man's wife asking him how he would vote in the issue between prohibition and dispensaries. He replied he would vote for a dispensary. She said I want you to vote for prohibition. He said all right. But when I vote for prohibition there is to be no more intoxicants of any kind used in my house for any purpose. She then said, I do not want you to vote for prohibition. When one casts a vote it should be to rule himself. Some people seem to vote to controll other people. The man who votes for prohibition has no right to take a drink of intoxicants of any sort without stultifying himself.

One intemperate view held is if we could banish all the drinks from the country then we would have a millennium. But the devil is older than whiskey or brandy. It is true that the drink habit occasions much mischief, but to claim that if all liquor were expelled then there would be no crimes, or that would cause men to become Christians is an intemperate claim.

Because some men will have intoxicants is no argument why the State should encourage them to buy them. Because some men will become drunkards is no reason why the State should provide them liquors. Drunkenness is a sore evil. To oppose it arrays its apologists and friends to a bitter opposition to all efforts to curtail its use. Hence we now see the bitter passions of men on each side raging. There seems to be a strenuous effort of the prohibitionists to carry the State. Friends of human liberty and of the rights of men look on this contest as one involving great issues. It matters not which way the tide turns more than legal enactments are needful to eradicate the evil. Not until men are changed in their tastes and principles -- not until they see and feel the evil of drunkenness will the curse be removed. The fault is in the man who drinks it, and that love of wrong remains in him if he does not drink it, but often times it is emboldened by drinking.

Property of any sort is a temptation to a thief. But we do not aim to cure thievery by destroying all property. We do not think the proper way to prevent fornication is to kill all vile women. Guns are often employed to slay men. We do not legislate against men's selling guns or buying them, but we claim to punish the man who unlawfully uses the gun.

But one says there is no need of strong drink or wine. To take that position is to contradict the Bible and those who favor prohibition provide a way to purchase it. Bible prohibition directly condemns in toto what is forbidden. It makes no compromise whatever with what it prohibits. The first instance of it declared, "But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

We have Bible authority for the use of wine and strong drink yet the Bible directly condemns drunkenness.

Let each man calmly consider the matter and vote the way that seems good to him, and let all others allow him this privilege.

I have penned these thoughts not to array one set of men against another. Old men, fathers and mothers, should want their sons to be sober. We desire sober-minded men that build character on solid principle. Now how shall this be best obtained

The people of God are under law to Christ—the law of freedom. They are made free from the desire to become drunkards. Hence they have no need of human laws to regulate their conduct. The law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient.

.P. D. G.

Brother L. Hasking requests my views of James 1: 3-18. Read and ponder these words. James turns neither to the right hand nor to the left in his writing. He leaves the proud man no room to glory, nor does he leave the humble man any room to despair.

Surely he deals faithfully with all classes, nor can he justly be accused of any partiality. His writing is on the order of a grand exhortation and rebuke, an exhortation to the afflicted to endure and let patience have her perfect work, and a reproof to the haughty and high minded to repent and turn away from wrong doing by that which is right.

On the side of those who attempt to hide their transgressions under the decree of God—that we are delivered to do these things—he says, no man when he is drawn away of his own lust can say that he is tempted of God. For God cannot be tempted with evil neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and when lust has conceived it brings forth death.

This declaration of the servant of God is clear enough to every one who loves the truth of God, and sets aside as false all theories that furnish man any excuse for his wickedness. Sure I am that when one has an experience of what the grace of God does for and in the sinner it forever settles in him the abiding conviction that man is a sinner, and that he has no excuse for his sins; but abhors himself. Why should he repent if he is not a sinner? Why should he turn away from any thing if that thing is not wrong? The goodness of God leads us to repentance. He shall bless every one of you in turning you away from your iniquities—not after you have turned away; and the iniquities are yours.

Again James says, do not err my beloved brethren. Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and comes down from the Father of light. This is his unchangeable course without any change or variableness or shadow of turning. Do not think that you have induced the Lord to have mercy on you, that you have begun this wonderful work. "Of his own will beget he us with the word of truth. Of God's own will and according to his own purpose he begat us. He is the sole and only cause of all this nor can any part of it be ascribed to the creature man. It is too high and blessed and glorious to be in any sense the product of man, or to admit of co-partnership with man in any part of this matter. No man can say if I had not done this or that thing then these good things would not have followed. The exclusion of all boasting of man shall be so plain and manifest that this song shall be sung, Not unto us, not unto or in us, but unto thy name shall be all the glory.

James reproves such unconcern about their conduct as though there is no need of concern about whether the subjects of grace are exercised in the maintenance of good works which are good and profitable unto men. One may say he has faith, but is it proven to be genuine faith by what it does, or is it dead being alone? James does what is wise. He calls up the case of Abraham the noted man of faith, and proves that Abraham's faith caused him to offer up his only beloved son Isaac as God commanded him, and thus he showed that his faith was of the true kind that produces good works or good fruit and hence is genuine. Make the tree good and the fruit will be good, the only way to show or prove that one has the faith of God's elect is to show what that faith does, then its possessor is justified by works also.

He also brings up the case of the harlot Rahab to prove the need of faith that works by love. She was a gentile woman, yet she has the same kind of faith that Abraham had; and it is proven to be true by what it does.

The trying of this faith works patience or the strength of endurance, and hence it proves or makes manifest that this faith stands in the wisdom of God, and not in the power of men. This patience should have her perfect work.

Notice this work is wrought in the creature who is the subject of this gracious work of God, and in whom is illustrated what the grace of God does. How gracious and wonderful it is when God works in the creature of his own good will and pleasure to do such great things in him.

Patience is the perfect work of faith, and this perfect work displays its marvelous perfection in enduring, as seeing Him that is invisible, and hence everlasting life is manifest in us; for God is of one mind and changes not but is perfect and therefore unchangeable. Let us likewise be partakers of his character and waver not, or we will not receive anything.

When we are settled, established how happy should we be in abiding in the doctrine of Jesus Christ and him crucified.

P. D. G.

Friend J. C. Rice requests my views of Isaiah 35: 8-11. God called for the sword and destruction to come on the proud and haughty, and all the glory of Israel faded. Characters answering to wild beasts of the desert, the sayr shall cry to his fellow, and the owl, vultures and etc. shall dwell there forever. These wild beasts answer to Gentiles to whom is given this once goodly land of Israel.

In the desert shall spring up gladness though and fruitfulness and beauty, and the solitary place shall be a joyful home for these people. An highway shall be there, and it shall be a glorious way, a garden which the Lord has blest. No unclean thing shall pass over it. No worldly wisdom can find it. It shall be for the redeemed, for the people of God that by nature were not his people, Gentiles whom the Jews considered as dogs.

Jesus is the highway and the Jews are blinded, but the gospel is preached to the Gentiles, and the Jews are cast out into outer darkness. But surely the ransomed of the Lord dwell here in the love of the gospel, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away. They shall return from the land of pollution and they shall return and come to Zion.

The fullness of the Gentiles is coming and dwelling in Zion.

No one of these shall fail nor want or miss his mate. The mouth of the Lord commanded and his spirit has gathered them. His word never returns to him void, nor fails of accomplishing his purpose.

What a blessed highway this in the desert. Every thing of man is as desert. There is no road nor way, nor life in man, no fruitfulness, nor joy, nor peace, nor love, but all these blessings are in Jesus who is the way, the truth and the life. All the fullness of God dwells bodily in him.

P. D. G.

A MIRACLE.

When Jesus was on earth he wrought many miracles, such as opening the eyes of the blind, unstopping the ears of the deaf, cleansing lepers, causing the lame to walk, healing all manner of diseases and raising the dead.

These were works performed instantly and without any use of medicine. He spake and it was done. No mere man can do these things or explain them anyway. They stand as divine and incontestible proof of the divinity of Jesus Christ.

What miracle if any is accomplished in a believer in Jesus Christ? Are not all the miracles that Jesus wrought on different persons performed in each one that is a partaker of the divine nature of the Lord Jesus? Each one is in and by nature dead in trespasses and sins, "And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." All men in and by nature are dead in sins. For by the one offense of the one man Adam death reigned by one, and death hath passed upon all men for that all have sinned. You hath he quickened. Jesus quickens the dead and they are raised up together with Jesus. They are risen with Jesus. This then is a miracle, and greater than the raising of a man to resume a natural life. For he that believeth in Jesus is passed from death unto life and shall die no more. He that believeth in Jesus shall never die.

He is born of incorruptible seed by the word of God that liveth and abideth forever. He is born of God and can never die. He is a new creature in Christ Jesus and is a child of the resurrection life of Jesus. How much more glorious is this than to be born of Adam. Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when we see him we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is.

The subject of this wonderful grace is renewed in the spirit of his mind and renewed in knowledge, the eyes of his understanding being enlightened, and he who sometimes was darkness is light in the Lord. Surely this is a far more wonderful eyesight.

The devil is cast out of this subject of grace, for he is free from sin in Christ Jesus. He takes up his bed and walks and leaps and praises God, and he walks by faith and not by sight. He is also cleansed of the sin of leprosy.

A new tongue is given to this subject of grace so that he speaks the pure language of love and peace. Old things are passed away and all things are of God. Is this not miraculous? Are the days of miracles passed away?

As much is done for one child of God as for another. The same healing and saving is done for each one. This healing is in soul and spirit, and effects the body so that the leaven works in the man controlling his life, and raising him up to sit with all the saints in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. This is the marvelous work of grace—the miracle of salvation wrought as much in one saint as in another, for the quickening, healing, enlightening, cleansing, redeeming is performed as much in one as in another subject of grace. Hence they all believe alike and speak one and the same things in Christ Jesus. What is done in all the body is done in each member.

The world denies such miracles because they have never felt them. But the believer has the witness of these wonders in himself, and should let his light so shine that others might see his good works and glorify our Father in heaven. This light shines from heaven. The natural sun when shining is above us, but here is a light above the brightness of the sun and is within the child of God, and when it shines it gives God the glory, and those that see this light shining give God the glory. For none but God can cause this light to shine out of darkness.

When a man born of God walks out, proclaims, makes manifest this light then his acts if he utters not a word give God the glory, for such are to the praise of the glory of the grace of God.

P. D. G.

“And they could not take hold of his words before the people,” Luke 20: 26.

The chief priests and scribes are the most active and bitter enemies against Jesus. How strange that he who knew no sin, and in whose mouth was found no guile, and who was full of grace and truth, and who went about doing good, was opposed by men and especially that he was so bitterly opposed by the chief priests who were to minister in holy things, and whose lips were to keep and teach good things, and that the scribes who copied the law of Moses and had such opportunities to know its meaning, should be so violent in their opposition to Jesus. One would naturally think these men would be the quickest to discern his blessed character and the first to hail him as the Saviour. Surely God has confounded and put to nought the wisdom of men and the cross of Christ stains all the pride of man.

These men used all their cunning to catch Jesus in his words in order that they might accuse and convict him before the people—the common people who heard him gladly—the people who were humble and received his teaching. It was said by way of reproach to Jesus that none of the rulers or leaders of and of literature believed on him—and it was only the common people that heard and followed him.

The aim of the leaders and rulers was to obtain some charge against Jesus before the people in order that they might make a case against him, so they sent men to him who feigned themselves just men, but they were spies. They came with flattering words saying master, we know that thou savest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God truly. Flattery was the mask under which they operated. This often is successful before men, but the more of that one uses before God the worse it is for that man.

Jesus taught as no man ever did, and spake as no man ever did. For he knew the truth for he is the truth. In him was no darkness or ignorance, no deceit, no guile. He always spoke the truth in every thing. Men speak and argue in such a limited an imperfect way that room is left for replies to what they say, because man is so finite and limited in his knowledge that he is not able to utter perfect truth. But when Jesus speaks it ends controversy. His words are final because nothing can be said in reply. Job and his three companions answered each other several times, and though they did not speak the truth as Job did, yet the matter was not closed so far as Job was concerned until the Lord God spake; but when he spake the words of Job were ended. Job spake no more because there cannot be any thing said in reply to what God says. Who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the creature argue against the creator? The words of Jesus search out all things, and set all things in their true light. His word is sharper than any two edged sword piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intent of the heart. That is the reason why when God searches the heart the man thus in the hands of God sees and feels that his thoughts are vile, and he feels that he is unclean. When men differ and argue each one attempting to defend his own position the effect of the contention is to flatter each man that he was too smart for his antagonist, and each one is more entrenched in his own views. But when Jesus speaks it is to tell one all things that one has ever done, and show him his ignorance and vileness, and take away from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and he falls down and worships God. When the queen of Sheba is brought before the wisdom of Solomon he told her every thing that was in her heart, and no more spirit was left in her; but Jesus is infinitely greater than Solomon. There is no sense in which any man can speak, whether in his completeness of knowledge, or of justice, mercy, truth, faithfulness, convincing, healing and saving power, or taking away a man's self-righteousness and false trust as snares or hindrances. There is nothing left to be said or done when Jesus speaks. It is finished.

When his enemies sought to entrap him in the case of tribute money saying is it lawful to give tribute unto Cesar or not? They did not want to pay tax to the Roman Government. They thought if he said it is not right to pay that tax then they could accuse him to the Roman powers as being their enemy, for much as they hated Rome they hated Jesus more. If he said yes, pay the tax, then that would cause the Jews to dislike him still more. What they wanted was to take hold of the words of Jesus before the people.

He said bring me a penny, when they brought it he said to them whose image and superscription does it bear? They said Cesar's. Then he said, if it is Cesar's money give to him. Render unto God what belongs to him, and to Cesar what belongs to him.

If they had obeyed God as the law of Moses commanded they would not have been subject to Cesar. How searching are the words of Jesus. There can be no reply, but the wrong doers stand self-condemned.

They bring a woman caught in the act of adultery before him, what for? They think now if he sides with Moses and says she should be stoned, then they could accuse him to the Roman government of counselling rebellion. For the Romans had taken away from the Jews the power or right to put men to death. If he should say do not stone her then they could inflame the people against Jesus as being an enemy to Moses. The law of Moses required that one thus guilty should be stoned, and that the accuser should cast the first stone. Would it not then be a solemn thing to be a witness against another. Jesus stooped down and wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not. While they were clamoring for his answer when he raised himself up he said, let him that is without sin cast the first stone. That was the very spirit of the law of Moses which Jesus came to fulfill. But it convicted the last one of them. Could any one of those men reply to Jesus? Not one could stand before him or utter a word of reply. His answers are final. There is no room to ask a question, no place left for the cavalier to stand or reply.

Jesus is the word of God which we are to preach, that word was made flesh and dwelt among us.

When Jesus speaks to the poor, halt, maimed, trembling, distressed sinner is it to condemn? No, it is be of good cheer, rise, he calleth thee. His word binds up the broken in heart, the sorrowful in spirit. The word that called up Lazarus from the dead is the word that speaks peace to the afflicted, humbling one. The word that created the worlds is the word that quickens the dead, the word that uphold, all things is the word that produces light and joy in the soul.

When Jesus speaks peace to the troubled soul there is no spirit to question his glory or his power. If an enemy accuse one of God's little ones that little one need not defend his own case, could not as the Lord does. Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect. It is God that justifies. It is Christ that died, yea that is risen for us. If Jesus is for me who can be against my cause: I need not say one word in my own behalf. If you take me let those go their way. Nothing can be said in reply to what Jesus has done. We have an advocate with the Father Jesus Christ the righteous.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold—I will write a few lines to you that you may know that I am yet alive, though suffering much from the infirmities of age and afflictions. I hope there is a happy home for us all on the other shore.

We much appreciate the Landmark. It always brings good news to us, yet I can only listen to reading, as my eyes so bad I can scarcely see. May many blessing ever rest on you and your loved ones, and if be the will of our Father may you be spared much longer to publish the glorious truth to a dying world.

As ever your friend and I hope sister in christ,

E. A. EVERETT.
REMARKS.

When one is stricken with the infirmities of old age, and weighted with the burden of years that one may well say and feel this is not my home nor place of rest, if that one has received a precious hope through grace as sister Everett I feel has been favored to do.

It is comforting to me to feel that my brethren pray for me that strength and every needed blessing may be given me for my labors here, and that I may find mercy of the Lord to labor in his vineyard for the comfort of Zion.

P. D. G.

Eatonton, Ga.

My Dear Brother Gold—It is with great pleasure I embrace this opportunity of writing you. I am very feeble at this time and have been for several days. Only a few days more will bring me to seventy-nine years of age. More than twelve months ago I lost my dear wife. As time elapses the sadder I feel. But there is a great consolation, and I am made to rejoice from my very soul, that I shall meet her in the heavenly mansion where there is no sin, sorrow, separation, nor death.

If my wife had been spared nearly three months longer we would have been married fifty-four years.

She came home to her peopl at Old Crooked Creek church three years ago. Oh such rejoicing by the people.

She was born in July 1829, and died in March 1907. I have no continuing city here, am living among my children.

THOMAS R. SPIVEY.

A friend requests my view of Luke 4: 26. "But unto none of them was Elias sent save unto Sarepta, a city of

Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow

This woman was a gentile. There were many widows in Israel in the day of Elijah during that great famine but Elijah was not sent to any of them but the gentiles.

Jesus preached election to them, but not for them. They had marveled at his gracious words, but when he preached the discriminating, electing love of God towards his people this so offended the Jews, who considered themselves so much better than the gentiles, that they rejected Christ and sought to destroy him. Surely it calls for a gracious, marvelous power that causes one to deny himself for Jesus sake, and consider and feel it just in God to reject him and prefer others. Self righteousness is the most active, bitter principle in a man that exalts itself against Jesus Christ. Though those Jews could read in the old testament scriptures that God had commanded a widow woman of Sidon (not a Jew) to feed Elijah which was a great favor to this poor widow keeping her alive during all the famine, yet when Jesus preached and stated this to them they were so enraged that they sought to cast him down the hill headlong.

Further Jesus cited the case of Naaman the leper who was a Syrian, and that there were many lepers in Israel in the days of Elisha the prophet, but none of them save Naaman was cleaned. It matters not how gracious the words of Jesus, yet unless he spake what was pleasing to them they sought to destroy him.

How could anything but the electing love of God reach man in this self-righteous nature? When we feel that we are worthy of blessing they do not come to us: but when starvation stares us in the face, we are eating the last morsel and must die then the word of the Lord tells us the first cake—the first fruit must be given to the Lord. When Elijah went to the home of the widow of Sarepta and asked for water and bread, she said as the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake but a handful of meal and etc. and I and my son are preparing to eat this and die. Elijah said make me a little cake first. This she did and there was enough for the three during the famine.

The first fruit must be to the Lord always. He is above all. This slays the principle of self-righteousness, and opens the blessed field of election which save us from all foes.

P. D. G.

REMARKS.

What a precious hope to old bereaved people to look for the coming of the Lord will be gathered, and the take them home where all the redeemed of the Lord will be gathered, and the dead in Christ shall rise first, and they that are living caught up to meet the Lord together in the air, and then to be with him forever.

OBITUARIES

LYDIA HOLADIA.

Lydia Holadia was born December 2nd, 1810. She married Kanidia Holadia May 5 1835, raised a family of eight children, three of them now living, joined the church at Bethlehem, Tyrrell county, N. C., May 1st, 1857. She was faithful in attending her church meetings, up until a short period before her death when she became too weak to leave home, but was always glad to hear preaching, and to welcome the children of God. After she became too much afflicted to attend her church meetings by request of her children and herself I visited her, and preached for her at her home. She was sound in doctrine, orderly in her walk, and Godly in her conversation, one of the most spiritual minded women I ever knew. The last time that I preached for her she seemed full of joy, exclaiming often bless the Lord oh my soul. On leaving her she embraced me and said, it will be the last time

I will ever see you on earth, which was so, but now that she is gone, we feel sure she died in Christ, and is now in that precious land where they never grow old, "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest." In her last days she made her home, with her widowed daughter Sister Frances Barnes who cared for her, as tenderly as if she had been an infant, and while the blow falls most heavily on her, she being entirely left alone she has that blessed assurance that God is the widow's friend, and conscious of having discharged her whole duty. May the dear Lord comfort her in her declining years, and may she find that assistance as she nears the tomb that she so nobly rendered to her sainted mother. God has promised his blessings to dutiful children. His word is true. Our dear brother—her dear son Thomas Holadia exercises in public to the comfort of God's people who know him was also a great comfort and help to his dear mother. He would often go to her home and read the bible to her and pray for her. He is another one of the noblemen we believe is in the kingdom of God. She died as she lived, in the full triumph of faith. May my last end be like hers. She died August 26th, 1907, aged ninety-seven years six months and four days. May we be prepared to meet her in the happy beyond.

WASHINGTON HENRY HEDRICK.

Washington Henry Hedrick, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hedrick, departed this life January 23rd, 1908. He was born April 17th, 1907, being nine months and six days old. He was a pleasant child and was like a ray of sunshine in home. He was the favorite of every member of the family.

He was always a very delicate child, but bore his suffering with patience. He died with pneumonia. All that mother and other loving hands could do could not stay the hand of death. God had called this one to dwell with him where there are no pains. Grieve not loved ones, for our loss is little Henry's eternal gain.

The little babe has gone to rest,
To reign with God forever blest,
Its little tongue will always praise,
A Saviour's love redeeming grace.

Far from a world of sin and strife,
It now enjoys a heavenly life,
And joins to praise, and shout and sing
And make the heavenly echoes ring.

Could we but hear its little tongue,
So sweetly sing the heavenly song,
Could we but see its smiling face,
Delighted with the heavenly place.

We would not wish it back again,
But say dear babe with God remain,
We'll try to gain that peaceful shore,
Where those who meet shall part no more

Now let us strive the prize to gain,
Let's come to Christ, with him remain,
Then we shall share in Jesus' love,
And meet the little babes above.

WILLIAM HILL.

This dear brother was the son of Peter Hill and Sydney, his wife. He was born May 8th, 1823. When he grew up he married Bathsheba Salter. The fruits of this marriage were fifteen children, ten of whom are yet living. Not one of them ever joined any arminian religious denominations, four of them are members of the Primitive Baptist church. Brother Hill was received into the church at Hunting Quarters in May 1874 and was baptized by Elder Benjamin Bynum and was one of the fifteen sheep I saw in my vision when that church was revealed to me in my early ministry. He was a kind and gentle father and husband and provided well for his family working with his own hands. He was a sailor as long as he was able to go by reason of his age. Until he was old and disabled he always bore his part in the expenses of the church.

Four and a half years ago Mrs. Hill was paralyzed in one side, since which time she has set on an invalid chair, but he was very devoted to her in her afflictions. He passed out of this world on March 15th, 1908, being eighty-four years, ten months and seven days old.

We miss him and feel the bereavement but we feel also that it was far better for him to depart and be with Jesus.

His afflicted wife, dutiful children, the church and their many friends have our deepest sympathy.

We have a number of poor Baptists that want to read the Landmark, but are unable to pay for it. If our friends wish to help such send me some money and it will be applied that way. P. D. G.

Simpkins' Prolific Cotton Seed.

Resembles the "KING" but is earlier by ten days and bolls larger and gives much larger yield both in the field and at the gin. The superiority of this cotton over all others consists in its extreme earliness and heavy fruiting. Makes long limbs which come out at ground, close joints and small seed, giving 40 per cent lint. ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elders Gold and Lester,—Dear Brethren.—I have a mind to write a portion of my past life in regard to what I hope the Lord has done for me. I feel so unworthy and have had so many doubts and fears but this morning I feel to trust in the Lord and hope he will be with and direct me in writing my experience if I have any.

I was quite young when I was made to think of my sinful self and was made to think of dying in my sinful condition and what would become of me. I tried to pray the Lord to have mercy on me and asked him to forgive my sins and prepare me to die. I felt if I should die in that condition I would be forever lost. I would go to preaching and all I heard would condemn instead of comfort me. I did not want any one to know of my troubles, even my best friends, but would visit protracted meetings and when they asked all who wanted to be prayed for should kneel at their seats I would bow down, for I felt need of the prayers of God's people. They would then come and ask me if I wanted religion, if I wanted to live a christian life in the future. I told them I did and then they asked me to go with them to the front bench, they would pray for me—that if I would make one step towards God he would make two towards me. So I went and tried to do as they told me. I supposed they would tell me something to relieve my mind, but they said all I had to say was, "here Lord I give myself to thee 'tis all I can do," then to get up, praise the Lord, give them my hand join the church and I would be saved. But from what I could learn from reading the bible and testament it could not be as they told me, as I couldn't understand it that way, still I continued to attend their meetings until they closed although I seemed to feel worse than when my trouble began.

I went in this way until I was married, January 10, 1878, when my husband and I began house keeping. I got into so much trouble I supposed it was because I was so much alone and would often go where he was at work and then I wouldn't feel so lonely. But immediately I left him my troubles would return, worse sometimes than others. I continued in this way until 1881, when my mother joined the Primitive Baptists and was baptized. While looking at her going into the water, this bore upon my mind oh, if I were only fit to go in with her, but felt to be a poor lost sinner with no hope ever being a subject to claim a part with these beloved people. I said nothing to any one about my feelings but wanted to ask mama how she felt and if she was ever in much trouble, but was afraid she might ask me something about my feelings.

In 1882, we moved to cambell county where there were no Baptists and for nine years we heard only one sermon and that was by a traveling preacher who came through Leasville. That sermon was preached right to me and

I wondered if he knew my feelings. We would come back to my fathers sometimes and go to Fairview where Elder Peter Right was moderator. I did dearly love to hear him and paid close attention to what he said, but tried to keep him from knowing I was interested in his preaching. I would go home more reconciled than before but the same troubles would return and I felt so cast down would wonder what I was troubled about. I thought maybe something was going to happen in the family that my husband or some of the children would be taken away.

On November 22, 1884, the Lord saw fit to take the only little girl we had. I didn't see how I could give her up but knew she was better off than she was with me, also I felt confident she was a little angel singing God's praises in heaven. It was harder still giving her up as I had no hope of ever meeting her above where all is peace and love. I became so troubled that part of the time I didn't know what I was doing. I would go off to some private place, fall down on my knees and try to pray the Lord to have mercy and to remove this store of trouble from me. My face would be wet with tears and I would wipe them away when my husband came as I did not want him to ask me anything about my trouble.

In 1887, we moved to our present home near Fairview church and I heard preaching every month but my health became very poor and I couldn't go often as I was confined to the bed most of the time. I would lie there and pray the Lord to give me strength to get up and be with my children. I would read the Landmark and wish I could feel as happy as some of the writers did in their experiences and if I could I would be willing to die. Sometimes I could walk about when I would rove in the yard and try to wear away my troubles, but in vain, they were always present.

I remember one day when my husband and I were walking when I thought I would never get well and said something to him about it. He asked me if I thought I was going to die. I told him I didn't see how I could live with so much trouble. Then he wanted to know what I was troubled about and my answer was I couldn't tell him. As I was lying down feeling very badly a short time after this conversation, thinking that everybody had forsaken me, that the Lord had no mercy for me, not thinking I would live until next morning and with tears streaming from my eyes while trying for the last time I thought, to pray the Lord for mercy, this scripture came to me, "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted." I raised up and there was the brightest light shining around me I ever saw and I was so happy I felt like I wanted to fly. I loved everybody. There was a dear old member of the Primitive Baptist church who I had had hard thoughts against and immediately I was made willing to forgive and love her. She appeared as plainly as if she had been with me although we were ten miles apart in person. Tongue can not explain the love I had for her and I thought I would keep this a secret. I felt so happy I wanted to tell all my friends what a precious Savior I had found. All was peace with me and all my troubles were gone. It was the brightest night I ever saw. There was a hymn on my mind and it seemed I could hear all the dear old brethren and sisters singing it.

"Amazing grace how sweet the sound,
That saved a wretch like me;

I once was lost but now I'm found.
Was blind but now I see."

was the song and I felt I could not keep my happiness from my husband any longer. I lay down and put my arm around him. He awoke and asked what was the matter. I told him I felt so much better, there was no more trouble with me, that all was peace and love. I said oh I do love my savior, don't you love him too? but he did not answer. I talked to him about my feelings but he could not talk to me.

When I awoke next morning it seemed everything was praising the Lord. However it was not many days before doubts and fears began to arise and I was cast down again. I thought perhaps it was the devil dealing with me. I tried to pray to the Lord if I was deceived to undeceive me and I thought if it had been the Lord who was dealing with me I should not have felt as I did and worldly things would not be on my mind. I feel that way until this day. When I went to hear the Baptists preach they would tell my feelings so much better than I could it gave me great relief. I wanted to join the church and be baptized and live and die with them. They were the people I loved but when doubts and fears came I felt I was not fit to be with those I believed to be the chosen elect of God.

I went on in this way until the fourth Saturday in September 1886, when I went to hear Elder Peter Right preach. I had no thought of offering to the church so after preaching when the door of the church was opened I sat still as I didn't want to deceive them if I was deceived. But at the second invitation to my surprise it seemed I was lifted from my seat and the next thing I knew I was trying to tell what I hoped the Lord had done for me. I was received, but I have often thought since if the brethren and sisters knew me as I know myself they would be sure to say you are trash and trouble and not fit to be here.

But after all my trials and troubles I am sometimes carried back to that happy night I spent and hope it was for my good. I can not help loving God's elect it matters not where they are whom they are with.

great deal more .tcmfwypmhrashrrddl

Dear brethren, I have written a great deal more than I expected when I began and I don't want to worry any one. Examine this and if you see anything good in it that will benefit anyone you can have it published in the Landmark as some have requested this of me. If not fit for publication it will be all right. If it is of any comfort to anyone give God the praise, I deserve none.

Pray for me as I feel to need your prayers for my case must be an outside one. I feel as the poet says,

"I am a stranger here below,
And what I am 'tis hard to know,
I am so vile and full of sin,
I fear I am not born again."

Your sister in Christ I hope,

M. J. HOWELL

Thurman, Va.

My Dear Brother Gold.—No doubt you will be surprised to get a scribble from me, so soon after writing you some days ago, but it seems my mind is not relieved, and the scriptures and wonderful things shown poor sinful me, are too great and mysterious for a weak, vile worm of the dust.. "Blessed are they who hear the joyful sound, for they shall walk Oh Lord in the light of thy countenance." I don't know that this is exact scripture language, for I have forgotten how it reads. I try to pray that I may not knowingly misquote.

Friday A. M., November 30th.—Dear loved ones I hope in Jesus, this beautiful morning finds me so low down in feelings, I can't express the burden that seems almost unbearable. Is it ever thus with you? Rich scripture has been presented to me, and if not deceived commands viz. "Go doubting nothing," "He that knoweth my will and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes." "If you love me keep my commandments." I know my Lord and Savior has done great things for me all the days of my sinful life, naturally and I believe spiritually.

Dear brethren and sister, I feel that we as a people, (if indeed I am a Primitive Baptist,- are going astray in many ways. The question arises in my mind, am I right, or wrong? The scriptures teach that no man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will hold to the one and despise the other. "Ye can not serve God and Mammon." We can not follow after the things of the world and follow Jesus, as he is not of this world. Please read John seventeenth chapter, and may the Lord give us understanding, if his will, is the sincere desire of one, who I hope loves the dear Redeemer and his people above all things. Before my great indescribable sufferings, I knew I was striving hard for the things of this world, not realizing where I was drifting, resulting in the destruction of almost all spiritual pleasure for a time. Why did I do this? Sin had beguiled me a helpless worm of the dust, and I was forgetting to look unto the hills, where I could see his help.

What a sad and terrible condition for children of God, who have been so highly blessed, and who cherish a hope that Jesus has led us about and instructed us; has kept us as the apple of his eye, as he did Jacob of old. For those blessed with spiritual ears hear the soul cheering language, I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee.

These sweet words are presented so unexpectedly "Follow thou me." Oh Heavenly Father have mercy upon me and all thy people everywhere. Show Jacob his sins and Israel his transgressions.

I feel I have suffered untold misery for not obeying commands.

"Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. We are told to hearken unto the voice of the Lord and to follow Jesus through evil as well as good report. He promises never to leave or forsake us, but can we expect his mercy and loving kindness when in forbidden paths? When we forget our tender shepherds care, and from whom comes all our strength, naturally and spiritually, and strive to go in our own strength, we will soon learn there is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof is the way of death. There are many ways to death in spiritual comfort, and I believe natural blessings too, are with-held from the Lord's people when in disobedience. When ye think ye stand take heed lest ye fall. Oh! that our Redeemer will enable us to stand in the Lord.

May the dear Lord bless us with a spirit of prayer, show us how we are, and where we are. I fear much of the time in trying to pray it is only a form of words, and not true prayer.

May the Lord have mercy upon our unrighteousness and sin, remembering them no more against us forever, and lead us in the path of the just, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Last week a dear and much afflicted brother spent the night and part of next day with us. He was so afflicted with rheumatism that he was disabled from working to support his wife and seven children. I felt he had been blessed of the Lord when I heard him relate some of the wonderful dealings of God with him. Next morning I seemed to be aroused early with different scripture language, some of which is not now plain to my mind. I hope the dear Lord blessed us to pray unto Israel's God in behalf of this afflicted brother.

and family, and willingly obey the command, "Bear ye one anothers burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." I expressed my desires to my daughter, and I feel she heartily joined me.

"He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord" seemed to flow sweetly into my mind. Also "withhold not good from them to whom it is due." My husband and I asked him to spend longer with us; he expressed having enjoyed himself so much it seemed his countenance beamed with encouragement, while those sweet words came to me, "It is more blessed to give than to receive" affording me greater pleasure. I felt so glad to see my children greet the afflicted with a pleasant smile, and I believe wait on him willingly. If we were blessed to do these things in the right spirit, all honor be ascribed to the Lord.

A greater feast awaited me on the coming Saturday and first Sunday in December, our quarterly meeting.

I do feel the Lord richly blessed the church with the bread that cometh down from heaven, from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, nor shadow of turning." It seemed the Lord's ministering servants were highly favored; were burdened with that word of the Lord, and had the spirit of liberty in proclaiming the unsearchable riches of Jesus to the comfort of the dear little ones. This poor vile one was blessed to be with them and partake of the feast with a thankful heart, also to commune with the saints in remembrance of the sufferings and death of our Lord and savior Jesus Christ. I hope discerning his body, in a meek and lowly feeling, and with a thankful heart. May God forgive all even in this scribble, and enable his children to do the same and bless all.

May the Lord bless you richly brother Gold, and family, for your kindness to me, now and forever, and may you pray for me and mine.

Lovingly,
EUGENIA A. HINTON.

Dear Brother Gold,—If I am worthy to call you such. My troubles are so great I seem unable to bear them longer. it seems if I cannot get relief this sinful flesh of mine will go to the dust from whence it came and I pray God that my spirit may go to him who gave it and rest forever more.

I have been a member of the Baptist church about two years but can not go to preaching. Brethren, will you all pray for me. Brother Gold, can you tell me what to do with an unbelieving husband who won't be satisfied by his wife? Can I leave this world and two children behind me with a trouble like that?

Oh, brothers and sisters help me and pray for me. Oh, if I could hear brother Lundy preach one more time before I die.

Brother Gold, please let me hear from you through the Landmark and although I am not allowed to read them some one will tell me what you have to say.

YOUR UNKNOWN SISTER.

REMARKS.

The sufferings of this sister are indeed great, and yet while she is not permitted to hear the gospel preached she could give no better evidence that she is a child of God.

Everything works together for the good of those that love the Lord, and while it maybe hard for our sister to realize and appreciate these trials that are placed upon her, He who seeth and doeth all things right will in his own good time make the crooked paths straight and show that all is for his glory.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold,—This good and precious letter received a few days ago from brother L. H. Hardy, I send to you to publish in the Landmark as I feel I want to see it in print. I have for a long time had a desire to see brother Hardy and hear him preach and I hope the Lord will open a way for me to do so if it is his will. I also hope to hear you again brother Gold preach the unsearchable riches of Christ as you always do.

I hope some of brother Hardy's appointments will be at Walton or Mountain Springs as I am so anxious to hear him preach.

Love to you and sister Gold.

Your little sister in hope,
TISHIE PICKRELL.

Java, Va.

Mrs. Tishie Pickrell, Java, Va.—Dear Sister:—It is quite a pleasure to get such a letter from one of the Lord's children as the one I received from you this morning. I surely feel unworthy to receive such evidences of God's love to such a poor vile sinner, but I feel like I know how to appreciate it.

I am often despondent and fearful that I don't know the Lord. I often cry unto him for days and get no answer and am made to feel fearful that I have never prayed in the name of Jesus Christ. Oh, how terrible it would be if after all I have endured and suffered that I should be mistaken and lost.

Once a sister, Jennette Willis, Atlantic, N. C., dreamed something like your dream. In her dream I stood in the pulpit preaching and was suddenly changed into a bright shining angel of God. I am made to question why are these things so? I baptized her and am pastor, therefore she was well acquainted with me while you are not acquainted and therefore it is the more strange that you should have such a dream and know it was me. It is as the poet says:

God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform,
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm.

If I know my poor heart I love the Lord and want to serve him with every breath and in every act of my life. I know he has been good to me whether he has forgiven my sins or not, for if it had not been for his great goodness to me long before this time I would have been cut off from time—from the land of the living. But I am spared and kept for a purpose that God only knoweth.

I feel I want him to do with me just according to his will and make me his humble and obedient servant that I may ever live unto him and in him. I feel to thank you for writing to me.

The Lord will I will preach at Weatherford, Va., on Tuesday after the third Sunday in April. I don't know how far you live from there but would be glad to meet.

Mr. W. W. Pickrell Seymour, Va., will look out for me there. He has written me to make the visit and the appointments will soon appear in the Landmark. You will see them.

The Lord bless you, my dear sister, and give you grace to love and serve him.

Your loving brother,
L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Mr. Gold,—I want to ask you about a church trouble I had some time ago. The moderator of the church where I was a member began begging people around in the neighborhood to join the church and he received one able bodied person as member who lived a short distance from the meeting house. I told some members that I thought all able bodied persons should join the church unsolicited and I did not believe in that way of receiving members to a church. Well we got up a pretty smart talk about the matter, some agreeing with me and others talking like they did not see anything wrong in it.

Finally the clerk wrote an order to this effect that the moderator with two or more members could receive members away from the church house and could baptize them into the fellowship of the church and then they had the church to vote on the order with the result that every member present voted for it except myself.

I told them I was willing to receive members at water where we had met for the purpose of baptism. I told them I was willing to receive members at the arm and was willing to set up another arm if they saw proper and was more than willing that should any person, young or old, be unable to come to the church house and should make it known that they wanted to talk to the church for the preacher and as many of the members as could should go and hear them tell of the dealings of the Lord with them and if they gave them satisfaction to receive and baptize them, but I believed it best that all able bodied persons should come to the church house to join.

But they would not agree to what I said so I told them I could not submit to their order and wanted them to take my name off the church for I didn't think I could live in peace much less fellowship and I did not want my membership without fellowship.

I yet think the church would be better off without a person who has not love enough for the church to go to the church house to join. I don't think such members would do the church any good. I believe the Lord is able to bring his people to the church also that he will bring them when it is his will to do so. If he is not able to bring them into the church but has to send the preacher after them how is he going to hold them in the church after the preacher begs them to enter? Now what I want to know is whether or not I was contending for any thing wrong? Do you think a preacher assuming that power over a church is serving the church or the church serving him? Don't you think it is depriving the the church of their privilege, and do you think such a church is in order when they hold such an order on their church book?

Now I have not written this to hurt any one's feelings for I have the same love for the church today that I had the day I joined, and I love to hear the truth preached as much so as I ever did. Whether I am a Baptist or not I do believe the Primitive Baptist is the only true church on earth, but I am sorry to see the new practices among them and destroying the peace of the church, and I think they would do well not to have anything to do with these new practices. Don't you think there is a difference between a preacher going over the country begging people to be baptized and the way Philip baptized the Eunuch?

I want you to give me your views on some scripture—Luke 14th chapter beginning at the 16th verse. Do you think those people that made excuses were changed people or not and what do you think that compelling power is? Also Jeremiah—16th chapter and 16th verse.

Mr. Gold if you think this worth space in your paper you can publish it. If it is not worthy of publication please reply by private letter and oblige, a poor sinner saved by grace if saved at all.

MARY F. WILLIARD.

Siloam, N. C.

REMARKS.

We consider the above article as expressing safe and sound views of the matter discussed.

It seems to me that every one truly desiring fellowship of the church would wish every member present when he offers to the church, and that if any member is not satisfied that member ought to speak out then and there, and the church should not wish to pull one in over the head of any member.

I think not one of those who made excuses for not coming to the feast was blest with a good hope through grace. To compel one to come in is not to force him against his own will to come, but to encourage such as hunger and thirst and would be glad to feel that they are welcome. There are those that gladly would come if they could feel that they are welcome. Such as these need exhortation, hand-falls dropped of purpose.

Jeremiah 16th chapter and 16th verse, The Lord sends for fishers that fish men. Also he will send for many hunters and they will hunt men. This shows the blessed power that the Lord displays in making his people willing in the glorious power of his grace. For all the Lord's people have to be led by divine power into the church of God. This does not mean that they love oxen and land and money or wives better than they do the Lord Jesus, but their own sense of unworthiness keeps them away until the Lord makes them willing in the day of his power. I think a pastor is a servant of the church—not a lord.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold,—I have been thinking for some time that I would renew my subscription to the Landmark, but have kept so busy that I have put it off until now. So I am enclosing you check for $1.50 to renew.

I am so cast down at present I cannot write anything that I feel would be interesting to you, and yet I do not want to complain; but oh, that I may have patience to endure and be given faith to look to him from whom cometh all my help.

Some time ago I dreamed that I was put up for a target to shoot at. I saw that there was no way to get around it, but that it must be so. And I was given the spirit of prayer, in which language was given me as fast as I could utter it, but I did not know, when I would utter one word, what the next one would be. In this prayer I prayed that the dear Lord would be with me, for I realized that he was my only help, and all my support, and be my strength and stay through the trying ordeal—through the hour of death, as I then viewed it.

If I have ever experienced anything of the christian warfare, I find that it is continually—a daily dying. Paul said he died daily. There is no discharge in this warfare; but oh! how I desire that the dear Lord will go with me through this valley and shadow of death that I may fear no evil.

Since then I dreamed that the enemy was trying to over-power me and take my life when suddenly I was delivered out of his hands by a strong power that raised me up above the earth, and I sailed above the trees, and as I sailed there was a new song one that I did not know by heart, put in my mouth in praise to him who delivered, who doth deliver, and in whom I trust will still deliver. I did not know one word of this song except as it was given to me. I was singing the tune of New Britian, which was given me with the words of the song. The last line, as I remembered it when I awoke was, "O Lord my Savior be," which is the very breathings of my poor heart, realizing that he is my only refuge and strength—my only hope of salvation.

Pray for me. Yours in hope of that rest which is to come.

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

Elder P. D. Gold,—And the readers of Zion's Landmark and the dear Saints of God. I desire to write to you. I have felt that I would love to write to your dear paper ever since I came home from my trip to your country. But I have felt so unworthy, yet my impressions are so great I will try in my weak way hoping it is of the Lord. I will try to tell you of my trip in N. C., and Va., I left home the 29th day of July and arrived at Stem, N. C., Saturday August 2nd, at 8 a. m. I went to the home of our dearly beloved brother Gooch and ate my breakfast. There I met Elder Gold and Elder Hardy. I had not slept much since I left home and felt very bad, and when I met these able men I felt worse, for it was the first time in life I had been away from home. I felt so little. I shall never forget what Elder Gold said to me, he looked at me and said arn't you a preacher? I doubt whether I would have felt any worse if he had hit me. I felt bad all day. I rode out with brother Gooch. to the association at Tar River. I did not have much to say to him for I felt so cast down, but before that association was over and I heard those dear men preach, salvation by grace it drew me to them until I was not afraid of them any more. I never shall forget their kindness to unworthy me. Brother Gold, your kind words are fresh in my memory. May the Lord bless and keep you by his power. At Tar River I met a goodly number of my relations in the flesh whom I had never met before. They were all very kind to me, as were all the dear Saints I met there but I was cast down while I was at that association. On Sunday night I did not sleep much, but I know not why. I visited Staunton River association next. There I met many precious Saints of God of whose kindness I shall always remember. I cannot give all their names but remember their kindness to poor me. I remember that dear moderator T. N. Walton who was so kind to me, his kind words to me still ring in my memory. May the Lord bless him with all the Saints I met at that place. At the next association Upper Country Line. Brother L. H. Hardy was moderator. He was so kind to me and I esteem him highly for the cause sake. Here I turned back. I bade my preaching brethren good bye. I met J. A. Monsees at the Lower Country Line and was with him most all the time 'till the Upper Country Line. I enjoyed his company and good preaching, and learned to love him for Christ's sake. Here I bade him good bye. Next I went to Martinsville, Va. here I met brother A. L. Moore. I want to say I was glad to see him, he seemed like home folks to me, for he had often been at my brother's and began preaching in the same church I did. I spent a very pleasant night with him and his kind family and tried to preach in his home church in Martinsville. There I met a band of lovely Saints, their kindness to me will always be remembered. From there I visited Pig River association, there I met many precious Saints. Brother Turner was moderator, he was a brother indeed to me. May the good Lord bless him to the good of the cause of Christ. It was here, I met Elder Corn and Minter. They are getting old. May the good Lord bless them in their declining years to the good of the cause of Christ is my prayer. I cannot name all I met on the trip. but I hope to be remembered by all of you. From here I started home on August 26th, arrived home on the 29th found my family well for which I feel thankful to the good Lord for his goodness and mercy to me. May the Lord be praised. Surely his mercy dureth forever. Love and Godly fear is to reflect to the world the glories and excellencies of the character of the true Savior who gave himself for the poor sinners such as we are, and now may we all be able to come unto Mt. Zion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first born which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

May the Lord bless you in your work.

Your brother in Gospel bonds.

W. T. CLAYTON.

Dear brother Gold and a father in the gospel I hope.—I have just returned home from a short trip that my mind had been directing me to make before I left or had promised to go. It seemed like I could see squads of people assembled and saying come, come, and after my mind became centered on those little squads of people my home began to be a prison to me. I agreed to go as mind directed and if I am not mistaken I met some of the children of God who were desiring me to come and I hope I was enabled to hand out some of the broken loafs to the children of the most High God.

Brother Gold do you know I had almost decided to have you discontinue the Landmark to me, but on returning home and being blessed to read the glorious sermon of brother John Youmans which was printed in the last number, I was made to say, surely I can't get along without the good old paper, so you find one dollar enclosed which will renew my subscription for a little longer.

Hoping the good Lord will continue to bless you in the years of your old age. Yours in love I hope,

J. G. SOUTHERN.

Dear Brother Warren:—The text in 1st Peter, third, twentieth taken in connection with Genesis sixth chapter and third verse is the only proof I can find of the length of time the Ark was in building. The text in Genesis proves that the Lord had set for his long-suffering to continue with the men of that old world and the one by Peter shows that long-suffering was while the Ark was in building. Therefore I conclude that this is sufficient proof that the Ark was one hundred and twenty years in building.

During that time Noah was a preacher of righteousness. It is said of him as it was of Enoch that he walked with God. This was not said of any others but these two.

God's promise to Noah for his generation was given to him before any children were born to him when he was four hundred and eight years old. At five hundred years old he begat Shem, Ham and Japheth. Thus those sons were prophetically promised sons. They received the covenant in their father Noah. When they were born they were born in the covenant that God had made with Noah. Shem and Japheth honored that covenant in covering their father's nakedness, but Ham forfeited his title in his shameful conduct and his forfeiture fell on Canaan, his youngest son. The tribes of Misriam, Phut and Cush are easily tracable to-day but if the Canaanites are yet in existence I know not where they are. Thus the sins of Ham were visited on his children separating them from Shem and Japheth and especially on Canaan cutting off his seed from the earth.

"The sons of God" doubtless were the children of that royal line from Adam to Noah while the daughters of men were the daughters of the sin cursed Cain. These were fair and their beauty allured the sons of God to leave the pathway of moral rectitude and follow after their carnal lust until wickedness found no bounds only in the vengeance of God against sin.

Then he gave out his decree to his faithful servant Noah who in the midst of all this wickedness could be faithful in the service of the Lord and believe his word. After God's word was spoken to Noah it appears to me that every movement of Isis, every stroke of the axe and saw or any tool that he might use in the building of the Ark was a sermon testifying to God's long suffering with that wicked, adulterous and God dishonoring generation. But with all faithfulness and actual building of the Ark he did not convert one soul to his faith. It looks as if he would have become sorely discouraged but the spirit of him who had commanded him was with him and he must obey that word for he feared God and that fear moved him to obedience.

Twenty years after the word of the Lord came to Noah he received encouragement in the birth of his three sons who should live with him and perpetuate his seed upon the earth. These three sons were one hundred years old when Noah had finished the Ark and the time of God's long suffering with that generation was at an end. The last of the royal line up to Noah died that very year.

It appears to me that one of the greatest signs of God's truth to Noah was given in the birth of his three sons. There being no distinction made as there was in his fathers as such an one lived so many years and begat a son and then lived so long and begat sons and daughters, but Noah lived five hundred years and begat Shem, Ham and Japheth, and nothing of any more children following. Then the names and dispositions of these three brethren infer that they were not of the same color though all of the same birth. Adam means red earth and Shem has about the same meaning, Ham means black while Japheth is white and scattering abroad. This was another link in the warning of God while his longsuffering waited. God always gives the wicked religious Babylonian space to repent and is longsuffering to them in their infidelity until the time that His longsuffering will endure no more. He does not give Jerusalem or his church space to repent but gives them repentance itself by Jesus Christ.

I must stop now. I hope you may see something in scattering outlines of a wonderful field and that God will give us all strength to love and serve him even as Noah loved and served him.

Your brother in hope,
L. H. HARDY.

Dear Brother Gold:—It has been on my mind for a long time to write a few lines for the dear old Landmark and I hope the Lord will guide me. I can't remember how old I was when I began being troubled about my sins when I would think of having to die and be lost forever. Sometimes after retiring at night I would study about dying until I would get in so much trouble I could scarcely keep from crying aloud. Then I would try to pray. But all this would wear off and I would go on enjoying the things of this world as I always had for a while, until I would hear of a death, or see anything that reminded me of death when I would be gin to study about my sins again.

I went on in this way until the second year after I was married when there was a great drouth when I was troubled again. I thought perhaps the world was coming to an end, and I would try to pray. But after it rained I went on very well satisfied. When christmas came I enjoyed dancing as I always had done, but in about two weeks a neighbor died and when I returned from the burial my troubles began again worse than ever. I thought should I have died then I would have been lost. I tried to pray but the more I tried the worse I felt, I got into so much trouble I couldn't do any thing but beg the Lord for mercy. I read the Testament but received no comfort, and could only say Lord, have mercy on me, a poor lost sinner. I went the most of my time with these words in my mouth, but didn't want any one to know it. I would go out in the dark and on bended knees would try and ask the Lord to have mercy on poor me. This continued until the third or fourth Sunday in April.

I read my testament, but it didn't do any good. On one of these days in the afternoon I got up and went out of sight of the house in a little piece of woods where no one could see or hear me, and knelt beside a log and tried to beg the Lord to have mercy on poor me, as I supposed I was going to die. I thought I could feel my breath getting shorter and shorter. Then the first thing I knew I was on my way to the house slapping my hands for joy, and it was a secret no longer. My hands appeared whiter than ever before, and I thought I loved everybody. Then I had a great desire to be baptized. I loved the Baptists better than any name on earth. When I was a child I loved them, but after that change I loved them better than ever before.

I know it is a change in me because what I once loved I now hate, and have never engaged in any worldly amusements since the change occurred in 1880.

The scripture says we know we are passed from death unto life because we love the brethren, which is the church as I understand it, and if I am not deceived in myself I know I do love the Baptists and believe they are the church of God.

In June we moved to Spray, N. C. where there were no Primitive Baptists. In August the missionaries held a big meeting and I was hungry and thirsty. I went to hear them. In about a week I wanted to be baptized thinking that afterwards I would be satisfied, and was for a while but afterwards became more troubled than ever. I tried to pray but got no relief. At times I wondered if any body felt as I did and felt to be the strangest person on earth. I went on in this way I think for about three years when at the Lord's appointed time Brother Stultz preached at old Good Will church in Henry county, Va. I went to hear him and thought he preached to me that day. I found they were people who believed as I did. Brother Stultz told my feelings better than I could, and I wanted to speak to him, but I didn't. I then wanted to join the church more than ever. Even before I knew it was scripture this passage would often come to my mind, "oh ye of little faith," but after reading the bible trying to find comfort I found it. I felt all this was the dealings of the Lord with me, and that it was not my own work. After hearing Brother Stultz preach I wanted to join that church, but wondered if I was fit. So one day while asking the Lord to make it known to me whether to go to the Primitive Baptist or not, these words came to me in a plain voice, "go to the Baptists." This was repeated three times and I was so happy. That evening I received a hope if I ever had one and I was satisfied to go to them.

The next opportunity I had I went to Good Will and after preaching when the door was opened for the reception of members the first thing I knew I was going to the pulpit, giving the preacher my hand and telling the church of what I am trying to write. I was received and baptized the fourth Sunday in October 1884, and while at times I feel I am not one of the elect, yet when I hear them preach I feel I am a Baptist too, for they do preach what I believe as I know by experience.

After I joined at Good Will we moved to Patrick county Va., when in about a year I got a letter from Good Will and moved my membership to Pleasant Grove. Seven years later we moved near Ridgeway Henry county to which place I also moved my membership. Five or six years afterwards we moved to Spray, N. C. to which place I again carried my letter, and was admitted where I hope to remain the balance of my life and enjoy the good preaching we are blessed with.

This is just a letter of my trials brother Gold and you may do with it as you like; if it is printed or not it will be alright with me. I desire the prayers of all who feel like praying for me as I feel to be the least if one at all.

"I want to live a christian here;

And want to die rejoicing,

I want to know my Savior's near
When soul and body's parting.

Your sister in Christ I hope,

MARY V. MILLS.

Spray, N. C.

Elder L. H. Hardy:—My own dear brother, this morning after three o'clock while lying on my bed sleepless I was thinking of you and I felt like I wanted to tell you some of my early experiences and this thought came;

What can you tell him about yourself that he dont already know? He knew you before you knew yourself. But my dear brother, I don't want to write something that you don't already know for if we are both children of God then I believe we have been taught in the same school, the school of grace and if our teacher will diert me what to write I will try in my weakness to write you a little of what I feel that I have been taught.

When I was a very small child our dear mother used to take me with her when she went upstairs to pray for her children. I would sit down by her while she read and when she would kneel down to pray, I would think, I wonder if I will ever be as good as mother? I will try to be like her if I can but I know I can't be good.

Sometimes I would read the Primitives and the Landmark. I always looked for the experiences. I liked to read them best of all. I have thought, I wonder if I will ever have an experience like that .

These were my childish thoughts, but I went on in that way until I was nearly grown. I began to have a love for the people of God and I wanted to be with them, but I felt to be such a sinner I didn't feel worthy to be in their company and I did not want to be in any other.

After we moved down the country I thought perhaps these feelings that I have been having will wear off but they didn't. I kept feeling my sinfulness. I don't know that I ever thought I could do any thing to save my soul from eternal punishment. I felt that if I was ever saved it would be by the grace of God. After we moved to Beaufort county where I had Baptist associates I began to have a stronger desire to be with them and I wanted to talk to Brother John R. Rowe about my feelings but somehow I could never do so. While mother was at your house on Goose Creek Island staying with you when Lemuel was a little baby I was sick and old brother John Rowe had me carried to his home. They were so kind to me, all of them. I didn't feel worthy of such kindness. While there on the bed with a high fever I believe the Lord spoke peace to my troubled soul in these words: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." I felt a calm, sweet rest and I began to get better of my sickness from that time. When mother came I told her some of my feelings. I also told Elder J. T. Rowe. I felt like I wanted to join the church, and I did so on the first day of July 1887, and when you led me down into the water I did not feel worthy to receive baptism at your hands, I felt that you were far my superior in every way though you were my own dear brother. However I have never regretted being baptized. I have never doubted but that I was connected with the Lord's people but I often doubt my fitness to be with them, yet I am not tired of them. I often fear that they may be tired of me. The older I get and the more I am deprived of their company the better I feel to love them.

I will stop this imperfect scribble. When I look over it it looks like I feel, very imperfect but I will send it to you.

We all enjoyed your company so much while you were with us we hope you will soon come again.

I hope the Lord will lead you in the right way and that you may be spared long to preach his everlasting gospel.

Hope you will remember us in your prayers that we may ever be found walking in the right way.

Your little sister,

PATSY ADAMS.

Brother Gold, the above was written to me by my baby sister. I baptized her the same day I was ordained. I send it to you for publication so that each one of us (all being subscribers to Zion's Landmark) may have it and that others may be comforted with us.

Affectionately,

L. H. HARDY.

Dear sister in Christ:—For some purpose I know not I feel impressed to write to you as I have not heard from you in some time past.

We are usually well as for the health of this old body, in this life. I hope you and yours are well, both in mind and body, and are blessed to receive health for your poor soul through the love of Jesus, and are realising still that our health for our poor souls is received by revelation of Jesus Christ. I feel that I can say with Paul, for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ, and by it we realize that the outward man is decreasing as fast as the wheel of time can roll round, and we are growing weaker as the scriptures teach. Surely every jot and tittle shall be fulfilled for we learn when we seek to be justified in Christ that we find ourselves sinners. Then is Christ the minister of sin; God forbid, for if I build that I have destroyed I make myself a transgressor. Then if we have trouble among ourselves and we bury all pitch-forks tomahawks and knives all in the same grave, then if satan can ever bring them to a resurrection through us then we are the transgressor of the law of righteousness and have brought to life the hurtful things that have no need of ever being mentioned out of love. Christ came to fulfil the law, by making a sacrifice of his precious blood on the rugged tree of the cross, and paid the debt for the children of God.

For he tasted death for every one that would believe on him and keep the commandments, and take up their cross and follow Christ, for he is the true one and the great door of the church. Then as we grow weaker in the flesh we grow stronger and wiser in the knowledge of Jesus: if we are born again born of the water and of the spirit we are born of the spirit of Christ. For he said to Nicodemus ye must be born again. Marvel not at what I say, that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. Then if we are blessed in the spirit to praise God, I feel we can say with John when he was speaking to the seven churches in Asia, or writing to them, by the revelation of Jesus, signified by the seven golden candle-sticks the coming of Christ. I John who also am your brother and companion in tribulation and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that was called Patmos for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ, we learn by it that we have the same spirit in the love of Jesus when we are impressed to write to one another as a preacher has the impression to preach to a congregation for relief of mind. This I feel that God has predestinated as much of our duties as it is to preach, and God gives us light and liberty to release our impressions to write in his name for the comfort of a loved little one. Probably one feels as I do to-night to feel to be the least of all saints, if indeed I be one at all. Dear sister so often the times I have visited your pleasant home and you have proved by your appearance to me, you have made me as welcome as you were your self, for the little crumbs that you say you received by the few little scattered remarks. God I feel gave me liberty to speak to you when we would enjoy the lonely moments and talk of the blessed divine things which are not of this world and so much comfort it was to us to enjoy, for that blessed light of Jesus shined in each heart of ours and caused us to receive comfort crumbs. Oh how sweet the name of Jesus sounds in a believer's ear, and causes us so often to mingle together and sing that blessed little hymn, Amazing grace how sweet, was the that saved a wretch like me. Oh dear sister, I feel that this is as much truth as ever could be spoke, for oh its so much amazing to a poor sinner to realize that Jesus has spoke peace to his poor soul. After realizing and seeing self a sinking sinner and seeing God is just, there he has made known to us the deep myteries in his love, and it was only grace could save us if saved at all. T'was grace that leaped in a poor sinner's heart, and saying come dear child, in Christ we have a part. I once was lost but now I'm found, was blind but now I see. Oh how sweet for a closer walk with God, and our blinded eyes are opened and we are made to see our lost and ruined condition, and lifted from the horrible miry clay and our feet set upon a rock cleft for me. Dear sister, pray that we all may have the faithful hope, and remember, He that has commenced a good work in you will perform it world witout end. You will please make due allowance for my imperfection, for you know I am dependent on the good Lord every hour I live. Your little brother in the bonds of love through Jesus. Please write soon.

Elders Gold and Lester, Dear Brethren in a precious life—Seeing my subscription to the Landmark has expired I will again renew as I cannot feel satisfied to do without it, as it has been my constant companion almost ever since its publication.

I first subscribed for it when brother Podenheimer was its editor. I sent the money to him but when my first number came you had become editor. It has been a source of comfort to me through this sin stained world.

I have passed my 70th mile post and you know I have nearly finished my course. May I be prepared to say with the great apostle of the gentiles, I am now ready to be offered and when the time of my departure is at hand, I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is a crown of righteousness laid up for me, and not for me only but for all who love his appearing.

May the Lord bless you to continue to fight the good fight of faith. I am I hope your brother in tribulation.

Jubilee, N. C.

Miss Sallie T. Moore, Dear Sister—Your letter requesting me to write on Music, Dancing and etc. has been received and I will try to comply with your request.

We find that there is praise in heaven, this we know by experience for we are made partakers of it. Where is the christian but in heaven when he is in the spirit on the Lord's day? Then his whole spirit, soul and body are filled with music and praise to God such as the world as such will never know. This is only a foretaste or earnest of full joy of eternal glory. I do not believe that the christian in his glorified state will enter into something altogether new to him for the Lord gives him here a part of the same blessing that he shall receive there in all of its fullness. The joy thus experienced is an inward fire of love to God and his people and works that can't be seen and known by the world, nor can they know why the child of God should feel about it as he does for it is inexpressible and full of glory.

I have carefully searched every text in the bible where music or dancing is spoken of and fail to find one passage that justifies the modern source of music and dancing. I know that young folks are young folks and we nor any other set of religionist can make christians out of them or cause them to love the way of the Lord. This is one reason that we see so many church members engaged in balls. They have been gotten in the worldly churches to make more numbers and they love the ways of the world as well as ever and know nothing of the way of the Lord therefore their hearts are to follow the things they love.

I feel sure that the christian's old nature is as much in the love of the world as it ever was but there is another spirit in him to turn him from the ways of the world, the flesh and the devil and therefore he crucifies the flesh with affections and lust thereof. This will lead him away from the common worldly music to the praise of the Lord and from that dancing which gives so much joy to the flesh to rejoicing in the spirit of the Lord in his heart.

Music is very animating but unless it is purely spiritual it is not edifying. To animate is to make one feel lively from a natural stand-point, but to edify is to give comfort from a true spiritual standpoint. I want to illustrate in this way: A preacher may so deliver his sermon that his congregation really do not know what he is saying so as to connect his subject together and yet that congregation may be animated under that very sermon that they will speak in the highest terms of praise of it. Another may speak in a clear, plain demonstration way and set forth the truth of God so plainly that you can read it in your own heart and yet that animation may not be felt at all. However there is edification and a growth in grace under the latter way of preaching that never can be under that animating, unteaching kind of preaching first mentioned. I fully believe it is more damaging than useful in the church of God. It is even so with music: Let a number of skilled musicians play harmoniously some lively piece of music and in usual double time and it will make a graceless professor forget his religion. Why? because it is so animating. Let a number of christians sing a good spiritual song and it will so build you up within that you will feel that you want a thousand tongues to use in praising the Lord; Why? because you are so edified that you want to speak forth the praise of Jesus Christ, your redeemer. Thus the flesh instead of becoming so animated that it wants to become prominent, it is so subdued that you are made to feel that you want to spend your life in the service of God. That first kind of music is not needed in the church of God for we want nothing to make one feel his importance there, but we want the praise of the Lord so plainly and clearly set forth that there is no mistaking animation for education neither in singing nor in preaching.

Instrumental music was pretty largely connected with the worship under the law as will appear from the following scriptures: 1st Samuel eighteenth chapter and sixth verse. They had music and dancing when David returned from killing Goliath. When the ark of the Lord was brought home and Samuel sixth chapter and fourteenth verse and 1st Chronicles fifteenth chapter and twenty-ninth verse David leaped and danced before the ark of the Lord.

It appears it was a custom for the women of Israel to get together and dance but not with any men. Judges twenty-first chapter and twenty-first to twenty-third verses.

The children of the wicked used to have dances as it appears in Job twenty first chapter and eleventh verse. In Ecclesiastes third chapter and fourth verse, we are told that there is a time to dance, but we are not told when that time is only when we compare the other scriptures and see when the people of God exercised that privilege. In all of those places in which music and dancing is spoken of it shows the praise of the Lord except when Israel was worshiping the golden calf or the enemies of Israel were making merry over their victories in war.

While we cannot make christians of our children yet we should teach them morals both in word and deed and in this way restrain them from the wickedness of the world. The sons of Eli the high priest were very wicked before the Lord and the Lord visited their wickedness on Eli and his house because he didn't restrain them and cut off his house from the priesthood. This is enough to teach us that we should restrain our children. It is rather hard in this day of evil to be faithful in all things. Clubs are formed to get together for card playing either in spots or in numbers and some of us instead of teaching our children the evil of such things, engage in them ourselves and thus set the example of evil before the eyes of those to whom we should be a pattern.

I find in the New Testament that when the prodigal son returned to his father's house there was music and dancing. This is representing the experience in the hearts of God's children when one comes in with knowledge of the truth in Christ Jesus. Abraham was the father of those who worshipped under the law and as such he gave the portion of his goods to the younger son which under the law belonged to him. Abraham was also the father of the faithful in Christ Jesus and as such he had the fatted calf killed, (Jesus Christ, the ring of love, the robe of righteousness and the shoes of preparation of the gospel of peace ready to go on this penitent one as soon as he returned to him empty. When this was done all who were in the home were filled with music and dancing.

There is another case when one came and danced to show her fine accomplishments. The daughter, Herodias who danced before Herod and for her beautiful dancing received the wages of unrighteousness, the head of John the Baptist, the servant of the living God. See how she was ensnared in her vanity? and Herod was eaten of worms and he died a wretched death.

There can be no harm in any kind of musical instrument. The harm is in the use which is made of it. The same is true of the human voice, we may use either of them in an ungodly way. The Christian, when he is merry, should sing psalms, hymns and spiritual songs; making melody in the heart to the Lord, and this should be the music of all our churches.

Your brother in hope,
L. H. HARDY.

THE LAW: THE GOSPEL.

1st—The law is the ministration of death: the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Hence by the law is the knowledge of sin and by sin comes death: but through Jesus Christ is preached the forgiveness of sins; for Christ is become the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

2nd—Christ was made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law. He came under the law which is the strength of sin. When Jesus was made of a woman, made under the law that meant that he the just one should suffer for the unjust in order that those for whom he died and rose again should receive the adoption of sons. All this guilt under the law was imputed to Jesus, so that he who knew no sin was made sin for us. This is the most wonderful love and mercy ever known—that God so loved the world that he sent his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have eternal life.

3rd.—The suffering of Jesus surpassed that of any man. He could say behold and see if there is any sorrow like unto my sorrow. The strength of sin is the law. Not until one is quickened to feel and know the law does he know the power of sin to slay him. I had not known sin but by the law. When the commandment came sin revived and I died. Sin slew me by the law which is good. Because the law is good, holy and just therefore it condemns sin: but it cannot excuse or pardon sin, nor can it make any allowance for it, not even in the perfect Jesus for he is in the place of his people as their surety, and must restore that which he had not taken away. The soul that sins must die for the wages of sin is death. Hence Jesus must be sacrificed for sin. Nor was it a common death that he died. He must feel the guilt of sin to make an atonement for the sinner. His perfect life could not exempt him from death, nor diminish ought of suffering due for sin. Hence his soul is made exceedingly sorrowful even unto death. While he prayed to his father being in an agony, "Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not my will but thine be done," not a whit of the penalty for transgression could pass: but a perfect atonement must be made by death. Jesus offered himself holy, spotless, perfect and obtained eternal redemption by the one offering of himself once. Dreadful guilt is thus done away. Not a sin could be forgiven without the shedding of this blood. Not one of Adam's race could ever have been saved without this sacrifice. While Jesus was under the law he was oppressed and afflicted, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.

4th.—The best evidence we can have or do have of the sorrows of Jesus is when we are laboring and burdened with the guilt of our sins until we die to all hope of salvation through any thing we can do. This is the time of Jacob's trouble, the greatest trouble Jacob ever has or feels. It is the death sentence of sin, the justice of God in the condemnation. Here he is brought to submit to God's righteous law, and fully approve of the holiness and justice of that law in condemning him. When pardon is granted him through the atoning merit of Jesus Christ crucified and risen it is the happiest and most blessed hour of the soul that has felt the guilt of sin. Here is a new world of glory revealed in to him. The love of God is shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost. Then he blesses God and sings a song of praise unto him. It is the song of Moses the servant of God and the song of the Lamb.

But none ever knew the sorrow unto death Jesus must suffer to fulfill the law, and make an end of sin. But in his resurrection a new day begins, the sabbath of rest, the most glorious proclamation of peace and pardon for all our sins, and the giving unto us the purchased redemption of salvation that comes through the blood of Jesus.

5th.—The gospel is a song—glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will to men. As when David slew Goliath the giant which relieved all Israel, and enslaved all Philistines typical of the victory wrought by Jesus and revealed in his people—as step by step they find that the things that appeared most against them are removed as we approach them, and instead of being enemies to destroy us are cautious to warn us and make us behave, or nods of correction to hurry us on to safer ground, and better views of the glories of Mount Zion. Often our way seems so hampered that there is no way for us to pass along and escape, but as we approach the seeming danger we are constrained to take the shipping that in the storm calls for the appearance of Jesus walking on the water, and ruling the storm which obeys all his commands, and we are at rest and adoring him who rules all things. Troubles are thrust in our way to make us sensible of our inability ty to overcome them, but as Jesus removes them they deepen our reverence for him who has all power, and we feel that they work for our good because they call forth a prayer to him to lead us, and his faithfulness appears clearer and plainer to our views.

6th.—The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. As a dream these things seem as idle tales to our unbelief but as faith provides we find they are greater than we could imagine, and better than all that men could declare. Faith is the substance of things hoped for. Faith is the worker of wonders and the revealer of secrets beyond our power to even think. By faith we overcome the world. The just find a most wonderful living in this hallowed ground. The work is all finished though we knew it not, but as it unfolds it reveals the power of God unto salvation. As sin has reigned unto death under the covenant of works, even so grace reigns through righteousness into eternal life by Jesus Christ.

GLEANING

God made provision for the poor when he settled his portion in Canaan. He instructed his people to leave some of the crop in the field when they gathered their harvests in order that the poor might glean some food for hunger.

It was not left merely to the will of the owner of the field to observe or reject this matter as he should prefer. But he was commanded strictly to leave some of the crop, and not gather the utmost. Boaz having the mind of the Lord in him, enjoins on his young men a special command to leave even handfulls of purpose for Ruth. This was surprising liberality to this poor stranger.

It was the poor, the needy, the stranger, and the hungry that this bounty was reserved for. What a favor to live in a faithful land where heaven made such a choice and merciful reservations for the needy? Well all who live in a gospel land are so highly favored.

What I mean by gospel land is not merely the locality or territory where the gospel is preached; but the field or harvest of spiritual blessings. All who hear the joyful sound of the gospel with spiritual hearing and feel their need of the bread of life, find handfulls of purpose.

The poor and hungry bestir themselves. It energizes a man, and incites him to seek bread, when he feels the pangs of hunger. The rich are lazy, and move slowly, and only at their pleasure. But the poor are active and busy, and make many a step in hard toil seeking bread. So it is with those hungering for the bread of life. How they search here and there to find a head of wheat, or a cluster of grapes, or bunch of raisins, or a pomegranate, or fig, or bottle of wine, or drink of cool water. How eagerly and with what a zest a hungry soul will search the bible or providential dealings to find a handful dropped of purpose. For here he likes to find it dropped of purpose for him. He does not want it to be a chance, but a purpose.

What a blessing to be stirred up to diligence. Poverty of soul is a great blessing because it leads and hurries one to fulfill the scriptures, and do those things which the Lord commanded to be done. If not hungry we could never search and seek the Lord with the whole heart.

Then how sweet the food is to the poor and hungry. Every bitter thing even is sweet. Little crumbs are so savory, and a little goes a long ways, and we notice and pick up little things when we are hard pressed, that the full soul would not notice. We watch and trace the good hand of God so much better when we are poor. The rich would despise this small provision, but it is a great matter to the poor. A dinner of herbs and love to give it sauce is king's fare to us then. Our soul eats and blesses the Lord who left a command that the Lord should glean thus.

The poor are not trespassers when they are gleaning. God has given them the right to glean. We have a right to enter and glean. The king has so ordered it. Nor is it of the refuse and chaff we are to glean, but of the choice crops; and we are to take all we can get; for it is left for that purpose.

Then we can lie down also in green pastures; because the same Lord, who spreads the table for us in the presence of our enemies, is our shepherd. How sweet the rest which the Lord gives. When he makes our bed for us, and the valiant men of Solomon are guards, surely we can say our bed is green, and our rest is sweet.

Then he gives his poor, his paupers, whom he feeds from his own table, the best wine which goeth down sweetly, causing the lips of them that are asleep to speak. Gleaning is good, and I have never heard of a gleaner coming to grief. The richest food, and not too much of it, is gathered for the hungry thus under the command of the Lord of the Harvest.

OBITUARIES

MRS. A. V. HUDSON.

We, the members of the church at Wolf Island, in conference assembled at the March meeting, 1908, adopt the following:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to take from us by death our dear sister, Mrs. A. V. Hudson.

And whereas, We desire to be submissive to the will of Him who doeth all things well, feeling that our loss is her eternal gain.

While the infirmities of age have kept sister Hudson from being with us often in her declining years, yet she has remembered us, and sent us letters of love and good will, showing that "where the heart is there will the mind be also." Truly a mother in Israel is gone.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our church book, a copy sent to the family of our deceased sister, a copy to Zion's Landmark, and a copy to the Reidsville papers with the request that they be published.

Dear Brother Gold:—Enclosed is a very good piece I cut out from an old Landmark printed in 1878. I would love for you to republish it if you think it not amiss. It was written by you I guess, as it was in the editorial. I picked it up this morning, and my eyes fell on that place headed, Gleanings, and I read it and the tears flowed freely as I read. I was so poor and needy and hungry that I felt like it was a handful dropped on purpose for me and it came in such an unexpected way. I dreamed last Thursday night that my father and I sang together, God moves in a mysterious way, and we came to the verse, ye fearful saints fresh courage take, the clouds you so much dread, are big with mercy and shall break, in blessing on your head. I thought I said papa these are sweet words to me, and my dear brother they are sweet, and I know God moves in a mysterious way. Little did I expect this morning that I would receive the comfort at home all alone as I have. But that rich letter that you wrote years ago was dropped on purpose before me to read this morning, and I do rejoice in the Lord that it was. If you dont republish it I hope you will send it back to me, for I shall want to read it again.

Your sister I hope,
MATTIE LUPER

THOMAS F. SMITH.

Brother Thomas F. Smith, son of Joseph T. and Rachael Smith, was born April 21st, 1886, and died January 16th, 1908. He was married to Allie I. Sasser February 6th, 1889. Unto that union were born five children, four daughters and one son.

He was received a member of the church at Memorial, Wayne county, N. C., Saturday before the first Sunday in October 1899, and was baptized with his wife Addie I. Smith on Sunday following by Elder J. W. Gardner.

Brother Smith was a very industrious farmer, I have been told until he became much afflicted with rheumatism and became helpless. His limbs became so drawn he was entirely helpless and was greatly reduced in flesh. Such suffering as he must have felt to be so reduced and helpless must have been severe, and it continued for years. Patience it seemed to me was greatly displayed in him. Cheerfulness was a lovely trait in his character. Tenderly the Lord lead him. He greatly enjoyed the company of his brethren and friends. While it was distressing to see one so helpless, yet the spiritual-mindedness and sobriety of conversation of brother Smith was such as to repay the visitors who desired to talk about things greater and better than anything in this world.

He read his bible very constantly and delighted to converse on the contents of that best of all books. Few men have I met better versed in the contents of this book. The compensation for his suffering, helpless state, and his inability to labor, and his feeling of dependance on others was found in the store of knowledge his mind was enriched with. He was greatly blessed in the constant and kind attention of his faithful wife, though of course it was a trial to him to know that she must so constantly wait on him.

He was blessed with great love, faith and hope, and was gifted in speaking and in writing, and he wrote much. He passed away most peacefully, and those that knew him well felt that the Lord was with him in all his afflictions, and took him home in the merits of the Lord Jesus who was the hope of this afflicted brother.

May the mercy of the Lord be with his bereaved family.

IN MEMORY OF MY MOTHER.

Mrs. Virginia Ann Dalton. She departed

this life January 28th, 1906. She was the daughter of Archer W. and Fannie H. Roberson, of Stokes county, N. C. She was born April the 13th 1837. When about eighteen years old she was married to Gabriel P. Dalton and was a kind good wife to him as long as he lived. Mama was left a widow when we children were all small. With her own dear hands she toiled to support and school us. My two sisters are dead. Only my brother and I are left to mourn our loss, but God be praised we feel our undoing is her eternal gain. She was a Primitive Baptist from the crown of her head to the sole of her foot. I think it was in the year 1875 she joined the church at Sardis and lived a consistent member up to her death. I would love to say I know I have a good subject to write on, but I feel I am not competent to do justice to the sacred memory of my dear Mother, for I feel she was so pure and good, so humble and christian like in all her ways. She was such a devoted christian and loved the brethren and sisters it seemed with a love almost divine. And I feel I am so sinful that all I do is sinful. So dear friends you can imagine how incompetent I feel. I think she would have liked for me to write a few lines to her memory. I have tried so many times, but my eyes will fill with tears, and I cannot see what I am writing. I can't understand why I feel impressed to write this. I know there are others who would write a much better piece. Mama was not well for several years, but during her last sickness, she was not confined to her bed but three days. Dr. Jones attended her the last two months, said she had heart trouble. She suffered very much at times with shortness of breath, difficult breathing but was so patient in all her suffering. She talked very much the morning of the day she passed away into that beyond. She said she wanted to be resigned to the Lord's will, and said she thought she was, for if it was his will to suffer longer she was willing to suffer. If he saw fit for her to go she had rather go than to suffer so much. About ten o'clock of the same day she told brother and myself she was perfectly easy and I dont think she suffered any more, for several times during the evening she told me she was not suffering, she felt better. About five o'clock my children came in from school, when they kissed her and asked how she was feeling she answered so bright and cheerful, she thought she was feeling better. This was not five minutes before she passed away without one single groan or struggle.

"Asleep in Jesus blessed sleep.

From which none never wakes to weep.

It seems I could write on and never stop. She was so kind and good to every one. She so much enjoyed meeting with brothers and sisters in the christian faith and love. Elder Alvis Moore preached an impressive sermon and conducted the burial services, January 30th, 1906. We laid our dear Mama to rest by Papa here in the home burying ground where her mother and father are buried. May our lives be as noble and good as hers is my earnest prayer.

NEEDAM M. WHITE.

We, the Primitive Baptist church, at White Oak, Jones county, N. C., realizing the loss we have sustained in the death of our dear brother Needam M. White, who fell asleep in Jesus, February 11, 1908, having been a member and serving this church as a deacon for many years.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1st that we bow in humble submission to the will of the great head of the church, who doeth all things well, as we believe our temporal loss is his eternal gain.

2nd. that a copy of these resolutions be put upon our church record, a copy sent to brother White's widow, and a copy sent to Elder P. D. Gold, with a request that he publish same in Zion's Landmark.

Done and signed by order of conference this fourth day of April 1908.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Allow me to say that I have collected nearly 500 sketches for proposed book biographies of Primitive Baptist ministers of U. S. Many other sketches have been promised. Please send them on, brethren. If only a few words about life in ministry, age, etc., that will do, but give all the information you wish. I will re-arrange for publication. Now please don't delay. There is not a more worthy, self-sacrificing and honorable body of men and women than the ministry of the Primitive or Old School Baptist church. A book of this character will be interesting, and useful, as well as commemorative of their memory. No mooted questions, Baptist differences or "bones of contention," will be published, but only that which will be edifying, unifying and representative. The work will have an appendix containing much useful and valuable information, in brief form, gleaned from the best authorities. This alone may be worth the price of the book to you, which will be between one and two dollars. Can't name exact price yet. It depends upon size number of photos, binding, etc., and the orders I receive. The larger the edition the cheaper the book. Now if you would like to commemorate the memory of these "Soldiers of the Cross," as you like to see their grave marked when they are dead, then send your order, for one or more copies. Don't delay, but tell me how you feel about the matter. It will cost me about a thousand dollars, and if the Baptists and their friends don't want it I cannot afford to publish. Kindly write me.

R. H. PITTMAN.

Luray, Va.

Dear Brother Gold—I know nothing by experience about stealing goods, but since I have been in the ministry I have many times stolen time from myself to go see the brethren, who have written for me that I might impart to them some spiritual gift. My pastoral labors have been very heavy for thirty years, and to be faithful in that and then to steal my rest time to fill up outside invitations has told very heavily on me for the last three years. I am now experiencing a rebuke for this over work. This was my rest week and I came over here in Virginia to see some brethren and friends who have been writing for me. For two days I held up and enjoyed filling the appointments they had made for me, but on the evening of the second day, which was yesterday I had to give up, and now I can't read my appointments for today and to-night, but must try to get home as soon as I can. I want to take this step to let those who may be disappointed know why I was not with them.

Even a preacher is flesh and can endure only so much, and if I don't go to see those who have invited me it is not because I do not want to do so. For three springs I have broken down under the strain.

I must try to be faithful to the churches that I have promised to serve, and that will keep me from visiting many others even very destitute churches that I feel are neglected.

I must try to go home to my family today sick, but I am glad to say in behalf of my brethren and friends, not financially hurt.

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the sweet ministrations of his Holy Spirit be with you all.

Your brother in a good hope.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

GLORYING IN THE LORD.
*A Sermon Preached at Cranbrook, on June 4th, 1871, by Daniel

"That according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."—1 Cor. i. 31, from ver. 18. I have often told you that all divine teaching tends to two points—may you examine whether the teaching you are under tends to the same. One point is, "That no flesh should glory in his presence." And he knows best how to bring the sinner off that sandy foundation. The other point is, "He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." And friends, the happiness of all saved sinners in this life and the next is to glorify the God of all grace. The first point is gained by a deep knowledge of self. How can one then glory in self? And the second by a knowledge of Christ. As Christ is revealed, He must wear the crowns as the author and finisher of salvation.

We noticed in the morning that the "preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God" (ver. 18.) So Paul tells the Romans: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (i 16.) "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent" (1 Cor. i 19) We find Christ rejoiced in spirit, and said, "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." God's word pronounceth a woe to those that are wise in their own eyes. Theirs is not a case for Jesus Christ. (But I know of one in particular that is a case for Jesus Christ.) He says, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent. Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world? For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe" (vers. 19—21.) And He will often work by weak instruments. When they thought the disciples were unlearned and ignorant men, they "took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." And may they take knowledge of us on the same ground. You see, preaching is God's appointment. Under Peter three thousand were pricked in their hearts. Many now in heaven had reason when on earth to thank God for a preached gospel; many can date their first wakening from the preached word; many have been refreshed many brought into gospel liberty by it. For "it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." It is a mercy that many in heaven, and many on the way there, have received blessing from the living God in their living souls without any means at all, but God's people dare not in their right minds, slight the means of his appointment. And put matters at the worst, can it be wrong to mingle with God's saints? Who can tell but that an arrow may strike thy conscience, and bring thee into concern? I can say in truth that in my wanting to come to Cranbrook, it was to come where there was a spirit of hearing. And when a red hot shot is cast, who can tell who may be hit by it? and if it should be so with you, you will never repent coming under the word. Ah, we never went guilty to bed for anything that is right. Once I opened my Bible with no expectation, but I read down the 22nd Psalm, and I shall have reason to thank my God as long as I am in this world that I read that Psalm. I read, "I was cast upon thee from the womb; thou art my God from my mother's belly." I felt I was cast upon his providence and his grace as his child, he in love being willing to take charge of me. O sinner, it is a mercy to be found waiting for him, and who can tell "whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good?"

"For after that in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." You know many poor, ignorant people say, "How can any preach unless they have been to college?" But Tiptaft said he wondered any could preach Christ's gospel that had been to college. The wiser men are in natural science, the greater fools they often are in divinity. Paul says, "When it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb and called me by his grace, to reveal his son in me." He puts God's pleasure at the beginning. And if we are saved, it is according to the "good-will of him that dwelt in the bush."

"For the Jews require a sign." Now the Jews looked for the Messiah to come in grandeur: but his own way was as Bethlehem's Babe, cradled in a manger. They asked, "Have any of the rulers believed on him?" There was no room for him in the inn; and there will never be any room in thy heart for Jesus Christ until he makes room. Bless God for a contrite heart if you have it. "And the Greeks seek after wisdom: but we preach Christ crucified." I have thought again and again about Christ crucified. You know, if Jesus Christ had not been crucified, we must have gone to hell; and so it is not enough to preach Christ, but it must be Christ crucified, Christ resigning his life for his people, Christ in his life, Christ in his death, Christ in his ascension, and as our intercessor with the father in heaven. And, I say, if he had not died that death, what would have become of you and me? "The Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom: but we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." Now the greatest manifestation of the wisdom and power of God ever made, shines forth in the incarnation of our redeemer God. And yet to them that perish it is foolishness. Now suppose God had referred the matter to angels and men, and given them an eternity to look it over, to look at his justice and holiness, and at our condition, and said, "Now find you a fit and proper person to put away sin, and bring life and immortality to light;" it would have beggared angels and men to all eternity. Thus the great display of God's wisdom that could ever be made, was God in our nature, "Immanuel, God with us." And think of our wretched fall. I say it with reverence, the mighty God, the maker of heaven and earth, could not have remained in heaven and reached us from the jaws of hell. There was a necessity that the co-equal God, the co-eternal Son, should come down to this earth, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself; and all in a way of holiness, to his eternal glory and church's good. And I tell thee, it is God's wisdom devised it, and God's power accomplished it. The faith of God's elect knows it to be the power of God and the wisdom of God. God is a just God as well as a Saviour; he will in no wise acquit the guilty. Hence a necessity for God our creator to take our sins, in order to bring in everlasting righteousness. And you cannot find a single thing belonging to the Son of God that can be done without. Take away his deity, and where is the efficiency of his blood? as it is said, "How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" Take away his deity, and where are the efficacy of his blood and the merit of his obedience? Take away his humanity and where is the blood, where is the bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh? (Eph. v. 30.) He is very God and very man. Now you cannot point me to anything connected with the person of the Lord Jesus Christ which my soul can do without. There is nothing but what his people shall receive partly in the world to come. Thanks for Jesus Christ, the "new and living way" to the living God. He has ever been, and ever will be, acceptable and suitable to all in whom the father is pleased to reveal him, precious in every point of view to him that believeth, 1 Peter ii. 7.

This was the greatest manifestation of the power of God that ever was made. It was great when he said, "Let there be light: and there was light." Again we are on an island, the sea comes close around us, and yet the island has never been overwhelmed—the power of God puts boundaries to the sea. David says, "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy hands, the moon and stars, which thou hast ordained: what is man, that thou art mindful of him?" You may well say so, David. And one of our poets says,

"Lord what is man, Thy desperate foe,
That thou could'st love and save him so?"

I know of no greater display of God's unspeakable power than was made manifest in the incarnation of Jesus Christ, our Husband, Brother, Friend. Mary his mother could not make the mystery out. What a riddle to her! "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." You know he that atones for the sins of others must have none of his own. "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." Bone of our bone, yet without sin. What a marvellous wonder that, nothing could accomplish but the power of God.

And I will tell thee another thing. You and I came into the world enemies to God, and now we are friends; we came into the world dead as Beelzebub, now we are alive to God; we came into the world Pharisees, and now are heartily willing to renounce all things. "For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ." Now we are made numble followers of the Lamb; and though spotted as a leopard, yet are panting after God. Is not that a manifestation of his power towards us? Moses might well say, "I will now turn aside, and see this great sight." A bush on fire and not consumed: and who preserved it but he that dwelt in the bush? "We preach Christ crucified unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." "Whom he did predestinate, then he also called; and whom he called, them also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified." Why justify them? Why, because they feel the depth of the fall. Here are God's predestination, effectual calling, justifying grace, and glorification; and I have realized my interest in three out of the four. It is God's work to adopt and justify, and he can take thee to heaven, though reason cannot see the way to get there.

The top of Jacob's ladder was in heaven, the bottom on the earth—very God and very man. And what a mercy to have known something of him!

"Sinners can say, and only they,

How precious is the Saviour!"

The fourth point, is God's work to settle, and I know he will have the glory. "Unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God." I could not help thinking, about ten o'clock this morning, it will be a good thing when this poor soul is happy with God; but while one is here; one must go on preaching; and it is a blessed thing to preach that Christ that has been the power of God to one's own soul.

"because the foolishness of God is wiser than men." "Well but," say you, "is not that blasphemy?" What you call foolishness is God's wisdom. "He taketh the wise in their own craftiness." You see what your wisdom will come to. And you may look upon the preaching of the cross to be foolishness; but it is because "the foolishness of God is wiser than men." You look at the wise men after the flesh, and talk to them about the incarnate God, and about needing salvation by his blood, and you will often find them the biggest fools under heaven. If they look at these things as folly, it is because they are "foolishness" to them; but they are God's things, and the "weakness of God is stronger than men." The poet says, "No less almighty at his birth

Than on his throne supreme,

His shoulders held up heaven and earth,

When Mary held up him."

And though reason may cavil, faith stand in the power of God never will Oh, sometimes how I do want to drop into the grave because I know, "Absent from the body, present with the Lord." No more spot, no more lust; but I shall see him whom my soul loveth, and not have a doubt about it. "And the weakness of God is stronger than men." Now it is not so much to be wondered at that God in our nature should withstand every foe, but there is something marvellous in a poor sinner standing up before mighty foes and yet, with an atom of saving grace, he shall obtain glory. "Because I live, ye shall live also." And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

"For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called." See how that is carried out; how few wise and noble there are. How true the word of God! And what does God say? "Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom"—if not under divine teaching he will: "but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the Lord." O what a mercy, to know anything of judgment and lovingkindness! It is a marvellous thing that God should bear with a poor sinner.

"Sometimes the Lord bestows on me,
His fretful child a toy,
On which I raise my prospects high,
And look for certain joy.

But soon there's something intervenes,
I've something else in view;
The former mercy is forgot,
And I want something new."

Who can bear with children like parents that love them?

"Not many mighty, not many noble are called." It was asked, "Have any of the rulers believed on him?" No man can make a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, but he that made the world out of nothing. O sinner, if you have an atom of faith in the scriptures, or the God of the scriptures, be thankful. The God that made the world must make a penitent. There is nothing done but by the power of God. How he could make iron swim! And, to come to the point at once, how he could redeem, save, justify, and glorify countless myriads of the human race by the blood and obedience of the Babe of Bethlehem.

"For ye see your calling brethren,"—
"God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chose the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things." How I have thought of that! Are you one of these base things? If any were to send me to find anything baser than I, I would not stir an inch; for I know I should not find it. "And things that are despised hath God chosen." I have no hope of your religion unless you despise yourselves and your sins; and those that despise themselves will be esteemed by Jesus Christ. "Yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence." Let me once more entreat thee, if thou hast any concern for thy soul, to consider, what art thou taught? what is the influence of that teaching? If Jesus Christ is all in all, who is to wear the crown but himself? "For great is thy mercy towards me; and thou has delivered my soul from the lowest hell." There was no room for David to glory in anything else than the Lord God of Israel.

"Thus falling before thee,
We laud thy loved name,
Ascribing thy glory
To God and the lamb."

"But of him are ye in Christ Jesus." Look at that word, "in Christ Jesus." No final condemnation to such. The apostle wanted to be found in him, and the language of every penitent is "Did he die for me?" For "there is therefore no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus." "Who of God is made unto wisdom." Look at these solemn words. If Jesus Christ is never made wisdom to you, you will perish in your ignorance. It does not say, "He is wisdom and we must claim him;" but, "of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto wisdom;" and if God never makes him wisdom to thee, thou wilt die in ignorance. "Wisdom is the principal thing therefore get wisdom." Get a personal knowledge of thine interest in the Lamb. Solomon says that "wisdom is better than weapons of war." God came not by weapons of war when he came to redeem, but in a way of wisdom. "We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery." He saves poor sinners and every attribute of deity shines forth in the face of Jesus Christ. "There was a little city, and few men within it, and there came a great king against it." Who was that? The devil. "And besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it." And only to mention one bulwark—"dead in trespasses and sins," who shall deliver thee? "Now there was found in it a poor wise man." Who was that? why Jesus Christ, who, "though he was rich yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." "A poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man." And you and I should never have remembered him but for his remembering us.

"Who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness." "I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, and my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation." And so with the man in filthy garments. "Is not this a brand out of the fire?" "Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment." "I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off." And what is righteousness but being clothed in Christ's obedience, being washed in his atoning blood?

"And sanctification." There is nothing sanctifies the sinner but the blood. "Set a mark upon the forehead of the men that sigh and cry for all the abominations that be done." O the sanctifying, peace-speaking blood of the Lamb! "Through sanctification of the spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter i. 2). Does God command every man to repent? Then has he worked that repentance in thy poor soul?

"And redemption." The redeeming price that ransomed thee from hell has made a way for the ransomed to pass over, and sing the song, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy and thy truth's sake." "That according as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."

Robersonville, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold—Dear brother—It has been on my mind for some time to write my experience, but it will be impossible, for the best scholar in the world could only hint at it, for the depths of sin in a human heart can't be fully described by neither pen nor tongue.

About the year 1879, from some cause there was a feeling of condemnation upon my mind. Of course while growing up to manhood I often did wrong and often received the mother's hand which I often deserved, but after receiving chastening from her it was all over for I had suffered the penalty of that sin and it soon passed off.

But this feeling of condemnation is different in some sense from that of my mother's rod for I was flesh of her flesh and bone of her bone, so I didn't think that she would destroy or forever banish me from her home.

But the condemnation I was then under was from a perfect just and holy God and while I stood justly condemned before him I felt that if I would stop sinning and live upright that he (God) would be pleased with my obedience and would accept me in his embrace and all would be well, so I resolved I would live upright and not sin any more. But alas, how foolish I was and how little I knew of the deception of my heart, for when temptations would present themselves before me I found I had not strength to resist, so my hopes were darkened and blighted from that stand-point. But as my mother was a member of the church and as I often went with her to meetings and was frequently with the members of the church I would often hear them tell the trials of their souls and how they were without hope and how discouraged they were until it pleased the Lord to reveal Christ unto them as having borne their sins in his own body and suffered and died on the cross, and there suffering the most shameful death that mortal ever did to take away their shame and guilt, and present them unto his father perfect pure and holy. So I often heard them with great interest as they told my feelings until they came to their deliverance when it made me hope that the Lord would sooner or later deliver me from sin and condemnation. So I was often looking and expecting the Lord to manifest himself unto me in some way and take away my guilt and give me a good hope that when I died I would be received in everlasting glory to praise him forever. Thus was the meditation of my mind for about twelve months.

About the close of 1880, as I had not been delivered as I had hoped, I concluded all the trouble I had been in on account of sin was all imaginary and that the Lord had never began a work of grace in my heart, and as the pleasure of the world still lingered in my heart and I still had a love for the things of earth I concluded that I would try to take pleasure in the things I once took pleasure in. So I went to a party and was asked to take a part in the dance. I did so but not with a clear conscience for I felt condemned, but I thought I would overcome that feeling by getting drunk so I bought a pint of whisky and drank it but it only added trouble to trouble for I felt I had forever sealed my eternal destiny in that lake from which none ever return, for I knew that I had sinned against light and knowledge so I felt that the time had been when I might have repented but now it was too late. Thus I passed the year of 1881, the agony of which no mortal tongue can express.

I often went to the woods to weep and cry and try to pray to the Lord for mercy, and yet feeling he could not remain just and hear my cry.

At the close of 1881 I did not feel that I could remain in the country where I had always lived and I felt I wanted to go to the forest and dwell with wild animals for I was unfit to dwell among the civilized creatures. So the last Sunday in December 1881 I concluded I would seek solitude in unknown parts but didn't want any one to know any thing of my whereabouts so I put on two suits of clothes and started to Tarboro as that was the nearest train point. About 7 o'clock in the night I reached Bethel. After passing Bethel a short distance I sat down in a corner of the fence feeling that it was death to go and death to turn back and after sitting there a few minutes I arose and turned homeward.

Oh! could any criminal condemned to be hung standing on the scaffold receiving the rope around his neck, with the trap sprung and soon to be thrown by the officer into everlasting eternity have felt worse than I did at that time, but as I kept walking back home over the road I had just traveled a few hours ago in deep meditation over my awful condition I began to feel some relief of mind but could not tell from whence it came. But I reached home about one o'clock in the night. I was about like the criminal on the scaffold ready to be justly hung but when the last ray of hope is taken away and he is in the hands of the executing officer and the officer bound to obey, and just before the trap falls here comes a message from the supreme authority commanding his release. Just think if you can how you would feel, none but those that have been there can know. I have never felt that I could worship, praise and adore him half as much as I ought to for the free and unbounding grace for it was absolutely free to me for if he (Christ) had dealt justly with me I would have been forever banished from his presence and cast into that lake where the heat dieth not out and the fire is not quenched.

Oh! glorious thought to thus be delivered and to be blessed with a hope in Christ.

Now my reasons for wanting to unite with the church was not to be eternally saved or to become a child of God for what I have written above is an evidence that I was already born of God, if I am not mistaken in what I had passed through during these two years, but it was because I loved that substance which had passed through the same trouble that I had and the ordinance of baptism was beautiful to me, for Christ who is my righteousness if I am not mistaken was baptized and what he did was right and I wanted to follow him if I could and I thought I could. But my dear brethren I often feel if I was ever in the way that Christ walked it was when I crossed his path and am wonderfully blest to be permitted to get that near in the right way. But Paul the great apostle of the Gentiles, saw nothing good in his fleshly nature, only a spirit of rebellion. Sin still dwells in our flesh so that we cannot live the life that we want to, for when we would do good evil is always present. Paul could say without a doubt that there is no power that can separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus.

Christ laid down his life for his people and if he did lay down his life for his people how can they be separated from the love of God without Christ being separated from his love. Oh! may the love of God bind his people together and if it dont nothing else will.

Brother Gold I commit this for your consideration to do as you please with it.

May the grace of God abound in the hearts of his children is my humble prayer, if not deceived.

A sinner saved I hope by the grace of God.

M. P. SMITH.

Elder P. D. Gold and all lovers of the Truth—greeting—Loved one I have had a mind to pen a few thoughts by way of endorsing Elder S. C. Jones, article in the Landmark of February 15 on the ten virgins, but owing to my vileness and the corruption in every thing else we see and hear almost, I have tried from time to time to keep silent. But the Lord says, I have placed watchmen upon thy walls Oh Jerusalem that shall not hold their peace day nor night, ye that make mention of the Lord keep not silent. So I feel it is as a fire shut up in my bones and I must speak.

I must say to my dear brother Elder S. C. Jones and others that I and the sound doctined brethren of my home church Old Mount Arraat and others of our association, heartily concur with you in your explanation of the subject throughout. It is just what I have contended for ever since I began preaching both in and out of the stand. So may the good Lord who alone reveals secret things to his servants bless you still more and more.

Now I feel to say that the parables generally embrace only the heir of the promise, the obedient and the wise ones and the difference between the two classes of heirs is here in this life, while the wise or obedient child has the oil or joy or an acquitted conscience here, for the Lord says, well done thou good and faithful servant. On the other hand the foolish or disobedient child has his darkness here and feels condemned.

Yours in hope

Elder P. D. Gold Dear Brother—It has come into my mind to again cast my mite, and "the word of the Lord is sharper than any two edged sword" and etc. And he says, "My word that goeth out my mouth shall not return to me void but shall accomplish the thing whereunto it is sent."

I would never take my pen to write again were it not that I feel constrained by some power and I trust it is the power of God, yet I see both natural and spiritual blessings held from me and I feel so distressed that life is a burden. So pardon me readers not that I would by any means compromise the truth, but that it should come from such a sinful unworthy worm as I feel myself to be, for I cannot do the things that I would and I often feel I am a reproach to the precious cause of Christ also still feeling I had rather die than do anything that would dishonor his holy name.

Now I would say that if any of you children of God hold anything against one another pray to God to enable you to lay it down. Just think of how much Jesus suffered for you and how great a debt he has forgiven you. It seems to me I see the abominations of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet "then know ye that the end is nigh even at the door, watch ye therefore and pray, for ye know not at what hour the son of man cometh." The last commandment that our dear dying suffering Lord gave was, "Little children love one another." If I have ever in my life done anything by word or act to offend or hurt the feelings of any of the little ones, I am willing and ready to fall on my knees at their feet and ask forgiveness and I am willing and do with my whole heart forgive and want to forget any hurtful word or act that has ever been said or done to me and if I should never see the opening of another day I can say in meekness I have done what I could but grieved because I couldn't do better. I leave all things in the hand of a faithful creator, our covenant keeping God, and commit to his care my spirit.

I desire an interest in the prayers of the saints and may God give me the spirit and desire not only to think but do his will. This is the prayer of the least if one at all of the numer saved by grace.

Elder P. D. Gold, My dear brother --Another year has passed and gone and I have read and reread the sweet consoling words in the dear old Landmark, and I feel like I could never do without it. It is such a comfort to me. I hope you may be spared to continue your work for many years. I have wanted to write you something for publication for a long time, but I feel that I am not competent. I have so many disappointments, fears and trials. I hope you won't forget to pray for me and my household. I know the dear Lord has blessed me all along in many ways through life, and I want to be thankful. We obtain each and every perfect gift through and by him, and were it not for his strong arms to comfort me I would never stand my great and sore trials and troubles.

Pray for me brother Gold, and may God's greatest blessing rest upon you. I feel so low spirited I desire the prayers of all the children of God.

I am your sister in hope,
MAGGIE A. JONES.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother—Enclosed find check for two dollars, for which please give me credit on Zion's Landmark. I regret that I am behind a little, but such is often the case with me though it is my desire to be more prompt if I could be so. I think nothing becomes a Baptist better than faithfulness to all his obligations. I know you are very much dependent on your subscribers or you can't meet your obligations as you like. Therefore I feel for you and pray the Lord to impress the minds of the readers of the Landmark to be faithful to you that you may be able to continue its publication to the praise of God and to the comfort of his people. Hope you are well.

Yours in hope,
J. P. TINGLE.

Dear Brother Gold—As the good Lord has blessed and enabled me to work and get money sufficient to pay for the dear Landmark I will say I am glad and hope I am thankful as it a great comfort to me. I have grieved because I couldn't get the money sooner but the Lord knows my mind and my chance. I feel I am blessed to send this and hope you will continue sending me the paper.

I don't feel I can write as some do but sometimes I can sing and feel it is true that Jesus died for me and it lifts me up to things above. Again I think it a wonder I could ever be saved but one thing is certain I love those I believe are christians. At best I only intended writing a few words in order to send you my due but if you have room you may print this as I love to see the other names in the Landmark because the crumbs are a part of the loaf and I have been told by a still small voice to call nothing common that God giveth. I hope he gave me what I have and I know I was not taught of man.

I have often desired to be at the feet of Jesus but most of the time I am tried in various ways but my hope is strengthened when I can sometimes feel I am a member of his family. Brother Gold I am poor in the flesh but still I feel I ought not to complain for I had rather be with you all in fellowship than to possess everything else.

Your sister I hope in Christ,
M. M. CURREY.

Elders P. D. Gold and Lester—Dear Brethren in the Lord, I see my time is out and has been for two months. You will find a post office order for $1.50. Will you please send me the Landmark for another year. I have been taking it about thirty five years, and have never got tired of it yet. Brother Gold, we have a good church here. I mean good Baptists. We number twenty seven, and I think we will soon have another church at Rocky Ford. I am trying to preach for them once a month. This is a fine country, and I would like to have any Baptist that is coming west to come and see us. I mean any sound Baptist. I would like to visit old Virginia again, but it seems that it is hard for me to get away.

W. C. PERDUE.

Lamar, Colorado.

Elder P. Gold, Dear Brother—Enclosed you will find money order for $1.50 for which please continue the Landmark for this year. I should have sent this in January but failed to do so.

I do enjoy your articles so much and hope you may be spared to us many years yet. It seems to me that God has so richly blessed you with that meekness, always so calm and it appears to me, so Christ like. Oh! if I could possess that spirit then I should know that I was one of his little ones. My imperfections and short comings do rise up before me like a great mountain I cannot surmount them, they keep me down. When I would do good evil is present and it seems that pride and everything mean is mixed with all I do. But I am grumbling when the Lord has so wonderfully blessed me. When I realize most fully his exceeding kindness and goodness to me, I feel the more humble and unworthy.

I hope you and your family are well. Please remember me to them and I hope you can visit Winston again soon. I had promised myself the pleasure of having you last time when sickness prevented.

Your little sister in hope,

Elder P. D. Gold—I feel this morning so cast down and destitute of any thing to write, but the impression comes with so much force, comfort ye, comfort ye my people; and how helpless and despondent I do feel. No rest, no peace do I find, and no comfort do I receive. I feel forsaken by earthly friends, and also our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

I united with the church at Old Hickory Grove on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1906 and was baptized on Sunday, by Elder Bernice Wood, have felt great relief of mind and conscience since, although very disobedient and following after evil more than good, it seems to me

I received a hope at the age of seventeen. At the age of twelve years I dreamed of going down through the earth three times to where there was nothing but water, and the last time a man met me at the bottom step and carried me out into the water. Then I knew I must be baptized. I became willing to be baptized about three years before I would obey, and the burden grew heavier and more burdensome to carry until I asked the Lord to show me if I should go, and I saw a light among some trees which seemed to me to be brighter than the sun, and I cried out Lord what can it mean, and the answer was, unite with the church. I stayed away two months then, and oh! the agony I suffered, I never can tell. I would walk and pray repeating every step what shall I do? and why were my sufferings so great? and a voice spoke and said, you are so prone to sin, and now when I hear any one say they are living clear of sin it makes me think they have never been born again. I find no good thing dwells in the flesh. I often wish that I could rise and fly and say farewell to this earthly cage. I know that if any one on this earth hates sin and nature any more than I, they have my sympathy. When I would do good evil is present.

The day I united with the church when they opened the doors of the church I began to murmur Lord I can't go, as soon as I did there arose a dead body before me, and something says you may join the church and live, or not join the church and die. This was repeated twice, then I said, Lord I will go. Then when I rose up to go and talk with the church there formed a light around the members, and they were placed in a little narrow path marching in a straight row singing the sweetest little song I ever heard. Then as soon as I was received I was carried up in that light, singing the same song, above the skies. But doubt and fear filled my mind before I got home, not believing I was fit to be baptized, but just as I arose the next morning Christ appeared and says, I am the way, the truth, and the life: then I could feel more willing and ready to go, for he says my yoke is easy and my burden is light. I often tell my husband the travels of this world is like wading in deep water, every step I take the deeper it gets. I am sitting by the fireside to-night writing at three o'clock. I threw aside my paper and pen this morning and said I had no impression to write, and retired as usual at bedtime, but found I could not rest, for it seemed that the devil would tear me to pieces, and my poor sick child would be taken from me before the sun rose. I raised up and said to my husband get up and build a fire for I feel like I am lying in hot water and everything in my earthen vessel being torn to pieces. Dear kindred in Christ, I think we should try to live and walk as near like Christ as we can. See what a meek and lowly lamb of God he was, while living here, taking our sins upon his shoulders, and suffering for us. Oh! to think of the agony he suffered and we should never complain for no lot is ours to compare with his. I dreamed about fifteen months ago of seeing Christ and the Father. They looked to be lifeless as pictures of two different men. When I first viewed them, I was in my kitchen fixing to put down bread when they appeared in my bread griddle. I went to the stove to see if it was ready when it appeared and my mind was filled with wonder as to what it meant. Then they both united in one and became a living being and it began to rise up dressed in white with a white cap on his head. Then I knew it was Christ and when I saw it was going to leave me I said if you must leave me go love not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" I do not expect every one to think as I think or feel exactly as I feel. There are diversities of operation of the same spirit.

What do we know of God's purposes or designs, save as he reveals them. Why quarrel about the "absolute predestination of all things," or "eternal generation of Christ," or "Time salvation?" It is enough for us to know that God governs in all things, and we are not his councilor, nor can we teach him. "What we don't know now we shall know hereafter."

I have felt moved to write to you, my brother. Forgive me if I have said what is wrong. I desire the prosperity of Zion. Oh! that God would revive his work in the hearts of his people and in the church. Do with this as you please; if you think best burn it.

When it is well with you remember your aged brother,

LEONARD COX.

REQUEST.

We are much in need of money to pay expenses of publishing the Landmark.

We have a number of poor Baptists that want to read the Landmark, but are unable to pay for it. If our friends wish to help such send me some money and it will be applied that way.

HOW TO SETTLE TROUBLES.

"If thy brother trespass against thee go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone." In the 18th chapter of Matthew a rule is given that when observed never fails to settle troubles. The reason it so often fails is because men disregard these words of Jesus and make themselves transgressors. This command of Jesus strikes directly at man's rebellious nature. When my brother wrongs me or trespasses against me, my corrupt nature, my carnal mind, begins to rule, and it magnifies what he has done until I feel revenge in my heart and I resort to the thing very common among carnal men. What is that? I tell some other man—any other man or person, is the wrong one—what has been done to me, how wrong he is that has done it, and I magnify the wrong that he has done, and I am very careful to set forth my own conduct as very nice and proper, and thus I set him forth in a bad light, and ignore him in the eye and mind of the man I am talking to.

The truth is I am mad and do not wish to save the one that has trespassed against me. Instead of being grieved and sorry of what he has done, and endeavoring to hide it I am spreading it abroad by telling another of it, and increasing the difficulty of settling it.

Soon I tell some other one of it, and then it begins to spread and a party is formed against that brother that has wronged you. Well suppose he had wronged you? Is that worse than you or I have done? If you love him you are sorry he has wronged you, and you pray for him, and go alone to him. If you go in prayer you have no bad company with you, and you tell him of his fault between you and him alone. You do not make any great demands that he cannot pay. You appear to him to be reasonable and merciful. He feels he has wronged you, and that you are better than he is, and he confesses his fault, and you are glad that he has confessed, and you are glad to forgive him, and here the matter ends. How good that is. You have hid a multitude of faults and saved a brother from death.

But suppose you transgress by disobeying the word of Jesus, and a church is divided, and two parties are formed in the church; and the peace of the church is destroyed, for a house divided against itself cannot stand. Then misery follows. Now what have you gained by disobeying the word of Jesus, and walking after your own carnal nature? You die to the peace and joy of the church, and are miserable.

P. D. G.

THE POWERS THAT BE ARE THE ORDAINED OF GOD.

That is the reason why the people of God should submit to these powers. They are to protect the innocent and punish the guilty. Hence they are not made for a righteous man. He has the love in himself to lead him to do right. He is a law unto himself, because the laws of God are written in his heart. If the principle of desire to do right is not in a man's heart then there is no acceptable obedience to law in him. Law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless. It is to restrain them by its terrors, and if that is not sufficient to prevent their commission of crime, they are to be punished as evil doers.

Whenever a man is found transgressing the law he cannot put in any defense, for he stands guilty, and is known by his wicked conduct to be a transgressor. His mouth is shut from making any defense.

If a man does not like a law that gives him no right or excuse for not obeying it, unless it is in violation of the revealed will of God. Then whether he should obey God or men any man could say obey God, for he is above all law.

The more laws there are on the statute books the greater the evidence of the wickedness of men. If a righteous man need no statutory law the greater the number of such laws the clearer the evidence of an unrighteous people. It is a pleasure for a righteous man to submit to the powers that be. For to him there is no evil, for all things work together for good to them that love God, and are called according to his purpose; and he that loves God beholds in him and in his government nothing but what is good. As God is above all even so his government and dominion is above all, and seeing the hand of God in the powers that be he submits to them as ordained of God. If the love of God is in a man that enables him to do all things unto the Lord. This is the highest liberty and the greatest freedom. Nor is there any such freedom as this, for this is freedom that brings no bondage, nor any barrenness to the soul. To stand fast in this liberty wherein Christ has made us free is the liberty purchased by the Son of God, and revealed to us by the Holy Ghost. Then because I am commanded of the Lord to submit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake I do this as unto God and for the good! of men. P. D. G.

LOVE.

There is not so great a principle in man as the love of God when shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost. God is love and there is none so great as God, and when the holiness of his love is bestowed upon us no greater treasure is ever given us.

While this love is so great it works no ill to man, but works good to him. It wrongs no one, but it does good to others. It is the fulfilling the law which is holy, just and good. It brings joy to the man in profession of that love, and strengthens him unto all longsuffering with joyfulness. No man can be miserable who loves God and his people. Nor can this love be destroyed, for many waters cannot quench it, nor can the floods drown it.

He that loveth is born of God for love is of God. We love God because he first loved us, and this love manifests itself in loving the brethren. The strongest evidence one is born of God is that he loves the brethren. This is the highest knowledge the people of God have of a spiritual birth.

This love or charity thinketh no evil. It does not impute guilt to the brethren, nor wrong motives, nor does it charge them with wrong. It does not hold ill with or malice against any. It lays aside all malice, all evil speaking, guile and hypocracies. It does not entertain an evil report, nor does it repeat a slander. It hopes for the best, or hopes all things. Surely to have this heavenly love is the greatest of all blessings. It hungers for or covets earnestly the glory of God and the peace of Israel and its labor is one of love. How can people that bite and devour each other be possessed of this love? How can people that delight in confession be born of God who is not the author of confession, but of peace as all churches of the saints?

Jesus said, hereby shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another—love that reaches from one to the other—not that it boasts of what it does. For true love vaunteth not itself, is not easily puffed up. It relieves the suffering, it suffers long and is kind. It prefers the good of others to its own case. It loves better things than these that are in the region of selfishness.

If trouble breaks out as a plague of leprosy in the tents of Israel he that loves peace becomes a mourner in Zion, and wears the sackcloth of a sad and heavy heart; nor can he rejoice until there is peace in Zion. Such will be very careful not to lay any stumbling block in a brother's way.

Now brethren let us labor for peace, deny self, hate the garment spotted by the flesh, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

How ready we should be to pity and forgive the wrongs of others, and remember that we are all in the flesh; nor should we expect more of others than we give unto them. For it is easy to live in peace with others while we remember that it is more blessed to give than to receive. Where there are no tattlers nor reporters of an evil matter the fire soon dies out. But if some throw trash of evil speaking on a matter of strife that will cause the fire to burn more fiercely. In the day of strife and confusion is a good time to hold your peace, and pray to God. When strife is rampant so many of us turn that unruly member the tongue loose so that it causes the fire to rage with redoubled fury. When wrath is kindled it is so hard to control it. What is done in the heat of passion is hard to curb.

To shun the appearance of evil is commanded in scripture. To watch self as an enemy that must be kept under is no easy matter, yet it is so important for our peace and for the peace of Israel to do this. To love good things, and seek those things which are pure, honest, just, of good report, and one so noble and praiseworthy.

"Love is the golden chain

That binds the happy soul above;
And he is an heir of heaven,

That finds his bosom glow with love.

P. D. G.

Brother George W. Carter requests my view of Genesis, second chapter and seventh verse, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."

The man thus formed of the dust of the ground by the Lord God is the subject of redemption. The proof of this is that this man is brought to see he is helpless and vile as dust and ashes. We read what Abraham said of himself (Genesis 18: 27,) "Behold now I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord which am but dust and ashes." When Abraham stood before the Lord he felt himself to be what man is at his best estate—altogether vanity. Why should man then be puffed up and exalted in his own conceit? When man feels and knows he is dust-formed of the dust—then he ceases boasting of what he can do. Abraham could do nothing but beg. He could not work.

The class of men that boast of the ability of man and what he can do to help the Lord have not felt that the Lord has fashioned them of clay. They appear to belong to that class that offer their own works which like the ground is cursed for man's sake. They are of that class that go about to establish their own righteousness and boast of their moral dignity. For Satan's malice and cunning and his poisonous, deathly bite infects the race of man. The greatly increased conception and multiplication of Eve's sorrow appears, and Cain who was of that wicked one and slew his brother comes on the stage of action. Jesus said to the Jews—John 8: 42-45—ye are of your father the devil and etc. The tares or children of the wicked one are sown in the field which is the world said Jesus. This generation of evil doers does not feel that they are dust, but are full of pride which is of Satan the wicked one.

But the people that know the truth that man is dust, that have the faith of Jesus, and know their nature to be of the dust, and having the inspiration of the almighty have by the faith of Jesus that understanding to bring the offering that God gives to their faith, even the Lord Jesus who was found in fashion as a man, and was humbled unto the shameful death of the cross that we through his poverty might be rich. Hence it is in this name that the poor and vile approach unto God, and are accepted in Jesus the beloved. Those that feel they are dust depend alone on that God who quickens the dead and is able to change our vile body, and fashion it like unto the glorious body of the Lord Jesus according to the mighty power whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself.

When the Lord God breathed into the nostrils of this man formed of the dust of the ground and man became a living soul—not divine, not immortal as God who only hath immortality, for if he had thus been the substance of God he could never have sinned nor died. But this shows that the Lord Jesus could come to us. For when he breathed in man whom he had made the breath of life he came to man as he did not to any other part of the creation which he had made. Adam was the figure of him (Jesus— who was then to come, the substance, the quickening spirit.

In the generation the people born of God, those sensible of their condition in nature, are created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that they should walk in them. These elect people according to God's foreknowledge are his workmanship. Note that not one of these good works is in Adam, or according to him, nor of him, nor in the flesh, but they are all in Christ Jesus who is the second Adam, the quickening spirit, (not a quickened spirit,) the Lord from heaven. Even Abraham had not whereof to glory before God in the flesh, or by any works of man. For dust cannot bring forth a spiritual work. But when the Holy Ghost is given of God unto his people then they are spiritual, and the works wrought in them are spiritual, and they are acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, and their fruit is unto holiness, and the end is everlasting life.

It is the spirit of the Lord Jesus in man that constitutes him a spiritual man, and the tree being made good the fruit is also good.

One must know that he is dead in Adam as the consequence of transgression in and by Adam, and hence by him see and feel the justice of that death must be felt: then the revelation of the second Adam whose obedience causes the justification unto life eternal of all that receives abundance of grace and the gift of righteousness by one. For as by the destruction of one many were made sinners even so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous: and that as sin hath reigned unto death even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

But does not this save all of Adam's offspring? Only such as receive the abundance of grace and the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one Jesus Christ, Romans 5: 17.

Everything in the carnal, natural mind of man is opposed to God, for it is of the earth, and to dust it shall return. Then the resurrection is not according to fleshly reason, for the things Jesus taught are not according to natural reason. Why should nature tell us if we die we shall live again? Yet when in the power and light of revelation the wonders of the soul are unfolded in the glory of creation the resurrection life is not an incredible thing, but it is the crowning wonder and blessing of immortality.

But the resurrection of the wicked shall be to shame and everlasting contempt.

P. D. G.

“Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.”

What a willing servant the mouth is, and how it is as a glass reflecting what the heart meditates.

and vile in spirit when his mouth utters these things they will not seem to him to be hateful, because his spirit does not hate them. That is the spirit or abundance of the heart dictates what is agreeable to that heart, and its utterances are pleasing to the man. How poor a judge therefore is a corrupt man of what should be the thought he uttered. He is a fool and all his thoughts and words partake of that corrupt fountain.

Out of a pure heart flows pure thoughts, and therefore pure words. Gracious words emanate from a heart of purity, and hence by his words such a man is justified.

First I wish to say that I endorse all you said in May first Landmark in regard to prohibition. I wish to say that no one abhors drunkenness any more than I do; but does prohibition stop it? No and not only fails to stop drunkenness, but it causes people to violate both the laws of the land and of God by running the blockade, stealing, telling lies, or any other unlawful thing they can think of to get something to drink.

I say it would be better to follow the teaching of the scripture and I have never been able to find any place in the scripture where the Lord instructed any one to remove anything of an evil nature to prohibit the people from having access to it. He has condemned the intemperate use of anything he has blessed us with. And not only so but he punishes each offender. For instance Noah when he began to be an husbandman planted a vineyard and became drunken of the wine. But the Lord did not say remove the fruit so that there should not be any more wine. But he laid a punishment on any one who drank too much of it. How a man can contend for prohibition and tell men it is wrong to drink even a single drink, and then vote prohibition and slip it and drink I cannot understand. Just think of the scriptures that: if thou teachest “Thou shalt not steal” dost thou steal? “Or thou shalt not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery?” And it will apply equally to the man who says thou shalt drink. Is not that trying to get the mote out of thy brother's eye, before you get the beam out of thine own eye? You remember the Saviour calls such hypocrites. If you will read carefully you will see what the hypocrite's portion is. I think each and every voter should consider well the question to be voted upon, and be thoroughly satisfied in his own mind regardless of what any one else says before he votes, and then vote according to his honest convictions. Then he should not be blamed nor ridiculed for it. That principle of trying to degrade and ridicule every man that does not vote for the prohibition ticket is one of the most intemperate principles of the prohibitionists. A temperate principle is willing for every man to vote as his mind bids him. How can those that try to ridicule and degrade those that have a mind to vote against prohibition claim that scripture that says as ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them?

I would to God that every one that has a mind to drink too much would get rid of that mind, and have another in exchange and power to control it never to drink too much any more. But I nor any other man has power to make that change which power belongs to God alone. For nothing but the grace of God has ever made a sober man out of a thief. I would to God every man was for temperance. It was that temperance principle that accused John the Baptist of having a devil, and the son of man being a gluttonous man and a wine biber, a friend of publicans and sinners.

My advice is and always has been if a man cannot drink any without drinking too much, he is not to drink any. As for myself I have never been able to see any good in drinking any except as a medicine. But there are others that are just as sober and temperate, not only in drinking, but in their dealings with their fellow-men as I (or any of the prohibitionists) that claim they have been benefitted by drinking a dram when they are cold and enjoy it; and do not get drunk or do any harm, and are just as reliable and sober as any prohibitionist.

I have written more than I intended and will not worry you further.

May God so lead the minds of the people in the coming prohibition election that they may cast their votes in that way that the result of the election may bring peace and harmony over the state, and stop all the prejudice and ridicule that is being so practiced among the people at present.

As ever yours,

ALEX WIGGS.

SCRAPS.

Sister Auribo E. Johnson, wishes to know who are those that God turns to the left hand, and to whom he says I know you not; and who are the five foolish virgins?

We must refer this and all questions of importance to the Lord who is the just judge. Some people have dreams to guide them. But a dream beside the word of God is as chaff compared with wheat. Let him that hath a dream tell it, and such people are pretty apt to do this; and let him that has the word of the Lord tell that. The chaff will be blown away by the wind. The wheat is gathered into the Lord's garner.

People think that because the Lord calls the foolish ones virgins therefore they were his people. But he says to them I know you not. But the foundation of God stands sure having this seal "The Lord knoweth them that are his."

The door was shut against the foolish ones, and there is no evidence that when the door is shut that it is ever opened to those against whom it is shut. When a comparison is made between the two classes one wise and the other foolish, those not among the wise are classed with the foolish, and all are included in one or the other class. If all the foolish are saved then who is lost.

Interpretations of scripture are very important if they are correct, but very dangerous if they are untrue.

Come now and let us reason together saith the Lord. Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow, and etc., Isaiah, first chapter and eighteenth verse. If my sins are all forgiven what greater blessing is ever bestowed on me? Blessed is the man whose iniquity is forgiven. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord imputeth righteousness without works. The forgiveness of all my sins makes me clean and pure, or I shall be as white as snow. How could one be in a better state than this? The blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin. Surely this would bring us nigh to God. Would perfect reason allow one to be any better or more holy than to be as God makes him? To be clean in the sight of God would be to receive from God all that is needful to make us perfect in the perfection of divine beauty.

A friend writes that years ago he came among the Primitive Baptists, and then the members would give good heed to their preachers who would warn them of approaching danger, and then there was peace and love among them. But since that good time divisions have sprung up among them, and like a house divided against itself cannot stand they have become weakened. Now the preachers are not so much heeded when they give warning. The Catholics are gaining ground among them, the Holiness people are increasing, the Unknown tongue set are decoying off their children. If a preacher attempts to warn them they say he does not know what he is talking about. Now what think ye of such a state of things?

He refers to Micah the prophet who, when the Assyrian enters our borders then we will raise against him seven shepherds and eight principal men. The seven shepherds set forth the seven attributes of God, or his perfect power and glory. The eight principal men set forth the writer of the New Testament who are empowered to declare the law in Zion. The attributes of God shine in the government of Israel as shepherds that guard and feed their flocks, and where these rule there is a security for the sheep. This our defense against the Assyrian who was a great enemy of Israel in the older time, and carried off the ten tribes into their captivity and dispersion among the heathen.

In the new dispensation or new covenant God dwells in his people, and has inspired the writers of the new testament to declare and interpret the holy law in Zion for the guidance and protection of his church. While the good people of God give heed to these blessed safeguards they dwell in peace and truth, and no enemy shall exact on them. But when they depart from the perfect law in Zion their distress comes. Oh! that we were wise and knew where our strength is, and would give heed to the things that make for peace and comfort to Zion.

Sister Fannie E. Wells requests my view of Rev. 20: 5-6, especially that part concerning the saints reigning a thousand years with Christ.

We must wait for the fulfillment of scripture in order to know the meaning. It is always a mystery until the Lord reveals it. Blessed and holy are those that wait until the Lord unfolds the meaning of scripture. I think that we know enough to understand that all power belongs to Jesus, and that when he delivers us none can hurt or molest us, nor make us afraid, and that time is not measured in such a state or condition as that is. So judging from what we have tasted, handled and felt of this blessed estate we know that all his word is true, and shall all be fulfilled in his own time and way.

P. D. G.

Dear readers of the Zion's Landmark, and to all whom it may concern.

What is this we see coming up out of the sea (the people) having great power, after which the multitude is wondering, save those whose names are written in the "Lamb's Book of Life," slain from the foundation of the world. Is the Beast that John saw, which had great authority, which made war with the saints, to which power was given over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations? Is this the beast which had two heads, one of which was wounded to death? But John saw another beast, with two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon, this beast exercised all the power of the first that was before him, and causeth the earth, and them that dwell therein (not thereon) to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. This beast will be worshipped, and those who refuse, must be burned at the stake and cast as it were into the fiery furnace. Again I say, what is it? Yonder in the distance we see its headlight, its banner emblazoned with the word "Religion," as with lamb like reproach its whistle sounds around: "I am praying for you." This is the beast, with its locomotive power, "Prohibition," taking aboard all who are blindly lead; the end of which, (I tremble to say) will be the persecution of the church of the Most High God. History repeats itself. Is there one in the ranks of the Primitive Baptist Church who will stand and see Gog and Magog, gathering together the delivered nations of the earth, going to battle with the saints, with their number as the sand of the sea, and not raise voice against it? Do you not fear even to stand upon neutral ground? These things must come, the Bible must be fulfilled, but woe to them by whom these offenses come! Therefore "Touch not, taste not, handle not, the unclean thing." Designing men, in deceitful guise, are leading "Innocense" to the polls to vote thus, "Against the sale and manufacture of all intoxicating liquors." Had it been: "Against Prohibition or for Prohibition," it would not be so very trying for him to cast the vote he desired. Brethren, fear it as you would a viper. "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free and be not entangled again in the yoke of bondage". Come out of her ye people, and be not partakers of her sins that ye receive not of her plagues. "Prohibition does not prohibit, it is simply a right that does not belong to one. Drunkenness is horrible, and is a curse, but morality cannot be ignored, and to sum up the matter, nothing but the grace of God can make a sober man out of a drunkard. They are trying to bring about the millennium, therefore let's have none of it, God's time is appointed, no man can change it, how glorious to know this. Put not one stone into this tower they are building to heaven, then you'll have no part in the confusion of tongues. Take no part in a popular movement, for you know all such is of the Devil. Who shall be able to stand?

"What I have written, I have written," nor do I know why, my impressions, to do so were strong. If God is for us, who can be against us?

Dear brethren, if this be faulty throw the mantle of charity over the writer, who is prone to do evil, and feels each day to know less and grows weaker.

Yours in love, I trust,
LIZZIE HOLDEN GARRARD.

OBITUARIES

ANNIE K. BOAZE.

By request (though I don't feel competent) I will write for publication the obituary notice of the death of our highly esteemed sister in Christ, Annie K. Boaze, daughter of Z. W. and Lucy Boaze, which occurred February 25, 1908, of that dreadful disease consumption. She was in declining health for two years. Sister Katie was twenty-six years, one month and seventeen days old. All was done for her that parents and human aid could do, but could not stay the icy hands of death. She joined the Primitive Baptist church at Strawberry some five years ago and was baptized by Brother Hundley her pastor. She lived and died a loving, delightful and consistent member. She leaves behind a heart broken mother, father, three sisters, four brothers and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her demise, but they should not mourn for any one with such bright evidence as hers. Let us remember that a good name is rather to be chosen than precious ornament and the day of death than the day of one's birth. It was my privilege to visit her during her sickness and was by her bed-side when she died. I never witnessed a more triumphant death. She died an easy death as one fallen asleep. She expressed such willingness to go. Sister Kate had the pleasantest way of greeting her many friends when visiting her. To be able, to know her was to love her. She told her loved ones good bye and not to grieve for her, that she would soon see her aunt Kate which had passed away three weeks previous. Sister Kate was a lovely character. I have loved her ever since I met her. She told me at her place of worship she wanted to wash my feet, I thought it was so lovely for a young sister to speak so Christ like. She was blessed with a bright mind susceptible of high culture, a winning and sweet disposition. Her life was like the rising of a brilliant sun on a gentle spring morning.

I asked her the night before she died how she was, she said she hoped she was most gone. How those words did pierce me to show such strength in her Lord. I never heard of her complaining at her lot. She talked so beautiful during her sickness, desiring to depart and be with Christ which is far better than this world of sin and sorrow. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. She requested Brother Hundley to hold service which he did, speaking very comforting to a large audience of friends, also her friend Mr. Moore led in prayer and spoke consoling after which her remains were laid at rest in the family burying ground near Swansenville. I desire to say to those behind that while the beautiful flowers that may shed their sweet fragrance over her sleeping dust through the oncoming years will all wither and die, yet your own cherished one that you loved so well, will live forever, and will love you on and on with a love that will never cease. And your love for her, so wonderfully manifested here on earth will but intensify as the countless years go by and you rest with her radiant and immortal life in your Father's house.

While your troubles are great you have the sweet consoling grace belief that Katie is now unspeakably happy, and rejoice in the hope that when our trials of life are ended we too will be wafted on angels' wings in the presence of the blessed Jesus to rejoin the darling one. Thanks be unto God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Weep not loved ones for dear Kate,
For her toil in life is over,
And we too must soon or late
Pass over yonders' shore.

Her friend,
LAURA POWELL.

CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH ROBBINS.

Dear Brother Gold—The Lord saw fit on the 24th day of April 1908 to call from our midst Charlotte Elizabeth Robbins, (better known as Bettis,) who was born February the 18th 1879. She was the daughter of Richard and Luther McKaughan. She was married to Luther E. Robbins December 2, 1906. To this union was born one girl. She professed a hope in Christ in the year 1903 and joined the Primitive Baptist Church at Saints Delight and was baptized on Easter Sunday of the same year by Elder P. W. Williard where she remained a faithful member until death. Her natural life was one worthy of consideration. She was an affectionate wife, a loving sister and an obedient daughter.

Since she joined the church when she didn't fill her seat on meeting days it was generally believed by all, there was an unavoidable hindrance—She endeavored to honor her faith by her works.

The humble writer while chronicling her death is made to remember the many kind and comforting words she has spoken to him. Her kind and affectionate way and manifestation of the love of God in her heart made to her friends and brotherly love wherever she went. But her days are accomplished, her race is ended, and she is gone, leaving a mother, two brothers, a husband and a sweet little baby behind, together with a great line of friends to mourn her loss. But may the God of all grace reconcile us to his divine and most perfect will, and may we realize our loss is her eternal gain, and when the summons comes for us may we, as did she, not fear, or dread to go, is the prayer of the unworthy writer.

JIMMIE M. CREWS.

ELDER NEVILLE BENNETT.

At his residence near Wadesboro, Anson county, April 6, 1852, died Neville Bennett, aged 52 years after some 20 days' confinement, leaving a wife and 12 children, with a very extensive connection and a large circle of acquaintance to mourn their loss. Mr. Bennett has long been known as a man of great perseverance in the farming department, and thus by economy, prudence and honesty accumulated a large portion of this world's goods. He was distinguished for his firmness and integrity both in politics and in his religious sentiments. He was a true whig and a firm Primitive Baptist. Although he was rich, he did not seem disposed to mind high things but condescended to men of low estate. He was very much noted for his readiness of mind and boldness of spirit to speak his mind, or give his views on any subject he understood, whether it was liked or disliked believed or disbelieved by many or few; and in this way made manifest that he loved the praise of God, more than the praise of men; and this he would do at all times, and on all occasions when it seemed to him to be necessary, even if he was looked upon as an enemy because he told the truth. Yet, he was a man of tender and condescending feeling in a good cause, but never was he known to shun the truth for the sake of honor, popularity or wealth. For these reasons, with many others, we mourn his loss, nevertheless though he is dead, he is only, we trust fallen asleep; and though he has left his friends and inheritance below, has gone to a better society and richer inheritance above.

The above is from the Fayetteville Observer of 1852.

REMARKS.

Elder Bennett was the father of Hon. R. T. Bennett, a prominent lawyer of Wadesboro, who represented that district in Congress and is noted for his strength of intellect and eloquence of speech.

EMMA MCKINNEY.

Was the youngest daughter of the late deacon John W. Harris, and wife, (both of precious memory) was born July 19, 1854, and died February 18, 1908, being fifty-three years and nearly eleven months of age.

December 18, 1879, she was married to Mr. J. T. McKinney and was baptized as a member of Lick Fork church, by Elder James S. Dameron, in June 1894. Afterwards she moved her membership to Reidsville, it being more convenient.

She has gone from our midst but how consoling and pleasant to contemplate the different periods of her beautiful life—first a little girl always meeting friends with a bright smile and open arms—a few years later, an affectionate and dutiful daughter ministering to the wishes of an invalid mother—afterwards a faithful, kind, and helpful wife to her husband while as a mother her soul went out in love and labor and prayer continually for her children—finally as a church member fearing God and striving to keep his commandments "The law of kindness was in her tongue," consequently she had many friends, and few enemies if any.

As though she had a premonition that the end of her life was near, on the 31, of January she wrote a letter of love and advice for her children to find and heed after her departure.

On the 11, of February two of her daughters who were teaching in Eastern North Carolina, N. C., a married daughter whose home is in Leaksville, and a son at the University were summoned to the bedside of their parents, both of whom were extremely ill of pneumonia. In one short week the mother was called to her long home and the father was too ill to be informed of it. When he recovered sufficiently to realize that his best earthly friend was gone his grief was pitiful.

The whole family have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in this sad bereavement. May the Lord reconcile them to his will, and may the dear daughter who has laid aside her favorite employment to take the oversight of the younger children, in compliance with her beloved mother's request, be blest to perform this duty with cheerfulness, courage and wisdom from the Heavenly Father.

Sister McKinney was laid to rest in Green view cemetery on the 19th of February after a funeral discourse by Elder L. H. Hardy her pastor.

HASTEN BLALOCK.

Roxboro, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold—By request of his family I endeavor to write for publication the obituary of brother Hasten Blalock who was born September second 1827, and fell asleep March seventh 1908. His stay on earth was eighty years. He united with the church at Camp Creek September ninth 1866, and was a faithful member for forty years. He was elected clerk of the church in 1879, ordained a deacon in 1884, and served until his death.

He was sound in the faith and a strong believer in salvation by grace, and remained so until his departure.

I visited him in his sickness, and he expressed himself as greatly desiring to go to preaching. You were with me brother Gold, on one occasion and preached for him and he enjoyed it.

He was faithful to his family as a father and kind to his children. He was married to Miss Martha Childs. Unto them was born a family of children that greatly loved their father, and waited on him patiently until his death.

May the mercy of God be given unto the family according to the will of God.

PEARLIE MINTER.

Gone but not forgotten. On the first day of October the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buck Minter and bore their loving daughter Pearlle away. She was 18 years old lacking just one month. She was taken with typhoid fever, and after a lingering illness of several weeks she passed from her earthly home to dwell with those gone before. All that loving hands and good physicians could do, rendered her no service. She leaves father, mother, brothers and sisters to mourn her loss, besides a host of friends. She was laid to rest in the Richardson burial ground beside her sister near Leatherwood church.

A precious one from us has gone,

A voice we loved is still;

A place is vacant in our home,

Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled,

The boon his love had given;

And though the body slumbers here,

Her soul is safe in heaven.

Written by one who loved her.

THOMAS BLALOCK.

Roxboro, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold.—I write for publication the death of Thomas Blalock, who was born in February 1892, and died February 1908. He married Miss Patsy Aiken June 1892. He joined the church May ninth 1897, and was faithful in his service, kind and loved to go to preaching. He was kind to his wife and made a good husband.

He went off from home the morning of his death to cut wood for a neighbor. During the day a tree lodged when cut down knocking him down, and falling on him killed him instantly. His death was a great shock to all his family.

May his bereaved and stricken wife have grace given her sufficient to encourage her to trust in the Lord realizing his goodness and mercy through life.

Your unworthy servant in Christ I hope

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

THE SAINTS OF GOD RAISED UP TO SIT TOGETHER IN HEAVENLY PLACES IN CHRIST JESUS.

"And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in kindness toward us through Christ Jesus."—Ephesians ii. 6, 7.

What a wonderful golden chapter is this! What thousands of saints now in heaven have felt it good in the days of their tribulation when here upon earth. How wonderfully clear the apostle in this chapter has set forth the state of all mankind; and yet God, in the riches of his grace has had compassion upon his people—toward his people; and oh! how he (the apostle) treats upon this quickening operation of the spirit which you and I must feel if ever we reach that blest abode. Man by nature is born dead to God; dead to spiritual things; yea even his carnal heart has no desire for God. Till God sets up his kingdom in a poor sinner's soul, there will be no going out after him. Man may have a natural religion, a religion that may seem to please the flesh, but while he is a stranger to God, he knows nothing about the operation of the Holy Ghost in his soul.

When Paul wrote to the Ephesians in this wonderful chapter you see how he could speak, how he could call them

"brethren" how he could say the Holy Ghost had quickened them into divine life. Why, my friends, could the apostle say this? Because they knew that language that no others could ever utter. And mind you this, how they came upon a real right foundation; they had a real religion.

"And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins. Mark that! Not partly dead. And oh! this is it we are born into this world satisfied with this world, and we should have gone on, beloved, satisfied with the things of time till we finished our few days and dropped where hope and a crumb of mercy could never come. And when we come to good works, as people sometimes talk about, this is it—the work, the best work that a man can ever have in his soul is joy through the atonement of Christ. Ah! that blessed feeling! And he will never be able to utter it in this time state. Oh, to be humbled! to sit at the feet of Jesus Christ! Oh! to feel he has had mercy upon thee; chosen thee "before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." (Eph. i. 4.)

"Wherein in time past." Turn it over, poor sinner, in thy mind, where were you and I? Why, were we pursuing the downward road: satisfied—contented here, so to speak, with time things; but when the Holy Ghost sought us out, quickened us into divine life, we could no longer follow the course of this world. Why so? Because the end of these things is death. Ah! that is it. It is death. So that, as dear Bunyan says, "a man is brought to turn his back upon the world"; he sees it, and feels it to be empty bubble. As dear Daniel Herbert says:

"There's nothing here can satisfy,
Nor gold, nor house, nor land."

"Sometimes the Lord bestows on me
His fretful child, a toy,
On which I raise my prospects high,
And look for certain joy."

But soon there's something intervenes."

Has it been so with you? I can say, my friends, it has been so with me; and I have proved it for many years to be a wilderness. Yet, what a mercy to have one proof that we are longing, yea, as Bunyan says, we have a few of those "long necked desires." At times our minds run after him; and we can say he is our best beloved, and "he is the chief among ten thousand, and the altogether lovely."

"Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Among whom also we all had our conversation in time past in the lusts of our flesh fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others." And how the apostle then comes to this: "But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved,) and hath raised us up together." Now some people never draw the line, my friends, but the apostle here, he speaks to the Ephesian church, and he says, "Hath raised us up together," showing, you see, that nothing but power can raise a dead man, nothing but the power of omnipotence.

"And hath raised us up together." What does the Psalmist say of our state in sin and condition that we all were in? Yea, how he speaks of God "Who remembered us in our low estate," with that mercy that endureth for ever. So that it is not mercy to-day and tomorrow, and then forsake a man it is not conditional upon what you and I can do. No, my friends, but when blessed with his mercy, blessed with his compassion, humbled in the dust, brought to feel our nothingness before him, and when he raises us out of that depth of sin, and the law has come home—the law speaks, as I read to you just now, "to them who are under the law," and if you look, whatsoever the law of our nation saith, "it saith to them who are under the law." "That every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God." Can you say with Mr. Hart, has there been a time when you could say?—

"Though we are guilty, thou art good;

Wash all our works in Jesus' blood;
Give every fettered soul release,

And bid us all depart in peace."

"Poor Jacob said, "All these things were against him." I was saying to a servant of God the other day, "I fell down," and I said this—I feel as I could preach upon that text, "All these things were against me." But my friends, it is not all the dark side; it was not so in Jacob's case. There was now and again a glimmer of light; and the dear old patriarch said this—"It is enough." And Doddridge said:

Enough, my gracious Lord,

Let faith triumphant cry;

My heart can on this promise live,

Can on this promise die."—Gadsby's, 345.)

'Ah! come, if he has ever given you a promise—look at the dear old saint he had got into the land of Goshen; he was numble, so to speak, and he had to say, "few and evil have the days of the years of my life been" (Gen. xlvii. 9.) And I believe this, it will be the language of God's saints; and if it is not their language, it will be their feelings. "Few and evil have the days of the years of my life been."

You and I cannot look back upon a well spent life. No, there is nothing of that; but we can look back and see what unbelieving creatures we have been. And how God has pitied us! And we can at times bless him for that portion—"If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful; he cannot deny himself" (2Tim. ii. 13.)

Now, then, has God made thee to differ from thy neighbors? Has he blessed thee; expanded thy desire toward himself? He says this: "The desire of the righteous shall be granted" (Prov. x. 24.) And you will bear this in mind, that in him the church is righteous. For without holiness no man shall see the Lord;" and the apostle says, "Ye are complete in him" (Col. ii. 10.) Dear Toplady says: "Complete atonement thou hast made, And to the utmost farthing paid

Whate'er thy people owed;
How then can wrath on me take place,
If shelter'd in thy righteousness,

And sprinkled with thy blood?
If thou hast my discharge procured,
And freely in my room endured

The whole of wrath divine,
Payment God cannot twice demand,
First at my bleeding Surety's hand, and then again at mine."

No, Never.

"Turn then my soul unto thy rest;
The merits of thy great high priest

Speak peace and liberty;
Trust in his efficacious blood,
Nor fear thy banishment from God, Since Jesus died for thee."—Gadsby's, 227.)

Died to raise; died to redeem; died to save.

"And hath raised us up together." Now you look at the mind of man, it will never run beyond this time state. The people at Athens, how they worshipped an unknown God. "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you," saith the apostle. Ah! then, this "raising." When the blessed spirit works in the poor sinner's soul, he raises his mind to God. And then we may say this: "Ye believe in God," said Jesus, "believe also in me" (John xiv. 1.) Now there was a time when you and I, poor creatures, believed in God. Ah! we believed, in this, that all his judgments upon the wicked must be fulfilled; and we were brought to believe this—we must sink for ever; we could not pay one mite. No. Mr. Hart says:

"While we can call one mite our own,
We have no full discharge."

Oh! to be brought here, poor creature, and to lie under the sentence of death. The apostle says in writing to the Corinthians, "we had the sentence of death in ourselves; that we should not trust in ourselves, but in the living God." Ah! you know this, that man would trust in something; until driven by sheer necessity, he will never trust in the Son of God; and when he raises us up he says, "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth;" and, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Come now poor creature, has there not been a time when your expectation has been from him? Has there not been a time time, though he may try you? You know the wise man saith, "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; but when the desire cometh it is a tree of life" (Prov. xiii. 12-). Ah! the desire accomplished is sweet to the soul; it is a tree of life."

All that you can ever wish or want can be found in the Son of God. How suitable! Look at his suitability to meet thy case. All that must have ever fallen upon us, fell upon him; and John Newton says this:

"Tis he instead of me is seen,

When I approach to God."

And the Psalmist had something of the same feelings. He said, "Look upon the face of thine anointed" (lxxxiv. 9.) Why my friends, if the eternal God were to look upon you and me apart from his dear son, we must sink for ever beneath his wrath; but he is well pleased in what his dear Son did. Hart says:

Righteousness within thee rooted,

May appear to take thy part;

But let righteousness imputed,

Be the breast plate of thy heart."

"And hath raised us up together."

Come, poor creature you know there is a difference in those people's religion that know something of his blessed power. What thousands are satisfied with the form. Ah! a dead form; and they will live and die in it if grace never makes a difference. That is it. And when grace makes a difference, God raises them up; and, you see, they are a people that walk in peace then; peace through blood.

"Peace by his Cross has Jesus made,

The Church's everlasting Head;

O'er death and hell has victory won.

And with a shout to glory gone."

"And hath raised us up together; and made us sit together, in heavenly places." Come, poor creature, now there are times when you read the word of divine truth; there are times when it is confirmed in thy poor heart. Ah! say you, "After all the changes I shall see him face to face." And it may be a just crumb; and after a little time you will call it into question. You will see it was "eaten in haste;" it was the Lord's passover. As I was telling the people last evening at Ticehurst, what a feeling I have had, and a union of spirit to that poor crooked woman who was bent down under a spirit of infirmity for 18 years, who could "in nowise lift up herself." And what makes God's people feel they can do nothing with this spirit of infirmity their helplessness. You cannot accomplish your desires. No," say you, "I would put everything straight if it were possible." The Lord said, "Ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the Sabbath day?" Ah! you know that is it, my friends. There is a rest prepared for his people. Mark tells us, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath" (Mark ii. 27.) That rest was accomplished through the Son of God.

"And hath raised us up together,"

You know there is something in my mind runs to heaven and God's saints. A month today I was in Yorkshire, and a gentleman said to me, "You have been coming to my place for a long time; I will fetch you to-morrow." Well, you know, my friends, one sometimes feels tired; and some people have an idea that a man can always be going and never get tired; and I felt like this—run down. Well, I went, and after dinner he said, "You don't mind going for a drive." I did not know where he was taking me. He said, when we stopped, "Well, you have read in old Mr. Warburton's works of Pool Moor, this is the chapel." Why, my friends, you might have thought I was another man altogether. And I say this: Nothing has ever confirmed my poor, feeble, shattered faith at times like old Mr. Warburton's works, next to the divine word of truth. And I said, "We will go in and look at the chapel." You will remember this, you who have perused the book: Mr. Warburton was between 30 and 40 years of age and he had so wished to settle at Pool Moor; and oh! how he begged, how entreated of God; and he leaves this testimony behind him. He dearly loved the people, and the people loved him. God had "raised them up together." They had had a little of that feeling together. And the last Saturday night he was there, Mr. Warburton put out a feeler; and what was that? He said, "Well by this time I suppose you are settled with a minister?" A Mr Webster had supplied for them, and the church intended to give him a call. They replied it was settled for Mr. Webster to come; that was in the year 1808; and he lived and died with them. There is a tablet up in the chapel to that effect; and you could hardly believe the state poor Warburton was in, and he went out of the house and roared like a bear bereaved of her whelps. And, my friends, as I have read this, the feeling that I have sometimes had towards God's people! Those that I believe know these things in reality; and like poor John, sometimes, the many things that have tried me! What a feeling I have had! But now I feel there is a vast deal of difference at Pool Moor. I said to the gentleman that was with me, "They would not endure John's preaching now." He replied, no, they would not. They handed a pamphlet to me, and on it he was called the "Reverend John Warburton." He would not have liked that; that is only attributable to Jehovah. "Holy and reverend" we read in the Psalms, "is his name." I say it seemed to revive me a little to walk round and see the chapel. I was speaking about it the other Lord's day at Abingdon, and the poor old deacon said to me, "What a comfort it was to me what you said this morning about Pool Moor. I have been reading Mr. Warburton's book." And it seemed according to his feelings it was a church—a confirmation.

And hath raised us up to gether, and made us sit together in heavenly places." You know some of those free-willers, and people who have never been in the depths—lost and saved, they say—"We do not care about that." My friends, Watts speaks to this effect.

"'Twas love that made his willing feet In swift obedience move."

Ah! it is love that does these things. It is wonderful what love will do. "Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it." (Song viii. 7). No, with all that ever the dragon could throw out of his mouth after the woman, he could never destroy her. "If a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be condemned."

Then what a favor, beloved, it is to know something of these heavenly places. Ah! Paul could say, "Whether we live or die we are the Lord's;" and he tells, "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us, from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. viii. 38, 39.) Ah! these heavenly places! "Why," say you, "man, they are so few and far between." This is it. Have you ever had

Of your proper title"?

"Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." And hark at what

Hammond said:

"If once the love of Christ we feel:
Upon our hearts impress'd,
The mark of that celestial seal
Can never be erased."

You may forget; you may get into such confusion; your days of darkness may be many; the unbelief of your heart and infidelity may work at such a pitch, till you are ready to give every thing up. But remember this, his eye is upon thee. Yea, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." And the Psalmist tells us, "Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy" (Ps. xxxiii. 18.) Not them that hope in themselves." It is said of Noah, he found grace in the eyes of the Lord.

"And made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Ah! poor creature, that is my only safety. Hart says:

"Venture on him, venture wholly,
Let no other trust intrude." †

But you are ready to say, "How can I come; I am nothing but a mass of sin. The leprosy is about me; that terrible disorder." You may feel you cannot go to God, but what a mercy he has a long arm; he can reach thy case; he can heal the leprosy you feel within, and smile upon you; and when you feel that you can say with the apostle, "And made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." And you know you have never set in these heavenly places with Godly humility, and will perish at last. It would be an utter impossibility. "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me," he said. Oh what a wonderful thing; and "him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi. 37.) No, he never will. And you are enabled, at times to come with a little of that precious faith; and you glorify him with his own glory, and put the crown upon his blessed head; and said the apostle—"And made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." How persuaded I am if you have a little of this sweet making it is not a servile thing. There are times perhaps, when you have met with God's saints, and you have had a little conversation, and they have unbosomed their feeling so that deep waters have seemed to run; and you have been a man of understanding; you have drawn it out of them; and poor creatures, they have thought like this when they have got away,—the enemy has seemed to tempt them, and they have sunk nearly into despair, and wished they had never said any thing; but nevertheless their language has gone forth, and it has been blessed to God's people. This is sweet conversation! "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself" (Phil. iii. 20, 21.) To subdue that carnal mind; yea, to subdue whatever may rise against him, like, you see, the beasts that Noah took into the ark, it is said, they were all subdued.

"And made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." It is God who gives us to realize this blessed communion and this feeling. And what a feeling you have to those poor creatures that know a little something about that sweet humility. "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word" (Isa. lxvi. 2.) You know the word of God has searched us through and through. He has said he will "search Jerusalem as with candles." What is that but the church? And oh! there have been times when we have had such searching looks! Those have been times when we have said we must give it up: darkness has seemed to cover us. But O he has turned; he has smiled upon his child; he has turned the "wilderness into a fruitful field." And what have you done? You have blessed him in return; and, I say, you cannot help it. O to praise him!

"Weak is the effort of my heart,
And cold my warmest thought;
But when I see thee as thou art,
I'll praise thee as I ought.
Till then I would thy love proclaim,
With every fleeting breath;
And may the music of thy Name
Refresh my soul in death"—
(Olney Hymns, 57.)

Ah! look here, poor creature, you will be brought near, you see, to that time when heart and flesh must fail; and he says this: when heart and flesh fail, he will be strength of their heart and their portion for ever; but "The Lord's portion is his people: Jacob is the lot of his inheritance. He found him in a desert land and in the waste howling wilderness: he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye" (Deut. xxxii. 9, 10.)

"That in ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace." O it seems to beggar all language, my friends, to set it forth—"the exceeding riches of his grace." Say you, "What is that?" Why, it exceeds all the world: it exceeds all wealth, all friendships so to speak. Paul said, "The grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners of whom," he says, "I am chief" (1 Tim. i. 14, 15.) Come poor creature, can you say you are the chief of sinners? And only to think of this—"the exceeding riches of grace." Neither Abraham, nor Isaac, nor Jacob, nor any poor creature would ever have entered the portals of heaven but for the exceeding riches of his."

"O to grace how great a debtor,
Daily I'm constrained to be,
Let that grace, Lord, like a fetter,
Bind my wandering heart to thee.

Prone to wander, Lord, I feel it;
Prone to leave the God I love;
Here's my heart, Lord, take and seal it
Seal it from thy Courts above!"
That is what we want. You know we may go through a form, as we do sometimes. A fortnight ago I was at home, and I thought, "What a formality!" (What forms we may seem to use!) and a few minutes after God dropped a portion of his word into my soul that humbled me in the dust; yea, and that verse as a clencher:

"He sees me often overcome,
And pities my distress;
And bids affliction drive me home,
To anchor on his grace."—

(Gadsb'y, 209.)

Ah! that is it, my friends. You know there are a few will say to you, it is not right; but God's work is going on—(how many men will pick up different things; but we must come personally: it must be me; it must be you) —and if we have not an experience that will tally with it, it will be a blank when we come to die. You will say sometimes, "Lord, do give me another lift: do grant that I may feel a little of the exceeding riches of thy exceeding grace." Nothing puts a man in the dust like this. God puts human nature in the right place; and he puts the crown upon his blessed head; and he says as dear Swain,

"Think, O my soul, if 'tis so sweet
On earth to sit at Jesus' feet
What must it be to wear a crown

And sit with Jesus on the throne!"

(Denham's 745.)

Why, this is it, my friends. We shall never have a fullness here; but only now and then just a touch of his favour. But what will it be when we get home? How we shall crown him! How we shall extol him and lift him up for ever! That is it.

"That in the ages to come he might show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Yes, while endless ages roll. O you try and cary home a little of that feeling—"the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Look at it; he became a man to suffer. Do you ever say what Watts says?

"Was it for crimes that I have done

He groaned upon the tree?

Amazing pity! Grace unknown!

And love beyond degree."—

(Gadsby's 763.)

O think of the love—the power of the Son of God! O to make everything, so to speak, and to feel this, that if you had ten thousand crowns you would put them all upon that dear head that was once crowned with thorns. Yea you can say then, when you feel a little of the "exceeding riches of his grace;" "He is the chief among ten thousand, and the altogether lovely." "Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold king Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals, and in the day of the gladness of his heart" (Song iii, 11.) Ah! you know, my friends some people say this—"O then I am going to preach Christ." But no man can ever do that without a gracious experience. It does not matter what mortals tell you; a man must know what is to be lost, and that he has been saved, and that by the blessed power of God. There are many deny a feeling religion. I am very bold on that point. If a man tells me that, I tell him he has no religion at all; and "A form of words, though e'er so sound,

Can never save a soul;

The Holy Ghost must give the wound,

And make the wounded whole."

What a mercy it is to have a right religion, and to know something of the "exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus!" It "rises high and drowns the hills" in our souls' feelings—all the guilt that we have felt; and we crown him with his own lovingkindness and goodness, and say that he is he is ".....the friend of sinners,

Be that forgotten never."

May the Lord add his blessing. Amen.

"LEST."

That is, lest ye fail of the grace of God to see the Lord, and plant roots of bitterness that cause trouble and defilement.

Therefore an apostle says, "Follow peace with all men: and holiness: with out which no man shall see the Lord. Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God: lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you and thereby many be defiled." eHb., 12: 14-15

To follow peace with all men is to study, consider, endeavor, strive, and that continually, by every means of gospel law, love and obedience, to make for the things that give peace to all. So there can be no partiality or selfishness in the work. And thus we attain to holiness; that is, a legal gospel holiness; or holy in the sense of perfect gospel obedience to which the same apostle refers when he said, "Present your bodies holy, acceptable to the Lord which is your reasonable service. Rom., 12: 1. Showing that practical obedience to the law creates that holiness; without which no man shall see the Lord: hence, in and by which we do see him. And we want to see him in proportion to our obedience to him. So that thus holy, we want to see him—we love his appearances—we desire faith to see when good comes—to see the times of refreshings from his presence—to discern him in others; and especially in our own heart working in us that which is well-pleasing to God—to will and to do his commandments. For he embodies our hope, love, faith, light and life; wisdom, strength and righteousness, and how could we bear to live this life not seeing him? Therefore, "Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God:" that is, lest failing in following peace with all, and holiness, nor seeing the Lord, you fail of this grace of God, and as no more prompting, directing and sustaining you. For as not looking diligently to it, or trusting in it in all your preceding work—your failure proving it—your denial has aggrieved that spirit—the same whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption to your body—has quenched that spirit, or its influence in your heart, as that you have, as said, denied—done despite its promptings; and it is now withdrawn as your divine, infallible guide that has heretofore directed you, and prevented troubles springing up from your wrongdoing.

Then, we gather that to follow peace with all, and holiness, is to see the Lord; and to see him as our infallible guide and inward spiritual monitor, as well as otherwise; and then to see him is to have looked dilligently unto him, not only to acknowledge him working in us both to will and to do, or as causing us to love, and wish to attain to holiness, and giving the power to perform; but he to whom we still look lest we stray, lest any root of bitterness springing up among the brotherhood trouble us as the cause, and where by some of them be defiled. Thus, we do not fail of the grace of God; nor by faith, of seeing the Lord, who thus gives us the sweet experimental assurance in heart that that holiness fruit of righteousness which sows peace abroad to all men, shall harvest it at home—that they who follow after and make peace, shall in like manner obtain peace—that to follow peace with all men, and holiness, is to stand with the righteous at the harvest time of "peace sown to righteousness.

But of all in apparent jeopardy here by a "lest," this "grace of God" is by far the most important and to be the most dilligently looked after, lest we fail of it; for failing of it we fail of all; as without it we could not follow peace or attain to holiness, or prevent those dire-after-consequences. Then our first and most important work in all this, to look dilligently, lest we fail of this grace of God. And which grace is given to every one eternally saved or born of God. And which grace is synonymous with "God working in you both to will and to do." And that this work, thus willed to be done, was to be performed by the hand of "you," or the person in whom he worked the will; and that it pertained exclusively to practical gospel obedience, is made plain and undoubted by the same apostle when writing to the brethren on this obedience. He says "As ye have always obeyed, not only in my presence, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation, with fear and trembling for it is of God which worketh in you." Phil., 2: 12. And which was as much as to say "continue in practical obedience to the law of Christ." And "your own salvation" they were to work out, can be none else than our own which saves us from the terrible results of disobedience to the same in time. It is called "our common salvation" in James, as that each one in common must work his own out. And, among other things, saves us from failing of this grace of God and the planting of roots of bitterness, &c., together from their evil consequences.

Then having this grace of God, or God in spirit working in us to will and to do or as giving us the desire to attain unto holiness as given to love it—and the power—as diligently looking to it—to perform it practically, with impressions and promptings in spirit directing us, it is indeed with fear and trembling that should essay to approach to it, for it is the great God working in you; hence what a fearful thing to disregard these promptings, as that is a fearful thing to fall into his hands for such; and it is a fearful thing to turn from or deny his rule to "follow peace with all men, and holiness, lest thus grieving that spirit—thus quenching it by denial—we fail of this grace of God as bereft of it and left to the darkness and disasters of the flesh we have served in preference. "For every disobedience shall receive a just recompence of reward." Heb., 2:2.

Looking at it thus, how can one deliberately and knowingly deny the inward impressions and promptings of the spirit, looking to the written law of God? In this case it is "follow peace with all, and holiness." That this is God's law, and that you love and crave to attain holiness by obedience, is that it is God's spirit prompting you. Hence how can one come before it without fear and trembling and looking diligently to God for strength and guidance, lest they fail of this grace as withdrawn? For who could lightly or carelessly be bereft of this heart monitor?—this infallible spiritual guide?—this only power to perform in an acceptable manner to God?—this, as it were, pillar of cloud by day, and of fire by night, to surely guide and safely lead unto the paths of peace and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord; and thus be left to darkness and the promptings of the will or desire for holiness and the power to obtain it: for with the divine Spirit goes this "working to will and to do." I repeat, how can one take such a fearful risk as to fail of this grace of God without which he can do nothing? And failing, lest his shortcomings be as planted roots of bitterness whereby many be defiled.

But says one, "I did not know to do this, or not to do that, was to deny this gracious spirit prompting. I only know by the results that I fear I have failed of this grace of God." Then let me beg you to try the spirits—try your own—try your every intention, word and act, as gauging them by the given rule to "follow peace with all men; and holiness." If they accord with this you are in the right way. For I do assure you that as to holding or losing our peace, or as working out our own salvation, in time saving us from the dire consequences of these "lests," together with all results of disobedience, this is an unspeakably important question—yes, a paramount question; and, from the fact that if you should fail of this grace of God, you will fail of all, and in all as good and acceptable to God. Ah, then, take heed and look diligently lest you fail of it. Remember in taking heed that he that gathereth not with Christ, scattereth abroad. Then let us remember that not to follow peace with all men is to scatter it abroad and let trouble and roots of bitterness spring up in its place. Then always in starting to say this, or do that, look closely, diligently, consider if it tends or will work for the things that make peace—peace to all, generally, and not for this or that particular person involved, while it may disturb another—then look diligently, certainly to the grace or Spirit of God for guidance and strength to perform; for any work you cannot ask God to guide and help you in must be a wrong work. Any word, or act, or general work that follows peace, or tends to make peace with and for all men!; and holiness—that is right in itself as commanded—is a right work. Anything to the contrary is dangerous.

Then I repeat, always think—consider where this work or that step will lead, lest you fail of this grace of God: weigh your motives, search your way as a law—watch and pray so as to retain this grace, and you never will plant a root of bitterness among the brotherhood, as that you have followed peace and holiness, and the grace or spirit of God dwells in your heart.

One of the surest ways to the contrary, and most prolific of roots of bitterness, is to gather up and circulate all the evil reports against the brotherhood. One has doubtless “failed of the grace of God” to do so. And a paradox is, that they who so eagerly gather and circulate these evil reports do, in words, deepest deplore their circulation. Never touch such things—never take up reproach against your neighbor or brother, lest you fail of this grace—lest you plant roots of bitterness that bring you trouble; and whereby many thus provoked and offended retaliate in kind and thereby are themselves defiled.

P.

Dear Brother Gold—I am sending you $1.50 for the Landmark, which comes to me regularly, and which I love to read for the truth's sake. You will very readily understand how I esteem and appreciate the Landmark, when I inform you that I have had 288 copies bound in book form. I have six books, each book has two volumes, the six books representing a period of twelve years. I prize them very much and I believe that all Baptists ought to take the Landmark, or some other good sound periodical, as they are not only comforting, but instructive, especially those who live in remote sections, where they are not blessed with the sweet privilege of hearing the gospel preached in its purity.

Now I do not believe that we should allow the Landmark, or any other paper to come between, or prevent us from reading the scriptures. I would that I could encourage all lovers of the truth to read the Bible more, to study it more, and pray God to give the understanding, for the Bible is the only book—it is the book of books. All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. The scriptures cannot make a man of God, but after he is made, they can thoroughly furnish him unto all good works. If a hose is thoroughly furnished it would be impossible to furnish it any better. If we could improve upon it in any way by putting a few extra touches upon it, it would be evident that it was not thoroughly done before. But the scriptures thoroughly furnish the man of God. So that it is not needful for one to go elsewhere nor to step out side the bounds of Holywrit. It does seem to me that the plan of salvation, the paths of righteousness, the way of holiness is so clearly and plainly marked out, that all dutiful and obedient children cannot fail to find it and walk therein. For we read, "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the way-faring men, though fools, shall not err therein. Isaiah 35: 8. Now, Brother Gold, do not understand me to mean, nor insinuate in the least that it is the intention of the Landmark, nor any other of our good sound Baptist magazines to influence or in any way cause those who read them to not read the scriptures. I do not mean any such thing, nor do I believe they do. On the contrary, I believe they cause, or have a tendency to influence those who read them to search the scriptures, like the Bereans, who "searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." Acts 17: 11.

Brother Gold, I hope the good Lord will spare your life many years to come, to publish the Landmark, and to preach the blessed gospel of the Son of God. Now I do not feel like closing this letter without saying something about how the Lord has blessed us here in Manchester. The church of Hopeland has extended us an arm, so when Brother A. J. Moore comes up and preaches for us we can open the doors of the church and receive members of Hopeland church. I feel glad to say that there has been added to our membership lately, one by letter, brother G. S. Wilder, and two by experience, one the wife of brother Wilder, the other was my dear wife and companion in the flesh, and I hope also in the spirit. They were baptized last fourth Sunday about 3:30 p. m. in the James river, by Elder A. J. Moore. The place we have selected for baptising is a very suitable place in many respects, has a solid rock bottom, with any desired depth in easy access, over-looked by a beautiful landscape, which portrays the wonderful works of nature. Owing to a wreck on the Southern rail road, several hundred people witnessed the sacred rite. I feel that there are others who will shortly come home. I feel the Lord has a people here. Brother Gold we enjoyed your preaching. When can you come again?

In hope,

J. E. HERNDON.

Elders Gold and Lester:-

Dear Brethren—I write this to let you know how I am—"So vile so prone to sin, afraid I am not born again"—Feeling lifeless to all spiritual things, pertaining to God, my little hope is almost gone and at times I seem to be enshrouded in midnight gloom, my heart so hard and strong that spiritual rest cannot enter there, so afraid I have been deceived in my self and have deceived the church and have brought reproach upon Christ and his cause. Caught at the shadow and missed the substance.

My daily walk has been so far from what I profess to be, doing things I don't want to do, and those I want to do I do not. Oh! what a deplorable state to fall into. My dear brethren and sisters, is it thus so with you? My heart is so corrupt, hypocritical, and deceitful. How I grieve and mourn over my imperfections, trying to pray to the Lord to keep me in that straight and narrow way, and strengthen my faith in him who doeth all things well. How often I have to look back when I claimed to have a little hope in Christ and could pick up a few crumbs dropped here and there for me and how precious they were.

The day I offered to the church nearly 18 years ago. I know the Lord was with me and gave me the few words I told to the church, and when brother Gold began asking me questions the answers were given me, which were these: "I am here for the cause of Christ, him crucified, and I love him and his people." I knew of a truth this was so. Those words had never crossed my mind to tell to the church, and how I enjoyed going to the church and hearing the gospel preached I know of a truth it was a joyful sound that I had been mourning and praying for so long. Meeting and singing with the brethren was a feast to my hungry soul, but I have changed so much since then I have almost lost the sight of it all.

The last of January I was taken sick with heart and nerve trouble and was prostrated for nearly two months. What darkness of mind then and I felt like the Lord's time had come to take me away for better or worse. Nor was I reconciled to his will for I didn't want to die as I dreaded death so, being afraid I was not born again. I sought the Lord daily, nightly, and hourly at times, but found him not. The breathings of my soul went out in prayer to God to be saved, but I was hedged in on every side with death on one side, and my sinful life like a mountain on the other and not the least ray of light did I see. How I prayed to know if Jesus died for me and to think I had professed a hope in Christ and death so near and I afraid to die. I felt like I had been deceived and had deceived the church and as a vile miserable sinner I was, needing the prayers of every righteous sinner on earth, and yet knowing without Jesus it would be of no avail.

I hope my afflictions have been for my good for through the Lord's merciful kindness I am improving and able to be up. I may never be well again but feel thankful it is as well with me as it is. I have been able to "praise God from whom all blessings flow" and was able to go to my church where I found a feast of fat things.

Brother Gold I felt impressed to write this and hope it is of the Lord. If you see fit to publish it do so, if not it will be allright with me. Your unworthy sister with little hope,

SARAH J. REDMOND.

Tarboro, N. C.

Mrs. Sallie B. Newman—My friend it seems to me your dreams are all good ones and point to some of the things I hold to be dear to a child of God.

How sweet the name of Jesus sounds to one that knows that name. To you that believe he is precious. For precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

The next dream your grand mother, who has been dead for years led you through a river of the clearest water into a house where was an aunt of yours, who had been dead for years, and you three ate together showing your fellowship and love for each other.

In another dream you went into a river where was a rock, and in that rock was the prettiest spring you ever saw, and the best water that you ever drank.

Such dreams leave a delightful impression on the mind of him that dreams such pleasant dreams. As Jeremiah dreamed of the everlasting love of God drawing him, and his sleep was sweet to his taste. It is like the wine of the best beloved causing the lips of them that are asleep to sneeze and surely the speech is good and pure.

UNCLEAN SPIRITS LIKE FROGS

Brother B. F. Liles, of Texas, requests my view of Rev. 16: 13-15. "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God almighty.

"Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame.

This is a very mysterious book, yet a most wonderful one. If Jesus has given me understanding of this book, it belongs also to the saints. I entreat the readers of the Landmark to search the scriptures to see whether what I write is approved therein, for if not my writing is worthless.

Among the characters set forth in this book we find the dragon, the beast and the false prophet—three, and they are in opposition to the three that bear record in heaven. We also find that the mystery of iniquity, as well as the mystery of Godliness, must be accomplished.

The dragon is the old serpent, the devil that deceiveth the nations. He began that work of deception in the garden of Eden. The beast with the seven heads and ten horns, described in this book, is an imitation of Jesus Christ, to whom the devil gives his power and great authority. This beast is wounded to death in one of his heads and his deadly wound was healed. All the world wondered after this beast whose names are not written in the Lamb's book of life slain from the foundation of the world.

This imitation of Jesus is a false Christ—false doctrines—by which Satan deceives the world. Great power even of working miracles has he in sight of the beast, etc.

The false prophet sets forth the false spirit or teaching in the world. The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of true prophecy. God has his prophets, so satan also has his to deceive mankind with.

During the prevalence of this false bloody, persecuting religious worship great judgments are poured out on the sea, the rivers, the sun, etc., or the natural fountains or sources of fruitfulness, light, heat and productivity. John saw three unclean spirits like frogs. The Holy Ghost employs animals, fowls, reptiles, etc., to indicate character. Sheep, doves, oxen, etc., are used to typify God's people. While serpents, wild beasts, etc., are used because of their natures and habits, to set forth the nature and conduct of the wicked. Frogs are here used to set forth wicked spirits, used to represent the false worshippers. What is the nature of frogs. They are not upright as men in their shape, nor do they crawl as serpents. They do not declare plainly and clearly the upright truth and doctrine of God our Saviour. Nor do they say it is of the earth. Those are the most cunning deceivers who attempt to combine works and grace—part of God and part of the creature, which is shadowed forth by the position of the frog.

Also the frog has a very large mouth and makes a great loud noise. So false preachers speak great swelling words to beguile men. There are many loud mouths and vain talkers.

Likewise the frog has a large air bladder and can swell up and puff himself to a great size. How full of vanity, puffed up are false preachers and teachers of the world. The frog is able to live in both land and water, but he makes much more noise after a great rain, and multiplies more rapidly then, and becomes very noisy; so these teachers become very active and noisy and productive in the rainy season.

Frogs are more afraid of serpents than perhaps of any other power. False worshippers are fully under the power of the vile one, and hence these enemies of God are controlled and marshalled by the Old Serpent or dragon, to make war against the saints and are gathered to the great day of the battle of Almighty God.

These spirits enter into the kings or rulers of the world, and of spiritual wickedness in high places and influence them with their spirit of falsehood to persecute the saints, and are being gathered to the battle of the great day of Almighty God.

The Lord will come as thief or unexpectedly, and take all his enemies by complete surprise. Therefore let all his people watch, and keep their garments pure, by walking according to God's word.

P. D. G.

RESTORING.

If a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore him in the spirit of meekness: considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6: 1.

This last phrase—"lest thou also be tempted," shows that one thus overtaken was tempted—that some outside influence stronger than his own innate conviction has deceived and led him into this fault. And this proves that he was such as an Apostle calls a weak brother, yet for whom Christ died. Hence this weakness calls for a more tender concern from the "strong"—those too strong, with too much knowledge or spiritual discernment to be thus tempted or deceived, yet therefore, the better enabled to consider himself, that likely under the same weakness and temptation he would have also been overtaken; also to do unto this brother as he would have him do unto him, in which spirit of meekness he will never destroy or hurt one such; but by patient labor of love will reclaim—restore him for whom Christ died for his name sake. 1 Cor. 8: 11. Also the inference is that the spiritual have not only knowledge, but also meekness. Knowledge may puff up, meekness proves too great a measure of the spirit; indeed the more spiritual one is the more meek and lowly-minded he is, and the more he esteems others (of the brotherhood) the better than himself; and the further he is from wanting to lead or rule and dictate to a brother of the church. Hence, when you see a brother making himself conspicuous and officious in wanting to take the lead in all church matters, you may know he is weak, and at fault as lacking this very spirit of meekness and lowliness of mind, and knows not he is in danger of falling. While the truly meek and lowly—the truly spiritual—though feeling to be the least of all, is yet the willing servant of all. So in the lowliness and gentleness of divine love, patience and long-suffering of Jesus, will he labor and not faint, to restore a brother overtaken in a fault, and for Jesus' sake. For such do not serve for self sake, as do the carnal minded, who, devoid of all these graces serve to gratify and establish a personal prejudice or a partisan principle, regardless of the law or honor of Christ, or result to the brother involved.

Then, indeed, if a brother is overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore him; for those thus tempted into error have the spirit, but as intimated, in less measure. Romans 12: 8. For there is no appeal from, no resistance that can stand against that spirit using the weapon of meekness and lowliness in gentle and tender forbearance in Jesus' name. Whatever mind, whether the spiritual or carnal mind goes out to search and try a brother, it will at once provoke its like. Hence the admonition, "Ye which are spiritual restore the brother overtaken in fault." The strongest power, the mightiest force and influence in the church on earth in this spiritual meekness and lowliness of mind. A brother or committee is known as to nature by their report, the result of their labors with such as are thus overtaken in fault. At the same time I repeat that the spiritual—this mightiest force in self estimation—is the least of all; and hence the furthest from desire or intent for authority or rule in church matters; indeed, it has no discernment of itself as a power; it only seeks to minister. For herein God reverses the laws of nature whereby the great rule, and makes the least not only the greatest, but also to judge and rule, though all unconsciously. Matt. 20: 26-28; 1 Cor. 6: 24.

Suppose a majority of the members of a church, though sound and orthodox, God fearing and humbly-walking should be overtaken in the fault of tradition, or of believing it gospel to continue to observe all things of church work just as their fathers did and handed down to them; for instance, that the church should commune and wash feet only on Sunday afternoon. Remember, this restoration by the spiritual applies only to those overtaken in fault, or such as had been deceived and tempted by others to do or believe wrong. These as born and trained amid the more pure but less highly cultured environments of country life, in their old fashioned love and respect for parents and their religion, had imbibed these traditional ideas we will say. But a few more advanced members wanted to cut off here and amend there, so as to get the church out of the old ruts into new ones. Of course this was resented as if asking them to deny Jesus. Now here was a chance for the spiritual. But suppose the few instead are impatient, seeing it will take unusual time and labor to uproot and eradicate that so long and deeply taken root, and so adopt a hasty, summary measure, and by force rend loose from these. But now alas, have they not become guilty of a worse fault than they have thus escaped from; and of a worse nature; as that they are not overtaken, but have walked into it deliberately? They have cut themselves off—or provoked it—as one arm at the shoulder from the body as it were, to be rid of some little sores on the body, leaving a terrible wound to the body—yes to both—that will be long in healing. I had rather have borne with these little sores though often irritating than bear the responsibility of having made an left that grievous wound to the body. Oh, how much better to have sent the spiritual to restore! how much more conscience appeasing, and honoring to Jesus, though it took years of patient work, though Jesus said in approbation "because thou hast borne and hast not fainted through all these years of labor in love for my name's sake, well done, good and faithful servant."

Suppose the other side also provoked by the carnal mind that had thus hastily and roughly dealt with them had also neglected the almonition to have the spiritual reclaim, nor had applied the gospel rule of labor with these in their first wrong step: had not subdued the carnal mind thus provoked and aroused to retaliation, but let it rule to the exclusion of these brethren; and thereby added the deliberate sin of disorder that resulted in greater wrong than traditions to non-essentials. Just see what breach upon breach one wrong first step will lead to. At the same time the other party—the wise, as so advanced in knowledge, the strong, as assuming to go out of old ruts up to higher planes—must bear the greater share as having provoked to retaliation, instead of to love and to good works, and as not bearing with the infirmities of the weak.

Oh, how much better to have borne and labored in unity to heal these little sores of the body, than so rend it in separation—to have patiently worked a life time to eradicate the disease of the hand of some, as it were, than by hand to hurt and destroy in God's holy mountain. I had rather be laboring still in unity than bearing the responsibilities of separation. The body may live; the arm will die.

And just so with the individual member who is overtaken in fault. Send the carnal to restore and the breach is made worse. And woe to the church if it be a family feud. The carnal always assume to be the wise and strong with the authority to rule or ruin. The spiritual are the meek and lowly, and these are the mighty to reclaim and restore to gospel truth and order.

What is so lovely, so beautiful, so endearing, as well as mighty, is this power in lowliness. What a sweet invisible force and influence for good! what a two-edged sword is it for Jesus sake? And how it endears one to us in that he has borne and has patience, and for Jesus' name's sake, has not failed, not only with a brother in error but in all things touching the well being of the brotherhood, or in restoring peace, unity and fellowship to the churches.

But what a comment on our churches in some sects today. Is it that they have withheld the spiritual from the work? Or has God withheld the spiritual from them?

P. D. G.

Our brother, Elder Kilby, presents serious and important questions for consideration, and by consideration I do not mean merely to think and talk about it; though it is good to think and speak of such things, and of all the things we should act upon; for by our words we are justified or condemned, as they are good or bad. Still we are not to be hearers only, nor vain talkers, but doers of the word.

Every established child of God knows that it is evil to depart from the whether it be good or evil; and that we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, and receive according to our works. We know too that there is no long credit extended to the sinner. In the day that one sins he dies. It does not require three months or six months, or a year, or even a day to elapse before the sowing ripens. How quickly the harvest comes. If we sow to the flesh we shall of the flesh reap corruption. Whatever a man sows that shall he also reap. So that if one has the mind to do wrong the curse begins in that, and if he walks after that mind the plague at once breaks out. Nor is a child of God ignorant in these things. Whatsoever is not of the faith is sin. The condition one is in when doing wrong is itself an evil, and punishment follows quickly.

On the other hand the diligent soul prospers. The obedient eat the good of the land. It is not a long credit. At once he that obeys is blessed. Yea, he is blest in the deed—in the doing of it—blest when he has the mind to perform, and blest in the performance. It is not a vain thing to serve the Lord.

Giving diligence add to your faith the due reward of his deeds, then he acknowledges the justice of God in his condemnation, and God reveals his son full of grace and truth, the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. Jesus shines in glory, and the soul receives him as his Lord and hope, and faith acknowledges him as the Lord, and that soul trusts him. The power, therefore, that is manifested, is God's power and wisdom displayed in Jesus. This is God's power unto salvation. How free this one now is in the faith of Jesus! There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after flesh, but after the spirit. Because the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made him free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God, sending his own son in the likeness of sinful flesh—sin—condemned sin in the flesh. Of course if the law itself could not help the sinner or do anything to justify him, the sinner himself could do nothing to that end. But God laid help upon one that is mighty, whom he made strong for himself. Jesus comes in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin, and Jesus condemned sin in the flesh—not only in heaven, but its own stronghold, in the flesh; so that sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace. Now faith beholds, owns, loves and dwells in all this blessed truth of Jesus crucified and risen the Lord our righteousness. Faith is the substance of all these blessed things hoped for, for we never hope for that we do not love or desire, nor do we ever hope for that we have no expectation of ever receiving.

Faith dwells and operates in the spiritual world, even the heavenly, or in the gospel kingdom—not in the legal kingdom. It hath no place in earthly kingdoms. Faith says the work is already finished, Christ is already come in the flesh, has already been crucified, is already ascended into heaven. The word of faith which we preach is nigh thee even in thy mouth and thy heart, saying, if thou shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised Christ from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

The faith of Jesus puts his strength in you by putting you in his strength. Your standing is thus in him, and the life that you now live in the flesh you live by the faith of the son of God. What a life of joy, peace and hope this is! What a pure life, a holy life, and complete life is the life of faith!

The faith of God never fails or blunders, nor misleads. It has never blundered. It has never come short of triumph. There is no sin in faith. Surely then faith is the gift of God!

How do I know I have it? Jesus is precious to him that believeth. It is the knowledge of Jesus, trusting in him, serving, obeying him that proves that we have faith. This faith shows what it is by what it does. It works by love, it purifies the heart, it overcomes the world. P. D. G.

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

This is the inspired bible definition of what faith is—not of its author, nor of the power which produces it, nor of what it does; but of what it is. The domain of faith is above or out of reach of the domain of sight or senses. We walk by faith, not by sight. That is, to walk by faith is not to walk by sight. For the things of faith are not within reach of natural vision, or natural reach of earthly power. They are not attainable by human effort. The things of faith are things hoped for, therefore they are not in possession; for we do not hope for that we have in our natural or literal possession. Faith is the substance of things hoped for. The things hoped for are not any carnal or worldly things, but they are heavenly or eternal things. They are not such things as carnal nature ever wants or could desire. One must be born again before he could desire things of faith.

Faith is not a shadow, figure or type. It is not a speculation, notion, theory or dogma. It is not that which will be greater sometime than it is now or has been. It is substance of heavenly things. The law was an image or shadow of good things to come. The law could never make such as came unto it perfect, for it made nothing perfect. Faith never deals with anything that is not perfect. It is substance, divine, eternal realization, and the very substance of that which every one born of God hopes for; and it is the evidence, witness or proof of that which is not seen. Then what a wonderful thing faith is! It is the just man's income or support—that by which he lives. Without it there is no coming to God, nor pleasing him; but with it the world is overcome, and witness that one is righteous is obtained. There is nothing too hard for faith to do, for to him that believeth all things are possible. All that have ever had this faith have a good standing—have obtained a good report, are owned in heaven as of the seed royal, as of the children of God. It is the correspondence of the children of God with that spiritual world by which they receive of the blessed fullness of Jesus. Faith works by love. While charity or love is greater than faith or hope, yet charity or love owns faith to be of the heavenly family, and always honors her in all her doings. Love thinketh no evil, and faith beholds and owns only what is truth.

The things that faith does are always above nature or natural performances. Look how it guided Abel in his offering, and what witness he received by it that God had respect unto him, and then unto his offering. Noah did by faith what no man had ever done before, or will ever be able to do again. He did that which condemned the world, and by which he obtained witness that he was righteous.

Among all the performances of faith recorded in Heb., 11th chap., there is not one thing done naturally, or as a carnal or natural man doeth things. Then faith must be substance of heavenly things, or of things hoped for.

Not one of the things faith did when Jesus was on earth was as a natural man does anything. Those that had faith owned Jesus, and received him as God's Son sent into the world; owned him as the just one foretold by the prophets, and as coming from heaven; received him, embraced him, loved him, worshipped him, and trusted him. Faith never questions the power of Jesus to do right, or ever fears he will do wrong, nor does it ever question his power to do as he pleases to do, nor does the soul blest with the faith of Jesus ever claim any worthiness, or that blessing should come because of any good or meritorious thing he has done. It deals alone with divine power, and rests in the divine will; sees the wonderful unlimited power of God, and trusts in that. It says, Lord, if thou wilt thou canst. It says, if I may but touch his garment I shall be whole, for I know, O Lord, thou canst do everything and no thought of the heart can be withholden from thee. Creature help or effort is perished in the thought or expectation of him whose faith is in God. He has been translated out of the darkness of the flesh into the spiritual world, and deals now with him who is risen from the dead, and has all power both in heaven and in earth.

As long as one trusts in an arm of flesh there is no faith, nor substance of things hoped for. When one passes into the agony of death as the wages of sin, and thus feels that he receives virtue. Faith is the foundation. That is already laid. Let us build wisely on this foundation. Let every one take heed how he builds thereon. Virtue is strength or solidity, heavy growth—valor to fight, to labor and endure. To this and as a consequence of this knowledge or experience of God's faithfulness add and his blessing is given. For if any man do the will of God, he shall know of the doctrine whether it is true or not. Knowing this to be true, what moderation, what sobriety of mind, quietness, rest and confidence it gives. This also increases our brotherly kindness to the family, and makes our conduct so lovely in the household of faith, and also calls out that charity that thinketh no evil, and reveals the saint so that a blessed, glorious entrance into the joys of salvation is given to the diligent soul.

But here is one who has received the pardon and forgiveness of his sins, but confers with flesh and carnal reason. His hope is not big enough he says, and declares he is not fit to join the church, and that is deaying his Lord. e Hlays up in a napkin or in the earth what is given him. He walks the flesh or world, and falls into divers temptations. He is not under what the flesh or carnal reason calls the church restraint. He says, if I am a christian I can live outside of the church as well as inside, and if I do wrong the church cannot bring any charge against me; and so he drags along in this miserable plight until he quite forgets he has been purged from his old sins that he was guilty of before he was forgiven; and has committed so many since then that he has scarcely any hope that he is one of the Lord's people, and is ashamed to even own that he is one of the Lord's people.

The scriptures warn, exhort, encourage in many ways, by direct precept and the examples they present of obedient and disobedient characters—that those who serve the Lord truly do at once receive a blessing—it may be only in the ability given them to endure—and that is a wonderful blessing, for behold we count them happy that endure; and that the unruly and disobedient do become entangled and engulfed in many sorrows here in this present life.

Why some are more diobedient than others I cannot tell. Enough is written to put you and me on our guard—to watch as well as pray. We are so weak we need all the help, all the teaching of God's word and his grace. Never let us feel that we are so strong that we can neglect anything he has commanded us to do, or so established that we can with impunity transgress any of his commands which are all holy. Then shall I not be ashamed when I have respect to all thy commandments. For every word of God is good, and it is written that man shall live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Forever his word is settled in heaven.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM Y. LOVELACE.

He was born in Caswell county, N. C., August 1822, and lived there until he married Celena Paschal in January, 1842. After which he moved to Rockingham county, and lived the remainder of his days.

He joined the Primitive Baptist church at Wolf Island in 1879, where he remained until his death March 15, 1898, at his daughter's Mrs. Fannie Smith, in the southern part of Reidsville. Though he was visited by all his daughters, some living in Reidsville, and some in High Point, who administered to him all they could. In a talk with his daughter, who told him that she had been praying for his recovery, he replied that he had been praying and had a hope that he would be better off after he was gone. He did not appear to desire to get well, or even had any fear of dying.

Resolutions of Respect.

Where as God in his providence has been pleased to remove from our body by death our beloved sister Rosa King, who has been for 50 years a faithful and consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church at Wilmington, N. C., and possessed all the traits that constitute a lovely christian.

Resolved:

1.—Therefore while we are grieved at our loss we believe it to be her eternal gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of God who is too wis to err, and too good to be unkind.

2.—That a copy of these resolutions be inscribed upon our church record, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy sent to Elder P. D. Gold to be published in Zion's Landmark.

Done and signed by order of the church

LETTIE HAMILTON.

Dear Brother Gold—With a sad heart I will attempt to write the death of my daughter Lettie Hamilton who departed this life April 4, 1908, making her stay on earth 22 years, two months and twelve days. She died of that dread disease pneumonia suffering ten days, but never was heard to murmur. She bore her suffering patiently.

I did all I could for her, and the Dr. did the same; but there was one above who could do more.

She was in her right mind to the last. She called me and said mama I am dying, and I was so heart broken I could not talk to her, but said to her you are not dying. She said yes I am but I am not afraid. She asked me if her clothes were ready. I said yes. She asked me what I was going to lay her out on? And I said what do you wish to be laid out on and she replied it did not make any difference with her. Then she took her handkerchief and looked up at me and put it around her jaws.

Brother Gold, was not that heart breaking?

Then she said she heard the angels singing on the other shore, and they were coming over after her in a boat. She told me to not let the children make so much racket until half past three o'clock, and then they could make all the racket they wanted to. Just at half past three o'clock she fell asleep in Jesus. She was not a member of any church, but loved to hear the old Baptists preach. She cared nothing for worldly pleasure, fine dress, nor dancing, always was kind to every one.

She leaves father, mother and seven sisters, three brothers, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

MARY HAMILTON.

Pamlico, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—When I was a small girl, ten or twelve years old, I would study very often about death. I knew I had to die, and this gave me great trouble, especially of a night. I would dread for night to come; for I could not sleep for studying about death and misery. This seemed to wear off, and never troubled me very much till when in my 17th year I became troubled. I hardly knew what was the matter. I wanted to be off to myself where no one could see me. Then I would pour out my tears in prayer to God, asking him to have mercy on me. Sometimes when I would go to the spring I would stay so long pouring out my prayers to God, when I got to the house they would ask me what I had been doing. I did not want any one to know I ever tried to pray. After this the Missionaries had a protracted meeting not far from our house, or the place, where I then lived. I went to meeting but I was afraid I could not hide my feelings and that they would want me to go to the mourner's bench. I went in and took my seat as far from the pulpit as I could, trying to hide my tears. After they got through preaching they called for those that wanted to be prayed for to come and kneel down and they would pray for them. I don't believe I knew any thing right then, but found myself at the bench on my knees. I went there three days. Sometimes I would be almost melted away in tears; at other times I did not have any feeling for prayer or any thing else. On the third day I felt I was humbled down at Jesus' feet, begging him to save me or I perish. If I ever obtained a hope in Christ it was on the same day that I felt so near his feet—July, 1872. I did not only fall at his feet but in his arms, praising Father, Son and Holy Ghost. I wanted to tell everybody how good the Lord was, and what he had done for me. Pen nor tongue can describe my feelings that day. I went home thinking I would not say any thing, but to my surprise when I got to the door I commenced crying and telling what the Lord had done for me.

After talking about the goodness of the Lord I lay down on the bed. I felt like the Lord had done great things for me, whereof I was glad. I had no trouble for several day; but it was not long before I thought I was deceived, and had made people believe I was a christian. This gave me trouble at time. Some times I can say, "The Lord is my God and my Saviour," and feel like he died for me.

I feel like some times it would be a pleasure to me to leave this world of sin and sorrow, but the thoughts of death and judgment make my heart burn within me. I think no christian would have such carnal thoughts and foolish talks as I have. If I am saved I know it will not be by my good works. If I ever did any thing good I don't know when it was. When I feel so little and worse than nothing my mind goes back two years when I was confined to my bed. Three or four weeks I could not hardly raise myself up, nor hard'y move myself in the bed. I was heard singing. I don't know when I commenced, but when I came to myself I was singing these words:

"I know his courts, I'll enter in, Whatever may oppose."

My husband came to my bed and asked me what was the matter. I told him I had gotten well and I never would get done praising the Lord for this good night's rest. He brought me some water. I raised up with as much strength as I ever had, and I thought every thing was light and joy. I at this time belonged to the Missionaries. I had never heard a Primitive Baptist preach till after I was married, but I heard people talk about them. They said they preached infants to hell, and let a man do as he will he will be saved, and a great many things that I find now to be false. When I heard them preach I thought that I had never heard men pray and preach like they did. If I am not deceived it was sweet food for me. I thought I would keep this all to myself, but these words would be ringing in my mind: "Never man spake like this man."

Brother Jones preached at Big Meadow the fourth Sunday and Saturday before in June, 1884. It seemed to me it was Christ speaking to his disciples. They looked so humble—so lovely—I wanted to be with them, but I did not think I was fit to be among such a people. I thought I would just go up and tell them how I felt. I would be a friend to them if nothing else. Then it seemed like something wouldsay, "You have nothing to tell. If you go up there you can't speak a word." So you know it was a cross to me. When the door of the church was opened I went and related as best I could the reason of my Before I said as much as I wanted to say, unworthy as I felt, they received me into the fellowship of the church. I went into the water the next morning with my husband and my husband's brother, and was baptized by Elder Isaac Jones. It was a pleasant day and a sad one, too. I believe there are tares in the true church, and I fear. I am one. I was with the Missionaries twelve years. Why I was I can not tell. It was a cross to me, that is to the flesh, to leave mother, and brother and five sisters with the Missionaries, but I have heard the doctrine of men 'till I don't want to hear it any more. My letter is already too long. I did not think I would write so much.

ELDER HENRY PEELE.

This aged brother—in his 80th year—departed this life May the 24th. He was a member of the church at Smithwicks Creek, and had long been their pastor.

He was an exemplary man in good things such as truth, honesty, industry, economy and the noble, useful qualities required of a gospel preacher. He was gifted in the mysteries of the Bible. With no flattering words for falsehood, but with righteous indignation against mystery Babylon the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, so shifting and movable in her styles and fashions that the simple are often deceived by her, Elder Peele exposed this artful whore, and warned Israel against her fornication.

This church met Elders W. T. Broadway and W. R. Galamore at Gain's store, and in consideration of our condition and lowly state, having had no preaching, no conference until this time; and as the house is past repairing, and the church lot somewhat of an out of the way place, we agree to sell the lot, and place proceeds of such sale to use of another house and place as herein named, the name being changed from Bear Creek to that of Gain's Grove, on which place we hope to have a house soon. An arbor will be built at once for the purpose of service until the house can be built.

We desire some of the ministering brethren to come and preach for us.

Elders W. T. Broadway and W. R. Galamore will be with us the third Sunday in June and Saturday before.

Brethren, sisters and friends are invited to come. Gain's Grove church is six mile from Bear Creek station.

We desire that all who may have a mind to travel will come this way.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—Our association held at Mountain Creek, May 6, 7, and 8, closed sweetly and we had some of the loveliest preaching I ever heard from mortal lips, as it came down from God through Elders Broom, W. T. Broadway and Thomas Bell, who are without doubt blessed fathers in Israel. We desire to thank the blessed God, our Lord Jesus for sending to our association those dear gifted brethren who stirred up our minds by way of remembrance, and who told us more about that loving Jesus who has done so much for us and is yet interceding with the Father for us.

Brother Gold, I have thought no doubt the Lord would send us these precious shepherds and others often if we the (Bear Creek Association) would only walk more upright and show more by our acts that we love him. I feel sorry to know that some of the churches in our bounds are cold and indifferent and would that I had more zeal for the Lord's house. Pray for us and especially for me for I feel to be the least of all.

Brother Gold, I have often thought of you. P. G. Lester, L. H. Hardy, C. H. Waters (editor of Zion's Advocate.) S. Hassel, John R. Daily, and others, and I can't tell how much I would give were I able, to see you all and hear you preach that loving power of God that is unto salvation to every one that believeth. Brother Gold can't you come to our next session? It will be held with my home church in October. Notice will be sent to you later.

I must close, as I fear what I have written is worthless. Among some of the things, I would like to mention before I close, is about a precious sister named Moss, coming with shouts and praises to God. She went up to the stand with the ministers and told how ashamed she once was of the old Baptists, but now she was ready to walk with them through this proud world and ready to help them sing, "Amazing grace how sweet the sound, I once was lost but now I'm found." This occurred while the church was singing the parting hymn. The church was called in conference order and sister Moss was received at Mountain Creek while many loving tears were being shed.

So farewell in the Lord to all who chance to read this.

J. F. HOWELL,

Big Lick, N. C.

"And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" Gal. 3:29.

They which are of faith are the children of Abraham. God made promise to Abraham before the law was given; in this promise is the covenant. The faith of Christ in Abraham was such as made him the father of the faithful, or a father of many nations; for Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed."

Then Abraham stood up anterior to the giving of the law as type of all divine blessings of faith, which is of Christ, and the law was given to show the necessity of salvation by grace. Hence the law is a school-master until Christ come. The school-master merely trains the children put then in his charge, so the law does its work of showing those under it their vileness and inability to perform, and every one under it is brought in guilty. But Jesus was made a curse for his people, and when he comes who is of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, it is that we might receive the adoption or liberty of sons. Here, then, in this adoption, is freedom in this blessed sonship. Until the coming of Jesus, the heirs were under tutelage and bondage, and differed nothing from servants; but when Jesus came, and redeemed the heirs they became dead to the law by the body of Christ, and are alive unto God in and by the resurrection of Jesus; and if we be Christ's then are we Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Christ is greater than all. Therefore to be in Christ guarantees all the blessings. If God give you Christ, how shall he not with him also freely give you all things? The faith of Christ was prominent and conspicuous in Abraham, who against hope believed in hope—who staggered not at the deadness of Sarah's womb—who withheld not his only son Isaac from sacrifice, thereby approaching in the type to show that God would give his only begotten son through love to redeem sinners.

The faith of Abraham embraced the promises and held them, counted those that be not as though they were, accounting that God was able to raise Isaac from the dead, and he received him in the figure, and saw Jesus. This precious faith sees beyond and above the law which is the ministration of death; looks beyond the dreadful wilderness of death, and beholds the land of promise. It also works by love, and therefore overcomes the world, and lays hold on the hope set forth in the gospel, and receives the end of faith, even the salvation of the soul.

Abraham is called the father of the faithful because it dwelt so wonderfully in him. To be blest therefore, so as to dwell in his bosom, and to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, is to dwell in all the promises of God, and in the fullness of the gospel, in its liberty as free-born, in its fullness, as in Christ Jesus. These blessings are freely given to them that are in Christ Jesus, "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear brother in Christ—I will try to write a few lines to the Landmark, but through much fear and sense of weakness, as I feel utterly unable to write, anything that would be of any benefit to the people of God and that would glorify him. Of myself I know I can't do it but my desire is that I may be aided by his holy spirit in this feeble effort. Other wise I know it will be no good. for in the flesh dwells no good thing.

The subject in view I feel to be too great for me. The word faith I understand to be the opposite in meaning to unbelief, as the apostle said, "It was the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. While it is the gift of God and possessed by every one that is born of the spirit, is there not practical faith exercised by God's children aside from belief in the doctrine of God our Saviour? Paul said" Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ let us go on to perfection, and not laying against the foundation of repentance from dead works and of faith toward God." Is not all our rebellion and disobedience the fruit of unbelief, and does not this same break out into idolatry? "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Is not this the same practical faith? If so then deliverance follows from the traps and snares of this world. We understand that the word faith mentioned many times in the New Testament means to rely on God's promises, as it reads "Abraham staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief but was strong in the faith, giving glory to God."

The apostle said, "The Lord was not slack in his promises as some men count slackness." Are not all his children witnesses of this truth? Our Lord and Master said it is your father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom and also that all these (temporal) things shall be added unto you. Then do not all his promises embrace all things for the welfare of his children, both temporal and spiritual? "And he said unto his disciples take no thought for your life what ye shall eat, neither for the body what ye shall put on, the life is more than meat and the body more than raiment." Then it is wrong to have doubts and fears of our own body and life (which I think Jesus meant) what can be the comparison when we contract with a wicked set of wicked men in New York to take care of our wives and children after our death? How many times have we seen deliverance in the midst of poverty, the wolf being as it were at the door? How can we go off in to these practices after having seen the mighty hand of God filling the cruse with oil and the barrel with meal? O that the dear children of God flee these things which certainly have the appearance of idolatry. Paul wrote to Timothy, "But thou O man of God flee these things and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, patience, love and meekness. 1 Timothy, 6-11: (read preceding verse,) faith being one of the things for Timothy to follow after, is this not obedience to the same faith in staggering not at the promises of God through unbelief? Also to follow after patience? Surely this was also important for Timothy. I understand this to have the same meaning of taking no thought for our life and body in the sense that Jesus spake to his disciples, to wait patiently on the Lord knowing that what he has promised he will also perform.

Many of God's children are poor in this world's goods and no doubt according to his wise purpose they should live by faith as to temporal as well as spiritual blessing, being some of the many trials we are called upon to pass through in this world. Some of the "All things that worketh together for good that love him."

May the God of all grace help our unbelief that we may be enabled to trust him for all things.

Brother Gold, if there is in your judgment anything in this letter that will offend any of the dear brethren and sisters I feel sure that you will do me the favor of not publishing, for if I know myself I don't want to say or do anything that will offend anybody, but trust what I have said is in love and with a sincere desire for the peace of Jerusalem. Yours in hope,

H. A. BYINGTON.

Macon, Ga.

Elder P. D. Gold:-

Dear Brother—Will you please give your view of 2nd Cor., 5:1. Does that mean that we know we are a child of God? If so, what is the meaning of the 7th verse, and the 24th verse of the 8th chapter of Romans? I hope you will give your views for my edification. I have to confess that I don't know that I'm a child of God. I sometimes hope that I am, and then I see so much vileness in myself that I fear that I am not a child of God. Is it possible that God's children have as many wicked and foolish thoughts as I do, and act so many of them? I know one thing, I love the Primitive Baptists. The apostle tells us that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. It gives me consolation, but if the brethren could see me as I see myself, they would not put any confidence in me. If I am a child of God, I am the weakest of all. My hope is very small at times. I ask an interest in your prayers.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

N. T. COX.

REMARKS.

Is it by faith we know we have this building of God. See 4th chapter 17th and 18th verses of 2nd Cor., connecting with this scripture. Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, works for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look—not to the things which are seen—but to the things which are unseen. All the things that are seen are temporal, will soon perish; but the things which are unseen are eternal. Therefore, it we by faith look to the things which are unseen, these temporal things, such as afflictions, are but as a moment. It can be known only by faith that we have a building of God, a house not made of hands.

The further reason why and how we know it is that in this body, this earthly house, we groan, being burdened. Those who are satisfied with this earthly house, or with self, and do not feel burdened on account of sin, have no desire for a better house, nor any evidence of the same. It is such as groan in this earthly house, this bondage of sin, that cry out, "Oh wretched man that I am!" that have any true hope of deliverance, or any desire therefor. Such as are plagued with vile thoughts, and when they would do good evil is present, and such as do the evil they would not, are the ones that groan in this tabernacle, and therefore have hope for deliverance. They are the ones that walk by faith. They cannot take one step by sight, nor can they see the hope they have. When they examine themselves there is no sign they can see to encourage them to think from anything they do that they are christians. They cannot therefore say they know they are christians, but can only say they hope they are from such evidence. If in this life only we have hope, we would be of all men most miserable.

Certain signs follow them that believe. One is, we know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren. He that loveth is born of God.

The Lord generally did not tell his people directly they were his children, but usually so marked his sheep that others could know them. His teaching was to make them self-aborrent —watch, take heed, examine themselves, beware—to make the timid hopeful, to stir up the careless and indifferent to diligence, to strengthen the feeble knees, to warn the curious or inquisitive about others to be more concerned about their own case. It is not allowed in the kingdom of heaven for any of its subjects to rest, save in the fullness of a crucified redeemer.

P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold—Dear and much loved brother in the Lord: What is gained by adding to faith, and what is lost by failing to add, as Peter teaches in his writings. The Lord's people have this faith by the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, or by gift as much as anything else. I hope all the brethren that write for our paper will show by the scriptures what is lost to the child of God by disobedience. Now I know God works in his children to will and to do of his good pleasure; but they don't all obey. Some fall, some depart from the faith, some sow to the flesh; some are blind and cannot see far off; some build with wood, hay and stubble, and their works are burned, and they suffer loss: some build on the sand and their house or work is destroyed. We would love for all the people of God to see and realize what a fearful thing it is to disobey our God. Farewell. Pray for me and mine.

Yours in hope

Church, Ashe County, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—Enclosed you will find a letter from sister Azubah Lee, that is very rich in many points of doctrine. Brother Gold I have been to see sister Lee and she has such a great gift I felt too little to try to preach in her presence. Her letter has been of much comfort to me—poor and vile—and I send it to you thinking it may comfort some other little one as it did poor me.

Hoping your health is good, I remain your little brother I hope in bonds. Pray for me dear brother.

A. D. JOHNSON.

Benson, N. C.

Elder A. D. Johnson:—

Dearly beloved brother, united by the sacred ties of human fellowship—Perfectly blank in feeling as being unable to write a word of interest or comfort worth the raising of this pen but as promised will make the attempt. While you are aware no water can be drawn from an empty well, therefore you cannot expect any words of mine to be of interest as I feel as void of understanding and so useless as an empty well. But ever since I met you and brother Spencer I desire you to know that the hours I was blessed with your presence was of unusual enjoyment to me, feeling that you both are representatives of the widow's vessel of oil which was multiplied so that all the vessels even the empty ones were filled and still there remained oil in the vessel. Oh! how my heart overflowed with joy to meet you. At the same time such a sense of vileness and my destitute condition made me feel I was too sinful to raise my eyes to behold the pleasant countenances of one who I felt to be so superior in spiritual strength as you are. Oh could I have fallen at your feet and have given you an understanding of my vile sinful self you would never have greeted me with the brotherly kindness you did. Oh how much I enjoyed those few hours we were assembled together and how sad the parting when you left us as I had hoped to hear you converse more on the wonderful works and blessings of our crucified Saviour. I feel you were so rich in that knowledge which the world cannot give, but taught only of the Lord and that I might be able to catch a few more crumbs. Ever since I received a hope and united with this people I feel to be chosen generation I always desired to eagerly listen when assembled with any who I felt were so rich in the knowledge and experience and hear them talk of it. But pardon me dear brother for I feel so little and ignorant in writing to one who is so much my superior but at the same time I have a great love for you because your feelings are so similar to mine, and dear brother should you see the whiteness of the robe you wear as I see it you would become exalted.

The following morning after you left us I awoke between 4 and 5 o'clock and you were on my mind representing a perfect sweet toned instrument and having had an opportunity of having some of the sweet chords of music which send peace and glad tidings to cheer the sin-sick soul which flamed my cold lonely feelings with a burning desire to hear more of such as I know you are able to give. Dear brother do you ever meditate on how some enjoy the peaceable fruits of righteousness while others are continually cast down and in the valley of humiliation? But I often think such a state is all I deserve to keep me from becoming vain and puffed up; as you are aware that in this world's treasures some who are poor would be very proud if possessed of the world's goods others are allowed. So we must try to bear with patience and considering we know not our needs, trust him who has promised to be with us in the sixth trouble and not to forsake us in the seventh and will preserve us blameless in the sight of an all wise Father.

Oh, the completeness of Jehovah's guidance. He will be with us when we turn to the right or to the left and though we be as children of an earthly parent we are often prone to think we know how to walk while there is still a lingering sense within which often reveals to us our weakness. Often at times when we go wrong we are made to realize and bless his holy name for his guidance seeing his strength is so perfect and our weakness so great. To this man will I look, saith Jehovah, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit. Oh what a promise to us who are as those feeling so poor and cast down. But I am so prone to give way to the flesh and its desires I am made to abide in doubts.

I consider these promises to represent the round of a ladder where we are compelled to climb feeling our weakness and deficiency, while the rounds are not so broad as to give us perfect rest and assurance. So thereby we keep striving to climb higher, for narrow is the way and straight the gate that leads to life eternal while wide the gate and broad the way that leads to destruction.

How different from those who profess to be saved and sanctified? Would not poor doubting unworthy sinners feel rich if they were satisfied they were safe, with no more doubts to cause them to fear? Why is this class not fair representatives of the rich which we are told of: "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven." So I consider this class that feels so rich in Christ saved and sanctified with nothing to fear or affect them. No, these rich are not saved by grace through faith. If already saved no need of faith as they are to their journey's end and have no need of faith as faith will be done away with when safe in the arms of Jesus. As faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, then this rich class are surely not saved by grace through faith if they have seen the reward and have it in possession.

My letter is getting lengthy and is a fair comparison of myself, composed of ignorance and mistakes and needful to be ashamed of, but as good as you could expect if you knew the weakness of the writer. But dear brother cast the mantle of charity over its imperfections and remember it is only from a poor vile sinner feeling too unworthy to lisp his holy name who is ever guiding my erring steps.

Asking your prayers at a throne of grace and hoping to hear from you at an early date I am yours unworthily,

AZUBAH LEE.

Dunn, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I have just been reading the dear old Landmark, and it has been a source of much comfort to me especially your writing about the necessity of faith. What a blessing it is to have faith, and to be blessed with such a gift. I call it a gift because it came from God. It did not cost us anything. If the children of God were not blessed with that gift O! how often it seems to me that they would be drowned in perdition. I say this from experience. If I had no faith why the evil spirit would utterly destroy my peace and consolation. For several months I have had to contend with fiery temptation though I gave them room to come in, and it greatly troubled me, and especially in the latter. This morning I felt somewhat enlightened to the glory of God, (though yet weak from the worry) and was blessed to enjoy the Landmark January 15. Though I truly hoped in all my trials that I was trusting in an all-wise and mighty God, who is able to save Israel and the three Hebrews from the flames.

The morning of my deliverance, which was my birthday June 7, 1902, after I felt my sins forgiven and in a state of rejoicing I felt like I had received the most wonderful gift that ever could be bestowed on any one, because all my sins were pardoned, and Christ was mine and I his. And the Lord showed me on that morning to the right hand was peace and happiness, and to the left was trouble and confusion, and saw if I followed the right and obeyed his commandments that peace and happiness would be my lot, and if I followed not his ways it would be going to the left and destruction and misery, would be my lot. So I have witnessed both. When I obeyed the Lord it would be a spiritual feast and great rejoicing in his love, and I would feel to have the answer of a good conscience. Though when I felt that the Lord gave me the mind to go to hear preaching and to assemble myself with the people of God, and I gave down under a little trial and rebelled against my God, then woe and misery is upon me. No one knows but the Lord and I the suffering I have endured on account of not assembling myself when I felt that the Lord did lead me. The scripture says when we prepare not ourselves to do the will of God we are beaten with many stripes, I have experienced that enough to be true besides reading it so plain in the scriptures. I feel to say to those who may chance to read this and especially to those outside of the church who claim to have a hope in Jesus Christ, if you ever felt it your duty to go to the Old School Baptists, and relate what the Lord has done for you, why not take your cross and go, it would be a great comfort to you, and you would feel to have the answer of a good conscience toward God. I thought at one time before I joined that it was out of all reason for me to join and be baptized as I was such a sinner, and was not fit to dwell among those good people, though the God of Israel showed me it would be a great comfort and peace to obey his calling, and which I found it to be much greater enjoyment than I expected. It seems to be too great a burden to undertake the task, though if you go it is all removed, and you can look back and see the hand of God with you, I feel to say if all that are in the church would come nearer to the scripture, I do not believe there would be so much coldness in Zion, being faithful in all things. As for myself I know I fall short of acting faithful in every thing, and it makes coldness and gives room for Satan to come with cunning to do his work in Israel. It is better for us to suffer for doing right than wrong. As we often receive great persecution for Jesus' sake, after all we have reasons of rejoicing by obeying the truth, as when it is not obeyed we are cast in outer darkness, beside the stripes of the rod we receive. I have written according to my feelings, and a part of what I believe which I learned by experience.

Brother Gold, I have a desire to see you and hear you preach, to see your countenance which shines with the love of Jesus. It is a comfort to me to have the pleasure of seeing you as your look is meek and lowly as the Lamb of God.

From a sister I hope in eternal life.

Yours in bonds of truth,

M. ALICE BLALOCK.

Mr. Gold—I feel a desire to write to you about what I hope to be the dealings of the Lord with me. When I was a boy I would often think of dying, but the thought would soon pass away. I went on in worldly pleasures. In the year 1898 my step mother died. She called me to her and told me to meet her in heaven. I went on doing the best I could, and thought because I did not do and say things that I had seen members of the church do that I was getting along very well. But the dear Lord showed me what an awful sinner I was. I felt that I was worse than any one else. I had lain down, but I arose and everything seemed dark before me. Again I lay down and was endeavouring to pray to the Lord to have mercy on me a poor sinner. Suddenly my prayer was turned into praising the Lord for his goodness to me. I was happy, and felt then if I died I would be saved; but I do not feel that way all the time. At times I fear that I have not been born again.

I love to be with christian people and hear them talk. I love the old Baptists. They are so good and kind to each other.

Please remember me in your prayers.

Please give your views on 1st Tim. 5: 8, "But if any provide not for his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel."

A friend.

REMARKS—Infidels or heathen, as religious teachers call them, and especially such teachers as claim great sanctity, and compass sea and land to make proselytes, and teach the people that if you give them money you are giving it to the Lord, yet these infidels or heathens are careful and prompt to provide for their own households by laboring for their families. This is so obvious, natural and reasonable a duty that even the heathen will observe this obligation.

People therefore that neglect their helpless or aged parents by not providing for them, and men or women that spend their time in lecturing and begging money instead of staying at home and laboring for their families, are worse than heathen.

If a preacher goes off to preach the gospel, and not to beg for money, and when he is at home labors as Paul did to support them that were with him, and covets no man's gold or silver or apparel, then he is supported in his conduct by the word of God, Acts 20: 28-35.

P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold, dear brother—I am an old man, in my 87th year an old Baptist by profession having been baptized in 1835 and ordained in 1847. I knew of no difference among Baptists until four or five years after uniting with the church. The church professed to take the scriptures as a creed independent in its organization, holding the principle of God's sovereignty, man's condemnation under the law, the necessity of regeneration, the vicarious redemption of Christ, the impartation of divine life by the Holy Spirit, effectual calling and divine preservation by a living faith to eternal salvation.

The essential ideas were that man by nature is destitute of the knowledge of God, condemned under the law and redeemed only by the blood of Christ, the knowledge of which fact are revealed in the gospel, is made known to, and made personal to the individual soul by the teaching and witness of the Holy Spirit.

Such was and still is my creed to-day, and these facts I have endeavored to set forth and preach as embodied in the injunction to every one called of God "to preach—not himself—but Christ Jesus the Lord." This is first taught to every believing soul by the spirit of God, and a dispensation of the word of God is given to every one taught of God and commissioned by him to preach Christ only, as considered and witnessed by the authority of the church.

I had some peculiar experiences and trials as regarding preaching, but was somewhat aided by the advice of my first wife's father, who was told by her that I was in some trouble. He said, "Leonard don't worry about this matter, if the Lord wants you to preach the church will find it out." I did not tell the church but they told me and called for my ordination.

But of this I had not designed to write to you. All the actors of those days have long since gone home. For of the church in those days it could be said: "How those christians love one another." From all I see in the "Landmark," "Footprints," "Signs of the times," and other prints I am often led to cry, how those christians hate one another!

Election: 'tis a glorious theme,

Infinite wisdom devised the plan;
The only way of redemption
To save rebellious man.

Then we have predestination,

To execute the wondrous design;
With power it wrought salvation
All of God, the divine.

In all things there must be a cause or reason, then a plan or way, then a commandment to execute the design.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." In his wisdom he foresaw the fall of man, and loved his own with an everlasting love.

He said "let there be light, and there was light." He said let us make man in our own image. There was none to counsel or advise him, but there are some to agree with him.

God saw the light that it was good and he divided the light from the dark ness. Has the night any right to complain? Seeing the earth was without form or void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep. This we understand to be election manifested by the greater light which rules the day. And there is a lesser light which rules the night, but it is only reflected light of the sun. The lesser light, the moon, can be seen by night and day, while the greater light can only be seen by day. Night has never seen the sun, neither has any worldly man, even seen the "Son of Righteousness," but he can see his light reflected in his people, the elect, for he is shining in them all the time. The man does not always occupy the same position towards the sun, and does not always reflect a full light, which I think represents our dark seasons, but Jesus is in view to the believer always.

The man who sleeps all day and is awake at night would not know where to look for the sun when told there is one.

We understand election is the wisdom of God manifested by the light of his people.

The Holy Ghost the third person in the Trinity, is the executive officer to carry into effect the design. He visits Mary, the virgin, a figure of love and mercy, and says, "Thou shalt bring forth a son and thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins."

So his people are saved by the Holy Ghost; his loving Son paying the sacrifice. His people are saved, justice is satisfied, and his grace and truth are in them to sing praise to his name forever, Amen.

J. J. BECK.

Sandy River, Va.

Elder L. H. Hardy:

My Dear Sir—With pleasure my mind reverts to the time when you were here and preached Jesus in all his perfection as the way, the truth, and the life of the children of regeneration, and I hope the way may soon open for you to come again. We would be more than glad if you could this summer, and if you should see the way open do not wait for a fifth Sunday as any other Sunday that suits you will do. I feel poor and destitute as to divine things and have nothing to offer as a sacrifice to put away sin. "The sacrifice of the wicked is abomination: how much more when he bringeth it with a wicked mind." My mind seems unholy. One of old said "Will the the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil." No doubt you say so too. You also can say. "The Lord hath made bare his holy arm:" that he sent his immaculate son to this sin cursed world and he died as the only sacrifice for the sins of his bride, and he arose for her justification. The eternal Jehovah said by the Prophet Isaiah, behold my servant shall deal prudently. He shall be exalted, and extolled and be very high. In his exaltation he says to the prisoners, go forth; to them that are in darkness, show yourselves. "They shall feed in the ways and their pastures shall be in all high places. They shall not hunger nor thirst; neither shall the heat nor sun smite them, for he that has mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them." What a blessing the poor and needy have when they are led to those high and heavenly pastures and made to drink from the springs of God's eternal love. At times they almost forget their poverty. The Lord declared by the prophet, "And I will make all my mountain ways, and my high places shall be exalted." All the hostile powers combined cannot hush the voice of the bridegroom nor close the ear of the bride. At times, yea often she feels forsaken and alone in the wilderness, with no arm to save nor eye to pity, when at a time unexpected to her, she seems to hear a voice saying: "O Judah keep thou solemn feast, perform thy vows, for the wicked shall no more pass through thee, he is utterly cut off." Here it seems the prayer of the dear Saviour is answered, when he said, "Father I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." Perhaps I have wearied you by quoting scripture and said nothing interesting. It seems though I can see a beauty in those scriptures that my feeble powers cannot express. I hope you will give your views on them through the Landmark, also your views on the first verse and eighth chapter of Revelations.

This leaves us all in usual health and I hope you are well. Sarah joins me in expressing kindest regards to you, and we both hope you will come to see us again soon. All Baptists that heard you preach here expressed themselves as being highly pleased.

Truly yours,

THOMAS LAMBERT.

EXHORTATION.

Elder P. D. Gold:

My Dear Brother—I feel inclined to write again for the many dear readers of the Landmark. I know that in and of myself I am weak and sinful and my human nature totally depraved but I do believe I have been made by the power of God to feel the great need of the injunction of the apostle, "Pray without ceasing." I have felt this more and more as I go on my pilgrim journey.

I have been a member of the Primitive Baptists 23 years and it has been a home indeed to me. They have borne with me among them. I have found mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters. There I have found rest, and I feel to say with Ruth, "Entreat me not to leave thee nor to return from following after thee." I love to be with God's dear people and hear them preach, sing and pray. This is the city set upon a hill to give light to the world. But dear kindred are we letting the light that we profess to have, shine when we take hold of and go into everything just as the world does? We have come out of the world and put on Christ, and are we walking in him or have we become entangled again with the yoke of bondage? Children let me tell you, I know this is our Father's house and I know the rules and regulations of the house as laid down in the 18, chapter of Matthew. I know when I am preaching that is truth, but it a hollow sound on account of the vessel it comes through being dusty and full of cobwebs on account of neglect of duty. I know all this and more. I know when the members are laying up treasures for themselves on earth, neglecting their pastors, the sick, and etc. Every child of God knows I am telling the truth when I say instead of the preachers and deacons doing their duty and the members as well by going to see the sick, singing and praying with them, some are actually having christian science practiced on them in one way or another. Oh, God show us and turn us from every evil way. Let us every one examine ourselves and see whether or not we are being governed by holy writ. If we are doing wrong we will surely suffer and if some one else is doing us wrong they will suffer. I owe no man, woman or child any harm but desire to do unto others as I would they should do unto me, and above all things on this earth I desire God's people united in love and good will—love which is of God, for God is love, and love produces good works. "He that loveth is born of God." Be ye faithful unto death and I will give you a crown of life.

WHAT IS RIGHT.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brethren and Sisters—I have for some time felt impressed to write and try to explain my feelings but being so imperfect and not knowing the impression is from the Lord, I have put it off until it seems I must write to relieve my mind, hoping the Lord will guide and direct me that I may not say anything that is not according to his will and pleasure.

Brothers and Sisters, I do not feel worthy to thus address you but there is one thing among the many I feel we should carefully and prayerfully consider and if any of the Lord's people think and believe as I do I would love to know it. This is what I want to know. Do we do right at communion meetings to stop service and go out and have dinner and then go in and continue service? Would it not be better to continue service until through and all that have dinner can eat and those that haven't any can return to their homes. Brethren do we not know that there are poor people who love to hear preaching and would stay until service closed but they can't provide dinner and have no way of carrying it so they have to go home before service is closed or do without dinner and wait until those who have dinner have finished eating and all go into the house together. Is there equality in this? Some who enjoy the services come from afar and they can't afford to stay at church so long as it makes them late getting home. I repeat would it not be much better to continue services until dismissed and then all those having dinner may eat and then they will not impose on those who haven't any.

Brethren can we not do without one meal a little while for Christ sake? When he was here on earth people continued with him three days fasting and they received a blessing, and what was written aforetime was written for our learning. Would that we could give more earnest heed and thus avoid so many slips. I do not feel worthy to write or even think of the duties of others for my manner of life troubles me more than anything in this world, but if I am not deceived I can see and feel that we, the Baptists are in a serious condition. we are not doing our duty, we are not faithful as we should be and I feel we are too slack, too negligent in regard to duties. Many are too worldly minded, so much so we think we can't spare the time to go out and meet our pastor on church meeting days. I believe it is as much our duty to attend as it is our pastor's, and suppose he did not attend regularly would we esteem him faithful? We should strive to meet him every time and remember too that it is our duty to administer to him as the Lord has prospered us and when we are guilty of this sin of omission we not only mistreat our pastor but we reject the blessing we receive in obedience. Christ said, "if you deny me I will also deny you and if ye be willing and obedient ye shall eat the good of the land, but if ye refuse and rebel ye shall be devoured by the sword for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." It is also our duty to visit the sick and afflicted and keep ourselves unspotted from the world. How many of us have a clear conscience in this? I haven't. We are too ready to postpone until tomorrow what we should do today. Still we know not what a day may bring forth and when we indulge in so much negligence, what may we look for but the rod, for because of these things cometh the wrath of God on the children of disobedience.

I notice in the Landmark that many subscribers are behind. Are these too not negligent? The Landmark does not cost one much but when many are behind think how much this amounts to and how unpleasant and discouraging it is to Grother Gold, I hope all who are behind will send him what is due as it will relieve him and I know you will enjoy it much better. No wonder we complain of so much coldness and barrenness in our midst when we neglect our duty so. My brethren these things ought not os to be. Oh, that the Lord would create within us clean hearts, a right spirit, lead us in the way of righteousness, deliver us from evil and enable us to love and serve him more and better is my prayer for Christ's sake.

Brother Gold, I have written this to relieve my mind, do with it as you think best. A sinner saved by grace if saved at all.

REBECCA SMITH.

Reidsville, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—Enclosed you will find a letter from brother Moore, which has been a great comfort to me, and thinking it might be some to others, I send it to you to publish if you see fit. If not, won't you please send it back to me.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,

P. J. MADRY.

Scotland Neck, N. C.

Dear Sister Madry—We received your nice present on last Friday and can assure you it was much appreciated. Such tokens of love and kind remembrance are both humbling and encouraging. We hope to feel thankful to our glorious Redeemer that our lot is cast among those, who are his faithful children. While we have ever felt poor and weak and unworthy, yet we have been in experience taught that God reigns on high, but never confines his goodness to the sky; but his mercy reaches our misery, and his grace our guilt and that he knows the steps we take, and is not only leading his people, but teaching them while strangers and pilgrims here below. He has prepared a place for them in that bright and happy home, of which we only have a foretaste now. But at his call will enter in the full fruition of his eternal glory and rest where sickness and sorrow, pain and death can never enter. Yes, it will be a sweet and glorious rest.

God showed you in that vision of the Bible on your heart, that you had the substance of its whole teaching in your soul, and should not be dismayed or discouraged. We think of you often and our hearts go out to the God of mercies, and the good physician who we know is able to heal all diseases and who has never lost a single case, for his grace is sufficient. All things are under his divine control. Diseases are his servants. Out of the depths of woe we cry unto him, and never cry in vain. He took Daniel out of the horrible pit, and put him on a rock and a new song in his mouth, made Job's last days his best, as in the case with all his children. When he speaks storms and darkness and tempest and raging seas obey, diseases and death are gone, and the victory is already his, purchased of his blood, and we shall bask in unalloyed bliss with him in the chimes of unsullied day. This precious faith excludes all the works of man and self righteousness.

We desire the blessing of God upon you and your dear precious children, who have always been so kind to us, and if we never meet any more here below, we hope to meet in Heaven where our precious Saviour is the heights of glory of that eternal abode, home indeed.

EPHRIAM.

"And the name of the second called lie Ephriam: For God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction." Gen. 41: 52.

Once last year I was coming up on the train and was reading this part of my Bible when this text was forcibly ushered into my own experience and I wept for joy. My joy became very nearly unspeakable and I turned my face to the window that the other passengers might not see my emotion, and that I might rejoice before the Lord alone. This morning this circumstance is forcibly in my mind.

Joseph was the oldest son of Jacob and his much beloved wife, Rachel, for whom he kept sheep and served for fourteen years. His love for her was so great that those years appeared to him but a few days.

To me this love appears to be very great so much so that it didn't abate in the least when he knew that he must take Leah also in order to be the husband of his loved one.

The love of our Lord for his bride was so strong that he does not hesitate to do it, because he must take the body of flesh in order to accomplish the full work of salvation.

Leah was the cause of all the crosses in the house of Jacob, and caused a perpetual warfare. The flesh is the cause of our trouble and perpetual warfare. Leah was the mother of Judah, the lion tribe through which our Lord came. The Saviour must come in the flesh, be born of woman in order to fight the battles of his bride and overcome every enemy. He must learn obedience by the things that he suffers and to suffer he must be in the flesh. There is where the battle is fought, the victory won and his people receive the knowledge of the warfare, the victory, and the earnest of the spoils. There is where they learn the fellowship of the suffering of Christ, bearing the image of the earthly and receive the evidence that they shall reign with him and bear the image of the heavenly. No law must be violated. Even the law of Syria must be obeyed, by Jacob or his marriage will be unlawful and his children bastards and bondmen. He is free and so must his children be. Thus he obeys the law and purchases his wives from under it and sets all his posterity free, even before the first one was born.

Our Lord, in covenant, sets his children free even when there were none of them and his delight was with the sons of men. There his life became their life and in this life they were in sure and an indissoluble unity with him. When he actually came and entered into the flesh it was but the fulfilling of that blessed eternal covenant that the liberty of his bride should be made known to her and that she should enter into the experience of and receive the benefits of that blessed covenant relation with her husband.

The love that Jacob had for Rachel was the cause of his marriage to Leah that he fulfilled the law to marry Rachel. Even so the love of the Lord for his bride was the cause of his coming in the flesh, but his coming in the flesh was the fulfilling of the covenant in which his love to his bride is manifested to her.

Joseph was Rachel's first born in just as our Jesus is the first born in the church of God so that she is the church of the first born. He is the first fruits of the harvest, and as he is so shall every sheaf of the harvest be.

Joseph was, through their enmity to him, sold into Egypt by his brethren. He had done nothing worthy of this evil treatment, but it was God's way of sending him before them to preserve much people alive and to make special provision for Israel against the days of famine, which he had appointed to bring in all the land.

Our Lord did nothing evil to cause the hatred of the Jews against him, so that they should so cry out against him, but it was God's way of providentially saving this world, and of giving the special favor of salvation by grace to spiritual Israel, who are saved altogether by that grace which was given us in him before the foundation of the world. (The word world does not mean the gospel world, but the cosmos, or the whole creation.)

In this separation from his father's house Joseph was sorely tried and very deeply afflicted, but he never forgot the love he had for his brethren who hated him. Our dear Lord never forgot his Father's house though they pierced him with many sorrows and brought him down in Gethsemane sweating as it were great drops of blood falling to the ground. It was for them that he so suffered.

Ephraim was not the special fruit in which Joseph was rejoicing. He was just as thankful for Manasses and he being the first born Joseph wanted to set him at the head of his house. This shows that there was more than Ephraim here. However the blessings of God which he had poured out on Joseph caused this son to be called Ephraim. In Joseph the Lord had brought the two lands Egypt and Canaan together therefore this son was called Ephraim or twin-land. Egypt was raised up to be the place where Israel should be blessed. Here was the land of Joseph's afflictions and the land of his fruitfulness and prosperity.

Here in the flesh was the land of our Lord's afflictions, the land of his fruitfulness and the land of his prosperity. It is to us the land of redemption by him and the land wherein we are brought to know the goodness of God and the faithfulness of his holy eye and arm. Here we learn of him who for us became meek and lowly in heart and was hurt by the iron bands of sin, which were put on him.

Joseph's going down and his exaltation was the salvation of Israel. Even the humiliation of our Lord and his resurrection is the salvation of spiritual Israel both for time and for eternity.

This same line followed Israel for in after years the more they were persecuted the more they increased so that it appears that "persecution was the seed of increase." This was wonderfully manifested with the saints just after our Lord's ascension into glory. As they were persecuted in one city they fled to another and as they went they preached. Thus the word of God increased and the saints were multiplied and the word of God grew strong in the land.

The increase of the church today may not be in numbers. The best increase is the growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. This renews the heart, revives the spirit and brings forth the shoutings for the headstones, crying grace, grace unto it. This is a true revival of spiritual religion in the church and it is felt by the church. When these come in the church it is apt to prove to be a beginning of a healthy increase in numbers in membership.

Also my experience has been that the higher the afflictions of persecution rage against an individual saint the more fruitful he is in the work of the Lord. To deny oneself and submit to the stroke of the sword in persecution is altogether against the powers of human nature, but it is enjoined on every gospel minister for a bishop must be no striker. Then for one to take up the sword and strike, disqualifies him as a minister. To bear the burden of afflictions and persecutions show the fruit of the spirit of God in his servant and he is made to rejoice as he sees Ephraim born in his own experience and labors in the house of the Lord.

The Lord bless his afflicted poor to rejoice in afflictions.

In hope and love,
L. H. HARDY.

Resolutions of Respect.

Where as God in his providence has been pleased to remove from our body by death our beloved sister Rosa King, who has been for 50 years a faithful and consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church at Wilmington, N. C., and possessed all the traits that constitute a lovely christian.

Resolved:

1.—Therefore while we are grieved at our loss we believe it to be her eternal gain, and we bow in humble submission to the will of God who is too wis to err, and too good to be unkind.

2.—That a copy of these resolutions be inscribed upon our church record, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy sent to Elder P. D. Gold to be published in Zion's Landmark.

"NOT FOR YOU TO KNOW."

Even the apostles who had walked and talked with Jesus for three years were apparently, more concerned about the kingdom of Christ as established and affecting them nationally or naturally, than spiritually. They like we, wanted their church and doctrine to make a good time for them in this world. No matter how much Jesus had said to the contrary, they still hoped his kingdom would be national, and that they would reap benefits from it for this life. Two of them had already requested a place of high personal honor—one on his right, the other on his left hand—believing he would establish and mount the national throne of Israel. Ah, me, how mistaken! We, too, want to reap timely benefits in connection with this kingdom. We want it a time of honor and rejoicing—a season of spiritual self-assertion and triumph in body to the convincing dismay of the world. Ah, me, how mistaken! How we shudder to face the fact that "if in this life only we have hope, we are of all men most miserable;" and that from the fact experienced by us that as killed to the love of sin; as dead to the world and all its pleasures and benefits as fleeting vanities, we can enjoy them no more: then truly if hope was confined to this world and life we would be of all men most miserable. And still we would not as the church appear to the world as its filii. And that when we know that to be a friend to the world is to be an enemy to Christ. James 4: 4. Therefore, the very fact that any professed is proof it is not of Christ.

Then, while the lesson is plainly written, how hard to learn that the church is "chosen in the furnace of affliction:" Isaiah 48:10—that "in this world you shall have tribulation"—that this life in this mortal body is God's time or season of trial by affliction, while all their peace and hope is in Jesus Christ. Lord bless is he that abides—whose hope, as an anchor, has entered into that within the veil above, not below. For as Jesus was, in this world, so shall be his disciples: no worldly pomp or display was sought by him. See him hated, reviled, defamed, and with his disciples ignored as the off-scourings of all things; and then his trial and tragic end endured so meekly and silently: no worldly ambition here, and because "My kingdom is not of this world, else would my servants fight." John 18: 36. Then neither should we as his disciples, or church, scramble for worldly place preferment, or anything.

But if we cannot have this or that right here and now, how prone we are to wonder and enquire when will be God's time or season for them? When will there come a time of refreshing from the Lord? When will the time come for Zion to arise and shine in that the glory of the Lord is risen upon her? When will this long cold winter season pass from the church? When will come the time of spring or the summer season, when the long imprisoned revelations shall burst their icy bands and burst into bloom with the singing of birds, etc. When will the man of sin be taken away? When the time for Babylon to fall. When shall this or that prophecy be fulfilled? How long before all the kingdoms of the world shall become the kingdoms of our God? When is the time of the end—the restitution of all things? Then personally, while we read "all our times" are in God's hand, we still would ask of the time and season for this or that event that must come; for instance, shall it be a time of light and joy or a season of gladness, when I die.

Jesus answered all such when, before his ascension his disciples asked him, "wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" he replied, "it is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the father hath put in his own power." Acts 1: 6. Then why should we waste time and neglect our immediate work—which, if well done, would keep us well employed—to look after that God only can do.

The holy, almighty, all wise—the Lord God omnipotent reigns. Let us leave these times and seasons in his hands, and do the work he has commanded us—what our hands find to do, and trust him to do his work.

I looked over this turbulent world ploughed as it were by the heavy thunderbolts of God's wrath, his unusual judgment falling in famine, plague, pestilence, sword, dire disasters, war and rumors of war, and sorely dismayed, searched a time or season to favor Zion in vain. Then the above thoughts came, and stayed and comforted me."

"It is not for you to know the times and seasons" in God's power, but that Zion's God reigns, and not a sparrow falls without him. "Say to Zion, thy God reigneth." That is enough.

P. D. G.

ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION

A friend requests my view of Mark 13:14 and 17 and 18 verses of same chapter, "But when ye shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet standing where it ought, (let him that readeth under?

stand,) then let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains."

Prophesy goes before and tells that which shall be whether good or bad. One class of mankind holds that all things are fixed of old, and shall come to pass according to that purpose: and while prophesy does not utter its voice concerning all events, yet those it refers not to are as fixed and as certain of occurrence as those that are named. While others deny this view of the matter, and contend that blind chance forbids any power unalterable in itself causing all things to occur according to a fixed purpose.

Men can very easily differ on questions they do not understand, and what is the subject that we fully comprehend? It should be easy to confess that I do not understand a matter, and therefore my words should be few on that matter.

The prophet Daniel had foretold of the days Jesus was expounding. The subject was the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem. When Jesus said there shall not be left one stone upon another of these great buildings, this caused great astonishment among the disciples who asked him to tell them when these things should be, and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?

Jews require signs. It is true that signs herald many events, while others are not thus foretold: but the wise take heed to these things, and blest are those that heed to warnings. Jesus cautioned them to take heed lest any man deceive you. Why? For many shall come in his name saying I am Christ, and shall deceive many. Look in the present day at the lo heres and the lo thers. Go not after them.

Wars and rumors of wars are no sign of the end. There shall be pestilences, famines, earthquakes and etc., but these are not the sign of the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem; yet it should be in that generation. Many should hate the followers of Jesus, and they should be delivered up, beaten and persecuted by the rulers for a testimony against these rulers. But the end is not yet. However, the time will come and the sign should appear. When ye shall see the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet standing where it ought not, then let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains. This abomination that makes so many desolate is the Roman army. Rome was then the mistress of the World, and had in great cruelty overridden and made desolate. It was a most wicked kingdom in ravages because it was stronger than any other kingdom on earth, and full of pride, gluttony, oppression and idolatry.

It was a matter of history that the Roman army invaded the land of Judea and besieged Jerusalem some years after the crucifixion of Christ, and during the siege gave opportunity to all Jews that desired to flee from Jerusalem to do so, and that the christians all believing what Jesus had told them used this opportunity and made their escape. Jesus tells them to pray that their flight be not in the winter, as it would be so much worse a time of the year for a flight and that it be not on the Sabbath day when one could not make a long march on that day. Also he stated that it would be severe for those that gave suck or were with child to be in such a flight; of course it would be bad for mothers with infants to have to flee in such a time. It would be a time of great suffering. A calamity of untold horrors should sweep over the entire land as this destructive Roman army should destroy the country. Hence Jesus said, except those days of suffering should be shortened no flesh should be saved: but for the elect's sake those days should be shortened. So that even temporal mercies of the blessing of grace even should be measured out to men for the elect's sake.

All these things relate to a literal, temporal salvation from the horrors of the destruction of the doated because wicked city of Jerusalem that should be left desolate unto itself. Such had been the wickedness of Jerusalem that wrath unto the uttermost should be poured out upon that doomed city, but the mercy of God should provide deliverance for his own followers.

Not one of the stones of that temple should be left upon another—not a trace of the former covenant of works should be found in the gospel church. Not any part of Man's works could enter into the holy temple of God. It should be a regeneration. Old things should be done away, and behold all things should become new. The kingdom should be spiritual and new, heavenly and divine.

While the old worship of Rome should continue on the earth and the mystery of iniquity and the abomination of desolation should persecute and destroy, and the smoke of its false doctrines should fill the earth, and cause the nations of earth to worship and be drunken with the wine of her fornication, yet all Israel should flee to the mountains of God's holiness, and the days of suffering should be shortened so that every one written in the book should escape, and not a vestige of legal worship or man's doings should be found among the redeemed of the Lord.

The legal heavens of the Jewish nation and worship shall be at an end. Their sun or light of the temple worship shall be darkened, nor shall the moon of that worship give her light, and the stars or teachers of that kingdom shall all pass away, and outer darkness shall be the character of that people.

But Jesus in the glorious power and light of the true church of God shall shine and bless the people of God. For the Son of Righteousness shall rise with healing in his wings coming in the clouds of heaven, and he shall send his angels (ministers) and gather his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost parts of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.

The gospel was preached to every creature under heaven in Paul's day, and the sound of the gospel had gone to the ends of the earth. P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

NEWSOME TAYLOR.

Dear Brother Gold—I have been requested to write an obituary notice of Mr. Newsome Taylor, who was the son of Mr. P. G. Taylor and wife Mary, of Edgecombe county, N. C.

The subject of this notice was born on 16, November 1849, and departed this life April 27, 1908, making his stay on earth 58 years, six months and twenty-seven days. On the 20th of December 1866 he was wedded to Miss Ellen Brown (of said county). Unto this union 8 children were born of which one son Dempsey Taylor who lives near Rocky Mount survives him. The bereaved wife of the deceased will make her home with her son in the future.

Mr. Taylor united with the Primitive Baptist church at Hopeland (in the town of Whitakers) of which church his wife is a member on the first Saturday in August 1893, and was baptized on the following day by pastor of said church, Elder A. J. Moore of which church he lived a constant and faithful member until his death.

His death came not unexpected, as he was sick four or five weeks previous to his death. In his death his wife loses a dear companion, who was indeed a good provider and a faithful husband, and a good father, (as I have been told.) His wife whom I am in sympathy with will feel the loss greater than any one else. As his death will cause the home to be broken up and she will make her home with her son.

May the grace of God ever abide with the grief-stricken wife, and cause her to be reconciled to God's will is a sincere desire of the writer.

CELONIA FOSTER.

Dear Brother Gold—With a sad heart I write of the death of my dear wife. She departed this life September, 24, 1907. A few days before her death she had a dream. She saw a man standing by her bed that was a most lovely man who said his name is Jesus.

She united with the church at Pine on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1906, and was baptized the following day by Elder Broadway, and was the daughter of brother John and sister Tabitha Auman. She was the mother of four children, two living and two dead—half with her and half with me.

I am the only one of my family but what is working to help the Lord, but I am a beggar for his help. I was 17 years old went there for sport. So great was my before I heard a Primitive Baptist sermon preached. It condemned me of sin, for I trouble I went to work as I was taught until I saw I could do nothing and gave up all hope, I felt I must sink in woe, and misery. It seemed I was sinking down in the dark pit. The Lord appeared to me, lifted me out, placed me in the bright street of Jerusalem. I felt like I could praise him always for his mercy and goodness.

Your unworthy brother in Christ I hope.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Resolved 1. That while we should reverently bow to the providence of the Lord, we desire to state, that in the death of our beloved brother and pastor, Elder F. L.

Oakley, which occurred at his home in Caswell county, N. C., on first Sunday in January 1908, we have sustained a great loss; for he was held in high esteem; for his gift, Godly conversation, and good deportment made room for him.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Zion's Landmark for publication, and also a copy be sent to his wife, sister Oakley, to whom we extend our sympathy, and that a copy be spread on the church book.

Done by order of the church at her April-meeting, 1908.

JOHN W. GILLIAM.

ELDER JOSEPH J. JOYCE.

Dear Brother Gold—I will endeavor in my weak way to write a few lines in memory of dear brother Joyce.

Elder Joseph J. Joyce, was the son of Alex and Mary Joyce, was born in Henry county, Va., September, 26, 1852, and was married to Sarah E. Vernon November 3, 1870. Unto this union were born five sons and eight daughters, one son and six daughters having preceded him to the grave. He united with the Primitive church by experience at Buffalo, Saturday before the first Sunday in November, 1870, and was baptized next day by Elder Robert Hill, and began preaching in a short time.

He was a great favorite of the brethren and friends, and his preaching was much appreciated by all who knew him. While he did not travel far from home he made many sacrifices for the comfort of bereaved friends as well as his immediate family.

He was sick only about two weeks with pneumonia. While he suffered greatly he bore it with patience unto the end.

I was blest to be with him the last 15 hours of his life, and he preached and prayed about one hour before he died, and said there was only a small chord remaining, and when that was clipped he would be at rest, and appeared to be peaceful.

easy until the end came which was February 16, 1908.

While it seems hard for us to part with so faithful and so useful a preacher, yet we should be resigned to the Lord's will.

I will say to his dear wife and children brethren and friends, I truly believe he rests from his labors, and the time will not be long that we will have to remain here below. I desire to commend you to almighty God, and to the word of his grace for he alone can comfort our hearts, and fill the vacancy in our homes, and in the churches he so faithfully served.

Written by one who dearly loved him
 GEORGE L. ZIGLER.

WILLIAM C. TREVATHAN.

Brother Trevathan fell asleep at 2 o'clock a. m. June 18, 1908. He had long been a deacon at the Falls of Tar River. He was one of the loveliest men I have ever known. He was gentle but firm, kind but steadfast in the truth, heroic but pitiful, watching but forgiving, a peace maker. Surely he has purchased a good degree and great boldness in the faith.

What a faithful man was he to keep up correspondence. How we shall miss him.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Dear Brethren and Friends—Please allow me to state to you that if I have any spiritual gifts, that one of them is the composition of religious poems. I am a poor man as to this world's goods, and not able to meet the expense of placing my composition on the market by retail, neither soliciting agents. And when I say I can't leave an humble home and go out over the world to face the wanderer and the agent or travelling man has to bear the cost to get my works in the hands and home of my Baptist brethren, and public friends, I am sure will appreciate my weakness by your cross of life, hence the last spark of hope I have as to circulating my poems is by taking orders through advertising.

Brethren, the following is my plan of trying to get what I hope to be the rich and glorious fruit of our dear Redeemer's sweet chords of love and revelation handed down from heaven to poor unworthy me. Had it not been revealed to me, surely I could not have written as I have.

Mr. J. J. Thorne:

Your book is a gem of rhyme that can not be duplicated anywhere
"Scholars should read it."

To whom it may concern:

Wilson, N. C., June 5, 1908.

I have examined a copy of "Humble Hours of Solitude," the collection of original poems written by Mr. J. J. Thorne, of this county, and desire to say concerning the book, that it teaches many valuable lessons to those who may learn them, and will serve to stimulate those who study it to endeavor to live better lives. It is evidently the result of deep, earnest, and anxious thought on the part of the author, and intended as a great help to all those who may have the opportunity to read its pages. I bespeak for it a kindly and sympathetic reception by the public.

Very truly, etc.

J. D. BARDIN, Attorney-at-law.

You will notice the title of each poem that will constitute the proposed book appear on the opposite page. I am sure that you will agree with me that the sentiment of each poem is as rich as the titles sets forth.

Please send me your orders, which will be filled about November 1, when the P. D. Gold Publishing company complete the books, I will notify all subscribers through the Landmark, that the books are ready for delivery

I shall only have one advertisement as it is very expensive. One person told me that they were the best poems he ever read.

The price of "Humble Hours of Solitude" will be $1.15 with heavy board binding sent postpaid. Get all your friends to send their orders as soon as possible in order to give plenty of time for the printing. Send all orders to J. J. Thorne, Elm City, N. C.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

TRUE UNITY AND ITS BLESS-EDNESS. Psa. 133.

"Behold! there is a light worth seeing." What distances men will travel, what toils and hardships they will undergo, to see some gorgeous royal or military spectacle. The saints have no such lengths to go. If they can turn in upon their Bibles, and the Holy Spirit gives them light, there they may see divine spectacles, and make discoveries which will transform and benefit their souls. Such a light we have in this Psalm. If Balaam could break out in such rapturous language when he saw the literal Israel dwelling in their tents, surely here is something far more delightful. We have a view given us of the Israel of God. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Every word of God is good. Let us then examine a little closely this divine sentence framed by the Psalmist under divine inspiration. In the first place we notice a limitation. The brethren are alone spoken of. It does not say where all sorts and kinds of men, or even all sorts and kinds of religious persons, or even all professors of christianity, dwell together in unity, it is good and pleasant. This is man's unity; God's is different. Indeed the Lord declares divisions, not unity: "Israel shall then dwell in safety alone." Here is a decree concerning separation, not unity. So Paul writes

"Come out and be separate as saith the Lord." This the Lord himself effects as in Habakkuk, "He beheld, and drove asunder the nations." This is man's division. Well, the Psalmist writes about the brethren, the true family of God. Those who are alike born again, and born from above, new creatures in Christ Jesus. We firmly believe that there is fleshly unity which God abhors, and a spiritual unity in Christ which is of himself, and approved by him. This the Psalmist calls attention to. This is the same unity as Paul speaks of in Ephesians iv., and exhorts the people of God to aim after the preservation and manifestation of endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The persons he addresses have all one Father, one Saviour, one Holy Spirit, dwelling in every one of them. They constitute one body, all being alike joined as members in vital union to the Lord Jesus. It is good and pleasant then for those persons to dwell together in unity; they should dwell together, they should be united to one another, they should be ship; they should not only be separated from the world, but gathered into communities for mutual benefit, united testimony and service to the Lord. Thus we read how the brethren at Jerusalem were separated from the people round about them, and gathered together, "And all that believed were together." "And they continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." They believed, they were baptised, they were united together in church fellowship, and acted in accordance with such union. Their visible unity was the proper expression and manifestation of the invisible unity in the Lord Jesus which they had before. So it was with other churches, other visible communities of the people of God. Thus all these true churches had a visible unity amongst themselves, and with one another, which was the true and proper expression of that unity in Christ by the Spirit which were common to all. This was no forced, artificial unity, no mere external thing, proceeding from man; it was brethren united together by invisible bonds, manifesting that unity of the Spirit before the world. It is good for the true brethren to dwell together in unity in outward church fellowship. They are one in Christ; God is their habitation through all generations (Psa. xc.). They will and shall dwell together in unity hereafter. How good and how pleasant it is if they do so down below.

"How sweet, how heavenly is the sight,

When those who love the Lord,
In one another's peace delight,
And so fulfil his word."

"Love is the golden cord which binds,
The happy souls above;
And he's an heir of heaven who finds
His bosom glow with love."

The Psalm then, at one and the same time, enforces union and separation. It separates the brethren from all others, and speaks only of their unity. the fact is that a false unity is against the true, the unity which is of man, and pleases him, wars against the unity of the Spirit, which alone pleases God.

Now, this dwelling together in unity of the true people, is good, and a pleasant thing in itself, and also very pleasant to behold; therefore our attention is called to it. Also, of course, the aim of the Psalmist is to stir up the hearts of the Lord's people to seek conformity to it. Indeed all true discoveries, of divine things in Christ have a transforming influence, and therefore produce a desire, and aiming after more complete conformity to them. "From glory to glory," then there is a good and pleasant sight set before us. By the word good is meant, that this dwelling together in unity is beneficial to the brethren. It does them good. One of our poets writes:

"It's in union,

Hope and joy and love increase."

Now we are sure that nothing is more destructive of true Christian prosperity than the introduction of fleshly strife, and contention. It brings a blight upon the ministry of the word, and a blight upon the hearers. Let the minister say what he will, one or both parties to a strife, will take offense. The sweetest gospel will be turned into gall and wormwood. If the minister speaks of love, it is either considered a maudlin sort of preaching, and he is styled, as a kind of reproach a loving John, or he is thought to be aiming at somebody. The fact is the flesh, and a legal sour spirit has got in amongst his hearers, and this curdles everything. Thus the ministry gets dried up, and all things get worse and worse unless the Lord interposes. O what flourishing churches have in this way been turned into barren wildernesses! What a mercy is a proper spirit and understanding of the Word, "to leave off strife before it be meddled with." Happy the church the members of which, contend earnestly, as one man, for the faith once delivered to the saints! Woe to the church the members of which fall into striving one against another. Striving, as too often is the case, about things of the least consequence, or about the meats and drinks, and non-essentials; striving for the mastery. If unity is maintained, three words, in the spirit of them must prevail: Bear, Forbear, and Forgive. Bear with one another's infirmities: Forbear to give needless offense and to hurt one another's feelings; Forgive when any one hurts us. Certainly one thing which especially tends to introduce strife, and to break up unity is the bringing in persons into churches who are not really brethren. These persons are not really one of spirit with the others. They have not the Holy Ghost dwelling in them, hence they become elements of strife in the church. When the poor weak Jews were building the temple in the days of Zerubbabel, others wanted to associate with them in the work. But the Jews would not allow them. Hence arose persecution and hindrance. But they were perfectly right, and in spite of persecution and hindrance, the temple was built. Unless a due separation is maintained, a beneficial unity will be sure to suffer. We may illustrate this by a little anecdote.

A minister, who was looked up to as a sort of oracle, on account of his reputation for wisdom, had at the same time to answer two letters; one from the bailiff of his farm, the other from a church which had fallen into a state of strife and disorder, and decay. The letter to the bailiff, being misdirected, came into the hands of the hands of the church. It contained the following sage advice, "Look well to the black bull, and take care of the fences." At first the elders were puzzled, but at length one more skilled in interpretations than the others, pointed out the meaning, and its pertinency, or fitting application to their case. The black bull was the devil, who had got in amongst them, and the fences were those of a proper church discipline, guarding it from error, wrong actions and improper persons. The church received the sagacious counsel, and very soon the black bull was turned out, the fences mended, and order and harmony and prosperity restored to the people. Paul warns us of the black bull in Ephes. iv. 26, 27.

But this dwelling in unity is not only profitable, but pleasant. There is something delightful about it. This the Psalmist sets forth by a comparison, or an emblem. He compares it to the precious anointing oil which was poured upon Aaron's head, and that went down to the skirts of his raiment. This oil, the composition of which is given us in Exodus xxx. 23-25 sent forth a delightful fragrance, and, as Solomon says, rejoiced the heart. So it is with real Christian unity. Of course that oil was emblematical of the Holy Spirit, who is the real source of Christian unity, and of that which makes it sweet and pleasant. There is a sweet savour of Christ about it. As the holy anointing oil which was not to be poured out indiscriminately upon every one, but was divinely appropriated to particular persons and things so the Holy Spirit is poured out upon Christ partakes of this special anointing. The holy oil in Israel was poured upon Aaron's head, and ran down upon his beard, and went down to the skirts of his raiment. So the Father gave the Holy Spirit without measure unto Christ, and the same blessed spirit is given in measure to all his people. Flows down the skirts of his raiment. All his people partake of the Holy Spirit as the spirit of life and grace, and sonship in Christ. As there is one body, so there is one spirit of life and light in that one body. Here is the true and essential source of all Christian unity; and hence is derived its sweetness. What sweetness, what pleasantness, can there really be in a forced, external, fleshy unity? Bind, by external bands, a putrefying corpse to a living man, and where is the pleasantness? Where is the sweetness? No! the true unity has life, and sweetness, and fragrance about it; for it is all in Christ. By this anointing too, they are all alike made priests unto God. There is no distinct section of them, made into a separate priesthood, according to man's invention. He hath made us kings and priests unto God is true of the whole family of God. Having used the emblem of the fragrant oil to set forth the pleasantness of Christian unity, the Psalmist now uses another similitude to show forth the goodness, the beneficial nature, of this unity. He compares it to fertilizing dew. Not to dew generally; but to the dew upon Hermon, Sirion or Zion, as a particular mountain at the north of the Land of Promise was called. As Aaron typified the great high priesthood of Christ, so this mountain is taken to present his sovereignty, as he is king of kings, and Lord of Lords. Of other sovereignties and lordships, we read Zech. xi. 1, "Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars." This is something very different to dew. But upon Sharon, a part of Lebanon, there is the falling of the dew. This dew represents the true blessing of God, which is only upon Christ, and those in Christ. This blessing answers to the blessing of Abraham, "I will bless thee, and make thee a blessing." Now when the Lord's people dwell together in unity, this blessing is much upon them. They dwell together in union in Christ, they share in union his blessing. They are sweetly beneficial one to another. Christ makes them kings as well as priests unto God. They are enabled to reign over themselves, to control their carnal natures, and that spirit which is naturally in them, and lusteth to envy. This is all shown forth in Ezek. xxxvii., where they are represented by sticks, which become one in the hand of Christ, adhere one to another, by his uniting grace, and are used unitedly to carry out his saving and beneficial purposes. We have a union of life, a union of spirit, a union of pleasantness, a union of profitableness, when brethren dwell together in Christ in a spiritual unity.

As the holy anointing oil in Israel was emblematical of the Holy Spirit, in one point of view, so the dew of Israel, of Hermon, was emblematical of the same Holy Spirit in another. He is in Christ the promised blessing. "I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring." He is the source of life and fruitfulness, and usefulness in the people of God. And when they dwell together in unity in Christ all this is especially manifested in them, and enjoyed by them. When he is grieved by their foolish strifes and divisions, which proceed from their naughty wanderings from Christ and their carnal natures getting into some degree the upper hand, then the dews of Hermon no longer plentifully descend upon them, but deathfulness, barrenness, wretchedness take the place of life in the enjoyment of it, and a blessed fruitfulness; for in the Lord Jesus Christ, and in unity to him, and therefore to one another in him is the promise of blessing and life evermore. To illustrate this, we have a remarkable setting forth of the unity, force, and fruitfulness of the Israel of God in Micah v. 7, 8. The prophecy clearly refers to the days of the Apostles, when it was so strikingly fulfilled. We have the Judge of Israel, the Lord Jesus, smitten. He rises again, the peace of his people. Then follow the triumphs of the remnant of Israel, the Apostles and early christians. "The remnant of Israel is as dew from the Lord, as showers upon the grass," sovereignty and refreshing descending. Also they are used in the work of conviction of sin, tearing the consciences of sinners in pieces that the dews and refreshing showers might fall upon, and be valued by them. We know how in those days the Lord's people dwelt together in unity. We know with what power, then, they went forth preaching the gospel. They tore in pieces, as in the cases of the Jews at Jerusalem and of the Jailor of Philippi, the consciences of sinners and were not only a blessing one to another, but, in the Lord's hands, diffusers of blessings round about them in every direction. Selected

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I send you a letter written me by brother S. C. Jones, of Monroe, N. C., which contains good instruction to God's people. It will do the brethren good to read this letter.

Yours for truth,
W. A. SARTEN.

Mr. W. A. Sarten:

Dear Brother—I received your letter and am very glad to know that you enjoyed my letter of February 15, on the foolish virgins. Now brother if we can agree on one subject, perhaps we can on another. I am a strong believer in election and predestination as far as the Bible teaches and no further; I am also a strong believer in time or common salvation.

I want to relate to you a strange vision that appeared to me one morning in the spring of 1904, while in the field at work. I was hoeing corn alone, when I was impressed with the subject of preaching, and I selected for my subject "The sower and his seed." "A sower went out to sow his seed, and as he sowed, some fell by the way-side; and it was trodden down and the fowls of the air devoured it. And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it. And others fell on good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit a hundred fold. And when he had said these things, he cried, he that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

I took up the parable in this way: I said the good ground "hearers" are the ones that God plants his eternal word in their hearts, and are God's elect, and God prepared the ground before he sowed the seed. I thought that the good seed fell into good ground: Matthew, says "in" good ground, but Mark and Luke say "on" good ground. Then I took up the way-side fellow, and I said here is a man that only hears with the natural ear, and all he heard was the natural sound. And the fowls destroyed it, for I thought it was only the outward hearing, and the fowls could destroy man's works. The thorny ground fellow could soon be choked out, and I never stopped to think who sowed the seed, nor what the seed was, nor who the fowls were. To be plain I thought the good ground fellow was a christian, and the seed that fell in his heart was a new birth, and the stony, thorny and the way-side was a mere professor or dead sinner. Brother Sarten, I thought I did very well as I had seen lots of Baptists preach and write on this subject and they all showed it up in this light. When I got through dividing this word between the dead and the living, a voice spoke to me and said, now I will give you a key to unlock this parable, and the key was this: for this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing and their eyes are closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and should be converted and I should heal them, and their sins be forgiven them.

Now Brother Sarten, if any poor mortal ever got into any trouble I did, for I could not see how the dead sinner could close his eyes, stop his ears, and his heart wax gross to keep Jesus from converting or saving him, and for his heart is already as hard as adamant, and his eyes already closed and he is deaf as to hearing. When I was almost ready to give up, a voice spoke and said, divide this word between the children, a part to the obedient, and a part to the disobedient and apply it in a practical sense and not to the new birth. And when I began to divide it in this way a sweet peace of mind came over me, and the tears began running down my cheeks so fast I could not see how to work, and brother Sarten, I was over-joyed.

Now let us take the word of God for our counsel, "When any-one heareth the word of the kingdom." What is this kingdom of heaven? Is it the eternal heaven above? No. Is it the spiritual kingdom? No. Now let us prove this by the Bible. Jesus said to the scribes and pharisees, ye shut up the kingdom of heaven: you won't come in yourselves and you hinder them that would. Now if the kingdom of heaven is ultimate glory, how can they get into it or shut could they go into the eternal heaven themselves, and if it is a spiritual kingdom how can they get into it or shut it up. Now this is the militant kingdom and the scribes and pharisees were law subjects. Now what did Jesus mean when he said you won't come in? Don't that signify that they could come in? Now the scribes and pharisees were teachers of the law and when the church was set up or the kingdom of heaven was at hand they still clung to the law service instead of of going into the kingdom, and did everything they could to keep others out. Well have we got any of those characters to-day? Let us see. We very often hear it said that a person cannot go to the church until God's appointed time and he will make them willing in the day of his power. Now all such persons as these are shutting up the kingdom of heaven. The Holy Spirit quickens the dead sinner, Jesus pardons their sins and they are living children. It is then their duty to make themselves obedient and if they don't they have to suffer. Now Jesus says, behold I stand at the door and knock and if any man hear my voice and will open the door I will come in and sup with him and he with me. Now if Jesus is going to bring them to church in his own good time why is he knocking, and why don't he come in and fetch them out. It is the duty of a person to open the door in a practical sense. The marriage supper of the lamb is come and the wife hath made herself ready. She did not make herself a wife, but she made herself ready to meet the bridegroom. Now brother Sarten, when you went to get married, if your wife had presented herself in every day garments and you dressed up neat and clean, you would have been offended, but instead she was arrayed in her wedding attire and you were well pleased. Now all this dressing did not make her your bride. We are commanded to put on the whole armor of God, that we may ward off the fiery darts of Satan, so if all things are predestinated of God, why don't he put the whole armor on us.

That servant who knew his Lord's will prepared not himself, neither did according to his will shall be beaten with many stripes. Now there was a preparation for this servant to perform, not to make him a servant but to make him a dutiful servant, so if everything is predestinated of God, is it right to beat this servant. Let him alone he will do it at God's own time. He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, I will liken him unto a foolish man that built his house upon the sand. When the rain descends and winds blow upon that house it falls. Now the man don't fall, it is his house that falls therefore let every one take heed how he builds, for if we build with hay, wood, and stubble, they will burn up. The man don't burn, it is the hay, wood and stubble that burns and our disobedience will surely be tried by fire. Jesus says, "Let your light so shine that others may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven." Now if everything is predestinated what is the use for Jesus to say let our light shine as it will shine at God's appointed any way?

Well brother Sarten let us divide this world up into three periods of time, the first two thousand years of outlaw, the next two thousand years under law and now two thousand years under grace. Then let us take up the sinner from the day he is born into this world until he is convicted, as being one period of time and from the time of his conviction to the pardon of his sins as being the second period of time. Now the sinner under the second period of time is in the same condition that God's people were under the law, and all the parables were spoken under the law or second period of time, and not a single parable spoken in the third period or gospel day. Then the foolish virgins, wayside, thorny ground fellows, bad fish, one talent man, goats, and rich men all came in under the second period or law service. Now we will take up the man first in his dead state in the womb, second in his quickened state in the womb, and third, after he was born into this world. These parables did not take effect or come into use under the law, but they took effect right at the hour of mid-night, right at the winding up of the law service or the setting up of the gospel kingdom and are having reference to practical life in the gospel day or kingdom of heaven, the new covenant. Before there was any covenant is one period of time, under the old covenant the second period of time, and under the new covenant the third period of time. Now under the old covenant God's people live by faith and not by grace for law and grace will not reign together.

Then back to the way-side hearer. This word fell into his heart and not into his natural ears, and Satan came and destroyed it or the fowls of the air. What are the fowls of the air? They are every false way, and if they get hold of us they destroy our peace and happiness in this life. They once had me, but thanks be to God I have come out of her and I hope to be separated from her the balance of my life. The devil took this word out of his heart to keep him from being saved, and the Arminian world thinks this saving is eternal life. The way-side fellow has light under a bushel or bed and is only by the way and not in the way. Strive to enter in at the straight gate: for many I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able. You know we can't strive to enter into eternal life, for if we can the Arminian world is right, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leads to destruction, and many there be which go in. The wide gate and broad road leads to death here and not to eternal death. The way-side fellow becomes unfruitful. How can a tree become fruitful that never bore any fruit, and the thorny ground hearer brings no fruit to perfection? The good ground hearer hears the word and keeps it. We don't keep our eternal life, it is kept by the power of God.

The one talent man had his Lord's money hid in the earth, this old body, and Jesus said you ought to have put my money into the bank (church) so at my coming, I might have received my own with usury. Now this usury is the meat, drink clothing and visit that the sheep gave him by their obedience. The goats are lost into everlasting punishment or outer darkness for not giving him meat, drink, clothing him and visiting him.

Brother Sarten I hope this letter will be of some benefit to you and if you think it fit for publication have it published. If you ever disobey God's commands stop and see if you are a thorny ground hearer.

I would be glad if I could get more good letters like yours and if any one sees this parable different from me let him show me my wrongs and save a soul from death, for if I am wrong this is the way to death. Pray for me and mine when it goes well with you. I am your little brother if one at all.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I feel impressed to write you a few lines for the dear old Landmark, that I trust will stir up the pure minds of the brethren in a little degree (at least I hope so,) for I am stirred my self, and would to God that others might be. I have noticed in some places (and in most places,) where we worship a disposition on our part to allow almost any little thing to keep us from our meetings, for instance worldly business, or disagreeable weather, and other things of no more serious nature. Now is this according to the words of the master who said, Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. According to this the service of God should not be a secondary thing with us, but it should be first. "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another." O how good it is to mingle with children of God in his worship. Again, we admonished (or rather commanded) to forsake not the assembling of ourselves together.

Recently I traveled eighty-six miles to go and to come from a church where not a member went out. Just why I don't know, only it was a little disagreeable weather. Such is very discouraging. Now these brethren are as lovely as any you ever met in your life, and I wanted to see them, but could not, and I felt sure if they had wanted to see me as bad as I did them they or some of them would have gone. So you see what an awful position it puts one in. Just a short while ago, I asked a deacon, as good a man I think as I ever knew, when his quarterly meeting was, and he said he could not tell me. O how shocking that a man of God should forget such things, but we are all frail beings. Why is it that we are more forgetful than our fathers? Is it not because of the love of money? Why is it we don't want to see each other when meeting time comes? Is it because iniquity has abounded, and our love has grown cold?

Dear Brother, I never knew you to fail to attend your meetings, and how lovely to be an example to the flock. David said, "I have been young, but now I am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread."

How blessed it was with Paul when he could say, "I have kept the faith, I have finished my course, and fought the good fight and etc."

One of our dear brethren lately said just before he died I went every time I could.

I want to see my brethren when I go to church, and would be glad to know that they want to see me. Would you not feel so much better satisfied brother Gold, that your service was acceptable if they would prove it by filling their seats if possible?

Very truly in love,
W. A. SIMPKINS.

REMARKS—Read every word of this carefully, consider and act on the good advice.

TRIP!

Dear Brother Gold—Many have asked me to write them through the Landmark while I was in Eastern North Carolina. By your permission I will try to grant their requests. Brethren and sisters I was blest to fill all my appointments except the last one. A change of schedule caused me to miss connection so I could not reach that appointment.

I returned home April 6, finding all well. I enjoyed my trip very much, receiving much kindness from the people for which I desire to be thankful to the people, but especially thanking the Lord, for it is from him we receive all good. But how often we forget the Lord while we receive good at the hand of the Lord. Shall we not also receive evil, for whom the Lord loveth he chastens. Then behold the goodness and severity of the Lord.

I hope to visit you all again if the Lord will.

I would be glad to have a letter from any one I met. I will close by asking an interest in your prayers.

TREES OF THE LORD'S PLANTING.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear borthor in Christ—Whereas I hope I am a witness to the truth when I hear the gospel preached, and inasmuch as you have been faithful in watching over us in discipline order for the last thirty years or more in coming in and going out before us and also have declared unto us your love in the spirit and truth in obedience to our Heavenly Father, therefore if I am not deceived I love you dearly for the work's sake alone.

Now dear brother, I want to give you a hint of a dream I had not long since which was of great comfort and peace to my mind. In my dream I was in a large field and in this field there was a house one half of which was filled with seed and these were wrapped up in deceit, and I knew they were counterfeit. The other side of the house filled with so may seed that no man could number and these seed were solid and sound and I knew they were for a purpose as they were put up in such nice packages with about ten bushels to the package. Then I wondered what it all meant. I turned and walked about ten yards and came to a live tree and a vine, and the vine came up from the roots of the tree, and under this vine there was a hundred bushels of seed and I knew the number of bushels there under the vine. Now these seed were about the size of hominy bean and were pleasant and beautiful to behold, and I looked up to see the vine and it budded and brought forth leaves which were of a dark blue and green color. It is such a mystery I can't tell it as I experienced it, but I knew it was the Lord's work. The vine bloomed out white and very little branch seemed to bear a humble part in obedience to the rest of the tree from which the vine sprang. And there came a seed in every bloom and all these were filled with laughter. In a moment the leaves and blossoms all disappeared but I couldn't tell how. Immediately the seed were all robed in linen, clean and white and everything became transparent and filled with the Holy Ghost. Then they began laughing and dancin in praise of Israel's God. "Hear oh Israel, the Lord our God is of one mind and changes not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed," and I looked down to see the seed at the root of the tree and they had all formed into a square block at the root of the vine and these all were clothed in the righteousness of Jesus Christ and were likened to little stars shining so bright, and they seemed to be shining upon me a poor needy vile sinner. Here I tried to return thanks to God for his testimony making wise the simple, for thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing and hast put off my sackcloth and girded me with pleasure, therefore will I rejoice in the God of my salvation—in him whom my soul loveth. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." Then I knew my redemption was sealed with an everlasting seal in the covenant of grace from before the foundation of the world..

Oh, glorious hope, how blessed we are if we have faith in the living hope of electing of the Father. God is love therefore we love him, and if we love the brethren in deed and in truth this is an evidence we have been born again and that we are in the true light.

Therefore we have this sweet union in Christ and have fellowship one with another and worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness and rejoice in Jesus Christ and have no confidence in the flesh.

Sometimes I feel to be sure I am what I have confessed before man and in the sight of God, but when I get low down in my feelings I fear I am mistaken in the whole matter, feeling unworthy to even claim kin with the brethren I love and esteem better than myself.

Brother Gold, if you have a mind to favor me with a few remarks they will be appreciated much as I don't know what an olive tree is.

Affectionately your brother,
D. T. BILLUP.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—Enclosed please find money order for $1.50 to be applied to my subscription to Zion's Landmark for this year. I am somewhat behind in paying for same owing to my negligence, but this being my birthday, making me 74 years of age, I have decided not to put it off any longer as I am looking for my departure any day.

Some years ago I wrote my experience from nature to grace, as I hope and had it published in the Towiliga Messenger, otherwise I would send it to you for publication, but to make my letter a little more lengthy and as I see a great many dreams or visions in the Landmark am so much edified by reading them I will endeavor to write two of my dreams that I had about twenty-five years ago.

Three or four years after I had been admitted into the Primitive Baptist church I was so greatly enthused over my deliverance from my wretched state, in speaking peace to my never dying soul, also in being admitted into his kingdom on earth (church), it came into my mind that I very much desired to see the end of time and Christ coming to claim his reward and gather His jewels, the saints. But finally I got to thinking I might be mistaken in myself and my mind became somewhat burdened with the thought. So I asked the Lord to show me whether I was mistaken or not and also to show me himself in his excellent state. But I did not receive any answer for so long a time I began to think I had asked him for something that was inconsistent with his will, so endeavored to banish it from my mind. Two or three years after that I had a dream, as follows: I thought I was looking for my cattle when Christ met me and handed me a little stick about twelve inches long made of the heart of red bay and beautifully polished. He told me my time was about out and I understood him to mean the end of time was about here. Then he turned and walked away saying he had other business to attend to. As he walked away I saw he was dressed very commonly and had on what was called in my boyhood days a round coat. I knew it was Christ as soon as I saw him and as he walked away from me I threw out my hands each way and shouted for joy, and I was so full of joy I awoke and for a moment thought I was on a cross beam which was resting on two gate posts about ten feet high.

I thought over my dream but could not imagine what it meant although being fully satisfied it was to show me something. So as time passed and opportunities occurred I would ask one of the brethren to interpret my dream but none could. One day as I was going to TyTy, a small village on the railroad, and after crossing Little River, I started up a long rise, the top of which was about three hundred yards, all the time meditating on my dream, when all at once something seemed to say, "did you not ask the Lord to show you whether or not you were deceived in yourself concerning the end of time?" Then I remembered the dream, and said "yes." "So you also asked him to show you Himself in his exalted state and you saw him in his humble state." He was in his humble state the first knowledge I had of him. Then I wanted to know what that little stick meant which he handed me, and the answer was "it was his staff, and was for me to lean on while I stayed here," in other words his grace.

Two or three years after this one night I lay down to rest and dropped off to sleep when there appeared about five feet in front of me, as I thought a beautiful lady, most beautifully dressed, in a sitting position about three feet from the floor and not resting on anything. By the time my eyes rested on her I heard a voice say "I am God." And as soon as those words sounded I saw it was Christ, and just that soon I said, "I thank God I have seen my Saviour." I looked upon him just as long as I could keep my eyes open, but when I was forced to wink my eyes he disappeared. So you see my brethren I did receive more than I had asked for. Now what kind of life ought I to live? I cannot be as thankful as I wish to be. My whole soul's desire is to serve him, but when I would do good evil is present and the only way I can serve my heavenly Father is with my thought and mind, and I find I fail in that as the thoughts of foolishness are continually flowing in my mind. But there is one thing about myself which gives me consolation; I love everything that Christ loved. He loved the Father and the saints. So do I. He hated all evil. So do I, and still that does not make me perfect. One thing only gives me consolation, and if I am not deceived, years ago he told me his grace was sufficient for me, and that is my refuge and hiding place during my stay here on earth. If I am saved it is in and through him.

I will quit, as my letter is too long now. Yours in hope of an eternal life through our blessed Jesus.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—We were blessed with a good meeting last Saturday and Sunday. Sunday night four joined by experience, and if the Lord willing will be baptized the second Sunday in June, when I hope you will be here.

I send you for publication in Zion's Landmark a rich and wonderful experience of Sister Ida Burch, which made the poor sinful me rejoice in spirit. She is one of our worthiest members and I think all lovers of truth will enjoy reading the experience of this dear sister. Yours in hope?

H. J. ROGERS.

Roxboro, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—As you and many other dear Baptists have requested me to write my experience I will in my weak way pen a few lines. I have had many impressions to write but when I read the dear old Landmark I always find some one telling my feelings, better than I can write them. I have often wanted to talk with you, but when I see you I feel that I cannot tell anything that would be of any interest to you.

Brother Gold, the thought had never entered my mind about death or its sadness until I was twelve years of age; when one of my dear friends was called from this world. She was a special friend of mine and I loved her as I did my own life. I had never thought or realized of young people dying, but here I thoroughly realized that the young may die and the old must die. She was sick only a few days and the doctor said she could not live, which made me feel so sad. I went home with heavy heart meditating how I could give her up. When the news came she was dead I can't express how I felt. Here my troubles began. Suppose I had been called where would my poor soul be cast? My trouble grew heavier each day and I felt to be a sinner and there was no hope for me in this lost condition. I felt my life would soon be ended and my soul sent to torment, for a greater sinner never lived than I felt to be. I was the chief of sinners.

I began to go to Sunday school thinking I would become good and my trouble would leave. I attended for quite awhile but obtained no relief. Finally the members wanted me to join them, and I was ready, because I was willing to do anything to get relief of mind. But my dear mother advised me not to join them and I did not.

At times my trouble seemed greater than I could bear and was greater than human tongue can express.

In my sixteenth year I was troubled more than ever. My dear mother said to me one day she believed I was losing my mind, and I thought surely I would if my trouble didn't cease. I thought to be forsaken by all on earth. I felt every one thought I was the chief of sinners and how little and unworthy I felt to sit at my dear old father's table. I would often get so full of tears I would leave the table and go to some secret place and pour out prayer to God. But it seemed only utterance of words escaped my lips. When I read the bible every word condemned me. I had gone so many times to secret places to try to pray for deliverance. I thought really it was a sin for such a poor sinner as I to even try to pray. But I would say before I thought, Lord be merciful to me a sinner, or, Lord deliver me from this great burden. It was my daily saying.

In this year my mother was stricken down with rheumatism, and in the fall I had fever, or thought I had. The day I was taken sick I went to my room feeling very badly and I had given up in despair; every thing seemed to be draped in mourning and to me it was the saddest day I ever saw, yet it was beautiful sunny autumn morn, and while my mother was praising God for such beautiful weather, every thing was gloomy and death-like to me. My mother was to go to Hot Springs for her health.

The little birds that chattered at my window seemed to be full of sorrow and sadness. I closed my eyes thinking to never see any more pleasure, and I could not utter one word of prayer. All at once a feeling came over me different from what I had ever had before. I was taken to a large brick building in an open field and when I reached the building I turned my eyes upward when a voice spoke and said, "the work will soon be finished, then I'll come down." As I turned I beheld Jesus, the beautiful Jesus. He stood with a circle of angels around him and they were singing beautiful songs, and each one as they passed, smiled and held out their hand to me as if to say, come with us, but I refused and the angels disappeared leaving Christ alone with me. He took me by the hand and carried me to a beautiful place where only a few were assembled. It was a white church and the people in it looked so happy. Jesus here disappeared and I came to myself. Everything around me was changed; the little birds seemed to be full of love and the sunshine was, oh so beautiful. I felt like praising God from whom all blessings flow; he had wrought such a wondrous change in every thing though I had not realized there was a change in me from nature to grace. I thought all this however was mere imagination and I took it for no change at all, but only rejoiced to see everything so bright.

Mama was uneasy about me, yet I did not feel sick in the least. I kept meditating why the change and why every thing was so much brighter than ever before. I felt happy though I thought if deliverance ever came I would be the happiest child in the world and would be run over with joy as I had heard and read of people being. My joy, however, didn't come all at once, but by degrees and I kept rejoicing more and more every day.

I was in bed only two weeks and when I became well my dear mother left to go on her trip. My aunt stayed with me while my mother was away and one day I felt like I wanted to talk to her and find out what she thought of what I had passed through. When I began to talk the tears trickled down her wrinkled cheeks for joy and she said she knew there had been a change in me. Before I got through talking I felt sorry that I one so vile and sinful should mention such a sacred thing. How could one so pure and good as she believes poor sinful me. She talked lots to me advised me to go to church the next meeting and relate my experience. She was a Primitive Baptist. I did not consider this as I had no thought of being one of these old fashioned people as I had often scorned them and laughed at their old time ways; still there was a love in me for them. I had always been taught to reverence them, but I did it only for my mother who was a strong believer. They would often visit our humble home and I wanted to be where they were, but being a child supposed they would think strange of me staying where they were. I was afraid they would learn I was concerned in some way. I longed for their coming and my heart would leap for joy when I would see them, I wanted to be with them but how little and unworthy I felt to be when in their presence. The dear hand shake and kind words the members would always greet me with made me feel so unworthy but happy.

My love grew more and more for them, and I loved them better than any people on earth though I had never heard them preach very much. Oh, how sweet and Christ like they looked to me. I began going every time they had preaching and I would read the Landmark to see if there was any one like me. When I went to church the minister would tell my experience better than I could, and surely I thought some one had told him of my trouble, for it seemed every word was to me. I could not stay away from their meetings for it was my desire to be among them and hear them speak of Jesus and tell their feelings. I had a desire to join the church and at every meeting I thought I would surely offer, but that unworthy feeling would creep over me. Something within me would say you have nothing to say, how can they receive you? In October 1907 I went before the church and told part of what I have written, and was received.

The morning I was baptized was a beautiful one indeed; the sun shone its beautiful rays, and as we drove to the place of baptism every thing was peaceful and calm. How lovely the little pond looked. It was a place of beauty to me and how I had longed to go there and be baptized. Two others and I were baptized by our pastor, Elder W. A. Simpkins. This was a day of much happiness to me and it seemed my mind left this world entirely.

I have had many pleasures since joining the church and have had great trials too. I often get so low in the valley I am made to wonder if I ever have tasted his sweet love or felt his tender mercies. I don't feel worthy of the least of God's blessings and I know I am not thankful as I should be of the many blessings he bestows upon me. I am so ungrateful yet blessings continue to come. I am often found meditating surely if I am a child of God I would not have these vile and sinful thoughts, and I am not born of the true spirit. If I did I would do better, I would walk more orderly and my life would show a christian walk. Can one so vile and prone to sin be a child of God? Brother Gold, do you think one feeling as I feel to be can be a child of God? I am often made to exclaim, my God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me! Is he clean gone forever?

I often wish I could meet up with one who has traveled in the valley, surely there is not one that has been brought so low as I. Then at times I am lifted up and think I will never doubt again. But these seasons of joy can't last always. Brother Gold pray for me that I may live an upright life, so as not to be a stumbling block to our dear church. I have written very scattering but as my mind led me, and the half has never been told. Please be kind enough to bear with my many imperfections and if there is anything amiss in what I have written please pardon me for it is my hearts desire to write nothing to be criticised. Your unworthy sister,

IDA BURCH.

HOW SAVED.

"For I through the law am dead to the law that I might live unto God. I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me," Gal. 2:19-20

Perhaps in as few words as could compress so wonderful truthfulness Paul has uttered the doctrine of God our Saviour in the above reference.

He writes this epistle to meet the then prevalent heresy propagated by Jews that professed to be believers in Jesus, but who held that they must be circumcised after the manner of Moses and keep the law of Moses. It is the old question discussed whether we are saved by grace or by works, whether by Jesus Christ alone, or by something else in whole or in part.

1. Paul affirms that salvation is by Jesus Christ alone. He refers to his own experience as the first thing to show him, or in other words what God had shown him, by saying he received it not of man, nor by man, but by Jesus Christ and God the Father who raised him from the dead. Not only is it not of man, but wholly by revelation. "Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world according to the will of God and our Father." He expresses astonishment that those who had received Christ as their hope should be so soon removed from the hope of the gospel by what they called another gospel, but which is not another. For there is but one gospel of Christ, and that proclaims the finished work of redemption. So perfect and glorious is the person and obedience of Jesus Christ that nothing can be tolerated in any sense to claim any part in this salvation. The Lord alone is exalted in that day.

2. Not even Moses to whom God spoke face to face as he did to no other man is admitted to bear any part of the glory. Nor does the law that was given by Moses have any place or tolerance as an agent in helping Christ in the matter of salvation. Except as that by which is the knowledge of sin does the law have any place. The law was given that the offense might abound, or that men might know thereby that they could do nothing to save themselves. Paul said, I had not known sin, but by the law.

3. But there was a time when he as Saul thought he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, which things he also did—He considered himself a true disciple of Moses. Yet he had not learned a letter of Moses' law, nor did he know a thing that Moses required. The commandment which he thought was unto life he found to be unto death. Instead of living by what the law required when the commandment came sin revived and he died.

He had before profited in the Jews religion more than many of his equals. But when it pleased God who separated him from his mother's womb to reveal Jesus in him that he might preach Him among the heathen, immediately he conferred not with flesh and blood. He did not consult with the other apostles. He did not go to school anywhere to learn how to preach Jesus. He did not receive a thing from man. Years afterwards when he visited Jerusalem, and saw Peter and James, but they added nothing to him. But when they saw the gift of God in Paul they glorified God in him.

4. He utters a great truth when he said, "For I through the law am dead to the law that I might live unto God." The strength of sin is the law, so that sin slew him by the law. Thus he was killed to the love of sin, for sin by the commandment became exceeding sinful and slew him by the righteous law. Hence through the law he became dead to the law. Never after this could he trust to anything man could do. He saw that what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his only begotten Son Jesus Christ in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit. I am dead to the law by the body of Christ. That perfect and holy body though in the likeness of sinful flesh yet without sin bare our sin in his own body on the tree, and was made a curse for us, and we being dead to sin in and by the crucifixion of Jesus are married to Him who is risen from the dead even the Son of God, in order that our fruit might be unto holiness and the end everlasting life. Then I am brought out from under the law unto the gospel of the grace of God. I am made to feel and know the law is holy, just and good, and that I am vile, carnal and full of sins. For if Christ be in you the body is dead because of sin, but the spirit is life because of righteousness. I am on the Lord's side. I acknowledge the justice of God in my condemnation, and the grace of God in my salvation. The life therefore I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me. It is the faith of Jesus that is in Paul, and by that faith he lives and acts in the flesh. Since he is crucified with Christ he is a dead man. But Christ is risen from the dead and Christ lives in him. Thus gives him the righteousness of God. This is not the righteousness of the law of works. That is the righteousness of filthy rags, of dung and dross, and the man who seeks that ignores and denies Christ. If righteousness come by the law then is Christ dead in vain. But faith establishes the law.

GOOD AND EVIL.

"I form the light and create darkness: I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things," Isa. 45:7.

Friend Peter Strickland requests my view of the above scriptures

What good and wonderful thing is it that God has not done for Israel?

The greatest worldly kingdom had Israel in their power, yet the Lord God delivered his people. Pharaoh king of Egypt felt his great power. Then Babyalon the greatest power of earth in his day felt the power of God in his destruction as he delivered Israel. The great Assyrian kingdom also felt the blasting power of God in smiting them for oppressing Israel. The great kingdoms of the earth were handled by the God of heaven as his servant whether for oppressing Israel in his disobedience, or for relieving his people from oppression.

It is true that God caused such small things as swarms of flies, lice, locusts, frogs, murrain, hail, thundering and lightning to afflict Egypt, and did not cause any other great or small kingdom of men to invade that people and humbled them into releasing his people by slaying the first born—just one in every house of Egypt.

The part that the great kingdoms of earth have played in the march of nations has attracted the attention of mankind. One reading the profane history of the kingdoms of the world sees no special use that God makes of one nation nor of any nation. Historians see and acknowledge nothing but what is apparent on the surface, and fail to discern the hand of God in marshalling the powers of earth in the strife of men. But one reading the bible will see that God uses this or that nation as it pleases him to afflict them or Israel. He has commanded the enemies of Jacob to be round about him. He makes Moab his wash pot for purging and washing off the filth of Israel. He uses Philistia for correcting his forgeful and disobedient people. He has divided and meted out the nations as it has pleased him, and musters them into his service, or disbands them as it pleases him. He raises up one and puts down another.

Cyrus the great king of the Medo—Persians held sway over vast territories of people who held the doctrines of a plurality of gods of opposing natures and aims—one a god of good and another of evil—one of light and another of darkness. They judged according to the appearance, and seeing day followed by so different a state as that of darkness, peace so opposite to that of war, sickness so different from that of health, and death so opposed to life, they concluded there must be different gods or powers, that caused these different states of things.

This is a conclusion held by heathen nations generally. One visiting a museum having on exhibition statues of the heathen divinities will be impressed with the frightful appearances of these gods which they have embodied in forms that they worship. Their hideous appearances are adapted to excite dread and slavish fear in the worshippers' minds. There was no faith inspired by unlimited power, goodness and truth in One Eternal, everlasting, self-existent God doing all his pleasure, and beside him there is no other God; and one Lord Jesus Christ his son, the only mediator between a holy and just God and depraved and sinful man, reconciling man to this holy God, and causing him to abhor himself and repent in dust and ashes.

The language of the prophet Isaiah inspired by the God of truth was of purpose to set forth the great truth of the unity of Godhead, and his unlimited righteous power and glory.

Light and darkness stand opposed to each other. Now if the power that creates darkness is opposed to the power that forms light here are two powers or two Gods one against the other: but is that the truth? There is but one creating power. The worlds were formed by the word of God. Nothing was made without Jesus Christ that was made or created. But darkness was created. God is light and in him is no darkness, but he is uncreate, self-existent, eternal or without beginning of days or end of time. The perfection of the Godhead is uncreated. Things that are created a beginning. In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. We are not informed of the creation of any thing anterior to that time, or before the first thing that was created. Darkness was among the first things named in creation. God said, let there be light and there was light, and God separated them. He had absolute dominion over them.

Evil is created and God creates it. Job said, shall we receive good at the hand of God and shall we not receive evil, which is the opposite of good. The Lord God had wonderfully blest Job. That was the good. His health, his goods, his prosperity, his favor among men were among the good he had received. But now evil was upon him. All his goods were destroyed, his children killed, he was cast down, smitten with sore boils from head to foot. These things were evils he had received from the Lord. What comfort would there have been to Job to think that there was another God beside having enough power to send all these evils contrary to the will of the God he had been serving, and who was able to destroy Job, and that his God could not prevent this, and hence Job must finally perish and be forever destroyed by this God of evil that was too strong for the God of heaven? The comfort to Job was that God was doing all these things, and though he did not give any account of his matters, or tell Job why he was thus dealing with him, yet Job's faith or confidence in God was not shaken, or could not be because there was no other God beside the Lord, and he could not do wrong, and that he knew his Redeemer lived, and that when he was tried he should come forth as gold.

This view does console the children of God; for they know that God reigns and causes all things to work together for good to them who love God, and are the called according to his purpose.

In the case of Cyrus the display of God's sovereign power over Babylon, and the liberation of Israel from that great power by king Cyrus, who was used as God's servant for Israel's sake and the prying out of the treasures of these Persian kings to rebuild Jerusalem, and restore Israel to their own land, or that these things were done for Israel's sake, because God loved Israel, displays the great truth that there is no God beside the God of heaven, and that he rules all nations and is above all gods, or that these false gods are no gods at all. P. D. G.

WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

This question is asked when one feels it is night, and a time calling for the need of a vigilant watchman. It also appears that the night is grievous and there is a desire for the day or light to appear. For burdens seem to be heavier in the night than in the day. Enemies seem to gather in the night and distresses appear greater. Hence the inquiry of the distressed one to the watchman asking him what of the night.

Is the present time one of day or night? One says it is day—a day of great progress and wonderful performances—a day of great knowledge and triumphs. Another says it is a time of much sorrow and great distress. The love of money is causing coldness, slackness in serving the Lord much self-seeking, but little love of the brethren. The sick are neglected, the poor are not helped, the slack ones are not reproved, the weak are not strengthened. Where are the signs of Israel's prosperity? How long is the night yet to last? When will the morning come.

Both morning and night will come. The morning of true deliverance will come to all who look for the coming of Jesus. The night of darkness for light, bitter for sweet. Those that wait for the coming of the Lord Jesus are sensible, they are not in the light as they hope to be, or they would not desire for the coming of the day, for they would be satisfied with things as they are. Such as are burdened with a sense of darkness look and hope for the coming of day. Those that are not desiring anything better than what they now have when a change comes to them it will be night coming to them. To them that sit in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up. Those that are trusting in the light of their own eyes blindness will seize.

Day is the time for labor. Are Baptists alive to the nature of their privileges one to another. For instance an old preacher went twelve miles to serve a church, the members did not help him with money to enable him to meet his expenses. His horse failed. Still he visited that church walking twelve miles, and he was an old man. On his last trip in the winter he was attacked with sickness and died. While the members did not help him to buy another horse, or to help him feed the one he once had, yet they said he was faithful. Was he faithful to tell them what was their duty to him? Were they faithful to him? If Baptists loved their pastors more and money less they would not need so much plain talk about what they should do in the way of helping their pastors.

Day is the time to labor. Are we diligent looking well to our flocks and herds? Are pastors watching during the darkness of the night in order to care for the flock? A church desires to have a rule to lay by every Sabbath as the Lord has prospered them so they may have a fund of money to meet expenses. Some brother makes an objection. He says this has not been our custom. We should not let our left hand know what our right hand does. Another brother says, our left hand is the love of money we are guilty of. Our left hand says, keep all the money in the left hand, and the right will not do any thing that the left objects to. If a church desires to take up a collection every meeting for proper expenses, and gives every member and every friend present an opportunity to give for such a purpose as helping their pastor and other necessary expenses, is that contrary to sound new testament principles? See 1st. Cor. 16:9-2. Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the church of Galatia, even so do ye. On the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come. Paul is here instructing that every member lay by as the Lord has prospered him, on the first day of the week. The rule is as the Lord has prospered him, on the first day of the week. What for? To raise money to convert the heathen? No. It is a collection for the saints for the poor and needy ones—for necessary expenses. Have this ready so that the preacher will not have to make a speech to raise money.

I visit our people above Washington City occasionally, for instance in Maryland, Del., Penn., New Jersey and New York. At every meeting the deacons pass through the congregation and collect what money each one desires to give for expenses. The members and friends generally give. No speeches are made, no money begging. Now tell me which is more in harmony with Paul's rule our conduct down South, or their conduct up North?

The question we should ask is this. What is the bible rule on this matter, and if we are remiss or unfaithful let us repent and do better.

Watchman, is it day or is it night? Is the night coming and the morning also?

It will do a Baptist good to follow the bible—make sacrifices, and deny self, seek the things that be above this world. If the doctrine we love is so dear to us can not we make some sacrifices to show our love of it by helping the poor saints with our collections? P. D. G.

CAREFUL WALK AS WELL AS PRUDENT TALK.

“Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear than give the sacrifice of fools; for they consider not that they do evil.

Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter anything before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few.” Eccl. 5:1-2

1. This address is to those that go to the house of God. Surely it is a great blessing to have a desire to go there. One said, “I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord.” So that if we have the heart to go to the house of God or be assembled with his saints to worship God we are blest. Nor will one who truly desires to go there say it is so holy a place I prefer to go to the house of mirth where I may do as I please and be not in presence of the Lord, for I desire to attend to the carnal corrupt things of earth and walk after the flesh. While one in his right mind feels unworthy to appear with the Lord's people, yet his heart is there, and he cannot be satisfied to dwell in the tents of wickedness. One day in the Lord's courts is better than a thousand in the tents of wickedness.

2. Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God. Let your walk be clean and strait, seemly and well directed. Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only. Doing what is right keeping your feet clean and beautiful is one of the loveliest traits of character. Vain talkers are far worse than no talkers. Silence is often golden. Watch as well as pray is the command. What a busy life of discipline of self is required to keep the peace and walk worthy of this high and holy vocation—not going off on a frolic. Indeed there is no discharge in this war. Death is the time for rest. You may be ready to say how can I do all these things? Unless He that commands us to do them works in us both to will and to do it is not done, and then it is done in such a way that we cannot glory save in the Lord.

3. Be more ready to hear than to give the sacrifice of fools. To have the desire to hear of the Lord, to hear the gospel preached is surely a good desire. Fools think they can get up something or say something out of their own heart, or offer some sacrifice that appears pleasing to them, and they think they can help the Lord with these things. But the preparations of the heart in man and the answer of the tongue are of the Lord. Hence we are not to be rash with our mouth, nor hasty in our heart to utter any thing before the Lord. For God is in heaven high above us, and we are on earth but dust and ashes, therefore our words should be few.

If the Lord puts his words in our hearts and makes our tongue as the pen of a ready writer then the meditation of our heart and the words of our mouth will be acceptable in God's sight, for then we will speak as the spirit gives us utterance. Then it will not be our words that we speak, but the words of the Lord.

4. How beautiful is the service or worship of God? It is the most blessed and the purest thing a child of God is ever favored to perform when he worships God in spirit and in truth.

OBITUARIES

CLARA JOHNSON.

The subject of this notice, Sister Clara Johnson, was born February 24, 1812, and died June 5, 1908, making her stay on earth 96 years, 2 months and 11 days. She was Clara Bowers before she was married to Uriah Johnson, at what date I cannot tell. All her brothers and sisters are dead, and she leaves 5 children, 20 grand children, 31 great grand children, 6 great, great grand children. She some years ago joined the Missionary Baptists, but said she was never satisfied with them, and came to the church here at Hamilton, about twelve years ago. I think she said she was baptized when she was 84 years old. She was ever afterwards a faithful and loving member. She was old and infirm for many years before she died, and could not get to her church, and I visited her as often as I could, and she always spoke of wanting to see us all, and her willingness to depart and leave the world. She filled up the measure of her days in usefulness to her family and others. She was one of the most industrious women I ever knew, and would knit or do some kind of work as long as she could. At her burial I felt a strong impression to read the last chapter of Proverbs as descriptive of her many virtues.

We feel she is sweetly resting from her long life of toil to awake in newness of life in the resurrection. May the Lord comfort those left behind.

Affectionately,

Hamilton, N. C. M. T. LAWRENCE.

Yanceyville, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—I hope by the help of the Lord we have built a house for preaching, and we desire if the Lord will to organize a church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday at Oak Grove, in Caswell county, N. C., about 4 miles west of Yanceyville, and about 7 miles from Country Line and Moore's Creek, almost in due line with Pleasant Grove and Reidsville.

I would be glad if some of our preachers would visit us and preach for us.

Your brother in hope,

JAMES W WATLINGTON.

ELDER J. J. JOYCE.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—It is with a sad heart I make the attempt to write of the death of my dear father, J. J. Joyce, and to ask you to please publish it in the Landmark.

He was born September 26, 1852 and died February 16, 1908. On the 3rd of November 1870 he married Sarah E. Vernon, to which were born thirteen children, six boys and seven girls, of which nine are living, and all married except three, one boy and two girls. When he died the youngest was twelve years of age and I pray God will look over those who survive him with an eye of pity and that they may be brought up in the way he tried to raise us all, for he did so much crave to raise us right. He would so often tell us that a good name was to be desired rather than great riches. Surely children never had a better father than he, a wife a better husband, and neighbors a better neighbour. He was always ready to help in time of need.

I do not know just how long he has been a member of the Primitive Baptist church as the old church book has been misplaced, but it has been about 28 years. I am going by my age and I know I was quite small when he joined. I can just remember seeing him baptized and he began preaching the same year.

Oh, to go once more to old Buffalo, our home church, and see him in the pulpit and hear him preach again. And when I think of his being gone and will not again be before me in this world I cannot stand it. It seemed to me that for the last few years he tried more than ever to show people the right way. Last summer he nearly broke down, but he continued and said he would rather die preaching than any other way, and so he did.

I wish everybody could have heard him preach and sing and pray while on his death bed. He was only sick about ten days but during that time his mind was placed only on heavenly things, and he would quote scripture as he always would and sing some of the prettiest songs I ever heard.

On Wednesday before he died the following Sunday he seemed to be considerably better and talked to us all as he always did. He called for me to come to him, and when I went he told me to sit on the side of the bed that he wanted to talk to me, saying he had lots to tell me, but was so weak he couldn't tell much now, but hoped the Lord would enable him to tell all. He said I have studied lots about Hattie since she died as to whether she is at rest or not and I thought she was but didn't know, but I do now it now. I asked, do you? And he answered, yes I know it just as well as I know you are sitting here by my side.

Hattie was my sister who died almost three years ago. He also said, I have a sweet promise for you children. He said he always felt like he couldn't die satisfied not feeling his children would be saved and that he had that promise and was willing to die as he ever he was to take a drink of water.

He also said he had a promise for himself that he knew he would go to rest and for us not to sorrow for him when he had gone. He said to me, if you could have been carried to where I have been, you wouldn't want ever to come back to this world again. He said he had been carried right to the top of the fountain of mercy, but we have to wait for God's time to take us. He said he had been with the apostles and they had taught him how to preach and that since I had been sitting by him he had heard the sweetest singing anybody had ever listened to, and that one of the songs had been given to him for us which he wanted sung when he died. He was so weak however, he couldn't tell us what it was. Oh, how I wish I knew what it as, but he never could tell. I told him he had done on this bed some of the sweetest preaching I ever heard and he asked me who else had heard him. He also said if he preached any more to call in everybody so they could hear what he had to say. So just before he died he seemed to have another call to preach, and he did, praying before commencing as he always did and at the close his voice was clear and distinct to all present. After the sermon he called my oldest brother to him and said, there is only one little thread holding me here and if you would clip it I might rest. Then he said to him I pray that God may show you all before it is too late just what brought me to where I am and the faith I now believe in have believed in for these many years. After saying this he turned on his back and died as easy as if he had fallen asleep.

Brother Gold, pardon me for being so lengthy, I only wish I could write all he said so the readers of the Landmark might read it, but it would take up too much space. I pray that God may have mercy on us in our sad bereavement and especially on our poor little weakly mother, she looks so lonely. How desolate home is; how we miss that sweet smile. May the Lord enable us to say, Thy will be done, and may we all be prepared to meet him in heaven where there will be no more sad farewells.

Written by his oldest daughter.

ROSIE E. CARDWELL.

Elder J. D. Draughn, was too sick to fill his lately published appointments.

Elder George Boswell, expects to preach at Bethany Saturday and fourth Sunday in August, funeral of Jonathan Collier.

The Lower Country Line Association is appointed to be held with the church at Surl, Saturday and first Sunday and Monday of August.

Visitors will be met at Helena, Friday morning.

The Upper Country Line Association will convene, the Lord willing, with the church at Reidsville on August 15, 16 and 17, 1908.

The Lord has given us favor with the graded school board and we have obtained the use of the graded school building and grounds for our accommodations during those days.

We propose, with the blessing of the Lord, to entertain and take care of association; yet if any of our brethren and friends actually prefer tenting on the grounds there is ample room. However, we make this special request of them, that no tent be erected nor fire built within one hundred yards of the school building, for we want to return it in as good condition as it will be delivered to us.

Our brethren, all lovers of the truth and of law and order are respectfully invited to be with us and partake of what we hope will be a feast of fat things on the lees.

L. H. HARDY, Pastor.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

I wish to call the attention of subscribers to the Landmark to my advertisement of July 1, stating that a splendid likeness of the author would appear in my book. The word splendid was added by a friend of the Landmark office in my personal praise. I mention this to show that I would not call my likeness splendid. I did not know this until the Landmark was printed. My advertisement stated that a person had stated that a person had stated that my poems are the best he had ever read. This was an error of type setter. It should have been many persons.

Dear friends, I would not desire to make my poems public if I did not know they were written for the upbuilding of humanity and composed of moral and religious subjects. Many have told me my poems are the best they ever read, and many of the people are of the Primitive Baptist faith.

I feel that no one will ever regret sending in an order. Those not of the Baptist faith say they are excellent. Persons of all denominations praise my work.

Price of Book $1.15 each; more than 300 pages in the book.

Notice will be given when the book is ready.

Yours to serve,

J. J. THORNE.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elder P. D. Gold :

Dear Brother—I attach a letter from my friend Dodson, of Richmond, and I trust that you will publish same in the Landmark as early as possible, as it is in reply to one which I wrote, and which was published in the last issue of the Landmark.

Mr. Dodson is a friend of mine whom I have learned to admire, and with all his sinfulness which seems to make him feel his inability, I feel that I love him as a child of God. Doubtless many others of those who have taken up their cross after reading his letter, will feel the same way, toward him. To all such, I feel that my very heart goes out to them in the love of God. You have met Mr. Dodson in person, and if you can make a few remarks by way of reply to Mr. Dodson, through the Landmark, I would ever so much appreciate it, and I know that Mr. Dodson would. He is very attentive at our meetings which we have here on every fourth Sunday and Saturday before, and I did not suppose that he was simply giving his appearance for an outward show, but his letter to me is rather a pleasant surprise, in that it affords me the double assurance that the spirit of the Lord is with him. May it be his good pleasure for Mr. Dodson to go and tell God's people what great things have been done for him, whereof he is glad. With all of his weakness and sinfulness, he is I believe, a child of God, and the Primitive Baptists would I am sure give him the right hand of fellowship. But if he was righteous, then I could not say that he would receive or merit the fellowship of that church or people, for they are all poor, weak, sinful creatures, and it is for the sinner that Jesus atoned on the cross. The Lord will finish the work which he has begun with Mr. Dodson, and then I feel that he will realize a happiness which comes only from obedience.

At our last meeting two were baptized, and one received by letter. Thus blessed and remembered of the Lord, we feel to rejoice, and praise his holy name.

I have the permission of Mr. Dodson to send this letter to you for publication, if approved of by yourself.

Your brother in love,
W. R. MOORE.

Mr. W. R. Moore:

Dear Mr. Moore—Doubtless it will be a surprise to you to receive a letter from me, but I have just been reading in the dear old Landmark, and came across your letter headed "What can we do to merit our soul's salvation." For some reason, I know not what, it seems to me that this letter of yours was written for me. I feel that I can appreciate the blessed truths contained in your letter, which are many, and I only wish that I possessed the ability of expressing my feeling in writing. I often find them expressed so much more beautifully by others in the Landmark than I could possibly do, which I assure you is a great comfort to me as I am made to realize that no one could write as they do without having trod the path I am traveling, and this gives me renewed hope, feeling sure that our leader must be the same—the Lord.

Mr. Moore, I have read your letter several times and studied it closely believing as I am made to, that God must have directed your pen. Somehow, I feel that he is commanding me through you, yet he only knows my heart. I know that I love the Primitive Baptists, and I cannot help it, either; and I often long to be classed among them, but I am such a sinful being and so unworthy of his wonderful love, that I made to doubt the holy calling. I have from time to time, made up my mind to live a better life, and when I get good to join the church, but I am no nearer that point now it seems, than when I began trying to live better.

I believe that I have been made to know that there is nothing which man can do to bring the Lord under obligations to save him, for his very thoughts are full of sin. As you know we have it preached to us on every street corner almost, that it is left with man as to whether he shall be saved or not, but such a doctrine does not agree with the experience of a child of God, if I know anything about such an experience, which I hope I do. I know there is nothing good in me, and that unless I am sustained by God's all-powerful arm, I am lost forever. He alone is able to lift us up out of the miry pit, and put our feet upon the rock, and Oh! if I could know that I was one of the number for whom Christ died! But it is best that I should not. I have many a time tried to ask the Lord to give me some unmistakable evidence of his love for me, and there have been times when I was made to feel "Surely God has heard my prayer" and I would feel that I could not doubt longer, but after a while I was made to fear again, and so my life has been one of doubt and fear. I think sometimes that the love which I have for you people, should be sufficient for me, but I fear that if I were to offer to the church and be received, I could not live the life that is required of a christian. It is so hard to do right now, and I fear that I could not do any better, should I unite with the church, and if the people of God could only see me as I am, they would no doubt turn their backs upon me.

I enjoy coming over to Manchester, hearing the good preaching, and being with you people, and I assure you that I feel deeply indebted to you for your kindness to me, who was a perfect stranger to you in a sense, yet before I ever saw you, I felt to know you.

I believe that that little band which meets over there on the fourth Sundays and Saturdays before is one over which god is carefully watching and I hope that he will continue to bless them in the future as he has in the past. If they are his he will guide their footsteps and bless them according to their needs, and "if God be for them, who can be against them." They are not so many in number, but God has promised that where two or three are gathered together in his name, he would be with them. Such a God as this! what would a poor sinner do without him? He is ever present, everywhere at the same time, though sometimes when we get low, in spirit, we fear that he has forsaken us, forgetting for the time being, that he has promised never to leave or forsake those whose trust is in the Lord.

I trust you will pardon me for writing thus at length, but evn now one-hundredth part has not been told, nor indeed can be. I felt impressed to write you a few lines and I trust that the impression was of the Lord. May the Lord continue to bless all those who feel the need of such a God as the Primitive Baptists try to trust and serve, and may he bless us all to serve him better, is my prayer. Sincerely,
R. LESTER DODSON.

TWO LAWS. X X

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—By request, and some going forth of mind, I submit a few thoughts on the following subject: Matthew 25: 1-13 verses. The parable of the ten virgins.

It is in much weakness and fear I make the attempt, and unless guided by the spirit, I know I will make a failure. According to my weak understanding there are two laws existing with the children of God: the law of the mind, (Christ) and the law of sin (flesh). Paul said he delighted in the law of God after the inward man, but he saw another law in his members warring against the law of his mind, and bringing him into captivity to the law of sin which was in his members. This rule of action motion of the flesh produces sin, which law is applicable to all flesh and cannot bring forth other than that, while the law of the mind comes down from above and cannot sin, for he that is born of God cannot sin, which is clearly demonstrated in Matthew 7th chapter, 18th verse, "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." Hence we find there is a natural and a spiritual in one; a first man Adam, which is of the earth earthy, natural, fleshly or sinful, while the second man Adam is a quickening spirit, the Lord from heaven, righteous, holy, pure and without sin, and only at such times as when we fully under the power and influence of this second man or holy spirit can we worship or bring an acceptable offering unto the Lord. For the wisdom of this work is foolishness unto God, and I do believe all who have been born of God have realized or witnessed the true existence of these two laws or minds, which might be classed as foolish and wise.

Now I want to consider what the above parable is like. It is the kingdom of heaven, and I do not understand this kingdom to be composed of the non-elect, but of God's chosen or elect—those whom Jesus came to redeem. Then evidently only those who are saved with an everlasting salvation can be numbered in the kingdom which Jesus came to set up, which according to his own words is not of this world. John 18: 36, "My kingdom is not of this world." Then those who are saved with an everlasting salvation are the ones to be likened to ten virgins. Then do we believe in the mind and purpose of God that there were five of them whom God had not known, when God hath spoken of any being conformed to his own image only those whom he before knew. Yet we find five foolish and five wise virgins, five admitted into marriage and five not, five taking lamps with no oil in them, while five took oil in their vessels. Now those foolish ones to my understanding represent the natural part which trust in self or the law which fails to make the comers thereunto perfect, and is of God, enters into the worship of God or Marriage, fully divested of all self, or selfdependence or foolish part, only proven to nature when the final test comes and it realizes it must step back on the same level as all other flesh and is shut out. The strong man is now bound with his goods destroyed, while the wise, that which is born But wisdom teaches us at such times that we can't buy our way in, and that God has never known us in the worship of God according to the flesh. These lamps or law the flesh walk by, sight, while the spiritual walks by the light of grace wherein the law has been fulfilled. I do believe these foolish and wise will travel on together until these mortal bodies shall return to their mother earth from whence they came and the spirit returns to him who gave it, but after the dissolution of these, our mortal bodies. I believe this foolish part or law of sin will be done away with, which the foolish virgins to my mind represent and that which enters eternal glory will be fashioned like unto his own glorious body and this old foolish part will all be left behind. Then shall the travel together of the foolish and wise, or warfare between the law of the mind and law of sin be fully at an end, and we shall be able to worship or serve the true law without confusion of sin or self, at least this is my hope.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. M. CREWS.

Kernersville, N. C., R. F. D., No. 3.

Dear Mr. Gold—It will probably surprise you to get a letter from such a sinner as I am. I am in receipt of the 15th issue since sending my subscription and I want to tell you how much I appreciate it. I trust you will live long and prosper in the good work which I believe to be the work of the Lord. Although I am not affiliated with any denomination still I believe if any denomination is right, it is the the Primitive Baptists. I believe in their way of worshipping the true and living God.

Mr. Gold, my object in writing this is for you to reprint, please, the life and experience of Sarah Hamilton. I heard my father read this years ago in the dear old Landmark and I am filled with a desire to read that wonderful experience again. I hope it will be convenient for you to reprint it some in the near future.

Please Mr. Gold, also give your views on the following questions: Do you believe in Sunday schools? Why or why not? In foreign mission work? Why or why not? What does it take to make a fit subject for baptism? Many are called, but few are chosen? My object in asking the last question is to know if all that God calls are saved? I had an argument with a comrade some time ago on this subject and I told him I believed that all God called were saved, because he said, I have power both in heaven and in earth to give to as many eternal life as my Father has given me. The same God is calling sinners all the time to come unto him, is wooing and beseeching them to come, and if they did not come to God would turn a deaf ear to them after a while and wouldn't help them and so they are forever lost.

Has God a certain part of the people which he will save and the remainder he will send to hell. Some of the elect has been saved in heaven, for John the apostle saw 144,000 were the elect and another number that could not be numbered which are the ones being saved now by going to work and saving themselves by making one step towards God and his making two towards you. Not by works are ye saved lest any man should boast, etc., etc.

Mr. Gold, I did not write this long letter for publication, however do as you see fit. Hoping there is a crown of righteousness laid up for you in heaven. Yours as a worldly sinner,

E. F. PEARCE.

Princeton, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—I send you a one dollar and a half money order to pay for the good old Landmark another year. I did think I would try to do without it, but it seems like every copy that comes gets better. Your writing and Brother Lester's is as good to me as any preaching. The last time I met you was at Strawberry larst August, and Oh! what a wonderful good meeting we had there, and the people were so kind to us.

Sometimes I feel so thankful to the Lord because his mercy endureth forever, that I want to give the dear Lord all the praise.

Dear readers, when I read the scriptures where the dear Saviour says "it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." I feel like this is to me and I am one of those he was speaking about. Then again I feel so low spirited, I don't know whether I am any thing or not. But we read that we may know that we have passed the brethren, and if I know any thing I know I love the people of God, and I desire the prayers of all his dear people. Dear brethren and sisters, I want to tell you about what great preaching we had at Spray, N. C., the first Sunday in this month. There were so many members together, and I felt like we had a great feast handed to us straight from God through brother Flinchum and brother Spangler. I felt like the presence of the Lord was there with us all and Oh! what a happy season to meet with so many dear ones that I love. Sister Ivins was baptized by brother Spangler Sunday morning. Dear Brother Gold, I had a desire to write a little, but do as you like about publishing this in the Landmark.

Your unworthy sister,

EXPERIENCE.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I have been trying to write you for some time, but a feeling of unworthiness has kept me from doing so. I will tell you some of my experience, if I have any. If God ever did anything for me, it was as long ago as I can remember. I went on in worldly ways, at times promising God to do better, but kept getting worse, until 1906, when I was cut off from the world.

I had pneumonia and fever, but before this, for about two years I was afraid of everything. I felt something was going to kill me, and that I did not have a friend in heaven or earth. It seemed that even wife and children had turned against me. I would go off to myself to try to pray God to have mercy on me, but it seemed in vain, for I was so sinful. My pillow was wet with tears begging God for mercy on poor me. All this was before my sickness in 1906. While I was sick I thought I saw hell and heaven. At first it seemed I was between the two, and Satan said, "Come go with me and I will give you all this money," I thought I saw stairs, and money was rolling down them. But I passed by, and on the other side I saw heaven and I went to the door, and the Lord said, "Come back," and I awoke with this hymn in my mouth "When I can read my titles clear," and how happy I was. But it was not long before something said to me, "Can you read your titles clear?" Then I was in trouble again. I was not yet able to be up and I wanted to see some of the church members, but did not want them to know what was the matter with me, for I thought they would say I was a fool. As soon as I was able, I went to meeting, and it seemed the preacher told my feelings. I did not offer to join them for

I did not think they would receive me, so I put off as long as I could. When I went to the church and was received in full fellowship and baptized it looked like the heavens were opened to me for two days, and then I began to doubt myself, and think I was a hypocrite, and that gave me much trouble. I am so far from what I ought to be, I am afraid I am not one of God's little ones. All the others look so much better than I feel, for I am from death unto life because we love so unworthy. Pray for me dear brethren and sisters that I may hold out faithful to the end.

Brother Gold, come and preach for us when you can.

Your unworthy brother, if one at all,

H. F. MORTON.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Sir and Friend—I herewith send you, for publication in Zion's Landmark, a letter written by Elder L. H. Hardy. I have much enjoyed reading it; and feel that others will do the same.

Truly yours,

THOMAS LAMBERT.

Mr. Thomas Lambert:

My Dear Sir and Esteemed Friend—Your very good letter to me came two days ago and I don't know when I have enjoyed one better. I feel like others of like precious faith should enjoy it with me which I know they would if you will give me your consent to leave it at my disposal which I hope you will.

The text to which you called my special attention, I will try to notice as soon as the way is open, which I hope will not be long.

Who knows how terrible are the sacrifices of the wicked, but those whose eyes have been open, to see into their own heart?

Here is one of the ways in which the flaming sword turneth to keep the way of the tree of life, and it is here fully manifested, that the Lord will not accept any sacrifice that man can bring. David felt this and said if thou wouldst have accepted I would have given it. While the thousands of rans of Israel were at his command he saw that these would not make the required atonement; nor if all the rivers of the earth had flowed with the oil of the sanctuary would all this have appeased the wrath of a righteous God against sin. Ye are not redeemed with such corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, but with the precious blood of Jesus Christ. This is the one acceptable sacrifice with which God is well pleased.

The opening up of the light of his countenance in our poor benighted hearts, is the way that we see our own abomination and the utter impossibility of our coming before God. Yet, that is the very place that we must bow. The poor woman with the issue of blood had to come there as did Mary Magdalena. They brought neither money nor price to offer to the Lord but poor broken hearts and spirits of deep contrition. These were, in the sight of God, of great price and he had mercy on them and healed them. Thus in their own abomination, that is to see themselves so plainly, as to be made to hate themselves because of sin, they came to the Lord in the prayer of the upright which is God's delight. Thus they are led to think on and to rejoice in the name of the holy Lord shedding abroad in their hearts the hope of glory. How blessed is every one who is led by the spirit to trust in the Lord.

Here we enter the blessed experience of the fact that God has made bare his holy arm for us, and has stripped off everything human, or of the world. This he fully accomplished when he yielded himself up in death and went in the sepulcher. When he arose for our justification, there was not left a single trace of human effort, nor of law service but our sins were fully atoned for and all our iniquity was fully covered. Then in the eternal wisdom of God, he has given his divine holy spirit to utter out to us the things he has before provided and made sure in his death. In his ministration he makes known that the great captain of our salvation has led captivity captive and now that he has ascended upon high he gives gifts unto men, even the forgiveness of sins, and sets the prisoner free. Thus he is brought to know the truth and to live in the liberty of the gospel. Here the ways of the Lord open and every high place becomes a pasture with springs of water and streams, for the washing with fire for purifying that all things fleshly shall be burned up and the house of Levi purged and refined until the refiner's image shall appear in the purified heart. Thus we pass through the valley of Achor where we rejoice in the doors of hope. The seal of the covenant is given in Egypt and we are washed in Moab to find rest in Canaan with the blessing of God forever more upon his holy mountains of praise where love constrains us to lift up the voice in high and exalted strains to reach unto the very head and place the crown and royal diadem of our God on the head of our adorable king immanuel, before whom we will bow forever and praise him for his great salvation.

Oh praise ye the Lord ye host of his?

Exalt his holy name ye seraphim.

Praise the God of gods, and king of kings;

Sing ye unto him forever more.

The Lord bless you. Remember my regards to sister Lambert and all your family with our friends.

I would love very much to visit you again and will when the Lord opens the way for me to do so,

I hope the praises of Israel's God may fill your heart and soul and make you fruitful in his holy calling.

Your true friend,

L. H. HARDY.

Dear Brother Gold—If you can bear with me, it seems that I must write you again, as I cannot work or get my mind on work. I am due many letters, but can't answer them all at present. So if I write anything that you think they would care to see, I will try to let them all hear from me at once. It is for present relief I am writing. I had said in my heart, in response to some kind of a feeling which came over me that seemed to be urging me to write. No, I will not write now, for the Baptists are, perhaps, tired of seeing my name already and I prefer not to worry their patience any more for the present, at least. But it seems I can't think of anything else, and I don't know how to write. I am entirely dependent, even for language to express my feelings.

For some time before our association came on, I looked forward to it with pleasure, and the hope that I might be blessed to attend; and as time passed I grew more anxious until my very heart would leap for joy at the thought of once more having the privilege of meeting, mixing, and mingling with so many of the dear children of God, and hearing the blessed gospel proclaimed by the mouth of his faithful, true and tried servants. My anticipations grew so high that I was almost overjoyed at the thought before the time came. But ah, how I was brought and made to feel all the week before it came—so low that I was made to fear that all my desires and anticipated pleasures were of a fleshly nature and the dear Lord was not in it at all. On Monday I received a letter from Elder Thomas Bell saying that he was sick and could not come; at which I was made to feel, in that so many of my anticipated joys were cut off, that I was not worthy, but utterly unworthy in every sense, of the joys for which I had looked forward, a cloud of gloom and darkness seemed to overshadow the meeting for me, and I was left to realize my total dependence upon God, and to him only could I look, with a desire—one that seemed to me strong and sincere—that he would fill all vacancies with his holy presence. I received the second stroke, which again smote down my anticipated pleasures to such an extent that I wept like a child, feeling that surely I was mistaken, and my desires were not of the Lord. Still I could not think of staying away. It seemed that I must go, which I was blessed to do, and to realize that, even these things the dear Lord had worked together for my good in teaching a forgetful creature of his that ever important lesson of looking to and trusting him alone for every blessing. As I went my heart burned with the desire that the dear Lord would be in our midst—filling all vacancies with his holy, lovely presence, and that we might be enabled to worship and serve him alone. And O! how tenderly and graciously he hearkened unto my cry—even the cry of one who is vile—making it to me one of the sweetest meetings I have ever attended. I canot find language that will but just begin to express the joy and sweetness I was given to feel. It seems to me that I realized a more full and complete manifestation of the love of Jesus displayed in the hearts of his children, even to this poor worm of the dust. The theme of the preaching was love from beginning to end—everything was love. How glorious it was to view this love the love of Jesus—as it, in one delightful stream, from every bosom flowed; for it seemed that every one was filled with love, and Jesus' image was manifested in every countenance, which made the meeting a little heaven below. And, O, how sweetly enchanting was the gospel's charming sound. How satisfying to the hungry soul.

Brother Gold, I do believe I was, at intervals for a few moments at the time, satisfied with the bread of heaven. David said in Psalm 105:40 "The people asked and he brought quails, and satisfied them with the bread of heaven." He spoke at different times in the following language. "The meek shall eat and be satisfied." "They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house." "They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied." "Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things." "I will satisfy her (Zion's) poor with bread." He did not say how long they would remain satisfied, but we take it for granted, it was only a short time. David himself is a good example, for some times we hear him exclaiming with ecstasy of joy in language like this, "Praise the O, my soul, and all that is within me, praise his holy name." Then suddenly we hear him crying from the depths of his heart unto the Lord to restore unto him the joys of his salvation, and similar language at different times.

I believe when we are "caught up in the spirit on the Lord's day," that the old man, in old Adam's nature—this vile sinful self, is left behind—entirely forgotten, and we are brought into an entirely new and heavenly view, where we see and hear things that are unlawful to be uttered—we can't utter them, they are unutterable. There is no language in these low grounds of sorrow that can express them; and I believe, for the time being, which is only momentary, of course, that the new man is happy, and "satisfied with the bread of heaven"—this heavenly view, in which he sees Jesus, and feels it is enough. These blessed seasons do not last long; but when we awake in his likeness then we shall be forever satisfied.

O, glorious hope of precious love;

It lifts my soul to things above.

I have not been able to express my sweetest thoughts.

Much love of the household of faith, and especially to my correspondents—will write you separately when I can.

Your little sister in a sweet hope.

LOUISA A EDWARDS.

But he willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, (And who is my neighbor. Luke 10:28.

This is a matter of importance, this is a question asked by a lawyer, a man who is expected to be well educated, a man that has cultivated brain, as for this world's good, and I think should be cultivated in the way that would teach who is my neighbor; but can a theological school trainer fill the heart so as to train it in the grace given by the supreme power.

Atheist is one who disbelieves in a personal God. Then who is my neighbor? as a justification of the lawyer. Jesus said what is written in the law; how readest thou? and he answering said, thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself. And he said unto him, thou hast answered right; this do, and thou shalt live. Then if a man were to travel from one city to another, and were to fall into the hands of thieves who would strip him, and give him bloody wounds, and leave him lying on the way-side could it possibly be his neighbour? And by chance there should come down a certain priest and when he saw the lame man, and passed him on the other side, and likewise a Levite when he was at the place came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan as he journeyed, came where he was, and when he saw him him, he had compassion on him. Now who would we claim to be our neighbour? Oh, the dear one that showed us compassion. Then if we be taught of the spirit of Christ we then are filled with the love of compassion we then want to aid with helping hand and heart in compassion. As we realize that Jesus the spiritual light leads us in a good work instead of doing as we please, then is when we learn who is our neighbour. We learn compassion unto the poor, for when our neighbours aid us it is in the time of a wound, for he is able to bruise and then to heal. But if we never receive a bruise we can't be healed, but if we touch we will be strong; but drink and be healed. Dear people in the days of my young manhood while I was without the compassion of the good Lord and led astray by Satan, I was so ready to scorn the poor old gray hairs, and pass them on the other side, but oh, when I was born again I then could see they had compassion on a poor vile sinner like me. but oh how sad it would be to the young like me to visit our home church and could not see a poor old gray head there with heart bended low, and say with lifted eyes come home dear child to taste the Lord's pure oil and wine.

A young unchanged heart is so ready to mock or call the poor old grayheads crazy or foolish. Once I remember way back yonder when the so-called peoples' party was in such a bloom there brother Gold in your county was a man on his way home from Wilson, on a short shalve cart, and shalves fell from the axle broke his leg, and soon there came on one of the county commissioners, and he asked him if he was hurt, and the reply was yes sir my leg is broke, and he passed him unknown, and in a short time another man came on, and put him on his buggy and caried him to his wife and little children. Sure we realize here which was the neighbour. Now dear brother Gold I will finish the secret. The lame man was a peoples' party. The first man that saw him was a democrat, and the politics divided the spoil with the proud. Then such carnal things are (evil) when good should be present.

Better to be of an humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud. Then why should we have prejudiced ourselves against our fellow man because he don't see just as we do. If they be enemies pray for them, if they be neighbours love them as thyself. Can a blind man see, can a deaf man hear? A dumb man can't speak. But the seed that fell among the thorns sprang up and the thorns with them. Some fell upon good ground, sprang up and bore fruit a hundred fold, but man is like the grass of the field when winter comes it is cut down, and lying lifeless, but when Spring opens the sun is warm the grass glitters in the sparkling dew. When Christ comes in winter we are cut to the ground, but he pours in oil and wine, and we are raised and stand in the heavenly dew. There we realize that Christ is our neighbour and our wounds are bound and healed, and Jesus is our helping neighbour. Brother Gold, when your heart was young as mine, then you could but enjoy the young comrades of your age. But when you were made to walk with your neighbours then could you not see and realize that two could not walk together unless they be agreed. (Then it is the indwelling spirit of Jesus that brings his church to have one Lord, one faith and one baptism, unto the end.

Then can we serve two masters which are God and mammon. If ye serve the one ye will hate the other. If ye be called to the edification of the body of Christ and you should be asked to stand up for the democratic party of your county, and have all manner of ugly things poked at you. What are you serving (mammon of course.) Why should you desire to come down from the highest office in the world to take a little office given by men? Then could we strip ourselves of a pastor and grade him down in a lower office, (no never, God forbid,) one that is prepared to stand up and defend that spotless garment of righteousness with which all the children of God are clothed by the work of regeneration, and we are told to keep it clean and unspotted from the world by a godly walk and a holy conversation before all men. (Whoso walketh wisely shall be delivered.)" Proverbs 28:26.

FAITH AND PRACTICE.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear brother and fellow worker in the ministry—I hope God has impressed my mind to write on the above subject, "Faith and Practice" in the kingdom of God or the church. Jesus gave the church rules to be governed by and gave her the right to keep and govern her own house. Jesus tells her the penalty if she fails to follow the rules he gives which is death, and if she follows his rules she shall receive her reward which is life, glory and peace. We can't be in sweet fellowship with the church and be in fellowship with the world and with everything that comes along that looks nice to the natural eye and mind. My young preaching brother and laity, we can't be in touch with every set of faith and practice in the world and live with dear mother, our home in this sinful world of sorrow and witchcraft. Oh be careful, dear little one, where you go and what you say and do. If we don't take heed to the doctrine, faith and practice we will get caught in a snare. Jesus said press forward, for he that looketh back is not fit for the kingdom or the church for it brings confusion in the home of all that love the Lord our God who ruleth us and gives us a foretaste of our eternal home: Jesus says, watch and pray lest we fall into a snare. If we listen to everybody what kind of faith have we? Is it not dead faith. What kind of home would we have? Would it not be a den of thieves, robbers, liars and tattlers? Let us be careful how we act, talk and walk. They caught me in their snares but I hope God brought me out and made me willing to watch and pray and strive for that good old way that leads to life. There is but one way and that is Jesus, one church and Jesus is the head and chief moderator.

Dear brethren and sisters, I have been in touch with the anti-christian power and went down to the gates of hell and there learnt that salvation is of the Lord and not of men. I have a little hope yet that God will lead me in the future and direct my tongue and feet and that he will help me to walk in the old path of faith and practice of him that worketh all things after his own will and purpose, for he has not given us the spirit of fear but of power and of love and of a sound mind. Be not therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord or of me his prisoner, but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God who hath saved us and called us with an holy calling not according to our works but according to his own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began. Let us be strong in the faith and practice of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and let us be careful how we live. Let us hold to nothing but strong doctrine and faith in the kingdom of God for the time is come and now is that God's little ones will turn their ears from the truth to the teaching of men having a form of faith and practice which will lead the obedient ones to a spiritual death if we listen to their teachings.

I know what I am writing about as I have experienced it and I hope God has directed my mind to write in love to the household of faith and practice of the church. I would not give the sweet fellowship of my good brethren and sisters for all the constitutions of men and devils on earth. We cannot serve two gods at the same time. We cannot fellowship with our brethren and sister and belong to a secret order and continue to sit with them we are acting the hypocrite. Let us drop everything that belongs to the world for the sake and cause of Christ and his kingdom.

Dear brethren pray for poor sinful me as I have a heavy burden to bear the cause of Christ in this mountain country. I should be pleased to see our church draw a straight line of discipline of faith and practice and seek to follow Christ our head, the giver of all grace, love and mercy. Let us strive to live in harmony in the practice of Christ and the apostles. My desire is to live to see our church in sound faith practice and in fellowship everywhere as one body in the Lord.

Brother Gold if you think the above will strengthen anybody you can publish it though if not cast it by.

Your little brother in love and cause of Christ,

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother in Christ—I feel to have a mind to write a short letter to your valuable paper for publication if you deem it worthy of space in its columns.

Brother Gold I have been thinking a great deal about our association which was held with the High Hill church, Union county, N. C. We had a well behaved audience for which we feel thankful and the people appeared interested in our meeting. I feel like saying it was good for us to be there and wait on the Lord. This was a very dear meeting to me.

The brethren were so wonderfully blessed of the Lord to preach the gospel. Brother Gold, your sweet preaching did me so much good that I feel to know it is the everlasting gospel of Christ. Dear brethren and sisters let us think how good the Lord is to us with his holy presence. Let us rejoice in him with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Yes I feel we had a feast of good things from a far country during our association and when the parting came on Monday, the last day of the feast, eyes were flowing with tears of joy and gladness filled all hearts. Brethren and sisters think how good the Lord is to us. Did he not die for us and rose for us and did he not ascend for us? He is of long forbearance and tender mercies to his children. I hope I feel thankful to the Lord for such meetings, so I can meet with the dear brethren and sister from different parts of the country and to see the manifestation of love one has for another. It is the love of Jesus that draws them together and makes them set together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Such love is the love of God to such sinners as I feel to be, but whether I am one of the Lord's little children or not I know not, still I have a little hope that I am. There is one thing I do know however, I love the brethren and sisters but I often times feel they can't love me because of my vileness. But this is a love the world knows nothing of. Behold what manner of love the father has bestowed on us that we should be called the sons of God! Therefore the world knows us not because it knew him not. No the world knows us not nor will it ever know us because God's children have been taught in the high school of heaven and no earthly school can teach what God has taught his children in that school. In that school he taught them they were poor vile sinners and that he had all power in heaven and in earth and that there was nothing too hard for the Lord to do. He taught them that salvation was of the Lord and not of man and if ever saved it was by grace and grace alone and not by anything good they had done. He taught them he had chosen them in Christ before the world was. He taught them many wonderful things the world knows nothing of and the world by wisdom cannot find out. "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord and great shall be the peace of thy children." Yes he gives them peace of mind when they follow him and rest to their weary souls. Jesus tells his children, "if ye love me keep me my commandments.

Brother Gold, I was so glad to meet you at our association and hear you preach the sweet truths of the everlasting gospel of Christ with the rest of the preaching brethren, for it was all good preaching to me. While on the train from Monroe to Charlotte you talked to me of many sweet things, and though we had to part at Charlotte and if we should never meet again in this world I hope we may in yonder bright one where there is no parting and sad farewells.

Dear brethren and sisters I hope the Lord will be with you all and prosper your way in the Lord. So farewell, brother Gold, I hope you will cast the mantle of charity over this imperfect scribble and if you do not think it worth publishing throw it aside and all will be well with me.

Yours truly,
W. R. HELMS.

We are much in need of money to pay expenses of publishing the Landmark.

We have a number of poor Baptists that want to read the Landmark, but are unable to pay for it. If our friends wish to help such send me some money and it will be applied that way.

Brother Samuel Snider requests my view of Jeremiah 9:1-7. (Read this scripture.)

This scripture is addressed to Israel. Whenever Baptists or the Lord's people think they cannot do wrong, they are on dangerous ground. One of the afflictions of Jeremiah was to behold the wickedness of the Jews, and to Lear heavy tidings to them. Jesus above all others bore the guilt of his people. While prophets could not atone for guilt, yet they more deeply felt and lamented the downfall of Israel. They loved Israel and the more they loved them the greater was their grief, at the transgression and downfall of that people. We expect men to receive the due reward of their deeds: What we should abhor is our evil doing and the sins of Israel.

Men reading the abominations of Israel of old are surprised at their hardness of heart and their wickedness, but the more we know of our own transgressions the less are we astonished at the misdoings of others.

The Jewish nation were furnished with all that could be done for man in the way of opportunity for him to show what might be done by him. The finest country in the world was given him. The greatest man of faith was his father. Other nations were shown that he was God's favorite. The finest code of laws ever delivered by man came to him. The priesthood of a most royal line served God for him. Penalties were clearly foretold should be inflicted on the transgressor. Great-rewards were sure to come to the obedient. Nothing was uncertain or left at random.

Now was man worthy of such confidence or treatment? How did the matter work out? Was the most noted deliverance from oppression ever accorded to man appreciated or even remembered by him?

Never did a nation fall from the higher position, and forfeit all its opportunities. They forsook the true God and were married to false gods. They forsook the fountain of pure water and hewed out broken cisterns that could hold no water. They perverted every precept of the law, and trod under foot every favor bestowed upon them.

Finally they with wicked hands crucified the onl begotten son of God who came to them as his own. They desired a murderer in his stead, and called down the blood of the just one on their own heads. For this God destroyed their place and nation, and still both are accursed.

How then are men saved if not by works of the creature? By the grace of God.

THE BIBLE.

In the scriptures God speaks or declares his will. There were many enemies that presented themselves and their views which occasioned the declarations of divine truth for all time. Such occasions were used to show the difference between right and wrong in order that men might know once for all time what is truth and what is falsehood. For instance after Paul had preached the gospel to the churches in Galatia, and the brethren after this had been corrupted by false teachers who taught that by creature works their cause might be helped—such as being circumcised—an act taught in the Bible, but a figure of inward circumcision, the substance, so that to go back to the shadow denied the coming of the substance which is Christ himself, so that to go back to the shadow would render Christ of no avail at all. So that Paul earnestly condemned their course and protested against such a fatal error. This declaration of Paul stands good against all departures from the will of God.

One declaration of the will of the Lord stands forever in its place against what is wrong. There are no changes that men bring about that can change the will of God as proclaimed in his word. The word of God is unchangeable and final and ends all controversy.

When Jesus was on earth all manner of error thrust itself in his way, or was up in order that men may know what is wrong at all times as well as what is right. Nothing but Jesus is right. Nothing that opposes the Lord can ever be right. Nothing that he does or teaches can ever be wrong.

The bible is a test of a man's character. If one has the right spirit in him the bible is a comfort to him. If there is any thing wrong in a man the bible exposes it because it is the standard to which all come, and by which all are weighed, or measured. Surely this is the most blessed of all books and the people who love the word of the Lord are blest above all people.

P. D. G.

The best way to settle fusses is to confess your faults on to another, and pray one for another.

I do not know how to deliver you out of a trouble if you have done wrong. If you are suffering for righteousness sake you can bear the trouble for you are already blest.

Watch as well as pray is the word of Jesus. But when danger is imminent it seems that neither to watch or to pray is present.

What does man know of the future?

Nothing. Then how safe and important for him if God chooses for him and directs the course he is to take.

How dependent it should make me if I know not what my danger is. How thankful I should be if I have been kept from danger and guided aright.

P. D. G.

Brother C. H. Shoemaker requests my view of 1st John 2:2, "And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world."

Primitive Baptists are a peculiar people in prescribing all power and worthiness to the Lord God, and claiming that there is nothing good in man, except it is of the Lord. Though God made man upright, but lo man hath sought out many inventions. Every thing that God made. For instance fruit was good but when man transgressed God's holy law death passed upon every thing, for when man the head died death reached every thing in and under his dominion. That state of peace and healthfulness had been disturbed. Poisons were found. Enmity was developed. Danger lurked. There was no absolute safety any where on earth.

The tastes of man called for stimulants and hence gluttony, drunkenness, self-indulgence, the gratification of dangerous appetites was indulged.

Warnings were given. But men do not fully heed them.

Fruit, decays and rots, and there is developed in the rotting or death like state of decay a liquor that produces inebriation. Man eats the fruit prohibited, and then God drives him out of the garden of Eden which the Lord had planted, so that Adam can no more eat of that fruit, for man has never returned to that garden. Man has never improved on any thing God has made, but has perverted and corrupted the right way of the Lord, and wrought sin in the earth.

Now what and where is his hope? How can man be just with God? Not by any thing that man can do, can this be accomplished. It is the act of God to justify the ungodly. Romans 3:25 declares that God hath set forth Jesus as the propitiation for our sins through faith in his blood. His obedience reconciles us to God through Christ. To propitiate is to make favorable, well inclined, gracious, to atone, to appease, conciliating favor. The death of Jesus the propitiatory or atoning sacrifice whereby God manifests every divine blessing.

Now this propitiation is not for Jews only, but for the whole world, or for Gentiles as well as Jews. Jesus is our advocate with the Father. We know that his blood cleanses from all sin.

Have we faith in that blood? Do we in heart rely alone on his obedience to bring us to God that we may receive the forgiveness of sin through his blood?

If Christ lays down his life for a sheep, and that sheep fails to hear the voice of Jesus, and therefore fails to follow Jesus, what becomes of the death of Christ as to that sheep? If God gives a sheep to Jesus that fails to come to Jesus, what is the consequence? If Jesus fails to see of the travail of his soul will be satisfied? Primitive Baptists have no question in their minds on this subject. They believe that Jesus shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied, and that all that the Father giveth to him shall come to him, and that Jesus will in no wise cast out any that come to him. For it is of Jesus and for Jesus sake that God is gracious unto us. There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, and we need no other. He therefore is the propitiation for our sins, and not only for the Jews, but for the Gentiles also, and Jews and Gentiles include all the world.

QUESTIONS.

Friend E. F. Pearce asks me

1. "Do you believe in Sunday Schools? Why? Or why not?"

I do not consider Sunday schools authorized by the Bible. Their founder has not been dead much more than 100 years. If they are authorized by the Bible why were they not installed earlier?

The Bible commits the training and bringing up of children to their parents or parents or relatives, and it always puts the charge of matters in the right place. The things taught children by the Bible are according to sound doctrine. Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. If the teaching is according to truth children will not depart from it when they are old.

Do you think that children are brought up wisely in these things? See how ready, high minded, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy they are. By their fruits ye shall know them. If modern Sunday schools are right they would prove it by the good fruit they bear in obedient children who honor their parents and ornament society.

2. "In foreign mission work? Why? Or why not?"

The foreign mission system is based on money. But ye are not redeemed with such corruptible things as silver and gold from your vain conversation and etc. But ye are redeemed by the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb verily ordained of the world, but manifested in these last times for you who by him do believe in God. So that the common tenets held and advocated by the defenders of missions, that the salvation of mankind is limited and controlled by the efforts of man in their salvation, we believe to be contrary to the scriptures,

We hold that the Lord sends his preachers and they come to the daughters of Zion proclaiming peace to Israel, and that then is no failure in the salvation of all the heirs of promise.

It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. When the gospel is preached, as many as were ordained to eternal life believe. The Lord sends the preacher and opens the heart of the hearer.

It is ordained that they that preach the gospel shall live by the gospel. Freely they have received and freely they are to give. Those that hear the gospel preached have an impression to give. In doing this they are blest. It is more blessed to give than to receive.

3. "What does it take to make a fit subject for baptism?"

By grace are ye saved. So it takes the grace of God. It is manifested in repentance to ward God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ. None are prepared for baptism, but believers. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. A burial in water, or buried by baptis into the likeness of the death and resurrection of Jesus is a true baptism. It does not put away the filth of the flesh, but it is the answer of a good conscience toward God by the resurrection of Jesus. Christ from the dead. As the resurrection shows the raising up of one who was dead, so before one is prepared to be baptized he must be dead to sin by the body or death of Jesus, and married to him who is risen from the dead. Thus he receives the answer of a good conscience towards God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

4. Many are called but few chosen."

In the 20th chapter of Matthew an illustration is given. An householder goes out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard. He agreed with the laborers a penny a day, and sent into his vineyard. At different hours in the day he called them agreeing to give what was right. Finally at the 11th hour he sent laborers. These last received every man a penny making those last labored but one hour equal to those had borne the burden and heat of the day. It is said in the parable the last were first. They that were first also were last. Those that labored but one hour were called before those that had borne the burden and heat of the day, and received the same as those that labored all the day.

All of these were called or saved, but some were chosen in preference to others. Paul was the last of the apostles in the calling, yet honored above any of them by his Lord. He was sent to preach to the heathen as no other man ever was.

He that thinks he is first and claims special honor is last. He that feels he is least is preferred before others. Thus there is a most blessed equality in the kingdom of heaven.

There were a hundred and forty and four thousand saved of the twelve tribes of Israel, and the same number in each tribe.

After this John beheld a number that no man could number of all nations, languages and people and kindred and tongues crying with a loud voice, as they stood before the throne and the Lamb with white robes saying, salvation unto our God and to the Lamb. But while it was a number that no man could number it was yet a definite number, an elect number known to God; and not one of them claimed that anything he or any man had ever done in any sense caused it; but they all cried as Jonah did salvation is of the Lord. This is the one true song that all the redeemed sing, whether they were saved before Jesus cam in the flesh or since, whether they were Jews or Gentiles, whether they were literal Israelites or heathen.

P. D. G.

BORN OF GOD.

One born of Adam inherit his nature and standing. Adam is of the earth earthy—is dust and to dust shall he return. The curse of Adam abides on all his offspring. The death—nature of Adam preys on all his children. The law of heredity surely is apparent every where and on every variety of animal or vegetable life. Everything brings forth of its own kind. This law is so fully established that it needs merely and only the statement of the fact, to manifest its certainty.

Now shall not one born of God be also a partaker of the nature of which he is born? That which is born of the spirit is spirit. It is a birth of incorruptible seed and therefore it cannot die. This spiritual birth causes no change in the nature of the Adam man, for the Adam or sinful nature of man is as sure to die after one is born again as is that nature in an Adam man that is never born again.

But there is a new man after this birth of the spirit, and this new man never becomes old. He is renewed in the spirit of his mind. Christ is in him the hope of glory. The principles of Jesus are in him. He is meek and lowly, loves the truth, loves righteousness, is a lover of God, lays down his life for the brethren, and dwells in the love of God. His conformity to the life and character of Jesus is apparent in the image of the spiritual man. The revelation of Jesus Christ in him brightens his character, and flavors his speech with goodly words, and he bears the image of the heavenly in his desire to do right; and without doubt in the resurrection life he shines in the glory of Jesus, for he shall awake with his likeness, and as surely as he has borne the image of the earthy so shall he in the resurrection bear the image of the heavenly.

However innocent an infant may appear at its birth, or however unlike death some may seem as they grow up to stalwart manhood with stout brawn and agile limbs, yet it does not require many years in order to develop the vanity of earth and the frailties of age, and prove the decay and death that has lurked within from infancy. For by the disobedience of one many (all Adam's offspring in past tense or at the time of Adam's transgression) were made sinners, and our life and character from our birth to our death proves this: so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous, even all for whom Jesus gave himself. In the covenant of grace where one lives, dies and rises for the many, it is sure that salvation shall come to all the seed even all of the heirs of promise. Hence they shall be granted repentance through Jesus who is exalted a prince and a Saviour to grant repentance unto Israel and the forgiveness of sins. Also the faith of Christ shall be in them together with the revelation of the spirit of Jesus in them, and they shall grow up into him in all things; for he is the head and they are the body, and of his fulness have they all received and shall receive abundance of grace. For where sin abounded even there grace did much more abound, that as sin hath reigned unto death even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

Then love covers the multitude of sins. For God which is rich in mercy with the great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses and sins, hath quickened us together with Christ. By grace are ye saved.

Then the grace of God shall cause every one born of incorruptible seed by the word of God to be manifested unto and in eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, and each one shall be like him in that resurrection life.

For Jesus Christ hath life eternal and this life is manifested in him. Therefore he saw no corruption even when he was laid crucified in the grave. Death had no dominion over him, for he was able to lay down his life and he was able to take it again. This eternal life is manifested to the heirs of promise and is hailed by them as their eternal deliverer. The life they now live in the flesh they live by the faith of the Son of God. The faith of Christ which works in them supports even this mortal life, and quickens us from the dead unto the enduring as seeing him who is invisible. This blessed life of Jesus works in us unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulness, and in the end every one shall appear before God in the perfection of Jesus Christ. P. D. G.

FREEDOM.

Few words contain more that is good than the word freedom. It lifts its professor above the shackles of all slavery, or tyranny of evil principles, or vile passions, thus enabling him to rule his own spirit, and keep under the evil passions and lusts of his nature.

Such freedom redeems him from the envy so cruel, and jealousy of a morbid nature, enabling him to think no evil of another; but to think the truth. It could not cause him to fellowship evil in another, but it so liberates him that he rejoices in the truth. It ministers great joy to him for another to do well and prosper in the truth. There is ample room in his heart for all well doing and prosperity of others. For another to do right and receive the reward of good deeds gratifies him. For love enables its professor to rejoice greatly in the happenings of all that are divinely blest.

The evil principles of envy, jealousy and hate that so rankle in the bosom of the wicked inflicting upon them great distress, and souring their disposition so that they are murmurers, and are disconnected, and profane, find no soil congenial to such noxious weeds and thorns in those plants of the Lord that are nursed and watered in the Lord's garden.

What is there to oppress a man whom the Son of God makes free? He is not under the curse of the law, for Christ is become the end of the law for righteousness to him. He is not the servant of the devil, for Jesus has bound satan and cast him out of this subject of grace. He is not trusting in man, nor under man's power, but is under law to Christ which is the law of love. He is not under the dominion of sin, but grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord. He is not under the power of the love of worldly gain, money or fame and honors of men, but he seeks those things which are above this world. He takes not thought for the morrow, knowing that his Father has all these things in his hand and he knows what he needs, and will supply all his needs. Such an one is kept perfect peace because he trusts in God. The more fully he is the servant of the Lord the greater and more perfect is his liberty or freedom—freedom from all desire to do wrong and exemption from all that is hurtful. For if the son makes one feel he is free indeed. P. D. G.

TEETH.

"Thy teeth are as a flock of sheep which go up from the washing," Song 6:6.

What are some of the beauties and uses of the teeth?

They stand as sentinels armed at the gate of the body to challenge the entrance of any enemy into the house. While chewing food for the use of the body it is their business to not admit any unground substance into the body, but allow only that to enter that is separated into small quantities so that it may be easily digested. This tends to make the body healthy and fruitful.

There is also a fighting force in the teeth to inflict pain on an enemy. Cnashing on one with the teeth is an exhibition of anger full of fury.

Sound and well shaped teeth add much beauty to the face of the person. For teeth are set in the face where they are seen when one speaks, and contribute greatly to the beauty of the features.

What shall we say of the spiritual signification of teeth? They are set forth in song as of great utility, fruitfulness and beauty. Sheep are a great symbol of the Lord's people. Their hearing is good. Their walk is excellent. They make straight paths for their feet. They are washed and therefore clean—pure. They eat pure food. Their pastures are on the mountains of the Lord. They eat the pure food of Canaan. They masticate well, they carefully inspect what they eat. They do not eat that which is unclean. They do not swallow down gulping in large quantities unchewed like a dog does. They grind up, consider, reflect upon, masticate whatever enters their mouth, and as faithful sentinels their teeth taste, watch, guard and serve the body with diligence in feeding the body. They therefore taste their food as they chew it, and find much sweetness in the word of God as they eat it. As teeth separate food taken in the mouth into small particles and hunt and pick out hard or bony substances, and chew the food well, and then admit it into the body prepared for digestion, so there is in the head of him, the chief shepherd of Israel, all the wisdom that searches out pure food for the sheep, for he gives himself and they eat the flesh and drink the blood of the Son of Man and have eternal life, and therefore shall never die.

The teeth of the spouse or bride of the lamb are as a flock of sheep which go up from the washing clean, faithful, healthful, every one having twins for there is not a barren one among them. Surely then her husband loves her, and her beauty is such as she reflects the excellencies of her husband, so that she shall be forever to the glory of his peace. She hath received double at the Lord's hands for all her sins. She remembers her misery no more in that glorious risen life in Jesus, and her fruit is unto holiness and the end is everlasting life. As Job's last days, after he came up from the washing clean and fair so that he received of the Lord double in blessings, and his last days were his best days, so the bride of Christ comes up in the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost as most beautiful, comely and glorious as she is robed in the righteousness of Christ and is one with him and complete in him in the day of the gladness of his heart.

P. D. G.

PAUL AT ATHENS.

See Acts 17:24-31. Perhaps one of the most notable occurrences is presented by the pen of inspiration as Paul stands in the midst of Mar's hill and said, men of Athens I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

The city of Athens was the most famous then on earth for its beauties, its arts and science, its philosophy and learned men who spent their time in searching after new things. For the mind of man especially when stimulated to inquiry seeks something new.

Paul visited this famous city. Why did he not say no one in this proud, fashionable and learned city will hear me, and therefore I will not go there, nor preach to them. Some Baptists talk like the Lord has not power over the hearts of the proud men, not knowing that by nature we are all proud. It is not necessary for us to possess any thing in order to be proud. The man that has nothing is as proud as the one that has millions. He may not display it as much, but it is in him.

As Paul passed along in Athens he beheld an inscription to the unknown God. This he called too superstitious. Superstition consists in false worship, false religion, worshipping one knows not what. The Athenian had many temples or altars. One was to the unknown God. Yet he was the true God and the only true one.

The philosophical sects of Athens finding Paul there preaching something new to them took him to the Areopagus—their highest judicial court on Mar's hill, and said may we know what this new doctrine is? He seemed to them to be a setter forth of strange gods, because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection.

The doctrine of Jesus Christ is certainly a new thing in the earth that never becomes old, nor is ever so fully comprehended that it ceases to be wonderful. It is both new and old, and nothing else could ever be that way. It is older than time, yet there is no decay in it, nor does it ever cease to be a glorious mystery, and therefore it is always new.

Surely it was a strange thing to those philosophers to be told of the Son of God in the flesh, his death and his resurrection from the dead. When Paul preached Jesus he preached the Unknown God. What a salvation to know the truth. Freedom from ignorance and correct knowledge of the truth is unspeakably great. This will lead one to worship in truth and to live righteously.

Paul not a whit behind the chief apostle in all true senses stands up before these learned men with no blush of shame, with no apology to men, with no shrinking, yet with no arrogance nor boasting, with no apology for the doctrine that he preached, and declares that the God whom they ignorantly worshipped is the true God that made the world and all things therein, who is Lord of heaven and earth, and dwells not in temples made with hands. Men build houses for themselves or others to live in. But the God of heaven is before all worlds, and made all. He cannot therefore need anything, nor can men build him a house to dwell in. He inhabits eternity. Neither do men's hands worship him. These Greeks were great builders of houses, exceeding in fine arts, and perhaps thought they added something to the pleasure of their gods by what they did as house builders. But our God is not worshipped with men's hands as though he needed any thing. Instead of his needing anything he gives to all life and breath, and all things. What a wonderful God he is.

Now we should not suppose that if we are the offspring of God, as certain of your poets have said, that the God-head is like to gold, silver, wood or something of which we build temples. Not only this, but he has made of one blood all the different races, nations, languages, tongues, colors and manners, all the nations of the earth however much they may appear to us to differ. When we go to war against them and slay them, or defraud or wrong them we are slaying or wronging God's creation that are no worse than ourselves, but made of the same blood.

He has determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation: that they should seek the Lord happily they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us. For in him we live and move and have our being. How new and wonderful this doctrine that a personal, invisible, creator is hid, reigns and has fixed our habitation and bounds, and his predestination provides that they should seek the Lord. There is no chance or uncertainty in God's administration of the world, only as with the creature there is uncertainty and peradventure because he cannot search, for known unto God are all his works from the foundation of the world. Because men cannot comprehend them renders them not at all uncertain with him who does all his pleasures, nor does his predestination furnish them with any excuse for doing that which they know is wrong. His predestination is an encouragement for man to hope in God, and repent and trust his Son Jesus Christ, because God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, wherein he has given assurance unto all men in that he has raised him from the dead. For Jesus his well beloved son was found in fashion as a man, and knows our frame, and has suffered the just for the unjust, and in that blessed perfect righteousness of mercy and truth, justice and peace met together judges. Surely then this is a righteous judgment.

No greater favor nor honor is ever bestowed on a man than to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified, a prince and a Saviour for sinners.

A special reason why Paul preached there was that the Lord had some people there that should hear from Paul's mouth the wonderful doctrine of God our Saviour, and among these elect people was a member of the Areopagus named Dionysius, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

When they heard Paul on the resurrection of the dead some mocked. Till this day there are mockers concerning the resurrection of the dead. It is the dead that are raised up, not some body that has never died. One say sneeringly it may be how are the dead raised? If one is not dead how can he be quickened from the dead.

Others said to Paul we will hear thee again of this matter. When men do not believe, yet cannot answer nor refute the arguments advanced or the truth presented they sometimes say we will hear you at some future time, or we will consider this hereafter.

Paul speaks of a mystery that we shall not all sleep. When the last trump shall sound the believers then living shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, after the dead shall have been raised incorruptible, and together shall they all be caught up to be with the Lord.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first.

Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words: 1st Thessolonians 4:16, 18.

Is there any comfort in this blessed teaching to believers in Jesus.

OBITUARIES

HETTIE JANE JOHNSON.

Sister Hettie Jane Johnson, was born September 14, 1849. She was the daughter of George and Hettie Hobbs, and was married to J. H. Johnson, December 19, 1867; by whom she had nine children six of which are now living with 4 grand children. She also leaves one brother and one sister and her husband to mourn their sad loss. She had the first stroke of paralysis in July, 1898 from which she never recovered, though she was able to get about a little, and had another stroke in July 1903, which rendered her still more helpless, and she had to be rolled about in her chair the remainder of her life. She was confined to her bed about two weeks before she died, and fell asleep in Jesus we believe on April 13, 1908. I think she was baptized into the fellowship of the church at Coneoto in the year 1871. She was I think the second one baptized and remained all her life after a lovely member of said church. As long as she was able she was faithful to her duties as a member of the church, and made manifest her love for it and her Saviour; and we believe is gone to rest with him forever. May her loved ones left behind find comfort in the thought that their loss is her eternal gain.

Affectionately,

M. T. LAWRENCE.

ELDER HENRY PEEL.

The church at Smithwicks Creek, Martin county, N. C., being in regular conference, Saturday before the fourth Sunday in June 1908 passed the following memorial resolutions upon the death of Elder Henry Peel:

Whereas, it has pleased God in the dispensation of His providence to remove from our midst our much beloved brother and highly esteemed pastor, Elder Henry Peel, who has been preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ ever since June 1860, who was, four years later (1864) ordained to the full work of a gospel minister, and after the death of Elder William Whitaker in 1874 chosen with Elder Levi Rodgerson pastor of this church and served, faithfully in that office until his death which occurred Saturday night, May 23, 1908; therefore be it resolved:

1. That in his death we feel that we have sustained a great loss which can be filled only by Him who doth all things well and we bow in humble submission to His great and holy will.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family of our deceased pastor and in their bereavement we point them to that Jesus whom he so earnestly preached. We also send a copy to Zion's Landmark and a copy to the Gospel Messenger for publication.

3. That we have these resolutions recorded in our church book.

WM. J. GRIFFIN, Moderator

WM. H. DANIEL, Clerk.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove by death from our midst our beloved brother Hasting Blalock, who has been a faithful and consistent member of Camp Creek Primitive Baptist church for 42 years, and served us as clerk until old age, and declining health caused him to resign, and was senior deacon at the time of his death, March 14, 1908.

Also brother Thomas R. Blalock, son of brother Hasting Blalock who had been a faithful member for more than ten years and was suddenly killed by a falling tree on February 7, 1908.

Resolved—Therefore while we are grieved at their loss, we believe, hope, and trust, it is their eternal gain, and bow in humble submission to the will of the great head of the church, who doeth all things well and makes no mistakes.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be put upon our church record and a copy sent to the editor of Zion's Landmark with request that he publish the same. Signed by order of the church at Camp Creek in conference on Saturday before the second Sunday in July 1908.

J. A. HERNDON,

Moderator.

J. H. GOOCH,

Church Clerk.

Dear Brother Gold—By request, I will write a short notice of the organization of a new church near Yanceyville.

After a sermon by Elder B. B. McKinney, a presbytery was organized, consisting of Elders B. B. McKinney, J. P. Johnson, for the purpose of organizing a Primitive Baptist church.

Elder B. B. McKinney, was chosen moderator, and brother T. A. Steinfeld, of Pleasant Grove, was asked to act as clerk.

Brethren Thomas Rudd, of Country Line, and W. C. Apple, of Pleasant Grove, were invited to take seats with us.

Those having letters were then asked to present them, whereupon brother Robert Jones and sisters Emma P. Gwynn, of Pleasant Grove, and brother James W. Wathington and sister Laura A. Wathington, of Lick Fork, came forward with letters of dismission and were received.

Articles of faith, that are generally accepted among Primitive Baptists were adopted.

The moderator then gave them the right hand of fellowship and pronounced them a constituted church to do business for themselves.

Agreed that the new church be named Oak Grove, and that their meeting days be the second Sunday and Saturday before in each month.

Elder J. P. Johnson, of Moon's Creek was chosen as their pastor.

Others are expected to unite with this church soon.

Brother Gold, some time ago one or two school houses were closed against Elder J. P. Johnson in that neighborhood, which seemed to hasten the building of this house—special mention should be made of Mr. Jeff Foster, who headed the list with $100 and was the general manager. He certainly was a faithful worker.

This house is about 4 miles north-west of Yanceyville. They ask travelling ministers to preach for them in their rounds.

HELP.

We have had and are now having difficulty to collect enough money to pay our current expenses in publishing the Landmark.

Many of our people are poor and far away from preaching, and therefore seldom hear the gospel preached. If those who have money to spare will send me some moneys this will enable me to send out the Landmark to some such brethren and sisters. Remember this and help them as it will be a favor they will appreciate.

To increase our subscription list will enable me to disseminate or scatter and publish the doctrine held by our people to the comfort of the Lord's hungry ones.

Writing is a general way of publishing our views, and gathering the Lord's people. It makes manifest what we believe, and others learning thereof, and having the witness that they believe likewise are strengthened to confess the Lord's name—just as when a child of God hears the word preached which searches him out and encourages him to hope that salvation is also for him.

Writing the truth is a great method of expressing in enduring form that does not pass away that which is commonly believed among us.

Therefore our association will be held in our own church house and our preaching in all the church houses as it may be necessary.

The Methodist church has the largest seating capacity and therefore the first sermon at eleven o'clock on Saturday will be preached there.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elder William Woodard:

Dearly beloved brother in Christ—I feel tonight that I want to praise the blessed Redeemer with ten-thousand tongues if I could, I don't feel then that I could praise him any where near the limit of praise, to his blessed work and power. Seeing myself vised up in the power of the lion's jaw O, blessed Redeemer, lift me out of the horrible pit of sin and death, and invite me once more to come up to that blessed city set upon a hill. O my beloved father in Israel, to day I saw and felt why God had spared and impressed you to visit us at Salem and preach the unsearchable riches in Christ, for last week while plowing in the field, I felt the angel of God prepare your way in my poor and sinful heart, that there may be once more peace, union and fellowship bestowed unto the little vine that he in the days past and gone had planted there with a finger of love. O that I could only see you once more down upon a bended knee. I feel I want to rest giving praise unto the eternal God. I am bound to confess that I have never before felt such love and communion in and through a sermon that I was at liberty to gather, for I do feel and trust that it brought peace through the pathway of our Lord Saviour Jesus Christ, the peace maker; for, they shall be called the children of God. This is a fountain that never runs dry, but oh my soul that cloud that comes by tempest is always dry and only gives a wind storm, and never wets the poor weak worms of the earth with the dews of heaven.

I was impressed with these words, "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath for it is written, vengeance is mine; I will repay saith the Lord." Therefore if thine enemy hunger feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head, Romans 12:19 and 20. Those words I feel were the words that prepared the way of peace and love, but if they be not heeded then what do we see? We see stripes, balls and chains worn for iniquity, for they are many, and I feel most sure when both sides of a subject like ours have been debated on, and the query announced, it shows that both parties have done wrong. Then I feel we stand in with Solomon's song saying, Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines, for our vines have tender grapes. This I feel has reference to a disturbance in the church. When one is hurt with another, he will go out into the world and gather up all the news he can get, and keep growing in malice, instead of doing as we are commanded to do, go to thee alone, and this word alone means Christ like, in love with no malice in the heart; but talk in love and bear with one another, so as each other will be able to bear his part. And remember that Christ bore it all.

Brothr Woodard I could say much more along this line, but I remember you are feeble and I don't wish to worry your patience, but wanted to tell you how happy I feel to think there is peace once more at home. I wish every Baptist in the world could know this, and how joyful I do feel to think I have written this in peace, for peace at home makes peace abroad. You will please make due allowance for my imperfection, and remember me at a throne of grace.

Your little unworthy brother if one at all.

A. W. THOMPSON.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear brother—Enclosed you will find a letter from dear brother Isaac Webb and I have concluded to send it to you for publication so the brethren and friends might know his condition and administer to him in his declining days if they feel to do so. As ever yours in humble hope,
J. R. JONES.
Greensboro, N. C.

J. R. Jones:

Dear brother—Yours of the 9th to hand found us both enjoying tolerable health, though we will not enjoy the vivacity of youth any more. I am in my 75th year, my wife is 2 years and 25 days younger than I. I had rather use my cane than not even to walk across the floor and I am not able to work anymore. Myself, wife, children, grand-children and great-grand-children, together with the children and grand-children who have married, of both dead and living, number nearly one hundred and seventy. All our sons and son-law, daughters and daughters-in-law, except our youngest daughter and her daughter husband are Primitive Baptists, also several of our grand children.

I am not baptizing many of late; we seem almost at a standstill.

Elder D. S. Webb, came down lately and staid two or three days and nights. He has wonderful influence among the Baptists. His wife is a great sufferer and although she is terribly afflicted she has such confidence in his ministry she does all she can to enable him to visit his many churches.

It seems I feel as much interested in the prosperity of the church as I ever did. I have made about one month trips for each of the last four years. In July 1904 we took a little trip and got forty-seven additions, in 1905 we took another little trip and got nineteen members, in 1906 still another and got twelve and last June we got four. We have gotten a good many more along at other times. Owing to my badly crippled condition I have missed several meetings since the last of October. I am a tolerably bad cripple anyway, and sometimes weigh two hundred and forty pounds. One morning I had climbed a fence and in getting down on the other side my left foot caught fast in the fence, about two feet from the ground, and the top rail broke and I fell back on a large rough rock breaking some of my ribs, between my right hip and right shoulder blade. I could not rest anyway, but am now recovering considerably.

I learn that brother Dameron is dead, but it is appointed unto all men to die.

I hope you are well and will please write again. I always love to receive letters from my brethren. I hope you may be kept by the power of God unto salvation and that brotherly love will continue, for he that loves is born of God. "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren."

Good-bye,

ISAAC WEBB.

Hillsville, Va., Route 3, Box 45.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I enclos. one dollar which I wish you would place to my credit on the Landmark. I have received every number since the 15th of November, and up to to the 15th of

May have not missed a single copy I have read every communication in them and must say I have enjoyed the writings very much, and while all the writers are strangers to me in the flesh I have been made to feel they were my kindred in Christ.

I have had many desires to see them and hear them talk of the goodness of God and be at their church meeting and hear their pastors proclaim the glorious news of salvation through a crucified and risen Saviour

Brother Gold, one dollar is not much, but it will help you some on expenses.

Please continue to address my paper to ELDER J. F. SUTTON.

Paris, Monroe county, Mo.

Dear Brother Gold—Enclosed you will find a good letter from a very dear brother and as I feel it is too good for me, if you have time and space please publish it in the Landmark so others may see it. He is a dear brother and has given me many good crumbs when my soul was hungry.

Brother Gold this is the first time I ever attempted to write, though have had a mind to for a long time. I have been reading the good old Landmark tonight and it seems as though I have been hearing you preach. If I could write like the dear brethren and sisters it would be such a pleasure to me, but I am so unworthy, so low down, way down in the low-grounds of sorrow. My little hope is all I have. Please pray for me. Your little sister in hope,

MARY ANN DEANS.

Wilson, N. C.

Dear Sister in Hope—I have just read your comforting letter in the Landmark and while reading it I was wondering and thinking of the watchful eye that sees us anywhere we may me, and these words came to me, "One faith, one Lord and one baptism." We learn he is able to send his comforter to New Mexico as easy as he does to

North Carolina, and has people there, kept by the same faith and by the same Lord, washed by the same blood of the lamb and purifying the hearts by the same purifier, representing a death, our little hope by repentance of sin, turning darkness into light, making crooked ways straight, rough ways smooth and by smiting satan with a two-edged sword and leading us in the marvelous light by the same commandment of taking up the cross and following Jesus. And by it we are led down into the same liquid grave, put out of sight and raised up by the same purifier, representing a death, a burial and the same resurrection and in Christ Jesus one Lord, one faith and one baptism. This, I feel dear sister is enough to satisfy us that God is not a universalist God, but the same yesterday today and forever. There we realize the great burden of baptism put upon us as a duty and we are never relieved of burden until we perform our duties in baptism. Why? Because we have one faith, one Lord and one baptism, and he teaches all by the same judgment and commands all with the same commandment, to honor thy father and mother, love thy neighbor as thyself and etc.

I have often thought of John when Christ commanded baptism by him, and I think of his unworthy feeling as he expressed to Jesus. Why there cometh one whose shoes I am unworthy to unloose. I feel the same unworthiness visits the Old School Baptists, as God I believe meant it for good. Why? For God's people realize there is nothing good in the flesh, for by nature we are the members of the fallen race of Adam, therefore the flesh is corrupt because it transgresses the law and by it becomes a fallen race, and was unable to perform the duties of repentance. But John came preaching repentance in the wilderness, his meat was locust and wild honey. If we had lived in John's day could we have been what we are now? Yes, of course, because we could have grown to the age of maturity in his day as well as now, for the same Lord and the same faith prevailed and the same baptism was preached by John then as is preached by brother Gold and all gospel preachers. John didn't preach himself, brother Gold don't preach himself. I never heard a Baptist preach self only in the way of repentance, therefore if they preach self unrepented I could not have much if any confidence in them, for Christ came in the world to call not the righteous but sinners to repentance. There we learn that God predestinated a people to seek and to save by sending his only begotten son into the world to seek and to save that which was lost, and to teach one Lord, one faith and one baptism. Then if we be born of the right spirit we realize we are taught to be relieved of that great burden which follows us down into the liquid grave. There we feel we have buried the one great burden of baptism, for the great cross between the foot-steps of Jesus and the flesh is buried after the foot-steps of Jesus; for it is opposite to the ways of the flesh and if we should compare the love of Jesus to an iron shaft which locks by a combination, the keeper would have to know the combination to get in, then the enemies can't get the full fellowship of the saints of God, for Jesus has not shown them their sins, in order to walk after the inward man, which is the indwelling spirit and the glory in Christ which teaches us the combination of his own tender mercy given to his poor people. Then we are brought to glory in Christ Jesus our Lord, for we are taught of one Lord, one faith one baptism.

We see so many good letters written in the dear old Landmark and are made to rejoice, because we feel a drawing together of the writers whether we know their faces or not, for we learn they are taught by the same one Lord, one faith and one baptism, thus showing that the carnal ways of the world are torn up and broken to pieces and brought into a united love and communion with Christ Jesus our Lord. We read it is impossible to please God without faith; then if we have faith we are satisfied with one baptism, if our baptism be of the Lord, and the one Lord teaches us to learn the one combination, which is Jesus, and to walk in the light thereof, for he is the light of the world and shines in a believer's heart, for he is the only way—the one way—the truth and the life.

Now the manner of Paul's preaching was Jesus, "For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified, and I was with you in weakness and in fear and in much trembling, for we are taught it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the true and living God." Thus we realize ourselves when we are made to repent and believe in one Lord, one faith and one baptism, for the burden is so heavy we are brought to feel our weakness in the flesh. This I feel was the weakness Paul was speaking of in first Corinthians, second chapter. He realized that it was impossible for man to save himself, for he goes on to say, "and my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power." We learn in the words he spake that it was in proof to a certainty, the living truths of the spirit, which is power. The power that is able to shut and none can open; the power that can open and none can shut. So if man had the power would there ever be much Primitive Baptist doctrine preached here. I think not, for it is so hard for the flesh to learn the combination of its secret and the whole secret dwells in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

Dear sister please pardon me for writing you such an unexpected letter, but in christian love I hope. You will please make due allowance for my imperfections, and write soon if you have a mind to. Your brother I hope in Jesus.

Wendell, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Very Dear Brother in Christ—I have concluded by the help of the Lord to write a short piece on the duty of the church towards each other and towards God. But before I proceed I wish to give a brief account of my tours through Eastern North Carolina. My first preaching tour was last year, during the months of July and August beginning with the church at Durham and going to the Little River, Contentnea, Kehukee, White Oak and Seven Mile Associations, and this year my tour commenced at Winston but did not fill that appointment as the Missionaries had control of the church house at that place and only allowed the Primitive Baptists to hold two sermons each month. But in the providence of God I was blessed to fill the rest of my appointments on the tour, which were at Saints Delight, Abbotts Creek, High Point, Burlington, Durham, Raleigh and from thence I visited churches in Contentnea, Black Creek, Little River and Seven Mile Associations. On both of these tours I was heartily and cordially received by the many brethren, sisters and friends I met with and I hope by the grace of God was enabled to preach a word of truth unto them which was the gospel of their salvation, and from evidences I firmly believe it was received as such. The many brethren, sisters and friends will long be remembered by me and I do believe they are embraced in my poor weak prayers, and my prayer is that the everlasting covenant may rest upon them and their dear children. I also hope they will remember me in theirs, that a door of utterance may still be given me by my God, that I may continue to preach him and his grace unto the children of God for their comfort and his glory.

In taking up the subject I propose to write upon I will affirm that the grace of God that regenerates men does not make void moral law as the rule of the natural life. Neither does the grace of God make void the spiritual law in the church of Jesus Christ, that God through Christ has established for the spiritual rule and government of all his regenerated people to their sweet peace and consolation and God's glory. But the grace of God establishes the spiritual law of life as the only rule of the faith, practice and worship of the dear children, and for a dear child of God to be governed by some other rule that God has laid down through his own dear son to rule and govern his children in their practice and in their worship of God is Christ and God dishonoring. Is Christ and God unglorifying. And to add or diminish any thing from this one infallible scriptural rule of practice and worship is equally as presumptuous and blasphemous, for there is not but this one way. A child of God can honor Christ and honor God and glorify God through Christ and that one way is by following Christ in all of his examples and walk before God in all the ordinances of his house (church), keep all the commandments and themselves from the errors of the world. For a dear child of God to claim that he believes in Christ and will not observe all the practices that are laid down by him and his holy apostles, is but to prove himself false and a traitor to God and a rebel to Christ, for if one clause is impeached it would invalidate the whole New Testament covenant. If Christ through God did not have the ability, power and wisdom to deliver unto his church a perfect system of laws to govern his children in their practice and worship, he did not have the ability power, and wisdom, through Christ, to save a single soul.

We may talk loudly about the grace of God saving fallen men but by our walk deny it, and bring swift destruction upon ourselves, for to deny his spiritual laws of spiritual life, is to deny the grace of God. Dear brethren and sisters let us wake up to a sense of duty and obligations we are under to our God and to one another, also let us obey God in all things he has commanded of us through his son and holy apostles, then our peace will be like a river and our righteousness like the waves of the ocean.

The fact that God embraced his dear children in the covenant of redemption and his amazing love for them should prompt them to strict obedience to all his commandments. As a proof text I will quote the Prophet Hosea, 4:6, 7. "My people are destroyed for a lack of knowledge; because thou hast rejected knowledge I will also reject thee that thou shalt be no priest to me; seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, so I will also forget thy children, as they were increased so they sinned against me; therefore will I change their glory into shame." For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God. "Let no man deceive you with vain words for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." Ephesians 5:6. If you keep my commandments you shall abide in my love. Faithful and loving obedience consists in our gathering together at the house of God for the purpose of worshipping him, also in seeking to control our children from vice, idolatrous practices and when our meeting times comes stop our business and take our family with us to church, praising God with song, prayer, exaltation and preaching, and also in washing one another's feet, commemorating the death and sufferings of Christ. It also consists in visiting the father and widow in her affliction. And keeping ourselves unspotted from the world. If we would do these things then our light would break forth as the morning and our spiritual health spring forth speedily, righteousness would go before us and the glory of the Lord would be our rearward. Then when we called him he would answer us, he would guide us continually and we would be like a watered garden. Written I trust with an eye single to the glory of God and the good of his church. Yours to serve waiting in hope of a blessed immortality.

JESUS THE ENSIGN AND REST OF HIS PEOPLE.

"And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious."—Is. xi. 10.

In the scriptures we often find the expression, "In that day;" a term which evidently conveys the idea of some distinct and definite period. It refers sometimes to the day of God's visitation and judgment in righteousness upon his enemies, and his chastenings upon his people; to the period of the Lord Jesus Christ standing upon the earth in the days of the flesh; to the day of grace and power communicated to the heart; and also to certain special and peculiar blessings of the manifestations of God to the soul. Then in that day when the Lord Jesus Christ was tabernacling in the flesh, and also in the day when he is revealed to the hearts shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious."

From the words before us, we purpose briefly to notice four particulars.

I. Jesse's root.

II. The ensign.

III. The persons to whom he is an ensign.

IV. The glorious nature of his rest.

I. Jesse's root. Now the first thing which particularly strikes us in the text is the person spoken of, Jesse's root. We are not to understand this literally, as a root of some tree; but it is a figure used to set before us a certain person, which I believe to be none other than the Lord Jesus Christ himself, "Immanuel, God with us," God "manifest in the flesh." And for proof that he alone is here intended, it is written of him in Revelations xxii. 16, "I am the root and offspring of David, and the bright and morning star." Now a root is one thing, and the offspring another; the root and the branch are very different things; and so the Holy Ghost has seen fit in this beautiful figure to set forth the two natures of Immanuel. By the root I believe his godhead is intended; and by the offspring his manhood. Christ puzzled and confounded the Pharisees on this point by asking them if they knew what David meant when he said, "The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool. If David then, call him, how is he his son?" (Matthew xxii. 44.) Here the godhead of Jesus Christ and his manhood are plainly set forth. As David's Lord he is Jehovah; and as David's son, he is man; two natures in one identical person. So that Jesse's root in the text, we understand the Deity of Immanuel in union with his manhood, standing on the earth in the latter day; or, in other words, God in Christ "manifest in the flesh," tabernacling or dwelling among us; and hence we have this blessed mystery unfolded.

The beginning of this chapter beautifully sets forth the humanity as well as the Deity of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is there represented not merely as the root, but also as a rod, "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots." By lineal descent he took his human nature from David and Jesse, "yet without sin;" and "the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord" rested upon him. These terms could apply to nothing but the human nature of the Lord Jesus Christ, because in his Deity, in his absolute godhead, he needed not the outpouring of the spirit, but as man he did, and it was given unto him without measure. He was "full of grace and truth;" and "grace was poured into his lips."

Now in the mystery of the incarnation of Jesus, every poor, sensible sinner is brought to feel, in some measure, the holiness, majesty, and eternity of his holy Deity. For when the spirit is pleased to shine upon the two distinct in the person of Jehovah Jesus, and the fulness of grace and mercy there is in him, and that he stood upon the earth in the latter day expressly for the purpose of being a refuge and hiding place for poor, lost, ruined, and destitute sinners; then the soul is brought to trust in him, being led to look at him by faith as God and man in one glorious person; because on one hand, if he were not God, his hope would perish; and on the other, from the detestable nature of sin and his awful breaches of the law, he could not stand before infinite purity if he did not behold Jesus stooping so low as to make himself of no reputation, to be numbered with transgressors, to be smitten for iniquities, to have his name cast out as evil, to be called gluttonous and a wine-bibber. But he endured all this, that he might come into the low, degraded, and sunken state of his people, and raise them up to everlasting bliss and glory. I have known a little of the sweetness of this in my own soul in days that are past, and have seen the beauties of the Lord Jesus being man as well as God, and God as well as man. For when the eyes have been opened in some measure to see pure Deity alone, it is so forbidding and awful, and we feel the vileness of our flesh to be such, that we stagger and fall backward at the thought of meeting the pure and eternal God. But when we can see Jesus taking our nature, standing in our law-place and stead, and entering into our very circumstances; when we can behold him not only taking our flesh, but the sin and guilt of his people by imputation; enduring the wrath and curse of God, and the pains of hell, we feel then raised up to hope; and though we may not be able to claim him with a full assurance, yet we feel a delight in this truth, that God has "laid help upon one that is mighty," and "exalted one chosen out of the people." Here "we see Jesus made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death," "putting away sin by the sacrifice of himself," and thus becoming the salvation of the church. And when the spirit shines into the heart, and illuminates the dark understanding to see that the Lord Jesus Christ is "the way, the truth, and the life," it produces delight and joy in believing. But I know at times God's people are so shut up in bondage and darkness, and especially those who are under legal teachers, that they cannot see the glory of it. Yet when God breaks the chains of ignorance from the mind, and with a glorious ray of light shows the Lord Jesus as God's salvation, revealing him to the eye of faith as a refuge for those who feel themselves "miserable, blind, and naked," he becomes "the chiefest among ten thousand, and the altogether lovely." The heart will then feel a union affection, and love to him, because of his peculiar beauty and glory. They will see him in his complexity of character as God and man; they will see salvation in him, righteousness in him, justification in him, sanctification in him, and eternal life in him; and they will feel the glory of this truth, "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his son;" and that their "life is hid with Christ in God."

The Lord Jesus Christ is the great object of the spirit's revelation. When he is seen by the eye of an enlightened understanding, and preached in the heart and conscience in all his glorious characters by "the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven," and made known as "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever," he becomes endeared to the soul, and his name is full of sweetness and power. And when the beauty and glory of his person is felt, there is flowing out of affection towards him as the object of the soul's delight. At such a time the heart is warmed, and a confidence, repose, and resting is enjoyed; whilst at other times, when it is not so apprehended, there will be mourning, pining, and longing desires after him whom to know is "life eternal."

II. The ensign. "He shall stand for an ensign to the people." Now I need scarcely tell you, that the simple signification of the word ensign means a standard, flag or colour, which is exhibited for a regiment or army to rally round. The figure becomes more striking if we recollect that in former days, when any prince or famed warrior, or some notable, courageous, and intrepid person, became the king or captain, it was the custom to unfurl a flag or standard, and plant it on an elevation, or on the top of some high hill, and then to sound a trumpet; so that all his friends and followers might rally around him as their captain or king. So likewise, Immanuel has unfurled his banner on the height of Zion, that poor sinners might sit under the shadow of it with great delight and find his fruit sweet to their taste; as Solomon says, "He brought me to the banqueting-house, and his banner over me was love" (So. ii. 4.) The banner of the son of God, which is set up over his people, is the everlasting love of God in Christ. Jehovah Jesus himself is set up as an ensign, around which are all who are discontented, all who are distressed, and all who are in debt, may flock, as they did unto David at the cave of Adullam, when he fled there from the cruelty and tyranny of Saul. So all who flee to Jesus for refuge, who cannot be pleased either with the world, the flesh, or the devil, all who are dissatisfied with themselves and their sins, who have felt that they are in bondage and distress, and under the anger of God in a broken law against their sins, when they hear of Jesus Christ as the captain set up for those who are thus disconsolate, distressed, and deep in debt, make haste to him; and he becomes a blessed captain and Saviour over them. Jesus Christ, therefore, is called "the captain of salvation;" and he is said to be "made perfect through sufferings." See how beautifully David typified him. David was cruelly hunted about like a partridge on the mountain; for Saul hated him, and wanted to shed his innocent blood. But why did Saul hate him? Because the women had sung, "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." And from that time the heart of Saul was full of rancour towards him, and he became jealous of innocent David, but all to no purpose: for David was the man after God's own heart, and the anointed of God. The spirit of the Lord was upon him when he "slew both the lion and the bear;" and he went with him when he slew Goliath with merely a simple sling and a smooth stone. But when Saul was pursuing him over hills, dales, and mountains, he said, "Thou huntest my soul to take it" (1 Samuel xxiv. 17.) Still the Lord his God was with him as his refuge and defense, and became his salvation. And though he was often affrighted, troubled, and in distress on account of his pursuers, and peared forth many cries and prayers lest he should fall into the hands of his enemies, yet the Lord never forsok him; he went before him, and followed after him, and was as a wall of fire around him, preserving him in numberless instances from going down to the gates of death. Thus David experienced many troubles, distresses, and scrows, in order that he might become a perfect captain of salvation to those who came unto him in the cave. So Jesus Christ endured the sorrows of his people and bare the burden of their sins; with the feelings and anguish of imputed guilt, the pains of hell, the displeasure of God, and the hidings of his Father's face even unto death; that he might be "made perfect through sufferings," and know perfectly and exactly what the people of God suffer when they pass through their sorrows, and be able to sympathize with them in their distress and enter into all their cries and groans; "for in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted." He is a perfect Saviour, not only on account of the power and grace that is in his godhead, but because he has passed through sufferings, and endured those very temptations and distresses which the saints more or less have to wade through. So that when a soul is burdened with grief and guilt, feeling the hidings of God's face, Jesus Christ knows and understands it all, for he has felt the same, through the imputation of sin and guilt: and when it is pressed down with sorrow, and cries out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Jesus knows it well. He is able and willing to stand forth as the ensign, and unfurl his banner, in order that these poor, afflicted, and disconsolate outcasts may come to him, rally round, and take shelter in him as the captain of their salvation. If they are not able to live in sin, nor take their delight in the world as formerly, nor do anything to the satisfaction and comfort of their poor souls, they will come as poor outcasts, in their sorrow and distress to the Saviour. There is no other whom they can rally around; they must come to him alone; for he is a brother "born for adversity," and a friend that loveth at all times;" and he will become the captain of all those who are in debt, trouble, or distress.

But how do they come to this ensign? When they are enabled thus to see him standing forth, they will admire and love him, and will feel burning desires towards him, saying, "tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, and where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon!" They will come with petitions, prayers, groans, and a pouring out of their hearts to the Lord to give strength, power, and ability to come; for they have none of their own. So that the soul that has thus come to the Lord Jesus Christ, and is looking to and trusting upon him, having its desire, will, and affections fixed upon his glorious person, that soul has already come to Jesus; and he says to all such, "him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." But to feel with assurance and decided confidence that Jesus is his friend and Saviour is another and an after step, one which the soul cannot take at this time; but when the will, desires, and affections are in union with Jesus, by and by he will communicate more power and love, shed abroad the riches of his grace and mercy, and bring the soul sweetly and blessedly to his feet, placing him under his banner, in the banqueting-house of his love, and causing his fruit to be sweet to his taste. Thus Christ stands forth as ensign and a standard for the people.

III. But let us inquire a little into the persons to whom he is an ensign. First, to "the people;" and secondly, to "the Gentiles."

1. "The people" mentioned here, appear to me set forth literally the Jews, in opposition to the Gentiles, who were always emphatically and peculiarly called "the people," to distinguish them from all the other neighboring nations. Now Jesus stood forth in the days of his flesh as an ensign to his own nation; "he came unto his own but his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." Still some of his own followed him, and stood by him to the last, as John, Peter, and others (though through fear many deserted him for a time;) yet I believe nearly all of them sealed their attachment to him with their hearts' blood.

But the term "the people," has a spiritual as well as a literal signification. The Jews were his people nationally, a people that he loved not for their sakes only, but because of the oath which he had sworn unto their fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They were not his people because they were more numerous than others, for they were comparatively few in number (see De. vii. 6—8;) yet they were his, and typical of a spiritual people, who, as Peter says, were a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people." They are a peculiar people, peculiarly ordained in Jesus to eternal life, peculiar in the everlasting love of God, peculiar in the operation of the spirit on their hearts; peculiar in their feelings, views and affections; and created and preserved in Christ Jesus, for a peculiar end as to their eternal happiness. such as will astonish and confound both men and devils, and which at times is amazing and wonderful to themselves, when they were enabled to realize it by a living faith.

But this people, which shall flock around Jesus as an ensign, will have to pass through spiritually what Israel did literally. They were called to endure hard bondage and rigorous servitude under Egyptian taskmasters; and it was not till they had sighed and cried unto the Lord by reason of their iron bondage that they were delivered. And this is figurative of God's peculiar and elect people, his holy nation. When by the life, light, and power of the Holy Ghost they are brought to feel their bondage to sin, Satan and a broken law; when their souls are brought experimentally here, they will send forth groans, cries, sighs and strong desires to be delivered therefrom. They will want to be released from it, as the Hebrews did when they wrought under the heat of a tropical sun, and were almost exhausted, and beaten with stripes because they could not deliver in the tale of bricks; and being unable to perform their tasks, fell down under the burdens, and cried to the Lord by reason of their sore bondage. And so it is with the Lord's people that are called by grace, when they are brought to feel their sin and sinfulness. But I do not say that all feel the same weight and burden of it, or the same wrath and anger of God in the conscience; yet when the spirit convinces a person of sin, he will grieve and lament in spirit; he will complain and confess his guilt, and struggle and strive to get clear of it; he will feel that he has transgressed God's holy law, and will fall down as a ruined vile, and lost sinner; he will see that if heaven depended upon his works, he is lost forever, and that he could as soon trust to outward profanity for salvation as to any good works of his own; he will see that God's law is exceeding broad, and sin exceeding sinful; that every foolish thought of the heart is sin. And seeing and feeling all this, he will cry and groan to be delivered from it, and will pray the Lord to bless him with a sweet sense of his everlasting love, speak home justification to his conscience from all the accusation of law and Satan, sanctify and cleanse him from all the filthiness of sin, and bless him with joy and peace in believing. This is what all will hunger and thirst after who belong to this peculiar people, who are called out of Egyptian bondage into God's marvellous light. And when they are brought here, they will have to travel out by faith, being called out by the voice of God; they will have to go through the Red Sea in their feelings; and in every step of their pilgrimage they will have manifold discouragements, with many obstacles and difficulties to encounter and surmount, which will appear almost impossible to overcome. Every child of God in his experience will bear me out that he has had at times his way hedged up with mountains on either side apparently insurmountable, with the sea before him and a pursuing army behind him; but when he has come to the very brink and verge of them, the spirit of the Lord has been pleased to reduce them down to a plain, to open up a way through the sea, to cheer and comfort the heart by removing the trouble, and enabling him to surmount and overcome every obstacle. And thus, when they have groaned out their sorrows, the light of heaven has dispelled the gloom and darkness, and they have felt the light, life, and power of God; their souls have been made, ere they were aware, like the chariots of Amminadib; they have overcome the trouble, and have discovered themselves standing in a large place, with feelings of peace, joy, and delight in the Holy Ghost.

Yet before Jesus reveals himself, how painful are all these feelings to the soul! how full of unbelief it is! how unable to believe the word of God, to rest in his mercy, or to trust in his unchangeable faithfulness and loving-kindness! But when God comes in like a sovereign, breaks down all opposition, removes the trial, and shines into the heart with his glorious, refulgent light, then every obstacle is overcome, relief is experienced, and the sinner is filled with joy unspeakable and full of glory, receiving the end of his faith, even the salvation of his soul (1 Pe. i. 9.)

These peculiar and special people are distinctly called by the apostle Paul, in Romans ii. 29, the "circumcision." He says, "Circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God." Now then I believe, the people in the text are God's Jews, his peculiar Jews; they are not Jews outwardly, but inwardly, being circumcised in the heart, having felt the knife of God's truth piercing the conscience. You remember how it was with the three thousand under the preaching of Peter at the day of Pentecost; there appears to have been nothing humanly great or grand, nor anything very remarkable in it. Men in our days sit down to study sermons, to get them up elegantly and deliver them eloquently in an oratorical style, working up the passions of their hearers; and when they have moved the feelings, and drawn out a tear or two from the eye, they call it spiritual religion, while at the same time perhaps it is nothing more than a delusion. But mark the effects that attended the simple and unadorned sermon of Peter to the three thousand. Aye, what but the power of God could have affected it? Every sentence he spake told upon the hearts of his hearers, every word that he uttered went with power to their souls; and we are told that "they were pricked in the heart," and cut to the quick by the sword of the spirit; they fell down before the Lord, and cried out to Peter, and to the rest of the apostles, "men and brethren, what shall we do?" Here then is to be seen the effect of circumcision in the conscience. And if God has raised up such a powerful feeling in your heart either by the preaching or the reading of his word; if he has brought you to himself to cry out solemnly and seriously, "what must I do to be saved?" it you have thus felt the circumcising knife of God, opening up your guilt and sin to view, you will look about with solemn earnestness, and inquire how can you escape from the wrath to come. But the religion of all mere Hebrews, or letter Jews, in the present day, is only form and delusion; their religion stands in the praise of men, and not in the praise of God. Now any natural man may have an outward and external form; but spiritual feeling and inward sensations are the work of the spirit of God alone in the heart. These are the people that shall come to Jesus Christ. Only let a man be pricked in his conscience, and directly he will hear the word of grace with pleasure; it will be good news and "glad tidings of great joy" to him. So that every Hebrew who is thus circumcised in heart, will live to the praise and glory of God's free grace. And when the spirit brings the soul thus to feel that he has rest in Christ, comfort in Christ, salvation in Christ, justification, sanctification, redemption, and eternal life in the Lord Jesus Christ, he will feel then that God has eternally loved him, blessed him and accepted him; and he ascribes all to the praise and glory of God.

Paul again, to the Philippians says, "Beware of the concision. For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus and have no confidence in the flesh." The child of God is brought in his heart and soul to feel the vanity of the world, the deceitfulness of sin, the delusions of satan, and the vileness of self; he knows that he could as soon trust to Satan for salvation as to his own heart; he would have no confidence in himself in any shape or form; all his glorying is in the Lord Jesus Christ; his soul presses toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Christ is the life of his spirit, the desire of his soul, and the glory of his heart; and though he turns aside, and tries to live by his own strength and legality, yet his guilt and helplessness will drive him back again to the sinner's friend. The spirit of truth will show him that God has put every thing in the Lord Jesus Christ; that he has treasured up all supplies in the covenant head; that it has "pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell;" that he is made "head over all things" to his body the church, "the fulness of him that filleth all in all;" that in him is unchangeable mercy and eternal life; that all the graces of the spirit are in him in their inexhaustible fulness, as hope, faith, love, life, and holiness; and that it is all treasured up in him for his redeemed people; that so they come naked, to be clothed; hungry, to be fed; thirsty, to drink the waters of salvation; ignorant, to partake of his wisdom; and receive out "of his fulness, and grace for grace." Here, then are the characters that come to Jesus as the standard bearer, and the captain of salvation.

2. Again. The text says, "To it," that is, to this ensign, "shall the Gentiles seek." To the Gentiles as well as to the Jews Christ was a standard. The Jews looked upon other nations as unclean beasts and dogs; as vile, unworthy, and unfit for God or their society. Now a Gentile who feels himself to be spiritually what the surrounding nations appeared literally to the Jews, is one who loathes himself as a dog, or a beast, and unworthy of God's notice; one who feels himself guilty and filthy, ignorant, helpless and depraved, having forfeited all claims to mercy; and such seek the Lord Jesus Christ, and come to him alone on the ground of free, unmerited favor, and divine compassion. These will seek him with the whole heart, soul, and spirit, with fervent and burning desires; and they find him "as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of waters in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land," and as the captain of their salvation (Is. xxxii. 2.)

But we shall presently see the word "seek" in the text means also take refuge in and trust upon him, as it is expressed by the apostle Paul in Ro. xv.: "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made as an ensign to the Jews first according to the promise of God; and then to the Gentiles, according to the mercy of God, "the Gentiles might seek God for his mercy." The Jew came according to his ancient promise, but the Gentile as a poor filthy, debased, out-cast sinner; and they came to glorify God for his mercy in raising up for them a captain and a standard-bearer; as it is written, "For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name. And again he saith, rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people. And again, praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him all ye people." And then the apostle quotes our text in the following words: Esaias saith, there shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust" (Ro. xv. 8—12.)

Now this "root of Jesse" shall stand forth as an ensign and governor over the Gentiles; and they shall be brought willingly, cheerfully, and gladly to submit to his sovereign sceptre, not only as the eternal judge of heaven and earth, to whom men and devils shall bow; not only as a just God, ruling them with the rod of his lips; but more especially they shall be made willing to fall under his gracious, kingly authority. But sometimes such an one so feels his inward guilt and backsliding that he thinks the Lord never can have patience and forbearance with him, and will surely cast him off; yet still the mercy of God flows freely, he still holds out the sceptre of his grace, as king Ahasuerus did to Esther when she approached him with fear and trembling, and said unto her, "what is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom" (Es. vii. 2.) And so when the poor, self-condemned, and guilty sinner goes, as it were, with his death-warrant in his hand, he is filled with astonishment and wonder that the Lord meets him with such lovingkindness and tender mercy; and with a willing heart he falls down and submits to his blessed sceptre and government.

But, says the apostle, "In him shall the Gentiles trust." The poor, vile, worthless Gentiles; then, in his own feelings, shall trust in Jesus. And when he comes here, his heart will go out in supplication, "Lord enable me to trust in thee." But he will then find, with the apostle, that there are two wills in his heart; and he will say, "To will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not." How often will there be desires after the Lord Jesus, but no ability with an unwavering faith. But the very desire, the anxiety, and the honest breathings of the soul to shelter in Christ are received. He knows at times we have got the will to serve and honor him when we have not the power to do it. There was a time when we had no will at all to serve him, when our desire was only to serve self, the world, and the devil; and it was not until he had changed the current of our inclinations, touched our hearts, and communicated new desires which we had not before, that we had a will to love and obey him. But where the Lord has given the will, by and by he will give the power (Ph. i. 6.) I am confident he will do it; he has done it again and again in my unworthy heart. I have had the will, but not the power; and as to believing, I could not raise a particle of faith till he enabled me. But when he comes down in his sovereign mercy with power into the heart, he makes the will and affections to flow out towards him; for he will work in the soul "to will and to do of his his good pleasure;" giving a love to Jesus, and raising it up in power, as he did the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple, causing him to leap and praise God before all the people. So Jesus comes and communicates the blessed, heart-dissolving, and softening beams of his grace, giving power and life, and enabling the soul to take refuge under his banner with great delight. Jesus becomes the darling of the heart, and all the power of the mind will go out after him; and being thus possessed of a soft, loving, tender-spirit, the soul will be able to love all things, believe all things, hope all things, and endure all things; it will be enabled to take insults from friends and foes, to stand losses, crosses, and temptations, and endure those things which to the flesh are insupportable.

IV. The glorious nature of his rest. The text says, his "rest shall be glorious;" or rather as the margin reads, "his rest shall be glory." A little light and instruction on this part of the subject may be found in Jud. ii. iii, where it is recorded, that when the people sinned, and did evil in the sight of the Lord, he gave them over to the hands of their enemies, to the nations that surrounded them, who oppressed, grieved, and afflicted them. And this he did to prove and try them, and chasten them for their sins, because they had departed and backslidden from him; but not to destroy them. But when they cried unto him in their distress, then he raised up some mighty man amongst them, such as Othinel, the son of Kenaz, and Ehud, the son of Gelra, and put his spirit upon them; who then slew their enemies and gave them deliverance, with a glorious rest from the invasion and oppression of their enemies; and that sometimes for twenty, forty, and even eighty years. Now Gideon was one of these princes. He arose, blew his trumpet, and by the spirit of the Lord resting upon him, he conquered and dispersed their foes, giving them rest and peace. In this he was a type of Jesus, who has overcome our enemies, destroyed our foes, and conquered the devil, annihilated sin by making an end of it, and abolished death. He has made reconciliation for iniquity, taken away the guilt of his church, made up the breaches of the law, satisfied the justice of God, and raised up and saved his people with an everlasting salvation. And thus Jesus has risen up as a mighty conqueror, as the leader and captain of his people, giving them a glorious rest.

He gives them rest also to their consciences when they are oppressed with trials and troubles, hunted about, and almost torn to pieces with doubts and fears. He then appears for their deliverance, and gives them rest from their enemies. But how does he do it? Just as the sun, by the refulgency of its rays, puts out darkness at noon-day; so when the son of righteousness rises upon the heart, and his rays of light and life are felt in the soul, with the glory of his love, blood, mercy, pardon, and righteousness, all the burdens which oppress and vex the heart, the darkness that covers the conscience and obscures the eye, vanish and disappear; for when Jesus' love is felt in the heart, all these shadows flee away. Thus Jesus rises up as a mighty prince, conqueror, and deliverer; and the soul that so enjoys him finds that his rest is glorious indeed. And when the poor soul has been hunted, like David, as a partridge on the mountains, with fears, suspicions, and many solemn heart-searchings; thinking that perhaps, after all, he is only an empty professor, and staggering to and fro like a drunken man; fearing at last his religion will only prove an empty and deluding profession, and that all the workings of his feelings are only natural, he will sink down at such a time into great depression and despondency. But by and by the Son of God will come in glorious power to the heart, and manifestly stamp the soul and seal it up to eternal life, giving the man to feel the power of the truth in his heart and conscience, and solemnly to say, "Thou art my Lord and my God. Thou art my Father, my salvation, and my eternal life." Then all the powers of the soul will flow out in love, and experience a blessed union and oneness, and he will feelingly say, "The Lord loves me, and I love him." There is now a solemn exchange, and sweet communion enjoyed with a gracious, and sin-pardoning God. Jesus thus becomes precious, and his rest glorious, by the blessedness of his love being shed abroad in the heart; and the soul feels the glory of his faithfulness and "God is faithful;" his heart overflows with thankfulness and adoring gratitude for his unchangeable grace; he knows that all the Lord has done to him has been in very faithfulness and truth, and he says, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted." Under these sweet feelings, he can enter into what

Deborah sang in her song, after the Lord had conquered her enemies. She said, "Speak, ye that ride on white asses, ye that sit in judgment, and walk by the way. They that are delivered from the noise of archers in the places of drawing water, there shall they rehearse the righteous acts of the Lord." Here shall they speak forth his glorious acts of love and mercy to the soul, and say, "The Lord has become my salvation; he is my refuge, my rock, and my high tower." And thus they find that Jesus is indeed a glorious rest to the poor, lost, and helpless souls.

Now have any of you present ever known and enjoyed this rest? Have you had rest from the fear of hell? Jesus gives it. Rest from the wrath of God in the conscience? Jesus gives it. Rest from the power of temptation, and Satan's fiery darts? Jesus gives it. Rest from distress of soul? Jesus imparts it. Rest from doubts and fears? Jesus gives it. And is it not a glorious rest while you are in it. To a person in difficulties, affliction, bodily sickness, and poverty, without either friend or helper, how acceptable are a few pence or shillings; for not only do they get him the necessaries of life, but the very gift warms the heart. And so with the Lord's people who feel their spiritual poverty and infirmities, who are full of doubts and fears, tried with a tempting devil, and the bidings of the Lord's face, how sweet and glorious is this rest when the spirit works a holy confidence in it, and a blessed persuasion and hope rises up in the soul of its interest in the loving heart of Jesus.

But I cannot find words to express the peculiar feelings, the supernatural feeling, the godly feeling that thus comes down from heaven into the heart and conscience, and which none but he can know to whom God reveals the secret. It is a rest from fears, doubts, and all misgivings. But those who never had these tossings to and fro can never want this rest, or seek it. I can sympathize with my very heart and soul with those who are afflicted with doubts and fears; and I can rejoice with those who are delivered from the power of them. But I can have no union with those who never knew them and can talk of interrupted rest in Jesus; for I know nothing of their religion, nor does God's word either, if I know anything about it.

The Jesus is here set forth as a standard-bearer to the poor tired soul, and his rest is proved to be glorious. And Paul says, "Labor therefore to enter into that rest." But what is this labouring? The heart labors with desires and fervent wishes; coveting earnestly the "best gifts," groaning and pleading for the manifestation of Jesus to the soul. And whenever God gives a sight and sense of his love to the heart, it will cause a hungering after this best of gifts. If God's love abound in the conscience, what is so blessed as the light of his countenance beaming in the heart as an earnest of heavenly bliss? We live, we hope, for heaven; and a little foretaste of this in the soul will do more for it than all that Arminian preachers can, with their fears of hell and legal terrors; for none of these things will give a single earnest of future bliss, overcome the power of sin, nor produce love to God. A little of this blessed rest in Jesus will enable a man to honor and glorify the Lord; it will put down all fleshly and ungodly feelings, and make him a christian indeed; it will prove him to be a man after God's own heart, and accuse him to be sick of the world and everything connected with self. But alas, these feelings are transient and do not stay long; yet while they are enjoyed they have this sweet affect, to make the rest of Jesus "glorious" to his people.—Selected.

BAPTISM.

"Buried with Christ by baptism into the likeness of his death." The death of Christ was necessary to abolish death. The death of any sinful mortal would have made no satisfaction or atonement for sin, it would have been only the sentence of execution of justice, for the wages of sin is death, but Christ comes into the world without sin having no debts of his own to pay and therefore was freely offered to make atonement for the sins of others. He comes as a surety for the people for whom he lives and for whom he suffers. As the surety Christ must suffer the just one for the unjust, he is the appointed heir of all things and being the first born of every creature he must pay off the debts of the estate in order that he may inherit the estate in righteousness and clear the estate of all incumbrance.

Baptism (which means a burial in water) sets forth the death and burial of the Lord Jesus Christ, and therefore is an ordinance of the church of God. Jesus said, I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened! This he said signifying what death he should die. When therefore a believer is baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, he declares his death to the law by the body of Christ and his unity with Jesus in the resurrection. In a baptism there must first be death, for we do not bury people that are living. When Jesus was baptized in the river Jordan he came straight way out of the water and the Holy Ghost descended and abode upon him, the unerring token of his acceptance of God and of his resurrection life. The voice of the Father from heaven declaring "This is my well beloved Son" shows the way to heaven is open. When a believer is buried with Christ by baptism into the likeness of his death and is risen with him, it sets forth resurrection life, or it shows forth the doctrine of a risen and glorified redeemer and that this subject of grace is also risen from the dead by the faith of Christ, for if we have been planted together with him in the likeness of his death we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. "Wherefore, my brethren, ye are also become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. For when we were in the flesh, the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter. "Romans 7:4-7. Baptism is not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Then baptism symbolizes the doctrine of the Bible that Christ died for our sins, and rose again and that we being dead to sin might live by faith in him. It is a great privilege to confess the name of the Lord and be baptized in his name, and go on our way rejoicing. It separates us from the world and identifies us as the people of God. It shows this people to be dead to the world and its rudiments and alive unto God by Jesus Christ. It shows the people separated from the world, called with a holy calling not according to their works but according to his purpose and grace given to them before the world began. It sets forth the life and the faith of Jesus, in that we are not our own but bought with a price. Therefore we should glorify him in our body and spirit which are his. This is a peculiar people zealous of good works, a people alive unto Jesus Christ having their fruit unto holiness and their end unto everlasting life.

Are you a believer in the Lord Jesus? Have you been baptized in his name? What right have you to neglect baptism if you believe in his name? It is incumbent upon a believer to be baptized and they are disobedient if they fail to do so. His yoke is easy and his burden is light and blessed are all they that wear this yoke.

PREACHING.

"For after that in the wisdom of God the world knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." 1st cor. 1:21.

There is no wisdom the world has by which it can find out God. The wisdom of God is so far above the wisdom of the world that the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God, and so blind is the world that God's wisdom is foolishness to it. In the wisdom of God the cross of Christ is preached and that is called foolishness, for it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. It is not preaching foolishness, nor is it foolish preaching, but the foolishness of preaching when Christ is preached. He is preached as the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth, and if he is the end of the law there is nothing further lacking, for the believer is complete in him wanting nothing. The word that we preach says; "Say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above;) or, who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.*)" For the word of faith that we preach is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart; for with the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. This is in no sense preaching one's works, but preaching Christ crucified, the wisdom of God and the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. If the work is already completed the world says, "What is the use of preaching?" That is what we preach, that is, we preach a finished salvation, for we preach that which saves the sinners and by which he is already saved, and the evidence is given to us as we believe it. Be it unto thee according to thy faith.

A man said to me once as we were talking of God, or that nothing that we can do can change the purpose of God, why then do you preach? I said we preach to tell the people that God is unchangeable, some people do not seem to know it. We do not preach to change the purpose of God, but to declare what that purpose is, or to declare that we are already saved. "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness, but unto us that are saved it is the power of God." A man must be saved through the death and resurrection of Christ before you can tell him that he is saved, for if you tell him he is saved when he is not, that will not be the truth. But a man could not believe that he is saved if he is not saved. When the word of faith comes with power into a man's heart, that is the evidence that he is already saved, but he does not receive the benefit of it until he believes. The pleasure of the Lord is communicatd unto him in his believing.

The gospel is good news and glad tidings of great joy unto all people, for unto you is born a Saviour which is Christ the Lord. Now, when this word comes in demonstration of the spirit and power, then it comes in faith, and "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." This is foolishness to the world for the world cannot see, nor understand the things which are revealed unto us by the spirit of God. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard nor have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his spirit," which spirit searches the deep things of God, and preaching the gospel in demonstration of that spirit, therefore is foolishness to the world.

God takes the wise in their own craftiness. The pride of man exalts him to think he can find out and understand mysteries, but the mystery of the cross of Christ stains the pride of man so that man stumbles at that stumbling-stone and rock of offense that God hath laid in Zion. There is nothing so abasing to the pride of man as the cross of Christ by which every high thought of man is brought down and the pride of man humbled, and the lowly and those who feel that they are poor are raised up as beggars on the dung-hill to inherit the throne of glory with princes. The preaching of the cross so abases man that it offends him, it so raises up the meek and lowly that it fills them with wonder and praise. It supplies the poor with good things and sends the rich empty away, which is foolishness to the rich and worldly-wise.

If according to the world's reasoning predestination is true, what is the use of preaching? It is to tell the poor and the needy that all things work together for good to them that love God, for that God hath reconciled us unto himself by Jesus Christ. Because he hath made him who knew no sin to be sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him, therefore as the ministers of God we pray you in Christ's stead be reconciled to God. It is the poor that have the gospel preached to them, which tells us that all things are ready, that wisdom hath slain her fatlings and mingled her wine and spread her table. But the man that is worldly-wise does not see these things or believe them.

What is the difference between prophecy and preaching? Prophecy foretells that which shall be, preaching declares that prophecy is already fulfilled. Preaching is a peculiar word denoting that prophecy is fulfilled. The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy, that is, it is the substance, accomplishment, fulfilling of all prophecy. Therefore when Christ is preached it is the divine accomplishment of the word of God. Therefore to hear the gospel preached is to have the evidence from heaven that one is saved. To report a matter is to declare its fulfillment. "Lord who hath believed our report, and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed." Where a report is believed there the arm of the Lord is manifested, hence it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

"How can they preach except they be sent?" To hear the gospel preached is a testimony of the Holy Ghost witnessing salvation. One hearing the gospel preached is ready to wonder that old things are passed away and all things are become new, and all things are of God. It is to him a matter of wonder that he is saved, because he has done nothing to save himself. It is the belief that Christ hath saved him according to the will of God, on the other hand the world believing that salvation is through works, looks upon preaching of the gospel as foolishness.

OBITUARIES

BENNIE COOK RORER.

Dear Brother Gold—By the request of the children of this beloved brother. I will try and write an obituary notice and send you to publish in Zion's Landmark.

I feel incompetent to write in a manner to do justice to such a man, but I will do the best I can. I have put it off for weeks thinking I would be better prepared to undertake it, but I am just as much at a loss as when first requested.

Brother Rorer, was a son of the old famous brother Rudolph and sister Millie Rorer, was born June 18, 1828, died December 15, 1907, making his stay on earth 79 years and six months.

He was married to Emma Roberson October 26, 1856. Twelve children were born to them. Fifteen grand-children are numbered among their descendants. They lived happily together, his wife going before him several years to the grave, which was a great shock to him. They were very much devoted to each other, and after her departure he looked so sad most of the time. But we hope they are joined together never to part.

This brother joined the church at Old Union and was baptized by Elder George W. Hundley August 1900, and lived a consistent member till his death, strong in the faith. Brother Rorer was truly a kind and loving husband, a devoted and indulgent father, placing all confidence in his children, seemed as much devoted to them as any father I ever knew. He was beloved by all that knew him, kind, honest in all his dealings, faithful to visit the sick, kind to the poor, and as much as he was able ready to help the needy, and was a good neighbor. Solomon said a good name is better than precious ointment.

Children how thankful you ought to be of the good name that your father has left behind. I know you all miss him. His doors were not only open to you, but all his friends and especially to his brethren. We will all miss him. If loving hearts and willing hands could have turned aside the shaft of death you would still have your dear father with you, but the summons had come and he paid that debt that we all must soon pay.

I know the old home is not like it once was. Father and mother are both gone. Do not grieve after them; but as they both loved you and no doubt counseled you and admonished you to love each other so love each other for their sake.

We hope your loss is their eternal gain, and that you may be enabled to say as Job did of old, the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, and blessed be his holy name. Now may the Lord bless you all to bow to his will, and save you in his kingdom.

Z. T. TURNER.

REUBEN DENTON.

Brother Reuben Denton, was born April 3, 1834, and died June 24, 1907. He was married to Temple Corneison February 22, 1857. There were born unto this union 10 children, 6 sons and 4 daughters. There were left to mourn his loss a wife and 9 children. The writer feels that their loss is his eternal gain. He was a devoted member of the Primitive Baptists for 34 years or more. He held his membership with the Sugg's Creek church, Montgomery, N. C. He was a great sufferer with rheumatism rendering him unable to attend preaching for years. By request myself and others preached to him at his home. I have been in some glorious meetings at his home.

There is an arm of Howard's Chapel church at his home. He told me he wanted meeting continued in his community after his death. I am still trying to preach at his old home, and it is a sweet place to me. Several have joined at his home place. His people are very kind to me.

The dear brother was well informed, much devoted to divine things, was a peace maker, a good husband, a kind father, a choice neighbor. He is gone, but still lives in the hearts and feelings many people.

A. G. MORTON.

BRADY WILSON WILLIAMS.

By request of Elder H. M. Williams I will try to write a short obituary notice of the death of his son Brady Wilson Williams, who was born January 17, 1887, was taken sick July 23, 1907, with typhoid fever, and died August 31, 1907. He was a lovely young man highly esteemed in his community. He loved the Primitive Baptists, and would contend for their faith, but never made any professions until he was taken sick. He would often speak of the different preachers and that he would love to hear them preach. He would often speak of the blessed Jesus saying he wanted to go home—to that home above.

The writer was well acquainted with the young man. He often visited our home to be with the young people, and would talk to them on the subject of religion.

But now he is gone the way of all the earth. All was done for him that kind hands could do. He leaves a father, mother, 3 brothers and 1 sister to mourn their loss. We would say mourn not for him for we feel that your loss is his eternal gain, now being with Jesus in whom he so greatly rejoiced while on his death bed, leaving a sweet testimony behind that he would be where there is no sorrow or pain, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

So dear father and mother, brothers and sister, when the time arrives that the Lord shall call you away may you all meet him in that bright world above. Written by,

W. R. HELMS.

ELIZA E. GURLEY.

Eliza E. Gurley departed this life May 18, 1908. She was a single daughter of C. L. and Ellen J. Gurley, of Pikeville, N. C., was 31 years of age, and has been afflicted for 18 years with neurlgia and paralysis. She was perfectly resigned to the Lord's will, and asked us not grieve for her, "just say poor afflicted girl has gone to rest." She called each member of the family to the bedside and bid us good-bye. "She told us to meet her in heaven." All was done that Doctors and loving hands could do, but we could not stay the hand of death. The Lord gives and the Lord takes away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

But it seems so hard to part and so lonely here. She joined the church at New Chapel and was baptized by brother Lancaster in her 18th year. Her funeral was preached by J. W. Gardner, a very impressive sermon; and she was laid to rest beside her baby sister in the family burying ground. Written by her mother.

ELLEN J. GURLEY.

MARTHA E. BILLUPS.

Sister Billups, daughter of John Lockey and Penninah, his wife, was born September 16, 1836, and released from the trials and conflicts of this life and called to eternal peace and rest, in the happy home prepared for her by her dear Savior, on the 21st of June 1908, making her sojourn on earth 71 years, 8 months and 25 days. She had gone to Charlotte hoping the change would be beneficial, as her health had been failing for three years, but on Sunday at 5 o'clock a. m. her spirit was called up to meet her Lord.

Those of her children and friends who watched by her say she passed away peacefully and gently strong in the precious faith of God's elect which had enabled her to feast on and rejoice in Christ Jesus, having no confidence in the flesh for a long period of time.

Her remains were brought to Rocky Mount by Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Long, her daughter and son-in-law, and held at her oldest daughters' home by Elder N. B. Williford after which the body was laid to rest in Pine View cemetery.

She was married to Lawrence Billups, who as long as he lived, was a dear lover of the truth and a faithful member of the Primitive Baptist church at Whitakers, N. C. She was the mother of five children, two boys and three girls, of which number two girls survive her. Her disease was cancer of the breast, from which she suffered for three years with remarkable patience and christian fortitude. She told her children she did not fear to die, as her hope and trust was in the Lord who had conquered death and had brought life and immortality to light through gospel.

She came with her husband and helped constitute the church at Hopeland April 4, 1879, and has been a constant attendant when not providentially hindered through all these years. Full of love to the Lord and his people she loved the service and was a bright and shining light. Her walk and conversation was heavenly. Her heart was filled with the love of Jesus and the doctrine of electing grace. She hated every false way and was gentle; easy to be entreated and exhibited the grace of the spirit, love, joy, peace and long suffering. She did not claim perfection, but felt poor and sinful and vile in herself. She was rich in faith, and no doubt in dying clasped Jesus in the arms of her faith, the antidote of death.

Our loss is her eternal gain. May God bless her children who are left behind and enable them to emulate her virtues and forget her shortcomings. May that love, faith and hope which comforted her life below and lifted her heart to God be theirs. May the Lord, if his will, reveal his love in their hearts that they may take a place with the saints below, and at last meet her in heaven, where those who meet shall part no more and those long parted meet again.

John says, "I heard a voice from heaven saying, blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth sayeth the spirit, they are at rest from their labors, their labors, their good works follow them." The evidences of eternal life which Christ gave to as many as God gave him are only found in those who rejoice in his electing love and who are predestinated to be confirmed to the image of his son and these enter into everlasting joy at God's right hand.

MRS. NORA B. PARKER.

The subject of this sketch was born near Whitemell, Va., May 1, 1880, and departed this life June 14, 1903. She was the daughter of Edward R. and Lucy A. Scarce, who preceded her to the grave a short while since, being the fifth one of this family to depart this life in less than two years.

She was married to my brother Charles C. Parker December 9, 1904. Two children were born unto them. Obediences, Nora was sick about five months before she died. Her disease was consumption. She suffered much, but bore her affliction with much patience. She was a good neighbor.

Like her mother and sister she was a firm believer in the doctrine dear to the Primitive Baptists, but never united with them. She leaves a loving husband, one little son, two brothers, and five sisters, and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

Her body was laid in the family burying ground to await the resurrection morn, when we hope Jesus will take her as his own.

Written by her brother-in-law.

WILLIAM C. TREVATHAN.

Resolved by the church at the Falls of Tar River, at their July meeting 1908, that the clerk with a memorial notice of the death of brother William C. Trevathan, and spread one copy on the church book, send one to family of deceased, and one to Zion's Landmark for publication.

William C. Trevathan, was born January 22, 1830, was married to Sarah J. Price, united with the Primitive Baptist church at the Falls of Tar River in 1872. He died June 18, 1908, leaving a wife, five children and a church he loved so well to mourn their loss, but to rejoice in the hope of his eternal gain.

As a husband, father, a church member he was as the star of Bethlehem ever pointing to that dazzling crown of glory from whence comes manna to the hungry soul, and to the weary rest. He died as he had lived strong in the faith, strong in hope, and with good will toward all men.

As a deacon he was ever watchful over the flock, faithful to every trust, firm but forgiving, and one had only know him to love him, and be in his company to catch an inspiration of his goodness and mercy of God.

As a confederate soldier he was as brave in battle as he was true to duty in camp.

Plain Talks on Fertilizers

Improving and Increasing Tobacco Crops

No soil is rich enough in all the foods the tobacco plant needs to produce it at its best.

Many tobacco soils, however, contain natural elements, rich in certain valuable plant foods, but lacking in others. And just as a dead or dying soil must be fed with a complete plant food, so these partially fed soils need specially prepared food to supply what they lack, and balance the unequal fertilization supplied by nature.

When these special nourishing elements are added to the soil, crops multiply enormously; quality improves, and profits are doubled and trebled. Tobacco is seldom planted nowadays without the use of some fertilizer; but the great point to remember is to have the right fertilizer in the sufficient quantities, otherwise the results will not be satisfactory.

Over one million tons of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers were sold last year, a sure proof of their great popularity and value.

The whole story of the composition, treatment, and productivity of the soils of the tobacco region are told by government and private experts in the Farmers Year Book or Almanac of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co.—sent free if you write to any sales office of the Company.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

"For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the spirit the things of the spirit."—Roman viii. 5.

The context of this verse is remarkable: it is the great and wonderful doctrine of justification, the life of the church of God. "Righteousness delivereth from death" (Proverbs x. 2.) When Christ's righteousness is brought near, and is received by a believing man, it is the joy and the rejoicing of the heart. "Surely, shall one say, in the Lord have I righteousness and strength" (Isiah xlv. 24.) This makes the things of Christ become as an element in which the soul moves and delights. Paul says that, "being justified, by faith we have peace with God;" and being "in Christ Jesus," "there is therefore now no condemnation." And these justified people are the people who mind the things of the spirit, because they are "after the spirit." What is it to be "after the spirit?" It is to be born of the spirit. Israel "after the flesh" is Israel born of Abraham. Men "after the spirit" are spiritual men by regeneration; and spiritual things are their element. My friends, we cannot find the things of God to be our element until we are in those things, and they in us. It is no wonder that the carnal man, even if he a professor, should admit from time to time an irksomeness in spiritual matters. He may constantly be in his place in the chapel; but put him with two or three spiritual people, whose conversation is of him they know, and he will not find that that society is his element; and being out of it, he is dull, heavy, not at home.

There are two kinds of people, therefore, in the text, as in this chapel. Yes and they are known by their different courses, by their actions, by that which occupies their hearts.

One who is after the flesh minds the things of the flesh, attends to them, goes after them, finds them his element. He loves them, is at home in them, wants nothing better, nothing different, nothing else. His greatest ambition is bounded by the things of the flesh; his appetites are all satisfied if they get the things of the flesh. My dear hearers, look at this solemn truth, and then reflect on this: "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according that he hath done, whether it be good or bad" (2 Corinthians v. 10.) That solemn scripture will be found to be true of every one. You here who are after the flesh, mind its things, and only its things, for you cannot mind anything else; and you will receive according to them if you leave this world unchanged.

But we have another kind of people in the text—a blessed, a happy people; yet very tired, because, while they are after the spirit, they are also born of the flesh. Hence they have hindrances to meet, things aversive to the hidden man of the heart that wants God. You who are born of God are formed for his glory, and sometimes you will feel it; for how can you be partakers of the Holy Ghost, and never feel that you are formed of God? You mind the things of the spirit, you want them, are troubled when you cannot get them.

Let us look a little first of all at the great and wonderful foundation there is for this minding of the things of the spirit. We have it clearly laid down in this chapter: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." To be in Christ is to be in everlasting union with him; it is to be in him as our head and representative; to have been in union with him when he was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; when he grieved, groaned, and sighed, and wept, and sorrowed; and when he said on Calvary, "It is finished;" and bowed his head, and gave up the ghost. He did all this for his people. It is a great concern with some whether he did it for them. If he did not, alas for them! it would be better never to have been born. But if he did, O what an honor, what a mercy to have been born into this world, to be born again of the spirit! May we be enabled to do as Peter exhorts, give diligence to make our calling and election sure: for if we do these things we shall never fall (2 Peter. i. 10.) This is the point—whether we know in any measure what it is to be in Christ. How shall we indeed? By Christ coming to us, by his blood making peace in our consciences, by his infinite righteousness being imputed to us; or by a sense upon our consciences of the smile and blessing of God. All religion must be cut down to this—"in Christ Jesus." We shall not take anything more with us than we have in Christ when we go into eternity. All good is received from him,—his spirit, life, righteousness, forgiveness, pardon, sanctification, eternal glory. All the rest of religion proceeds only from man, approved it may be by the religious mind; but it will perish. Therefore this is the thing to look for, to pray and wait for—the coming of Christ to us. You can confess that Jesus is the Son of God, and that he has come in the flesh, when he has been revealed to you. You can confess him of course, externally without this, as believing the scriptures. If you believe their testimony, you therefore believe that Christ came in the flesh; but when the redeemer comes to you, enters your heart as your life and your righteousness, then you can say, "He has come in the flesh, and he has come to me." This is a point. Give all diligence you seeking souls to make this sure. This is what is called eating the flesh of Christ, and drinking his blood; Paul calls it in this epistle, "receiving the atonement." It is a great thing to have. This is the meat that Christ speaks of, that the world is not to destroy. The feeling of it may be lost, the thing itself never; neither in the foundation of it, which is the person and work of Christ; nor in the communication of it, which is by the revelation of the Holy Ghost. You will never lose it, though the feeling of it may die away through the touch and influence of sin.

These people are distinguished by walking after the spirit; "Who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." To walk after the flesh is to walk after its desires, aims, ambitions, appetites, and directions; it is to be altogether worldly. They that are after the spirit born of him, who have his indwelling his teachings, mind his things. My friends, what we owe to the person and love of the Holy Ghost we shall never know fully in this world. Think of his love in coming, and, as Dr. Goodwin says, "raking into this dunghill of our hearts!" What love he displays in coming to elect sinners, happy in sin and death! what love when he speaks! It is a great, an almighty, an all-efficacious word, "live;" and it imparts life. Religion, where real, has not its rise in some efforts of the mind to mend a bad case; it has its rise in the impartation of divine life to the soul; and from this spring all exercises, convictions, appetites, wants, and desires. The love of the spirit is wonderful, passing the love of woman; for it comes with nothing to draw it; there is nothing to give him delight in the objects he comes to.

This great, mysterious work in every redeemed soul shows itself sooner or later, in this particular thing--minding the things of the spirit. I. The first important enquiry, then, is to be this: What are these things of the spirit? And II. What it is to mind them. Let us try to look at these two things.

I. What are the things of the spirit? You must remember that there is a covenant of grace, and that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are equal partners in it, three contracting parties; that the spirit, the third person in the Trinity, is sent by the Father and the Son to make revelations of the covenant; and therefore comes not of himself, not without the Father and the Son concurring, but from them to speak the things which concern the souls he comes to teach. The things of the spirit, then, are those things in the covenant of grace which Christ said he would show. When promising him to his disciples, Christ said, "He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you." And he is concerned to set them before poor people, and to hold them out in such a view as to draw them, and make them their own in experience. These things of the spirit are:

I. The person of Christ, the refuge of sinners, the only refuge. O to be daily concerned about this refuge, a loud being in it, beneath its shelter and its shade! Now the person of Christ is the very bottom and top of everything to a child of God. It is the work of the spirit to reveal this person to make him known; so as that he shall not be speculated about by the people of God, but known. Oh! beware of speculations in religion; they are dangerous and dreadful. To rest on anything you do not know for yourself is dreadful; to talk about what you have never felt in your own soul to profess you know that the Holy Ghost has never brought to you, to speak of God whom you have not seen by faith, of God in Christ whom you have not known, is a very solemn and awful thing. My dear friends, may we all be silent about things eternal which the Holy Ghost has not taught us; and since he is the only teacher, may this be what we know by his blessed teachings--that there is a Jesus Christ. You may say, "Who doubts it? who with the bible in his hand can be ignorant of it?" In a sense no one, and in a sense every one is. In a natural, external sense, nobody can be ignorant of the person of Christ who has the bible and reads it. You all know him so, and, alas for you that, thus knowing him, you never kneel before him and worship him. The Father says when he brings him into the world, "Let all the angels of God worship him." And they did, and came and glorified him, and sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and earth peace and good will toward men." We are worse than the beasts if we see that the bible is a revelation of him, and yet own him not. But O what a thing it is to find that there is a revelation within the revelation, a life brought to you, a powerful knowledge given to you, a sweetness wrought in your heart, by the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ into your soul, that you know who he is! It is a happy blessed, sweet place for one to be in, when he can say for himself,

"What object's this that meets my eyes
Without Jerusalem's gate,
That fills my mind with much surprise,
As wonder to create?

"Is this the man, can this be he,
The prophets have foretold
Should with transgressors number'd be,
And for their crimes be sold?"

Oh! if you can say this—

"Yes, now I know 'tis he, 'tis he,
'Tis Jesus, God's dear Son,
Wrapt in humanity to die
For crimes that I have done," that will do all that you want. To be daily concerned about it is a great thing. Now you may be under conviction. Conviction on conviction is written on the fleshy tables of the hearts of some here; trouble on trouble prayer after prayer; desire after desire real confessions. You ejaculate, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Sin, O the eruptions of it here and there! You say, "I fear I never had a right desire. never prayed rightly, never had a right feeling." This is the case for years with some, they never can say, "The Lord blessed me here, or there." What will bring all your matters to a point, and make you know it is well? what will enable you to say, "Well, in all these words I hoped on, it was as if God were writing on my heart with his own, but the characters were not legible to me then; but now I have got his own signature and seal to his handwriting?" What will do it? The Lord Jesus revealed in you by the Holy Ghost. That will be a sign, a seal, the Lord's own signature to all previous writings, as if to say, "I did that for you, and that; I fitted you for this robe by stripping off your rags; I prepared you for this refuge by enlightening you with a conviction of your danger." This is one of the things of the spirit, the person of Christ, the refuge for sinners. O you seekers, seek on; you cannot seek in vain. "He that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened:" this is God testimony.

2. The next thing of the spirit is Christ's righteousness. "I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off; and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel thy glory" (Isiah xlvi. 13.) That is a thing the spirit is sent to reveal. Sinner, you can never be right without it, never. You can never be justified, never stand before the Lord with joy, never be commended by God's own mouth, unless you have this robe on you.

"Righteousness to full perfection Must be brought,
Lacking nought,
Fearless of rejection."

Whatever a person may be without this he is short; and to be short here is to be short for eternity. The Holy Ghost is sent to reveal this perfect righteousness; to take Christ's obedience, active and passive, and open it to the eye of faith in the sinner's soul; so that he shall say, "I shall stand in that great day." He teaches what Christ was delivered for, and what he was raised for. "He was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification" (Romans iv. 25.)

3. Another thing of the spirit is the blood of atonement, in which, if plunged, the sinner is clean every whit, nothing remaining of sin. My friends, you may make as much of your sins as you possibly can, and they will be finite when you have done; but the blood of Christ is infinite in merit. Our sins are the sins of creatures, and God knows I do not say that to diminish them. My own sins trouble me; but they are sins of a creature. The blood of Jesus is called in the Acts, "the blood of God:" "Feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." And if the spirit takes of this cleansing blood and brings it to the conscience, it will be found to be infinite in its efficacy; whatever sense of guilt there is, whatever views of sin are entertained, whatever sense of despair is closing upon your soul, this blood will take it all away. Hart has beautifully expressed it, speaking to the Holy Ghost:

"From which pure fountains if thou draw
Water to quench the fiery law,
And blood to purge our sin;
We'll tell the Father in that day,
And thou shalt witness what we say,
'We're clean clean, just God, we're clean.'"

Well, sinner, that is a thing of the spirit. Oh, what he teaches here, when he, as it were, breathes on the soul life and holiness by that blood! God teaches with a heavenly teaching. His blood is known then to be so full of efficacy that nothing can stand before it. "All manner of sin and blasphemy" it bears away—the iniquity of our holy things, the falls of Peter, of David, iniquity of all kinds, "shall be forgiven unto men" by the precious blood of the son of God. That is one of the great things the spirit is sent to reveal.

4. Another thing of the spirit is the intercession of Christ in heaven. He was "raised again for our justification." When he had shown himself alive to his disciples by many infallible proofs, he was received up into heaven; and the Holy Ghost tell us in Hebrews that "he ever liveth to make intercession for us." God's people are often dumb, justly dumb. O the sin of their religion, the sins of their everyday life! If you feel guilt daily, it will stop your mouth. What can you say? The most is, "God be merciful to me a sinner." "Put not thy servant away in anger." "Do not cut me down as a cumberer of the ground, though I deserve it." Yea, these things will shut your mouth; but will the Lord always have silent people? No. How will he open their mouths? By the Holy Ghost showing that Jesus Christ, "ever liveth to make intercession." And if only he pray for us, put a word in for us when we cannot ourselves, we shall feel the effect. If he says, "Father, I will that these on their bended knees, with lips sealed by their guilt, these returning prodigals be with me where I am," that will do; and if the Holy Ghost shows to our feeble staggering faith his intercession, what a mighty thing it will be in our hearts.

5. Let me mention another thing of the spirit, namely, the scriptures inspired by himself. It is wonderful what use the God of all grace makes of them. Men are born again by the "incorruptible seed" from them being implanted in their hearts. "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth" (Ja. i. 18.) And have you not had a word from scripture put upon your poor perplexed mind sometimes as a heavenly direction? or sent to your desponding heart as a great encouragement, when an atheistical disposition was working? To get a hint of mercy from his word will give you an interest in those "two immutable things," his promise and his oath, "in which it was impossible for God to lie;" wherein he shows his willingness to give strong consolation to them that have fled to him for refuge. Think of it sinner,

"Your seeking his face
Is all of his grace."

It is the first in willingness as in every thing else. When the spirit shows you that, it will draw you. "I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love." Then you will rise up in sweet encouragement again. The scriptures are a thing of the spirit. It is a truth that he who inspired blessed men of old to write them, sends them with his mighty power; and if you find them working in you, you will find something of God with you.

There are many other things of the spirit, but these were in my mind to lay before you this morn'g. So to speak, they embrace those which make for our peace; and if the Holy Ghost shows them to us, we are highly favored. Now let me ask you ere I close, whether you know anything of them? O beware of taking things for granted! You may be lost in generalities. You may take every particular truth a general one in your own mind naturally, and be lost in that kind of thing. Therefore look narrowly to this, whether you have ever known any power, any glory in the things of the spirit; for they are vital. They that are after the spirit mind his things, because they know them; you cannot mind them else. He gives them a being so to speak, in the heart; and then are sought unto. Men can never be satisfied without them when they see them in the light of the spirit; for God is become the center of their soul's affections. May the Lord shine upon them, and make us understand them, for his name sake. Amen.

Selected.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—If indeed I am worthy to call you brother which I am in Christ. For some cause I know not what, I have a mind to write you for publication, and as I am deprived from going to church on account of rain will make the attempt although I know not how much or what I may write. But it seems I must write something for the relief of my mind though it may not be of any comfort to any one. I see my weakness and imperfections so that I might say it is so much like myself it would be of no comfort to any one.

Brother Gold, yesterday and today were our preaching days at Roxboro and we had a good preaching by our beloved pastor Elder W. A. Simpkins, who was blessed to preach with power and love. I have not been a member of the church very long, but I feel like if the brethren could see me as I know myself they could not have fellowship for me. If I know my heart I have the desire above everything else to live a christian life, but I fall short so far it seems that sin is mixed with all I do. I see my weakness my imperfection and my crookedness so plain before me that it brings me as it were down in the low grounds of sorrow.

I will here relate a dream I had some time ago. It seemed I was traveling in a far country and at first I was on a nice white, straight and level road and afterwards on a crooked, rocky and very rough road, then changed back to the nice level road again. This changing continuing until once when I was on the rocky and rough road something seemed to say to me, this is the road to heaven, that the nice white road represents a state of rejoicing while on it you are confident and feel that all is well while the rocky road means despair and trouble. The next morning the first thing that came into my mind was, God is his own interpreter, he makes it plain, which gave me some comfort for awhile.

But, dear brethren, I almost began to lose hope that I would ever be changed from nature's darkness to his marvelous light, when this scripture came to my mind, "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren," and if I know my heart I do love the brethren. I often get to the place, where this is the only staff I have to lean upon. I often ask the Lord in my weak way to teach me to know his will and to lead me to do it and often I look back at my past life and see how I have been brought along and blessed to have food, raiment and good health and not worthy even of the least of his blessings, it brings me very low and enables me to praise the Lord and all that is within me to praise his holy name. There is a continual warfare within me, the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak. In my flesh there dwelleth no good thing and I can't live like

I want to and it troubles me.

Brother Gold, I would give anything if I could tell my feelings, but I can't, while others tell theirs through the precious Landmark which is a great comfort to me. I have sweet little hope that all will be well in the end and I would not take ten thousand worlds like this for it. The more I hear the Primitive Baptists preach the more I want to hear them. I hope it is the love of God shed abroad in my heart that makes me love the doctrine of salvation by grace given to me a sinner, and I hope to feed dependant on him for mercy, grace and protection. For some time I have desired above all spiritual blessings, a heart to thank, praise and honor my dear Lord and master for his goodness and mercy to me a sinner. Oh my dear brother, that I might continue to praise him the balance of my days.

Brother, this is my first attempt at writing anything for publication and I have written more than I intended. As you see I am a poor writer and what I have written is scattering. I simply followed my mind. I want to say to every one that reads this, I desire an interest in your prayers as I am a poor sinner.

I hope, brother, the Lord will abundantly bless your efforts in contending for the truth and holding Jesus as the Saviour of sinners and save and crown you in the end. Do as you think best with this as I only wrote it for relief of mind

Yours in humble hope,
F. D. LONG.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Please publish the following in Zion's Landmark.

On July 3, the Happy Home church of Primitive Baptists met at Hudson, N. C., in conference order, and after electing Elder H. Taylor, moderator and T. H. Bentley clerk, proceeded to business in the following order:

1. Invited visiting brethren and sisters to sit with the church in council, whereupon the following brethren and sisters took seats, T. H. Bentley, W. A. Bentley, S. E. Bentley, L. E. Bentley, T. G. Prestwood and Flora Standley, and after due consideration of all business, that the members composing Happy Home church, to wit, T. M. Stanley, W. R. Stanley, Anna Branch and L. Heffner were found to be orthodox by the above named council and by their request were dismissed by letter and thereby dissolved their constitution. Done and signed by order of the church.

L. H. TAYLOR, Moderator,

T. H. BENTLEY, Clerk.

P. S. The next day, July 4, the Philadelphia church of Primitive Baptists met at the meeting house in Caldwell, county, N. C., and after preaching went into conference when the four members of the Happy Home church and sister Flora Stanley from Philadelphia in Rutherford county, came forward with their letters and were heartily received into the fellowship of the Philadelphia church in Caldwell county. also a dear young brother, Robert Branch, and a dear sister Mary Knighter joined by experience and were baptized the next day by the writer. The last two had previously belonged to the Missioary Baptists. The dear sister came 80 miles to join and be baptized.

May the good Lord be praised for such a good and glorious meeting, thus ending a two weeks tour by the writer which he met with the following elders. W. R. Helms, H. M. Williams, C. A. Davis, G. W. McGee, and J. D. Draughn. On my return home last night I found my family well. Will say to the many brethren, sisters and friends that I met on my way that I highly esteem their kindness to me.

Your brother in hope,
H. TAYLOR.

Dear Brother Gold—By the fruit the tree is judged. If the fruit is good and our taste is right then we can judge the tree truly by its own fruit. If the fruit is sour we say it is not a good tree, but if it is sweet and suits the taste we say it is good. But we see that one must have a healthy taste or be in good health himself before he can judge rightly.

Now I have seen children eating nice sweet apples and they enjoyed eating them for they were good and were the fruit of a good tree. By this we see those without taste are not true judges. So when we see a member careless and unconcerned about going to church and meeting with the brethren and hearing his pastor preach or give us nice sweet apples to eat, his own act shows his taste or love for apples or preaching is not right and something is wrong and this causes those that go to feel indifferent. Now how much better to see all the children filling their seats and waiting for the hour to come for the true servant to give them of the things the master has given him. A true servant delights in doing his duty; his reward is peace within. How sweet is this peace? It gives rest and comfort to him that the world cannot give. So when each member discharges his duty faithfully they may reap a reward of peace. Peace and love make a happy family, and our dear kinsman love to visit such families and eat of the same good fruit that the father gives to his servant to give to the children, and when the servant sees that each child of the family is there and all is well, how it gladdens his heart and what a happy family our fathers are when all are in peace and love. Then we can sing this sweet song,

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear,
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fear."

A brother I hope,
W. H. BRADLEY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear and Highly Esteemed Brother—I see in the Landmark of May 15, a letter written by Mary F. Williard upon which you also made some appropriate remarks. My first impulse was to make no reply, but after considering the matter, and being requested, I have decided that for your relief and for the relief of all your readers I will make this brief defense.

The church to which she refers is situated in Yadkin county, N. C., is known by the name of Deep Creek, and is supposed to be the oldest Primitive Baptists church in Western North Carolina and the only church in that county. The pastor, whom she would have you to believe is exercising a kind of lordship over that church, is the unworthy writer whose name will appear at the close of this article. I have served that church for more than 30 years and have reasons to be proud of the soundness and orthodoxy of its membership. I admit my service has been rendered under unfavorable circumstances and all of you know it has been much in weakness, but I am willing and ready and expect to stand behind all the official acts of that church until I am convinced they are wrong.

On my own part, and I think I am fully prepared to voice the entire membership of that church I am willing to make any personal sacrifice that would reasonable to perpetuate peace, but we are uncompromisingly opposed to making any sacrifice at the expense of the noble cause that we profess to stand for, or that would infringe upon the dignity of the church; and will say further that we are open for investigation and for interrogation and would appreciate an opportunity to answer any question that any of our brethren or sisters might wish to ask who are interested or concerned about the business proceedings or the internal affairs of the church.

Dear Brethren Gold and Lester:

To all the brethren, sisters and friends who read the dear old Landmark—My mind has been impressed for sometime to write for publication two dreams. Perhaps some one will call me an old dreamer, as I have already in time past written some dreams for publication in the Landmark.

About four months ago I began to be troubled as to what the grace of God was and wondered if I am a subject of his grace and for several nights before I slept, in my weak way I begged the Lord if it was his will, he would show me in a dream or vision just what the grace of God was, and that I might see it as with the natural eye. And I believe it was shown me in a dream just as it is intended for the precious and chosen people of God. It was shown me in my dream in this way. There was a great multitude of people before me and God's chosen people were shown me as a peculiar and separate generation or in other words the generation of Jesus Christ. On this generation I saw the grace of God raining as it were in the form of bright shining dust in golden color. It was settling on myself and my dear wife, Brother J. F. Spangler and his wife, Brother J. W. Flynchum and his wife, Brother J. W. Redman and his wife, Brother J. W. Jefferson and his wife and many others while the Arminian churches and the world all seemed to be together in darkness. This dream has been a great comfort to me.

Again, about ten days ago while I was eating my supper, these words came so forcibly to my mind as to almost strike me down, "what is the power of God?" and until I went to sleep I was trying to beg the Lord if it was his will, to make manifest to me in a dream just what was the power of God. That night to my utter surprise I dreamed I saw the power of God in this way. His almighty arm was shown me in the shape of the arm of a man and it seemed to work on hinges and was as a rod of iron. It seemed to be as long as the world and as broad as the universe, having all power and none could stop his hand, and there was a power of darkness coming towards that arm as a rushing mighty wind. But that almighty power was not frustrated in the least, and a still small voice seemed to speak to me saying, "fear not little one my grace is sufficient."

And now dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, if a poor down hearted and sinful worm of the dust as I feel myself to be is ever blessed to enter that rest prepared for the children of the most high God, it will be by grace and grace alone. May the love of God rest with you all, amen.

Your poor unworthy brother,

A. P. ROBERTSON.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear brother—I have for sometime past had a desire to write you a few lines, though not through any worthiness of mine, but through the blessed worthiness of the precious Son of God, from whom we receive each good and precious gift and through whose precious blood we shall be able to reach the blessed portals of the shining courts above, where we shall behold the once lowly but now exalted Savior sitting at the right hand of the Father, being arrayed in living and eternal glory.

It is enough to make our hearts leap for joy in the saddest hour of life to think of a blessed hope being given us that when we are worn and tired of battling with life here below that the Lord will remove us to rest with Jesus in the shade of the beautiful trees on the evergreen shore beyond this vale of tears.

"All hail the power of Jesus' name!

Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

Oh! how can it be true that such consoling power has reached the heart of one so awfully wretched as I?

We have just finished a sweet meeting which closed last evening, conducted by Elder B. F. Woodcock, of Jesup, Ga. One was baptized while many others are lingering around the fold.

Please remember me in your petitions and come to see us if you can.

I am I hope your little sister,

MRS. J. M. HOLLOWAY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—I send you for publication in the Landmark the circular letter entitle "Strange Fire," written by W. A. Barham, moderator and C. W. Anderson, clerk, to the New Hope association in 1893, and latter appeared in the "Footprints of the Flock." It expresses my own feelings so well I think it would be well to have it in the Landmark, but will leave it for your consideration.

Affectionately,

STRANGE FIRE

Ancient Israel was a type of spiritual Israel in the gospel dispensation. The laws, ordinances and rites of that people were, as the apostle says, "patterns of things in the heavens." Their murmurings, rebelliousness, and the consequent chastisement, "happened unto them for ensamples (margin, types) unto us." Those unto whom it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven would do well to heed the lessons taught by these types. "Whatsoever was written aforetime was written for our learning." God did not drive out all of Israel's enemies. "The Lord hath given commandment concerning Jacob, that his enemies should be round about him." He has use for them, to "prove his people, whether they will walk in the law of the Lord or no."

The Israelites were continually partaking of some of the abominations of the nations around them; and, as indicated by the type, the Lord's people in this day often partake of the religious denominations around them. The Lord sent prophets unto the people, rising up early, and telling them of the terrible desolation that would come upon the earth in consequence of their corrupt practices. But they would not hear. They even stoned to death the prophets who bore to them the messages of mercy—murdered in cold blood the men who from love to them hazarded their lives in trying to turn them away from doing things that would bring destruction upon them. How severe, and yet how just, was that judgment that made their land an "utter desolation, without an inhabitant." By the rivers of Babylon, their harps hanging upon the willows, the withering blighting curse of God resting upon them, whichever way they turned, the city of their fathers' sepulchres lying waste, its walls broken down and its gates burned with fire, they lament and bemoan their folly, and sorely grieve and repent that they refused to obey the prophets whom God in mercy had sent unto them, warning them that this would be the awful consequence of their transgression. "If the words spoken by angels were steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

What fascination these abominations must have had for the children of Israel! How dear to them were those corrupt practices that they become so enraged against those who would dare to speak against them, that they would put them to death! This proves that they dearly loved those abominations, and doubtless considered them the most important part of their religion, and felt as if they were doing God service in torturing to death one who would dare oppose them. But that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination with God. Just as indicated by the type. The Lord's people in this day are continually borrowing from the Babylonish customs of the denominations around them, and they become enraged at whoever dares to protest against them, and are ready to persecute and cast out such a one. If they would only consider that these things are highly esteemed among men, they might know that they are an abomination with God. If we would reflect upon the fact that these things are popular with, and practiced by, all worldly religionists, we might know that the Lord's people could not indulge in them and yet be "diverse from all other people."

One great cause of Israel's disobedience was that there were always so many false prophets to encourage the people in their transgressions, and to withstand the true prophets when they warned the people of the desolation they were bringing upon themselves. And so it is now. "But as there were false prophets among the people, even so there shall be false teachers among you."

Things are continually creeping in among us that are borrowed from other denominations, and highly esteemed among them, that the bible does not authorize. We denounce Sunday schools, mission boards, etc., because they are not authorized by the bible; we contend that the scriptures furnish the man of God with all the instructions and examples necessary for every good work; and yet we practice shaking hands while singing, and some other things that they do not authorize. It will not do to say that these things are too little and insignificant for the scriptures to notice; for then they would be too little for the Lord's people to practice. But the shaking of hands while singing is not a harmless, inert something, or mere nothing. It brings down fire from heaven in sight of men.

There is something wonderful and mysterious about it. It makes women shout, and men hug and embrace each other. It either brings down the spirit of God to warm our hearts, or it manufactures a base counterfeit resemblance of it. In either case it would be incompatible with Primitive Baptist doctrine. It is of heaven or else it is of men. It is authorized by the bible, or it is of Babylonish origin. It is a solemn sacred duty, or it is abominable wickedness. Is it not a fire of our own kindling? If not, why does it come only when we shake hands while singing? Cannot all who participate say, "Ah, I have seen the fire, I am warn?" "Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks, walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of my hand, ye shall lie down in sorrow.

Strange that shaking hands while singing should do such wonders; but it is well known that it produces in the participants a feeling of inexpressible happiness. It make one feel excessively full of love. He is raised to a fever heat with a kind of intoxication; and in obedience to that inexorable law by which all vibrating bodies (fixed ones are not subject to it) pass from one extreme to an opposite extreme, he becomes jealous, and hating towards those for whom his heart was so excessively full of love while under the excitement. Hence come wars and fightings among us. In following unauthorized practices, things which are highly esteemed among natural men, and appreciated by the old, natural or fleshly man of the christian, we sow to the flesh, and of the flesh reap corruption. It is feared that this practice is a prolific source of the bickerings and dissensions that now mar and disturb the peace of Zion. Thus by the heat of our own fire which we have kindled we lie down in sorrow.

This is the great motor-wheel, so to speak of the Arminian's meeting. This electro-magnetic feeling generated by singing and shaking hands, and less effectually by other means, constitutes the essence of the worldly religion. Without it the revival meetings of worldly religionists would soon pass out of existence. When all other means fail in these meetings, this is often resorted to with success. The preacher having failed to raise an excitement by his vivid picture of hell and the torments of the damned, together with the fearful dangers of procrastination, and the whole concern to be about to die from coldness, he now resorts to another device. He propose that the congregation sing a hymn; "and let all the christians, those who feel that they are on their way to heaven strike hands." This generally does the work. Some woman raises a shout, almost unconsciously exclaims Glory! and wildly and frantically claps her hands showing that she is under the influence of some powerful controlling agent. A peculiar magnetic feeling takes possession of the participants, particularly those most easily affected. Their eyes are suffused with tears, and every one seems filled with love and intense happiness. It is a kind of intoxication, a delightful feeling which men dearly love and crave; and like every other species of intoxication, has its reaction. Strife, bickerings and ill feelings follow, as certain as languor and depression of spirits do natural intoxication. It is bad enough to be drunken with wine. It is far worse to be drunk with the wine of Babylon.

Some twenty years ago, on Big Mulberry, Franklin county, Ark., one of these electro-magnetic revival meetings assumed gigantic proportions. Large numbers of people were powerfully affected. Quite a number of young men under its mysterious influence attracted considerable attention. They embraced each other with their arms, and a considerable group was thus formed, huddled together, swaying to and fro under the influence of the great intoxicating power. They gently patted and childlessly cuddled each other, exclaiming frequently, "O how I love you brother!" The meeting finally closed, the great blast died away, and one of bitterest neighborhood feuds followed in its track. Strange to tell, but it is true the group of young men, so prominent under the influence of the mysterious agent at meeting, were likewise the most conspicuous characters in the quarrel. They were now carrying deadly weapons for each other, and the same tongues that had exclaimed so tenderly, "O how I love you!" now swore with terrible vengeance, and threatened to kill the objects of their excessive love while under the influence of man-made religion. The intoxication was produced by the wine of Babylon, and was connected with the hatred that followed. It has been long noticed by close observers that hatred, quarreling, and ill feeling and crime in general, follow in the wake of the great revival. May the Lord deliver us from the intoxication and consequent reaction of this miserable infatuation. The result of shaking hands while singing, among Baptists, is exactly like it.

The arguments used in favor of the practice are deceptive. At the close of the association, and some other meetings, we must take the "parting hand;" as if there were no other time than during divine service to bid the dear brethren and sisters farewell, as an act of hospitality; and that must be done, too, while singing. It is the peculiar effect that is desired, for generally after the congregation is dismissed they take the "parting hand" again, and, as it should be done, with singing. "O! I can't think it wrong for God's people to shake hands," interpose the advocates of the practice; as if we must do this as a part of the religious ceremonies, and while singing, so as to get up an excitement and a shout, or not at all. As if opposition to an innovation upon the worship of the infinite God who will not accept an offering made by strange fire, was designed to prohibit or prevent the ordinary acts of hospitality in a friendly salutation or a loving farewell when not engaged in worship.

History gives no account of this practice in the church for eighteen hundred years after Christ. It was introduced among the Baptists in the present century. Hassell says, page 583, in enumerating the inventions of men in matters of religion in the nineteenth century, that among them were "protracted and distracted meetings, * * * anxious seats, Mourner's benches, affecting tunes, sobs, sighs, groans, convulsions, human resolutions hand shaking," etc. On page 918, he quotes from the History of the Ketchikan Association," by Elder William Fristoe, published in 1808. Speaking of "some new called Baptists," Elder Fristoe says, "These have departed from the simplicity of the gospel, and from the examples of Christ and his apostles and the primitive saints, and have introduced human inventions and contrivances, for the avowed conversion of souls. The preacher after ending his sermon, comes down from the pulpit, singing a hymn on some tender affecting subject, with a tune of mournful sound, * * * accompanying the singing with a shaking of hands and exhortation, with great appearance of affection." Here is the origin of this practice. It was not invented by Christ or the apostles, nor sanctioned by the prophets, but by a few disorderly Baptists in Virginia, about the beginning of the present century. No previous mention of it is made in history, and it certainly is not found in the bible, unless by denunciation of "fires of our kindling," "offering strange fire unto the Lord," etc. It is strange that Primitive Baptists who oppose human inventions in matters of religion should have ever tolerated it for a moment. If the scriptures are a perfect rule of faith and practice, let us reject everything that they do not authorize, let it be great or small. Offering unto the Lord by strange fire is sin. Offering unto him must be made only by fire kindled by himself. To his name be praise forever. Amen.

EZEKIEL.

Ezekiel was a man whom God strengthened. He was among the captives in Chaldea. The Lord showed him visions of the glory of God and showed him visions of his glorious sovereignty and commanded him to deliver messages to the nations. The spirit that moved the prophet to testify against the nations and foretell what each nation should do or suffer, shows that the hand of God was upon him. One of the nations that he commanded to prophecy concerning was Tyre. Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord God; Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a God; Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee."

Tyre was a city of merchants, and their traffic was in merchandise. They excell in the manufacture of goods and in sending their wares to all countries. They were mariners and did business upon the high seas, and they commanded the wisest and most skillful men of the earth to do their business. This city became exceedingly wealthy and sat as mistress in the seas and over the lands, she was lifted up with pride and thought she was a god.

In Ezekiel 28:13, to 15, God said to her, "Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God; every precious stone was by thy covering, the sardius, topaz, and the diamond, the beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in these in the day that thou wast created. Thou art the anioned ed cherub that covereth; and I have set thee so; thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; and thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones fire. Thou wast perfection in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee." Here is a setting forth of one of the most embellished cities of iniquity, her merchandise going to all countries, her sails spread to all waters, and the wisest men of earth were employed to conduct her business; but it seems to be in the weakness of human nature for man to forget God and ascribe creative power to himself, so that his prosperity becomes a snare to him, it looks like every perfection of Eden, every sparkling mineral, every precious stone was found in Tyre. She was the excellency of beauty and she shows in the stones of fire, the hidden treasures of knowledge of earth were wrapped in her, but there is no exemption to the man that sins, but God will find him out and cast him down.

In man's state of uprightness in the garden of Eden, beauties of wealth and wisdom were displayed, man being in honor abideth not, he hath sought out many inventions, and by transgressing God's holy law he procureth his downfall, and fell as the sun of the morning and fell into the condemnation of the devil which is pride. As Tyre was swept from the rock on which she was built and no trace was left of her former beauty to indicate the greatness while he was in the garden of Eden, in the midst of its beauties when ambition took hold of him to become as gods, he was stripped of his glory and beauty and driven out from the garden of Eden to till the earth which was cursed to bring forth briers and thorns. And he corrupted his way and defiled his sanctuary by the multitude of his iniquities. And God has brought fire upon him which hath consumed his vanity as moth.

There is a great mystery in the fall of man, to whom God gave such honor and upon whom God conferred such power. Man was commanded to subdue the earth, he has sought out many inventions, created nothing, added nothing to what the Lord created, waxed worse and worse in morals; yet in many ways he has sought out, applied and seemingly changed and brought into operation many new uses of the things sleeping in nature. His mind delights in works of earth, building cities, cultivating the earth, travel, use of steam, electricity, publication of books, making speeches, contending in the rivalry for mastery, seeking to exalt self, he has made what he considers great progress.

But when he is lightened from above or born of the incorruptible seed by the word of God, then his desire is to meditate upon the wonders, beauty, the glory, the majesty, dominion, eternal life, infinite happiness of the Son of God so that he then glories in the Lord, for the Lord makes all things new, never to wax old or to fade away, then he seeks the city that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, and the glories of the new Jerusalem shall forever delight him.

The goings of the Lord Jesus have been from everlasting and he is wonderful in counsel and excellent in performing. In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. He is the second Adam, the quickening spirit, the first born from the dead, chiefest among ten thousand and one altogether lovely. To know him is eternal life and by his transforming power he shall change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his own glorious body, and we shall be satisfied when we shall see him as he is. Every color of the rainbow, every hue and beauty of every precious stone shall shine in him above the brightness of the sun.

P. D. G.

Brother J. R. Jones, requests my view of Jeremiah 12:9, "Mine heritage is unto me as a speckled bird, the birds round about are against her; come ye, assemble all the beasts of the field, come to devour."

The people of Israel are the Lord's heritage. They were so disobedient that they became as one contemptible and despised. The Lord took no pleasure in them, and called for the surrounding nations to afflict and oppress them because they continued not in his ordinances. Naturally the surrounding nations hate Israel because there is no bond of sympathy between them. Israel considered himself superior to them. The proper feeling for him to have was one of gratitude to God for his favors under a deep sense of their unworthiness to receive them. But pride and vanity so occupied their minds and influenced their conduct that the other nations despised them, and sought to oppress them. When Babylon held them in bondage there was no pity in that people. They were full of spots, sores, plagues, ill favored, speckled, without beauty in the eyes of the nations, and instead of comeliness and beauty they were cast off and abhorred as the most despicable of all creatures. Rejected of their God, and scorned by their adversaries, they must hang their harps on the willows and weep beside the dark waters of Babylon, and remember their former days of prosperity now so blurred because of their present mournful ones. When we remember what we have procured by our folly and deserved by our shameful conduct our grief becomes so heightened that we can have no pleasure. Those that hate us spoil us and scornfully remind us of our folly.

Then when we see the spots or specks of defilement on ourselves, and know that we are not pure nor clean, but motley and not walking in white we are shorn of our strength, and confess with shame our fallen condition. For these stains are so glaring and cannot be hid from our view. As dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to give an offensive smell, or as a little folly in a wise man mars his good name, so much more than it appears in a fool, so these spots stainings the garments of Israel that should be spotless, and one says how is the fine gold become dim? Is this the people the Lord has wrought so much for, crowned above all others, and now behold how fallen.

It was the sad lot of the prophet Jeremiah to bear heavy tidings to his people, and weep over their backslidings, and lament their downfall. In this he foreshadows Jesus the weeping one bearing the guilt of his transgressing people so that his sorrows surpassed those of any other man—so that he was justly called the man of sorrows.

P. D. G.

One signing the name "a sinner" requests my view of Mark 10:2-9. Read this scripture. Jesus answered questions in faithfulness even when enemies asked them to tempt or ensnare him. The pharisees came to Jesus and said to him, "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.

He said to them, what did Moses command you? They plead that Moses suffered it. Jesus said Moses for the hardness of our hearts suffered this. But God from the beginning made them male and female.

It was no credit or honor to the Pharisees to be told that on account of the wickedness or hardness of the heart of the Israelites he suffered them to put away their wives. If they had been righteous they would have been satisfied to abide as God created them. God made them in the beginning male and female, and what he has joined together let no man put asunder.

Perhaps there is as many sins committed against the marriage relations as almost any other relation of life. A man should love his wife as himself, and nothing but death can separate them. In proportion as men ignore or violate the relation of marriage do they show their corruption.

There is only one ground or cause for separation or annulling a marriage and that is fornication.

In the spiritual realm fornication is the worship of idols. Those who are married to Jesus, or those whom God has given to Jesus, worship and serve him. They that forsake the Lord Jesus are guilty of fornication or spiritual adultery, and therefore guilty of whoredom, and no whoremonger shall inherit the kingdom of God.

HUMILITY.

The natural state of man's mind is one of pride, vanity, conceit, arrogance, coming from the devil who is the king of all the children of pride. When one is born of God he becomes humble as a little child and a follower of the Lord Jesus who was the humblest man ever born of woman or that ever walked on the earth. He was meek and lowly in heart, when he was reviled he reviled not again, he prayed for his enemies, saying of those who crucified him, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do."

When one is convicted of sin he is being convinced of the pride and vanity of his corrupt nature, of the spirituality of God's holy law, and of his inability to comply with any of his requirements and of the nature of his carnal mind to transgress all its precepts. He becomes convinced of the justice of the law and of his condemnation and that the sentence of death is a righteous one, he is made conscious of the holiness of Almighty God, and becomes vile in the sight of God, abhorring himself. Thus he becomes sensible of his unworthiness, and that any mercy bestowed upon him is a favor hence he becomes thankful. In this condition he can forgive an enemy, laying aside all anger, wrath, malice and evil speaking, and as a new born babe desire the sincere milk of the word that he may grow thereby.

It is pleasant to deal with a man that is humble, forbearing, forgiving, not exacting or making demands of the other that are unreasonable, not expecting any great thing for himself, nor is he a candidate for high honor for himself, he is not selfseeker, he seeks the honor of God, feeling that the lowest place is most fitting for himself. He seeks first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, he prefers the honor of God and desires to glorify God in his body and spirit which be- long to God.

Such a man has the principle of happiness in himself, because the mercies of the Lord flowing into him, bestow upon him favors of which he is not worthy, he can rejoice always and in everything give thanks, because he has so many things to be thankful for. His spirit of discontent and strife has been cast out of him, and the spirit to appreciate divine favors keeps him humble and thankful, so that he is not actuated by a hard heart and an un- forgiving spirit. The last days of Job were his best days, because the spirit of meekness and divine reconcillation to God and joy in the Lord took possession in his heart. The kingdom of heaven is righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. A believer in the Lord Jesus, when walking in the spirit is a lover of good men, seeks those things which are above the world, is laying up treasure in heaven where neither moth or rust corrupt, where thieves do not break through and steal, for there are no thieves or robbers where his treasure is. The humble man is in spirit, he is never afraid that he will not be appreciated by others or that he will fail of obtaining any blessings provided for him, his confidence is in the Lord, who judgeth righteously.

The meek shall inherit the earth, for all things work together for good to them that love the Lord, to them that are called according to his purpose. He minds not higher things, but condescends to men of low estate. The men of low estate, here referred to, are those who are sensible of their infirmity and do not enroach upon the rights of others, therefore he dwells in love and unity of the spirit and bonds of peace with those who love the Lord. Hence his society is with the excellent of the earth in whom there is no guile. He is not afraid of pestilence that walketh at noon-day, nor terrors by night, for thou will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on the Lord, because he trusts in him. The humble so trust in the Lord and dwells in Mt. Zion which cannot be removed. A proud man cannot trust in Lord but he depends upon himself. A humble man cannot depend upon himself because he is conscious of his own weakness and vanity. It is a great blessing when the foundation of pride is removed, when the foundations of the great deep are broken up and when the peace of God flows into the soul so that the strength of the Almighty is a strong habitation into which he may continually resort. Such a man cannot trust to his own knowledge and wisdom and foresight, but he trusts in the wisdom and power of God who is his shield and buckler. Hence he is strong in the power of the Lord and in his might. Therefore, such a one overcomes the world.

EYES.

What a wonderful creature is one that is made in the image of God, and whom God loves? The eye receives impressions from all objects that present themselves before it. Instantly whatever comes within the range of the eye is photographed on the eye, and the picture stands out before the eye. Shall not then he that made the eye see? We see in the light. But the natural eye of man cannot create light the eyes sees. But God is light, not only is there light in his presence, but he is light, and in him is no darkness at all. There is not a particle of light in our eyes. As proof of this where and when there is no light we cannot see any thing. We cannot behold any thing until it is presented in the light, for light makes manifest. We cannot estimate the value of the eye, nor recount its uses. As proof of this knowledge or understanding. When the eyes of our understanding are enlightened then we know the hope of God's calling. To have such knowledge of God as to know his character and the certainty of his doing all his pleasure is a divine and unspeakable blessing, being an anchor to the soul both sure and steadfast. The revelation of the glorious beauties of the Lord's kingdom to the understanding of one born of God, opening unutterable beauties of heaven to him, unfolds such majesty and dominion of God, and such a new world of glory as the natural eye of man hath not seen. God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

When he lifts up the light of his countenance upon us and gives us light, and we find grace in his eyes every time he looks upon us it is a look of love, and he beholds no iniquity in Jacob; for the light of his countenance clothes Jacob with such beauty that there is no spot in him, but he is all glorious within. For it is in God's light that we see light—not only see objects manifested by light, but we see the light that makes the objects manifest. P. D.G.

BONES.

The first substance in the creation of the type of the church was a bone—a rib taken out of man by the Lord God the maker. Bone is considered the most enduring part of man, and is the substance of his frame. It gives power and shape and strength to the man. When flesh, sinews, skin and shape are perished from man his bones continue. For Joseph said I die, but shall carry my bones when you emerge from Egypt. The valley of dry bones presents only the evidence of that which once lived in the shape of bones very dry, and no two bones even joined together. No man could have put the proper bones together bone coming to his fellow bone of the same body. But under the creating, moving, unerring power of prophecy each bone comes to his fellow bone linked with security, girded and fenced with skin, and so beautified as they stood up a living host as the Lord's people. The shepherd takes two legs or a piece of an ear out of the mouth of the lion, and knows what part of the sheep he has rescued, but who could place bone to his fellow in the valley of bones where no two were together? How feeble man would be also in giving life to these scattered dry bones. But there is nothing too hard for the spirit of the Lord to do. Two legs of a sheep would indicate that one may walk, and a piece of an ear would indicate that one might hear.

Resurrection life is built on what God does and says. For as not a bone of Jesus could be broken, so not a member of the body of Jesus which is bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh shall ever fail to come and appear in its place in Zion. Nothing—not a hoof—shall be left in Egypt or death.

Jesus shall present his church a glorious body without spot, wrinkle or any such thing.

Whence do the bones grow in the womb? Where do they gather substance? Yet the food and other nourishment that feeds the infant gives increase also to the bones.

The bones are hid because they are covered, so the strength of the saint is hid so that it cannot be seen by man. The strength of Israel is in the Lord Jesus, who has a name written on his thigh Lord of lords and King of kings. This strength is everlasting. So from the beginning Jesus appears as the strength of his people, for as the rib of Adam is the material of which his wife is made, so of the substance of Jesus the chosen of God originate.

P. D. G.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD SOLDIER.

Would you say that for one to have no burdens to bear, no fatiguing marches to make, no exposures to heat and cold, no hunger and thirst, no enemy to encounter, that he is a good soldier? Suppose one had all that his foolish heart could wish, every vanity gratified, no exposures to enemies, no crosses, the captain always heaping praises on him, would you be willing to go along with him to battle? Would you expect to fight?

A soldier must prove all things. How? He must fight if he expects to reign. He must endure if he expects to overcome. He must bear burdens if he expects to be strong. He must hunger if he wants to know how sweet a good mess is. He must come into the fight if he is to learn the strength of the Lord, and how weak he is himself. If we are to learn that we must be steadfast in the faith in order to overcome Satan we must feel his darts and learn his devices. We prove all things by handling them. It is not the on-looker that learns, but the man who sees and feels and knows the place of danger and also the place of safety.

The smooth stones of the brook satisfied David that this only would reach and destroy Goliath. He had experience in such matters, and faith guiding him he employs that which alone supplied need. Hence he had no carnal fear about the victory. By faith he overcame. This faith is the language of experience speaking encouraging words in the heart that has the witness of God's mercies prophesying victory to him. It is God speaking in the heart of that which shall be because we have witness or proof of these things in what we have already seen, felt and handled. God speaks to the heart of things hoped for, and the substance of things not seen strengthens us unto the battle.

Out of weakness we are made strong. Strength of endurance is given to confess the Lord is able because he has already delivered us. What he has done for us who has begun the good work causes us to hope he will continue to deliver us. The just shall live by his faith.

OBITUARIES

RUTH O. HOUSE.

By the request of poor, patient, suffering little Ruth's mother, I will attempt to write a short sketch of her death and sufferings. She was born October 11, 1886, and died July 9, 1908, making her stay on earth 21 years 8 months and 28 days. She was the third daughter of Mr. T. L. House and Sallie his wife. She never united with any church or made any open profession of religion, but we have all reasons to believe that she is at rest with our blessed Saviour. For the past three years she has been a great sufferer, but she bore her sufferings with great fortitude. She was not down all the time, she would have spells and be down several weeks and recover, but when the end came, and death claimed her as his own, she was down nearly three weeks. Her disease was so complicated there was no relief for her, although she was the most patient sufferer I have ever seen. I visited her during her sickness and I have never seen any one so sick to bear it all so well, never to make a murmur, and was willing for any one to wait on her. She was a beautiful and accomplished young lady and everyone that knew her seemed to admire her. She had an unequalled character always trying to make everything pleasant for every one from the oldest to the youngest. She seemed so bright during all of her sickness, and knew everyone that came to see her, and would say, I am so sick unless I can get better, I can not stand it much longer, but I could not help from feeling hopeful of her, although I knew her condition was serious and all the doctors, parents, sisters brothers and loving hands could do for her was of no avail. It was heart rending to have to give up one, just entering into the bloom of life, so bright and promising. We all loved her so much and loved to have her visit our home, it seemed to make everywhere bright and jolly wherever she was at. May the good Lord bless the grief stricken family.

Ruth was loving and dear,
Most precious to our sight
Alas that stroke! It was severe,
Which took our hearts delight.

Just a few days ago,
Have quickly passed along
Since our dear Ruth was taken away,
And left us quite undone.

There's not doubt upon my mind
But victory she obtained.
Although we are left here behind,
I hope we will meet again.

MOLLIE AND ELBERT SCOGGINS.

Dear Brother Gold—By request of the family I will endeavor in my weak way to write a few lines in memory of these dear children.

Mollie was the oldest daughter of A. B. and Belle Scoggins, was born April 10, 1887 and died July 23, 1907, making her stay on earth 20 years, 2 months and thirteen days. She was a delicate child, being afflicted from her birth and knew not the pleasure of feeling well or enjoying life as most young people. Her friends knew not how to sympathize with her affliction. She suffered greatly although all that loving hands and kind physicians could do gave no relief.

Mollie was kind hearted, had a sweet disposition and was an industrious girl, yet her health was so poor she could do but very little work. Her sufferings were so great she would often say, this world is no pleasure to me. She was often heard at the midnight hour asking the dear Lord to relieve her of her sufferings by taking her home to glory. The last few days of her life seemed to be her happiest ones. She praised God continually just before she died. She begged her father and mother not to grieve after her and not to shed one tear as she was going home to Jesus. She bid adieu to each member of the family, telling them how to live.

Funeral services were conducted by Elder J. J. Hall, appropriate remarks were made and her body was laid to rest beside her dear little brother who had gone before.

Little Elbert Scoggins was the youngest son of eleven children. He was born August 25, 1899 and died June 29, 1906, making his stay on earth six years, eleven months and four days. He was a bright eyed little fellow, always pleasing and gay. He was stout and healthy, but was taken with the fatal disease, typhoid fever, living only a few days after taking it. Little Elbert possessed a good disposition, always kind and affectionate. He had many playmates who loved him dearly, he was so kind to them. During his illness he was very quiet and patient.

It is hard to give our loved ones up, but Thy will be done not ours. Dear relatives don't grieve after the ones gone before, for they are now resting sweetly. The funeral services of little Elbert were also conducted by Elder Hall, and his little body led to rest in Durham cemetery, there to await the resurrection morn. I desire to most humbly pray that the blessings of God be given the bereaved family.

ELIZABETH OAKLEY.

Dear Brother Gold—By request I hope to write in remembrance of my dear mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Oakley. She was the daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth Painter was born May 15, 1838. Married to Mr. Moses L. Oakley in 1848 and died April 19, 1907, making her stay on earth exactly seventy-nine years. The fruit of this union was eight children and she was blessed to raise seven and see them married. She had sixty grand-children and forty great-grand-children, the writer marrying her youngest daughter.

I know I can't write half of the good life of this dear woman. She was hard working and industrious, and was a noble and obedient wife, a kind and loving mother and a good neighbor, always ready and willing to visit the sick and do all she could for the poor and needy. She was a strong Primitive Baptist and believed in the blessed bible doctrine of Christ our Savior, that grace is the gift of God. She had a bright hope of Christ as her Savior for forty years before she joined the church at Storie's Creek. She was seventy-six years old when she joined and was so feeble that her eldest son went in the water and helped dear old brother Albert Blalock baptize her, and it was the sweetest baptism with more love manifested when she was baptized than I have ever seen. She suffered many years with a bad cough and part of the time could not sleep day or night though she bore all her afflictions with patience. In her last illness while talking with her, I asked her, if it was God's will to call her did she feel she would be better off. She said she felt she would be, and was willing and wanted to die, if it was his will, though she was submissive for the Lord's will to be done. I have not a doubt about her being at rest and believe she is asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep.
A calm and undisturbed repose;
Unbroken by the last of foes.

Asleep in Jesus, peaceful rest;
Whose waking is supremely blest;
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour
Which manifests a Savior's power.

All of her children are believers in the Primitive Baptist doctrine, and three of them are members in that church. Dear God, I humbly hope if it can be thy will to give each one of us grace sufficient that we may live a christian life by an orderly walk and a godly conversation, as our dear mother lived and died in the triumph of faith.

HESIKIAH WADE.

Hesikiah Wade was born Feb. 1821 and died Feb. 1908, making his stay on earth 87 years. When quite a young man he joined the Primitive Baptists church at North River, Carteret county, North Carolina, under the preaching of Eld. Benjamin Follard, at what date I don't know, but he was living then at Smyrna, N. C.

He came from sturdy New England ancestry who emigrated to Carteret county about 1730. They were Prodestant or Roger William Baptists. He was married sometime in the forties to Miss Nancy Wade, daughter of Caleb and Ruth Wade who were Primitive Baptist. She died about twenty years ago.

At the close of civil war he moved to Morehead City, where after his second wife's death he lived with his son. He was well known as Uncle Ki. He was strong in the faith once delivered to the saints. His seat was never vacant where his dear people were assembled in divine worship. His health was very good for one so advanced in years and though he was blind or nearly so, he cou'd find his way.

In the cold days of last February he obeyed the last call of nature and obeyed the last mandate of the lowly Jesus and went to the pool of Saloam and washed, and now he beholds the joys of his Savior of whose army he was a member and whose uniform he was always wearing. Faith Ready; the faith that had given him so much joy in this sinful world. He leaves a host of friends to mourn their loss, but their loss is his eternal gain.

SIMPSONIOUS HOLDEN.

Simpsonian Holden was born June 5, 1839. He was united in marriage to Mahalia Jane Batts, the 12th day of November 1868, and joined the church at Moore's in Wilson county, N. C., August 24, 1879, and died at his home in Gardner's Township, county and state as above, September 8, 1907, after a brief illness, making his stay on earth 68 years, three month and four days.

In the death of brother Holden the county of Wilson has lost one of its best citizens, his wife, sister Holden, a true and faithful husband, his children a kind and affectionate father. His relation to the public was that of an honest honorable, upright citizen. His conduct towards his neighbor and whom he came in contact, his courtly bearing and kind consideration for the feelings and opinions of others, gave ample testimony to the goodness and purity of his heart.

As a church member he was especially dignified, affable, respectful and loving towards all. It may be said of him truly that he was diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. For many years he served his church as clerk, and deacon acceptably. His church gave him liberty to speak publicly in the name of the Lord. I have often heard him with pleasure and to profit. His knowledge of the scriptures was quite extensive and he was well established in the doctrine and an experimental knowledge of the truth. His loss to the church will be felt for many years, having left behind him a good name and an excellent example.

J. S. WOODARD.

W. W. BENNETT.

Elders Gold and Lester—In compliance with the request of Sister Ida Dalton, I write for publication in Zion's Landmark, a short sketch of the life and death of her father W.W. Bennett, who departed this life June 30, 1908, aged 79 years 7 months and 6 days. He was a son of William Bennett Sr., of Rockingham county, N. C., and was born November 24, 1828, and was united by marriage to Martha S. Robertson and Francis Robertson his wife, November 23, 1858, Elder John W. Stadler officiating. To this union was born three sons and two daughters. One daughter, one son and his wife died previous to his being called home. He united with the Primitive Baptist church at the February meeting in 1881, at Sardis church in Rockingham county, N. C., and was baptized at the March meeting in 1881, by Elder R. W. Hill. His dear wife and the unworthy writer and his wife also being blessed to unite with the church and be baptized at the same time with him. Brother Bennett was ordained to the office of deacon soon after uniting with the church, the duties of which he faithfully discharged, manifesting as much meekness and humbleness as any one could have done. He was not double-tongued, not given to much wine, and not greedy of filthy lucre. I am sure he came as near having the qualifications of a deacon as set forth in First Timothy 3:8, as any one I ever saw. He always provided well for his own house and had plenty for the comfort of himself, his family and his brethren and friends when they would visit him, and that was often, as his house was a home for his brethren. He was possessed of a generous spirit and very kind to all, both old and young, but his chief delight was with the brethren at home or abroad. He was never absent from the church on meeting days' unless providentially hindered and he was sound in faith and doctrine, never sacrificing truth for error. He was a close observer, not hasty in speaking, but would give matters due consideration of thought and when he spoke it was generally to the purpose. He always manifested a spirit of forbearance and forgiveness and endeavored to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, and always walked worthy of the vocation wherewith he was called, making it manifest by the same that there was a reality in the confession that he had made before men. Yes I have no doubt but men of the world have said of him, truly he was a child of God, for he was a living epistle known and read of all men. He was truthful, sober, honest and just in his dealings with all men, always doing unto others as he would have them do unto him. As husband, he was affectionate, true and devotional. As father he was a good counselor, very indulgent using no partiality.

Brother Bennett had been gradually declining in health for several months, but he never suffered much pain, and never murmured or complained, as I ever heard and when the end came he passed away as calmly and easy as an infant going to sleep. He leaves to mourn his departure two sons and one daughter, one son in law, two daughters in law, several grand-children, two brothers and one sister. His children were all at his bedside at the time of his death, and had been with him most all the time during his last illness. Notwithstanding his oldest son, A. B. Bennett lives in Winston, N. C., and his daughter, Mrs. C. H. Dalton lives several miles distant, yet they left their homes and families and gave their entire attention to their father, as did also his son W. M. Bennett and daughter-in-law Mrs. Ella Bennett and also his only surviving sister Miss Sallie Bennett. No children could ever manifest more love and respect for their parents than they did. But the fullness of the time had come for him to be called home, and to his children and brethren, sisters and friends one and all I will say, remember we are only waiting here below, but soon we after him must go. We should not grieve, nor wish him back in the world of sin and sorrow. But stay thy tears for they are blest whose days are past, whose oil is done. Here midnight care disturbs our rest; Here sorrow dims the noon day sun.

O, stay thy tears, the blest above, have hailed a spirits heavenly birth and sung a song of joy and love. Then why should anguish reign on earth. And think not he is dead, for he is not dead, but sleepeth.

Asleep in Jesus blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep." And after having fallen asleep his mortal remains were carried to the church at Sardis on the 2nd day of July 1908, and his funeral preached by Elder P. W. Willard, his much beloved pastor, to a large concourse of sorrowing relatives, brethren and friends, and then he was laid by the side of his dear companion who had preceded him a few years, there to await the resurrection when they shall all come forth they that have done good to the resurrection of life and they that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation. May the Lord comfort all that mourn.

Affectionately,

W. A. GOURLEY.

Plain Talks on Fertilizers

Improving and Increasing Tobacco Crops

No soil is rich enough in all the foods the tobacco plant needs to produce it at its best.

Many tobacco soils, however, contain natural elements, rich in certain valuable plant foods, but lacking in others. And just as a dead or dying soil must be fed with a complete plant food, so these partially fed soils need specially prepared food to supply what they lack, and balance the unequal fertilization supplied by nature.

When these special nourishing elements are added to the soil, crops multiply enormously; quality improves, and profits are doubled and trebled. Tobacco is seldom planted nowadays without the use of some fertilizer; but the great point to remember is otherwise the results will not be satisfactory.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

ADAM.

Adam was not a heavenly being. He didn't come down from heaven. He was of the earth, earthy. His name means, "Red earth," and was always a reminder to him that he came from the ground. The earth was the creature of God and was made in the beginning. Then also man was made.

Jesus Christ was not made in the beginning. He came down from heaven. Here in the flesh, he was man and at the same time he was God—the God-Man. Not the Elohim or God but the Jehovah Elohim as Lord God. He was the Lord from heaven, the quickening spirit.

Adam was only a figure. A figure is really nothing, but that which it represents is everything.

Adam was just as earthy before the fall as he was afterwards. His condition was changed in the fall but his relation to the earth was the same. He could not look upward for there was no mind in him, to lead him that way. He had never been able to compare the good and the evil, for he knew only the state that he was in. He knew nothing of God as the God of justice and mercy, nor could he know in that state for he felt no need to cry unto God. He was pure or good in that that there was no sin about him.

The Lord came in a world of sin. He was made sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. He was the tree of life in the garden of the Lord, of whom the church receives life and becomes the branches or the fruit bearing tree of life in the midst of the street and on either side of the river of life.

Adam had no life in himself, he received it from the Lord. He had no power to keep that life nor to give it to another. It was to live but not to give.

The Lord both lived and gave his life to others that they should live by him.

Adam's bride was in him but he knew nothing of her existence. He received the law to multiply and replenish the earth, but no way was manifest by which this word should be fulfilled. The undeveloped woman in the man received the same commandment. She knew nothing of what she was being commanded, for she had no separate individual existence, from the man. Being made in him she was just as earthy as was the man, for they were both of one. What was a law to the one was the same law to the other. The transgression by her was the transgression by him, for she was of him; bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh. Hence when he followed her in the transgression by actually disobeying the law he was only following the lead of his own earthy being and looking downward to the place from whence he came.

The bride of Christ was in him and in him she received the first and new covenant. He was from above and therefore in her new life—development, she looks upward to the high and the holy, and her longings are to Godward. He is the eternal Father and her life of God given by Jesus Christ by whom grace and truth came.

The first temptation was to eat that which was forbidden. This thing was beautiful, the woman was overcome and had no power to resist the temptation. The forbidden fruit was no part of the woman's person, and satan in the form of a serpent had no power to be joined with her in cohabitation. To simply bear and believe the words of satan's mouth was eating. He that believeth in me shall never hunger, said our Lord. Now if that is true on that side, it is also true on the other. Here the corn (grain) of wheat had fallen into the ground to bring forth fruit. The man was not deceived, but went with his bride. He loved her, she was bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh, after the fall as much so as she was when he first saw her, fresh from the hand of their maker. His love led him to live with her in death and they both became in that condition to die daily or continually.

The love of the Lord was entirely unchanged by the love of his bride. He loved her even when she was dead in sins and his love led him to die for her that she should live with him for he not only had the power of the resurrection, but he is the resurrection. Thus we see the shadow, (Adam) cannot equal the true, (Christ.) Adam had no power to live, nor to cause others to live. Christ had power to live and to cause that all who are in him should live also. This he does by giving them his life, which is eternal. Death reigned in Adam, therefore he could only impart death and bondage to his seed. Thus the same red earth or Adam is with every man who comes into the world. We are yet Adam, and do not have to add anything to form our plural.

When the Lord drove man out from the garden, he completely hedged in the tree of life to keep man away from it and man has never been able to find that way. His mind is the digging in the earth to find life. The earth is cursed for his sake. Just as the earth brings forth thorns and thistles so does sword (word) of the Lord forever cut off these things and man cannot approach unto the tree of life, nor partake of his fruit. Christ is the way. He came down from heaven and all that come to the father must come by him. He has made the way to the tree of life sure. Not to Adam as such for he is yet earthly, and therefore he on his part must see that he is cut off. It is in cutting off old Adam that we are led by Jesus Christ to the tree of life. We eat of him and live by him, he is our life. Adam never was the life of his bride though she was in him and their life was one yet he was not her life. They could be separated, and one could die and the other yet live. The Lord is very life of his bride and she is in him forevermore and she cannot die because of her perfect unity with him. He has said to her, "As I live so shall you live also." Therefore her life is equal to his life and the one is sure as the other.

Where Adam yielded to the temptation to eat, our Lord overcame in the same temptation. Therefore where Adam had no power to stand and fell our Lord had power and stood and continued to resist even unto death and overcame in that he died and lived again. The law given in Adam by transgression became the law of bondage unto death, but the law that is given in Jesus Christ is the law of liberty in that he lives.

Adam the first could not live only by Jesus Christ and so we must live and praise him who gave himself for us and saved us from our sins.

L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—It is in my mind to write a few words on Isaiah 55:1, and some other scriptures as they may appear to come in the thoughts of my mind.

“Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price.”

We all know that thirsting is a sure sign of life. No dead person ever thirsted. This is also true spiritually. If one is thirsting for the righteousness of our God, the waters of eternal life, he surely is not dead in trespasses and sins, but has been quickened by the spirit of God shed abroad in the heart. Therefore this language is altogether to and for the living children of God. They are called upon to hearken, to give attention to the fact that God has some thing in store which they are to freely receive; something for which they can pay nothing. Those who have anything that they can pay cannot so much as hear that blessed word for it is not spoken to them nor for them. None feel this poverty, but those whose hearts have been touched by the blessed word of God. When our Lord preached the gospel it was directly to that hungry, thirsty, poor people and it never failed to bring forth fruit. Hear the word. “For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I send it.” Isaiah 55:10-11.

What can be plainer than this? God has a purpose in view that his word shall do, he speaks and it is done, his word has carried.

Did any one ever sow seed on a stone in order to make it fallow ground?

Even so the sowing of seed on briars and thorns and by the way side does not make them fertile or prepared soil. After the seed have fallen one proves to be stony, one wayside and the other full of briars and thorns. All these soils were that way before the seed fell on them and they continued that way. Spiritually if these had been children of God they could not have been this way for the stony heart would have been broken, fallowed and the fire would have consumed all of this choking filth.

Here is another soil. The stone has been broken, the thorns taken away, the wayside fallowed up and when the “Ho,” to that soul is spoke there is a listening ear; when the word is to the thirsty that soul leaps for joy, for he hears the call and is ready to receive it, has received it and at once that soul drinks that which has so freely flown with out money, without price and fruit is borne unto the hand that sowed the seed.

No stone ever made itself hard nor did the fallow ground prepare itself. Yet that would be the truth if the stony ground hearer were a christian disobedient to God's word and the fallow ground hearer an obedient one.

Wherein did the five wise virgins do better than the five foolish ones? The whole ten took their lamps and went out to meet the bridegroom; while he tarried the whole ten slumbered and slept, when the midnight cry was made the whole ten arose and went out to meet him. Wherein did the one do better or worse than the other? There was a difference for five of them had lamps and vessels in which oil was taken, the other five had lamps only with no place for oil. The wise virgins did not make themselves wise nor did they provide themselves with those vessels. The foolish could not turn from their folly by getting vessels full of oil. Each was honest in his profession (lamp) and therefore one just as virtuous as the other and therefore "ten virgins."

When the word was spoken it was to the intent that the difference should be known, that the wise should be manifested in the Lord.

The idea that our dear Lord has anything to sell to his chosen people is a contradiction of our text and second quotation. If he has obedience to sell what will he receive in exchange for it? If he has obedience to sell how much and what is the price thereof? Will he be enriched by this sale? What is the trafficking commodity of God's holy kingdom and what is the acceptable currency there?

The text tells us that no money nor price is to be paid therefore there is no currency acceptable and they who feel that they have any are not told to come to this river, this well-spring of life and salvation.

No one but a christian ever thirsted for this water and to him the word of the Lord is, "Come ye to the waters," and he comes because the word thus spoken has power to draw him. It was sent unto that end and it accomplishes that purpose. Praise the Lord.

To say that God would have us do this or that and that he has so commanded but through our rebellion we do not do his commandment, it is just the same as any one else preaching conditionalism or Arminianism, and it disputes the word of the Lord.

We buy, but we do so by the blood and righteousness of Christ. That is the only acceptable currency of the kingdom of the living God. To him and him alone has the father said, "I am well pleased for his righteousness sake." In this do I desire to trust above all the obedience which can ever be rendered by me and all the rest of the children of God. Obedience is good, it is that which the Lord works in our hearts by his grace and we work out with fear and trembling, and it is the light which is produced on the lamp by the oil in the renewed heart or vessel which is given us as a safe and sure depository for such a heavenly treasure. It comes to us without money and without price and we eat and drink and the fear of the Lord makes us rejoice in his salvation.

They that believe do enter into rest even as the Lord finished his work and rested. Faith is the end of works and an entrance into the work of the Lord. There we enter into the promises of the new covenant and we love the service of God. We don't work to obtain something as a man would a livelihood here, but we work because the inheritance is ours and we rejoice in occupying it.

We love the food and rejoice in the fountain of living water. It is in us a well of water springing up unto eternal life.

Rejoice in the Lord ye thirsty souls, and you that have no money nor price to bring for the salvation of the Lord is yours, and all he is and has he gives you without money and without price.

Praise ye the Lord.

I am yours in this faith and blessed hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Miss Louisa A. Edwards:

Dear Sister—After reading your letter to Brother Gold in the 15th July No. of Zion's Landmark I was impressed to write you and let you know that a refreshing shower fell into my soul, and I drank of the living water that flowed into my soul. Yes, dearest sister, the little showers that bring peace, joy, love, and rejoicing, are the ones that we enjoy most the ones that enable us to see by an eye of faith they are of the Lord; for we read that the Lord was not in the earthquake nor in the storm, but in the still, small voice. It is like the dews of Hermon—the oil of gladness that is flowing out of the little white clouds—that fall upon our heads, and run down, even to the skirts of our garments, and some how or other it gets in our hearts, and we cannot hold our peace and hence my writing to you, for there the Lord commands a blessing even life forevermore.

Dear sister, when the life-giving blood was shown to me, and I was enabled to believe it was shed for me; and the river of life was presented, I drank and drank until I viewed myself as one; and I was enabled to glorify "my God." Yes, dear sister my God. I felt that he was my God; and even now thirty four years have gone by but the same faith that enabled me to claim him as my God still abides, and I still feel to say, "my God."

Dear sister, I am seventy-six years old. I cannot stay in this world much longer, but by the grace of God I can say that death has no terrors for me, for, dear sister, what is death to a child of God, but a sweet resting place where we will await the coming of our dear Lord, when he shall descend in like manner as he ascended? Then we shall arise, and ascend with our dear Lord, and ever be with him. Then we shall see him as he is, and praise as we ought. Till then, dear sister, let us try to keep the straight and narrow path, that leads to that blest abode, for if we leave this narrow way we will surely get on forbidden ground, and "Giant Despair," will be after us. This straight way is the king's high-way where no lion's whelp, nor ravenous beast can go; for none but the children of God can travel that way, and if our Father does not lead us along that way we are constantly out on Apolyon's premises.

Dear sister, I started out to talk more about the cloud that you spoke of. I want to tell you what nice little showers the Lord caused me to enjoy. He did not send any dark, angry clouds, but like the one you spoke about that white cloud that sends the refreshing showers in your soul, and refreshes all the little plants, and makes them-grow. That was the kind of clouds that caused me to be in a state of rejoicing and praising for two long years.

Dear sister, I hope you are not tired of my saying sister, for if I am what I hope I am—a child of God I think I have a right to call you sister.

Yes, for two years, and for several years the Lord led me along; and from time to time enabled me to see, at least, his "back parts," for I often look back and see the hand of God in delivering me from dangers seen and unseen. Thus far the Lord has led me on; and I still believe he will lead me to the end, and when I am called to lay down the shackles of mortality that I shall be able to cross over the river of death rejoicing in the same blessed three—one God.

Dear sister, please cast the mantle of charity over my shortcomings and imperfections.

From your brother near the end,

W. C. TREVATHAN.

Rocky Mount, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—I will again send you a piece which was written November 23, 1906, soon after I was baptized. Craving an interest in your prayer, I am your little sister I hope,
BESSIE BROOKS.

While I sit watching the golden sun set, listening to the sighing of the winds and the autumn leaves as they rustle on the ground, it brings to my mind sweet memories of the happy day, when through fear and trembling I went forward to proclaim what great things the Lord had done for me. Though I felt to be the poorest of the poor so unfit, imperfect, so unworthy to dwell with his people yet to my surprise they received me. Oh, what joy filled my soul, when I realized that I had been gathered into the fold, how comforting it was to me, when the dear little flock seemed to bid me welcome. I felt as a poor alien weary of wondering who had found rest by the way-side. What sweet promises are given unto us and the joys of assurance when he bids those to come to him, unto him all who labor and are heavy laden and he will give you rest, take his yoke upon you and learn of him for he is meek and lowly in heart and you shall find rest unto your souls for his yoke is easy and his burden is light."

Greenville, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—Your good letter has been a source of much comfort to me. How like "apples of gold in pictures of silver" are your words—so fitly spoken.

If I could just say my words as near like I feel that they should be said, as you speak, how pleasant it would be, I feel. A picture like this is beautiful; but, alas, I cannot even frame one presentable. If there is any gold about it I make such a daub of it, not being skillful with the brush, until it cannot even be seen, it seems to me—the silver when standing out above and free from the contamination of inferior metals, is, of itself, a pretty picture; but I make a botch of that—So that nothing I do is perfect. Sin is mixed with all I do.

It was sad indeed to me to hear of the death of brother Trevathan, yet I feel it is a glorious exchange with him; for he said in a letter to me once that death had no terrors for him, but he seemed to look forward to it with joy, believing that the dear Lord would lead him unto the end, that when his time came to go he would be enabled to cross over the river of death rejoicing in the same blessed God. How beautiful to me is such confidence and trust in God! How glorious the view of the faithful, true, and tried servants of God, as they near the blissful shore of eternal happiness—There is something from within that speaks, and says with one of old, "Let me die the death of the righteous, let my last end be like his." I feel that I was greatly blessed of the Lord in being favored to know this worthy man of God.

I enclose you copy of the first letter I received from him. I feel it will be comforting to others to read.

I am alone in the store now, as my brother was taken down yesterday with an attack of the fever, but I do hope he will not get seriously sick; yet he has been lingering for some time, which makes me fearful.

O, how much I feel the need of mercy and grace. Pray for me.

If, at any time, you should feel like writing me a few lines, they will be gladly received and much appreciated.

Lovingly,

LOUISA A. EDWARDS,

Polkton, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Esteemed Friend and Brother in the Lord—I feel sometimes that it would be esteeming you more highly if I left out the word "brother," because I fall so far behind in walking up to the loving commandments of Jesus, therefore I go doubting many times not having the full garment of evidence that I am indeed a true brother and an heir with Christ. If I am not deceived in my heart I do have a longing desire to put off the old man with his deeds (that is carnal deeds of the flesh,) and put on the new man, that is Christ Jesus the Lord our righteousness and thereby walk in newness of life. This I have failed to do many times, but by this I have been taught a grand lesson. I have learned that without Jesus I can do nothing that will be pleasing in the sight of the Father, and when the spirit doth not strive with me I am just as liable to go astray as any of the children of wrath. But I do not believe as some teach, that the almighty who counts the human family (the bible tells us) as grasshoppers will trifle with man by sending his spirit to their hearts and then fall out with him and withdraw the good spirit from him never to return again. Such a doctrine as that says that God changes, but I know that the word of God says, "I am God and change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." So I do know if I have been born of the spirit of God, or in other words, if it ever has been the will and pleasure of the Lord from eternity to beget me by the word of truth he will in nowise forsake or cast me off forever. This is the kind of God I have faith in, and this faith is a free gift from him, because flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto me, notwithstanding I have been tempted to hold a faith that holds a God of trial and of want. Yea a God that wants to do many things, and not only that, but a God that goes forth making many trials to do at I to conquer but fails because of men and devils. This is a mighty God, trying to do with almighty men and devils. This is not the God spoken of in Revelation 6:2. We find there the true God going "forth conquering and to conquer." Yea, faith in this God is the only faith that will overcome the world, or in other words overcome all other winds of doctrines. It seems very strange to many people that the Old Baptists are so very hard to turn from what they believe to be the gospel. We (if you will permit to put self in), the Old School Baptists are a people that believe God to be omnipotent and omnipresent, we believe he is a God that cannot lie, in as much as he cannot change. Therefore we believe he will fulfill all that he has promised. He has promised to be merciful to our unrighteousness and a present help in a time of need. He has promised to be with us in the sixth trouble and not forsake us in the seventh, and by keeping his commandments through faith he has said he would be with us alway, even unto the end.

Hence the world need not invite us to join secret orders and trust in them and doubt what God has said, neither can they persuade us to believe that there will be more people saved in eternity because prohibition is coming in force.

I am glad our peace is not disturbed by this prohibition bill as other denominations are. I think it best for our people to say as little about this, as possible as we cannot change it. I would not change it if I could. I did not vote in the recent election regarding it. I do not approve of any one saying that prohibition will do away with all whiskey outside of pharmacies and thereby decrease crime so much so as to do away with chain gangs and all such places of punishment. Neither do I approve of any one saying that prohibition was meant for a wicked thing, because that side shows up to be on moral ground. Consequently let us judge nothing before the time; it will take more than a year to determine what prohibition will do, perhaps five years. Brother Gold I like all you said on prohibition.

I will close by hoping you will excuse me for such a badly formed scribble. I have only touched along the line of a few things to relieve my mind. I leave it to your judgment for publication. I have written a few pieces that came out in the Landmark, and some of the brethren spoke as though they enjoyed my writings, therefore I will write when I feel impressed though I don't wish to crowd out anything that the abler brethren have written. I don't wish to be a teacher, neither do I want people to think I am something great, for I know I am a sinner saved by grace if saved at all. Yours in faith and love to all the brethren.

J. F. HOWELL.

Big Lick, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—As there are no Baptists here I sometimes spend some very lonely Sundays. My work employs my mind to some extent during the week and sometimes my meditation are sweet company for me when I have no one to whom I can speak. But I read yesterday with much comfort the history of Joseph, the dreamer, as he was called by his brethren, which is always very touching to me. We often hear the patience of Job spoken of, but I think Joseph must have been an example of patience too, for we may read history through and we never hear one murmuring word escape his lips. When he dreamed a dream and would tell it to his brethren, they would make fun of it, and they hated him because he dreamed. But Joseph seemed to bear it all patiently. The wrath of his brethren was so kindled against him because of his dreams that they sought to destroy him and thus to put an end to his dreams. And when they sold him to the Ishmaelites, stripping him of his coat of divers colors, which his father had made for him because he loved him, staining it with the sin of their own crime, we have no account that Joseph uttered a murmuring word. And when he was afterward innocently cast into prison we hear no complaining from him, but see only the patience with which he endures. It is typical of the meekness and humility of Christ through all his sufferings.

When it came to pass that the chief butler and baker were imprisoned and each of them dreamed dreams which troubled them, Joseph interpreted them, telling the butler when it went well with him to remember him. But when he was delivered out of prison and was restored to his former state of prosperity he forgot Joseph. So much like we are. When we are in a state of rejoicing, prosperity and a land of plenty fearing no evil, how thoughtless we are but when we like the chief butler, are brought to "remember this day" our faults then it is we can point others to one who can interpret for them. And Joseph is sent for and interprets for the king and instructs him how to do that he may be able to survive the famine. Joseph is made governor over all Egypt and was favored and blessed of God, the Father of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to lay up in store against the days of famine, bread sufficient to keep many people alive. But what a special favor was bestowed on Joseph's brethren? He knew them the first time they went to buy corn but they did not know him, still the guilt and shame of the sin and crime of selling their brother followed them, just as our sins follow after and pursue us when we are constrained to go as beggars to the footstool of sovereign mercy and there plead for mercy instead of justice; for justice we knew would cut us off forever, while it might be that mercy would permit us to live. But he let them leave without making himself known to them, though he would have to hide his face to weep, such was his love for them. And because they could not get any more corn until they brought Benjamin they would not go until they were compelled to or starve. Oh what a touching sight that must have been when Joseph made himself known to his brethren, and how their guilt must have pressed them sore, when they knew it was he whom they had sold. See Joseph's love for them in freely forgiving all of them and saying to them, "Ye meant it for evil, but God meant it for good." What patience and brotherly love was here exhibited. Freely forgiving them for all they had ever done and said. Surely from thenceforth they must have been a band of loving brethren. Much there is in the history of Joseph to compare with the experience of the child of God and to point him to the Savior of sinners, of which Joseph is a beautiful type. Oh that brethren and sisters everywhere would love each other and cease to find fault with each other, cease to back-bite and devour each other. How pleasant it is to see love and union abounding.

Brother Gold, I feel it would do me good to have a letter from you.

In love and sweet fellowship,
LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—As my time expired the first of June for the Landmark I will send you $1.50 for its renewal as I don't want to miss a copy and I don't want to be behind as I believe all readers of the paper should try and keep up their subscriptions.

As the nearest church is 25 miles I don't hear preaching often, so the dear old Landmark is always a welcome visitor as it comes laden with much comfort and joy, but as brother J. E. Herndon stated in his article, we should not let any periodical come between us and our blessed bible.

I was blessed to attend a three days meeting at Coal's Creek church in Allen county, Kan., the first Sunday in May and it was a feast indeed to my hungry soul to be able to meet with the brethren and sisters and to hear so much good preaching. The Association will be held with this church the coming September, the first Friday, Saturday and Sunday. If nothing providentially hinders I hope to be able to attend that too.

Dear Brother Gold I hope the Lord will spare your life for many years to come to publish the Landmark and to preach the blessed gospel of the Son of God, for the time is at hand when we need such preachers and editors, them that God has placed upon the walls of Zion to cry aloud and spare not, to lift up their voices like a trumpet, to show the people their transgression and the house of Jacob their sins. And we are all commanded to watch, not others, but self, and it seems to me the older I get the closer I have to watch self, for it does seem to me I see my unworthiness and nothingness more and more every day of my life. Yea, I am made to cry as the old patriot, "O wretched one that I am," and I also find that we never come to that state until we feel like giving up our little hope. I say little for it does indeed seem small at times. And then in will come the tempter, if thou wilt only fall down and worship me, then we see our little hope brighter and we are made to cry out, Oh, no, no, not for ten thousand worlds like this.

Well, as I have already written more than I intended to I will close, asking you to throw the mantle of charity over all imperfections and if not asking too much remember me and mine in your petition to our heavenly Father.

Yours most unworthily,

ROZILA E. SHOEMAKER.

Mont Ida, Kansas.

Dear Brother Gold—Enclosed you will find $1.50 subscription to the Landmark for another year. I enjoy the contents so much that I think it well worth the price, and I hope the subscribers will contribute to you faithfully that you may be able to continue publishing it with joy. I think it a blessing and a great comfort to converse as it were through its columns and we should appreciate it as such. But I am so vile and sinful I often fear I am not one of the Lord's people and it seems at times I will almost faint by the way. But when I hear or read the travail of those I believe are his people and have the witness within, how it revives my poor heart and I am made to rejoice and can say as Jacob did, "it is enough. I know that my Redeemer liveth." Surely the Lord has been good to me and I feel if I should live to be very old and spend the remainder of my days in his praise I could never praise him enough for his great goodness and wonderful kindness to me, a poor sinner.

PRAYER.

Dear Brother Gold—I have been impressed for several days to write a piece to the Landmark on this subject, so I will try to write today if it is the Lord's will.

It is Sunday July 26, and we people in this section of the country haven't had any rain in a little over three weeks. This morning we had a fine rain and I couldn't help but rejoice when the rain began to fall, to think what a blessing it was and I couldn't help but go and pray to God and thank him, for the wonderful blessing he was sending down upon we ignorant people of this world.

I can't help but think that we people don't pray as often as we ought to, and thank the Lord for the many blessings he bestows upon us day after day and hour after hour.

Oh, my dear brethren and sisters it sometimes almost makes me shudder to think how far we people miss it in not honoring the Lord as it seems that we ought to when we come to the point to think that he is the ruler of heaven and earth, and the commander of all things, it is through and by him that we get everything we possess. I think it reads somewhere in the bible that there is nothing given unto man except it cometh from God, and it seems that we ought to be more humble to God when we come to think that the land we walk upon, and the water which we drink belongeth to the Lord. I am not but 24 years of age, and have been a member of the Primitive Baptist church ten years so you see that I am young and I may know what I am talking about.

I had a dream one night that was strange to me. I dreamed I went to a bridge that I had often dreamed of before and it was covered like a house. I went in and there had always been work benches, tools and shavings in there, but I would never see the workman and I would always go back, but this time the benches were moved, the tools and shavings all gone and still I saw nobody. I went further in than I had ever done before, and I came where I could see the water. I turned around to go back and on my right hand I saw a fountain, a large stream of water, right over the bridge. The river looked muddy, but the stream of water I saw over the bridge was as bright as ice and glittered like ice against the sun. I felt thirsty and walked up and took a little sup of that water and when I found myself I was standing in the floor, it seemed to me about two steps from my bed.

I thought about my dream and I was not thirsty and how came me standing there I could not understand, and I haven't dreamed of that bridge since.

I do not understand any of these mysteries, I wish I did.

But I strove against joining the church any more for a long time, but I went to hear the Primitive Baptists altogether. One time I was there when they communed and I went out of doors a bad feeling coming on me all at once. I felt like I was lost, and hardly remembered where I was. My son came to me and asked me if I was ready to go home, and I don't know what I said, but when I came to my right feelings I was back in the church sitting right at the door.

When we went out a brother came to me and asked me why I did not come up nearer and be with them.

I don't remember what I said but I was sorry that anybody had noticed me, for I felt bad indeed. I had said I did not intend to join the Primitive Baptists church as I had already been baptized and I would look to the Lord and be satisfied, and not put my trust in any denomination. I felt that day that I had neither home nor master, and it was before me all the time after that.

"He that knoweth his master's will and doeth it not shall be beaten with many stripes." And I believe that I was beaten for there is no tongue can tell what I went through with before I joined the church.

One of my children became sick with a bad fever and was sick five months. I stayed awake until I could not go to sleep and when I would close my eyes it was before me, he that knoweth his master's will and doeth it not shall be beaten with many stripes. I would try to get it off my mind, and had thought I would never promise the Lord to do any thing else, for it seemed that I never did any thing I promised to do.

I had thought when my baby got better I would go before the church, but when it would get better I would put it off, and my baby would get worse again. And I did finally promise I would if it was his will and he would help me to get there one more time. And then I would conclude that it was all foolishness, that I was not fit to join the church.

When I would close my eyes I would see a pair of balances and they would go up and down just as my mind went.

When I would decide to go they were on the balance and I tried to beg the Lord to settle my mind and show me if I was fit to join the church.

One night I was very restless and felt like I did not have a friend on earth or in heaven. It is impossible to describe it. I felt like I wanted to see the Saviour and talk to him face to face. I felt like that I had seen more trouble than any one else had ever seen.

I had weakened down and my trials through life got no better and I was surely no longer able to bear it. If the Lord did not help me I was gone at last. I do believe I had the spirit of prayer on me that night when I asked the Lord why I was born a helpless creature in this world, to see the trouble that I had seen.

I was sorry for sin even the first sin that was ever committed, what more could I do?

It came to me that Christ suffered and all that wanted to follow him must suffer like him. Low and humble was the only way that leads to him. And it came to me you have a hope of eternal life and your troubles are riches for you in the world to come.

I would cry and talk to the Lord and every thing I asked, the answer came at once. And the answers were scriptures that I had read in time. And I got happier than I had ever been before in this world. I shouted and felt like I saw my father and I said "pa I am rich". I would not exchange my life for all the money in this world.

They were the sweetest people on earth to me and I was saying to them I have a hope of eternal life and Oh! how happy I am. I thanked the Lord for all the trouble that I had seen. I was glad that I felt poor and humble.

I soon joined the Primitive Baptists church at Hopeland was baptized by Elder A. J. Moore and have been better satisfied since then and have been more able to bear my trials in this life, thought they are great and I get very down hearted at times. I felt some time ago that I was glad I had to die and leave this old world behind.

I felt like I was shaking hands with the Old Baptists.

I know what the Lord does will be all right.

I feel like some one will say that I have said too much but I feel like the half has not been told.

All that read this please excuse me for being so lengthy, it is the first I have ever written for publication and it has been a task to me. I hope the Lord has directed my hand so that I have not written any thing wrong.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Very Dear Brother—I have just reached home from an eighty-four days tour through Virginia, West Virginia, and North Carolina where appointments were arranged for me by Elder S. W. Wyatt, and from Martin Tenn., where appointments were arranged by Elder C. W. Cayce.

I found all well at home, for which I am thankful to the giver of every good gift. I met many brethren and sisters and quite a number of God's able ministers, for which I was made to rejoice and praise his holy name.

Dear brethren, may God's richest blessings be yours and when you have filled your mission here below may his blessings still flow towards you and take you to a world where parting will be no more. I ask the prayers of all who may read this that it may be said I have fought a good fight; I have kept the faith, for if I am what I profess to be it is a poor hell-deserving sinner, saved alone by the sovereign grace of an all-wise God.

Dear Brother Gold—Will you please send me the Landmark of June 15, as for some reason I failed to get mine. I hate to trouble you but I want to read them all, besides I am saving them all to have bound.

Brother Gold, I feel the Lord has a people here and is making it manifest. Two were baptized at our last meeting which makes four in all that have joined here since the church at Hope land granted us an arm, and I feel like more will come.

In hope,

J. E. HEPBURN.

PRAYER.

Men ought always to pray and to faint—that is not to abandon prayer. The illustration Christ uses of the widow—a helpless woman—and the unjust judge proves that men should persevere in prayer. The point of prevailing of the widow was her continuance or importunity. The unjust judge said, lest by her continuing coming she weary me, therefore I will avenge her quickly or speedily. He did not care for her, but to avoid being troubled by her, he arranged to get rid of her.

Now shall not God avenge his own elect that pray or cry day and night unto him though he bear long with them? Jesus said that he would avenge them speedily. Now this is a great encouragement to pray unto God.

He does not need to be informed of our needs, nor does he need to be told what we are doing, or how he should deliver us. We do not pray to change his mind or purpose. Why then do we pray? If we feel that God's will is right and perfect then we don't want that perfect will changed. We are in need and are helpless. We beseech the Lord to help us—to do for and in us the things we cannot do, but the things that should be done. We need mercy and we desire to come to the fountain of mercy that we may obtain mercy in time of need. The Lord causes changes to be made for our deliverance that we could not make. He causes changes to be made in us that we could not make. It may be we need to be strengthened in order to endure and he is able to give us strength. It may be that we need instruction in order to repent. It may be the heart of others need to be touched so that a way may be opened for one to be relieved.

God will be sought unto by prayer in order that we may be humbled to confess our need and our helplessness, and that his name may be exalted and glorified.

What a great gift is the gift of prayer? When it was said of Saul, behold he prayeth, here was found a new thing in the earth so far as Saul was concerned, and his prayer was heard and an answer of peace was given to him. What a change was wrought in Saul before he prayed. One says if Saul had not prayed he would not have been saved. If Saul had not been in trouble before he prayed he would not have prayed. If any is afflicted let him pray. How sweet it is that our Father hears the prayers of his children and gives an answer of peace. P. D. G.

"Never man spake like this man."
John 7:46.

The Pharisees and chief priests sent officers to take Jesus. Is there any state, condition or circumstance where men more fully display their inward, real character than they do in the presence of Jesus? In the broad open light of day, one's outward conduct is more clearly exposed than when he is in secret, though his motives may be hid from the detection of men. But everything is naked and open or appears in its true light in his presence, for he is judge. In his presence every act and word of man is weighed in its true character. Such as feel their vileness and abhor themselves are humble. Such as are corrupt attempt to appear in a false light.

The pharisees and chief priests hated Jesus, and sought in many ways to entrap him in his words, and to manufacture public sentiment against him by false accusations. Failing in these things they sent officers to arrest him by process of law and bring him before their courts for trial.

The officers went to Jesus. In his conversation such was the depth and wisdom of his teachings that not only could no place be found to take hold of him, but his words took such deep hold upon them that they felt the majesty and power of his name. Some said he is a prophet. Others said surely this is the Christ, so there was division. There was that displayed in him that awed them to feel that no man is like Jesus. No other man ever spake as he does. Surely this is the Christ. So they could not take him.

One objection to him was that he was not born in Bethlehem because he was called Galileean. But both were true. He was born in Bethlehem, and yet he was called a Galileean, because he lived in Galilee. So easy is it for us to be misled in our judgments which are filled with prejudice or hate.

But when we have an honest desire to know the truth we look and judge with an honest desire not to be mistaken or deceived.

It truthfully could be said that there never had been such a man as Jesus, and that no man had ever spoken as he he did, or talked, or thought, or acted, or felt as he did. No other ever knew the heart of man as he did. There was nothing in man's destiny too deep for him.

He knew man and what is in him. He never guesses or conjectures or experiments. He knows what man needs and therefore he never fails to tell him the truth. There is no disease he has not full power over.

He knows the deceitfulness of man, and that is the reason that wicked men hate him. For the more corrupt a man is the more that man hates Jesus, because his purity condemns corruption. Every pure word of Jesus condemns the wrong doing of men. Because men's deeds are evil they hate Jesus and will not come to him. But if a man loves Jesus it is proof that such a man loves truth. He that is of the truth loves truth. To him the words of Jesus are pure and gracious. Hence that man feels never did man speak like Jesus does. So that men show and prove what they are by what they think of Jesus. Nor can any man dodge or evade this question. Every man must meet this question, and every one must appear in judgment before him. He is the judge of quick and dead, of the just and of the unjust. Instead of our judging Jesus he judges us. When we know the truth and love it we know that his judgment is just, and will stand for ever for no man has ever spoken as he has.

P. D. G.

LIGHT.

Jesus appeared to Paul in a light above the brightness of the sun—a different kind of light—a light that shines in the heart or understanding, a light that makes manifest the secrets of life, of the heart, of the thought, a light that reproves and makes manifest ones wrong, never flattering, never corrupting, always correcting, humbling.

Natural light of the sun never changes one's thoughts or conduct. A thief is the same at noon in broad day light as he is in the natural darkness of midnight. The natural light of the sun causes no correction, conviction, nor instruction in the man. It is only an outward, natural light. But the light of Jesus shines in our hearts. While the darkness does not comprehend it still it in no sense prevents its shining. The natural sun has no power to shine in a man, nor to convince him of his vileness, nor to make him hate himself.

When God who is light and in whom is no darkness at all appeared to Job the effect on Job was to cause him to know the truth and abhor himself, and justify God's way in all things.

Christ is the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. He came into the world. There is no other light but Jesus the sun of righteousness. When Jesus was under the law in the flesh he was hid or veiled, and was not risen in his glory. The legal dispensation is the night time. It was the ministration of death. The Lord hath set his glory above the heavens. It is a light above the brightness of the sun and hath healing in his wings. Life and immortality are brought to light in the gospel. It is by revelation only that this is known, and he that believes has the witness in himself. He can not borrow that light from another, nor give it to another. It is in the Lord's light that we see light. To them that sit in the region and shadow of death a great light is sprung up. Such as feel the darkness and are oppressed by it and know not what to do, nor where to go, to them it is sprung up. When it shone on Saul it rendered him blind so that one led him. When the gospel was preached to him scales fell from his eyes and he saw. The Lord gives sight to the blind. The Lord sent Paul to open the eyes of the blind, not to give sight to see the light, nor to give the light.

No man gave Paul that light. It came from heaven, not through the agency of any man. God commands the light to shine.

What is the unspeakable glory of this salvation? There is no power of nature by which it can be received or seen. Nor can the happiness and joy of one that receives this light be ever known in this world as it shall appear in the resurrection of the dead.

Christ is become in his risen life the first fruits of them that slept under the law or first dispensation. In his resurrection many of them appeared unto many. Jesus the first fruits is holy, and so are they holy in and of him, and they have ascended in him, even as the thief on the cross was that very day with Christ in paradise. Ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God, and when Christ who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with him in glory. The life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me, since I am crucified with Christ who is my life. Then it does not now appear what we shall be; but we know that when he appears we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

P. D. G.

TIMES OF REFRESHING.

How divinely true is the word of God, and how certainly do we enter into its blessed fulfillment when we are in a time to every purpose under heaven to believe on his name. The raven, and there remaineth a rest to the people of God, but how seldom do we seem to rest just a little in these comforting assurances. How slow of heart we are to believe all that the Lord has spoken. It seems that we are just now and then able to claim fellowship with one of all who cried out, "Yea Lord I believe, help thou mine unbelief." But is not belief itself a matter of faith by grace? If so the hour of belief is a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. None but the believer in Christ is aware of his unbelief, therefore it seems to me that if I am a believer thus my very unbelief ought to conserve to establish my heart with the spirit of waiting for refreshing or rest from divine presence, and that instead of becoming distrustful, doubtful and despairing, should at all times trust in the Lord and confide in him and in the blessed assurance of hope expect of him the most gracious and everlasting fulfillment of all his divine and unfailling purposes concerning me even the promise of the life to come. But I am so forgetful of the things of the times which are past, I forget the word which declares that the things which have been are now and that which is to be has already been. I am unable to recall that last year was droughty and the year before it rained, and that notwithstanding these things seed time and harvest time did not fail, and that in them there was sowing and reaping some of which sowing was perhaps to the flesh and some to the spirit, and that as was the sowing so was the reaping. In our cold and barren seasons like David we are, want to cry out, Has the Lord forgotten to be gracious, are his mercies clean gone forever? But why should we thus cry? Do we not know that the Lord does not forget anything, especially his people, for has he not said. I will not forget thee, I will never leave thee. We know these things and that they are true and sure, but our knowledge is not such as to keep us at all times and under all circumstances reconciled to go, waiting for his law and expecting of him the fulfillment of every purpose concerning our salvation. We may know and believe and trust and hope and be assured of much with respect to God and his salvation and our relation to him thereby, but if these be not applied to our faith by the spirit of Christ there is nothing of divine unction in it and we do not and can not enter into rest nor cease from our labors. We seem in some sense or other to have the veil of our unbelief upon our heart, but when in and by the spirit of liberty our heart turns to the Lord we are at once again free, and all is well and we have hope in God, and all our desires are unto him, and his will is over us, and his right hand embraces us, and all our need is supplied according to riches in glory by Christ Jesus our Lord.

Talking about conditional time salvation, some of us are inclined to hold a doctrine worse than that. We want the Lord to do his part first, or if not we want to be very sure that conditions on his part shall be certainly complied with. We want to know before we leave home whether we shall have liberty to preach or hear of understand and be comforted when we get to the place of meeting. The church is cold and barren and we want to warm up and become fruitful before we can afford to attend upon its meetings. The history of the church is that it has its seasons. Some time winter, and again it is rainy, some early and some late. The time for the singing of birds and the appearing of flowers, the seed time and the harvest, and every season is in its time and every time in its season. And we can not and should not look for, nor expect one in the time and season of the other.

The churches in this part of the country have from time to time had their barren and their fruitful seasons and we have mourned and rejoiced accordingly. For some time now until recently we have been cold and barren and but few seemed to attend our meetings and I had become much discouraged, but the Lord is yet in his holy hill, Mount Zion. The second Sunday in July I baptized three at my home church and the third Sunday I baptized thirteen at another church near me and two await me for baptism at another church near me, making eighteen in all during a month. And there are others who have tasted that the Lord is gracious and we look for them to come home to their friends. At another church ten have been received during the month. The Lord is good to Israel for which let Mount Zion rejoice and the daughters of Jerusalem be glad,

P. G. L.

MOURNERS.

Selfishness is the mudsill of man's nature, and mudsill it is. He wants others to give to him. He pleads poverty whenever it suits him, and that is at almost every turn and corner. He wants to get things cheaper than their cost if possible. Why, if I love a man should I want him to labor for nothing? Is it honest? We spend money for whiskey and tobacco, things that damage us, yet we do not like to pay value for things that are useful and beneficial.

We complain that ours is a hard lot, when such complainings are a reflection on the God of providence, who has been and is still very merciful unto us.

We get sick and no one comes to see us, and we complain that the Baptists are cold. Have we visited others when they were sick? Have we ministered to them? It does not say pure and undefiled religion is for others to visit us. Are we the fatherless and the widows? If so the Lord knows this and knows us. It is not what others do, but what I do that manifests what I am. It does not say we know we have passed from death unto life because the brethren love us. But it reads, we know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren.

It is not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that does the will of God.

Paul said by the grace of God I am what I am. Grace caused him to love the Lord, to serve the Lord, to hate evil, to deny self, to rejoice in the predestination and the electing love of God, and made him careful to maintain good works. Whatever he was it was by the grace of God, and not of himself.

When we become tainted with flesh and rail at our hard lot, and think others are so much freer from trouble than we are and envy them, then there is hardness, muzzling and complaining in our spirit. But when it is shown to us that we are unprofitable, and we begin to consider the Lord's long suffering to us, and to think how much he has shown mercy to us, but we have been unthankful and unholy, disobedient and complaining we become ashamed of ourselves to think how great God's mercies are to us, and how vain, sinful, selfish and unprofitable our own life has been to him we become astonished at God's long suffering and at the greatness of his mercies to us.

This is my case. P. D. G.

"Jesus saith unto them, loose him, and let him go," John 11:44.

Lazarus was called up out of death. What a bondage death is. Surely within the confines of the grave and in death there is bondage. The people of God while partakers of flesh and blood are in bondage through fear of death. But death is the king of all terrors, for he is greater than any other monster to whom all must bow, and from no mortal has any power to release himself.

When Jesus who is the resurrection and the life stood in presence of the grave that had held Lazarus dead four days, and said Lazarus shall live again, or rise from the dead, yes others said he shall rise at the last day. How far off that puts it. The comfort appears so distant and remote as one fancies an indefinite period of time with the decay of all nature, dust returning again to dust, how far off and comfortless appears the resurrection at the last day. But Jesus said, I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. But faith alone can substantiate all this into a living, present reality, and cause us to feel and know that if we have Jesus we have all. Life, death, things present, things to come all are yours. Surely the faith that thus enriches us and looses us from all the shackles of mortality, and all the doubts of sinful man, and lets us go into the resurrection life of immortality and glory is such that it is produced alone by the mighty power whereby God raised Christ from the dead.

Where shall one go who is loosed from death? Shall he go into corruption or liberty? No more can one desire again to go into death, who has been oppressed with its utter darkness and the absence of every element of light and life, joy and peace. Shall one that has been lifted up into the joy of heaven ever again desire to be involved in the bondage of death's awful corruption?

Jesus did and said what no other man ever did, and his declarations of truth unto the glorious realms are such a demonstration that he that doubts is condemned and is without excuse. He takes a man well known to the Jews, a prominent man, well connected, living near Jerusalem. This man sickens and dies. His death is generally known. Lamentation is made for him. A notable gathering of people is present. Jesus loves him and weeps. This is beheld by the people who say behold how Jesus loved Lazarus. Then could he not have prevented his dying? He would if he had been able, for see how he loved Lazarus. This is clear proof to us that he is not able to raise Lazarus, and this is a barrier to his claim that he is the Son of God. Here the battle is raging, and the lines are sharply drawn, and the fierceness of the struggle of life and death between this man called Jesus and death that laughs at our calamities and mocks when our fear cometh.

Shall Jesus raise this dead man? He commands to roll away the stone. The emblem of death the stone closes the sepulcher from sight. When that stone is rolled away, there lies the dead man. No one can doubt he is dead. No room for deceit or pretense here. There is not one that believes Jesus will raise him. Any failure would have been detected at once, and not a sympathizer with Jesus could have been found. Such is the nature of the work of Jesus that it meets, overcomes and destroys every trace of doubt, or question that could arise in the mind of the opposer, and he that still denies must be convinced by overwhelming power and glory that stays death—that looses the prisoner, that unties every knot of the avenger death, and abolishes the grave, and leads captivity captive. In the very teeth of death Jesus slays death, and destroys him that had the power of death, as he lays down his own life in the arms of death, and death is no more.

Freedom from any peril, from every enemy, from every sorrow shall come to those whom Jesus makes free.

Loose him and let him go. Where shall he go? He will go where immortality reigns, where there is no death, nor sorrow. He shall be with Jesus.

When Jesus said to those standing by, "Loose him and let him go," was not that they should give any life to Lazarus, for Jesus had already given that: but it was to take off the shackles or bandages that bound him. It was to loose him, give him freedom of movement that he might go. Is it not true that there is a use for gospel preaching to those already risen from the dead in trespasses and since by the resurrection of Jesus, who speaks to them, and by whom they are quickened together with him, and begotten again unto a lively hope? Like Corneilus always alive praying unto the Lord, and giving much alms to the people, a devout man, but he should hear words from Peter whereby he should be saved for he must be told what he ought to do. This looses him to the freedom of the gospel so that he has liberty of life and the joy of spiritual activity in obedience to the faith. He is now a living free man and enjoys the freedom of citizenship in the house of God.

Where does he desire to go? Does he desire to go back into death? How shall they that are dead to sin walk therein again? They are alive unto God, and have their fruit unto holiness, and the end is everlasting life.

P. D. G.

"Sir we would see Jesus," John 12:21.

Certain Greeks came to worship at Jerusalem at the feast of the Passover, and they said to Phillip, sir, we would see Jesus. This was just after the notable miracle of the raising of Lazarus. For his fame had spread abroad as the most wonderful one that ever appeared on earth that his friends could not love too much, and his enemies could not manage, or get rid of, nor control, nor comprehend. Surely Jesus is a troubler to wicked men. For men cannot put away or hide their wicked deeds.

It is in the nature of mankind to worship something. Ordinary men have men that they follow and will serve. If one rises up that creates a stir by saying or doing things uncommon they want to see him. Curiosity to see that which is unaccountable induces some to come and see that which is strange. When the mighty works of Jesus began to be spread abroad men heard and wondered. Some did many things that Jesus taught. Some heard him gladly until persecution arose, or some corrupt thing in their conduct was exposed. If we love any of our wrong deeds more than we love Jesus that is not forsaking all for him, and we are not his disciples indeed.

It is not enough to merely want to see Jesus because we are filled with loaves and fishes, or because great multitudes follow him. Jesus is never flattered by the praises of men, nor deceived by their profession, for he knows what is in man, nor is he ever turned from his purpose by what appears to be a fit opportunity, good time to make an effort. The disciples thought Jesus would establish a kingdom of men on earth suitable to our natures, and they considered that the favorable time for this had arrived. For he had raised Lazarus by a most wonderful miracle, and men were praising Jesus, and his fame was spreading so that now if he would proclaim that he is a king he could enter upon his kingly power and throne.

But where Jesus said the hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified, and how shall this be done? "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abides alone; but if it die bringeth forth much fruit." To follow Jesus one must lose his life. Jesus is that corn of wheat that must fall into the ground and die. He must lay down his life or he will abide alone. He must be crucified or die for our sins and rise again, and in rising from the dead he shall bring forth the wonderful crop of increase of which there shall be no end. He must fall into the earth. He must not only be found in fashion as a man, but must as a grain of wheat die and rise again, and in his lifting up he must gather to him a kingdom so great and glorious that this harvest of fruit shall be without number, for it is a number that no man can number.

When a grain of wheat falls into the earth or is sown in the earth it is placed in that condition in which it must die, but the life in that grain becomes far more than it was before it fell in the earth, and it comes forth greatly multiplied in producing a crop or harvest of itself or kind—not a new kind, but it is the same or a multiplication. That which is brought forth in the death and resurrection of Jesus is a most wonderful harvest of the regeneration or spiritual birth of those born again, and bearing the image of Jesus because they are bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh, or his children. For is the everlasting Father, and of the increase of his government there shall be no end. He goes forth bearing precious seed weeping, but he shall surely come again with his sheaves the fruit of his labor and travail of his soul; and his seed shall be counted to him for a generation. Jesus lays down his life that he may take it again, and shall say to his Father here am I and the children which thou hast given me. Lo children are a heritage of the Lord, and happy is he that hath his quiver full of them. All the father giveth to Jesus shall come to him. They are children that will not lie. In his pity and his love he redeemed them, and they are born of incorruptible seed by the word of God.

Now to see Jesus in his glory in the resurrection life with all the glory of the Father and the holy angels, and an innumerable company of the redeemed, the children and church of the first born whose names are written in heaven is such glory that never has been seen in time, nor by the eyes of mortal man, when there is neither Greek nor Jew, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, neither male nor female, but all one in Christ Jesus, the children of the resurrection.

OBITUARIES

SISTER EMMA HARRIS MCKINNEY.

The subject of this memorial was born July 19, 1854. She was the daughter of the late Deacon John W. Harris and wife. In December, 1879, she was married to Mr. J. T. McKinney, whom she faithfully served until her death.

In 1894 she joined the church at Lick Fork, which was the old home church of her father and mother. Of this church she continued a faithful member until we were ready to organize in Reidsville, when she became one of the constituting members here, and continued faithful to the end of her earthly existence. Sister McKinney was a very faithful woman in all that she thought it to be her duty to do. No one knew her but to love her, and now that she is gone from us here and we have not a shadow of doubt, but that she is resting with our Lord whom she loved to serve while here. She loved her church and the doctrine she believed, and in it all she felt free. A day before her death she said to her nurse, "You know that I want to stay here with my family but I am willing to go at the Lord's bidding." Thus she showed a spirit of submission to the will of her God.

She leaves a husband and seven grief stricken children 2 brothers, 3 sisters, and a host of relatives and friends, with the church to mourn her loss, but we earnestly believe that we shall meet her in the realms of the blessed.

She died on February 18, 1908.

SISTER MARY MOTLEY.

The daughter of Lancelot Johnston and wife was born December 24, 1833. On September 27, 1855 she was married to T. J. Motley, and was the mother of eleven children, of whom eight survive her.

She died February 20, 1908.

In the summer of 1892 she was baptized into the fellowship of the church at Lick Fork, where she remained a faithful member until she took a letter with the rest of us to join in the constitution of the church at Reidsville, and there she continued steadfast in the faith until the day of her death.

Sister Motley was a woman of strong constitution and endured much, but remained faithful. She was a great lover of the Primitive Baptist doctrine, and had no hope in any other. She had the pleasure of having one of her daughters in the church with her, and of knowing that others were of the same faith.

She was fully resigned to her death. I visited her just before the last moments, and found her conscious of all that was going on, and she expressed herself to me as being ready and willing to go. She felt that she was going home. How good to go home to die no more.

The funerals of both of these sisters were attended by the pastor of this church, after which they were laid to rest in Greenview cemetery, there to await until the Lord shall call up the sleeping dead to meet him in the air, and to dwell with him forever.

May this be the happy lot of those who mourn their departure.

Done by order of the church.

EMMA L. BRADLEY

Dear Brother Gold—It becomes my painful duty to try to make the attempt by the help of the true and ever living God, who giveth every one according to his own will and purpose, to write the obituary notice of my own dear daughter Emma L. Bradley. She was born August 22, 1874 and died June 1908 making her stay on this earth 33 years 10 months and 3 days. She was the daughter of H. G. Worsley and Mary E. Worsley his wife. She was married to John W. Bradley by Elder W. H. Fly, December 13, 1889 and unto this union was born one daughter Mabel, living and going on eight years of age, the subject of this notice. She was apparently healthy until a few months before her death, when she had as we thought a grippe, but seemed to get better when the symptoms seemed to appear in the form of rheumatic pains attended with swollen limbs. Then the disease seemed to attack her kidneys. Dr. J. P. Whitehead examined her and said it was necessary that she should go to the Richmond hospital for treatment and it was expected there would have to be an operation performed, but it was found to be too risky on account of other troubles that had been discovered, therefore it was decided to bring her back. She was brought back to Rocky Mount to L. Robbins, who married her sister Mrs. Lucindia Robbins, where she received all the attention that kind brothers and sisters, doctors and kind friends could give. But the death angel had come with a message "child your father calls, come home."

Oh, how we miss her, one so dutiful to us in our old age. Oh, the last time I saw her what an angelic look she had upon her face and how resigned she seemed to appear and so'd to me in a whisper, for she could not speak above a whisper, father look at that beautiful magnolia bloom. How pure she looked yet in the flesh, I felt like she had been with Jesus. She was a firm believer in the Primitive Baptist doctrine, though she never united with the church and always seemed to enjoy the company of the members of the church. She was a good songster and had a beautiful voice.

I felt like she did with a previous hope in our blessed redeemer. We feel that we cannot wish her back in the sinful world again to suffer the affliction she has passed through for we feel to believe she is resting with Jesus singing praises to God with the ever blest. Oh, how poor mother in her afflictions, what a shock it was upon her weak feeble frame, but she knows that God's will must be done, that God give'th and the Lord taketh away. She knowing this experience has become more reconciled. Oh, my dear children let us pray to God to give us a spirit of prayer that he will prepare us to meet our loved one who has gone to that blessed eternal rest and is with Jesus to sing praises for evermore.

H. G. WORSLEY.

MRS. ADA MCKINNEY BUTLER.

This lady was the daughter of Mr. A. B. McKinney and his wife and was the first of their large family of children to die except one that died in infancy.

She was born January 1, 1877 and died August 22, 1908, therefore she was thirty-one years, seven months and twenty-one days old. On April 18, 1900, she was married to Mr. S. H. Butler by the late Elder J. S. Dameron. From this union were born three children, but only one to live.

Mrs. Butler was what we might call a good woman. She never had any hard, nor ugly things to say. She was bright and intelligent and a helpmate indeed to her husband who in turn was very kind and provided well for her.

She never made any outward profession of religion, but was a believer in the faith and doctrine of the Primitive Baptists. She was a lover of the Landmark. Her life was such as it took to adorn a christian character and we believe that she is at rest with our dear Jesus.

She leave a dear and loving husband and little daughter with a father, mother, four brothers, eight sisters, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but we feel that they mourn in the blessed belief that she is at rest with our dear Lord, which is much better than the best of all this world.

On Sunday, August 23, her remains were taken to the Primitive meeting house in Reidsville, where the funeral services were conducted by this writer and then she was laid to rest in Greenview ceme'ery there to rest until the Lord shall be pleased to call her up with all who are in the grave, and we believe that she will be among that number who shall awake in his likeness and be caught up to meet him in the air.

The Lord bless those who feel so keenly their bereavement and, if according to his will, bring them to love and serve him by Jesus Christ our Lord.

Written by their friend,

L. H. HARDY.

ROSA WORSLEY.

It is with a sad heart that I attempt to write of the death of our darling child Rosa, whom the Lord saw fit to take from us April, 13, 1908. She was thirteen years six months and eighteen days old. She was a great favorite with every one. She always seemed to love every body not wanting to harm any one. She was the most sympathetic child I ever saw. During all her sickness she didn't want us to go to any extra trouble for her. She begged me to stop the doctor from coming, because he could not do her any good. She never knew what her disease was and didn't think that she was seriously sick, unless she did the morning of her death. She asked if the doctor said she was seriously sick and she looked at me so pitifully and said, "I wish I could get well." Her last words were, "Run fast doctor," How heart breaking to part with one that strived so hard to live, but when the Lord speaks kind friends and doctors can only look on and say, "Thy will be done not mine." Her room was kept perfumed all the time with fresh flowers sent by some loving friend or teacher. She would often say that she didn't know that her friends loved her so, but the Lord loved her still more. She was in bed six weeks, she went to school on Monday before she gave up on Wednesday. Her disease was tuberculosis.

During her sickness she dreamed that Sister Emily Braswell, a good woman that Rosa loved, who died about one year ago, came down from heaven to talk to her. She told her what a beautiful home she had where all was peace and love. She told her that she and no other little children need not mind dying there was such a beautiful place prepared for them.

She told her that she had grieved so much over the death of her little grand-son, Tom Braswell, at the time of his death, but now she rejoiced over it because he was so much happier now than when he was on earth. The she bid her good-bye and said she must go to see some more of her people. She said she had dreams when she could sleep. The night before her death Sister Carrie Williams and I were sitting by her bed, and Sister Williams said she saw a beautiful star pass slowly over Rosa's bed. A short while before that Rosa turned her head and said, "See that twinkle little star." I feel those stars were God's spirits hovering around to take her home.

May he prepare me to meet my loved one in the world to come.

LULA WORSLEY.

PENNIE E. BARBOUR.

By request, though I do not feel competent, I will write for publication the obituary notice of Pennie E. Barbour, daughter of Brother T. R. and Sister Edith Barbour, of Four Oaks, Johnston county, N. C. She was born December 8, 1887 and died with consumption March 11, 1908, making her stay on earth 20 years, 3 months and 3 days.

This dear christian girl was taught of God and though young had a great love for Primitive Baptists and always seemed to love the company of older people. She liked to take part in singing praises to her master and had a hope and great faith in him, saying she knew she would be better off when gone. When her father and others were talking of building a house for the worship of the Baptists and had not selected a place, it seemed the Lord showed her in a dream where it would be built and she told her dear father of it and the house was built there. She saw also where the baptizing would take place.

At the meeting Saturday before the first Sunday in September 1907, when in conference and the invitation was given, four came forward and were received in baptism. When her dear father and mother came home she asked them if there were four that joined. They said yes, and she told them she saw four baptized. She was very sick having chills, but she said she was going to see them baptized. So on Sunday morning, with a chill on her, she got on the buggy with me and I carried her to the place appointed for the service and she witnessed what God had already shown her. We returned to the church and she stayed through the meeting. She there told her people she felt like she must go into the water. But she was not able, and this was the last opportunity she ever had, so she never united with the church. On Thursday after she was taken to her bed, never to mingle with her loved ones again at church.

All that loving parents and kind friends could do was done, and the loving physician who treated her so well, but when the Master's time comes to take his loved ones home they must go. So she is gone to return no more, where all of God's afflicted and poor will one day be gathered together with their Jesus to suffer no more, but sing his praises forevermore. She leaves father, mother, two brothers and two sisters to mourn their loss, besides a host of young friends. Weep not loved ones, try to live as you want to die, and may God bless you all to reconciled to his will.

The unworthy writer had the pleasure of being by her bedside, to pray for and with her, and twice while she was suffering so much, I never saw any one enjoy the service as she did. The last time I was with her, she said at parting, "I feel better now, come to see me again." I bid her farewell, never to meet her any more. May we all feel to say, "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

J. H. JOHNSON.

Dear Brother Gold—The object of this letter is to bring before your readers a very valuable remedy, Gowan's Preparation, manufactured by the Gowan McNeal Company, of Durham, my home town. It is an external remedy for pneumonia, croup, colds, coughs, pains and soreness in chest, throat and lungs, and for any kind of inflammation and congestion that can be reached from the outside, for pains, soreness and stiffness in muscles and joints and reduces inflammation and fever at once. Its worth should be known to every mother for croup and whooping cough and being external it can be used on the smallest children without harm or fear of deranging the stomach. It can never form the drug-habit which so often follows the taking of internal remedies. I know the worth of Gowan's Preparation, for the reason I have used it in my family for several years and have recommended it to a number of friends and with the result that they become permanent users. When known it becomes the family doctor and is worthy of a place in each and every home. Should your readers fail to secure it from their druggist, write the Gowan Medical Company, Durham, N. C.

With best wishes, I am, your brother,

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold—Sometimes I question whether the things that are deepest in the mind, and most constantly in the thoughts, are ever spoken or written. "Deep calleth unto deep," but who can give expression to that which the great depths say to each other? The sense of sin and sinfulness, the hunger after righteousness, the longing for the favor of God; these things are so solemn, so sacred, so deep, that they become unspeakable; they can not be put into the language of this common work day life. "Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy water spouts." When the waters are so shaken that the great depths are discovered, and all the Lord's waves and billows seem to go over us, so that out of depths we cry unto the Lord, then we hear Jesus crying out of the same great depths, and it seems an answering cry to that which has surged up out of our own poor hearts.

But to whom can we speak of such deep heart work when we can not ourselves understand its awful meaning? Sometimes a hymn, sometimes a word heard while under the sound of preaching, sometimes a word from the inspired scriptures of truth dropped into our souls with power, will stir the great depths in our souls, and call forth a response to the dear Savior's cry unto the Father, when he sank in deep waters where there was no standing. But we can only feel, we cannot tell it.

"For the divisions of Reuben there were great searchings of heart." Judges 5:15, 16. Joshua 22. We are about our daily work, or are resting our tired bodies or in conversation with friends upon some important worldly theme, or are laboring under anxiety of mind concerning some important worldly interest; but all the time this searching is going on in our hearts. These "great thoughts of heart" are not affected by our natural condition, whether of prosperity or adversity, whether of joy or sorrow. They will not be quieted, they will not get away from our minds; they will not let us rest.

Reuben had his home on one side of Jordan while he labored and fought for and with his brethren on the other side. This may explain some of the experiences of the Lord's people in this world. There is a sense in which this world is our home, while at the same time in a spiritual sense we are not of this world, for Jesus has chosen us out of the world. Our true interests are in heaven, and our conversation is there. In the new heaven and new earth we labor, and build, and fight, concerning the things of faith. And yet how much of our time we seem to be laboring and building and fighting for this world. No wonder that this divided condition causes us to have many great thoughts of heart," many questionings and doubts. Since we have to do with both natural and spiritual things, we are often tempted to question whether we do really have any part or lot with the true Israelites who are altogether on the other side of Jordan, in the true gospel land where it is the privilege of the inhabitants to abide among the sheep folds, to hear the bleating of the flocks.

Sometimes I feel tired of this divided life, and at times I strongly question whether I have ever been truly in the gospel country. Yet I do want to be with the Israelites who have passed over Jordan, and with no other people. I want to labor for and with them. I want to be with them in their warfare, and fight with them the good fight of faith. I want to have to do with those who build houses and inhabit them, who plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them."—Isa. 65:21.

This is the people I love. Whatever may be their condition in the sight of the world, whether rich or poor, learned or unlearned, high or low, they are my people, and I want to live and die with them.

But I did think Brother Gold, that I would try to tell you, and thereaders of the Landmark, some of these deep and intricate thoughts and searchings of heart I have alluded to, but I can not. I can say that I am very glad and thankful that we have such a Savior as we have. He has been through all the waste, howling wilderness of our nature, and has been tempted in all points like unto his people, and therefore he is able to succor those who are tempted. I have sometimes thought, when down in the depths, and feeling my nature to be a desolate and terrible wilderness, that no child of God ever did feel as wretched, so sinful. But soon, perhaps, some precious word of the dear Savior would come to me telling my own feelings, and I would be comforted with the thought that Jesus had borne these very sorrows, and I was now favored to know in this way the fellowship of his sufferings. "In all their afflictions he was afflicted,"

How good that is. "As the suffering of Christ abound in us, so our consolation aboundeth by Christ."

For many years the name of Jesus has been a precious name to me.

Your brother in hope,

SILAS H. DURAND.

Southampton, Pa.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Very dear Brethren—I will offer a few thoughts on the following scripture: The voice said, cry, and he said what shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flowers of the field."—Isiah 40:6.

This is a true picture of man in all his glory, for it said, "all nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity." God's children have learned this in their experience. Paul said, "For I know in me (that is in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not." The child of God within and of himself is yet a needy sinner and will need a Saviour to intercede as long as we are in this tabernacle, but if our earthly house of this tabernacle was dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens. This is and was the desire and expectation of the saints of God in every dispensation of time. Time makes no changes in God's children as to their hope. The child of God even to the present time has the same hope that the people of God had in olden times, even Christ in them the hope of glory. For there is no difference. The same Lord, both of Jews and Gentiles. They both were manifestly built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets. Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, in whom all the builders fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord. This building is composed of both Jews and Gentiles. The middle wall of partition is broken down between them. So the Jews no longer call the Gentiles common or unclean. They both have access to that inheritance which is incorruptible undefiled and fades not away, which will be complete with us when the dissolution of this mortal body takes place. While on our pilgrimage here we have to contend with our great enemy, the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, among whom we all had our conversation fulfilling the lust of the flesh and of the mind and whereby the children of wrath even as others. But God who is rich in mercy for his great love wherewith he loved us even when we were dead in trespasses and sin. If it were not for the riches of his mercy we would be carried down to degradation and shame, being often tempted, but delivered, cast down but not destroyed. Paul said I die daily. We did not only die to sin in our troubles before the love of God was shed in our hearts, but our nature is so corrupt we have to be buffeted time and again, to show that we are but grass and all of our glory as the flower thereof. This will not only be manifestly true when we depart from time, but is true while on pilgrimage. This scourging is applied to keep us in our right mind, and then we are not exalted above measure. Then we are prepared to be yoke fellows with the meek and lowly, and also with the Lord Jesus Christ. We then show forth the praise of him who has called us out of darkness into his marvellous light, which is wonderful indeed.

David desired the Lord to lift up the light of his countenance upon him. For with thee is the fountain of life, in thy light shall we see light. The Lord did not only give us the light of day, but that light that shineth in our hearts and that in the face of Jesus Christ. He first gives us light to see our sins and then gives us light to see Jesus as our Saviour. For it is said, "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. Jesus did not only taste the animal death, but that eternal death.

David personating Jesus said "The sorrows of death compassed me and the pains of hell got hold upon me. I found trouble and sorrow."

Jesus did not only go down as low as we were but even lower in order that the everlasting arms might raise us up that we should set together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Where we are blessed with his presence here, it is a foretaste of the joys that await every one of his children when we cross the river of death. We never will be fully satisfied until then.

Brother Gold—I have attempted several times in life to write a few things that have been before me in time past, and I hope some of it has been the Lord's dealings with me, but I feared so much it was not his work, that I have always laid it aside and would not write. But, I would like to see it in print and also I would like to know what some one else thinks of it. And if you think it worth printing please do so, and if not burn is so no one else will ever read it.

After my first child died, I was in great distress, and felt like I wanted to know if babies went to heaven as soon as they died or did they have to wait until judgment day. This one thing troubled me and caused me to read the bible, more than I ever had before, and I got satisfied when I read the 9th 10th and 11th verses of the sixth chapter of Revelations. I don't know what it meant or why it satisfied me, but the next thing was would I ever be prepared to meet it. I can't tell the trouble I was in, so I went to work to try to live a better life and try to pray to the Lord to help me to live better so I might meet my baby. I could never see that I had done any thing good but found more and more fault in my self every day and this gave me a lot of trouble that I could not live right.

I would beg my husband to try to live a better life so we could be prepared to meet our baby, but he seemed unconcerned. I knew the time had much and I felt like if he would stop drinking we would both become christians.

There is no tongue to tell what an awful thing it is to live with a man 30 years that drinks too much.

I dreamed one night that my husband and myself had to get married and he was dressed in black and looked unconcerned. I knew the time had come and they were waiting for us and I passed by him and said "come on" and he did not come, but I wanted to do my duty so I went on. I stopped in a field right at the end of a grave and at the other end of the grave I saw two large doves and one of them went down in the grave and I did not see it any more. The other opened a large paper and said "This is the matrimony, where is the man you are to marry" I looked the way I came and I did not see him, so I said he has not come. He closed up the paper and said "the time has not come for you to be married." I had on a long white veil that reached from the top of my head to my feet. It was called the brides garment, and it seemed to be all I needed to make me happy if only my husband would do right. I dream. I cried and told him dream. I cried and told my husband that he or myself one was going to die soon, but it has now been 24 years and we are both living and it is impossible to tell what I have been through with since then, but will tell a little.

I have lost several children since then, and have seen them suffer until I would feel like that it was impossible for any one to be saved except those that died when they were babies. Surely I was lost, I knew I was such a sinner and I would promise to do better and would try to beg the Lord to forgive my sins, and help me to live free from sin. I have wondered when my babies were dieing so hard, if they were suffering for my sins. I would often feel like after they were dead that they were better off than they could be here in this world, suffering like I was.

I have seen so much trouble trying to raise those right that are living and I became in great trouble for fear I could not hold out. My health grew very bad and I got so I was studying about dying all the time. It seemed to grieve me to leave my children in the hands of the cruel world, without a friend. I knew there was no friend like a mother. I was bidding farewell to everything here for I would soon be gone. I would try to pray and some times I felt like I could not pray as I wished too. It was before me all the time "pray." I would say to myself breath is prayer to God, he knows me and what I need better than I do. I was willing to die if it was his will only I hated to leave my children. I had two spells like a crazy one, but it did not last long. At one time I felt like I had turned to a rock and would say foolish things, but I knew what I was saying, but had it to do, to keep from getting worse. I tried with all my might to put my trust in the Lord hoping I would get better but I could not pray.

I walked the house one day and talked to the Lord, when there was no one in the house but myself. I thought I would go out and find a place and try to pray one more time. I went out in the bushes and wanted to ask him to spare my life and let me live to raise my children. I surely felt that he had my life in his hands and was then ready for it and I was tired of sin but could not live free from it, and I was willing to give up every thing but my children. So I bowed down in the bushes and heard myself say "Lord thy will be done." A light passed with the words though my eyes were closed. I felt so much relief I felt like I had nothing to pray for, but remembered what I went out there for and said Lord if it can be thy will spare me and let me live to raise my children, but if my death can be the means of saving their souls let it be.

One part of this was my prayer but the other was not of my make. After this I went to a revival at a Missionary Baptist church and went before the church and was received and afterwards baptized and felt better for a while, but soon got dissatisfied with some things that is useless to mention here.

I very often think back when I joined the church it was said of the Primitive Baptists how dearly they loved each other and how honest they were and it was said that their word was as good as a bond but it seems now that we are falling back a little for you can very often hear of some disturbance among the churches. It seems it would be so much better if we all would pray to the Lord that we may see eye to eye and speak the same in praise to the most high God.

I can't help but notice at our associations in the column where some of the brethren are excluded, and it seems it gets more every year.

Oh, my dear brethren and sisters if you will allow one to address you in that way let us all try to pray to God that we may see eye to eye and ever be found together singing the songs of Zion, and ever be found by the help of the Lord preparing a place for God's little ones to come home and tell what the Lord has done for them.

Brother Gold, I will bring this letter to a close if there is anything in this letter that will be any help to the children of God, you can publish it and if not throw it aside, and I want to ask you and all the children of God to pray for me that I may fulfill the calling wherewith I am called.

Yours in hope of a better home,

C. C. BOAZE.

Banister, Va.

Dear Brother Gold, Brethren and Sisters—This Sabath I am at home with my family and as I feel impressed to write a short letter for publication, will make the attempt.

I have felt for some time each time I would write would be the last, and this feeling teaches me I have no claim on anything or anybody; no claim on my life naturally, or my brethren spiritually. I feel sad and lonely indeed, and am but a wanderer at best on the earth, wondering about after the things that I love most but very seldom find, and when I do find them they are not of this world but of heaven. Wherever I go I am longing for something and often I do not know what it is. But God knows and I know he will supply my every need, yet I can't wait with patience for his coming.

I hope I love the truth of God which is Jesus, the way and life as well, but if I do I can't prove it at all times alike and I don't know I ever proved it even one time. There are many ways by which we are to show our love to God, but it seems to me there is no better way than to feed the sheep and the lands, the purchase of Jesus' blood, and I think I enjoy feeling this flock when Jesus furnishes me with food divine, better than anything I have ever been blessed to do in this life.

Now the question arises in our mind "What shall I cry," "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" what does the pastors of God's choice feed the flocks with? The prophets said, "I will set pastors over them that shall feed them with knowledge and with understanding also." Now brethren when a man arises to preach and he does not feed you with knowledge and understanding, what evidence have you that God has set him over you? After you hear a man time and time again and he does not preach to you after years of trial, and you know his talk is a burden rather than a comfort, what right have you to continue such an one in such a place. I know of some today that talk on every occasion that they have and they are bound to know and see their talk is not at all edifying, yet they persist and go on and on when they ought to say to the church: brethren I thank you for the privilege you have given me but am mistaken, and not embarrass the church with having to tell them to stop.

When a preacher or a man professing to be a preacher sees his congregation holding their heads down and wishing he would stop, he had better stop for it is the thing to do, and when the preacher will not do this the church should tell him to stop, for it is the thing to do.

Very truly,
W. A. SIMPKINS.

Dear Elder Gold—I have learned that you left the Missionary Baptists some years ago and that your reasons for so doing were published in pamphlet form. If you have a copy kindly mail same to my address and I will forward price by return mail. I left them myself in 1857. I enclose a letter, or a copy of one I wrote to a Primitive Baptist in reference to my leaving the Missionaries. Sometime when you have the space will you be obliging as to publish it in the Landmak, by which means it will be preserved for my dear children.

If I live until the 13th of next March I will be 78 years old. My grand-father Davidson emigrated to Kentucky in an early day. He was a Primitive Baptist minister and one of the framers of the first constitution of Kentucky. He was born in 1740 and died in 1811. He was twice married, and by his first wife had five sons and two daughters and by his last, eight sons and two daughters. My father was born in 1799 and was the fourth son by the last marriage.

Grand-father's descendants are widely scattered over many states. I have his bible and hymn book which are more than a century old. They could not have been preserved so long had not Uncle Joe Davidson, in an early day, killed a young deer or fawn and I covered both bible and hymn book.

Dear brother this may not be of any interest to you, but we know not that some of grand-fathers grand-children may still be living in North Carolina and if so they may be glad of the information.

Your sister in hope,
LAURA M. BAIRD,

Cave City, Ky., Route 3.

I, years ago published my reasons for leaving the Missionaries. I have not a copy on hand. P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold—I am sending you $1.50 for the Landmark as my subscription is now due for another year, and I don't feel satisfied one day after it is due, as it comes to me heavy laden with the precious things that I love for the truths's sake, and as I get to hear very little preaching of late. I most especially enjoy the editorials. You continued an editorial from Rev. several months ago that was of precious interest to me as I felt I had experienced things along that line, but could not claim it as such until I read that editorial. Such is the case often that the dear brethren and sisters can tell what I have experienced better than I can tell it myself, and thus my heart is drawn out to them until I almost feel that they were present. If not deceived I love the Zion of our Lord and his people. Oh, blessed land of pure delight, where Christ the immortal reigns where the brightest morn exclaims all night and over his foes he reigns. He has opened the grave and the gloom has fled that darkened the sinners that to him were led. And from old—more precious than gold in our sight, was the death of him to his saints. So why should we murmur and sadly complain if we see him and hear him and feel him to reign. But who feels thus all the time? So when I am weak I lean on his rod and when I am faint I call on my God. So no one but a sinner just like I feel to be can feel his love precious and flowing so free, filled with all grace for you and for me. For while we are the weak he is the strong. He helps us and keeps us and leads us along. So in no flesh on earth can I trust, but alone in him who is the just.

Brother Gold, I hope the Lord will enable us all to pay up our dues for the Landmark and make you able to meet your necessary business. May God's richest blessings rest upon you in your declining years. Brother Gold, I hope you will remember me in your prayers that I may ever be found faithful, walking in the right way.

Your sister in Christ I hope,

MARIE C. JONES.

H. P. D. Cold:

Dear Friend—I feel impressed to write you my experience and let you know my good feelings and all my bad doings, and I want you to tell me whether any one living such a life can be saved or not.

I am not a member of any church, although I was raised by old Baptist parents. I am 25 years old and have claimed a hope for nearly two years but the most of the time I am afraid I am deceived. I have had serious thoughts since childhood about torment for when my parents would tell me about it I would look into the fire and wonder how I could ever stand it. At eleven years of age I craved to die before I reached twelve as I thought if I lived until then I would be lost. I saw myself a great sinner, though as time passed I became as gay and happy as most children. Nearly four years ago I heard of one of my friends joining the church, and oh, how it sunk into my heart. I went to sleep one night and dreamed of being baptized and came out of the water with the most beautiful dress on. The dream was so dear to me I would sit and think about it and cry. But that wore off for a while until one day I went into the field by myself and was thinking about dying, when the thought came over me, unless we are born again we cannot be saved. I began to cry and beg God for mercy. I continued trying to pray about two months, but was not deeply interested until the first of July when I would walk the paths and would often go to sleep begging God to have mercy on me and to forgive my sins. I became interested in the bible and would take it with me everywhere I went. Then I went to a protracted meeting and when the preacher called for them to come up and be prayed for I almost felt compelled to go but did not. I felt if anyone ever needed prayer I did, so I went again another day. As I entered the church I wanted to cry, but wondered what people would think of me with tears in my eyes. When I left that evening I cried all the way home. It seemed I was perfectly happy and my desire was to talk with christian people. I wanted to tell them how I felt and wanted them to tell me how they felt. The next Sunday I was upstairs trying to pray when these words came into my mind, "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren," and I thought I did love them, and from then I had a different feeling for christian people than I ever had before.

I was riding with an old christian gentleman the next Sunday and I told him to pray for me, and he said he would. I told him my feelings and he said he wanted to see me join the church. I told him I was not fit and he said that was exactly what he wanted to hear me say.

I went on with my burden growing heavier and heavier every day and did not want to speak to any one. I went to the church one Saturday with that great burden and this man came to me and wanted me to join and I finally did. But oh, the burden grew ever so much heavier than before it seemed I was blind and deaf. I came home and did not go back and that afternoon tried to read my bible but it seemed I was overcome with trouble so went into the woods to try and beg God for mercy. The next morning I got up feeling some better but the burden was still there. On Monday morning my burden was greater than ever. I got up and came down stairs and a colored woman asked me about being baptized. I told her I never would be baptized until I felt better. I started out to the woods to pray and as I stepped out of the door I felt that Jesus was near and that there was something for me that day. I remained in the woods and begged the Lord until I thought the woman might get uneasy about me and I didn't want her to know what I was doing. I started back to the house but before reaching there I felt compelled to give up and I could only say, God be merciful to me a sinner. I finally reached the house and began cooking supper when it would often come to me to go and pray. The last time I prayed I heard my husband coming and his presence seemed to revive me some. We ate supper and I went with him to the barn. I began telling him of my condition and about the Landmark and how I could understand its preaching. In a moment it all seemed opened to me and I began to get happy and I clasped my hands and I said, "Bless the Lord, oh my soul." I kept getting happier and that night I went to bed singing but not to sleep. Sometime in the night something seemed to start at my head and left me like a great load at my feet and immediately I was so happy I can't express it. I felt new all over, and could only say, "Bless the Lord oh my soul."

I could view the road I had traveled and oh how rugged it was. How good I felt. It was a time of joy and I sang every good song and wanted to praise him. I raised up and looked from the window and it was the most beautiful sight I had ever seen.

Now Mr. Gold, I want to tell you of some of my badness. I am told often I have never been born again and a certain one has frequently told me I would be lost were I to die and other people have said all manner of evil about me and called me ugly names. This occurred once before and I made up with them, but now they are worse than ever and it doesn't seem that I ever make up with them again or that there is really much desire in my heart to do so. They have made me shed so many bitter tears that it seems I have no control over my heart concerning this, besides God has never made me willing to forgive them.

Mr. Gold, Sometimes I seem to get a few crumbs from the Master's table, but not many. I am in lots of trouble and have stated my case to you and I want you to please tell me what to do.

Yours in hope,
MARY DEAN.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—In the Landmark for Aug. 15, I see the extract of my letter to Brother J. R. Jones. On the 31 of October last, I fell off a fence backward on a rough rock, and broke one or two ribs, and when about well of it, while on my buggy I fell forward and the right side of my breast struck the wheel of my buggy, and was badly hurt again, but have recovered of both. But owing to my being crippled, and my left leg shorter than the other I limp all the time, which necessitated my using a cane though my health is good. I am near 75 years of age, and my wife is two months and twenty-five days younger. I am hardly able to work any more, but mostly live by renting my farm. I am neither rich nor destitute, and have no cause to complain. In some sections where I labor, my friends and brethren are kind indeed. I put up no claim for alms giving, for should I sow unto the brethren spiritual things, I should not think it a crime to receive the carnal things. Though a gift makes me feel unworthy, I fear I might burden them. The giving alms or for poverty differs from administering carnal things for sewing unto the people of spiritual things. I do not wish to visit any section without some invitation.

As I said to Brother Jones, forty seven were received in our presence in 1904, nineteen in 1905; twelve in 1906; and four in 1907. During these little visits—pastors and elders of that section were frequently with us but generally gave us preference. Last month we were exercising among them again for a little over three weeks, when twenty-four joined by experience, and my son baptized all but two of them. A few days after he returned home, he was requested to come again. He went for a few days and about a half dozen more joined, and some of them he baptized. Of the thirty about half the number were unmarried young ladies, and of honorable standing. In the community of the Mountain and Senter associations are many live Baptists, and a fine citizenship. The last thirty members were mostly young people though nearly half of them were married. A great many others have been added during that time. Many churches or the church in many places is prospering in the reign of grace. We love to feed the lambs, and perform our part among the fishers of men. We do not reprimand churches for neglecting their own pastors. This we leave for the pastor, deacons and the church, or it would be thought we were begging for ourselves in a round about way. Neither do we hear or inquire after the faults of our preaching brethren, and parade them before the churches and people which they generally serve. This would injure their influence, and cripple the church. The relative duties of pastor, deacon, and church are perfectly delineated, that the man of God, or teacher, may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. A disorderly member may fill the ear of a traveling preacher with his tale of distress, and if the preacher is inclined to give heed to a naughty tongue he is a striker for him, and sows discord, and needles with other men's matters. The back biter, and busy body, should be reproved and not encouraged. David said, "How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!" I love a joint labor together with the brethren. Prosperity is always with it, or soon will follow it. It is like the precious ointment upon the head of Aaron that ran down to the skirts of his garments. For there the Lord commanded the blessing of life for ever more. May the Lord extend peace like a river, and the glory of God be manifested upon the children of men, and the hand of the Lord be known in the comfort of Zion.

We have always delighted to kindly entertain our brethren and friends, and are anxious to do so yet.

ISAAC WEBB.

Dear Brother Gold—I was requested by some of the brethren, sisters and friends to write.

I reached home on Wednesday night finding my children all well. I left my home August 1, reaching the Country Line Association on Sunday, where I met many of the good brethren, sisters and friends, and felt like it was a good association.

From there brother Gold and myself left for our appointments which we were blest to fill up to Friday before the second Sunday where we met the Staunton River Association. There we met a large congregation of people, and had a very good meeting. From there we filled appointments back to Danville, Thence we went to Reidsville where we met the Upper Country Line Association.

On this tour we met many good brethren, sisters and friends, were treated very kindly—better than I felt like I deserved, and the people appeared to enjoy the preaching at our appointments.

I met a good many that had been reading about the great storm and flood of waters that was on the ground when I left home, which I thought was about at its height when I left home, but on my return I found it had risen much higher. I often attempted to describe the condition of our country when I was out but failed to do it. Since coming home and viewing my farm and others I am not able to describe it, for it is so much worse than I heard it was.

I think there are as many as a thousand acres in one body owned by different parties, and the people tell me the water was from 3 to 6 feet deep over all that body of land, and they could run boats anywhere over the fences. On my farm there were about fifty-five acres of cotton, and most of the cotton stalks are as dry as they are in January. The entire crop will not make fifty pounds of seed cotton. I do not think there will be twenty-five barrels of good corn made on my place, excepting about five acres about my house. While the corn is all damaged the people can use a good deal of it and will have to for I have never seen this country in any such condition before. They have no fodder to pull, and no cotton to pick and they seem to be at a loss what to do or where to go. They say they cannot pay their taxes, nor their debts. This is over a pretty large scope of this county. But in some places it is much worse than it is in this neighborhood, for as I came home a man on the train told me there were twenty-two families in the lower part of his township that did not have anything growing that man or beast could eat. All up and down the Northeast river nearly everything is destroyed. I was told they could see sheep, cattle, hogs and goats floating down the river lowing and bleating.

I have about three acres in cotton around my house that will make a fourth of a crop. I left home on Saturday morning after the storm on Thursday and Friday. I could not hear any direct news from home until I reached Reidsville. There I received two letters from my daughter, and when I read them I was melted to tears to hear of the condition of our country. But this scripture was quoted in my mind, "I was once young, and now and I hold, yet I have never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread." The next thought was it was God's will to send this rain on the earth, and he will do right. It may be a blessing in disguise that we cannot see now.

I do not want you to think I am one of the righteous, for I am not. I have often felt to say like Jacob all these things are against me, and they will bring my gray hairs down in sorrow to the grave. I believe that God will take care of his people, and his people have to suffer for Christ's sake, learning obedience by the things they suffer.

I have given a short sketch of the condition of our country.

ISAAC JONES.

Dear Brother Gold—The following incident in the life of Elder Henry Petty, who died in Pickens county, Ala., several years ago might be interesting to the readers of the Landmark.

It was not my good fortune to know Elder Petty personally as he was called from earth before I had an acquaintance with the Primitive Baptists, but I met his two sons, Elder Elisha Petty and Deacon Ralph Petty, both of whom stood in high estimation among the brethren. They too have passed away.

I was clerk of the Pilgrim's Rest Association six years and I often noticed Elder Henry Petty's name in the Association books, and I have no doubt but that the incident is true.

Elder Henry Petty was born and reared in Kentucky, and exercised in public to some extent before he came to Alabama; but Jonah like he decided to leave his native state and go where no one knew he had ever tried to preach. So in company with two other companions he set out for Alabama horse back. Before leaving Kentucky or on the way Elder Petty made his companions promise they would never diavulge the fact that he had ever tried to preach.

Landing in Pickens county, Ala., they rode up to a farm house one afternoon and inquired of the man of the house if there was any land for sale in the neighborhood. "Oh, yes," said the farmer, "but get down and spend the night. There will be preaching tomorrow close by, and you can go out to the meeting and see the people, and find out who has land for sale. So they took him at his word. On the way to meeting next morning Elder Petty was so afraid the people would suspect he was a preacher he got down hid his saddle bags in the woods. The meeting was under an arbor, and Elder Petty dared not venture up to the front but took a back seat. Three preachers were in the stand. One rose up and said he had been appointed to preach, but every thing was dark before him, and he could say nothing and took his seat calling upon one of his brother preachers to go forward and preach. The second preacher however was in the same plight, "just couldn't preach," and he took his seat calling on the third man. This man arose and in a solemn, bewildered tone said, "Brethren there is something mysterious about this matter. Neither of the brethren can preach, and I am sure I can not, and I don't understand it, and if there is a preacher in this congregation let him come forward." In a moment Elder Henry Petty rose from his seat and walked to the stand singing, "Keep silence all created things, and wait your maker's nod. My soul stands trembling while she sings the honors of her God. And here the whole secret was explained.

Elder Petty bought land and lived and died in Pickens county, Ala., and "though dead yet speaketh."

Brother Gold, I have told this several times publicly, but I could never tell it without shedding tears. To me it is a touching incident and demonstrates the power of God in the calling, qualifying and sending his ministers when and where he will.

"God moves in a mysterious way,

His wonders to perform,

He plants his footsteps on the sea

And rides upon the storm."

Brother Gold, I am spending a lonely and desolate life. Seldom have the pleasure of associating with the brethren, but I still have hope in God.

Yours in gospel bonds,

H. J. REDD.

Remarks—Yes Brother Redd, this is a solemn and interesting incident. Such events make a deep impression on my mind. The marvellous works of God are precious to his saints. I am glad you have written this one. The Lord will have his own. Talents may be buried seemingly, but they will be dug up and accounts rendered, and God's name glorified.

LIFE—LIGHT.

"In him was life; and the life was the light of men, John 1:4.

One of the sublime utterances of inspiration is recorded in the above words. There can be no reasonable question as to what personage or character is here introduced. His equality with the eternal God is set forth. In creation he takes such an active part that nothing was made that he did not make—not that he made a part of it or aided. It was more than that. Nothing was made without him. Surely this declares his godhead.

In him was life. He that created all things that are made surely has life. In the fullness and perfection of that life light can not be wanting, and that life was the light of men. This light did shine in the darkness which comprehended it not. The mystery of this light can never be comprehended or understood by the darkness—the darkness that is in man.

The word of God which is eternal life was the light controlling, shaping, forming, directing in the creation of man. Hence wisdom dwelling with prudence found out knowledge of witty inventions, and in the counsel of eternity grace and truth are given men in Christ Jesus before the world began, for they are chosen in Christ Jesus before the world began, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father through sanctification of the spirit unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. The benefit of the obedience of Jesus is given them. The blood is given them, so that we of his fullness receive and grace for grace. Thus the life of Jesus which is eternal is the light of men. For though man in his earthly estate is but dust and shall die, yet a foundation is laid in Zion on which the creation of man proceeds to the riches of the glory of God's grace. For though man is a fallen sinner by transgression, yet that eternal life never transgressed in Adam nor did it ever sin, and in that eternal life we are preserved in Christ Jesus. The transgression and fall of Adam calls for the consummation of the way of redemption, or for the coming of Christ is the flesh, made of a woman, made under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons of God, being born again of incorruptible seed by the word of God that liveth and abideth forever; for the word was made flesh and dwelt among us and we beheld his glory as of the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth. For the law came by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

Jesus being the true life is the light of men. Every prophecy, every promise of mercy to sinners is based and proceeds on the certainty that Christ should come in the flesh and lay down his life, and take it again. The exceedingly great and precious promises to sinners are made on this sure foundation. Jesus upholds all things by the word of his power. Though men transgressed and brought death into the world, yet Jesus certainly should come in the flesh and should bruise the serpent's head, and should lead captivity captive. What if some did not believe? Shall that make the faith of God be without effect? His own fury it upheld him. His holy arm has gotten him the victory. He shall not fail nor be discouraged. He shall bring forth judgment unto the truth, and in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

The light shines in the darkness, but the darkness comprehends it not. It can not prevent the light from shining. How great is that darkness in the blindness of the sinner. How mysterious is the work of grace which the sinner does not comprehend, yet the darkness can not hinder or defeat the work of God. The sinner can not help nor hinder the light from shining. Jesus is the true light that lights every man that cometh into the world. This is true even of the coming of every natural man into the natural world. For no natural man creates any natural light to conduct him while he lives here in the world. Also every vessel of mercy born in the spiritual world is lighted by the Lord Jesus.

When the Lord Jesus came in the flesh, for the word was made flesh and dwelt among us, he came unto his own, the Jewish nation, but they did not receive him; but as many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. But they were born: not of blood, nor of will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. They were born of God before they received Jesus and therefore they received him and power was given unto them to become the sons of God. So great and mysterious, so gracious and wonderful is the way of the Lord in manifesting those born of God as heirs of God and joint heirs with our Lord Jesus Christ. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed on us that we should be called the sons of God. It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he appears we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is. The light shall so shine in us that we shall be like him.

Ye who sometimes were darkness are now light in the Lord. In him is no darkness at all. God is light. In the light of the Lord we have joy and peace. The light makes manifest. The light changes us into the glory of the Lord so that as we see him we are made like him. Every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure.

We are of the day, children of the light. Let us walk in the light.

WHY DO YOU PRAY.

Is it because you read in the bible that men ought always to pray and not to faint? Jesus uttered that because it is the truth. He never said any thing that is not truth. But suppose you had never seen a bible or heard of one, what would you do when afflicted would you pray or not?

Suppose you are well informed in bible lore, having read it much, and having often heard that men should pray, do you pray except when you are distressed? When you are happy what have you to pray for? When you are at ease merely what have you to pray for?

If you are in deep distress you pray to God if you are a devout man. Do you think your praying will change the mind of God, or do you hope that your condition will be changed? You pray because you are in need, and your desire is that God will help you as it seems good to him, enabling you to bear the trouble, or working in you that which you ought to do.

In prayer you draw nigh to God; and you worship him. You own his righteous dominion and desire that his will may be done in you, and that you may be conformed to his will.

What greater blessing than this could you pray for? Is not the affliction that causes you to pray then a blessing to you?

After you have been afflicted you have seen that you needed this affliction and you say it is good for me that I was afflicted. Then you are more established in the truth that your will is not the right will, but that the will of God is the right will. Is your will and God's will ever the same? No. Then your will can never be right, and if never right it is always wrong.

P. D. G.

WHAT BUT GRACE COULD SAVE ME?

To be saved by grace is to be saved by the Lord. If one could be saved by his works it would not be of the Lord. Where Paul wrote by the grace of God I am what I am, he did not mean that by what he had done he obtained this salvation. For he wrote that if it is by works then it is not by grace, and if it is by grace it is not by works. He also wrote, "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that (faith) not of yourselves. It is the gift of God; not of works lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Now what did Paul mean when he wrote this language? Can you find any utterance of his that contradicts this language? If salvation is of the Lord is it not a greater salvation than if it is by man? What is a sweeter word than grace? What more completely suits the sinner's need than this? What is more glorifying to God than this? What is more humbling to the sinner than to be conquered by grace? What more thoroughly and completely changes him than grace? What makes more to the praise of the grace of God than when God performs it all?

P. D. G.

CHARACTER.

Is character what another thinks of you, or what others think of you? Suppose they are mistaken as to your principles or motives. Suppose one acts in a deceitful manner impressing others that he is honest in motives when he is not, then the estimate of his character is false.

Suppose I am not a good judge of character, not being myself a lover of righteousness, and I see in him traits that I admire which are not the elements of a just character, then he can not be a man of uprightness.

Who is a judge of good character? A man is not a judge in his own case, nor is he the just judge in the case of others. Yet men's characters are considered good or bad according as they are highly esteemed, or held in disfavor by the popular opinions of mankind.

God is the judge of all, and his judgment is always correct. What soever a man sows that shall he also reap, because the crop is the real outgrowth of the character of what is sown. It is the unfolding growth and reigning of the principles of his nature that policy can not disguise, nor hypocrisy conceal.

Suppose one had that just and wise composition of parts that would never seek applause for himself, and appreciate commendation that another is entitled to as much as if it were bestowed on himself, thus being so free from the desire of approbation he is not worthy of that he has no preference for himself then he would make no difference between himself and others. He would be free from that apparent modesty which seems to distain all commendation for himself, yet at heart desires all the best things said for himself, and would divert praise due to another, and despoil him of what is his due, is such an one a robber or does he bear false witness?

If one should so dwell in the light that he sees things as they are, and with unbiased impartial mind should render praise to whom it is due, and in a righteous spirit hold the guilty man to be guilty, and so love principles of truth that he would know no man after the flesh, what would you think of his character? When there is no envy or jealousy, but such a love of truth and righteousness dwelling in one that he knows no man after the flesh, nor does prejudice dwell in his heart toward another, and he esteems the poor man as well as he does the rich and rich as well as he does the poor, possessing good will towards all, not loving money, and showing by his conduct that he deals justly, loves mercy and walks humbly with God, is his character good? What is there in the principles or practices of that man that is not good?

One is not to swear at all. He has no power to make one hair white or black. He has no control over time, nor any dominion over the faith of another, but submits his case into the hand of God to be disposed of as seems good to the Lord of all then he has the principles of a good character. To work out these principles and to make them manifest in sincere, humble conduct is manifesting a good character.

P. D. G.

WHY?

"Why art thou cast down, O my scul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God." Psalms 42:11.

There are questions asked in the bible that have never been answered by man. Such questions as this, "Wherefore didst thou doubt, O thou of little faith? Why take ye thought for the morrow? We know that taking thought for to-morrow provides nothing, nor brings any comfort. We know that doubting does not strengthen one, nor does it honor God. There is no comfort in it, for it proclaims an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God. It proves our folly. What great folly it is to refuse to be comforted, and to cleave to that which can not deliver nor reach our case. We may have confidence and hope that we shall yet praise God who is our hope and the health of our confidence, while we are still cast down and are unable to lift up ourselves. Indeed we are unable to deliver our soul. For there is something in the soul beyond our power to reach or to quiet. We may have pains in our body that we do not fear will destroy us, yet at present such is the suffering that the assurance they will soon pass away does not at all relieve the present suffering. Our reasoning may assure us that the trouble is temporary, and that may strengthen us into greater endurance, but it does not remove the present distress. There is soul suffering that natural reasoning can not comprehend, nor relieve, and this calls for a divine power to enable us to bear it, or deliver us from it. One says if I were a child of God surely I would not suffer as I do, while that is the very reason that one does so suffer. The Lord's people are quickened into a life that is keenly sensitive to sin, temptation, darkness, sorrow and vanity. The soul afflictions of one born of God are far greater than are the natural troubles of one not born from above. Those dead in sins are not plagued as those that are dead to sin,—that is such as die daily and are counted as sheep for the slaughter have endless distress. For a warfare compels a conflict most undesirable and one that causes the soul thus affected to cry out O wretched man that I am. Who shall deliver me from the body of this death? For the good that I would I do not, and the evil that I would not that I do.

Can you tell why Christ was such a sufferer? He knew no sin. But he bore our sins in his own body on the tree, and was made a curse for us. We must follow him, the path he trod is one of sorrow. We must suffer with him—not for him in order to help him. But we are manifested as his in filling up the measure of the suffering of Christ in our mortal body. If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him.

A man's foes are they of his own house. They will not let him rest, nor be long at ease. He wants to be let alone that he may swallow down his spittle. But this is not our rest. Then we must have such troubles that no man can deliver us from. In our deep distress our trouble causes us to come to the Lord for help. When out of the depths we call unto him and he delivers us, then we know that salvation is of the Lord. For when troubles from which we can not deliver ourselves are upon us and we are conscious that no power of man can reach us, and the Lord takes us up, then our faith is led to rest more in the Lord who is a present help in time of need.

The Lord waits to be gracious. He so controls that when we despair of help from man and then the Lord delivers so great is the deliverance that we know the grace of God brings salvation. Then we rejoice in his power.

The healing power of the Lord so reaches and relieves us that we know from experience that he is the health of our countenance and our hope. Yet there is continual weakness and disquiet in self. Why art thou disquieted in me O my soul? This infirmity is never cured, but the strength of God made perfect in our weakness does enable us to glory in our infirmities; for when I am weak then am I strong.

P. D. G.

WHY SHOULD WE FEAR MAN.

If I have good will to man I need not fear to meet him for I have no harm towards him, but will do him kindness. Nor need I fear what he can do to me if I am trusting in the Lord. The principles of honesty and fairness keep me then from taking any advantage of him, because I am doing to him as I would that he should do to me. Good behavior is the dearest and the most satisfactory exponent of sound principles the world can see. By their fruits ye shall know them. He that seeks the good of others in righteous living is braced by the rule to do to others as you would have them do to you. This balances the account well and causes the scales to be even, and equality allows no partiality to any one. Here is a paradise of precious fruits that do not grow on a selfish soil, but they expand and enlarge as trees of the Lord's planting that he may be glorified. The good works that believers should maintain are good and profitable unto men. P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Sir—Will you give your views through the Landmark on Revelation 20:4, 5. By so doing you will greatly oblige me.

Yours truly,

W. B. NEWTON.

There were events shown to John, false prophecies and deceivers presented to him, of such a character that we feel that they are a great mystery to us. The events foretold by John form much of the history of the worldly denominations together with the bloody persecutions and great sufferings of mankind. We see only the outward acts and events, but to John the wicked spirit and false principles of worldly rulers were shown, and Satan the roaring lion that works in wicked men is so exposed to John as man can not behold unless shown to him. John also saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. They were faithful in serving the Lord Jesus, and in rejecting every false worship. Nor did they count their lives dear unto the death for the truth's sake. The souls of these faithful servants of Jesus were shown to John. The Lord greatly blessed them. He honors those that honor him. Surely it is not a vain thing to serve the Lord. To reign with Christ is an honor and a glory above any thing of this world. Blessed and holy are such as have part in the first resurrection. Jesus is become the first fruits of them that slept under the law. Jesus is the first born of God, and the first born from the dead. He was delivered for our offenses and was raised for our justification. Wherever the faith dwells that owns Christ as our Savior there are those that reign with Christ, and shall dwell with him. Such are blest and joyful. Surely those that love Jesus so that they lay down their lives for the truth's sake shall be honored by Jesus.

Satan shall be chained in the bottomless pit a thousand years. During which time he shall not deceive the nations. The power of evil and distress shall be curbed by the Lord during that thousand years. After this Satan shall be loosed to deceive the nations in the four quarters of the earth, and to gather them to battle against the Lord. In this great battle all the nations of the earth that are under the power of Satan are arrayed.

This is clearly near the end of time. Where is the evidence from this that the world is converted to christianity? Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse deceiving and being deceived.

Now when and how these things shall be fulfilled I know not. I know nothing of these deep mysteries unless they are shown to me. I believe the scriptures shall be fulfilled as it is foretold by God's servants, but how or when is unknown to me. This should not cause me to question the certainty of their fulfillment, nor the importance of my watchfulness lest this come on me at unawares. Every word of God shall be fulfilled. Blessed are they that watch and pray.

P. D. G.

Elder Asa D. Short requests my view of Matthew 25:41, 46. The 46th verse reads, "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."

It is contended by some that the scriptures do not sustain the doctrine of eternal or everlasting punishment.

I am not surprised that triflers, scoffers, unbelievers, the wicked do not hold that the scriptures set forth everlasting punishment. For those that love sin do not believe it is a grievous thing, or that it merits such punishment. Sin with them is a trifling thing and not hating it, but loving lies and believing a lie it is expected of them that they would reject the teaching of Jesus who more than once sets forth hell as a place or state of unending punishment.

In the ninth chapter of Mark it is stated three times that in hell the fire is never quenched, and their worm dieth not. What language could be plainer? If one says this is a figure of speech it must be said in reply that a figure is never so strong or great as the substance it represents. In Matthew 25th chapter the language used is so strong and clear that no stronger language could be used. If one desired to employ language to declare punishment to be everlasting what plainer or stronger word could he use than the word Jesus used whose word is truth.

But one says flesh and blood would soon be consumed in fire. But it is not flesh and blood that is cast in the lake of fire and brimstone called the second death. But after the resurrecting of the unjust having been awaked or raised to shame and everlasting contempt they shall be turned into or cast into hell, or go into everlasting punishment. For the sea shall deliver up the dead that are in them. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.

Now why should not one that has tasted of sin and death under conviction not believe that there is a just God that hates sin, and a hell prepared for the devil and all his angels, and a condition or state of everlasting punishment for the wicked, because nothing but the death and resurrection of Jesus, or the shedding of his blood can atone for sin and abolish death? When God has taken one out of the horrible, bottomless pit that one knows there is a hell, and knows that his own suffering could never atone for the least sin nor mitigate its deserved punishment.

P. D. G.

Brother M. L. Liles, of Texas requests my view of the seven nations of the Canaanites that infested that land when Israel entered it. They were wicked people living there by sufferance of the Lord, not having as yet filled up the measure of their iniquity. For it seems that the mystery of iniquity must finish its course, as well as the mystery of godliness must also be accomplished.

The seven attributes or spirits of God denote the fulness of his perfections, seven being a full and complete number. So the seven abominations of iniquity answering to the seven nations of the Canaanites, the seven more wicked spirit, stand as a counterfeit in opposition to the perfection of deity. These unclean and wicked spirits are cast out of the subject of grace, when God binds the strong man and casts him out, and dwells in the subject of grace. For God dwells with him that is of an humble heart and a contrite spirit. But by nature the subjects of grace or vessels of mercy are dead in trespasses and sin as well as others. For there is no difference in nature.

After the driving out of these Canaanites there yet lingered some that dwelt in the valleys or dark low places, and some possessing chariots of iron occupied the mountains or high places where pride and vanity dwell; nor were these cast out by Israel. They remained there to try Israel as thorns in the flesh. While Israel walked humbly with God these enemies could not hurt them. But when Israel rebelled these enemies then had the mastery over them and prevailed. So that Israel being in a state of imperfection with flesh lusting against the spirit here were enemies placed to check their disobedient course and to prove whether they would serve the Lord or not.

In the people of God there yet remains the Canaanite in the land. There is one thing those born of God know. One says I know that in me—that is my flesh there dwelleth no good thing. Well what does dwell there? The good I would I do not, the evil I would not that I do. This renders him wretched. This flesh or law of sin in the members will dwell here until death is swallowed up in victory. Then shall the inhabitants no more say I am sick. For the former things shall be done away. For behold God will make all things new.
P. D. C.

GAMES.

Amusements as the world calls them, such as cards, dice, baseball, and many other things of similar characters, are very fashionable among people. It seems difficult for them to get rid of time that hangs heavily on their hands. The effort therefore to "kill" time as they call it, or to while away the time by being occupied with something pleasing or amusing is their aim. They justify or excuse this course by saying that they desire employment to while away the dull time.

Now, should people in professing to be followers of Jesus Christ resort to such amusements?

"Be wise redeeming the time, for the days are evil." To be wise in redeeming the time is to employ it to God's glory in serving him. Surely time does not hang heavily on the one who seeks to glorify God by doing the things that are needful to be done or useful.

Such games as baseball costing so much money, throwing away so much time do not commend themselves to people who seek to do things that are useful. To labor with ones hands will strengthen and develop the body without damaging or maiming one. Often people engaged in baseball games get hurt. Besides it is a labor requiring such exertion as is injurious to the health of the person thus engaged. While manual labor such as is necessary to earn a living is conducive to health.

Did you ever consider how much is wasted by thousands of people that witness such games? What profit is there in it? Habits of idleness in looking at such games that impart no instruction are hurtful to the people thus throwing away their time. If you have no need to labor for your own support you could use that time in obtaining food or clothing for some needy, sick or helpless people, or relieving the distresses of others.

The people professing godliness should not be conformed to the world, but be transformed by the renewing of their minds in order to prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. They are to be separate from the world for God has separated them from the world as those circumcised in heart to worship God in spirit, to rejoice in Christ Jesus, and to have no confidence in the flesh. How then shall such people delight in worldly amusements and vanities, and show that they are called of God with a holy calling? How can they let their light shine as the children of the light and of the day?

If you have no work or labor that ought to be done visit the sick, read your bible, speak to them that fear the Lord, and do such things as are good work which are good and profitable to men.

OBITUARIES

FERNEY H. GOODWIN.

He was the son of Jackson Goodwin and Nancy his wife of Cedar island.

He was a great sufferer, but was made willing to obey the summons of the Lord to leave this world.

He desired to pray if he knew how, and he prayed in these words, "Oh Lord open my poor heart and prepare me for a better place. Grant that I may not live to see but one more sunrise, but take me into thy home, Amen." He prayed also for those who stood by. He said he wanted to die, it would be so happy to go to heaven and be with the Lord.

Like all parents and families they feel sorely bereaved, but the Lord is their help and their shield and we desire to pray him to give them comfort. They express their submission in the following words:

Dearest Fernie, thou hast left us;

Here the loss we deeply feel.

But it is God who hast bereft us.

He can all our sorrows heal.

The Lord bless the bereaved family.

Their friend,

L. H. HARDY.

MRS. W. S. WHITE

By request of her dear husband I will try with a sad heart to write the obituary of my dear aunt.

Aunt Maggie was born in 1883, August 19, and fell asleep June 1, 1908.

Asleep in Jesus blessed sleep where none ever wake to weep.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. White at 19 years of age and to this union was born three children two of which still survive her.

She lived with her husband only 6 years: such a short time did they live together. They were perfectly devoted to each other and did all they could for one another.

She leaves a devoted husband, a mother, one sister, and two brothers, and many other relatives and friends to mourn her loss. But we feel our loss is her eternal gain.

Aunt Maggie was in the prime of life and the bloom of health and little did this happy family think as she passed to and fro with footsteps light on the day before, that when the sun should shed its glorious light that this dear one would be cold in the embrace of death.

Sunday night she aroused the family from their slumbers with the scream of "Oh, my heart!" her husband, mother, and brother gathered around her and she told them "she was bound to die that she was choking to death" and in about three hours she passed away. The family and friends did all they could for her, but they could not stay the mighty hand of death. The doctor came the next time enough to see her breathe the last breath.

She passed away very easily and was smiling when she died.

She was a kind and affectionate, wife, kind and loving mother; she was kind to everybody.

To know her was to love her. She always took the bright side of her troubles and never murmured over anything.

She was not a member of any church, but was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptists and she liked to be with them and to hear them preach.

She enjoyed nothing more than reading the Landmark for the last two years. The heart broken family and relatives desire the prayers of all their friends.

May God be with us all and help us to submit to his will.

A precious one from us has gone,

A voice we loved is still.

A place is vacant in our home;

Which never can be filled.

God in his wisdom has recalled
 The boon his love had given
 And though the body slumbers here,
 Her soul is safe in heaven.

A NIECE.

SALLIE H. CHERRY.

Dear Brother Gold—It becomes my sad duty to chronicle the death of one of the members of the church "Singleton," at Washington, N. C., Sister Sallie H. Cherry wife of Mr. Bob Cherry of this place. She was born September 4, 1864, and died April 16, 1908. She has been a member of the church of God, only a few short years. She was gentle and kind to every one, but if needs be that she must speak, she was faithful to do so. We believe that God's purpose was accomplished with her here in this vale of tears, and he called her home. She leaves an aged husband, two little girls, Dot and Madge, and several step-sons, who were very kind to her. She died very suddenly. We regret to have to give our members and loved ones up; but who can prevent when the death summons comes? So with resignation we desire to say—Farewell dear sister Cherry, we hope to meet you some day, where farewells are heard no more, sighs and sorrows are ended, and tears are wiped away, where we hope to bask forever in the sunshine of God's love and sing redeeming grace forever more.

Affectionately,

BETTIE Z. WHITLEY.

WALTER L. FLYNCHUM.

Dear Brother Gold—If the Lord will bless me I will try to write the death of my dear husband, and what a sad thing to think about, the loss of a good husband, one who was so kind. It grieves my heart to part with one so dear and kind. His stay on earth was thirty-six years, three months and seventeen days. He was afflicted all of his life, but not so bad until seven years ago he got so afflicted he could not labor. The last six months of his life he suffered being hungry and could not eat anything only a little milk, and Oh what a grief it was to me, to see him want to eat and could not, but oh my lonely days are now. I am realizing the losing of a dear husband. No one knows but one that has felt this sorrow. I can't help but think that he has gone to Jesus and if I and my little children can meet him there when we leave this world, it will be enough for me.

I thought this would be of some comfort to those that have an experience of grace to read. I feel like no one has seen the trouble I have, no one to speak to but my little children and grandmother. We don't know what we are to come to if the Lord don't guide and teach me how to raise his little children and keep them from all harm. He had catarrh and indigestion. He professed a hope in Christ seven years ago. He had been sick, the doctor was waiting on him, when one morning becoming worse he said he could not unless something was done for him. We sent for the doctor, when he came he asked him how he felt, he told him he felt bad and told all that were around his bedside to pray for him, and said there was no hope for him, but he was bound to die. He got so then he was willing to go, and commenced using some words of scripture as though he was preaching. His step-mother came in crying. He said don't grieve after me. He told me last winter that he hated to leave me and his three little children; but if he could only feel as I did when I told my step-mother not to grieve it ought to be enough for me. The good Lord has promised to be a husband to the widow, a father to the fatherless. He would call me and say Mollie, I want to tell you what to do, and I have thought of the good advice he left me. He would say I don't want you to plant any more tobacco for you see what it has done for me. A while after he professed a hope he sent for Brother Mickey and Brother Ashburn to come and talk with him. They came, he told them his trials and what he hoped the good Lord had done for him, and they told him^{on} to come to Piney Grove and restate what he had told them. That was the first Sunday in May, and he was no' able to get there, so waited until the first Sunday in July and we both went and talked to the Primitive Baptist church and were received and baptized the first Sunday in August. The doctor said it would not do for him to be baptized. He had told it that he had done all he could for him. The night before he was to be baptized he coughed almost all night, and next morning he could not go, he was so weak he could not put his clothes on, so he thought he would have to put it off, but I told him I did not think it would hurt him and we went to the river and when we got there he was so weak he said I can't go in unless the good Lord will give me strength, and Brother Ashburn said a few words to him. He says I will try it. They sang constrained by love we come, and prayed and we both were baptized by Elder Ashburn, and as we came out of the water they sang how happy are they who their Saviour obey. When we left home that morning he said to me if I go to the water we won't go to the church; but after we redressed he met me and said we will go to the church. He got better every year. He lived six years and six months after he joined the church, and was a faithful member to the end. He got worse this September a year ago, and was confined six months. He would beg me to pray for him. I would say to him beg the Lord to let me bear a part of his sickness so he could get well with me and the little children, but it was not the Lord's will, so the day he left this world he told me to pray for him. I told him I had tried. He said you have no hope of me ever getting well. I told him the Lord would do right with him. He said I know that.

He turned over and said I thought I heard the Savior coming and slapped his hands together. In the evening he told me the Savior would do right with him.

I want you all who read this to remember me and my little children in your prayers. My little children stay around and cry and say mama, I want papa to come back. No tongue can tell my feelings.

His funeral was preached at Piney Grove

WINCY ANN MOORE.

Sister Wincy Ann Moore died suddenly June 7, 1908, was about 55 years old and was the wife of Mr. Troy Moore, of Union county, N. C., to whom she had been married about 28 years. She became a member of Watson church April 20, 1887, and was baptized the fourth Sunday following, remaining a consistent and faithful as I have seen her live to the day of her death. Her life as I have known it has been that of a noble christian lady whose words of comfort and kindness have been many and timely. I was at her burial, it was a scene of sadness indeed but it manifested that a good wife and mother had been taken from loving kindred whom I advise to live after her good example and respect her religion. May the Lord bless them.

BENJAMIN F. ROBERTSON.

Elder P. D. Gold—I send you a short sketch of Brother Benjamin F. Robertson's life and death. Brother Robertson was born November 1, 1823 and departed this life May 22, 1908, making his stay on earth eighty-five years. Brother Robertson died near the place he was born in Griffins township, Martin county, N. C. He followed the trade his father learned him, mechanic, wheelwright, under taker and farming, living on his own farm. In early manhood he was united in marriage with Miss Margaret G. Perry from which union several children were born, though only two survive him, one son and one daughter. The daughter Mrs. Hadley is a member of the church with her father and aged mother. Bro. Robertson being full of life and a brave man joined the first company of volunteers and fought through the war in behalf of the South, being taken prisoner twice, the first time at Hateras, the first battle fought in N. C., and the last time at Kinston, N. C., one of the last battles. After the war he returned home and went hard to work, reclaimed his gone down farm and left his aged widow a good home and it is pleasant to know she is a faithful and long tried Primitive Baptist.

Brother Robertson was a truthful and honest man, doing lots of work for his neighbors for nothing, and in his middle age the Lord saw fit to arrest him and he was brought to judgement and pronounced the sentence against himself and saw the sinfulness of man and the righteousness of God. He had Christ revealed in him the hope of glory and on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July 1881, was received a member of the church at Smithwick's Creek and died a member of that church.

Brother Robertson was noted for attending church. He would make long journeys to churches besides his own and that on foot seldom ever riding far or near. We think he did more walking to church than any man in this country, always filling his seat at his home church until old age and infirmities over took him. The last few years he was not able to attend church yet the brethren would meet and preach at his house to his delight and that of his family. We shall no more hear him praise the preaching, but we can say, "Dear friend fare well, and with God and Christ forever dwell." In behalf of the family.

ELIZABETH S. BELL.

By the request of my husband I will try to write the obituary notice of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Bell, widow of Mr. Stanfl S. Bell. She was born April 28, 1821, and died July 10, 1908, making her stay on earth 87 years two months and twelve days. She united with the Primitive Baptist church at Hadnots Creek on Saturday before the first Sunday in September 1868 and lived a faithful member until her death, always filling her seat until she became so old and feeble she could not, her church being eight miles from her sons' home with whom she lived.

Mother suffered a great deal in her latter years with neuralgia in the nerves of her face. She was very deaf and almost blind, but she bore it all with meekness, often saying if it was the Lord's will to take her out of her sufferings she was willing and anxious to depart.

She was one of the most industrious women I ever knew. She leaves four children two sons and two daughters, fifteen grandchildren and twelve great-grand-children with numerous friends to mourn for her, but we believe that our loss is her eternal gain.

May the Lord enable us to say, "Thy will be done," and may we all be prepared to meet her in that bright world above where there will be no more suffering nor sorrow.

Dearest mother thou hast left us,

And thy love we deeply feel.

But 'tis God that has bereft us,

He can all our sorrows heal.

Written by her daughter-in-law.

This aged brother was born in September 1825, in Cross Roads township, near Wilson and Wayne county line, N. C. He died August 23, 1908. He joined the Primitive Baptist church in 1877.

He was a faithful member. No charge was ever brought against him. He was prompt to attend his meetings, and faithful as a correspondent, and true to his promises. He was married three times and leaves six children.

A few years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and lingered until he passed away. He is gone from his troubles and labor to rest in the grave where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary be at rest. In the resurrection he shall come forth with the just in the likeness of Jesus to be ever with the Lord. His spirit is now with the Lord Jesus.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

TRULY GOD IS GOOD TO ISRAEL.

Dear Readers of the Landmark—Can you not realize, as the scriptures have declared that God is good to Israel? Is he not good today for giving us such a precious gift as dear Brother Gold, who has stood so long on the walls of Zion and declared glorious gospel of the Son of God with his tongue and with his pen through the Landmark to so many poor sinners—sinners that have been born again and sinners that have been made to realize that God was good to them? Surely this is a wonderful subject to the dear children of God when they begin to think back in the morning of time, yes before the lightest dust of the hills was laid that God did choose, elect and set apart out of Adam's posterity a people that should glorify his dear name here in the kingdom of our God, which kingdom Daniel spoke of. For he says in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom that shall break and consume all the kingdoms and it shall stand forever.

Then the subjects of this kingdom can say indeed and in truth that God is good to Israel. And how good he is and has been to his people and this goodness endureth forever and of his love there is no end.

But no human being can say God is good to them unless they have seen themselves poor lost and ruined sinners and have been made to say, O Lord, have mercy on me a poor sinner, and have pray, wept, mourned and realized if they were saved at all it was mercy and if lost it was just. Then at the Lord's own good time he comes down where this poor mourning soul is as he did to poor old Jacob and takes his feet out of the mire and places them on a rock and puts a new song in his mouth to praise his holy name.

So here he could say in spirit and in truth that God is good to Israel. No doubt if he had ten thousand tongues they would all have been engaged in praising the dear Lord for the wonderful workings of his mighty hand.

For the Lord has done that for his people which they could not do for themselves with all the power of the earth combined. Nothing but the precious blood of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ can save poor fallen man. The cry of the Arminian world today is, give us more money and we will save poor sinners. They have never saved one neither will they ever save any, for the Lord Jesus has saved every one that ever has or ever will sing in that blessed world from which no traveller returns.

The scriptures declare that he stood as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world and so the redeemed family of the Lord shall ere long meet their God in peace, for the time is drawing near when doubts and fears will be removed and when we can lie down in the arms of our dear Savior

Dear brethren, I have no doubt about God's children being saved eternally for they are already saved, but I am afraid some of them are not saved here in the visible kingdom. Are you earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints? If not the command is "come out of her my people that ye be not partakers of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues; if ye be willing and obedient ye shall eat the good of the land.

Then this Canaan land must be figurative of the militant kingdom here in her organized state for the children had to cross the river Jordan to reach the natural Canaan land which flowed with milk and honey. So dear child of God you who would enter this visible kingdom must down in Jordan and be baptized like dear Jesus. This is the door into the kingdom, where the spiritual milk and honey flows and where we can receive the spiritual blessings of our God. For we only receive the spiritual blessing when we are walking in the foot prints of our dear Saviour which he has marked out and left on record in the scriptures, for they teach us our duty to ourselves and our brethren also just how we obtain our blessings here in time. And we would do well to study them more and try more clearly to understand them for they were given to a live people. Then if we, the redeemed of the Lord, would only follow the teachings of the scriptures we would not be talking about each other nor running or mixing with the different orders of the day. They cannot hurt the church of God if every subject of this kingdom would do his duty, but when we fail we do not fully realize that truly God is good to Israel.

I will now close for fear I might weary the dear readers of the Landmark.

Brother Gold, carefully inspect what I have written and if you think it in harmony with the teachings of the scripture and that it will be of any comfort to the dear people of God please publish, if not lay it aside and it will be well with me.

A sinner saved by grace if at all,
S. J. CAUDILL.

Elders Gold and Jones:

Dear Brethren—I have had a mind to write to you all every since you came through here and preached at Strawberry, and it seems that I can't get rid of it.

I hope it is the Lord impressing me to write and I do hope he is directing my pen for I know if he is not in the matter there is nothing that I can say that you all would like to reach. I feel too unworthy to attempt to write to such wonderful preachers, called of God as I think you all are. I so often think of the good meetings we had at Strawberry. I think it is something wonderful to see God's little ones coming home and telling what they hope the Lord has done for them. The ladies that joined the church that day were all baptized the following Sunday morning except one, she will be later.

When they came out of the water they all seemed to be so happy. As one of them came out she was clasping her hands together. I have felt that it was a blessing to the people in old Pittsylvania county for you all to pass through and to speak of the unlimited power of the Lord and I hope the Lord may forever add his blessings upon you all and that your future life may be as bright as the shining stars. Now I will try by the help of the Lord to say something that may be of some encouragement to you sisters who have confessed that you wanted to give up the worldly things and take up your cross and follow Jesus, to say I want to be some help to my country and my fellowman, and especially serve my God for we are wholly dependent upon him for what we get in this life.

Brother God, you can publish this if you think I haven't said anything that will be a pull back to the children of the Lord. If I have said anything that I ought not to have said I would appreciate your kindness if you will overlook my many errors and return this letter to me, for I try to pray to God that I may not be a stumbling block to the church of God.

Yours in hope of a better home,

C. O. BOAZE.

Banister, Va.

Dear Sister Annie—Although I am not feeling at all well tonight, I am very anxious to write you, and when I think of your godly walk, and conversation in Christ Jesus, I can't believe that anything which enters my mind can be any comfort or interest to you. Howsoever, I can only try to pray that the Lord will guide and direct my pen. I enjoyed your short visit to us more than I am able to express; for there was really nourishment in it all the way through. Yes, such as I sought for in the dream I imparted to you. I believe you were sent here by the Lord. While we know the mercies and wonderful dealings of God with us, we need to have our pure minds stirred up in remembrance of such things. I hope some day to talk more about spiritual things. (In the Lord's time I shall.) You, my dear, are so enlightened, so much like a preacher. I think the Lord has given you bountiful grace to endure your sore trial. Had he not been gracious, you could not have borne it as bravely, or not at all. I truly sympathize with you, but not full, because, no one can, but God—unless that person has experienced the same. Sometimes when I am saddest I cannot shed a tear, but my nature is very sympathetic and I often want to help the bereaved, but can only ask the Lord to be with them. At all times I cannot do even that. I never shall forget the sweetness of your voice as you were on the front porch telling of your deep gratitude and Lord had not forgotten to hear your cries, and to be gracious unto you, and how you were so overcome by the realization of his love and mercies. Isn't it a sweet thought that he never forgets to be gracious, not only is he near in the sixth trouble, but also in the seventh he is with us. Yes, omnipotently, omnisciently and omnipresently. If God be for us who can be against us. He is ever watching over us, if we are not always conscious of it, and supplies our needs. The poet says "affliction purifies the soul."

"A life all ease is all abused,

O precious grace that made the wise;

To know affliction rightly used,

Is mercy in disguise."

I certainly do hope you are feeling better ere this. Although you said very little about feeling badly, I knew you did.

I was pleased to hear the gospel on last Saturday and Sunday. Do you know, sometimes I am present in body at our meetings, but not in spirit, to hear and enjoy, as I would wish. I have thought a great deal about the advice given to me in your letter, also, Brother Lawrence's sermon of exhortation, and must say I appreciate such things from those in whom I have such great confidence. But after all, I still refuse to act according to the impressions within. Knowing too there are promises, precious to the obedient and curses pronounced upon the slothful. I suppose I am too weak in faith, but we cannot know these things by sight but by faith, which is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. I find each time in relying upon the flesh that we are nothing and less than nothing. God has power over us as the potter hath power over the clay, to make different the vessels, and so we are helpless to bring about our blessings either natural or spiritual. We are nothing but dust and should not forget from whence we came, and whither we are to return. We in approaching God must possess the true spirit of humility, meekness, Godly fear, and submission, or else we will not be answered; yet we of ourselves cannot acquire such a spirit. How helpless we are! I hope to serve him more each day, but there is such a continual warring between the flesh and spirit that I often feel I shall fall. I pray that I may die the death of the righteous, but when I realize I must live the life of the righteous, to die such a death, it makes me tremble. Whether I am one of the elect or not, I love those whom I firmly believe are, and do love to hear them tell of the dealings of the Lord with them through their pilgrimage. When I can witness with them in their feelings it makes me sing praises to God for leading me in such glorious paths, and that surely the son of righteousness hath arisen with healing in his wings for my soul. Therefore we should look to him who hath delivered, still delivers and will deliver. Well everybody is asleep in the house but me, and I will have to sleep in mama's room by myself tonight. I feel lonely as so many have vacated, but truly I have been lonely all day and the house full. You know, I am more alone sometimes, in a crowd than really when by myself. Listen at truth and wisdom couched in this quotation,

"Wisdom's self oft seeks some sweet, retired solitude.
Where with her best nurse—Contemplation,

She plumes her feathers and lets go her wings.

That in the Saviour's lustle of resort,
Were all too muffled and sometimes impaired."

I will close now; write to me when you feel like so doing. I think you write such beautiful letters, and I am glad to receive such soul cheering ones.

Remember me in your prayers to God.

Devotedly your sister in hope,
SUE MOORE.

Dear Brother in hope, I am here at Beaufort, N. C., and my mind is much exercised on the doctrine of predestination, and while I know that many good brethren will differ with me, I only beg them to bear with me in this matter. Although God may have fore-appointed many things and although he may have preordained, many thing, yet in as much as his elect were destined to eternal punishment, as in the Adam life, this being their condition as God's creatures in Adam, in order that they should become his creatures in Christ God predestinated them to eternal happiness. To make my views plainer, their destination eternal death, and God's predestination their eternal peace in Christ, the syllable pre, being added to destination. In other words God's predestination is just that part of his foreappointing, or of his foreordination as relates to the eternal peace of his elect.

Now dear brother, if this does not meet your approbation just consider me a poor beggar at your feet, and if you should publish this and it does not meet the approbation of my brethren any where I will only ask them to consider me a poor beggar at their feet. And my prayer is that the dear Lord may ever be with us all and keep us from bitterness towards each other although we may differ on some points.

Brother Gold, if you publish this I will ask that the gospel messenger, and Primitive Baptist please copy.

Your unworthy brother,
E. G. ROWE.

CRUMBS FROM THE MASTER'S TABLE.

"Shall come to me."—"To Me." By these words there is further insinuated, though not expressed, a double cause of their coming to him.

1. There is in Christ a fulness of all-sufficiency of that, even of all that which is needful to make us happy.

2. Those who indeed come to him, do therefore come to him that they may receive it at his hand.

For the first of these there is in Christ a fullness of all—Sufficiency of that, even of that which is needful to make us happy. Hence it is said, "For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell." And again, "Of his fullness have we all received, and grace for grace" (Col. i. 19; Jn. i. 16.) It is also said of him that his riches are unsearchable: "The unsearchable riches of Christ" (Ephesians iii. 8.) Hear what he saith of himself, "Riches and honor are with me (yea, durable riches and righteousness. My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver: I lead in the way of righteousness, and in the midst of the paths of judgment: that I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures" (Pr. viii. 19—21.)

This in general. But, more particularly.

1. There is that light in Christ that is sufficient to lead them out of and from all that darkness, in the midst of which all others, but they that come to him, stumble, and fall, and perish;

"I am the light of the world," saith he; "he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (Jn. viii. 12.) Man by nature is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knows not whither he goes, for darkness hath blinded his eyes; neither can anything but Jesus Christ lead men out of this darkness. Natural conscience cannot do it; the ten commandments, though, in the heart of man, cannot do it. This prerogative belongs only to Jesus Christ.

2. There is that life in Christ that is to be found nowhere else, Jn. v. 40. Life, as a principle in the soul, by which it shall be acted and enabled to do that which through him is pleasing to God. "He that believeth in (or cometh to) me," saith he, "as the scripture hath saith, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water" (Jn. vii. 38.) Without this life a man is dead, whether he be bad, or whether he be good; that is, good in his own and other men's esteem. There is no true eternal life, but that which is in the me who speaketh in the text.

There is also life for those that come to him, to be had by faith in his flesh and blood: "he that eateth me, even he shall live by me" (Jn. vi. 57)

And this is a life against that death that comes by guilt of sin and the curse of the law, under which all men are, and for ever must be, unless they eat the me that speaks in the text. "Whoso findeth me," saith he, "findeth life;" deliverance from everlasting death and destruction by which, without me, he shall be devoured, Pr. viii. 35—36. Nothing is more desirable than life to him that hath in himself the sentence of condemnation; and here is only life to be found. This life, to wit, eternal life, is in his son; that is, in him that saith in the text, "All that the Father hath given me shall come to me," Jn. vi. 37.

3. The person speaking in the text is he alone by whom poor sinners have admittance to, and acceptance with the Father, because of the glory of his righteousness, by and in which he presenteth them amiable and spotless in his sight; neither is there any way besides him to come to the Father; "I am the way," say he, "the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me" (Jn. xiv. 6.) All other ways to God are dead and damnable; the destroying cherubin stands with flaming sword, turning every way to keep all others from his presence, Ge. iii. 24. I say all others but them that come by him. "I am the door: by me," saith he, "if any man enter in, he shall be saved" (Jn. x. 9.)

The person speaking in the text is he, and only he, that can give stable and everlasting peace; therefore, saith he, "my peace I give unto you." My peace, which is peace with God, peace of conscience, and that of an everlasting duration. My peace, peace that cannot be matched: "not as the world giveth, give I unto you;" for the world's peace is but carnal and transitory; but mine is divine and eternal. Hence it is called the peace of God that passeth all understanding.

4. The person speaking in the text hath enough of all things truly spiritually good to satisfy the desire of every longing soul; "Jesus stood and cried, saying, if any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." "I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely" (Jn. viii. 37: Rev. xxi. 6.)

5. With the person speaking in the text is power to perfect, and defend, and deliver those that come to him for safeguard. "All power," saith he, "is given unto me in heaven and in earth" (Mat. xxviii. 18.)

Thus might I multiply instances of this nature in abundance. But.

Secondly. They who in truth do come to him, do therefore come to him that they may receive it at his hand. They come for light, they come for life, they come for reconciliation with God; they also come for peace; they come that their souls may be satisfied with spiritual good, and that they may be protected by him against all spiritual and eternal damnation; and he alone is able to give them all this, to the filling of their joy to the full; as they also find when they come to him. This is evident.

1. From the plain declaration of those that already are come to him. "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom we also have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God" (Ro. v, 1, 2.)

2. It is evident also, in that while they keep their eyes upon him, they never desire to change him for another, or to add to themselves anything else together with him, to make up their spiritual joy. "God forbid," said Paul, "that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." "Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the love of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and be found in him, not having my own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith" (Ph. iii. 7--9.)

3. It is evident also by their earnest desires that others might be made partakers of their blessedness. "Brethren," said Paul, "my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved," that is, in the way that he expected to be saved himself. As he saith also to the Galatians, "Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am, for I am as ye are;" that is, "I am a sinner as ye are. Now I beseech you, seek for life as I am seeking it;" as who should say, "For there is a sufficiency in the Lord Jesus both for me and you."

4. It is evident also by the triumph that such men make over all their enemies, both bodily and ghostly: "Now thanks be unto God," said Paul, "which always causeth us to triumph in Christ." And, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ" our Lord? And again, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Co. ii. 14; Ro. viii. 35; 1 Co. xv. 55, 56.)

5. It is evident also for that they are made, by the glory of that which they have found in him, to suffer and endure what the devil and hell itself hath or could invent as a means to separate them from him. Again, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor heights, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Ro. viii.)

"Shall come to me." O the heart-attracting glory that is in Jesus Christ, when he is discovered, to draw those to him who are given to him of the Father; therefore those that came off old rendered this as the cause of their coming to him: "And we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father" (Jn. i. 14.) And the reason why others come not, but perish in their sins, is for want of a sight of his glory. "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them" (2 Co. iv. 3, 4.)

There is therefore heart-pulsing glory in Jesus Christ, which, when discovered, draws the man to him; wherefore by "shall come to me" Christ may mean, when his glory is discovered, then they must come, they shall come to me. Therefore, as the true come, with weeping and repenting, as being sensible of their own vileness, so again it is said, "The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with singing and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and glory of that grace that shows itself to them now in the face of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the hopes that they now have of being with him in the gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away;" that is, at the sight of the heavenly tabernacles. Therefore it saith they shall enter into the king's palace" (Is. xxxv. 10; li. 11; Ps. xlv. 15.) There is therefore heart-attracting glory in the Lord Jesus Christ, which, when discovered, subjects the heart to the word, and makes us come to him.—Selected.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother in Bonds—At the request of many brethren and sisters I will give you an account of my travels in North Carolina and Virginia.

I first went to Concord to the home of Mr. Burres, who is a great friend of the Primitive Baptist and whose wife is a Primitive Baptist and addressed on the night of June 11, an attentive congregation among whom was Brother T. B. Parris and wife. Next day, June 12, I went to Salisbury and found Brother Strange at whose house I took a good rest and in the evening preached at the church. There I met the beloved Elder W. T. Broadway. On Saturday and Sunday, 13 and 14, I preached at Pine church spending Saturday night with Brother Andrew Williams and Sunday night with a Mr. Broadway whose wife is a Primitive Baptist. Early Monday morning I left for High Point where I took break fast at the home of Brother Crouch. At 10 o'clock I accompanied Brother Goodman to the store of a brother Idol, which is located near the church, where I tried to preach at 11 o'clock also at night. At the store I met Elder C. A. Davis but I am sorry I have forgotten the brother's name with whom I spent the night.

On Tuesday June 16, I was taken by Brother Garason to Abbotts Creek where I met Elder P. W. Williard. This is a lovely church. The night I spent with Brother Garason and the next day was accompanied by him to a prospective church called Mount Vernon and after preaching on to Warton, where I took the electric car for Winston-Salem, where I found Brother William Teague with whom I spent the night and the following day. I took supper with Sister Burton and that night, June 18, I preached at the church.

June 19, a brother Thomas conveyed me to Saints Delight where I preached after which I was conveyed by Brother Vance to the home of Brother James I. Crews, where I met Elder J. W. Crews. The next day Brother Crews took me to Pine Bridge church, where I preached Saturday and Sunday, spending the Saturday night at the home of Sister Deal and Sunday night with Brother J. O. Fulp. Monday, June 23, Brother Fulp took me to Walnut Cove, and I took the train for Martinsville, Va., where I met Elder A. J. Moore. There I preached at the church, dined at Brother Wind and preached again at night.

I can never express my gratitude to Brother and Sister Winn and others for their kindness to me. Also Brother Moore's kindness was such as to cause me to feel that he was a father. God bless him. Then last but not least came a present from Sister M. J. Davis. Such acts of kindness, so far from home bestowed on one so poor, melted my hard heart and caused tears of joy, that perhaps after all my doubting and great fear, the Lord still stands by me. Precious thought.

On June 23, at 1:30 o'clock I boarded the train at Martinsville for Danville, Va., and was met by Brother Jamison who put me up at the Morgan Hotel a comfortable place to rest. After supper I accompanied Brother Allen Hines to the church where I preached to a large congregation. Returned to the hotel and spent the night leaving for Greensboro, N. C., the next day, Wednesday, June 24. Greensboro is the home of the beloved Elders C. F. and O. J. Denny. I preached at the church at night and rested at the pleasant home of C. F. Denny.

Thursday I boarded the train for Burlington where I was met by W. C. Jones and conveyed to his home, preached at night at the church and met Elder W. B. Williams. Left Friday for Durham and the home of Brother G. C. Farthing. This beloved brother did all that was necessary for my comfort. God bless him and his family. Spent a while with Brother Saterfield, preached at night and left for Raleigh Saturday where I met Brother R. E. Adams and wife. I was conducted to the home of Brother G. T. Powell and preached at the church that night, Saturday and Sunday night. Monday, June 29 I went to Clayton and was met by Brethren Ballance and Hinton, preached at the church in the morning and at the home of Brother Ballance at night. At the latter place I met poor afflicted Sister Hinton, whose mind is so fruitful in the scriptures that it caused me to wonder if I was not out of it altogether. Oh that it could be the Lord's will to restore Sister Hinton to health, but the greatest blessing is her reconciliation.

I should not neglect to state that at this place I met and greatly enjoyed the company of Sister Stallings. On June 30, I went from Clayton to Wilson. This is the home of the venerable P. D. Gold. I can never express my gratitude to the great God for bringing me to the shelter of such homes. God bless this dear brother and his family. Preached at the Wilson church that night and the next day, July 1, when I met the venerable William Woodard and Elder Farmer.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother in the Lord—I feel to ask you to publish the location of our meeting house in Baltimore. Some of our people from the South recently visiting our city have been bothered to find it. If you will kindly give this a place in the Landmark, and those who think to visit Baltimore at any time will preserve it the trouble of finding us will be avoided. The meeting house is on East Madison street near Calvert street. Those going on the cars get off at Madison and Calvert streets within one half square of the meeting house, which is open every Sunday a. m. at 11 o'clock. The first and third Sundays the brethren have prayer meetings, and on the second and fourth Sundays I am there and speak as the Lord enables me. And we are always glad to see any of our people that have the opportunity and the mind to come and worship with us, as we feel that the Primitive Baptists everywhere are our people. And while I am writing I feel to tell you some of my experience in gathering a church in the city of Norfolk, Va., this year. First of all I will say that for two or three years I have felt impressed at times to go to Norfolk, and get the few Primitive Baptist that I knew were there together, but put it off wondering whether or not the Lord was in it. Early this spring the same feeling came into my mind again, but I had said nothing to any one about it until a young sister Hitch, who is a member of our church here in Baltimore, but lives in Norfolk, came up and asked me to go down and preach for them. I then told her my feelings and she insisted saying that her brother would secure a place for the meeting. I agreed to go on the fifth Sunday in March, which I was blessed to do, and found quite an interest and more Baptists than I knew were there. They seemed so cheered and comforted that at their request I agreed to visit them again the next fifth Sunday, which I did, and at this meeting one dear brother was received and I baptized him Sunday p. m., amidst much rejoicing.

There was a proposition at this meeting to constitute a church which was agreed to and the fifth Sunday in August was chosen as the time. The Lord blessed us to meet at the time and place appointed. He also blessed us with a good day and we feel with his glorious presence. The presbytery was composed of Elders Charles Meads, of Weeksville, N. C., and Joshua T. Rowe, of Baltimore and Deacons John T. Walker, of Washington, D. C., and C. C. Aydlett, of Elizabeth City, N. C. Deacon Walker was chosen clerk, who at the request of the church will send you for publication an account of the proceedings of the presbytery, and also of the church on that day.

May the Lord bless the little vine in our prayer for Jesus sake.

Yours in gospel bonds I trust.

JOSHUA T. ROWE.

THINGS WHICH ARE MOST SURELY BELIEVED AMONG US.

Inspiration of the scriptures.—2 Ti. iii. 16.

If we could count eternity, we could reckon the worth of our immortality. If we could realize the holiness of God, we could grasp the infinite distance to which sin has cast us from him. If with clear vision we could gaze on divine justice, in the light of that glorious attribute we could see the eternal felicity of God's presence in love, we could judge of the torment of his anger, the woe, the darkness, the death, the hell of it. But in our fallen state we are ignorant, darkness, children of the night, Ep. v. 8. and "if a man walk in the night he stumbleth, because there is no light in him," Jn. xi. 10. If, then, no light can be had which shall show us our present evil state and the way from it, reveal the wrath to come and a door of hope, a way of escape from it, we must die in our sins, "having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance" that is in us, because of the blindness of our hearts (Ep. iv. 18.)

In infinite love the Lord has given to mankind the holy scriptures. They alone teach man how "sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Ro. v. 12.) They are a lamp to the feet, a light to the path of ever child of God, Ps. cxix. 105; Pr. vi. 23. From sin to holiness, from Sinai to Zion, from sinful self to glorious Christ, from time to eternity, from mortality to "glory and honor and immortality," the word of God shows the way. No other book can claim to do this. And if men are to rely on the bible for all this, that book must be infallible. The oneness, the completeness, and the eternity of the truth which it declares and holds forth, are involved in its plenary inspiration. Take away the plentitude of inspiration, and the reliability of the word of God is taken away. We are mocked by the critic who comes to us and says, "The bible contains the word of God, but many statements in it are not inspired, are not indeed correct in history, true to facts in geology, nor are all the doctrines you think it teaches to be any longer received. And I, by my critical knowledge am able to distinguish between the inspired parts and those which are merely human, follow me." But we unhesitatingly say to him, "We will not follow you. You have no right to ask our confidence in a book which you tell us is not all true. The interests involved—our souls' salvation—demand a book which is absolutely true, infallible."

We say then, boldly that the plenary inspiration of the scriptures is a doctrine most surely believed among us. Moreover, so long as a church is scripturally entitled to its sacred character, so long will the bible be held by her as coming immediately from God, and therefore as inerrant. That it should be so held is absolutely necessary. It is necessary that sinful men should be unerringly told whom and how to worship. Without the unerring light of the word how can we know? Jn. iv. 22; Acts xvii. 23. Inner consciousness, the researches of a depraved intellect can never rise to the true knowledge and spiritual worship of the true and living God, 1 Co. ii. 14; Job. xi. 7—12. In infinite compassion the Lord God has given to men, whose blindness is the fruit of their own sin, the true light of his word. Moses told Pharaoh that he did not know with what Israel would be required to serve the Lord, till they came into the wilderness, Ex. x. 26. Nor can men now, more than then, discover by their own wisdom how to worship and serve the Lord. There must, then, be a revelation of God, his will, and his way; and that revelation must be perfect, exact, infallible.

Moreover, not only is an infallible guide in respect of worship needed to save men from worshipping they know what, Jn. iv. 22, but their minds, empty of the knowledge of the true God, and ever gadding about, need doctrine fixed, subject to no change, that shall never pass away. Such doctrine we say the word of God teaches, both in law and gospel. "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled." "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of the grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: But the word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you" (Mat. v. 16, 17; 1 Pe. i. 24, 25.) The eternal law of righteousness, the fall of Adam, the miraculous birth of the son of God, his vicarious atonement by sacrifice, his burial, his resurrection, are all distinctly taught in the sacred pages of holy scripture, Ro. v. 6—19; Lu. xvi. 17; Mat. i. 18; 1 Co. xv. 4. But who can receive one of the above points of doctrine if plenary inspiration is denied? Who, too, can draw comfort from the sweet doctrine of election, the gift of the Holy Ghost, imputed righteousness, the final perseverance of the saints, if the book which teaches is not the God-breathed book it claims to be? if holy men of God were not moved by the Holy Ghost to write it?

This short paper is but a plain attempt to consider the doctrine of inspiration from a practical point of view, an attempt to set forth the need of a revelation of God, an inspired word on which faith wrought by the spirit can confidently rest.

We think the following extract from the Westminster Confession of Faith* very beautiful, and to the point we have in view in our paper:

OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURE.

- "Although the light of nature, and the works of creation and providence, do so far manifest the goodness, wisdom, and power of God as to leave men inexcusable; yet they are not sufficient to give that knowledge of God, and of his will, which is necessary unto salvation; therefore it pleased the Lord at sundry times, and in divers manners, to reveal himself, and to declare that his will unto the church; and afterwards, for the better preserving and propagating of the truth, and for the more sure establishment and comfort of the church against the corruption of the flesh, and the malice of Satan and of the world, to commit the same wholly unto writing; which maketh the holy scripture to be most necessary, those former ways of God's revealing himself unto his people being now ceased. The authority of the holy scripture, for which it ought to be believed and obeyed, dependeth not upon the testimony of any man or church, but wholly upon God, who is truth itself, the author thereof; and therefore it is to be received because it is the word of God. . . . Yet notwithstanding, our full persuasion and assurance of the infallible truth and divine authority thereof, is from the inward work of the holy spirit bearing witness by and with the word in our hearts. The whole counsel of God concerning all things necessary for his own glory, man's salvation, faith, and life, is expressly set down in scripture, or by good and necessary consequence may be deduced from scripture; unto which nothing at any time is to be added, whether by new revelation of the spirit, or traditions of men. Nevertheless we acknowledge the inward illumination of the spirit of God to be necessary for the saving understanding of such things as are revealed in the word."

To this clear and strong confession of belief in the divine inspiration of the scripture, we as a body firmly adhere. In our own article of faith on the subject we say, "We believe in the divine inspiration of the holy scriptures and receive them as a gracious revelation of the mind and will of God." It is our fervent desire that we may more and more see the divine beauty and glory of the scriptures, and feel their power by the inward work of the Holy Ghost, who inspired them; that we may be sanctified by them according to Christ's prayer, Jn. xvii. 17; fight against sin and Satan and world by the "sword of the spirit, which is the word of God," Ep. vi. 17; and be "nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine." The enemies of the word of God are alert, strong, and many sin in the saints is allied with them; Satan is ever seeking whom he may devour. We therefore are not to sleep, but to war a good warfare. And only as we held fast the faithful word in the light, life, and power of the spirit shall we be able to "withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to Stand."—Selected.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—I wish to inform the brethren through the Landmark the will of late Sister Basham has been fully carried out by her nephew, E. L. Wright, who was made administrator of her estate. As formerly reported $1,800 was donated to build and complete a meeting house for the Primitive Baptists on two acres of land with right of way to a spring for the benefit of the members.

The property adjoins the graveyard and has two entrances by two iron gates. A more complete church building does not exist within the bounds of the Pig River Association.

The writer and Elder Z. T. Turner met a large and orderly congregation there together with the brethren and sisters from other churches that had been dismissed by letter on the third Sunday in July, 1908. Elder Z. T. Turner was chosen moderator and C. M. Turner, clerk. After reading the rules of decorum and examining the church government they were constituted into a body to do business for themselves.

The church is composed of eight members, C. M. Turner, Joseph Johnson, Daniel Bassham, D. McCall and others. After being set in order they went into conference and chose Elder J. C. Hurst as pastor to go in and out before them and feed them with knowledge and understanding.

D. McCall, clerk, Johnson and Bassham, had already been set apart as deacons by former churches, before their dismissal. May the Lord bless his church and the labors of their undershepherd that they have chosen to go in and out before them is the prayer of your servant.

On Sunday we were blessed to have Elders J. C. and S. N. Hurst with us, after hearing two discourses by Elder Turner and J. C. Hurst we took a short recess at which time a welcome and delicious dinner was served brought out by the brethren and friends for the occasion after which we returned to the house, when Elder S. N. Hurst preached an interesting discourse followed by the writer. On dismissing and taking the parting hand Brother Simmons was received by experience. They agreed to have their meeting on the second Sunday of each month. This church is located about 10 miles north east of Roanoke City on Bedford and Roanoke Pike. We hope our brethren and friends will be faithful in attending this church and add to them such as would be saved.

A. B. PHILPOTT.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—According to previous arrangement, the following brethren met at Bethel church in Franklin County, Va., on Saturday before the second Sunday in July, 1908. To wit: Elders Peter Conn, Z. T. Turner E. S. Blankenship, composing a presbytery to examine and set a part Brother J. C. Martin to the full gospel ministry if found qualified. After examination they being satisfied that God had required something at his hands and finding him sound in the faith, set him apart to the full gospel ordinance.

He is a son of the late Elder J. R. Martin and like his father, is no slug-gard but shows great intellect in his manner of preaching and is what we consider about sixty years of age and Jonah like took his wife and went to the far-west, his troubles followed him. Also lost his wife and then wandered back to his old striving ground and about five years ago married again to sister Mathor, a member of the church. About one year ago he commenced publishing the name of the Lord.

Brethren we have had some refreshing showers around in this part of the vineyard of the Lord, recently, I was blessed to lead seven into Smith River last Saturday, three sisters and four brothers and bury them by baptism unto death like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the father. They also should walk in newness of life. Also the church at Goblin town have received eleven by experience, letter and restoration, under the care of Elders Philpott and Cockrane. Several additions to other churches in our bounds.

Sorry Brother Gold you could not get off to visit us and attend the Smith River Association. Love and kindest regards to all.

Your brother in tribulation,

A. B. PHILPOTT.

Dear Brother Gold—Enclosed you will find a letter received from a dear brother in May, Brown county, Texas and trusting he will raise no objection to my sending it to you for publication in the dear old Landmark as it is too good for me to keep alone. There is too much light of the spirit in it to cover it with a bushel or to sit under a bed, but rather feeling a duty resting upon me by placing it upon a candlestick so others may see the light thereof, as it is written, let your light so shine that all who cometh in may see the light, and as I feel this a light of the spirit I desire to keep it not alone. Please publish it at your earliest convenience.

Yours in the bonds of eternal love,

A. W. THOMPSON.

Archer, N. C.

Dear Brother Thompson— I received your comforting letter of the 5th on the 17th and while it is a great comfort to me to receive the many letters of love and fellowship from Baptists living in different parts of the country many of whom I have never seen yet when I look at myself it makes me feel sad and fearful that they have been deceived in me for when I examine myself I am made to say as Paul did "For I know that in me that is within my flesh there dwelleth no good thing," but it seems that that the will is present with me, but how to perform that which is good I find not, then I can only say, "O wretched man that I am who shall deliver me from the body of this death." Oh, that I knew how to deliver myself from this horrible state then would I gladly do it, but I can not. So all that I can do is to wait 'till my deliverer comes. "Oh, that I had the wings of a dove then would I fly away and be at rest" It is written that "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." But how can a man be quiet while he is surrounded with troubles on every hand? Surely nothing short of the grace of God could make a man quiet while in this condition. A man might appear quiet outwardly, but inwardly there would be no quietude. But there are many precious promises and assurances in the bible to the poor way worn and tempest tossed child of God if they could only apply them to themselves. Some of them are these, David says, "The wicked are not troubled like other people." He certainly did not mean that the wicked has no troubles but that their troubles are of a different kind and not like the troubles of other people. The children of God are troubled about themselves because they can not live free from sin as they desire to do while the wicked have their troubles about other things. This is the difference in the troubles of the two characters, one is troubled about carnal things. Isaiah says, "Say unto them that are of a fearful heart be strong; fear not behold your God will come with vengeance even God with a recompense. He will come and save you." Jesus said to his disciples just a little while before he left them here in the world, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer I have overcome the world." Here we see that tribulations is a part of the inheritance of the child of God while here in the world and Paul says, "And not only so but we joy in tribulation also knowing that tribulation worketh patience and patience experience hope and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Oh, that could always feel to be patient in these tribulations and let patience have her perfect work, then it seems that I could be satisfied. Jesus said to his disciples in what is commonly called the sermon on the mount, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled."

These people are a blessed people, not will be blessed provided that they will mourn, hunger and thirst after righteousness, but the blessing which they have already received is what produces the mourning the hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and if this sorrowing be of a godly sort then it is said "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of but the sorrow of the world worketh death." Here again comes in the perplexing question from whence cometh this sorrowing, this mourning, this hungering and thirsting. If it is of a godly sort, then salvation is sure to follow, but if it be of the world then we need not look for anything to follow it but death and this question is so hard to determine it causes us to spend a great deal of our time in fear and trembling lest we have been deceived in the whole matter because it is written, "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked who can know it." This being the case then it follows that our own hearts are more liable to deceive us than anything else. But I am persuaded that if we follow the deceitfulness of our own hearts that it would lead us to put our trust in man and not in God. This is what I believe to be the great cause of so much conditionalism being taught in our country now, when men are following the promptings of their deceitful hearts, which is always contrary to their own experience. Of course I mean them that have an experience which I believe many of them have, and are doing violence to it, while there are others who seem to have but little regard for any thing except the money they get for their work. Thus they go claiming to have a great desire and impression to at least help to save the lost from eternal ruin. But in my judgment the wicked heart in man has never imposed a greater deceit upon him than to cause him to think that he could have any part or lot in the matter of the eternal salvation, either of himself or any one else, for in setting up such a claim they are bound to deny that Jesus came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost which he said that he did or else they have to deny that he did what he came to do after he has said, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." And the last words he said while hanging on the cruel cross was "it is finished." It was the deceitfulness of the wicked hearts of that people there which caused them to put Jesus to death and it is the very same deceitfulness at work in the hearts of the people now that causes them to deny that he finished the work that he came to do or to deny that he came to seek and to save that which was lost but only came to make a way passable and possible whereby they might be saved or in other words to make way for them to save themselves of for the preacher to save them either one denies what he said and therefore gives him the lie. This is a shame to a people claiming to be enlightened. Please excuse my imperfections and remember me in your petitions. Write again.

Yours in hope and love,

J. W. MARTIN.

The next session of the Black Creek Union is to be held with the church at Lower Black Creek Saturday and fifth Sunday in October.

JACOB—ISRAEL.

Characters are embodied in names in the bible, and the sayings and doings of men are the bringing out or unfolding of these characters. A notable instance of this is displayed in Jacob and Israel. Jacob received his name the day of his birth. He and Esau were twins, Esau being the elder. As Esau was born Jacob caught hold of his heel as one supplanting him, and having power even at his birth he prevailed. But he is called Jacob which means a supplanter. The letter appears against him, but Jacob prevails. Esau said is he not rightly called Jacob? He hath supplanted me two time. Jacob seemed to know how to supplant Esau, he took hold of his heel, while in the letter there was apparently a breaking over and prevailing in a manner that the ordinary dictates of man would not approve, yet there was a prevailing in a power that acts beyond and above the ordinary code of man's notions of right and wrong. In the spirit of power he leaps over and grasps the victory. In the name of another Jacob prevails. He gets nothing in his own name.

When he must meet his brother he greatly fears, and the spirit and power of prayer comes upon him as one said let me go. But Jacob the distressed man said, I cannot let thee go unless thou bless me. What is thy name?

His answer was my name is Jacob—a supplanter, a sinner. No more shall thy name be called Jacob, Israel shall be thy name, for as a prince thou hast power with God and men and hast prevailed.

Jacob is the vessel of mercy, or the one the Lord loved before he had done good, and Jacob is saved. But there must be revealed in him another character that has power with God and men as a prince, and that character is named Israel. For the new man answering to Israel receives the kingly power.

By considering Israel in his life after a new name is given him we notice that he possesses the same traits he did before the new name is given him. In difficulties and straits he acts as one wanting in the essential power of victory. The supplanter is apparent. In trouble guilty fear arises. He is hasty to conclude all is against him. He is not so much a character of faith as one walking by sight, and ready to conclude all is against him. It is not so much faith, hope and charity as it is few and evil army days. It was Jacob who said, no doubt an evil beast has slain Joseph, Simeon is not, and now you you will take Benjamin. All these things are against me, and my gray hairs shall go down to the grave in sorrow. He thought he was telling the truth. But it is not the judgment of that which is born of God, but of Jacob the supplanter who controlled by that spirit cannot attain unto the understanding and power of one born of God.

Jacob said Benjamin shall not go to Egypt. But what has that to do with God's purpose. When the time arrives for Benjamin to go to Joseph Jacob ceases talk and Israel who seldom speaks, yet when he does speak it is after God's will said, take Benjamin and God almighty go with you, and give you favor before the man. How true that should be. The man was Benjamin's own brother, and Israel's own son. Why cannot Jacob talk less and Israel more? The Lord sent a word into Jacob (not Esau) and it lighted upon Israel. How the new man loves the word of God.

When the report comes that Joseph is governor over all the land of Egypt Jacob's heart unable to believe it. The fleshly principles cannot come into the secret of the Lord, nor dwell in the resurrection power and glory of what God does. Jacob's faints. But Israel is enabled as that gracious birth of God to believe the good things of God, and he says, "It is enough, my son Joseph is alive and I will go and see him before I die. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, but that which is born of the spirit believes God. The Lord loves Jacob. He knows our frame. He remembers that we are dust. His compassions fail not, therefore the sons of Jacob are not consumed. P. D. G.

NEW COVENANT.

Hebrews 8:10-13. The covenant that God made with Israel at first was a covenant written on tables of stone. When God took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt. They did not continue in that covenant, and God did not regard them.

In an ordinary contract there are two parties agreeing to do certain things. One failing to do his part of the contract or contracts defeats the object of the covenant. God did not talk to Israel as one man talks to another in making this covenant. He commanded them to do certain things, but they failing to do these things God did not regard them. This was the covenant or the covenant of works which nothing perfect. God came near to them, and it was a great condescension to take them by the hand and lead them out of Egypt where they had felt such bitter bondage.

But in the new covenant the case is very different, for in this new covenant which God made with Israel (for observer Israel did not make a covenant with God,) he put his laws into their minds and wrote them in their hearts. Surely he put them in the place, that grace provided. This made them love what God had done. For what is put into the heart is dear to the possessor. Then this law dwells in the heart and goes always with the subject of that law. It is with them in their down sitting and uprising, their out going and their incoming. When they are awake it talks to them. When they are asleep it abides with them. Surely the law dwelling within the heart is the safest and best place. God puts these laws into the minds of his people, and God writes them in their hearts. Here is a new creation, a new man, new wine put in a new bottle, and both are preserved.

God is their God and they are his people by this new covenant. Nor will he ever cast them off. In this new covenant made, ratified, fulfilled, performed, completed and established by the Lord Jesus the well beloved son of God, who came in the flesh to do the will of God in earth, and suffer its righteous and dreadful penalty for his people who had transgressed every precept of the first testament, the law is forever established and settled in the court of justice, and mercy and truth are met, and righteousness and peace have kissed, so that the sins and iniquities of his people he will remember no more forever. He will be merciful to their unrighteousness.

They shall not teach each other these glorious things. They shall not teach every man his neighbor. But God teaches every one of them. They shall be all taught of God and great shall be their peace.

This is the blessed estate of Israel in the gospel or new covenant where-in God hath made the first testament old. Man could not do this. He could not remove the curse or burden of the law, nor escape from it. But God takes away the first testament that he may establish the second covenant. So God makes peace and Jesus becomes the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him.

What or where is there any condition in this new covenant? There is not a condition in the gospel. All the promises of God in Christ Jesus are yea and amen to the glory of God. Ye are complete holding the head, and of his fullness receiving and grace for grace, for the law came by Moses, but grace and truth by Jesus Christ. We have the witness of these things in us when sin slays us by the law which is good. Then we love good holy law of God, thought it is spiritual and we are cornered and sold under sin. But in our head we are complete who is made of God unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

P. D. G.

Blanche, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Sir—Will you give your view through the Landmark on predestination of sin? Was it predestinated too before the world was spoken into existence? Who is the author of sin? Where does it originate? The bible states that God made everything. Did he make sin? If not where did it come from?

G. S. JOHNSON.

Remarks—Mankind have always in their wild state been inclined to break over legal bounds, tempt God, and meddle where there is danger. This is traced back to the serpent who sinned from the beginning. Presumption is the nature of pride.

We are told in the scriptures that secret things belong to God, and revealed things belong to us and our children. One of the things revealed is that by man came sin. By the disobedience of one many were made sinners—one man Adam.

God made man upright, and if everything he made was good then where is the evidence that God made sin or is its author? If God's word condemns sin from the first of the bible to the end of it, then where is the warrant for us to conclude that he is the author of it, or authorizes us to commit sin? If in the examples of the bible we see sin punished by the hand of God then why should we seek to charge him with injustice? God tempts no man: then do you believe his word that says, God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man with evil. Why not rather say that man is tempted with evil when he is drawn away of his own lusts, and that it is man that sins, and that he has no excuse for it.

Why not take the blame on ourselves when we sin, and have the honesty to own this when the experience of all the saints is that man has sinned and has destroyed himself.

The bible does not say anywhere that God predestinated sin. Then why should we hold that he does? The foul charge dwells in the darkened soul of man, and proclaims him under the power of darkness, and guilty of great folly. When the light shows us we feel that God's ways are clean and we are vile. Then we abhor ourselves in dust and ashes.

Predestination relates to and concerns the holy purpose of God in determining that those he foreknows should be conformed to the image of Jesus. He predestinated that they should be holy and without blame before God in love.

But was not Jesus of Nazareth delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God into the hands of men who put him to death? Yes. But did they crucify him with holy and righteous hands, or did they do this with wicked hands? They did it with wicked hands, see Acts 2:23. Then if they did this with wicked hands they were not moved to do this by the spirit or purpose of God. When men sin they follow and work out the wicked principles of their own nature and hearts. Men are free to do evil, or they act according to what is in their own nature, or they are following their own will which is free to do evil. The spirit that works in wicked men is of Satan the prince of the power of the air that works in the children of disobedience. It is working out or manifesting the evil of their own nature, which they do not by divine compulsion of God, but by that which is in their fallen natures. They mean it for evil, nor can they ascribe it to God, nor excuse themselves even when God means good, or works, or causes good to come out of it. God sent Joseph down to Egypt for a good purpose, and great good was wrought thereby; but his brethren sold him into Egyptian bondage through an evil intent, or meant it for evil. Nor did they, nor could they ever excuse themselves for their wicked act because God meant it for good.

How ready blind man is to charge God foolishly. It is only when man is lumbled and abased in the dust that he takes shame unto himself, and ascribes holiness unto God whose ways are high above ours as the heavens are above the earth.

Everything that God made was good—in the six days of creation. Then did he make sin then? No, for sin is not good. Sin was not created. Sin is the transgression of the law—an act.

What is meant in Isaiah 45:7. "I form the light and create darkness. I make peace and create evil. I the Lord do all these things." Evil is here used in the same sense that Job employed it when he said shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil? Job did not mean sin but chastening, correction or that which was the opposite of what he had been receiving which was prosperity. Darkness is the opposite of light. The withdrawal of light results in darkness, the opposite state.

Sin came from the opposite of God—the devil; not that the devil is a creating power independent of God, but is the opposition of God of goodness. He is the negative condition of enmity against good. For God is good. The devil sins from the beginning. Let us eschew the things not revealed, and wisely give heed to what is taught in the word of God, and eschew evil.

Once I had a pen of hogs fattening. One of them when they were fed would seize a bone if there was one in the bucket of slops, and run off and gnaw that while the other hogs would eat the food that fattened them. This hog always remained a runt and never fattened. The lean kine remain lean. Those that love and believe the word of God separate the precious from the vile, and feed on the sincere milk of the word and grow thereby. While those fond of contention, strife and envy, and seek to be wise above what is written wrest or pervert the scriptures to their own destruction.

TRIP.

I have visited four association besides filling other appointments in the month of August. The associations were well attended by people of excellent behavior who evinced a desire to hear preaching. There were many preachers present at the meetings, and the preaching was good. The Lower Country Line Association met the first Sunday in August. This is a new association or recently formed. The Staunton River met at Franklin Junction where a great assemblage was gathered. The third met at Reidsville, where the behavior was the best I have ever seen in that association. This association was never before held in the town of Reidsville. It was handsomely entertained.

The fourth one was held in the city of Roanoke, Va., and is the first time our people have ever had an association in Roanoke. The behavior I suppose was never better. Old and young sought to hear preaching. It was a new thing to the citizens of that city. There is a church of more than one hundred members at that place with two preachers there, natural brothers J. C. and S. N. Hurst, and are very acceptable to their people. They have preaching every Sunday and a large congregation of people. How nice to go to preaching every Sunday and take your children with you.

Elder Isaac Jones was with me part of the time. Eight persons were received into churches on the tour at our week day appointments. I have annually for about thirty-five years visited the Staunton River Association without missing a single session.

Scarcely a member or friend is living who was present at the first session I attended. Elders John R. Martin, Wm McDowell, John C. Hall and James S. Dameron were present, but none of them are here now on earth.

P. D. G.

Mr. Gold—I want to ask you what you think of me a most miserable sinner. Oh, I feel to be one of the very worst. I have been in trouble so long and do not know what to do. Oh if I could be a christian. I have tried every way that Arminian preachers say and I get worse.

I have heard Mr. J. F. Spangler preach several times, and I just wanted to ask him to pray for me so bad.

Sometimes I think it may be the Lord will remember me if Mr. Spangler will pray for me. I hope he will. Mr. Gold please pray for me.

If not asking too much please publish this as soon as possible, as I am so feeble and full of trouble.

A SINNER.

Remarks—What do I think of the writer above? I think the sentiments expressed show this one to be truly concerned about the wonderful matter of salvation. I would that many more were thus grieved, for if they were I feel there would be hope for their salvation. For blessed are they that mourn on account of sin. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled. Those that truly desire to be christians shall obtain the desire of their heart.

The woman that spent all her living on physicians and got no better, but rather worse was blessed with that faith which said or talked within hir. If I may but touch his garment I shall be made whole of this disease, and she was moved by faith to seek the Lord Jesus, and at once was made whole of whatever disease she had. Jesus said to her, daughter thy faith hath saved thee, go in peace. We must cease from man. This thing of spending all our hope on man is a failure. We must go beyond even the watchman.

Preachers tell us to do this and that, but there is but one that can save the soul and that is Jesus Christ the righteous. Men are physicians of no value. But Jesus Christ came into the world to seek and save that which was lost. That is his blessed business, and oh how wonderfully he does this. When the soul fails to find help everywhere else and dies to every dependence on vain man, then it is brought to know that vain is the help of man. That soul then finds there is no help in man, and they that observe living vanities do it to their own hurt. When Jesus is revealed in and to them the hope of glory then such know that salvation is of the Lord, and put their trust in him.

Arminian preachers offer to pray for souls and say give me your hand and confess the Lord. But where one feels he is vile and blind, poor and helpless, he is not so forward to volunteer to help others, for he feels he needs help himself. Nor does one that has found that no man can help so wretched, guilty and vile a sinner as he is feel so anxious and ready to entrust his case in the hands of poor puny man: but he desires that the Lord would undertake for him.

Yet, God's people and his preachers do have a desire that Israel may be saved, and do desire that poor sinners may call on the name of the Lord, and pray for the salvation of the Lord's poor.

It is a source of comfort to me to find one or many that abhor themselves and feel they are helpless and lost. For to me this is a sign that the Lord is calling them to himself, and that he will surely perform that blessed work which he has begun.

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCH CONSTITUTED AT NORFOLK, VA.

(Minutes of Proceedings.)

By request of several Primitive Baptists living in Norfolk, Va., and vicinity that they be formed into a regularly constituted Primitive Baptist church, a meeting was called for that purpose at 10 a. m., August 30, 1908, in Hall corner of Camp Avenue and Poole street, Norfolk, Va.

The services of the day were opened by the singing of hymn No. 547—(Lloyd's selection,) after which Elder Joshua T. Rowe, of Baltimore, Md., preached from the 133rd Psalm, presenting some of the benefits and pleasures of the union of the Lord's people. After preaching a presbytery was formed composed of Elder Joshua T. Rowe, of Baltimore, Md., Elder Chas. Meads, of Weeksville, N. C., Deacon C. C. Aydlett, of Elizabeth City, N. C., and Deacon John T. Walker, of Washington, D. C. Elder Meads was appointed as moderator and Brother John T. Walker, clerk.

The letters of dismissal from home churches of those wishing to form the new church were called for and 13 received.

After the above letters had been read and passed upon by the presbytery a request by the above brethren that the name of Brother Warren E. Brickhouse be added to their number, Brother Brickhouse having been baptized a few months previously by Elder J. T. Rowe; the same was granted and his name added, making in all fourteen (14.)

Then followed the reading of articles of faith by Elder J. T. Rowe, which the above 14 brethren unanimously adopted. Church Covenant was then read by Elder J. T. Rowe, moved and carried same be adopted.

These brethren about to be formed into a church were then asked by the presbytery by what name the church should be known and by their vote decided it should be called the "Primitive Baptist church of Norfolk, Va."

Elder C. Meads then spoke to the above brethren in a very feeling way in regard to the duty and responsibility of members toward each other and the church, after which Elder C. Meads declared the Primitive Baptist church of Norfolk, Va., duly constituted and that all Primitive Baptist churches throughout the country would recognize them as such; the right hand of fellowship was then given each member by the presbytery.

The Primitive Baptist church of Norfolk, Va., then met in conference and chose Elder C. Meads of Weeksville, N. C., as moderator and Brother John T. Walker of Washington, D. C., as clerk. Elder Meads opened conference by inviting all present of like faith and in good standing in their churches to seats with them; an invitation was given to any who felt a desire of the fellowship of the church to come forward during the singing of a hymn.

Then a charge was given the church by Elder J. T. Rowe; he also spoke on his impressions to visit the brethren in Norfolk and his experience amongst them to the present meeting. Elder Rowe then read from the scriptures the qualifications and duties of a deacon, also spoke of the relation of the church towards its pastors and the business of the church. It was then voted that the office of deacon and pastor be considered at a future church meeting.

A unanimous vote was then taken appointing Sister (Mrs.) Mary Jane Price of No. 530 Fort street, Norfolk, Va., church clerk.

It was then moved, seconded and carried that the church meet for worship and business every Saturday before the third Sunday of each month. Prayer meeting on first Sunday in each month, and next communion third Sunday in November. A unanimous call was then given by the church to Elder C. Meads of Weeksville, N. C., to preach for them on each third Sunday and Saturday before in each month for the present, and that Elder J. T. Rowe of Baltimore, Md., preach every fifth Sunday during the year.

It was then ordered by the church that the clerk send a copy of the minutes of meetings for publication to the "Signs of the Times," and "Zion's Landmark." At 2 o'clock meeting adjourned after singing the Doxology, to meet again at 3 p. m.

At 3 p. m. services were opened by singing of hymn No. 300, (Lloyd's selection,) and prayer. Elder Meads preached from Mat. 11:28, 29, and 30, a most feeling and impressive discourse; at its close the ordinance of the Lord's supper was observed, after which we sung a hymn and went out. (No. 50, Lloyd's selection.)

Thus ended we believe a day spent in the service of our God, one that will long be remembered by those taking part, one on which the master builder smiled. For unless the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it. There was quite a large congregation present composed of members of other Primitive Baptist churches and friends. It was a fine day, for all of which we desire to thank God and take courage.

Done by order of the church.

ELDER L. C. MEADS, Moderator,

JOHN T. WALKER, Clerk.

Norfolk, Va., August 30, 1908,

OBITUARIES

THOMAS JEFFERSON HORNER.

The subject of this notice was born April 23, 1850 in Orange county, N. C., was married December 28, 1871 to Miss Analiza Terry. Was received in 'o Wheeler's Primitive Baptist church in Person county, on the second Sunday in December 1889, being baptized by Elder D. R. Moore, and continued in the fellowship of the same until his death in Rex Hospital, Raleigh, N. C., August 21, 1908.

In his youth he was full of life and hope for the future and had a good time in the enjoyment of the social life of his age. Some years after his marriage he became much concerned about his soul's eternal welfare and his burden of guilt became so heavy and his fear of judgment so great that he did not care to be left alone even when engaged at his usual pursuits, often requesting the company of his wife or children, but when it was well pleasing in the sight of the Lord to lift the burden from his heart and mind and place his feet, as it were, upon a rock and put a new song in his mouth, he became as earnest and faithful in the discharge of what he felt to be his christian duty as he had been in pursuit of the world. His life as a husband and father was an exemplary one. His many years of married life were spent in peace and love with his wife who still survives him and he was always considered, so far as I have information, a splendid type of christian gentleman. It was my pleasure to know him well for the last four years and I knew no man who seemed more earnest in defending his faith in God, than he was.

A short time before his death he was carried to Rex Hospital, and had an operation performed from which he never recovered though he lingered in the care of his attendants and loved ones from Burlington, his home, until he was permitted to pass over the river of death and rest in that home which he, by faith, saw during his lingering days. His son asked him a few hours before his departure if he wanted to go home and he said my home is over yonder.

His remains were returned to his family August 22, 1908 and the funeral service was conducted by Elder W. C. Jones and this writer, a large number of his friends and relatives being in attendance. At the close of the service we laid him to rest in Pine Hill Cemetery, Burlington, N. C.

He lived in Person county 22 years, and his last five years in Burlington, N. C. He left a wife, eight children, seven sons and one daughter to mourn his loss, but not without hope. His wife is a member and his children are all warm friends of the church that was honored and loved by the father. We shall sleep but not for ever. The waking shall be to see ourselves in the blessed image of Christ our Lord and then we will be satisfied.

Yours in hope,

O. J. DENNY.

REBECCA E. DANIELS.

It is with an aching heart I attempt to write the obituary notice of my dear departed mother.

Rebecca Daniels was born December 20, 1845 and died March 6, 1908. She married James O. Daniels June 12, 1880, and unto them were born nine children, five girls and four boys all survive him except two.

She became a member of the Primitive Baptist church six years ago and always attended the meeting whenever she could. She requested when dying that her obituary should be placed in Zion's Landmark. I assured her it would appear there.

She was sick not quite a week, being taken on Saturday and dying on the following Friday. Her sufferings were very great but only for a short duration. She talked of angels wearing crowns. She spoke of her mother, who had been dead for more than a year, as if she had been present. She would fold her hands and softly say, "Father and mother take me home to rest." On Thursday night she sang some verses of one or more hymns, then she wanted some one else to sing, "Dear friends farewell." She told us children that we should be better satisfied when she was gone from this world of suffering for she would be better off.

She didn't want to murmur at her suffering, for she knew it was not right. She would tell us how she longed for that sweet peaceful sleep which she is now enjoying in her home beyond the skies.

Written by her daughter, who some day hopes to meet her.

FRANCES GOODWIN.

Roe, N. C.

Dear Mr. Gold—I have been wanting to write to you for a long time, but have not been well and could not feel like writing. Miss Mary F. Hyman, my dear aunt died on February, and was buried at her old home in Edgecombe county. She was 85 years old the 15th of October, and had been with us for the last two years, and was very feeble; but was able to get to her church at Cross Roads at most of the meetings, and always seemed to enjoy them so much. She was confined to her bed three weeks, before she died, and the doctor said, her sufferings were from heart trouble. She suffered so much, but was so pleasant and kind, and said she was waiting for the call from the dear Lord, and was willing to go. She often spoke of you and Mrs. Gold and how she enjoyed her visit to your home, and often wished to see and talk with you; but was not able to go to see you, I am sure you remember her, and what a dear, faithful member she was to the Baptist Church. I was sure some of her friends would write you about her death, but I have seen no account of it in the Landmark, and think you may not have heard of it. Hoping this will find you and the family well and with best wishes.

Lovingly,

SUE HYMAN.

Remarks—Our dear Sister Hyman was truly a lovely and faithful Baptist, and gifted in the knowledge of the scriptures, and in the good discipline that should be observed in Zion. She was the daughter of Elder V. M. Hyman, who was faithful in Israel in his day.

We greatly enjoyed her visit to our home.

I thank Miss Sue Hyman for her letter to me.

MRS. PATTIE M. FULTON.

Was the daughter of Captain and Mrs. Roland S. Williams, deceased both beloved members of the Primitive Baptist church.

Sister Fulton, was born in Rockingham county, on the 15th day of June 1874, and passed from earth September 20, 1908, leaving a devoted husband, five children, a loving brother, (Mr. John Williams, of Pine Hall, N. C.), an affectionate sister, (Mrs. R. Horney, of High Point, N. C.), and an aged aunt, (Sister Sallie Bennett, whose home was with Sister Fulton), to deeply mourn her departure. She had been a resident of Winston-Salem about twelve years, during which time her godly walk, sweet disposition and tender kindness had won for her a host of friends. Her life so gentle was productive of good. She was married to Mr. T. P. Fulton on January 6, 1908, and she was often heard to remark that no woman had a kinder, and more patient husband than she had.

She united with the Primitive Baptist church at Sardis, about five years ago, after which she seemed restless, until she became actively engaged, with others, in an effort to secure the house of worship for Primitive Baptists in her home town, Winston-Salem. Along this line her efforts were blessed, for she lived to see the house paid for, and was one of the organizers of the church. She was a sweet singer, loved the brethren and especially did she rejoice in the doctrine preached by our beloved pastor Elder J. A. Ashburn.

For months before her departure, she seemed to be aware of her approaching dissolution, and expressed a willingness to go. One week before her death, she said to the writer, "The Lord's will is that I shall not recover from this illness, and what he wills is right. I've asked him to give me a spirit of prayer for recovery, but he withhold's it, and death has not the horror for me it once had." When asked if she wished to remain with her husband and children she said, "I love them dearly, but the Lord has promised me to care for them and his promises are sure, and I am resting on his promises. Bright's disease was the main cause of her death, and during the last few days of her life she suffered intensely, remarking once that though the road be rugged, and through much suffering to that glorious end, it is all right, since it is the Lord's will! then begged the Lord to take her and spare her further suffering, after which she passed into a stupor, and the doctor said, she was not conscious of any pain. Thus she passed from us our loved one, leaving us with fewer earthly ties. Our little feels deeply the absence of our precious sister; but we believe she is with the Lord. May her bereaved ones realize that her prayers for them were heard. She sleeps in the Salem cemetery. Elder J. A. Ashburn conducted the burial service. The burial offerings were profuse, and many sorrowing relatives and friends followed the remains to its last resting place.

We saw the suffering, and we saw the patience sweet and strong;

But now pain's last long hour is past,

And Jesus' blissful rest at last,

Shall dreamless sleep prolong:

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

GOD'S FORMING HAND AND SHOWING FORTH HIS PRAISE.

This people have I formed for myself; they shall show forth my praise."

—(Isaiah xliii. 21.)

This remarkable portion of God's word is not merely the language of the prophet Isaiah; he was only the instrument, or the channel through which God was pleased to speak this language. Therefore we are called upon to regard it as being spoken by the Three One Jehovah. It is God in Christ Jesus that expresses himself in these words, and they are spoken for the comfort and the announcement of his people as they journey through this wilderness world. Therefore it becomes us to take special notice of what the Lord says when he speaks to his own chosen people, because we live in a day when so many of our fellow creatures think that God is waiting for sinners to come to him to be saved, that is in their own strength, and that he may be gracious unto them. But the scriptures do not say such things. If you notice, this chapter makes known God's mind and will to the people of his choice. We will, in the first place, call your attention to the opening words of this chapter, "But now thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and that hath formed thee, O Israel, fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by name: thou art mine." Now, that is the way the Lord speaks to, and makes known his will and purpose towards his people; and you will see that he gives them a name; and that name is "Jacob." Now if we consult the ninth chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Romans we shall find something there worthy of serious attention. "As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated" (13). You see the one was loved, and the other was hated; and we should say from before all time in his eternal mind, "So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy" (16). This is bible language that has stood for ages past, and it will stand down to the end of time whatever our fellow creatures may say. We cannot alter it in any way whatever. It reads the same tonight as ever it did—"Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." Thus God has been pleased to draw a line of demarcation between his people and those that are not his people; and you will notice that this mark of distinction has been visible enough to those that are taught by the Holy Spirit throughout all ages. See, how it began at an early date of the world's history in separating Cain from Abel, and then Absalom from Solomon, and Judas from Peter. And can we honestly say that this line of distinction has separated us from an ungodly world? If so, then God has been very merciful to us in calling us by his grace unto a repentance that needed not to be repented of. Now, in our text we notice that God has put his people together, and says "This people (meaning all his people) have I formed for myself; they shall show forth my praise." But in what way are we "to show forth God's praise?" In the way the Holy Spirit is pleased to direct us into. And doubtless it will be through the pathway of sorrow, for we read, "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but in me ye shall have peace." And this peace is the very essence of the gospel of Jesus Christ when made known in our hearts by the Holy Spirit. The apostle Paul tells us what his blessed gospel really is. He says—"It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth"; and to the church at Thessalonica he is bold to say that the gospel which he through grace preached did not come unto them "in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance" (1 Thes. i. 5). Thus we see that the gospel the Lord's ministers preach is different from the preaching of the day. It comes into the hearts of his people with power, and the Holy Spirit accompanies it with blessed assurance that it is the gospel of Jesus Christ. But are we the people that know this gospel, by receiving it with power into our hearts? and know something of the leading features of it by the grace of God? If so, we have seen, and felt the necessity of having a true gospel repentance wrought in our hearts; for Christ says—"Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke xiii. 3). This doctrine is kept very much in the background in these days, and how very little is said about the word of God being made spirit and life to poor sinners' hearts; and yet we read that "The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword" (Heb. iv, 12), and those that have felt it to be so know something of being brought under the forming hand of God, which is quite different to the preaching of some of our fellow creatures who say—"you should repent and do such and such things, and then God will do his part." But the scriptures tell us that the Lord saves his people by grace, and that the second person in the all glorious Trinity ascended up on high, "far above all principalities, and power, and might and dominion" to give repentance, unto Israel, who are the people set forth in the text. Therefore, we see that power is not in the hands of God, who bestows it at special seasons, and for a special purpose! and that we may through the power of divine grace come to him as feelingly lost sinners.

"This people have I formed for myself." Now, when we turn to the Old Testament we see that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were called by the divine grace, and many others, who were blessedly helped "to show forth God's praise." The Holy Ghost has recorded the gracious experiences of these ancient saints, which is a great blessing to the people of God now. Hence, many of his people when in the depth of trouble have to go to the scriptures for a confirmation of what they feel within, and to find out, if they can, how those in olden times were brought under the forming hand of God, and how in ages past they were led "to show forth God's praise." Thus God said unto them,—"Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine. When thou hast passed through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee" (verse 1, 2). From these portions we see that the way to heaven lies through floods and flames; which agrees with what Christ said when he was upon earth, —i.e. "These things have I spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: be of good cheer; I have overcome the world" (John xvi. 33). All true spiritual peace is treasured up in Christ Jesus; and as he has all true godly repentance at his disposal, so he must bestow upon us before we can come to God the Father in an acceptable manner; and that is what the Lord's people are so tried about, whether they have really known what true godly repentance is; that is, a repentance that cometh from heaven. For they know that if they have not that repentance they are not amongst God's righteous people. Job said, "The righteous shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall wax stronger and stronger." But the path the Lord's people have to travel in when under his forming hand is so rough, crooked, and dark that, as Mr. Hart justly says: "There seems no path at all."

Well, the Lord tells us that "He leads the blind by a way that they know not, and in paths they have not known" (Isaiah xlii. 16). And this is the way his people have to travel in all ages. You see he leads them into it, and they follow him. Now, they are not led into these paths by a stranger, for "they know not the voice of strangers." "My sheep hear my voice (said Christ), and I know them and they follow me." Thus in the giving of this "eternal life," there are other graces which the Lord is pleased to bestow, and what are they? The grace of repentance and prayer: for the Lord says, "I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and of supplication" (Zech. xii. 10). And this is the people that "shall remember all the way the Lord hath led them" (Deut. viii. 2). And to be led by God is to be under his forming hand, and while we are there, how he shows us our real state and condition by nature, which is most unsatisfactory to our feelings, and we begin to take a deeper interest in reading the word of God, and are often in prayer before the Lord; with the hope that he will have mercy upon us, and pardon our sin, for it is great! But how pointed are scriptures, and with what light and power do they come into our mind when the Holy Spirit shines upon them, and makes room in our hearts for them. And it is a wonderful revelation to our soul when we come to see that the mere reading of the scriptures is not sufficient for God's people to do; they (the scriptures) must be lived in our every day life if we are to go to heaven when we die. The child of God when under his forming hand is brought face to face with the holy scriptures, and he knows they are the words of the living God by the solemn effects they produce in his heart. Sometimes they raise up a little hope in his bosom which gives him a little consolation, and they sometimes cut him up root and branch, and spoil him of his little hope. Then again they bring him to the Lord as a poor penitent sinner longing and panting for mercy, and the substance of his prayer is found in such expressions as these—"Lord, undertake for me," "Lord, help me," "Have mercy upon me, O God," and, "Lord, that I may receive my sight." At other times the scriptures drive him in his feelings from the Lord, for being solemnly convinced of sin, of death, and of judgment to come, and feeling sure that he has broken and violated all God's holy and righteous laws, he thinks it is vain to call upon him, for the wicked he clearly sees "are turned into hell with all the nations that forget God." And he has read that "the hope of the hypocrite shall rot," and as for the Pharisee, and all who exalt themselves in a form of religion against God, they are to be abased. Seeing and feeling what a great sinner he is, he again breaks out with the Psalmist saying, "O Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure" (Psalm vi. 1). This, then, is being brought under God's forming hand, and we see that this is the way the Lord turns the poor soul from darkness unto light, and brings him from Satan, and the love of the world unto God. And in doing so, how he chisels off all the rough edges of the world's pleasures, and show him that he cannot serve God and mammon, he and the world are now at variance, and he sees nothing in it that is of any real value to his soul, and also he is being led out of himself, that he might not any longer trust in himself but in God, who has called him by his grace, and is forming him for his honor and glory, and in due time show forth God's praise. But the poor soul must be killed before he can be made alive, and lost before he is found, and brought in guilty before a just and holy God before he will plead for mercy and forgiveness. Indeed, he has to be laid low in the dust of self-abasement, and upon the dunghill of sin, before he can fully comprehend what it is to be lifted up out of the dust, and to be translated out of the kingdom of Satan into the glorious kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ. Thus, much of the second chapter of the first book of Samuel has to be lived before he can be set among princes of God's people, and cause him to inherit the throne of glory.

Now, in this our day there does not appear to be much of this kind of religion going on in the hearts of many of our fellow creatures. We often hear of one and another being saved, but how few complain of being lost. Many will wrap themselves up in their own goodness, and good doings, but how few there are who can say that through grace they are clothed in the righteousness of Christ. But when a man's cob-web righteousness is taken from him, then, and not till then, will he seek unto God to be clothed in the garments of salvation, that he may be "made meet to be a partaker with the saints in light." To come under the forming hand of God, we see, is something that the natural man knows nothing of. It is, so to speak,—having our souls turned inside out, and to have the world turned upside down, and to experience in our heart that there is nothing in the world can cause a spiritual peace or joy. So then, the Lord gathers his people out of the world, and brings them to see that it is polluted. Then as Jeremiah says—"The Lord hath appeared of old unto me" Yes, he appears unto his dear children, to the convincing them of sin, of death, and of judgment to come, and for the forming of them for his praise and glory, and we may add for their lasting peace, and their eternal happiness. Then we see, that he says to them by his servant Jeremiah—"Yea I have I loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with loving-kindness have I drawn thee" (Jeremiah xxxi. 3). But Jeremiah says further on in the same chapter that this people "shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them; I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn" (verse 9). And the prophet Isaiah tells us that "They shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem" (Isaiah xxvii. 13). Now this is the people that the Lord calls his own people. And in the prophecy of Zechariah they are called the "third part"—and the Lord says of them—"I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined and will try them as gold is tried; they shall call on my name, and I will hear them! I will say it is my people; and they shall say, the Lord is my God" (Zechariah xiii. 9). Thus you see that the way to heaven is not a pleasant way to flesh and blood; but it is the way the saints have to walk, and "faith approves it well." And there is no other way to heaven and glory, and "this people," when in their right minds they wish for no other. For, they feel that the Lord is their keeper, and he that keepeth Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps; and he is their guide too, for he guides them into all truth, and leads them through the wilderness by his own unerring hand. And while thus being kept by God's almighty power, and guided by the skillfulness of his hand, how sin is made to lie heavy upon their souls, and very bitter to their taste; so that they have to learn by an inwrought experience that "From the crown of the head to the sole of the foot there is no soundness in them;" nothing by nature but "wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores." And this is just the state and condition God finds his chosen people in when he begins to draw them under his forming hand: to form them for himself, and that they may hereafter "show forth his praise." But these dreadful bruises and sores are the effect of sin, which pollutes the whole man, so that there is no part but what is filthy and sinful, yea, every part is tainted by sin. But the Lord speaks most blessedly to such characters when they long for the healing balm of Gilead, and the kind attention of the good physician there, and when they desire above all things to drink of the rivers of his good pleasure. He says to them at such times, "Ho, every one that thirsteth come, ye to the waters, and ye that have no money: come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price" (Isaiah lv. 1). And then further down the chapter he very graciously adds;

"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts. And let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." It is mercy such poor souls are seeking after, and as the hymn says:

"Mercy is welcome now indeed
To those that guilty stand;
Wretches that feel what help they need
Will bless the helping hand."

How earnestly they pour out their hearts in the language of the fifty-first Psalm, "Have mercy upon me, O God. According to thy lovingkindness. According unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions." And in another Psalm their language is, "The troubles of my heart are enlarged, O bring thou me out of my distresses," so we see that when under the forming hand of God, they are taught how to pray and what to pray for.

There is much said about prayer by some people, and it is spoken of by them as being a very easy thing to pray: but God shows his tried children that it is a solemn, and wonderful thing to pray, and for the prayers to be heard by God and answered. None can pray aright who are destitute of the spirit of prayer, and the grace of supplication, and these blessed gifts must be found in their hearts, or they will find that their prayers, though ever so sound in words, will not prevail with God. Well, the Lord says, by his servant the Apostle Paul, that, "the Holy Spirit maketh intercessions for the saints, according to the will of God." But the child of God says when so exercised about prayer, that "He knows not how to pray, nor what to pray for as he ought." But the Lord says—"the Spirit helpeth our infirmities, with groaning which cannot be uttered." And here these exercised children of God got a little comfort to their troubled minds when they can believe that groans, and sighs, and earnest desires from their hearts prevail with God. Previous to this they had been cutting themselves off as cumberers of the ground, and concluded that, as there was so much sin in their hearts, and sin was mixed with all they did, that they were still "living after the flesh," and walking contrary to the Lord who had done already so much for them. But in reality, they were through the spirit endeavouring to "crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts." And most anxiously desiring to live, act, and move in the fear of God, and to "put off the old man with his deeds;" that they might be found among that elect people who are treasured up in Christ Jesus so securely that no "condemnation" can take place against them. They do not wish to be carnal-minded, but spiritually-minded, so that the Lord "has thoughts of peace towards them and not of evil."

O how the Lord the spirit does exercise his dear children when he brings them under his forming hand! They have but very little peace and rest from their troubles, and this up and down life goes on in their hearts until the time arrives when the Lord is pleased to say to their distressed souls, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isaiah i. 18). All these expressions, when applied by the Holy Spirit, are received with light and with power into the heart, and the receiver of them is made willing to come to Christ that he may be saved from all his sins. Thus he inwardly says before the Lord, "Lord, I am willing to come unto thee, but wilt thou, and canst thou have mercy upon one so vile?" Then the Lord very tenderly says to him again, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matt. xi. 28-30). Such blessed portions of the word of God, when applied with power, have an abiding affect upon the heart, and draw up the thoughts and desires to God, and whilst so engaged in looking upwards, faith is imparted, and by the eye of faith the poor sinner sees him who before had been invisible, even Jesus; whom he now beholds as his blessed advocate, his Daysman, mediator, and intercessor. He stands amazed as he recognizes Christ Jesus the Lord as his law-fulfiller, his burden-bearer, his councillor, who has pleaded his cause before the Father, and paid the heavy debt which his sins had created. And how the blessed spirit of truth condescends to apply the blood of atonement to his soul, which cleanses him from all sin, and shows him that Christ has become his blessed surety, and is formed in his heart the hope of glory, and the chiefest among ten thousand. He (the poor sinner) is now released from the yoke of bondage, and delivered from the curse of the law, and set apart from the world as a monument of God's mercy and a miracle of his grace. Now he understands the meaning of Mr. Hart's hymn:

"Come ye sinners poor and wretched,
Weak and wounded, sick and sore;
Jesus in his love will save you,
Full of pity joined with power.
He is able,
He is willing; doubt no more.

This he feels in his own experience, and he can speak of it as such, for it is still fresh in his heart. He sees a great beauty in many of the hymns, and the more he reads them, so much the more they become food to his soul. Thus, the Lord, you see, has waited to be very gracious unto this child of grace, whom he hath been forming for his honor and glory, and now the soul being lifted out of the dust, and drawn near unto God by the cords of his love, he is anxious to show forth his praise. How very different, too, are the soul's expressions now, to what they once were. We hear him saying, "I waited patiently for the Lord; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry," and where was he? In the horrible pit, and in the miry clay. He was formerly groaning out his feelings before the Lord, being so afraid he would never obtain mercy from his gracious hands. But he says, "The Lord has set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings, and hath put a new song into my mouth, even praise unto our God." "And can I do less," says the poor sinner, "than praise him for all he has done for me? Why; it seems to me now, that if I were told to hold my peace, the very stones would cry out against me!" But how can he be quiet, seeing that the Lord has done such great things for him whereof he is glad? He feels that he must show forth God's praise; and publish it upon the house tops, that the Lord hath "called him with a holy calling; not according to his works, but according to his (God's) own purpose and grace, given him in Christ Jesus before the world began." But in many ways do the Lord's people show forth God's praise. For the grace of God that is in them has power over them from time to time to guide them in the way that they should go; and to keep them honest and upright before God and the world. The fear of God in the heart is a great blessing bestowed upon the Lord's people: when it is in exercise they cannot go far wrong, and, like that good prophet Nehemiah, they are enabled to say—"And so did not I because of the fear of the Lord.

Thus, in our daily life we are kept by grace from doing as others do, and being kept we "show forth God's praise" before the eyes of our fellow creatures; and should we be observed by the people of God, doubtless they will see that "we have been with Jesus and been taught by him." And having found out that Jesus is the only way to God, we desire to follow his footsteps, and in doing so our prayer is—"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;" and this is also "showing forth God's praise."

Jacob waited upon God, and so did his father Isaac, and all the saints, but what did they wait upon God for? The thing is very plain indeed! They waited upon him for him to be gracious, and merciful unto them; and that afterwards they might show forth "God's praise." How often do we show forth God's praise by the use of our hymns, when they are brought by the Holy Spirit into our hearts. Take for instance this one when you can see your way, and read your title clear to mansions in the skies:

"Here I raise my Ebenezer;

Hither by thy help I'm come;

And I hope by thy good pleasure,

Safely to arrive at home."

No better employment can ever be obtained in this life than "To show forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvellous light." I remember, very well indeed, when the Lord brought me into gospel liberty, and it was when listening to a very powerful discourse which was preached by one of his servants; it came with such warmth, feeling, and power into my heart that I felt I must shout aloud during the service, but the Lord kept me from doing so; and as soon as the service was over, I left the chapel and ran out of the town, that I might give vent to my feelings in secret before God. I had no desire to go to the corner of the street as the hypocrites do, for I knew that the hope of the hypocrite shall perish. But I felt most anxious to obey the gracious command of the Lord, who says—"Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast" (Isaiah xxvi. 20). And when we can get into such places in our soul's feelings, it is like "dwelling in the secret places of the most high; and abiding under the shadow of the almighty." These are wonderful places to be brought to, and here it is that we can say from our hearts, "I love thee, Lord, because he hath heard my cry." Now why do we cry? You might meet a hundred people in your streets and you would scarcely find one out of that number who knew anything of this crying, or who had known any of these distressed feelings we have hinted at; but we cry because we have felt trouble and sorrow. These are the things then that teach us the need of vital prayer; and to call upon God in a similar way to what the Psalmist did when he said, "O Lord, I beseech thee, deliver my soul?" There is no other way, if we are to prevail in prayer with God. And is not this the way all poor sinners have to go, if they are to be heard and answered? But by these painful exercises the Lord humbles us in the dust, and reduces us so low in our feeling that we are willing to be saved by free and sovereign grace. Hence, "the Lord makes us willing in the day of his power." Thus, we have blessed God that even he convinced us of sin, and has dropped into our hearts a single crumb of his pardoning love and mercy. Here it is then that we show forth God's praise as we read in our text, "They shall show forth my praise."

I well remember once when the good

Lord delivered my soul from the hand of the enemy, and blessed me with a felt sense of his pardoning love and mercy, and the precious blood of atonement was applied to my heart, that I said to my soul—"Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee" (Psalms cxvi. 7.). And do we not at these times give grateful "thanks unto the Lord for he is good, and because his mercy endureth for ever." Yes, "the redeemed say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy." And we exult in these grateful praises before the Lord in proportion to that delivering power we have received by faith into our hearts. I remember I said "Lord thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling." And like Jacob of old, I raised up an "Ebenezer to his praise." Now, we find that God has ever been with his people in all places, in dark places, as well as in the light; in trouble and sorrow as well as in deliverances and joy. And he said to his servant Jacob, "I will be with thee wheresoever thou goest; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of." And blessed be his dear name his people shall not long together leave him. Thus there are times when we return again unto him, and find him to be a shelter to our souls in a storm, and the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, and we come under this shadow with great delight. And here again we show forth his praise. But we are not long in one position, and we find that our frames and feelings alter. As our hymn says: "One hour upon the truth I feed;

The next I know not what I read."

At one time we appear to be on "the mount of transfiguration," and saying—"It is good for us to be here," then when we come down, and return to our own place, we begin to murmur, fret, and repine, and often write bitter things against ourselves because we cannot do the things that we would." But what a great blessing it is for any of us here present tonight to be built upon the "Rock of eternal ages." For God says—"Upon this rock will I build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." To have our hopes for eternity built upon, and centered in this great rock, we shall be safe through time and to all eternity. And the Lord will, by his spirit, give us to see from time to time that we are still kept under "his forming hand," and being there we shall be helped to "show forth God's praise." A consciousness of these things will help us to live godly in our daily life, and knowing that in matters of salvation we can do nothing for ourselves, we shall feel desirous to live in the fear of the Lord, and for him to direct us aright in all things. O what a blessed grace is the fear of the Lord! and how valuable it is to all the Lord's people when in exercise of their hearts! The apostle says—"It teaches us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world. Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Titus ii. 12-14). Now, look at the word "soberly" in the quotation I have given; there is a great and a broad meaning belonging to it if we did but understand it rightly and spiritually. Some people have an idea that it only means we should not take intoxicating drinks to excess, but be temperate, careful, and moderate in the use of such things, lest we be reprov'd, and censur'd for being off our guard in the sight of our fellow creatures. But it has a wider meaning than that. It means, be sober in our daily life in the world; be sober before the Lord's people; be sober in the church of God; and in the sanctuary of God: be sober in conversation with his people; be sober in your families, and be sober in your businesses, and in your lawful callings in the world. In a word, it becomes us to be sober in all things and to live honestly and soberly before God every day, for we know not what a day nor an hour may bring forth. We have ample cause to ask the Lord daily to make us by his spirit, sober-minded, and spiritually-minded, and to grant us a good measure of holy and filial fear of God which is of great price to them that receive it; lest we fall into temptation. And that we may be upon our watch tower, watching continually the never-abating movements of our great adversary the devil; for "he goeth about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour." But blessed be God, Satan will never destroy "this people that God has formed for himself;" and who he says "shall show forth his praise." He has made many attempts to do so, as we clearly see from the holy scriptures, and especially so from Hebrews ii. chapter. The writer says there (verse 37), "They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goat skins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented (of whom the world was not worthy); they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens, and caves of the earth. And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise;" but they all died in faith, and came off triumphantly "through the blood of the lamb." Thus they showed forth God's praise, not only in their lives, and in all these persecutions, but in their painful death. Ah! my dear friends. God is pleas'd to wean his people from themselves, and from all the vain things of the world; so they are often ready to say from their hearts with truth:

"Weary of earth, myself, and sin.
 Dear Jesus set me free,
 And to thy glory take me in,
 For there I long to be."

Are not these expressions thy soul's inward feelings? and do not these feelings often prompt you to pray in this way and manner?

"Order my footsteps by thy word,
 And make my heart sincere;
 Let sin have no dominion Lord,
 But keep my conscience clear!"

Now if these lines are language of your heart dear friends, God has done something in you, and for you, which can never be destroyed, and there are times with you, when you feel a willingness to live, and walk according to his gracious commands; which are not at all grievous, and the burden he lays upon your shoulders is light. If the Lord has blessed us with a measure of Godly fear, I am sure there will be times and seasons when we shall be looking unto him, for him to direct our every step through this vain world, and there will be a calling upon him for help in our many times of need. The Psalmist, we read, did the same, and he tells us that God was pleased to spread a table before him in the wilderness in the presence of his enemies; and anointed his head with oil; so that his cup ran over with the Lord's goodness. And for all this rich display of the Lord's goodness and mercy to him, he was helped to show forth his praise. So if we are in any measure led and taught by the Holy Spirit, as was the Psalmist, we are still under the forming hand of God, and desiring to glorify his holy name. May the Lord add his blessing. —Amen.—Selected.

I will ask you to remember me when at a throne of grace.

MEMOIRS OF MRS. MARY CHURCHMAN.

Agreeably to what my parents educated me in I was zealous for the established church, and thought all fanatics who dissented from it. I had as much prejudice against dissenters and as great an inclination to prosecute as Paul had.

There lay a way through my fathers yard for Mrs. Marling a godly woman to go to the meeting which she did every Lord's day. I early thought it my duty to set his great dog to molest her and used sometimes to encourage to encourage him for half a mile, together with the most bitter invective, such as saying, "My dog would smell the blood of a fanatic," and etc.

The cur, though bad enough to others, yet, such was the preventing providence of God, never once fastened upon this gracious person; notwithstanding, for some time I constantly made it my business to set him upon her.

When I was about 18 years of age it pleased the Lord to lay on me a languish fit of sickness, which raised in me some promises of a new life, and when I recovered, at the persuasion of a neighbor who had been very useful to me in my illness, I went with her to hear that great man of God, Mr. Holcroft. He preached powerfully of hell and judgment, which made me tremble, and secretly wish I had never come there. Every time he named the name of Christ it was terrible as the thunder and lightning upon Mount Sinai. I wished myself covered with the mountains, and looked upon Christ as my terrible judge and enemy. This trouble I vented in floods of tears and many wishes that I had never been born, and that I had never come there; for now, thought I, "they will think me one of themselves;" which I at that time was fully resolved against. I seemed now to hate these people more than ever. Satan also suggested, what would my relations say and they must never know that I had been at a meeting, and the like. Thus, in great hurry and confusion, I sat till service was ended. After sermon, staying for my neighbour, the minister came to me, and asked me where I lived, who I was, and whether I knew anything of the Lord Jesus Christ, etc., but such was my ignorance, and such hurry and confusion of my mind, that dark was my answer. I told him I believed the world was at an end. Well, home I came, and not one word did I speak to my neighbor, but was very angry in my mind that she should ever ask me to come amongst the dissenters.

The next opportunity that presented, I had an inclination to go to the meeting again, which I did, but very privately. My mother began to mistrust me and repeated her charge, warning me not to go among such sort of creatures as the fanatics; "for I believe," said she, they bewitch people into their persuasions. However, I went on a weekday, and the same minister preached from those words Can. 11:16, "My beloved is mine and I am his; he feedeth among the lillies. The word was accompanied with power. He was a good samaritan to me that day. The spirit of the Lord shone around about me. Oh, then I saw the Lord Jesus become my husband! He was to me a hiding place from the storm and tempest, to which I saw my guilty and polluted nature had exposed me. Oh, happy day indeed, I found him, who a little before appeared as a terrible judge, to become my beloved and I knew that I was his. Oh joy inexpressible! He was as a bundle of myrrh to my soul. I had not only here a little and there a little, from the word of God, but I had everywhere much. I had everything I wanted to my decayed spirit. I well knew I should meet with hard things from my relations, but I could now pray, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," Luke 23:34.

As soon as my father and mother knew that, I went to the meetings Satan put them in a great rage. My father was then high constable, and had an order from the justices to return all the names of those who frequented the meetings. This made it a hard thing for his own daughter to be a fanatic, which was what he could not bear. And this also increased my difficulty in getting out on the Lord's day, which notwithstanding I sometimes did, and have walked eight, ten, yea, twelve miles to a meeting. If my father at any time understood where I was gone, he spent the day in nothing but oaths and curses and resolved to murder me. My mother though an enemy to fanatics, would frequently send a servant to meet me before I could reach home, to tell me not to appear until my father was gone to bed; and I often hid myself in a wood stock where I have seen him pass by, with a knife in his hand, declaring he would kill me before he slept. In this bondage I lived for one year, but the Lord carried on what he had done for my soul; which I did on Lord's day, as the manner then was.

I had some fear lest indeed my parents should hear of it, which they did within a fortnight after, by means of a basket woman, who came to our house, and asked my mother if she had not a daughter. She answered, Yes. Oh, said the woman, "I heard her preach such a sermon at Mildred as raised the admiration of all who heard her. (Mildred was where she gave in her experience and that was what the woman meant by preaching). This my mother obliged her to attest before my father and me, who no sooner heard of it, but he immediately turned me out of doors, not suffering me to carry anything with me, except the clothes on my back.

I went to a goodly gentleman's house, about four miles distant from my father's house, who had often told me I should be welcome to his house, where my employment should be to be governess to his children. But there the Lord was pleased to try me greatly at my setting out. My mistress, though a good woman, soon became uneasy thinking her husband showed me too much favor. She was suffered to carry it very cruelly towards me, ordering my lodging with the meanest of servants, and my diet likewise as coarse as theirs. It being a time of scarcity of provisions, we under-servants lived chiefly upon barley bread. I was obliged to borrow necessary change of linen till my own was washed, nor did I know for months, what it was to have a penny in my pocket.

This change of living together with my grief at being banished from father's house, brought me so low that a sore fit of sickness ensued. My life not being long expected, the gentleman sent a message to acquaint my mother that I had a great desire to see her, but as soon as the messenger informed my father, he replied if he did not immediately get out of his house he would shoot him dead! However, about a fortnight after, my mother sent me a box of wearing apparel, which I received with these words on my thoughts, "For your heavenly father knoweth that ye have need of these things." I lived in this place with much difficulty three years; but in all that time never knew what it was to have one barren Sabbath. I thought my mercies equal to those of the children of Israel. I gathered my manna on the Sabbath, and it always lasted sweet and good, it never cloyed, and

I was always hungry inasmuch that I thought if seeing and hearing the saints sometimes here was so pleasant, what must it be to dwell forever with them above. I was placed indeed among those, where I had frequent opportunities of being convinced that good men are subject to like passions with others. This grieved me, but God did me good by such disappointments; for hereby he brought me more off from the creature to the creator.

The year following providence placed me twenty miles another way, where I obtained a Joseph's character, and a Joseph's promotion, being greatly valued by many noble families, and especially the Lady Marham, who told me she loved me years before she was personally acquainted with me. She gave me of her liberality, and maintained christian communion with me. One remark this lady made I very well remember speaking of the suitableness of the spirit's applying the word to all ranks and condition: "It is well said saith she in holy writ. No many noble are called; had it been expressed not any noble, what a condition must I have been in!"

Persecution now came on apace; the dissenters could have no meetings but in woods and corners. I myself have seen our companies often alarmed with drums and soldiers; every one was fined five pounds a month for being in their company. Here God left me to stagger; "Then suggested, "If you give your body to be burned and have not charity it is nothing," 1 Cor. 13:3. But the greater the temptation, the greater was the deliverance, by means of these words, "These are they which have come out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the lamb" (Rev. 1:14). Also, "And white robes were given to every one of them." Blessed be God, Satan by his assaults only bruised my heel; my head remained whole.

While I was in this family, the commissioners came and searched for ministers. Mr. Billies the gentleman of the house and Mr. Holcroft were asleep in a private arbor, I ran with some difficulty and awoke them, and they made their escape through the hedge; but as I returned the officers surprised me. They went and found some slips of theirs on the hedge which made them roar like blood-hounds; after which they came and seized the whole house of goods. These men were Mayor Y, and Col. C.

But oh, the great trial now came on; they found and seized my beloved pastor Mr. Holcroft and carried him to Cambridge Castle, but even then God appeared wonderfully to him; he preached and many souls were converted in that place. Now God was with us much; he was indeed as a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by day. And oh, how did I remember his loving kindness to me the least of all saints. He not only delivered me from fears but even death itself; nay, the flames with which we were threatened were made familiar to me. I was enabled to say Oh, death where is thy sting? The Lord was a cover from that storm and tempest and a strong rock in that day of trouble.

Mr. Billies, with whom I had lived had a call to Holland; and as the persecution was very threatening in England he thought it his duty to accept the call. He gave me an invitation to go with him assuring me that all things should be in common. As I well knew my circumstances were very precarious, not having anywhere to bide my head, when this worthy family was gone from England, this drew me into prayer. I sought the Lord time after time on this account and it seemed he was providing for me in another land. Grace taught me my duty to my parents though they were enemies to the cross of Christ.

Accordingly I acquainted them with the invitation and that I should comply with it unless their commands were to the contrary. I added in my letter, I should be all obedient to them saving in matters relating to my God and though I had not been permitted to see them for seven years past yet I could assure them my affection for them were the same as ever. I begged they would consider of it and let me know in eight days time for all things were ready to embark in a fortnight. Not hearing from them in the time set, I took their silence for a consent and so prepared all things ready for my journey and set out with my kind friends.

Just before we reached Harwick, where we were to take shipping a messenger from my father overtook me with a letter, the contents of which were as follows: That if I would come I should have my liberty to worship God in my own way; but as to my leaving the land this was what they could not bear; therefore, without fail I must come back with the messenger, which I did. Great was the sorrow of parting with my travelling friends, but my duty to my parents surmounted all.

I no sooner entered my father's house when my mother in receiving me fainted away. My father also though a man of great spirit offered to fall on his knees to ask my pardon for his former cruelty. Oh amazing work of sovereign grace. When our ways please the Lord he makes our enemies to be at peace with us. My father immediately told me I should have my liberty in matters relating to my God. I then humbly offered my obedience to them both on my knees. At supper there was not a mouthful eaten but with tears. I well knew that my God had appeared to my father on my behalf as he did to Laban of old, and was helped to apply Jacob's promise to myself (Isaiah 32:12) "Thou hast said I will surely do thee good."

The next Sabbath my father came into my chamber by break of day and told me I should have a horse and a man to wait on me to the meeting, which was at a place called Taft (or Toft near Cambridge). Mr. Oddy assistant or fellow pastor with Mr. Holcroft, preached from the words, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, (Psalms 110:3). Then I could see electing love the prime cause of all of God's dealings with me.

There now appeared a great reformation in the whole family. My father feared to sin for fear of grieving his daughter and in a little time left off drinking, which was the forerunner of all his other evils. Now I thought I could give my body to be burned for the souls of my dear relations. The Lord granted me my request on their behalf. In a few years I had not only the pleasure of seeing the conversion of three brothers, but of seeing them also eminently useful in the church. I found my God reserved his greatest mercies for my greatest trial; for at the death of my dear sister, I had not only the comfort of seeing her conversion but the satisfaction of seeing my dear father and mother also converted to the faith of Jesus, though at the eleventh hour. Yea, such was the power and goodness of God that he left not so much as a hoof behind in the whole family.

Surely now I may say that nothing but goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life. When we had free liberty from popery and slavery our great deliverer King William the Third, many were the favors which I enjoyed. God gave me the best and tenderest of husbands, a prophet of the Lord indeed. May good instruction abide with my children to this day. In short the Lord has sanctified every trial to me, and followed me with pleasures and comfort in my old age.

CLOSE OF VOLUME 41.

Forty-one years ago the Landmark was first published. Men sometimes count by forties. Moses was forty years in Egypt before it came into his heart to visit his own afflicted people. Then he fled into the wilderness and was a stranger forty years, then God appeared to him in the burning bush, yet not at all burnt, and commanded him to visit his people and bring them out of Egypt. Then was Moses another 40 years in the solemn labor of bearing the burden of that people another 40 years.

Thou shalt remember how the Lord hath led thee these 40 years in the wilderness to prove thee and teach thee.

Moses was 40 days and nights on the mount in the glorious presence of God. Jesus fasted 40 days and nights and was an hungered, and the devil tempted him in the dreadful wilderness. Here was the sorest trial and the complete triumph.

We dwell in the goodly land of promise for it is fulfillment. The land is redeemed. It is a purchased possession to the praise of the glory of God's grace.

My labor is I hope one of love, for I love the doctrine of the Lord Jesus and gladly would I sound it out so loud that heaven and earth might hear. I love the people that love this doctrine, and feel the need of it. Without the grace of God none could be saved. First God shows us the need of his salvation, and then causes us to hunger after it.

If I, unworthy though I be, am enabled by the grace of God to serve the Lord Jesus in his people that is a great favor to me.

This has been a year of trials with some, and of prosperity to others.

It has been a year of good health in our country a year of much rain at times, a year of but little increase in the general membership—a year of considerable increase in the membership of some few churches.

The providence of our Father in heaven is marked by much mercy and great long suffering to usward. Having obtained mercy of the Lord I continue to the present time.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

P. D. G.

WHAT KIND OF PREACHING?

Can one preach the gospel and not preach doctrine? What is the doctrine of God our Saviour? It is to ascribe greatness to our God, see Deut, 32:2-3. This doctrine comes from heaven. Jesus said my doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. All that Jesus said was his doctrine. You cannot divide it into parts. It is not divisible. One part is as necessary as another, and it is one. Should one dwell on what is most surely and safely believed among us—it is the doctrine. Should he dwell much on what we should believe it is the doctrine. Should he dwell on the necessity of baptism, or repentance, or faith it is all the same doctrine and all is needful. There is no part of it to be left out or omitted. If one dwells on predestination altogether to the exclusion of other matters taught in the bible as plainly and as frequently he is not declaring all the counsel of God; and is not profitable to others. No one of the sermons or discourses reported by any apostle
