dwelt exclusively on that theme, nor did any one of them exclude it. If some of them did not name it they embraced it. For instance James who is considered by many as the most practical of writers states that of God's own will begat he us by the word of truth, and he says known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world. Jude declares that certain ungodly men were before of old ordained to this condemnation of creeping in unawares. John records the electing love of God, when he reports the words of Jesus, Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you. Peter declares that the church is elect by God the Father according to his foreknowledge. Paul need not be specially referred to, for doctrine and predestination is called the Pauline doctrine by its enemies. But all these apostles wrote in their labors of other matters in the doctrine. They exhorted, they rebuked, they reproved with all long suffering and doctrine.

We do not consider that a gospel preacher if faithful has a hobby or devotes all his labors to one theme, and neglects other themes as taught and enforced in the bible. All scriptures is given by inspiration of God, and so far profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. Departures from the doctrine, or neglect of it call for reproofs and corrections.

If one reads the bible with a view of supporting one subject to the neglect of another then he does not faithfully search the scriptures. He should search to know all that they teach. There are no contradictions in the scriptures. Contradictions are in us. If we are sickly or distempered or partisan we lay hold of things to support our false theories.

Some seek to pry into things not revealed. Some try to find out who hypocrites are, and who are unsound. They set up a standard and slay all that do not measure up to their false standards. Go to a good banker and watch him counting money, and casting aside counterfeit bills, and ask him how he knows them. He will tell you he is not looking for counterfeit bills, but for good money. He knows what a good bill is, and will at once reject all that are not like the good bills. To have clearly in your mind what is right will cause you at once to reject all that are not like the good. But you are looking for the good and throw away the bad because it is not like the good.

Why should I seek beyond what the bible says about how sin came into the world? Why should I not seek the second Adam by whom all good comes, and in whom is the perfect remedy. To our shame be it said by man came sin. That is enough for us to know. Do you know you are a sinner? Then the greatest matter is to know the remedy, to seek the Lord Jesus.

We preach Christ not the Devil—the remedy not the disease. We should desire and strive to preach him in all his fullness as the scriptures present him.

A very successful way to cause hardness, produce coldness, bring about division, and force great distress on the churches is to preach something not taught in scripture, or misrepresent and pervert what is taught. For instance to so preach predestination as to leave the impression it makes God the author of sin. The bible from the first to the last of its teaching condemns sin, and furnishes no man any excuse to commit sin. Any man therefore who so preaches as to give any man any excuse for his sin is a false teacher. There is plenty to preach if we preach what is plainly declared in scripture—things that edify, that encourage good behavior, that are for peace and love—preaching Jesus Christ and him crucified.

Do not aim to be called a deep preacher. Water may appear deep when it is so muddy you cannot see any thing in it. Sound, clear, plain doctrinal preaching setting forth the things most surely believed among us is profitable preaching. When one aims to be a big preacher he often becomes hurtful. Serve in the gift God has given you. Love the brethren whether they love you or not. We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren.

No one can explore the fathomless range of the gospel field. The humble soul gets near the brethren. The meek inherit the earth. P. D. G.

CREATED IN CHRIST JESUS UNTO GOOD WORKS.

This is the new creation. All the creation in Adam is of the earth and therefore earthly. As is the earthly so are they that are earth. As is the heavenly so are they that are heavenly. Jesus is the second man, the quickening spirit, the Lord from heaven. This is the new heavenly order. To be created in Christ Jesus unto good works that are preordained of God is the divine work of the new creation, and belongs to the kingdom of heaven—a kingdom of righteousness, joy and peace in the Holy Ghost.

The works that those born of God are created unto are so holy that they cannot be performed except as Jesus works in us both to will and to do. For without him we can do nothing.

One may feel that to preach is above all other things. But charity is better, greater, than all gifts. Surely if God endows one with the gift of preaching, teaching, or exhorting this is great, but to be a humble follower of Jesus working in him in spirit is greater, better, more glorious than all gifts that may call for the admiration of men. The humble soul loves the Lord so that he desires to glorify him according as the Lord works in him both to will and to do, not seeking the applause or admiration of men, but so loves the children of God that he desires to serve and benefit them.

When one sees the glory of walking in the spirit and serving the Lord Jesus then he feels the need of the coming of the Lord Jesus, and the happiness of being found in him. When one has felt and tasted that the Lord is precious he will welcome his coming as John did when he said, "Even so, come Lord Jesus. To be found in him, not having mine own righteousness which is of man's works, but having the righteousness of the Lord Jesus, clothes one with glory and immortality.

To walk by the faith of Jesus causes one to maintain good works, or the work of Jesus is wrought in such by which he overcomes the world. God has before ordained the good works which are wrought in those that are led by the spirit. The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, faith. Such as thus walk overcome the world and dwell in the love of God who rules in their heart. We that live are always delivered unto death for Jesus sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our own mortal flesh. For the life of Jesus to be made manifest in our mortal flesh is the most gracious display of good works showing that we are created in Christ Jesus unto good works according to God's will and this is the highest evidence and display of the sufficiency of grace vitalizing one as good as dead. For God quickens the dead. To live the life I now live in the flesh by the faith of the Son of God is to show forth the indwelling of the risen Lord Jesus in the sinner who is quickened from the dead and is risen with Christ. In his divine fellowship there is peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. Christ in you which is the hope of glory, is the broad seal and mark of the love of God dwelling within you. For surely the light shines in such an one so that the anointing makes his face to shine, and displays the wondrous riches of grace so that such may say by the grace of God I am what I am—created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God has before ordained that we should walk therein. Surely there is therefore now no condemnation to such as thus walk in the spirit.

P. D. G.

WHAT A MYSTERY IS ADAM?

He was made in the likeness of his maker. Was eternal life ever in him? We say not. If it had been then why should there be an end to his life? For that which is eternal cannot die.

In what sense was he in the likeness of God? Suppose a photographer takes the likeness of a man and it is like him a good one; but is there any of the man's life in him? No. Suppose an artist so perfectly paints a sheep that one says that is a perfect likeness of a sheep, yet, there is no part of the sheep in the picture or likeness. When God made man he made him in his own image, yet there was no spiritual life in him. He was not a spiritual man. He was a natural man of the earth earthy.

All that was in Adam sinned and therefore died. Was Jesus the substance of the figure in Adam? No, for all that was in Adam sinned. The subjects of salvation were in him. Adam is what is saved; but he that saved Adam sinned not.

Adam sinned and death passed upon all Adam's offspring, for all that were in him sinned. But Jesus the seed of the woman did not spring from the corrupt loins of Adam. He was not of the earth earthy. He was a quickening spirit the Lord from heaven. Every one that is ever saved sinned in Adam; but he Jesus that saved them had no taint of Adam's sin in him, nor was he in Adam.

The people saved were chosen in Christ before Adam was created, and before the world began. Jesus was with the church and in the church in the wilderness, and he is the heaven that saves all that are saved. It is the sinner of Adam's race that is saved, but he that saves them knew no sin.

Adam is the figure of Jesus who was to come. Now a figure is not the substance but it points to it. Ashadow is the outline or figure of a tree, yet it is in no sense the tree. The sense in which Adam is the likeness or figure of him that was to come is explained in the fifth chapter of Romans. The one sin of the one man Adam is that by his sin death passed upon all men because all sinned in that one sin of the one man Adam. Even as by the one life of obedience of Jesus all for whom he lived and died shall reign in life by one. For as by the disobedience of one many were made sinners even so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. Adam is the head of his offspring, and his sin is such that it defies all that are in him or descend from him. Even so the obedience of one makes all righteous that are in him or chosen in him. He was delivered for our offenses and raised again for our justification. So Adam is the figure thus of him that was to come even Jesus, the second Adam, the quickening spirit, the Lord from heaven. For since by man came death by man came the resurrection; but how different the two men.

Eve was created in Adam before she had a separate existence. Before the Lord God made the woman he created them male and female. It was after this the Lord God took a rib from Adam and of this he made a woman and brought her to him who loved her as bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh.

This is a type of the church of God. Adam and Ever were one. The serpent could not separate them. Adam loved his wife and hearkened unto her, and went down into death with her. Jesus the second Adam is in substance related to his bride. She is of him, and he loves her when she sinned in her natural head Adam and therefore Jesus was able to lay down his life for her without sin. Jesus knew no sin; yet God made him sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Jesus loved his bride and gave himself for her. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory. All that are chosen in him shall come to him. They are given unto him of his Father, and the prayer of Jesus is that they shall be with him to behold his glory, and to be forever with him. Christ loved the church and gave himself for it, and shall present it without spot before his Father's throne with exceeding joy.

Every one that enters the kingdom of heaven enters it by a spiritual birth, just as every one that enters this natural world enters into it by a natural birth. Every one that sinned in Adam fell under the curse of the law of sin and death, and must be redeemed by Jesus—must be pardoned of their sins and iniquities—must be granted repentance—must be justified by the blood or life of Jesus received by faith, and must die in the flesh and to the flesh, and be risen from the dead. For all their fullness is in Jesus.

When he shall have changed our vile body and fashioned it like unto the glorious body of Jesus this will be the consummation of the most glorious manifestation of God in the flesh crowned with the mystery of the grace of God.

P. D. G.

Elder Gold:

Dear Brother—I see in the Landmark some quotations of scriptures that I don't understand, sometimes by yourself and sometimes by your correspondents; and I have heard it from the pulpit, in order to prove the identity of man's body in the resurrection, "Who shall change our vile bodies like unto his glorious body." Now there is no such scripture. If there is I have never been able to find it.

And again in the Landmark of November 15, 1895, R. Anna Phillipp quotes "waiting for the adoption to wit, the redemption of our bodies." Notice these scriptures, and please tell me if you think the individual bodies of men will be resurrected, or will it be a body collectively of saints. If you think it will be the body that is buried, that is resurrected, please give me all the scriptures on that point you can through the Landmark or by private letter just as you prefer, and oblige one that wants to know the truth.

Your brother I hope,

J. J. BECK.

Remarks—A resurrection must be the raising of that which was dead. The word contains that meaning. It means to rise again—that which dies rises again. It requires this to constitute a resurrection.

Jesus said the hour will come when all that are in the graves shall come forth, and etc. At the crucifixion of Jesus the graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and etc., Matt. 27:52-53.

Now Paul puts a question made by one that denies the resurrection of the body. "But some man will say, how are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come? First Cor. 15:35.

Paul tells us in Phil. 3:21 the Lord Jesus Christ shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto the glorious body of the Lord Jesus.

What do those believe that deny the resurrection of the body? If there is no resurrection then is not Christ risen, and our preaching is vain, and our faith is vain, and we are yet in our sins. If there is no resurrection of the dead why are they then baptized for baptism if there is no resurrection?

Because people cannot understand the resurrection of the dead therefore shall they reject it? What is that carnal reason understands in the teaching of the scriptures? Because Nicodemus could not understand how one could be born again why did he not say this cannot be?

To reject the teachings of the resurrection of the dead is far more difficult to me than it is to believe it, when I do not know or see how it can be only. I have the witness in my own heart that it shall be. For if you be risen with Christ seek those things which are above this world, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. He that believes knows that Jesus has all power in heaven and in earth.

What a precious truth that we shall be like him when we see him as he is.

Ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands—a number that no man can number of those whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life shall awake with the likeness of Jesus.

OBITUARIES

DR. EZRA CUMMINGS.

Dear Brother Gold—It is with a very sad heart that I try to write the obituary of our dear brother, Dr. Ezra Cummings. He was the son of Henry P. and Serena Cummings, was born in Monroe county, Va., in 1872, and died September 2, 1908, making his stay on earth 36 years. Six years ago he graduated from the Baltimore Medical College, and entered upon the practice of his profession at Marshville, W. Va. After practicing for more than four years he moved to Clarksburg, W. Va., and formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Dr. DeForest. He immediately took high rank in his profession, and was regarded as one of the most successful physicians in the city. Four years ago he came here and joined our church, White Oak Grove, and was baptized by Brother P. G. Lester. Brother Ezra was a good little boy from an infant, and remained so until death. He always enjoyed talking of the goodness and greatness of the Lord, and was so much company and pleasure to us all. I shall never forget his last visit here to see us, how we enjoyed his presence, and how sad it was for him to go so far away never to come to see us any more. He said to me when he was here, "Callie, you have been such a good, kind sister to me, you never gave me a cross word." I told him he was such a good boy he never needed an angry word. He was taken sick with typhoid fever and only lived nineteen days. He was so patient during his sickness, never murmured, nor complained. Sister Celia seeing that he must soon leave us all said dear brother, I feel that Jesus is here, and he said, "Yes." I want you to feel that way all the time, and I am willing to the dear Lord's will. Then Brother Arthur said to him, do you know me? He said yes, I will know you always. Just before he passed away he said, "Celia, watch by me tonight," and looked up at them and smiled so sweetly. Oh! to think of that sweet face smiling in death entering his beautiful home above. What a precious thought to know there is a home for all of God's children when they are done here. 'Tis my great desire to do the dear Lord's will while I live here, and when I am called to go, that I may be like Brother Ezra that the Lord's will is my will.

LYDIA A. PENDLETON.

Lydia A. Pendleton, was born in Floyd county, Va., June 4, 1832, and departed this life July 6, 1908. She was a daughter of John and Phoebe Semones, and was married to V. H. Pendleton March 11, 1880.

Sister Pendleton was for a number of years one of the most successful school teachers of the time in this section of the county. She was a teacher in the true sense of the word. She was a woman of common sense and good forceful character. In her teaching she imparted wholesome learning, which entered into the life and character of her pupils and built up in them a structure fraught with a moral and intellectual stamina fitting them for that sphere of usefulness in which is found the best types of manhood and womanhood, upon which depends the success of the coming generation and the general prosperity of our country.

Sister Pendleton professed a hope in Christ and joined the church at West Fork, Floyd county, Va., Saturday before the third Sunday in September 1869. As a member of the church she was faithful and strong in her profession. She was clear and decided in her conversation of divine truth. She was an earnest contender for things of ancient character, for the faith once delivered to the saints, and for the customs and frailties of the fathers. She was strong in both mind and character, and was among the chief women in the church, and was a strength and help to the ministers serving her church and in the association. She was dear in the discipline and order of the church and her labors for the good order and peace of the church were marked and fruitful.

She was a good neighbor, and lived in the midst of her friends, and enjoyed their confidence and esteem. She was a faithful wife, living with due regard to and in consideration of her husband, rather than herself, ready to sacrifice if necessary to render homage. She was a great but patient sufferer, growing firmer and brighter in exhibiting the blessed assurance that as the outer man perisheth the inner man is renewed day by day.

Elders Q. D. Weeks, her pastor, Amos Dickerson and myself preached to her memory the doctrine she loved, after which in hope of the resurrection of the saints to eternal life, her mortal remains were buried near the old homestead.

P. G. LESTER.

ELDER HENRY PEEL.

By the request of the church at Smithwicks Creek in conference Saturday before the fourth Sunday in June, 1908, we attempt to write a shortsketch of the life of our beloved brother and highly esteemed Pastor Elder Henry Peel, who was born in Martin county, N. C., January 11, 1829. His father and mother were Henry and Prudence Peel. His father died when he was only 9 years old, and his mother died some years before his father. Brother Peel, having been left a poor orphan boy, had to live with his uncle, Thomas Peel until he was about 22 years old, the Lord saw fit to arrest him from his wild career. After having undergone considerable trouble on account of his sins, he was somewhat comforted in a dream or vision of the night. He saw a beautiful spring or stream of water clear as crystal, which to his mind was the water of life. He knelt down to drink thereof, but could not remember having drank any of the water that was so beautiful to him. This to him was a mixture of joy and sorrow. It was a joy to him to see the water of life, and a sorrow not to remember having drank thereof. This seemed to leave room for doubt; thus his joy was not complete. It brings us into fellowship with the apostle where he says, "For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."

Brother Peel united with the church at Smithwicks Creek, Saturday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1852, and was baptized the following day by Brethren Noah Peel and William Tice.

CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

Brother Peel saw in a dream a large field of wheat, which had many briars and bushes among the wheat. A deep felt sorrow came in his heart for those who had to reap the wheat. This to his mind represented the wheat that Jesus says he will gather in to his garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. The reapers were the ministers of the gospel and his mind was then deeply impressed with the duty of preaching the gospel, which gave him more trouble than he was able to express. He meditated on this great and all important matter, and after having thought much about it he was forced to the conclusion that it was something that he could not do. This he said was the concluding thought. But in this he was again brought in sweet fellowship with Jesus, "Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered."

So he suffered on account of this duty until he was made willing to preach the gospel of Jesus, which he did to the glory of God and to the comfort of his people.

In June 1860 the church seeing that Brother Peel had a gift liberated him to exercise his gift within the bounds of the church, by September of the same year his preaching had proven so satisfactory that the church gave him written license to exercise his ministerial gift where he might feel impressed to travel.

Elder Peel was ordered to administer all the ordinances of the church of Christ in March 1864, by Elders C. B. Hassell and William B. Perry. After the death of Elder William Whitaker in 1874, he was chosen jointly with Elder Levi Rodgersoon to the pastoral care of the church at Smithwick's Creek. He remained pastor until his death which occurred May 23, 1908.

He served the church very faithfully laying a worthy example for a gospel minister. He was always on time never waiting for the congregation, saying that the appointed time had come to begin the worship. He often exhorted the brethren to do their duty. He traveled and preached in twenty counties in this state with power and demonstration of the spirit to the satisfaction of the brethren wherever he went. He also traveled and preached in the state of Tenn.

In June 1886 the church at Jamesville called him to take charge of that church which he served faithfully until in July 1898. He saw his health would not bear him out and he resigned.

His diary shows he baptized 113 persons married 165 couples, and preached 350 funerals traveling 3,240 miles for the last one purpose alone, never charging anything for any of his ministerial labors, holding that the service of Christ to be above price. Like Paul he labored with his own hands to support himself and those depending on him.

Elder Peel was married 3 times. About the year 1852 he was united in marriage to Mary Ada Ann Perry, a member of the church. They lived happily together until her death June 1854. After the death of his wife he decided that he would never marry again, and sold his home and went to school, but would never take any part in debate and speech making, saying that he never intended to make a public speech. On December the 16th 1856, he was united in marriage to Armiza Lilley. Unto this union were born ten children, but only one survives him. After the death of his second wife in 1877 he was united in marriage to Elizabeth F. Godard, unto whom one son was born. This wife and son still survive him.

Sometime in January 1908, he was taken with la-grippe. Owing to his advanced age he was never able to leave home any more. Although too weak to sit up all the time, he would be glad to have the brethren and friends visit him, and would talk and expound the scriptures to them. One of the last texts which he spoke while on the bed of afflictions may be found in Zecariah first chapter and first verse, "And he shewed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him." He was very much comforted knowing that no one was able to remove this filthy garment except a higher power than man.

To show his love for the church and his friends we here copy a letter written by his own hand, to wit:

Brethren, sisters and friends—I this morning have taken my pencil in hand to try to mark down a few words to try express the joy and comfort that I have had with you in your coming to see me while down in my affliction, and also the comfortable conversation that we have had together has been a source of joy and comfort to me.

And also to see the great care and respect that you have had to me in supplying me the whole time with the very best provisions that could be had, and a plenty left on the table for several more times. I do not think that there ever have been any children that could have had any more care or respect for their own father, than you brethren, sisters, and friends have had for me. I cannot express the joy, comfort and consolation that it gives me to think of these things. Farewell brethren, sisters, and friends may the Lord be with you and bless you is my desire for Jesus' sake.

HENRY PEEL,

April 28, 1908.

On Saturday night, May 23, 1908, Elder Peel gently fell asleep, as we believe, in Jesus. On the next day, Sunday afternoon his funeral was conducted by Elders John N. Rodgerston, A. D. Mizell and Brother W. H. Peel. A very large congregation of brethren, relatives and friends met to pay their last respects, and see him laid to rest in the tomb there to wait till the morning of the resurrection.

LUCY DEANS.

It is by request of her aunt, of Wilson county, that I make the attempt to write the obituary of Lucy Deans. It is with a sad heart I make the attempt yet I feel it my duty to do the best I can, though I do not feel competent to do it as it should be done.

She was the daughter of Mr. Jesse Deans, of Wilson county and was 34 years old, when she departed this life and was relieved of all her sufferings here. She was taken home to rest on the morning of June 27, 1908, after being confined to her bed only two nights and one day. Lucy was not a member of any church, but died a true believer in the Primitive Baptist faith and would go to church when ever she could. She leaves a father, two brothers, one sister and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

I have known her for the last fifteen years and knew her as a sweet loving girl and loved by all who knew her. It was sad to see the little children standing around her grave while her friends were placing flowers upon it. She bore her illness without a murmur. She lived with her brother and was a kind and devoted sister to him. It is sad to think her loved ones will never see her more on this earth, but I hope they will meet her in heaven above where parting is not known.

"Savior has this precious one,
Safely gathered for his own;
Now she waits for us above,
Resting in the Savior's love,
Jesus grant that we may meet,
There adoring at thy feet."

BIOGRAPHICAL HISTORY OF PRIMITIVE OR OLD SCHOOL BAPTIST MINISTERS.

Last appeal For Sketches and Photographs, a Request For Subscriptions.

I have collected and am arranging for publication, in book form, between six and seven hundred sketches and about two hundred photographs.

This book if published will also contain sketches and pictures of few of our spiritually minded and talented sisters who are well known by their writings, together with an appendix of much useful information in brief form that I have gleaned from various sources. I feel to say that the work will be fairly representative, reasonable correct and of unusual interest to every Old School or Primitive Baptist. I want to make it so, and I again ask those ministers who have not furnished me with a sketch and photograph, to please to do so without delay. However, if they will not, because of a feeling of modesty, etc., as is the case with many, will not some one write me a sketch of the life and labors of such Elders? Do you not want your pastor represented? If so ask him about this matter, and assist me in getting information at once.

I hope to complete and have the book published this winter. It will cost me about a thousand dollars to do so, and I want all who read this and feel they want one or more copies of the book to write me a postal card saying how many they will take. It will cost you but one cent to do so, and will enable me to know if I can afford to publish, and how many copies to have published. The book will be more representative, much larger and therefore more extensive than I first anticipated, but I want to make the price not over two dollars. A large edition will enable me to do this, I think. So please help me make the price cheap to all by ordering now, and paying later when the book is published. If you will write me please do so soon.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove by death from our midst, our beloved Sister Patsie W. Fulton, a faithful and consistent member of Winston-Salem Primitive Baptist church.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That while we are grieved over our loss, we believe it is her eternal gain, and bow in humble submission to him who doeth all things well.

2. That the community has lost a jewel; the family has lost a loving and faithful wife, and mother, and the church one of her most useful and beloved members.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heart felt sympathies in this great trial, and point them to that one, whom she trusted and served.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon our church record, and a copy sent to the bereaved family. Also a copy sent to Zion's Landmark for publication.

Done by order of the church at Winston-Salem, in conference at our September meeting, 1908.

DEACON NEEDHAM M. WHITE.

The subject of this notice was born April 14, 1837. He married Julia E. Kirkman, November 8 1860. To this union were born eleven children, eight died in infancy, and three sons and one daughter survive him.

He joined the church at White Oak, Jones county, N. C., during the year 1890, and was ordained deacon of said church the fourth Sunday in October, 1893, by Elder J Smith and L. H. Hardy. He was faithful to his church in his official capacity, looking after the needs of the poor and in traveling far and near through heat and cold, as a correspondent to union meetings, and associations. He was a farmer and labored hard as long as he was able to go for the support of those that were dependent upon him, and that he might be able to administer to those less fortunate. He was a just and upright man in every action of life, one that feared God and eschewed evil, one whose place will be hard to fill as a citizen, in the home and church; but we are glad to feel that he is gone from the toils of this poor world, and have as sweet hope of a better resurrection.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

P. D. GOLD.

I trust every reader will try and secure a new subscriber for the Landmark. Our expenses are heavier and an increased circulation is necessary to enable us to make anything.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

THE "STORY OF THE CROSS."

I would, with reverence, explore
The stream which rose near Eden's gāte (Gen. iv. 4; Heb. xi. 4).
Which tidings of salvation bore—
And stay'd its course near Olivet;
Whose hallow'd banks good Abel trod—
First martyr in "blood-offering's" cause—

Where Enoch held converse with God
And learn'd the "Story of the Cross!"

The patriarchs, too, in after years Long'd much its length and depth to scan;

Unaided by interpreters,
They yet were taught redemption's plan!

They watch'd this river gliding on,
To trace its deeps were curious—
(Heb. xi.)

Their maker's commendations won,
And read the "Story of the Cross."

Bards, too, who sang in days of yore,
And kings in gorgeous state array'd,
And priests, who walk'd the hallow'd floor,

Attention to this subject paid.
These heard a voice which quell'd their fears,

No theme could so their minds
engross,

With peering eyes and listening ears
They learn'd the "Story of the Cross!"

Methinks I see the shining ones—

The first to sing creation's birth,
Descending from their golden thrones
To view this mystery on earth (1 Pet.
i. 10-12.)

And, hovering o'er the crimson stream;
We marvel not that they should pause,
Nor doubt but here the seraphim
Oft sung the "Story of the Cross."

The ancient Hebrews' solemn feast
Of bitter herbs and pascal lamb,
With every sacrificial beast
Consumed by altar's holy flame;
Nor less the serpent made of brass,
Which on the pole uplifted was,
Preach'd to that serpent-bitten mass
The wondrous "Story of the Cross!"

John, herald of the great I AM!
Efore his countrymen appear'd,
Crying, "Behold the atoning Lamb!"
And thus the Savior's way "prepared."
And Moses and Elijah came,
Each holding forth God's slighted laws,

Yet both proclaim'd Jerusalem
An the sweet "Story of the Cross!"

When Peter stood with lifted hands,
And, "filled with the Holy Ghost," Address'd a crowd from distant lands
Upon the Day of Pentecost,
What made proud rebels cry aloud,
And fear their soul's eternal loss?

What moved? What dried those tears which flow'd?

Read Peter's "Story of the Cross!"
(Acts ii.)

When Paul the pilgrim's pathway trod
 The world with him had no esteem;
 The "Gospel of the grace of God
 Was all that great apostle's theme!
 Array'd in Jesus' righteousness,
 All earthly good he counts but "dross;"
 Through floods and storms we see him press
 To preach the "Story of the Cross!"

His brethren in the gospel field,
 Who gloried in the Savior's name, God's mighty two-edged sword would wield,

Where'er they stay'd, of went, or came They'd have their countrymen at home—

Who charged them with a breach of laws—

As well as proud, despotic Rome,
 List to the "Story of the Cross!"

We see them on the foaming main,
 Upon their honor'd mission bent,
 To preach the Lamb for sinners slain,
 Who ransom'd souls from banishment!
 At times they're fill'd with dread alarm—

Their barque the raging billows toss—
 But, cheerfully they brace the storm
 To tell the "Story of the Cross!"

When sore afflictions mark'd the way
 Which by those pilgrims must be trod,
 The cross oft trunn'd their night to day—

The cross borne by the Son of God;
 Whose faithful soldiers chose to dwell Where hoary walls display'd their moss,

Rather than they would cease to tell
 The melting "Story of the Cross!"

The matchless love the cross makes known

Will still inspire the ransom'd throng
 To hymn the Lamb who fills the throne
 Whilst endless ages roll along,
 My fellow-laborers in the field,

The story needs no human gloss,
 Proclaim "Eternal life, reveal'd Through the blest "Story of the Cross!"

Peterborough, J. BOLTON.

Almighty Babe! Eternal Son!
 In Bethlehem born a child of days!
 Yet whose beginning ne'er begun—
 Father and child of human race!
 We hymn thy birth, Incarnate Word,
 With angels bright and glorious;
 For, without this man ne'er had heard,
 Nor known a "Story of the Cross!"

Immanuel! "Span-length" Babe and God!

Thy birth we hail and celebrate!
 Thou root of David! Jesse's rod!
 Who didst assume man's low estate!
 Our utterance and conceptions fail—
 We try, but feel our utter loss,
 To think the love that did prevail
 To fill a manger and a cross!

PREACHING OF THE GOSPEL.

"For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."—1 Cor. i. 18.

My text naturally divides itself into two parts; therefore, as the Lord shall enable me, I shall thus speak of them.

I. "For the preaching of the cross to them that perish, foolishness." look all over England, as well as other lands, and what a state mankind is in! I say, they consider us the greatest fools in the world who talk about Christ and the gospel. They think we cannot have common sense. But "the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God;" and "the world by wisdom knew not God." Therefore they ridicule and make a mock at real religion; and if it is brought forward, the generality, from the highest to the lowest make "foolishness" of it, and try to confuse a person who talks about it. Go where we will, "The carnal mind is enmity against God, and is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." And why? Because "the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Now, how can people be saved by the Lord Jesus Christ, when they are ridiculing him, glorifying in their shame, and openly manifesting, in all their conversation, the enmity they have against that dear lamb of God, who was crucified, died, and rose again for the salvation of all his dear people? 'Tis was the case with you and me. In our carnal state, we did not think much about hell or heaven; our very hearts were in the world. And the young, if they had a little natural conviction, would put it away saying, "It is time enough when we get old; I want to get rich; I want a husband who can keep me; or a wife I can love; I want honor; and as for religion, there is time enough for that." Why, there are many bigoted church-people who never entered a dissenting place where the cross of Christ has been preached in its reality. They must have their religion in a steeple or some wonderful cathedral, or where the rich and great assemble, and live and die mockers of Christ crucified. "To them that perish foolishness." Look at it.

Now, poor dear child of God, let conscience speak; is it so with you? It was so with me once. I used to think what a melancholy set God's people were. I wanted a little more vanity and enjoyment in the flesh; and seeing them moping and sighing, always reading the bible, and talking about the things of God, I thought they were fools; I did, to my shame. And no thanks to us that it is not so now. The Lord must have opened our eyes to see, in some measure, or there we should be now. You might hear a foreigner speak, and what would his conversation be to you? Just so with us; in our first-born state, the children of God are "barbarians" to us; and what we do not understand is mere foolishness." There is so much in the words, "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness;" Christ crucified is "to the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness; but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God;" for take away Christ crucified, and how is any sinner to be saved? My friends sin has made the breach between us and God, thrown the world into all manner of confusion, and left us in a most wretched condition; and if the Lord Jesus Christ had not been set up from everlasting to be the God-man Mediator, to be put to the most shameful death which devils or men could invent, not a soul could be saved. I say, he is the way to God and heaven. Sin had blocked up the way and shut the door; but the Lord Jesus Christ came and threw open the door. And what a great thing was it for him to set his love upon a certain portion of the human race, to agree to stand in the law place of their souls and to have made over to himself whatever wrath or anger they had procured! And who can tell the torture, the millions of hells that came in upon his righteous soul in Gethsemane's garden and on the cross? I do love the words:

"Must Simon bear the cross alone,
And all the rest go free?
No; there's a cross for everyone,
And there's a cross for thee."

So all of God's people have the cross to carry. They are commanded to take up their cross. Christ had to be crucified on the cross. They nailed him to a tree, platted thorns, and made a mock crown to put on his temples. The Lord cursed the ground after Adam fell, and there sprang up thorns and thistles. And for fear lest a drop of the precious blood of the Lord Jesus Christ should be left in his head, this crown was placed upon it to prick and wound it. This caused him to cry out, "I thirst!" They had now "Drained every drop of vital blood."

Justice had demanded that; for we read; "The soul that sinneth, it shall die;" and, "without shedding of blood there is no remission." And the father (how wonderful of him; spared not his own son, but delivered him up." Look at that. Where is the poor human being—if he has a spark of humanity about him—who, seeing his dear child in danger of being put to death, would not save him if he could? But "it pleased the Father to put him to grief." And he himself makes his face like flint, and says, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death; O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction; repentance shall be hid from mine eyes." And oh! friends, at last he was "brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth." Could he not have pleaded his innocence, for he was holy all his days? Yet he will say not a word. No, he had all thy sins and mine (if we belong to him)—past, present, and to come—laid on him; and if he were innocent, we were guilty enough. But, a surety, he was made sin by imputation, "that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." Now, do you not see the beauty of preaching the cross of Christ? "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness." Sometimes I get a little opening, because it is not foolishness to me; I call it the greatest wisdom God could set forth. "But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block, and unto the Greeks foolishness, but unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." And it is said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." There was a time when we did not love the gospel of Christ; we despised it. And the Lord said to such as shall perish, "Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish! for I work a work in your days; a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you." Now, there are thousands who answer to that character; and God tells them to "wonder" and "perish." And oh! my friends, there are but two classes; haters of God, and lovers of God; haters of the gospel, and lovers of the gospel! and I am sure that all who are saved are brought to love the gospel, and to say—

"For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness; but unto us which are saved, it is the power of God." Now, my dear friends, every man and woman who is gone, or who ever will go to heaven, was saved before the world began. I will prove it. "Who hath saved us"—it implies that it was done in eternity—"and called us with an holy calling according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." What can the Arminians think of that: to have things given in Christ before the world began? "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ; according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world." All this was settled. Then, for those who were saved in the covenant, Christ came into this world, and died. Nor did he leave it until he had blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against them, taking it out of the way, and nailing it to his cross. And when he said, "It is finished!" the work was done; salvation was wrought out. Now all those for whom Christ died will want to be saved. Say you, "Does not everyone want to be saved?" No. Where were you and I? Going on Gallio-like, caring not for these things. Christ was to us "a root out of a dry ground; and there was no beauty that we should desire him;" for "we desired not the knowledge of his ways;" we lived without God, and without hope, and were contented in being "strangers to the covenant of promise." Now the Holy Spirit—as much almighty as the Father and the son—comes, and brings us wisely to consider our latter end, causing a great solemnity to come over the mind—"Perhaps I shall soon die!" Light shines into the heart, and discovers to us the state we are in; for "the entrance of thy word giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." Says the poor soul, "If I die as I am, I shall go to hell; and how can I tell that I shall live another day? I am a sinner; and if I die in my sins, where God is I never can go." It is faith that believes this. "Why," say you, "was that faith, then?" Yes; when the Lord by his blessed spirit, convinces us of our sins, "faith is the substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen;" and a person cannot get rid of the fact, by night or by day, that there is a hell or heaven to be entered upon, and that without realizing a greater alteration in himself than he has yet experienced, he feels quite sure how it will be with him. So that his is not a lazy desire. The poor thing cannot help crying from the heart. I lived twenty-two years before I prayed from the heart; but when I came to be in trouble, and death was brought near to me, and God brought me into judgment, I would have given all the world, had I possessed it, if I could but have known I should be saved. Then I began to look around, and saw some who for years had been running for their lives to hear what God would say about their souls, and, instead of looking on them as fools, I only wished I was like them. And oh! my dear friends, I could not get rid of it. Sometimes I got tangled in one thing and sometimes in another, which only brought fresh guilt. My sins, from childhood, were shown to me; and the sight made me cry lustily, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner." And you cannot think how I used to love my mother, I thought she was right, and I was wrong. My wife felt a little jealousy springing up, for, instead of my sitting down, when work was over, and talking to her, I would go and tell my mother what trouble I was in. And the poor old lady would weep. (Now, do you know anything about these matters?) It was what she had prayed for, I dare say, hundreds of times.

If I could not buy good men's experiences, I borrowed them. How I loved Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, and Elisha Cole's Book (I scarcely think there is such a book upon the earth, except the bible, a most blessed book it is, friends).

2. "But unto us which are saved it is the power of God." There must be a power in a man's religion, when in the past he was quite opposed to all that was good, but now all that he desires is to be one of the Lord's people; and says, "Oh that I knew for a certainty that I was born again!" What a power there must be to bring us forth as lovers of these things.

Now you can sometimes say, "Lord, all my desire is before thee, and my groanings is not hid from thee." Why, my dear friends, the Lord is looking after our hearts. Some people are judging according to outward appearance, but God does not judge in that way. We might see some of the most abominable hypocrites, and set them down as God's children. They might come with a smooth and oily tongue, and be able to talk all day. Now, real religion has to do with the heart; and there is such heaviness comes over a man, that it makes him stoop. "If," says some poor soul, "a sense of unholiness and infirmity is an evidence of life, I can put in a claim." Now, once thou wast as great a sinner, and wast blind to it, but, since thy sin has become a burden and a plague to thee, and thou wouldst be glad to get rid of it, there must have been a power put forth to cause this change. Again the bible formerly lay on the shelf, now the poor soul sees it to be the book of books. In it is to be found every man's name and end. It is the foundation of every good book, the spring-head and source of every good book, there is not such a book in the world. If you want to know how a man is to be saved, here it is cleanly set forth, and sometimes, when the Lord speaks by it a word of encouragement, the soul feeds upon it, and can say, "Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart." He is ready to turn down the leaf, or mark the passage saying, "I will be at that again;" feeling he shall get another snap at it. By and by he turns it over and there it is, only ink and paper, and he thinks, "Why, I was not deceived, was I? I felt assured that it came from God! What is the matter?" Now, the power comes with it when thou feedest upon it; but when the power is withdrawn, the poor soul, especially in his young days, cannot understand it. Sometimes the verse of a hymn is so sweet, it seems as though the poor soul's experience were known to the poet, and does him more good than it would if one ever so poor had a hundred pounds left him. At another time, he looks at his book, sees the verse, but cannot feel the power.

The same is true in hearing the gospel. You might hear me preach twenty times, and not have a doubt of the truth of what you have heard, but it is the power you want. Some, through ignorance, are ready at such times, to pick over the minister. By and by they come again, the minister speaks, God applies the word with power (for the gospel is the power of God when God applies it); and what a change is affected! He says, "I came so miserable, and hardly knew what I came for, and yet thought I should like to come once more; and I would not have been away for all that you might mention, That man has got into my heart, and his name will ever be dear to me."

When I have heard with power, the very name of the man has been sweet. It is very well to say, "I was pleased to hear so and so," but there is a deal of difference between being pleased with a man (thousands are pleased with a man for his gifts) and being profited by him.

It is power that the living soul wants. Gifts and ability are nothing better than "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal," they may please, but do not profit. One dear old saint he lived, on the strength of what he had received for forty days and forty nights. I seldom read the bible, in private, and get much comfort. By and by perhaps, my eyes fall on a verse which some old man preached from, when it was a particular time with me, when nearly the whole sermon begins to spring up within. I remember once being engaged in thrashing with some men. I had heard old Mr. Warburton preach, and that with power. As soon as we began to thrash, and they to talk about their feats, "Oh," I said, "I never heard such a man as Mr. Warburton." By and by, we got into deep conversation again, and up came I with Mr. Warburton's name. This is the effect when there is power. It is like a little leaven hid in three measures of meal. And what is it all without power? It is right to call upon God, but if taught to know anything about the power, you may find plenty of words at a throne of grace, with no more feeling in them than in the bed by which you kneel. Another time, you may begin so miserably, telling the Lord what a poor thing you are, and the Lord breaks into your heart, and says, "Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it." "Call upon me in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee." Come unto me, all that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." What a difference there is in your feelings! The poor sinners heart is broken, the intercourse with heaven is open; he knows the blessedness of a throne of grace, and what Paul meant when he said, "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." He finds that the Lord listens to him, and though he feels he is nothing, like poor worm Jacob, there is something springing up, "I will not let thee go" till the day breaks. What is religion without power? It is not much contended for in the day in which we live. But power will do to die by; and unless our religion stands in the power of God, it is no good, either in life or death: for the faith of God elect "works by love," and stands not in the wisdom of man, but in the power of God." There is no feeding without power; no application without power, no enjoying divine realities without power; and it is power that does us good. Mr. Hart says: "But when to me that blood's applied, 'Tis then it does me good."

How we need to contend for the power; because of you had a thousand bells in your conscience, and a burden ready to press you into the earth—if the Lord said, "Loose him, and let him go," you would be free in a moment. It is only for him to speak, as he did to Lazarus. He was brought forth at God's voice, but he came forth "bound hand and foot with grave-clothes, and his face bound about with a napkin." Now the Lord had brought him into that state, but he did not leave him there, but said, "Loose him," and as soon as they did so he was free. Just so spiritually. The Lord Jesus is anointed to "proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God." And, bless his dear name, when the gospel of God is accompanied with power, what blessed effects follow! "I will run the way of thy commandments when thou shalt enlarge my heart." The church said, "Draw me" by thy power, "we will run after thee." The poet says:

"Give power and will, and then command,
And we will follow thee,
And when we're frightened, bid us stand,
And thy salvation see."

"But unto us which are saved it is the power of God." We shall want more than flesh and blood when we come to die. We read, "the sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ," that is, the Lord comes and puts power into the soul, and shows him that he is about to take him home, "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest." "So shall we ever be with the Lord."

I must leave these few solemn remarks, may God add his blessing, and I add no more, for I do feel so inwardly weak.—Selected.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

After God delivers his children from the power of darkness and translates us into the kingdom of his dear son, which makes us "Meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light, we then are able to read the old testament with some understanding of the beautiful types and shadows pointing to the spiritual truths of the new. And as the scriptures of the old testament point to the new, so does nature point to and symbolize the spiritual truths within us.

The historical facts recorded in the first chapter of Genesis, relative to the creation and formation of this natural earth, is a figure of the creation and formation of man, the earth a figure of our natural bodies, and the heavens a figure of the creation and formation of the spiritual man, which was created in Christ Jesus before the world began, and formed in us when we were quickened together with Christ.

For as the darkness was upon the face of the natural earth until the spirit of God moved upon the face of the deep, so is darkness or lack of understanding, upon the face of the depths of our souls, until the spirit of God moves upon the natural goodness of man and causes a light to shine within us, to divide darkness from light. That is to show us the difference between the goodness, or morality of man, and the goodness of God.

This light he calls, in this chapter, a firmament, and he places it amidst the waters to divide the waters which were under the earth from the waters which were above the earth.

The natural earth spoken of is a figure of the goodness of God. And when the waters were all gathered together in one place, that is when we see that God alone is good. The dry land appears, that is, we see ourselves a sinner in God's sight. The gathering together of the waters he calls seas. As the natural seas water and nourish the natural ground so does the goodness of God nourish the spiritual man.

The earth or natural man brings forth grass, the herb yielding seed and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself." This is a figure of our morality which we bring to God as an offering, as Cain did, and are rejected because it only yields fruit of his kind, and whose seed is in itself.

And the evening and the morning was the third day of our experience. For we had our first day when the light shined within us and our second when that light caused us to see that God alone was good.

"And God made two great lights the greater to rule the day and the lesser to rule the night. He made the stars also." The greater light or sun, a figure of Christ ruling the inner, or spiritual man and the lesser light or moon, a figure of the Mosaic law, which is a lamp to the feet, and "a schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ (Galatians 3:24).

The stars a figure of the rudiments and ordinances of the gospel.

The evening first and then the morning and we have passed another day in our experience.

"And God said, let the waters bring forth abundantly, the moving creatures that have life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven."

The creatures which were created in the water, a figure of the attributes of natural goodness which were created in us before we were ever formed, and the fowls of the air, which were created in the water but later formed in the earth, a figure of the mind enjoying the answer of a good conscience, which is the natural blessing we receive for doing what we feel to be right.

"And the evening and the morning were the fifth day."

The creature created in the earth, a figure of the attributes created in our bodies before we were formed of the dust of the earth.

The cattle, a figure of that attribute which craves to be pastured, taken care of, and is docile.

Creeping things, a figure of that attribute which is easily crushed and subdued.

The beast of the earth, a figure of the desire within us to run wild, tear to pieces and drown.

Each of us has all of these attributes in our natural make up.

"And God said, let us make man in our image, after our own likeness, and let them have dominion over the fishes of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth. And over every creeping thing upon the earth." "Male and female created he them."

We were created in the covenant between the Father and the Son, and given dominion over the attributes, the creation ending on the sixth day.

"And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all his work, which he had created and made."

"These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth, when they were created." And every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field, before it grew, for the Lord God had not caused it to rain, upon the earth. And there was not a man to till the ground."

In the creation man was last, but in the formation first.

He was formed of the earth, and God himself breathed the breath of life into him and he became a living soul. This is a figure of the formation and quickening of the spiritual man who is formed of a broken and contrite heart, which is the dust of our broken bodies, the breath of life. For he is our peace, who having abolished, in his flesh, the enmity, that he might reconcile both unto God, in one body by the cross. So making peace (Eph. second chapter).

And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden, and there he put the man whom he had formed."

God in his wisdom and goodness does not cause us to go any farther in our experience than he has prepared us for.

The garden of Eden, a figure of the world within us or the preparation of the heart, for the spiritual man, at this period of our experience.

He is permitted to partake of the life giving things of nature which God has plante din the garden, but forbidden to partake of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, which is in the midst of us. We are not forbidden the tree of life at this period, because, with out the knowledge of godd and evel we could not partake of it.

The river which went out of Eden and from thence was parted into four heads, is a figure of the goodness of God nourishing this garden which he has planted within us.

The first river signifying the spiritual blessings we receive at this time. The second river representing our periods of darkness, and the fourth river a figure of captivity.

After the commandment is given to man, God said, "It is not good that man should be alone: I will make him an helpmate for him."

Before the woman was made God formed the creature of the earth and brought them to Adam to be named but there was not a helpmate found for Adam. God caused a deep sleep to fall upon him, took out one of his ribs then closed up the flesh instead thereof.

He takes away his strong heart and gives him a heart of flesh that he may feel and sympathize with his bride, who is made from this bone and becomes bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh.

Eve is first a figure of the old covenant or wife of God, to bear him sons to bring under the law, which is a schoolmaster to bring us into Christ. Then she is a figure of the church or bride of Christ, who is the natural man quickened into spiritual life by the word or spirit of God.

So the woman is a figure of the flesh or natural man whom Christ came into the world to save; she is his bride.

"And they were both naked the man and the woman and were not ashamed." A figure of our still being in the womb of nature even after we are quickened into spiritual life, before the time when sin takes occasion by the commandment to deceive us, (Romans 7:8-9).

After the serpent, a figure of sin, beguiles the woman and her husband partakes of the tree of knowledge with her, their eyes are opened to see themselves and they sew leaves together for aprons.

This is a figure of our trying to cover our sin from our own eyes, with the deeds of the natural or Adamic law.

When we hear the voice of God within us, we hide behind the life giving things which God has planted in the garden.

After sin has beguiled us he is cursed and not permitted to roam, or walk with freedom within us again. But he is permitted to crawl within us and eat of the dust of our broken bodies.

Sin is the thorn in the flesh spoken of by the apostle Paul.

Satan is still allowed to buffet us but not with such power as he had before we had a knowledge of good and evil.

The seed of woman, the spiritual man who is formed of the dust of our broken bodies shall bruise his head and Satan shall bruise the heel of the child, that we look back with sorrow upon the sins we commit, and this sorrow is Satan's glory and the dust upon which he feeds.

"Unto the woman he said, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children; and thy desire shall be thy husband and he shall rule over thee."

This is a figure of the sorrow we feel when we are convicted of sin. A broken and contrite heart is the child which she bears and her desire shall be unto Christ.

The ground was cursed for man's sake, because he had hearkened unto his wife and she the natural man shall bring forth thorns and thistles unto him.

It is only by striving hard to keep the natural or old man bowed down, that the spiritual or new man eats his bread.

And now that we have knowledge of good and evil, we are turned out of this garden, where we have been nursed in our spiritual infancy and cherubims are placed at the east of the garden and flaming sword which turns every way to keep the way of the tree of life.

The cherubim a figure of the old and the new covenant with Christ, or the mercy seat between.

The flaming sword a figure of the justice and judgment of God.

Having partaken of this knowledge we dare not stretch forth our hand towards the tree of life, because of our unworthiness, for though the types and shadows in these chapters point to the spiritual man, having been quickened into life, they leave him in the womb of nature, where he will remain until God shall deliver him into the hands of Christ.

Remarks—I desire that these sisters continue to write. P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother in Christ—I will once more address you as it has been on my mind for some time to write you.

Ever since I left Elizabeth City and moved to Norfolk I have been wondering around in darkness the greater part of the time and it seemed I couldn't get my mind in a frame to write you, but it has pleased the Lord I hope, to give me a place to rest my weary feet after so long a time.

After coming to this city I was like one alone. There were but few Baptists here of our faith and order or at least I didn't know where to look for them. But the Lord who is ever mindful of his little ones has been pleased to call us together I hope in a bond of love.

Brother Rowe, of Baltimore, was sent to preach for us on the fifth Sunday in March and it was like a great rattling among dry leaves and since that time we have been having prayer meeting twice a month, with Brother W. H. McCleary conducting the meetings. Now we have an organized church which was constituted August 30. Brother Rowe and Brother Meads preached for us in the spirit and power of the Lord I believe. We now number 14 members. Brother J. T. Walker, of Washington, D. C., will send you the proceedings of the meeting to be published in the next issue of the Landmark.

I enclose $1 to start my subscription on the Landmark and will send balance yearly due soon and some new subscribers if possible. Brother W. H. McCleary, an old subscriber asked me to tell you to please send him a copy of the Landmark of September 15.

Brother Gold please give me your views on the Song of Solomon 8: 8, 9, 10 as they are continually on my mind in connection with our little church here.

Beloved brother, we would be so glad to have you come and preach to us, and any of the brethren who will. We desire the prayers of all the dear saints everywhere.

With much love to all the church of Christ of which I hope I am a member. I am your unworthy sister.

THE PRIESTHOOD OF CHRIST.

(By J. C. Philpot).

But having thus far seen his blessed fitness for the office of priest as the true and proper son of God, we may now direct our thoughts to a consideration of the office character which he thus assumed. In attempting to do this, it will, perhaps, be desirable to obtain a clear view of the nature of that office. A priest implies a sacrifice, and a sacrifice implies three parties: 1, a guilty transgressor, for whom the sacrifice is offered; 2, a holy God, to whom the atonement is made; 3, a priest, who shall stand as a mediator between God and the sinner, and who shall offer the sacrifice required. We see all this strikingly shown when the children of Israel sinned in murmuring against the Lord for his destroying Korah, Dathan, and Abiram. The children of Israel were the guilty transgressors; the Lord God of Israel was he against whom they had sinned; Aaron, offering incense and making atonement for the people, was the priest, the typical mediator. As he stood between the dead and the living, and the plague was stayed)Numbers xvi. 48). Thus we, as we know by painful experience, are guilty sinners before God; He, in all the perfection of his justice, purity, and holiness, his wrath against sin, and his inflexible determination by no means to clear the guilty, is our most just and righteous judge; our adorable Lord, the Son of God in our nature, Immanuel, God with us, is the mediator, the only mediator between God and us; and he, as our high priest, has offered a sacrifice, even himself as a propitiation for our sins. We should, however, carefully observe that there is no necessary or natural connection between sin and sacrifice, or that God is at all bound by his moral perfections to pardon sin. It is wholly owing to the all-wise and all-gracious will of God that any pardon should be extended to any sinner, that any grace should be shown to him, or that any way should have been devised and executed to open a way of escape from the wrath justly due to his transgressions. It pleased God, in the depths of his infinite wisdom and mercy, that a way of salvation should be provided for the lost: but as justice must be amply satisfied, as the righteous law of God could not be violated with impunity, as his infinite purity and holiness could not be tarnished by passing by iniquity, as if it were a slight thing for a man to deface the image of God, and, by listening to Satan, to defy the authority of his maker, this could only be accomplished through a sacrifice of God's own providing, which was no less than that of his dear son, that "He should be made sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

But here let us for a moment pause to apply these thoughts to our consciences, and to examine our spiritual and experimental acquaintance with them; for however clearly we may seem to see, or however boldly acknowledge these as important truths, yet what is all this short of their experimental power? and how deeply do we need that they should not only be at first made known to us by divine manifestation, but that they should be kept warm, fresh, and alive in our bosom as every-day realities for our faith, hope, and love to be actively engaged upon as the very life of our soul. We therefore need on all these points the special teachings and testimony of the Holy Ghost, not only to lead us feelingly and experimentally into them under the first convictions of sin and the early suings for mercy, but to seal them daily upon our consciences as living realities, so as to live continually under their power and influence. The great mark of divine life in the soul is that it makes itself manifest by its internal movements, and that all these movements, whether up or down in or out, all really tend upward to the fountain of life, who said, "Because I live, ye shall live also;" "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." If I have no daily sight or sense of sin, no deep and abiding conviction of my state by nature before God as a most miserable transgressor, a guilty criminal of common dye, I shall certainly neither know nor care to know anything experimentally and savingly of the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ. But, again, if I have no spiritual view of that just, holy, and righteous God with whom I have to do, who in himself is "the consuming fire," and whose indignation as such burns to the lowest hell, what sense can I have of needing a sacrifice for my sins, and that that sacrifice should have been consummated by nothing less than the blood-shedding sufferings, and death of his co-equal, co-eternal son? And further, unless I have some spiritual knowledge of and faith in the only-begotten son of God, what can I know of his having shed his precious blood to redeem my soul from the lowest hell? Or again, whatever may be my views and feelings upon these points, how can I spiritually apprehend them, or live from day to day upon them, except the blessed spirit be continually opening them up and applying them to my heart? But we are rather anticipating our proposed intention of showing the peculiar bearing which the priesthood of the Lord Jesus has upon the experience of the saints of God, and shall therefore pursue no further this train of thought. Our present object is rather first to establish its truth on a firm, scriptural basis, and open up its nature and character, its end and object before we enter upon the experience of its benefits and blessings as made known by a divine power to the soul.

Having, then, seen that the original and eternal dignity of the Son of God as a person in the glorious Trinity is essential to his priesthood, and that his being God the Son fitted him in a manner, full, beyond all conception, of ineffable grace and glory, to sustain that office, we may now look at what was further necessary that he might execute it according to the will of God, and in perfect harmony with "the counsel of peace which was between them both" (Hebrews x 9; Ze. vi. 13). One main object of our blessed Lord's assuming, according to the will of his heavenly Father, the office of a priest, was that he might "put away sin by the sacrifice of himself" (Hebrews ix. 26). To offer sacrifice, we know, was one chief part of the priestly office, for priesthood and sacrifices are so indissolubly connected that it is a received axiom, that where there is no priest there is no sacrifice, and when there is no sacrifice there is no priest. Sin could not be put away without a sacrifice, and this sacrifice must be no less than the obedience, bloodshedding, sufferings, and death of the son of God, wherein and whereby he offered up himself as a propitiation to put away the wrath of God; for "it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins" (Hebrews x. 4). Sin being such an abominable thing in the sight of God, such a violation of his word and will, such a daring rebellion against his majesty and glory, such a casting aside of his righteous government and authority, rendering the sinner so polluted and unclean, so filling him with a teeming mass of ungodliness, and so making body and soul a very temple of Satan, it could not be forgiven and put away, without a sacrifice in some way commensurate to its flagrant and hideous enormity. That sin should be visibly and effectually punished, the righteous character of God be fully and openly cleared, the claims of his holy law be thoroughly satisfied, his truth and justice be amply vindicated, his wrath be wholly appeased, and yet that his mercy and love might be displayed in all their gracious and eternal fulness in the complete salvation of an innumerable company of chosen sinners—this was the grand mystery of infinite wisdom, infinite love, and infinite power, to be accomplished and revealed in the person and work of the son of God, as giving "Himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour" (Ephesians v. 2). But this sacrifice of himself he could not offer, unless he took a body capable of doing and suffering the whole will of God. Deity, as pure deity, can neither obey nor suffer. The Son of God, as the true and proper Son of God (only), co-equal and co-eternal with the Father and the Holy Ghost, could neither obey nor bleed, nor die. And yet without obedience the law cannot be fulfilled; without blood, sin cannot be remitted; without death the sacrifice cannot be completed. Yet must it be obedience without failure, blood without blemish, and death without desert. A lamb, therefore, was needed "without blemish and without spot" (I Peter i. 19); a Lamb "slain" in the purposes of God, "from the foundation of the world" (Rev. xiii. 8); and that lamb one which God had "provided for himself," as Abraham prophetically assured Isaac he would do (Genesis xxii. 8).

Here, then, we see in some measure the beauty and blessedness, the grace and glory of that pure and sacred humanity which the Son of God took in the womb of the Virgin Mary, under the overshadowing power and operations of the Holy Ghost, and whereby he became "Immanuel, God with us." This was "the body" which his heavenly Father "prepared" for him, and which was "curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth" (Psalms cxxxix. 15), when at one and the same instant the divine person of the Son of God took a pure and perfect human body and a pure and perfect human soul in the womb of the Virgin. Then could he say, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. Sacrifice and offering (that is, such as are offered by the law) thou wouldst not; but a body hast thou prepared me" (Hebrews x 5).—Selected.

BORN AGAIN.

I notice some preachers in attempting an explanation of Adam's state since his transgression err in their estimate of what he was in his first estate. If we do not know what Adam is now should it be expected we should know what he was before he was what he is now? My impression is that the man who knows what Adam is now has a more correct view of what he was in his uprightness than the one who does not know what he is now.

A man that denies the necessity of a new birth—a being born of God or born from above—does not feel Adam's vileness, nor have any conception of God's holiness.

Literally a birth is an entrance into a different state from what that was before. While it cannot be said that naturally a child had no life or existence before it was born, yet, it must be born in order for it to enter this world, and become subject to its laws. The child must have had life before its birth, and while in its mother's womb or it would not be born alive. Birth develops, liberates, brings out, manifests, brings to our view, that which in this manner and way comes into the world. No natural child ever saw the light until it was born, or ever heard voices of men before its birth. So that by birth one is brought into the circumstances, surroundings, condition and under the laws of the world he is born in.

When Christ was born of a woman he was made under the law and was found and fashioned as a man.

Christ said to Nicodemus except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God. He must be born of God or born from above so that he can discern and enter into the nature of the kingdom of heaven. Its laws are spiritual so that he by birth must be brought into harmony with the law of God. It is in the nature of the divine law to be able to reach to, condescend and adapt itself to the weaker. The higher and greater can reach down to and take up and lift up, elevate those who are beneath by implanting a higher, stronger order of life in the inferior substance. For instance man is of the earth earthy, but the Lord Jesus who is not of the earth earthy took upon him a body of flesh, and being found in fashion as a man he was humbled to the death of the cross that we by his poverty might be rich. He bear our sins in his own body on the tree that we should be free from sin, and he quickens us from the dead that we through his poverty might be rich. We are begotten again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. The life of Jesus is manifest in our mortal flesh. The spirit, holy, higher law of Jesus quickens us into a new spiritual life, and we are born of God, or born from above, born of the spirit, and are therefore spirit.

How about the body that dies? We have received the spirit of adoption which witnesses to us that the body shall be raised from the dead. It must die. The mortal body is sown in death, but raised a spiritual body. For he shall change our vile body and fashion it like unto his glorious body. This corruptible (body) must put on incorruption. When we awake with his likeness we shall be satisfied.

Then the man is saved. This sinner is saved. First God quickens the dead in sins, for we are begotten again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away reserved in heaven for those who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. For Jesus shall raise the dead in Christ, and change those of his people who are living on earth, and together they shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air and so shall they ever be with the Lord.

P. D. G.

Brother T. R. Spivey, of Georgia requests my view of First Corinthians fifth chapter.

Let us consider the 11th verse, "But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolator, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not eat."

The subject matter of the chapter relates to fellowship. This is a peculiar love found in the church of God. In order for any one to counted fit and be esteemed as worthy of this fellowship he must be purged of the old leaven of the flesh or hypocrisy, and be manifested as of the new lump holy. For even Christ our passover is slain for us.

There was a report that there was such a fornicator as one having his father's wife being retained as a church member there at Corinth. This is such a shame as would not be tolerated even among the heathen. This church was even defending that man, puffed up, not having even mourned that such was the case. If the church had felt the sin and mourned then they would be in a condition to have that man taken away from them by their withdrawing their fellowship from him.

Paul was absent from them in the body but was present in spirit, and had already judged concerning him that had done this deed. In the name of the Lord Jesus, when you are gathered together—that is in your conference—the spirit of Paul with the power of the Lord Jesus to deliver such an one—this fornicator—unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. Paul was empowered as judge in the church of God to direct in the exercise of discipline for the peace of the church, and what he and the other apostles bound on earth was bound in heaven, and what they loosed on earth was loosed in heaven. For these apostles are joined unto Jesus the head of the church in the healthful administration of the order of the church of Jesus Christ.

There is a use for Satan. When one a child of God walks after the flesh, and will not give heed to admonition, but perish in walking after the flesh the church is, after laboring with him with a true desire to save him, and he will not hear them, is to deliver him to Satan for the destruction of the flesh. That is what Satan feeds on, for dust is the serpent's meat. He is very fond of it, and devours it greedily. Imagine him casting one into his great pot or furnace and boiling him with burning coals of fire, with what scorching power and distress Satan, who has the power of death, imprisons this proud, selfish, conceited, fleshly one until these fleshly, ungodly principles, these lusts of the flesh, are burned up. Does Satan ever fail in his work? No, never. When one is delivered into the hand of Satan he will not forget how Satan has executed his job.

Do not hink that the devil exists for no purpose, or that his flatteries will prove truthful, or that when he paints the lusts of the flesh in such fair colors that there is a word of truth in them. The snare of the power is artfully set, but when the poor, silly bird is caught then no more flattery, but oppression, misery, death follows. How wretched that one feels. How awful his condition. If we walk after the flesh we shall die.

In the second epistle to the church at Corinth reference is made to this same character who has been chastened (see second chapter of second epistle,) unto great suffering, and Paul writes to this church to restore this same one lest he be overwhelmed with sorrow.

Paul tells the church that God Judges them that are without, but that they (the church) are to judge those that are within. For we can not well avoid meeting up and dealing in ordinary business with corrupt worldly men more or less. In order to keep no company in any sense with the fornicators or covetous of this world we must need go out of the world. But he writes the church is not to fellowship or eat in the table of the Lord's supper, or to commune with any fornicator. That is do not fellowship with him that is guilty of lewd conduct with a woman. This is fornication, nor with a covetous man. What is a covetous man? He is one who covets what is not his own, and who would take the labor of others for nothing. If I can get a man to serve me and I am not disposed, and do not minister to or serve him in any way, letting him labor for me and I do not help him any, I am a covetous man. I am taking from him that which is not mine. Suppose one preaches the gospel to me, and I do not minister to him of my carnal things, I know that he is at expense in visiting me losing time and paying out money and away from his family at his own charges and he gives nothing to support my family and I not a covetous man. If he has ministered to me in spiritual things is it a great matter that I minister to him in carnal things in serving me and I do not help him is this right. Now does the church ever deal with or labor with a member thus covetous? Should you eat and drink with him at the Lord's table? Should you hold him in your fellowship?

Suppose he is an idolator loving money or things of the world, and worshipping or trusting in such is he worthy of membership in the church or family of God?

Suppose he is a railer, murmuring at providence, or abusing mankind, or meddling and pressing in things he has no business with, not being meek and quiet, is he worthy of membership with the household of faith?

Suppose he is a drunkard. A drunkard is man that is intoxicated or drunken with liquor or with the cares of this life so that he is not sober minded. Is he worthy of church membership?

Suppose he is an extortioner, or one that oppresses others, wrongs them, takes from them more than is right or meet, wrenches or twists anything from another by threat or violence, or by any unjust or unfair means, shall such an one be held in church fellowship? No. Who but one born from above and humble is fit to be a church member. What a solemn and blessed, serious, holy calling to walk by the faith, of Jesus. What a faithful and wonderful thing is gospel discipline. What a high calling to walk in white. P. D. G.

NEW VOLUME NUMBER 42.

We commence another volume of Zion's Landmark. A volume is intended to be a finished book. For instance a volume of Zion's Landmark contains 24 issues or numbers. For as much as writings have been made for ages declaring and setting forth what is surely believed among us, I have also for nearly 40 years been led to contribute what has occurred to me as an impression or view from the word of God of what should be received and observed by us. From time to time I have written as it seemed good to me relative to matters which concern our people in doctrine, experience, conduct, conversation, discipline, and whatever is of importance to be observed in Zion. To write unto edification and for peace on gospel principles has been my purpose. For there can be no solid peace unless God is its author. My love for the brotherhood constrains me to write for the peace of Zion. While I live I desire that this shall be my motive.

My imperfections are such that none but those that love Zion can bear with them. We know nothing of the future. The peradventure is with us. Casting bread on the waters however is not a profitless or uncertain business. We have received many encouraging letters of comfort our imperfect efforts have brought to the readers of Zion's Landmark. This to us is a labor of love. P. D. G.

Mr. Gold will you please tell through the Landmark whether the scriptures give any account of Christ's going to school; also if he was trying to learn something from the lawyers and doctors when he was twelve years old?

Very truly yours,

MARY JANE FUQUAY.

Jonesboro, N. C., R. F. D., No. 2.

Remarks—Could any one that had any true understanding of Christ think that he received anything of man, or is indebted to man for any thing. Shall vain man instruct the Son of God, or teach the Almighty? Who hath instructed him? If he were hungry would he ask anything of poor, vain man?

One of the questions that haunted the blinded, unbelieving Jews, who hated Christ without a cause, and :

whom they would not render a word of honor, was whence hath this man letters having never learned? They knew he had never gone to school. How did he then know the scriptures? How could he tell their thoughts? How could he so answer all their questions, that they could make no reply? He was the greatest enigma to them. They wanted to condemn him, yet the more they condemned him the more they showed their own wickedness.

When twelve years of age he was found in the temple asking and answering questions of the learned Jews, the doctors of law and rulers. He answered their questions so completely that they marveled and wondered. He asked questions of them not to gain information from them, but to show the folly of their position and views.

Jesus as an infant was holy, and no other infant was thus holy. This child born unto us—not merely for us—but unto us, this son given—not offered—unto us is wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Was, there ever any failure in him? He increased in wisdom and stature. The wisdom of God was in him. His increase was the greater manifestation of that wisdom as there was more call or need for it, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man."

In him were all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. He is God manifest in the flesh. He is made of God unto the believer, wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."

There is nothing we know of ourselves as we ought to know. There is nothing hid from him. We are complete in him wanting nothing.

Faith forbids our having any confidence in ourselves. Faith in Jesus could not be holy and precious or efficacious if we had the shadow of a doubt that he is limited in knowledge or power, or that he is dependent on man for any help from man, or any power in man to put himself in a position to make himself acceptable to God.

What a heaviness and gloominess to such as confess that they worship a God who is dependent on man in any thing, or for any thing. What a comfort to trust in the eternal God whose everlasting arm is underneath, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on thee, because he trusteth in thee."

I have no idea that our friend Mr. M. J. Fuquay holds in any sense to the popular sentiments or notions of the world concerning the Lord Jesus.

P. D. G.

Elder W. D. Matthews, of Atlanta, Ga., is an active and useful brother. He is president of a hospital known as the Durham hospital. It charges $25 per week for patients, first class, second class romms $15 per week; but sufferers not able to pay more are received at $7.50 per week. But to obtain this favor application must be made to Elder D. M. Matthews, 426 Cipitol avenue, Atlanta, Ga., and not to Dr. Field, who has charge of the Field infirmary. The service is excellent and the success of the treatment of patients is remarkably good.

Besides this Elder Matthews is connected with an institution known as the Old Women's Home, where in distressed and helpless old women of good character are supported free.

Beside this an unaccountable puzzling phenomenon appeared recently at Social Circle in Georgia, that Elder Matthews has caused to be placed on exhibition in Atlanta, that is attracting great attention, and is not as yet accounted for by any man. He told me he should offer $1,000 to any one who would explain this mystery.

I copy what has appeared in the Atlanta Constitution in regard to the matter:

"During the month July there appeared on the wall of the new residence of Mr. M. M. Almand, in this city, an unsightly blemish, of a dark brown hue, and at first was supposed to be caused by a leak, but afterwards it was conclusively proven that no leak was there and the discoloration was perfectly dry. Some time afterward there appeared in the top of this spot a perfectly formed woman's head and face, followed later on by an infant lying across the woman's lap. Later came a perfect hand with index finger pointing to the east. Later on, and quite recently appeared another infant, the exact image of the first infant, also lying across the woman's lap. There are several other faces on the picture such as a body shrouded for burial, several men's faces and some lettering.

The appearance upon a spotless wall of, first, the discoloration and then the pictures coming out in bold relief, has caused no end of speculation as to what caused it, which cause is shrouded in mystery. Chemicals, water and heat have been applied to portions of the picture as a test, and have had no effect, as the picture remains the same after each test, which is conclusive evidence that it came there by the agency of no man. We have seen the picture every day for the past six weeks, and it seems to us that the pictures are increasing, as several have made their appearance in the past few weeks.

Hundreds have been to see the pictures, among them scholars, divines and men read in mystic lore, but when asked for an explanation of the picture one and all decline to give an opinion, saying it is too deep for them.

The picture is of mysterious origin, inasmuch as it came upon a spotless wall without any human agency. That there is an explanation of its appearance outside of the superhuman view taken by many, we do not doubt, but that explanation has not been forthcoming.

Photographs were taken of the Almand family, of the house and each room taken separately, as well as the room containing the picture, before and after its removal. Preparatory to the removal of the picture from the residence of M. M. Almand, of Social Circle, Ga., Mr. W. D. Webb, contractor, and I. B. Eason, expert carpenter, cut out the section of the wall containing the picture. The portion of wall cut out will show outside of the wall with weatherboarding as it originally stood, as well as the inside wall containing the picture."

I visited two associations in Georgia, the Eachaconnee and Yellow River. Elder T. J. Bentley is moderator of the first one, and Elder James Jordan of the second one which was held in the city of Atlanta.

There were many preachers present, and a large crowd in Atlanta.

EXTREMES—BOND OF UNITY.

The Catholics, in order to prevent schisms in their body of membership have, a pope considered infallible as head of the church who declares what each Catholic is to hold so that there shall be one interpretation, one meaning, one faith, one practice, in the entire body. The right of private interpretation of the scripture or its meaning is denied to any member. What the priest declares to be the meaning of the scriptures must be accepted and held by each member.

Many have been imprisoned and burnt for holding what was contrary to the doctrinal sentiments of their church.

When Martin Luther, John Calvin, and other reformers declared against the Catholics, soon there were various denominations springing up, some hold ing to one thing and some to another, so then began the great spread of different sects that now are counted by the hundreds. The efforts of these different sects to come together fails to materialize, or rather it is only materialistic, since no two men not taught of God can agree, or have one mind, for each will have his own mind, and it is all the member of a man or man's works.

But when the God of peace teaches his people great is their peace. He takes away the stony heart and the carnal mind, and gives a mind of peace or that loves the truth. He renews them in the spirit of their mind and gives them one and the same mind. They all believe one and the same thing, and all believe the same thing in Christ Jesus. They shall be all taught of God and great shall be their peace. Thus God is the author and preserver of their peace; nor need they any armies to make them keep the peace; nor any rules and resolutions of men to hold them together. They are exhorted to strive together for the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, and to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

They that know Jesus will forsake all else for him, and seek nothing else. They speak one and the same things in Christ Jesus, and their conduct is marked by humility. Any that do not thus walk the church is to withdraw after having labored with them, if they will not hear the church: for the life and discipline of Christ is in the church which is joined together by joints and bands ministering to and nourishing and strengthening each other. God dwells in the church and walks in it as his habitation. Hence the true members love the church of God and dwell together in unity. P. D. G.

MELCHISEDEC.

A friend requests my view of Heb.

7:1-3. This request is on scriptures concerning Melchisedec. This man was so great that it is not told how great he was. "Now consider how great this man was." The phrase now great makes no comparison of equality with any other. He was greater than a righteous king, for he was king of righteousness. He was greater than a peaceable king, for he was a king of peace. He was greater than Abraham, for Abraham blessed him. He was greater than the priesthood of Levi that paid tithes to Melchisedec, while he was yet in the loins of Abraham. His priesthood was greater than that of Levi for he did not receive it of man, nor transmit it to another; but abides forever as the priest of the most high God. Then he appears as the most wonderful character without father or mother, or beginning of days, or end of time, as the effectual priest of the most high God, giving efficacy and strength to the worship under the law which made nothing perfect; but as guaranteeing a worship that should bring perfection. This most noted type of the Lord Jesus our glorious high priest on his Father's throne, who was from the beginning the most glorious high throne, was so made by the oath of him who cannot lie. The brightest and highest types are employed to set forth the glorious majesty of Jesus as Lord of all.

The law made nothing perfect. It was the best of earth—lambs of the firstling of the flock without blemish—blood freely shed—a priesthood unto whom God gave this honor—the man Moses the meekest of men—the law coming from heaven good, holy and spiritual, yet all this utterly failed to save a single soul or to cleanse from sin. A better covenant, a better priesthood, a new kingdom, a new king made after the order of Melchisedec must reign and abide priest of the most high God forevermore, P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

HARRIET STOTT.

Harriet Stott, was born February 28, 1862 and died June 7, 1908.

She was the daughter of Arnold and Zilpha Nichols. She married Godfrey Stott January 6, 1883. Unto this union were born eight children, only three are living, one girl and two boys. She first joined the Free Will Baptist church, but eight months before her death she left them and united with the Primitive Baptists. She was meek and lowly and loved by the brethren. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Elder E. W. Boswell. J. M. BURNETTE.

J. T. FENFROW.

Whereas Brother J. T. Renfrow departed his life September 24, 1908, and the church of Contentnea feels a deep sense of loss sustained in his death.

Be it resolved, that Brother Renfrow whose life illustrated the life professed. This means that he was honest and conscientious and that he performed to the utmost of his ability the duty of a good citizen. To the poor and distressed he was ever kind and sympathetic, causing the widows' hearts to sing and the poor to call him a friend indeed. In his community he was neighborly and a brother whose influence was a blessing and a benediction.

In his family he was a good husband and father. As a church member few excelled him. He showed his faith by his works.

We bless God for his life and example. Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon record, and a copy sent to Zion's Landmark, and a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

ELDER G. W. BOSWELL, Moderator,

WILLIAM O. BARNES.

Brother Wm. O. Barnes, was born December 15, 1842 and was married to Miss Algid Barnes, daughter of Mrs. Eviline Farnes, June 15, 1870. He was baptized by Elder W. F. Bell in'to the fellowship of the Primitive Baptist church at Deep Creek, Halifax county, N. C., on the first Sunday in November 1878. He died August 23, 1908.

He was a strict member of the church and always filled his seat when not providentially hindered. He was glad when the brethren visited him and always looked well to the comfort of his family. He had no children born to him. He was raised a poor boy, labored hard all his life and received a home for himself and wife with whom he lived contented and happy.

His christian life was upright and his walk was in accordance with his profession, believing in salvation by grace through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and died in the triumph of that faith which was once delivered to the saints.

He leaves a devoted wife and many friend to mourn their loss which we believe is his eternal gain. Peace to his ashes.

MISS MARY F. HYMAN.

By request of the members of Cross Roads church, I send you the obituary of Sister Mary F. Hyman. She was born in Edgecombe County, N. C., on the 15th of November 1822 and died at the residence of her nephew Mr. Ed. Hyman near Hobbgood, N. C., February 11, 1908, after an illness of three weeks, suffering mostly from heart trouble, making her stay on earth 85 years three months and twenty-six days.

Her father from what I have heard was one of the most faithful ministers the Primitive Baptists had in that day, and was moderator of the Kehukee association from 1828 to 1857 when by reason of age and infirmity he was unable to attend meeting and Elder C. B. Hassell was chosen in his place.

Sister Hyman was blessed with a good hope through grace and joined the church at Cross Roads, Edgecombe county, N. C., Saturday before the second Sunday in September 1854 and was baptized the next day by Elder Eli McCaskey and has ever since led a life of holy example. I feel that she was indeed a mother in Israel and was never missing at her meeting time, unless providentially hindered. She was one of the finest advocates of salvation by grace and her whole theme was Jesus and him crucified, she was a great lover of singing and sung a beautiful treble as long as she lived, her favorite hymn being, "How firm a foundation ye sains of the Lord," which she would ask us to sing at every meeting and she would sing with the spirit. The Lord had blessed her with a very bright active mind and I have been told that she was very industrious. She was very kind to me after I took the care of the church at Cross Roads and her advice to me was very encouraging and touching. She told me she prayed the blessings of the Lord upon me and that the church might prosper and grow.

The last conversation she told me she was only waiting the Lord's time for him to take her home from this world of sin and sorrow, and I feel assured she has gone to reap that reward that belongs to the people of God prepared for them from the foundation of the world.

I feel that words fail to express the many lovely traits of character of this dear sister. I hope the blessings of the Lord may rest on her nephew Mr. Ed Hyman and family for their kindness to her and to her niece Miss Sue Hyman who was so kind in conveying her to her meetings and caring for her in her last days.

She was buried in the family burial ground there to await the morning of the resurrection when her body will be raised triumphant over death and the grave. The church misses her and feel grieved at her departure, while we believe it is her eternal gain.

MARY BLACKMAN LEE.

Mother was born April 29, 1847, and died August 17, 1908, making her stay on earth 61 years three months 18 days. She was married to Monroe Lee on the 12th day of May 1868. Unto this union were born eleven children, nine of which are now living.

Mother joined the Primitive Baptists church at Hickory Grove, Saturday before the second Sunday in September 1896, and was baptized the next day by Elder U. J. Westbrook, and lived a consistent member of that church until it pleased God to take her out of this low ground of sorrow to dwell, as we have the evidence to believe, in that blessed home above. Mother always filled her seat on her meeting days unless providentially hindered, in her last days.

After she was unable to attend church she always wanted some of the brethren and sisters to visit her which many of them did.

I think Brother Gold there is too much said about the dead sometimes, so I will be as short as possible. Yes it is hard to say too much about a good mother which I claim we were blessed with. I know she was a good wife, a good neighbor and a good mother.

Mother was industrious in trying to bring up her children right teaching them to obey her as long as they remained under her control, and after they had left her she spent hours giving them advice, whether they heeded or not. She was a great sufferer for several years, first with scrofula, then came a spinal trouble and consumption which grew worse until it took her away. She bore her suffering with meek patience and when she saw the end was near she prayed to die, her sufferings were so severe. It was hard to gaze upon mother lying cold in death. One that has nursed us and cared for us, no matter how tired or weak as she could go. She could not do enough it seemed to satisfy her for the suffering. But I have been made to feel that our loss is her eternal gain, and she is now reaping the reward that awaits the people of God. I trust I have a little hope of meeting mother ere long where no more sickness, sorrow, pain nor death is, where the redeemed of the Lord walk the streets of that New Jerusalem there to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom; so with David I would say when I awake with thy likeness I shall be satisfied. Yes I trust that God through his goodness, love and mercy may lead, guide and direct me to walk in the light of his countenance turning neither to the right nor the left, but ever abiding in the faith once delivered to the saints. May it please God to lead all her children into the light that they may one day yet to come be numbered among the redeemed of the Lord. When I returned from the burying grounds, where mother had been confined to the narrow limits of the grave, to await the resurrection morn, for the first time in thirty-five years I found her chair permanently vacant, no more to be occupied by her, no more to hear that comforting voice, no more to feel that soothing hand when in distress or afflicted.

In conclusion I want to say to her children and grand-children, though she is dead she yet speaketh. Remember her example and try to follow in the paths she trod as near as you can, and may the Lord enable you all if it is according to his divine will, to say as she did that your hope and trust is in Jesus.

Her loving son,

MOSES LEE.

MOLLIE E. SASSER.

Dear Brother Gold—I send you for publication the death of my dear sister by birth and also in Christ, Mollie E. Sasser, who was born April 6, 1870 and died October 8, 1908, making her stay on earth 38 years six month and three days.

She was the daughter of Martin Raper and Pollie Raper and married W. R. Sasser. Unto them were born nine children, 5 boys and four girls. Five together with her dear husband still survive her.

It is with a sad heart I attempt to write of my dear sister. Her walk would bright it makes me glory in the Lord to feel his home is a happy one for her and that she is singing in the sweet courts of glory.

She was a member of the Free Will Baptist church for about fifteen years, but God in his allwise wisdom saw fit to bring her up out of Babylon, established her going and put a new song in her mouth even praises unto Israel's God.

She joined the Primitive Baptist church

October 5, 1907 and was baptized the next day by Elder G. W. Boswell.

She attended every meeting until taken in affliction so she could not go and would often speak of how she enjoyed the true doctrine which comes from above. And how she did enjoy seeing the brethren and sisters and having them speak of the heavenly things which flow with milk and honey.

Brethren it is not our will to lose our loved ones, but our loss is their eternal gain. I hope all of God's people will remember the dear family in their prayers and that God may draw them nearer to him that they may be prepared to meet her in that kingdom where parting is no more, world without end amen.

May the Lord bless us all and enable all of us to walk closer to God day and night in the prayer of an unworthy brother.

Just before my dear sister passed away she reached out her hand to her dear father as if to say, I am bound for a higher and brighter world.

Brother G. W. Boswell attended the funeral and opened the services with praise and prayer.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

P. D. GOLD.

I trust every reader will try and secure a new subscriber for the Landmark. Our expenses are heavier and an increased circulation is necessary to enable us to make anything.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold—I have been troubled and perplexed for quite awhile in regard to the condition of the Old Baptists and have really had serious fears that the war that has been raging among them would result in their extinction. But recently I have become more hopeful and the following thoughts have occurred to me, which I now send you. These thoughts are illustrations. "When there is war, either between two nations, or internal revolution, there is always more or less excitement, love, sympathy and good will give way to hatred, vengeance and retaliation. And opposing forces butcher each other without remorse. Every available weapon is brought into play to destroy the enemy. Lawlessness, disorder and confusion reign supreme, and the innocent suffer with the guilty. Desolation and ruin are everywhere apparent. After each succeeding battle there is a lull and hostilities cease for a time to care for the dead, wounded, and dying. After awhile either by conquest or otherwise the war terminates, and then the people return to their wasted homes, and go to work to rebuild and reconstruct and re-adjust. But it requires a long time to recover from the dreadful and devastating effects of war. In addition to the destruction of property and loss of life, every thing and every body is demoralized. Moral character is below par, consequently it takes a long time for conditions to right themselves again. A money panic produces similar results in the commercial and laboring world.

It is said that "after a storm there is always a calm."

A person is suddenly taken seriously ill, the doctor is called in, but he is puzzled, can't diagnose the case. Consulting doctors are called, various remedies are tried. The patient lingers between life and death, anxious friends watch by the bedside day and night, and hope and pray for their recovery. Finally perhaps when hope has fled and despair takes its place the patient begins slowly to recover, but it takes time for restoration to health again.

Now to sum up, we have the war, the conflict has been bitter, and waged with relentless fury. It was not a war against foreign foe, but a war among ourselves. The most prominent weapons used was "Absolute Predestination of all things" on the one side and "Conditional time salvation" on the other side. Other weapons have been used, but those two were the most prominent, and the most destructive. Many have been wounded and many have been slain on both sides, and I trust the war is over, and the last battle fought. I don't think there has been any conquest on either side. Both sides seem to have decided that war is a bad thing at best, and there seems to be a desire for peace, and a desire to "beat their swords into plow shares, and their spears into pruning hooks." The storm came and carried destruction and havoc in its path, but the storm is gone and there is a "great calm." The patient that was so sick hovering between life and death is on the road to recovery. "Is there no balm in Gilead? is there no physician there? Then why is the health of the daughter of my people not recovered?" Whence come wars and fightings amongst you, etc. He maketh wars to cease to the end of the earth."

And now Brother Gold I feel more encouraged. "Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation. She shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end." "My word shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, henceforth, even forever."

This is enough. The church is built upon this Rock—(The Rock of Revelation) and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

"Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, etc.

In hope of real and lasting peace through Christ.

Yours to serve.

H. J. REDD.

Remarks—What folly is there in going to war. If while war is raging we would keep far from every evil work then it would be so different. But war is a time when evils break out.

However, we learn in the school of affliction by finding out that we are the fools and transgressors.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold—As I hope in the Lord if one so weak as I am to claim that relationship with you who is blessed with the goodness of God to write and explain the wisdom of God so wonderfully as you do. I am sending you for re-publication again the pieces that have been printed in the old Landmark, of the date of June 15, 1898, and December 15, 1898, of the wonderful trip that Brother Leland traveled.

I am sending these by the request of the brethren and friends. This is a wonderful miracle of the work of God. This from one that hopes that he has been taught the love of God. Pray for me that I may be willing for his will to be done.

Your brother in Christ I hope, SAMUEL SNIDER.

The following remarkable incident has been sent us for publication. It may not be amiss to give it a careful reading. Pride is a great and growing evil.

The following incident is told as part of the unwritten or traditional history of Elder John Leland during the latter part of his life

Mr. Leland traveled much over the country on preaching tours on foot. On one occasion he had been warmly solicited in writing by a widow lady to visit the part of old Virginia in which she lived, and preach, telling him to set his time and her house was at his service, both as a place of abode and also a place to hold his meetings. Mr. Leland replied to her by setting a day that he would preach at her residence at 10 o'clock a. m.

The lady was a wealthy planter in Annamattox valley, and regarded her self as one of the most pious and exemplary persons to be found any where. She had been raised in the high circles of life, and knew nothing about poverty, nor had ever associated with laboring classes. She was at this time about 35 years of age, and had been a widow two years; but knew nothing of the privations commonly attending the life of a widowed mother.

She took much pains to appear pious and her chief object in inviting Mr. Leland to preach at her house was that she might make a display of her wealth, and thus have the applause of all of her associates. So she went to a great trouble and expense in preparing for the meeting. The appointment had been spread far and near, pressing solicitations had been sent to numerous friends to attend the meeting, no expense or pains had been spared, not only to have the best and finest of everything, but to have everything in the best style. On the evening preceding the meeting several carriages had already arrived to be in good time, and to enjoy the hospitality of the hostess. About sunset Mr. Leland came to the mansion on foot. The day was quite warm and he was dusty when he made his appearance. The walk had caused a free perspiration which ran down his cheeks, making roads in the dust which had settled on his face during his day's walk. He walked up to the door of the large stone mansion, and his rap was answered by a black servant, of whom he inquired for the landlady. The servant ran down the broad carpeted hall to a door from which proceeded the sound of talking and laughing. In a very short time a lady very richly attired made her appearance walking briskly and lightly toward the door where Mr. Leland was standing. He had a fair view of her person, and at once viewed in her physiognomy, her character and excessive vanity.

But before he had time to speak, or before she was near enough for him to address her, she spoke in rather a harsh tone; old man what do you want here? I have nothing for beggars. Mr. Leland in a soft and unassuming tone said, please excuse me madam; I do not wish to beg for money, but I am very tired from a long walk and called to know if you would do me the kindness to allow me to stay under your roof during the night.

Viewing him hastily from head to foot, she very postively answered no. I have company now, and tomorrow the Rev. Mr. Leland is to preach at my house, so I can't take in poor stragglers. Well, said Mr. Leland, I am too much fatigued to travel further tonight. Will you allow me to stay in one of those cabins, pointing to a row of negro houses just outside the mansion yard. After a moment or two of reflection she said, "Yes, you may stay there with the negroes if you want to." He bowed a very polite thank you, and turned toward the row of huts. He proceeded to the furtherest one from the mansion before he found any one to whom he could speak to ask permission to stay, but came at last to the smallest of all the huts, where he found seated at the door an old negro fawning herself with the wing of a fowl.

He spoke to her very gently, good evening aunty. His greeting was answered with good "evin mosta." Well aunty, said he, "I have come to ask a very uncommon favor of you." Bless de Lord mosta, what can that be, fo' pleas God Ise nuffin to give any one." "I am very tired from walking all day. I called at the house of your mistress but she says she has no room for me in the great house." I am too much fatigued to go farther, and so I have come to see if you can allow me to shelter in your house." "Bress de Lord mosta, I got no comodation for any one, but fore a fello mortal shall stay out does I let him stay in my cabin sho, ef dey can put up wid my plain hut. Uncle Ben be in directly, den he can keep you company while I fixes you sumpen to eat; for you looks as do you had not eat a morsel for a long time." At the same time pointing to a three legged stool by the side of the door saying, "set down dar, and rest your self, for you looks so wore out." Mr. Leland took the seat as directed saying at the same time, I am sorry that I am compelled to put you to so much trouble as I have no money to pay you. "Please God mosta, aunt Dilsey never charges any one yit far sich comodations as I could give em, God knows its poor enough at best. You say mosta, you call on missus at de house dar, and she can't take you in. Well, you must cuse her, for she's looking for a mighty heap o' company to-morrow. Dars a great man to be dar to-morrow what's gwine to preach in her house and a good many folks done come a ready, and heap mo comin to-morrow. So missus is mighty busy fixin far em. but here's Uncle Ben;" she continued as an old grey headed negro came around the corner of the cabin muttering to himself about the carelessness of some of the other negroes. This old couple, Uncle Ben and Aunt Dilsey as they were familiarly called by all who knew them both black and white, were an old couple who from old age had for a long time lived in a small but snug cabin at the far end of the row of huts occupied by the younger set and more active slaves.

Although Uncle Ben was not required to do any labor, yet he voluntarily took a kind of supervision over the farm, stock, etc. When he saw Mr. Leland he stopped short, and gave him a scrutinizing look, when Aunt Dilsey spoke saying, "Uncle Ben don't stare your eyes out at a stranger, dis ole gentleman was out traveling and come to stay in our cabin kase missus can't let him stay dar as she's got 'a heap o' company now." Well, said Uncle Ben, "We's commanded dat if a stranger comes along we's got to take him in and give himu sich as we have to set before him.

While Aunt Dilsey was preparing supper, Mr. Leland learned much about the lady of the mansion from Uncle Ben. He learned with other things that they were a very religious family, but the hostess had been raised in the city of Richmond, and had imbibed all the fashionable ideas of religion, with but very little of its true principles, and none of the humility.

Soon after Mr. Leland had finished a very good coarse supper he told his host that he was very much fatigued from a long day's walk, and would wish to retire for the night and that he felt like he wished to return thanks to his Creator for the blessings of the day, and invoke his protection through the night, that if it would annoy them he would retire to some place out of doors. Bress God, said both of the old folks at the same time, "We allers likes praying in our house, and neber goes to bed thout one of us tries to pray." Mr. Leland then took an old well worn bible out of his little bundle, and read in a very solemn tone the one hundred and second Psalm. During the reading the two old blacks often said in a low voice, "Amen, bress the Lord." When the psalm was ended, Mr. Leland fell upon his knees, and poured out his feelings in such an outburst of reverential eloquence as was seldom ever equaled, and never surpassed by mortal lips.

His host and hostess were so affected by the reading and prayer that they could do nor say no more than fix their eyes on their guest, as though they felt he was something more than a mortal man. He retired to a clean little pallet in one corner of the cabin, where he soon fell asleep. When morning came he was up early. Aunt Dilsey soon had a good plain repast, after which he seated himself to read telling his hostess that he felt too much fatigued to travel, and if she was willing he would rest there until afternoon any way, and then if he felt better he would go on his way. Aunt Dilsey said, "Yes mosta stay with us just as long as you want to. We be glad to have you stay with us a fortnight, if you can put up with our far." Mr. Leland seated himself under a shady tree in the cabin yard with his bible waiting to see what the finality would be. About 9 o'clock every thing was in a bustle at the stone mansion. All the servants were called in to dress in their very best. Carriages began to arrive by the dozens, until the hall and every part of the large and elegant home was crowded to overflowing, but to their dismay no preacher made his appearance, for the last carriage that came in sight had been scanned to get a glimpse of the minister. No one in the large congregation had ever seen him. So every one was full of anxious expectation, supposing that when he came he would be drawn by two or four fine horses driven by a servant in livery. 10 o'clock passed, half past 10, 11 o'clock was announced by the clock on the wall, and no minister. The company had by this time become restless, and were about to disperse when Aunt Dilsey went to her mistress and said, "Bress de Lord missus why don't you get dat ole man who stayed in our cabin last night to come here to de door and pray fore de folks all go home. He prayed in our cabin last night, and dis mornin, and fore God in all my born days: I nebber heard sich praying a fore, he's setting right dar now under the tall pine tree, and as de preacher's not come, if you let him pray, I'll go right now and fetch him down." The matter was talked of among the congregation when it was agreed to have the straggler, as they called him, come and pray before the congregation broke up. So Aunt Dilsey went to where Mr. Leland was sitting and said "mosta de folks all dispinted bout de preacher comin. He am not cum, and da wants you to go down and pray for em, fore da all break up. Mosta, I want you to pray jis like you did las night." Mr. Leland walked down to the front door, and standing on the steps repeated a short hymn by memory, sang and then engaged in prayer. By the time his prayer was ended all eyes were fixed upon him with amazement. He then remarked that as there seemed to be a dis-appointment, that if it would not be assuming too much, he would talk to them a few minutes. And as a foundation or starting point he would read a short passage from the word of truth which they would find by reference to the thirteenth chapter and second verse of Hebrews, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." When he had spoken for about twenty or thirty minutes, the hostess who had refused him the hospitalities of her house the evening before, became so deeply affected that she ran and prostrated herself at the feet of Mr. Leland, and would, had he allowed her to have done so, washed his feet with her tears. It was said that she was so overcome and affected that from that time forward she was a changed and different woman, so much so that she threw off all her finery and ornamental dressing, and became an humble and plain christian. Though she was a professor before, her whole deportment underwent a complete change. Her house became a place of divine worship, where she delighted in making all, no matter how plain, or how poor, as happy as kind attention could make them. In fact it was said that if preference had to be given to any it was always in favor of the poor and needy.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—This will inform you of my safe arrival after attending your association, which was very enjoyable. In fact I don't remember to have been blessed with the spirit of understanding to my joy more than at this meeting. And I rejoice that I was permitted to be there with the Lord's people.

There is nothing quite so reviving to my drooping spirit as to mingle with the saints and to hear them tell of the wonderful works and goodness and mercy of God. Indeed it is strengthening to the weak and weary, and I trust he will continue to bless me with this mind to seek their company, and with a meek and humble spirit to live at their feet, and be obedient to his blessed commands.

On my arrival home I found a card from Sister Addie V. Smith. It was twenty-six days coming (from Shanghai, China, 31 Quinson Road). It bears a message of love to the church, and desires that peace may abound with us, and promises to write more fully soon. I wrote her yesterday and requested her to write a communication for the "Landmark." If you have a mind to write her by way of remembrance and encouragement I am sure it will be appreciated.

I would assure both you, and Sister Gold, of my appreciation of your kindness and favors shown me at your home. I enjoyed my visit with you, and your conversation, especially on spiritual things, was both comforting and profitable to me. Yea, it is wise and wholesome counsel, and I feel greatly benefitted by your company. I hope this may find you and yours in good health.

With much love, I am yours in the hope of life eternal.

BETTIE G. WILLIAMS.

Dear Brother Gold—The following letter of experience of Sister Mary Moore is too good for me to keep all to myself, and therefore, I copy it and send it to you for the readers of Zion's Landmark.

Yours in hope,
L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Elder L. H. Hardy:

Dear Brother in Christ—I hope if one so unworthy should address you as such. For a long time it has for some cause been on my mind to write you. I can't tell why, for I feel so unworthy even to think of writing to one in whom I have so much confidence, but it seems that I can't get it off my mind.

Before I joined the church I had a mind to write to you and tell you some of my feelings, and when you came to see us soon after I joined I can never tell how much I enjoyed your visit and your preaching on both days. I felt like it was too good for me. It seemed to me that I could see the image of Jesus in your face. I felt unworthy to shake hands with you. I thought that you would be surprised at my joining and that you did not have confidence in me. After preaching when you spoke so kindly to me and said you were not surprised to hear of my coming in I felt like falling at your feet and crying aloud, for I had never said one word to you on that subject. I felt surely the Lord was in it all.

I feel like I want to tell you some of my feelings before I went to the church if the Lord will guide my pen.

From early childhood I had serious thoughts of death and would get in trouble and go off alone and cry. I did not know what was the matter with me. I felt like I was the worst one of my father's family. Sometimes I felt so badly and mean that I did not feel worthy to sit around my father's fire-side. Sometimes I felt better and sometimes worse until I was nearly grown

Papa and mama joined the church. I cannot express my feelings. Then I felt to be alone without friends on earth or in heaven. When they came out of the water I felt like I wanted to go to them and ask them to pray for poor me, but was afraid to go for I did not want any one to know the trouble I was in. Not long after they had a revival at Wheeler's, and a large number joined. I was in so much trouble, I felt like I was lost and all I had to look to was God, and my prayers were, "Lord be merciful to me a sinner." One of my girl friends joined and was baptized. I thought she looked so good. If I could be just good enough to be with that good people. I felt that I could not live without relief. I came home that evening and went upstairs and tried to pray to the Lord for mercy. I could not hide my tears, therefore, I stayed out of sight as much as possible. I went on with night work crying and begging for mercy. I started to milk, I saw that I was going to meet papa. I thought I would ask him to pray for me, but when I got to him he handed me a present he had for me, and told me to take care of it. I bursted out crying. He told me not to cry for I was welcome to it. I could not speak, but went on until after supper. We were all around the fireside. I sat back to hide my grief. All at once I felt so good, it seemed that a light shined around me and my burden was gone. I felt that my sins were all forgiven and I loved everybody. Right here I have trouble. I cannot remember how long I stayed in that calm frame of mind, but I could not get that burden back. I thought that if I could get it back I would know better how it went. Then came a desire to be baptized, but I was so young I thought I would never tell anybody for I could live a christian out of the church just as well as in it. However, I could not get that burden off of my mind. I felt that it was my duty to be baptized. One night I was thinking of baptism and how sweet it was, and I went to sleep and dreamed that Cousin David Moore baptized me, and when he raised me up he began to shout and mama met me shouting. I felt like I had deceived them and how miserable I felt. I did not see the water, but just went through the motion of baptism.

I never have known what that dream meant, but it is yet fresh in my memory. I thought it was to show me that I was deceived therefore I would put it all aside and try to have a good time, but I could not. If I did wrong I would think of how merciful the Lord had been to me and of my promise to try to live better. But I fought against that feeling and began to go to parties and take a part. The first one I went to I was beaten with many stripes I hope. I rolled on my bed all night, and could not sleep, but begged the Lord to forgive me. I kept going to keep from being odd from my friends and it troubled me less. I got so I enjoyed it, but when my burden came again it was worst than the first. I felt like I had trampled God's mercies under my feet. The sleepless nights I endured: Then it came to go to the church. I cannot go for even papa and mama would not have fellowship for me. At last I hope I was made willing in the day of his power. I felt that if I did not go something awful would happen to me. I went before the church at their May meeting in 1906 and was received, and on the second Sunday in June I was baptized by our pastor, Elder J. Hall.

I didn't feel so happy as I have heard some say they felt, but I felt calm, felt like I had done what was my duty.

That night I lay down feeling that I had done what I could. Although I felt unworthy to have a home with that good people, yet I have never regretted being there. At times I feel surely

I am deceived, but I had rather die than deceive them. I cannot live as I wish to. When I would do good evil is present with me.

Brother Hardy, if you can have a mind to do so pray for me that I may live nearer to God each day and hold out faithful to the end.

I did not think of writing so much when I began, but my mind led me on and I do not feel like there is anything in it that will interest you for I cannot express myself like I want to. Please pardon me if you can.

Brother Hardy, I wrote the above in March but could not send because I was so afraid that it was not of the Lord, and am yet, but it seems that I am bound to send it or be killed to all the enjoyment of spiritual things.

Your unworthy sister saved by grace if saved at all.

MARY MOORE.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Very Dear Brother in a Precious Hope—I have just a few minutes ago received a letter from you written July 31. It went to Polkton and has been there all this time—two months. This is the letter you were asking about as we went on to Roanoke—if I received it.

Of course I would have been glad to have gotten it then, but it is much appreciated at this time, coming as it has in such a time of need.

I never do hear from you, but that it cheers me; and I believe the dear Lord directed this message to come to me at this time.

You said in this letter that your needs were as great as ever, and instead of growing better you were increasing in poverty, and growing more and more needy.

How comforting to know that one like you has such feelings as these; yet I cannot see how you can feel that way,

As you say, self gives me so much more trouble than any one else.

Elder H. V. Cole spoke so comforting to me at Roanoke in regard to the "Law of the Lord"—how he delighted in it according to the language of Paul, and the law of sin which works in our members so that when we would do good evil is present.

Much of the preaching at Reidsville and Roanoke will, I feel, be sweet to me for still many more days to come. I feel that I was especially favored and blessed of the Lord in being favored to attend those two associations. I had some hope of attending the Little River and had my suit case packed to go, and was then providentially hindered; but feel that I was blessed with some resignation to the will of God, knowing that what he does is surely right. I could not attend ours, it being so far by rail.

Is your association near you this time; and could a person go from here and get there the same day?

How sweet to meet and mingle with the people of God! It seems to me if I were deprived of the company of the saints that life would be sad in me.

Sometimes I feel that I can say I know I love them. It is the same sense in which I feel to know that my Redeemer liveth.

Elder B. H. Harrelson came to our house Monday night after the Little River Association and stayed with us and out home until Thursday. He seemed to be full of the spirit of Christ and conversed richly of heavenly things. His company was to us a treat indeed. He was on his way to our association.

My mother is up again, though not strong yet.

I am feeling very well at present. This is a poor letter, but how can I do better?

Yours in love and sweet fellowship,
LOUISA A. EDWARDS,

Dear Brother Gold—I have intended several times in my life to write of a few things that have been before me in time past, and I hope some of it has been the Lord's dealings with me, but I feared so much that it was not his work, that I have always laid it aside, but as I read other people's writing, it makes me think so much of my own experience, that I feel like I would like to see mine all together and in print.

After my first child died, I was in great distress. I wanted to know if babies went straight to heaven as soon as they died, or did they have to wait until judgment day. This one thing caused me to read the bible more than I had ever done before, and I got satisfied when I read the 9, 10, and 11 verses of the sixth chapter of Revelation. I don't know why it satisfied me, or what it meant. The next thing was would I ever be prepared to meet my baby. I went to work to try and live a better life. I tried to pray daily to the Lord to help me to live better. I could never see that I lived any better, but found more and more fault in myself all the time. I would beg my husband to do better, and try to be prepared to meet our baby when we should be called to go. He did not seem to be in trouble as I did, and so I felt like I grieved more about his sins than I did my own. He would drink too much, and I felt like it would kill me. There is no tongue can tell what an awful thing it is for a woman's husband to drink too much. I dreamed one night that my husband and myself were to be married, and I wanted to do right, so I went to him and asked him to come on, they were waiting for us. He sat still and looked unconcerned and was dressed in black. I went on and stopped in a field and in front of me was a grave. At the other end of the grave were two large doves, one of the doves got on the grave, and went down in there, and I didn't see him any more. The other dove opened a large paper and said, "This is the matrimony, where is the man you are to marry?" I looked the way I came with a sad heart. I did not see him, so I said he has not come, the bird folded up the paper and said, the time has not come for you to be married. I can't tell how I felt. I had on a veil that covered me from my head to my feet. It was called the brides' garment and it seemed to be all I needed to make me happy, if only my husband would do right. I waked up crying and told my husband my dream. I felt sure that he or myself was going to die soon, but it has now been 24 years ago since I had that dream, and we are both living yet.

I have lost several children since then. I have stood over them and seen them suffer until I would feel like it was impossible for any one to go to heaven except those that died when they were babies. Surely I was lost, I would wonder if they were suffering for my sins. I knew I had promised to do better, and had always failed to do so. I was in a lot of trouble. I felt like those that died when they were young were the best off. They would not have to suffer as I did. I have seen a lot of trouble over trying to raise those right that are living, and do my duty by them. Oh! this added to the trouble I already had. There is no way to describe it. My health grew very bad, and I had been through with many toils and snares. I began to think surely I could not hold out any longer. I began to think about dying all the time. I was bidding farewell to my children and everything that looked natural to the eyes here, for I would soon be gone from this world of trouble. It grieved me to leave my children in the hands of the cruel world without a friend, for I felt there was no friend like a mother. I would try to pray, but I felt like I could not pray as I wished to do. I felt like the breath I breathed was prayer, and that the Lord knew I needed what I need better than I did. I was willing to die if it was his will, only I hated to leave the children. I had two spells like any one crazy. I felt like each time that I turned to a rock and I could not get it off of me, and saying foolish things. I knew what I was doing, but I had it to do, to keep from getting worse. I wanted to pray but I could not, but tried to put my whole trust in God that I would get better, but I feared I never would. It didn't last long. Soon after this I walked the house and tried to pray one more time. There was no one in the house but myself, but I concluded to go out in the bushes, so I did. I knelt down and cried, I felt that the Lord had my life in his hands, and he was then ready for it. I wanted to ask him to spare me and let me live to raise my children, but I heard myself say, Lord thy will be done, a light passed with the words, I felt so much relief that I just did remember what I went out there for, and then I asked him if it could be his will spare me and let me live to raise my children, but if my death can be the means of saving their souls let it be. One part of this was my prayer, but the other was not of my make. I did not know much about the Primitive Baptists, as it had always been inconvenient for me to hear them, but I went to the Missionary Church after this, and soon went before the church, was received and was baptized. I felt perfectly satisfied for a while, but I soon got disgusted with some of their works. I concluded if all churches were like this I would stay at home and read the bible, and ask the Lord for an understanding and be satisfied.

I soon got to going to hear the Primitive Baptists. I could not go with them on every thing. They seemed to be too hard at first. I would read the bible and it seemed to go against them on some things. I could not understand until I would hear them preach on that subject, and then it would be very plain. I soon fell in love with them. About this time I had another dream. I dreamed of going to a bridge that I had dreamed of before, several times in life, but had never thought much about it until this time. I dreamed I went to this bridge. It was covered like a house and I went in, there had always been work benches and tools and shavings in there, but this time they were all gone. I went farther in then I had ever done before and I soon came where the river was; it looked muddy. I turned around to go back and to my right hand I saw a place that looked like a fountain. It had a stream of water that glittered like ice against the sun. When I saw it I was thirsty. I took a little sup of that water, and when I found myself I was awake standing it seemed to me about two steps from my bed. I remembered my dream and wondered what it meant. My thirst was gone, and I have never had that dream since.

Right after this I went to hear the Primitive Baptists preach again, and they communed that day, and I went out of doors after preaching as I always did, and a bad feeling came over me all at once. I had not given it a thought that I had quit my church, and was living out of my duty. My son came to me and asked me if I was ready to go home. I don't remember what I told him, but when I found myself, I had gone back in the church and took my seat right at the door, and when they broke up I went out quick and a brother came to me and asked me why I did not come up nearer and be with them. I was sorry that any one had noticed me, for I felt bad indeed. I had thought I would never join any church again, but from this time I was very restless. It would come to my mind, he that knoweth his master's will and doeth it not shall be beaten with many stripes. Well I began to feel more like I was not fit to join the church than I had ever felt before; so I strove against it for sometime, and I believe I was beaten with many stripes before I joined. One of my children became very sick with a bad fever and was sick five months. I did not get but very little sleep during that time, besides having many troubles of many kinds. I became very nervous and could not sleep when I got the chance of it. I would feel like when I tried to go to sleep I was frightened almost to death. It would come to my mind again, he that knoweth his master's will and doeth it not shall be beaten with many stripes. I would promise the Lord that I would offer to the church, and I knew I could not leave home at that time. I was afraid to promise any thing, for I had never been able to do any thing I had ever promised the Lord. I begged the Lord to settle my mind, and show me I was fit to join the church, and then when I would close my eyes I would see a pair of balances, and they would go up and down, just as my mind did, and when I would decide to go to the church they were on the balance, and when my baby would get better I would think it all foolishness, and put it off, and my baby would get worse again. I felt like my trials through life were so great and I had weakened down till I felt like I surely could no longer bear it. I felt sure that I had seen more trouble than any one else had ever seen. I felt entirely friendless in this world. I broke down before the Lord and begged him to help me. I believe I had the spirit of prayer in me that night. I wanted to see the Savior face to face, I felt like I was sorry for sin, even the first sin, and why was I born a helpless creature here to suffer as I had, and no joys mingled with my sorrows. All at once I thought about the Savior on the cross, and it came to my mind that all that wanted to follow him must suffer like he did, and low and humble was the only way that lead to him. It seemed that it was said to me, that you have a hope of eternal life and your troubles are riches for you in the world to come. I shouted and thanked God for all the trouble I had ever seen. I was glad that I did feel poor and humble. I felt like I saw my father and said, pa, I am rich I would not exchange my life with you for all the money in the world. I felt like I saw the old Baptists and shook hands with some of them and told them that I had a hope of eternal life, and I was happier than I had ever been in this life. I can never tell all that came in my mind that night. It seemed that every thing that I asked the Lord the answer came at once, and some of it was scripture that I had read in time. I joined the Primitive Baptist church a while after this and was baptized by Elder A. J. Moore, at Hopeland, and I have been better satisfied since then, and have felt more able to bear my trials here, though they are great. I get so down hearted at times that I fear that I am deceived, and I am sure I do not feel fit to be called a child of God, if I am one, it is his good mercy that saved me, nothing that I have ever done. It is a hidden mystery why God chose a part to be saved, and left the others out, but it is his will and his way, and for him only to understand. All that are saved will be saved his way or no way. I am glad he fixed a way to save his people and if he had not, we would have all been lost. I can only hope I may be one of his, it makes me tremble with fear that I am not. I see so much fault in myself it makes me sad to think about it. I felt some time ago that I was glad I had to die and leave this world behind. I do hope I may feel that way when the time comes to go.

I feel that I have written a mere sketch of a few things that have been as strange to me as it is to them that read it. I hope the Lord has directed my hand so that I have not written any thing wrong.

I have written this for the Landmark before and it got mixed with some one else's letter, while printing. I have tried to describe my feelings a little plainer this time, but I feel sure that the half has not been told, but I guess it is the best I can do. I am 45 years old—am the daughter of E. G. Hales.

May the Lord add his blessing in my prayer.

SOMETHING THAT SHOULD BE KNOWN.

Dear Brother Gold—Knowing, as I do, the almost universal sentiment of the Primitive Baptists of North Carolina against new and unscriptural innovation, I feel that I owe them a statement of the existing affairs of Georgia. For the last ten years our people have been greatly disturbed by some of the churches installing instrumental music in their worship. The introduction of said practice met with considerable opposition in its incipency, but it was not until it was that those who were so eager to have the organ, began working for what they called "reformation" in the churches, by associating protracted meetings (which meetings we could not object to if the Lord protracted it,) tolerating secret orders, and finally degenerated into the Arminian practice of assessing the members to procure funds to pay the preacher, that brethren set up bars against them.

I said we could not object to continued meetings if the Lord continued them, but it is hard enough to keep the flesh out of two or three days' meeting, and whose anxiety is at such a rapid pace to swell our numbers, soon, to some extent, becomes dethroned and results in throwing the doors too wide open; and such has been the case in South East Georgia. The following letter will explain the matter, and is reliable testimony.

Stillman, Ga.

Elder Lee Hanks, Macon, Ga.,

Dear Brother—I have yours of the 31d inst. You asked me to write you the cause of our division at Mount Olive church, Upper Connochee Association. Our first trouble was the assessment, the preacher, Billie Screws and two or three of the brethren put upon the church, and changed the decorum to make it binding on the church. The preacher and the two deacons made the assessment, and assessed the members from $1 to $12 per year. Assessed one old sister $1, who was the wife of an old pauper brother, who gets a part of his support from county treasury. The old fashioned Baptists kicked at this new decorum, and this started the row. Then the old Baptists brought up the new measures using organs in their worship, having continued meetings (Brother J. J. Sutton, Stillmore, Ga., "said fleshly revival meetings) five or six days at the time, and at these meetings, when the opportunity was given for members they, Screws, Stubbs, Lamb and Crouse would have from three to five members out over the congregation pressing and pulling at the people to join the church. This committee was usually young ladies and of course they had more influence over the young; and when they got one to join, they usually invited other denominations and the world to fellowship the new converts.

Now, you can see what brought the division. Old Baptists can't stand such practices, therefore, we, the Old Baptists, withdrew from their disorder, about thirty members in all, to thirty-two progressives. Now, the preacher that led this progressive fight was Billie Screws, the pastor, of Mount Oliff church, who lives in a parsonage supported by the church; Stubbs, Lamb and Crouse.

Yours in hope,
A. D. WARREN,

Witnessed—S. E. MERCER.

Brother J. J. Sutton, Stillmore, Ga., corroborates the above statement. The line in this country has been drawn, reaching from Atlanta, Ga., to the Georgia and Florida line. However, the division is most prominent in middle and south east Georgia. The leading preachers on the disorderly side: T. J. Bazemore, W. A. Lamb M. F. Stubbs, W. C. Crouse, W. W. Childs, Morgan Brown, B. H. Pierson, W. B. Screws, F. H. Sills, W. W. Riner, R. H. Barwick, A. V. Simms, H. Bussey, F. L. Fuller, A. V. Simms, and T. E. Sykes.

I am sure the ideas entertained by these men are not in accord with true Old Baptist principles, and should not be tolerated in any country.

The Old Baptists of North Carolina and Virginia are not in sympathy with such unscriptural proceedings, and to avoid in roads by them, I think in justice to the cause we love, they ought to be published in the Baptists world. I trust the time will come when the Baptists will come together upon solid Baptist principles but it seems that history continues to repeat itself. Many have been the sorrows because of this. Little things are in all cases fore-runners to greater things. The organ in the church was a very little thing and it seemed almost incredible that any should protest against its use in worship, but alas, it has had associates, and will lead to much baser practices finally as is shown in the letter inserted in this article. May the Lord save his people from such delusive errors.

Brethren keep this article, and if you will refuse to receive any of the men, whose names appear in this article, you may avoid some of the sad rents in your country that they have caused here.

Yours in hope,
J. A. MONSEES.

Dear Brother Gold—Your remarks at Greensboro church concerning the triune God was a great comfort to me; also you said that man had no covering for his sins.

I admit I have none of myself as my sins are open before the Lord all the time, I know I am a great sinner and have sinned before God and in his sight, but I hope God for Christ's sake has forgiven them all. I only write to relieve my mind because I heard a voice say, you shall be in great trouble until you let these things out. Oh that I could have an eye single to the glory of God. Isaiah said, speaking of the son of man which is Christ, that he shall be as a hiding place from the wind and a covert from the tempest, as rivers of water in a dry place and as the shadow of a great rock in the weary land.

"Oh Jesus is the rock in the weary land,

And a shelter in time of storm."

A few years ago when I was all alone at my work I heard a voice say, "I reckon you had better try to pray a little." I did not remember anything troubling me except a conscience of unworthiness. After thinking it over I concluded it might mean something so went and secreted myself to keep anyone from hearing me. I knelt on my knees and began to pray the best I could. While my eyes were closed apparently I saw a stream of pure, rich looking blood come flowing down towards me. I said it is the blood of Christ and oh that it could wash and make me clean. Brother Gold, I guess you have thrown water out before now and have seen it form a sheet over the wind. Well this is the way it appeared to me. A portion of that blood covered me and went all through me down to my feet. Oh the sweet peace, joy and gladness that filled my poor soul and the tears of gratitude I shed. I felt I was washed and made clean in the blood of the Lamb. He cleanseth us from all sin and I feel some of the same power now. All glory to God and the Lamb. I need to be kept every day, for I know I am a vile sinner and saved by grace if saved at all.

If you should publish this I hope it will comfort some little one, if there is any as little as I feel to be.

Brother Gold I have attended five associations this year; Upper Country Line, Abbotts Creek, Bear Creek, Mayo and Fisher's River. They all had fairly good behavior, were very well attended and good preaching which I enjoyed very much. I was kindly cared for by the brethren and friends and I hope I am thankful to them, and especially am thankful to the giver of all good.

As ever yours in love of the gospel truths,

J. R. JONES.

Revolution Mills, N. C.

My Dear Brother Gold—While I am still enjoying the warmth which seems to abound at the Fisher's River Association, I hasten to write you something of our trip and visit there; for I well know that in this sordid atmosphere this feeling will soon be succeeded by a very different frame of mind.

Sister Burton and I went up to Pilot Mountain on Friday afternoon. Elder Key met us and took us with some others to his home, where we were kindly cared for. Next morning we were conveyed to the association where I met some I knew, and some who remembered and loved my dear father, and who showed me much kindness for his sake. How good it seems to me to be accorded such consideration for his sake, and in remembrance of my dear mother. I want to be grateful for it and desire I hope to walk in the path they trod.

Such kindness reminds me of Mephibosheth when he received favor at the hand of David, for the sake of his father Jonathan. At times too I feel that I know something of my lameness and unworthiness when I am blest with all that pertains to my father's house, and have eaten bread at the king's table.

I do not expect ever to grow up to the full stature in faith, hope and charity which my dear parents attained, if indeed I have been blest to experience any, but I believe it is all of one kind whether much or little, if it is really the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. I had not intended saying all this, as one of our preachers says; but it came up and I had to tell it to get it out of the way. The preaching Saturday and Sunday was good. Saturday night we spent at Elder Bird Denny's. His wife is a sweet motherly woman, and we enjoyed being there.

A large crowd attended the meeting. There was good order and apparently an anxiety to hear. On Sunday evening we went to Elder Gabriel Denny's home, where we spent the night. Elder O. J. Denny, youngest brother and wife, Dr. Brooks and a few others.

I do not think I ever visited a more pleasant home or with a more lovely family. Without seeming to say or do much they made us feel welcome.

Soon we were singing and such singing as I seldom hear. They all have good voices and with Dr. Brooks, who greatly enjoys singing, we had a real feast of song. Some one would select another hymn and that was sung, and then another.

Then Elder O. J. Denny began talking, and as he talked we all drew near until we were gathered about him. Soon it turned to an experience meeting, and as one and then another told of the Lord's dealings with them most of us were melted to tears. Then came reading and prayer, and then a final song, and the group separated.

The affection of father for children, their love and reverence for him, and their affection for each other all believing the same thing, their fears, their hopes, their aims seemed one, all impressed me as one of the loveliest homes I have visited in a long time.

But with all that pleasure they have sorrow too. The mother is gone, and when I noticed the tenderness with which they mentioned her name I could guess their loss.

I wish you and Sister Gold could have been there. We thought and spoke of it several times.

Different ones asked about you, and regretted your absence.

LAURA A. REED.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Will you please publish in the Landmark that the Primitive Baptist have a church house at Coats, Harnett county, N. C. We invite the ministering brethren at home and abroad to preach for us when so impressed. I live in the little town of Coats, and will be pleased to publish appointments for any who desire, and will take care of them best I can while with us.

WHY NOT?

If we are right then we are satisfied to abide in Christ and in his blessed doctrine; nor will we wish to add to nor take from his complete, perfect word. If God has taught us then we understand what is the meaning of scripture. Contentions and differences, departures and offences come of a defect or enmity in the carnal mind against the work and will of God. For there is in the expressed will of God that which fully satisfies the renewed mind of such as are taught of God. If one is born of God that spiritual birth will show itself in the obedience of faith, and walking in the Lord's precepts in the keeping of which there is great reward.

Why should I desire to do something not commanded in the word of God, or why should I shun to do what is commanded? Because I am controlled by a will that is opposed to God.

The test of faith and its obedience is made in the faithful observance of what is commanded. If I love the word of God that is proof that I love God. It is not what I say but what I do, that decides the matter with me. Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only. A doer of the word has no higher aim than to obey God, nor has he time or a mind for anything else. Nothing else could satisfy his mind. It is not that he is making loud professions of his doings. But whatsoever he does is unto the Lord. God is in his thoughts, and whatsoever he does whether in word or deed is to the glory of God, whether he eats, or drinks. With the mind he serves the laws of God. God is working in him both to will and to do. Hence the willing and the doing show the presence and power of God in him. Not that the doer of God's word feels that he is perfect or in serving God as it seems to him he ought. The working of God in him is not to cause the man to do what he naturally desired, but the working of God in him both to will and to do causes fear and trembling in the mind. Never until God begins to work in him the willing and the doings does the man know his inability to do what is commanded. So imperfectly therefore does he feel that he serves God that he cannot boast of any thing he has done, so that he is taught that salvation is of the Lord, and that by the grace of God he is what he is.

P. D. G.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

When God inspired or moved the holy men of old to write the scriptures of truth, they were moved to write what was commanded them. Not a word of the natural opinions of men was written, but it was the word of truth. Words of wicked men and deeds of wicked men are recorded, but they are stated as truly occurring.

The revelation of divine truth in its inexpressible fulness and unutterable glory is expressed so far as words can declare.

When Jesus, who is the word of God in his glorious majesty and power—that word that was made flesh and dwelt among us—was manifest in the flesh it was witnessed and testified to in the fulfillment of prophesy, and was witnessed by men chosen of God and ordained to testify to the ends of the earth the wondrous fulfillment of prophecy. The apostles who are first in the kingdom as judges in Israel with great grace and great holiness gave witness of the most notable events.

When the Holy Ghost revealed in them the glory of that kingdom, and enabled them to declare all the words of this life, what a precious treasure is given to those that love the scriptures, and receive the things most surely believed by us.

Have you ever noticed the wonderful utterances of the apostles concerning the things that God said will surely come to pass. These are divine messages of our Father sent to us and written in our hearts and there is such love and joy in meditating on them.

HOLD FAST THE CONFIDENCE. ETC.

“Whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end,” (Heb. 3:6.)

What is the sure evidence and proof that we are the house of God? For the church of God is house or temple wherein he dwells. To know that he dwells in us and that we are his house or church there is the blessed evidence that we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. Confidence is faith or trust as it “dwells in the heart of a believer.” In our deliverance from so great a death, and the joy that sprang up in our souls as Jesus appeared the chief among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely, we felt that confidence and blessed hope spring up that to us is the beginning of days. A new world sprang up in our joy and hope. Old things had passed away, and all things had become new, and all things were of God. This is God's witness to us that we are his children. This is that white stone and new name given us that no man knoweth save he to whom it is given. We are to hold this fast.

We may not be able to keep the great joy all the time, but we are to hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm to the end. Where else can we go? To whom shall we look but unto Jesus for salvation? He only has the words of eternal life.

There are many snares and deceivers that lure us off if possible, and beguile unstable souls, but to whom shall we go? Did we not try every thing else, and turn away from every thing else, before we found mercy in the Lord Jesus? Is there any other Saviour now but Jesus? No, no more than when we first sought and found him. He revealed himself then as the chiefest among ten thousand. We need him now just as much as we did then, and he is the same Saviour now that he was then. We can do nothing without him. We need him every moment. He is the same yesterday, today and forever. The proof that we are his is in our holding fast our confidence and our rejoicing of hope firm to the end.

Was what deceitful, treacherous natures and hearts we have. How easily we let these things slip, and how soon forget what manner of men we are of. We need renewing from day to day. One hour we are rejoicing and the next we are in heaviness through manifold temptation, and fear we are deceived. How good to feel he is faithful by whom we are called to the fellowship of his son. The more our confidence is fixed in him the more we are thus manifest as members of that body parts of that building of God not made with hands eternal in the heaven. What God doeth is forever. If we are of his spiritual building that cannot perish. Hence the proof that we are of that house or building is that we hold the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. For all born of God will thus abide in him and endure to the end, and such shall be saved. P. D. G.

THE TEN VIRGINS.

More than a year ago, I was requested to write upon the above subject, but at that time I had no mind to do so. The question having recurred by way of remembrance, I have some mind to present some thought for the consideration of those inquiring, and for the general reader as well. Whether susceptible or not, most of the parables have been held by our brethren as meaning differently, and when such is the case the reader must readily know that when two or more dissertations have been made of the same subject maintaining a different conclusion they cannot all be right, wherein they differ, but may all be wrong. Furthermore when brethren differ as to questions wherein no fundamental principles of doctrine, is involved, their differences should be regarded as differences of opinion and not of revelation. I have thought one might take one of the parables as a text or subject and preach a gospel sermon and yet not set forth what the parable was designed to teach—I have thought it easier at times to put a text to the sermon than to preach a sermon from the text.

As a matter of revelation it might be considered a question whether the Lord ever reveals a matter to his ministers which the faith of those taught of him cannot readily accept, therefore when differences arise as to that which is preached it is quite probable that the matter has not been revealed to the speaker or the hearer has not been taught of God. In either case to wrangle, dispute and contend to the engendering of bitterness and estrangement of feeling and fellowship does not affect the real situation, but merely sets up a superficial complication, which can but produce confusion and distress.

The teachings of Christ are spiritual and must be spiritually considered. Nothing therefore that is not spiritual in itself or does not sustain in some way a spiritual revelation to that which is spiritual can be what is designed by him to be taught in the use of the parables.

The kingdom of heaven is likened unto ten virgins—as were these ten virgins so shall the kingdom of heaven be. On the one hand we have ten virgins, and on the other hand we have one kingdom. The kingdom of heaven. As virgins they are all alike. They are virgins by virtue of two reasons—they were born so and are so kept, and as such they are abiding the time of the coming of the one bridegroom, their bridegroom, and while he tarries they alike all slumber and sleep together, as virgins slumber and as virgins sleep. He giveth his beloved sleep. And when the coming of the bridegroom is announced they all arise and trim their lamps, and as they trim them the first and only feature of difference appears. Half of these virgins find that their lamps had gone out, and the cause was that their oil had given out, and the lack was because they had only taken oil in their lamps, while the others had taken oil in their vessels with their lamps and their lamps were all alike burning and alike they trimmed their lamps, but the foolish took no oil in their vessels, and therefore and therein did their foolishness consist and appear. In some sense the likeness of these virgins both the wise and the foolish is reflected in the kingdom of heaven. I have noted that the difference consisted of foolishness. They were not fools, but foolish. Christ However, said of the two, Oh, fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. In part they were wise and in part they were foolish, and in this instance their lack of wisdom constituted their besetment. As the besetment of these virgins was their foolishness and that was evidenced by the lack of oil in their vessels, the wisdom of the others must have consisted in the oil which they had in their vessels and the fact that they had it, having brought it in their vessels with their lamps. The oil implies wisdom. The wise took oil, the foolish did not. Their foolishness did not consist in the simple fact that they did not take oil with them in their vessels with their lamps, but rather in the fact that they did not have sense enough to thus take it. Had they been sensible they would have been mindful and would have therefore taken oil as did the others.

The unjust steward was commended for his wisdom, and the one talent man was commended for the lack of it in such application as would have been creditable to one entrusted with business. It seems that these parables belong to the church today, upon whom the ends of the world are come, in which is the Lord's coming, and admonish us to be watchful, sober, vigilant and expectant. We are living in the day of the bridegroom's coming, and should expect him any day and every day. Paul looked for him to come in his day, and he did come and we should and I hope we do, at least in part, look for him, and he comes to us, and is with us, but like Jacob we so often have to say: Surely the Lord was in the place and I knew it not.

There are two agreements to which all might come, or a part might come to one and a part to another, as to what this parable might or might not mean, and there need be no argument about it. We may all become agreed that we understand it or that we do not understand it. The apostle seemed not to comprehend what Christ meant by this and that one until he explained it to them, and we find ourselves not in full accord as to what he meant by his explanations.

It seems to me if we keep in mind that it is the kingdom of heaven that he is illustrating we may determine many things that it does not mean. If we are of the opinion it has any reference whatever to the world or any part of it then we only have to determine wherein one-half of the kingdom of heaven is composed of the world and what part of the world enters into its composition, and we have the solution. Christ said, my kingdom is not of this world. The apostles seemed to embody the kingdom when Christ was here, and he said of them "Ye are not of the world, for I have chosen you out of the world." The parable in some sense has its application in the church which is the kingdom of heaven under consideration, and what is applicable to the church is applicable to each member of the church. It does not say part of them is like to five wise virgins and part is like five foolish ones, but it likened to ten virgins, five of whom were wise and five foolish. It would therefore seem reasonable to conclude that wherein the kingdom in its entirety likened unto this or that each member as an integral part would reflect the same likeness.

Should we conclude that the five foolish ones are the non-elect, we would have to determine, if we could, which part or half of the kingdom the non-elect compose, or in the case of individual numbers what part of them was non-elect.

If we make the foolish represent disobedient christians we shall have the peculiar condition that exactly one-half of the church is disobedient or if individually considered one-half of each member is disobedient. But we might not reasonably attribute the disobedient conduct of a christian, if such a thing be possible, to his ignorance or foolishness. Paul did some things ignorantly in unbelief before he was a christian, and he enquired of the foolish Galatians to know who had bewitched them that they should not obey the truth, but I do not find where a christian is charged with having disobeyed anything.

Christ was under the Jewish or law dispensation when the parables were spoken, and in most, if not every instance reference is made to the condition of the kingdom of heaven as under that dispensation in connection with the virtues and powers by which it should eventually be developed and revealed in its spiritual condition as under grace in the gospel dispensation, in which at its appearing there was a turning and discerning between him that served God and him that served him not. This is perhaps the time referred to when he said, "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, etc." When he came in the spirit and power of the Holy Ghost and the everlasting Father to gather together all things in one even in himself—to separate between the precious and the vile and the gospel—the spiritual and natural and reveal the spiritual and true worshippers of the living God. The full and true intent of the law and the gospel and the condition of the church under each and under both, were fully and clearly revealed to the apostles as spiritual judges of the twelve tribes, and to the disciples as to the church which receives and maintains the judgment of these judges throughout the gospel day—by an experience in which are revealed all the law and the gospel together with their respectful efforts, by which the church and each member thereof are exercised in a disciplinary sense in which is exemplified what is taught by the use of the parable.

If this parable has an application to the church in this day, which it no doubt has, I am of the opinion that it is in a disciplinary sense as the church is constituted and tabernacles here in this pilgrimage, and as to the church so to each member.

In what seems to be a beautiful figure of the peculiar makeup and condition of the children of God in this pilgrimage as set forth in the experience, life and character of Jacob and Israel as in the one man, we have what this parable might represent as applicable to the church or kingdom of heaven under grace. Jacob, the man, the sinner taken in one line is all there is as the subject of redemption, and Israel when he considered in his line is all there is of the child of God, and yet the one is nothing in either respect without the other. The man could not be considered, as the subject of redemption, to be other than a sinner, and yet we could not think of one born of God as being a sinner. The man is the subject of salvation and yet he does not enter, as a man, into the kingdom—men and women are born again, and yet when Christ shall have made up his jewels they will not appear as men and women. Mortality will have been swallowed up of life. The true bride will appear in spirit, in life, in wisdom, holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and with her blessed Lord made higher than the heavens. Christ as a man died without the gates, was put to death in the flesh, but was quickened by the spirit and appeared within the holy city as the Son of God in the spirit and power of eternal life and as with the bridegroom so with the bride.

These thoughts are suggested for consideration rather than an explanation of the parable. P. G. L.

OBITUARIES

ELDER S. C. LITTLE..

Elder S. C. Little passed away a few days ago at his home in Albermarle. He had long been a watchman upon Zion's wall, and had preached firmly and candidly, the doctrine of election and predestination, salvation by grace and grace alone, regardless of the opinions of men, or what they might say; and we feel that his is a happy exchange when he awakes it will be in Jesus' likeness to be forever satisfied.

LUCY A. V. MATHEWS.

Was born October 3, 1869, and died August 26, 1908, age 42 years 10 months and 23 days. She united with Bethel church the first Saturday in August 1899, and was baptized with her father, W. J. Mathews by Elder S. O. Plyborn. She was a devoted christian and beloved by all who knew her. She was greatly afflicted for several years before her death, this she bore with christian fortitude, and was seldom heard to complain. She leaves father, mother, three brothers and several sisters to mourn her loss, but trust their loss is her great gain and while her seat is vacant at home and the church of her membership, we feel her spirit is with the redeemed host praising God. May God in his infinite wisdom sanctify this stroke of affliction to the good of all her loved ones, that is near and dear to her according to the ties that binds us to this life, and prepare them for that which is to come, is the prayer of your servant.

A. B. PHILPOTT.

DR. EZARIAH H. CUMMINGS.

Dr. Ezariah H. Cummings died Thursday morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Dr. Wm. C. DeForest, 414 W. Main street, of typhoid fever after a brief, but painful illness.

Dr. Cummings was born in Monroe county in 1872, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Cummings, formerly of Virginia. Early in life he professed faith in Christ and became a member of the Baptist church. His deep piety and pure christian character endeared him to all and throughout his christian career he lived a life worthy of emulation. In his last hours he expressed a willingness to die and said that death had no terrors for him, because he knew in whom he trust.

Six years ago he was graduated from the Baltimore Medical College and entered upon the practice of his profession at Marshville. After practicing successfully there for more than four years he moved to Clarksburg and formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, Dr. DeForest. He immediately took high rank in his profession and was regarded as one of the most successful physicians in the city.

Nineteen days ago he was stricken with typhoid fever and from the incipency of the disease his friends feared the worst. The best medical aid was secured, but the disease had fastened upon him with such tenacity that it baffled medical skill and he sank rapidly until the end. No young physician enjoyed a wider acquaintance than he. The members of the profession speak of him in the loudest words of praise, and his friends everywhere deeply regret his death.

Several years ago his father and mother preceded him to the grave. He is survived by one brother and five sisters. They are: A. H. Cummings, of the Bailey Produce company, city; Mrs. DeForrest and Miss Rosa Cummings, city; Mrs. Dona Altizer, Mrs. Callie Altizer and Mrs. Wilda Williams, of Virginia.

Owing to the illness of a little daughter of Dr. DeForrest no services will be held at the home, and the body will be taken to Marshville, where the funeral will be held at 10:30 o'clock, followed with interment there.—"News," Clarksburg, W. Va.

WILEY PRIDGEN.

By request of Brother T. H. B. Pridgen and wife, I will try with the help of the Lord to write an obituary notice of his dear old father, (Wiley Pridgen.) He was the son of Patrick Henry and Lucretia Pridgen, and was born December 24, 1826. He was married to Saludie Pittman in 1855. She died in 1887, and he lived with his son twenty-one years. About 61 years ago he became a member of Toisnot church (in the town of Wilson), and was baptized by Elder Ichabod Moore. Some several years after he moved his membership to Sappony church, Nash county, N. C., and remained awhile and then moved to Mill Branch church of the same county, and was a faithful member the remainder of his life, which was about twenty years. He was blind for twenty-five, and could not go but very little only as he was led about; but he filled his seat as long as he was able to get to the church, and was always ready and willing, and it seemed to be theme of his life, to talk about the love and mercy of his crucified redeemer. He loved good singing, and he always seemed to be delighted for us to meet and sing for him, which we did very often. He was not able to meet with the brethren at his church for several months before he died, but they would have the ministers of God to visit him and preach for him at their home. His mind gave way some time before his death, and he was as a little child until the day before he breathed his last the next morning, and Brother and Sister Pridgen say he came to his right mind that day, and could see again. His grand-daughter was by his bedside that day, and she asked him if he didn't want something to eat, and he told her no, that he was full. She says grandpa, you haven't eaten anything in two or three days. What are you full of? He says I am full of the Holy Ghost. He turned over and said, Oh Lord. She asked him what he wanted. He says I want rest, but I shall soon go home and be at rest forevermore. We have not a doubt but that he is in heaven praising God with the redeemed that have gone before. I seldom missed a week but what I went to see him, and he always seemed so glad when I would go. He would often say, I can not see you, but I can hear you, and I love to hear the voices of the children of God. He would ask me to sing directly after I would get there. He departed this life August 19, 1908. He only lacked a few days over four months of being 82 years old. He was confined to his bed only a few days. He leaves two children, seven grand children, and five great-grand children, and a great many relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but we do not mourn as those without hope, for we feel that our loss is his great gain. He craved to go home and be with the Lord. He would often say Sister Luper, I want to go home. I am tired of this world. He felt like it would be far better to depart and be with Christ. His son and wife were very good and kind to him, but he had a view of something far better than they could give, and we believe that he is now reaping the great reward. May the Lord comfort the bereaved and may we say like Job, the Lord gives and he takes away, and blessed be the name of the Lord.

Your very little sister, if one a' all,

MATTIE LUPER.

ELDER WILLIAM W BARNES.

Brother W. W. Barnes, was born in Wilson county North Carolina, June 27, 1824, was married to Mary Eure, January 9, 1845. Two children were the fruit of this union, the first one died in infancy. Mr. J. S. Barnes, is the other, with whom his father lived and died. His wife died June 1 1892. He died November 1, 1908, after an illness of nine weeks with paralysis. His mind was badly impaired at times, then again it was lucid. His son writes he often spoke of me in his final sickness.

He had long been a Primitive Baptist uniting with the church at White Oak, Wilson county, N. C. He was ordained there, and was the oldest Primitive Baptist preacher in this country. He and Elder C. B. Bessell officiated in my ordination in March 1870. He was the longest liver I think of any spectator present at that time.

Brother Barnes moved to Hyde county, N. C., January 1882, where he died.

Brother Barnes, was a clear, sound preacher in the doctrine, and in his early ministry baptized many people. His churches prospered. He was active and laborious as a preacher taking long trips. He returned from a trip August 26, and was paralyzed August 28. He said he was going home, how blessed to fall asleep in 'his harness. He was more than 84 years old. His funeral will be held the first Sunday in Deember at Tiny Oak, and be conducted by Elder E. E. Lundy. P. D. G.

SALLIE E. WALTERS.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Will you please publish the death of Sallie E. Walters, the wife of Jackson Walters. She was a consistent member of the Old Mill Primitive Baptist church. Her meat and drink were to serve the Lord while here upon earth. She joined the church about ten or twelve years before her death. She said she was ready and willing to go when it was the Lord's will to take her and that the Lord was her shepherd and she wanted for nothing. She was a kind and affectionate neighbor. To know her was to love her. She was especially kind to the poor people. She was never known to deny any one any thing that was in her power to do. She delighted to help the poor and her pastor. She is survived by her husband and eight children now living. She was the mother of eleven children three boys and eight girls, three of her girls preceded her to the grave. She is also survived by three sisters and two brothers and an aged mother. She was born in North Carolina, Caswell county and was married to Jackson Walters in 1883, January 10, and departed this life October 4, 1908, making her matrimonial life with her unworthy husband nearly twenty-six years.

Brother Gold and any that may read this sad obituary of my dear companion when you feel and can pray for me and the children that we may be resigned to the Lord's will, for the ties of nature are so strong that it makes it hard for us to give her up. She was so true and affectionate. We loved her as a wife and mother, but we feel satisfied that she is now with her blessed Savior in whom she trusted for her salvation.

Oh! brethren it is a blessed thought that the Lord gave her to us for a little while and then to take her home to himself in glory, but it is so hard to part with those that we love. Her life that she lived was such that we are now able to say that it is all well with her now. Brother Gold will you please publish this in the Landmark and will you please add what one of her children wrote.

Brethren visit us when you can in our sad affliction. Dear Sallie loved to have the Old Baptists in our home in her lifetime. Now dear brethren and sisters come into our home and feel satisfied that you are welcome with your unworthy brother if he be one at all. Now I will close and good bye till we meet again and if we never meet in this earth again may it be the Lord's good will that we meet in heaven when we are called to lay our armour by.

Your unworthy brother, and husband of the deceased,

JACKSON WALTERS.

CONDITIONS IMPROVING.

President Finley, of the Southern Railway Company, who has just returned to Washington from an inspection trip of two weeks over the lines of the system, found evidences of improvement in business conditions and of a general disposition on the part of business men throughout the south to take a hopeful view of the future. Speaking of the information he had gathered on his trip, Mr. Finley said:

"Prices for pig iron" are firmer. Southern furnaces, as a rule, have sold their products up to the end of the year, and the increasing number of inquiries for iron warrant the expectation that orders will soon be placed for business the coming year.

Lumber is more active than for some months past. Especially is this true of the grades shipped in box cars. The present demand will be augmented by increased requirements from railways, principally for car repairs, as some of the railways are contracting with car companies for some of their heavier repair work.

"One of the most encouraging signs of reviving industrial activity is the increasing movement of steam coal to industrial centers. The unusually warm weather of the present fall is retarding the movement of domestic coal.

The cotton crop is early, and the fibre is moving to market in larger volumes than at this time last year, although, as a result of the stagnation which has prevailed in the cotton goods market, prices are lower than a year ago. The demand for cotton-seed products is good and they are moving freely.

"The domestic market for cotton goods shows indication of gradual improvement. Owing to the accumulations of large stocks and to other causes affecting that market there is at present little demand for cotton goods in northern China. Aside from this, the export demand is fairly good, and those mills interested in the north of China trade are looking forward hopefully to a renewal of sales for that market.

"Grain traffic into the south—especially corn—is light. This is due, in part, to the relatively high price of corn and the low price of cotton, and in no part to the fact that at this season of the year the south is consuming its own grain.

Merchandise stocks which had been permitted to run low during the business depression are being replenished conservatively. Retail trade in the cities is good, but as a result of the low price of cotton and of a disposition on the part of retailers to buy cautiously for the present, jobbing trade is still somewhat restricted.

"While some lines of business have not yet shown as much improvement as might be wished, I believe that conditions generally are decidedly better than at any time since the beginning of the business depression a year ago, and that we have reason to look forward to a gradual return to a higher level of prosperity."

Elder F. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Your kind letter received, and beg to state that the "picture on the wall," has been a decided success in Atlanta. It is still a puzzle to every one that sees it, and no one has been able to give a demonstration or explanation of the wonderful phenomena. It continues to develop almost daily, and the latest discoveries is a railroad train in full sweep, a small city, and two factories with smoke issuing from the smoke-stack, besides a number of faces have been discovered near the bottom of the wall by different parties.

The American Encyclopedia people of New York have had a man here all the week getting a biography of the picture and of the Malcolm family, and these biographies will be printed in their issue of volume 15. James A Hyslop, of the Scientific Research, of New York is also engaged in trying to investigate the matter from a scientific standpoint. We expect to remove the picture tomorrow to Augusta, Ga., thence to Jacksonville, Fla., and New Orleans for the winter, thence to New York in the spring. The picture has paid nine hundred and fifty four dollars, being on exhibition here twenty-four days. No one yet, has applied for the thousand dollars, though many have worked hard for the prize. With kind regards to your wife, and best wishes to yourself, I am

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

CRUMBS FROM THE MASTER'S TABLE.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavily laden, and I will give you rest."

The dispensation of the gospel may be compared to the cities of refuge in Israel. It was a privilege, an honor to the nation in general, that they had such sanctuaries of divine appointment; but the real value of them was known to few. Those only who found themselves in that case for which they were provided could rightly prize them. In like manner, the gospel of Christ can boast; but it can be truly esteemed and understood by none but weary and heavy-laden souls, who have felt their misery by nature, are tired of the drudgery of sin, and have seen the curse of the broken law pursuing them like the avenger of blood of old. This is the only consideration that keeps them from despair that God has provided a remedy in the gospel, and Jesus has said, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." If they could receive the full comfort of these words, and heartily obey the call, their complaints would be at an end; but remaining ignorant, unbelief and Satan combine in various ways to keep them back. Some will say, "O that I could come; but, alas! I cannot." Others, "I fear I do not come aright." Having, here under the character of those who labor and are heavily laden, I proceed to consider.

What it is to come to Christ. I have observed in general that it appears to have the same signification with believing in him. But that we may understand it the more clearly, let us inquire.

1. How did those to whom he personally spoke these words, in all probability, understand them.

2. How far those to whom he makes them applicable are suitable to our circumstances.

3. Whether, as we have the same necessity, we have not likewise equal encouragement to come to him with those who were conversant with him upon earth.

4. It does not appear that those to whom our Lord spoke in person were so much perplexed as many are now, to know what coming or believing should mean. He seems to have been understood both by friends and enemies. Many questioned his authority and right to exact a dependence on him self; but they seemed to be at no difficulty about his meaning. It certainly implied more than a mere bodily coming into his presence. He was surrounded, and even followed, by multitudes who never came to him in the senses of his invitation. To such while standing about him, he complained, "Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life." Therefore, if we consult what is written of those who came to Jesus for relief, and obtained it, we may conclude what coming to him implies:

1. A persuasion of his power, and of their own need of his help. They knew that they wanted relief, and conceived of him as an extraordinary person, empowered and able to succor them. This persuasion of Christ's sufficiency and willingness was then, as it is now, afforded in different degrees. The centurion spoke with full assurance, "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed." The leper more dubiously; "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." Another in still fainter language; "If thou canst do anything, have compassion, and help us." The faith of this last was, as the man himself acknowledged mixed with much unbelief and fear; yet Jesus did not despise the day of small things. He pardoned his suspicions, confirmed his fluctuating mind, as an instance how graciously he accepts and cherishes the feeblest effects of true faith, "He will not break the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax."

2. An actual application. This evidenced their faith to be right. They did not sit content with having heard him, but improved it; they went to him, told him their cases, and implored his compassion. Their faith prevailed against all discouragements. In vain the multitude charged them to hold their peace. Knowing that he only was able to relieve them, they cried so much the more a great deal. Even when he seemed to discover a great reserve, they still waited, and knew not how to depart without an answer. Nor could a sense of unworthiness, fear, or shame keep them back, when once they had a strong persuasion of his power to save.

3. When he was sought to as a soul physician, as was the case with many whose bodily diseases he healed, and with others who were not sick, those who came to him continued with him, and became his followers. They depended on him for salvation, received him as their Lord and Master, professed an obedience to his precepts, accepted a share in his reproach, and renounced everything that was inconsistent with his will. Some had a more express and open call to this, as Matthew, who was sitting at the receipt of custom regardless of Jesus, till he passed by him, and said, "Follow me." That word, accompanied with the power of his love, won his heart, and diverted him from worldly pursuits in an instant. Others were more secretly drawn by his spirit and providence, as Nathaniel, and the weeping penitent who silently washed his feet with her tears. And this was the design and effect of many of their bodily and family afflictions. The man who was brought to be healed of the palsy received the forgiveness of his sins; and the ruler, who first came to Jesus with no other view than to obtain the life of his son, obtained much more than he asked or expected. The Lord afforded such an affecting sense of his power and goodness upon that occasion that he henceforth believed, with all his house.

These things are applicable to us. Jesus is no longer visible upon earth; but he has promised his spiritual presence to abide with his word, ordinances and people to the end of time. Weary and heavy-laden souls have now no need to take a long journey to seek him, for he is always near them, and in a spiritual manner, where his gospel is preached. Poor and inconsiderable as we are in the judgment of the world, I trust we have a right to claim his promise, and to believe that he is even now in the midst of us. Therefore come unto him, that is:

1. Raise your hearts, and breathe forth your complaints to him. Do you see your need of him? Be persuaded, and pray to him to assure you more strongly of his power and goodness. He is just such a Savior as your circumstances require, as you yourself could wish for; and he is able to convince you in a moment that he is so. If he is pleased to cause a ray of his glory to break in upon your mind, your fears, and doubts, and griefs would instantly give place.

2. Persevere in this application to him. Set a high value upon these his public ordinances, and be constant in attending them. His eye is fixed upon us; his arm is revealed amongst us. I trust it is a time of grace amongst us. When we meet he does something for one or another in the assembly. He has a fixed time for every one whom he relieves. He knew how long the poor man had waited at the poolside, and when his hour came he spoke and relieved him. So do you endeavor to be found in his way. Read his word; be frequent in secret prayer. You will find many things arising from within and without to discourage and weary you in this course; but persist in it, and in good time you shall find rest for your souls. These are the means which the Lord has appointed you. Converse likewise at proper opportunities with his people; perhaps he may unexpectedly join you, as he did the two disciples when walking to Emmaus, and cause your hearts to burn within you. Farther:

3. You are to follow him, to take up his cross, to make a profession of his name and gospel, to bear contentedly a share in the reproach and scorn which is the usual lot of those who will live godly in Christ Jesus, in the midst of an unbelieving and perverse generation. You are not only to trust in him as a priest to atone for your sins, but to receive and obey him as your teacher and your Lord. If you are truly weary and heavy laden, you will be glad to do this, and are crying to him to enable you; and you are likewise willing to forsake everything that is inconsistent with his will and service. If you are desirous to come to Christ, it is not grievous to you to think of parting with your sinful pleasures and vain companions. Rather these are a part of the burden from which you long to be freed.

Come in this way, and you shall find rest for your souls. Are any of you thinking, "O that I could! Surely if I had seen him and heard him, I should have ventured. But now unbelief and fear keep me back." I observe, therefore:

3. That as we have no less need of Jesus than those of old who saw and conversed with him, so we have at least equal encouragement to come unto him. . . . Consider if the loss of his bodily presence is not more than made up to us:

1. By the fuller manifestation of the holy spirit than was afforded before his ascension. The Holy Ghost was not then given in that clear and abundant measure as afterwards, because Jesus was not yet glorified. While he was with them he was their comforter and teacher; but he told them, "When I depart, I will send you another comforter," whose office and abode with you will be in many respects so much more advantageous that on this account "It is expedient for you that I go away."

2. By the greater number and variety of promises which we enjoy. We have not only the scriptures of the old Testament in common with them, but to us the ancient revelations of the will and love of God are enlarged, explained, applied, and confirmed by the superaddition of the new.

3. By the experience of multitudes of all ages, people, and languages, who have gone before us since their time, the cloud of witnesses to the truth and grace of God. The reality of eternal things and the victorious power of faith are now increased by the concurrent evidences of thousands and millions, who have overcome all opposition by the blood of the Lamb, and

4. By the proofs and living witnesses of his power and grace amongst ourselves. Are there not many with whom you worship and converse from day to day, who can tell you they were even dead in trespasses and sins, but he has quickened them? They were once as you are, laboring and heavy laden; they waited for him long, had a share in such temptations and conflicts as you now feel, were often at a stand, and upon the point of concluding their case to be desperate, as you may think yours at present; but at length they were enabled to come unto him, and they have found rest. Every such instance should encourage you to gird up your loins of your minds; to be patient, and hope to the end. As they have felt your troubles, so shall you partake of their consolations in due time.—Selected.

Dear Brother Gold—I esteem it a very great privilege, indeed, to be able to call you “brother,” but when I do so there seems to be something within me crying out, unworthy, unworthy; yet, if I am not deceived, I hope and believe that Christ is my worthiness—without him all I do or say is full of sin.

Brother Gold, I have wanted to write to you ever since, I came back to Richmond, about the middle of August, and, in fact, have made several attempts, but my letters were so imperfect that after reading them over I would cast them aside. Somehow, though, I still have the desire to write, and while I feel my inability to express myself as I would like, if the good Lord will direct my thoughts I will try in the midst of all my weakness to speak a few words concerning some of the things I have experienced in my travels. For several days before I left Richmond to hear you and Brother Jones preach at Cane Creek, I was continually praying the Lord that if it was my duty to unite with the church, to forbid that I should come back to Richmond without offering myself to the church. I was made to feel that it was my duty and I promised God that if he would spare me until I could get to Cane Creek I would not let the opportunity pass. I was continually begging the Lord to give me some new and unmistakable evidence of his wonderful love for me and to enable me to go to his people and tell them what blessings I had received. A few nights before I left, I dreamed of being baptized, and it seemed that there were only three persons present; one was my father, the other I did not seem to recognize, and myself. This comforted me much, but by morning it seemed I only had a slight recollection of what I had dreamed. I was fully persuaded in my mind though that the first opportunity I had I would offer to the church and let the brethren decide as to my fitness to be numbered among them, and when the invitation was extended I went forth, praying God would give me liberty of speech to speak of his wonderful dealings with me, a poor sinner, but, somehow, I could not say much and was afraid that I would not be received. I thought my poor heart would break. For if I was turned aside by those people, where else could I go? But when I was received, there sprang up a joy that could not be expressed and I was made to glory in his holy name. Brother Gold, for some reason, the dealings of the Lord with me have, in a sense, been somewhat different with me from what is true with some of the Old Baptists, in that I cannot point to the very hour I was enabled to believe on Jesus in the pardon of my sins. After listening to some of the brethren relate their experiences, I sometimes think that if I could only have been dealt with as they I could never doubt the fact that when Jesus cried on the cross "It is Finished," that my sins were atoned for, and it seems to me that I would know I was a child of God. Have you ever heard of a case similar to mine? Paul says "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren," and this scripture is of great comfort to me, as I feel I can of a truth say that I love those that I believe to be the chosen people of God.

From my childhood I have had a desire to search the scriptures, and often when but a little boy would get the bible, or the Landmark, and read hours at a time, but was ashamed for any one to see me; as I grew older, the desire to know more of Jesus increased. I studied the bible in all earnestness, trying to see if I could not discover some means by which I could do something to bring the Lord under obligations to save me, but I was made to know that there was nothing that I could do and that it was not justice I wanted, but the mercy of God.

The morning I was baptized was a beautiful one, but I was still seeking some stronger evidence of the fact that I was one of his, and before leaving home I went out on the porch where my father was with his testament and was only there a few minutes before he left the porch, but he did not take his testament, so I decided to see if I could not find something in it that would strengthen and comfort me; and upon opening the testament, the first verse I read was the eighth verse of the eighth chapter of Romans, if I remember correctly, reading as follows: "So then they that are in the flesh can not please God." This scripture may have several meanings, but it appeared to me that morning that it meant I could not please God so long as I lingered with the world. This was indeed a strengthening scripture to me at the time and somehow I felt re-assured that I was doing my duty. We then proceeded to go to the pond where I was to be baptized by Brother Lewis, who has always made the impression upon me as being a man of God, and when we arrived the service was opened by singing "Oh, how happy are they," and oh, how sweet it was to me on that occasion? I can never forget it. Prayer was then offered by my father, and what a prayer it was; my father's prayers have always touched me more than any one I have ever heard pray, and on this occasion I was made to feel that surely God hath inspired him to speak such words as I had never heard fall from human lips before, and I almost felt like crying aloud, "Surely, the Lord hath designed it all." I couldn't see how it could have been otherwise.

After I came back to Richmond, the next Sunday being fourth Sunday, I attended preaching at Manchester, by Brother A. J. Moore, and enjoyed the services very much. I then went to Brother W. R. Moore's for dinner, and there we had a little gathering that afternoon and sang many songs of praise to our Redeemer. I don't think I have ever enjoyed an afternoon better than on that occasion and was made to feel like it was good to be there.

For fear that my letter is proving a hardship, I will proceed to bring it to a close, at the same time asking to be remembered in your prayers, for I feel the need of all such, and hoping that you can find it convenient to journey this way sometime and preach for us at Manchester, I am, I hope,

Your young brother in Christ,

R. LESTER DODSON.

Remarks—Brother Dodson, do you see anywhere in the scriptures the day and hour when one is born again?

P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—By the consent of Brother Hardy I send this good letter to you, asking you to please publish. It was of so much comfort to me I think others will be comforted by it,

Your little unworthy sister I hope,

MARY MOORE.

Miss Mary Moore:

My Dear Sister—Your very good and welcome letter came while I was away in the east and my wife laid it away for me and forgot to give it to me until just now. I do not feel worthy of such confidence as you express, nor of such sweet epistles of love, but I surely do appreciate both and feel that they are good things from the Lord. How good the Lord is to us poor worms. Sometimes I become so full in thinking over these matters that I weep tears of joy and thanksgiving and my whole heart goes out in praise to him for his unspeakable blessings. As I grow older these things grow sweeter and I rejoice the more.

Some days ago I was surveying a good portion of my life when these blessed words came and filled my heart Today I wear the double crown

Of battle scars and hoary hairs;

Yet have never tried my foes to down,

Nor take a word that was rightly theirs.

This thought was a full loaf of bread to me and I felt that I could go forty days and forty nights in its strength. How good is the Lord to remember us with such words of consolation.

Then to feel that he put it in your heart, one in whom I have had full confidence for these several years, to write to me such a sweet epistle and I so unworthy of any blessing of his. Surely he is the God of mercy, "The God whose everlasting arms are ever underneath and it is he who will bear us far above all those that oppress us with our inward enemies. Surely he is a very present help in trouble.

I have been made to rejoice in the Lord because of the rich blessings he has bestowed on your father's household. Both your father and mother in the house of the Lord, then yourself, your sister, your brother and his companion, with another one already having confessed a hope in dear Jesus. How good this is! We came along somewhat in the same line, father, mother and four of us children have been baptized into the fellowship of the church, with my oldest sister remaining out, but she too is blessed with a good hope through the grace of our God.

There are several things in your letter, which are exactly in accord with my own experience. After my burden was removed it was several days I was in unbroken rest. That rest was broken by an inquiring to know where my burden was and to try to get it back, so I might watch the more carefully how it went the next time. Then when I received the baptism of the Lord there was no particular outburst of joy as has been felt by many. My case was just a calm rest until the burden of the ministry, which I had felt at times from the time I was four years old. This was now brought before me as a duty which must now be done and it broke that rest. From then until now there has been a woe on me if I preach not the gospel. I find no time to be at ease in Zion, therefore. I am made to feel that you and I are close of kin in the Lord and his holy kingdom.

The experience of the people of God always brings comfort to the household and therefore I hope that you will not object to me sending it to Elder Gold for Zion's Landmark. If I do not receive a letter of objection this week I shall feel at liberty to forward it to him. I want to be remembered in much love to all the family and especially do I want to rejoice with your father and mother in the unspeakable gift of God to them and with dear Brother Hall in the encouragement he has received from the Lord in his ministry.

The good Lord's blessing rest on all of you and keep you in the way of his peace is the prayer of your little brother in hope,

Dear Brethren and Sisters—I have had a mind to write you for a long time, but have kept putting off from time to time, because I feel to be weak, and unlearned, and fearful that what I feel impressed to write will not be received in the same spirit in which I hope I feel about it. I am a poor weak mortal prone to do the things I would not, and when I would do good evil is present, but I have a strong desire to do right, and I try to do the best I can. I often express it this way—that I do the best that my weak judgment and the devil will let me, for I am tempted by Satan so much, I think sometimes that surely he tempts me more than any one else. If all the experience of my life was printed it would cover many pages, and doubtless there are many people that would not believe it. I don't believe I could have endured thus far without the Lord's help.

I love the Primitive Baptists. I feel that they are my people, their God my God. And my very heart yearns for their welfare and prosperity. Oh, how it hurts me when I see one treading on perilous ground, with feet well nigh slipped! and such is often the case. I want them all to let alone the institutions of men, and let their light shine. And right here I feel like I want to say a word to some of our beloved preachers, and I want them to receive it with the same love which I give it, and do not misunderstand me and think I am trying to dictate as if I felt myself better than you, but all of us need our attention called to our duties and our failings; and surely all of us have plenty of them. Be careful about hurting a little one's feelings. You don't want to hurt them I know, but sometimes you do, wound them when you harshly criticize some personal view or opinion, which concerns the people in general, because your own opinion is different. It is well enough to be careful about sharply asserting ones opinion because gentleness is better than force.

Preach the word, preach Jesus, feed the flock on heavenly food, that manna which comes from above, and you will have small need of mixing husks in with it, that is, scoring away on Sunday schools, insurance, prohibition and so on, for when the sermon is about half composed of a lecture on such subjects, and is repeated so often it becomes to be husk to the poor little child of God, and he goes away about as hungry, as when he came, for he wants food. And dear pastors, though it is your duty to warn and exhort when you see your members becoming negligent and too much worldly minded, yet it seems to me that you might have more effect if you would take the time to labor with the individual who takes part in worldly institutions, privately as well as publicly, pleading with them gently, yet firmly, and I believe you would come nearer bringing them back than you would by scoring in the pulpit so much, and throwing out bones for them to pick. The hungry child doesn't need the bone so much as it does meat, and those who are hungering after righteousness should be your chief concern when you go out feeding. Now loved ones, do you want to say or do anything that will encourage any immorality? I know you would say "No." Would you feel surprised were I to tell you that really and truly there are some among you that have? Alas, to our sorrow such is the case, but you may ask, "How or why?" Well, to my knowledge there are several of our members that have great appetites for strong drink, and seemingly unable to control it as they should, making a habit of drinking it as a beverage, feeling like they must tone up their nerves as they call it if they even go through the strain of going to church and sitting during a sermon and so on; for there are many ways and excuses you know that one can frame up in order to favor a carnal appetite. Well such characters feel very much encouraged when the preacher harps on prohibition so while by the process you may think you are trying to save some one from being an extremist on one side of the question, you are simply encouraging your weak brother on the other hand. Why there are some who boast about it. They say brother so and so does not condemn the way I use it. There should be more reproof than it seems to be for the immoderate use of such beverages. "Let your moderation be seen of men." Besides it favors Arminianism too much any way for a preacher to use such subjects so much in the stand. Let them go with their worldly institutions. If you preach Jesus, and rightly divide the word of truth, why all that have eyes to see and ears to hear, and hearts to understand, will discover the false from the true. God forbid that I should wound your feelings by calling your attention to this, but I feel forcibly impressed to tell you this, and may the Lord forgive me if I have said anything amiss.

I have the sweet little hope that I shall be freed from all sorrow and temptation when this troublesome life is over, and now I am old and the most of my days, which have been filled with trials and disappointments are behind me. Many more may await me before I receive the call to lay my armor down. I am nearing my three score and ten, and according to nature and my present feelings, the end is not very far ahead.

May God bless you all,
A SISTER IN TRIBULATION.

"There was a man of Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to Jesus by night and said unto him Rabbi which is interpreted good master, we know that thou art a teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that thou doest except God be with him." third chapter of St. John second verse.

Doth not poor Nicodemus, represent a child of God whose feelings have been roused for it is in the night time of his soul when he comes to Jesus. We know not the exact time nor the number of times that he comes to Jesus, it may be early or at the latest hours of night, or on a bright sunny day that he goeth away to some secluded place, or in the dark closet, or at his bedside kneeling in prayer so that none might see nor hearing him asking the way of eternal life. We learn that Nicodemus came to Jesus by night, we know not the exact time, it may have been early or at the darkest hours of night thinking no one might see him nor hear his conversation with Jesus, asking the way of eternal life. "Jesus answered and said unto him, verily, verily I say unto thee, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." We learn that this was mysterious unto Nicodemus, and he did not understand it when he said unto Jesus, "How can a man be born again when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" He did not acknowledge that it was a spiritual birth instead of a natural birth, for the "carnal man receives not the things of God, neither can he know them for they are spiritually discerned." Jesus answered "verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of the water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh and that which is born of the spirit is spirit." "Marvel not that I say unto you ye must be born again." This is as mysterious unto a child of God, as it was to Nicodemus, but there is a difference for his own knowledge teaches him that he cannot be born by nature again, but he must "be born of the water and of the spirit before he can enter into the kingdom of God."

Now for an illustration. When a little child is born into the world and as it cries that is an evidence of life and it must be bathed, clothed and nursed for it has become dependent upon its loved ones for all the necessities that must be bestowed upon it while in its helpless state of infancy. So it is with the poor little babe that is born of the spirit and as it cries that is an evidence of life and it must be cleansed, clothed and nursed for it has become dependent upon its heavenly Father for all the necessities that must be bestowed upon it while in this helpless state of infancy, for it is now crying vile and it must be cleansed in Jesus' blood to wash away its stain, naked and it must be clothed in the pure robe of righteousness, helpless and indeed it must be nursed and there is none but the great physician, from on high can attend this poor little babe that has just been born of the spirit, for all its help must come from God, for it now stands before him a poor lost and ruined and undone sinner and it learns there is nothing it can do to work itself in favor with God and it is through and by the loving kindness and tender mercies of Jesus if it is ever saved. He knows of the awful pit that is before it and its sins appear too great to be pardoned, but it is continually begging God for his mercies but it seems of no avail and it feels that it would gladly exchange life with the vilest of reptiles or the wildest of beast or something that has no future being and at last it gives up all hope in the world and feels that it is just if its soul is sent to hell for it feels that it has committed the unpardonable sin and it is just if it be cast away. But oh, it is there when Jesus comes into the nighttime of this soul and it is filled with a gladness and joy unspeakable, and it can sing the song the hundred forty and four thousand sang that came out of great tribulation. This little babe has been born of the spirit, therefore, a spiritual birth is shown in the kingdom for it has now become an heir, of the kingdom, and shall reign with Jesus evermore. When "he shall come in the clouds with power and great glory, and he shall send his angels, with a great sound of a trumpet and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds from one end of heaven to the other."

How helpless is poor mortal man in saving his soul. There is nothing he can do to inherit eternal life, for his dependency is upon Jesus; for he must be born of the water and of the spirit before he can enter into the kingdom of God. All who are now crying in sincerity, "Lord have mercy upon me a poor sinner," give evidence that they are living children and have been born of the spirit and they shall inherit the kingdom for none of his shall be left. For he saith, "All the Father giveth to me, shall come to me," and will not these be saved? We know not who they are but the Lord knoweth all that are his. "For whom he did foreknow he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his son, moreover, whom he did predestinate he also called and of whom he called he also justified, and of whom he justified he also glorified." And again he saith, "no man can come to me except he which sent me draw him."

By grace are ye saved through faith and that not of yourself lest any man should boast for it is the gift of God.

If it is of works then it is no more of grace.

Your little unworthy sister,
BESSIE BROOKS.

EXPERIENCE AND CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

Dear Brother—God in his love and infinite wisdom has given grace in Christ to an innumerable host who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb, and did as I trust number this one poor sinner with them, who was born of Baptist parents, September 28, 1852.

My father's father and mother both belonged to the church also my mother. My father was a professor in Christ though he never joined the church, but was pious and truthful and raised his children sober minded, taught them to tell the truth and to treat all men as they would wish to be treated. I was married when about 19 years of age and my wife and I lived together for about six years when the Lord saw it proper to take her from me leaving one child and myself to mourn for her.

Sometime after I married the second time, and when I was about 31 years old I was in the field about my farm one day when I was seized with a thought of great terror and horror of darkness and condemnation. I felt I should soon be cast into everlasting death and I sought lonesome places and would beg God to be merciful to me and save me. I continued to beg God in prayer for about five months and in November 1881 on the Lord's day I was freed from condemnation and death as I hope in the presence of Christ as my Savior, one altogether lovely and the chiefest among ten thousand, and as I trust the glory of the Lord filled the temple. I knew if I was saved it was in the mercy of God and I have believed ever since that God for Christ's sake pardoned my sins.

I then at that time continued to read and search the scriptures for the true church, and at the end of which time, not being able to remain away from the church any longer, I went on Tuesday after the first Sunday in November 1883, was received and baptized. This was a happy day with me and long to be remembered.

The third night after I was baptized I saw in a dream or vision myself standing in a large new house elevated higher than the people. The house seemed to be crowded with people and I was holding a hymn book in my hand and lining a hymn and the people singing and I singing with them and talking to them of the goodness of God toward me in mercy. I also saw the Holy Ghost come down from the elements in a shape like the moon when it is full. It struck me on the head and stood in a stream from my head to my feet, and a voice spoke and said, it is the Holy Ghost. I awoke from this dream in a spirit of praise.

For a considerable time after this I continued going to church and filling my seat, in fact I did not miss many meetings until 1887 when I was called to the work of gospel ministry if ever called. I had been sick for several weeks and had become very weak, when one night my wife had finished her work and came in the room and sat down near the fire. I tried to set up but was so weak I could not. So I went back to bed and the last thing I knew I saw myself standing on the south side of a square field and the field was set out in fruit trees in perfect rows with each tree burdened with its fruit. I then saw a carriage all of gold, that resembled a small house on wheels. The door of the house was open and over the door was fine metal of carved work. Also there were wings spread each way and three steps which led up into the house. It all appeared as solid gold. I was then placed on the second step when I saw two blue steel sickles, one standing east and the other west. The carriage or small house then moved north directly through the field the sickles on each side cutting down all the trees leaving nothing standing.

It seemed a great grief to me that such beautiful trees should be cut down and all the fruit destroyed. I then woke up realized where I was, and told my wife I had to die for I felt I had been warned of death.

I got up and walked around the room holding to the chairs and again came back to bed when I was placed again in the same field where the fruit trees were. But now there was nothing but a great hole in the earth, and the enemy that was to destroy me was coming out of the earth in the form of yellow jackets as thick as they could fly, and were coming as arrows dart towards me. I felt I was gone, but just before they struck me angels from heaven came down in an innumerable host and made a ring around me so the enemy could only strike the angels, but they did not fear them. I came to my mind and raised up in bed and these words were spoken to me saying, "All flesh is as grass. The sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat than the grass withereth and the flower thereof falleth away;" and to preach the everlasting gospel to a perishing people. The fear of death then was all gone and the glory of the Lord filled my soul. I commenced talking to my wife and preaching Christ and his kingdom, and bless your soul, dear child of God, what a feast of joy it was to me. My neighbors gathered in and I preached to them and I soon got well when I would preach salvation by grace to everybody I met.

My neighbors soon reported me crazy. At this time I was living about fourteen miles from any Primitive Baptist church. On one occasion at our regular church meeting I was present and our pastor failed to be with us. The brethren asked me to come forward and organize conference. I told them I could not but they kept pleading with me until I finally agreed to go and try. It was there I received great consolation.

I served in this way for about two years, when in the fall of 1889 I dreamed I was traveling to a city in a road that was beautiful and level. I had traveled until I became so tired I could hardly make a step when I came to a very old and rotten looking barn. The door stood open and I stepped up and saw some old rotten hay in the barn. I went in, lay down on the hay and went to sleep. And while I slept the fowls of the air came into the barn and ate all the flesh from off my right leg. From my knee down there was nothing left but the bone and leaders. And I knew this while I was asleep, because while still asleep I dreamed I woke up and felt I was ruined. I then thought I would move my leg and succeeded in doing so, but it was awfully weak. At first I could only take very short steps, but the more I tried the better I could walk, and the flesh began to come on the bone of my leg until finally all the flesh came back and my leg was whole again. I then traveled over this beautiful road in joy and gladness. The more I walked the more I could walk, and the more glorious it was until I awoke when behold it was all a dream. Then I began to wonder what did this mean. Surely this is a sentence of condemnation against me and is it possible I have acted a hypocrite for the past two years and oh Lord if so, forgive me.

I now thought I never would stand before the public any more, and felt I was down forever, and that I had brought condemnation against myself and shame upon my wife and children. I moved from Davidson to Davie county, where I rented a farm and put my bible in the bureau drawer where I could not see it when I was in the house. I went in sorrow and tears often and at that time I would rather be alone than to be with any one, although after the first year the burden became lighter. The scriptures somewhat left my mind, still the impression remained with me. I began to think about the latter part of the third year that the impression to preach the gospel would leave me before much longer. But this was not the case, the impression returned with more weight and increased more and more.

N. B.—Brother R. H. Pittman has requested a sketch of my life and travel from nature to eternal life in Christ as I hope, and call to the work of the ministry of the gospel. Brother Gold, will publish this sketch in the Landmark and Brother Pittman will collect and publish in his book. I trust that many of the dear brethren and sisters may be blest to read this and that they will send in their subscriptions to Brother Pittman for his book, that they may be comforted and instructed and that they may get some idea of the servitude of God's ministers.

God bless all whom it may concern.

W. T. BROADWAY.

Elders P. D. Gold and P. G. Lester:

Dear Brethren—Thank you for your picture Brother Gold. It looks so natural. When reading your editorials I imagine I see the expression of your face in the various sentences. I think I enjoy having met you as much as one could. It helps me to believe the purity of what you preach. I hope you will be spared long to comfort those who profit by your labors.

I am not expecting to last long. I am a little feeble, nearly worn out. My next anniversary is my seventieth. (May the 9th). May I yet have hope there is a rest remaining for me. I feel that I am nearly killed to the love of the world, but much of the time I am filled with vain thoughts and idle conversation to no purpose, which makes me abhor myself. Sometimes I feel I want to be in seclusion. But then the evil spirit of the flesh would torment me. I know that I love truth and the pure in heart. I do not love wicked company. If my heart is not deceived I love God, the three in one, better than any and all things else. If this love, the new birth and daily manifestation given by the holy spirit that I am his and he is mine, do not constitute a christian experience I am lost. This is the staff on which I lean—no purity of mine. All the good comes from God. The more light I have of the spirit the more imperfection I see in myself. If you never hear from me again I hope we will meet again in heaven.

My children are all married except Carrie. My youngest son lives with me. With best wishes to yourself and family.

Your unworthy sister,

MRS. N. J. BOOKER.

Dear Brother Gold—I send you by money order $1.50 payment in advance for the Landmark for another year. May the Lord grant you health and strength of body and mind to continue the issuing of this glorious messenger of truth to the lovers of truth for many years.

We learn that the love of truth gives freedom from the bondage of the spirit of carnality which belongs to man in nature, who is a stranger to grace, the outcome of love. God is love and those born of God love him and manifest it by obedience with holy fear, seeking first his kingdom and his righteousness to do their duty to God and to man according to the spirit of love by the Holy Ghost and are they who worship the only true God through his son with all the heart, soul, mind and strength and love their neighbor as themselves. Then this leaves no room to love, serve and worship anything else. All else is idolatry, which God will punish. Out of the love of self comes all idolatry as "the love of money is the root of all evil." And the world is full of it.

To worship God is to deny self and follow Christ.

S. W. OUTERBRIDGE.

Robersonville, N. C.

Brother Gold:

After the association yesterday I came here enroute for home, and as I find I must wait here until 2 o'clock this afternoon will write a line for the Landmark.

I enjoyed my visit to North Carolina and was kindly received by all. This is a great mercy to the churches and while this condition lasts our people will be united and happy.

I would be glad to mention all the places I went and the homes where I was so kindly entertained but I have not the time to do so. I am grateful for the many evidences of love and fellowship I met on the way and while I feel unworthy of it yet I desire to have the tenderest regards of all God's people.

I saw over forty preachers and three associations I attended have a membership of over four thousand. I heard of no discord in any way and no tales of a "progressive spirit."

I am truly glad I made this visit as it is a pleasure to know of these people. I hope they will think of me and pray that the Lord will care for me and favor me with the favors he leaves to his people.

I am now at the home of our dear Brother Moore and was with Elder A. J. Moore at his appointment here last night. There is a loving band here who are trying to maintain the service of God, and it was pleasant to be with them last night.

I start from here on my long journey home this evening at 2 o'clock and if it is the Lord's will, I will reach home Tuesday at 1:30 p. m., where I hope to find all well.

"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for the brethren to dwell together in unity." Peace is sweet in our homes and it is sweet in our neighborhoods and in our churches. "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God." We need members in all our churches that love peace and know how to make peace. Nothing makes it more manifest that we are the children of God than to be at peace one with another. To be peaceful we must be forgiving ourselves and this we can afford to do since the Lord has forgiven us so great a debt. "If anyone be overtaken in a fault, let him that is spiritual restore such an one, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." This has often brought mischief in our churches. It is good for us to consider ourselves—to think of our follies and weaknesses. It will help us to live with others.

May the dear Lord bless all the dear churches where I have been is my prayer.

J. H. OLIPHANT.

Manchester, Va., October 26, 1908.

FORGIVENESS.

What is true forgiveness? This question has an answer in every Christians' heart.

We are not able at all times to find it but it is there.

We have to do with Adam who may be called, Mr. Stiffy, and he is ever ready to show his requirements and where he has been wronged and offended. It is he who brings up charges against his neighbor or his brother.

I once heard a brother say that he felt that his brethren had badly wronged him and he was "mad". He did not want to meet them nor have any conversation with them. He wanted to get away from them. After a while he saw that he was wrong, that those brethren loved him and that they had no mind to do him wrong. He felt ashamed of himself and he loved those brethren and was humbled.

Here was forgiveness. They were already forgiven in his heart and he had no mind to talk about their wrongs nor to bring up charges against them. This is the way that it is manifested that brethren are together and are one in Christ Jesus.

Who am I, that I should want my brethren to come to me and make confessions? Am I a pope or a priest that I can forgive sins? God forbid. No, just as soon as the true spirit of repentance is in my heart every sin of every person whether he is a brother or an enemy is forgiven and I stand face to face with the judge of the whole earth who looks into my heart and there is not a thought that is secret to him. When I am in this frame I feel that I could gladly meet every one in peace. Oh that I could stay in that blessed sweet frame of mind! But, no. Mr. Stiffy has to get in my path and bring up feelings which are so contrary to my ideas of christianity that I am sore burdened and tried and don't know how to come before the Lord. Sometimes when I am looking at this terrible spirit in myself, I am made to fear that I have only the hypocrites' hope and if that be true how woeful is the end. I do not want to be that way. I do not want to be in the company of this old nature of mine. I hate it and would get away from it but, alas! turn which way I will it is just before my eyes and can see nothing else. Were it for the few little intervals of sunlight with which the dear Lord blesses me I would be left in the wilderness with nothing but a fiery law hanging over my head ready to consume and destroy me. But, thanks to his holy name, these seasons of sunshine do come and this fiery law is of no force. Mr. Stiffy is made to go into his retreat and shut his awful mouth. Then I am humbled before the Lord and am ready to take the hand of peace with every one and the hand of fellowship with all my brethren and sisters. Then I experience in my poor heart the sweet forgiveness of all my sins and am given faith to believe that they have all been washed away in the blood of our holy Lord Jesus.

At such a time I would not say to any one, you have wronged me and you must show your repentance and confess your faults. No. No. they are all forgiven.

How can I come before my dear Lord and ask him to forgive my sins with my heart full of accusations against others? In such a condition I would have no spirit of prayer with which to call on the Lord only as the hypocrites do, and therefore I could expect nothing, but the answer which the hypocrites receive.

Brother Gold, I know nothing about this only as it thus works in my own poor heart. Today I have been given that sweet feeling that I have nothing against any person on earth.

Before I arose something seemed to say within me, "Oh that day when freed from sinning!" and it was so sweet to me that I repeated it aloud. Immediately it was in my mind to write these few words and I have written.

Your brother in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

TWO THINGS.

It is one thing to be humble. It is another thing to profess humility when one does not possess it.

What are some of the differences of these two things? The humble soul bears burdens and endures hardness. When one that is humble is treated wrongfully he endures it without retaliation. He does not feel that vengeance belongs to him, nor desires to take revenge. A humble man feels that he does not deserve to be well treated. One that feels unworthy does not become offended at harsh or wrong treatment in the sense of returning evil for evil, because he does not feel worthy of honor. While the proud man expects honors and seeks them, and is offended if he fails to receive what he desires and feels that he deserves. Such people are forward to profess to be humble and assume a voluntary humility, and appear to be very patient and meek. But such people are easily offended and quickly resent what they consider is an insult when it was not so intended.

If a brother offends or displeases one of this character, instead of going to that one alone in the spirit of prayer, and with a desire to hide the multitude of sins, telling him of his fault between the two alone, never having told it to any other, nor desiring that any other should know it, for it would disgrace the offender, this one trespassed against feels that he does not wish him exposed or damaged, but this proud one is ready to tell this trespass everywhere, and spread this trouble. Now if one is humble he would not become so easily offended, but is not worthy, hence he bears these things as things he is sorry of—sorry that one should thus act, and bring distress on others, and wrong his own soul. For if I love a man I desire that he may so act as to receive and enjoy the approval of all the members of church.

To seek self and be chief or first in a matter is the common selfish trait of mankind. One's pride may act in a way to assume or feign humility by appearing to be very humble, when in reality it is all to please self. To deny self is the most difficult task to do as long as one loves self. Indeed it can not be done until one is led to hate self. When Job said I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes thus he denied self. He then put up no claim for self, nor would he own there was a good thing in it, or that it could do anything good, as Paul who said, I know that in me—that is in my flesh—dwelleth no good thing. That is the man that walks by faith and not by sight, which would be to walk according to the flesh.

One says, oh I am so vile, I am not worthy of being noticed, yet unless this one is specially noticed he or she becomes offended and complains of being neglected, and that the brethren do not love that one; now where is humility? If one is humble he is loving others, not himself, is not seeking any thing for himself, but seeking and praying for the peace of Jerusalem.

One that tries to do right and mourns at the constant presence of selfishness, and sees pride and vain glory, envy, and every foul and unclean spirit meeting, opposing and besetting him every where, and is endeavoring every where and all the time to beat down, bruise and get rid of this nature, but feeling that it pollutes, mars and defiles the best efforts he ever makes, and who has this conflict all the time, does not feel he is humble. Nor can he see any humility in himself, but sees the very things he hates in himself, and does not see any thing else in his nature, does not feel he is humble, nor does he think he is humble though others tell him he is; yet that is the humble man. If every body should tell him he is good and true and faithful, he would not believe it, nor could he be flattered to believe it, nor to regard himself as better than his brethren, for he has a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, an inner consciousness that he is vile. He has the sentence of death in himself that forbids his trusting in self or the flesh, but his hope is in the Lord Jesus that raises the dead.

How could one in truth and in reality prefer others to himself if he at the same time considers himself better than they are? It would be a mockery and be hypocritical. A man had better not pretend to be any thing than to appear to be or profess to what he knows he is not. An honest man desires to act and speak in sincerity, and not to appear to be what he is not.

A man is not a judge of his own case, but if he is sincere and honest he will profess to be as it appears to him. He sees his own vileness, yet he does not see the vileness of others, but he sees the image of Jesus in others and prefers them to himself. But if a man has made a profession of religion merely, but is not a possessor, and is hence puffed up with pride, having never seen or felt the plague of his own heart, he is anxious and forward to make a fair show and appear before others as a man of faith and humility, of meekness and as possessing all good traits, and is desirous to be considered as entitled to a high seat, and will oppress the poor and glory in what he is doing.

P. D. G.

Brother James Short asks if the ninety and nine sheep represent the world (Luke 15)? No; because sheep do not represent the world. The ninety and nine sheep had not gone astray. He leaves them to seek the one gone astray. He leaves the ninety and nine in the wilderness and seeks for that one that has wandered away until he finds it, and then he brings it home, and calls in his friends saying rejoice with me for I have found that which was lost. So the rejoicing was not over the ninety and nine sheep, but over the one that had gone astray when he had found it. So Jesus said, there is more rejoicing in heaven over one sinner that repents than over ninety and nine just persons that need no repentance. A righteous man needs no repentance. A sheep not gone astray is surely a sheep as clearly as if it had gone astray. But the sick one in a family is the one the well ones are concerned about. Any member of the family in peril is the one that calls out for help from the others, and the strong are to bear the infirmities of the weak. This is a law of righteousness and love, and all the laws of heaven are love.

Objection was made to Jesus because he showed compassion to the needy and vile. He received sinners and ate with them. To raise the fallen, cheer the faint, show mercy to the unworthy are traits of character in Jesus that set forth his divine character, and also his goodness and purity. He can receive and save sinners and yet overcome sin and while endearing the sinner to himself displays that riches of grace that destroys sin and overcomes evil, and so ingratiates the sinner to him, turning the sinner from dead works to serve the true and living God, that sin is made an end of, and everlasting righteousness is brought in.

What could so effectually eradicate the waywardness of the younger son and endear him to his father's house as the enslaved condition his own conduct of going astray brought him to the bitterness of, as well as the wonderful, unexpected, conquering love his glad father bestowed on him.

What too could have so silenced the mourning of the elder brother, and showed him that all was his as the mercy showed to one utterly unworthy of any favor.

Whether the guilty like I am can find any that need no repentance does not so much concern us as to find that there is mercy for the fallen.

"REMOVE NOT THE ANCIENT LANDMARK WHICH THY FATHERS HAVE SET."

The fathers such as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob have walked up and down the land, and all their foot was set upon the Lord hath given them. A surveyor has a guide and his limitations or boundaries to run to and from. The surveyor cannot run over on the land of another, and thus take his property. But has a guide by which he ascertains and locates the true boundaries or landmarks. Thus he sets them. By faith the fathers walked up and down, surveyed, located, set and fixed the boundaries. Here are the stakes with cords holding and binding them together. The cords of love and stakes or boundaries constitute the landmarks. These landmarks are not to be removed. We are to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. Nothing is to be disregarded. Everything is good and to be held. We are not to transcend and go beyond, nor to fall short in anything. Not a stake to be removed, nor a cord to be loosed. The doctrine therefore and order of Zion is unchangeable. The city lieth four square. Therefore it cannot be changed. The multiplication of grace and peace does not allow of any change of boundaries, stakes or doctrine, but the greater growth within the boundaries—the occupancy of all the land, the enjoyment more fully of the good things in the kingdom.

Nothing is plainer to the lovers of Zion and her king than that this doctrine and order are fixed from the beginning. People that do not feel impressed with this unchangeableness and perfection of the doctrine of God our Saviour do not prove that the faith once delivered to the saints has been delivered to them, while the true followers of Jesus feel that all he said and did is precious to them, and is all to be observed. How important that believers should be baptized, wash feet, lead lives of humility, abstain from evil, be ready unto every good work enjoined in scriptures, keep their bodies under, love the brotherhood, and keeping all the sayings of Jesus.

It was on my mind to be baptized. When this was done I saw the preacher no more as one reproving me for not obey, but I went on rejoicing. Until I washed with the saints it was on my mind to wash feet.

As oft as you observe the Lord's supper you do this in remembrance of the Lord to show forth his death. Thus we are to keep the ordinances as they were delivered unto us waiting and watching for his coming.

These landmarks are ancient—not any modern device of man. A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary. That which is perfect cannot decay—cannot be improved because it is ordained of God. If we love God we love his works, we love his doctrine and desire to keep that which he has committed unto us, and do not wish to remove a single landmark set by the fathers who were led by the spirit of God. These are guides, rules and bounds that we give good heed to. Every time we hear a gospel sermon preached this field which the Lord has blest, this garden of his pleasant fruits, is presented, and the south wind blows, and we eat the pleasant fruits and inhale the sweet odors of the goodly land.

If we are right every word of God is sweet to us, and we live by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God. P. D. G.

REVELATION.

What guides the Lord's people since they have no earthly head, pope, guide, leader or expounder? They are to call no man father. They have never been led except as the Lord leads them, and he is not on earth but in heaven.

The work of grace in their hearts and manifested in their lives is felt by them as scripture is opened to their understanding, or as they hear preaching. The spirit of God is the guide and interpreter of the good things of the kingdom of heaven. When he moves the servants of God to expound the word it is heard, felt and understood by the believers in Jesus so that he knows this is the truth of the Lord. It is effected in a way that abases man and exalts the Lord. Hence there is no man of the right mind that feels capable of being a leader or a ruler, nor does he desire to be. Humility prevents the people of God from desiring to be leaders or being called great, each esteems others better than himself. So that it is impossible for the unclean to enter into these heavenly places. There is a wall of fire that burns all the chaff and keeps out what is unfaithful.

It is a matter of wonder what purges the church, or what keeps out the evil minded. There is no apparent effort to induce fashionable people to enter with the church. The beauty of simple gospel worship that those circumcised in heart love is what attracts those born of God.

When the Lord's people are left in the stormy sea of life to toil in rowing on the treacherous waters of worldly care then there is not much joy in preaching. It is the hungry soul that loves to hear the gospel preached. When one is set at the feet of Jesus and hears words from him then the world is under his feet, and heaven comes down his soul to greet, and glory crowns the mercy seat. Then he knows whom he has believed, and knows the joyful sound. Then there is none to whom he can go but Jesus, and there is none else he desires. So glorious the revelation of Jesus that when he appears the most ignorant in worldly wisdom knows equally with the most intelligent that the Lord alone leads his people, and there is no strange God with them.

Such is the weakness and helplessness of the Lord's humble, poor and needy that they feel when their signs are cut off they wander as a scattered sheep helpless and without a guide. So weak are the people of God when they are scattered that as dry bones of the valley they are very dry, and the question is can these dry bones live? For it seems that there is no hope for them. But when the spirit of God moves these dry bones then life comes into them, and they stand up together, and are manifested as the whole house of Israel.

The heavenly power that moves in the heart and affections as the wonderful works of the Lord are declared, and light and love flash in the soul lifting it to the mountain heights of joy, unfolds the resurrection mystery of glory. As one is led from one chamber into another, and the banner of love waves protecting the hearer from every enemy and shielding him from every fear, he crowns Jesus Lord of all.

But when the voice of this heavenly music is no longer heard then Israel with harps hung on the willow weeps in Babylon.

We read of Israel in the glory of victory over her enemies, then we shout for the battle. Again we see her fleeing before the uncircumcised and we wonder where is now thy God. So in these days none but the Lord can lead Israel, and when the Lord's people forget him they are the weakest of all people, and the most wretched. They have but one leader, yet they cannot follow him while they feel that they have any strength. It is only by revelation that they can march.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM CHARLES WARREN.

By the request of his mother, I will write a short obituary of her only son William Charles Warren, who was born November 24, 1879 in Pitt county, N. C., and departed this life June 21, 1903, near Robersonville, in Martin county. He was a son of Howell and Fannie Warren, the latter being a faithful member of the church at Flat Swamp, Pitt county. He was a grand son of Brother Alfred James, who died this date just before Charlie did who was something near 83 years old. He was as his daughter a member of the same church, and a very faithful one too. He lived a life while a member worthy to be patronized, meek and quiet, filling his seat in the church when not providentially hindered. Charlie was a very obedient son to his parents, ever willing to render service unto them as to make them comfortable. He was away from them about two years of his life, a while after his becoming of age, first on a farm that his father intended for him, then he went to Portsmouth, Va., for some months and worked in a furniture factory, where his health failed him, and he became unable to work. He was treated by a doctor there, but he didn't tell Charlie what his illness was, but wrote his parents of his illness, so his dear mother went a' once and stayed with him until he got ab'e to come home. Then they called in Dr. Hargrove the next day, and after examination he stated that his spleen was enlarged. He treated him for a while with favorable results. He resorted to other physicians, six in all, but not to benefit. He then went to the hospital in Washington, N. C., and he remained there four weeks. He seemed to improve for a while, but his condition was no better. When he came home he concluded t'at there was no use to try medical skill farther. His parents of course kept trying various remedies. In fact all was done for him that could be by human skill and kind parents and good neighbors, but all to no avail. He was confined about four weeks and then died. His sufferings were intense, but he bore his affliction with a great deal of patience, especially the last four weeks of his life. The doctors did not seem to understand his case. He was very anxious to get well so he could go to work again, but later on he was often calling upon the name of the Lord, and was heard several times to say, Lord have mercy on me a poor sinner. He took his sister in his arms the day he died, and said don't cry sister if I die; for I hope that I will be better off. While it was indeed very trying to his parents and sister to give him up, but they are not without hope. He said a while before he died, oh I am rising so fast and don't it seem good. So I feel to say, their loss is his eternal gain, and while it is trying indeed for us to give up our loved ones yet when they leave the evidence that the Lord is their shepherd they are better off than we that are left to follow. The last time I called to see him, he was impressed to ask me to pray for him, so he told his mother after I was gone, but did not feel worthy. By request of his heart stricken parents I held burial services at the grave when he was buried. There was a very large crowd of his relatives and friends present, which gives evidence of how he was appreciated when living. May the good Lord bless those with grace whose heart are made sad by his departure. Here in this life there is worry and disappointment, but over there is rest and quietness. Why do we dread the change?

G. D. ROBERSON.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Friend—It is with a sad heart that I try to write the obituary of my dear mother, Mrs. Sallie E. Walters wife of Jackson Walters. She was born April 25, 1863, and died October 4, 1908, making her stay on earth 45 years 5 months and 19 days.

She is survived by a husband and eight children five girls and three boys. She also leaves a mother, three sisters and two brothers to mourn for her.

She was one of the sweetest mothers that ever lived and I feel like sometimes I can't do without her, yet, I feel that our loss is her eternal gain. She left such bright evidences that she is now with her God. She said she was not afraid to die and told us she was so happy, so happy a few hours before she died.

I can't wish my dear mother back in this sinful world to suffer pain and sorrow, but I can't help but grieve for her, she was so good and kind to us. Sometimes I feel like I can't live without her, yet, I know I have a dear father, sisters and brothers, but what is home without a mother who is always ready to share our sorrows and give us advice.

Mama had been in declining health for several months, but was up in her room and could walk around in the yard. She was taken to her bed on Friday night and died Sunday night. All was done for her that mortals could do, but God had called her to come home and we could not stay the hand of death. No one knows how hard it is to stand by a dear mother and see her die but those who have experienced it, but we must be resigned to God's will.

She united with Primitive Baptist church at Mill some years ago with which she lived a consistent member. She loved to meet with the brethren and hear them preach and pray and sing hymns of praise. One of her favorite songs was, "A few more days on earth to spend, and all my trials and cares shall end."

The burial services were conducted by her Pastor, Elder T. N. Walton, and she was laid to rest in the family burying ground.

Written by her grieved child,

BESSIE WALTERS

NAOMI ELIZABETH LAWRENCE.

Our dear daughter and youngest child, Naomi Elizabeth Lawrence, was born in Hamilton N. C., August 11, 1891, and died very suddenly on the morning of the 26 of September 1908. She grew up a bright strong and healthy child and had very little sickness up to the time she was taken with rheumatism about a year ago. Her mother and I were gone from home at the time and when we returned we found her in bed with that terrible disease with which she suffered intensely for about six months. For a part of the time she could not feed herself or turn over without help.

She got better of that but it left her heart and lungs in a bad condition and we tried many remedies and physicians but could not cure her. She was energetic and would go as long as she could and was up many times when she should have been in bed. She was very patient and would not complain though suffering so much and always tried to be bright and cheerful. She was the life and light of our home and we all loved her so much. Just before she died she went with me to the Ebenezer association at Luray, Va. We thought a trip to the mountains would benefit her. There she made many friends as she did everywhere she went. While on the trip she had a chill in Front Royal and we had to return home and she was confined to her bed for several days. She rallied again and we thought she was getting better but our hopes were all blasted for she was not. I left home Friday evening before she died to go on my way to my appointment at Sparta. I kissed her good bye while she was sitting on the front porch little thinking I would never see her again. While at Hill at the home of Mr Stancill on Saturday morning and while preparing to get off to church at Sparta I received the sad news that she died about half past seven o'clock. It came to me so suddenly and was such a shock it broke me down and I know not what to do. I reached home and found it true and oh, how my heart sank within me to look upon that lovely face in death but as we believe sweetly sleeping in Jesus. We believe she was refined and purified by her great sufferings here and passed away without even a struggle into the regions of blessedness and peace. The last books I saw in her hands were our hymn book and Zion's Advocate. From what she said to her mother just before she died and other evidences left us we feel death had no terrors for her.

Not only our house but the community is left in sadness. She had many friends of all classes around her wherever she went. If indeed she had an enemy I am not aware of it. The only dear child of her dear mother who has nursed her so patiently and untiringly and my baby child, we sorrow for her, but not as for those for whom we have no hope. We thank the dear Lord that he lent her to us the short time she lived and pray him to give us grace and submission to his divine will in her death. I hope the Lord's people everywhere will pray for us.

Affectionately yours in deep sorrow,

M. T. LAWRENCE.

SABRA EMILY ALLSBROOK HARRISON.

It is with much sadness of heart that I attempt to write the obituary of my dear mother. Sabra Emily Allsbrook was the daughter of William and Penelope Elinor Allsbrook and was born in Edgecombe county, N. C., near Rocky Mount, on the 30th day of May 1827 and died at her home near Plymouth, N. C., the 13th day of July, 1908, making her stay on earth, 81 years one month and thirteen days.

When she was about ten years old her father moved from Edgecombe county to Martin county, near Williamston and there on the 20th of September, 1842, she was married to my father Isaac Harrison, by Elder Humphrey Stallings.

Unto them were born fourteen children, six girls and eight boys, which they raised to be grown men and women and all married with families except one son William, who died in the civil war including him five preceded her to the grave which leaves nine living, six boys viz: Elder N. H. Harrison, and James, Julian, Joseph, Willie, and myself, three daughters Mrs. J. T. Rowe, of Baltimore, Md., Mrs. C. W. Sykes, of Georgetown, S. C., and Mrs. S. O. Lynn, of Suffolk, Va., she also leaves seventy-six grand children and forty-six great-grand children making a total of 131 living descendants.

Mother obtained a hope in Christ and joined the Primitive Baptist church at Moratock, Washington county on Saturday before the third Sunday in July, 1875 and was baptized the next morning by Elder N. H. Harrison, and was never missing at her meetings unless providentially hindered, and it was her great delight to have the people of God to visit her at her home and hear them talk of the dealings of the Lord with them and his wonderful power. Words fail to express the many lovely traits of character of my dear mother, she was so gentle and kind, self sacrificing and patient through her many trials of this life and none knew her but to love her. She no doubt passed through much suffering and sorrow having given to the world many sons and daughters to rise up and call her blessed. She felt that the Lord had given her a blessed family as she lived to see nine of her fourteen children baptized in the Primitive Baptist church of which she belonged. My love for her was inexpressibly tender as it fell to my lot to have the whole responsibility of caring for her in her old age and my hands never tired administering to her comfort day or night. I remained at the old homestead for more than eighteen years, and so many pleasant hours we have spent together. She was always so comforting to me in my troubles and Oh, how I miss the soft touch of her dear hand to soothe my aching head when sick. The dear Lord had blessed her with a bright active mind, and great energy so that she was very industrious. My wife and I never tired in waiting on her when she was sick and she so often told us that she hoped the blessings of the Lord would rest upon us and our children for our kindness to her.

For sometime before she died she had seemingly been in better health than usual, and the day she died was so cheerful and bright until about twenty minutes before she died, when she complained with a pain at the heart which the doctor said was heart failure.

She would often say:

Oh! when shall my sorrows subside,

Oh! when shall my suffering cease

Oh! when to the bosom of Christ be conveyed

To the regions of glory and peace.

I feel assured she is now resting in the arms of Jesus, where the toils of this troublesome world are over. May the dear Lord direct her children to live a life of pure example as mother did and die as peaceful in the full triumph of having faith without a gasp or struggle. I can say in truth when she took hold of my hand telling me good bye in death it was the saddest parting of my life, but the time will soon come when we must say farewell to all of an earthly nature and we hope by the love and mercy of God to meet mother and all our loved ones gone on before in that blessed world where all but love is done away.

The funeral services were conducted by Elder M. T. Lawrence, it was her request not to have any funeral preached, but to have him to conduct services at the grave and there amidst a host of sorrowing relatives and friends her body was deposited in it's last resting place beside that of her husband in the family burial plot on the old farm where they lived happily together for forty-eight years.

May the six sons and three daughters be comforted, upheld and strengthened by the healing influence of the holy spirit and at last be prepared by God's divine power to meet our dear mother in that sinless world where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

PENIZA J. MADRY.

The deceased was born September 18, 1843, and was called away from time and earthly scenes to the place prepared for her by her Lord and Saviour whom she loved and served, on Wednesday evening at 10 o'clock, July 29, 1908, making her 64 years, ten months and fourteen days old. A prayer was offered up to God for the bereaved children and devoted friends and all in attendance for reconciliation to the divine will, and sermon preached by Elder W. B. Strickland. The remains were then borne to the grave by kind friends and gently lowered in the tomb, near the home that had been made a modern home by her energy and loving ministrations. The concluding remarks were made here on the resurrection and full and complete glory in body and soul when Christ shall come the second time without sin unto salvation. The gentle rain that was falling reminds us of the doctrine of God our Savior, which she in life loved so well and which dropped to her all along her pathway below, as the rain whose speech was as the dew to her to revive and refresh her soul, and produce light, liberty, and strength in the Lord. She never failed to ascribe greatness to our Lord. He was her rock and she rejoiced in his perfect work.

What a sad scene as the children groaned, men and women turning away from that place with heads bowed, hearts almost broken, and spirits crushed, and tears dropping making smuggled groans, with their affections almost entirely buried in the tomb; but the God of nature and of rich reigning grace will not suffer them long to be thus. Light and comfort he will send in his own good time. The cry out of the depths of woe shall reach his ear of mercy. The voice shall come from heaven, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; yea saith the spirit they shall rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." We know our loss is her eternal gain. Only gone out of death into life. Sister Madry's maiden name was Peniza J. White, a family of high standard and most excellent in virtues, many of whom now live in Edgcombe, Nash and Halifax counties. She was married to Mr. B. T. Madry February 9, 1860, her husband died July 29, 1875, just thirt-three years prior to her death. Left a widow with six children, she surely had and made manifest the riches and effect of God's promise to be a husband to the widow and a father to the orphan. Or as Job says 29:13, "The blessings of him that were ready to perish came upon me and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy." With this strength naturally and spiritually, she wrought almost wonders, as was said by the Commonwealth, the town newspaper:

"She realized her responsibility and devoted her remarkable powers to the pleasing task of rearing and educating her children and preparing them for the good and useful places of life." The true devotion of mother to children and children to mother was always beautiful and continued to the last moment of her life. We can truly witness the statement as in our visits several times to see her, we have been struck with admiration and praise to the Lord for such constant loving and sleepless ministrations of filial love of those especially who attended her person, watched by her side.

She lived to see all of her children married, settled and independent so far as living is concerned and has left a good estate besides.

She united with the Primitive Baptist church at Kehukee by relating a rich and full experience of the work of God in her soul on September 1879, and was baptized by the unworthy writer on the following Sunday morning. She was a strong, constant, and devoted and faithful member and constant servant and beloved by all to the end. The whole of her life has been lovely especially as a member of the church of God. Her walk and conversation were as ever becomes the children of God. She believed in God's choice in Christ before the world began, and that their life was in Christ, and that they would be called with a holy calling and preserved by God's rich and reigning grace, and at last present it unblemished and irreproachable before his great white throne. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons and three daughters. To these whom we know so well and who have our highest regards, we would say think of those high and holy expressions of love and faith in Jesus as the ever constant and sure power not only to deliver his people from the snares of sin and Satan here below, but to keep them and even in death to give them the assurance that he has conquered death for them. Those near by could see as we talked that loving power and the eternal home and glory of the soul already prepared by Jesus, the illumed glory of heaven as it radiated from the countenance, beamed and sparkled in the eye, while she too would sanction and talk of Jesus. Death had no terrors for her. Her faith bridged over the darkness and she saw light, life, glory and peace beyond. May God bless her children and friends and give them the grace and faith of their mother if his will, and that they may think of mother in heaven and emulate her noble and christian life.

Oh how sweet that precious grace and love of God, which brings Jesus the end of the law to all that believe, and takes possession of the soul and life of the saint of God and makes him delight to love and serve the Lord and rejoice in him having no confidence in the flesh, giving glory to God, while they live and by living in the obedience of the gospel of the kingdom, and as they are bid by the holy spirit make it evident that in dying they will be in the arms of the Savior.

In her sickness, which kept her in doors for several months she had several glorious visions of the Lord and his speaking with and to her. She seemed to feel sure that she was going and did not dread, but had a desire to depart and be with Christ. Her home was a resting place for Primitive Baptist and their friends and oh how all lovers of the truth will miss her.

May God give grace that we may bear all things with christian fortitude and exalt the name of him who doeth all things right.

"We shall sleep but not forever,

There shall be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no never,
On the resurrection morn!

From the deepest caves of ocean,
From the desert and the plain,
From valley and the mountain,
Countless throngs shall rise again.

We shall sleep but not forever,
In the lone and silent grave;
Blessed be the Lord that taketh,
Blessed be the Lord that gave.

In the bright eternal city,

Death can never come;
In his good time he will call us
From our toil to home sweet home."

MARY ELIZABETH HARRISON.

Death has again visited our home and taken from us our little baby, Mary Elizabeth she was the daughter of A. L. and Hattie Harrison and was born November 20, 1908 and died November 27. She was a sweet little angel and the dear Lord in his allwise providence saw fit to take her home, she only budded on earth to blossom in heaven. Jesus said suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven. The Lord giveth and he taketh away, blessed be his name.

BOOK NOTICE.

I have published a little pamphlet entitled "A Brief History of the O'd School Baptists." It has fifty double column, thirteen em. pages and runs from John the Baptist to the present day.

The fifth and sixth chapters are devoted to the history of Pilgrim Primitive church, which is the oldest one in Texas, and runs from 1833 to 1847. I expect to yet publish the history of this church up to 1869.

The price of my history is 25 cents post paid. Send orders to J. H. FISHER, Graham, Texas.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

ABIDING IN CHRIST.

"He that abideth in me, and I in him the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye cannot do nothing" John xv. 5.

There is an ineffable union between Christ and his church. In respect to our first union with God in the law of our creation it is a new union, in respect of the purpose of God it is older than the other, an eternal union. It is set forth here in a figure, "I am the vine, ye are the branches." As the stock gives life to every branch united to it, by the sap flowing in, so life flows from Christ to every redeemed sinner. He comes to dwell in the soul at regeneration, and imparts to it a new principle of cleanliness, his own holy life. We read, "Christ who is our life." The scriptures all testify to his indwelling, and show it is his purpose to make his people his dwelling place. "For the Lord hath chosen Zion, he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever, here will I dwell; for I have desired it" (Ps. cxxxii. 13, 14). "My tabernacle also shall be with them," and "I will dwell in them and walk in them" (Eze. xxxvii. 27; 2 Co. vi. 16). There is no other way to be cleansed from the terrible disease and pollution of sin but by his indwelling, whereby we are made one with him in nature, and receive the holy spirit with all his quickening operations. "I in them." As we are cleansed from the guilt of sin by the blood of Christ our priest, so we are cleansed from the filth of sin by his holy life imparted. And this holy life can come to a sinner only on the ground of his atoning blood; because "He loved the church, and gave himself for it." Even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish" (Ep. v. 25—27). Brethren, what is there to be compared for blessedness to this union with God in our nature? Of all blessings covet this first, to have it in your souls and experience—the power, life, holiness, and peace of it. He that seeks it has it already; but the possession of it must be made known to him by revelation for his comfort. "He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing."

We want, if God help, to somewhat enlarge on this part of christian experience, abiding in Christ experimentally. There is an experience of it to be known. It is easy to sleep on generalities, but if we come to particulars we may find something to keep us awake.

I. By faith we are to abide in the great work of atonement accomplished by Christ. Everyone instructed in the knowledge of the fall by the Holy Ghost, knows the defilement and the power of sin, in measure; what it does in separating between God and the soul weakening faith, cutting off communion, and causing in many things a stumbling in the ways of God. What is the remedy? Not a cutting off of our sinful nature and so destroying its evil workings, which is impossible; but a going with the worst of sin which brought distance, dryness, and barrenness to the atonement of Christ again and again. A legal heart will always oppose this end and draw wrong conclusions from these self procured troubles. Satan points to our failures and to the causes; and the effect is contraction of guilt. But what the Lord teaches us is to go and acknowledge our iniquity. "Only acknowledge thine iniquity" (Je. iii. 13). He instructs us to go with our eyes on the atonement, and to plead that as the only ground of new access, to obtain a new sense of mercy. If we are lively, a past sense of acceptance will not do when we get fresh distance and fresh separation from God. It may help if the holy spirit brings it to remembrance but that is not fresh cleansing. O the tears a child of God has to weep in spirit over a self-procured separation, a sin-bought silence from God! "Ye now therefore have sorrow" over clouds brought between Christ and your souls, over the suspension of the sweet operations of the spirit that were your delight. A cessation has come to communion. Sin and guilt will try to turn our eyes into ourselves, perhaps to make us doubt the reality of our religion, or of God's past dealings with us. Now faith's business is to make use of Christ in this particular, and to go again and again, confessing, confessing, confessing. The prodigal went this way. His thoughts, mind, and memory went to his father's house, his whole heart ran there, and that affected all the rest, guided his mind, directed his feet, brought him back to his father and put words into his mouth; and when he was yet a great way off, his father "ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him." The robe, the ring, and the fatted calf were all bestowed upon him.

Now, if we abide in the doctrine of Christ's atonement, this will be our mercy, to go over and over again, and make mention of his precious blood for the removal of sin and distance. We shall think of what procured our pardon at first, what brought peace, and healed our wounded consciences. Turn to Isaiah, "It pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief." "The chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed." Zechariah speaks of the same abiding of faith in the atonement, and shall be in bitterness for him as one that is in bitterness for his first-born saying, "They shall look on me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him as one mourneth for his only son." (xii. 10). By his wounding and bruising only can we be healed, and bruising only can we be healed. If we have a motion of faith in the heart when guilty, this will be its aim—through atoning blood and pardoning love once more to have access to gain God's ear, and have his heavenly smile on our souls. Do we not know what abiding in him is in this particular? When trouble comes and guilt is fresh contracted, do we not turn to his blood? and when our legal minds work, does faith say, "That fountain is the remedy there is the cleansing?" What brought peace at first must renew it; what first gave acceptance with God must again bring us nigh. We would direct a troubled child of God to this most seriously; because there is no getting or maintaining peace without it. Listen not to Satan who says all is wrong because you have done evil; but remember that Jesus Christ is the "same yesterday, today, and forever," and his blood "cleanseth us from all sin."

Let us look at a scripture example or two. See how David's faith pressed through when Nathan's message fastened guilt upon him; how he cried, "Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities." "According unto the multitude of thy tender mercies, blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquities, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sin is ever before me." O guilty child of God, this is the only outgate. A renewal of pardon, peace, and communion with God can be had only by that faith which in the nature of it abides in the atonement, and goes forth in fresh acts towards the dear redeemer. Look at Peter, how foul was his backsliding, yet, when Christ asked him, "Lovest thou me?" his faith abode in him, and he answered, "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." Now, if conscience speaks loudly against us, or the devil tempts us on account of our base behavior to the Lord, let us turn our eyes another way; as Kent says:

"Oft as sins, my soul, assail thee,
Turn thy eyes to Jesus' blood;
Nothing short of this can heal thee,
Seal thy peace, or do thee good."

If we abide here by faith, and go from time to time when guilty to the fountain, if we look for no healing but what this gives, no other cleansing, we shall find it sooner or later. This is a use of Christ that the people of his love are called and warranted to make: and this is abiding in the doctrine of the atonement.

2. In the second place, faith is to abide in the righteousness of Jesus Christ. No other robe will suffice for our standing before God. The law requires active obedience as well as atonement for sins by death; and both these are found in Christ's righteousness. God will never hold sweet fellowship with a sinner, nor give the spirit of adoption, nor any spiritual blessing, unless we are delivered from all condemnation by Christ's righteousness. Faith is to say, "Surely in the Lord have I righteousness and strength." Is it not a painful experience with some, like Joshua, to stand before God in filthy rags? Does not conscience say, "No access without righteousness, no smile from God without righteousness"? and does not faith say when far off, "Look for that robe, that only robe in which God can allow a sinner to come near"? Faith in that has solid comfort in it. We are perfect in Christ; no evil can approach us there. "Because thou hast made the Lord which is my refuge, the most high, thy habitation; there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling" (Ps. xci, 9, 10). This righteousness will establish us when we believe in it. The holy spirit takes it and shows it to us; and when he does, it fixes the heart and affections on him who wrought it out. To feel weary and distant will not bring us near; to feel our ignorance will not comfort us. But when faith sees not only where we are and our rags, but how righteousness is to be put on, and how the lack of grace is to be supplied from Christ, we plead, beg, follow after, and say, "Come ye, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths" (Is. ii. 3). May we abide in the doctrine of this righteousness, in which we are justified. Through this divine robe we may obtain new access, peace, and comfort again and again, and

"He that wears it is by God exalted high."

3. In the next place we are to abide by faith in the gracious and prevalent intercession of the Lord Jesus Christ. "He that abideth in me,"—in the faith of my intercession—"and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." What a wonderful thing to abide there! A child of God needs Christ to open his mouth for him; he is to use as well as he can his dear intercession. This is it. "Father, I will that they whom thou hast given me be with me where I am. Bring them honorably through their troubles for my sake. Pour plentifully on them the holy spirit." If faith can use Christ's intercession, it is abiding in it. But when new trouble come, the conscience finds it heavy work. The feeling rises that they are for our sins, and we must expect God to deal with us for them, and more severely still. Probably as many as are lively in their souls will be often saying, "The misdeeds of this day are enough to ruin us for ever," and wondering how God can bear with them. We may have the scriptures in our hands, and be busy at other things; and though we kneel down before his holy majesty, we cannot gather our thoughts to him. This makes me cry out, "O barren fig-tree, how can I ask the Lord to bless me? Unbelieving believer, how can I plead boldly before him?" May he give us what he gave Abraham, not to stagger through unbelief in our time of need, but to be strong in faith, giving glory to God. "Why hope against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, so shall thy seed be" (Ro. iv. 18-21). All hope for him from nature was gone, and with his natural helplessness before him, he believed in the almightiness of God, and hoped against hope. So, if we have no hope of success with God because of our sins and barrenness, by faith in the intercession of Christ we may believe in hope, and not stagger at the promise through unbelief. This is to abide in his intercession, and to bring forth much fruit.

4. In the next place, we are to abide in his promise and in his faithfulness in respect of them. It is God's ordinary method that a promise given out to a child of his shall come into a sort of death, in order that faith may be tried and strengthened. When one begins to look out for the fulfillment, there comes a death upon it. This is a trying experience; but this is the time to abide in it. Some have to wait years before they get the fulfilment of the word of God to them, but he intends good by the delay. His wisdom shall shine in the way he takes, and his faithfulness be glorified by his coming at the appointed time. Thus it was with Abraham, and must be with every one whom he is taken into covenant, and to whom he has said that he would do him good. If he has promised one, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," or, "as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee," it will be so. How some have limited him to certain ways and times, and procured themselves much trouble. Faith believes he is "above all, and through all, and in you all" (Ep. iv. 6); and he will make all things work together for good. Even if every wave says, "This is to be your grave," faith will say, "I believe that God, that it shall be even as it was told me" (Ac. xxvii. 25). He that can make use of God's faithfulness in this way abides in Christ, and brings forth much fruit. "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday today, and for ever," the faithful God. He cannot come in a wrong way because of his word to them, who are in this abiding. "Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors. For whoso findeth life, shall obtain favor of the" (Pr. viii. 34, 35). That watching daily is abiding in Christ. It is written, "If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself" (2 Ti. ii. 13). Paul speaks a word which may seem rudimentary, but which we are to lay hold and stand fast unto. "God that cannot lie" (Titus i. 2). Peter speaks of the same truth when he warns us of some who say, "Where is the promise of his coming?" etc. "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise as some men count slackness" (2 Pe. iii. 8, 9); as if he should say "Hold fast to God that cannot lie. Why reckon him by time, and his ways as man's ways? He has been good to you, helped you in the past, held communion with you from off the mercy seat: why now misjudge him, and think his promise has failed for evermore?" Said Asaph, "This is my infirmity; but I will remember the years of the right hand of the most high. I will remember the works of the Lord, surely I will remember thy wonders of old" (Ps. lxxvii. 10, 11). While this faith is in exercise, the man is a conqueror, rises above circumstances, and says with Paul, "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me."

We might mention many more particulars, as the omnipotence of God; but these must suffice. There is an omnipotence in God's ordination of the use of faith. "All things are possible to him that believeth." We have great need of that faith that will make use of the covenant, and abide in Christ by fresh acts; that goes forth to his great atonement, his glorious righteousness, his prevalent intercession, and his exceeding great and precious promises, all which are so exceedingly suited to bad cases. This is an ordained way, a way God meets his people in. In these heavenly truths we are to live and abide; and to renew our acts of faith in them frequently is to abide experimentally in Christ, and Christ in us, and to bring forth much fruit according to his word.—Selected.

ONE THING DESIRED.

November 11, 1840.—Ps. lxxxiv.: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand." This does not mean outward worship only, but to spend a day in communion with God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, seeking his face, watching his hand, praising him, and asking wisdom of him in all our temporal and spiritual affairs. Now David says, "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord, my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God." This is to express the spiritual, ardent longing he felt for the sweet presence of the Lord at a time when he had lost it. Now do you feel this? Remember the "kingdom of heaven suffereth violence," and is to be got in no other way; and the holy spirit works this earnestness in the hearts of God's people.

"Yea, the sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars. O Lord of hosts, my king and my God." This is my desire, to bring my family and all my concerns before God, that he may guide and conduct all for me. "Blessed are they that dwell" in this house; they cannot help praising thee. They see thy wonderful wisdom in so overruling even temporal matters that they cannot but feel the utmost admiration and astonishment. How this enables them to fulfil all relations of master or servant, parent or child! Let our affairs be ever so numerous or complicated—as David had to rule a kingdom—and let us live in whatever tumult we may, yet this sweet communion is to be enjoyed and carried on in the midst of it; as I have found in the midst of the greatest bustle. Only let us take heed to the secret warnings and cautions and checks of the holy spirit, and not slight them, but pay a tender regard to them, and stand in awe of them; and if he frown, fall down under it, and never rest till this peace is restored.

Here it is said, "Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee, in whose heart are the ways of them." Such will dread above all things the slightest motion and offered help of that legal spirit which will ruin all, and will have their strength in Jesus Christ, not in themselves. Such go from strength to strength; that is they become weaker and weaker in themselves, but are taught by the Holy spirit and by experience to find the Lord Jesus Christ a ready help in every trouble. So that a confidence at length is worked in the soul that all things, however dark they may be, will by his wonderful working be made to work for good, and that in all troubles they shall be more than conquerors through him that loved them.

Now these make a valley of Baca a well. They are encouraged not to wish for a life of no trouble, but rather to seek his presence and blessing in all troubles. For Jesus Christ is a well and out of him we draw water by prayer; and it is impossible to fall under convictions of sin, confess, and beg mercy of him without getting a taste a "well of water springing up into ever-flowing waters." They are eternal life, lasting life." And David says, "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God;" that is, be kept in a waiting posture, be the last and the least and the meanest in the church, "than to dwell in the tents of wickedness," or have all the fullness of this world. Now we cannot make this choice of ourselves, it is contrary to our nature; but God the holy spirit works it in the hearts of his people. For naturally we say, "How dull is praying all day, watching all day!" But the holy spirit will cause us to feel that this life exceeds all delights of this world. "For the Lord God is a sun and shield," not darkness and uncertainty. It is not stumbling at we know not what, but we shall have light on our path, and he is a shield to cover us from evil.

In Psalm xxvii David says "One thing have I desired of the Lord." What is this one thing? To have communion with him in all things temporal and spiritual to ask advice and protection of him, to be in his fear all the day long, and to seek his blessing in all things. "That I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life"—not enjoying this communion today and losing it tomorrow. No, but to have it every day; for this steady uniformity is the work of the spirit. But these "tents of wickedness" we are obliged to enter (only take heed you are where God calls you). We must have communion with the world, and we cannot touch pitch without being defiled. Then when guilt is contracted we show we have communion with the Lord by sorrow, misery, and confession; and he does return again, and wash away these defilements. "But be not deceived, evil communications corrupt good manners" (1 Cor. xv. 33).

"To behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple." We behold his beauty in various ways. I see great beauty in the way he led me into this house in answer to prayer. I have seen his beauty when a thief would have robbed me, in leading me to pray to him and his causing the thief to pay me. I have gone to him with earnest prayers and tears when I had work brought before me in the course of his providence beyond my ability; and he has given me the requisite talents.

"For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion, in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me." We may be surrounded with all manner of confusion, and in the midst of this he can give us assured peace. "He shall set me up upon a rock." This rock is the Lord Jesus Christ. Not in a presumptuous confidence, but in a real trust wrought in the heart by the holy spirit that he is my friend. There is the utmost safety in every trouble, if we rest on this rock.

And to show again the ardency with which we must seek these things if we ever hope to attain them, David says, "My soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is, to see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary" (lxiii. 1, 2). That is, to hold communion with God in all things all the day long, not to do one thing without him that we may have time after to seek his face, but to seek his face and his help in all our occupations, to see his power and glory. Again he says, "My soul followeth hard after thee." There must be this violent pressing after him, and David says, "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts" (lxv). This work of God is generally done by affliction leading us to seek his face. And he says, "We shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple."

Now, take notice, all the good things of this world produce no real satisfaction. Hence that saying, "Man never is, but always to be blest." But the last gleam of God's mercy, the least token of his favor, has the fullest satisfaction in it. We want nothing as long as it lasts; we are fully satisfied, therefore this is the sum.—Seek to make God your friend, the faith, the son and the holy spirit; that he may rule and overrule all things. And if he shows displeasure in the slightest degree in anything, be sure you stand in awe of that, and do not slight it. There is no end of the blessings that will follow you in attending to these admonitions;

but if these are disregarded and not attended to through the hurry of other things, we shall fall into darkness, and not know where we are going. All the misery I have ever met with in the course of my life, is from not paying attention to these things. Yet such is his great mercy that he does not suffer all his displeasure to arise, but brings us back with much sorrow and many fears. When these heavy convictions come upon us because we have slighted his counsel, he will be with us, leading us to cry for mercy, and will bestow it on all who seek to make him their friend.

Now, blessed are all they who dwell in these courts, who have this holy familiarity with God, who have him for their friend, and who go to him as to their home and dwelling. Blessed are all such.—Selected.

"Take therefore no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself, sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Matthew 6:34.

These words are the plain simple teachings of our Lord and Savior, and are full of instruction and comfort, for all who are inquiring for the way of life eternal, and desiring to follow in his blessed footsteps. This language was spoken by Jesus to his disciples in the memorable sermon on the mount and is effectual and binding to his followers now as the time they were uttered, and it is our privilege and pleasure, when blessed with spiritual light and understanding to partake of the benefits and joys of the same.

In the beginning of this paragraph we are fully assured that we can not serve two masters. "Ye can not serve God and Mammon," is the declaration of inspiration.

I understand the word "take no thought for the morrow" implies a command, and should be heeded as such, since God makes it possible for his children to obey each and all his teachings by trusting and obeying him in all things.

If our time, the present only, through the goodness and mercy of God is well directed, and our thoughts well employed, to serve, honor and obey him, we have none left to speculate for the future, we can not change God's laws, "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit to his stature." Mat. 6:27.

In this great lesson of faith and trust, herein taught, the Savior illustrates his never ceasing love and preserving care, by the lillies and grass of the field, inanimate things, and because of such wonderful creation, are arrayed with virtue and beauty, beyond even Solomon, the great and wise man. Man is marred and corrupted because of sin. And also is used the fowls of the air, for example of his love, "they sow not neither do they reap, or gather into barns, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?"

Is it any wonder then, when his people fail to trust him, who has promised those who forsake all for Christ sake, "shall receive an hundred fold, now in this time and in the world to come life eternal" that they should be rebuked and upbraided with the words, "O ye of little faith," Why need we be anxious about worldly cares or anything, but to love and serve him who has redeemed us by his own precious blood, and who are the continual objects of his care. This command does not infer that we should be slothful in business or unconcerned as to our daily needs, but to the reverse to be diligent, industrious, and upright in all our dealings with our fellow man. "To do justly and to love mercy." "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise," be vigilant and very zealous in our every day walk to serve God watching continually lest the enemy approach and tempts us in unsuspected ways. The wise man says "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man." When this is done our time will be consumed; and well employed. "The morrow" is the future and is not ours, and may never come to us, though we often boast of it, "shall take thought for the things of itself" The promise follows the command. Are not these promises and all contained in his word and the loving assurances daily experienced of his watch care over us evidence enough. He has promised to supply all our needs; he is Jehovah, is, was, and ever will be. If we provide things honest, in his sight, as is the command, means supplied by such efforts if well spent in supplying the necessities and comforts of life and administering to the needy and destitute, we will have none left to speculate on our lives and take chance games, and trust to corrupt institutions and organizations of men to provide for our loved ones in the future. We are commanded to shun the appearance of evil and to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, consequently we should beware of these institutions.

Speculating in any way is corrupt, and the farther we get into it in mind or in means the darker the way. This is evident to all sober minded persons. When we give of our means to support institutions the fundamental principles of which is mere speculation and graft, we can not see the depths of its blackness and corruption, and if the character and underlying motives, could be revealed to us, in its true light, surely every earnest enquirer after the way of life would turn away and stand aloof from such evils.

May we not so overtax ourselves and our strength with worldly cares and anxieties to neglect our common duties to each other and to God. It is the wealth of God's grace, and not worldly riches that so adorns the christian's life here, and his righteousness alone that gives him entrance into the joys of eternal bliss.

Nothing is more upbuilding and strengthening to the Lord's people than to assemble together and speak often one to another of the good things of the kingdom. It helps us to forget our evil thoughts, and worry and perplexities of mind, and is strengthening to the whole body and we should esteem it a glorious privilege. We can not look into the future or change the mind of the Lord concerning his dealings with us but "he who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" will be merciful to his beloved.

His teachings are to abstain from evil and to "quench not the spirit" and it is by trusting him in obedience we are blessed. Our environments and influences have much to do with shaping or forming our christian character as well as our christian reputation, but I have gathered very luscious fruit growing in low, marshy, and suspecting surroundings, and have plucked beautiful, and fragrant flowers from the wild wood. Not long since I met a stranger who talked of such trusting loving faith in God and manifested so sweetly the spirit of resignation to the will and providence of God in all things that I remarked she talked like a Primitive Baptist, but she replied no, she could not feel the name had much to do with our salvation but God gives grace and faith. I was reminded of the words of Jesus on one occasion, "I have not found so great faith no not in Israel."

"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." We may be assured that every day will have its attending evils, while we sojourn here because of evil principles and indwelling sin. The Canaanite still dwells in the land and will continue to perplex and annoy us. All who are regenerated and born into the kingdom of God's love are alive unto Christ, not passive, but are under a law unto Christ to keep his holy commandments.

O, that the Lord may increase our faith, and give us more grace enabling us to cast all our care upon him, for he has promised good to his people, and may our conscience be more tender and easily smitten by sin, that we may dwell at the feet of Jesus acknowledging our faults—one to another and look well to the way of God, and honor him continually by living aright in the present, and trusting our future in his hands.

Brother Gold, I have penned these thoughts as my mind was exercised since you requested me to write on this subject, they are for your consideration if you deem it profitable you are at liberty to publish the same.

In hope and love,

CONTINUATION OF ELDER G. W. ROWE'S TRAVELS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

I left that night at 8 p. m. for Durham, N. C., and took dinner Friday, July 31 with Brother Farthing, where I met Elder W. M. Monsees. At 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon I took the train for Helena, N. C., where I was conveyed to the home of Brother David Clayton. On Saturday, Sunday and Monday I was at Lower Country Line Association. Here I met many of the preacher brethren and it was indeed a glorious assembly of the dear saints of God. I spent the time while this meeting lasted at the home of Brother D. Clayton and while there I had the company of the precious W. M. and J. A. Monsees, also W. J. Heard who lives near Macon, Ga., and is a faithful young minister.

This association adjourned Monday August 3, when I was conveyed to Roxboro where I heard Elder J. A. Monsees preach. Monday night I spent at the Burch home where Sister Ida Burch and her younger sister entertained us pleasantly. Tuesday I spent the time, mostly with a brother Rogers whose dear old father is 80 years old and almost deaf. Yet this dear old man did his best to make me pleasant. God bless him. Tuesday night Elder A. L. Moore preached at Roxboro and I spent the night with Brother Jas. Carver, and on Wednesday went from Roxboro to Durham where I took dinner with Brother Farthing. At 5:30 p. m., I took the train for Goldsboro intending to go to Elder Gardner's home, but feeling much worried and rather than disturb his family at that late hour I went to the nearest boarding house and rested.

At 7:10 o'clock the next morning August 6, I took the train for Wilson where I heard Mr. Farncombe preach again and got dinner at the home of Brother Wm. Woodard and having no appointment until Saturday I remained at the Woodard home until Friday. This brother Woodard gave me a two mile ride and back on his automobile. this August 6, 1908, my first ride on an automobile.

Friday, August 7, I took train at 2:45 p. m. for Rocky Mount and spent the night with Brother I. W. Bass. Saturday at the Falls church and spent the night with Brother Henry Trevathan, greatly enjoying the company of old sister Trevathan, the widowed mother. I preached again at the Falls Sunday and at night preached at the Trevathan home. On Monday August 10, I took the train for Tarboro where I preached at the church and took dinner with Brother Braswell, leaving by train at 4:15 o'clock for Robersonville and the home of Elder G. D. Roberson. Tuesday, August 11 preached at Flat Swamp then back to Elder Roberson's for dinner. From here Brother J. H. D. Peele conveyed me to his home where I spent the night and on Wednesday, August 12 I preached at Bear Grass church, took dinner with Brother S. Rogerson and went to the burying of Sister Caroline Jones, the funeral services being conducted by Elder J. N. Rogerson. This dear old sister had suffered long with cancer; a mother in Israel has fallen, is there any to take her place in this earthly sanctuary. While standing in the cemetery, and as the weather was very warm, I came so near becoming overheated that I was very weak for several days: I spent the night with Brother Samuel Rogerson who conveyed me Thursday to the Skewarkie church where I met Elder Sylvester Hassell. Here I preached and afterwards was conveyed to the home Brother William Slade at Williamston, where I got dinner. At 6 o'clock I took the train for Jamesville and spent the night with Sister Stallings whose two sons did all that was necessary for my comfort. Friday August 14, I preached at the church at Jamesville and took dinner with Sister Stallings, after which Brother J. J. Manning conveyed me to his home where I spent the night and on Saturday preached at Smithwicks Creek church. The night I spent with Brother Sylvester Peele who conveyed me on Sunday to Washington and I preached at the church there. I took dinner with Brother Ross, where I spent the night. Monday I went to the home of Sister Betty Whitley and enjoyed the day very much. I took the train at 4:30 for Edwards where my poor heart was lifted up, meeting with relatives I had never met before. A brother Ross first met me at the station, then B. D. Rowe, brother Joshua T. Rowe, of Baltimore, and of J. R. Rowe, who died in 1899 in Beaufort county, N. C., after meeting these brethren we went to the home of Brother W. H. Edwards. Now this brother Edwards is the same relation to me the Rowes are and I was almost overjoyed at the meeting and so great was my joy I was afraid I couldn't preach. But after supper we went out to the schoolhouse, the place appointed for the preaching and I did the best I could, but can't say that it was preaching. After my attempt Brother Willie Rowe conveyed me to his home. This dear brother had but lately enlisted in the Lord's army. I spent the night with him and on Tuesday, August 18, I preached at Sandy Grove church. At the close of the meeting Brother George Hardy asked me if I would preach again Wednesday night to which I agreed. I went home with Brother John Sephus, generally known as Sephus Rowe and it was all such delight the thought of walking over the country of my ancestors—a delight I had for a long time craved.

On Wednesday August 18, Cousin Sephus conveyed me to the home of Uncle Joshua Rowe, a great-grandson of the first Joshua Rowe who settled in this section. Uncle Joshua is 85 years old and blind and as I looked into his face it appeared I could see my dear old grand-father, David Rowe, who died in Georgia early in 1869. We spent the day with this venerable man and at 3:30 o'clock took the sad parting with Uncle Joshua; and it was indeed sad, for when I looked into that face for the last time it did appear that something had gone from me that I could never recover. Then the thought, yes, and I will soon lay this poor body down in death and so far as this earthly existence is concerned will never recover it. So in the midst of sweetness there is also bitter.

From here we went to visit Uncle Isaiah Rowe who is 73 years old and a brother in the flesh to Joshua. These two old men had never united with the Baptists, but I could not help thinking of how when I had tried to solve the problems of life, and when in the midst of financial distress as well as spiritual depression, that I had thought of some of my uncles who were then dead that they could probably advise me. But the moments pass swiftly and the mistakes of the past come to memory only to make life more miserable which brings to our minds the fact that there is nothing in this life at best but mixtures of joy and sorrow, but our hope is that one day through the grace of God this mortal shall put forth immortality. We spent a little time with Isaiah Rowe and then walked over the grave-yard near his home and saw where some of my relatives had been laid away, but strange to say there is no one who knows the resting place of my old ancestor, Joshua Rowe.

(To Be Continued.)

Elder P. D. Gold:

My Dear Brother—As I have not contributed anything for the Landmark in sometime, I feel that I would like to express a few thoughts in its columns.

I was sorry that you was not able to attend the Union Meeting at Durham for it was worthy the name "Union," handsomely entertained by that lovely body of brethren and sisters who are noted for goodness and greatness, and every one present seemed to feel at home and enjoy the meeting. The elders that I heard preach were Elders William Woodard and Isaac Jones who were wonderfully favored of the Lord and peace and good will seemed to prevail. The worship of the Lord at this time and place will be long remembered by many. A very large and attentive audience heard the word of the Lord solemnly and faithfully proclaimed and I believe such meetings will be fruit bearing; in fact I believe, "There is a time to sow and reap." Oh, that we poor worms could realize that our "labor is never in vain in the Lord." This Paul said he knew and we know it too, but the great question is have we labored in the Lord. We often ask: "am I led by the spirit of the Lord in this or by the flesh?"

We are indeed a "peculiar people," a blind people consequently have to be led and it is said, "a little child shall lead them." I have often seen little children leading the blind on the streets and it always brings this thought to my mind, how thankful I should be that I can see, yet it is seldom that I feel truly thankful (if ever). God's people are all blind in the sense they must go like Abraham of old, "Not knowing whither they go," only as God leads. "I will bring the blind by a way they know not, etc. Now those who feel indeed blind feel the great need of this great leader and commander, that God has given them. "Behold I have given him for a leader and commander to the people."

Now those people are not only afflicted with blindness, but with deafness, with leprosy, with death, and with poverty, but listen, "the blind receive their sight, (which is Jesus), the deaf hear, (in Jesus), the leper is cleansed (by the blood of Jesus), the dead are raised up (by Jesus) and the poor have the gospel preached unto them (by Jesus)." O, what a leader this afflicted and poor people have to trust in, "Behold I leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people and they shall trust in the name of the Lord."

I wish I could impress this dear people of God that he that hath promised can not lie, and every promise is left to his people.

"They that be whole need not a physician but they that be sick."

O dear afflicted tempest tossed saints cheer up, God will keep every promise he has made and one is, "In the world ye shall have tribulation but in me peace." We must remember which one is first, and sweet peace of Jesus could do us no good, did we not know of the tribulation of the world first.

Do you not know from heartfelt experience his grace is sufficient? If so how has he taught it to you? Just as he did to Paul, just as he did to all those that lived before you and all that will live after you.

"All thy children shall be taught of the Lord (not of man) and great shall be the peace of thy children." Now what is the peace of thy children? The apostles say "Now he (Jesus) is our peace" and we know it is true, he is that peace that "passeth understanding." The apostles were astonished on the Galilean Sea when this peace spoke to its troubled waters and so are we astonished when Jesus speaks to us and in us. We are made to wonder, "For his name shall be called wonderful." I verily believe by experience there are times we are given to understand in part, what is the length, breadth and height of his calling, but when this understanding is given us it increases the wonder of his name in our minds and at the wisest moments of our lives we can only say, "O, the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God how unsearchable are his judgment and his ways past finding." I will close with love to all.

Very truly,

W. A. SIMPKINS.

EXPERIENCE OF R. PHILLIPS.

I, Robert Phillips, was born November 7, 1841, and am now (August 7, 1908) sixty-six years and eight months old.

My parents were Baptist believers, and I stayed with them till I went to war, in 1862, as a volunteer in the Fifty-fourth Virginia Regiment. I was assigned to the western army. When in the battle of Chicamauga, I, for the first time, promised the Lord that, if he would spare me through the battle, I would try to live a better life; and, in a few hours, I came very near being killed by a falling tree. Of course it was the power of the Lord that brought all (who escaped) through the war. The Lord spared my life, and enabled me to get back home the 25th day of May, 1865. A few months later I got married to Alice Wade, the daughter of Nathan and Delphia Wade. Then I made promises to the Lord, but broke them. About the year 1883, I became so troubled over my sins that it seemed I could not live; and it seemed that my best time to ask for forgiveness was when my little family were all asleep around me. I often prayed till I was almost worn out. My pillow was often dampened with tears. When I would wake in the morning my condition was the first thing in my mind. I felt that if the whole world had been mine, and it full of gold, I would have freely given it all for a place of sweet rest in heaven. About the year 1884 Elder Wyatt Phillips came from Illinois, and, being such a great preacher, it seemed that, after I had heard him preach, that my troubles all doubled on me. I heard him first at the association at White Oak Grove; and, he being my first cousin, came home with me. I took him to preaching, at different places till I had heard him preach more than thirty times. I met him at the association at Pine Creek, and he and Elder P. G. Lester promised to go to our next meeting at Indian Creek, and to go home with me and both fulfilled their promise. Several others went home with me that night. We had been having a three days' revival at Indian Creek all summer; and my wife said that as she did a month before she would join at the next meeting. That put me in more trouble than ever; and, seeing her in trouble and in trouble myself, I thought if it would be the Lord's will, how nice it would be, if we could go to the church together. But when the meeting came she failed to go. The night they all came home with me, Brother Lester asked me to tell my experience. I told him that I had none, but my wife would talk to him, if she wanted to, and she told her experience to him. Then I got my little crowd off to bed; and as I occupied a bed to myself, I thought I would ask the Lord for mercy once more, and I prayed for two hours from 10 to 12 o'clock. Then I felt my great load roll from me and I felt light and happy. No person on earth knew how I felt, and the nearer the approach of day, the lighter and happier I got. Every breath seemed to be, "O, bless the Lord!" The next day my wife and I told our experience to the church; and Elder Thomas Dickens, Amost Dickerson, I. L. Rigney, P. G. Lester and Cousin Wyatt Phillips were all there, and they received us into the church without asking us a single question. The following day we were baptized together by Elder Wyatt Phillips. Then my wife and I lived happily together for many years, or till death came and took her away.

Then, after one year, I was married to Lutitia Vaughn, widow of Elijah Vaughn. She and I lived happily together till rheumatism broke up our happiness. Then I being unable to support her, we broke up housekeeping. She went to her old home, and I moved to and am now living with my son, Lee Phillips. I now have to be waited on as a little child. I cannot tell any one how much I have to suffer. My wife, who is such a good woman, is now (August 6, 1908) here waiting on me as good as she can.

Well, Brother Branscome, I could have had more written, but thought it would make this letter too long.

This was written by grandson, Oscar W. Phillips. Yours in hope,

ROBERT PHILLIPS.

Dear Brother Gold—I would like to say a few words to your subscribers with your permission.

Dear Brethren, Sisters and Friends, those of you who are in arrears for the Landmark would it be a good time for you to come forward with your subscription, now that you have had time, the most of you, I suppose, to gather and market your crops? I notice Brother Gold keeps appealing through the Landmark, to those who are behind to pay up, as it is expensive to run the paper; and besides that the new postal laws require him to pay extra postage on all subscribers who are behind. Just stop and think of this for one moment. Think what this amounts to on thousands of subscriptions. That alone, is too expensive to Brother Gold, to say nothing of his having to lay out of the use of the subscription price of the Landmark.

It is a very easy matter for each one of us, separately, to imagine that ours is a small amount and Brother Gold will not hurt if he does not get it, but while one of us is thinking that way lets wonder how many more are thinking the same way—thousands perhaps, which amounts to a great deal, and he needing the money to pay publishing expenses.

How nice it would be if we would all, as much as in us lies, come together as one body, as it were in that sense, and stand by him in his hour of need. I find it just as easy to pay in advance, as to wait until the end of the year; and I have a clear conscience in so doing, and it makes it so much better for Brother Gold. Suppose we all practice this, that in the future it will be better all round. We will feel better—will not have the burden of owing him on our minds, and it will save him much financial worry and expense, making it so much easier for him.

I know a great many get the idea that Brother Gold is rich. (I used to think so), and that he does not even need the subscription of the Landmark; but this is a mistake. He has a good comfortable home, and, I suppose, some property; but how many of us, if we had these things, would have them long, if we had to sell off our property to run our business, as is the case with Brother Gold? his is too sad a truth, and I feel that it ought not to be so. He and Sister Gold are both getting old now, and while we believe, and are confident that the dear Lord will never leave nor forsake them, yet let us not hesitate to do our duty in coming up to the standard of our profession. We profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, which implies that we are truthful and honest—that we are lovers of truth and honesty—not only willing, but anxious to pay our just debts, and all of us who have subscribed for the Landmark are in debt to Brother Gold. So let us come willingly to his relief. He is not able to work like he once was, and it is too bad for him to be compelled to sell what he accumulated (when he was young and able to work, to run a paper for our pleasure; and then have to borrow money, as he is having to do. So let us pay him what we owe him, and, as much as in us is, let us enjoy that freedom of conscience which "owes no man anything."

He will appreciate it, and, as I said before, you will feel better.

Your little sister I trust, in love and sweet fellowship,

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

Brother Gold—A learned brother says that Adam received the command to multiply when he saw no way for the command to be carried out, and that Eve received the same command when she had no knowledge of her existence in Adam. That seems to me to be about equal to telling a child to do something before it is born.

God made them male and female, and blessed them, and told them to multiply, ect. Then man is more than one.

Another brother says that Jesus tasted not only animal death but that eternal death. When he tasted animal death his natural life went out. If he tasted eternal death what became of his eternal life?

Oh my people, they that lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy faith.

Can you give me some light on the points.

JOHN HALL.

Remarks—It appears that all this work pleased the Lord who pronounced it all very good, God declaring beforehand what shall be. There is in the purpose of the Lord God that which goes before and determines what shall be. Is not creation reported in Gen. first chapter a type of the wonderful mysteries of God's workmanship? In the type every thing is good, and does not as yet appear to be marred in the hand of God, but in its order and wonder appears as very good.

For instance in Gen. 2:4-5, there is a declaration of the generation of the heavens and the earth, and every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew, and there was not a man to till the ground.

We see in this predestination of God. None but God can predestinate any thing, but he counts those things that are not yet as thought they were.

Adam is the figure of him who was then to come. His bride or help meet was in him before she had a separate existence. The command to multiply was given to both of them in him as the head before man knew anything of its accomplishment. But what was there uncertain about this? God's commands never fail. The weakness of the creature imperils nothing. God gives commands to his creatures that they do not fully or at all understand. He told Abraham to go to a country he had never seen. He gave commands to Jeremiah who said I am but a child, and God said to him, say not I am a child, for thou shalt go to all that I command or send thee. There is never any uncertainty about the execution of God's will because of the ignorance or inability of the creature.

One would think there has been no uncertainty about the multiplication of Adam when we think of the countless millions of his race that have been born.

If the mere figure of the Lord Jesus in his corrupt and darkened state had not failed to multiply, what think you of this going forth of him who is the substance, the Lord Jesus, the quickening spirit, the second man? The first man is of the earth earthy the second man is the Lord from heaven.

When the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground this man was to till the earth. He is not able to get above the earth for he is of the earth earthy. He digs in the earth. He may invent flying machines, but he cannot rise above the earth in his nature. If he should reach the north pole he would still be on the earth ignorant of divine things.

But the second Adam quickens the dead, and works in man putting his spirit in him and leading him to seek things above this earth. He causes the fruits of the spirit of God to be multiplied in him, such fruit as love, joy, peace, truth, patience, meekness, faith, temperance, etc. and such gracious fruit as grows alone in the garden of the Lord, and this heavenly fruit is born of the church or bride of Jesus Christ.

For the Lord the second man has power over all flesh to give eternal life to as many as the Father has given him.

The rich displays of the gracious power and wisdom of God are wrought in the first Adam so changing him by a spiritual birth from above that these vessels of mercy are to the praise of the glory of the grace of God.

Every man for whom Jesus tasted death by the grace of God is explained in the second chapter of Hebrews as being those children which the Father gave him. I do not understand that when Jesus laid down his life that it went out, or had no more existence after that. For he did not perish. He said he had power to lay down his life, and power to take it again. He told his disciples he should be crucified, but that he should rise again from the dead the third day. He saw no corruption. God raised him from the dead to die no more. The clear, continual teaching of Jesus was that he should rise from the dead. Surely this is the very opposite of his life going out. Jesus lost nothing by laying down his life. He saves. Nothing is ever wasted in his life or labor. When a natural man dies he returns to dust whence he came. But when Jesus the prince of life is crucified nothing of him goes to dust or perishes, for nothing of him is of the earth. He came from heaven.

"If Jesus tasted eternal death what became of his eternal life?" He did not lay down eternal life. That could have no end. His soul was made an offering for sin. He abolished and destroyed every enemy, and rose triumphant over all enemies.

Brother Hall, has light given him from heaven, and knows these things are true that I have written.

P. D. G.

END OF YEAR.

How quickly years fly by. No trains of man's engineering, no ships piloted by him as speedily make their flight as does this rapid motion hasten us on to eternity.

We should not be so concerned about the speed of time as about the way we are in, whether in the high way of holiness—the way, the truth and the life, or the broad road that ends in death. Who are our companions? Are they the chosen, called and faithful, or are they the lovers of the world and its wicked ways?

We know nothing of the future—scarcely anything of the present, and are full of regrets for the past. How good if the Lord is eyes to us, and he is our wisdom and power.

God spake to the fathers of old, but in these last days he has spoken unto us by his son whom he hath appointed heir of all things. He is the author and finisher of the faith of God's people. This faith cometh by hearing, and hearing comes by the word of God—not the word of man—not the preacher, but the word of God. This faith is the substance of things hoped for. We are saved by hope. God brings his people by a way they know not, and leads them in paths they have not known. It is a new way—a living way. Thanks be unto him for his unspeakable gift. His mercies fail not, therefore, we are not consumed. His grace is sufficient, therefore, we overcome and continue to the present time.

P. D. G.

BLESSED ARE THE DEAD.

What dead are blest? We consider it good to live. Death is counted an enemy. The children of God are all their lifetime subject to bondage through fear of death. The wages of sin is death. Jesus said my soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto death. So that death is full of sorrow and is the wages of sin, and the most bitter thing with a sting full of calamity.

It is the lowest stoop into the dust where there is no knowledge, nor device, no comfort, no joy, no activity. None of the things in the state of death are desirable to one in health and prosperity.

But the bible declares that the day of ones' death is better than the day of his birth, and the heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, while the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

What an unnatural thing then it is for one to be brought to know that there is a death that is a blessing. But this death is not in Adam. That is the end of man. There is no other end of the natural state of man but death.

Jesus Christ is eternal life to all that know him, or have him. Jesus came that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly.

What then is it to die in the Lord? It is to die to sin, an altogether different condition from that of being dead in sin. To be dead in sin is to be completely under the power of sin, while to be dead to sin is to be free from sin and alive unto holiness.

Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord. What a condition then of freedom from death and from sin is that estate. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, for over such the second death has no power. But there must be a death before there is a resurrection, for he that is thus dead is freed from sin. The effect of the application of the law is to cause death to sin. Reckon yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. When one is convicted he becomes sensible of the nature of sin and its killing sentence, and when the Lord reveals himself as our righteousness then we are alive unto God, and our fruit is unto holiness. Surely this is the most wonderful birth from the dead—a resurrection from the dead. Such have passed from death unto life and the second death has no power over them. When one dies in the Lord it is a blessed final death to sin, and freedom therefrom, and a living unto God where there is joy and peace in the Holy Ghost.

Such rest from their labors. Jesus said come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. When such take his easy yoke and light burden they find rest unto their souls. This is a glorious rest in the Lord Jesus. Their works follow. They do not go before and introduce or commend them to the Lord, but they follow as the fruit, effect and result of the new birth. Make the tree good and the fruit will be good. Hence the works of those dead to sin follow those that are thus dead.

Finally at the end of the world when Jesus shall change our vile body and fashion it like unto the glorious body of himself then shall all those born of God be found on the right hand of God. For the Lord shall change our vile body and it shall be caught up to ever be with the Lord in glory. They shall come forth out of their graves to everlasting glory and praise to his name.

P. D. G.

Sister Price, of Norfolk, requests my view of Song of Solomon 8:8, "We have a little sister and she hath no breasts. What shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for?"

If she be a wall, we shall build upon her a palace of silver; and if she a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar."

In the deep mysteries of wisdom love looks abroad in the realms of affection for a settlement of such questions as marriage. For in the heart there dwells the principle of father and mother that provides for offspring. In the heart of Naomi whose coal was quenched, for hope for herself had died, there springs up the desire to provide for Ruth.

In the song of songs which is Solomon's where love holds her regal court, and in poetic strains chants her joy, there is thought for a youthful, undeveloped sister concealed in the wilds of Gentile ignorance, and darkness; yet the love of nature runs deeper than the love of race, and while Jew and Gentile have no dealings still in the realm of prophecy there is a looking to, a seeking of a provision of the day when this little unprovided for Gentile shall be spoken for. She hath no breast nor sources of feeding, no comfort of love. There is no promise for her in Jewish worship, or in the temple of Jerusalem. Where shall place be found for her? How shall she appear among the maidens as one beloved and favored? Shall she bear fruit unto holiness? Shall she find a place in the family of God, and appear among honorable women, or even as the king's daughter all glorious within? For there must not be schism in the family of God. The middle wall of partition must be removed, and where once there was desert there must be a fruitful field. How shall I put thee among the daughters and rank thee with Rebekah and Rachel? as a fruitful vine running over the wall? If she appear solid as a wall a defense in the building, then we will build upon her a palace, a home, a dwelling place in the beauty and brightness of silver. Here shall be a home, a kingly dwelling place for the truth of God. Apostles, prophets, pastors and teachers with all the richness of the church, shall dwell here as an everlasting habitation. While the house of Israel of old is left unto her desolate, and no honor is borne to Jerusalem of old, behold the glory of God is given to the Gentiles as the abode of love, riches, honor, peace and glory.

And if she be a door we will enclose her with boards of cedar. An open door of utterance shall be given unto her. Instead of hearing as of old the singing of David, the prophecies of Isaiah, the wisdom of Solomon there is now an interpretation of those seers upholding a greater richness of beauty and glory. In the new tongues greater fulness of praise sounds out the glory of the latter day. In the glory of the Gentiles is poured forth in the lap of the faithful wife as a vine running over the wall an increase of utterance enriching as shedding forth glory and beauty, the richness of the cedar is beheld among Gentiles who dwell in the tents of Shem, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, while the children of the kingdom are shut out.

But love in the prophets of old dwells in the Gentiles' breast and praises gush forth and warble from the door of sublime utterance in the house of the younger sister who acts as nursing mother in the family, and the increase still multiplies, and thus the glory of the latter house is not behind that of the former, for a greater than Solomon is here, and kings' daughters are among the honorable women. So this fruitful one once so little has become a thousand and has found favor in the eye of her husband.

A new year is opening. Time moves on, carrying creatures rapidly toward the end of their earthly goal. While we know not what awaits us in its development that does not disturb the occurrence of what slumbers yet, nor are the appointed events any less certain of transpiring because we do not know what they are, nor when or how they shall occur.

How sweet and restful the faith that rejoices in the dominion of our Father whose eyes are over the righteous, and who is himself eyes for them.

Hope construes and interprets events that seem to be against us as working for our good. Because we know not what will prosper we should not withhold sowing seed in the morning, nor plough with a slack hand in the evening. We know that he that will not sow shall not reap.

All things continue as of old in the course of natural movements of the sun, moon and stars, and the periodical return of seasons. Nor is there any change in the nature of man. He is born, sickens and dies, and hasts away. He is as dependent on the grace of God for salvation as he was of old when the prophet proclaimed it shall be with shouts of grace, grace unto it. The basic principles of man are as of old. The regeneration is the same mysterious production of the Spirit of God that it was in former days.

Life is sweet to him that loves the Lord Jesus.

While many wrong themselves by suicide, the humble child of God desires not to do violence to others or to himself.

It is the desire of this writer that the readers of this paper this year may be favored of the Lord with much to be joyful for, and that they may thank God and take courage.

P. D. G.

IS IT DIFFICULT TO TELL THE TRUTH?

One says truth is a great thing. Then to tell it is a good thing. No lie is of the truth. Two parallel lines could not cross each other. Truth and falsehood could not become one. There is no affinity or fellowship between them.

What is truth? It is a perfect gem, and indestructible jewel. It can offer no beauty to him that loves falsehood. But to the honest man it needs no apology. Truth is stranger than fiction, because there is so much that is not the truth. Is truth of the earth? No. It comes from heaven, whence all good things come.

Can a man tell the truth about himself? If he knows himself he can. If he knows himself as Job knew himself in the light of God's countenance he speaks the truth as Job did when he said, "Behold, I am vile."

Is a man speaking the truth if he says I am good? How that can be true when Jesus said there is none good but one, and that is God. How can man say men do good works, when the Bible says there is none that doeth good; no, not one.

Men's assertions cannot be the truth merely because men think they are truth. A matter may appear to be truth when it is not true. Of course one who thinks a thing is true is more commended when he considers it true than if he should assert a thing to be true when he knows it is not. But a thing has an existence before one affirms its existence or occurrence. Our words do not create any thing, but they only report what is true or false.

as the case may be. If we could speak and it be done because we thus speak that would prove us to be creators.

A lover of truth is careful of his utterances. He will swear to his own hurt and change not. His words are few because he knows very little. Nor does he wish to be a tattler, nor to speak that which he understands not. There are times when his heart is heavy, and his words would have no cheer in them. But at other times he would speak to be refreshed. For in the day of joy goodly words flow out of the heart that is glad. His tongue then is as the pen of a ready writer. Nor is this the creation of fancy, nor vain speculation; but he is speaking forth the words of truth and soberness.

One might memorise and repeat words of Scripture when such would not be truth to that speaker, because he has not set to his seal that they are true. He has feigned them to deceive others, or has deceived himself. For he that deceives others is a liar.

The tongue tries words. If God has given one a new tongue that one is guided by wisdom in his utterances, and speaks the truth because he knows it. Jesus Christ is the truth in whom there is no lie. But man at his best estate is altogether vanity, and men of high degree are a lie. If you see a young man in health and vigor without an ache or a pain can you say he is health? No, for shortly he will waste away and die. But Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day and forever, because he has the dew of his youth, and is unchangeable in perfection.

Man may appear to possess strength, but how weak and soon he crumbles to dust. But Jesus has immortality. A Samson may act with strength that is a wonder, but soon he becomes weak as another man. But there is no limit to the power of Jesus. Solomon has greater wisdom than any other man, but his end soon comes, while Jesus is wisdom unchanged and unchangeable because perfect.

Now if Jesus is formed in me—if Christ is in me the hope of glory—then I know the truth.

One might profess to own much wealth, and appear in that character desiring to make others think he is wealthy, and obtain credit under false pretences when he is poor, vile and deceitful. When his false appearance is discovered by others he is despised as a hypocrite. So one may appear to be glorious when he has not the inward witness of it. He may seem to men to have on a wedding garment—for he can deceive men. But God cannot be mocked. An honest man loving truth does not desire to make a pretense or false-show but he speaks the truth to his neighbor.

OBITUARIES

AVA A. WATERS.

It is with a sad and heavy heart that I make the attempt to write the death of my dear sister, though I feel it my duty to try to write something in memory of her.

She, Ava A. Waters, was born June 3, 1862, died October 15, 1907, making her stay on earth forty-five years.

She joined the Primitive Baptist church at La Grange, quite a number of years ago. she lived and died a loving, delightful and consistent member. Let us remember that a good name is rather to be chosen than precious ornament, and the day of death rather than the day of birth.

Her health was comparatively good until two weeks before she was stricken down with gastritis, and continued to grow worse in spite of all that could be done. We did all that family, friends and a good physician could do to keep her with us, but the good Lord called and we had to give her up. I have never seen any one more willing to die than she. I felt it was more than I could bear but the good Lord never puts more on us than we are able to stand. Though it was hard, I would not have her back in this sinful world, for I fully believe she is enjoying the sweet rest she so much longed for.

MRS. GEO. L. TAYLOR.

La Grange, N. C.

SISTER ANN DODSON.

It is with much sorrow I attempt to write of the death of Sister Ann Dodson, the daughter of Charles R. and Mary Ann Lewis. She was born November 9, 1862. At the age of 20 she was married to Mr. Isaac Dodson. To them were born nine children. She was a member of the old Mill Primitive Baptist church, where she lived in love and died in full fellowship.

While wife and mother are gone from earth we hope to meet her in that better world above where parting will be no more. She was a faithful member always filling her place at her meetings when she could, and much enjoyed the preaching of the gospel when she heard it. She told her son a few days before her death that she was ready to go when the Lord called for her.

It should comfort the bereaved family to think that mother's hope of heaven's good by her in this trying hour.

May it be the will of the Lord to bless the dear ones left behind with the same hope, that they too may be ready when the trying hour shall come to them.

C. T. EVANS.

J. T. RENTFROW.

Dear Brother Gold:

It is with fear and trembling that I make the attempt to write an obituary notice of our highly esteemed brother, J. F. Rentfrow, but as it is the request of his brother, Benjamin Rentfrow, and his dear family at home, I will try and do the best I can, trusting I hope it will be satisfactory to them and to his church where he was held in the highest esteem. Brother Rentfrow was the son of Mabry and Susie Rentfrow, and was born July 4, 1849. He was married to Celia Thorn, April 9, 1871. There were born unto them five children— all girls and all-married but one. She still remains with her mother.

Our dear brother first joined the Free Will church, but only remained with them about two years. He found no rest there, and said he felt like he would perish if he staid there. He became very dissatisfied and especially after he was shown the true church of God, which was the Primitive Baptist church; so the third Sunday in May, 1897, he asked for a home with them at Conetnea church, N. C., and was gladly received and was baptized by their pastor, then Elder Wm. Woodard. He lived in honor to his profession until death, always filling his seat unless providentially hindered, and was ready and willing to bear his part of the burden of the church with cheerfulness. He possessed a spirit that was very meek and gentle and full of love and peace. His present pastor, Elder G. W. Boswell, says he never knew a better man, always laying a good example before his neighbors. He loved to see the upbuilding of his neighborhood, always gave freely of his means for that purpose. I have been told that he was one of the best men to the poor they ever saw, always ready and willing to help one in distress. He often (to my own experience) caused the widow's heart to rejoice and sing, and the poor to rise up and call him blessed. Brother Rentfrow, said that he sat down to his breakfast table one morning, and news came to him that there was a sick person in the neighborhood that was destitute of anything to eat. He felt so impressed that he could not eat another mouthful until he carried his neighbor something to eat. He was very tender-hearted and had great sympathy for one in trouble. He has been a source of comfort to me, ever ready and willing to do anything for my comfort when I would be at his good home. He would always pay my expenses backwards and forth. He and his dear family seemed very near and dear to me ever since I first became acquainted with them.

Wilson county has lost one of its best citizens, the neighborhood a good neighbor, the church one of her most faithful members, and the dear bereaved family feels that they have lost their best friend on earth, one of the best and tenderest fathers, and a most devoted husband.

My dear sister Rentfrow, none will feel the loss as you do, none can give you as good advice as he did, there is none that can share in your troubles as he did, and enjoy your comfort as he did, but as this is your loss you have nothing to regret as a most loving and obedient wife to her husband. I feel to say that I never saw a more devoted couple as you and dear brother Rentfrow were, but my dear sister, it was the will of our heavenly Father to take your dear companion from you, but press on with courage, you have but a few more sorrowful days and lonely hours to spend; then your God will call you home to meet your dear companion above, where all will be love, peace and joy, where you will meet your Prophet, Priest and King, see him as he is and be like him. Oh, may you take courage by the way and thank God for such a companion as you had. While he is dead he yet speaketh, while it is your loss it is his gain. May our God give us all grace sufficient to bow and be submissive to his will. His dear pastor says that he has lost one of his best friends, that he was a great man to him, always speaking words of comfort to him and encouraging him on his way, and bolding up his hands and feeble knees, and always administering unto him of his carnal things, saying it was more blessed to give than to receive.

Brother Rentfrow passed away September 24, 1908, after an illness of several weeks. His disease was a brain trouble. He leaves behind a loving wife, five very kind and obedient daughters, who were always ready and willing to do all they could for their dear father and mother and three brothers and one sister and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. He was a man that was greatly beloved by all that became acquainted with him. His pastor preached his funeral on the day of his burial at Contentnea church at 11 o'clock, using for a text the 4th chapter of Romans and 25th verse. He was then laid in his last resting place in the Contentnea church cemetery amidst a large gathering of people. May the Lord be with the bereaved. May he cause every one to feel that he works every thing after the counsel of his own good will and purpose, and whatever he does is best. I can greatly sympathize with the dear bereaved family, for I have lost both husband and father, too, and I know what a great loss it is. But I hope that we all can trust in one that can do more for us than any earthly friend. He has promised to be a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless, and I have found him as such, and I trust that our sister will, too. May we all, by the grace of God be prepared to meet our dear loved ones in a better world than this, is the desire of the unworthy writer. With much love to you all.

Your sister, I hope, in Christ,
MATTIE LUPER,
Spartanburg, N. C.

JOHN BRYANT GRIFFIN.

Williamston, N. C., Dec. 14, 1908.

Dear Elder Gold:

I will endeavor to write a few lines for publication in the Landmark concerning the life of my dear father, John Bryant Griffin, deceased. He was born August 16, 1848, and died August 24, 1908, making his stay on earth 60 years, 1 week and 1 day. He was married to Virginia A. Rawls in 1875. She died in 1876. He was married to Annie E. Roberson in 1876. Unto this union eight children were born. This wife and seven children survive him. Father joined the church at Smithwick's Creek in June, 1878. He seemed to take great delight in going to church, and being with the members as long as he was conscious of anything. He often would speak of how he enjoyed your company, and others, at the association at Smithwick's Creek, first Sunday in October, 1907. He was anticipating going to the Falls to the association and meet with you all again. He was taken Monday after third Sunday in August with congestion of the brain and several other diseases and lived one week. All that physician, family and friends could do failed to do him any good.

He tried to sing several hymns after his strength left him, so he could not. His last words that we could understand were, "home, sweet home." He fell asleep to wake with Jesus, as we hope, on Monday, August 24, 1908. His funeral was conducted on Tuesday the 25th, by Elder A. D. Mizelle.

We are very lonesome and miss his presence very much, but hope our loss is his gain.

ANNIE VIRGINIA GRIFFIN.

WILLIAM V. MASON.

This dear friend was the son of Mr. Manning Mason and wife, sister, Siddle Mason, of Morehead City, N. C. He was born January, 1848, and died January 11, 1908. He first married Miss Emily Davis, who bore him four children and she died. Then he married Miss Olive Adams, who bore him one son, and he died. He leaves a widow and son with an old, afflicted mother and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Mr. Mason was a man of strong character and always showed that he wanted to do the thing which was right. He was a warm friend with but little outward show. He was ever true to his convictions and cared very little for policy. In his religious views he was a Primitive Baptist, but made no outward profession. He had no use for profession without possession, and believed that in that kind of religion lay the deepest roots of hypocrisy. His Bible and books and papers which spoke the truth of the Bible were his literature and he was a man of unusually good understanding in those things, but he was a man of few words.

In his death the writer has lost one of his best friends, but we are all glad to rejoice that our loss is his gain.

The Lord bless the bereaved family with true spirit of reconciliation to His holy will and make them diligent in every good word and work to the praise of His glorious grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the beloved.

After an impression rested on my mind for sometime concerning the Book of Joshua I wrote down and had printed these impressions in a pamphlet in a number of chapters. THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the King in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform us of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

PETER'S VISION.

(Acts 10:34-35.)

Cornelius was a Gentile. The blessings of the covenant made with Abraham were not understood to belong to any but the seed of Abraham according to the flesh. Cornelius was a devout man, one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always. This indicates that he had been quickened by divine life. We have no reason to think that he gave alms and prayed to God in order to win the favor of God, but because he felt a desire to help the poor, and because he had been made to feel his dependence upon the Lord. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil, and the Lord puts it in the hearts of his people. Jer. 32:40, that they shall not depart from him. Although the fear of the Lord was in the heart of Cornelius, as the beginning of wisdom, yet he did not know the fountain of true and everlasting righteousness. If he knew of the sect of the Jews who were disciples of Jesus, he undoubtedly regarded their religion as something belonging exclusively to the Jews, and in which he, as a Gentile, had no right or interest.

Here was a field prepared of the Lord in which he would make known his salvation. So an angel of God is sent to him to direct him where to send for one who should tell him what he ought to do. In obedience to the direction of the angel Cornelius sent two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually, to Joppa, to ask Peter to come down to his house.

Now Peter did not yet know that salvation was to be given to the Gentiles. It is true that he had preached the sermon on the day of Pentecost, but the great company that had come together at that time were "Jews and Proselytes," although all known nations were represented there. Therefore Peter was still in ignorance of the Lord's purpose to send his salvation "to the ends of the earth," the Gentiles. Now as a Gentile household had been prepared of the Lord to hear and receive the joyful sound of the gospel, so the Apostle Peter was to be prepared to preach it to them, none too soon, none too late, but just at the right time.

On the morrow, as these messengers of Cornelius "went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, Peter went up upon the housetop to pray, about the sixth hour. And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready he fell into a trance, and saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners, and let down unto the earth, wherein were all manner of fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air. And there came a voice to him: Rise, Peter, kill and eat. But Peter said, not so, Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean. And the voice spoke unto him again the second time, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common or unclean. This was done thrice, and the vessel was received up again into heaven."

Then came the messengers of Cornelius, and by the direction of the spirit Peter went on the morrow early with them, accompanied by certain brethren from Joppa. He was still doubting in himself what the vision should mean, when he came into the house of Cornelius at Caesarea. And when he saw Cornelius and the company at his house, and heard his experience, then he knew. On his arrival at the door of Cornelius' house he still thought that it was unlawful for a man that was a Jew to come in unto one of another nation, but he understood that the force of that law was removed from him, and that he henceforward should not call any man common or unclean. But he was not prepared to preach the gospel truth revealed in that vision until Cornelius had fully related to him his own vision, and had mentioned the attitude of a gospel hearer toward a gospel preacher, saying with authority, "And God hath well done that thou art called. Now therefore are we all here before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of God."

Cornelius at first thought he was before Peter, and must worship him. The apostle at once corrected this error, and now Cornelius sees clearly that he and all in his house, who fear the Lord, are before God, and are waiting upon him; and that they are now to hear, not any peculiar wisdom and knowledge that Peter, as a man, may possess, but all that is commanded him of God.

"Then Peter opened his mouth and said: Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him."

This is the first time that the apostle had ever perceived this most important truth. He had up to this time believed that the Lord respected the person of a Jew above that of a Gentile, and that he respected the person of an obedient Jew above that of one who was disobedient. So the natural man has always felt. So the wisdom of the world regards this subject today, believing that the favor and blessings of God are received upon the ground of superior merit in the person of the one to whom they are given. Because of this the sinner who has been quickened by divine life, and made to see and feel the sinfulness of his heart, and the sins of his life, is sunk in distress, not being able to understand how a holy God can look without abhorrence upon the person of one so defiled with sin.

Now Peter understands the vision of the great sheet. The glorious meaning of it is now clear and plain to him, as it will be, in the Lord's own time, to every poor, trembling sinner, who knows the plague of his own heart. The animals in the sheet represent all kinds and conditions of men. Both clean and unclean beasts were there, and to Peter all were unclean because all were in contact with each other, so he could not eat of anything there. But the voice from heaven told him that all in the sheet were clean. How were they clean? Not as regarded individually, but as in the sheet. The ox and the bear, the wolf and the lamb, were alike clean, but only as seen in the sheet. Outside of the sheet the wolf would have been unclean and the lamb, but in the sheet no one was cleaner, no one more unclean, than another. All were alike clean in the sheet.

The sheet represents the everlasting covenant. It was let down from heaven three times to show that the covenant of grace appeared in each of the three dispensations, the patriarchal, the legal and the gospel. It comes down from heaven, and therein are all the elect of God, "chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world." No matter how different from each other they appear, in the flesh, in their own person, they are all alike in the covenant, Christ is the covenant. God does not respect them in their own persons, but in the person of Christ.

They are accepted in Christ, and with him. "In every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." The fear of the Lord in the heart and the working of righteousness, are evidences of this acceptance with Christ. Not the cause of their acceptance but evidences. "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil." The Lord says: "I will put my fear in their hearts that they shall not depart from me." They hunger after righteousness. The Lord works that desire after righteousness in their hearts, and it is seen in their life, and is an evidence that Christ is in them the hope of glory. And so God is not a respecter of their persons, but gives them evidences that they stand holy and unblameable before him in Christ and in love.

SILAS H. DURAND.

Southampton, Pa., Nov. 12, 1808.

Dear Brother Gold:

I desire to make a statement in the Landmark about a very heavy burden now resting upon my mind and heart. The statement I desire to make is this: Very nearly two years ago, several brethren encouraged me to purchase a home, with the promise they would assist me to pay for it. Urged by this encouragement, feeling it would be better to buy than rent, and impressed, as I then felt, of the Lord, to buy a home, I went forward and bought a house and lot in Elizabeth City, N. C. The price of this house and lot was $1,100. It was the cheapest and best place I could then buy, anyway large enough for my family. The house consists of five rooms and kitchen. The material out which it is built is comparatively new. The size of the lot is 20 feet by 110 feet. It is situated on one of the principal streets of the town. I paid some down on said piece of property, leaving me owing $1,000 on the whole. I borrowed $200 of this amount from Mr. J. C. Meekins, Sr., he taking first mortgage on the house and lot. Brother W. H. Keaton, Hon. I. M. Meekins, Hon. R. W. Turner, all of this city, endorsing my note for the other $800. I have only been able to pay interest on the first mortgage for one year. I bought the place about July, 1907. I have not been able to pay any since on said debt. I am afraid the parties who kindly signed my note are thinking hard of me for not paying them said claim. I would that I could settle this claim for their sake. My credit will be injured, I am afraid. I want to pay this debt, but cannot. God only knows what a burden this debt has been to my heart. I am praying night and day for him to settle this claim and lift this burden. He can. I feel that my God has moved me to make this statement. I have prayed long over it. I have been too independent to make such a statement; necessity and the impression I have received have forced me to make it. I now leave this statement in his hands. I will try to trust him for the issue thereof. Desiring the mercies of covenant keeping God, and desiring the prayers and sympathies of brethren and friends in this dark hour of need, I remain,

Yours in love,

J. A. SHAW.

Dear Brother Gold:

I have a desire to write to the Landmark, but I feel so unworthy of the rich blessings of God I know without him I can do nothing—am a failure from head to foot, because in my flesh dwells no good things. I have been made to feel that if I receive what I deserve I would be banished from the dear presence of our Saviour Jesus Christ forever. But I am trusting in one that has all power in heaven and earth. While sometimes I feel that I am lost, and can never be saved because I know I have sinned against God, I desire the prayers of all the dear children of God everywhere.

I received a hope eight years ago last September, if not deceived. I feel that I have been a sinner all my life, and expect to remain so as long as I live; yet I hope that I am a child of God. The best evidence I have that I am is a dream I had about one year ago. I dreamed that I was in the whitest place I ever saw in all my life, and I felt as happy as I could be, for I thought it was heaven. But it did not last long before all was dark as midnight, and I felt that I was lost forever unless God saved me by grace. I feel I am the vilest man living on earth, and without the presence of God I cannot do anything. Sometime I feel that I will never doubt again, but the devil comes along in his bewitching ways, and there is nothing but doubts and fears. He will say do this and do that; yet something says it is not just in the sight of men, much less of God. For Christ's sake deal just with all men; and if I know my heart's desire that is what I want to do as long as I live in this world of trouble and sorrow.

As I am about to close I will say to the dear Primitive Baptists by the help of God I pray that you all may hold out faithful to the end. I have been with you but a very short time, and may be criticized for writing this weak letter; but if I am not deceived it is God that gave me the mind to write. If I am deceived I hope what I have written will be forgotten soon.

I am a man unworthy of God's blessings.

EXPERIENCE AND CALL TO TO THE MINISTRY.

(By W. T. Broadway.)

In the latter part of the fourth year when it seemed I could no longer endure my trouble I gave up for lack of strength, and once more turned to my Bible as a poor helpless sinner in the valley of darkness and shadow of death and with a feeling to say, return, oh my Father, to a poor, backsliding and disobedient child; have mercy on me, oh Lord, for I am in trouble, such trouble as is not common to man. Altogether of a carnal mind, I was afraid to go to church and try to speak in the name of Christ, for fear I was not called and I was afraid not to go and try. I have plowed the field and preached in thought from one end of the field to the other and cried and preached night and day. I have aroused my wife and children many nights, and they would talk to me and try to get me to hush. I was in this condition for more than two years, when one Sunday morning I went to the cook room where my wife was preparing the morning meal, and just as I stepped up to the stove I was struck helpless and as I fell she and my two oldest sons caught me and carried me out into the yard where I could get air. One said, get a doctor. But I told them not to, for I had to die, as I had lived in rebellion against God. However, they got the doctor anyway, but I could walk before he came. He gave me some medicine and told me my blood was out of order.

I began to go often to my church meeting and when Elder J. A. Burch, the pastor, would preach, I could not help from crying, and when he had finished preaching he would ask me to select a hymn and talk some and organize conference. I would always tell him I could not, and when meeting was over, oh what a burden was on me. It seemed more than I could bear.

I traveled in this condition for about five years, when on Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in March, 1896, or just before day, I raised up in bed and my wife asked, what in the world is the matter with you? I told her I did not know what was the matter. But I must serve the Lord or die. I got up and after I had done my Sunday morning's work I left the house and went about a quarter of a mile to a lonesome place and knelt down and prayed to the Lord to relieve me. My prayers seemed not to rise higher than my head. I went still further and knelt down and prayed for mercy. It seemed my words fell to the earth. I got up and went still further across the plantation into a deep hollow and prayed to the Lord, and in my prayers these words came in my mind. "Oh Father, have mercy on me and forgive me for the way I have lived and make my way prosper in thy name if thou hast called me as a servant of his holy covenant, I would deny thee no more." At the end of these words I was free from that death and fear and God was then my Father and Jesus my Saviour. What a feast of love was this. I went to my home rejoicing, and I have never been able to preach such a sermon as was preached in my mind that day. It is with me long to be remembered, and the vow that I made in prayer to God that day is before me every time I am called on to go forward in service of the Lord.

On Saturday before the second Sunday in April I went to the church at Pine, where my friendship was, and after preaching Elder J. A. Burch asked me to take the hymn book, talk some and organize the conference. I went trembling, took the hymn book and commenced talking of the mercy of the Lord to me, and of his love and power in the salvation of the church. This I did until July. On Saturday before the second Sunday, fourteen of us members took letters of dismissal and were organized into a church at No Creek, in Davie county, N. C. On the fifth Sunday in August, the same year, the church opened their regular church meetings, which were to be held on the third Saturday and Sunday of each month and on Saturday before the third Sunday in November I was liberated to preach wherever I should have an exercise to go. On Friday before the second Sunday in November I was ordained and soon I had the pastorate of five churches, which I have served with the ability that God has been pleased to give me, and I can still say I am yet an unprofitable servant, striving only to do my duty. I am now pastor of Salisbury church, Pine, Tom's Creek, Rock Hill and Gains Grove, or have served that church as pastor. I am not able to say how many I have baptized in the last ten years, as I did not keep an account, neither can I say how many funerals I have preached, or how many couples I have married. But there have been several, and I am this morning feeling unworthy to express my feelings of love to the many brethren and sisters in the Lord, and I heartily ask your prayers to God that I may bear up in my service to him through this pilgrim life.

I have now tried to give a sketch of my life in travel from nature to grace and call to the ministry of the gospel and some of the exercises thereof and will close after making a few words of comment on the good chapter of Isaiah: "But now saith the Lord that created thee, oh Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name and thou art mine." This is the first verse I want to call your attention, what is contained in this one verse. First, this is the God of heaven that speaks, not a man, but the spirit of God in man. It is the same that speaks to Jacob, that created him, and tells him that he had formed him and God speaks to Jacob, as in the singular, as one by saying, but now, thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob. The word "thee" means one in the singular. The word means in the plural, thus meaning a number more or less. Jacob is only one in the consideration, Israel is one only in the consideration. Now what do we understand about the two. Jacob is created and Jacob is formed. Let us illustrate it in this way. We will take one grain of corn. In this one grain is the heart. The one grain is planted in the earth. Through the act of moisture of the earth the life of the grain develops and puts forth a stalk. It grows and in process of time a number of grains are brought forth. This is a formation of a number of grains, and not a creation of them of their coming forth. But one were in all the created grain. So in like manner was Israel all in the one created Jacob, or the one man Jesus Christ of which Jacob was a type. Jacob was a natural man and was the father of the twelve tribes of Israel. As a natural people was a type of spiritual Israel. Now Jacob sees a house or temple which God dwells in. God says again I will dwell in them and I will dwell in them, and they shall be my people, and I will be their God. Christ was a spirit of life in Jacob, and was to be made manifest in the formation of Israel, and the Lord said to Jacob, fear not for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine. The word "thee" is pointedly called four times in this verse of scripture. The meaning the formation, the redemption, the name. So then God created them, he formed them, he redeemed them he called them by name and said to them thou art mine, and God leads them along and multiplies them and blesses them and delivers them when in deep waters and in fiery furnaces, and when the time draws near for Christ to be born God sent his angel to the Virgin Mary saying that she bring forth a son, and he shall be called the son of the high priest, and that thou shalt give him the name of his father David, and he shall sit upon the house of Jacob, and of his throne, that shall be an end. Now the house is the church of God in which God dwells. What house will you build me, or where is the place of my rest; hath not my hand made all these things?

God places each member in the body as it pleases him, and he is glorified in all his works. Dear child of God, when you are in the deep, in the dark, and the valley of death God is with you for good to your never dying soul, and you and I will learn obedience through suffering, and in the end everlasting life.

W. T. BROADWAY.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—It comes to my mind this morning while reading the Bible to write to you on the all-important ant subject of "Salvation by Grace," and if you think proper to give it a place in the Landmark, so that all who have an interest may have a chance to read it.

My wife and myself arrived here last Monday and being among strangers we expected to be lonesome, but notwithstanding all that we are so agreeably entertained that we have not yet found ourselves as we expected, for as soon as we were admitted to our room and had recovered from the fatigue of the trip it came to my mind to write to our dear church, both in the flesh and in the spirit. And as soon as I had commenced writing the first letter which was a dear daughter, Estelle, and then to my sister Bess (which you know is my sister in the flesh as well as in the spirit) the Lord, I believe, came down in the fulness of his love in my poor heart and so overwhelmed me with that unspeakable love that it filled my soul so full that joy was so great that my whole being was hunched into his great sea of love, joy, and adoration, and though I felt to be baptized in the fulness of his love I realized that the great depth and height of it reached so far above me and so far beneath me that I could not describe it in a word, why the unboundedness of the great flood that so enraptured my mind and I know as you will see that my effort this morning is so full with so much weakness on my part that I am falling in like manner to do so, and can only exclaim, Oh Lord, endow thy servant with more heavenly wisdom that he may speak and wave of thee and thy glorious kingdom, and that great and unspeakable love that it may reach the hearts of his dear children and that we all may rejoice together thro' world over, and be raised to such a height of praise for the gift of his dear son to us poor sinners and the revelation of him in our hearts with all the attended mercy, goodness and love which brings to us such sure word of prophecy that it engrafts in our souls that assurance that he is ours and we are his, with such indelible firmness that we in rapture can (as Thomas did) exclaim, "My Lord and my God."

While I write of all these great blessings to us I find that my eyes are so clouded with tears that they freely drop upon the table as I try to pen down the substance of my feelings, and am reminded to inquire what has brought to us such great blessings. And the answer is that your adorable Saviour "being in an agony he prayed more earnestly, and his sweat as great drops of blood falling down to the ground," Luke 22:44. And then to think while our Lord was so suffering for us that we were enemies to him and all our backs were turned to him and are no better than the wicked Jews who crucified him and astonishingly I saw that Jesus the Son of God was thus in such agony that sweat as it were of great drops of blood flowed from him, thereby showing the poor, unworthy sinner as I am, should be so filled with his fulness that it should such forth from my heart such an abundant flood of tears of joy, and make me almost speechless from a sense of that great fulness and blinded with kindred tears, I could only wait until I could thus give vent to my inward emotion before I could write more. And to think all this is given us while we are yet sinners. Surely our tongues fail to express, our pen too frail and our ink too pale while in this world to ever praise and thank God for these unspeakable blessings. And may our heavenly Father give us more grace if his will that we may serve him better, love him more and live more and more as we grow in years to his praise both in action and words and have a more abundant entrance into his kingdom and the joys thereof.

So you see, dear brethren and sisters, the Lord's blessings go with us wherver we go and he can turn our greatest afflictions into the greatest blessings. If I had not been afflicted I would not be here.

I will now, in a few words, refer to ourselves as pertaining to our health and welfare here. We have a comfortable room and nice furniture and we are pleasantly attended to. These people supply all our necessities satisfactory to us and we think we are being benefitted by the water. We have no complaint to make only of ourselves. We want, the Lord will, to get home on Friday before the first Sunday, and if I am able to fill my appointment, will do so. My wife joins me in the warmest christian love to all who love this blessed doctrine.

Your brother in hope,

Dear Brother Gold:

I wrote you an article a shore time since. and now, by your permission, I drop you a-few lines this gloomy Monday morning while it is raining, and I would, if I could, not only write out some of the evils which seem to affect the household of faith, but would rather write out the remedy for the ills. It seems that destruction and divergence is seen all along the line. Old watchmen in years must see it plainer than some of us who are not so old in the cause, but enough is seen to realize the great affliction we are undergoing, and the sad effect if the righteous judgment of God for every sin must have its just punishment, and we all know or should know that whatsoever a man sows that shall he reap. If we sow to the wind we shall reap a whirlwind, "If we sow to the flesh we shall reap corruption." We know too well that we cannot escape the judgment of God. How faulty we are in sometimes claiming or pretending to be faultless. How often have I heard the false assertion, he is without fault. Who is that? I answer, Jesus only. I have never known but one who was faultless of all men. It is the man, Christ, Jesus. Some men will lament their faults and confess their iniquities, and yet if you present their faults you have a case on your hands, and a war will ensue; and if you don't mind or do mind you will be hurt, for the back-handed missile will cut you to the quick. When we look at man closely we will find that David told the truth when he said in his taste all men are liars; and observation under the divine headlight reveals the fact that David declared the truth. All men lie in some way in a high or low place, either in word or deed, and he who makes the biggest, broadest claim is the biggest liar of them all. I have known some of the best men as we call them to lie. I could prove it, but it might be painful to read. So desist. Some men's acts won't bear close scrutiny; but one great fault is that professed Christians trample the law of Jesus under their unhallowed feet, and instead of taking the beam out of their own eye, they are magnifying the mote in their brother's eye. This is one of the most practical things now-a-days, and I am sorry to note it is done to perfection by those who make such large claims on what they call practical godliness. Aalas, alas, how sad to note such adverse things among those who claim to be the children of God, but such is the case. I have seen it and witnessed it too often to be mistaken—so often the speculations are indulged in on a minister's character to his hurt, and the one who does it boasts that he don't indulge in levity, nor tell anecdotes. Would to God he would, for the brother's good. The time would be better spent than what it often is, and then they will wipe their mouth with dignity and say I have done nothing. Backbiting and sowing seeds of discord is so prevalent that it shocks and disgusts the humble child of God. Christ has laid down the law as to offences and reconciliation, and it is trodden down and disregarded by those who profess to be teachers of good things. They lie and do not tell the truth. I know two preachers now who are berating each other and neither will heed Christ's word, but will evil affect as many minds of others as they can, and get them with us as they say, and a brother who advises them not to do so becomes their enemy, and they let out on him, and magnify his defects and spread the strife as much as possible. I have become so tired and weary, and seen so much until it has burdened me so much as to make me doubt the reality of christianity, and made me question their love and devotion to Jesus.

I don't say they are not children of God, but they are doing wrong, and the church should not allow such. Discipline is needed, but such is the case that the preacher is the church, he directs the church and usurps a power and authority over God's heritage. This is one of the great evils of this time over which we grieve and hope for a change. Oh the many evils, the sorrowful things we now encounter. Our only hope is the Lord. Truly may it be said, "Oh Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but thy help is in me." Yea, our only help is in the Lord who knows how frail we are. It is good that he remembers we are dust. Jesus is our hope for the better, and as our eyes are turned from these annoying and harmful things to look into his perfect life and face. May he in the fullness of his marvelous grace bring the captivity of Zion (when we all may rejoice and be glad, and forgive us of all our wrongs and enable us to forgive and love our erring brethren who seem to be in such a state, and instead of talking about their defects throw over them the mantle of charity, and pray for them, and the peace of Jerusalem. Christ is the only panacea and remedy for the ills. There is a leprosy in Gilead, and there is a physician there, and as prisoners of hope we are made to look to the stronghold, look away to the hills from whence cometh our help, the Lord which made heaven and earth.

Yours in hope,
W. LIVELY.

GRACE.

This is to me a most wonderful word. It stands for what God has done, and what Jesus has done and what the Holy Ghost has done, and what this triune God is still doing and will yet do for poor needy sinners. Grace is what God does for his people, and works is what God's people do in obedience to him.

Which is it saves us, what we do, or what God does?

"By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves it is the gift of God.

"Not of works lest any man should boast." Eph. 2:8-9.

Good works are for a wholesome purpose, but the scripture does not teach that they give us salvation.

Grace actually saves sinners, but good works of the bible kind manifest and prove the presence of that true grace, which is of God. But selfish works, done to exact and benefit ourselves, do not prove that we love God, but only prove we love ourselves.

All salvation is from the Lord and for that reason he is to have all the glory, praise and honor. All our best works are mixed with sin and therefore cannot merit the praise that belongs to God. All our improper works, merit condemnation and judgment and bring us under such censure that without continual grace, we would be hopelessly undone and ruined.

If any part of our salvation was actually based on what we do, it would be right to give us part of the praise, but it cannot be so from the very nature of the case. We should not dwell on technicalities, but we should maintain that doctrine that gives God all the glory. For the whole truth is this, God is due a great deal more glory and honor than we have ever yet been willing to give him or able to give him, and therefore it must be true that he has done more than any of us has ever yet accorded him in saving and blessing his people.

Salvation is not of man, nor from man, but of God, it is manifested in man, and like leaves on a tree proves its life, so obedience to God proves what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.

My Dear Brother Gold:

I write to express my most hearty endorsement of your editorial in the November 1 issue of the Landmark, entitled "What Kind of Preaching?" especially the following paragraphs:

1. "We do not consider that a gospel preacher if faithful has a hobby or devotes all his labors to one theme, and neglects other themes as taught and enforced in the Bible."

2. "If one dwells on predestination altogether to the exclusion of other matters taught in the Bible as plainly and frequently, he is not declaring all the counsel of God, and is not profitable to others."

4. "Some try to find out who the hypocrites are, and who are unsound. They set up a standard and slay all that do not measure up to their false standard."

5. "A very successful way to cause hardness, produce coldness, bring about division, and force great distress on the churches is to preach something not taught in the Scriptures, or misrepresent and pervert what is taught. For instance, to so preach predestination as to leave the impression it makes God the author of sin, the Bible from the first to the last of its teachings condemns sin, and furnishes no man any excuse to commit sin. Any man therefore, who so preaches as to give any man any excuse for his sin, is a false teacher. There is plenty to preach if we preach what is plainly declared in Scripture--things that edify, that encourage good behaviour, that are for peace and love--preaching Jesus Christ and him crucified."

Predestination is a fundamental and precious doctrine of our faith, and I am a strong believer in the absolute sovereignty of God in all things, he doing and suffering to be done all acts of all his creatures, and even the heavenly bodies move and are held in their respective orbs by his mighty power. But I do not approve of preachers or brethren making a hobby of the subject. Much less do I approve of two or three brethren in a church making the subject a standard of the soundness of other brethren. I have known brethren to so emphasize the subject in their minds that they actually came to believe that no one was sound in the faith unless they believed in the "absolute predestination of all things" as interpreted and expressed by them. On the other hand, I have lived among brethren (in Georgia, for instance), who looked upon those who held such views as absolutely unsound themselves. I do not find, brother Gold, that the Scripture anywhere makes the belief in predestination the test of the soundness or depth of any brother. I have also seen the spirit in those that seed of Abraham—not of Adam—and was found in fashion as a man, that by the grace of God he should taste death for every man. Thus we see all things put under the feet of Jesus. His crown of glory and honor is that he may taste death for every child of promise. For he (Jesus) that sanctified, and they (the children) who are sanctified are all of one—all of the same parentage, for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren. Thus it became him (God) for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory to make the captain of their salvation (Jesus) perfect through suffering. Jesus says I will put my trust in him (his Father). Hence it is from faith to faith. Jesus first trusted in God. He is the author and finisher of our faith. Then he deals a measure of that faith to us the children so that it is from faith to faith. Again, behold I and the children which God hath given me. Because the children are partakers of flesh and blood Jesus likewise took part of the same, or was found in fashion as a man, and was in grieved to the shameful death of the cross. So Jesus is made a perfect man through suffering. For through death He destroyed him that in us the power of death (the devil) and delivered them who through fear do not yet were all their lifetime subject to bondage. This is the son of man who would not be perfect through suffering.

But the Spirit of the Lord God shall be in him, the spirit of wisdom and knowledge, the spirit of knowledge and seem to be fear of the Lord. He shall be a judge after the sight of his countenance rather reprove after the hearing of his ears. But with righteousness (not of his own righteousness) shall he be as one of the poor, and with equity for the meek of the earth. How sweet is the judgment of the Lord Jesus for the poor and needy. He shall slay the wicked with the breath of his lips. He makes an end of sin to those burdened with sin. For righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

What shall be the effect of this wonderful dominion? The most irreconcilable in nature shall become one. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; the calf, the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child (Christ in you the hope of glory) shall lead them. The sucking child shall play on the hole of the deadly asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the den of the dreadful cockatrice. Nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain.

Wars shall cease, death is swallowed up in victory. Who knows these things? They that are weaned from the breast, they that have learned doctrine, they that are dead to the law by the body of Christ, and that are alive to God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

What a perfect and glorious heirship is that of Jesus.

He destroys all enemies of truth and happiness. He lifts fallen man the beggar from the dunghill to make him inherit the throne of glory with princes. He overcomes every evil with good. He plants truth in the desert waste by taking away the stony heart and giving a heart of flesh. These are trees of the Lord's planting that he might be glorified. The Paradise of God blooms and fruits in heavenly perfection. Jesus reigns until every enemy is put under his feet. He is Lord of lords and King of kings. This King reigns in righteousness. He that honors and serves Jesus reigns with him as a king and priest, not in partnership, but partaking of his life and joy. He contributes nothing but is a receiver. He helps none but is helped all. Nor can any one knowing his own bring us under such censure that without continual grace, we would be hopelessly undone and ruined.

If any part of our salvation was actually based on what we do, it would be right to give us part of the praise, but it cannot be so from the very nature of the case. We should not dwell on technicalities, but we should maintain that doctrine that gives God all the glory. For the whole truth is this, God is due a great deal more glory and honor than we have ever yet been willing to give him or able to give him, and therefore it must be true that he has done more than any of us has ever yet accorded him in saving and blessing his people.

For through death He destroyed him that had the power of death (the devil) and delivered them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. This is the son of man made perfect through suffering.

The Spirit of the Lord God shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord. He shall not as man judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears. But with righteousness (his own righteousness) shall he judge the poor, and with equity for the meek of the earth. How sweet, gracious and saving is the judgment of the Lord Jesus for the poor and needy. He shall slay the wicked with the breath of his lips. He makes an end of sin to those burdened with sin. For righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

What shall be the effect of this wonderful dominion? The most irreconcilable in nature shall become one. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; the calf, the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child (Christ in you the hope of glory) shall lead them. The sucking child shall play on the hole of the deadly asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the den of the dreadful cockatrice. Nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain.

Wars shall cease, death is swallowed up in victory. Who knows these things? They that are weaned from the breast, they that have learned doctrine, they that are dead to the law by the body of Christ, and that are alive to God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

What a perfect and glorious heirship is that of Jesus.

He destroys all enemies of truth and happiness. He lifts fallen man the beggar from the dunghill to make him inherit the throne of glory with princes. He overcomes every evil with good. He plants truth in the desert waste by taking away the stony heart and giving a heart of flesh. These are trees of the Lord's planting that he might be glorified. The Paradise of God blooms and fruits in heavenly perfection. Jesus reigns until every enemy is put under his feet. He is Lord of lords and King of kings. This King reigns in righteousness. He that honors and serves Jesus reigns with him as a king and priest, not in partnership, but partaking of his life and joy. He contributes nothing but is a receiver. He helps none but is helped all. Nor can any one knowing his own vileness and the worthiness of Jesus ever wish to claim any of the glory of that kingdom, but each shall render all honor to his worthy name, and all shall sing in sweetest harmony not unto us, but unto thy name let all honor be given. For thou art worthy, for thou has redeemed us by thy blood out of every nation, language and tongue under heaven, and hast made us kings and priests unto God.

So he that sees Jesus in truth sees the perfect fulfillment of every scripture and every purpose of God. None can please God unless they honor Jesus.

P. D. G.

Elder Samuel Tatum requests my view of 18th verse of Jude, "How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts." Jude calls the attention of the beloved brethren to remember the words which were spoken of the apostles had told them that there should be mockers in the last time who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. What sort of people are they? "These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the spirit, 10th v. Those whom the Lord separates are called of God. For instance God separated Paul from his mother's womb, and called him by his grace—separated him from his sins, and separated his sins from him as far as the east is separated from the west. This is calling one with an holy calling. Any one reading the scriptures carefully, and understanding them must see that two manner of people are described in the scriptures. One class is such as are beloved of God, separated from their sins, called with an holy calling not according to their works, but called by grace, and are made to hate their own works and abhor themselves as vile, and of course their works are vile. They are such as build up themselves in their most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, keeping themselves in the love of God, and looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. Now this class are already in possession of the most holy faith of God's elect, for that they are building up themselves or growing up into Jesus Christ in all things, praying in the Holy Ghost. They are already in the Holy Ghost, and praying in the Holy Ghost, for they know not what to pray for of themselves, but the spirit makes intercession for them thus helping their infirmities. Such keep themselves in the love of God by this blessed, humble walk of faith. God begins this good work in them, and giving good heed to the teaching they have already received they walk in Jesus. For as ye have received the Lord Jesus Christ so walk ye in him rooted and grounded in his love.

But now consider the other characters described by Jude. They are the mockers who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. All the description of ungodly sinners and reprobate, characters named by Jude are included in this class. They have a form of godliness. They claim to be religious. There are certain men crept in unawares. Have they joined the church? Yes. They are vain talkers and boasters, making a show of religion. They were found among the Israelites that God saved out of Egypt, but afterward destroyed them that believed not. Also the angels that kept not their first estate or standing, leaving their own habitation are reserved in everlasting chains of darkness, blindness or ignorance. Mockers. What do they do? Take Ishmael who mocked Isaac. He claimed he was entitled to all that Isaac was, as much the promised seed. These mockers oppose the electing love of God that chooses some and hence leaves out others. They do not love the doctrine of God our Saviour. But they set up something else in opposition to the Bible doctrine, yet they claim to be religious. They ridicule the blessed doctrine of grace, the old-fashioned doctrine of perfection which therefore allows of no worldly progress. These are such as make a great show of religion, but are bouned by their own lusts. For if the light in one is darkness how great is that darkness, ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. Such as Sodom and Gomorrah suffering the vengeance of eternal fire, giving themselves over to fornication and going after strange flesh. Likewise these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities. They cannot endure the predestination or dominion of God, and speak evil of this holy power. Though Michael the archangel doest not bring a railing accusation even against the devil when disputing about the body of Moses, but said to the devil the Lord rebuke thee.

But these mockers speak evil of those things which they know not, but even in such things as they know naturally as brute beasts they corrupt themselves. They are followers of Cain, and have run greedily after the error of Balaam for money, for that is their reward, and perish in such opposition as Rahab made against Moses denying the necessity of a divine call to preach the gospel. You see they were all religious after a fleshy sort, separating themselves. Why they feast with you in religious worship they are spots, not washed by Jesus. They feed themselves without fear. They are clouds without water shedding no water on the tender plants of the Lord, trees whose fruit withereth—bearing no good fruit—barren; twice dead, naturally dead and having a name to live yet not living unto the Lord: plucked up by the roots, so they are twice dead. Men gather them in bundles and burn them.

They are raging waves of the sea

foaming out their own shame. What picture of a spouter, one who is a striker, out of whose mouth rushes such notions of boasting and vaunting, rotten sentiments and notions that assert the power of man, such assertions as set forth the false doctrines of men and devils, in whom there is no truth. These are murmurers, complainers, their mouths speaking great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration seeking gain or advantage. When they find people of wealth, or that appear to have wealth, or that are easily beguiled and flattered to give, people that they can operate on and induce them to believe that if they will give money it will add stars in their crown, and secure greater eminence in the church and heaven, they will hold such people in admiration. They suppose that gain is godliness. From such turn away.

They separate themselves. Men have persuaded them to make a profession of religion, or they have by a voluntary humility feigned to become the Lord's people. God has not called them to the knowledge of the truth. Pride, which is the bottom and ground work of fleshly lusts, the first born child of corruption, is manifest in all their conduct, and is the leader in this service.

It is said and claimed that the world is becoming so wise and so much better that such writings as those of Jude are out of fashion. But Jude says these mockers shall be in the last time. Paul also says in the last days of perilous times shall come, and John shows that up to the very end of the world the enemies of the church of God shall make war on the saints. Peter also writes knowing this first that in the last days scoffers shall come walking after their own lusts. It is a thing of importance to know this, "Knowing this first."

Perhaps no epistle or writing of any apostle in as few words marks, advertises, the character of false teachers more clearly than does Jude, or more distinctly separates between the precious and the vile. Do you see the difference? Where are you? If you believe the writings of these holy apostles then you will deeply consider this warning.

P. D. G.

THEY THAT WILL BE RICH.

How astute, cunning, scheming, far-sighted, quick to grasp the situation, and seize the opportunity is the man that will be rich. His mind, aims, purposes, thoughts and sentiments are so imbued with this one thing, he becomes so thoroughly saturated with this desire, that it occupies all his thoughts. Then he is so quick and cunning to see the opportunity to make money. While ordinary men are not even thinking how much money can be made out of such a thing calculations are running all the time through this man's brain and heart as to how much profit there is in this for him.

He does not accuse himself of selfishness. There is but one side for him to consider, and that is how much can I realize by this operation? Every power of his nature is engrossed in this business. As when every soldier in the army should be at his post in the day of battle, so every power of this man is fully enlisted in the conflict after money. Or as when one runs in a race for a prize and every power of his mind and body is urged with his topmost speed to run, so that he may win, so in this game after money such is his cunning and skill that he spares no opportunity to win.

It is surprising to see how quickly he discerns the opportunity to grasp the money, and how he gloats over his efforts and success.

Will he ever relax his strain, or cease his efforts? Never. It is not in the nature of what a man at heart desires ever to say it is enough.

But will such ever be able to cleanse themselves of this blighting, foul leprosy? Will they ever be healed of this foul disease that defiles and corrupts every part of the man thus possessed?

Will such ever be happy? Such will pierce themselves through with many sorrows which drown men in destruction and perdition. What a whirlpool of death are such plunged into. Such a place of desolation to be drowned in.

Paul tells us the love of money is the root of all evil—not a limb, or bough, or a few twigs, or some leaves of the tree of evil"; but it is the root of all evil. Why does it so hurt and destroy one that is under its power? Even nature teaches that we should have good will to men. The holy law of God requires us to love God with all our heart and love our neighbor as ourselves. But the lust after money when it seizes one dries up every natural affection and every principle of love to men. All pity and mercy are dried up and withered. Self is the one such a man loves. Covetousness is idolatry. He worships the god of mammon. Every foul spirit of the flesh reigns in him. He knows nothing of faith that works by love. He has no treasure in heaven. He is not rich toward God. He is an idolater—a profane person.

We think of Judas selling, betraying the innocent blood for 30 pieces of silver, and being so fully under the power of the devil that he destroys himself. We think of the rich man faring sumptuously every day, and when he died he lifted up his eyes being in torment, and was told that his good things were in this short vain life, and now in eternity he must groan in torment, and that it had been better for Judas if he had never been born. We consider that the love of money robs its possessor of every noble principle, and saturates and defiles him with every foul principle, and that while men praise the man who loves money and is rich, Jesus calls him a fool, and says that when he dies whose shall those things be he gave himself for.

P. D. G.

Friend G. A. Petway, of Tampa, Fla., requests my view of Rev. 12:8. "And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon: and the dragon fought and his angels."

In the book called Revelation there are the most noted characters represented as acting. In this chapter God, the Lord Jesus, the church of God, the dragon and his angels, the scene of war is in heaven, sun, moon and stars, the heaven and earth are presented.

A woman clothed with the sun, having the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars sets forth the church of God in glory. Truly this is a great wonder in heaven. This is bride the Lamb's wife. The sun denotes the brightness and perfection of her righteousness or clothing. The moon under her feet sets forth the shadowy dispensation of the law as supporting and honoring her. The crown of twelve stars emblazons the doctrine of God our Saviour as declared by the twelve apostles circling her brow. Things of glory appear in heaven before they are unfolded or come to pass in earth. The dragon, that old serpent the devil, is more subtle than any beast which the Lord God has made, and he is full of blindness and of suspicion against God and his Son. His schemes have been to destroy the works of God from the beginning. This he sought to do in the garden of Eden. He understood enough of God's purpose in the declaration that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head to cause him to think his head should be bruised—not by Adam's seed—but by the seed of the woman. When the wise men came enquiring where is he that is born King of the Jews, satan acting in Herod the king, inflamed him to slay the children from two years old and younger, thinking that thereby he should slay the child born unto us, the Son given. So when this great wonder appeared in heaven this woman is about to bring forth a child who is to rule all nations with a rod of iron. This is the Lord Jesus. Satan fails to destroy this woman or the child either. For the child Jesus is caught up to the throne of God in heaven. Then the dragon seeks to destroy the woman, the church of God. But God provides a way of escape for two wings of a great eagle are given her, and she is lifted above the earth and a place is prepared for her to be nourished. But the malice of the dragon is displayed in his persecution of the church of God.

This great red dragon full of warlike power of persecution is active in bloody persecution.

He appears in heaven with his angels or servants, ministers. What heaven is this he appears in? It is the Jewish heaven or the first heaven in which the temple worship of the first testament is founded and conducted. In this testament which made nothing perfect, but by which is the knowledge of sin there appeared the greatest opposition to holiness, even to fiercer enmity against Jesus and against God than any heathen nation has ever shown. For satan and his angels appear in that first heaven. For satan operates in his ministers or angels, which are men. He entered into Judas who was of that wicked one. There were many Jews, possessed of the devil. Every manner of hypocrisy and pride was displayed in them. This is war against the truth. Though it appears on the surface or to men as the triumph of the dragon and his angels: Christ is crucified and buried, but behold he makes a show of his glorious power openly as he rises from the dead and ascends into heaven and leads captivity captive, and gives gifts to men even to the rebellious.

No more place is found for the dragon or his angels in heaven for that first testament or heaven in which he operates is passed away as a scroll, folded up and ended. The stars or leaders in the legal heavens, the Jews that sat in Moses' seat as the scribes and pharisees, were under the power of the dragon, and were pulled down to earth with him. The former things are done away. For if any man is in Christ Jesus he is a new creature.

The second heaven is the gospel heavens wherein all things are new and that kingdom is above the power of satan who though he persecutes and afflicts, yet cannot draw off any part of the body of Jesus.

In the gospel heaven the Lord Jesus is the lawgiver, the prophet, the priest and the king who will save us. As Jesus is greater than Moses and all the prophets, and the covenant of grace or new testament is connected with the priesthood of Jesus that makes perfect and this kingdom abides forever and is above all other kingdom's glory or power, hence satan is cast down and cannot make war in this kingdom, though he wars against it. Satan is always on the outside and cannot enter into this kingdom of Jesus. For satan is cast out into the earth, and operates and wars in the flesh. Satan's kingdom is not divided, and God's kingdom is not divided. One is corrupt. The other is holy and incorruptible. Satan cannot so imitate a christian as to deceive the elect of God. He does not know what the love of God is,

and hence cannot enter into that.

As you see from the reading of the book of Revelation that always the church of God is above the world, above legalism, above man's works, so it is higher than Agag's kingdom, or satan's, and therefore the dragon being cast down or falling as lightning from heaven can never enter there. He makes war against the camp of the saints, but he is always on the outside, and can never prevail. For greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world. For he that is born of God is born of incorruptible seed and can not sin. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection for over such the second death has no power.

A birth impies a mother. Jesus said "who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples and said, Behold my mother and my brethren. For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven the same is my brother, and sister and mother."

The woman clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of 12 stars brought forth Jesus who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron. Sovereign power is given to him over all nations, but he works in his people in the beauties of holiness.

Sarah is the free woman who is the mother of Isaac the type of the Lord Jesus, the elder brother being the first born from the dead, and all his people or children are nearer of kin to him than can any be in nature. They are heirs of God and joint heirs with our Lord Jesus Christ. In the type of the covenant of grace Sarah is the mother of us all, that is of all the children of promise. For it is of faith that it might be by grace, to the end that the promise might be sure to all the seed whether Jew or Gentile.

In this blood of the new covenant relationship Christ loves all the seed, and they love the brethren. For he that loveth is born of God, for God is love. This kingdom therefore is infinitely above the dragon who is the destroyer and the enemy of all righteousness.

P. D. G.

PREACHING.

Should a preacher try to pray for everything he can think of, and use vain repetitions as though the Lord must be informed? He knows what we need before we ask him. He tells us we are not to be heard because of vain repetitions, or for our much speaking.

Why do men pray? They pray because they need help of God, and because they desire to praise God for what he has done, and they desire to express their confidence in God in the present and the future.

For the Gospel preacher there is only one subject to preach—Jesus Christ and him crucified, risen and glorified. In many texts of scripture this is tersely expressed. Indeed in all scriptural passages it is expressed or hinted. For such is the thread of connection in all portions of scripture that it may be said to be one garment without a seam.

When preachers appear on the stand to preach they usually announce a text. What is the authority for this. When the great preacher Jesus, and he only is the great preacher, and is in the spirit and power of truth the only preacher in Zion, stood up to read in the synagogue in Nazareth, as his custom was, the book of Isaiah was handed to him, and he opened the book and read from the 61st chapter and 1st and 2nd verses, and said this lay is this scripture fulfilled in your ears, and all marveled at his gracious words.

Do you expect when one rises to preach Jesus he will spend quite a portion of his time in talking of and about himself, thus trying to thrust himself forward in the front? Excuses and apologies are not preaching the gospel. I like to see and hear a man when he rises to preach to present his theme—read a text if one is on his mind—and at once begin to talk about it or preach. The sooner he presents Jesus to the people the quicker he disappears himself, or is hid behind Him that he is holding forth. Preach the word.

It is unpleasant and disappointing to a hungry hearer to be kept away from the table so long by the excuses of the waiter with apologies that he has not got any thing fit to eat. If the Lord sends the preacher he always has some thing that is savory and sweet. Excuses and apologies never feed the hungry.

If the preacher desires to be a true servant of Jesus, and wishes truly to feed the flock of God let him preach Jesus and the resurrection.

What should the preacher do when he has told his errand? Shall he repeat it and thus weaken it? Let him close the book and set down when he has delivered his message. If one is called to preach he opens his mouth and begins at some scripture and preaches Jesus, and he comes to a stopping place, nor can he proceed further with comfort or relief to himself or profit to others.

P. D. G.

SAMUEL.

Samuel ranks among the prophets as of the greatest. His character and example is worthy of study. His mother was sorely vexed with an adversary while she was barren. But when the Lord makes the barren one the joyful mother of children the increase is very wonderful in quality. Notice Isaac, Joseph, Samuel, John, but ranking above them all rises the holy child Jesus, born of a virgin. Feeling as godly woman of old felt the fruit of the womb is the reward that is of the Lord. Hannah was grieved in spirit as a desolate one. So great was her distress that she could not eat when they went up to Shiloh to worship the Lord. She prayed to the Lord. This is what the afflicted soul does, and the Lord hears such. How safe to commit your case unto the Lord. Whatever draws one to the Lord is a blessing. In that sense it is good to be afflicted. Hannah vowed to the Lord if he would give her a man child she would give this child to the Lord all the days of his life. How good it is to consider children the heritage of the Lord—for parents to acknowledge the Lord in their lives, and for children to honor their parents in serving the Lord.

When Hannah weaned the child Samuel she took him to the priest, and he remained in the temple and served the Lord.

Such was the brightness of his character and gifts that all Israel knew that the word of the Lord was with Samuel, and he was established as a prophet of the Lord.

He anointed the first king of Israel, and he anointed the greatest king of Israel David, and anointed David while Saul was reigning as king. Unlike most men that have a prospect of being king, and who become so eager to be king that they will slay the reigning king, David, though most exposed to the envy and malice of Saul, yet never behaved more unselfishly nor humbly than when Saul was seeking his life. Deep was his grief when told that Saul was slain.

Samuel loved and honored God and he loved Israel. He protested against their having a king, telling them the Lord was their king, and there surely cannot be so good and so great a king as the Lord God, nor any people so greatly blessed as those people whose God is the Lord. But Israel desired to be like the nations around them and have a king. How great a tyrant is a bad fashion, and how eager carnal people are to be in the fashion, especially if it is a display of pride and vanity.

But what did Samuel do when Israel would not hearken to his good counsel. Did he become offended and turn away from them, and refuse to serve them? Oh no. He still prayed for them, loved them and ministered unto them, and was faithful to them as long as he lived. Charity never faileth. It is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil. It is not weary in well doing. Such great gifts are displayed in God's true servants. A portion of this gracious spirit is on men whom the Lord endows with gifts of service to Israel. But the fulness of the gifts and graces of the spirit are poured out on Jesus, for he is full of grace and truth.

P. D. G.

ABRAHAM.

"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee:

And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great: and thou shalt be a blessing." Gen. 12:1-2.

Abram's name was changed to Abraham—the father of many nations. He was 75 years old when God called him out of the Chaldeas. Before God called him he was an idolater. Your father served false gods on the other side of the flood and Abraham your father was therefore a worshipper of false gods said Joshua. Josh. 24:2-3.

So God called Abraham. Now the Lord had said unto Abram get thee out of thy country. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing comes by the word of God. Always faith comes by the word of God. There is power in the word of God, for it quickens the dead. Look in the famous 11th chap. of Hebrews and see how faith is the response to the word of God. In every instance from the days of righteous Abel God's testimony is found to be the cause of faith, for it is the response of the heart which God has purified—to his word. God testified to Abel, to Enoch and all of them, so that faith cometh by hearing, and hearing cometh by the word of God.

God called Abraham out of his native country—from his father's house, from his people, from his kindred, from the scenes of his childhood and youth, so that he should see them no more. He separated Abraham from every natural tie to his native land and country, and led him among strangers and into a land he had never seen, and a land he knew nothing about.

This is a type of the way God calls his people out of the darkness of nature, and leads them to a state they knew nothing about. He leads the blind in a way they know not, and in paths they have not known, and they obey him.

God called Abraham away from all he had been identified with before, and separated him from all others that he might walk with God, and that God should be his shield and his exceeding great reward. For the Lord God called him alone, and no other had any thing to do with this, and he walked with God, and the Lord made him great. Abraham never doubted but that this was the Lord's work, and that the Lord alone called him and blessed him, and made him great.

How wonderful therefore was the life of Abraham dwelling separate from the nations, separate from his father's house, his native land, his people, but walking with God and walking before God. How safe and blessed is such a life—the life of faith.

He went out not knowing whither he went. He had not so much as a foot of land. When Sarah died he had no place to bury her out of his sight until he bought a burying place of the sons of Heth.

When God calls one to himself this is a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to God's own purpose and grace, and therefore it is a holy calling.

Abraham is the father of the faithful, and hence all the children of promise are the ones that believe in God and walk by the faith of their father Abraham. It is of faith that it might be by grace, to the end that the promise might be sure to all the seed. Thus it is made certain. But if it depended on creature works how uncertain it would be. Indeed it would be certain not to be.

It is a new and living way. God leads the blind by a way they know not, and makes crooked ways straight and rough ways smooth. If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature: old things are past away, and behold all things are become new, and all things are of God. Paul said, I am crucified with Christ, yet I live, yet not I: but Christ liveth in me, and the life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me. If ye then be risen with Christ seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Sit your affection on things above, and not on things on earth, for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God, and when Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

OBITUARIES

MARY TAYLOR.

Sister Taylor was a member of the church at the Falls of Tar River, perhaps 40 years, leading a blameless life in her devotion to truth and the duties of her station. She was firm and decided in her manner and loved her church and the followers of Jesus. She was sensible of her weakness and sinfulness, having been taught years ago the vile, guilty and helpless nature of man. Her convictions were severe, strong and clear, and her deliverance very happy. This led her to love the Primitive Baptists, and her lot was cast with them, being disposed of the Lord.

About twelve years ago her husband, brother Patrick Taylor, was called away the day he was seventy years old. He, too, was a faithful member at the Falls of Tar River, and had been perhaps about thirty years, and was much beloved by the church for his quiet, orderly life and his steadfastness in the faith of God's elect.

Of eleven children born unto them only three survive them. Two of them are faithful and much beloved sisters.

Sister Taylor for several years lived with her daughter in Tarboro. She was more than 77 years old when the Lord called her. She much desired to be at rest, but endured to the end in the patient waiting for the coming of the Lord Jesus.

She loved the Lord and He has her hope. She fell asleep the 26th of December, 1908, and on the next day was buried beside her husband in the presence of many people after funeral service of prayer and preaching by her pastor, P. D. Gold.

Her daughters, feel that she is at rest, and therefore they do not mourn as those that have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again them also that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

P. D. GOLD.

ADDIE LUCILE SMITH.

By request of sister Zilpha Radford and Willie R. Smith, the husband of sis'er Addie Lucile Smith, I will write a sketch of her life. Sister Smith was the daughter of brother William Massey and his wife, sister Zilphia Massey. She was born the 11th day of September, 1882, and died June the 29th, 1908, being nearly 26 years old at her death. She professed a hope in the blessed Lord in her early life, and about her 15th year united with the Primitive Baptist church at Smithfield, on the 3d day of December, 1898, and was baptized the next day, being the Sabbath morning, by the unworthy writer. She lived a consistent life as a church member from the day she united with the church to the day of her death, and not a single charge was ever brought against her. In all her christian life she was devoted to her church and pastor, always filling her seat unless providentially disappointed.

By request of her sorrowing mother, husband and brothers and sisters, I spoke comforting words from a portion of the 26th chapter of Isaiah. "Thy dead men shall live" etc., after which her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Smithfield, near the church she loved so much, there to rest, until it shall be raised in glory on the resurrection morn, forever to range in endless delight in the Eden of everlasting glory. Sister Smith was united in marriage to Willie R. Smith, of Smithfield, on the 11th day of April 1906; to them was born one daughter, Ethel Christine, who died two months after the death of its precious mother. The separation was not long. Her husband was very much devoted to her and though he was of a different persuasion (Missionary Baptist) from her, I never saw a man and wife more devoted to each other, he going with her to her church as regular as she went, and I cannot believe but that they were both Christians, for their walk in life proved it. May God, in his infinite mercy, enable them to kiss the rod with which he has afflicted them, and save us all for Christ's sake.

J. A. T. JONES.

HARRIET ANN ROBERSON.

Harriet Ann Roberson was born in Martin county, N. C., February 28, 1856, and died December 14, 1908.

She was the daughter of William E. Everett and sister of Sarah P. Everett, and was married to T. W. Roberson March 2, 1879. To them was born eight children, five boys yet survive her and also her bereaved husband, who are in deep sorrow for their loved one. She was to them a precious and loving wife and mother, and was also a good neighbor, and a kind and gentle christian woman. She united with the church at Flat Swamp at June meeting in '96 or 7, and was baptized by Elder G. D. Roberson. She loved her church and was a faithful and loving member of said church at the time of her sudden death. She was taken with a stroke of paralysis while about her dinner, near 11 o'clock, and lived until about 11 o'clock that night, and spoke only once and gently passed from the land of the dying to that blessed land where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more.

While our sister has passed away and left many loved ones to sorrow for her, her lovely life, assures us that the exchange is a blessed one with her. May the Lord by His presence comfort them and be their companion in their sad bereavement.

Affectionately,

M. T. LAWRENCE.

Treatise on Book of Joshua

After an impression rested on my mind for sometime concerning the Book of Joshua I wrote down and had printed these impressions in a pamphlet in a number of chapters. I had never read or heard preached by others the matter that came into my heart, and therefore I felt it was not a borrowed ax; hence with some willingness I committed this matter to writing. Any one desiring to read this treatise can have it by sending me 25cts, or five copies for $1.00

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

P. D. GOLD.

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

CONTINUATION OF ELDER G. W. ROWE'S TRAVEL IN N. C.

We returned then to cousin Sepnus' home, got supper and went to the church. After preaching I was introduced to little Bennie, son of the late Elder J. A. Rowe. God bless him. I then went for the first time to the home of E. D. Rowe, where I spent the night and next day. Thursday, August 20, I looked over the South Creek bottoms, a fertile section on South river, which river flows into Pamlico sound. This bottom is divided into many small farms, and is immensely fertile, but I can never write of all that was of interest to me. I spent the night at the home of old brother Dowdy and Friday, in company with brother Willie Rowe and wife, I went to Bethel church at Grantsboro. After service I b'd farewell to brother and wife, the last of my relatives met while on my trip. I spent the night at the home of brother Tingle and the next day took the train for New Bern, thence to Beaufort where I arrived at 11 o'clock a. m. Here I went to the home of Mr. Garner, whose wife is a Primitive Baptist, but an invalid. I spent the time principally at Mr. Garner's home until Monday morning at 7:30 o'clock, when I took passage on the boat that carries mail to Ocracoke. This was my first travel on water. I had traveled much among the mountains, through immense tunnels and seen many great and high mountains, but this was my first view of the ocean, and it was just as sister Bettie Whitley remarked, "That great and marvelous are tny works, O God."

Now the travel from Beaufort to Portsmouth was accompanied with many things of interest. In the first place I was tempted to take the train and go home instead of taking a journey on that water, and I stood much of the time Sunday looking out at the great waves of the ocean trying to force themselves through the inlet into the sound and wondering if I could endure the worry and fright of the boisterous waters. I was fearful that in my feeble state of health I would become seasick, having heard many people speak of seasickness. When I retired to rest Sunday night I prayed the Lord to direct me according to his will, feeling assured that nothing hurtful can befall one who is in his service. I prayed to him to let my first thoughts be on waking in the morning what he would have me do, and my first thought in the morning was to go to Portsmouth on the water instead of returning home. Then I tried to put my trust in him as I felt sure he had directed me to go on to Portsmouth. Well, our boat was run by gasoline and we had to stop at the several post offices along the coast to put off mail. It is only fifty miles from Beaufort to Portsmouth, but as our speed was seven miles an hour and stooping so often, we did not get to Portsmouth until late in the afternoon. About 11 o'clock I began thinking about my dinner, having forgotten to provide myself with anything to eat at Beaufort, and I asked Mr. Joe Morris, who had the management of the boat, what we would do about it. Mr. Morris treated me with all the courtesy that was due me, and may the Lord bless him accordingly, but he laughed at me for being hungry so soon. But I never get very hungry, still as I am accustomed to eat between 1 and 2 o'clock, I was afraid that the bouncing over the waves of Core and Pamlico sounds would make me seasick, not having anything to eat at or near the usual time, because this was indeed a strange event in my life. So when we got to Atlantic or Hunting Quarter, as it is sometimes called, Mr. Morris said we could go ashore for a little while, but to get ashore was to walk a narrow plankway about seventy-five yards long, called a wharf, and I didn't know whether or not I could walk it, as the wind was strong from the southwest. But putting my trust in God I walked that narrow-way to shore, where I intended buying some crackers and sardines, but did not succeed in getting anything at all from the two stores there. When I got back to the wharf, however, an old gentleman brought me three large biscuits and a bottle of figs. I ascertained that the old gentleman's name was Steve Mason, a firm Primitive Baptist and a great friend to the cause, so my soul was made to rejoice that God is able to provide for those in his service. Then at Hog Island there was another evidence of his goodness, when the beloved brother Steve Emory came aboard to see if I was on my way to Portsmouth, having learned of my appointments through the Landmark.

Now from here on we had the rough waters of the Pamlico to contend with and we went bouncing along over the waves two or three feet high. About 5:30 o'clock Mr. Morris pointed out to me John Satter and his skiff, and told me that Satter would take me ashore. I asked him if I was to ride the waves in that little boat? He assured me that all would be well, so at 6 o'clock I drug myself ashore at Portsmouth, feeling more dead than alive. I looked across the island which appeared desolate and my first thoughts were that I was as near out of the world as I could be and live. I was wornout with the fatigue of the journey and preaching time close at hand. My prayer was, oh Lord, wilt thou be with this poor worm at this place. We got supper at the home of brother Satter, and I lay down to rest a little before going to the place appointed for preaching, where I had good liberty, for which the Lord be praised. That night I rested well at the home of this brother, who believes in the admonishing of God's children to walk in obedience to his law. Here I met several brethren and sisters, among them the beloved brother John A. Styron, father-in-law of brother Satter. Tuesday, August 25, I visited the home of a sick brother named Styron, who said he was born and had lived most of his life there. This appeared strange to me that people could live on this island, which is only 18 inches above sea level.

Tuesday night I tried to preach again, being greatly exercised in mind on the subject of God's works and had delightful liberty. I will state here that many times in my preaching I had no liberty because I shoved those exercises aside. No, I am not an Arminian, because the Arminian expects eternal rest in good works, while I hold that good works are the means of having peace with God here in time.

And this, brother Gold, is the reason why you came out of Babylon (the missionaries) that you might serve God in his holy mountain. This you did in order that you might have peace with God. So now let your walk correspond with your talk. Dear brother, you do not need this admonition, but perhaps you and many others, myself, included, do need to be admonished to let their talk correspond with their walk, for I must have a suitable answer for the child of God who has been decoyed by the flattering charms of arminianism when they ask me why did I join the church and why do I preach, etc., and the suitable answer is that I may have peace with God in this life. These ideas cannot be set aside consistently.

Wednesday morning brother John A. Styron carried me offshore to the mail boat going south so I could get to my Wednesday night's appointment at Hog Island. Brother Steve Emory met me at the Lupton post office wharf and with his little skiff carried me around the island to his home. And a good home I found it to be. That old-fashion and simple manner of making home pleasant for the stranger that enters, prevailed. I soon found that there were others on the island who knew something of the Lord's dealing with his people. There was old brother J. W. Styron, a fisherman, in fact they were all fishermen that lived on the island except the merchants, and of course merchandising does not amount to much where there are only twenty-five families. Brother John W. Styron and his family made me welcome at their home during my stay on the island, so did brother W. W. Styron and his wife. I preached the best I could at the school house Wednesday night.

On Thursday morning the wind blew hard from the north which seemed to frighten the islanders. I told them I had seen hard winds blow from the north all my life and didn't fear them, that it was south and southwest winds that generally did the damage. But those people have trials that the islanders never sees, for just nine years ago wind blew the water up on Hog Island and Portsmouth, until it came into the houses. Brother Emory showed me where the water came into his house about eighteen inches above the floor, and those people knew the horrors. Hence their fear. Well it was dark and cloudy with hard winds, and I thought about those winds in the winter season when the weather is cold and not a hill anywhere to turn the force of the wind, what a desolate place it must be. Dark Thursday was followed by a dark Friday, which can indeed be remembered as the dark day of Hog Island.

I wish to say here, that every one on Hog Island treated me with the profoundest respect, whether they were Primitive Baptists or not, and my prayer is that they may be blest of the Lord. Friday passed bringing Saturday with the wind still blowing and the waves of Pamlico sound beating hard against the little island which, like Portsmouth, was eighteen inches above sea level and this day was the day for me to preach at Cedar Island, and to get there we had to cross the strait that separates Cedar Island from Hog Island. Brother Emory said we could not go as it was too dangerous getting back home. But far as I was concerned I would not have to come back, besides I had been living on these people since Wednesday and I was getting worried about it. True I was not eating much on account of my poor health, but they would prepare as though I was a big eater and complained because I did not eat more. Old brother Styron asked me if I was willing to cross the water to get to Cedar Island and I answered, yes, I see others crossing constantly and I can go if your skiff can go. Dear sister Styron and sister Emory thought it remarkable that I was not any more afraid of the wind and the waves than I was, being a new-comer, so to speak, from an inland section. But dear ones, the winds and the waves can never cause me such uneasiness as the waves of trouble and the winds of sorrow that I have had so much of for many long years, even far away from the coast. The many restless nights I've spent, although tired and worn out in body and still no rest for me. Thus it was for twenty-nine years until my physical man was completely exhausted, and I am happy only when preaching the blessed gospel of Jesus.

Brother Styron said he and his wife were going to Cedar Island, and said if you want to go we will take you, so over the waves three feet high we went and landed near the church house where we met a good congregation and preached to them. From the church we went to the home of brother T. S. Goodwin, where we got dinner, and in the evening again preached to a large congregation at the school. That night we spent with Mr. L. O. Daniels, a clever gentleman living on the island. The next morning, Sunday, I again preached to them at the church. After meeting brother Styron, who said I must return with him to Hog Island, in order to take the mail boat Monday for Atlantic, where I had an appointment Monday night. So twelve of us, mostly ladies, piled into brother Styron's skiff, and after much bouncing and some wetting by the spray we arrived at brother L. W. Styron's where we got dinner and afterwards preached at the school house.

I missed the mail boat the next morning, and as there was no other way to get to Atlantic I was compelled to remain all that day and the following night with brother Styron again. The next day, Tuesday, September 1, was too stormy for the mail boat to run, so I was compelled to stay another day on the island. Now all this began to appear against me. That night about 1:30 o'clock I waked up and the house seemed to be swaying to and fro. Indeed I did not sleep any more during the night and it is true this storm did frighten me.

I determined not to get left again, so the next morning I arose early to meet the mail boat going south. Mr. Lupton brought his wife down to the wharf, as she also was going to Atlantic. But the boat did not come, as it had gone northward the day before. So Mr. Lupton suggested that we three go to Atlantic on his skill as the storm had abated and a pleasant calm was on the water. We did, and thus I got away from Hog Island, a place where I will always want to go and where everybody treated me so well. I had inquired of Elder Gold if there were any Primitive Baptists along the coast and being informed there were I had a great desire to see them. Mr. Lupton's boat carried us safely, although, on account of the calm, it took us two hours and thirty minutes to make the trip of only eight miles. I had written ahead and informed the brethren at Davis and Marshallburg of the cause of my delay, but as the storm also kept the mail boat from running they did not get my card. So this was Wednesday and I was here at Atlantic when I should have been here Monday, according to the appointments published in the Landmark. But I addressed a large crowd at the home of brother Mason that night and the next day I took a southbound sail boat and landed at Davis shore with the aid of a skiff. The storm had blown down the wharf. Here I took dinner with brother T. C. Davis, rested in the afternoon and at night addressed a large crowd at the Davis home. And I want to say here that these people know as well how to listen to preaching as any I have ever seen anywhere, and this is the case on all the islands along the coast, and if the Primitive Baptists did not appreciate my visit to them they acted as though they did. Elder Lundy is pastor of these churches, but as there are so many of them he only preaches to each one quarterly. As he was on a visit to some relatives I did not see him, which I regret very much.

Friday I went to Marshalburg and to the home of sister Boyles, where I had dinner and a good rest. At night I preached at the church called Straits to a small audience and spent the night at the home of brother T. C. Lewis, where I met the venerable brother Harris, who is nearly ninety years old, but has a remarkable memory and can tell of events long past of the shore and islands. I greatly enjoyed his company.

From here brother Isaiah Wade carried me to Morehead on his fish boat. It was an interesting ride, and as I sailed along meditating over my travels in the past, the many sections of the country I had been and the beloved brotherhood I had met, and now to be permitted to enjoy such sweet fellowship as existed among the saints on these islands in the low flat country of Eastern North Carolina, my heart overflowed with gratitude to the dear Lord, for the bringing me this way. When we reached Morehead I spent the evening and took supper with brother T. W. Lawrence, then the night with brother L. M. Garner and was royally entertained. The next day, Sunday, September 6, at 3:30 p. m. I tried to preach to a small collection of the saints in the city hall and felt to have delightful liberty. Thus ended my tour in North Carolina.

Now my mind turned homeward, and a long journey it was, however in due time I arrived in Atlanta safely, and found all my people well and doing well, for which the Lord be praised. Now, before I close, I wish to express my heartfelt gratitude to Elder L. H. Hardy, for his manifest interest in my travels and may the goodness of God go ever with him is my prayer. Although I did not meet this dear man, yet he did greatly endeavor himself to me. Brethern and sisters, one and all, I thank you for all the kindness shown me and to you, Brother Gold, accept my thankfulness for publishing appointments for me.

Yours in hope,

G. W. ROWE.

31 Quinsan Road,

Shanghai, China, Nov. 15, 1908.

My Dear Aunt Bettie:

Will you again receive my message after my long silence? Personally, I care very little for apologies, but I do like to understand things. I will not, therefore, make an exhaustive apology for my very long delay in responding to your letter, but will offer the simple explanation of the situation: After I found that I was coming to China I had only three weeks in which to get ready; you can imagine the rush I had in attending to everything, and how little time was mine for writing. The letters that I wished to write had to be neglected for other imperative things—hence my silence. Having these letters unwritten I thought of course I would have ample time here to write any number of pages whenever I wished. It did not take long for that delusion to pass, however, and I realize fully now that very little of my time is to be my own. Thus it is that I have sent you no longer message than the post card. Can you understand and pardon?

It no doubt seems very strange to you to think of me as being in this faraway land. And marvelous it is that I should be here truly. The sweet part of the strangeness is, that I am just where I ought to be—just where it pleases the Lord for me to be. I cannot tell how much comfort the tenth chapter of St. John has afforded me, especially the verse which reads: "And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him for they know his voice." I need not tell you for you know well enough, that I am naturally timid, for I never had a real fear for my safety in taking the long, lonely journey from Alabama to Canada alone, nor did I feel any anxiety about the voyage across the wide mysterious ocean. How could I, when I felt in my soul such strong assurance that a divine power had opened the way for me to come to this land? Strange everything is out here, to be sure, and yet I feel so much at home, so natural, that I can only attribute the whole matter to the one whose strength is omnipotent, love all-abounding and goodness infinite. Beyond my comprehension I have wanted to write to the church at Middle Creek, sending a word, at least, of love to all. I would like to know how the church feels about my being here, and if any one feels aggrieved over it. It is needless to state that I am in no way connected with a mission board or anything of the kind. I am teaching in a self-supporting private school, composed of English speaking children—the sons and daughters of missionaries, for the greater part. I told the principal of the school in the beginning that I was a Primitive Baptist. When the opportunity came—when I knew that I must answer yes or no I earnestly sought guidance of the Lord, asking him in all the sincerity of my heart to enable me to know and do his will. For thirty-six hours I felt the weight of centuries on me; it seemed that everything was balanced—that everything favorable was counteracted by something opposite. I felt myself at a crisis, and I knew not what was the right side. I spent that day absolutely alone, so far as human companionship goes, but when I fell asleep I was still standing at the parting of the ways, as it were. The next morning when I awoke it was different. Never shall I forget the restfulness that was in my heart that Monday morning. It seemed "peace of God which passeth all understanding," and I knew that if the Lord provided the opening, if the position were really afforded me, it would be the Lord's will for me to accept. It is wonderful how the soul knows things, is it not?

And my soul d'd know for never since that sacred hour have I really felt that the Holy Spirit did not enlighten me. As you know, the position was indeed offered me, and I came, feeling that the Good Shepherd had prepared the way. I am so thankful to him for his wonderful goodness to me. I tremble when I remember how very near he is, and how unmistakably he has spoken to me. All this comes from my heart, and it is written with the deepest feeling of reverence for his precious holy name. I would love him and praise him and serve him forever, for he is indeed the Lord God, and beside him there is no other.

This part of my letter, dear aunt, is meant for the brothers and sisters at Middle Creek, if you do not mind. I would love to have them understand how strongly I felt the leading of God in the matter, and I send you love, and love for all. There is never a day that a prayerful thought does not go from my heart for you all. God keep you all and bless you abundantly with the grace of his holy spirit. Again love and good will to all.

I would like to tell you about this strange land I am in, but I have so lit-the opportunity to investigate things, and not being able to speak Chinese I can't find out many facts from the natives I do see. It is hard, if not impossible, to imagine what Chinese life is like. In the first place one wonders how human beings can exist in the midst of such poverty and such filth as one sees anywhere on the streets. They seem absolutely void of the need of cleanliness. I could name countless instances, but one will suffice. Yesterday as I was crossing one of the numerous canals that run through the city, I saw a Chinese woman stooping over the edge of the water, which was black and almost thick with the drains and refuse of the city, or more accurately which was like the water sometimes to be found in ditches in America. Well, as black and dirty as the water looked this woman was nevertheless washing her rice for supper in it. This is nothing unusual, for they have always been accustomed to using the canal water for all purposes. It does not seem strange to me any longer that the natives do not drink water. I was amazed when I first learned that, for I thought everybody drank water until I landed here.

Of course I have read about heathens and idolatry all my life, but never until yesterday did I feel just how pitiful it is. We went into a temple where there is a number of gods. On the floor before one of these a woman was kneeling and bowing alternately. Her face was so sad, so very sad, and her look was one of despair. She performed the required ceremony and then drew from some bundles she had a small strip of paper, which was supposed to contain the answer to her prayer. With this she went to the priest to get him to interpret the answer she had drawn. One would have to see the expression on her face—the combination of hope and fear and grief—to know how real it all was to her. It was no mere rite—no farce for her: all her heart was in the worship she was doing and all her faith was bound up in the interpretation the priest was giving. How eagerly, how patiently, she waited for him. When she turned from him, we knew her answer had been hopeful, for the poor creature was smiling significantly. But alas, the hollow face was still restless and I felt that her heart was hungering for that which brass and stone can never give her. But I must stop here: next time I will try to tell you more.

I trust you are well physically and may the Lord preserve you in strength in every way. My love to all the children and to all my friends whom you see.

For yourself keep a generous portion from your loving niece and affectionate sister in the hope of eternal life.

ADDIE.

May I hope to hear from you soon? The peace of Jesus be yours.

Wetville, N. C., Nov. 30, 1908.
Mr. Gold:

Dear Sir—I have thought for some time that I would write you a letter, but I feel so bad and lonely I will attempt it this morning, although I fear you will not appreciate a letter from such an unworthy soul as I am or feel to be. I have been in trouble a long time and it seems I can't get rid of it. I have read the Bible nearly through and sometimes I find a place where I think there is a chance for me to be saved, and then I have doubt myself so much I am afraid I will not be.

Other trouble I have seen for the past six months. I cannot tell you how much I went to the Wilson Sanatorium last April for an operation, and had to send my dear little children to my sister's to stay, and I felt as if it would kill me to leave them so long. I thought I should never see them again. But the good Lord spared me to come home and find them all well. I was happy, but it did not last long. I came home the first day of May and on the first of June I lost the dearest thing on this earth to me—my little girl. She was 8 years and 2 weeks old the day she died, and was not sick but four days. She was a bright, sweet child and loved her mother and father. She said to her father, "I am going home, come and go with me." I was sick myself at the time and could not be in the room.

When I was in the Sanatorium at Wilson you would pass my door going to see Mr. Radford and Mrs. Woodard, who were sick there at the same time, and I wished you would come in and see me, but you didn't know me then.

Don't think I have just thought of my Lord since my trouble started. I have always loved the Baptists. I was raised by a Baptist mother and always believed she was right. Some friend sent me a Landmark last week and you don't know how glad I was to get it and I did not stop until I read it through.

My mother is a member of Sappony and loves her church as well as anybody, I think.

Will you please tell me what you think of our knowing each other after death? Do you think we will know each other if we meet in heaven? Please tell me and pray for me and my two little boys that we may meet them that have gone before, and that have left us so sad and lonely.

Mr. Williford is sick and we don't have any regular preacher, but if we did have how glad I would be.

I hear the association will be held here next fall. I hope so and hope to hear you preach, and will, if I am spared to go.

I wish I could tell you my feelings, but I can't, so will close. Please answer the questions I have asked, and pray to the Lord to lead me right and to show me the straight and narrow path, for I am a poor broken hearted sinner that wishes to do right in the sight of God. Love to all the Baptists, and I hope to be one of them sometime.

Your friend,

ALICE BAKER,

Remarks—It doth not yet appear what we shall be; therefore no mortal man can tell. We shall know as we are known in the resurrection life.

The redeemed in the resurrection life shall be satisfied. There will be no ignorance there, no darkness, no distress, no unsupplied want. Those that are saved will be satisfied when they awake with the likeness of Jesus.

There is only one way to heaven, and in that way there is no failure, and none ever pass that but such as are saved. Jesus is that way. He saves sinners. The son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

I feel somewhat impressed to write to you tonight for the first time in several weeks. I can't express my feelings of late, and I haven't had but very little mind to write to any one—have felt that I was almost dead in regard to spiritual life. I have often tried to examine myself closely to see if I could find any life at all, and some times I have been almost to the place to give up and say no, there is not any there and never has been. But just before I would completely give up in despair some comforting word or thought would come in my mind and cheer me up and strengthen my little hope again and I would feel that there was a little life yet remaining. And while I was at the association, at Scott's church, I was made to rejoice within and say I know not my Redeemer liveth. I received a feast to be long remembered. But, my dear brother, I feel very sad tonight indeed. I received news late this evening that our dear and beloved pastor, Elder M. B. Williford, was very sick. He has been sick a good while, but had a very severe chill yesterday evening and is worse off than ever. I went to see him yesterday evening, and he seemed to be real bright nearly all the time I was there, but was taken with a chill just before I left him. He seemed to want me to talk to him, but I was afraid I would worry him and would only stay at his bedside a short while at a time. Today his fever is so high the doctor don't want any one in the room but one or two of the family.

Brother Gold, it is very, very sad to us all, especially me, that he has been so faithful in caring and looking over as a dear loving pastor. He has been through heat and cold to serve us, and often came when he was hardly able to do so. It grieves me to feel that perhaps he will soon be taken from us, and we will no more have the pleasure of hearing his welcome voice proclaiming the wonderful works and the great love of our crucified Redeemer or ever to see his pleasant face again. But there is one great consolation to us that when he passes from this earth that he will reach eternal happiness, where he will never know any more sorrow or have to suffer again. And I know the Lord's will must be done, and as he said yesterday evening, I do desire to be reconciled to his will. My mind this evening has been much on our dead pastors, the two that have been called from earth to heaven—Elders B. C. Pitt and Wm. H. Fly—and also our present one, and while I was thinking about them the question arose in my mind, am I wrong in talking and writing about them so much. And the answer soon came, no, they were and are worthy of every good word that can be said about them. And we should always hold such men of God in sweet remembrance. And Brother Gold, I feel that I do and hope that I will as long as there is any breath in this mortal body of mine, for they have all been fathers to me; they have all looked over and cared for me as a dear, loving father does his child in all my sad bereavements and great trials that I have had to pass through. They have stood by me and were always ready to lend a helping hand and would often cheer my drooping mind with some comforting word, and would often visit me at my humble home and administer to me and my little fatherless children as the Lord so impressed them to do. My dear brother, I don't feel that I can say, write or think too much about such friends, indeed do you? Brother Williford has been a source of comfort to me, and is one of the greatest consolers I ever met. He always has some cheering word to say to God's little ones, when he meets them, and especially if they are in trouble, and if it can be the blessed Lord's will, how glad we would be if he could be spared to us a long time yet.

Brother Gold, we know how it is to be left at our little church without a pastor. How destitute and lonely we feel, although the Lord has greatly blest us there in our bereavement, and I hope we feel thankful to him for the many rich blessings that he has bestowed on us.

I often feel, Brother Gold, that if I am one of that blest number that I am the very least and weakest of them all. I realize it more and more each day I live, and the more of my imperfections I see I am often made to cry out Lord have mercy on me. I arise some mornings with a great heaviness on me, a burden that I can't get rid of myself, and then I am a poor beggar. Some times it is on me all day and some times it is removed before night and I am made to rejoice in one that hast delivered, doth deliver and in whom I hope will still deliver. I go mourning a good portion of my time because I don't live as I wish to. I want to live as a christian should live, but I feel like the older I get the farther from it I live, and it greatly troubles me at times, for if I know my heart desire is to live in honor to my heavenly Father and travel that straight and narrow way that leads to life everlasting, and not be turning into those little no-harm places as I saw so plain in a vision one night.

My dear brother Gold, I saw the way so plain before me and it led to a beautiful city, and there was a dear brother standing near me and I pointed the way to him, and I said to him my dear brother, I want to be a whole-soul Primitive Baptist, and I want my walk to be as straight as that path before me. I don't want to turn neither to the right nor to the left, but I want to march straight forward to that beautiful city. I could not see the city, but I knew it was at the end of that path, and I could see those little beautiful places, to the eye, on both sides and the trouble we would get into by stepping aside into them. I was not sound asleep for I had just closed my eyes and as soon as I saw this I opened them again, and it was all so quick, the city was not very far, and I very often feel that if I am traveling that straight and narrow way that I will not have to go much farther, and my journey will soon be at an end, for I plainly saw that it was not far off. But if it can be my happy lot to reach that beautiful city how happy I will be. It is a sweet resting place for a poor and weary traveler.

Brother Gold, I did not intend to have my letter so lengthy when I commenced, but hope you will pardon me. May the Lord continue to be with us all and have mercy on us, and protect us from all the evils to come is the desire of one that begs to him daily.

Remember me at the throne of grace.

Your sister I hope,

MATTIE LUPER.

P. S.—Since writing the above I have heard our pastor is some better.

Dear Brother Gold:

Enclosed find a letter which I send for publication if your good judgment approves it.

Yours very truly,

LEVI J. H. MEWBORN.

I have Elder Hardy's permission to send it to you. I am suffering considerably with rheumatism in my back.

Yours truly,

L. J. H. M.

Reidsville, N. C., Dec. 26, 1908.

Dear Uncle Levi:

I am thinking of you and must write a word or two. Your good letter came to hand, and it makes my heart rejoice to know that there is at least one left who feels my sorrows with me. Then I rejoice in the blessed hope that there is one more, even Jesus, the great high priest of our holy new covenant. It is exceedingly good to have a sympathizer, but so much better to have one who is able and willing, and who will bear all the burdens.

None but our Lord can do it. The whole kingdom with its magicians, soothsayers, astrologers nor Chal-deans could read one word of their sure destiny that should so soon overtake them in their terrible wickedness. The Lord God had sent the hand and ordered the writing. He had also blinded the eyes of the Babylonians so that the folly of their wisest men should fully appear. However, there was one in whom was the Holy Spirit of eternal righteousness even in Babylon and to him God gave wisdom to read and to interpret this mystery of mysteries that had so baffled the skill of the wise men of Babylon. This wise man, this humble servant of the living God read the writing and gave the interpretation. The King knew it was true and the experience of that truth was then upon him.

This great Babylon was overthrown in its own debaucheries and they could raise complaint against no one, for they saw that the thing was decreed by the Most High, and they must go down under his just judgments.

Every word in the Bible concerning spiritual Babylon is a Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin that they, with all of their great wisdom and knowledge, cannot read. The thing is sure, the Lord, Most High, has appointed the overthrow and it must come at the very time appointed.

The people of God have already felt this in their hearts and have confessed their sins in the righteous judgment of the Lord and have experienced the words of John, "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." How good this is? The wicked are not so, they have no hands in their death. Death and destruction are on them and they promise themselves long life and many days with much prosperity. They know not that sudden destruction will surely overtake them and destroy them.

Remember that this writing was on the wall. It is there yet, speaking spiritually. It makes no more impression on the wall of the heart than all writing did on the palace wall of Babylon and is as little understood by those against whom it is written as that old writing was.

The same spirit that was in Daniel and endowed him with understanding and boldness to speak to the king and his subjects the truth of his overthrow is yet here in the true servants of the living God by which they are endowed with wisdom and boldness to declare the sure end of Babylon, The Great, The Mother of Harlots, The Abominations of the Earth. Then the message was received and the prophet honored (Dan. 5:29), but now the servants who faithfully proclaim the truth are, "Hated of all men," for Jesus' sake, just according to his word.

Here is another writing: It is deep down in the hearts of the poor and the contrite ones who tremble at the word of the Lord. It is not a writing of destruction, but of life and peace by Jesus Christ our Lord. It is mercy. It is written by an invisible hand and indelably fixed in the mind. Winds, waters, fires, the destructions of seas nor all the destructive elements of this world can ever erase one word, for the mouth of God has performed.

This handwriting comes only to the inhabitants of the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, and is to them an assurance of their rightful heirship to their entire inheritance.

In entering upon this inheritance they have to bear the image of the earthly. That image was one of suffering. He was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. So must all be who bear this image. However, that image assures us that we shall bear the image of the heavenly. In this the inheritance of eternal light and glory is assured and a kingdom of which there shall be no end. None can see this writing, but those in whose hearts it is written and they read it in all of their experience. However unlearned they are in human literature, they read this hand writing with all clearness and there is not one word of any unknown tongue in it. As they read it they rejoice in it because instead of it containing the decree of death and a destroyed kingdom, it gives sure signs of life and peace and a king and kingdom to continue forever.

What need we to care for the things of this world as long as we have this blessed covenant in our hearts? Are the troubles and sorrows we have here able to get our names and our share of this inheritance out of this writing? God forbid. No, this is one of the promises, "In the world you shall have tribulation." However, that is offset with this, "Be not dismayed, I have overcome the world," and, "In me you shall have peace."

That is good enough and we will rest in his love forever.

Your loving nephew,
L. H. HARDY.

A TOUR IN NORTH CAROLINA. Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—By the request of many of the brethren and sisters, and after some delay, I will try to give a short sketch of my trip through North Carolina.

I left home November 9 and reached Danville, Va., my first appointment, where I met with a good crowd and had reasonable liberty. I was conveyed next day, the 10th, by Mr. Foster, a precious friend to the cause, but not a member, to Oak Grove, where we had wonderful liberty in speaking both day and night. The church here has only four members, but there are many outside who manifest a wonderful interest in the cause. Brethren in the ministry remember this little church when passing through here.

I spent the night with old brother Watlington and the next day much to my delight, was conveyed by his dear son and daughter to Old Country Line church. Here we met a small crowd, but had a good meeting. We were conveyed from here by a Mr. King to Elder Y. I. Chandler, where we spent a pleasant night and then to Bush Arbor church, where we met a large crowd and were wonderfully favored to speak of the mighty works of King Emmanuel. From here we were conveyed by a Mr. Rudd to the home of Elder F. L. Oakley, deceased, where we spent a pleasant night with old sister Oakley and her son. The next day we were conveyed by Mr. John Oakley to McRay, where we met a small crowd, but had a good meeting. Here we were met by a Mr. Turner, who took us to his home, where we had dinner, and from there to Burlington, where at night we were blessed to speak something of the goodness and mercy of God to a small crowd and afterwards spending a pleasant night with Elder W. C. Jones. Here we were met by a young Mr. Johnson and conveyed twenty-two miles to Big Meadow church, where there was such a downpour of rain only a small number was present, but we tried to speak with some liberty. Here we spent the night with sister Joannah Johnson and tried to speak again. From here we were conveyed to Brush Creek church by Mr. Cicero Johnson, where we met a good crowd, but was so hoarse could not talk much. Here we spent the night with brother H. W. Johnson.

Our next appointment was at Mt. Tabor, but was unable to reach it, so I was conveyed to Siler City, where I boarded the train for Star and was met by brother Henry Tucker and taken to his home, where I spent a pleasant night. The next day brother Tucker took me to Sugg's Creek, where we met a good crowd and had good liberty in preaching. From here I was conveyed to the home of old brother Nathan Tucker, where I spent the night and next day met a small crowd at White Oak Spring, but had a good meeting. From here I went to Star, where I boarded the train for Peachland and reached there at about 10 o'clock p. m., November 19, and spent the night at the hotel. At Lawyer's Springs the next day, where I had an appointment, I met the much-beloved brother J. E. Williams, and was with him eight days. Here we had a wonderful meeting and here was the first time I heard Elder Williams preach. From here we went to brother Henry Baucom's for dinner, and from there to old Mr. and sister Ruffin Griffin's, where we spent a pleasant night. Then to Pleasant Grove, where we met a large crowd and were made to feel the Lord was in the arrangement. From here we went to brother J. A. Jones, where we found a kind home, and from there to Watson church, at their regular meeting, Saturday and Sunday, where we met a large crowd and enjoyed wonderful liberty both days. Here we met Elder J. F. Mills, who seems to be a standard-bearer in Israel. We spent Saturday night with a Mr. Brown, who seemed to be as much stirred by the Spirit of God as any many we ever saw. I was made to say God bless him. From here we were conveyed by brother T. A. McClelan to his lovely home, where we spent a delightful night, and the next day to Union Grove church, where we met a goodly number and where we had another good meeting. Here we were met by brother J. J. Hill and taken to his home, where we feel we stayed with a father in Israel. From here we went to Liberty church, where we met a good crowd and felt we had the presence of the Lord with us. We then went to the home of brother W. E. Williams and had a meeting the next day at Highhill church, where we met with the most wonderful meeting of our life.

I have never seen more love and union manifested at any meeting. We were conveyed from here by brother Tomy Brown to his lovely home, where we had a night meeting by Elders T. E. and H. E. Williams. From here we were taken by brother Brown to Crooked Creek church, where we met a good crowd and had wonderful liberty again and enjoyed the meeting much. We spent the night with Mr. John Biggus, who is a good warm friend to the Baptists, and was conveyed by him to Clark's Grove, where we had another good meeting, but a sad parting from Elder Williams, who here left me. He is an able defender of old-time Baptist doctrine and preaches that all sinners are saved by grace and love, and he stands firm for the old landmarks. The whole tenor of his preaching and conversation is "the old time religion." What a lovely yoke fellow he is to travel with. I spent the night with brother S. B. Tucker and was conveyed by him to Running Creek, where we had two days' meeting and met Elder Treece, who is an able young gift. We had a good meeting both days. From here we were conveyed by our much-esteemed friend, Mr. Frank Burris, to Concord, and at night tried to preach at his home. Here our appointments became confused and we stopped for two days at Lexington, where Elder C. A. Davis and myself had a good meeting. From here we boarded the train for home and arrived December 2 and found all well, for which we felt thankful to the good Lord.

I will say I met with the greatest liberty and ease of mind on this trip that I ever had. For eight years I had impressions to make this trip. I found nothing new among the churches; all seemed to be in place.

Will say in conclusion to the many dear brethren, sisters and kind friends I met with that I thank you much for your kindness to me while with you and would be glad to hear from any of you that wish to write to me.

Dear ones, remember me at the throne of grace.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—It is with great pleasure, after being confined to my room and bed four weeks from December 1, 1908, with a serious attack of erysipelas in my left leg and side, it is a great pleasure to be out again. I was skillfully treated by Drs. Ross, Bassett and Simmons, of Martinsville, Va. But I fear I will be a cripple as long as I am permitted to remain on this earth.

While I was suffering such excruciating pain my mind was directed to the church and going forth in my feeling for her welfare created a great desire to get well, that I might go and defend my Master's cause. I then thought if I were restored I would obey the impression of my mind and visit some parts of the country I have never been. If not deceived I have been impressed to go to Eastern North Carolina and the southern parts of Virginia. I still think I will try to visit these parts of the Lord's vineyard this year if it is the Lord's will.

I was blest to meet many brethren last year I had never seen before, and some of them I shall never meet again on earth. But faith springs up a thought that I shall meet them when we have crossed the chilly waters, where our friendship will be nearer, and our union dearer.

We have now passed out of the date of 1908, with its joys and sorrows, which we have all shared a portion of. Some have left lasting impressions not to be forgotten by us: for we cherish the memory of some of these events and look forward with anticipating joy for their renewal.

Brother Gold, I gave brother Jones subscription for the Landmark in May, 1884, and have been a constant reader of this periodical ever since. I feel it has been a source of great comfort to me, and a welcome visitor at my house, and I hope that my seven children, though wild and mischievous now, may read it when I am no more, and may it be the will of God to impress them with the truth contained in its columns.

I hope the Lord will bless you in your declining age, and sustain you and spare you many more years to preach and publish the Landmark for us as dear sister Edwards set forth in her article.

The brethren ought to consider your trials and fields of labor, and come to your relief.

Love to you and sister Gold, and all the household of faith every where.

A. B. PHILPOTT.

Remark—I live in Eastern North Carolina and desire to express the wish that you may be directed of the Lord to visit us in this section.

Though you have never been here that I am aware of, but when our brethren hear you then you will not be a stranger to us.

A QUESTION.

Lamar, Col., Dec. 15, 1908

Dear Brother Gold:

I cannot see why all the Old Baptists cannot see alike upon the glorious doctrine of the blessed Bible; and why some want to fetch in some new things, and add to or take from the good old way that Jesus and the apostles and prophets taught. It seems to me that the old way is the best way, and the only way that could comfort a child of God. So my advice would be to all to preach a whole Saviour, the author and finisher of our faith.

W. C. PERDUE.

Remarks—It looks strange to us to see neglectings, breakings over, transgressing and departures from the true way and the only true way.

When I was a boy I was fond of reading the historical part of the Bible, it may be so called, the Jewish nation, the kings and judges, and how they would prosper when they served God, and how they were afflicted when they forsook the right way. It looked to me like surely they could see the great reward in serving the Lord, and the certainty of distress befalling them when they denied the only Lord God.

But these things were written for our admonition on whom the ends of the world are come. Are we better than they? No, in no wise. Do we act with more wisdom? No. The apostles exhorted the churches to peace. The Lord Jesus prayed that his people might all be one—that they should all speak one and the same thing in Christ Jesus. For a brief time it appears on and after the day of Pentecost they were all in one place, and all with one accord, and had all things common, and no one called any thing his own, and there was great peace, and they all abode steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship. Then there was but one doctrine, and the Holy Ghost enabled the apostles to declare that doctrine, for they spoke as the Spirit gave them utterance.

It was not long before trouble came in or sprang up. Like it was when Israel walked dry shod through the Red Sea and left all their troubles in Egypt. When they crossed over the sea they sang a wonderful song. They all sang it, and they thought all their sorrows were drowned and they should see their troubles no more forever. There was no discord, nor strife on that day. They sang a new song of praise without one discordant note. But only a few days elapsed before murmurings arose, and ugly charges against God and Moses were heard. Why hast thou brought us into this wilderness to kill us all? We had plenty in Egypt. Why did we leave there? The seeds, germs, sprouts and coals of this malevolence are slumbering as a volcano when we do not know it. We are astonished ourselves when the plague breaks forth. Some man who thinks himself higher from the shoulders up than others, and who wants to be considered smart, sound, deep and gifted, a great discoverer of myteries, and a deep expounder and an expert and valient defender rises up. It matters not what new and strange thing he may preach or advance, some will follow him, and soon a party is found and trouble rises up and spreads.

Our common snare of Israel of old was their proneness to adopt part of the heathen worship. They loved to worship in high places. Pride was a snare to them. They wanted to be like the nations around them. They would leave off or neglect part of the worship, or they would bring in something else beside what God commanded. The germs of these immoral, corrupt things, these lusts of the flesh, were in them and when opportunity offered they broke out. The same things are in our nature now and cause our troubles. To deny self and mortify the old man and put off his deeds is a business we do not like. To be humble, to be counted as nobody, and not to be known only as the humblest and follow Jesus only, is what flesh and blood cannot do and do not desire to do. Hence these heresies and confusion.

We should still labor though for peace. He that endures unto the end the same shall be saved. The blessing is still on the peacemaker, and on all that pray for the peace of Jerusalem, and that walk in the good old way.

P. D. G.

COMPLAINTS.

Men do things sometimes that they know before hand will give offence, but when blamed they become much offended and appear to be greatly surprised.

For instance, Primitive Baptists are noted for cleaving to what they have professed in a religious way, especially to customs of worship the denomination has adopted. But now and then a part of them desire new and more fashionable things, and will introduce them under the plea of expediency, or that it will strengthen the denomination to do so. For instance, young people have gone to literary schools and become so charmed with instrumental music that they will not attend worship where there are no organs used in the church houses. So some churches have adopted their use. This gives offense to others, and there is a conflict, a clamor against those that uphold such a practice, and a division is produced.

Now who has made the trouble? It is those who depart from the recognized way and custom among the denomination. They have introduced new things objectionable in departing from the old things preferable. Why should such innovators become offended when they are opposed? What right have they to do such a thing??

Years ago I became dissatisfied with the people I was living with, and, being unable to reconcile myself to their practices, I left them and went to another denomination. I expected the people I left to be offended, and did not blame them for so being, for they had a right to consider me in the light of an innovator. I felt that I should say nothing against the people I had left, nor in defense of the ones I became associated with, until I was called upon publicly to give my reasons for my conduct. Then I felt it my duty to do this.

When I become so dissatisfied with a people that I cannot respect their rules and practices, but must adopt some other rules that I know will give offense, then I will have the courage to leave the said party alone. That would be giving them less trouble, doing them less wrong, than by bringing in things among them detrimental to their faith and practice.

The Primitive Baptists are known generally to be opposed to the money schemes of other denominations, and opposed to the use of organs in their places of worship. Now if I want to have organs, and adopt the monied systems of the day, let me go to a denomination that has them. Such denominations are numerous. I could find them everywhere.

P. D. G.

WHAT?

What is it that is not included in the scripture that declares, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose," Rome 8:28.

Does impure religion work for good to such characters as are the chosen of God? Do the enemies of the cross of Christ that persecute the people of God serve any purpose of God to them? Did Job's three friends that so greatly distressed him serve any good purpose to Job? Are those that preach falsehood and make empty the soul of the hungry serve any good purpose for the chosen of God? Is there any need for such as pervert the word of the Lord by falsely expounding the word? Many exhortations on what we consider the Arminian side—preaching a conditional salvation to men: now is there any need for this? Judas with others killed the prince of life with wicked hands. What act was more wicked; yet what act has brought greater glory to God or such blessings to men? Every reproof, rebuke, exhortation as well as every promise is needful to the child of God.

One of the little ones visits a place of worldly amusement or of folly, and sees and hears things to his hurt and shame. Now what good is there in that to him? If he had been what he ought to be he would not have gone there. But having a false spirit in him that sought things wrong the devil's sheriff fell afoul of him, and gave him a beating and bruising that taught him a needed lesson. For the briars and thorns of the wilderness fall heavily on such as wander in forbidden paths. While we labor in the Lord's vineyard we need not fear the enemy. When one is disobedient is he loving God? It requires the rod for the fool's back. This does not work for his good but it is evil. However he being in this state of disobedience the distress is the best thing for him, and it will bring him in the way he should go, and in the end he shall see the good of the Lord in the land of the living.

Remember this wonderful scripture applies to them that love God. It is true that all things (nothing excluded) that affect the lover of God do work together for his good. All things work together for good to such as love God, and are called according to his purpose.

P. D. G.

DEFENSE.

Paul said he was set for the defense of the gospel. Did he ever call on the arm of the law or make an appeal in politics as a means of furthering the gospel? When the prophets or apostles were persecuted they fled into other cities, but did not resort to the sword of man, or the arm of the law to enable them to prosecute their measures. Peter drew his sword to defend Christ who said to Peter, Put up thy sword. They that take the sword shall perish by the sword. Jesus said he could call on his Father who would give him more than twelve legions of angels, but how then should the scriptures be fulfilled—that thus it must be—that He was to suffer thus by the will of his Father. Jesus did not resort to nor call for the interference of the law of the land to help him in the execution of his purpose, or to obtain power over others. Jesus sought no help of man, nor did he make any appeals for aid from men; but He committed his entire case to his Father, and wholly trusted him for all results. The meekness of Jesus stands out as inimitable and unapproachable in its beauty and perfection. When Jesus was brought up before Pilate he made no effort to be released. Indeed for that purpose he came into the world.

There never has been any league between true religion or its propagators, and the politics of the world, or the laws of earthly kingdoms. Jesus said my kingdom is not of this world.

What would you think to read of Paul or Peter or John petitioning earthly officers or powers of men to help them to enforce the tenets of their faith or doctrine? We should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Those possessed of this faith are the ones to earnestly contend for that faith once delivered to them. We are kept by the power of God through faith. We are to prove the holy origin of that faith by enduring as seeing Him who is invisible.

We are to submit to the powers that be or the laws of the land, and render unto Cesar the things that belong to Cesar, and render unto God the things that belong to God. But all the increase of the planting or labor of the gospel preacher is to come from God.

When God called his people out of Egypt he did not call on Pharaoh to help the Lord in delivering Israel. God made Pharaoh willing to let them go, but not to enact any laws for that purpose.

When Israel entered the land of Canaan the Canaanites were not required to enact any laws to aid Israel. When Israel was delivered from Babylon there was no power of Babylon to help them. God slew the enemies of Israel—the Egyptians—the Canaanites—and the Babylonians. He delivers his chosen people. There is never a confederacy between the people of God and the powers of earth.

For the law of Jesus our lawgiver:

being higher than any earthly law, and the power of God being a gracious and far more glorious power its character is shown in the refusal of the followers of Jesus to call on the help of man. When Daniel's enemies conspired to destroy him he obeyed God as much in that threatened hour as at any other time. Nor did the three Hebrews who were taken before Nebuchanezzar and threatened with being consumed in the overheated furnace resort to any aid of earthly law to deliver them.

Jesus said to his disciples that when they were brought up before rulers to give an account of their manner of preaching, or to make a defense, they were not to think beforehand what they should say. For an answer should be given them in that hour that all their adversaries could not gainsay. Stephen's accusers who were the political leaders and rulers could not resist his speech; yet they put him to death; but what a wonderful victory was his?

The very fact that the advocates of any form of religion call on the secular arm or power of the law to aid them is an acknowledgment of the weakness of their cause. The God whom we serve is able to deliver us, and if he delight in us he will deliver us.

Every good gift and every perfect gift comes from God, and no earthly power, law or force has ever been able to help the God of heaven in any sense in the administration of his government. When Pilate representing the powers of earth set a seal on the tomb of the crucified Jesus it did nothing in preventing the resurrection of the glorious Lord. When Saul's authority from the officers of the law was being used to hale men and women and commit them to prison, that power and light above the brightness of the sun had mercy on the prosecuting Saul, and made him a wonderful preacher of Jesus.

The powers of earthly governments or of the world have never understood the wisdom and grace of God. He that is a friend of the world is the enemy of God.

In glorious submission to God's will, in preaching his power, in showing that love and faith that make the lover of Jesus endure all things for the elect's sake, and to glory in being counted worthy to suffer persecution for Jesus sake, is given divine and gracious proof that greater is the power that is in us than the power that is in the world.

P. D. G.

"And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal 3:29.

They which are of faith are the children of Abraham. God made promise to Abraham, before the law was given, and in this promise is the covenant of grace or the gospel covenant. The faith of Christ in Abraham was such as made him the father of many nations; for Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed."

Then Abraham stood up anterior to the giving of the law as type of all divine blessings of faith, which is of Christ, and the law was given to show the necessity of salvation by grace. Hence the law is a schoolmaster until Christ come. The school master merely trains the children put in his charge, so the law does its work of showing those under it their vileness and inability to perform, and every one under it is brought in guilty. But Jesus was made a curse for his people, and when he comes who is made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, it is that we might receive the adoption or liberty of sons. Here, then, in this adoption, is freedom in this blessed sonship. Until the coming of Jesus, the heirs were under tutelage and bondage, and differed nothing from servants; but when Jesus came, and redeemed the heirs, they became dead to the law by the body of Christ, and are alive unto God in and by the resurrection of Jesus; and if we be Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Christ is greater than all. Therefore to be in Christ guarantees all the blessings. If God give you Christ, how shall he not with him also freely give you all things? The faith of Christ was prominent and conspicuous in Abraham, who against hope believed in hope—who staggered not at the deadness of Sara's womb—who withheld not his only son Isaac from sacrifice, thereby approaching in the type to show that God would give his only begotten Son through love to redeem sinners.

The faith of Abraham embraced the promises, and held them, counted those things that be not as though they were, accounting that God was able to raise Isaac from the dead, and he received him in the figure, and saw Jesus. This precious faith sees beyond and above the law which is the ministration of death; looks beyond the dreadful wilderness of death, and beholds the land of promise. It also works by love, and therefore overcomes the world, and lays hold on the hope set forth in the gospel, and receives the end of faith, even the salvation of the soul.

Abraham is called the father of the faithful because it dwelt so wonderfully in him. To be blest, therefore, so as to dwell in his bosom, and to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God, is to dwell in the promises of God, and in the fullness of the gospel, in its liberty as free-born, in its fullness as in Christ Jesus. These blessings are freely given to them that are in Christ Jesus, "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

P. D. G.

CHIPS.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbor. If a man loves me he does not wrong me. If I love another I cannot wrong him.

Busy bodies in other men's matters have none of their own to attend to. The more of such business as this one does the more mischief he causes.

Election is a glorious theme to dwell upon. Those that are candidates for worldly offices gives much diligence to secure them, and are often defeated. But no one that gives diligence to make his own election sure in matters of a gracious salvation ever fails. If we were to give half the attention to eternal matters that we do to our temporal affairs how much better would it be for us?

If each one of us were as anxious to hide a brother's failings or faults as we are to hide or excuse our own how much happier we would be: and if each one of us were as severe in condemning our own faults as we are the faults of our brethren then we would have so much to do at home that we would seldom take up the case of our neighbors, for our own case would always be first as we know it first, and first come first served.

If each one of us would vote for his own government, or vote for a law to govern himself, as much as to govern others, then we would have a far greater equality. As we would that others should do to us we should do to them. What I want another to do to me I should do to him. If I want a man to divide his goods with me let me begin at home and first divide with him, and stop there, for I have then done my part. If I expect him to divide with me because I have divided with him then I am selfish and wrong.

Happy is the man that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth. I am not to make a rule for another, nor allow to myself that which I would condemn in another. To govern one's self is the greatest of all ruling.

P. D. G.

January 4, 1909.

To the Readers of Zion's Landmark:

Dear Friends—I have been impressed for the last three or four weeks to ask you through the Landmark to help Elder Gold, and today when I read Miss Louisa Edward's appeal to her brethren and sisters in behalf of Elder Gold the tears were made to trickle down my cheeks, and I had to lay the Landmark up and leave the room, and went off to my work with the tears still trickling: and the impression came fresh and with force which made me willing to make the attempt (whether this is of the Lord or not I know not), you can be your own judge.

What I wish to ask is this (one hundred):

Are there not one hundred readers of the Landmark whom God has blessed with a sufficiency of this world's goods, and can feel a willingness in their hearts to give Elder Gold and wife ten dollars; and another one hundred five dollars, and others to give more or less as God has blest them. God loves a cheerful giver.

Now, my friends, a few words and I am done. Elder Gold is getting old and has spent the prime of his life in the ministry, and God has blest him to preach the word to the comfort and edification of his dear children, or in other words to feed the sheep and lambs, as I hope I was the last time I heard him preach. He has also edited the Landmark with a gift from on high.

Now friends, shall we allow the Landmark to be discontinued for the want of funds and Elder Gold with his gray hairs go down to the grave in bankruptcy and ruin, and you to regret that you have not done your duty?

Friends, if Elder Gold has ministered to us in spiritual things is it unreasonable that you should minister to him of your carnal things? Many of you in writing to Elder Gold wish him well, but that is like wishing one to be clothed, fed and warmed without furnishing the means to be clothed, fed and warmed. Christ said if you do not love the brother whom you have seen how can you love him whom you have not seen?

James says that faith without works is dead. So love without proper manifestation is worthless. Now, if you see a brother in need and your bowels of compassion do not move in his behalf it is very poor evidence that the love of God is shed abroad in your hearts: and how will you let your light shine? Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you.

May God bless you to properly consider this and do your duty.

YOUR FRIEND.

Remark—The friend who wrote the above has sent me $10 as a gift. He desires his name kept back from publication. I did not know that sister Louisa Edwards or he intended to write as they have until I received their communication, having never hinted such a thing to either of them, or any one else. However, they have stated the truth. I am in debt and very much in need of help.

If my friends come to my rescue it will greatly relieve me. If the Lord is in the matter deliverance will come. It would be much pleasanter to me in the flesh never to name money in this sense.

OBITUARIES

SARAH F. LEA.

Elder P. D. Gold.

Dear Friend—It is with a very sad heart this dreary morn that I endeavor to write you a few lines concerning the death and sufferings of my dear and aged aunt Sarah F. Lea. She was the daughter of Wm. M.

and Elizabeth Lea and was the oldest child of a family of thirteen children. Aunt Sarah was born September 25, 1833, and died August 23, 1908, making her stay on this earth 74 years and eleven months. She leaves one brother and eight sisters, with a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She made an open profession of religion in early life and united herself with the Primitive Baptist church at Wheelers some time during the war, being baptized in full fellowship by Elder Andrew Hall; then in 1866, it being nearer her home, she moved her membership by letter to Prospect Hill church, where she remained a faithful member until her death.

Aunt Sarah was taken down to her bed some time in March with a serious heart and kidney trouble and suffered untold agony. All that loved ones and physicians could do was done with but little relief. She was so short of breath she would often think she was dying and call her four maiden sisters that she was living with to her and tell them good-bye, that she was gone, but soon she would revive again, and once during her illness she was able to go to her meals for a short while. All that seemed to be on her mind during her illness was Jesus, and him crucified. She did not seem to enjoy hearing anyone speak of worldly things and would often say all she craved was Jesus and be like him. Just a few days before her death she asked her youngest sister and niece that was there to sing "Oh, When Shall I See Jesus" and "Amazing Grace" for her, and when I went they were telling me about it and she told me she sang a few words of "Amazing Grace" and before that she could only get breath enough to speak a few words and have to rest. I was with her the last three days she lived and she seemed to be partial to me as a nurse and did not want me to leave her at all, and wanted me to give her all the medicine and nourishment that she took. She had but little faith in physic and would say death was preferable if she could only know she would be at rest. On the morning she died at night she had a bad sinking spell and called me to her and I asked her what she wanted. She said, Maggie I am dying—this is death. I rubbed her and told her I thought not, but asked her if she didn't think she would be better off if it was. She said she was afraid not; yet she would not give her hope for all the world. She then said: Your mother was willing and prayed to die and I want to die like her. I told her I thought when death came she would be reconciled and willing to go. She then asked me to give her something to keep her alive until her only brother could get there. He was then living about forty miles away. I told her that was out of my power without the help of the Lord, and she would have to ask him to do that, but I gave her a tablet to tone up her pulse and that was the first one she had wanted to take and she revived right much. She asked for another after dinner and about 3 o'clock her brother and his wife came. She knew them and talked to them for a while right strong and seemed to be better, but in a short time she began to sink again. I asked her if she would take another tablet; she said no, she had nothing to live for now. I told her I thought she ought to feel comforted, as she prayed to live to see her brother and her prayer was answered. She said yes, and he came through all this rain. Lord bless him (it was on that awful rainy day). It was then about sunset, and about 8 o'clock she died. Just before the breath left her she said tell Willie to come to her (that was her niece, who is a member of the church). She said she wanted to tell her she was going home. So when Willie got to her she told her to make a bright light, she was going home. She then told her oldest sister good-bye and passed peacefully away like one going to sleep. O, sleep in Jesus, oh blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep.

R. E. BARDIN.

The subject of this sketch was born March 14, 1871, and died November 7, 1908, from an operation for appendicitis. He was married twice, the first time to Miss Victoria Overman, in the year 1892. They went to Crews, Va., where he worked in the railroads shops. His wife being very weakly, later they moved back to Wayne county, N. C., where he engaged in farming. He and his wife, united with the church at Upper Black Creek. He was a good neighbor, faithful member and kind husband. I never saw him too tired to wait upon his wife who for years was in very feeble health. After her death he moved to Selma, Johnston county, N. C.

In the fall of 1907 he was married to Miss Lula Kirby, to which union was born one son. He was always very fond of children, and I never saw anyone more delighted over a child than he was. But the good Lord saw fit to take him from this world of trouble, where the unworthy writer believes he has gone to rest. He leaves two brothers, four sisters, wife and one child to mourn their loss which is his eternal gain.

SALLIE AYERS BELL.

Oh, how sad the thought of writing the death of my little granddaughter, Sallie Ayers Bell. She was the only child of my oldest son, Benj. Bell, and wife, Ella. She was born January 19, 1902, and died November, 15, 1908. She was sick only nine days. She bore her sickness with more patience than anyone I have ever seen. All was done for her that loving hands and physicians could do, but God had called her home. Such a sweet and darling child could not stay in this sinful world. She said to the cook woman the morning before she was taken sick that night, these words: "Eva, paper and mamma will miss me, won't they; I'm going to die some of these days?"

Yes, we do miss her so much; she was so loving. It is hard to think of never seeing her coming to meet me with outstretched arms and hands full of flowers, no more forever. She loved flowers. I have often times seen her running through the bushes gathering roses to take to school with her. This little subject was dear to my heart, for I weaned it from from its mother. Of times it would plead to stay with me. She was a very cheerful and bright child. She loved her books. She got a pencil and started to write a letter, but only wrote two words. This was Wednesday before she died, Sunday. Saturday she said: "Put my pencil away." She seemed to know her work was finished. She was very fond of music and loved to sing. How sad to think of its little tongue singing "There is a Fountain Filled with Blood." She sang two verses and then said: "Mamma, sing "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

Oh, how sad it was to give up the last one of the home. It was so pitiful to see her reach out her little hand for anything she wanted. She could not see at all for three days. She never complained because of her eyes being closed.

There is nothing that we can say that seems to console her parents, but we hope that God in his infinite love will direct their thoughts to him above, who alone can cause them to say all is well, dear Lord, with me.

She was buried amidst a large crowd of relatives and friends in the new grave yard near Bell's Chapel. It was a lovely sight to see her little schoolmates gather around the grave, placing flowers, with tears flowing.

I close by asking an interest in the prayers of all who read this.

Oh, little Sallie, how we miss you,
 How much no one can know,
 And yet we know 'twas best that you Should from earth to Heaven go.
 You were gentle, kind and loving.
 And oh, it seems so bad,
 And still we know it's best for you
 To be at home with God.
 Your suffering now is ended.
 No more you will feel pain,
 And we know our great loss

Is your eternal gain.

Then why should we grieve or weep
 When we know you are at rest,
 Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
 At home among the blessed.
 At peace, at rest in heaven,
 We know that you must be,
 At home with God forever,
 In a grand eternity.

GRANDMOTHER.

MRS. E. A. EVERETT.

This precious mother departed this life June 9, 1908, in her 78th year. We may think it hard for friends and loved ones to be taken from us, but our loss is a great gain to the poor suffering child of the Heavenly King. This dear mother was born and raised in Halifax, and in 1846 she was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to J. H. Everett. Of this union there were several children, but only two lived to be grown, and one of these, the son, C. B. Everett, was called to his eternal home several years ago. My dear companion, Fannie, is yet spared for some good purpose of the Lord. One daughter-in-law, Cattie Everett, and grandson, survive her. Our mother was very lively in her early life, but was very kind and charitable to the poor and needy ones as long as she was able to be. Several of her last years were spent in much suffering, but we feel that it will all be light compared to the never changing glories prepared for her in my Father's house above, that mansion not made with hands. Our mother was received into the fellowship of the church at Kehukee several years ago, relating a sweet hope in Christ. Her orderly walk and godly conversation was manifest evidence that she received the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the fact of Jesus, our ever living head, and friend to all his dear children of every nation and every tongue.

Mother always loved to fill her seat at church with her dear kindred in Christ, but she was not able for several years to be with them very much.

We see the hand of mercy ever extended beneath his poor and afflicted saints.

All that could be done by a loving daughter and sympathizing friends was done, but medical skill had failed. As she was sinking to rest the holy angels seemed to gather around her; she would reach out her hands to embrace them, saying she saw many precious little babies. Oh, for a close walk with God I feel is the desire of my Father's children, that when we pass from earth we will be living monuments of mercy, with our ever living head around the throne of God for ever. I hope I am, as ever,

Your little brother,
T. E. AUSBORN.

ARE YOU WORKING?

Quite a number of friends of our publications are working to help us extend their circulation, and in addition to piling up votes for the ten valuable prizes to be awarded on April 1, are making 10 per cent. commission besides.

The contest has only fairly started and you have more than two months to secure the valuable piano, one of the three scholarships, or a free trip.

Send us your name on a postal card and we shall be glad to forward matter descriptive of the work. Address.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

P. D. GOLD.

I trust every reader will try and secure a new subscriber for the Landmark. Our expenses are heavier and an increased circulation is necessary to enable us to make anything.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Winston, N. C., Dec. 9, 1908.
Elder P. D. Gold, Wilson, N. C.:

Dear Brother in Hope—I am just in receipt of a letter from Mr. B. X. Linville, which I send you and will ask you to publish the same. Mr. Linville is a good man and bears a good name among the people who know him.

This letter calls to my mind a trip which I made more than three years ago. I left Winston Friday morning, expecting to go to High Point, but after I started I turned aside to go to meeting at Saint's Delight church, and Elder Denny was to preach there. I got lost, would go this way and that, at last met Mr. Linville and went to his home for dinner. After dinner Elder Denny, his wife and myself were on the porch; a silence reigned and I felt a strange warmth, a weight, a power. He said: "Mr. Linville, we are all here to hear what the Lord has done for you. He broke down, but finally told a part of what he has written. We admonished him to duty, and I started to High Point again. Again I got lost, and at dark I found myself at the home of Mr. H. D. Shields. After supper his wife informed me she had often prayed for me to come, that she might talk with me on the Scriptures. Words can't express the meeting. Her husband, herself and the congregation were there. Surely the Lord was in the midst. His name was praised. Oh what love. She told us how the Lord had blessed her. About 12 p. m. we retired. On the morning we left off the trip to High Point and went to Abbott's Creek church, where we had the most wonderful meeting. I don't wish to tire you, but will say Saturday I refused to use the Scripture on my mind, trouble seized me. Oh, how miserable: darkness and fear followed; next day, Sunday, I yielded and was delivered. The heavens were opened, and the Lord added to the church some six or seven, I don't remember the exact number; but will not soon forget that day. Soon after others were added, in all I guess about fifteen or sixteen in that section. One was the sister Shields, with whom I had stopped Friday night. Let me finish the story in short. Soon after a church was organized in High Point, one in Winston and one at Bunker Hill, a point about nine miles from Winston, and ten miles from High Point. All these churches are now warm, also the churches at Saint's Delight and Abbott's Creek, of which our dear brother Williard is pastor.

Yours in humble hope,

J. A. ASHBURN.

Kernersville, N. C., Nov. 15, 1908.
Elder J. A. Ashburn:

Dear Friend—I have felt an impression to write you since you were at our home. My conscience has constrained me for refraining from answering the questions you ask. Now I hope God will direct my mind and guide my pen, and I will try to tell you a part of what I hope to be the dealings of the Lord with me. When I was a boy about 8 or 9 years old, arising from my bed one morning, I was not sick, but a terrible feeling was upon me. I thought I was bound to die. I was impressed to try to pray. I got down on my knees and asked God to spare me and I would be a better boy. When I arose from my knees I felt like God had answered my prayer. That dreadful feeling was gone. At times in my boyhood days I would get in trouble and get to studying about dying and would wonder where I would go when I died. When I was about 16 years old I would read my Testament, and thought the end of time was near at hand. That put me in a terrible condition, as I was afraid I would be lost. I dreamed several times that I could see the world come to an end, and that gave me lots of trouble. Sometimes I would get to studying about my condition, and my father would come along and ask me what was the matter with me, and ask me if I was sick? These sad feelings would wear off for a while, and then they would return. I went on in this condition from time to time, and would slip my Testament in my pocket, and go to the pine thicket and read a chapter and try to pray. Sometimes it would seem like I did not lack for words, and again it seemed that all was dark with me, and I could not utter a word. Time and again when I would do something bad I promised God if he would spare me I would not do so any more, and then I would go and do something far worse than I had done before. I would go to hear the Methodists and Moravians preach, but I could get no food. I would hear the Baptists preach, and some times the preacher would tell my feelings better than I could have told them myself. I wondered how the preacher knew my feelings so well, for I had not told them to any one. Again it would seem as if the preacher was looking at me and preaching to me, and no one else. A year or more ago I got in trouble about prayer. It seemed that I sinned every time I tried to pray. Something would say that you are acting a hypocrite. I quit trying to pray awhile: then it seemed that every thing that I did was heaping trouble on trouble. The 12th of November, 1896, I was married to Carrie May Crews. She, at that time belonged to the Methodists. When I would try to pray I would ask God to guide and direct her, and if she was wrong to show her the right way. The second Sunday in November, 1902, after preaching by Elder P. W. Williard at Saint's Delight, the doors of the church were opened for admission of members. My wife arose and went forward, offered to the church and was received. I thought it was more than I could stand. I felt like we were parted. It seemed to me that she was on the road to heaven and that I was bound for destruction: so I wept like a child. I have been at preaching and at the close I would have a desire to shake hands with the preacher, but would not go for fear some one would see me. I have looked upon the Baptists as the happiest people in the world, and desired that I could be as happy as they looked to be. I have often felt like I wanted to get away from everybody. I felt like I did not have as good sense as other people, and everybody knew it. Some time ago I asked my wife if I acted like other people. I went on in this condition and did not tell any one about my troubles until the second Sunday in August, 1905. I knew my wife had seen me shedding tears that day, so I told her that there was something the matter with me. My dear companion told me that she knew what was the matter with me, as she had traveled that road herself. I told her that I felt like I had sinned the unpardonable sin, and that my case was a hopeless one. I told her while sitting in church that day at Saint's Delight I thought of my father I had seen sitting in that church so many times. I told her that I would have given anything in this world if I could have had my father back here long enough for me to throw my arms around him and ask him to forgive me for the many wrong things that I did when I was a boy. I then broke down in tears. I asked my wife not to tell anyone about my feelings. Some years ago I had a dream that I was in such a nice place. I thought there was no trouble there. Some times I feel like I loved everybody, and I am sorry for everything I have done to hurt anyone's feelings. Some times I feel like my past life has been nothing but mistakes and failures. I have often wished that I had not been born, or that I had died when I was small. That which I would not do, and that which I should I do not. Some times I feel like I was not fit to correct my children.

Mr. Ashburn, you put an awful feeling on me when you asked me to tell my experience. I thought I would be glad to tell it if I only had a little one. My acts, my thoughts, my ways seem to be so far from what I think a Christian ought to be. I feel to be a terrible sinner and of all men surely the most miserable. Now I will tell you some of my dreams. Some time the first of the year, 1906, I talked with some of the Baptists and told them some of my feelings; they told me to go to the church. I did not feel fit to offer to the church. I prayed God if it was my duty to go to the church to make it known in some way so that I would know what was my duty. After that I dreamed that I was going down a long slope, and after a while I came to a stream of water, and there stood a large crowd of people. They opened for me to pass through. I reached the water, the preacher took my hand, and led me out in the water, then he told me to stand by his side, that he wanted to talk some. I then turned my head and my oldest brother was standing by my side with tears streaming from his eyes to the water. Then I awoke. Some time about February or March of 1907 I dreamed that I was at the old home place, and was in the house where my father nearly always kept some wine. I thought it was full of barrels. It seemed that I very much desired some of the wine. I thought I got a cup and drew some wine. By that time it seemed that my mother was at the door talking to me; then she turned, walked off a few steps, and dropped her head as if she was studying about something. It seemed that I took a sup or two of the wine, and it tasted very good. By this time my mother came back and was talking to me again. She had been dead about a year at that time. I stepped out into the yard, then I realized that my mother was dead. It seemed like she had been dead but one week. When she died she had several stands of bees; when I stepped out into the yard the bees began to come and light on me, and said their foreman was gone, and they could never work and do anything more if they did not have some one to care for them. They were coming by the hundreds. I could see them coming as far as my eyes could see. It seemed like they were in the best of humor I ever saw bees in. They told me they wanted me to see after them and care for them, and to be their shepherd. I told them I could not care for them, that I had a brother there that could look after them better than I could. They told me that I was their choice and I must care for them. When I woke up I was shedding tears. Then it seemed that the communion table at Saint's Delight was brought before me; then this passage of scripture seemed to come to my mind. You may know that you have passed from death unto life because you love the brethren. (If I know myself I do love the Baptists). The first Sunday night in November, 1908, I dreamed I was at a church and the people began to gather in. Two or three preachers came in and went to the altar. Then Elder P. W. Williard stepped in the altar. Then I heard a voice say this is a stream in a weary and dry land. This was repeated three or four times. Then it said this rock is bursted. This heart of mine is melted. At this time my oldest brother was before me, and we were shaking hands. About this time my wife called and asked me what was the matter. I woke up praising God for his wonderful works. I said bless the Lord, oh my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name. My wife came to my side. We were talking of the wonderful works of God. Looking up I saw a star. I did not say anything for a few moments, then I asked my wife if she saw that star. She said she did. This scripture came to my mind. That God's people see eye to eye and speak the same thing. Next morning I rose, seemingly a great load had been taken away. I felt as I never had felt before. I felt like everything was well with me. I could not help shedding tears. I do not think they were tears of sorrow, I think they were tears of joy. It did not seem that I could wait until I could meet up with my brother. On Friday following he came by. I told him my dream, and asked him if he was in trouble. He said he had been for some time. There is no one but those who have experienced the same can tell the joy, satisfaction and comfort these words gave me. They lifted me up, strengthened my hope and made me rejoice.

The Lord is so great,
His love so rich and so free;
Did Jesus die for such A great sinner as me?

I will close. I fear I have worried you. If you feel the spirit of prayer I hope you will pray for me and my family. My wife and I would be glad for you to come to see us soon again.

Your friend in hope,
B. X. LINVILLE.

Elder P. D. Gold:

My Dear Brother and Father in Israel: To You Greeting—It is by and through the divine mercy of an allwise Redeemer that I am the spared monument of another day, for which I do hope I feel thankful to the giver of every good and perfect gift, for they all come from God.

My dear brother, it has been a long time since I saw you, and I did miss you so much at our association and was disappointed at not seeing you, and I have had a mind to write you a few lines to let you hear from me. I am well, except I have a cold, which I hope soon to be clear of. But, oh my leanness, my leanness; and my dear brother I feel to be such a great sinner. I have no strength of my own, and therefore my help and strength must come from the one that rules and superrules all things according to his own purpose for his own glory. And I am glad it is so, for my dear brother I do feel like I have been kept by his Almighty power, and that he has been merciful to me ever since my existence in this world, and that he has kept me by the word of his Almighty power. And even when I was sinking down in despair I could do nothing but cry, oh Lord, have mercy on me, a poor sinner. And at a time unexpected to me he spoke peace to my troubled soul and took my feet as it were out of the mire clay and established my going, and my poor soul was filled with joy and gladness, for he had for me a pardon sealed, and his love to me revealed. And then I was glad when they said unto me, into the house of the Lord let us go for many mansions there be fore the healing of sorrow and woe, and is it not a great thing to think of what a precious Saviour we have got. And he has promised to be with us in the sixth trouble and not forsake us in the seventh.

My dear brother, I sent you pay for the Landmark by Elder William Woodard, and hope you will continue to send it to me as I love to read it and enjoy so much reading your writings. They sound so much like your conversation, which has always been sweet to me. It would be a great pleasure to be with you now and hear you talk of the love, mercy and goodness of our Saviour. Oh it is all so wonderful to think of. I am often made to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory when alone in deep meditation to think of his great love for his people; and my dear brother, if I am one that he died for, that is enough for me. I often fear though I am deceived, for the things I would do I do not and that causes me to fear I am wrong.

I would be glad to get a long letter from you, if you feel like writing to one who feels to be a poor little beggar, and one left alone like I am. I would be glad to see you, so come to Lillington, if you can, and preach to us.

May the dear Lord bless and spare you for many years to come and give you health and strength to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, is my heart's desire for you. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am, as ever, your humble little sister in the hope of eternal life,

MARY C. STEWART.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—"For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. 4:15. This is a very peculiar expression, the substance of the expression is, we have a mediator that is reconciling us not only to our infirmities, but unto God, and why are we thus reconciled, because our infirmities is a prayer unto Jesus; the reason he can be touched is not only that he was tempted in all points, but was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. It seems, if possible, we are more experimentally interested in the priesthood of Jesus, than we are in him as being a prophet or king, and why, because all of our spiritual blessings come through Jesus as our priest, and also every blessing of every description comes through Jesus as our prophet, priest and king. Jesus is the very embodiment of prophecy, for Peter said the Spirit of Christ was in them, and this is the reason why their prophecy come to pass. Jesus as king has no equal for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings, and his scepter sways creation, and none can stay his hand, for he shuts and none can open, and opens and none can shut. These expressions were realized by Abraham and Sarah, his wife, as to the birth of Isaac, and also in regard to John the Baptist and many others spoken of in the Scriptures, and it is realized by us even to the present time, not only the preachers, but the laity, as well, for it is the Lord that giveth and withholdeth, and we cannot tell the reason why, only because it seemed good in his sight, though it is for our good he withholdeth in order to teach us how dependent we are for the mercies of the Lord; if we were not dependent we could not thank the Lord for being so kind to us, as our great high priest, who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; the high priest under the law did bear the names of the children of Israel in the breastplate of judgment upon his heart, when he went unto the holy place for a memorial before the Lord continually. So likewise our highpriest more perfectly bears our names before our heavenly Father. It is said behold I and the children whom the Lord hath given me, there will not be any left out of these children, and to prove that all things were ordered and sure, when the children of Israel left Egypt they carried Joseph's bones with them. Joseph is a bright type of Jesus. It is said we are bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh and members in particular, while we are a gift to Jesus he is a gift to us, though we were involved Jesus had to redeem us and that by the shedding of his blood, for without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. The names of God's children are written in the book of life of the lamb slain from the foundation of the world: heavenly things had to correspond with the heavenly things, and this is the reason why Abel offered a lamb unto God that the blood of it should prefigure the blood of Jesus. We said that Jesus was before all things, and all things were made by him, and without him there was nothing made that was made. So Jesus has the pre-eminence over all things, both visible and invisible, and this is the reason that the children of God can realize in their hearts that Jesus is all and in all. He is in all of his people; if we have Jesus we have everything that is needful for our consolation; having this hope we are enabled to leave the things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, we press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Why is it high, because it is of a divine origin. We often feel like that we do not attain unto these things, we cannot only through Jesus who can be touched without temptations and sorrows. Jesus was an experimental sufferer almost from his birth until his death. Dear children of God, you may feel forsaken by some that you thought were your friends, but you never will be forsaken by the Lord, for Job said he shall deliver thee in six troubles: yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee. So we trust in his promise, like a dutiful child to a kind father, we have nothing to plead before our heavenly Father only his promises, and they are given through his Son Jesus Christ. So we desire to raise a tribute of praise to the Lord for these wonderful blessings.

Yours in hope,
ASA D. SHORT.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—It has been on my mind to write you for a long time, but knowing my weakness, ignorance and inability have put it off from time to time, hoping I would get in a better frame of mind. But I don't seem to get any better, so will do the best I can.

I have lived to see my 80th birthday and all these years I have been spared for a purpose unknown to me. I have passed through many trials and sore afflictions, but the dear Lord has given me strength to bear them all thus far and I trust he will continue to do so my few remaining days. It is my desire in all things to do right, but fall so short in my duty that it makes me have many fears and doubts. I feel to say with the poet, "I am so vile, so prone to sin, I fear I am not born again." I cannot express my feelings as I wish. The three hundred and eightieth hymn expresses them much better than I can.

I have not been able to get any new subscribers yet, but will do all I can to help you. Many thanks for your picture. I've had it framed and I highly appreciate it.

I will bring this poor scribble to a close, it is so badly done both in writing and composition. I know so little, but one thing I do know, I do love the Primitive Baptists and the doctrine they preach. Please pardon all mistakes which, like myself, are many. I have written several letters to you, but when I would read them over they appeared so little and imperfect I would cast them aside. If you have the time and mind to write would be more than glad to hear from you. Much love to you and sister Gold, and may heaven's blessings rest on you all, is the desire of your aged sister, if one at all,

Yours affectionately.

Dear Brother Gold:

I cannot tell you how glad I was last night when my brother came in and brought a letter from you. It is so reviving to be thus remembered by you. And I appreciate so much your kind remembrance of my mother. She has been very sick, but has been better ever since I came home, and we hope the worst is over; although the doctor seems to be a little fearful, and thinks it will be some time before she can be up. I have heard from her this morning, and have not been able to go to see her since Wednesday, the next day after I got home; think perhaps I can go in a day or two, if I do not have another one of those attacks.

I am not suffering this morning, but I am very weak from the intense suffering yesterday and day before.

I had just written you a letter and sent it to the office a little while before brother came with the one from you.

I felt like I wanted to hear from you, and will be glad to hear from you any time you can feel to write me. But surely I am vile, and feel unworthy of the notice of such as you and many others—not worthy of the notice of any of God's dear children, and that he alone can have mercy on one so vile—not because of any foreseen good in me, but alone because it seemeth good in his sight; for I feel that Paul uttered a very truth when he said, "For I know that in me that is in my flesh, there dwelleth no good thing." How sweetly Dr. Hurst preached from that scripture at Roanoke. I feel that I cannot forget that together with others that I heard.

I am sorry you were disappointed in my not coming, for I too, had hoped for a personal visit; though I did not feel worthy, but utterly unworthy of so great a blessing. I was also disappointed very much.

You ask do I ever feel that all things work together for good to them that love God? Yes, through sufferings I have been brought to realize this truth. We can't always just see it that way; for no chastisement, or affliction for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; but they afterwards yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them who are exercised thereby. "All things are yours and for you." We are always ready and willing to accept the pleasant things that come our way, but we are not so ready to accept the unpleasant ones; but we learn through sufferings that sorrows and trials, afflictions and stripes are needful, and work for our good, if we be the children of God.

There is great comfort in being blest with that spirit of resignation, which endures with patience, such things as are put upon us, and to wait a revelation of the wise design of the Lord.

I believe I did not tell you that I went up to Elder Wm. Grafton's the first Sunday in this month—was at their meeting at Harford. Elder Grafton preached a very able sermon from these words, "He came to his own and his own received him not, but as many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God." He is real active for a person of his age—is in his 84th year, and has served Rock Springs and Harford churches continuously for over fifty years.

The Bible is his companion—he reads it much. He said to me, "I reckon I have read this book through as many times as I am years old; and if I had to do without it I would miss it, I would feel lost." He appears to be patiently waiting his appointed time, knowing that it can at best, be but a few more days. I enjoyed my visit very much. They wished to be remembered to you, and said they would be glad to see you again.

I got one of the pictures of the preachers at Roanoke. It was real good. Did you get one?

Have heard from mother—she is still improving, and I hope she will get well.

I am feeling very well.

In love and sweet fellowship, I remain,

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Enclosed is a very good letter which I received of brother Geo. M. Hardy quite a while ago. Having received much comfort from it myself, I felt perhaps it might be of some comfort to the readers of the Landmark and to the household of faith in general.

Yours in hope,

CARRIE WILLIS.

Mrs. Carrie Willis:

Dear Friend—When I reached home Sunday evening I found your good and comforting letter there awaiting me, and let me tell you that it was a joy to my soul to hear you tell your hopes and fears—of your mixtures of joys and sorrows, for in my heart I do believe that only a christian has such feelings as you express. Oh, what a joy it would be to me if I could feel that I kept the commandments of the Lord. And yet I do believe that you and every other heaven-born soul does keep his commandments—not in the flesh for the apostle tells us that, "In me, that is in my flesh, there dwelleth no good thing," and again, "With my flesh I serve the law of sin, but with my spirit the law of righteousness." Then it is only in spirit that you ever expect to keep the commandments of the Lord.

This flesh of ours has the curse of sin upon it, and all fleshly lusts must remain with it while we remain here, and even when we die, it is sown in corruption, and nothing short of the grave has the cleansing power over it: but thanks be to God, it will be raised in incorruption, and will come forth pure and spotless, made white in the blood of Jesus. But from the time that the Lord blessed you with a true spiritual desire for righteousness and made you feel that you would be glad if you could rise above all fleshly lusts, all sin and temptations and live a pure and holy life, without sin the remainder of the time allotted for you here, and gave you a desire to love and be with his people, you have never sinned in spirit for "The soul that is born of God doth not commit sin," nor can it sin for the seed of God remaineth in it.

This constitutes the christian warfare. This gives you hopes and fears. This gives you mixtures of joy and sorrow. It is the flesh lusting against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh. It is this makes us feel that the things that I would not I do, and the things that I would I do not.

The flesh seeks for the things of the flesh, of time and sense, of worldly joys and amusements, and all the lusts thereof so that its joy might be full, and its pleasures great as in the days gone by, but it is held in check by the spirit which is being taught and led by the spirit of God to know that these things are all evil and must perish with the using, and to seek after the things of righteousness and truth, things that will abide forever and after time and sense are passed away, will take us to the great "I am" to ever rest in the sweet embrace of our dear Jesus whose blood hath cleansed us from all sin and has now taken us unto himself as his own bride. Oh, what joy to have a little hope that we are thus blest.

Dear friend, my hope is that all those who have such feelings as you express and as I believe I have seen evidence of in your case, are taught of the Lord. Those feelings of love for his people and desire to keep his commandments with feeling of inability to do so are my feelings, and in expressing them you have told me my experience and found a near place in my heart as one of the Lord's children. I should be glad to read another letter from you.

May the Lord guide and direct us in all things.

With love and kindest regards and best wishes for the success of you and family, I am,

Your true friend,

GEO. M. HARDY.

CIRCULAR LETTER.

(Written by Joshua T. Rowe.)

The Baltimore Primitive Baptist Association, to the Churches and Associations With Whom We Correspond—Greeting:

Dear Brethren—In our letter for this year we feel to call your attention to some thoughts on the eighteenth chapter of Matthew.

In the closing verses of the preceding chapter we have set forth some of the authority of the kings of the earth, and we think there is no doubt that the disciples of Jesus were looking forward to the time when he would reign a king on earth, and that they had some carnal ambition to satisfy in holding some important position in that supposed kingdom. Therefore the question in the first verse of the eighteenth chapter, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?"

Second verse. The little child here presented to the disciples was, we think, a natural child, but a helpless one, and his natural weakness was to remind them of their own spiritual weakness.

Third verse. Jesus says, "Except ye be converted," that is, so changed as to get rid of this carnal ambition to be great, "ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven," for its king is humble and tells you that he can do nothing but of the Father; so you must be helpless as little children and know that "without me ye can do nothing." This kingdom of heaven we think is the church militant, over which we have one Lord, and all we are brethren. In this kingdom the smallest one is the greatest, the humblest one is the most exalted, and the one who shows a disposition to be led, is the leader. Such meek, humble, small ones as this are the greatest in the church, (or kingdom) as shown in verse four.

Verse five tells us that "whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me." Not the natural child first presented, but the humble child of God represented by the natural, and it is the child of God that we have presented to us from here on, and his greatness consists in the Spirit of Jesus that dwells in him, and those who love and receive him for Jesus' sake, love and receive Jesus.

Verse six shows us what a terrible thing it is to offend one of these little ones that believe in Jesus, and this offence does not mean the excitement of the carnal passions, but by our own carnal, sinful actions leading them into or tempting them to sin, or to tempt them to believe that being children of God they are immune from the sufferings that belong to the flesh, as Peter did our Lord. (Matthew xvi. 22.) But in the twenty-third verse Jesus said, "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me." If we insult our brother as a man, we may appease his wrath and all be well, but who can make amends when we have caused him to offend?

Verse seven: "Woe unto the world because of offences!" Not this carnal world that has not known the Father, nor the Son whom he hath sent, but the world of God's people for whom Jesus is the propitiation (satisfaction) for their sins. (1 John ii. 2). God's people are called the world, because they are made up of every family of the earth. (Rev. v. 9). These all feel the woe that their carnal nature by its offences brings upon them. These offences bring the oft repeated cry, "O wretched man that I am!" It is this that brings about the warfare between the flesh and the Spirit, and it is the enemy against whom David prays in Psalm cix. "For it must needs be that offences come." Not that offences in any way help or advance the cause of Christ or bring comfort to the child of God, but as two opposite currents of wind produce the whirlwind, so the contrary natures, the flesh and the Spirit in the child of God cry, Forgive us our sins; and the man who has sinned feels the greater woe.

Eighth verse: "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off," etc. For the reason that offences bring woe upon the offender, whatever offends you cut it off and cast it from you. This, dear brethren, is your carnal nature looking around the glories of the world would take you where you should not go, representing feet, or if it would take you as a hand that would neither glorify God nor comfort you, as his child, cut them off. It is the same as the apostle says, put off the old man with his affections and lusts. "Cast them from thee." For-sake the evil and turn unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon you, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. (Isaiah). "It is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire." This means your comfort in the kingdom of God (the church), the joys of salvation as experienced in walking according to the gospel rule. Better to be hopping along in the path that Jesus trod, on one foot, handling only the true gospel of Christ, than having two feet, profession of love to Christ, and at the same time loving the world, and all the time be in the fire of God's wrath and fearfully looking for the day of his fiery indignation.

Ninth verse: "If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee." If you see any other than the land of God in his works, either in nature or in grace, your eye is offensive, for God will not give his praise to another. Pluck this out, cast it away, and with an eye single to his praise enter into life, the fellowship of Jesus and his people, which is far better than seeing man as an help to God. "Having two eyes to be cast into hell fire," which is experienced in our souls when we are conscious of having robbed God of his glory and praise.

Tenth verse: "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones" that walks in the path of Jesus, that handles the pure gospel of the Son of God, and that gives him all the glory of his works, and in those things sees no one but Jesus. To scorn one of these would be to scorn Jesus, for he dwells in them, and this is why they are such humble little children in his kingdom. And "their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." The Spirit that ministers to them, the grace that keeps them humble and small in their own estimation, does it by showing them that all things are of God the Father, who rules by his Son in his gospel kingdom (the church). Should we despise them, we should despise or scorn the Spirit that moves them: in their humble way.

Eleventh verse: "For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." Not the lost or dead in trespasses and sins are meant here, but those who by living after the flesh have died or are in the wilderness of transgression, as shown in verses 13-14: showing that as the Shepherd is not satisfied with ninety-nine sheep, but must have the hundredth one, and goes himself into the mountains and seeks that which is gone astray, and when he rejoices more over this one than those that went not astray. It is possible that the earthly shepherd may not find his lost sheep, but the all-seeing eye of Jesus never fails to find the lost sheep, however, small he may be, or however dark the mountain into which he has wandered. "It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." Then they will not perish, for God will do his pleasure and bring his sheep home again. It may be with a broken, contrite heart, as the prodigal son, but O the sweet comfort of the poor, wayward son in being received as a son, which was more than he dared ask. All this, brethren, refers to our own experience alone.

Now, coming to the fifteenth verse, the Lord teaches us how to deal with those of our brethren who may trespass against us; and in the first place we feel that we should know that we are injured instead of being insulted and being trespassed against. We should go to our offending brother in that meek and humble spirit that has been with us up to this time in dealing with ourselves, and prompting us to cast away the offending foot, hand and eye. The beam being out of our own eye, we now see clearly how to pull the mote out of our brother's eye, and so not saying one word to any one about our brother's sin, we go to him alone, and if it be that he has the same spirit of Jesus, he bears us, confesses his sin, and we have gained our brother; but if he be so carnal and selfish as to persist in his sin, then take with thee one or two more of the children that believe in Jesus, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established, for the humble Christ-like brethren will be able to judge both the words and spirit of each of us, and are capable of advising us for the better. We feel that the inference is strong, that if he hears them all is well, and here the matter should stop forever. "And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church," and if he hear the church, well, but if not, "let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." He has now been laboring with by one, two, and the whole body of Christ, and he will not hear, so you are to look on him as a man of the world, who has no privileges in the church. You have bound him on earth, and the same is bound in heaven (the church). This is justified by his worldly course, and we have shown our devotion to the cause of Christ outside the church in our efforts to be reconciled to our brother, are loosed; that is, our course, has been recognized by the little ones that believe in Jesus, and thus we are loosed in heaven (the church), having the same privileges as before. Those two little ones whom we have called to our aid, and to whom we have submitted our case, have agreed, and the thing has been done for them of our Father which is in heaven (the church), as shown by verse nineteen.

Verse twenty: "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." In the case referred to, the two little ones whom we have called to help us have Christ in them, and we have him in us, and so he is in the midst, directing our own peace and that of the church, which is still to us the kingdom of our blessed Lord.

The remainder of the chapter is devoted to the one thought of sin and forgiveness, and the extent of that forgiveness. Peter asked how oft he should forgive his brother, "till seven times?" thus more than doubling the Jewish custom of forgiving three times, perhaps feeling that this would be very charitable; but our blessed Lord, who is rich in mercy, and all the time forgiving his people's sins, teaches us that as to his, so to our forgiveness there should be no limit: not seven times, but seventy times seven; and then he tells us that the "kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. * * * And one was brought unto him that owed him ten thousand talents." Just think, brethren, what an enormous debt for a small servant to owe with no means to pay, and what anguish of soul he must have felt when his lord "commanded him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made." The debt though more than sixty-seven millions he does not dispute, but begs for mercy, saying, "Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all." Brethren, how often we make promises in our poverty that we never keep in our prosperity, but like this ungrateful servant seem to forget what great mercies we have received. His lord was moved with compassion, and forgave him the debt. He was not now required to pay, but set free, and at liberty to enjoy home and loved ones. How glad he must have felt, but how soon he seemed to forget the great mercy shown him, "and went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him an hundred pence (about thirteen dollars), and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest. And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all; and he would not; but he went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt." O what base ingratitude! How can one so blessed be so hard-hearted and without feeling for those who are now, as he was but a short time ago, in great trouble? No wonder that his fellow-servants, seeing what was done, should be grieved, and their lord wroth. He truly deserved to be delivered to the tormentors. "So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto us, if we from your hearts for give not every one his brother their trespasses." See, brethren, the great difference in the amount of their debts: the one ten thousand talents the other an hundred pence, and the difference between the debt we owe our blessed Lord, and that our brother owes us, is no less. If I have done no wrong and my brother has trespassed against me, his debt is small compared to mine. Let me remember the great mercy shown me, the long-suffering of God toward me; also the great debt I owe, and my utter inability to pay, and then I shall see the debt my brother owes me is small indeed. We have one Lord, even Jesus, and to him we go with all our complaints, acknowledging our sin, and with a broken and contrite heart we beg for his mercy. "Ye Gentile sinners, ne'er forget the wormwood and the gall." Having so many times been forgiven such great sins in which we have greatly rejoiced, ought we not bear this forever in mind, and cheerfully forgive the small sums that our brethren owe us, saying it is of small moment, my brother, I freely forgive. May God grant us this blessed principle of forgiving, never dying brotherly love that gives us at all times to remember and appreciate God's wonderful mercy to us, and then we shall be merciful and forgiving toward those who may at times like ourselves be out of the way.

May God keep us all humble, and at his footstool united in loving friendship, praising one Lord Jesus.

THE TALENTS, MAT. 25.

"For the Kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods."

Jesus said "The Kingdom of heaven is as a man travelling into a far country and calling his own servants," etc. The parable used sets forth the manner of Christ who took his journey into a far country, but before doing so he called his own servants, giving each one talents according to his ability.

He called his own servants. One may contend that all men are servants of Christ. If so why does he single out some as his own servants? This language excludes some, or means that there are some that are not his own servants. All through the Bible there is difference between those that serve him and those that serve him not. That some of the Lord's servants are more faithful than some others is manifest. But he has his own servants as separate from all others. He delivers unto them his goods or talents according to a certain rule. That rule is the several or distinct, peculiar ability of each one of the servants. I do not consider that any man has any ability to serve the Lord before the Lord quickens him or makes him his servant. If every man in nature has any ability to serve the Lord and in that sense is his servant then where is there any need of grace whereby and wherewith we serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear? What is the several ability which is considered and which determines the number of talents delivered to each one? We see among the servants of God different gifts and different degrees in their amount of labor and usefulness. Now who made one to differ from another? We know it is God that does this, and he bestows gifts as it pleases him. He makes the feet strong to walk through briers and thorns, and he puts greater burdens on them. He bestows his gifts according to the several or peculiar ability of each one of his servants. When he calls his servants he communicates this ability to each one of them and then delivers the talents unto them according to the several ability of each one of them.

What are these talents? They are not the gift of eternal life. They are not what makes one a child of God. For these his own servants were servants before the talents were delivered unto them. These talents are goods or money with which they exchange and serve—not in the world—but in the kingdom of heaven. For all this service is in the kingdom of heaven. As men use goods or money in their business in this world and conduct their business exchanges, so in the kingdom of heaven or in the church of God such are called to serve in his kingdom as preachers, deacons and members of the body in general with such light, knowledge and understanding as is given them. Now all these gifts belong to the Lord as his talents, goods or money, with which they serve each other and minister to each other, and thus serve the Lord; and the money or talents thus put to the exchangers increases as it is properly used. For there is always increase and growth in his kingdom where the servants put these talents to the exchangers or to proper use: for it is not a vain thing to serve the Lord. Remember this is the Lord's money.

That servant who feels that whatever he has received of the Lord still belongs to the Lord as much as it ever did, and that he himself has no right to hide it, or misuse it, or bury it, or to deny that he has it nor to become censorious, or heady and high minded, nor oppressive so that he does not begin to beat the men-servants or maid servants, or to claim that these talents are so much his own that he has the right to demand pay for what he does to others, or for others, thus denying that this is his Lord's money, proves his devotion to his Lord and honors his Lord, and is benefiting the church and his talents increase and double. The brethren render double honor to such. We have seen men that glorify God in the gifts he has bestowed upon them or committed unto them, and those gifts brighten, and such brethren are humble feeling that nothing they have is their own, but all belongs to the Lord. Such servants remain useful to the end of their life. They feel that they have no right to betray their trust. Their Lord has entrusted these gifts to them and all their time and talents belong to their Lord: hence they have no right to defraud, nor be drunken, nor unfaithful, nor to waste their Lord's money in any way, nor to prostitute their members as instruments of unrighteousness, but to present their bodies a living sacrifice to the Lord. They feel they are not their own, but belong to the Lord; nor have they right to pervert their time, nor bodies, nor gifts to any corrupt use, nor to use their tongues or speech to any fleshly end. But whatsoever they do, whether they eat or drink, or whatsoever they do, it is all to be done unto the Lord, and thus they glorify the Lord in their bodies and spirits which are his. For ye are not your own, but are bought with a price.

What right has the man with one talent to hide his Lord's money? It is not the man's money. If the Lord has taught one he is a lost sinner, and has given him hope through grace of finding mercy in the sight of the Lord, what right has that man to put his light under a bushel? Should not all the gifts be brought into the store-house? One says the Lord I hope has done something for me, but it is so little. If I had a gift or evidence like such a one I could name then I would own him and put my gift in with the others. But it is unreasonable for me to be required to reap where nothing has been sown. It is hard service to present something when I have nothing. I know that salvation is of the Lord, and that he will have his own, but I am afraid to try to serve him. If this man were afraid not to serve him then that would be better. This one talent man keeps his Lord's money laid or wrapt up, hid, in a napkin (grave clothes or under the law), and in the day of reckoning presents it with an insulting apology.

What becomes of him? Out of his own mouth he is condemned. He cannot enter into the joys of his Lord because he has not owned or confessed him before men. He has not honored and served him. We must take his yoke and learn of him, and then we find rest unto our souls. This is addressed to such as labor and are heavy laden not such as are dead in trespasses and in sins. When Jesus said "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me." This was not spoken to those dead in sins, but to such of his people as are disobedient, or not serving the Lord. Those that hear his voice or obey him he eats or sups with, and they with him. Such are blest in owning him and walking in white. They do not hide their talent or bury it, but put it to use, and the Lord eats and drinks with them, or they enter into the joys of their Lord.

The disobedient are cast out into outer darkness where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth, or misery and woe. Those that disobey the Lord and walk after the flesh reap the fruit of their evil deeds, or sow to the flesh and of the flesh reap corruption.

What becomes of their talent of that service which is rendered by the obedient, but is not rendered by such as become unfruitful and deny their Lord? It is given to the obedient servant. He has double honor. The Lord will have his own. From the disobedient shall be taken away even that which he hath.

What is gathered from this teaching of our Lord? That it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, if we turn away and refuse to hear him that speaks from heaven; but if we acknowledge him in all our way he will direct our steps; and it is a most blessed thing to be faithful in that which he has committed to us.

When Jesus was crucified and arose from the dead he ascended into heaven on the right hand of God, exalted a prince and a Saviour, and received gifts even for the rebellious, or passed out from under the legal dispensation into the gospel kingdom, where he must reign until every enemy is put under his feet. He has set various gifts in the church with which he is served. He said to his disciples I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go I will come again and take you to myself that where I am there ye may be also. Now his servants are to occupy till he comes again. For Jesus will come again. To them that look for him shall he appear without sin unto salvation. We are to watch as well as pray. Blessed are those that are faithful serving the Lord. To watch is to be obedient, faithful unto death. Such shall receive a crown of life. Paul fought a good fight and kept the faith. He employed all the talents the Lord gave him in obedience to the Lord and was commended. The obedient child of God is far happier if he is persecuted, if he is in the lion's den, or burning fiery furnace than the disobedient one that does not give God the glory. The outer darkness or the flesh, the world and its ungodly ways is a place of weeping and gnashing of teeth to the child of God who walks after the flesh.

There is according to scripture a service required before the glory and joy of the kingdom of heaven is entered into—not that the kingdom is not already begun in such, for God begins this good work; but when the tree is made good this is proven by its bearing good fruit. There is joy felt in the obedience of faith, but we suffer with Christ before we reign with him.

I consider that there is more joy in the suffering of Christ here in this present life, more peace in following Jesus here, better to be a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord than dwelling in the tents of wickedness for a season. We should esteem the reproaches of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. The beginning of the kingdom of heaven is in time. Those that have tasted that the Lord is gracious have the earnest of the joys of heaven.

When the Lord comes to reckon with his servants there is a commendation he gives to such as have been faithful, and this is felt in the love and fellowship of such as have truly served the Lord; but those that have not been diligent and faithful cannot enter into these joys in this coming.

This does not refer to that resurrection life that does not yet appear, for that is yet hid from us. It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is.

What a blessed hope, what a glorious waiting till Jesus comes.

ADAM THE FIGURE.

A figure represents substance, but is not a reality.

When the Lord made Adam he placed him in the Garden of Eden to dress and keep the Garden. He caused all the animals to be named by Adam, but there was not one of them fit to be his companion. They were all beneath him—inferior to him—none of them were suitable to be with him as a companion. This shows the superiority of man in his creation over all the beasts of the field.

We sometimes see men now so fallen that they love beasts of the earth as though they were their companions. Men and women sometimes love dogs more than they love truth.

The Lord provided a suitable companion for Adam, not by choosing any animal of the beasts of the earth, but by a special, peculiar and after creation such as has never been known before or since. The Lord provides an help meet suitable to Adam. Causing a deep sleep to fall on him—an emblem of death—wherein Adam was not only inactive but altogether ignorant of what the Lord was doing, he takes a rib from the man and makes a woman, and also brings her to the man. Adam is not only entirely pleased, but he loves this creature and calls her woman as taken from man, the female of man, the fruit bearing part of man, the truly responsive creature to all the loneliness of man. For the Lord God had said that it was not good for the man to be alone.

Adam uttered the law of his relationship and affinity for his wife when he said, this is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh—therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and cleave to his wife, and the two shall be one flesh.

There never has been in nature such another marriage as this one. No other man has ever married a woman that was of himself as Eve was of Adam. What does this pre-figure?

We have stated that the figure is not the substance, though if it did not shadow it forth it could not be a figure. Jesus who was to come, at the time of Adam's creation, was typified in Adam and the church of Jesus Christ in Eve. This great mystery of creation and marriage concern Christ and the church.

Shall not Abraham seek a bride for his son Isaac, a type of Jesus the promised seed? Shall not the Lord God of heaven and earth prepare a bride for his only begotten son, and bring that bride to him? We find from the scripture that the church of Jesus Christ was chosen in him before the foundation of the world. As the material of Adam's wife is of him—the woman of the man—so the bride, the Lamb's wife is of Jesus Christ. As the Lord God took the rib from Adam and formed a woman, so the Lord God formed the church of God in Christ Jesus. But of God are ye in Christ Jesus. Then he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of God, and therefore Jesus is not ashamed to call them brethren saying, behold I and the children which God hath given me. Thy maker is thy husband. There is no more endearing relationship than that of husband and wife in the Bible sense of that term. It is closer than parent and child, for a man forsakes his father and his mother both for his wife, as she is bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh.

The Father arranged the marriage after the Bible order of faith, see Abraham and Isaac. God brings the bride to Jesus who loves his church. Why should he not? His father gave her to him. She is betrothed to him in loving kindness and faithfulness and tender mercies forever. Many scriptures set forth the love of Christ for his church. Jesus gave himself for her. No greater love than this could be found. His delight is with her. She is his glory, and he will present her before his Father's throne with exceeding joy.

Who knows the greatness of the love and delight Jesus has in his bride, and what honor he puts upon her. Back-sliding she has been. Woe to the man she has been. All his grief comes to him because of her. As Sarason's grief came to him because of and through his wife, so Jesus must bear all her guilt and feel the pangs of her unfaithfulness. Yet he loves her, and love is stronger than death, and many waters cannot quench it.

The reproduction of man is accomplished through his wife. The glory and strength of man appear in his children. As arrows are they in his quiver of triumph. Happy is he that hath his quiver full of them. They are the heritage of the Lord.

Jesus shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied. All the grief is borne by him, all the fruit is found in him. In him is both husband and wife. It is in the travail of his soul he shall see to his satisfaction.

While in nature the church is weltering in her own filth and blood, or has destroyed herself, yet he so puts his beauty upon her, and she is so joined unto him in spirit that they are one. She abides in him to bear fruit. He creates the fruit of the lip. His spirit is in her. He works in her both to will and to do of his good pleasure. The church is created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath ordained beforehand, that she should walk in them. He works in her that which is well pleasing in his sight through Jesus Christ, to whom be dominion and power, honor and glory forever.

Here is a family, the whole family of God. Children that will not lie. They bear the image of their Father. They are born of God, therefore born of incorruptible seed.

This family is to the praise of the glory of God's grace. Jesus is glorified in them: They shall speak with the enemies in the gate. He spreads a table for them before the enemies. They show forth the incorruptible character of immortality.

How unlike they are to Adam's children, a seed of evil doers where sin reigns unto death. These are the children of light and of the day. They are the opposite of Adam and his offspring. As by the disobedience of Adam many (all his seed or offspring) are made sinners, and so death passed upon all of Adam's unborn offspring, before a single one was conceived in the womb (because they all sinned): so by the obedience of Jesus Christ many (even all for whom he died and rose again) shall be made righteous; for they were chosen in him before the foundation of the world, and they are the children scattered abroad everywhere in the loins of Adam all over the earth in nature, and therefore it is expedient (the provision and remedy of wisdom that finds out all witty inventions) that one (Jesus) should die for the many and the whole nation perish not. For God deviseth means whereby his ransomed shall not be expelled from him.

Is it to the glory of God that Jesus should fail to see of the travail of his soul? What pleasure would it be to a parent to find some of his children irretrievably lost? Has not Jesus received of his Father power over all flesh, to give eternal life to as many as the Father hath given him?

When he shall say, Father here am I, and the children whom thou hast given me, shall one be absent? Will that be a marred family? Shall the Father hear the intercessory prayer of Jesus, "Father, I will that they whom thou hast given me be with me where I am to behold my glory?" Then shall not these heirs of God and joint heirs of Jesus Christ be glorified together with Jesus?

Adam is a complete failure—shall not Jesus be a glorious success? The figure is nothing of reality. Shall Jesus be anything but reality?

Adam's marriage is dissolved in death. Shall not the marriage of Jesus be forever enduring in the resurrection?

Adam's offspring bear the image of their father, and sink into death. The children of Jesus shall bear his image and shall therefore be glorified together with him in the resurrection, and an unbroken family shall ever be with the Lord.

P. D. G.

PARABLES.

The brethren in their interpretation of parables consider that because the kingdom of heaven is likened to such and such things therefore all in it must be holy and spiritual. It is upon such and such an interpretation as this that they are led to conclude that all the ten virgins are children of God. "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins," etc. Is every thing referred to spiritual in these parables? I say not. For instance Jesus put forth this parable unto them, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed. But while men slept an enemy came and sowed tares," etc., Matt. 13:24-30. Jesus also said the kingdom of heaven is like a net that was cast into the sea and gathered of every kind. The good were gathered into vessels, but the bad were cast away. The bad are the wicked. In the exposition of the parable of the wheat and the tares the wheat are the children of God, but the tares are the children of the wicked one, and they grow together until the harvest or end of the world. Thus it is plain that some are not God's people in these parables that represent the kingdom of heaven. Even among the twelve disciples one was a devil. In the early church there were false teachers, in the days of old there were false prophets.

We must not trust to an organization or mere profession or in appearances. All are not Israel which are of Israel; but in Isaac the seed are found. That is it is by promise. It is of faith that it might be by grace in order that the promise should be sure to all the seed.

Five virgins were wise and five were foolish. They could not be farther apart than wise men and fools are. The Lord knew one and did not know the other. One part went in and the door was shut. There is no evidence that the door was ever opened to the foolish ones.

In looking at scripture we should consider all its bearing and interpret it in accordance with the tenor of scripture generally. If there had never been found an expression in scripture setting forth the kingdom of heaven as having tares, or the children of the wicked one in it, or had called the wicked in the same net with the good, then we should have no authority for considering any but the Lord's people in the kingdom. But we see a class in the kingdom that fail to enter in the marriage with the bridegroom, and a class of tares that are gathered out and burned, also a class of wicked ones that are cast away.

Scripture must agree with scripture then is wisdom justified of her children.

In other parables this explanation is such as requires a consideration that sets forth a different matter. For instance in the parable of the leaven the object is to show the efficacy of the principle of leaven that operates with equal power in all that it is placed in, so that this divine power never fails to do what is purposed. The leaven leavens the entire lump of meal, there being no part or particle of the meal that is not affected by it. Differences in men are manifest. Some are of God and others are not of God, nor was ever the purpose of God to save such as are not the children of promise.

Some run well awhile. Who did hinder them? Some make a fair show in the flesh. Some make rapid progress for awhile, but by and by they fall away, having no root in themselves. The true ones endure unto the end and are saved in harmony with every principle of grace. Others run for awhile then they fall away for want of love or interest in the kingdom of heaven, and each one proves what he is.

P. D. G.

STRENGTHENED. EPH. 3:16.

What power men have in nature is the power of doing evil. Jesus said, no man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him. He also said, Ye will not come to me that ye might have life, because your deeds are evil. Then men can do wrong in working out the evil of their own natures, but cannot do good of themselves, because they do not love good. Hence the power in them is unto evil. O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but in me is thine help. This was said unto Israel.

The strength or power of God is a spiritual power. Those born of the Spirit of God are born of incorruptible seed, and such can never sin because the seed of God abides in them, and they can never die.

This man is called the inner man, and it is created in righteousness and true holiness, and stands opposed to the outer man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts.

It is also called being renewed in the spirit of the mind—not the carnal or natural mind, because the carnal mind is of the old man or outer man.

The prayer of Paul was that the Lord Jesus would grant that according to his riches in glory the brethren would be strengthened in might by his spirit in the inner man. This strengthening is to quicken us according to his divine power to all endurance, to the patient waiting for the coming of Christ. To endure temptation, to wait for the coming of Jesus Christ, to grow up into him in all things is the precious work of grace as manifested in that which is born of God.

The power that conforms us unto Jesus Christ by raising us above the world into a state of incorruptibility is a power unto salvation, being the power of God.

It is the same power by which we believe in God, and by which we comprehend the love of God. This power enables us to endure in the day of trial and temptation, so that we faint not, but are enabled to rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

Yet this strengthening is not visible or in the outer man so that we can see and feel it as we would like to do. For we must be weak to be strong, and this is contrary to nature. It is the strength of the Lord made perfect in our weakness. For we cannot depend on him while we are relying on ourselves. It is a spiritual strength and not a natural one.

P. D. G.

RESURRECTION OF THE UNJUST.

Brother King White requests me to write upon the resurrection of the unjust. It is enough for those born of God to consider that there shall be a resurrection of the wicked or unjust, if we see that Jesus so declared though we cannot understand how it is, or how it is accomplished. Faith receives and holds the promise of God to be true though we cannot see how, as Abraham went out by faith into a land he had never seen.

Jesus declared that there should be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust, John 5:28-29. Why marvel at this? Why should it be thought an incredible thing that God should raise the dead? But it has been denied in many ways. . . But we are warned of this in the Bible. One way of attacking it is to say, But how are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come? The familiar matter of sowing seed is used. Thou fool, thou sowest not that which shall be but naked or bare grain. It must die. Then it brings up a crop. Except it die it abides alone. Every seed brings forth of its own kind. While Paul in the 15th ch. of 1st Cor. refers to the resurrection of the bodies of the saints, the Lord told Daniel of the resurrection of the wicked as well as of the righteous, "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake: some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Daniel 12:2. It appears from this that the wicked shall come forth to shame and everlasting contempt. The outgrowth and consummation of wicked principles in their corrupt lives shall appear in the shame and everlasting contempt of their being raised to reap the fruit of their wicked doings.

While those walking in the faith of Jesus shall grow up into him in all things, and shall awake with his likeness in the resurrection of the just, and shall be like him, for they shall see him as he is and be satisfied.

OBITUARIES
ELDER DAVID CARTER.

G. H. W. OAKLEY.

The subject of this notice was born June 22, 1834, in Beaufort county, N. C., and departed this life November 27, 1908.

Brother Carter united with the church at the Head of Pungo about the date 1860, and was baptized by brother Albin Swindell. He truly adorned the profession he made by a well ordered christian walk and conversation. I was associated with him very much, and am free to say that the grace and mercies of God were the theme of his soul.

He was liberated to exercise in the ministry, and the church was so well satisfied with his gift that he was ordained to the full work of the ministry about 1876. The church book was destroyed by fire. Correct dates cannot be given.

Brother Carter served his church as pastor for many years, and was the regularly installed pastor at his death. Some years before he died he had a stroke of paralysis in one leg which finally settled in his head, impairing his memory.

Brother Carter's last days were days of great suffering, yet he did not murmur or complain. Often in the midst of his suffering I have heard him say that he had a hope of a better world than this.

He was twice married. First to Harriett F. Davis. Unto them were born 11 children, 7 daughters and 4 sons. He was married to Eliza V. Tooty November 25, 1884. Unto them were born 5 sons.

He leaves a beloved widow and six children, 3 of each marriage, and many grandchildren. The church of his membership and the sister churches mourn his loss. Yet we believe that our loss is his gain.

I wish here to state that brother Carter

The subject of this sketch was born August 22, 1852, and departed this life September 26, 1908, making his age 56 years, 1 month and 4 days. He was the son of Elder F. L. Oakley, of Caswell county, N. C. He was without a doubt raised under strict discipline, and therefore did not shame his parents. Though born with a deficiency in his feet and hands, he did not wait for others to support him, but was industrious and persevering. Besides farming he taught school successfully for several years, and was then chosen county treasurer, in which capacity he served for about eight years, being thoroughly honest and straightforward in all his transactions. The state superintendent remarked: "He was one of the best treasurers in North Carolina."

Mr. Oakley was twice married. First to Miss Alice Rudd and after her death to Miss Emma Rascoe. The fruits of these unions were fifteen children, two having died. He provided well for his household, being a kind husband and father, training his children in the way they should go. He was a good neighbor and highly respected generally. He was constantly in attendance on the ministry of the word, and took much interest in the people of God. Though he made no open profession I feel he had a godly concern on the subject of salvation, and hope and trust he is gone to that land where sickness and sorrow, pain and death are not feared. He was stricken suddenly with pneumonia and died in a very few days. After services at the home led by the writer, he was laid to rest in the burial ground at Arbor church to await the resurrection of the just. He leaves a heart stricken wife and children, besides a host of relatives and friends to mourn the loss, but we mourn not as those who have no hope.

W. D. GAY,

After a lingering illness Mr. W. D. Tompsey Gay, a promising young lawyer of this city and the eldest son of G. W. and Jane E. Gay, formerly of Scotland Neck, N. C., died at his home at 6 o'clock Sunday morning, December 22, 1908, after an illness of about sixteen months.

He was born at Scotland Neck, N. C., April 12, 1879. At the age of 15 years he received his diploma from the military academy and then entered Wake Forest College, which he attended for several sessions. Going from Wake Forest to Richmond College, where he took a law course and graduated with distinction. Being but 18 years old at that time it was necessary to wait three years before he could pass the legal examination before the supreme court of appeals, which he did in 1903 at Wethville. He passed the Virginia examination and at once began the practice of his profession. Being possessed with a remarkable analytical mind his success was assured from the first and up to the time of his failing health he was enjoying a growing practice and had before him brilliant prospects. His remarkable aptness for his profession, coupled with his conscientiousness and affability and his unswerving loyalty to high ideals, made him many friends.

Four years ago he married Miss Julia C. Beckers, of Church Hill and he is survived by his wife and a bright 3-year-old boy. He was the only brother of Dr. George Gay, of Church Hill.

His health began to fail him in July, 1907, and he was confined to his bed for several weeks before his death after a long visit to the mountains. The funeral services were conducted from the family residence, No. 711 North Twenty-sixth street, by the Rev. R. H. Potts, at Union Station M. E.

church, of which the deceased was a member.

Dear Brethren Gold and Lester:

With a sad heart I will write a short sketch of our son Stephen Ellis Lester Thomas. He was born March 5, 1893, died April 24, 1906. His stay on earth was 13 years, 1 month and 19 days.

Little Lester, a bright, loving child and obedient son, seemed to have a great thought for his parents. He had been a great sufferer for two years or more. His disease was heart trouble. He was so feeble he could scarcely get out of doors. He caught pneumonia that swept him off after one day's illness.

We all did what we could for him. We called in several doctors to attend him. He appeared to want to get well. He told his papa almost the last breath to send for the doctor.

It pleased the Lord to lend us such a jewel of a son for awhile. He would often say before he took the muscles, Mamma, I can't stand the muscles. He knew his weakness. He always called father, '3 sisters and 4 brothers to mourn his loss.

I have a good hope our loss is his eternal sleep although it seems hard to give him up. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

Pray for me and mine.

MATTIE THOMAS.

LUCIE CANNADY BAILEY.

Lucie Cannady, the little daughter of G. O. and Mary Wiggs Bailey, is dead. The little rosebud was needed in a purer clime than this. Christ said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Little Lucie, frail and delicate from infancy, was a sunbeam in her home until God on the morning of September 1, 1908, saw fit to call her up higher. At this time she was 6 years 7 months and 24 days old.

Parents, a void is in your home, a little voice is hushed, a little chair is without its occupant; the pat, pat of her little feet is no longer heard.

Oh, the void! the void! But the consolation is that this marks the beginning of the home beyond the skies, for we know of this, our earthly tabernacle on Jordan, that we have a building, a home not made with hands eternal in the heavens!

Parents, you cannot call your darling back. The little ship is safely anchored in the harbor. Lucie is safe in the arms of Jesus. The heavenly candle can be an other star, and it is shining. Watch and pray, and you may feel its glow, and with spiritual eyes you may not only see it, but you may see as heaven's gate a way land beckoning you onward and upward.

Beautiful hands of a child can see,
Little voice calling, oh no far, to see;
Wee little darling, the light of your home,
Taken so early, is becoming mine.

UNCLE JIMMY.

"SONGS IN THE NIGHT."

This is the title of a little book now in the hands of the printer, containing the last five beautiful and fitting memorial poems which my brother, James B. DeLand, wrote, during the last year of his life; also a memoir of his life prepared by me, his experience of grace, and an account of his last hours, closing with an account of the wonderful return from apparent death to tell of the exceeding love and glory of the dear Saviour which had broken in upon his soul.

I have been asked to publish these poems in book form. I know the book will be exceedingly interesting to those to whom I am addressing this notice. It will be neatly and attractively bound in cloth, and will likely be ready to send to subscribers early in February. The price will be fifty cents, sent by mail postpaid. I will be glad if those who wish to get the book will send me their orders as soon as convenient. Address orders to

How to Increase the Yield of Fruit

Increased fruit crops are more often the result of good management than of good luck. Fruit trees and fruit plants need a liberal supply of

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

The trees absorb plant foods—that is, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash—from the soil just the same as any other crop. Experience has shown this over and over again. This truth has become so well recognized that "return to the land what the tree removes if you would expect the best results" has become an axiom with the best growers.

Apple, pear, peach, orange and other fruit trees soon respond to careful fertilization. But be sure to use the best fertilizers.

"I made a test with other companies' fertilizers," says Mr. H. O. Lowry, of Manatee County, Fla., "and yours proved to be the best. The yield where I used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer, was just twice as much as where the other two companies' fertilizer was used." Hundreds of users say Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are cheapest because of their good qualities—give better satisfaction and quicker results.

Many facts of great interest and value to fruit growers are published in the new 1909 Farmers' Year Book, a copy of which will be sent free on application to any of our sales offices.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the King in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

P. D. GOLD.

I trust every reader will try and secure a new subscriber for the Landmark. Our expenses are heavier and an increased circulation is necessary to enable us to make anything.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elder P. D. Gold.

My Beloved and Dear Brother—The following circular letter of the Warwick Association, written in 1845 by my dear father, Elder Gilbert Conklin, on "The resurrection of the body," received the unqualified endorsement of Elder Gilbert Beebe and all the ministers of the Warwick Association as well as the visiting ministers of corresponding associations, and though that glorious and Bible truth is a controverted point by a very few Old School Baptists, be it known that no circular letters could be written and sent forth as the sentiment of the Warwick Association now that did not embrace in the strongest terms that glorious Bible doctrine when that subject was under immediate consideration.

Affectionately your brother,
GEORGE D. CONKLIN,
CIRCULAR LETTER.

The subject chosen upon to dwell briefly in the present circular is that of the resurrection of the body, and from the importance attached to this subject in the scriptures it is judged that none can be more interesting to the saints. It is not presumed that anything new will be presented, and though it will be a repetition of the old things said and recorded, it is believed that sufficient interest is taken in the subject by the children of God to make it interesting to them. That there will be a resurrection of the bodies, both of the just and unjust, would seem to indicate a mind strongly imbued with skeptical principles. And though there is an admission of this fact, to a very great extent by such as profess to believe in Divine Revelation, yet the question is frequently agitated, "How are the dead raised up, and with what body do they come?" The great plainness of speech made use of in the scriptures would seem to leave little or no occasion for the agitation of this question by such as are taught by the word and spirit of the Lord. And hence the apostle calls the man who starts the question a fool; but at the same time goes on in a plain, simple, though forcible manner to illustrate the subject and ask the question.

To this illustration of the subject by the apostle, in the First Epistle to the Corinthians, some attention will be given. A reference is made to the custom of sowing seed into the earth, or grain into the ground, and to the fact observable to all who notice the process of vegetation, that that which is sown is not quickened except it die. As our bodies die and are deposited in the earth, they are spoken of as being sown, etc. The instruction given in this part of the illustration is, that though the body dies, no obstacle is thereby thrown in the way of its being raised, the power of God being adequate to the performance of this work, but rather that its death is indispensa-bly necessary in order to its being raised; that it is a resurrection of or from the dead. Again, in reference to sowing seed or grain, the apostle observes: "And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body shall be, etc." from which declaration it may have been supposed that the body sown in the grave is not the same body that is brought forth in the resurrection. To this point in the illustration special attention is invited. It is true that in sowing grain into the ground, we do not sow that body that shall be, or that we reap or expect to reap. But this has a reference to either quality or quantity or both. Yet though we reap a body ten or twenty fold larger than that we sow, as it may please the Lord to give the crop, or the body, the same grain as to kind and substance that we sow we reap; that is, if we sow wheat, we reap wheat, and hence the expression of the apostle, "and to every seed his own body." Again, "thou sowest not the body that shall be, etc.," indicating that the body shall be, or the body reaped is larger than that sown, but as a matter of course, of more importance, more valuable, etc. The lesson taught on this point of the illustration is, that the same body that is sown in the grave will be brought forth in the resurrection; and as the body deposited in the earth is spoken of as being sown and thus represented as seed in this matter, every seed will have his own body in the resurrection. Again, that the same body is raised that was sown, yet an important difference is manifest in the body as sown and as raised, as important as is the difference between corruption and incorruption, between mortality and immortality, between natural and spiritual, between sin and holiness; so that there is a peculiar fitness and aptness in the illustration in the apostle's language: "And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be," etc. The body as sown is not that body as in the resurrection, in beauty and glory, in honor and excellence, for it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is not intimated that the dead body or bodies, as sown (although represented as seed), possesses in itself a principle of germination as does the grain, but that in the resurrection it is brought forth by the mighty power of God according to the scriptures. In further illustration of how the dead are raised up and with what body they come, the apostle speaks of flesh; that all flesh is not the same flesh; that there is one kind of flesh of men, another of beasts, another of fishes and another of birds; by which we understand that although there be different species of flesh, yet they are all and each a fleshly substance, and that each kind possesses a bodily form. From which we learn that although our bodies are sown in corruption and raised in incorruption, are in their resurrection, as in their being sown, a fleshly substance, yet, as before remarked, differing essentially in honor, glory, beauty and excellency; in these respects they are not the same. Again, the apostle speaks of celestial or heavenly bodies and of bodies terrestrial, or earthly. The idea is, although they be celestial or terrestrial, heavenly or earthly, they are nevertheless bodies or substances, whether they be, sun, moon, stars, earth, or things of earth. So the human body, whether as sown in the earth or as brought forth in the resurrection, is verily a body, not a spirit without a body. But as the glory of the celestial is one and the glory of the terrestrial is another, and as there is one glory of the sun, another of the moon and another of the stars, and even between the stars there is a difference in glory, one star appearing larger than the stars, and the sun still larger, outshining and eclipsing the glory of the whole, so that by reason of its superior glory the others have comparatively no glory; "so also is the resurrection of the dead." There is a glory in the creation and formation of our bodies, being the creation of God, yet being under the sentence of death in consequence of sin, they are said to be sown in dishonor, but raised in glory. The glory of the bodies of the saints, as sown, is one, and the glory of them as raised is another. The scriptures seem to set forth a glory attached to the bodies of the saints here, although sinful and sown in dishonor, not only in the creation of God but also in that they are made "the temple of the Holy Ghost," and declared to be "members of Christ." 1st Cor. 6:15. But the glory to be attached to them hereafter is greater, so that the glory of the first is lost. It is no glory comparatively, is completely eclipsed by the glory in the resurrection as is the glory of the moon and the stars by that of the sun. The apostle having gone through with his illustrations and references to the grain, the variety of kinds of flesh, the celestial and terrestrial bodies, sun, moon and stars, their difference of magnitude and glory, goes on to assert in positive language what he had just been illustrating; first, declaring the design of his reference by saying, "so also is the resurrection of the dead." "It is sown in corruption, it (the same that is sown) is raised in corruption. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body." Here the apostle asserts the identity of that which is sown and that is raised, again and again, in his use of the personal pronoun "it." He also as frequently and as fully asserts the difference, the vast superiority, in beauty and glory of the saints (for it is them he has specially in view here-, as raised from the dead, to them as sown in the grave.

As immortality, spiritually and glory excel corruption, mortality and sin, so will the bodies of the saints in the resurrection excel them as are deposited in the earth. An important lesson is taught on this subject and much instruction given in the scriptures when speaking of the resurrection of Christ. That he possessed a body in substance and fashion like our own is certain, for he was found in fashion as man and was made in all things like unto his brethren, a partaker of flesh and blood. Verily and truly a man, yet holy, harmless and undefiled and separate from sinners, and after he had risen from the dead he told his disciples to handle and feel of him; "for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." The same body that lay in the tomb arose, it could not corrupt. A body like our own may exist free from sin, incorruptible and undefiled; such shall the bodies of the saints be in the resurrection. God has said to his people that he would quicken their mortal bodies and raise them in the image of Christ. They shall therefore be satisfied. It is enough. "I shall be satisfied when I awake in his likeness."

A word to those that are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord. The apostle says. "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible." "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of the archangel and the trumpet of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first." and we that are then alive, shall be unchanged. "For this corruption must put on incorruption and this mortal must put on immortality." So that the bodies of the saints, whether asleep or awake, at the coming of the Lord, shall be made to possess the image of the heavenly. And thus the apostle asserts that the Lord Jesus Christ shall "change our vile body," "according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself."

As it is not judged expedient to make our circular very lengthy, much that might be said on the subject must be omitted. A few remarks more will close this epistle. And why should it be thought a thing incredible that Christ should raise the dead? Will not the same power that formed our bodies out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into our nostrils the breath of life, be sufficient to raise them up from the slumbers of death? Shall not that voice that said: "Let there be light," and there was light—that voice that said to Lazarus, "come forth," and he came, he heard and obeyed by all the dead? "The hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice," etc. John 5:28. If God has decreed it and declared it who shall disannul it? "He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken our mortal bodies." Rom. 8:11. Again, "And God hath raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power." 1st. Cor. 6:14.

Dear Brethren, God will raise the dead, both the just and the unjust, for he has said it: and as his saints have borne the image of Adam, the first man, the earthly, so they shall in the resurrection bear the image of the second man, the Lord from heaven, the heavenly. The wisdom of the world, or human philosophy, is foolishness with God, and should be with us in this matter.

G. BEEBE,

Moderator.

G. CONKLIN.

Clerk.

"Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Mat. 10:16.

This must have been a very trying time with the disciples. They were men like others, capable of doing and were fishermen, one was a tax collector. Each one had his way and manner of working for a living and holding himself up among others who were their equals. But here is something else, something uncommon among men. One comes claiming to be their king. He is poor, makes no show in the world, is not esteemed among men, and has made himself of no reputation. He comes to them at their daily labors (not to street loafers and idlers) and says, "Follow me," and his word is of such power that they leave all, father, mother, nets, the receipt of custom, all, and follow this man. They saw no riches, no honors, no big reputation, but a poor Jew, whom they believed to be the Christ of God, who was to be their redeemer, their saviour. This faith moved them and they stood by him ready to go at his bidding, to do as he commanded, but they wanted to be with him to hear his words which were to them so full of the spirit they loved, to see his miracles so full of omnipotence.

But he now assures them that he is going to send them out into the world: not to gain riches, honors nor titles, not to have a good time, to make voyages that they might lecture thereon and gain riches and climb up to the top of the temple of fame as the world's greatest preachers, but he assures them that, "If ye will live godly in Christ Jesus you shall suffer persecution." Shall, not may. There is no uncertainty about it.

They are sheep and as such they must go forth. Harmless as doves, innocent as lambs, but they are sent among wolves or those whose business and disposition is to destroy. The Lord made the master to destroy as well as the potter to make the vessels. These disciples had no way of knowing the one from the other only as they went among them and partook of their fruit, for by their fruit shall you know them. The sheep and the wolf, the good tree and the bad are all known by the fruit they bear. These disciples had been given the spirit to discern both the good fruit and the wisdom to judge between them. The track of the wolf and that of the sheep are very different and they are to beware of dogs (wolf) and feed the sheep.

They are not told where they are to find the wolves, they may be in Israel or somewhere else, but they were sure to find them. The word to them is, "Blessed are ye when all men shall persecute you and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake." etc. All men. They may be in the church or out, what difference does it make. "Rejoice and be exceedingly glad." Oh, how contrary to the flesh! but it is a command and the joy is in the spirit of the truth.

"Be ye wise as serpents." What is the wisdom of the serpent? Some one has said that it is his charm, but I can't see it that way. The charm is the serpent's power; to get out of the way and hide himself from those who would destroy him is his wisdom. Thus the church is said to have dove's eyes within her locks. Eyes of watchfulness and innocence. The dove will spread her wings and fly away when she sees the enemy coming. The serpent will hide himself.

The Lord said, "When they persecute you in one city flee ye to another." Here is the wisdom of the serpent. They are not told to hate those they leave behind and not to notice them any more, but to pray for those who despitefully use them and to love those who hate them and to do good to those who evil entreat them. If they compell you to go one mile go two, or if they take away your coat give them your cloak.

All these did our Lord command and many more, but he nowhere said give them another trial and see if they will not do better the next time. Neither the wisdom of the serpent nor of the dove would be that way.

"And harmless as doves."

Whoever knew a dove to try to destroy, to kill, to live on flesh, to persecute? The dispositions of the dove and sheep are very much the same. Neither of them go just for the sake of going, but they go in search of food. In the spring or at the time to increase you will see the dove fly out love, but at no other season. Even so with the children of God; they come forth for comfort, to be edified, and strengthened in the Lord, to sit at his table and eat of his meat, to drink water at his fountain that they may grow up in the Lord. When they hear his voice saying, "Arise, my dove, my undefiled, and come away, for lo the winter is past; the rain is over and gone; the time of the singing of the birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land," then their souls are revived and strengthened and they are filled with his praises. They realize that they have a refreshing from the Lord and their spirits are revived in them.

If they have had hardness against any it is all forgiven and they are at peace with the Lord and all men; but even then they are not to forget to be wise and dwell prudently, for at such times the hawk for the dove and the wolf for the sheep will draw near to devour and destroy in the careless hour.

Watch, is the word for once and forever.

The Lord bless us and keep us that we fall not into the temptation and snare of the devil.

Yours in hope,
L. H. HARDY,

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—If any one so weak and full of infirmities should so address you, I will write a few lines for publication, and if you see fit to publish them, do so, and if not, all will be well with me.

I have had a desire for a long time to write what I hope to be the dealings of the Lord with me, and have felt very much impressed for the last few days, so much so that I can't get my mind from it long at a time.

When I was a child I would often think of God and Heaven, and hoped I might be saved when I died and not go to torment. I could not enjoy myself as other children seemed to and I would often do things to make them think I was enjoying myself. I dreamed three times the world was coming to an end and each time everything would look dark and gloomy and I thought my time was not much longer, which gave me a lot of trouble. I studied very much about it and wanted to read the Bible and Landmark every time I could, whenever no one would find it out. I greatly enjoyed hearing people talk on the subject of salvation and hear their experience. When Primitive Baptists would come to our house and talk with our parents I would try to catch every word they would say. On one occasion a friend was telling my father his experience. I don't think he ever joined the church, but was a believer. He said when he was a child he would set and listen to Old Baptists talk, but didn't want any one to find it out and pointed his big finger at me and said: just like that child over there in the corner. I felt very cheap about it for I didn't think they knew I was listening.

Before I ever went to a party I dreamed myself and a young woman went to one and as we were coming back, near home, I thought we came to a great pond of water and it seemed like the ground was turning to water and coming to meet us. I thought she went in first and when I was going in I heard a voice say, "Does my Redeemer live," and I woke up wondering what that meant. I felt like God had spoke in that dream which was very sweet to me indeed. And another dream was that the moon fell and broke and looked like buttermilk and molasses or eggs and molasses mixed together. I thought when it fell one of my grandmothers scraped it together with her foot and gave it a send and it went way back in the northwest and fell. She did it again and the third time she kicked it it staid. This was a dream which bore on my mind for a long time. I have heard that Elder Williams dreamed the same dream and I have always wished to hear him tell it.

From this I went on trying to enjoy myself with young people and trying to make them think I was enjoying myself, although it was generally very hard to do so. Sometimes I would be the gayest of my associates and then when I would get to myself there would be a great weight on my mind. I kept on in this way until I was married, when I thought I would be thrown more in married people's company and would be alright, but found myself not much better. I thought I could reason out things very well and I wondered why I didn't know the Bible was true as well as any one else. So I thought it was a supposition written out on the order of history and went on a good while feeling very well until the fall, when I was taken sick, and while suffering it came to me forcibly I was a sinner in the sight of God. One woman who was there said, almost immediately, I acted like a different person. I told her I had gotten so I could bear my suffering better. I felt like then I could bear anything and kept everything to myself. I soon found I had a burden in my breast which made me so miserable I didn't know what to do or where to go. When I was with any one I would try to be cheerful, but just as soon as I would get to myself I would begin crying. One evening when studying over my condition, the Lord's prayer, which he taught his disciples, came into my mind and I could not think whether it was a song or poetry. In a little while I went to my husband's father's for something and found a leaf of the Testament on the bureau that had the same prayer on it. It seemed like I had not even thought of trying to pray, and I then began trying to. I tried to beg the Lord to have mercy on me a sinner. It seemed I was like a ship on the ocean, tossed by the wind, and without the help of God could do nothing. Then I began trying to pray all the time, in company and out. I could not talk very much and was so burdened for about three months, I think, when strange to say, this burden left me and I knew not when it went. I craved then to get it back, for I felt like I had more enjoyment with it than without it. I think this was in March or April. I don't know very much about how I felt until in the fall when I awoke one morning feeling greatly rejoiced in the Lord, and this feeling possessed me so that tears ran freely down my cheeks, and I did not think of eating until late in the day. In the evening I thought I was all right and would never see any more trouble and then I went on in a worldly way, I guess. I wanted to tell people how good I was and what great things I was enjoying, but somehow I did not, but set a time that I thought I would, which was February 27, 1902. It was on the 27th of October, 1900, I first felt to be a sinner in the sight of God, and when the time came I had set, my troubles returned worse than ever. It seemed to me the Lord had turned from me forever, and there were three days and nights I didn't sleep at all. All was dark and desolate before me and I thought then I had taken the sign for the thing signified, and it was on my mind every morning that "many are called but few are chosen." I thought I was called, but not chosen.

I read the Bible every chance I could and it seemed every thing I read condemned me so much so I would think I would read it no more, but I would soon be reading it again. I thought I would ask some one to pray for me, but let every chance go by and not ask them. Sometimes I would feel a little better and would think maybe some one has prayed for me. I felt so weak and destitute of knowledge, wisdom and strength I would pray to the Lord to give them to me if, oh Lord, it was his will. I had read in the scriptures that there were some that were not to be prayed for and I would think I was one of them. I wandered why I was born and craved to die. I thought God would do the same thing for me after death as he would if I lived longer, and was sure he would do right with me. One morning when I was trying to pray these words came to me, "Praise the Lord who makes your cause his own." These words were neither seen nor heard, but were felt very plain, although they did not take hold of me as I wished them to until twelve months or more after that time. One day as I was reading some songs I came to this one "'Tis to his spouse that Jesus speaks; he chides a long delay." I could then feel I was his and he was mine. Some times the words, "I am a stranger here below, and what I am 'tis hard to know," were very comforting to me and also, "We travel through a barren land, with dangers thick on every hand."

On July 27, 1904, I began feeling very strange and thought I was going crazy. I had always hoped not to get deranged, but then it seemed all right, even if I was going crazy. I was perfectly willing and kept getting worse until I thought I was going to die. In a few moments, however, I began to get better and every thing looked white and clear for that time of night. I then thought I had crossed the Red Sea and entered a new land of rest, and I said three times, I thank thee, O Lord, for what thou hast done. The next morning I was hoping for more evidence. I then craved to be baptized and thought my experience was so much in accordance with other experiences I had read that they would receive me, but could not feel worthy to go, although I could not keep it off my mind. And the day I went it seemed almost impossible for me to go, but a compelling power kept saying, you are going, yes, you are going.

So I went, was received and baptized by our loving pastor, Elder J. J. Hall, and after I had gone some distance from the water a good feeling came over me. I felt like I wanted to shout and laugh at the top of my voice. But I have had ups and downs since then, with many more downs than ups. We can't always rejoice.

As my letter is getting long I will close requesting prayers of all who have a mind to pray for me, that I may be more upright in the sight of God.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

E. M. O'BRIANT.

Dear Brother Gold:

I thus desire to express my gratitude for and appreciation of the kindly assistance and comfort the dear brethren and friends are rendering me in this hour of need and distress. Since my statement in the Landmark of January 15, many have so kindly extended the helping hand and loving heart. Many have been the expressions of brotherly kindness and friendly sympathy received in their loving precious letters. The messages of tender fellow-feeling have gone to my cold, bleeding heart with melting and encouraging touch. Several of these letters from poor, tried, kindred hearts have overcome me with emotions of much gratitude to God my Father, and to the dear brethren with a deep sense of my unworthiness. These messages have made me exclaim: Who am I that the God of all mercy should thus bless poor unworthy me! Oh, I want to be humbly thankful, brethren, both to the dear Lord and you.

While I value the material assistance extended, I much more prize the gold of love, sympathy and brotherly kindness. Such coin as this is minted in the agony of the cross. Oh, give me the tender love and sympathy of my brethren, which is dearer to me than all else.

I have received epistles of temporal and spiritual worth from Georgia, South Carolina and our own state and even from distant California. A dear friend and brother in this distant state sent me a beautiful letter. All these things strike me forcibly. They teach me that my dear Father and ever dear friend is not limited in his ways and resources and that he who clothes the lilies of the field and feeds the birds of the air will avenge his own elect who cry unto him day and night. I tell you he will avenge them speedily, yea, he hath the very hair of our heads numbered. Does he not say, "as thy days are so shall thy strength be." "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Therefore we may boldly say the Lord is my helper.

I care not what man shall do unto me. And again, seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto thee. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall stand, in the language of the strength of Israel that cannot lie. The merciful Father, by the present smilings of his face, is applying these precious promises to my heart with redoubled force. But oh, what a thorny maze my burdened heart has passed through to reach this land of light. What distresses, what doubts, what fears, what murmurings, what rebelliousness, what humiliation, what despair and discouragement have rushed upon my soul during this long black night of trial. But now how precious the rays of this morning's light. What a glorious morning! A morning without a cloud. How long it will last I know not. I fear it will be short. God knows. Such, however, is our earthly pilgrimage. Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. I would like to write a personal letter to each dear brother and sister who has assisted me, but have neither the time nor the means so to do, therefore I here address them. The brethren up to date forwarded me $94.50; with this amount I paid the interest on both my mortgages of $500 each and a small amount on the principal. I have in hand $18.50 which I have not paid over. The amount I have paid over is $75.92. The amount now outstanding against my property is $972.28. May the Lord of Heaven and earth wipe this debt out is my prayer and may the blessings of the dear Lord rest upon all who have been enabled to render their aid and upon all the Israel of God. J. A. Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—My cousin, W. F. Graves, Vinton, Va., invited me to visit him, and preach in his vicinity, seeming to stress the idea of a visit more than anything else. I thanked him, and expressed a desire to go. But he writes to me again, enclosing Dr. Hurst's note to you, and your reply.

It is said that "consistency is a jewel," and the scriptures speak of "the legs of the lame not being equal." Do you think it is consistency to fellowship "unlimited predestination" and "secret orders," the former being the grossest kind of heresy, and the latter being idolatry; and then not fellowship me and others because we will not declare nonfellowship against the use of the organ in the church, something in which there is no principle involved, and no harm, unless there is harm made of it?

None but few of our churches have organs, and many of us are willing to accord to them the right to do so, believing that they have a right to judge for themselves in such matters, and that the scriptures give no rule by which such things can be made tests of fellowship. And the brethren who use organs in the church are as well-informed and spiritual as any we have, and their churches are peaceable and prosperous, and sound in doctrine; which cannot be said of many that are opposing them. It seems to me that many are governed by tradition and prejudice, and a party spirit, more than they are by reason and the scriptures.

That pamphlet, "The Old Paths Defended," sent all over the country by Elder Hanks and brother I. M. Norman, was misleading. In it questions were asked concerning "fleshly protracted meetings" and "assessing church members for ministerial support," things which our brethren do not practice nor advocate. The organ was brought in as though it was only one of many things that our brethren were using. This shows that those who are raising such an ado about the organ, do not consider it sufficient on which to make an issue. And the organ being not sufficient alone on which to make an issue; and the brethren not using the other things alleged against them, shows that those who are causing such a disturbance among our people, have no case.

Now you know that the Primitive Baptists in the northeastern states, and everywhere as to that, that hold to the "absolute predestination of all things," are fellowshiped by yourself, Elders Hassell, Thompson, Oliphant and almost all that are opposing the organ. And some advocate that heresy themselves. I remember noticing in your paper years ago, where you advocated that heresy yourself. I do not know how you stand now, as to your believing it; but I know you are tolerating it, and nominally fellowshiping it. And I remember that when you visited Kentucky many years ago, you published a communication from Elder Wallingford, on your return home, in which he stated that the church was not composed of sinners, and needed no redemption; which was the grossest kind of heresy, even denying, as it did, Christ the Redeemer. Yet, you made no "remarks," condemning his doctrine. How can you now come with so much complacency and assumption, and write as you did concerning me in your note to Dr. Hurst? Do you not see that this is very much like the Pharisees of old who "strained at gnats, and swallowed camels?" And the Primitive Baptists in the country of Elders Thompson and Oliphant, many of them belong to "secret orders," and they are not nonfellowshipped. It gives no "offence to our people, for them to preach in our churches," using your language to Dr. Hurst.

Now, I do not mean that one wrong will justify another; but I simply mean that it is not at all consistent nor Christ-like to reject brethren because of some minor things, and to receive others that are heretics and idolators. God seeth, and will judge his people.

The Missionary Baptists, from whom you came many years ago, are now advocating the Arminian doctrine, straight: but, after all, Arminian doctrine, though it is false, is not as bad as anti-nomianism. Arminianism, while it is false, and robs God of the glory for the salvation of sinners, it does cause people to live moral lives. Anti-nomianism charges God with being the author of all sin and wickedness through his predestination; and licenses men to do as they list. Now the Arminian will deny being one; but the anti-nomian does the same thing. I hope that I am neither one of these characters; but of the two,

I have much more respect for the Arminian than I have for the anti-nomian. Now anti-nomian is the logical and practical result of the false doctrine that sets forth that God hath predestinated all things. What do you think of Elder L. H. Hardy's blasphemous expression, "We do not know which to be thankful for the most, sin or salvation from sin?" I have not seen where any of you have declared against him or his blasphemy. I suppose you will preach him, and that it would give no "offence" to your people for him to preach in your churches.

There has been for years a tendency towards anti-nomianism, among our people; and I think some have about gotten there.

I preach as I did forty years ago; only, I hope I preach better, having grown in grace and knowledge, and being more spiritual as I am nearing my happy home in heaven. I preach the blessed gospel of Christ wherever I go; and I thank God who always causes me to triumph in Christ, and make manifest the savor of his knowledge by me in every place. I do not ride hobbies, nor run on extremes. So you see that in hindering me on a little visit to a few churches in the vicinity of my relatives in Virginia, you have hindered the gospel, and have "hurt the oil and the wine." I would have hurt no one, but would have done them good. The word of the Lord is, "If they come not bringing the doctrine of Christ, receive them not into your house, neither bid them God speed." Do you obey this word, when you receive heretics that preach anti-nomianism? If the doctrine of "God's unlimited predestination," the very root and foundation of anti-nomianism, is not heresy, then I do not know what is. One of the ministers belonging to the East Atlanta church, from which some of us were compelled to withdraw because of their heresy in doctrine and order, publicly proclaimed that God's people were under no law whatever, which is antinomian doctrine simple and manifest. When he had finished his sermon, he was heartily endorsed by his kind in the church by a hearty handshake. He also objected to the teaching of the scriptures in regard to God's children being taught by the ministers of Christ. But he is very much opposed the organ; and I suppose you would not hinder him at all, but would receive him yourself, and let him preach in your church.

Again, do you think it was brotherly, or even just in you, in publishing the false charges of Elder Monsees, a "novice," against fifteen of God's ministers, without an investigation on your part, or without proof? Do you not think you were guilty of a great sin, of which you should speedily repent? Have you any more authority to publish your paper, through which you allow brethren to be falsely charged, than brethren have to use the organ? There is no scriptural authority in the New Testament for either a religious paper, nor an organ; but I regard both as privileges that may be abused, as almost every other privilege may.

An intolerant spirit almost or altogether always accompanies error; and traditions, the traditions of men, are urged as reasons for false doctrine, instead of the scriptures. My excuse for writing to you thus in plainness, I hope is according to the word of the Lord which says, "Cry aloud, and spare not: tell Jacob of his sons and Israel of his transgressions." It is a mercy, if you and I are Jacob and Israel, even if we have to be reproved often. And if you can say with David, "Let the righteous smite me: it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me: it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head": then it is an evidence that you are an Israelite indeed.

Your brother in hope,

T. J. BAZEMORE.

Remarks—I have for more than thirty years been visiting Georgia occasionally. Elders J. R. Respass, Rowe, Pently, Nathan Russev, Patman, Montgomery, Adams, Pursely and many others now gone were then active preachers, also Elder Wm. Mitchell, of Alabama. I mingled with all these brethren and heard them preach.

They were predestinarians. Neither word limited nor unlimited was used. The simple word predestinated was good enough for them. Predestination then was all in Jesus. Then all was peace and love among the brethren.

I heard nothing then of antinomianism. Baptists then preached that Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that be-believes—believers are not under Moses as a leader, but Jesus is their lawgiver, leader, Lord and Saviour. Hence that we are dead to the law by the body of Jesus Christ, and alive unto God through Jesus Christ.

It was lovely then to visit those brethren. Peace, love and good will prevailed.

I went into nearly all sections of Georgia about twenty years ago, and peace abounded. I did not find a single organ in any church, nor did I hear such a thing spoken of, or that any one desired it. The singing was excellent, and often at the close of meetings we had prayer for members and their children—the children being present, who would give us their hand in token of a desire that we remember them in prayer.

Last September I again visited Georgia. How did I find it? Associations divided, a new set of Baptists called "Progressives" had come in. They have organs in their meeting houses. They blame the old Baptists as being illiberal because they are not willing for those that want organs to have them. But who has brought in the new things? It is not the Baptists that I used to visit. Who is to blame for this trouble? Not the old Baptists who stand where the church stood 20 or 30 years ago.

One says what objection have you to organs? Did not David use them? See Amos 6:5. There is a woe to them that invent to themselves instruments of music like David.

Organs, etc., were used under the law or in the tabernacle worship. But Jesus fulfilled the law and that worship or service is ended. Jesus has brought in the gospel worship. David offered sheep, etc., on Jewish altars. All that is gone. We do not offer bullocks on altars of stone. The Old Testament worship was literal or letter, visible worship. But the worship of Jesus is spiritual. A new heart is given and the kingdom is within you. There is not an instance of the use of an organ in the New Testament worship either by Christ nor a single apostle, nor a single church. But they sang, speaking to each other in Psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs singing with grace in their hearts to the Lord.

When I was in Atlanta I was told that the new order of Progressive Baptists had organized a church in Atlanta, and that Elder T. J. Bazemore was a member of it. When Elder Hurst enquired of me the standing of Elder Bozemore, I answered that he is with the new order. That is my offence. "Thus saith the Lord, stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, we will not walk therein." Jer. 6:16.

If there are any secret societies among our people I am not aware of it. I know it is the nature of man to want something new. New gods, new orders, new societies is the order of progress. But brethren keep out of these things, stand fast in the liberty wherein Christ has made us free, and be not entangled with the yoke of bondage. Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. Ye are complete in Christ wanting nothing. Hold him the head and then the body is safe.

It looks strange that Baptists should dispute about music.

The old set do not want any machine music, but singing and making melody in their hearts to the Lord. While Progressives want an addition of organs or instrumental music. It is a matter of grief to me that this distress exists. It was my duty to warn the brethren. But those that have departed from the good old way have occasioned the distress. It is the nature of men when they take a wrong step to persist in it, and defend their course. Hence the great importance of not taking the wrong step.

If Elder Bazemore has learned so much after preaching so long, and has made such great progress let him pity and bear with his tardy, slow brethren who cannot keep up with him, but like Jacob move along limping as they can hold out.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

As I have a day off to rest, meditate and attend to my correspondence, my mind has been directed to think of you and many of the dear friends of grace with whom I have been associated in North Carolina, my native state, and with whom I have mingled in sweet worship.

I find an inestimable pleasure in retrospecting the past when our hearts, are tendered by the grace of God would join and swell the anthems of praise to our adorable Redeemer who has done so much for us.

My brother, as the days go by I am more forcibly reminded of my obligation to him for the immeasurable gift of his love, the treasures of earth, though I possessed them all, are not sufficient for an obligation; my ability physically, mentally and spiritually are insufficient to render equal praise for his boundless mercy. It is my prayer that I may be able to praise him more and better in the future than I have in the past. Oh, may our lives all be more consecrated to his blessed cause.

When I look around and observe on every hand the indifference, the inactivity and the "love of many waxing cold," it grieves me sorely. I want to see those who profess to love God and his dear people prove it by their works. "Faith without works is dead."

"Show me your faith without your works, and I will show you my faith by my works." Jas. 2:17-18. I am persuaded that by works is the only way to show your faith, at least that is what I got out of the above lesson. When a person professes to love Christ I want to see him manifest it by his works, his conversation, his acts in life and a godly deportment. If he professes to love the brethren, which he cannot do unless his heart has been touched by the spirit of God; neither can he love God without loving the brethren. 1st John 4:21, 3, 10. I want to see them manifest it by making the necessary sacrifice to meet each other at the time appointed for divine service. I feel, too, that you should esteem it a great privilege to meet with God's dear children, not as a mere duty. David said: "I was glad when it was said to me, let us go up to the house of the Lord to worship." It is a very poor Old Baptist that attends his meetings just because he feels it his duty to do so. Where there is no more, I am glad there is that much interest, but I think he should regard it as a very high exalted privilege and pleasure to meet with the dear children of God here. There is nothing more more gratifying to me when attending my appointments to find the members all filling their seats.

Dear child of God, why are you striving and laboring so hard for the things of this world that you would neglect your church meetings, the sweet service of Christ, something lasting, durable and incorruptible, for a few dollars that will perish with you? (It will perish with you if you make it your idol). Ask yourself the question, would you go to your meeting if you expected to collect five dollars or ten dollars? There, don't you know you would go every time if you thought you could collect or make that much money? I know you would if you stay at home for the money. Then don't you love money better than you do the durable, sweet, and lasting service of Christ. These are questions well worth our consideration. Oh, may God stir his people to activity and loving faithfulness to his blessed cause.

I am now, November 27th, on a trip in Texas and have been filling appointments out here about five weeks, and the Lord willing, will stay until about the 20th of December. I have met many lovable and precious Baptists and have never enjoyed better liberty in speaking. Owing to the extreme busy season of the year the attendance during the week has been small though interesting. At many places while speaking the entire congregation seemed to be absorbed with interest while some were moved to tears of joy, and still others seen to shed seemingly bitter tears of penitence.

I never have been more fully endorsed anywhere than I have been here in Texas. They love the same precious doctrine, salvation by grace, as our people in North Carolina, Georgia and other eastern states that I have traveled. The dear Old Line Baptists believe and teach the same everywhere. May God be praised for his unspeakable gifts to poor sinful man.

I am again encouraged to "still press on" knowing we will have but few more heartaches, a few more sad afflictions and briny tears to shed and then the dear Lord will call us up higher "where pain and afflictions will be felt and feared no more." Blessed hope.

Yours unworthily,

J. A. MONSEES.

Hamilton, Texas.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Beloved Brother—We learn from reading, if the eye be single, the whole body is full of light, but if it be evil the whole body is full of darkness and how great is that darkness. I have seen the time when I was full of darkness and did not know it until the light shined in my heart and showed me how vile I was. By nature my heart is desperately wicked above all things and who can know it. When the light shines in our hearts and shows us how wicked and miserable we are and our inability to extricate ourselves from under the just condemnation of God's holy and righteous law, and when all things fail us and God for Christ's sake forgives us all our sins, and we are enabled to see the light and rejoice in hope of eternal glory and are made to believe that Christ died for us with that assurance of joy that is full of glory and unspeakable, then our bodies are full of light. While in this state we have an eye single to the glory for good and not for evil. Let us get the beam out of our own eye that we may see clearly how to get the mote out of our brother's eye. When we are in the glory of God and we can watch over each other we have this eye singleness how glad we are to meet together and hear the kind expressions of his goodness, mercy and blessings which God has prepared for those that love him and who are the called according to his purpose. As unworthy as we often feel to be, our God is a powerful God. He is good, merciful, kind and of long forbearance towards his little ones. His power was sufficient for Daniel in the lion's den, for the Hebrew children in the fiery furnace and for Jonah in the belly of hell, and is for all of his children as long as he has any use for them here in this world. When he gets done with us here in this unfriendly world he will take us home to himself there to remain and bask in the sunshine of Jesus forever more.

Brother Gold, my mind has been burdened of late about the duty of churches toward their pastors. This scripture has burdened me much,

"Muzzle not the ox that treadeth out the corn." I will tell you of a dream I had. I dreamed I was at church and the dearly beloved brother D. S. Webb was preaching (I wish to say that all of God's ministers are beloved in the spirit), and a man stood near by with a stick in his hand, and said you believe in preaching for money, do you? The preacher said yes, in part. He then struck the preacher several blows with the stick and I cried out, stop that, stop that, and he stopped. Then the man said, or do you believe in preaching for bread? The preacher again said, in part, yes. The man struck him several blows more with the stick. I cried again, stop that, and he stopped. I said to the preacher, You do not believe in muzzling the ox that treadeth out the corn, do you? and the preacher said no, and started toward me. I met him and threw my arms around his neck and cried out, may God bless the people. It hurt me to see the preacher imposed on for preaching the truth. It hurt me so that my voice chattered and my whole frame shivered as I looked toward the man to see what he was doing. He ran toward the door and it was all a dream.

I do think we ought to give our pastors something, and those who visit us also. Let each one give according as the Lord has prospered him. Our preachers have more burdens to bear and more duties to perform than the most of us. Why it is that I am so much troubled about these things? I cannot fully express why. I hope it is in a spirit of love. A very precious brother told me he was trying to serve eight churches; another precious one said he was trying to serve six. I think we ought to help such brethren when they visit us as well as look after our pastors. Let us all bear a part in all church expenses and thereby do to others as we would have them do to us. As the tree is to be known by the fruit it bears let us all try to bear a little.

I have been asked the question if I believed God would call a man to preach the gospel and not put it in the heart of somebody to help him. I say no. The trouble is we often fail to do the things we are impressed to do and thereby have to suffer the consequences. One said, ye are created in Christ Jesus unto good works. Is this not a good work? If so let us show our faith by our works. The poor widow cast in all of her leaven. How blessed it is to be kept close enough to the Lord to be willing to do our duty and leave the event with God. No more at present. As ever,

Yours in love,
J. R. JONES.

THE RESURRECTION.

Some time ago Elder J. J. Beck, of Virginia, and sister Lydia Ray, of Texas, requested me to give my views of the above subject, but not until now have I felt to attempt to do so. What does the word resurrect or resurrection mean? What should we mean by it? The scriptures must give the meaning we should have and use. To know the meaning of the term does not imply that we know the how of it, but the fact of it. The fool wants to know how the dead are raised up and with what body they come; the child of God wants to know that the dead are raised up and that there is a body with which they come. In order to a resurrection there must be a body, and in order to a body there must be a resurrection. With respect to the people of God as they relate to the resurrection there are bodies terrestrial and there are bodies celestial, and with respect to the resurrection as it relates to them there is a vital embodiment of divine nature and power by the wonderful working of the inherent energy of which there is a passing from this body to that, as from the glory of the one to the glory of the other.

That which thus passes from the one state to the other according to and by the mysterious working of the divine, creative and incomprehensible power of him who declared himself to be the resurrection and the life, is itself as mysteriously incomprehensible as is that by which it is sown a natural body and is raised a spiritual body. The very same it that is sown a natural body is raised a spiritual body. It is a body that is sown and it is a body that is raised, but the one is natural and the other is spiritual, and yet it is the same one body. It is not the identical body, any more than sowing is identical reaping, or that a spirit that has not flesh and bones is an identical man, or that a spirit that has not flesh and bones is an identical man, or body which has both. "Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more" (after the flesh). The resurrection is not a literal something any more than is salvation, or grace, or faith, or to be born again. "Mortality is swallowed up life." The mortal puts on immortality, the corruptible puts on incorruption.

We often come short of the full measure of the truth of a subject through the lack of a breadth of consideration commensurate with it. We are too much inclined to think of the body as one of the three component parts of a man, body, soul and spirit. It is the man that dies. "If a man die, shall he live again?" By man came death, and by man came the resurrection. It must be conclusive, and justly so, that death came upon that by which it came.

As it came by man, it came upon man, therefore, man died, all men die; death passed upon all men. That which died is that which made alive is resurrected. The whole man died the whole man is made alive, is resurrected.

It is said of Christ: "A body hast thou prepared me." Was not this body the man whose name should be called Jesus? Christ Jesus, the Lord, was manifested from heaven, but his manifestation was in the flesh, and thus he was made to be of the seed of David according to the flesh, and as such is called the man Christ Jesus. This man died and was buried and by the resurrection from the dead was declared to be the son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness.

This man is the body of that divine substance which was seen by the omniscient eye when the Christ was curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. This substance is the same, whether dwelling in the earth beneath, the man of sorrow, made to be sin, or in heaven above, the election of grace, the righteousness of God: And as with him so with his people to him, by him, and in him.

When Christ laid down his life it was not in the sense that he was without beginning of days, or end of life, but as a man. Through the eternal spirit, by the Christ life, the man life, was offered. The man is the body of the Christ. In the man is death, in the Christ is the resurrection unto eternal life, and in him is the life by which the dead are raised, the life by which mortality is swallowed up, therefore, he is the resurrection and the life to, for and in his people. Christ in you the hope of glory, the hope that this vile body shall be changed and fashioned like unto his own glorious body: "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

Man was created in the earth, and afterward was made, formed, fashioned in the image of his Creator, in a figure of another creation, formation and image. In a mysteriously wonderful sense the people of God were created in the new earth where-in the will of God is done as it is done in heaven, even as they were created in Christ, and are formed as Christ is formed in them the hope of glory. This is a re-creation, a regeneration, a resurrection by which the man which was the prime substance of the first creation, vitalization, and generation, is brought forth into an embodiment adequate to which he was by his Creator and re-Creator predestinated. In the twofold character of the people of God the first Adam constitutes the outer man, or the body, and the second Adam the inner man, the spirit, and life, or the outer man relates to the one, and the inner man relates to the other. When Paul said, I keep my body under, he must have meant the Adam man, by which came death, and he spake as by the revealed power of the Christ man, by whom came life. The man which is born again is the man who was regenerated, or recreated, and he is the man who was created, and who sinned and died, and he is the man who is resurrected, the body that is changed which is the body of the Christian, and the Christian is the man in whom is Christ the hope of glory, and by virtue of this divine inner man, this hidden man of the heart, the whole man, inner and outer, follows in the life way of Christ, and therefore, is called a Christian. Our earthly house of this tabernacle which is to be dissolved is the man as he relates to the child of God, and the house which is from heaven is the man as manifested in Christ as from heaven. As children of God are, as such, born from heaven, and in this tabernacle dwell among men, they are translated to heaven and in that tabernacle dwell with God. Paul says that Enoch was translated that he should not see death, and all of God's people are translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of his dear son. To translate a word out of one language, into another does not make it a different word, but it is the same word in a different tongue or language, a different body. To know a word in Hebrew does not enable one to know that same word when translated into Greek. To know one here does not signify that we shall know him when he shall have been made an inhabitant of another or a spiritual world. We do not know men in the kingdom of light by having known them in the kingdom of darkness, or we do not know a man is a Christian by having known him as a sinner and yet he is the same man, of sinners the chief, of saints less than the least, the man whose flesh there dwells no good thing, the man who is perfect in Christ Jesus wanting nothing.

With recognition in heaven, or to have there the identical body, we must have the entire man, for men are alive in this life and they are alive in the life to come. Man is alive united, but is dead when dissolved. The child was dead while the soul was absent from the body, but when its soul returned, or came into it again the child lived. Jesus said: "I am he that liveth and was dead and born again ever more." He is only known in life, whether in this life, or in that, and so are his people.

died the graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept rose, and came out of the graves, after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many. These were the bodies of saints which had formerly lived and who by the death and resurrection of Jesus live again, just as Christ had lived and does live. He had lived and walked with men and so had they. He rose from the dead and so did they, and he appeared unto many and so did they. Christ appeared as a man and so must they have appeared. I mean it could not have been their bodies, as the bodies of men, abstractly that rose, and came out of the graves, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many; but actually as literal, living men they appeared unto many, went into the holy city, came out of the graves and rose from sleep, or from the dead. We may only consider Christ abstractly while he was dead, his body was buried, his soul was in hell which was, perhaps, in this instance, the grave, and his spirit was; with the spirits in prison which also might be regarded as the grave, but all were present when he died, and all were present when he rose from the dead. From the dead, is from where the dead are, whether in the sepulcher hewn out in the solid rock, or dug in the soft earth, or whether mingled with the dust of the battlefield, or with the waters of the seas. It was the man Christ Jesus when he died and it was the man Christ Jesus when he rose, the same then as he walked among men, the same now as he is seated at the right hand of God, the same Lord Jesus Christ yesterday, to-day, and for ever, and as with him so with his people in him, through him, by him and to him. It should be noticed that those bodies of the saints appeared, and that Jesus after his resurrection always appeared and disappeared, even, when the doors were closed and bolted, which natural, literal men can not do, therefore, this word appear signifies that those who thus appeared were not really, in a very material sense, what they appeared to be, though they appeared as literal men, in a literal sense as living natural lives, yet they were not natural, literal men, but only were as they thus appeared, and in contra-distinction from a spiritual manifestation. This exhibition, it seems to me, was to establish the fact of the resurrection by Christ rather than the manner of it.

The resurrection when considered with respect to Christ as He relates to His people is an inherent creative power, wrought in Christ a mighty power, as ordained of God for the gathering of all things in one, even in Christ; and as it relates to his people, it is the gathering together of the elect of God in one body, the blessed fullness of him that filleth all in all, and that infinite showing forth of the bride the lamb's wife unto that eternal glory to which she was predestinated by God the Father before the world began.

The resurrection does not mean to raise up simply as from the grave, relatively it seems to imply this, but really and truly it means to to change, and in this change there is a passing from a lower order, state and condition to those of a higher and most holy sphere. Primarily, the resurrection is a divine virtue and power which permeates the depths and heights, the lengths and breadths, through and by which the highest descended to the depths, and the lowest ascends to the heights. It is the sublime and awe-inspiring humility of heaven, and the indescribable and transcendently glorious exaltation of earth. And these we find in their infinite fullness in him who declares himself to be the resurrection and the life, in whom are the descensions of heaven and the ascensions of earth.

The resurrection is by faith an ever present virtue and power dwelling in those who have their senses exercised by faith to know that Jesus Christ is the son of God, that the Christ is the living creative power of God by which all live unto him, whether they be yet unborn, or died a thousand years ago. It was in the burning bush, by which Abraham, though dead to men, was alive unto God. It was in the living word sentence "Whom say ye that I am," by which Peter answered: "Thou art the Christ the son of the living God," and it was in that ever living declaration to Martha: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth, and believeth in me shall never die: believest thou this?" which brought from her the like answer: "I believe that thou art the Christ, the son of God which should come into the world." While Christ stood in her presence as a man he was in her the mighty power of God, the resurrection of his people. The Christ was in her the hope of glory, an inner, abiding, indescribable, persuading assurance of a living creative presence which she could neither understand nor resist, by which she came, in spite of her unbelief, to the consummation of the fondest and most tender desire of her heart.

Every one who has in him this Christ, the hope of glory, has in him the resurrection and the life. This indwelling is not after the flesh but after the spirit, therefore, at its revelation there is satisfaction and contentment fraught with a quiet assurance of peace that passeth understanding. If it be so in this life what must be the raptures of blessedness when at the dissolution of this tabernacle there shall come upon us the effulgent glory of our house from heaven. Being then clothed upon with our house which is from heaven, we shall not be found naked, but eternal in the heavens even as our house is eternal therein.

The minds of the children of God are often agitated by the question as to where the dead are between the time they die and the resurrection. You ask me where my mother is buried, and as a man in the flesh thinking of the dead with respect to their relation to men and to the grave, I answer referring to a certain plot of earth, on a certain little hill, in a certain locality; but if you ask me where mother is, I think of the living as they relate to God, for all live unto him, and I think of her as in the spirit by faith, for thus I knew her here with respect to redemption, salvation and a hope in God, and I answer, mother is in the Paradise of God. As a woman she is dead to men and the things of earth, as in the first Adam who was of the earth earthy, but as a child of God she is alive unto God and the things of heaven as in the second Adam "Who is a quickening spirit." "Them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." The dead are only dead to men. The living and the dead sustain the same relation to God, as all live unto him. He declared himself to be the God of the living and not of the dead. That is he is the living God and therefore the dead live unto him, even as he lives unto them, as he is their God. "I am the God of Abraham and of Isaac, and of Jacob." Jesus says: "Because I live ye shall live also." Of what avail is the death of Christ if those for whom he died are dead? If they in this life lived by the faith of Christ who lived in them, are they less alive to God in the life beyond in him who declared, "I am he that was dead and am alive, and behold I live for ever more;" and again, "I am the resurrection and the life."

There is a kind of tradition as to the resurrection which prevents, it seems to me, the true understanding of this momentous and mysterious question! That the soul goes to heaven at death and the body is buried and at the resurrection, in the end of the world, at the last day, the soul returns and reunites with the body, and then all go to heaven! I can only think of the people of God as they are in Christ, whether in this or that life. The soul of Christ was not left in hell nor his body in the grave, and why should it be so with his people? He said to the thief: "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." This was divinely and mysteriously so while they were in the tomb. Paradise may not be heaven, in the immediate and divine presence of God, and perhaps is not, but surely it is neither the grave, nor anything else short of a living consciousness of infinite rest and happiness. In a sense it is not a perfect embodiment of consummated happiness, because not until all shall have been gathered into the eternal and divine presence under Christ, and he under the Father could the eternal glory shine forth to the uttermost and infinite bounds, and the fullness of him that filleth all in all appear the glorified embodiment to the praise of which all things are and were created.

I do not feel to comprehend these things, they are too high and too wonderful for me. I love to think upon them, to ponder them in my heart and speak of them with a present profound assurance of how wonderfully and gloriously mysterious they are. I would not have you think I have explained the mystery of the resurrection. We are more apt to be misled by the things we think we know. I have merely tried to give, in my way, an outline of how I think about the blessed doctrine of the resurrection of the body of the saints of our God. Consider what I say and the Lord give you understanding.

OBITUARIES SUDIE HUNT GOOCH.

Mrs. Sudie Hunt Gooch, the youngest daughter of G. W. and Susan C. Hunt, was born near Oxford, Granville County, N. C., Dec. 3rd, 1875, married to the writer Oct. 4th, 1904, and fell asleep in Jesus, as we have great reasons to believe, on Sunday morning, Nov. 22nd, 1908. The fruit of our union is one little girl, Janle Gold, who is three years and three months old.

Her entire family being members of the Methodist church, she in early life united with them and became a zealous worker and member of that church. She being fond of music and having graduated at Greensboro Female College, also at the Southern Conservatory of Music at Durham, N. C., was the organist of her church, when at home, until our marriage, and took great delight in the same as all who knew her will testify. Feeling, as I have heard her say, that she was helping the Lord in the conversion of sinners, I dare say that Saul of Tarsus was not a greater advocate or believer in the work system than she. While she was devoted to her church and all of its institutions, I can truthfully say that she never at any time refused to care for and entertain the best she could any of my brethren and friends that might visit me, knowing that it afforded me great pleasure. Neither have I at any time ever put a single hindrance or obstacle in her way from attending her church and its institutions which was only a few hundred yards from our home. Knowing that she did not understand the doctrine that I believed in which, if I make no mistake, is as dear to me as life itself, I never at any time asked or requested that she go with me but o.c.c. I knew of her religious views before our marriage, and should have tried to unduly influence her I would not have been worthy to have been her husband.

During our short married life I guess we lived as happily together as any two ever did. I cannot understand why God should have taken her from me at the time when it seemed from natural reasons we had so much to live for. It still seems dark and at times my soul refuses to be comforted. If I am not mistaken I have sufficient reasons or evidences to believe that God willed or gave her to me and I have living witnesses that heard me say the same before our marriage, and should I recite the many evidences I dare say but few could doubt the directing hand of God is the same.

In 1907, while I was in Richmond hospital for treatment, my wife was first taken sick, but our home physician not fully diagnosing her case, thought it nothing serious and pronounced it an attack of malaria, and she not realizing any danger and being anxious for my recovery, never mentioned her sickness to me until the day before I left for home, although I heard from her daily. On my arrival home, I found her in a weak condition and suggested her going to her mother's near Oxford and requested that she have the best physician in Oxford to examine her, which she did, and soon thereafter I was informed of her real condition. He said she had tuberculosis and needed a treatment different from that which he was prepared to give and requested that I take her to Asheville, N. C., to be treated by a specialist. So in three days after learning her condition we bade farewell and left for Asheville, arriving there on July 24th, 1907, where she remained for ten long months, except for one week's visit home the latter part of October. During her stay in Asheville she was treated by the best physicians in the city, but all their treatment failed to arrest the trouble. Right here I must mention the name of her older sister, Miss Sara Hunt, who remained with her during her stay in Asheville, also for a portion of the time after her arrival home on May 23rd, 1908. I can say of a truth that no sister ever cared for another with more anxiety and patience than did Miss Sara. I feel that all was done for her that was in our power, but none can stay the hand of death.

No one could try harder to recover than did my dear wife. She took all the treatment prescribed by the doctors and seldom missed stepping out in the open air from nine to ten hours each day during the coldest part of last winter.

While she was hundreds of miles from home, mostly among strangers, and sepa-voted from most of those near and dear to her by the ties of nature, yet God's ever-lasting love, His strong arm and protecting care was around about her. Yes, He has promised to be with His people through the death trouble and not forsake them in the seventh. I find that this was fully verified in her case, for it pleased God on the witness of time, when she had worked all her material and exhausted all of her strength, He revealed Himself to her as the mightiest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely and she was then made able to praise His great and exalted name as never before as an evidence of the dealings of the Lord with her.

I herewith send some extracts taken from her letters written in the month of April soon after God revealed Himself to her: "Last night I went to bed with the burden still on me, but somehow this morning it seems to have gone. I feel that I don't care the least bit for the worldly pleasures I have been thinking so about. If I make no mistake I believe I realize what Christ meant what He said, 'seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you.' If I am not mistaken in my own heart this morning I feel like God is my everything and whatever He does with me or anyone else will be alright, for He has made Himself dear to me and I know He will do right. This morning Sis Sara and I sang that hymn, 'Abide with me,' and it expressed my feelings. In life or death, O lord, abide with me. I believe these new feelings of submission and such as I've felt came direct from God. No help or talking from man has lifted the burden. But God alone has spoken to my soul. He it was who made me sorrowful, so he made me glad. God only knows how I want to be his child and I do trust it is His will for me to be. I have thought many, many times I would love to feel religious as you do and if God would show me that your way was best I would love to go with you, but at the same time I feel it would be a cross to me to endure the thoughts and feelings

I felt sure my former friends would have on the subject. But now I don't seem to care what they would say. If it is right man has nothing to do with it. Will you please send me one or two of your church papers. I don't find any soul food in mine, so I may have it stopped and if I do you must not subscribe for me."

The above was written on April 15th, 1908, and the first knowledge I ever had of any spiritual birth. No one but a child of God can imagine the joy it afforded me. The following was written the 18th of a day or two later:

"I do thank God for you now, and all I have known of you. Your most beloved letter received this morning, also the papers you sent. I was feeling very bad, hardly knowing how I felt, but I knew I wasn't feeling comfortable in mind. Surely I must be the most wicked of the wicked or I would not so often be depressed. After reading your letter and one other I received, I opened the papers you sent and in the 'Signs' I began reading a piece from some lady. It interested me very much and brought tears to my eyes. Why I felt this way I cannot tell except that God had sent them to me, to comfort and console my cheerless spirit. She seemed to have felt so much like I have, and said she too had been bodily afflicted and down in the depths. I can't tell why, but somehow this seemed to console me. I can't tell you how much better I do feel. The depression has left me and all seems calm and peaceful. While reading I did so much wish for you that we might talk together of the precious truth. They seemed so and true and real. I felt like I must speak of them to some one, but I knew that no one here would understand them as you did so I kept it to myself. I think I can fully understand how you use to feel when reading to me and I couldn't understand. I wanted to and tried to talk with you but I felt I wasn't in the spirit of the feeling, just as I knew you knew I wasn't, but unless I am mistaken I believe I can now 'weep with you when you weep and rejoice with you when you rejoice.' God has been so good to me I felt I deserved greater sorrows than I have felt; yet Christ came to call sinners to repentance, not the righteous, so surely there is hope for me now. He knows all about me and how that even after all the experience I have had lately I sin so often. Even my thoughts are wicked. I sometimes feel I'd rather withdraw myself from those I can't agree with and perhaps I wouldn't be so prone to criticize their words and deeds.

I really believe I am hungry for a real gospel sermon for the first time in my life. Remember me to Mr. Simpkins and tell him I should like him to pray for me. No dear, no one can think you are forcing your papers on me. I do not think you could have caused me to feel as I have but to keep other people from thinking so I am glad it happened while I am here and there. Don't you worry about sending me the papers, I wanted them, and if people do talk it makes no difference. I don't feel that you have had anything to do with my experience, no one could. I believe the whole thing was from a different source. I feel as helpless as a new-born babe.

I was deeply impressed and thoroughly believe what I read yesterday. When Jesus in answer to Pilate's question said, 'thou could'st have no power at all against me except it be given thee from above,' I wonder now that God would have permitted me to go on so long being deceived as I was, doing things and having people believe it was done for the glory of God, when I see now it was only for the glory of my selfish being."

I have many other extracts from her letters that I would like to record but know that I have already written more than I should.

On May 23rd, when she returned from Asheville, I met her in the city of Durham, which was the first time I had seen her since the Lord had revealed Himself to her. Oh the Joy and sadness that was met and expressed I can never tell. Many hours have we spent together at our humble home since her return from Asheville reading the Bible, Signs of the Times, Zion's Landmark and the Book of Meditations by Elder Durand, understanding and rejoicing together. Many dark hours she had after her return home and at times it appeared almost that the Lord had forsaken her, but she never at any time that I know of doubted the delivering hand of the Lord with her while in Asheville, and from that date has ever contended for salvation by grace and grace alone, and contended with preachers in Asheville and visited her after her deliverance. So much so at one time one of them in bidding her good-bye said "good-bye, sister Elder," referring I presume to some Primitive preacher. After her return home and when visited by her pastor, who was very sympathetic and kind and who expressed regrets that she was not able to attend their revival that was then going on, her reply to him (his own words to me) that she did not approve of some of their methods and didn't know that she would attend much should she have been well.

At her request the funeral was preached by Elder P. D. Gold, of Wilson, N. C. to a large crowd of brethren, friends and neighbors, who had met to pay their last respects to one who had not an enemy on earth that I know of and as pure a body as it was possible for finite beings to be, after which she was gently borne by sympathizing friends to the family cemetery in the village of Stem, N. C., and there deposited in mother earth from whence no traveler has ever returned. The floral offerings almost covered her grave.

The deceased left behind to mourn her departure, an aged mother, Susan C. Hunt, two brothers, two sisters, her darling baby and the unworthy writer who to-day mourns and feels his loss greater than ever before. May the good God enable me to say, not my will but thine, O Lord, be done. Her devoted husband,

J. H. GOOCH.

No Land So Rich That Fertilizer Cannot Make It Better

You use fertilizers for the profit you get out of them—and the better the land the more profitably a good fertilizer can be used on it. Do not imagine because land will produce a fair crop without that these fertilizers cannot be profitably used on it, or that they were made only for land too poor to produce without them. If poor land will show a normal increase when fertilizer is used, good land will show at least double the increase. Use Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers to increase the quality, as well as the quantity of the crop—and you will increase the profits from your land.

"I have been using your fertilizers for a number of years" says Mr. William Fraiser, of Glasburg, La., "and find that it not only pays to fertilize, but to do plenty of it, and use the best fertilizers to be had, such as your brands. I have used a number of them and found them to be as recommended and to give better results than any other fertilizers that I have ever used."

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

I trust every reader will try and secure a new subscriber for the Landmark. Our expenses are heavier and an increased circulation is necessary to enable us to make anything.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold:

Dear Brother—I have thought to write a few lines concerning John the Baptist and his mission, who was the soa of Zacarias and was of the course of Abia. His wife was of the daughters of Aaron and her name was Elizabeth. This barren woman, by the mighty power of God brought forth a son, and the angel Gabriel sent from God delivered his name to his father Zacharias; "thou shalt call his name John, and thou shalt have joy and gladness; and many shall rejoice at his birth. For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost even from his mother's womb." And it is said he leaped for joy at the salutation of the mother of our blessed Lord and Master.

This incident plainly teaches us that our God can cause infants, even the unborn to praise him. The prophet Isaiah foretold of this man some seven hundred years before he was born, "Hearing the voice of one crying in the wilderness prepare ye the way of the Lord and make his paths straight." This man is evidently the porter spoken of by St. John, 10th chapter. He is the one that raised the midnight cry, "Behold the bridegroom cometh," at the close of the legal dispensation and the beginning of the gospel. When the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, "Who art thou?"

John confessed and denied not, but said I am not the Christ, "There is one coming after me mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose." This man came preaching in the wilderness of Judea, commissioned from Heaven, for the word of God came to John in the wilderness. John being possessed of that humble spirit, went forth in humble obedience preaching a coming Saviour and the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, thus showing you believe in a coming Saviour that will wash away sins.

John on one occasion, when he saw Jesus coming unto him, said: "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." I have no idea that John's preaching in the wilderness down by Jordan's banks, was a mere accident. I have no doubt but that he commanded John to preach and baptize and directed where the preaching and baptizing should be done. But the priests and Levites called his work in question. The question is sometimes asked, who baptized John the Baptist? We have no scriptural evidence that anyone baptized him. It has been claimed that a Jewish priest baptized him. I think that the above quotation from John 1:25, 26 is sufficient to show that is not correct. John got his authority direct from Heaven when the word of God came to him in the wilderness. Jesus Christ, the son of God, acknowledged that authority by going to John and demanding baptism at his hands, and God the Father acknowledged his son and John's baptism when Jesus came up out of the water and the heavens opened and the spirit like a dove descended upon him. And there came a voice from heaven saying, "thou art my beloved son in whom I am well pleased." And I have no doubt but that God acknowledges all his sons and daughters in the ordinance of baptism. But when John saw many of the Pharisees and Saducees coming to his baptism he said: "O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come, bring forth fruits, meet for repentance?" That is some evidence of a gracious state or amendment of life. Now while John was a very humble man he was also a firm man, not to be shaken by every blusterer that came along. He was making ready a people prepared for the Lord, that is for the reception of him that was coming to set up his kingdom. And John seemed to know those Pharisees and Saducees were not prepared of the Lord to receive Jesus or to go into his kingdom, therefore he refused to baptise them, but called them a generation of vipers. But if John had been like a preacher of our day he would have baptized the last one of them. I have thought for several years that when Jesus set up his kingdom it was out of baptized believers made ready by John the Baptist, and I suppose from that time until now every local body has been organized out of persons that had previously been baptized.

I have said that I did not believe that it was any accident that John was preaching in the wilderness in the humble attire of camel's hair and a leathern girdle about his loins. God's people are a plain people and feel their unworthiness and unfitness to perform the duties laid upon them. John felt his unfitness to baptize the Saviour, and did not feel fit to unlatch the Saviour's shoes. But Jesus said, "Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness, then he suffered him." But what was Jesus baptized for? He was not a sinner. It could not possibly be that he was baptized to have his sins washed away. Did John preach to the people of Israel that the remission of sins depended on his baptizing them? And if Jesus washed us from our sins in his own blood, and who his own self bear our sins in his own body on the tree, and by whose stripes ye were healed, can it be possible our following Jesus in the ordinance of baptism secures thee remission or removal of our sins. I certainly think not. But if Jesus was not baptized for the remission of his sins by John in one of the most noted rivers of the East, was his baptism merely an example to his followers? Some say it was his priestly washing. The law of Israel was, this washing was to be done at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. But we find Jesus and John down in the river Jordan which would be a violation of the law. But Jesus was not a violator, but a fulfiller of the law. Zion is to be redeemed with judgment. "Judgment also will I lay to the line and righteousness to the plummet," saith God, therefore Jesus must be overwhelmed with suffering and death in order to stay the righteous judgment of God against his people. Our fathers in giving the significations of the river Jordan say Jor means flowing down and dan, river of judgment. This river starts in the heights of Lebanon and empties into the Dead Sea where nothing lives. The flow of its waters has never staved for any but the Lord's people. Therefore to stay the righteous judgments of God, flowing down from the heights of God's holy sanctuary Jesus must needs die and go to the grave where all his people go, and where none live as signified by the dead sea, in that he died he died unto sin, but in that he liveth he liveth unto God. All's God's people must first die unto sin before they can live unto God.

The next thing after a death to sin is a burial to that which they have died, and this is done by a burial in water and a raising up to walk in a newness of life, that is a devoted and upright life. John was the one that began this practice. Authorized by the God of Heaven, poor in this world's goods, clothed in a coarse garment and girded with a leathern girdle. And he did eat locusts and wild honey. The eating of locusts has been one of conjecture. The laws of Israel allowed certain kinds of locusts to be used as food.

I will here give a short quotation from Smith's Bible Dictionary:

"There are different ways of preparing locusts for food; sometimes they are ground and pounded and then mixed with flour and water and made into cakes, or they are salted and then eaten; sometimes smoked, boiled, roasted, or fried in butter. From ignorance of this fact, some persons have erroneously asserted that the locusts which formed part of the food of the Baptist, were not the insects of that name, but the long sweet pods of the locust tree, or St. John's bread, as the monk of Palestine called it." Page 485. I have made this quotation to show what the historian says the ancient custom of Israel was.

And now a few words concerning us who have professed faith in Christ, and who humbly hope to have experienced a death to sin, and a life to righteousness. And have gone to the Lord's house and have asked a home with the people with God; and followed the Saviour in baptism; and have arisen from a watery grave to walk in the newness of life, a humble and devoted life. My brother, or sister are we living that kind of life? Do we forsake the assembling of ourselves together for the purpose of worshipping our Lord and Master as commanded? Do we visit the sick in their affliction, and administer to the wants of the needy? Let us remember when we were baptized, we took the sacred obligation on ourselves to walk an upright life to, adhere to God's commandatory laws, and repeat his prohibitory laws wherein he has forbidden us to engage in the idolatries and vanities of this world. Picknicking, banqueting, drinking, gambling, profane swearing, black-guarding, lying, cheating, defrauding and running after and engaging in the pet institutions of this world which have become legion which ungodly men have instituted for worldly gain of some sort. But let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." Let us show our faith by our works, if we believe God's providential care has been over us all our life, let us trust him the remaining part of our days and not betake ourselves to the institutions of the men of this world. Let us remember that our God has said, vain is the help of man, "And cursed is the man that trusteth in man, or makes flesh his arm." And let us remember that Jesus Christ our blessed Master never set up but one institution on earth for his children to dwell in, and that he gave her a perfect rule of faith and practice, a thorough furnisher unto all good work.

Paris, Mo.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother:

I have just read your article on preaching in the Landmark of Jan-15th, and I certainly enjoyed it and think you are certainly right about the matter.

Preaching is the most solemn thing I have ever thought of and the reason I say this is because I fear the Lord has placed a part of that work on me.

I will give some of my reasons for these fears. About four years ago a solemn fearfulness took hold of me and I did not know what was the matter with me, and I worried over the matter for some time trying to pray to the Lord to have mercy on me and show me what was the matter. When one day a small voice said to me preach the word, and oh, what a shock it was to me, and I began to plead my unworthiness and my unfitness. Oh Lord, how can it be that thou canst call a wretch like me, and one that is not worthy of th least of thy mercies.

One day while thinking over the matter, thinking of my weakness, a voice said to me, the power is not in me. Yes, I know the power is the Lord's. He is able to bring forth strength out of weakness and light out of darkness; and if I knew it was the dealings of the Lord with me I would not doubt. I feel like if the brethren know me as well as I know myself they would not have any fellowship for me, much less hear me speak; therefore I keep silent the many times I feel like I must try or die. Sometimes I feel as if it would be better for me to die than be in the way, or to intrude on my brethren. I never want to do anything to bring reproach on the cause of Christ.

Brother Gold, I could write more but I do not want to weary you.

A sinner saved my grace if saved at all.

Remarks:—If another had these feelings would you not think he should preach?

HAWKER ON ROMANS II. 1-11.
(Selected).

Within the compass of these verses the apostle enumerates very many things which are, and must be, confessedly plain and universally received truths, not only founded in revelation, but common sense and reason. But on these we need not dwell. Paul's evident intention in the introduction of them is only in a way preparatory to show the inability of Moses to justify sinners before God. The great design of the chapter is to set this forth in the first colours, and, in the example of the Jew, to manifest that the law never did, neither was it ever designed, to bring sinners to God. And, therefore, he begins with stating common principles of right and wrong. All judgment proceeds upon this standard of equity. The Jews had a law. They break it. And yet, while breaking it themselves, they condemned others who break it also. Now, saith the apostle, is it possible for you to suppose that law which you have broken can justify you? Can you think that a broken law can be your justification before God? Are you so senseless as to plead what becomes your condemnation?

Such views of the subject contained in those verses will serve to explain the several expressions made use of in the apostle's reasoning. The goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance. What repentance? Not that repentance which Christ is exalted as a Prince and a Saviour to give (Acts v. 31.). God's gift cannot be man's merit. But the repentance here alluded to is that natural sorrow which conscience will still excite in the heart, notwithstanding its present benumbed state, and as we see it doth in the worst of men, when their sins bring sorrow, and their crimes bring punishment. The vilest sinner alive is led to this natural repentance when judgment taketh hold of him. But this sorrow differs wholly from godly sorrow and true repentance wrought in the heart by sovereign grace. This natural sorrow is wholly of man, the other is wholly of God. Natural repentance is excited by the dread of affliction. Gracious repentance is awakened by the Holy Ghost, when convincing of sin. And while that of nature only acts as long as a fear of punishment hangs over the conscience, and the heart remains the same as was before; that of grace brings with it a thorough change, and the life is reformed. The apostle himself so describes it. Godly sorrow (said he) worketh repentance to salvation, not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death (2 Cor. vii. 10.)

In like manner, when it is said in those verses that the Lord will render to every man according to his works, and that there is no respect of persons with God; those expressions must not be accepted contrary to the general tenor of holy Scripture. God hath no respect of persons, considered as to their own personal worth or doings. He hath no respect of persons as to their place of birth, or relations from whom they are descended in the Adam-nature of generation, when the whole stock is from the original apostacy, all alike corrupt. Neither hath the Lord respect of persons as some have ventured to suppose, from foreseeing what should arise in them, or be done by them, in the after circumstances of their life. For all the good that is done upon earth the Lord doeth himself. Upon all these accounts, nothing can be more plain and evident than that God is no respecter of persons. There is nothing in the creature, in a way of merit, which can act as a cause in the sight of the Lord to induce this respect. But it is equally certain that, while God respects no man's person, on either of the grounds here mentioned, yet the whole church, and every individual of that church, chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, the Lord hath respect to, on Christ's account, and highly distinguished every one of their persons, as they are one with Christ, and hath accepted and beloved them in him. And to the same amount, and on the same ground, the reward that the Lord is here said to render to every man according to his deeds; the sense, is, not that the merit of every man, considered in himself, and without an eye to Christ, will form the standard of retribution. For, alas! if this were the case, everlasting condemnation must alike fall on all, for all the world, in the Adam-nature of an unregenerated, unrenewed state, become guilty before God (Rom. iii. 19). But the meaning is (and, indeed, the verses following explain it) as men are accepted in Christ, or as they reject Christ in their own souls. They (saith the apostle) who seek for glory, and honour, and immortality, and eternal life; that is, they seek those things in Christ. Indeed, nowhere else can they be found. Christ himself is eternal life. And they who have Christ have eternal life in him, and all the blessings connected with it (John xvii. 12; 1 John v. 11, 12; John iii. 33). But to them that are contentious, that is, contend against Christ as the whole of salvation, and stand upon the bottom of their own works either in whole or in part, there will be indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil. Hence this Scripture is in this way very fully established. The Lord will render to every man according to his deeds. Here are the deeds of faith, and the deeds of works. And the issue is a as might be expected. Reader, ponder well the subject. Think what a mercy it must be in that final day of account, which Paul calls the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, to have a perfect, complete, and all-sufficient righteousness to stand in, for the justification of our persons before God. That can only be found in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ; and if it be blessed then, so must it be now. Have you ever made it the subject of examination? Will you try it in the present moment? Put your hand upon your heart. Judge it yourself with a strict scrutiny, as it will be done in the hour when weighed in the balance of the sanctuary. And as a discovery of its workings will bring up proofs of its deceitfulness (Jer. xvii. 17), listen to what the Holy Ghost speaks of Christ's all-sufficiency in the blood of the everlasting covenant. And if the Lord the Spirit shows you that there is more in Jesus to save, than in sin to condemn, sweet will be the consolation that will follow. And depend upon it, if the Lord speaks peace now, he will not speak condemnation then. He is of one mind, who can turn him (Job xxiii. 13.) God will not unsay what he hath once said. Deliver him from going down to the pit. I have found a ransom (Job xxxiii. 24).

Elders Gold and Lester, Dear Brethren:

It is with great pleasure after being confined to my room and bed for four weeks from Dec. 1st., with a serious attack of erysipelas in my leg and side that I am out again. I was skillfully treated by Doctors Ross of Passett and Simmons of Martinsville, Va., but I fear I will be a cripple from the effects as long as I am permitted to remain on this earth. While I was afflicted and was suffering excruciating pain my mind was directed to the church and a going forth in my feeling for her welfare created a great desire to get well, that I might go and defend my Master's cause. I then thought if I was restored in would obey the impressions of my mind and visit some points of the country that I had never been. I have always wanted to go to Eastern North Carolina and to South West Virginia. I still think I will try to visit this part of the Lord's vineyard this year if it is His will.

I was blessed to meet many brethren last year that I had never met before, and some of them I shall never again below; but faith springs up a thought that I shall meet them when we cross the chilly water, when our friendship will be nearer and our union dearer.

We have now passed out of the date 1908, with its joys and sorrows which we have all shared a portion of, some of which have left lasting reflections not by us to be forgotten for we cherish the memory of some of these events and look forward with anticipative joy for their renewal.

Brother Gold, I gave brother Isaac Jones my first subscription to the Landmark at my house in 1884, and I have been a constant reader of this periodical since and I also feel to say it has been a source of great comfort to me and a welcome visitor to my house, and I hope that my children though wild and mischievous by nature as they are now, may read it when I am no more, and may it be the will of God to impress them with the truth contained in its volumes. I enclose you three dollars to renew my subscription and I hope the Lord will bless you in your declining years sustain and spare you many more years to preach and publish the Landmark for us, and as dear sister Edwards set forth in her article, the brethren ought to consider your trials and field of labor and come to your relief.

Love to you and sister Gold and all the household of faith everywhere.

A. B. PHILPOT.

Philpot, Va.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother:

As I reached home Monday on the 7:20 o'clock train, I will write you a few lines to let you hear from me.

I left home Friday before the 4th Sunday in November, and met all my appointments or places for them. The brethren and friends were all very good and kind to me in meeting and conveying me along. Their hospitality was far above that that I was worthy of. The blessed Lord blessed me with a subject each day and with liberty to speak with comfort as I hope to the Lord's people. Notwithstanding my weakness, I stayed up each day. At Newport on Thanksgiving a dear sister, Mattie Mintz, came to me right after preaching and told me how she enjoyed the preaching and asked for an appointment to be made for the night, which was made after I learned that I could not leave until next morning. In a few minutes this dear sister sat down on the bench and fainted away and only lived a few hours. It seemed to me this must be a happy death to die, for she seemed to be carried away in the spirit of her dear Lord and Master. If any one ever did die rejoicing, this dear sister did. Oh! What a terror is death? but how good it is that we are born to die, for death is only the door of entrance into a better world than this. What a wise God our Lord is. How mercifully He deals with his children.

At North Creek one dear sister, E. J. Paul, came forward, gave a reason for her hope, was received into fellowship and was baptized in the afternoon by Elder Daniel Topping. She had belonged to the Christian church for many years.

At Goose Creek one was restored, a brother Sawyer.

As brother Lundy had been there three days at the union meeting I met him Monday.

At Sheffield my appointments were not known. Brother J. R. Tingle of Grantsboro went with me to his father's, brother Josiah Tingle, who said he had not got the Landmark Nov. 15th, and did not know anything about the appointment, so we went by brother Canady Rowe's. His folks were all sick but he was able to go out, so we four went to the school house and Mr. Paul dismissed his school for us.

When I got to Mt. Lebanon there was no one there, but I failed to learn whether they failed to get the Landmark or that they had discontinued it. I know some of the members have taken it. I feel sorry the two day's appointments were not known, and have had many things to ponder over about it, but the good Lord knows best, but it seems to me a matter of great importance for our brethren to read the Landmark. It is a medium through which we keep up a large correspondence. You are very good indeed in publishing appointments, associations and union meeting notices, which is a matter of much importance, beside the other good matters that is contained in them, and all this you do free, only for the annual price, then brethren why not take the Landmark and pay up your subscription and keep up with the movements of our people? is there a poor saint anywhere in this vain and sinful world that does not love to hear from Zion, to read of her peace and joy and fellowship everywhere? Is not this good news? Do we not receive much comfort in learning of Zion and her progress? Is it not worth more to us than the price paid for one year?

Brethren, be prompt, read the good old paper and let us hear from each other. How good it is to hear from our brethren in a goodly land.

Well, I will close for fear I will worry you with my scribble. With love and fellowship,

Your brother in hope,

JAS. S. CORBITT.

Greenville, N. C., Dec. 10, 1908.

Dear Brother:

It appears that of all the times in my life I have been this fall and last summer the farthest from my moorings of any time for years past. Sometimes the waters have been deep and sailing, though rough, has been safe by the compass. The winds have been very strong and for the most contrary so that they have had to be used in the place of the compass. Sometimes they have blown enough that the compass has been of great use for the clouds were so thick that neither sun, moon nor star appeared for many days together. The waters being new to me I did not know where the rocks were nor the quicksands or how to keep clear of these obstructions besides I didn't have hold of the helm. Thus I saw I was at the mercy of the waves. However, there was another little instrument on hand that I found in the chart, and its name is, "all prayer." The deep distress of my poor heart caused me to turn my glass upon that instrument with sore weeping and in looking through that as I looked astern I saw one at the helm and he was the Captain of the ship who had awakened to my help.

He has appeared that way just a few times this fall and when he so appeared I didn't care anything for the clouds nor wind nor sea though all of them continued as they were before.

Once or twice, times have been so troublesome that I found my little bark in the breakers head-to windward and no oars or motor power by which I could save myself. (These times have been even troubled my sleeping hours. A few nights ago a large bull was chasing and trying to destroy me. He was white except the fine red spots that looked nearly like blood a little smeared on his hair. I passed out of the road into one field and out of that into another and he shook his head violently and went away. Two heifers were with me, one fat and strong and the other very lean and feeble. When I awoke the vision troubled me much for I knew the face of the bull.

Two nights later I visited a house and as I entered the door I saw seven sisters of the church sitting in a row and they were preparing pulse for dinner. I spoke to them and five of them spoke to me, and one of the others looked at me and smiled, the other turned pale and went out but said nothing, good or bad. When I awoke I was troubled for I knew the last two sisters.

For some few days previous I had been on the rock and willing to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord and these things put me back into the rough waters and I have mourned much since. Just at this time the fog is so thick I can't well see the face of the compass nor get the various points so as to know how to steer but in the driftings of my little craft run up against something. (I may be mistaken about what it is,) which appears, as best my poor weak eyes can see it in this dense fog, to be a cross, and already I have been made to glory in it as that on which my Captain was once crucified. I know that if this be so it is the place for which my soul has sought and that there is a fountain at the foot of it in which if I am dipped I shall be whiter than snow and fully delivered from this very tempestuous sea. My Captain once walked upon the natural sea of Gallilee and many times on the tempestuous waters which threaten to destroy all his little ones and if he is mine he will deliver me.

This is as far as my glass leads me to see at this time. Of for grace to trust him. In afflictions many and a little hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother, seated at home, unable to travel around very much, I have been wondering if I can engage in anything useful. My strongest impulse at the present is the love of the brethren, many of whom I have never seen, nor expect to see in this world. But when death has done its part this tie will ever bind in heavenly perfection—that partakers of the Savior's grace, the same in mind and heart. Nor joy, nor grief, nor time, nor place, nor life nor death can part. I am in my 76th year, and the 44th year of my ministry. I once feared that my call to the ministry was premature. I was married and 18 years of age, when I was shown in a vision that I must use the Bible and hymn book, and stand in the shoes of an elder, pastor and moderator of the association. I thought I had not witnessed enough to even make a profession, much less to preach. But being strengthened, when 24, I joined the church. My wife, who before marriage, was Miss Malesia J. Martin, became a member two months prior.

The Scripture, "If a man desireth the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work," was almost continually upon my mind. I was rather surprised. What a man desiring to be a preacher? I had understood that those called to preach had hard struggles against taking up the cross, and had rather die than to undertake it. I had nothing against it, but my insufficient qualification and gift. Without which it was not my purpose nor desire to engage. For I considered it an awful worry on the patience of God's people to be detained by any whom God and not sent. After I had meditated on the matter for 13 years, when mowing in August, 1865, the poem struck my mind:

"The harvest fields are waiting,

The laborers are few;

And Zion 'She' doth languish—

O Shepherds, where are you?"

I answered: "Here am I, send me." The question came up: "Send me for what?" To gather in the sheaves. To call after and feed the sheep and the lambs. I was given a basket from the Lord, out of which to do the feeding. He said, "when this is eaten, come to me for more."

In the vision I labored among them. When given water and refreshment they gladly knelt, and with joy received it. I felt called to feed the flock of God, to be an ensample to them, and not Lord it over His church or heritage; and cast my care upon Him, and to be sober and vigilant, which is to be earnest and industrious, firm and zealous in the calling. Paul said unto Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth; and as said in Luke of the faithful and wise steward, to give them their portion of meat in due season, and to pray them in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God, and go home to their friends, the church, and tell them how the Lord has done great things for them, bringing forth fruits meet for repentance, as required by the Baptist in the beginning of the gospel, thus contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. Paul said to the saints at Philippi, that he desired to depart, and be with Christ, nevertheless, for him to abide or live, was more needful for them. He said though he preached the gospel, he had not whereof to glory, for necessity was laid upon him. God knows where his mourning ones are, and sends them a message by whomsoever he will send, and it will not return void, but shall accomplish the purpose for which it is sent. As the tree bore twelve manner of fruits the different gifts set forth the various conditions of the soul under the peculiar sensations of each hearer, one after this manner and another after that, there being many gifts or message Learners, as well as hearers; one minister bears a certain message peculiar to the condition of a certain individual, while the others do not, but edify and instruct others. The one wonders when a preacher rises if God will speak by him to them. He thinks so by the second and third perhaps, but God directs the arrow of his grace as it pleased Him, and the needy, desiring one feels its heavenly power in his heart, and this minister is a son of thunder to him. Paul said, Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit, but all these work that one and the self same spirit to profit withal; all taught of the Lord, all seeing eye to eye, and speaking the same things. There is some times a fault right here. Each one may think the one that bore the special message to him, is the best preacher he ever heard, and so of the rest regarding their own individual case—some for Paul, some for Apollos, some for Cephas. I think it is hurtful to express our choice in such cases. For who are they but those by whom they believed, or were edified. At other times the bread of heaven may be administered to us by a different one. Then where is the change? It is in our own condition, and we receive our portion of meet in due season. All the various seasons are not on us at the same time, for there is a time to all things. So let each abide in his calling. I should not be in place in trying to do brother Gold's preaching, but according to my peculiar gift, to feed the lambs and the sheep, and God prosper us and add to Zion daily such as should be saved. In brotherly action,

ISAAC WEBB.

Remarks:—The beloved John wrote much when he was old. Now how nice and strengthening to the flock of God it is for such a man as brother Isaac Webb to write (when he is not able to travel and preach much. Writings of those the Lord has commanded to write are preserved in unchanging faithfulness long after such beloved gifts have ceased to live on earth.

When one writes like brother Webb does in such a way that every one feels he is writing the truth there is no strife nor division produced by such writing, but it is all to edification.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

With the help of the Lord I will try to write you a few lines and I hope that what I write is of the Lord.

Brother Gold, Brother Shaw preached here last night in the Methodist church one of the sweetest sermons I ever heard. I have been in the greatest distress I was even in in all my life about Brother Shaw ever since

I heard about his trouble and felt like if I could help him it would be such a pleasure to me, and while I was in so much trouble about him I read a piece in the Landmark about your needs and I broke down and cried for about two days and nights because I could not help you. I prayed to the Lord to work in the minds of the people that are able to help you that they might supply your needs. I have a frail husband, ill with consumption, and his wages are but little, also four children to care for and it makes times hard for us, but the Lord has been merciful to us so much more than we deserve that I fear I am not one of His little ones. But my troubles and sorrows are so great here in this sinful world that I don't know which way to go or what to do, but the merciful Father has been so good and kind to me that I can't praise Him or glory in His name enough to feel that I have done anything. But I walk in the love of my dear Savior and His dear people day by day asking Him if it can be His will to keep me in that narrow path of the eternal kingdom where there is no more troubles, sorrows or tribulations.

Brother Gold, I guess I will stop for this time by asking you to remember me in your prayers and to write to me. I am your little sister in hope.

MRS. W. S. GIBBS.

Bellhaven, N. C.

Remarks:—Some brethren and friends have been sending in help to each one of us. We desire to be thankful for such relief, as it is a testimony of the love of those that give, as well as affording some relief to us who receive.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

I feel like sending you a letter I received from my father, deacon John T. Rowe, in February, 1902. He passed away in May, 1902, fully resigned and anxious to go and be with Jesus, in whom he had trusted for many years. If you will give it space in the Landmark I will appreciate it. Your brother in hope,

JOSHUA T. ROWE,

704 Lynwood Ave., Station L, Baltimore, Md.

Elder Joshua T. Rowe, My Dear Son:

So far as I know I remain about the same as when you were here; my appetite is as good and I enjoy myself about the same. I would be very glad to go to see you and family but am somewhat fearful to undertake it and prefer to pay your expenses to come and see us, which I hope you will do as often as your work will allow. We have just passed through another meeting; on Saturday it was very rainy but brother Brinson met a little handful of us and preached for us. We had not seen the sun or a star since last Monday until to-day and it has rained a considerable quantity. But it was a fair day to-day and there were more people and the preaching was able. I enjoyed it very much as I usually do whenever I hear him.

Your letter was a sweet one and very much appreciated by myself and others. I am glad you remember your mother and myself all back through your life and that you seem to appreciate our teachings but am more glad that you have another parent, one in the heavens above, and that He has taught you loving obedience to His word and laws, has given you such great love for His people and has given you such ability to declare to them His word, power and love for the comfort of His children. I would be glad were it His will that I could enjoy your sweet preaching more often. And we learn that "He rules in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth," and we should be content and feel that He doeth all things well to the comfort of His people and the glory of His name. Just as you say and as David says, so I feel He has been good and merciful to me all the days of my life and now in my old age and while I have been called upon to pass through many sore trials and sorrows that have almost swallowed me up; yet I feel he has not forsaken me, but yet visits me with messages of love and times of joy to comfort and sustain me in all trials, and He has always proven himself a victorious conqueror over all the foes of his people.

Give our love to all the family and come when you can. Write soon and often to your loving father, JOSHUA T. ROWE.

Dear Brother Gold:

I send you for publication in the Landmark a letter written by brother Winberry to me while I was in the West last summer. Since coming home I have baptized him.

Your brother in hope,

E. E. LUNDY.

Scranton, S. C., Nov. 5th, 1908.
Elder E. E. Lundy, Dear Sir:

I have read the scriptures carefully and studied them closely, believing as I am made to do that God must have directed me and that he commands by grace alone and he alone knows my heart. I know I love the Primitive Baptists and I long to be among them, but I am such a sinner and so unworthy of their confidence and love that I am made to doubt whether the Lord has ever called me out.

I have from time to time made up my mind to live a better life, and intended joining the church when I got good enough. But I am no better now than when I began trying. I feel that I have been made to know that there is nothing I can do that the Lord would be under obligation to save me, for my thoughts are continually evil. As you know we have it preached on nearly every street corner that it is left to man whether he will be saved or not. But such doctrine does not agree with my experience, if I know what an experience is and I hope I do.

I know there is nothing good in me and unless I am saved by God's grace alone I am lost forever. He alone must raise us from the pit of mirey clay and put our feet upon the rock.

Oh, If I could know I was one of this number for whom he died, but I reckon it is best I cannot know.

I hope you will pardon me for writing you thus at length, but the half has not been told nor indeed can be. I felt impressed to write you and hope the impression was of the Lord. May he continue to bless all who feel the need of a Savior and bless us all to serve him better in the future than in the past is my prayer.

..... Sincerely,
G. W. WINBERRY.

AS I SEE IT.

In the 1st Chapter of Genesis, 27th and 28th verses we are told that God made man in his own likeness, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them. And God blessed them and told them to multiply and replenish the earth. From the above scriptures I infer that they both received the command personally from God after full development. In this chapter we are told what God did in the six days of the creation. In the succeeding chapters we are told how he did some things. We are told that God formed man of the dust of the earth and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul. We are also told that God took a rib from the man and of that he made a woman. This is telling us how these things were done. God also planted a garden East in Eden and there he put the man the woman. Remember God did his work in six days. So this was done on one of the six days of creation, perhaps the sixth. It is all the work of God; his purpose was before him and his word accomplishes it, and he rests on the seventh day from all his work.

God did not have to wait to see the lone condition of the man in the garden before he knew he needed a helpmate. That was no afterthought on the part of God. In the garden God gave the law, the most important law that ever was given. Did the woman receive the law personally from God? I think so. The objector says that is inference. Well, perhaps it is, but we must infer that she received it in some way, we are not told how, but we know she knew it, for when the serpent approached her she was ready to tell him that they must not eat of the fruit nor touch it, lest they die. Now, as we have to infer that she got that knowledge, it seems to me to be on the safe side of wisdom to infer that she got it direct from God as she was one of the principal actors. When God spake to the man he spake to the woman also, for in the 5th chapter, 1st verse, we are told that God called their name Adam in the day he made them. So in the garden when God called "Adam, where art thou," the woman knew she was called as well as the man, and they both came from their hiding to justify themselves the best they could for what they had done. Why should we seek to keep the woman reconciled in the man until after the giving of those important commands. What good can come of it? I know this is not in accordance with the long cherished notion that Eve received the law in Adam, typifying the church receiving grace in Christ.

Some claim that this has been thus revealed to them and they saw a beauty in it and can't give it up. But I have thought that upon more mature reflection their minds might change. We all think the scriptures are complete, that there is no type or shadow left out that should have been referred to as such. Then think of the many things that are being introduced as types and shadows, then think how many scriptures have referred to them as such. If you fail to find the scripture, better not use them. If I introduce anything as a type or shadow that the scriptures have not referred to as such do not I seemingly infer that the scriptures are not complete and that I am trying to make up the deficiency. The Baptists claim to have a "thus saith the Lord" for what they teach. Would it not be well for them to consider when getting up those types and shadows and see if they can find a "thus saith the Lord" for them?

I think I know what it is to object to popular opinion, especially when it is held by superiors, but if I have written the truth it may be downed but never destroyed. I only ask that this may be considered in the same spirit that is written. The truth being my only object.

JOHN HALL.

Gorman, N. C.

Remarks:—Adam is the figure of Jesus Christ who then was to come, Rom. 5:14. Paul so treats this matter as a great mystery, Eph. 5:32. Eve was made of a bone of Adam who said this is now bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. She shall be called woman because she was taken out of man.

Adam was the first man and was of the earth earthy. He was first created and then formed. The second chapter of Genesis records more fully than the first chapter the manner of the formation of God's creation. Every plant was made before it was in the earth, Gen| 2:4, 5. Also the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground (7th verse,) which shows that Adam was first formed. All animals were brought before Adam and he gave them names, but none was found suitable to be a companion for him. Then the deep sleep fell on him and God took the rib from him and made a woman, and brought her to the man. Adam said this is bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. Here is the mystery of Christ and the church in this type.

What do we know of these things except what the word declares? I am sure if God reveals anything to us it is according to his word.

Wadesboro, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:

We now have a lot and a very good house on it in Wadesboro: but regret to say that we have so far been unable to get the same paid for. If any brother or sister or friend is impressed to help us it will be highly appreciated.

We have only six members. It looks like we will have to sell our house and lot unless we get some aid.

Your unworthy brother,

ADAM GREEN,

Clerk.

I have published a little pamphlet entitled "A Brief History of the Old School Baptists." It has fifty double column, thirteen em. pages and runs from John the Baptist to the present day.

The fifth and sixth chapters are devoted to the history of Pilgrim Primitive church, which is the oldest one in Texas, and runs from 1833 to 1847. I expect to yet publish the history of this church up to 1869.

The price of my history is 25 cents post paid. Send orders to J. H. FISHER, Graham, Texas.

WHY.

I have received many inquiries as to why I do not write for the Landmark. I will not attempt to give all the reasons, but will try to answer principally by writing more, "if the Lord will." Besides having been somewhat cumbered with other things which required time to discharge them, I have had but little mind to write. I have had about my usual interest of mind to preach, but not to write. I do not regard myself as being a ready writer, only being able to write, such as I do, when I have a mind to write, which is only now and then. I am frequently filled with uncertainty as to whether I should attempt to write at all, especially editorially.

I sometimes fear that my whole life has been more that of an adventurist than a matter of fact. My reasons of a hope sometimes appear insufficient to sustain a well-grounded one, and fear, therefore, that mine is not well grounded. My experience would rather discourage than comfort but for the saying: "Mine heritage is as a speckled bird." My life is much checkered—many things remaining without interpretation, many things to discourage, will only one now and then to encourage. But, after all, when I recant the blessings which have been bestowed upon me all along the way I have come, and consider the vileness and sinfulness of my carnal, depraved nature, I must say that goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life; and sometimes when I am given some degree of liberty of thought and power of expression, I feel that I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

How wonderfully strange is the experience of one who is made to see his sinful self all defiled and polluted by sin, and to feel the workings of sin in his members, made strong by the law warring against a law which desireth better things—the law of his mind—the law of the spirit of life; having by the one law the knowledge of sin, and by the other the knowledge of life; by the one being dead unto sin, and by the other alive unto God.

What a precious thought, that the existence of life does not depend upon the evidences thereof, nor the lack of them. Eternal life once bestowed is ever there whether its presence is realized or not. By this life is the child of God preserved, and is therefore as imperishable as the life itself. When this life, by its mysterious power, sends forth its vital pulsations, we have evidences of its existence, and are made to rejoice; but when we have not its vital influences, we mourn and long for a restoration of the joys of salvation. Therefore, whether we live, or whether we die, having this life, we are the Lord's and shall live for ever and ever in the Paradise of God.

In the infinitely wise provision of God it is so arranged that we shall, while in this pilgrimage, be made to see and learn the ways and wages of sin, and the way and gift of eternal life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. It is as essential, therefore, that we should know the depths and abounding of sin as that we should the greater depths, heights, and abounding of that sin hath reigned unto death, before we can know that even so grace shall reign through righteousness unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ, our Lord. righteousness unto eternal life, by Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Sin must become exceeding sinful before grace can become exceeding gracious and precious. The life of a child of God is not one of uncertain experiment, but one of certain experience. Eternal life is designated to dwell in this tenement but a brief period, and then to burst forth and embrace and comprehend eternal immensity. Mortality is to be swallowed up of it, and so vitalized by it, that future being is now, to us, incomprehensible. How infinite the theme! how glorious the thought!

What a blessed and gracious privilege to have a hope that anchors the soul, both sure and steadfast, which binds us in everlasting strength to the full realities of a better and ever glorious resurrection.

P. G. L.

“Woe unto them. They have gone in the way of Cain.” Jude 11.

What a wonderful epistle is that of Jude—short, incisive, discriminating—showing the difference between sheep and goats, true and false teachers.

Those who censure Primitive Baptists for earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, and exposing all false ways, would do well to consider what Jude says, and what all the Bible writers say, before they hastily condemn them.

The greatest conflict of the ages, of time, is that between Christ and anti-Christ—between the true and the false. In the eyes of the world the false appears tempting and attractive enough to please, while the doctrine of God our Saviour appears objectionable enough to enlist them against it.

It is stated in this brief chapter of Judge that certain men have crept in unawares who were of old ordained to this condemnation—ungodly men turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ. Such men were of old ordained to this condemnation. They have an appearance of being religious, but they are ungodly men. What is their mark, or how are they known? They have gone in the way of Cain. What is his way? He depended on his own works for righteousness. He brought of the fruit of the earth, the labor of his own hand, to please God with. The earth was cursed for man's sake. Cain did not feel this. He did not confess the name of the Lord.

Abel felt he was a sinner, therefore, felling this by faith he comes trusting alone in the Lord for righteousness. But Cain not only did not believe in Jesus, but he loved self and his own works—the work of his own hand—and besides that he hated God, and hated his brother, and slew him, and defended his conduct. He hated his brother who accepted of the Lord, and slew his brother.

Now the Lord's people never feel to rebel against God—if they are not accepted. They feel they are sinners, and that the Lord is righteous, and cannot do wrong. They will justify the Lord, and they do hate themselves. They could not hate those whom the Lord loves and accepts. They cannot say the Lord is unjust if he does not save them. They are glad the Lord saves any one, and they feel that if the Lord casts them off he is righteous. Their faith in God is such they know he cannot do wrong.

But Cain hated his brother, and slew him, showing he was wicked. How different are the Lord's humble ones! When the Lord accepts any of his people how glad the little ones are, and they will praise God for it! If the Lord accepts A and gives witness of it, B, it he is a believer in the Lord is so glad of this, and loves A, and rejoices with him. We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren, for he that loveth is born of God.

But Cain was of that wicked one, therefore he hated Abel, and slew him. There is enmity between the seed of the woman and the seed of the serpent.

The seed of the serpent or the wicked are proud, self-willed, want their own way, are righteous in their own eyes, do not submit to the righteousness of God. They speak evil of those, things they know not. But they corrupt themselves in such things as they know naturally as brute beasts know things. They love money or run greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, supposing that gain is godliness. They are sensual, devilish. They are murmurers, walking after their own lusts, speaking great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage. Such persons as are fascinating, influential in the world, they flatter and desire to allure into their churches, in order that they may have gain. They love covetous practices. Now the Lord will sling all these out. He will cast the bad away. They shall perish in their own corruption.

Abel was meek. He did not resist Cain with carnal weapons. He was humble. He suffered for righteousness' sake.

P. D. G.

TO A DEAR SISTER.

"Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." Rom. 6:12.

As clearly as light doth make manifest, each child of God is painfully conscious of indwelling sin in his mortal body. I know that in me, that is in my flesh, dwells no good thing. Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? There is no power by which the child of God can rid himself of this lust of the flesh. To suppose that a child of God is without this is a contradiction of Scripture. Every abomination and lust of death or flesh afflicted a child of God. Hence, feeling these lusts of the flesh working in him to bring forth fruit unto death, and having vile, foolish thoughts and the law of sin in his members leading him into captivity, the child of God often feels, "Is it possible that I am a Christian?"

The command is, Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body. Why should it not reign? Because we are dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is true that all that are baptized into Jesus Christ have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. This is because they are dead to the law, by the body of Christ. How do I know this is so of me? If it is I hate sin and it distresses me, and I long to be free from it, as our sister describes her case.

What we are dead to we cannot take pleasure in. No one that is quickened together with Christ can ever take any delight in sin. But there is a great difference between being dead to sin and being dead in sin. When one is dead in sin it gives him no trouble at all. When one is dead to sin it fills him with grief. It is the child of God who is afflicted.

But let him remember that he is in no sense a debtor to the flesh. The flesh can never help any in the salvation of a sinner. We, therefore, are not debtors to the flesh.

Therefore let not sin reign in your mortal body. Do not yield gratification to the flesh. Deny it. Resist the devil. He works in the flesh. But he is a conquered foe. We are not to be subject to the devil or the flesh.

If you had no sense of vileness what need would you feel for a Saviour or deliverer from sin and death.

"Be afflicted and mourn." God's people are an afflicted and a poor people, and this makes them mourn. We mourn because we are sinners. We fear we are not born again. But perfect love of God will cast out this fear. How often have I felt how can I be a child of God, and feared. But the fear of the Lord is to hate evil. Nothing but the perfect love of God can comfort such an one. When we can feel and see that God's love is everlasting and hides all our sins, then we can rejoice in that perfect love that casts out all fear.

But we must mourn because of our afflicted state. Blessed are such mourners for they shall be comforted. We should remember those in need of worldly goods and help them by ministering unto them, and we should visit the fatherless and widow or distressed ones in their poverty, distress and affliction.

P. D. G.

Brother Gold, I would like to see your views on the 51, 52 and 53 verses of the 27th chapter of Matthew: "And behold the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." What was the veil under consideration? Did all that is included in these three verses transpire or come to pass about the time of the crucifixion and resurrection, and if so, where is the holy city where they went and appeared unto many? It is evident that the centurion and they that were with him saw the earthquake, and feared greatly, saying truly this was the son of God.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

W. A. GOURLEY.

Brother W. A. Gourley requests my views of rending the veil of the Temple, Matt. 27:51-53. There was a tabernacle made of two parts. The first was the sanctuary. After the second veil the tabernacle which is called the holiest of all. Heb. 9:1-8.

Each one had its own furnishings. Into the first went the priests always accomplishing the service of God. But into the holiest of all went the high priest alone only once a year.

This signified that while the first tabernacle was standing the way into the holiest of all signifying heaven was not yet open.

This first or outer tabernacle made nothing perfect: yet all the things of that tabernacle were sprinkled with blood of bulls, goats, sheep, etc. Now while this first tabernacle was standing, and this worship which made nothing perfect there stood the veil of the temple closed, shutting off entrance into the most holy place.

The priestly service could not put away sin. What a reminder, what a prophecy was this worship of the imperfection of all earthly worship. The blood of earthly animals could be of no avail in ending sin, or of purging the conscience from dead works. Further what a prophesy was this of the need and of the coming of a better worship.

There must be shedding of blood. There must be a testator. Without the death of that testator his will is of no force.

Now Christ is come by a greater and more perfect tabernacle not made with hands, or no part of the first tabernacle. Nor by the blood of bulls and goats does he enter into the holy place which is heaven itself, but by his own blood he enters once into the holy place having attained eternal redemption for us.

The vessels of the tabernacle and the people must be sprinkled with blood as a type, for they were patterns; but the heavenly things must be purified with better sacrifices than these. What are the heavenly things that must be purified with better sacrifice? The sheep of Christ, those for whom he laid down his life, for Jesus enters into heaven for the redeemed family of God, and there he appears for us, and because he lives we live also. The new covenant of grace, the golden censor of pure incense or praise to God, the ark of the covenant, or place of perfect security against all harm, the golden pot that had manna, typifying the bread of life, Aaron's rod that budded and the tables of the covenant, the everlasting or new covenant of grace. The blood of Jesus sanctified all these, and the mercy seat where he meets with his people in peace and love.

Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many. When he offered himself the most awful and fearful display of the wrath of God against sin was thundered from heaven, and answered in the trembling and astonished earth. The sun was darkened, there was a mighty earthquake, the graves of many were opened and many came out of their graves and appeared unto many. The centurian said surely this was the son of God. But the veil of the temple which had been closed so many hundred years was rent or divided from the top to the bottom, showing that there is an open door into heaven and Jesus crucified is that open, holy way. Through his flesh or his obedience unto death comes the salvation of God. There is an open door consecrated through the veil that is his flesh into the holiest or heaven where he has entered for us, and we are accepted in him, and our standing is in him, and we are complete.

The veil represents the flesh. Moses put a veil over his face showing that the Jews could not see to the end of that which was to be abolished. That darkness of polluted flesh—the veil—is on the hearts of men under the law. Put Jesus came in flesh that was holy and rendered perfect obedience in the flesh, and in his crucifixion the darkness is done away, guilt is gone, there is an open door into heaven in and through the flesh or sufferings of Jesus. This is a consecrated or holy way. We are accepted in him whose blood cleanses from all sins.

All the things contained in these three verses are such as the veil rent from top to bottom, and the earth did quake, and rocks rent, and the graves were opened. The earth cast out her dead. The mighty throes of earth, as of a woman in travail caused the graves to open, and many of the saints which slept arose. Surely this was the most fearful, solemn and wonderful display ever beheld by men.

"Well might the sun in darkness hide,
And shut his glories in;
When Christ the mighty make died,
For man the creature's sin."

The holy city was Jerusalem—not the Jerusalem in bondage that crucified Jesus—but the Jerusalem that is free, that is the mother of us all.

These saints after the resurrection of Jesus appeared unto many. Men did not with their natural eyes see them. There is no evidence that any man with his natural eyes saw Jesus after the resurrection, for natural eyes cannot see a spiritual, risen Saviour. He appeared unto his disciples—showed himself to them. So these saints appeared unto many. It is one thing to be in the flesh and see things that are natural. It is another thing to behold the spirituality and glory of the resurrection life. It is one thing to be in the Jerusalem that is in bondage where our Lord was crucified, and quite another thing to walk about Zion, to behold her towers, and mark well her bulwarks, and tell that to the generation following. It is one thing to be in the flesh and by the dark waters of Babylon while the mockers are asking you to sing one of the songs of Zion, and it is quite another thing to be in the spirit on the Lord's day and hear the new song sung that gives glory to God and to the Lamb.

OBITUARIES

PEARL MINTER.

On October 1st, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buck Minter and bore away their loving daughter, Pearl. She was born Nov. 24th, 1889. She contracted typhoid fever and after a lingering illness of several weeks she passed from her earthly home to dwell with those gone before. All that loving hands could do was done but they could render her no service. She leaves father, mother, brothers and sisters to mourn their loss. Pearl was not a member of any church but was a believer in the Primitive Baptists. She is gone but not forgotten.

"A precious one from us has gone;

A voice we loved is stilled,

A place is vacant in our home,

Which never can be filled.

"God in His wisdom has recalled

The one His love had given,

And though the body here slumbers,

The soul is safe in heaven."

R. L. AND MALISSA A. SHREVE.

Dear Brother Gold, and to the Household of Faith:

I herewith send you the obituary of R. L. Shreve, son of Elder Robert and Sallie Shreve, and Malissa A. Shreve, his wife. R. L. Shreve was born in North Carolina in 1869 and died in Danville, Va., Jan. 30th, 1907. Malissa, who was the daughter of J. R. and Mary T. Bryant, Spring Garden, Va., was born Oct. 22nd, 1870, and died Sept. 8th, 1907. They were united in the holy bonds of matrimony Oct., 1889, to which union was born eleven children, nine boys and two girls, whom they leave to mourn their loss, besides a large number of relatives and friends. It is with a sad, sad heart, yet not as those who have no hope, for us to part from them. They were both devoted Christians and we feel that our loss is their eternal gain. We read, "blessed are they that have part in the first resurrection and over such the second death hath no power." We believe Jesus has newness of life, for their works showed renewness of life, for their works showed they had the sweet council of Jesus. They were loved by all true Baptists and all lovers of truth.

I have spent many happy hours with them in singing praises to God, and talking of what Jesus had done for them. But they are now gone to sleep with Jesus until the morn of the resurrection when they will awake in his likeness.

Brother and sister Shreve joined the Primitive Baptist church at White Thorn in 1871, and on account of convenience were transferred to Mt. Springs by letters about ten years ago. The church has lost faithful deacon and members.

The services were conducted by the writer.

DEACON IVEY R. BAKER.

The subject of this sketch, Ivey R. Baker, was born in Pitt county, N. C. He was the son of John B. and Licity Baker, and was born the 24th day of January, 1842. He in his young days enjoyed life to its fullest extent. Just prior to the late civil war he attended school in Goldsboro, N. C., and when the war commenced he volunteered and went to Virginia and was wounded. After he got well enough to return to the army he bought a horse and joined the cavalry, not being able to march. He spent the latter part of the war in eastern North Carolina doing picket duty.

In 1866, the 20th day of November, he married Miss Annie M. Hardy, daughter of Lemuel E. and Elizabeth Hardy. After marriage he moved from Pitt to the southwestern part of Greene county, and lived there until December 19th, 1904. He then sold his land in Greene and moved to Johnston county, and bought one of the finest tracts of land in that county, though it was considerably run down.

He served his county, Greene, for several years as a justice of the peace and school committeeman. His first wife bore him five children, one son and four daughters, two died in infancy.

After the death of his first wife, which took place January 4th, 1875, he married Miss Martha Whitted, of Durham, N. C., on the 3rd day of February, 1876. She bore him one child that died in infancy.

In the year 18—he was convicted of sin and was shown what a great sinner he was and his lost condition, and without mercy he was forever banished from the presence of a holy and just God; but through the atoning blood of Jesus, who came to save sinners, he professed a hope in Jesus and was received a member of the Primitive Baptist church at Bear Creek in Lenoir county, and was baptized by Elder Isaac J. Taylor, and remained a faithful and worthy member until the year 1885, when he, with his wife, took letters of dismission and for convenience united with the church at Newborn's at their September meeting, 1885. At their June meeting, 1886, he was ordained deacon by Elder L. H. Hardy, T. B. Lancaster and J. W. Gardner, the Presbytery, and filled the office with credit to himself and satisfaction to the church.

After he moved to Johnston county, he with his wife and daughter applied for letters of dismission and united with the church at Little Creek in Johnston county, and remained a faithful member until called to go home above, which took place on the night of the 10th of December, 1908.

He had been greatly afflicted for many years with a complication of diseases, but his death sickness was indigestion in its acute form. He died almost suddenly. Thus passed away a good and faithful citizen, a kind and loving husband and father. He leaves to mourn a good wife, one son and two daughters, and several grandchildren, and the church, but their loss is his eternal gain.

May the Lord be praised.

Written by request of the family.

ELIZABETH CARTER.

Just after noon on the 5th of March, my dear and precious mother departed from me. She was the wife of Willford Carter and daughter of Clifton and Mary Haiglip and was born Feb. 10th, 1824. She departed this life Mar. 5th, 1907, making her stay on earth 83 years and 23 days. She was confined to her bed one week and seemed to have no disease only complaining of weakness. She bore her sickness with much patience, never murmuring at anything but seemed to be perfectly reconciled that the Lord's will should be done and said she was only waiting for him to call her home, and we hope she has entered that home not made with hands eternal in the heavens there to dwell amid angels forever blest.

She professed a hope in Christ over thirty years ago and joined the Primitive Baptist church at Matrimony meeting house and was baptized by Brother McNeally. She remained a faithful member of this church until the Baptists built a new meeting house and organized a church at Shiloh near her home, when she got a letter and joined there, as she was too feeble to get to Matrimony often. She enjoyed going to her church meetings so much and went as long as she could. I well remember on several occasions she would start to church but would become so exhausted she would have to turn back and would shed tears because she was not able to go. How sorry I did feel for her, words fail to express. I told her I would write the brethren to come and have preaching at her home, which they did several times. She enjoyed both the preaching and singing so much. She had been a sweet singer herself and would always take her hymn book and try to help, but her voice was so weak she could not. I have seen her shed tears often when she tried to sing.

My dear mother, was, I think a true Christian and she spent her life in trying to do all she could for her children as long as she was able. Her precious hands were always ready. She seemed never to tire of doing all she could for me. Mother raised ten children, all living and all married except myself. The cruel war took from us our dear father, so we have had to travel through this poor world with no kind earthly father to guide and protect us. But oh, I feel we had as good and kind a mother to counsel us as any children ever had. But she has gone and left us to mourn our loss which is her eternal gain. She begged us not to grieve for her, and I know she is at rest. It is so hard to give up; everywhere I go I miss her so much. I feel I am left alone without a friend, but hope when I am called to die and leave this world of trouble I may meet my dear mother where parting is no more. "A dear and precious one from us has gone. A voice is hushed and stilled. A place is vacant in our home which never can be filled."

MARY.

MRS. MARTHA A. I. ALMAND.

Mrs. Martha Almand died at her residence in Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 14th, 1909, at the advanced age of 84 years. She was the widow of Wm. D. Almand, who passed away Nov. 15th, 1903. She leaves a host of friends and relatives to mourn her absence and while we know she lived to a good old age, we grieve to give her up, but cannot wish her back again believing our loss is her eternal gain, as we believe she lives in eternal bliss where Jesus is. O happy thought!

She leaves seven children, five daughters and two sons, Mrs. M. E. Marks, C. Almand, Mrs. C. A. Cooper, Mrs. Lane Webb, Mrs. Rilla Henry, Mrs. Ella Corley and I. D. Almand, also two brothers and three sisters.

Mother was a strong and consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church ever filling her seat when her health would permit.

It was a delight to be with them and her house was a home for them when they could visit her. She often spoke of dying and craved to depart and be at rest. She asked those around the bed to sing the song, "all is well." All is well, she repeated the words but her breath was too short to sing.

She was confined to her bed about three months before her spirit was released of its prison of clay to soar away to God who gave it.

Paul says if this earthy tabernacle were dissolved we have a building not made with hands eternal and on high. Yes, she was ready to go and when the kind summons came, child, your Father calls, come home! her spirit quickly sped away to join that happy throng in singing and praising Jesus the blessed Lamb of God. Oh, may we be prepared to meet her with all the redeemed of the Lord, where suffering and sin and sorrow are felt and feared no more.

Dearest mother thou hast left us,

Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

MRS. MINERVA MITCHELL.

Sister Minerva Mitchell departed this life at her home near Gideon, March 20th, 1897, in her 70th year. She was the widow of the late A. M. Mitchell a Confederate veteran who died suddenly about five years ago.

They were married in 1857 and five sons were born to them. Gideon and Turner are deceased and Robert, Edgar and Wirt survive them besides one sister, four brothers and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but we hope their loss is her eternal gain.

The deceased had been a consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church for about forty-five years and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the brethren but by afflictions was debarred from attending meetings often. We confidently hope she has been released from all her sufferings to a new life of joy, peace and happiness with saints gone before and now rejoices with them in heaven where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more.

I can say that I have been spiritually and personally acquainted I hope, with this dear sister for the past five years and have in my weak way tried to serve Wilson church, to which she belonged, as moderator, and I can truthfully say that none knew her but to love her. Her orderly walk, godly conversation and great patience in tribulation were bright jewels that she wore. I visited her a few times during her affliction and it seemed she had the greatest amount of patience of anyone I ever knew. Her heart and mind were led on to the love of God and she seemed to be perfectly reconciled to God and wanted his will done and not hers. She delighted in going to church and seemed to enjoy preaching so much, and at times she filled her seat when she was not able. She seemed to feed so sweetly on crumbs that fell from her Master's table, but now her faith is turned into sight and her hope into possession.

"A precious one from us has gone,

The voice we loved is still;

A place is vacant in our home,

Which never can be filled."

Children and grand-children, I pray you may follow her bright example and be blessed to meet her in heaven. Written by the request of her son for publication in Zion's Landmark.

CORRECTIONS IN THE OBITUARY OF MRS. SUDIE HUNT GOOCH.

In 2nd paragraph a sentence should read,

"Knowing that she did not understand the doctrine I believed in which, if I make no mistake, is as dear to me as life itself, I never at any time asked or requested that she go with me to my church. I knew her religious views before our marriage, and should I have tried to unduly influence her I would not have been worthy to be her husband."

In 5th paragraph it should read, "She took all the treatment prescribed by the doctors and seldom missed staying out in the open air from nine to ten hours each day during the coldest part of last winter."

In 6th paragraph, "For He has promised to be with His people through the sixth trouble and not forsake them in the seventh. I feel that this was fully verified in her case," etc.

In the 7th paragraph, "If I am not mistaken in my own heart this morning I feel like God is in every thing, and whatever He does with me or any one else will be all right," etc., also in same paragraph, "But God alone has spoken peace to my soul." Also in same, "I have thought many, many times I would love to feel religious as you do, and if God ever showed me that your way was best I would love to go with you, but at the same time I felt it would be a cross to me to endure the thoughts and feelings I am sure my former friends would have on the subject." Also in same, "I don't find any soul food in mine, so I may have it stopped, and if I do you need not subscribe for me."

In 8th paragraph, "The following was written the 18th of April and a day or two later."

In the 9th paragraph, "They seemed so true and real." Also in same, "Yet Christ came to call sinners to repentance, not the righteous, so surely there is hope for me."

In the 10th paragraph, "Remember me to Mr. Simpkins and tell him I should like for him to pray for me." Also "I do not think you could have caused me to feel as I have, but to keep other people from thinking so I am glad it happened while I am here and you there."

In the 13th paragraph, "And from that date has ever contended for salvation by grace and grace alone, and contended with preachers in Asheville, that visited her after her deliverance." Also in same ("her own words to me.")

In the 14th paragraph, "Who had met to pay their last respects to one who had not an enemy on earth that I know of and as pure a lady as it was possible for finite beings to be."

In the last paragraph, "May the Lord enable me to say, not my will but thine, O Lord, be done."

GEORGIA WEST.

It is with a sad and heavy heart I make the attempt to write the death of a friend as feel it my duty to write something in memory of him.

Georgia West was born in Tyrrell county, N. C., Sept. 3rd, 1890, and died from the effects of a fall from a moving car Feb. 12th, 1909. In the fall he was horribly bruised and he lived only seven days after the accident. His health was comparatively good up until that time. After his hurt he continued to get worse though all that family, friends and good physicians could do was done to keep him with them. But the good Lord called him and they had to give him up.

Poor boy, he hated to leave this world, but I hope he has only fallen asleep in Jesus' arms to rest forever more.

Not long ago he filled his place,

And sat with us in love;

But he has run his mortal race,

And never can return.

Perhaps our time may be as short,

Our days may fly as fast;

Oh Lord impress the solemn thought

That this may be your last.

We cannot tell who next may fall

Beneath Thy chastening rod;

One must be first, but its coming to all,

So prepare to meet your God.

ROSANNAH KING.

J. E. ADAMS.

By order of the church here at Wilmington, I will write a few lines in memory of Sister Rosannah King, wife of the late Joseph King, who died Dec. 3rd, 1861.

Sister King was born Jan. 2nd, 1821, and died in the 88th year of her life, April, 1908. She was baptized in the fellowship of the church at Wilmington in the year 1862 by Elder Aaron Davis. She was the mother of nine children, five of whom survive her, J. W., J. M., B. R., J. P. and W. M. King, the two former being prominent elders in the Adventist church. Her children, grand-children and great-grand-children number over one hundred. She was a fond mother, a faithful Christian, devoted to her church to the last and a true friend to all. She died in full triumph of faith in the hope of a better resurrection.

No Land So Rich That Fertilizer Cannot Make It Better

You use fertilizers for the profit you get out of them—and the better the land the more profitably a good fertilizer can be used on it. Do not imagine because land will produce a fair crop without that these fertilizers cannot be profitably used on it, or that they were made only for land too poor to produce without them. If poor land will show a normal increase when fertilizer is used, good land will show at least double the increase. Use Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers to increase the quality, as well as the quantity of the crop—and you will increase the profits from your land.

"I have been using your fertilizers for a number of years" says Mr. William Fraiser, of Glasburg, La., "and find that it not only pays to fertilize, but to do plenty of it, and use the best fertilizers to be had, such as your brands. I have used a number of them and found them to be as recommended and to give better results than any other fertilizers that I have ever used."

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

P. D. GOLD.

I trust every reader will try and secure a new subscriber for the Landmark. Our expenses are heavier and an increased circulation is necessary to enable us to make anything.

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brethren Gold and Lester:

Feeling my inability and having very little education, but for relief of mind and by request I will try to write something to be published in the Landmark if you think proper.

I was born in Franklin county, Va., Nov. 21st, 1875. My father and mother being Primitive Baptists, I was raised up under that head. Although my father was a minister and I loved my parents, I could not believe the doctrine they advocated. I believed just as every unregenerated one believes—that I could get religion just when I wanted it, and just like every one, I was not ready yet. I was young, in the bloom of life and this world was good enough for me. I was satisfied with the ball-room and card table, but why I did not remain in this condition I cannot tell unless it will do to apply the doctrine of the Apostle Paul, "I was alive once without the law, but when the commandant came sin revived and I died."

I of course believed that I was without the law. I thought I had as good a father and mother as could be anywhere. I believed they were honest in their worship but I could not believe like they did. I was satisfied with my present condition and the time of my conviction I can't name. On the morning of the 5th day of March, 1893, my dear mother departed this life, leaving seven of us children, all of whom are living and united with the church.

Four of us belong to the Primitive Baptist church at Lynville and three members of the Missionaries at Roanoke, and it seemed to me that my mother's death would almost kill me. That was the first trouble I ever had and it seemed there never would be any more peace here for me. But I could not give up my bad habits. I continued going to dances and would dance and drink brandy to try to drown my troubles, but the more I would do to drown them the worse they would become.

I went on in this way for four years, until 1897, when I thought they would have to send me to the asylum. I would be at work and suddenly find myself crying and I could not tell what it was, as I still believed I could get religion just when I wanted it. Yet there was something about it I could not understand. I would think over the past and would think I was as good as anyone else and at other times my life would seem very bad to me. I had lots of arminians to tell me, just as they had told others, that I had religion and didn't know it. Some said I was just as good as I ever would be.

I attended meetings of the different sects, but they could not make me believe anything like that. I guess I was a peculiar person to them and if I was not to them, I was and am yet a mystery to myself. I would study my case over and wonder, why am I thus.

I once thought I was just as good as anyone and now it seemed that I was the worst and had been the worst sinner on earth. It seemed that all I had ever done was before me and it was all bad. I could not think of one thing I had done that was worthy of example. My whole heart's desire and prayer to God was, "Lord be merciful to me a sinner." It seemed to me that everybody had forsaken me. Though brother and sister Basham, with whom I was living, were as good and kind to me as anybody could be, and others were also, still I felt to be cast off. I felt that my case was an outside one and didn't see how God could be just and save me. Still I could not help begging him for his mercy.

One morning in September, 1897, I was at work by myself, when this burden, it seemed to me, got to be greater than I could bear. I felt surely I was going to die and that eternal punishment was my eternal doom and I tried to ask the Lord to forgive me. Every breath was, "Lord be merciful to me a sinner," and this burden left me. It seemed to me that was the brightest day I ever saw. It seemed that every thing was praising the Lord, and I thought I would never have any more trouble. But before twelve o'clock it seemed something said to me, "you are deceived about this," and my trouble began again right then. So it is just that way still. There is a continual warfare, the old man and the new man, one against the other, the spirit and the flesh. As it is written, the elder shall serve the younger, which I think means the flesh shall serve the spirit.

Now it is not my desire to sin. Paul says, to will is present, but how to perform that which is right I find not. So then it is no more I that do it but sin that dwelleth in me, so then I with my mind do serve the law of God but with my flesh the law of sin and death.

For fear I might weary one reading this I will close. Asking you to use your own pleasure about publishing this, I am as ever,

Your unworthy brother in hope,
T. R. PLYBORN.

TESTIMONY.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother:

I have for some time felt to write a few lines for your consideration, and if this should be published I aim to give some testimony why I am a Primitive Baptist if one at all.

We understand that it is according to God's mercy that we are saved, not according to our works. I understand the word to mean something for nothing or in other words kindness, tenderness to the one that has offended. Now this being true those that are preaching works are not true. There are only these two, the church of God and the world profession don't alter it, but grace and mercy will. If it was as those modern preachers preach it, it would destroy mercy from the fact that they say and do live, but we believe that it is live and do. That is testimony. We read that straight is the way and narrow is the gate that leadeth to life and few there be that find it, but wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go in thereat. Now who is it that is teaching the broad way? Now the wayfaring man, though he be a fool, could not err therein.

Those wide gate teachers and broad way teachers will tell the people that the Lord will save them all if they will just let Him. I tell them that is a weak God. I would be afraid to trust Him after He has made the world and made it for his own purpose and then can't control it. Such teachings as that are robbers of his glory and power or rather dishonor Christ. No one can trace out the sorrows of his soul under the chastening hand of God, the struggles of his poor soul, his fears, doubts and conflicts and say that God helped me there, could teach me such stuff. But it is just what the world believes. By their fruit ye shall know them. Those preachers going around teaching free agency; no one is saved by free agency. Paul proved that by saying, not of works, but according to his mercy are we saved, to the testimony.

I understand Paul to write that he was confident that he that hath begun a good work within you would perform it. So you see they are denying the testimony. They are like whited sepulchers, outwardly appearing beautiful but inwardly full of dead men's bones and uncleanness. They are preaching their own sufficiency, but the scriptures teach we are not sufficient of ourselves to think anything but our sufficiency is of God.

My conclusion is that no one who has ever seen himself or herself as they are can believe such things. He feels and knows that in himself there dwells no good thing. I was made to believe this was so in the year 1879 on Monday night after the 4th Sunday in August, and the older I get the stronger I am in the faith, for I believe it is according to the power that worketh in me that I write and teach. I have been braced, I hope, by the most precious visions, one of which I will relate, I hope, for the comfort of some of God's little ones. When resting on my bed one night there came a man down through the top of the house, took hold of me and rubbed his face on mine and embraced me and when he left me he said Paul in the plainest language. No one could tell my feelings. I felt less than little and tears ran down my cheeks. I felt too unworthy to be visited by the angel of the beloved Paul and I have a hope that this was one of those ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them that shall be heirs of salvation.

And again I was in a beautiful room and saw a choir of angels like girls elevated and I was seated in front of them. They held books and sang, "Let your light so shine," and after seeing this beautiful vision I felt encouraged, knowing that one could not let his light shine unless he had light.

Brother Gold, your counsel is good; I love to read after you and all the writing brethren. It is a great comfort to me. Hope you all may be spared to write much more.

Your brother in hope,
WM. H. HODGES.

Sontag, Va.

Dear Uncle Levi:

Your letter came some time ago, but I have waited to answer and hope I have waited in prayer to the Lord for I would not like to write that which is not true.

Saul and David are very remarkable characters in the Bible. Saul was a man after the heart of Israel and David was after the heart of the Lord. Saul was a man of high stature, from his shoulders and upward above his brethren, while David was little and the youngest in his father's house. He was of no public note but an humble keeper of sheep. Saul was of a jealous spirit, but David trusted in the Lord.

The Lord appointed Saul king to punish the rebellion of Israel, but he appointed David king that the hearts of Israel should be turned unto the Lord. There can be no better spirit to punish evil doers than the spirit of jealousy, and there can be no such sure service rendered by any other than the spirit of love and fear of the Lord.

There is as vast difference between the spirit of the Lord and the evil spirit that went out from the Lord. This last is the spirit that generally moved Saul. It was the spirit of jealousy and the love of self. Being possessed of this one cannot be humble. Any appearance of humility would be to lift up self, to bring praise to ones self. This spirit is cowardly until it thinks it has the advantage and then it is very bold. The Lord sends this spirit on which the wicked depend and by which they are moved to destroy them in their wicked works. The cases of Saul and Ahab are cases in point.

While this evil spirit from the Lord worked in Saul to destroy him and make a final end of his kingdom, the spirit of the Lord worked in David to the praise of the Lord. This same evil spirit from the Lord worked in Joseph's brethren to destroy him, but the spirit of the Lord worked in Joseph to the praise of the Lord and to the salvation in the house of Jacob. This evil spirit from the Lord worked in the Jews and made them cry out against the Lord, saying: "Crucify Him," away with Him from the earth," etc. While the spirit of the Lord was with Him, enabling Him to offer Himself without spot to God to purge our consciences from dead works to serve the Lord. Wherever this evil spirit from the Lord is it only takes a touch and it is ready to show its serpentine head and to fasten its fangs in its hated victim, but if the spirit of the Lord be in that victim. He will deliver him even though he does it in the caves of the rocks, the wilderness or in the enemy's land.

This spirit began to appear in Saul against David when Saul fled from before the face of Goliath and thus humiliated Israel and disgraced the name of their God, who had promised to succor them and be their shield and put their enemies to flight before them.

The Lord had not said that He would overcome and destroy all their feeble enemies, but the strong and the weak were to be destroyed together. What was Goliath but a lump of clay in the hands of the great eternal potter? He could destroy him by the hand of the shepherd boy as well as by the hand of a mighty host.

The spirit of the Lord was in David and he saw nothing too hard for his God to do. Therefore he did not look on the awful stature of this uncircumcised Philistine. By the spirit of God he ran to the battle and smote the Philistine dead and delivered Israel. This the evil spirit from the Lord could never do.

Now, the fire of the spirit of the Lord began to spread and the women of Israel were caught in the holy fire and they sang, "Saul hath slain his thousands and David his ten thousands." This aggravated the evil spirit from the Lord which was in Saul and he became a crazy man and his heart filled with murder and caused his whole heart to be set on destroying David.

The spirit of the Lord was also in Jonathan and he made a covenant with David and gave him his armor. This was saying to David, God has made thee king instead of me. However, the same spirit was in both of them and their souls were knit together in a love that passed the love of woman.

This the more enraged the evil spirit from the Lord which was in Saul and he gathered his armies to kill David and took oaths (resolutions of the people) to kill him.

This is as far as this evil spirit from the Lord can go. It is the spirit of murder and will eventually end the life of him who is moved thereby. He that taketh the sword shall perish with the sword. Not by it but with it. That is, the sword shall perish and he that taketh it shall perish with it. He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

Should not the humble servants of God take courage and rejoice in the Lord? Praise ye His holy name forever.

I have done the best I could in describing the difference in these two spirits and their workings and I send it to you instead of the Landmark, and when you have read it, if you think proper you are at liberty to send it.

I have written so much and feel so much of my inability to do justice to any Biblical subject that I find myself shrinking back from the task.

We are all in usual health. The Lord abundantly bless you all.

Your loving nephew,
L. H. HARDY.

Dear Brother Gold:

I guess my time is out for the Landmark, so you will find $1.50 by enclosed check for which you will please send it to me for another year. I have been taking it for some time and I always try to pay in advance. I think if every one could do the same it would be much better for you.

I am glad to be able to pay for it, for it would grieve me to do without it, as I enjoy reading it so much. The sisters write such good letters—Sister Louisa Edwards, Mattie Luper and others. I wish so much I could write as they do. It seems I can't express my feelings as I wish to.

Brother Gold, do you think a Christian dreads death? I feel so low down and so much in the dark most of the time I fear I am not one. I feel so helpless. I know if I am saved it will not be by anything I have done or ever will do. It seems to me I have never had the evidence I read of others having. I so often call on the Lord to have mercy on me. I believe the Lord is able to save to the utmost all who come unto God by Him. If I only could know I was one of that number how happy I would be. I think I surely do love the Baptists and their doctrine. Brother Gold, if I knew I was as good as I think you are, I would be satisfied.

If you have time, please write and tell me what you think of my case. I would be glad if I could see you and talk with you. Pray for me, a poor sinner in distress. I hope you will excuse my badly written note and pardon mistakes for I am full of them. Your unworthy sister, if one at all.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother:
Landmark.

We have been readers for a long time and find in its publication what we believe and hope we love.

The sinner is saved by the grace of God, and manifested by his Son, Jesus Christ, to us.

Good works but prove what is wrought by him and are an effectual evidence of the saints' desire to honor and obey him in spirit and in truth. Christ is the cause of our salvation and he alone will finish the work in righteousness. The birth of the child manifests that he lives and is heir to all the inheritance he received of the Father for him. Hence if it is undefiled and will not fade away, what he has by hope will be fulfilled in his lot by that which is reserved for him when all other things fade away.

Many of the writers we do not know personally, but we love them for the truth they know and enjoy.

Your editorials are especially to me very comforting as they are pointed and clear in the ideas they intend to convey.

Many of your trials as an editor I do not know from a personal way, but I am impressed that you have many of which you do not publish. If we as readers could know more of them we possibly could relieve you in a way that would make your life more comfortable.

I have thought a faithful editor should be faithfully rewarded by his brethren.

Let the household know occasionally your troubles and be free to let them bear a part of your burdens.

Continue our paper and strive in the future as you have in the past to hew to the line, and square or judge with the square of the righteousness of Jesus Christ and Him crucified.

Affectionately your brother in hope,

G. M. FETTER.

Raton, N. M.

Remarks:—I desire to express my appreciation of the kind words of Elder Fetter. It is my desire that my life may be a labor of love in the patience of hope.

I could not express my anxiety and care in my continual yearning that the brethren may dwell together in love and peace, and that Zion may prosper.

No one knows except those in like position what is the expense, labor, toil and anxiety of my daily life. But that is all freely endured if I may be of use to the cause of truth.

I thank brethren that help me in my labors.

P. D. G.

Dear Children of the Kingdom of our God:

My heart and mind has been so full for the last several days and to you my spirit turns but how helpless I do feel yet I want to speak encouragingly to Zion. We are all travelling in this wilderness land, many are our sorrows and conflicts. Let none think that the others do not have their woes, for we all have them, some in one way, some in another, and we get to where at times, we know not what to do, nor which way to turn, but remember this is the end of the earth, and Jesus says, "Come unto me all ye ends of the earth and be ye saved;" and again, "These are they which have come up through great tribulations and have washed their robes and made them white through the blood of the Lamb." This means through suffering. "For if ye suffer with him ye shall reign with Him." Oh! glorious thought, but how our flesh hates to suffer; but remember Jesus was made a gazing stock. He suffered all kinds of humiliation, and then his precious head was crowned with thorns, His precious hands and feet were pierced with those terrible nails, driven through them, and His precious body, swinging as it were, just holding to the awful cross, by those four nails. None of us ever suffered such agony as this, for three dreadful hours, and it was all for poor lost hell-desiring sinners like me. Oh! kindred when I think of all this, I want to put my hand on my mouth and say to this wicked heart of mine, cease thy murmurings. How I want to come up to the standard of a true worshipper of God, but the longer I live the more imperfection I see in my sinful self. I was in company a few hours ago with some people who said they believed that there were people in hell for whom Christ died. Oh! I said, you deny the power of God. I came home, went to my room and shed bitter tears to think that my dear Saviour should be thus dishonored. But, oh, it did make Him so much more precious to me, how glad I was that I believed He died for me, and I saw in all my sorrows He didn't need any help. He was all-sufficient—a whole Saviour. Yes, I have long ago seen that if He had dealt with me justly, I'd now be in hell lifting my fruitless cries where mercy never could have reached me; but His gracious ear heard my feeble plaintive cry, and mercy was extended to even me—

Dear children, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, and remember the wise as well as the foolish arose and trimmed their lamps. What are the lamps? The profession we have made. Oh! how clean it should be, but just think of what must take place in the church of God to trim the lamps. Discipline. Dear kindred, I can't do the things that I would, but it does seem to me I want to follow Jesus and I pray to God both day and night for myself and you all, that—

"Each may feel his brother's sigh,

And with him bear a part

When sorrow flows from eye to eye,

And joy from heart to heart."

Affectionately,

BETTIE Z. WHITLEY.

Dear Brother Gold:

I send you this to publish if you see fit. I felt like I must write. You don't know how those pieces in the Landmark concerning you touched me, but it made you only that much dearer to me, for we came immediately in sweet fellowship. Oh! how I have suffered from that very cause debt in-somuch that at one time I thought my reason would be dethroned, but God was so merciful to me. If I had the means you should never suffer another hour from this cause, i. e., if I had sufficient means. Oh! how my heart did agonize when I saw Brother Shaw's appeal in the Landmark. He is very dear to me for Jesus' sake. Can't you come to see us before very long? My love to Sister Gold. Asking a continued interest in your prayers for this poor worm, and my family. I close in sweet Christian fellowship,

Washington, N. C.

Dear Bro. Gold:

As I am sending my dues for the Landmark, I feel like writing a little. You can read it and if you think it wholesome food for the readers of the Landmark, you are at liberty to publish it. I will ask you to be the judge in this matter.

The Scripture which is on my mind is found in Psalms 23:1: "The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want."

This is a saying of faith, of one whose heart has been purified by faith, one who has been brought through the furnace of affliction and learned by experience that vain is the help of man; that cursed is the man that trusteth in man or maketh flesh his arm.

No man naturally, can truly and deep down in his heart say "The Lord is my shepherd." It is only the faithful in Christ Jesus that can and do talk that way. Those who have been brought through the furnace of affliction and tried and refined as gold is refined, and made to see that in their flesh dwells no good thing, but in the Lord there is strength. It seems to me the Psalmist uttered the language of every heaven-born child of God, both individuals and collectively. But sometimes doubts and fears come into our hearts, and we wonder if the Lord is my shepherd. We know that the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are His. We know that all His precious promises are sure and certain to all those who are included in the holy covenant of love. We know that all for whom Christ died will be saved with an everlasting salvation, but the question that so often troubles each and every one of us is this: Am I one of that number for whom Christ died? It seems to be an individual case with us. Can I say of a truth, deep down in my heart with the Psalmist: The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want."

When we come to examine ourselves we find that we are sinful and vile, that from the sole of the foot, even unto the head, we are full of wounds, bruises and putrifying sores. At times we get down in the valley of humiliation and tribulation, darkness comes upon us and our hope seems almost gone, we feel that we have missed the substance and caught the shadow, and in our distress we cry unto the Lord and inquire: "Is there no balm in Gilead; is there no physician there?" Then the Lord whose ears are ever open to the cry of his children, hears our cry, speaks peace to our souls and we are lifted up upon the wings of His love, and our hope is renewed and we are filled with joy. Then we can say "surely goodness and mercy will follow me all the days of my life and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

How good it is when we are blessed of the Lord to rejoice in His name and offer up the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and declare His works with rejoicing. No doubt every one of the Lord's children would be glad to remain in just this condition all the time, but they cannot, and I feel like it is best for us that we cannot, for if we were never in tribulation or distress, we would never know what it meant to be delivered from them. Then again, we would know nothing of Christian patience, experience and hope, which the Apostle Paul says tribulation works in us. I believe that when we are down in the valley we are not liable to get into much trouble nor cause others trouble. We are not liable to stir up trouble or discord in the church, but we strive for the things which make for peace and look upon our brethren with honor preferring one another.

Jesus is the good shepherd who gave his life for the sheep. By the offering of Himself once, he has perfected forever them that are sanctified. His work is a perfect work, nothing can be added to or taken from it, and John says "We love Him because He first loved us." He loved the church, His bride, before the foundation of the world and purchased her with his own blood. Therefore we are not redeemed with such corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb, without blemish and without spot. Therefore the church is secure in Jesus. The Lord looks on the church through Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. And we are not only willing, but we desire to follow Him as dear children. He is to us the one altogether lovely and the chiefest among ten thousand, and we are the apple of His eye, the object of His love.

The latter part of the text says: "I shall not want." O how good it is when one can feel this deep down in our hearts. That Jesus will supply us every thing that is needful, for in Him all fulness dwells. He does not say he will give us all we want. No, that would not be best for us. He will not give us any thing that would be detrimental to us. But He gives us such things as we need, such things as would prove a blessing to us and glorify God. Then let us take courage, dear children, inasmuch as Christ has done so much for us and follow Him who is the shepherd and bishop of our souls, and may each and every one of us be so blessed of the Lord that we can say: "The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want."

In this blessed hope,

J. E. HERNDON.

Mr. P. D. Gold, Kind Friend:

I have thought several times I would write. Feeling to know what you would say or think would not change it one particle, yet I do believe that one that has the gift you have, and long experience can tell whether it is the dealing of the Lord, or whether it is one that is easily wearied, and that it is natural things that are disturbing them. Part of the time I have not natural energy enough to run my domestic affairs, and I have more on me than I can tell any one. Every thing I can think of seems to be a failure, and I do not care to be bothered with any one. Then I think I am not capable of having the cares of a family on me, and I must be sorrier than any one else. But I do not remain this way very long.

Then again it seems like every thing is favorable for me, and nothing but the good Lord's blessing has followed me all my days. It seems to me I am meaner than any one else, and when I go to meeting I fear it is in a hypocritical way, and no reality in it. But I know I love to go and hear the preaching, for I can hear it ringing within myself for several days after coming home. There is only about one thing I know, and that is that I do love many of the members of the church, and some of them I use to almost hate, and this is a mystery to me.

But I do not love them all alike. I am talking about old Primitive Baptists. When I go to meeting and am out on the church yard my whole desire is to be in their company. I do not feel fit to be there, but that does not keep me from wanting to be there. Years back if you wanted to make me miserable just put me in their company.

What I used to love I now hate. But why is it if any of it is of the Lord I have not an experience of grace like others? I do not know the very time this change took place as many claim to know.

I believe that where the Lord begins a good work He will finish it, and I am waiting for His appointed time.

I would like to do my duty if I knew what it is, yet I do not want to be too hasty. I do not want to deceive you people.

It had rather not sign my name. A friend to the truth.

Remarks:—Our friend whose name is a secret to me is quite right in saying I can do nothing against the truth, nor do I want to. If I am right I would like for what I do to be for the truth.

Our friend's case is one not more mysterious than many others.

The symptoms are plainer to others than they are to the patient. I am vexed likewise about business, and feel unfit to be numbered with the Lord's people, and am wearied with serving, and my life is a failure.

Again I at times rejoice and cannot recount the Lord's mercies. Again I praise the dead that are dead. At times I feel what a blessing it is to live. Are there not two manner of people in me? Am I able to keep myself?

Our friend tells many of the signs that follow them that believe, such as loving the brethren, loving to hear preaching, loving some Baptists better or more than some others. Well, if you love the obedient ones better than you do the disobedient ones is that a bad sign? You are afraid you do not go to preaching from the right motive, yet you know you love the brethren. All this is telling an experience, yet you wonder you do not have an experience like others, because you cannot tell when, how or where this change which you know you have felt took place. It does not say we know we have passed from death unto life because we can tell just when, how or where we were born again; but we know we have past from death unto life because we love the brethren.

If our friend would do like some others have done, go to the church or friends as Jesus said and tell them what great things the Lord has done for thee, and hath had mercy on thee, then you would receive the answer of a good conscience towards God, and go on your way rejoicing.

P. D. G.

Dear Brother Gold:

I feel like I want to write you of some of the feelings I had when I was quite young.

I felt to be a sinner before God and without his mercy I could not live long. I couldn't sleep at night but would get up and ask the Lord to have mercy on me a poor sinner. And sometimes I felt that it was a sin for me to try to pray, but could not help trying.

I went on in this way for over two years before I hope the Lord delivered me from my sins; until these words came to me: Take up the cross and follow me, I am meek and lowly, I am your father and besides me there is no other. I was made to rejoice in the Lord and claim him for my Saviour and I felt that I loved him above everything else. I felt that my troubles were all ended but it was not for long. I soon began to fear I wasn't a Christian and I became impressed to join the church, but felt I could not do that as I was not fit, still at the same time I couldn't stay away satisfied. I stayed away as long as I could though, and when I joined a burden was taken from me and I felt happy in the act and was made to rejoice.

Brother Gold, do with this as you think best.

From a sister in Christ I hope,

MRS. C. J. WILLIFORD.

By special request, I endeavor to relate a dream which I had about the year 1898, and in that connection will quote Isaiah 6:1: "In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord, sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple." The interest that I felt and now feel in the matter, so fills me with emotion that I can hardly relate it. My attention was first drawn by the call or whistle of a train and Elder D. S. Webb said, All aboard this train. It was asked: "What train?" and he answered: "It is the Lord's train." It ranged from west to east through all the earth, and supported alone by the power of God. And the ministers of God were calling and saying, come on and get on board the Lord's train. Elder D. S. Webb was on the west end of it; Elder J. D. Vass came up on the Southwest side; Elder Isaac Jones on the South side and Elder Isaac Webb on the east, all calling, "Come on and get aboard of the Lord's train. I thought I heard thousands of voices, in all directions, of people who came flocking, calling for tickets to get upon the train of the Lord. Many of them I knew, while many I did not know. I thought Elder P. D. Gold was in a place like a postoffice which appeared as clear as crystal, and lined as with pure gold. He was handing out tickets to the Lord's people, to those to whom they belonged—to the whole house of Israel.

This train was in no way supported by the earth. All whom I knew commenced soon after this to join the Primitive Baptists and in the last ten years about one hundred and twenty-five have become members of Fellowship church. Only one woman of them of my acquaintance is remaining out. I thought my dear companion who was then living, was on the train, also our five deceased children were of that throng, with the children of God.

Dear brethren, when you feel to remember one so unworthy as I, please pray for me, for I deeply feel as the poem says, "I am alone in the world."

Truly, DAVID DAVIS.

Dear Brother Gold:

I received a letter from my dear daughter a few weeks before her death which I would like for you to put in the Landmark. Some of the sisters have asked me to send it to you for publication. I went to see her in her last days and left her getting along well as I thought Sunday, and early Monday morning I got a 'phone message saying she was dead.

Oh, what a shock it was to me. It seemed like I could hardly bear it, knowing she had so many little children to care for, still I felt she was so much better off. She told me so many times about her feelings and ups and downs. That is why I believe if any are at rest she is. She had some of the truest dreams I ever heard of. She dreamed a few years before she went to Danville that they were going to some city and that her husband would not live long after they moved and that she would quickly follow her husband. And that came true. He lived a little over a month after they moved there and she only seven months after his death. She dreamed a few days before her death that she and her husband were together going up through the prettiest rooms she had ever seen and she felt so happy.

She had the hymn book and Bible in her bed when she breathed her last and it seemed her mind was always on heavenly things.

I could write more of her, but as it takes up so much time and space, I will stop. My love to you and Sister Gold. Remember me in your prayers.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother:

I feel so miserable this morning I will make the attempt to write to you if the Lord will direct my pen, for I know without Him I can do nothing. I have made several attempts to write but when I read it over I would find it so imperfect like myself I threw it in the flames thinking no one wishes to know of my troubles and would fear it was not of the Lord. But it seems to me I have borne my troubles alone as long as I can. Every time I get low down and miserable it comes very forcibly to my mind to write you, and I know the Lord does all things right and if it is His will for me to write I will do the best I can, for I know I am nothing but a poor sinner and if I am saved it is by the grace and mercy of God. And if God be for us who can be against us? All our earthly friends may forsake us but our God has promised if we will trust Him He will never leave nor forsake us. And He is not slack in His promises. What more do we need than such a God. Can we not endure all things for Christ's sake, who has promised to be with us in the sixth trouble and in the seventh he will not forsake us? Oh, I feel like that is enough.

The greatest joy of my life is when I can hear Christ preached in its purity and have an ear to understand. When my mind is raised from the things of this vain world to things above. Oh, I am so sick of sin and sinning that I sometimes find myself longing for that sweet rest in Jesus and be freed from the cares of this weary world.

A few days ago I was thinking, Oh, would it not be so much better if I could depart and be at rest. I arose and took the Bible and it opened at the first chapter of Phillipians and my eyes fell on the 23rd verse, and it read: "For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ," which is far better than the 24th verse which read: "Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you," and I finished reading the chapter which was beautiful to me.

I know God's ways are right, He does all things well, and there arose a prayer in my heart to God to make me reconciled to His will no matter what it was. I have had a great deal to endure, but I can look back and see how my God has lead me through it all and how merciful he has been to me. He can do all His pleasure and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

Dear brother, if I have done wrong by writing, I hope you will forgive me and look over my imperfection. I felt like I was almost driven to do it, as I was driven to the church for I felt that I should die if I did not go. There was a burden upon me choking and crushing my very life away when I left home that morning. I wanted to offer to the church but was afraid I would not, but I believe I was enabled to pray to God to give me strength to offer and He did. I went but could scarcely tell them anything. My heart was too full to speak but they received me, and it seemed to me that if they had not it would have killed me. I don't feel like I could have carried that burden much longer and as soon as I was received there came a peaceful feeling over me and my burden was gone. But I wanted to be baptized and the next day I was baptized and then I was perfectly happy. Not a sorrow or care of any kind.

I had never thought of being so happy in this world. I felt that I was cleansed by the blood of Christ, and when I am so low down in sorrow I am taken back to that happy day, when Jesus washed my sins away and it brightens my little hope. Sometimes it is small, then again it is sufficient. I would not give it for ten thousand such worlds as this.

My evidence is not so bright as some but thy grace is sufficient. That is a sweet thought to me sometimes. I cannot write one-half what I feel, so will stop. I never intended writing so much, but have written for peace of mind. If you see fit you may publish, if not throw it by and all will be well. Remember me and my little family in your prayers. I feel we need the prayers of all God's dear children. May God bless you in your old age is my prayer. Love to you and all the household of faith.

Your little unworthy sister I hope in Christ,

LULU MEWBORN.

Fountain, N. C.

My Dear Father and Mother:

I will try and write you a few lines this beautiful morning and try and tell you some of my feelings. For the last month or two I have been very low down in the dark valley of woe. I could not see my way through and am made to mourn all the day long. I am made to sav, surely the goodness and mercy of God has gone forever, why hast thou forsaken me. Oh Lord, deliver me from this burden. It seems that sometimes it is more than I can bear and surely I am deceived and never knew the Lord. Why am I thus tossed to and fro? I feel like Paul, to be the chief of sinners; who shall deliver me from this body of death? I try to read the Bible and there is no comfort there. I take up the hymn book and try to sing, but all sounds are lifeless and dull to me. Why am I forsaken and feel so lonely and sad? I felt like my dear father, mother, brothers, sisters, brethren and friends had all forsaken me, yet they haven't done any harm. I am made to wonder if it all is for my many sins. Oh Lord, have mercy on me; I know I am a sinner and it is by the goodness and mercy of God that I am saved if saved at all. I fear sometimes I am deceived, that I am not what I hope to be. I have so many evil thoughts. I feel that, what I would do I do not and what I would not do I do. Sometimes my heart feels so sad and cold I can't shed a tear over my many sins. My way seems so dark sometimes I fear I will stumble and fall. When I do feel my Saviour is near and with me it seems so short I am left in doubts and fears. I feel as the poet says:

"I am a stranger here below,

And what I am 'tis hard to know.

I am so vile, so prone to sin,

I fear I am not born again."

Oh! Is there any one like me.

When I got up this morning, I felt that I was cast away and that no one cared for me, and I began to think of how I use to go to church with my dear husband and see the dear brethren and sisters and hear good preaching and singing, and now to think I can't go, that he is not here to go with me, and my heart was filled with sorrow. All at once I began to sing and it seemed my poor heart was filled with love and joy to overflowing. I felt that I loved everybody and every song sounded so sweet to my poor soul. The birds even seemed to be singing praises to God and the trees also seemed to be bowing down in praises to Him. Everything I looked at was praising Him. For a while I was made to say, surely the goodness and mercy of God has been with me all my days, and I knew it not, bless the Lord O my soul, bless His holy name.

I know if I am saved it is by the grace of God. I don't feel like I ever did anything in all my life, that all the goodness I ever did came from above and shall return to Him.

I will stop writing as I fear I will tire you with my scribbling. If I had the education and words to express myself I would not mind trying. But I have done the best I could in my weak way.

These few lines leaves us all well at present except the baby, who is teething. I was quite sick last week and had to have the doctor, but am very well now, for which I thank the good Lord. I hope you are all well. Give the children my love and tell them their oldest sister has not forgotten them, that I think about them every day and wish that I could see them. Tell them they must write to me if I don't write to them, that I am always glad to get a letter from them. You all must come soon and write soon and tell me of your feelings. Remember me at a throne of grace.

Your poor afflicted daughter,

MALISSA SHREVE.

I have published a little pamphlet entitled "A Brief History of the O'd School Baptists." It has fifty double column, thirteen em. pages and runs from John the Baptist to the present day.

The fifth and sixth chapters are devoted to the history of Pilgrim Primitive church, which is the oldest one in Texas, and runs from 1833 to 1847. I expect to yet publish the history of this church up to 1869.

The price of my history is 25 cents post paid. Send orders to J. H. FISHER, Graham, Texas.

Married, on March 3rd, at the bride's residence near Pelham, N. C., Mr. John H. Walker, of Reldsville, N. C., to Mrs. Fannie Hodges, of L. H. Hardy. The Lord's blessing rest upon them.

ACCURSED FROM CHRIST.

Brother B. F. Hancock requests my understanding of Romans 9 :3. "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh."

In this declaration there is one of two things evident, that Paul spake after the manner of men, by the Spirit, because of the hardness of their hearts, or without command according to the sympathies and ties of nature. Or that this separation from Christ was not in the Spirit, but in the flesh. It does not seem possible for him to have spiritually or otherwise desired spiritual, eternal separation from Christ, but that he felt willing to forego all spiritual comfort here in this life, if by that his kindred could be saved.

It is natural and proper for the servants of God to-day to earnestly desire the salvation of sinners, whether kindred or not, provided it be the will of God to save them. It is possible, but hardly probable, that woman may forget her sucking child. It is probable that we may earnestly, to ourselves, desire the salvation or spiritual comfort of our kindred in the flesh, and may, with propriety, ask the Lord to have mercy upon them, knowing at the time that the will of God must be done. "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." Rom. 10:1.

Paul did not thus desire as though the word of God had taken no effect (Rom. 9:6); but knew that they were not all Israel which were of Israel.

We know that God knows his own elect and will save them, but we do not know them, only as they are manifested by birth of the Spirit.

While we must, both by command and willingness of mind, ascribe salvation, and the glory and honor of it to the Lord, yet it is not inconsistent with our call to the work of the ministry to entertain a general interest in the salvation of any one. Or in other words, it is not consistent for one who is saved to manifest indifference in the salvation of others. But we should not allow this interest to move us to set up Arminian auxiliaries for the salvation of sinners—such as trying to use ourselves as instruments, and our preaching as means for advancing the work and kingdom of God. Nor should we so draw back as to manifest no interest whatever in the work of salvation and who is saved.

There are two classes either of which I will call Arminians. One preaches and practices the doctrine of Job's miserable comforters, and the other that of the devil. One says you must begin the work and keep working unto the final perseverance or you will be lost forever and ever, and the other says: go on, let them alone, if they are among the elect God will bring them out, and will save them.

Acquaint now thyself with God and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee. If thou be the Son of God cast thyself down for it is written: "He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. Jesus said unto him: It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Matt. 4:6, 7. See Deut. 6:16-21.

To be utterly indifferent is as bad, or worse, than to be over zealous, doing that which is not commanded.

Paul finally confines himself to the spiritual Israel among those who were called Israel. So in point of spiritual comfort and soundness in the faith, we should specially testify of and to those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious.

Paul, no doubt, had reference to the spiritual portion of his kinsmen—Israel. He was of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin. He bore them record that they had a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For they, being ignorant of God's righteousness, went about to establish their own righteousness, and had not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. They had been bewitched by claimed that they must be circumcised and keep the law of Moses. Paul saw how they were blinded, and had great heaviness and continual sorrow in his heart for them. He could give up his comforts for them, that they might have true knowledge of God, and enjoy the righteousness of Christ.

The weight of the ministry to-day certainly embraces the welfare of every one to whom the Lord has appeared. It is to feed the sheep and lambs, false teachers—men of Juda, who Not simply those within the fold, but which are without. It seems to me that those outside of the visible church require much more attention than they generally receive, more than those in the church. The church is evidently the home of all who believe in Jesus. The very fact that one believes, and yet does not come to the church, is sufficient evidence that he is in some way blinded, or is induced by a seducing spirit to overrate the general condition of the child of God, or underrate himself, or both.

No doubt the true minister of the gospel has great sympathy for any and every one who desires to do right; but sometimes he may be, and no doubt often is, over cautious about exhorting such, and encouraging them by stirring up their pure mind by way of remembrance, for fear he might use some bible language used by arminians in the wrong place. The scriptures are addressed to the people of God, and may be used freely and fully with reference to them. There is no danger in reasonably urging them to action according to the scriptures.

In performing the work assigned to us we need have no fear of overstepping bounds and doing something which the Lord alone can and must do. His work is above before and beyond our work. We believe the Lord will bring his people into the church at his own appointed time and yet we appoint the first, second or third Saturday in each month and say that is the time for them to come in. According to the scripture, any time, day or night is the time, the accepted time—the day of salvation. So far as we have any thing to do with it the Lord's time is all the time. In whatever sense the servant is authorized and commanded to minister it should be readily and promptly done. "As ye have freely received, freely give."

Those who are deceived or bewildered in any way and thereby hindered from coming to a knowledge of the truth and acting accordingly are to be pitied rather than blamed. They should have our sympathies rather than censure, called for rather than driven away, comforted rather than discouraged, drawn nearer by affectionate entreaties rather than allowed to drift about and away, from careless indifference to their condition and needs. They should be teachers; but from some cause they have need to be taught what be the first principles of Christ. They should be able to eat meat, but must be fed with milk. At heart they know the truth, but their heads have been turned away by doctrines of men and devils—seducing spirits—which hold men's person in admiration because of advantage. This is a carnal, temporal advantage, and those who seek it care nothing really about the salvation of sinners. They make merchandise of what they term the gospel, and overturn the faith of some, and causing others to make shipwreck of theirs.

My desire is that the people of God might be one in doctrine as they are one in experience and in Christ.

SCRAPS.

A friend requests my view of Acts 2:21 and 3:19, 20: "And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."

The blood and fire and vapor of smoke represent the ending and removal of the legal heaven, continuing until the death and resurrection of Jesus.

Blood represents death, fire denotes the consumption of all the works of the flesh, and vapor of smoke the darkness in the hearts of such as are in the region and shadow of death. The soul under conviction of sin experiences all this. The tearing-down and removal of the foundation we once depended upon is a time of great distress.

Great signs appear. The day of judgment is come, and the sinner is brought in guilty, and the devouring element of fire consumes. The life is required, and darkness seizes the soul. But this is the time of Jacob's trouble. The crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus is preached, a new dispensation is ushered in after the removal of the old one, and the Lord Jesus is come to receive his kingdom, and he will save us. These are the last days in which God will pour out his spirit on all flesh, or the Gentiles as well as the Jews shall have the gospel preached unto them; and therefore it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved, for salvation is equally as free to Gentiles as to Jews—as free to the jailer at Philippi as to Saul the Jew. Peter was shown this in the salvation of the Gentile Cornelius, hence he said, I perceive of a truth God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him. This was announced when Jesus said, "All power in heaven and earth is delivered into my hand. Go ye therefore into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." For Jesus had removed the middle wall of the partition that separated between Jew and Gentile. Thus of the twain he made one.

MARKS.

"It is an honor for a man to cease from strife; but every fool will be meddling." Prov. 20:3.

It seems that there will always be strife. It is the employment of contentious, wrangling people to make fusses. They do this under cover of faithfulness. It is no mark of a lover of peace to hear one say he must be faithful, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints, if he is a rash man. The man that contends earnestly (truly, sincerely, having tasted mercy, and having a foretaste of salvation), bears with patience and with long-suffering endures. He does not make a man an offender for a word. There is much difference between stubbornness and sticking for a ceremony or tradition, or some pet notion not taught in scripture, and the faithful regard of a lover of good men and of gospel peace.

It is an honor for a man to cease from strife. By strife is meant the passionate, angry conduct or contention of people that become enraged about anything. It matters not what the matter of contention is. It may be for something right in itself, but if anger, malice and bitter feelings are aroused that is all wrong.

Striving in anger is always wrong about anything. It is an honor for a man to cease from strife.

But every fool will be meddling. There are a good many ways and opportunities for fools to show themselves. Such opportunities for the fools never seem to be wanting. There is always a supply of both. For instance, brethren get into a wrangle about some matter, and it often is about such a matter as wise men would not strive about. For instance one will see a mote in another's eye, and will make a noise about it, when there is a beam in his own eye, and the bigger the beam then greater the noise he will make about his poor brother. One will strive to make feet-washing a test of fellowship when the Bible does no such thing. It is a good thing to wash feet, and when brethren know these things they are happy if they do them. Anything the Lord teaches us to do if we know it we are happy when we do it. It is a plain command that those that believe should be baptized. We tell such of this duty. But shall we quarrel with them if they disobey? It is plainly taught that we should minister of our carnal things or worldly goods to those who have preached the gospel to us; but some of our brethren do not observe this. Now shall we bear with them, or withdraw from them? Covetousness is plainly condemned. It is plainly declared in scripture that we should withdraw from every one that is covetous; but it is nowhere said that we should withdraw from one who does not wash feet.

Suppose a fuss gets up about feet-washing, and a discussion arises. Every preacher that comes along that is a fool will want to be meddling in this strife. Usually there is some tale bearer that will be telling one side or the other, and thus widen the breach; and you can tell who the fools are by noticing the ones that are very active in taking sides and speaking of the trouble, or scattering flames before the winds of anger. A wise man would rather hear nothing about this strife, but be allowed to go and preach what the Lord gives him, and not what some man gives him.

When brethren get in such strife that they will not listen to counsel for peace, let them alone, just leave them alone, and do not notice them until they suffer awhile feeding on husks, and then they will desire to return home; and if some preachers get heady and contentious, and seek to have their own way, after proper admonition and reproof to them, if they persist we had better not allow them to come among us to trouble us.

P. D. G.

I have received from one whose signatures is "a little friend in deep distress," requesting my view of David being Christ's earthly father. When we notice the scriptural account of matters such as genealogy, and compare it with our manner of reckoning we note this difference. We say father, grandfather, great grandfather, etc. Now the Bible does not use such language. Abraham is the father of many nations. If we are Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed. David was the son of Abraham though born hundreds of years after the death of Abraham, and many generations were born between them.

Christ was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, Rom. 1:3, but declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead. Between David and Christ are 28 generations, Matt. 1:17. The meaning is that according to the flesh he descended or came of the house and lineage of David, yet he had no earthly father. His mother was a virgin after Christ was born. He is the seed of the woman—not the seed of any earthly man. His mother was of the house and lineage of David as also was Joseph, his supposed father. The seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. The seed of Adam was defiled. But Jesus comes into the world holy, undefiled. See Luke 1:28-36.

All this is fulfilling prophecy that one should occupy the throne of David and reign over the house of Jacob forever, who should be made of the seed of David according to the flesh. Acts 13:23, Isia 9:6-8. By or in the resurrection from the dead he is proven, declared or shown to be the Son of God with power by the Spirit of holiness.

The Jews to this day charge that Jesus was unclean, illegitimate in his birth, yet he was the only one ever born holy of woman. The mystery of bringing Christ into the world a holy seed is the blessed truth in which and through which the lost sinner—the vile sinner—hath hope toward God. Jesus bore all the shame and guilt of sinners living holy, overcoming guilt, removing iniquity, and making an end of sin.

After he had fulfilled the law for his people, and was crucified or delivered for our offences, God raised him from the dead, and in his resurrection we are begotten again unto a lively hope, and are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses. This is accomplished through the faith of Jesus. This faith comes from Jesus who trusted in God, and gave us a measure of this faith, hence it is from faith to faith, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith. Thus we are the seed of Christ, the nation born in a day where there is no such thing as son, grandson, great grandson, etc.—but all are one in Christ Jesus, neither male nor female, neither bond nor free.

Our friend laments such a deep sense of unworthiness, and declares such a great hungering to be a child of God, and such love for the Primitive Baptists. Would it not be in accord with the teaching of scripture to be baptized and put on Christ, and cast the burden on the Lord who sustains all the weary and heavy laden, and all such learn of him and find his yoke to be easy and his burden to be light, and find rest unto their souls:?

P. D. G.

A STRANGE THING.

A sheep is proverbial for quiet, harmlessness and innocence. But some flocks of sheep are queer.

A good brother narrated to me recently the conduct of a pet ram.

A goat came on the premises of this pet, humored sheep. At once they began a fight. But their manner of fighting was so different it required about two days to get them drilled into business. The sheep walks backward some steps and then plunges forward with the gathering force of a running speed, and butts with much power. As the goat turns partly around then rising pitches against his antagonist. As the goat would see the sheep coming he would thus turn round and rear on his hind feet, and the sheep would miss his aim. After about two days of this skirmishing they began their execution; for the goat learned to stand and receive the hard blows of this sheep, and it was soon perceived that the ram was hurting himself worse than he was the goat. So that they drove off the goat. But after that this goat was killed, and its head and horns were fastened in the fork of a tree where the sheep finding it began butting it, and knocked off one of his own horns, and would have killed himself had not the goat's head been hid from him.

Is there ever displayed in a pet preacher, or over indulged Baptist, such a temper as this, so that he would kill himself fighting a real or imaginary, a living or a dead enemy?

It is not good to praise men too much. When one wants to fight and rule he will destroy himself if allowed to do so.

Fighting goats is a poor business for sheep.

When we return railing for railing, we are in a goat-fight. When we attempt to take vengeance in our own hands we are heavy losers. The Lord fights the battles of his humble people. But when we are inclined to fight we cannot tell whether our enemy is dead or alive, and butting it will hurt us about as much if it is dead as if it is alive.

OBITUARIES

RAYMOND STOWE.

Brother Gold:

I will try and write the death of little Raymond Stowe, son of Raleigh and Nannie Lou Stowe. He was born June 14th, 1907, and died Feb. 12th, 1909. He was a bright little sun beam sent to cheer their home but the good Lord called him to His home which is a better place than this. He was sickly for a long time, but we thought it was teething, but he became so bad off they sent for the doctor, who pronounced it chronic constipation and gave him some medicine which seemed to help him.

On Friday he seemed much better as he got up to put on his bonnet and told his mother good-bye. His mother answered, "I can't stand it for you to tell me good-bye." He then turned to the rest of us and told all good-bye and wanted his father to carry him to the pig-pen. That didn't suit him and he wanted to go farther and his mother brought him to my house. He still wanted to go so she took him back home, but when they reached there he didn't want to go in the house. Finally he was persuaded, but he soon got worse. Another doctor was sent for, who said he had meningitis. After this he never noticed anything, but lived until the following Friday. All was done for him that doctor, parents and good friends could do, but they did not stay the hand of death.

Brother Oakes talked at the grave and sang:

"A little babe has gone to rest,
And he shall sleep, but not forever;
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no never
On the resurrection morn."

ELDER L. P. ADAMS.

Resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Elder L. P. Adams, pastor of the churches at Oak Forest, Hannah's Creek and Clement, all of Johnston county, N. C.,

Resolved, 1st: That in the death of the esteemed brother, elder and pastor, the church has sustained an irreparable loss, the community a kind friend, neighbor and good citizen, his family a devoted father, one who cared well for his household.

2nd: That while we deeply mourn our sad bereavement, we desire to humbly bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well and for the best.

3rd: Resolved further—That we extend heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family, his children and grand-children, and most especially to his dear devoted daughter-in-law, our dear sister, Mrs. Catherine Adams, who so kindly and tenderly cared for and waited on him through his afflictions. May the good Lord bless her and her dear children. May they be blessed to follow the good example and precept of their dear grand-father. And may the churches remember his counsel and godly admonitions and instruction. We feel that all of us would do well to follow his example and godly life. Peace be to his dust.

4th: Resolved—That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on the church book and a copy be sent to Zion's Landmark for publication and the same be adopted by the church at Oak Forest.

Done by order of Conference Jan. 23rd, 1909.

CASSIE VIOLA THOMAS.

Dear Brother Gold:

It is the request of the bereaved ones that I should write the obituary of sister Thomas, wife of J. C. Thomas and daughter of Peter Parcell and Nancy, his wife, age 37 years, ten months and three days, who died at the residence of her mother and youngest brother in Roanoke, Va., Aug. 4th, 1908.

She was survived by her husband, mother, two brothers and one little daughter, Mable Thomas, four and one-half years old, also one dear cousin, Mariah Ashworth, who has watched over her so kindly since her childhood.

She died with tuberculosis of the throat and all that loving hands and medical aid could do was done for her but of no avail, the Lord saw fit to take her to himself, to a better and brighter world than this. She suffered for two long years after praying that the Lord would take her home, and at his good and appointed time He took her home and she passed away as sweetly and as easily as a light going out. Yes, Brother Gold, she died just like you so beautifully described the death of the saints in one of your discourses in Roanoke at the association. I often think what a blessing that the Lord sends his servants to comfort in time of trouble.

She often said to her dear old mother, when she would see her in so much trouble, 'I hope if it is the Lord's will that we both will be a corpse at the same time.' She talked freely about death and told the writer when she visited her that she was ready to give up the battle if it was not for her dear husband and little girl who had been so much comfort to her.

She seemed to have the very image of Christ in her face when talking about death. Her life was one to be remembered by those who knew her. Her heart-broken husband wondered since she was so humble, quiet and so kind to all around her why she should have suffered so much. But that is not for us to know. God's ways are not our ways, and what He does is surely right, although it may seem hard; we must submit as He never does wrong.

Her funeral was preached at her mother's residence in Roanoke by the two brother Hursts and the remains carried to Greenhill cemetery, there to remain until the resurrection morn when the Lord will call all His elect home where we hope to meet her and shake glad hands.

So weep not, dear ones, as those without hope, for we believe our loss is her eternal gain.

Written by her cousin,

MARY V. ASHWORTH.

MAGGIE BLACKWELL

Elder Gold:

I will try to write of the death of my dear niece, Maggie Blackwell, the youngest daughter of Bettie and W. P. Blackwell. She was born July 1st, 1892, and died Sept. 14th, 1908. Maggie was a girl of very firm character. She was a meek, dutiful and obedient daughter, ever ready to do all she could for her dear father and mother. She leaves two sisters and two brothers to mourn their loss which they deeply feel.

She never made a public profession of religion but from her conduct during her sickness I am made to feel and believe that she is at rest with Jesus. I do not feel that little Maggie is dead but has only gone to sleep in Jesus where none ever wake to weep. Sleep on, dear Maggie, for I am sure we all love you as we did when your body was racked with pain. She died of typhoid fever. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, yea saith the spirit, for they do rest from their labors and their works do follow them. But, oh, you are going where we will not hear your sweet voice or see your smiling face again in this world. Yes, I believe she is at rest for her dear brother told me the Friday night before she died Monday morning that while he was sitting up with her she seemed to be listening when all at once she began waving her hands, and right then I believe she was changed from nature to grace.

So dear father, mother, sisters and brothers, forever cease your weeping, for she has gone and left a sinful world and will no more suffer pain or death.

Good Lord, do enable us to kiss the rod with which we are smitten, and make us realize that the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away and blessed be the name of the Lord, and I do hope to meet her some day in heaven where parting will be no more.

The funeral services were conducted by Elder Williard when she was laid to rest in the cemetery at High Point. Pray that her people may meet her never to part no more.

Written by her loving aunt,
ELIZA BLACKWELL.

MATTIE WILLIS.

It is with a sad and heavy heart I make the attempt to write the death of my dear sister, although I feel it my duty to write something in memory of her. Her death has brought the bitter cup of sorrow to the lips of relatives and friends.

Mattie Willis, the subject of this simple memorial, the daughter of C. A. and Louisa Mason, was born Feb. 11th, 1882, and died Jan. 31st, 1909, making her stay on earth 26 years, 11 months and 20 days. She was married to J. L. Willis, Aug. 26th, 1902, unto which union three children were born. She leaves behind a husband, three children, father, mother, five sisters, three brothers and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but our loss is her eternal gain.

She was the soul of honor and did to others as she wished to be done by, and was beloved by all who knew her.

It is sad to stand beside the bed of the dying and watch life's ebbing tide drifting the loved one slowly, perhaps, but surely into the great ocean of eternity, but when there comes the whispering from parched lips, "Oh! how beautiful, I want to go home," it brings balm to the wounded heart.

Just as the church bells rang Sunday morning the soul of Mattie Willis took its eternal flight heavenward to claim the reward promised for her goodness and faithfulness in Jesus while here.

Although she did not have any choice church, she attended all when she had the opportunity.

Six weeks prior to her death she was seized with that dreaded typhoid fever, and all the skill of our physician, added to the ministrations of our loved ones, friends and neighbors could not keep her longer with us, for He had said, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

She was ever good natured, kind and attentive, a dutiful daughter, loving sister, good mother and faithful wife. She is gone, gone never to return.

Let us cast our burden on the Lord and submit to his will. He will sustain us and we will be able to exclaim in a glorified voice, "Lord, I thank thee that not my will, but thy will be done." Though it was hard to part I would not have her back in this sinful world for I believe she is fully enjoying the sweet rest of heaven. "Oh, the morning, the golden morning,

We shall see it bye and bye,
 Faith beholds it in the distance
 And its dawning draweth nigh;
 Here we part for time is fleeting,
 Ever fading from our sight;
 But in yonder, happy morrow
 We shall never say good-night,"

OZIE BEATRICE LENEAVE.

Dear Elder Gold:

I will with a sad heart endeavor to write a few lines in memory of my little granddaughter.

She was born Oct. 20, 1907 (and died Sept. 17, 1908). She was a sweet little bud to be taken away so soon. It is hard for one that loved her as I did to stand by her bed and see her breathe her last breath, but she fell asleep calm and easy.

Her disease was dysentery. She was sick only one week, and all was done for her that loving hands could do, but we could not keep her with us for her time had come. Christ said suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven, and I believe she is at rest.

I hope when I leave this world that I may meet the two little grand-children in heaven where we will surround the throne of God, and sing redeeming love, and there I hope to see their face and join to praise the Lord.

Written by her grand-mother.

ELDER W. W. BARNES.

Elder W. W. Barnes is dead. The end came at the home of his son, Mr. J. S. Barnes, of Swan Quarter, N. C., on Saturday, November 1, 1908. He had been in declining health for some time, and his death was not unexpected. He was born in Edgecombe county, N. C., on June 27, 1824. Consequently, his earthly pilgrimage continued 84 years, four months, and four days. For twenty-six years he had been a citizen of Hyde county, having come from Wilson county in January, 1852.

On June 9, 1845, he was happily married to Miss Mary Eure. To them were born two children. One of these died in infancy. The other (Mr. J. S. Barnes) survives him. His faithful wife, on June 1, 1892, after sharing his joys and sorrows for forty-seven years, breathed her last. The death of his child and the death of his wife carried sadness into the heart of Bro. Barnes. These were sore afflictions. But while passing through the dark and dreary valley, his faith in God abiding, he could look up, and say: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

He crossed the line of three score years and ten, and reached a good old age. For about forty years he preached in the Primitive Baptist church to which he was strongly attached. Many to whom he preached are still living. They can look back through the years, remember his ministry, and recall the messages that fell from his lips.

We visited him several times during his illness. His body grew weaker, but his faith did not fail him. He was ready to go. He was tenting on the river's brink, waiting, patiently waiting for the call to come from the other shore, to pass over and rest in the shade of the trees. It came. He heard and his eyes closed in peace. The victory was won. His spirit passed peacefully over and was welcomed on the other side, "Forever with the oLrd." His spirit can now unite with other redeemed spirits and sing before the throne:

"Glory to God! All our dangers are o'er,
 We stand secure on the glorious shore;
 Glory to God! We will shout ever more,
 We're home at last."

May the family ties, broken, be united in the great hereafter.

LIZZIE SPAIN.

By request of D. R. Spain, I will try to write a short sketch of the life and death of his wife, Lizzie Spain. She was born March 31st, 1875, and died Jan. 15, 1909, making her stay on earth 33 years, nine months and fifteen days. She was a devoted wife and mother, filling both of these positions well. She feared God and loved his works, and gave God all the glory and praised Him to the end.

She leaves a weeping husband and five children, mother and father, two brothers and two sisters, together with a host of relatives and friends to mourn for her.

She was taken in the night of the 13th of January with a congestive chill, called her husband and told him she was cold. He soon put on more cover and in a short while she became so warm she began to throw it off, then her husband said I will go for your father and let him come and give you some medicine, which he did. Her father came, gave her medicine and thought she would soon get better; but she continued to grow worse and died at half past three o'clock on the 15th of January.

She joined the church at Beulah, Hyde county, on Saturday before the 4th Sunday in June, 1895, and was baptized by Elder L. S. Ross the following Sunday, and lived a consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church until her death, always filling her seat when possible.

We hope by the grace of God to be prepared to meet her in the happy beyond, when this day of life is done.

By request of her husband I send this for publication.

BELLE THOMAS.

In loving memory of my sister's little daughter I desire to write a few lines to the Landmark in loving remembrance of her.

Belle Thomas was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Thomas, and was born November 4th, 1889 and died November 3rd, 1908, lacking one day of being nine years old. She was sick just a short while: never gave up until the day she died.

We didn't think she was seriously sick until just a few minutes before she passed quietly away.

Oh! what a shock it was to the family. She was the oldest one of the children, and the only girl, and loved best by all the family. She was a sweet and lovely little girl with a sunny disposition.

She was the joy of the home, and it was so hard to give her up, but alas, her time had come to leave this world of trial, and none can stay the cold hand of death.

We miss her gentle and humble countenance. Her loving voice is silent in the tomb, but her ever loving ways will never be forgotten.

She was buried Thursday evening November the 5th in the family graveyard in the presence of her sorrowing relatives and friends.

She always went with me every spring to the graveyard to help set out flowers, and this spring she is not here to go with me, but has gone to return no more, gone to that beautiful land of peace and happiness where pain and sorrow enter not.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled:
A vacant place is in our home
Which never can be filled.

Dearest Belle, farewell, fare thee well,
Fare thee well till the resurrection morn,
On earth thou couldst not dwell,
Heaven is thy home.

Dear Brother Durand:

Your compliments, "Songs in the Night" are before me, and in reading the beautiful and sublime contents of the little book I can but wish that more of his hymns had been included in the publication. In connection with the bright reflection of the gracious truth of the blessed gospel taught to God's people in the revelation of salvation there is a distinctive individuality in the beautiful manner of expression in the line of thought which presents the hymns as a new born day full of life and light, and as fresh and refreshing as the dew of the morning. While you read them your own thoughts are filled with a sweetness strangely familiar, while your heart is filled with "Songs of the night."

"SONGS IN THE NIGHT."

Years ago these sweet songs were uttered and written by a brother of Elder S. H. Durand, who fell asleep in Jesus soon thereafter.

There is also a marvelous account of the manner of his passing through the Jordan which was driven back for Israel.—for every Israelite.

The price of the book is 50 cents.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time & which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother:

I was looking over some of my old letters today and found one that Elder John C. Hall wrote to me Dec. 31, 1900, and I think I promised you to copy it and send it to you for publication. After reading it over again I promised my wife that I would sit down at once and comply with my promise to you. Please place it upon the pages of the dear old Landmark so that every old Baptist who reads the Landmark may know what was the views of that able and gifted man of God on the subject of predestination.

I want to say as Brother Corn's name is mentioned in this letter that Brother Hall held Brother Corn in high esteem, dearly loved him and appreciated him as a brother.

Brother Gold, I was foolish enough, if you wish to term it that Elder J. C. Hall was the ablest and most gifted man I ever saw. He was a truly model man, his walk, deportment and godly conversation was so good. I think the good Lord put it into his mind to write some on these deep mysteries in order that the Lord's people might be built up and strengthened. I enjoyed his writings and want this letter put in print that others may enjoy it.

This leaves us in common health. Hope you and Sister Gold are well and that you both will come to our association in May. It is held with the church at Ephesus, Pittsylvania county, Va., and commences on Friday before the first Sunday. Your little brother with a precious hope in Jesus, Z. T. TURNER.

Figsboro, Va.

Elder Z. T. Turner, Dear Brother and Family:

Your highly esteemed and much appreciated letter reached me in due time and made us all glad to hear that you all were in the enjoyment of a reasonable portion of health. We are able to be about. I was very sorry indeed to hear of Brother Andrew Turner's condition or what his condition was when you wrote.

After I penned the above lines the thought rushed into my mind, he may be in heaven, and if so you should rejoice at his condition. I have enjoyed many pleasant hours at his hospitable home, but in all probability will never see his face in life again. But if he has gone I have no doubt but it is his great gain while it is the church's loss. I feel to sympathize with his family though none can fully enter into the feelings of one bereft of a companion but those who have experienced that sad loss. Death spoils our comforts and saddens our lives. In my loneliness I often think of death as Job said to his comforters: "Though I speak my grief is not assuaged, and though I forbear, what am I eased! But now he hath made me weary. Thou (death) hast made desolate all my company." Job 16:6-7.

I grope in deep and bitter sorrow, most of the time. My children are all to me that children should be in shape of affection and kindness, and we get along together as smoothly and as calmly as a summer morning. But there is a vacancy that can never be filled, and I have no idea will ever be sought to be filled. My age forbids it. I feel to adopt the language of the poet and say, "I'll go alone and sigh and mourn my dear and absent love." But why, oh why, should I mourn and murmur, I haven't a doubt that she is at rest. But in my affections she lives and will live while memory keeps its throne. "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Job 1:21.

Well, I am glad to hear that you and Brother Corn had a pleasant tour in Bedford and Franklin. Sister Divers told me that he and you had considerable conversation upon predestination while at their house on your return from Bedford. I feel somewhat astonished at Brother Corn at the stand he takes in regard to this important subject. As he is ready to admit the foreknowledge of God and that all things come to pass just as God saw from the beginning that it would and that nothing frustrates God's predestination and to then talk about God's permissive decrees. Does God permit anything to take place contrary to his eternal purpose? Surely if God permits anything to come to pass he must have seen it from eternity, for he is in one mind and who can turn him and his soul desireth even that he doeth. Job 23:13. Did not God see every event that ever has, is now or ever will take place on earth or in heaven or in the open space between earth and sky and even in the dark abode of hell? Certainly he did. Then we stultify ourselves when we try to make it appear that he did not predestinate every event to bring to pass just what he saw from the beginning. I mean from the time there was none but God. I maintain there is nothing can take place to frustrate every event that God foresaw. It is weakness to say if this is so it would make God the author of sin. God is not the author of sin but God saw sin in all its awful deformity and saw exactly what sin would do to the race of Adam—involvement in his death. So his wisdom provided a remedy in Jesus the Christ for just as many as will reach heaven. No more, no less. And if sin was not seen by the Lord in the very man Adam that was then uncreated, I ask with significance why or wherefore should grace be given in Christ before the world began? God's predestination did not force man to sin for he needs no forcing, but sinned without being deceived for his will was to eat of the forbidden tree. Man was not made a spiritual man when he was made, but a natural man. He was upright before his transgression. But we must recollect that man at his best estate is altogether vanity and man's vanity tends to sin. That God predestinated Adam's fall I haven't a doubt for I could not believe in predestination if I did not. If no transgression, no sin of course. If no sin, no need of grace, for as sin reigned unto death even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ for he came to save sinners. Why should it be said, Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God ye have taken and by wicked hands have crucified and slain? Acts 22:3. Can it be possible that he should be delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, and yet He, God, not foreordain every act that should take place to bring about this event? Nonsense to argue otherwise. Oh, but this was for the benefit of his people.

Well, now let us hear why he should ordain all good things for his people and let all bad things wag on by chance. Job said, and truly so: "Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What shall we receive good at the hands of God and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips? Do not those who speak against these things speak as foolish women? Certainly they do.

Let us read 2nd Chron. 18th chapter: God would make it manifest that Micaiah was a true prophet. See how it is brought about. Jehosaphat agreed to go up to Ramoth Gilead. Jehosaphat would have the king of Israel inquire of the word of the Lord. Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of the prophets four hundred men and said unto them, shall we go to Ramoth Gilead to battle or shall I forbear? And they said, go up for God will deliver it into the king's hands. But Jehosaphat is not satisfied and said, is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we may inquire of him? The king of Israel said, there is yet one man by whom we may inquire of the Lord but I hate him. Micaiah is called and the prophet said go. At first Micaiah said go, but this was only to mock the four hundred. The king suspected that this was not the message from the Lord to Micaiah, so he adjured him to say nothing but the truth. Then he said I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountain as sheep having no shepherd and the Lord said these have no master. And the king of Israel said to Jehosaphat, did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good to me but evil? As much as to say I don't believe what he has said. Again did this true prophet of the Lord speak thus; therefore hear the word of the Lord. Now mark: "And the Lord said who shall entice Ahab, King of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth Gilead? And one spoke saying after this manner and one spake after that manner. Then there came out a spirit and stood before the Lord and said, I will entice him, and the Lord said unto him, wherewith. And he said I will go out and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the Lord said, thou shalt entice him and thou shalt also prevail, go and do even so." Now, therefore, the Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouths of these prophets and the Lord hath spoken evil against them. Zedekiah, the son of Chenoaniah came near and smote Micaiah on the cheek and said, which way went the spirit of the Lord from me to speak unto thee. Micaiah told him when he should see. The king of Israel had Micaiah put into prison and ordered that he be fed with bread of affliction and with water of affliction until I return in peace. Micaiah let him know that if he returned in peace then hath not the Lord spoken by me. Read 2nd Chron., 18th chapter. Now what I want with this is to show the sovereignty of God. He has no need to force evil spirits but they volunteer. Ahab is doomed to die and therefore must needs go up to Ramoth Gilead, although the true prophet told him he would not return. God put a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets and they prevailed. He believed them and so goes up to Ramoth Gilead, puts the battle in array, disguises himself and yet one draws a bow at a venture, strikes him and wounds him and at about the going down of the sun he dies.

God's purpose is accomplished in a wonderful way. As with Ahab so it will be with all false theories, false faiths, false teachers, be it me or you or any one else. About the going down of the sun they will all die. For when the sun of time shall go down all things not related to the true church will pass away or die. Hence God's foreordination of all things and all events is established by his word. Can it be wicked to believe and teach that the same lying spirit from God is put in the mouth of all false teachers, murderers, liars, whoremongers, rapists, extortioners, adulterers, fornicators, false swearers and all other opposed of God's sovereign rule over universal empire? I think not. Doth not he see all my ways and count all my steps? Job 31:4. This being so it is a source of much comfort to me, that the Lord knoweth me altogether. No vile assassin can by any means take one of my steps from me. Not even a hair shall fall from my unworthy head without his command. All and every thought that has entered my mind was decreed by him. He has ordered every grievous sigh that I ever heaved or that I shall ever heave. All will be of him and he knoweth the number. Every groan that shall ever be extorted from me is numbered by my God. Every pain that is to rack my frail body has been numbered by him. Every word that I have or shall speak, every hymn of praise, every hand shake with the saints and every real joy that shall gladden my soul is fixed by him and Holy is his name.

This, Brother Turner, is my God and my hope, and though he slay me yet will I trust him and glory in his sovereignty. I own that in my early pilgrimage I did not think of these things as I now do, but held things in common with many precious brethren who do not see with me now. But God has caused the scales to fall from my eyes as I hope and now I hope I see him as he is. The I AM, that I AM—the eternal and wise disposer of all things.

I rejoice that Brother W. H. Hodges and yourself hold me in such high esteem, but I believe that before God I am far below the standard among the dear old Baptists is my humble opinion, and of a truth I think you are greatly mistaken. Oh, I am too vile. If I can only enjoy the love and fellowship of the Baptists that will be honor enough for me without thinking for a moment that I am the standard. For indeed if I am worthy to be anything it is to be a Baptist. He that cometh after me said, Jesus shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. It takes that to make a Baptist. Hence all real Christians are baptized wherever found, either Jew or Gentile.

I hope, Brother Turner, you and family will pardon my weakness in writing you such an unreasonably long letter. I have not written half what I wanted but prudence says stop.

My children join me in Christian love to you all. Come to see us when you can and write often. Your humble brother I hope,

J. C. HALL,

Gogginsville, Va.

Elders Gold and Lester:

It has been on my mind for some time to write you. I have been putting it off and promising the good Lord if He would spare me that I would try to express my feelings to the brethren. As far back as I can recollect, I have had serious thoughts of death, and realized I was a sinner. I read in the Landmark what others had experienced and thought if I could have an experience like theirs, I might know that I'd been born again. When I was growing up, I desired that the Lord might change me from nature to grace.

Even when young I realized that there must be a change in me, before I could be in fellowship with the people of God. When I was 17 years old my troubles increased. I was in a most distressed condition. I thought I was going to die, and without hope. I felt that my pleasures on earth were at an end. I was not any comfort to myself or anyone else. I would take my Bible and go to the woods where I thought no one would see me, and read, and try to pray to the Lord to deliver me. I felt that my prayers were not heard. I went about with my head bowed down. I did not know what ailed me. Sometimes I feared I was losing my mind. I thought if it was the Lord working in me I would know when I was delivered, but I did not. It was with me as expressed by Christ to Nicodemus in the 3rd chapter of John: "The wind bloweth where it listeth," etc. In about two years I was impressed to offer to the church—that was a task, as I felt to be a poor unworthy one, not fit to be among the dear people of God, though it was my heart's desire to be in fellowship with them.

On Saturday before the 4th Sunday in June, 1895, I went before the church at Beulah, Hyde county, N. C., and was received for baptism that evening. I felt fearful that perhaps I had done wrong. I prayed the Lord if I had that something might prevent my going next day.

Sunday came, all seemed well with me. These beautiful words were presented to my mind as though they had been verbally spoken:

"Oh, do not be discouraged,
For Jesus is your friend,
And if you lack for knowledge
He'll guide you to the end.
Neither will He upbraid you,
Though often you request,
But give you grace to conquer,
And take you home to rest."

These words gave me great comfort. I was baptized by Elder L. S. Ross, and I felt glad and rejoiced that He had enabled me to do what He had impressed on my mind.

My prayer to God is if I am deceived to undeceive me. May the Lord remember His people everywhere is my prayer.

LIZZIE SPAIN.

Dear Brother Gold:

As my subscription to the dear old Landmark has expired you will find $1.50 for renewal. I feel I can say truthfully the Landmark is so much comfort to me I would find it very hard to get along without it.

Brother Mode Willard is the pastor of our church and preaches once a month. We are to have a union meeting the fifth Saturday and Sunday in May, if it is the Lord's will, and will be held at the Crossroads church, near Summerfield, Guilford county, N. C., and I would like very much for you to be here with us at that time.

Brother Gold, I hope the Lord will spare and prosper you in this glorious work and when you have finished the work assigned you, may you have a crown of righteousness eternal where all is peace, love and happiness, for God is not unmindful to forget your work and labor of love which you have shown toward his name. "In that ye minister to the saints and administer." Hebrews 6:10; also in Paul writing to the Hebrews 11th verse "and we desire that everyone of you do show the same diligence to the full assurance unto the end for the promised blessings of God are to those who do his will."

As I drifted farther than I expected will close.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

P. O. FERRELL.

Summerfield, N. C., R. F. D. No. 2.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

Permit me to come again through the welcome pages of the Landmark. I am a vile, corrupt sinner still, without the gracious and soothing influence of our dear devoted redeemer accompanying me through the dreary desert land where, oh where, would the green oasis appear?

I have been sitting tonight, thinking, thinking over my past, lonely pilgrimage, the joys, sorrows, mountain, which by the faith of his son I have survived until the present time. Would that my poor broken heart was attuned continually in praise and adoration for such bountiful mercies lavished upon me. It is through such trying sifting scenes my soul has to pass, that I am often bowed with grief, and fear to my shame, I am unfit for a place in the kingdom below. My harp has been hung upon a willow for the past month. Mother has been quite ill with heart trouble, which has caused much desolation to prevail in my own life center. God, I am constrained to believe, is going to raise her in health once more. What is home without a mother? This question has manifested itself to me more than once during her illness. And those who have been thus stricken only know the pathos of such sorrow. Like the Psalmist David, my life is full of moans and groans. "I am like a pelican of the wilderness; I am like an owl of the desert; I watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the housetop." It is said, God's people are like birds, they sing sweetest when caged. If this be true and I am one, the melody of my songs is heard by others and not me, because I find no enjoyment in my limited twitters. Anything but music and harmony prevails as I swing daily backward and forth upon my lowly perch. My spiritual advancement does seem so slow and tedious. But I do not envy my dear precious kindred's liberties as they flit by the open air of golden, happy freedom, or because the Lord has given them more brilliant plumage. No, no, I desire to be reconciled to my little place in earth's great sphere.

I have thought though during my hard imprisonment that my ardent nature which craves love and sympathy, was almost really an affliction. When the cold, gray clouds of distress and loneliness hang over my uncovered head, with the whistling winds of adversity blowing sharply around me as now, it is then I look longingly for a kind word, an approving smile or a spiritual line from those whom I term my friends. Such illuminating rays from the sun of righteousness make me lift up my head and spread abroad my wings and clap them for joy and gladness; such delicious crumbs dropped on purpose for the beautiful quiet fields of our spiritual Boaz, make me sit and dream of that glorious harvest time, when the door of hope, the window of faith will be forever turned into sight, and I, even I, will be delivered from my lonely exile and into the blessed liberties of the son of God.

Now when I look down upon myself I cannot behold any comeliness within nor without, but then, oh then, I hope to hear from Canaan's goodly borders, accents sweet and rare from the voice of my beloved saying, "Thou art all fair, my beloved, thou art all fair, there is no spot in thee." The joy and ecstasy of such sublime musings seem almost too good to be verified in poor sinful me. Yet God's word is true. He never lies. Now, have I a companion in Israel, one who instantly travels this road of bleak bereftness? If so, dear one take courage if you can. This fiery path of tribulation leads to eternal bliss. We cannot so readily understand these dark, despondent, gloomy feelings, together with such trying events at present, but some day we will know, and be known even as we are known. Adieu, kind friends.

Your sister in hope,

ANNIE CRISP.

Dear Elder P. D. Gold:

As Mr Gower is about to write you. I have concluded to drop you a few thoughts, to try to express to you my appreciation of the reading matter contained in the Landmark. I have had access to its columns from early girlhood. My father subscribed for it when Elder Bodenhamer commenced publishing it.

The writing of Mr. R. G. Temple is much connected with my experience and hope of a blest immortality, if indeed I occupy that standpoint, though I feel like sometimes my hope is almost gone, and I haven't any hope of returning to the church any more here in this stormy life.

I think I will try to be contented with the Bible and the Landmark as long as I live; and you live to publish it and write the precious editorials. Oh! they have been so much comfort to me. tLapa.annn uqno'ac am rd rd me for the last six years. I got to a point when I thought I would be King expressed it, "have to do one thing to keep from doing a worse one," yet have sense to know you cught not to do any of them.

It seemed to me that a snake had the wheel within a wheel in his mouth, and when his hold was broken loose it just went like a whirligig. I was just miserable until it got quiet. I am so afraid of that snake I do not want to be hitched up with him any more, if it is the Lord's will to protect me from his cunning and crafty power.

Elder Isaac Jones said "the people of God were the sharpest people on earth"; I tell you it's a question to me whether they are sharper than Satan or not. I have heard it remarked "That works of iniquity are as deep as God." I do not agree to this, because I feel like that the wisdom of God and his works are deeper and higher than all others.

Well, I must close. Pray for me, if one so unworthy as I can go to your memory when thus engaged.

OPHELIA A. GOWER.

Dear Brother Gold:

I want to thank you for your kindness in writing to me of the departure of my dear cousin George W. Mewborn, whom I very dearly loved. I am from home and your letter reached me today.

I feel sure that with cousin George the old ship of Zion has furled her sails and gone safely over the stormy sea of life and anchored forever in the haven of eternal rest.

Like my poor self he sometimes had a stormy sea to face and the winds were contrary, they almost arose to the degree of the great Euroclydon, but with our great captain, Jesus, he was safe. It might appear at times that he was asleep or that he was altogether absent from the boat, but he was always there in time to keep the ship from sinking or if it sank or was beaten to pieces by the heavy waves, some piece of timber was prepared to take the helpless passenger ashore.

This last storm had been raging for some months and at times it appeared as if there was a lull and that it would subside altogether, but there was a wave reserved until that certain time. It came unexpectedly but surely and the passenger was at once thrown out on the shore, for which he had been looking for these several years past. There was a rock there but not one on which such a passenger could be killed and destroyed, for in this rock are the arms of sovereign mercy. These arms he had felt every time of need and in the end they awaited to receive one who had been their tender care for more than fifty years. Therefore this rock is the life and not the death of those who love the Lord and whose trust is in him.

May this be our happy lot when we have been called to lay our armor by.

Your brother in hope,
L. H. HARDY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

I feel constrained to make the attempt to write again to the Landmark, though except the Lord guides my pen it will be a failure, knowing that of myself I can do nothing, hoping and trusting that he will guide me in the way he would have me to go, and gently lead me as he leads his children to fountains of living water.

This year has been one of sore trials and troubles with me; yet I must praise him for his goodness and mercy to me through these many temptations.

It pleased the Lord to take from me two of my darling babies and mother during less than a year's time. I feel like it is a sore loss to me to be stripped of so many all so near together, but his holy and righteous will be done, and not mine, for he has all power in heaven and on earth to do as he sees fit, and how thankful I am that it is not left to poor sinful worms of the dust to do as we say.

I will leave in the midst of thee a poor and afflicted people and they shall trust in the name of the Lord. I feel like afflictions have been with me all the days of my life, and each year I see plainer how needful it is for such a poor sinful, wretched worm of the dust as I am following after the flesh and the lust thereof, forgetting the Lord and his wisdom. So you will see afflictions are needful for poor vile me.

"Let storms like a wild deluge come and clouds of sorrow fall, may I but safely reach my home, my God, my heaven, my all." I am often carried back when I hope I felt the forgiveness of my sins. Just before I was delivered I walked in the house and took the mirror as I thought to look upon my face the last time, for it seemed that I could feel death covering my eyes; then surely I was going to the bed and lie down and die, never expecting to see anyone again; but as I was holding to the glass my burden left me, and a song giving praises unto God entered within, and the glory of God shone round about me. If I ever felt rejoiced in my life I felt so then, I believe. The singing was a continual thing with me for several days. While I was asleep the singing was within, and when I would awake I was still singing. Right at the time I knew not what so much singing in my breast meant, but thought it was concerning a hope in Christ, showing me I would have a hope in Christ some day, and I thought whenever I got to be an old woman and got to wearing my bonnet and apron then I would join the church. For all the Primitive Baptists around here were old and wore their bonnets and aprons, but to my surprise it was the Lord and not self that was leading me I hope, and I was made to go at the age of twenty-three.

I must close not knowing why I was impressed to write these few lines to you, hoping you will pardon me for all mistakes and bear with me in my weakness, hoping the impression is of the Lord, and not self, desiring with a sincere desire to do right and follow in the path that leads to life eternal world without end. Amen.

MRS. L. A. JOHNSON.

Dear Brother Gold:

It is by and through the divine mercy of an all-wise and fore-knowing redeemer that I am spared to this morning, of which I hope I feel thankful. But sometimes I feel as Job did: that I will sit down in the ashes and wait for the Lord's appointed time for deliverance. I have so many trials and troubles spiritually that I almost give up, but the dear Lord has given me strength to bear them all so far. I trust he will continue to do so.

It is my desire in all things to do right, and do unto others as I would have them do unto me, but fall so short of my duty that sometimes I think I am out of the whole matter, that the Lord has turned a deaf ear to me, or I would not have so much trouble.

My husband was struck with another stroke of paralysis four weeks ago today and can't talk or use himself any yet. The doctor says he will not do any more work. We are both getting old and it takes my time to attend to him.

I am afraid I will lose my home. I owe three hundred dollars on it, and no way of making it with him in bed helpless. Why is it that I have such bad luck, if indeed it is bad luck? Sometimes I feel like it is all for the best, and then I think if I was one of God's children it would be different. But I do hope I am entirely willing for the Lord's will to be done.

If it is his will to cut me off both spiritually and financially it is all right, for he has the power and his will must be done.

I did not intend to write as much as I have done when I began, but wish I could write just as I feel, but cannot for the half has not been told. I hope you will have a mind to pray for me and mine in our affliction. I hope the Baptists in general will remember us. Your sister in hope of a better world, of this dear sister for publication. It was such a treat to a poor sinner like me I feel as if it would be a comfort to God's people to read it. With best wishes to you and the dear old Landmark, I remain

MRS. J. J. SHIELDS.

Your brother I hope if one at all,

J. M. O'BRIENT.

Roxboro, N. C. . .

Dear Cousin Melvin:

I will try in my weak way to answer your good letter, for I felt it was good for me when I received it, and although I don't feel worthy to write to God's children and feel to be the least of all still I have been made to love them. All this week has been a time of rejoicing with me. I want to talk all the time. Cousin Melvin, I have wanted to tell you my feelings for a long time, but when I would begin to talk I would get so full I couldn't do anything but cry. But it seemed to me you were the loveliest people I ever saw. I wanted to live with the Baptists but I was such a sinner I didn't feel that they could fellowship me. I went to preaching Saturday night and felt like I could witness everything Brother Hall said. I feel so unworthy to say "brother." He came home with us Saturday night and told me next morning I had better go and talk to the church that day. I told him no, I was unworthy. I determined not to go. But it seemed I had to. So I went and tried to tell them what good things I hoped the Lord had done for me when, much to my surprise, they received me and I enjoyed baptism. I felt strong and good and wanted to go through with it, and when I came out of the water I wanted to laugh and felt like I had done my duty.

I have been in trouble for several years but tried to keep it to myself. I would go on in gay company and try to have a good time, but it seemed all my troubles would go with me. Sometimes it seemed I had more than

Dear Brother—I send the experience

I could bear. And I was so disobedient last summer when my poor father and mother were so sick I felt I wanted to suffer for them. I felt like their sickness was trouble for me, for my disobedience. I came home and after retiring that night I was in so much trouble I tried to beg God for mercy on me a poor vile sinner, that I would try to do better. I cried nearly all night and felt as if I would never see the sun rise again, and if I died in that condition I was lost forever. But I felt like it would be just and didn't feel worthy of any of God's blessings.

I lay there and thought I would go to sleep and not disturb my dear husband. I shut my eyes and saw three men standing by my side; one said the middle man is Jesus. It seemed to me everything was lighted up and you don't know what a good feeling I had. It seemed all my troubles were gone. But in a few days they came back and I thought maybe it is imagination and you are deceived and it seemed my troubles were greater than ever.

I feel so much better since I joined the church, only feel just too unworthy to mingle with the little ones. I dreamed last night I went to Wheelers to join, but when the time came to be baptized I couldn't get ready. I felt that that was an evidence I was not fit to go. I told Brother Hall about it and he said he felt like that was an evidence that I was fit to go. I have wanted to join a long time, but felt too mean and I would look around and see so many outside who were so much better than I that I couldn't feel like I could go.

While I was at the water Sunday something said to me, "some more will soon follow you." I believe my father, mother and Mr. Long will soon join, and oh, how glad I would be to see them come. I hope the good Lord will bring them in.

Cousin Melvin, I feel like I am worrying you with this letter, but the half has never been told. If you were here I feel like I could talk all the time. "I want to live a christian and die rejoicing." Those words have been on my mind for a week. I have felt for some time if I didn't join the church some of my people would be taken from me. The night Brother Simpkins and Brother Hall stayed with us, last November, I was miserable. I felt so mean and so unworthy to have such good people with me. I felt like I wanted to fall at their feet and ask them to pray for me, but I felt too unworthy to ask them. I didn't feel like they would have any confidence in me at all.

Cousin, I didn't think of writing this much when I began the letter. Please pardon and pray for me if you feel that you can pray for such an unworthy creature as I feel to be. May God bless, guide and direct us is my prayer. Please excuse me for writing so much but I felt like I was bound to tell it. I enjoyed your letter and am glad you thought enough of me to write. Write again for I certainly appreciate your letters, but I feel like they are too good for me. I am going to stop. Give my love to cousin Maud and come to see us real soon.

Your unworthy sister and cousin,

MOLLIE LONG.

Dear Brother Gold:

On last Sunday morning I looked up at a house on a hill and saw how hard it was for it to be hid or for one to hide from it. The words came, "A city set upon a hill cannot be hid." I remembered the time when one hundred and thirty of us stood on the pier at Plymouth waiting for the boat to come and take us to the Kehukie Association and how bright it was when the searchlight was thrown on us from on board. Then I felt how great a searchlight is the Holy Spirit of God that not only lights all around us but all within us, even to the most secret thought and searches us out altogether and knows us, thus revealing every shadow of darkness and exposing to our full view the truth that we are poor needy sinners. Showing us that the worst of all our enemies are in the most secret hiding places in our own being. I truly felt the truth of this and was led out in prayer to the Lord to keep me in the hollow of his hand and deliver me from myself.

Soon we started to our meeting and I looked out through the woods and saw the beauty of the sun shining through the ice-covered trees while the chrysalis tear drops from the melting ice caused almost a shower of rain and I was made to feel how good are the mercies of God to us in the coldest times of our experience and my heart became filled with thanksgiving to him who has kept me in all my troubles unto this day, and I felt that he is my father God and that he will not let me go.

It was a good place to be in and a good feeling to have. Like an oasis in the desert where I could sit and rest a little moment and drink water out of the flinty rock and eat the honey out of the lion's carcass. I would stay there always if I could. but even now I have been called to pass on and to again experience the gloom of the clouds and to have to song from the singing of the birds and the cooing of the dove.

Such appears to be my lot in this world and if I could not look beyond in a precious hope mine would surely be a case of despair. But bless the Lord the eyes of faith will look forward and I hope and hope again. The Lord bless and keep you.

L. H. HARDY.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother I Hope in Christ:

Surely the mercy of the Lord endureth forever and this poor being is a spared monument of God's mercy. You have been on my mind so much of late, dear brother with a desire to let you hear from me and let you know something of how I enjoyed Brother Dailey's sweet but short stay with us. Surely he did not know the wonderful scripture that been, as I hope and believe, given me during my deep sufferings, especially of late, but soul cheering thought there is one that knoweth all things and I hope hears the cry of the poor sinner like me.

Much of the 23rd Psalm had been forcibly impressed on my mind from time to time and had been a source of great comfort during my trying sufferings of mind and body. I asked one of my children to hand Brother Dailey the Bible. He read the 23rd Psalm, commented some, speaking words of comfort and cheer, for they were as water to a thirsty plant and as food to a hungry soul. I dreamed I wanted you to know that I was so comforted and encouraged by his sweet words. While commenting on that scripture, especially this, "He restoreth my soul," Brother Gold, I don't know whether it was a dream or what condition I was in during the night after Brother Dailey had gone but it seemed I was so rejoiced I could hardly stay on the ground and on awaking I was aroused with this scripture, "The Lord is my shepherd, he maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters, he restoreth my soul." Dear brother, it did me so much good I felt to exclaim in the language of the Psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and let all that is within me bless his holy name." I had seen much trouble over the following language, "The soul that sins shall die," and if my memory serves me right this scripture was forcibly impressed on my mind while I was in the sanatorium at Wilson and my sufferings were indescribable, for I feared I had committed some sin that would banish me from the peaceful presence of the Lord, and that the dear brethren and sisters could not fellowship me. Dear brother, if you have ever been brought so low by sin and disobedience you can sympathize with me. But I don't look upon you as being so disobedient, for I feel you are blessed to eat the good of the land.

I hope these few and imperfect thoughts will find you and Sister Gold getting along well. My health is slowly improving and I can sit up some but not all the time. I have just had a spell of bleeding at the nose, which usually relieves my head some. I have to get Irene to do my writing for me and I think this is about my second letter in about three years. Dear brother, I feel that I was shown to write to you also to our dear afflicted Brother Green at soldiers' home, Raleigh, by the following words being presented to my mind, "write, quench not the spirit; where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty."

Dear Brother Gold, may the Lord bless you and yours now and forever and enable you to pray for me and my family. May the Lord forgive all that is wrong in this imperfect scribble and enable you to do the same. Accept much love for you and Sister Gold. Your afflicted sister I hope in christian love and fellowship.

Volume XLII - - - No. 11

Wilson, N. C., APR. 15, 1909

HOW DID CHRIST ACT?

He was placed in all the circumstances of trial, temptation, affliction, poverty, desertion, oppression, and suffering that could furnish an excuse of unfaithfulness, if he had been a mere man. Still the Godhead in him did not release or exempt him from any of this trial and sorrow, nor incline him to claim any exemption therefrom. "The cup that my Father giveth me shall I not drink it"? was his answer. He could have prayed to his Father, and He would have given him more than twelve legions of angels: but how then could the scripture be fulfilled that thus it should be.

The strengthening that God gave him was to enable him to endure to the full end of the suffering needful to make reconciliation to justice, and a complete atonement for sin. Was there anything in his birth, childhood or manhood that any natural man would have chosen as his lot? Who was as poor? Who was reproached as He was as being without an earthly father? Who was crucified as he was confessing the truth that he came from heaven? Who knew beforehand as he what manner of death awaited him, and yet steadfastly set his face to go to the cross? He said he had a baptism (death) to be baptized with, and how was he straitened until it was accomplished. If a man should know from his early life that in middle life he should be cut off by the shameful death of the cross, and be numbered with transgressors, how would it burden him? With men there is some kind of hope that they will be spared extreme suffering. But Jesus knew the whole course of his life was predestinated, and that it consisted of sorrow greater than that ever appointed for any other.

When one suffers for no fault, one who is innocent, that does not so lessen the suffering that it is no trial. Jesus though holy and without sin, yet was made sin for the transgressors. All their guilt was laid upon him.

If Jesus had not suffered for the unjust there had been no merit for us in that suffering. All that he did and suffered was for others. He knew no sin. Inasmuch as He was holy what he did for us reconciles us unto God, not by anything we have done or believed. When we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son.

Did Christ perform any miracle to relieve himself from suffering? Did he refuse to endure the pangs of hunger because he could turn stones into bread?

Did any of his followers petition legislators or the powers that be to help them convert men to the faith of Christ? No. They preached that Jesus is the Christ saying by Him all that believe are justified from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses, and if not by the law of Moses then surely not by man's works, for the law of Moses is holy, just and good, but not one of man's works is just or good.

Did any one of the apostles ever request merchants or laborers of any sort to suspend their labors that they might help them convert the world? Did they ever ask the interposition of the laws of nations in order that it might give them opportunity to convert men to the faith of Jesus?

There was manifested in Jesus and the apostles the utmost reliance upon the Lord God in all matters. They felt and held that God rules in heaven and among men. When they preached Jesus and the resurrection from the dead they trusted in God to make his word efficacious, knowing if God did not give the increase there would be no true increase, also knowing that as many as were ordained to eternal life would believe. When men murmured at Jesus for preaching what he did, He said, murmur not among yourselves, for no man can come to me except the Father that sent me draw him; and all that the Father giveth to me shall come to me. The perfect confidence Jesus had in his Father and in the ultimate triumph of truth is glorious. This faith in wonderful measure was given to the apostles, so that they with all boldness preached the Word of God, or the Lord Jesus who is the Word of God in its highest and most effective expression of life and glory. For that word never returns to the Lord void, but always accomplishes that which He pleases, and prospers in the thing whereunto he sends it. It is the Lord that adds to the church such as shall be saved, and He never adds any other kind, and nor can any man add a single one of that kind.

P. D. G.

WHY DO WE LOVE GRACE?

There should be good reasons why we love this doctrine. If there is no cause or reason for a matter then why cling to it? Be ready at all times to give a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.

1st. By grace are ye saved? Paul says by the grace of God I am what I am. If by grace we are saved then it is no more of or by works. Salvation cannot be by works, for if it is then it is no more by grace.

The grace of God bringeth salvation. It does not require it, but it brings it, causes it, produces it. By grace are ye saved through faith and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God. Not of works; for we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.

Second. The law covenant is the covenant of works. Jesus is the performer in the covenant of grace, for he is the covenant for his chosen people. They are chosen or elect in Jesus and grace is given them in Christ Jesus before the world began. So Jesus is the surety or covenant head and life of his people, not by giving them grace or strength to keep the law of Moses, but he is made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. Jesus gives them eternal life. What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God sent his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, and condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit. Then the righteousness of Christ received by faith justifies us from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses.

3rd. Now if it is impossible for one to be saved by his works of the law, and if it is impossible for one to be lost who is a believer in Jesus, and of the salvation by grace is not only sure to all the seed or children of promise, and if that salvation is so complete, glorious and wonderful that it shall be to the praise of the glory of the grace of God, and if it granted to them that work not—cannot work—but that believe in God that justifies the ungodly, then why blame us for loving that blessed God-given doctrine? If nothing but this could save us, and this saves us so completely that we desire no other way of salvation, even if there were another way, then why should we not glory in this salvation?

One saved by the grace is saved by the Lord. Who could do things as well as the Lord does? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? Who is he that condemns? It is Christ that died. Yea that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, where he ever liveth to make intercession for us.

When the Lord shows us that salvation is by grace then why should we not contend for this? Would it not be sin in us to hold our peace and not shout salvation is of the Lord. The whale could no longer hold Jonah when he was brought to know that salvation is of the Lord. Never perhaps was a man more straightened than Jonah was when he was swallowed by whale, could see no one, hear no one, do nothing in the way of work. He did not even promise the Lord that if he would send him away from there he would preach to Nineveh. No, it was just a case of such helplessness that if God did not save him there was no salvation for him. Every power of the enemy must be removed and only the power of God could be seen and felt. Did Jonah make any mistake when he said salvation is of the Lord?

Now was it not right for Jonah to give all the glory to the Lord? Is it not right for us to do the same thing? What else can we do, or what else should we do?

When the Lord God is pleased to reveal his Son in us the hope of glory should not we love that blessed doctrine, and proclaim it on the housetops and everywhere, and to all people?

Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Why should we hesitate or doubt that God is able to save any creature that comes to him by Jesus Christ—that calls on the name of the Lord? This doctrine is worthy of all acceptation.

P. D. G.

FOR GOD IS LOVE.

1st. John 4: "He that loveth not knoweth not God: for God is love."

This is the most wonderful definition in the Bible it seems to me. While God is unsearchable and incomprehensible, the most blessed attribute of his character is love. Indeed love is the noblest principle found in the characters of the best men, so that if one does not love what is noble, useful, needful and praiseworthy, we feel nothing else can compensate for this fatal lack, nor atone for its absence. Among the greatest things in God's endowment in men faith, hope and charity the greatest of all these is charity or love.

The nearer men approach to the likeness of God the more of love they possess. For whatever is godly shows the spirit of God in man. If a man has no love of truth or holiness in him—no love of God or the brethren—then we know he is not of God, and has not a single noble principle in him. He that loveth not knoweth not God: for God is love. Every one that loveth is born of God. There is no sin in this holy love. Faith works by it, without charity or this love nothing that one does profits him any at all.

Should one desire to know the character of deity and is proven to be a sincere and humble seeker after the true knowledge of God, what would most delight him? Would it be a contemplation of his omnipotence, or justice, or knowledge, wisdom, or eternity? These are all in the godhead without limitation, but would they so charm a vile, helpless, guilty sinner as they would produce in him a guilty fear? What the sinner needs is mercy, pity, compassion, forgiveness. When such a sinner is told God is love then hope springs up, for love is the fountain from which springs forth pity, mercy, compassion, salvation of the Lord. For where love leads then power, wisdom, justice all are led by love. Every attribute of the Godhead shines in the love of God, and his love leads and shines in every one born of God. The great love of God towards people while they were dead in trespasses and sins displays his mercy to unspeakable riches of compassion.

When our eyes are open to behold God's goodness in everything we see in what was once a desert the rose blossoms, a fruitful field where the wilderness is made glad. The smile of God's love shines in everything. All things work together for good to them who love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. All things are become new and all things are of God who is love, and his love is in everything.

Moses desired to see God's face, but God said to him no man can see my face and live; but there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock. And it shall come to pass while my glory passeth by that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by. And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts. This is his train of goodness. For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten, his well beloved Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. Greater love hath no man than to lay down his life for his friend, but God commends his love to us in that while we were enemies Christ died for us.

We love God because he first loved us. His love to us causes us to love Him. The fruit of the Spirit of God in us causes us to love Him. He that loveth is born of God, for He is love. When his love is shed abroad in our hearts we cannot think evil of God. We cannot find fault of his way. Nor is there any greater joy than to have perfect love of God in us which casts out all fear.

What a hallowed place is this where we put off our shoes from our feet, and stand in the strength of God. Our God is a consuming fire, and burns all the chaff of our vile nature.

John is the disciple whom Jesus loved. He loved his own or all his disciples and he loved them to the end, yet He had special love for John who leaned on the bosom of Jesus, and to whom Jesus committed the keeping of his mother, and said to his mother to behold John as her son. Hence John dwells so much on the love of God who is love, and leaves no hope for those that do not love God. How dwelleth the love of God in a man who does not love his brother.

The law is fulfilled in love which worketh no ill to his neighbor. Love never wrongs any one; nor does it think any evil. For God is love, and if we do not love Him how can we hope to be like Jesus when he comes again?

P. D. G.

DEFENSE AND CONFIRMATION OF THE GOSPEL: PHIL. 1:7.

Does the gospel need any defense? That which is right needs no defense from attacks of the just. Men who love liberty are not afraid of an attack from such as love the right. From tyrants and oppressors they need fear attacks, for such men are enemies of freedom and justice.

Perhaps to some it may appear strange that any one is an enemy of the cross of Jesus Christ, and of the gospel of salvation to sinners. Yet there is not another subject that has occasioned so much opposition and bloodshed. The reason of this is that the carnal or natural mind of man is enmity against God, and is not subject to his law, neither indeed can be; so that the carnal mind must be slain. The cross of Christ is the enemy of all wrong and sin, and hence the opposition of the natural mind against the gospel. The believer in Jesus wars against spiritual wickedness in high places. The adversaries of the gospel are all the enemies of righteousness and holiness, Satan the prince of the air leading.

Saul himself was by nature an active opposer of the truth, and thought it was his duty to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. All the energy of his nature was arrayed against that doctrine. He committed men and women to prison and to death, and thought he was doing the will of God in this course.

Perhaps no one was more fully and unreservedly devoted to the cause of Jesus than was this man whose name was changed to Paul. Perhaps no man suffered more than he did, or more willingly gave his life to the defense of the gospel, or was of greater comfort to the followers of Jesus.

He knew the nature of the human mind and the operation of the law that came by Moses. He knew what must be put in the place of what was renounced in leaving the world, and what was gained in following Jesus. He knew that the hidden things of dishonesty must be forsaken. Those things he once counted for gain were all forsaken and were counted as dung and dross that he might win Christ, and be found in him. What a radical, wonderful, thorough and glorious change is wrought in one who is translated out of darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the Son of God. There is nothing lost that ought to be saved. Everything gained is invaluable and glorious.

Why then should this doctrine and course be defended?

Every part of the doctrine of Jesus is opposed by man. It is a new doctrine—not a polishing of what is believed in nature. It is so different from nature that it is all of God. By nature is meant the fallen and polluted character of man—not that upright state in which God created him.

Paul had deep experience of the villainess of man, and therefore deep experience of the gracious power of God that saved him, and that experience caused him to contend earnestly for the doctrine of God our Saviour. For one who is saved by the Lord can never say too much in favor of what God has wrought for him, or for what he has wrought for others that are saved from their sins. Nor can we ever tell how dear those are to us who believe what we believe, and who hate what we hate.

How did Paul know that these brethren were among the elect of God? Their fellowship in the gospel—being confident of this very thing that He who had begun a good work in them would perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. Also they were in his heart and hence partakers of his grace. Fellowship is one of the sweet words of the Bible. Love of the brethren is a sure mark of God's work in us. When we love them we defend what they love, we suffer with them in their suffering.

Every principle of corrupt nature opposes the gospel. Hence we are called upon to defend and confirm the gospel. The wiles of Satan and the deception of carnal reason must be exposed.

The confirmation of the Lord's work in the saints must be made. The preaching of the gospel by God's witnesses must be done. Saints must be showed and told again and again that this is the Lord's work, and such men as Paul are enabled to defend the marvelous work of the Lord. Every time this wonderful work is declared there is a great strengthening of this work in the saints, and hence a pulling down of the strongholds of Satan, and bringing every thought into obedience to the cross of Christ.

One charge that is made against the doctrine of grace is that it warrants and encourages the commission of sin. "Let us do evil that good may come." If where sin abounded grace did much more abound then the more we sin the more grace will abound. The answer Paul makes to this is, how shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein? Our crucifixion with Jesus is the only way we are or could be dead to sin, and this is proven by our burial with Christ by baptism into his death, and our resurrection with and by him shows that we are new creatures in him. Then how can we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?

Those opposed to the righteousness of God, and that insist on their own righteousness charge that the predestination of God makes him the author of sin. But Paul proves that whom or as many as God foreknew he did predestinate to be holy and without blame before him in love, which is a perfect defense of the holiness of that doctrine, and proves that such as oppose the sovereignty of God are enemies of holiness, and that there can be no good works that God is not the author of.

What a wonderful defender of truth was Paul, and how valiant was he in the good fight of faith, and how victorious was he—more than a conqueror through Jesus Christ.

PURGING THE TEMPLE.

Sister Bettie G. Williams requests my view of John 2:13-17, "And the Jews passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem, and found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting," etc.

The law of Moses required the Jews to bring their offerings to the temple and eat the passover—to take their lambs from their flocks and bring them to the altar and slay them.

This they had abandoned, and some kept oxen, sheep and doves on hand at the temple, and sold them in the temple, and the money changers were there to carry on the speculation for gain. Thus they had made the house designed for prayer a place of speculation for gain, and those in charge of the business were thieves and robbers, and they had made the house that was intended to be a house of prayer a den of thieves. This is the way they had perverted the true worship of God, and Jesus made a scourge of small cords and drove them all out of the temple, and overthrew the money changers' tables. For Jesus came to make all things new. He should purge his people of uncleanness that they might make an offering in righteousness. All the Lord's way had been corrupted, and the temple which should be a house of prayer for all nations they had made a den of thieves. The worship of God must be holy. Those that pray to God must not fellowship uncleanness. Those that pray to God must not regard iniquity in their hearts. They that bear the vessels of the Lord's house must have clean hands.

Jesus does cleanse the hearts of his people or purify their hearts that they may make an offering in righteousness that the Lord may be glorified. For his people become the true tabernacle wherein God dwells and walks in them.

The disciples remembered that it was written, "The zeal of thine house has eaten me up," Psalm 69:9. The reproaches of them that reproached God fell on Jesus. The shame and reproach of the wicked conduct of the Jews fell on Jesus, and for the transgression of his people he was stricken. It was a false zeal that actuated the Jews. They pretended to great activity and much zeal in serving God. They compassed land and sea to make proselytes. They hated every one that reproved them in their oppression, false worship. They stoned prophets who rebuked them. They hated Jesus more than they hated any man that ever lived because every word he spoke was truth, and everything he did was holy. Jesus was a stranger to his brethren and an alien to his mother's children. When he wept and chastened his soul with fasting that was to his reproach. He made sackcloth his garment and was a proverb to them. The judges or those that sat in the gate spoke against him. He was the song of the drunkards. Never was one so hated as Jesus who was holy, harmless and separate from sinners.

To the eternal shame and reproach of man is his treatment of Jesus Christ. The Jews said his blood be on us and on our children, and to this day they are a scattered race without a scepter or government.

In the name of religion what speculation in money men are conducting everywhere. What zeal in their agencies for its collection they are manifesting, what great activity? What vast sums they beg for and collect to save souls they say.

A Jew might say what is wrong in having oxen, sheep or doves on hand as a matter of convenience to furnish offerings to those that eat the passover?

The order under the law was for the man to go to his flock and take a firstling of his flock without blemish, and present it to the priest for the passover, and his people were to eat it. Thus he was to eat of the fruit of his own labor. Well would not some other way do as well? Could it not be substituted?

Christ said to his apostles "go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Would it not be a quicker way to do a wholesome business by raising millions of money and pay men to go and preach? What do they preach when thus they are sent out by boards or institutions of men?

Why was Jesus so hated? Because he condemned their wicked course. If one in this day opposed the general and popular way of carrying the gospel as they call it he is hated and his name cast out as evil, and he is counted an enemy of all good works.

P. D. G.

IN ALL THEIR AFFLICTION.

Jesus stands from the foundation of the world as a lamb slain, Rev. 13:8; which is also finished on the cross, 1st Pet. 1:19-20. He then is righteousness of his people from the beginning. For in the beginning was the word. In due time that word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and lived in holiness, and died a holy sacrifice for the sins of his people, and put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

Man is a sinner, not merely from his birth, but he sinned in Adam. The fountain is polluted, and sends forth only bitter water. The stock or nature is corrupt, and therefore all the offshoots, all the offspring, is sinful. Jesus therefore stands up as the holy one identified with his people as their life and righteousness, from the beginning. His life is set over against theirs. In all their affliction he was afflicted. Why? "For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: so he was their Saviour." They were chosen in Jesus Christ before the foundation of the world, as he stood for them, not to prevent their sinning, not as one saying, I will see that they sin not; I will keep them from sinning. But he stood a lamb slain from the foundation of the world—one for the many—the surety bearing their sins—and in that sense they are without sin, or children that will not lie. They are pure, but it is all in Jesus. Christ bare his people and carried them all the days of old, and in him they are without fault. In his love and in his pity he redeemed them. Isa. 62:8-10. In this obedience, then, they are without fault, or children that will not lie; yet as sons of Adam they are all sinners, all gone astray, and by nature children of wrath even as others. Was he not thus a perfect Saviour, a glorious high throne, the place of our sanctuary from the beginning? How blessed that we have this standing! Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blest us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love. Eph. 1:3-4.

The predestination of God causes our adoption as children of Jesus Christ, and provides final and perfect holiness. Then Christ is our Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

God commends his love to us in that Christ died for us while we were sinners. For if when we were enemies to God we were reconciled to him by the death of his son, much more being reconciled we shall be saved by his life. In addition, we have also received the atonement, which is, in substance, as by the disobedience of one many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous; or, wherefore, as by one man (Adam) sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned; so by the obedience of one (Jesus) shall many be made righteous. We then are one with Adam in the transgression, and sinned in him. This part of the atonement we receive in conviction for sin, and we die in Adam, or feel the justice of God in our death sentence. The revelation of Jesus Christ brings the righteousness of God to light in our justification in Jesus. This is the wonder of the atonement and its glory. This we receive after we have the sentence of death in us, and feel the justice of God in our condemnation.

How wonderful, glorious, gracious, blessed, complete and perfect is the salvation of our God!

P. D. G.

WRITE, BLESSED ARE THE DEAD.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them," Rev. 14:13.

John was an eye witness, an ear witness, a hand witness, a heart witness of the Lord Jesus and of the kingdom of heaven. That which he had seen with his eyes, and heard with his ears, and handled with his hands of the Word of Life he declared. To merely read of these things in books is not sufficient to constitute a witness.

John heard a voice from heaven which spake unto him. The voice is from heaven therefore it is the truth, for nothing unclean or uncertain ever comes from heaven, nor does such a voice ever speak to the unclean.

In the multitudinous noise of voices and tongues with their interpretations among men there is babel, but no such voices as these come from heaven. Surely the ear must be circumcised to hear, and the eye must be single to see the truth. God's operations are every where, yet if one perceives God in the multitude of events it is as the still small voice. For God is not in the fire, nor wind, nor earthquake; yet they are the things that natural men tremble at. It is no uncertain voice that speaks from heaven.

John is commanded to write. For the things that John heard and saw, or that were told him in secret he was to proclaim on the housetop. No men since John's day were inspired as he and the other apostles were. Their word is final. The things they spoke and wrote were committed to faithful men, one generation after another, and thus we are to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints. No new revelation or no new doctrine has ever been declared since. It was once and but once delivered unto the saints.

Pilate said what I have written I have written. It becomes unchangeable when it is written. It is as true today as it was when first delivered or written.

What was John to write then? "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. This is no natural reward as the wages of sin. It is a state of corruption. There is no death in Jesus. To fall asleep in Jesus and be embalmed in his unchanging holiness is surely precious, for precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. This is no fancy writing, no novel or fable. No holy man of old ever wrote from his own imagination, or from a vision of his own heart, or from a supposition. But these writers and speakers wrote or spoke what they were moved by the Holy Ghost to write. Hence every word they wrote or spoke was true in the sense intended or declared. As a faithful witness tells only what is already true, and was true before he testified, and he testified to it because it was already a fact or done, so John wrote things of prophesy or that shall be. Here he wrote blessed are the dead. What dead? The dead that die in the Lord from henceforth. One help with a man that fears God is he knows there is no lie of the truth. To him it would be sin to utter that which is not truth, or to withhold more than is meat, or to pervert the word of the Lord, or the meaning of scripture. That is one guide with a gospel preacher. He desires to be as the mouth of the Lord to separate between the precious and the vile.

There is no blessing to any that die but do not die in the Lord. Them that sleep in Jesus are blest. They are alive unto God. Whether we live or die we are the Lords: no man liveth or dieth to himself. God is not the God of the dead but of the living.

From the time the dead die in the Lord they are blest. This then is a wonderful state. They rest from their labors. Labor and rest are different—opposite states or conditions. Labor comes first. When the laborer ceases from his labor then he rests. Ones work being finished, complete rest follows. As long as any change or addition or subtraction must be made with the labor that is being performed there is no rest. When God finished the six days labor of creation he saw it was all very good and He rested from his work. When one ceases from his own work he enters into rest. What a glorious thing to enter into God's rest. God's work is perfect. He that believes in God rests in this perfect work.

This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

To die in the Lord is to be crucified with Christ. They that labor and are heavy laden when the life, death and resurrection of Jesus is revealed in them do cease from their own works—they rest from their labors from henceforth, and their works do follow them. Their works do not go with them and commend or introduce them to the Lord. But the fruit they bear proves they are dead to the law by the body of Christ, and that they are risen with him. These signs follow them that believe. God ordains peace for them, for he has wrought all their works in them.

When one is dead to the law by the body of Christ he is loosed from that law, that being dead wherein he was held, that he should be married to another even to him who is raised from the dead, that he should bring forth fruit unto God.

The works of God's people from the days of righteous Abel do follow them and speak good things.

Remarks—To choose a good name is greater than to make a good name. If one has wisdom to choose a good name that will secure a far better name than one can make. For the good name the Lord gives is far greater than any thing any poor mortal can earn. The desire for the loving favor of God is also greater than any favor that men could earn. By grace are ye saved, and not by works.

The rich own the poor, and the borrower is servant to the lender.

We know that this is true naturally. Worldly riches tend to steal away natural affection and kindness, and make their possessor oppress the poor. But he that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity. When a man becomes rich he sows iniquity, and he reaps vanity. What a delusion it is to trust in the rod or scourge of wealth!

They that gather riches heap to themselves sorrow upon sorrow. But he that hath a bountiful eye, or that loves to distribute to the poor—that sees no fault, but much to admire in afflicted Joseph—shall be blessed, for he giveth to the poor. Blessed is he that considereth the poor. He that hath dispersed abroad is walking in the footsteps of Jesus, who said, it is more blessed to give than it is to receive.

16. He that oppresseth the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want. He is not merciful to the poor. He that gives to the rich does it to increase his own wealth or honor, and he is accursed in this selfishness. Love, pity, bowels of compassion to the poor, is greater than all worldly honors or wealth.

22. Rob not the poor because he is poor. We are not to despise the poor. In doing this we reproach their maker. God's people are poor and humble folk. Poverty of spirit is an unmistakable mark of sonship with God. The afflicted are apt to be in the gate, the place of judgment, crying for mercy. Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones in the gate crying for mercy.

27. Do not become surety to a stranger. He that strikes hands, or becomes surety to a stranger, shall smart for it. If you are surety for the debt of another you must pay it. Now if you have nothing to pay, the creditor will take away your bed from under you, and then where will you rest?

You cannot stand responsible for the sins of yourself, nor of any one. Jesus is the great surety. Cleave to him and you will have a bed to rest upon.

OBITUARIES

GEORGE WASHINGTON MEWBORN.

George Washington Mewborn was born in the year 1856. He was the third son of George Mewborn and Nancy L., his wife, and the grandson of Elder Parrot Mewborn, Sr. His twin sister died in infancy, his father soon after his mother while he was yet quite young.

We grew up boys together and were very familiar. When he was quite a young man he manifested a thirst for knowledge and closed out all of his little property and entered the school of Col. A. C. Davis, which was then located at LaGrange.

He was very studious and soon acquired a good knowledge of books. He was a man of good executive ability and his skill in managing schools and school work was seldom excelled. He was a natural born teacher and student. Col. Davis once told me he had rather put a child of his under Prof. Mewborn than any man he ever saw. He taught a number of schools in different sections and like all successful men he had his friends and his enemies.

Soon after he finished his student days he married Miss Bettie Peacock. This was in 1885. To them were born four children, two boys and two girls. One of the boys died when he was one year old and the other at eight months of age. The daughters are yet living. His good wife proved to be a helpmate to him in his school work for she possessed that special gift and was educated at the Salem Moravian College. They equipped their oldest daughter for the school work and now she is a help to her mother in carrying on their school.

Prof. Mewborn attained the degree of Bachelor of Science. At the time of his death he was principal of a school near Taylors in Wilson county. He had been quite ill all the fall and suffered much. He had been a sufferer with Bright's disease for ten years, and this with its usual combination of diseases led up to his death in the town of Wilson on the 1st Sunday in December, 1908, and on Tuesday following his remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery within one-eighth of a mile of where he was born.

He was ever a believer in the doctrine of salvation by grace as taught by the Bible and preached by Primitive Baptists. He as often told me that he rejoiced that we had such a grand-father and that all his children and so many of his grand-children had been given grace to believe the same truth that he believed and so ably preached.

I do not know the date of his conviction or of his deliverance, but for some years before he came to the church he showed in his love for the blessed truth that deep down in his heart there was an indelible hand-writing, not the Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin, which sealed the fate of Babylon's host, but the blessed covenant of mercy which manifested that he was washed in the blood of our dear Saviour.

The Lord blessed him to satisfy the church at Hamilton, in Martin county, N. C., of this fact for on the first Sunday in August, 1903, he was received and that afternoon was baptized by Elder M. T. Lawrence whom he loved very much.

While he rambled much in his professions as teacher and doctor of optics, yet he held his membership with the church at Hamilton until the day of his death.

All over the country he has left many warm hearts to remember him and in many minds monuments have been erected to his memory but in none other so great as in those of his loving wife and sweet daughter who must now battle with life's tempestuous waves without his advice. But there is one, even God, whom he loved, to watch over them as judge and father. He left besides these, three brothers and one sister with a host of relatives and warm friends to mourn, but all in the blessed faith and hope that his trials have ended and that he is resting with his dear Lord in glory.

The Lord keep his wife and daughter that they may be pure in his eye and prepare them to meet him in glory.

By a loving cousin,
L. H. HARDY.

ALFORD T. FORBES.

The entire community was saddened last Sunday morning when it was learned that the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Forbes had been seriously burned while playing around the fire-side that morning. Its clothing had caught on fire and the little body could not withstand the ravages of the flames, and on Monday morning, Mar. 1, 1909, the bright, beautiful spirit winged its way back to God who gave it, having spent only fourteen months on earth.

"We give thee but thine own,

What'er the gift may be;

All that we have is thine alone,

A trust, O Lord, from thee."

No ore on earth will the baby hands reach out in loving appeal to mother and father. No more the childish prattle is heard from its little lips. The parents' hearts are filled with sorrow and the home is lonely now, but they should find sweet consolation in the thought that their beautiful little darling has gone to live with God and has missed this earthly life of trouble and care. Yes, we should rejoice over the entrance into the pearly portals of a young and innocent one because we know it is safe and secure from all sin.

Such trouble seems hard to bear and we sometimes halt and wonder at God's divine plan, but this is his way in dealing with his children and we must bow in humble submission and say, "Thy will be done, O Lord, and not mine. Thou art omniscient; thou knowest best."

Dear parents, this beautiful little soul has only gone before to await your coming. It is but another link to draw you nearer, separation will not be long, and the precious little spirit will be there with a halo around its angel face to welcome you both into the holy city, the land of eternal bliss.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

A LITTLE REMEMBRANCE TO ELDER P. D. GOLD ON HIS SEVENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY.

Just seventy-six years ago today,
(So your father's records say,)
A man-child entered your father's fold,
Whom he pleased to call, P. D.
Gold.

The child was small and helpless then,
The Lord took him under his own hand;
To care for him with mercies rare,
To raise him up under his tender care.

All these years sin has found a place
In the carnal mind, that wilderness,
From tender childhood on mother's breast,
To ripe manhood, now so blest.
In looking back through these pilgrim days,
Not one moment of self-born praise
Can you see or think or speak of at best,
But with rich mercy you have been blest.

It is this hand that oft reproved you, yet
You'll trust him who does not forget
Nor sins remember against his love,
But with eyes of pity looks from above,

And comes to save his heart's delight,
And for them to overcome in the fight;
For 'tis his to save and his alone;
In him you trust for strength to come.

Thus in his fold he brought his sheep,
And by his hand his soul does keep Within the walls of his blessed fold,
This sheep is found in P. D. Gold.

Yours in hope and love,
L. H. HARDY.

EXTRACT FROM "PRECIOUS REMEDIES AGAINST SA-TAN'S DEVICES," BY THOMAS BROOKS.

Satan hath his devices to hurt the saints, and one great device that he hath to hurt them is by tempting them to be strange, and then to divide, and then to be bitter and jealous, and then to "bite and devour one another" (Gal.
v. 15). Our own woeful experience is too great a proof of this. The Israelites in Egypt did not more vex one another than christians in our day have done, which has caused a sad consumption to fall upon some. Now the remedies against this device are these:

Remedy I. Against this device of Satan dwell much more upon each other's graces, than upon one another's weaknesses and infirmities. It is sad to consider that saints should have many eyes to look upon their brethren's infirmities, and not one eye to see their graces; that they should use spectacles to behold one another's weaknesses, rather than looking glasses to behold one another's virtues.

Tell me, saints, is it not a more delightful thing to look upon that which is excellent in others, than upon their infirmities? Tell me, what pleasure, delight, or comfort is there in looking upon the enemies, the diseases, nakedness of our friends? Now sin, you know is an enemy, disease, nakedness of the soul; and what a heart hath that man that loves to look upon these! Grace is the choicest flower in the christian garden, it is the richest jewel in his crown, it is his princely robes, the summit of his royalty; and therefore is the most pleasing and delightful object for a gracious eye to look upon. Sin is darkness, grace is light; sin is hell, grace is heaven; and what madness is it to look more at darkness than at light; more at hell, than at heaven. Tell me saints, does not God look more upon His people's graces, than upon their weaknesses? Surely he does. He looked more at David's and Asaph's uprightness, than their infirmities, though they were great and many; he eyed Job's patience more than his passion; "Remember the patience of Job"—not a word of his impatience. He that drew Alexander, who had a scar upon his face, drew him with his finger upon the scar. God puts his finger upon his people's scars, that no blemish may appear. Ah, saints! would that you esteemed it your highest glory, in this particular, to be like your heavenly father; by so doing much sin would be prevented, the designs of wicked men frustrated, Satan outwitted, many wounds healed, many sorrowful hearts comforted, and God more abundantly honored.

Remedy II. Solmenly consider, that love and unity make most for your own security and safety. We shall be invincible, if we be inseparable. The world may frown upon you, and plot against you, but they cannot hurt you. Unity is the best bond of safety, in every church and commonwealth.

Remedy III. Dwell upon those commands of God that require love one to another. When your hearts begin to rise against each other charge the commands of God upon them, and say to your souls, Hath not the eternal God commanded us to love them that love the Lord? And is it not life to obey, and death to rebel? Therefore look that you fulfill the commands of the Lord, for his commands are not easily reversed. But are like those of the Medes, which cannot be changed. Oh! ponder much upon these commands of God. "A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." It is called a new commandment, because it is renewed in the gospel, and set home by Christ's example, and because it is special and remarkable above all others. "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Owe no man anything, but to love one another; for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law. Let brotherly love continue; love one another, for love is of God, and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." O dwell much upon these precious commands! that your love may be increased one to another. In the primitive times it was much noticed by heathens that in the depth of misery, when fathers and mothers forsook their children, christians (otherwise strangers) stood by one another, and their love of religion was firmer than that of nature. O that there were more of this spirit among the saints in these days! The world was once destroyed by water for the heat of lust, and it is thought it will be destroyed by fire for the coldness of love.

Remedy IV. Dwell more upon those excellent things wherein you agree, that upon those things wherein you differ. If you did thus, how would sin in your heart be subdued, your love raised and your spirits united one to another. You agree in most things, you differ but in few; you agree in the weightiest things, as concerning God, Christ, the Spirit, the scriptures, etc. You differ only in those points that have been long disputable amongst men of great piety and learning. Shall Herod and Pilate, Turks and Pagans, bears and lions, tigers and wolves, yea, shall a legion of devils agree in one body? And shall not saints agree, who differ only in non-essentials as have little of God in them, and that will never hinder their meeting together in heaven?

Remedy V. Solemnly consider that God delights to be stiled the "Prince of Peace," and "King of Salem," that is, King of Peace; and the Spirit is a "Spirit of peace." The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, etc. (Gal. v. 22). Oh! why then should not the saints be children of peace? Certainly men of fiery, froward spirits cannot have the sweet evidence of their interest in the God of Peace, in the Prince of Peace, and in the Spirit of Peace, as those precious souls have who follow after the things that make for love and peace. The very name of peace is sweet and comfortable; the fruits and effects thereof pleasant and profitable, more to be desired than innumerable triumphs: it is a blessing that ushers in a multitude of comforts.

Peace and love among the saints is that which will secure them and their mercies at home, yea, it will multiply them, and engage the God of mercy to crown them with the choicest blessings: it will render them terrible, invincible, and successful abroad; love and peace among the saints will put the counsels of their enemies to a stand, and render all their enterprises abortive; it is that which doth most weaken their hands, disappoint their hopes, and bring them down.

Remedy VI. Make conscience of maintaining peace with God. Ah, christians! I am afraid that your remissness herein has occasioned much of that bitterness, and caused many of those divisions which are among you. You have not endeavored as you should to maintain peace with God; and therefore it is that you have so dreadfully broken peace among yourselves. The Lord hath promised that "when a man's ways please him, he will make his enemies be at peace with him." How much more, then, would God make the children of peace to keep peace among themselves, if their ways did but please him! All creatures are at his command. Laban followed Jacob with one troop, Esau met him with another—both with hostile intentions; but Jacob's ways pleasing the Lord, he by his mighty power so orders it that Laban leaves him and Esau meets him, both with a kiss; he hath an oath of friendship of one, tears of the other, and peace with both.

Remedy VII. Dwell much upon that near relation and union there is between you. This consideration had great influence upon Abraham's heart. "And Abraham said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee; and between my herdsmen and thy herdsmen, for we are brethren." That is a sweet word in the Psalmist, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to live together in unity!" And as they are brethren, so are they fellow-members. "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." And again: "We are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." Shall the members of the natural body be serviceable and useful one to another, and shall the members of this spiritual body cut and destroy one another? It is against the laws of nature for the natural members to wound one another? And is it not much more against the law of nature and grace for the members of Christ's glorious body to do so? And as you are all fellow-members, so you are all fellow-soldiers under the same captain of salvation, the Lord Jesus, fighting against the world, the flesh and the devil. And as you are fellow-soldiers, so are you fellow-sufferers under the same enemies, the devil and the world. And as you are fellow-sufferers, so are you fellow-travelers towards the land of Canaan, the new Jerusalem that is above. "Here we have no abiding city, but we look for one to come." The heirs of heaven are strangers on earth. And as you are fellow-travelers, so are you fellow-heirs of the same crown and inheritance.

Remedy VIII. Dwell upon the miseries of discord. Dissolution is the daughter of dissension. And how doth the name and the way of Christ suffer by the discord of saints! How are many that are entering on the ways of God hindered and grieved, and the mouths of the wicked opened, and their hearts hardened against God and his ways, by the discord of his people! Remember the disagreement of saints is the devil's triumph; and is it not a sad thing for christians to give Satan cause to triumph? It was a notable saying of one, "Take away strife, and call back peace, lest you lose a man, your friend, and the devil, your enemy, rejoice over you both."

Remedy IX. Seriously consider, that it is no disgrace to be first to seek peace and reconciliation, but rather an honor. Abraham was older and more worthy than Lot, both in respect of grace and nature also (for he was Lot's uncle), and yet he first sought peace of his inferior, this hath God recorded to his honor. O how doth the God of peace by his spirit and his messengers, pursue after peace with poor sinners! God first proclaims peace to us: "Now, then, we are ambassadors of Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." God's grace first comes down to us, and who can resist such blessed and bleeding condescension, but souls in whom Satan, the god of this world, reigns indeed? God is the injured party, and yet he first seeks peace with us. "I said, Behold me, behold me, unto a nation that was not called by my name." How does the richness and freeness of his grace break forth and shine upon poor souls! When a man goes from the sun of righteousness, even then the beams of his love and mercy follow us. Christ first sent to Peter who had denied him, and the rest who had forsaken him: "Go your way, and tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him, as he said unto you." Ah, souls! it is not a low, but a God-like action, when we are wronged by others, to be first in seeking after other's peace; such works show that God is with a man's spirit. Christians, it is not matter of liberty, whether you will or will not seek after peace; but it is matter of duty that lies upon you—you are bound by express precepts to follow after peace; and though it may seem to fly from you, yet you must pursue after it. "Follow peace with all men and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Peace and holiness are to be pursued with the greatest eagerness that can be imagined. "Depart from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it." The Hebrew word that is here rendered "seek," signifies to seek earnestly, vehemently, affectionately, studiously, industriously. "And pursue it." That Hebrew word signifies earnestly to pursue, being a metaphor taken from the eagerness of wild beasts or ravenous fowls, which will run or fly both fast and far rather than be disappointed of their prey. The Apostle presses the same duty upon the Romans: "Let us follow after the things that make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another." Ah! you forward, ill-tempered christians, can you look upon these commands of God without tears and blushing?

Remedy X. is for saints to join and walk in the ways of grace and holiness so far as they agree making the word of God their only touchstone and judge of their actions. That is sweet advice the apostle gives: "I press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded; and if anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you. Nevertheless, whereunto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing." Christians, Zion loses much, and you lose much, and Satan gains advantage by this that you do not, that you will not walk lovingly together, so far as you conscientiously may, in the ways of God. It is your sin and shame that you do not, that you will not pray, and hear, and confer, and mourn together, etc., because that in some less things you are not agreed. What folly and madness it is in those, whose way of a hundred miles, fourscore and nineteen lie together, yet they will not walk in company, because they cannot walk the other mile together; yet such is the folly and madness of many christians in these days, who will not do many things they may do, because they cannot do everything they should do. I fear God will whip them into a better temper before he hath done with them; he will break their bones and pierce their hearts, but he will cure them of this malady. And be sure you make the word the only touchstone and judge of all persons and actions. "To the law and the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." It is best to make that the judge of all men and things now, that all shall be judged by in the latter day. "The word (saith Christ) that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." Make not your dim light, notions, and opinions the judge of men's actions, but still judge by rule, and plead, "It is written."

When a vain, importunate man cried out in contest with a holy man, "Hear me! hear me!" the good man answered, "Neither do you hear me, nor I thee: but let us both hear the apostle." Constantine in all the disputes before him with the Arians, would always call for the word of God, as the only way, if not to convert, yet to stop their mouths.

Remedy XI. Be earnest in self-judging. "For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged." Were christians' hearts more employed in judging and condemning themselves, they would not be so apt to judge and censure others, nor be so bitter against those who differ from them. There are no souls so fearful to judge others as those who most judge themselves: they are always careful to make a right judgment of men and things. They tremble to think, speak, or do evil against anyone. They always put the best construction, and give the most favorable interpretation of men and things, because they are acquainted with their own weaknesses and frailties. I have one request to make of you who often judge of other men's state, but never of your own, and often rashly and falsely: Dwell every morning a little upon the following scriptures: "Judge not, that ye be not judged; for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." "Judge not according to appearance, but judge righteous judgment. Let not him that eateth not, judge him that eateth; for God hath received him." Judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will manifest the counsels of the hearts; and then shall every man have praise of God."

Remedy XII. Above all, labor to be clothed with humility (1 Pet. v. 5). Humility makes a man peaceable among brethren, fruitful in well doing, cheerful in suffering, and constant in holy walking. Humility fits us for the highest services we owe to Christ and yet will not neglect the lowest service to the meanest saint. Humility can feed upon the meanest dish, and yet it is maintained by the choicest delicacies as God, Christ, and glory. Humility will make a man bless him that curses him, and pray for those who persecute him. An humble heart is an habitation for God, a scholar for Christ, a companion of angels, a preserver of grace, and meet for glory. Humility is the nurse of our graces, the preserver of our mercies, and the great promoter of holy duties. There are three things humility cannot find on this side heaven. It cannot find fulness in the creature, nor sweetness in sin nor life in an ordinance without Christ. And there are three things an humble man always finds on this side heaven: an empty soul, a full Christ, and every mercy and duty sweet wherein God is enjoyed. Humility can weep over other men's weaknesses, and joy and rejoice over their graces (1 Thes. i. 2-6). Humility will make a man quiet and contented in the meanest condition, and keep him from envying other men's prosperity. Humility honors those that are strong in grace, and puts two hands under those that are weak. Humility makes a man richer than other men, and teaches him to judge himself the poorest among men. Humility will see but little at home. Ah, christians! through faith be the champion, and love the nurse of grace, yet humility is its beautifier; it casts a general glory upon all the graces in the soul. Did christians more abound in humility, they would be less bitter and froward, and more gentle and meek in their spirits and practices. Humility will make a man have high thoughts of others, and low thoughts of himself; it will make him see much glory and excellency in others and much baseness and sinfulness in himself. "I judge," saith an humble soul, "it is well with these christians now, but it will be far better with them hereafter. They are now upon the borders of the new Jerusalem, and it will be but as a day before they slide into it." An humble person is more willing publicly to claim God, heaven, Christ, and every new covenant blessing, for other gracious persons than for himself. Were christians more humble, there would be less unhallowed fire, and more warmth of love among them, than there now is.— Selected.

Dear Brother Gold:

I feel constrained to send you a few lines today. As I sat in Tarboro church yesterday and listened to your preaching I had such a feeling in my soul of the Lord's great goodness to me, of his sweet love, of his majesty and power. I seemed to realize that God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. So great are these wonders sometimes that they seem past believing.

My mind was carried back to the time I lived in Montgomery county, before I came to this section of the state. I remember so well reading the Landmark of Mar. 15, 1902, at the house I was then staying. The people were not Baptists nor could I hear of any in that locality. In that number of the Landmark is reprinted your letter to Dr. Hooper, giving your reasons for leaving the Missionaries. I enjoyed reading it very much and felt there was so much in what you wrote I could hear bear witness to that. I longed to meet you and tell you how much good the reading of your experience did me.

When I came to Tarboro I did not know you preached here, in fact I did not know anything about Primitive Baptists and then when I heard you preach there seemed nothing for me. I was shut up in my soul's feelings and could not come forth. I have thought sometimes why did not Joseph make himself known to his brethren the first time they went to buy corn. The time had not come. So the Lord's people now have to wait until he makes himself known unto them. They often long to go into his presence and to realize their relationship to him, but he waits to be gracious. One says, he tarries oft until men are faint and comes at evening late. As I sat in church yesterday I felt how good God had been to me. He had heard and answered my poor prayers and given me more than I ever expected. I felt this especially when you asked me to talk some.

Dear brother, how unworthy I feel of your love and esteem, also of all the brothers and sisters' kind attentions. I felt so cast down all last week, especially on Saturday, but on Sunday morning as I walked to church with Brother Bradley these words sweetly dropped into my soul, "But unto you that fear my name shall the Son of righteousness arise with healing wings." I thought the natural sun shone brightly and warmed the earth with its beams, made it bud and bring forth fruit, etc., but this Sun of righteousness how much brighter when it shines on our poor benighted souls and how rich the fruit it brings forth, how sweet to our taste of joy, peace and love. But it is always dark before the sun rises and it is so dark sometimes. And then this sun only rises on those that fear his name.

The natural sun shines on everybody, the just and unjust, the righteous and the wicked; but the world dead in trespasses and sins never see a ray of this glorious sun of righteousness until God brings them out of nature's darkness, and God's people do not always see the sun that warms their souls and drives away their darkness. But when he rises, oh how sweet his beams, how our hearts are melted sometimes, and we think of that glorious morning which shall be without clouds when we shall all enjoy this shining forever and ever.

I tried to talk a little after you had gone, but I feel so unworthy and so empty I cannot understand how anything I can say can be of any comfort to God's dear people; but I love them. I love his precious name and love his ways. I have sometimes proved them to be ways of pleasantness and peace. I have had many ups and downs in my life, both natural and spiritual, but how good God is. I felt this morn- the Psalmist words suited my case.

"Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men." I felt a little of the love of God shed abroad in my heart. "Oh the rich wonders of his love; how high, how deep it rolls." Its fountain springs in heaven above, its stream revives our drooping souls."

Dear brother, does not your soul droop sometimes when you feel sin and guilt upon your conscience, and sometimes because of the roughness of the wilderness way do you not long for another sip of this water which is so refreshing to our weary souls? I hope the Lord will bless and sustain you and continue to make you a blessing to his people, and may your last days be your best days.

I feel God has been so good to me in giving me so many friends. I did not know whether the Lord had a people in this country or not. How many times I begged the Lord to guide me before I left my beloved England, and if he had a people to bring me among them, and now I feel sure I am among them. But I did not think I could speak to them. How small my knowledge is, and my understanding seems to be so dark in the things of God. I sometimes think that none of the Lord's people ever travel such a strange way as I do. I must conclude, wishing you every blessing,

Your brother in hope,
E. C. STONE.

Tarboro, N. C.

(Brother Stone is a native of England and is now in Tarboro, N. C., where he is at work. I trust he may find a pleasant home with our people among whom he now sojourns. P. D. G.)

Dear Brother Gold:

It is seldom that I am allowed to eat honey out of the flinty rock as I did this morning, when I read these words: "Jordan is driven back, but we must reach the place before we can see it. He that loveth is born of God. He that feels he is vile is one near the Lord." I was at once in the mount of the Lord and saw the Jehovah Jireh. That altar is yet there in that holy mount.

The Lord restored my soul and led me to the fountain of living water and by the still waters and made me to lie down in green pastures. Surely all that has ever befallen me are mercies from God. If he smite me it is in tender love and shall not break my head but it shall be a pleasant oil healing the wounds.

I am too full now to say more.

I. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

In Gen. 4th chapter, Adam and Eve being turned out of the Garden of Eden corresponds to or foreshadows the time in our christian experience when still being in the womb of nature, we are quickened into life and the Mosaic law put into our minds.

There is a great travel between the conception and the birth of a child of God, as we cannot enter into the gospel, or the promised land until we have reached the end of the law. Moses (the law) must die before Christ becomes our leader.

But we have life and are told to till the ground or keep the commandments; the ground being a figure of the natural man. The ground was cursed because the man hearkened unto his wife. It is to bring forth thorns and thistles unto him and only through great suffering will he eat his bread. She the natural man conceives of her husband, the spiritual man, and bears Cain or the letter which killeth. Again she bear Abel or he who is to be born again. The first a tiller of the ground, that is, sowing to the deeds of the flesh; the second a keeper of sheep which represents the things pertaining to life.

In process of time we come in the letter, bringing in the deeds of the flesh, an offering unto God and are rejected because sin lieth at the door. The spirit also brings an offering of that which the Lord has made him a keeper and the Lord has respect unto his own.

Then the sin in our flesh talks to the spirit in the field of the mind and sin riseth up gainst his brother and slays him. The body receives the spirit which is the life as the ground received Abel's blood, which was his life. And as the life of the wheat comes up from the ground, in the new body, so do we take part in the first resurrection, being slain by sin which killeth the body but cannot the life thereof. The letter killeth but the spirit maketh alive.

The spirit maketh intercessions and the woman conceives again and she bear Seth. When Seth hath borne fruit then begins man to call upon the name of the Lord. After sin slays the man, who is to be born again? He is cursed and made a fugitive and a vagabond within us and we no more yield our strength unto him. He is banished from the presence of the Lord and is only permitted to live in the land of Nod or in the natural man which is the desolate woman, who has many more children than she who hath a husband. This desolate woman's children are later destroyed by the same flood which saves the unpolluted posterity of Seth who are shut in with Jesus in the ark or covenant of grace, of which I will try to write later.

Yours in christian love,
KATE GREEN HESS.

THE GLORY OF GOD'S GRACE.

By the late Mr. W. Gadsby.

"To the praise of the glory of his grace."—Eph. i. 6.

Perhaps here is a poor sinner, trembling before God, with guilt charged upon his conscience, and justice appearing ready to cut him down as a God-dishonoring rebel; but O how blessed to see Christ stand forth and say, "Charge the sinner's guilt upon me; place it to my account." "But," says the soul, "I am such a vile, base, ungodly, sinner. "I died for the ungodly," says Christ; "let all thy vile-ness be placed to my account." "But I have sinned with a high hand and an outstretched arm." "Place it to my account, for I am a Saviour, and a great one," says the dear Redeemer. "But I have even done violence to conscience in order to conduct sin greedily." "I bore the whole," says Christ. "I put it away by the sacrifice of myself; finished it, and made an end of it, and brought in an everlasting righteousness; and, in rich free grace, I place my glorious righteousness to thy account, and thou art made the righteousness of God in me." Thus grace imputes God's people's sin to Christ, and righteousness of Christ to them. This is the glory of grace. The son makes the sinner free, and he is free indeed; and when the Lord reveals this to his heart, it is a sweet reviving cordial to his poor wretched conscience. This, then, is one part of the glory of grace.

But we proceed to observe, that it is the glory of grace to bring the prisoner out of prison, and set him at large. By nature, as sinners against God, we are all shut up under the law, and under the power of unbelief, as in a prison (Gal. iii. 23); and when the Lord quickens the soul and brings the sinner to feel what he is, and where he is, he finds he is in a most dismal prison, shut up as a criminal debtor and a vile sinner; nor has he it in his power to get out. He may hear of and see others walking at large, but that only adds to his misery; for his guilty chains are heavy, and a cursing law binds him fast down, and he expects nothing but a just reward for his vile doings, which is, for justice to execute upon him the righteous vengeance of heaven. He feels in his very soul that sentence of death is righteously passed upon him, for a court has been set up in his conscience; a fair trial has taken place, and he has been obliged to plead guilty to the dreadful charges laid against him. But just as he is ready to sink back into despair, the Holy Ghost puts a cry into his soul and gives him a small gleam of hope, and he with his whole soul cries, "Let the sighing of the prisoner come before thee" (Psa. lxxix. 11). And here he stands shut up at the bar of his own conscience, with a small gleam of hope, almost smothered with a thousand fears; but when he considers his whole case, he finds a little relief that he is permitted and is able to breathe out a sigh for mercy. At this time he hears the dear Lord saying, "Deliver him from going down into the pit; I have found a ransom." This revives his hope, and he begins to feel a little strength. The Lord appears, and speaks with that glorious voice which is powerful and full of majesty, and says, "For the Lord heareth the poor and despiseth not his prisoners." The soul is, in a blessed measure, set at large, and in very deed feels a little of the glory couched in that precious portion of God's word in Isaiah lxi. 1-3. The prison doors are thrown open, and the prisoner brought forth to sing the wonders of God's grace. He feels that Christ was given as a covenant to the people, to bring the prisoners from the prison. And this is a blessed jubilee. He feels that his debts are discharged, and all law demands cleared. Unbelief is obliged to give place to the power of God's voice, and divine faith in the soul, under the secret power of God the Holy Ghost, sings, "He brought me out of darkness and the shadow of death, and brake my bands in sunder." Faith, love, prayer, and praise, but more praise than prayer are now brought into sweet exercise; and faith is led to discover that this great deliverance is obtained by the blood of the covenant. Christ lives and reigns in the conscience, and the believer crowns him Lord of all, singing with a solemn, indescribable pleasure, "He hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God." Then, indeed, he feels what it is to have liberty proclaimed to his poor captive soul, and to have beauty of the Lord God put on him, and the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. All the powers of his soul are engaged in blessing and praising the Lord, and he can truly say, "Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing; thou hast put off my sackcloth and girded me with gladness."

The poor soul does not dream of being ever taken captive again; but by and by, through the power of unbelief a tempting devil, and the pride and filth in his old man, he will, if he lives long, find his harp out of tune, and his soul brought into bondage. Darkness envelopes his soul, and a thousand foes within and without beset him round, nor can he feel sweet freedom with the Lord. David's prayer, in many respects, suits him, and he cries out, "Bring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name." The Lord, in his own blessed time, is graciously pleased to hear his cry, to bring him again to his sweet enjoyment of his love and loveliness, and to triumph in him as the God of his salvation.

It is to the glory of grace that it communicates divine holiness to the unholy, and makes them a holy people (1 Pet. ii. 9). God, in his rich grace, communicates a holy life, a holy light, a holy love, a holy humility, a holy meekness. In a word, he makes them partakers of his holiness (Heb. xii. 10). God's holy kingdom is set up and maintained in the soul by the power of God, and stands in God's power. It contains in it the riches of the glory of God's inheritance in the saints, and is maintained there by the exceeding greatness of the power of God. God stamps his image upon the soul, and the believer is made a partaker of the new man, which, after God, is created in righteousness and true holiness, and in real spiritual knowledge, after the image of him that created him. The real saint is made a partaker of the divine nature; and as God shines in his soul and gives him vital faith to behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord, he is changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord. And this glass, in which the glory of God is seen, which produces such a blessed effect, is the Lord Jesus Christ, and is looked into as God shines in our hearts. As it is written, "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Now here is true holiness, and as the Lord manifestly lives, and shines, and rules, and reigns in the soul, the believer enjoys real holiness, Christ dwells in his spiritual family, the hope of glory; and the Lord both dwells in and walks in his people (2 Cor. vi. 16), and makes them partakers of that wisdom which is from above, which is first pure. They are made wise unto salvation, and the Lord purifieth their hearts by a vital faith in the glorious "mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ."

One branch of the prayer of the dear redeemer for his people was, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." And honors crown thy blessed brow, he adds, "For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth." The blessed spirit produces a divine change in their souls, and they are "born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." This divine change is entirely of God, and not of man (Jno. i. 13; iii. 8). By the glorious power of God they are vitally engrafted into Christ, the living vine and the Father purgeth them, that they may bring forth real spiritual fruit. Christ, the incarnate word, dwells in them, and says, "Now ye are clean, through the word which I have spoken unto you;" and, as they abide in Christ, and Christ abides in them, they bring forth fruit to the glory of God: "For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one." And thus, by virtue of their union with Christ, and being made partakers of him, they possess real holiness. And all is to the glory of grace.

It is to the glory of grace that the Lord will chasten his people for their sins; not in vindictive wrath, but in love; for as many as the Lord loves, he rebukes and chastens. When the dear child of God is under God's chastening hand, he is often ready to say, "I cannot be a real Christian, or I could not be so exercised. If the Lord loved me, surely he would not try me within and without, appear very gloomy, and hurricanes of various kinds come thicker and thicker every day; therefore the poor soul considers that the Lord does not love him as one of his own dear children. But, poor soul, you cannot be more mistaken. Read the word of the Lord: "And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children. My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." You mistake the design of the Lord; for they are "bastards, and not sons," whom the Lord does not chastise. Suppose your son and a neighbor's were to quarrel in the street, and do mischief, which of these you would take your own lad, and lay the rod upon him. And would that be a proof that you did not love him? No; but just the reverse; it would be a proof that you do love him; and though every stroke you give him would go to the heart, still you feel yourself bound, in love to him, to chastise him; and if he were very unruly, you would be ready to say, "This lad will break my heart if he goes on this way." The Lord gives proof of his love in not suffering sin to rest upon you, nor you to rest in it; but as a father he will, in love to your souls, chastise you. Bless his precious name, having loved his own, that were in the world, he loved them unto the end. And this is to the glory of grace.—Selected.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Your answer to Elder T. J. Bazemore in Landmark of March 1, 1909, sounds like my heavenly Father's trumpet. It has a sweet, ringing sound. Yes, a clear, distinct, certain sound.

Away with the so-called progressive things. No place for them in the church of Jesus Christ. They are all right in Babylon. Yes, just the place for the organ where the preaching, praying and singing is all mechanical. The organ has just as much knowledge of spiritual worship as most of its worshippers—preachers included.

Brother Gold, I love you and love to hear you preach, wish I could hear you some more. But I am a sinner, a very bad man, and I do not think I will ever be a good man, no never. I was born a sinner, have been a sinner all my life, and expect to die a sinner. If I have a hope it is Christ. But have I one? God knows.

Excuse me for intruding on your time. I am not worthy to say anything on the glorious subject of religion, so I will stop. This is from nobody but

D. M. VAIL.

Elder P. D. Gold, Dear Brother in Christ I hope:

I will try to write a few of the Lord's dealings with me if he will bless me with a good mind to do so.

I once hated the Baptists the worst of all people and I thought they were the worst people in the world, but now I think if I know myself they are the best. I went so far as to say that if I was ever fit to join any church it would never be the Primitive Baptist. When I received a hope in Christ I tried to go to every denomination except the Baptists but none would satisfy me, so I tried to pray to the Lord to lead me in the right way. And it came to me to offer to the church at Wolf Island. So he made me willing, but I had no idea they would take me. I felt too mean to be with such good folks as I thought they were then and are now. I love them all and can see Christ in the brethren and sisters, but I feel to be the least of all his sheep if one at all.

I will close and if there is one word of comfort in these lines give God the praise. This leaves us well as common and I hope it will be find you and Sister Gold well. Pray for me when it goes well with you.

Your brother I hope in Christ.

"LEST."

That is, lest ye fail of the grace of God to see the Lord, and plant roots of bitterness that cause trouble and defilement.

Therefore, an apostle says, "Follow peace with all men: and holiness; without which no man shall see the Lord. Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God: lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled." Heb. 12:14, 15.

To follow peace with all men is to study, consider, endeavor, strive, and that continually, by every means of gospel law, love and obedience, to make for the things that give peace to all. So there can be no partiality or selfishness in the work. And thus we attain to holiness; that is, a legal gospel holiness; or holy in the sense of perfect gospel obedience, to which the same apostle refers when he said, "Present your bodies holy, acceptable to the Lord which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1. Showing that practical obedience to the law creates that holiness; without which no man shall see the Lord: hence in and by which we do see him. And we want to see him in proportion to our obedience to him. So that thus holy, we want to see him—we love his appearances—we desire faith to see when good comes—to see the times of refreshings from his presence—to discern him in others; and especially in our own heart working in us that which is well-pleasing to God—to will and to do his commandments. For he embodies our hope, love, faith, light and life; wisdom, strength and righteousness, and how could we bear to live this life not seeing him? Therefore, "Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God:" that is, lest failing in following peace with all, and holiness, nor seeing the Lord, you fail of this grace to God, as no more prompting, directing and sustaining you. For as not looking diligently to it, or trusting in it all your preceding work—your failure proving it—your denial has aggrieved that spirit—the same whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption to your body—has quenched that spirit, or its influence in your heart, as that you have, as said, denied—done despite its promptings; and it is now withdrawn as your divine, infallible guide that has heretofore directed you, and prevented troubles springing up from your wrong-doing.

Then, we gather that to follow peace with all, and holiness, is to see the Lord; and to see him as our infallible guide and inward spiritual monitor, as well as otherwise; and then to see him, is to have looked diligently unto him, not only to acknowledge him working in us both to will and to do, or as causing us to love, and wish to attain holiness, and giving the power to perform; but he to whom we still look lest we stray, lest any root of bitterness springing up among the brotherhood trouble us as the cause, and whereby some of them be defiled. Thus, we do not fail of the grace of God; nor, by faith, of seeing the Lord, who thus gives us the sweet experimental assurance in heart that holiness or fruit of righteousness that sows peace abroad to all men, shall harvest it at home—that they who follow after and make peace, shall in like manner obtain peace—that to follow peace with all men, and holiness, is to stand with the righteous at the harvest time of “peace sown to righteousness.”

But of all in apparent jeopardy here by a “lest,” this “grace of God” is by far the most important and to be the most diligently looked after, lest we fail of it; for failing of it we fail of all; as without it we could not follow peace or attain to holiness or prevent those dire after-consequences. Then our first and most important work in all this, is to look diligently, lest we fail of this grace of God. And which grace is given to every one eternally saved or born of God. And which grace is synonymous with ‘God working in you both to will and to do.’ And that this work, thus willed to be done, was to be performed by the hand of “you,” or the person in whom he worked the will; and that it pertained exclusively to practical gospel obedience, is made plain and undoubted by the same apostle when writing to the brethren on this obedience. He says, “As ye have always obeyed, not only in my presence, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation, with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in you.” Phil. 2:12. And which was as much as to say “continue in practical obedience to the law of Christ.” And “your own salvation” they were to work out, can be none else than our own which saves us from the terrible results of disobedience to the same in time. It is called “our common salvation” in James, as that each one in common must work his own out. And, among other things, saves us from failing of this grace of God, and the planting of roots of bitterness, etc., together from their evil consequences.

Then having this grace of God, or God in Spirit working in us to will and to do, or as giving us the desire to attain unto holiness as given to love it—and the power—as diligently looking to it—to perform it practically, with impressions and promptings in spirit directing us, it is indeed with fear and trembling that should essay to approach to it, for it is the great God working in you; hence what a fearful thing to disregard these promptings, as that it is a fearful thing to fall into his hands for such; and it is a fearful thing to turn from or deny his rule to “follow peace with all men, and holiness, lest thus grieving that spirit—thus quenching it by denial—we fail of this grace of God as bereft of it, and left to the darkness and disasters of the flesh we have served in preference. “For every disobedience shall receive a just recompence of reward.” Heb. 2:2.

Looking at it thus, how can one deliberately and knowingly deny the inward impressions and promptings of the Spirit, looking to the written law of God? In this case it is “follow peace with all, and holiness.” That this is God’s law, and that you love, and crave to attain to holiness by obedience is that it is God’s spirit prompting you. Hence, how can one come before it without fear and trembling and looking diligently to God for strength and guidance, lest they fail of this grace as withdrawn? For who would lightly or carelessly be bereft of this heart-monitor?—this infallible guide?—this only power to perform in an acceptable manner to God?—this, as it were, pillar of cloud by day, and of fire by night, to surely guide and safely lead unto the paths of peace and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord; and thus be left to darkness and the promptings of the flesh; and thus made void of the will or desire for holiness and the power to obtain it: for with the divine Spirit goes this “working to will and to do.” I repeat, how can one take such a fearful risk as to fail of this grace of God without which he can do nothing? And failing, lest his shortcomings be as planted roots of bitterness whereby many be defiled?"

But says one, "I did not know to do this, or not do that, was to deny this gracious spirit-prompting. I only know by the results that I fear I have failed of this grace of God." Then let me beg you to try the spirits—try your own—try your intention, word and act, as gauging them by the given rule to "follow peace with all men; and holiness." If they accord with this you are in the right way. For I do assure you that as to holding or losing our peace, or as working out our own salvation, in time saving us from the dire consequences of these "tests," together with all results of disobedience, this is an unspeakably important question—yes, a paramount question; and, from the fact that if you should fail of this grace of God, you will fail of all, and in all: as good and acceptable to God. Ah, then, take heed and look diligently lest you fail of it. Remember in taking heed that he that gathereth noth with Christ, scattereth abroad. Then let us remember that not to follow peace with all men is to scatter it abroad and let trouble and roots of bitterness spring up in its place. Then always in starting to say this, or do that, look closely, diligently, consider if it tends or will work for the things that make for peace—peace to all, generally, and not for this or that particular person involved, while it may disturb another—then look diligently, certainly to the grace or Spirit of God for guidance and strength to perform; for any work you cannot ask God to guide and help you in must be a wrong work. Any word, or act, or general work that follows peace, or tends to make peace with and for all men; and holiness—that is, right in itself as commanded—is a right work. Anything to the contrary is dangerous.

Then I repeat, always think—consider where this work or that step will lead, lest you fail of this grace of God: weigh your motives, search your way as a law—watch and pray so as to retain this grace, and you will never plant a root of bitterness among the brotherhood, as that you have followed peace and holiness, and the grace or spirit of God dwells in your heart.

One of the surest ways to the contrary, and most prolific of roots of bitterness, is to gather up and circulate all the evil reports against the brotherhood. One has doubtless "failed of the grace of God" to do so. And a paradox is, that they who so eagerly gather and circulate these evil reports, do in word deepest deplore their circulation. Never touch such things—never take up a reproach against your neighbor or brother, lest you fail of this grace—lest you plant roots of bitterness that bring you trouble; and whereby many thus provoked and offended retaliate in kind and thereby are themselves defiled. P.

DO WE LOVE HIS APPEARING.

"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." 2nd Cor. 5:10.

Is it to us a blessed reality that Christ shall come again? Is it to us a reality that we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ? Is it to me a reality that I must appear before the judgment seat of Christ that I may receive the things done in my body according to that I have done, whether it be good or bad? Am I so impressed with what I am doing knowing that I shall appear before the judgment seat of Christ and receive according to that which I have done? If I feel this truly I am more concerned about how I live than I am about the conduct of any other person. If I feel this truth truly I am living unto the Lord Jesus. Since I feel that I must receive according to what I have done or what is done in me, surely I desire that I may be led to do that which is right and acceptable in the sight of the Lord Jesus.

If I love the appearing of Jesus I am constrained by his love to do that which is well pleasing unto him. My desire is to please him and whatsoever I do will be to please him, knowing that nothing else can be right, and what he wills to be done is always right and acceptable unto Him. If he is my Lord and master then should I not seek to please him? How sweet is the doctrine that he works in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

How do I know when I am doing bad, or doing that which is not according to his will? Whatsoever is not of faith is sin. Faith comes by hearing. If we hear him or believe his word we have the witness of the truth in our hearts which do not then condemn us, and we have the answer of a good conscience toward God.

QUESTION.

A friend desires to know on what authority women preach.

Answer.

On man's, or the devil's; for God's word gives her no authority to preach. Christ called no woman to be an apostle. No apostle ever ordained a woman to preach. Nor is there any evidence in the New Testament that ever a woman preached by divine authority. But on the contrary, the scripture expressly forbids woman teaching or usurping authority over the man. Paul is treating of the subject of preaching, and the proper behavior of God's people see 1st. Tim. 2:17:15). He declares he is ordained a preacher and an apostle to the Gentiles. He wills that men pray everywhere lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting. Also that women adorn themselves with modest apparel, etc. Let the woman learn (not teach) in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man. The reason is here given: For Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived; but the woman being deceived was in the transgression. Woman can decoy man into trouble where she becomes leader. Her place is not there. She should be a keeper at home. She that tarries at home takes the prey. But women that gad about and want to be leaders, whether in politics, religion, or anything else, are out of place and make themselves contemptible in the eye of decency and in the judgment of wisdom, and become a snare.

The worst form of false religion is represented by a woman attired as an harlot and worshipped, or wondered after, by all the world, and she bewitches the nations with the wine of her fornication, and whoso loves wisdom escapes her meshes.

LOVE—UNWORTHINESS

Brother M. F. Randall requests my view of Solomon's Song 1:5-7.

"I am black but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun hath looked upon me; my mother's children were angry with me, they made me the keeper of the vineyards; but mine own vineyard have I not kept."

Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon: for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions."

This is the language of the spouse typical of the church, or of Solomon symbolizing Christ. There is not, it seems to me, in all the Bible any more wonderful and endearing expression of love than are employed here in the mysterious communications of wisdom. This is the song of songs, excelling all other songs, as the gospel excels all other glories, as the love of Christ and his bride is richer, deeper and more wonderful than all other loves.

The language of the spouse here, breathing forth in love-sickness the pangs of shame-facedness born of conscious unworthiness, and heightened by his glory, causing her to veil herself and shrink from publicity, sets forth the modesty of virtue, and stamps her with the seal of merit.

I am back. This is the feeling of all that know the Lord. As the sun shines in his searching glory over the soul in the chambers of the heart of the daughter of Zion, she feels her vileness. It is not as in nature when the maid holds the glass and admires her personal charms—as her vanity interprets every feature of her face as the expression of beauty, every motion of her body as the perfection of graceful movement. For the more the light of truth shines in the soul the more of its vileness is seen and felt. How black? As the tents of Kedar. They were tents spread in the desert where burning suns scorched them into blackness, and they were without beauty. Black is the figure of death and corruption, and affords no cheering scene to the eye, and no fertility or sign of life. All that is couched in the catalogue of crime is covered by the word black.

The sun hath looked on me. Why should the sun which is the fountain of light or worthiness, make one black that it looks upon? The sun true to nature never flatters, but reveals and shows objects in their true colors. In the darkness of night we cannot discriminate one object from another. Colors are not shown then. But when light is thrown on objects each is shown in its true character. So when God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, shone in our hearts it discovered to us that which we had never before seen—our own blackness. Hence we say, look not on me, for I am vile, I am black.

Yet I am comely, for the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ is reflected, and I see the king in his beauty as the chiefest among ten thousand altogether lovely. It is in the light of the Lord that we see two things, our secret sins set in the light of his countenance, and this causes us to shrink back and veil ourselves in shame. Still in his glory we shine as a diadem of beauty, as gems sparkling in the light. Hence while we are black as Kedar we are still beautiful in his light as the curtain of Solomon, and comely in his beauty, fair as the moon, clear as the sun and terrible as an army with banners.

Reflection of the sun from objects or mediums that are transparent gives forth the charms and marvelous beauty of that great fountain of light.

There is on the spouse the name of her husband, and in her is his image so that he shines forth in her and his beams of beauty are seen in her answering to his glory, and she is like him. For when the true light shines the darkness is past. What is whiter than snow? The transforming power of cold can convert water into a substance white and bright. The sun shining on this discovers no darkness in the snow. But there is still a higher medium reflecting light than snow. Air is so transparent that in it when pure you see the sun himself as he shines, and often wonderful beauty appears. But in the resurrection still more wonderfully will the spouse appear in her husband, for when we see him as he is we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Then there will be no vileness or sin, deformity or darkness in us, but we shall be that which will fully reflect the glory of Jesus.

The spouse has her lamentations though in her deformed state. "My mother's children were angry with me: they made me the keeper of the vineyards, but mine own vineyard I have not kept." The Jews were entrusted with the oracles of God, had the prophets and the worship of God committed to their keeping, were especially commanded and required to preserve the truth, and keep the vineyard. The nations around hated the Jews and envied them: but the Jews did not keep their own vineyard. They utterly failed to keep the law or justice and judgment. They wrought no deliverance in the earth. When one is convicted of sin he is brought to see that though he once considered himself as superior in righteousness to others, and possessed a surplus, yet now he sees he has never kept his own vineyard, nor preserved his own purity. He now feels that all others have cause to hate him, and to be angry with him. He once boasted of his excellent goodness, now his case is worse than that of any other. There are none even among my own mother's children that care for me. I cannot look to man, not even to my mother's children for help or pity.

What does the spouse do? Harken O daughter. Forget thy father's house, and thine own people. We must forsake all, yea even hate our own life if we follow Jesus. It is then that the king shows that he greatly desires our beauty. Her language is to her Lord and husband.

"Tell me O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon?" Love to her Lord constrains her to cry unto him, and this love is sharpened by her distressed condition. Distress sharpens the appetite for the bread of heaven. Weariness impels one to strive for rest. Destitution quickens the search for the cover and quiet of the cool shade at noon, for the searching rays of the sun are dreaded by one who has been in the desert. A taste of the sweet morsels in the shepherd's hand will cause the sheep to long for the goodly tents of Israel, and for the quiet resting places of his well-fed flocks.

The child of God knows that there is a true church of Jesus Christ, and a favored flock of God fed with his own blood and nourished with good doctrine. This people his famishing soul longs for. He does at times get so hungry. His heart and flesh cry out for the living God. As the hart pants after the water-brook so his soul pants after God. Enough of the good things of the kingdom have been given him to teach him that eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. He wants to find where Jesus feeds his flock, and causes them to rest at noon, or in the heat and burden of the day. Not as those who loudly profess their ability to work for the Lord are those favored poor. No, but they want to follow the shepherd where he feeds his flocks, and leads them beside the still waters, and makes them to lie down in green pastures. While there are those that go about proclaiming the wonderful things they are doing to make sheep, these feeble and hungry ones want tokens of love, and handfuls of purpose dropped for them; that they may feed and rest with their beloved flock. Then too these needy ones are always feeling that others are nearer the Lord than they are, and like little children they want to get nearer their beloved and be separated from idols.

The answer to this enquiring soul is, "If thou know not, O thou fairest among women, Go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock." Thy way is by the footsteps of the flock. See how they have gone. Look at their footsteps. One of the surest marks of the flock is their walk or footsteps. The way they take, the life they live shows what they love, and where they have gone. Follow with them.

Feed thy kids beside the shepherd's tents. The kids are the young hungry ones of the flock, the little ones of lambs or goats. Both were clean beasts under the law. It means the young—the little weaklings, and represents this—that the hungry soul seeking the true church of God follows where the shepherds have gone before.

The way they should go is the way the prophets and apostles have gone, who are the shepherds, beside whose tents they will find quiet, resting dwelling places. These shepherds drop many a sweet, good morsel, by direction of the Chief Shepherd to feed the hungry kids, and satisfy many desires of their souls and they will receive many heart cheering tokens of love from the best of all husbands, Jesus who is the Chief Shepherd.

P. D. G

WHAT KINSHIP.

Are God's children all brethren, whether they are Jews or Gentiles, whether they lived before Christ came or since his resurrection? They are all brethren and when they pass out of time or give up the ghost they are gathered unto their people.

Often we notice just before the death of one he speaks of his people who have gone before and calls for them. It has always been a good mark if one loves his people, his wife and children, his parents, his brethren. There is a home feeling with his kindred, and home is a castle, a resting place to such people. A man that does not think well of his home is not girded up to the manhood of a good citizen.

But the mansion or home of God's children is not on earth. They have no certain dwelling place here. Jesus said, I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also. Ye are come (already come) to the spirits of just men made perfect—to the spirits of such men as Abraham and Job and others who have gone before, and ye dwell with these. We sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. For there is only one family of God, part of which is in heaven, and part on earth, and part yet unborn. The prayer of Jesus is that all that Father hath given unto him shall be with him to behold his glory, and Jesus shall say Here am I and the children which thou hast given me.

When Joseph came unto the time of his departure he gave to Israel a commandment concerning his bones. They should all be carried up from Egypt. Joseph was embalmed in Egypt and his bones were preserved until their time of departure from that country, and they were carried up to the land of Canaan and there they were preserved.

Ezekiel is carried to a valley of dry bones and very dry, yet when Ezekiel saw the valley full of dry bones and very dry, and the bones were so scattered that not two of the bones were together, and the Lord God said to Ezekiel, Son of Man, can these bones Live? The answer of Ezekiel was, O Lord, thou knowest. There was no doubt in the mind of Ezekiel that God knew. For known unto him are all his works from the beginning. The word of God brings each bone to his fellow bone, or to his proper place. The affinity or kinship of these bones is shown by the power that brings each one to its proper pace. There is perfect rest in this completeness. For when the work is finished there is nothing more to be done.

These bones constitute the whole house of Israel, the entire family of God. In the resurrection each one shall come to his place, and there shall not be a broken bone, nor a marred member, nor a single one not in its proper place, and there shall be no schism in the body.

"O happy day when saints shall meet
To part no more, the thought is sweet."
Love is the golden chain that shall bind this happy family.

When the children of God meet together now it is sweet as they speak one to another, and feel the chords of love drawing them together.

Here on earth as pilgrims and strangers we wander without a dwelling place or a home, often solitary and desolate, hungry and thirsty, the heart crying out for sympathy and help, for pity and relief, not knowing how to go in this dreadful wilderness; but then in the resurrection we shall know as we are known, and shall be forever satisfied in the home of the soul in the presence of our Father, and shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

DAVID L. WELLS.

This dear brother was the son of Stephen and Martha Wells. He was born Feb. 8, 1857. His parents died when he was quite small and he was raised by his grandfather. He grew up with a determined mind and selfwill which disposition followed him through life. He first married Mollie A. Smith by whom he had two children, a son and a daughter. This marriage was on the 6th of February, 1878. His wife died August 18, 1880. On August 29th, 1881, he married Martha F. Smith, sister to his first wife. To them were six children, two sons and four daughters. One son died in infancy. His second wife died February 2, 1899. On August 18, 1899 he married Mrs. Eugenia D. Smith, sister-in-law to the first and second wives. She survives him, together with seven children and a number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. His end came very suddenly and unexpectedly on Saturday, March 27, 1909. He had been plowing and had just removed the harness from his horse when he said, "I am getting right blind," and he began to sit down or to fall. The young man who was with him took hold of him and let him down and he was dead. The immediate cause of his death was apoplexy.

He was a very persevering man and an excellent provider, and left his family a good home and plenty to live on.

He was received into the fellowship of the church at Prospect Hill at the April meeting in 1887 and was baptized by Elder F. L. Oakley. He was firm in his faith and was faithful to attend his church meetings. He was ordained a deacon in the church before I went there but becoming satisfied that he did not possess the necessary qualifications he resigned about three years ago. When he did this he asked the brethren to let him have a little place to remain at their feet but that he did not feel to fill any office in the church. He was always ready to help bear the church expenses and to contribute to the support of his pastor which place I have occupied for more than twelve years and know whereof I speak. He was one of my best friends and since it became necessary for me to be conveyed from the depot to the meeting house and back, a distance of fifteen miles, he has always borne his part of the burden. On the 3rd Sunday in March he conveyed me from his home to Hillsboro and he was especially gifted on that day to talk on the things that pertain to the kingdom of the Lord. When we got to the depot and were about to part he said, "Pray for me and my wife and children that the Lord may keep us." These were his last words to me. My next news was a telegram on the night of the 27th calling me to his funeral. There I saw the largest congregation that I ever saw at a burial and everyone appeared to realize that a great and good man had fallen. There we laid him to rest till the day of the Lord when he shall awake in his likeness.

We pray that the Lord will bless his bereaved companion and children and give them that same living faith that kept him in all his sorrows and trials.

By his devoted pastor,
L. H. HARDY.

BETSEY CRISP.

It is with a sad heart I make the attempt to write the obituary of my dear Aunt Betsey. She was the daughter of R. J. and Lucinda Lewis and was born Dec. 31, 1882, and died Dec. 24, 1904, making her stay on earth 23 years, 11 months and 24 days.

She was a kind and loving woman. When she was about seventeen years of age she was taken sick and never really recovered. In Jan., 1902, she was married to J. R. Crisp, unto which union was born one son, who was only four months old when she died.

Four weeks before her death she went to her mother's on a visit and was never able to get back home. She never united with any church but was a firm believer in the Primitive Baptists. The last year of her life she was a great sufferer, but she bore her sufferings with the greatest patience I ever saw. Amid all her sufferings she was never heard to complain.

She leaves to mourn their loss an aged father, mother, five brothers, five sisters, her devoted husband and darling little baby, besides a host of relatives and friends. But we do not mourn as those without hope, as we believe our loss is her eternal gain. "But the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." May we all be prepared to meet our beloved ones in the prayer the unworthy writer.

Her devoted niece,
LELAH PARKER.

BEDE ANN McCASKEY.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth, yea saith the Spirit that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

The subject of this sketch was born the 21st day of March, 1831, in Martin county, N. C. In the year of our Lord 1848 she married Eli McCaskey, by which union was born six children, five of which are living. She joined the church at Spring Green, Martin county, in 1851 and died the 8th of January, 1909.

She lost her dear husband during the winter of 1865 and the care of all her little children was thrown upon her. She labored with untiring zeal to raise them honorable men and women, and all of them will love her as long as they are clothed in their right minds.

The writer of this sketch formed her acquaintance in 1865 and from that time until she passed away he knew her and loved her as a devoted Primitive Baptist. She had a bright hope in a crucified Saviour and longed for the coming rest. She bore her afflictions with great patience and told her loved ones that all was well. We believe our loss is her eternal gain, and we sorrow not as those who have no hope.

Her children sent for the writer of this sketch when she passed over the river and I saw her poor body laid low in the ground to await the resurrection morn. I did all I could to comfort the broken hearted relations, believing she was enjoying the bright mansions of glory on high. I hope that God's richest blessings may rest temporarily and spiritually on her dear relations so as to make them wise unto salvation in this world and eternally happy in the world to come.

Written by request of her children.

N. H. HARRISON.

WILLIAM C. BOOTHE.

Mr. William Boothe departed this life at his home near Floyd, Va., Dec. 15, 1907, in his 77th year. He was twice married and to the first union were born four children, three girls and one boy who mourn his sad departure. To the second union was born one girl, Esther, who was married to James Holt. Esther and her husband lived with Mr. Boothe and during his illness did all that loving hands could do but they could not stay the icy hand of death. His race is run, his toll and strife is over, and we hope he has reached his happy home above to reign with God forever and forever more.

He was a member of the Primitive Baptist church at Salem, having joined the first Saturday in August, 1907, and was baptized the second Sunday at Poffs Mill. He attended church that day which was the last time. He went home and never came out again. He was confined to his bed about a month and died with cancer of the stomach after great sufferings which he bore patiently. He said his only regret at leaving this world was leaving his wife and daughter. The latter was confined to her room when he died and she only lived until the coming March, 1908, when she followed him to the grave. We hope she has gone to heaven with him. She said just before her death that he had called her and that a week before her death she was with him and shaking hands with him. That make us believe she is with him in that happy home above.

We confidently believe he has been released from all his sufferings to a new life of joy, peace and happiness with saints gone before and now rejoices with them in heaven where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more. I visited him several times during his affliction and it seemed he had the greatest amount of patience of anyone I ever knew. His heart and mind were led on to the love of God and he seemed to be perfectly reconciled to God and he wanted God's will to be done, not his. He delighted in going to church and seemed to enjoy preaching so much. He seemed to feed so sweetly on crumbs that fell from his master's table. But now his faith has turned into sight and his hope into possession.

Children, grandchildren and friends, I hope we may follow his bright example and be blessed to meet him in heaven.

"A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we love is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Not long ago he filled his place
And sat with us in love;
But he has run his mortal race,
And never can return.

Perhaps our time will be as short;
Our days may fill as fast,
Oh Lord impress the solemn thought
That this may be your last.

We cannot tell who next may fall
Beneath thy chastening rod,
One must be first, but its coming to all;
So prepare to meet your God.

MRS. JULIET S. CARNAHAN.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Sirs:—I write to ask you to drop from your subscription list the name of Mrs. Juliet S. Carnahan, of Hiwassee, Va. I suppose she had about paid up to the present time, if not let us know. As she was known personally to both of you, you will be interested in knowing about her death, which occurred on March 1, in the 84th year of her age, after only three days' illness.

It was comforting to us, her children and grandchildren, around her bed to know that she did not suffer; and comforting also to remember the years of conscientious Christian living and the hope she so often expressed.

We are better for the example she set, of strict performance of her duties as they came to her. Left a widow during the war, she showed the most remarkable courage and ability in raising her family, in keeping them together in spite of the hard times so many knew here in the south. In those days her life was very hard and although a great worker she always managed to be in her place at church on meeting day and to keep good reading matter, books and papers and to have time to read after night usually.

You Primitive Baptists have few more devoted members. She loved the brethren and the church.

Her loving daughter-in-law,
FANNIE CARNAHAN.

The next session of the Staunton River Union will meet, the Lord willing at the church at Strawberry the fifth Friday, Saturday and Sunday in May. All lovers of truth are invited to attend, especially the ministering brethren. Those desiring to be met will please write me beforehand and they will be met at Danville or Dry Fork.

Brother Gold, we would be very glad to have you with us. We hope it will be a union indeed.

Your little brother in hope,
J. C. MITCHELL,
Church Clerk.

Whitmell, Va., R. F. D. No. 1.

Saturday and 5th Sunday in May is the time appointed for the Black Creek Union to be held in Wilson.

We would be pleased to have a general gathering of our brethren and friends then, an old fashion Union where there is peace and plenty, where love abounds, and good will prevails, where there is no lack, where he that gathers little is content because that little is so good, and where he that gathers much cannot keep it over, nor boast of any preeminence, but where we have all things common.

The Lord is able to give us such blessings. His hand is not shortened that it cannot save. Let us bring in the tithes into the store house and hope for a blessing, a reviving of grace in our hearts and lives. Is it not a time for fastings and prayer that the Lord would pour us out a blessing that our hearts cannot contain, but that will flow and run over the wall, and reach to others so that we shall see our neighbors and children come to the mercy seat, and find grace in time of need.

Come up to the help of the Lord. It is not a vain thing to serve him.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

THE WATCHMAN'S DREAM: AND PARYER.

Or Apollyon Despair and Angeline
Free-will in the World.

I dreamed from town I wander'd round
And o'er a trackless moor,
And heard a strange unearthly sound
I had not heard before.

I paused to know what it could be
When, suddenly, I saw
Some strange companions close by me,
Which fill'd my mind with awe.

My hair was moving on my head,
My blood almost congeal'd,
My heart beat fast, my reason fled,
I felt my doom was seal'd.
(Job 4:12-18.)

I swoon'd and reel'd, and must have fell,
But for an unseen hand
And voice, which said, "For thee 'tis well, I'm sovereign of the land."
(xxxiii. 14-18.)

Inspired by this, I gazed upon
This strange unsightly pair,
To see what crafts they carried on,
And what their natures were.

The man was black as dismal night,
Most frightful to behold.
The damsel clad in colors bright,
And deck'd with pearls and gold.

The monster shook his ghastly horn,
And foamed, and stamp'd his feet;
The damsel said, "The truth I scorn;
I live upon deceit."

The monster spoke of deadly draughts,
The cause of every ill;
The damsel show'd her subtle crafts,
The art of her free-will.

And yet these two were arm in arm,
In love and purpose true;
Conversing of the deadly harm
They were resolved to do.

I then drew near, and overheard
What each one had to say,
Of Zion and her risen Lord
In this benighted day.

I soon perceived they were agreed
In hating God and truth;
That neither were of Israel's seed
Their argument was proof.
(Job xli., Prov. v., vi.)

I heard Apollyon say:—
"My Angeline ;where is the power
That Christ was wont to show;
His promise, presence, or the shower
Which caused his word to grow?

"I've taught the world his word to scorn—
This host of victims show—
I slay my thousands with this horn
In deep despair and woe.

"I tell them all—'Eternity

Is but a part of time;
Despair is certain victory,
And death a brighter crime!

"I tell them Jesus was but man,
His blood of no avail;
His power and purpose, scheme and
plan,
Henceforth for ever fail.

"I ridicule the very thought
That God should ever be
By mortals unto judgment brought
To die upon a tree;

"Much less believe that he could rise
Triumphant over death,
When each of all his followers dies
To prove it all a myth.
(2 Pet. iii. 4, 1 Cor. xv. 12-26.)

"Predestination I deny,
And sovereign love I hate;
For these I substitute a lie,
That damning lie, call'd 'fate.'"

To which Angeline replied:—
"My noble lord; thy speech is true;
Thy daily victims prove
Thy skillful art, and malice too,
Against the God of love.

"But what would all thy glories be,
Thy pleasures or renown,
If I were not in league with thee
To smile away thy frown?

"I trust thou art not slow to see
We both perform our parts,
And gain our brilliant victory
By our united arts.

"If thou canst boast of thousands gone
By thy despairing yell;
With smiles I lead my millions on,
Who dance their way to hell.

"Thy worshippers before thee fall,
And thy commandments do;

But my 'blind guides' on Jesus call,
And personate his crew.

"Thy votaries from Jesus flee,
And fear his awful frown;
But mine compete with Deity,
And hope to share his crown.

"Yet mine and thine, and thou and me,
By nature and in arts,
Deny salvation full and free,— Despise it in our hearts."
(Prov. ii. 18, xxx. 12.)

Apollyon.

"Ah! true, my fairy; thou art right
In all which thou hast said;
We fill the world with subtle light,
And truth has almost fled;

"For even those who do believe,
Oft waver in their mind;
And one who does all truth receive,
We very rarely find.

"Their numbers seem fast dying out;
For, as I walk abroad,
I find but few concerned about
The honor of their God.

"Their weakness, too, I often prove,
When I their souls assail;
Their feeble faith, and lukewarm love,
Both prove them poor and frail.

"I prove from this they must be wrong,
For those whose faith is true
Can sing of glory all day long,
And sleep with heaven in view.

"But here are they as dark as night,
Distressed with doubts and fears,
With scarce a ray of heavenly light,
And hearts too hard for tears.

"Thus while they are in Meshech's land,
They are our daily sport;

And were they not in Jesus' hand,
I'd cut their prattle short."
(Mat. vi. 23; 1 Pet. v. 8.)

Elder P. D. Gold, Wilson, N. C.,

Very Dear Brother in Hope:—Of late, I have for some reason been enjoying the writings of the brethren and sisters more, it seems, than I ever did before; especially is this true of you personally. Your writings in the last few copies have been full of blessed truth and I have been made to feast more upon your words. I sometimes get very low and feel to be the least, if one at all, but when I can read such letters as those contained in the Landmark I feel lifted up and am made to rejoice and exclaim in my inmost soul, "I know my redeemer liveth." I cannot refrain from mentioning here how I have enjoyed reading your little book entitled "A Treatise on the Book of Joshua." I hope every one whose fortune it has not been to read this little book will send for a copy, and am sure they will feel more than repaid after gleaning its pages. I have also recently read the little book gotten out by Brother Silas H. Durand, called "Songs in the Night," which to me is very precious. I consider such reading matter as that referred to above very edifying to those chosen of the Lord. I sometimes think we haven't enough of such matter circulated among us, and hope we will be prompted by the Lord to give more time to the searching of his holy word. The Bible is my greatest comfort in time of trouble and despair, as it seems I can always, almost, find something between its lids to suit my case. It is so full of sweet promises that I can hardly realize at times that they were intended for poor sinful me, but I can feast upon them and this is an evidence to me that some of them, at least, are for me.

Dear Brother, I hope those of the brethren who possess sufficient of this world's goods to lend a helping hand to those in need, will be impressed by their maker to come to your rescue and see that your needs are supplied. I feel it is our duty as christians to do this, and I am quite confident that there are many who if they will only consider the matter will do much to assist you, and if they can only give a small amount, they should remember that it is the little things that count. I fear that some of us are not inclined to be governed in accordance with the scriptures, to the letter, on this point. We should remember that "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

May the good Lord continue to bless you to write and speak for us and to us as he has in the past, is my prayer. I hope it will not be long before you can journey this way to preach for us in Manchester, as well as other traveling brethren who are in this section of the country.

I hope the Lord has directed my thoughts in writing what I have, and would write more, but I feel my nothingness and inability so much, especially after reading after some of the writers, that I fear what I might have to say would not prove to be beneficial to the cause.

Trusting you and yours are well, I am, if not deceived,

Your brother in hope,
R. LESTER DODSON.

Dear Brother Gold:

I wrote you in November, but could not get the consent of my mind to send it off until this week. Because the tempter harrasses me so much I am afraid I am only a false pretender, as it seems all I say and do is imperfect and worthless, yet I keep hoping I am one of the redeemed number.

Dear Brother, the old year is past and gone and I don't know how to thank the Lord as I had ought for his many blessings bestowed upon us. I feel I have been abundantly blessed in the past and I trust the Lord will continue to bless us all in the future if it is his will and supply our daily needs. I suffered intensely with my eyes during last year but thanks to the medicine I used they have very much improved. I enjoy life more than have for quite a while, and oh, what a rich blessing it is. But when the chastening rod is laid upon me I mourn and plead for mercy and deliverance.

Brother Gold, I enjoyed the associations I went to so much that I can't express my joy. My heart was so full of praise to the Lord, and I felt so happy at times that I did not know how to thank him half as much as I ought. The ministering brethren labored faithfully for the cause of Christ and I listened attentively. They all preached sound doctrine so far as I could understand and I feasted on the gospel so much and so long that I thought I had gathered fragments enough to last a year. But since my return home I have had many doubts and fears concerning my spiritual joy. While I was under the influence of that spiritual comfort I felt the Savior's presence near me, and if I had been called to die while attending the association I was so rejoiced I felt I could welcome death; my faith seemed to be so strong in the Lord then, if I was'n't deceived. I did not think I ever would doubt but what that was a season of love and joy the Lord blessed me to enjoy on earth. I tried to watch and be careful as I possibly could so that I would not have so much to lament over. "But Satan with malicious art, watches each unguarded part." He does come in so many forms. He is a deceiver, a liar and the father of it, and yet he gets the upperhand.

I enjoyed the Black Creek Association too. The gospel was preached by the visiting ministry with power and demonstration of the Spirit. Salvation by grace was what I delighted in hearing so much, hearing the worthy name of Jesus declared, and the plan of salvation through his death and suffering on the cross. They all preached Jesus Christ a whole and complete Savior for poor sinners.

Oh brethren, stand upon the walls of Zion, cry aloud and spare not; shun not to declare the whole counsel of God, for the truth is what hurts the unregenerated fellows. Ye must be born again, born of the Spirit and the water or ye cannot see the kingdom of heaven.

Brother Gold, I was delighted to meet Sister Louisa Edwards, Sister Bettie G. Williams, Sister Luper and many others I could mention, but I feel to be the least of all. I am so vile, so sinful and so vain. One thing gives me lots of trouble since I came home. Sister Mattie Luper kindly asked me to spend the night with her at Brother Bennie Renfrow's. I did so and enjoyed myself very much, but I felt I made a very poor impression upon their minds by being so silly. But I have been hewn down in my feelings pretty low since then. Pray for me and may the Lord abundantly bless you is my sincere desire. Unworthy.

Dear Brother Gold:

I will write a few lines to you as my time for the Landmark is about out and I want to continue taking them as they are a great comfort to me, a poor sinner, to have them to read. I find there are some others like me in their trials and troubles and it gives me a little consolation to know this. But at times it seems my case is worse than anybody else in the world and I don't see how the Lord can forgive such a sinner like me. At times it seems no one has such trials as I have and they seem so great I can hardly praise the Lord for his goodness and mercy that he has not destroyed me, a poor sinner. Then again I can look back and see where his goodness and mercy has followed me all the days of my life through my afflictions, for I have been afflicted ever since I was eight years old in body and heart too. For if the Lord ever commenced a work of salvation within me it was when I was going in nine years of age, if I am not deceived, and I would to God if I am deceived he will undeceive me before it is too late, for I get so low down sometimes it seems that the Lord has turned his back on me and everybody else, even to my husband and children.

O brother, do you ever get that low down? for I feel that way this morning. I got one of the dear old Landmarks and read it and got some comfort. O bless the Lord, he is so precious to me, a poor sinner, for without him we can do nothing, for all our help is in him.

Well, Brother Gold, I will stop as I don't want to worry such a good christian as I believe you to be, and I pray to God that he will spare you here as long as it is his good will to comfort the little ones of this world, and when you part from this life may you go home to our heavenly father and reign with him in glory forever more. Any way we all be able to meet you if it is the blessed good Lord's will.

Brother Gold, if there is anything in what I have written that will be of comfort to the brethren and sisters, publish it, and if not, throw it aside. Pray for me.

ON PRAYER.

"An Invaluable Blessing, the Highest privilege of every Real Christian." By the Late Mr. John Rusk.

"Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."—Heb. iv. 16.

Sin, or sins of all sorts work strongly in us and we are unable to extricate ourselves from one of them; we read that the wicked is holden by the cord of his sins, "thus as sin works in us we expect eternal death," and this brings us to this truth, "for the wages of sin is death," and the scriptures cannot be broken. Slavish fear of God. Here we think we are like the Egyptians who said, "let us flee for God fighteth for Israel." The fear of man, "the wicked flee when no man pursueth," etc. Now let all these things be keenly felt, and let them appear to appoint or bind you over (by their long continuance) to utter destruction, and then try whether you can, as you formerly did, engage in so-called prayer with words sound in appearance perhaps for an hour at a stretch that others may applaud you. No; this untimely fruit falls to the ground, and you are bound in affliction and iron. This trade of lying, or, as the Scripture says, "Compassing our maker seemed to be delayed, yet God was faithful to his promise, he heard their with lies and deceit," can only oppression, and though the time of deliverance for the children of Israel be carried on with a seared conscience where Satan reigns, his goods being in peace; but we groan and this groaning shall, sooner or later, prevail with God, as you read, "to hear the groaning of the prisoner, and to loose such as are appointed to death" (Psalm cii. 20). David knew all that I have been saying, and he spoke these words from experience; you may read his complaints in this psalm, his full deliverance in the next which proves that God did hear the groaning of the prisoner. In the sixth psalm David tells us that he is weary with groaning all the day long (ver 6.) and he receives an answer in verses 8 to 9. Thus you see we groan to get out of prison, and God hears us.

Moreover, another cause of this groanings, "I have heard the groan but they went on long under this cruel who were first invited to go to Egypt; ing of the children of Israel, and am groaning is trying providence and cruel oppression. You may see this in the conduct of Pharaoh and his cruel taskmasters towards the children of Israel come down to deliver them," which he did to the very day that he said he would. From all this you and I may learn that God in such trials as these has two things in view; one is that the wicked may be more and more hardened in their wickedness by injuring the saints, and the other is that the saints may be so completely burdened with the cruelty, and oppressions, and trials, that they may groan to the Lord from a deep sense of their need of him, knowing that vain is the help of man. Had they—the children of Israel—succeeded when they applied to the taskmasters, Pharaoh, etc., and murmured at Moses, I say, these groanings would not have come up to God. You see we always try the flesh first, and learn the insufficiency of it, then we groan from a deep sense of want, and this is real prayer, though at the bottom we do not believe it to be; yet, afterwards we are sure that it was prayer. If ever this text had its accomplishment, "as you measure to others, so it shall be to you, good measure pressed down" etc.; it had in the destruction of the whole land of Egypt by the king of Babylon. "I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hands; but I will break Pharaoh's arms and he (that is the whole land) shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly wounded man. * * * I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries; and they shall know that I am the Lord." God is here speaking of the judgments to come on that wicked people of which Pharaoh was the head; but king Pharaoh was in hell long before this, even from the day that the children passed through the Red Sea, as you read, "I made the nations shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him (Pharaoh and all his host) down to hell," which took place many years before this destruction came upon Egypt, read Isaiah xix, and you will have an account of the downfall of Egypt. But to return.

This groaning arises from various trials, afflictions, temptations, cross-providences, and the cruel treatment of the children of men, but the chief thing is the hiding of God's face. Let him but smile on us and all is well. Now take notice of this one thing, you and I will never be long without this groaning. The Apostle Paul who was so highly favoured of God puts himself in with the rest of us and says, "We that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened." "Yea," says he, "we which have the first-fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves waiting for the adoption, to wit the redemption of our body." Now, whether you believe it or not, though this groaning of God may appear but of small account, and far enough from prayer in your eyes, yet in answer to groaning Lazarus was raised from his grave; read the 11th chapter of John, where you have the account of the miracle. In verse 33, it says, Jesus "groaned in the spirit and was troubled;" after this he wept; then in verse 38, "Jesus again groaning in himself cometh to the grave;" then in verse 41, he says, "Father I thank thee that thou hast heard me;" and then "he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus come forth." From all this we may learn that groaning is real prayer, and does prevail with God sooner or later. I shall now mention a few things that every sensible sinner longs for, and can never rest satisfied without.

(i.) He longs for the salvation of his soul. He is so sensible of his lost estate, and he is fully persuaded that should he die without an interest in Christ Jesus he shall be damned; but having had some sweet taste of heaven in his soul, when his convictions become keener than ever the consideration of coming short at last brings on such earnest longings after salvation, that such an one dies to everything else, and is little better in this world than a fool. But this is generally a work of time; the prize is set before us and we long to gain the day, so as to get above all our doubts, fears and misgivings of heart; to be saved from the reigning powers of sin, Satan, death, the wrath of God, and the damnation of hell. "I have longed," says David, "for thy salvation, O Lord." (Psa. xix. 174.)

(ii.) Such an one has an appetite for spiritual provision. He would hear the word preached every hour if he could. He will sometimes count the days to know when he shall go to hear the gospel. And in this he will differ greatly from others, for the preaching that he will long to hear is exceedingly precious to him, though the world will detest and loathe him for following after it, for the preaching of the cross is to them that perish, foolishness, and the Christ who, in his eyes, is the chiefest among ten thousand and altogether lovely, in their eyes, has no form nor comeliness nor any beauty that they should desire him, he is despised and rejected of men. Now David felt this longing, "My soul longeth, yea even fainteth for the courts of the Lord, my heart and my flesh crieth for the living Lord." (Psa. lxxxiv. 2).

(iii.) The delay of the fulfilment of the promises, and their continual longings meeting together greatly break the spirit, as David says, "My soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times" (Psa. cxix. 20). Sometimes he calls it longing after God's precepts, at other times he calls it longing after God's commandments, but he means one and the same thing, it is nothing else but a longing after holiness, which longing rises from grace being implanted in the heart by the holy spirit.

(iv.) The sum and substance of all this longing is Christ Jesus, and this you may see in Job, and so far was he from putting anything in competition with him, that he rejects everything beneath the sun, as though he would say, seeing Christ is gone all is gone, then in a fervent manner he prays and longs for death, "Oh that I might have my request; and that God would grant me the thing that I long for! Even that it would please God to destroy me; that he would but loose his hand, and cut me off" (Job vi. 8, 9). Job knew well what worldly prosperity was, but you do not find him longing for that, but in his worst calamity for death, but why? Because Job could not find Christ, his heart was set on him. "Oh that I knew where I might find him!" etc.; but when his captivity was turned there was no more longing for death.

(v.) Lastly. God hears this longing. "I will satisfy the longing soul." This promise is made to the longings of the heart; there is not a word spoken with the mouth, and this is very wonderful. I will try to explain myself. Let us for a moment, take it literally; suppose you, as one that feared God, were in great want of food, inasmuch that you were almost starved, and you walked out, no money, no work, no friend, your troubles so great that you could not pray, but your appetite keen you long for food. Well, suppose a person whom you have never seen before, steps up to you in the street and tells you that it is impressed on his mind that you are in want, and he gives you a guinea. What would you think of that? "Why," say you, "it would be thankfully received and I should be sure that God had noticed my longing appetite." Well, and when you received a supply you would be satisfied! Just so it is spiritually, the poor and needy seek water and there is none; and their souls (or tongues) fail for thirst.

These longings going out after Christ are heard, and God in answer thereto pours his spirit on Christ's seed and his offspring. Now this at once satisfies the longing soul, for Christ is everything it longs for. Did the soul long for salvation? he is God's salvation to the end of the earth. Did it long for his house or the house of God? he is a little sanctuary to it wherever it come. Does it long for holiness? he is made of God unto us sanctification. Is the soul dissatisfied? he is that good thing promised to the house of Israel; and "my people shall be satisfied with his goodness;" his flesh is meat, and his blood is drink. "I the Lord will hear them;" "I will satisfy the longing soul."—Selected.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear brother in Christ, if one so vile can claim relationship with you.

Inclosed you will find money order for $1.50 for which please send me Zion's Landmark for twelve months, for I do so much enjoy reading of the dear saints' travel from nature's darkness as they are led by the hand of God into the marvelous light of Jesus. Our Lord has grace all sufficient to save a poor sinner like me, for I know if I am saved it is by the grace of God and not for any good I have done or can do.

Dear brother Gold, I have been impressed to write for some time for publication of the dealings of the Lord with me for my disobedience. I am so weak and small in my father's house, if one at all, that I fear to attempt to write, yet it may be that some poor doubting child of God may be benefitted and halt in the downward road of disobedience to read what I have gone through on account of sin and disobedience.

I will refer to the time when I hope God for Christ's sake gave me a hope of deliverance from sin and death through Christ Jesus our Lord. Well do I remember that blessed day. Would that it were with me now as it was then, for it seemed to me then that I was in peace with God our Lord and with all mankind. I thought I would never see any more trouble in this life, that old things had passed and all was happy with me. But oh, how sadly mistaken I was. I went to Wolf Island and offered to the church and related a part of what I hoped the good Lord had done for me and was received and baptized by Elder J. S. Dameron. Oh what a happy day that was to me, but my happiness soon ceased as my mind became impressed that there was a work for me to do. I could not see how the Lord would call such as me for that and I would not yield so left and went to Asheville, thinking to get away from it, but I could not. Be sure your sins will find you out. I could not go far. I saw I was a poor sinner and thought it took a good man for that place. So dear people of God my troubles have been many and great. When my little child was burned to death and though my grief was great, yet my heart was as hard as Pharaoh's. Then my dear loving companion was taken from me and oh, what a wretched man I was. I thought I could not bear that, but God works all things after the council of his will. And yet the stormy clouds did not pass from me for I was caught in a fall of dirt and was buried alive and received an injury that I will never get over in this life. I thought then I would die and be cut off from my troubles here on earth. Yet the good Lord has spared my life up to the present time for some purpose known only to himself. Still the tempest of storm had not passed. Two of my little children were taken sick and lingered a few days when God saw fit to remove them from time to eternity. They both died the same night and were buried in the same grave. Oh, dear saints of God, it seemed I could bear no more. I cried out from the depths of my heart, O wretched man, who shall deliver me from the body of this death. It seemed I was at the bottom of the sea of sin with the seaweeds all around me, and I hope I was made willing then for the will of God to be done with me. I saw what a great sinner I had been and was yet and I hope it pleased God to take away these dark clouds and send the glorious light of Jesus in my soul and I can once more rejoice in a dear Saviour's love, and I hope I have learned obedience to God through what I have suffered.

So, dear reader, let me warn you in the fear of God not to be disobedient as I have been. If you are obedient ye shall eat the good of the land and if you are disobedient ye shall die by the sword. What we are impressed by the spirit to do, let us do with the grace that God giveth and run with patience the race that is set before us looking unto Jesus who is the author and finisher of our faith, and may God our Saviour bless you in all spiritual blessings.

Now, Brother Gold, if you see fit to publish this do so and if not cast it aside and all will be well with me. May God bless you and yours in the future as I believe he has in the past is my prayer for Christ's sake.

Miss Maggie Staton, Bethel, N. C.

Dear Miss Maggie:—You will forgive me I hope for troubling you with a line from me, but you have been on my mind continually for the past fortnight, and something says, write! and for the relief of my mind I now make the attempt, and hope you will let me hear from you very soon.

You can never know how glad I will be to get one more of your soul cheering letters, for I feel to say that the few I have received from you in time past have been such comfort to me, though I have never told you how much comfort I have found in your sweet and well-chosen words. I feel it in my heart to tell you that I believe the loving Saviour guided your pen when you wrote to me for it fed my famished soul, and you are, I feel to say, one of the meek, gentle and lowly ones, willing always and ready to cheer the lonely, comfort the sick and afflicted ones who love the truth and are hungry and thirsty.

How I would rejoice, I feel, to have you here, to listen to you talk. And oh, kind friend, can't you or won't you come and stay some with us? I would send for you if you will. I feel like you would gladly come if you only knew how much good you would do me. I felt that the good Lord directed your mind to spend that little time with us above Tarboro, and I hope if it is his will, that your mind will be directed to write me and tell me when I may send for you. I must tell you that I feel like the blessed Saviour has indeed been with me today. I feel to say his very presence has filled my soul with joy, and I have felt oh, so happy though very feeble in health, and have been all the year, yet I rejoice and am glad, for I feel that if this body was strong and well, I should not catch so many sweet glimpses of his glorious presence. And in my afflictions here I hope I see it as I feel it, a bright and lonely star, illuminated by his all-powerful presence, which shall shine forever and ever in my soul.

If we had all things in this life just as our carnal natures desire, we would soon destroy ourselves and forget our helplessness. So it is for our good that the gourd is destroyed, takes the gift away lest we forget the giver. How beautiful the thought to feel there is one who knows and sees all things? One who is good, kind, loving, merciful, the giver of every good and perfect precious gift, and who is my help in every time of trouble, sorrow and affliction, and never allows any more to be put upon us than he will help us to bear? Though the valley of the shadow of death be near and we faint and are so weary, yet his help fails not and he speaks (as it were) words of comfort and peace to the trembling soul, and oh, what love.

At times, Miss Maggie, I feel that I could almost fly away on the wings of this glorious love and truth. And a great portion of my time I am walking in the dark, voiceless valley alone, mourning because I cannot live as I desire. When I would do good evil is present. I feel to be nothing, less than nothing. And too, at times, my heart is desolate, my soul hungry and thirsty, I am famished and I feel like that I must surely perish. But in his own good time he bears me up again on the wings of his love, and oh, the feast far surpasses the famine.

and yet he sends the famine that we may enjoy the feast more

My Jesus is precious, my soul is in a flame,

I am raised into raptures while praising his name.

All glory to him who opens the prison door and sets the weary fainting captive free. What wonderful love. But oh, Miss Maggie, if I only had you here in person, so I could lay my tired, weary head in your lap and there tell, or try to tell, you some of the many, many trials and troubles and heart-rending sorrows I have undergone, I feel that you could and would sympathize with me. It is only by the power of a kind and loving Saviour that I am yet alive. He enabled me to bear up under them together with affliction.

Please pray for me and forgive all errors; you are good and kind, so please remember a poor vile sinner, if saved, saved by grace, for there is nothing good in me.

My health is very poor and has been all the year, though I am able to be up almost all the time. My husband's health is better, though he is not well. He joins me in asking you to come and stay with us some. Excuse bad writing, my fingers have cramped so I can't half write. With lots of love to you I must close. Please write real soon to your true and affectionate friend,

LOULIE C. EDWARDS.

Hill, N. C.

P. S.—I failed to mail this last week as I expected so will add a few more words to tell you I went to church to hear Elder Lawrence Saturday and Sunday. His text Saturday was, "I am the true vine, my father is the husbandman," etc. Sunday he preached from Malachi, 3rd chapter 5th verse, and oh, I cannot tell you how I felt. It seemed to me that every word was directed to me and how my soul burned within me, and how I did long to do what he pointed out was duty. He preached my feelings and desires better than I could ever tell them and the burning desire within my soul and heart is eating my very life away.

Pray for for me, kind friend, that the good Lord will spare my life; that I may be baptized in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Then I feel I could die satisfied. I go to hear him preach and he feeds me and strengthens me and I feel that I cannot live without a few of the crumbs. Yet I come away with the burden heavier each time. I feel that I am not good enough to go but I cannot stay away when meeting time comes. I love the true Baptists better than any people on earth and I wish I could feel as they look to me.

I am in darkness; today my joy is turned to grief, groans and tears, and oh, how shall I ever, ever bear it! I feel that I am one who is robbing the Lord. He made it so plain yesterday in his sermon. I shall never be able to tell the terrible sufferings I pass through. But I do so much want to see you and tell you what I feel to hope the good Lord has done for me a poor vile sinner, and then you can understand why I have written as I have. I hope to find relief of mind because you have been impressed upon my mind for over two weeks. Please write to me a poor trembling heart-broken sinner, and come to see me and stay some.

LOULIE.

Dear Miss Maggie:

May the blessed God of heaven reward you for the comforting letter filled with encouraging words that you wrote to me today, a poor wretched and miserable sinner. Oh, what can I possibly say to you that will even touch upon the encouragement that I received in your missive. Little, so little did I, for a moment think that I would receive such a reply; for I felt after sending you my feeble words that I had done wrong and was sorely troubled over it. I could not rest until one day such words as these came to my mind, He that is ashamed of me to own me, I will be ashamed of him, etc., then I felt that perhaps there was no harm done. I am weighted down with many troubles, and it seems to me I am not near over with them, and let me tell you. I was sorely cast down and in the deepest trouble the 4th Sunday night. I was sitting up alone with my Bible, and it seemed of a sudden I was stricken with a terrible weakness and my brain became dizzy. I laid my Bible down and went out in the back yard and fell upon my knees on the ground and tried to beg for the mercy of my God. I stayed there some short time and poured forth my troubled mind with tears streaming down my troubled face. I found no relief. I arose, came into the burden heavier than ever. I could not stand up any longer, and I fell upon my bed and dear friend and I passed through a most awful something like a trance. My mind seemed to be gone—I was unable to move hand or foot and was helpless. And oh, my God, I believe, through his spirit talked to me. These words he said, Pray, pray, pray," three times in quick succession, and then these words, "you have passed through many bitter trials, but you have greater ones—never fear, I will be with you—your troubles are not over—your sorrows and griefs will be greater. Pray, pray, pray, I will not forsake you, I will consume all the dross and you shall come forth purified." And oh, Miss Maggie, I was there in that fix for several minutes and the words that were spoken in my heart ran faster than I could remember them. I have not told you one-half, and oh, I feel that the sorest trials of my life have not yet come. My heart is bowed down by it. My soul is desolate. Pray for me a vile sinner, I beg you. I desire the prayers of every child of God.

I have never told a human soul about this, and I am almost heart-broken, but my God and Saviour is my friend, for he told me he would not forsake me. This is no vain imagining, for who would desire to suffer as I did if they had the power to prevent it.

But a few days prior to that I was calm in mind, though my body was in pain when I retired, and immediately on closing my eyes, hoping to go asleep, a most brilliant light, seemingly to be round and like the sun, appeared to me. I wondered and looked and it remained a few seconds and vanished, being immediately replaced by a beautiful white mansion setting upon a hill. My soul feasted for a moment, then it vanished and at once something appeared about the size of your hand and came very close until I could clearly see it. 'Twas the picture of a man with hands stretched out and I could clearly see the print of nails in both hands and feet, and could not sleep for some time, wondering what it all meant. 'Twas the picture of Jesus, I do believe, and oh, I wonder and think and try to pray, and yet I am and feel so unworthy, to beg him for mercy, for he has always been merciful and good to me and I have tramped upon his blessing, and my heart feels that it will burst with sorrow.

If I worry you please tell me so, but the love I have for you in my heart I can never express. And if more of the Baptists would speak to the longing, trembling, fearing ones they could never know how thankful their words would be received to a doubting, sorrowing heart. I was simply amazed upon reading your letter, because you expressed so much love for me, for I felt that no one as good as I think you to be could ever love me. But God be praised if you find it in your heart to love one that feels as I do—that the least of all things is too good for me. I have loved you ever since I first met you, but my love has been hidden, only myself and God knows. You said my letter to you was rich. Oh, how can you think that, and little did I think you would ever care to read it. I wrote just as I felt, yet, my dear friend, I do not see one thing to merit it a place in the Landmark. However you may use your own judgment.

I feel that I shall be destroyed for my disobedience to my maker and I live in terrible fear each day—the burden increases—I have no mind and feel today that I shall sink beneath its weight. I am feeble and can scarcely be up and my body is racked with pains and aches.

You said you would let me know when you could come. I am so glad you intend to if it is the Lord's will.

You will not care to hear from me again on account of my numerous words, but I have not written half as much as I wish to write. I feel like I must tell you that I spent two days with Miss Mag and Mr. Howard last week. Miss Mag is better in health though not well. I do love to go to see them. I went to Cross Roads on Saturday and received so much comfort from Mr. Howard's sermon, and yet I felt wretched and miserable on my way home, for I knew I had again rebelled. Pray for me—I have gotten to the place where the fountain of my tears has dried up. I cannot pray today and my agony of mind is bitter and intense. What will become of me if I remain as long as I am? My pathway is rugged and steep—my feet are on, it seems, the edge of a precipice, and I am standing still waiting for my redeemer to lift the veil from my eyes. Then and then only will I know which way to step. He directeth my goings and knoweth the way that I take, and when he takes the soul from this body of clay, I feel to hope that I shall see him as he is and praise him as I ought.

I hope you will forgive me the length of this letter and that you will write me at once, for I am not on the mount as I was when I wrote you before, and I need you more than ever. It seems I just could not write you before now though I have tried, so it must be that I was to wait until now. Please pray for me and mine.

With a heart full of love I am your true friend,

LOULIE C. EDWARDS.

Dear Brother Gold:

With the help of the Lord I will try to write you a few lines in my weakness and inability to express my feelings with regard to our afflictions, trials and tribulations here in the flesh. I feel to say, O Lord, how long wilt thou suffer the flood of afflictions to overflow us and let us go bowed down under the yoke of bondage. Oh Lord, if our suffering be for the cause of Christ, give us patience to bear it as Job did, and to hold to our integrity and be able to say, thy will be done. Oh God, for thou art righteous and will do right—thou judgest right.

I feel that according to nature in my former days my desire was to walk after the lust of the flesh, to please the natural eye and to wade deep into the wilderness of sin, but since then there has come a reformation. It was like the blowing of the wind, could not tell from whence it came or whither it goeth. It seemed that the sound awakened a feeling within me that caused as it were the scales to fall from my blinded eyes and enable me to see and understand things different from any period during my life. I felt that I had sinned away the day of grace and that my case was a helpless one. Oh my God, who will deliver me from my awful condition. I am a great sinner in the sight of a righteous God, my dear brother, who will punish sin wherever he finds it.

I cannot go into a thorough detail of my condition and deliverance, but it was a heavy load being lifted from my shoulders and it left me like it came and I could not tell what had become of it but it seemed a joy unspeakable had kindled up in my heart to praise God. It seemed that even natural things were more beautiful and that the sun was brighter and that the members of the Primitive Baptist church looked more lovely, for I had been brought in my experience to believe that that was the true church of God and it seemed that the love of the members was more precious to me. Oh what a wonderful cause and what a blessed thing it is to have a hope in Jesus. It is a sweet resting place; it is a safe anchor to the soul.

Brother Gold, excuse my weakness and imperfections and if you decide to publish this please go over and correct mistakes.

My wife's health is no better. She seems a little revived at times, but her general condition is no better. The rest are in tolerable health. My granddaughter has had the measles but she is better now. I trust that God has blessed your family so that all are in good health. My wife sends love and best regards to you and Sister Gold. May the Lord bless you to continue your labor with good health and long life. Wishing to be remembered in your prayers, I am your brother I

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

"This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church." Eph. 5:32.

The families of the earth are the fruit of marriage, and marriage is the safeguard against fornication. Therefore everyone is to love his wife and be true to her. He and his wife are one if it is a true marriage. Therefore the husband is to love his wife as he loves himself because they are one. He that is joined to a harlot becomes as the harlot and sins against his own body.

Fornication is the adjoining to and defiling of ones self with what is corrupting. If one is an idolator he is a fornicator. His idol or false god to which he is joined and its vile character corrupts him so that he is steeped in its guilt. On the other hand he that is a worshipper of the true God is made pure in receiving of the fulness of the true God, and is a partaker of the divine nature. He that is joined to—married to—the Lord is one spirit with the Lord, or one with the Lord.

In the figure or the type of marriage this is so clearly exemplified. The Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall on Adam, and took a rib from Adam's side, and made a woman and brought her to the man, and when Adam awoke from his sleep and beheld her he then said, this is now bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife, and the twain shall be one flesh. Therefore what God hath joined together let no man put asunder. The husband and wife are one, so that neither can marry again while the other lives.

Now these principles I have declared as of use in what it is in my mind to write. For creation is God's work and is typical of grace. Paul declares that marriage is a great mystery, but that he is speaking of Christ and the church. Then there is one Christ and one church—the true church. True there were many instances of a man's having more wives than one, but from the beginning God made one man and one woman, male and female, and the twain or two are one flesh.

In the type there are two women, Hagar and Sarah, which things are an allegory. Hagar answers to the bond-woman, bondage, the legal covenant; Sarah the mother of the children of promise answering to the covenant of grace or the spirit, or the opposite of the flesh. Hagar had no husband, yet she had many more children than did Sarah who had a husband, for the desolate hath many more children than she that hath an husband, Gal. 4:27. The nations and peoples without a husband are far more multitudinous than the Lord's people. His flock is a little one, while theirs is legion.

There were many more false gods than he one true God. There are gods many and lords many, but to us there is one true God and Father of all, of whom are all things and we of him, and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things and we by him. In the days that Israel existed as a nation the surrounding nations had many more gods than Israel did, and often Israel would follow after strange gods, and adopt the gods of the heathen which were no gods. This was fornication, one of the common sins of Israel. The Lord rebukes Israel as a backsliding people to whom he was married, but they had gone a whoring after false gods. This was a great sin showing the infidelity and falsity of these people. As there is no greater sign of fidelity than for husband and wife to be true to each other, so there is no greater evidence of wickedness than unfaithfulness of either one in this relationship. It was complained that the heathen nations were truer to their false gods changing them less than did Israel cleave to the only true and everlasting God. The only true way of preserving a seed naturally that is recognized as lawful is for husband and wife to be faithful to each other, and this preserves a seed intact in nature.

In the beginning God made one man and one woman from whom sprang all the nations of the earth. Soon men began to practice fornication by taking up strange woman and corrupting themselves, and the world became so wicked their sins cried to heaven for vengeance.

It is so charming to see a husband and wife loving, faithful and devoted to each other, and bringing up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Nor is their a better natural bulwark of good society nor a greater incentive to healthy and manly living than the faithful observance of this biblical relation of husband and wife. Where the husband can safely trust in his wife whose virtue is a crown of glory on his head, and a custodian in the sacred treasures of family and home; and where the wife confides in him as her head and defense, under whose wing she shelters from the storms of life.

The family tie is the most endearing of earth, and from it issues the influences that constitute the surest safeguard to virtue and prosperity; and it is the most promotive of cheerfulness and contentment among mankind; and from this fountain flows the streams that gladden the peoples of earth. Up from this relationship to the great fountain of purity from which emanates every gift good and perfect we look to behold the general assembly and church of the first born of God whose names are written in heaven, of whom the whole family of God is named. Eph. 3:15. In this family born of incorruptible seed by the word of God, whose Father is the Eternal One, who are begotten again to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, and who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, where the bond of unity is love, and whose home is eternal in the heavens, is where nothing unclean can ever come. Everlasting is the love that embraces all the children of God, wherein there is the equality of perfection.

The Jerusalem which is above is free, the covenant of grace, and the mother of all the free born. Jesus Christ is the first born of God, and is also the everlasting Father, and is the husband of the bride the Lamb's wife, and he is the appointed heir of all things.

Thy maker is thy husband, and the Lord is married unto his bride the church, and she is betrothed unto him in loving kindness and tender mercies and faithfulness forever.

Here is the true husband who loved his bride with an everlasting love. Grace and truth are given them in Christ their husband before the world began. What a glorious truth that God loved his people even when they were dead in trespasses and in sins, and it was a great love, and he has quickened them together with Christ; for it is by grace we are saved. Because the children are by nature partakers of flesh and blood Jesus likewise took part of the same, in order that he might destroy him that had the power of death that is the devil, and delivered them that through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. He Jesus is found in fashion as a man, made of a woman, made under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. Jesus loved the children and gave himself for us that we might receive the adoption of sons.

Here is a most glorious husband possessing every virtue in heaven. He hates putting away, loved his own which his father gave him with an everlasting love, and laid down his life for them. He provides every blessing for them and knows what they need. It is said that if an earthly husband and wife love each other truly the longer they live together the more they grow into a resemblance of each other in favor and thought, in habits and deeds. Surely in the resurrection life the bride shall be like her husband. Jesus was found in fashion as a man and made to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. His love drew him to her to endow her with his riches. His glorious power shall draw her to him, and transform her into his blessed likeness. For his life is revealed in her, and his thoughts and words and deeds are her glory, and she shall be satisfied when she awakes with his likeness. For it is the pleasure of the Lord for the husband to present his bride without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, before his Father's throne with exceeding joy. For this is the realization of the prayer of Jesus, Father, I will that they whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory. For the Father loved Jesus before the foundation of the world, and as the Father loved Jesus so Jesus loved them. For he loves his church as he loves himself. Jesus has fulfilled every requirement of his Father. He is the true husband, Priest, Father, Brother, Prophet, and King. Every scripture is fulfilled in him. He is the appointed heir of all things.

In the family of God eternal in the heavens none shall be but the redeemed of God, of whom Christ is the first born and the elder Brother, and the everlasting Father, for He and the Father are one. For there are three in heaven and these three are one. There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling, one God and Father of all who is above all.

Now it is evident there is but one bride the Lamb's wife, or but one true church of God. But in false religion is the fornication, lewdness, filthiness, idolatry. Anyone reading the Bible carefully must see fornication condemned. In the last book of the new testament the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth is set forth. She is the mother of harlots. Then she has many harlots. Many are her followers, even the whole world, except those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life from the foundation of the world. This mother of harlots holds in her hand a golden cup of false doctrines bewitching. She had made the world drunk, for all the nations of earth follow her, and are made drunk with the wine of her false doctrines. This whore has no husband, and hence cannot be a true wife, and her children must be the children of fornication. The children of God must be born from above, of the mother the covenant of grace. Hence the children are free born, and all love the grace of God, the covenant of grace, and drink the sincere milk of the word, love the pure wine of the grace of God. While the children of the bond women, partaking of the standing or state of their mother, love the bondage gendered by the law or the conditional covenant of which and by which no flesh can ever be saved.

The time will come when the bride of the Lamb shall be ready, and the marriage supper of the Lamb shall come. She shall be washed in the blood of the Lamb, and her walk or garments shall be clean and white and the New Jerusalem shall appear in all her glory as the city of God.

A CONTENTION.

William said to John, My friend John, will you tell me why some people believe what is to be will be? John replied by asking this question, If a thing is to be then what can prevent its transpiring? The question should be settled whether there is anything that certainly will be. Who knows whether an event yet in the future will certainly transpire? If it will not come to pass then what will occur in place of it? Who knows? Man does not foreknow events. He does not know what a day will bring forth. Who knows more than man?

William said, I do not believe that anything is so fixed that it must be accomplished. John replied, Then how is it that prophets foretell events seemingly impossible or only remotely possible; yet they occur as it was foretold. John said, Do you know of any event in your own life or knowledge that occurred because it was certain beforehand that it would occur then. William in reply said, Do you know of any event connected with your life, that, if anyone knew all of its surroundings or environments beforehand, or knew all the agencies and causes operating to bring it to pass, but could have certainly foretold that such an event would surely have transpired in the manner, time and place that such an event did occur? The causes producing this event were not controlled or directed by any man. They were controlled by the power that brought the event to pass.

Now is there not a knowledge greater than man's intelligence that has endowed man with his understanding? Does not that intelligence possess foreknowledge? Can he not foretell events? Does he foresee that certain events will come to pass, and therefore foretell them? Or does he determine beforehand what shall be, and hence declare the end from the beginning.

Again, John said if God does not determine what shall be but waits until he foresees what shall be, is he not dependent and submits to that which he foresees shall be, and does not do all his pleasure? If there is a power anterior to God that causes evil to come to pass, and God merely foresees that it shall be, then is there not another power besides the power of God that works some things according to a will averse to God?

William replies that time and chance happen to all men, that God foresees certain things are going to be, and while his will opposes them, and his word condemns them, He foresees they will be, and he suffers them for a purpose; but his word does not authorize them.

John replies, If God foresees that certain things in themselves wicked must come to pass then those things are certain to be, and if they are contrary to God's revealed or expressed will, then there is another power greater than God, or there is fate, or blind chance, or whatever you choose to call it: but you do not clear the record of the charge that what is to be will be. When men object to a view but present nothing any better or clearer, then what force is there in their objection?

While men object to the sovereignty of God their theories and views present nothing so good and clear or irrefutable.

The consistent view is to acknowledge there is one true and living God, and there is no God beside him. There is no comfort to a christian in any other view, nor is there any bible teaching that allows any other.

P. D. G.

THE LORD JESUS.

Men not guided by the Spirit of God and not walking by faith trust in the natural elements or agencies to keep, or heal, or deliver them. Natural air and water, natural food, natural operations of the ordinary agencies, elements or powers of the world are what they depend on. If they fall sick they trust in medicine, doctors, or the other influences, or time or nursing, or chance—anything but the Lord Jesus, to help them.

When Jesus appeared in his time it was a new thing on earth. His mother was a virgin. His childhood was perfect obedience to his Father. He lived independent of the ordinary elements of nature. His bread was secret. His authority was unknown to the Jewish rulers. He had no earthly possessions, nor home, nor place to lay his head. Did he live from hand to mouth? He lived in heaven.

There was no enemy that could take any advantage of him, nor do anything that was hid from him, nor could any power go at all beyond what he suffered. When devils wanted to hide in the forbidden, unclean swine they could not do that until they besought him and he suffered them to do so.

What he spake was done as he willed. Winds and waves obeyed him. Diseases departed at his word or touch. Death ended as he spake. Everything he did and said was miraculous. Heaven, earth and all deep places obeyed him.

Now the spirit of faith that receives and owns Jesus comes from heaven. By him all that believe are justified from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses—from all things—not by or through all things, but from all things. The law is a witness. The law required perfect, spiritual obedience, not a little of this could carnal man render. Hence the law justly cursed guilty man. The prophets foretold the great good day when one should come who would save us. When Jesus came both law and prophets witnessed or declared that by Jesus all that believe are justified from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses.

A witness does work, labor or perform, but it proves the case in point. When the heart believes in Jesus the virtue of his healing power accomplishes in and for the subject for grace what Jesus wills to be done. "Daughter, go in peace. Thy faith hath saved thee." How great is the working of faith. The just shall live by faith.

All that Jesus did was miraculous. One therefore to be a partaker of him must be quickened from the corruption of nature, and Christ must be so revealed and manifested in him that the life he now lives in the flesh he must live by the faith of the son of God.

P. D. G.

Brother S. M. Paul requests my view of Matt. 5:44-45, "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you;

That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."

Jesus is the true spiritual expounder of the law that came by Moses, and the complete fulfiller thereof: also he is the just and perfect teacher and doer of the code of behavior that will forever endure. There is no amending, curtailing or changing the perfect teaching of Jesus. For it is universal because it is the only right and righteous rule of life forever. Principles never change if they are perfect. Men may disobey them and pervert them, but that can never change them.

The Jews had disobeyed the law that came by Moses, perverted its true meaning, and made additions to it called traditions; but Jesus told the true meaning of the law, and the only course that can ever bring happiness to mankind. While the carnal nature of man delights in revenge, and loves to get the mastery, and hates an enemy, yet the spirit that delights in and practices such principles cannot be happy nor useful nor do good, nor have a good conscience. The rule of the law is, Love the Lord God with all your heart, soul, mind and strength, and your neighbor as yourself. This Jesus did, and when I, having been elect unto that obedience and the sprinkling of his blood, and receive him, am standing by his faith in that perfection the law is fulfilled in me. Then the fruit of the spirit of God is yielded. Love, joy, peace, long suffering, goodness, gentleness, meekness, faith, the things pleasing to the law of holiness are found in me. Then there is no enmity in my heart toward any one, nor can I then wrong another. Men may be my enemies, but I am not theirs. I can pray for all men and have good will toward all men. Why then should I not have the element of happiness in me, for I have the spirit of righteousness in me which is Jesus Christ.

But if I am in the flesh, or walk after the flesh, I have every ungodly, wicked principle in me that will surely destroy me. There can be no happiness where there is hate and sinful principles. For the flesh is the mother of every wicked principle. While we are in the flesh we are under the law, and the law worketh wrath or frowns on and condemns every ungodly principle and lust. For the law is the strength of sin, and sin slays by the law which is good.

If we have the love of God in us we love the law, and the things the law requires, or they are done in us. For if we are led of the Spirit we are not under the law, and hence not under its curse, and we work no ill to our neighbor, for the law is fulfilled in us.

God is good to all. He makes his sun to shine upon the evil and the good, and sends his rain upon the just and the unjust. These holy principles of God are in his children, therefore they do good and not evil to men.

But one says, I can not do the good I would. But can you delight in doing the evil that you see and feel in your flesh? No, not if you are dead to sin. It is one thing to be holy and another to feel that you are holy. The man who abhors himself is in a state of justification. The man that feels he is more holy than his fellows is self-righteous. One that truly desires to do better than he feels that he does, or that with the mind serves the law of God, while with the flesh he serves the law of sin, is the one who walks after the spirit and is free from condemnation.

This is the man that loves his neighbor and loves his enemies, and does good to all men as he has opportunity. For the holy principle of our heavenly Father is in him because he is a child of God.

How blessed to love the teaching of Jesus and be a doer of the word.

For the life such a one lives is by the faith of Jesus.

P. D. G.

WHY?

Why should we attempt to take matters in our own hand when the Bible authorizes us to wait upon the Lord who brings to pass whatsoever pleases him? One is not willing to go commit his way unto God in waiting on the Lord, but must take up the matter in his own way to save him. For instance when Moses was receiving the law from the Lord God on Mt. Sinai the people at the foot of the trembling mountain, within hearing of its dreadful roaring said, Up, Let us be going. For what is become of this Moses we know not. Make us gods to go before us. Aaron calls for the jewels which are placed in the fire, and a calf is presented. These be thy gods O Israel is their shout. Here is an instance of haste that works havoc among the people. Why not wait on the Lord? But impatient man does not like to wait. They that wait on the Lord shall renew their strength. God will be sure to deliver all that trust in him. He waits to be gracious.

A trouble springs up in a church. Members take sides, some for one and some for another. Soon two parties are formed, and a division follows, all for the lack of waiting until God shows what should be done. Until He shows what is right we should wait. If each would do that then there would not be two parties formed.

How good it is for brethren to dwell together in unity. Peace is one of the best states to be in, for then there is no strife. The doctrine of God our Saviour places us in the state of trust and quietness that secures much rest and joy in the Lord.

When men get in a hurry and become impatient they lose their good judgment, if they had it before. To wait on God is the highest and holiest service always bringing deliverance.

P. D. G.

A friend of Tarboro, N. C., sends a request of my view of Matt. 12:31-32, and states that this scripture has been a burden of mind. Those two verses bear on my mind a great deal, and I know that I am a sinner, and feel that I am one of the worst sinners that there is. I sometimes feel that my sins are so many that God will never forgive them; and I know that the bible says seek and you shall find, so I try to seek the best I can. So I will try to pray to God the best I know how. For I know that if I am saved that it will be God that will save me. For nothing that I nor anyone else can do will save me. It will have to be God and God alone to save this old sinful soul of mine.

I will not sign my name only the unknown writer a sinner.

Remarks.—This scripture describes the sin against the Holy Ghost. It declares that all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall never be forgiven.

It does not seem to me that one feeling as vile as this unknown writer has any mind or desire to utter a word of blasphemy either against Christ or the Holy Ghost. This one makes personal charges. Self is the sinner, and not Jesus nor the Holy Ghost. Who convinces man of sin? It is the Holy Ghost. Then instead of the Holy Ghost being against him he is showing this one the need of a Redeemer, or has begun the good work of salvation in this one.

If you had committed the unpardonable sin would you feel any guilt or need of Jesus? The Pharisees hated Jesus with such malicious and bitter hatred that they accused him of being in league with the most unclean devil. Have you the least trace of that vile mind against God. Not that I see.

On the other hand you are seeking the Lord, and endeavoring to pray unto him, which is according to the teaching of the bible. Every one that has this mind is blest.

Why not trust in Jesus? His blood cleanses from all sin. He saves the chief sinners, and there cannot be any greater sinners than those that feel they are the chief in their view.

The most desperate case is not the man who feels he is a sinner, nor the chief of sinners, but the man who accuses Jesus of such things as the Pharisees charged him with.

There is no way to save a sinner but in Jesus, nor can any ever fail of being saved that trust in him. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

OBITUARIES

BENNETT BULLOCK.

This well known, pleasant brother fell asleep in Jesus between the first and second Sunday in April. He was well and widely known among our people. He and Sister Bullock have been model, exemplary Baptists many years. Their house has been a pleasant home for our people, and they have entertained many.

They labored with their own hands and provided well for their family, and the Lord greatly blest their labors so they had plenty. Each one was in the 73rd year of their lives, and they had been married about 54 years. They loved while young and married early in life, and loved each other all their lives, and lived like husband and wife should live.

Brother Bullock was girded with the principles that make a man strong to run a race, and he has fought a good fight, and has gone home to be with Jesus.

A short while ago I visited them. Sister Bullock was so attentive to him and said, When he is gone what shall I do? Oh I shall be so lonesome. But He that gave her that good husband will be still a better husband to her.

Dear Brother Gold:

Knowing that you were very fond of our dear old brother, Elder Wm. Grafton, I feel to inform you of his death on Tuesday, a. m., April 6, and was buried on Friday at Hartford, M. H., where he had preached the gospel of Jesus Christ over fifty years. Services were attended by a large number of sorrowing friends. Ministers present were Elders S. H. Durand, J. G. Eubanks, B. F. Coulter, J. McConnell and the writer. I tried to preach the sermon by request of the family, from Acts 26:8, all the other ministers taking part in the service.

Elder Grafton will be sadly missed as he leaves three churches destitute, and they loved him dearly. He preached his last sermon on third Sunday in February from Job 23:1-6. Truly a father in Israel is gone. We all loved him.

Your brother I hope,

JOSHUA T. ROWE.

Remark—Words of man cannot value the lovely character of such a man, so humble, so gentle, so firm, so gifted, so faithful.

JAMES B. PAGE.

Dear Brother Gold:

I have been requested by the bereaved widow, Sister Emma Page, to write a short obituary notice of her beloved husband, James B. Page, who was born in Caswell county, July 17th, 1859, and departed this life Nov. 2nd, 1905. He never made an open profession of religion, but was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist faith, and always manifested a decided interest to the people of that faith and order.

He was not very strong physically, and would often refer to a dream, which he had in childhood, which seemed to be indelibly stamped on his memory. When he had this dream, he was suffering intensely from a severe rising in his right side. He told his people that he dreamed all his sufferings would be in this world, and often in advancing years, would say this dream had ever been with him during his transient stay here.

His last sickness was quite severe and strange in its nature. The doctor was puzzled to know how to treat his disease or to ascertain the cause or how to reach and alleviate the sufferer.

He had a throat affection and a severe rising at the root of his tongue (or larynx,) which would enlarge so enormously that he would walk the room with his tongue outstretched, gasping and panting for breath. It seemed every moment that respiration would cease, and life be extinct. This continued for near two weeks, more or less affected, and often he was unable to utter audible words or express himself at all.

Some little time before the end came, his dear companion was bending over his suffering form, desiring to comfort or to aid in some way to alleviate his suffering. He chanced to notice her standing there and raised his hands, while his countenance bore visible marks of peace within. He drew her to his embrace with such tender devotion that the bright smile which wreathed his countenance, was a bright omen of a decided change, though he could not speak a word.

father, a good and obliging neighbor to

He often expressed his feelings to his wife in regard to the church and how he would love to be one of them. But his excuse was unworthiness, but said perhaps he'd join them some time. He told his wife he wished to be buried at Cross Roads church, some four miles distant.

He was a kind and loving husband and many dear friends who were loth to part with such as he.

He leaves a broken-hearted widow, nine children, four sons and five daughters; three sisters and three brothers together with a host of friends and relatives, to mourn his absence.

Now, dear bereaved mother and children, try to bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, and may the Lord abundantly bless and comfort the bereaved and enable them to be perfectly resigned to the will of Him who doeth all things well, and may they also remember that all things work for good, to all who love His appearing, and when they remember that all things for for good to it be the will of God to save them eternally, is the sincere desire of the writer.

MISS ANN BOOTHE.

Mr. Gold:

Dear Friend:—This is my first attempt at writing you and although we have never

She wasn't a member of any church but a believer in the Primitive Baptists. My sister was staying with her one night and she told my sister she wished she could go to sleep and never wake up. She often told them she wanted to get well and stay with them one week, but it was not the good Lord's will to let her stay in this sorrowful world and longer. It seemed she was too good to stay, and when Jesus came and called her she was staying with her brother-in-law, Mr. J. S. Holt, and she said she had prayed for him to be rewarded in heaven for she was motherless and fatherless and he had been so good to her.

She dreamed a night or two before she died that her father came to her and shook hands with her and it seemed she studied so much about her father and talked so much about him that we believe she is now with him to stay where they will never have to part or say farewell. z

Oh, how sadly looks the place where once Miss Anne dwelled. Just a year ago at the sting of death she fell and the days seem long since she has gone, but the Lord saw fit to take her to that bright eternal home. No one can know how much we miss her, yet we know it was best that she met my father takes the Landmark and as I have read so many good pieces in it I thought I would write about one of my friends who left this world some time ago.

Miss Ann Boothe was born in July, 1863, and died March 4, 1908, making her stay on earth 45 years and 6 months. She leaves four sisters, one brother and a step-mother to mourn their loss. All was done for her that loving hands and kind friends could do, but none could stay the cold icy hand of death. Her father departed this life about six months before she did and her mother died a good many years ago. She was such a good woman that it seems I want everybody to know how good she was.

She died with that dreadful disease, heart failure and was sick about twelve months, but was never heard to murmur or complain. She bore her sufferings patiently. She was loved by all who knew her, always had a smile and always had something nice to say to everyone. She should go from earth to heaven.

She with patience fought the battle
That we all have got to fight,
Then she crossed over Jordan's river,
To that place where comes no night.

So sleep on Miss Ann, your troubles are o'er,

Sleep on and take your rest;
Some day I hope to meet you
In heaven among the blest.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

"What lady would expect to establish her own virtue by proclaiming the fall of her sister?"

There seems to be great fear in the camp of the saints, that the hobbiest will remove the stakes, and break the cords of the Holy City. Let it be remembered that no man ever went far from where he started on a hobby. Those who ride hobbies are apt to mistake selfishness for a great zeal to "defend truth" and "sound doctrine." They give people to understand that "we have seen servants on horses, and princes walking on earth." They want people to recognize their superior abilities; and declare them great princes. They are very anxious to come out of obscurity.

Some men try to make it appear that all the hobby riders are "absoluters." This is a grand mistake. It is to be feared that some, yes many, are willing to ride anything in any direction which they think will bring popularity to self.

One writer who seems to be very hostile to "absoluters" says, "There are about three per cent absolute predestinarians of all things hobby riders." He claims to have news from two other states besides his own. This recording "angel," as it were, marks on the bulletin board, "one state had of those loathsome wretches the great number of two." They had been excluded for something. He called it by an ugly name. The other state has the small number of one, who is in the penitentiary. He says he gets this good news from a traveling elder.

Here the thought suggests itself that there are many traveling elders; some who have to travel to regions where they are unknown to get a congregation. The thought also enters the mind, that if only three percent of the church is impure, the cry of "wolf in sheep clothing" should cease and peace ensue.

Small boys ride hobbies; how silly is the man who stands around and quarrels with the small boys for doing so. A little boy once owned a hobby and rode it, but as he grew the less he cared for it. Finally his hobby was stolen; he also learned who had it. His father told him to see after it and have it brought home. The little fellow replied, "it is not worth having a fuss over."

Oh, that some elders possessed the wisdom of that little boy.

This three percent testimony makes the present condition better than the twelve that Christ called to be his witnesses, for, so far as to numbers, 8 1-3 per cent was Judas Iscariot. Judas did not sidetrack Peter and cause him to cry, war, wolf, etc., nor to tell how many false brethren had been punished. But his theme was, "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and Jesus our Lord. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue; whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

It seems that some elders have not escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. They seem to lust for the mastery over everything, and want other people to think what they do not know is not worth knowing. Some of these wise acres act like they consider themselves absolutely predestinated to preach against the absolute predestination of all things. They seem to think that if God's kingdom rules over all it would have to be in all.

One of these anti-absoluters said it was "God's purpose for Adam to remain in the garden of Eden." Another said, "Certainly it is God's will to save everybody, I am a right smart of a Methodist." He also said, "If I had the power I would take every person in this congregation in my arms and fly to heaven. Another anti-absoluter of the "good samaritan" type, said that "There is as much difference in the words predestinate and foreordain as there is in day and night." Perhaps some one will say, surely, these are not Primitive Baptists. Yes sir, in good standing in their respective churches at the time of said utterances. However one of the said elders afterwards went off and tried to live on "missionary mush." Are these sayings not enough to make the conies hide in the rocks?

Mr. Busybody, whose sir name is self-conceit, causes much trouble. He is always looking after other peoples' business. He sees something wrong everywhere he goes. He wants people to think he is very sound in the faith, and like Jehu of old, says, "Come see my zeal for the Lord." He is restless, sorry he can't be everywhere at the same time. He feels it is his duty to travel and warn the churches that "Mr. Wolf should not be allowed to creep into the sheep-fold." He sometimes boycotts those who he is afraid will graze in his pasture. He has some failing to tell on almost every preacher he mentions except himself. Somebody may say, "Surely this preacher dwells on high; he is up on the walls of Zion where he can see the wolves and hypocrites."

The Lord declares by the prophet Isaiah who should dwell on high. It was, "He that despiseth the gain of oppression, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil, his place of defence shall be the munition of rocks; bread shall be given him; his waters shall be sure." Holy writ says, "The meek shall eat and be satisfied. The meek shall also increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the holy one of Israel. For the terrible one is brought to naught, and the scorner is consumed; and all that watch for iniquity are cut off.

That makes a man an offender for a word, and lays a snare for him that reproveth in the gate; and turns aside the just for a thing of naught." "The Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian Sea, and there shall be a highway for the remnant of his people." Although "a multitude of (Egyptian) shepherds is called forth against the Lord, he will not be afraid of their voice, nor abase himself for the wise of them." So shall the Lord of hosts come down to fight for Mount Zion, and for the hill thereof. As birds flying so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem. Defending, also he will deliver and passing over he will preserve it. Well may Israel say, "Lo, this is our Lord; he will come and save us. This is our God forever, he will be our guide even unto leath." "Watchman, what of the night."

THOMAS LAMBERT.

Ashboro, N. C.

Elder L. H. Hardy:

My Dear Friend—I wish to ask you some questions which I hope you will answer through Zion's Landmark:

1st. Do the scriptures teach that when your brother trespasses against you for you to first go to him and tell him his faults between yourself and him alone, and if he will not hear you, then take with you one or two brethren, and then if he will not hear them take the matter to the church?

Answer—That is the teaching of the scriptures as we find it in Matthew 18th chapter. No church should allow a matter of this kind to be mentioned in her conference until she is sure that these first and second steps have been taken and if she does so allow the church gets out of order and becomes unfit to attend to business until she repent and do her first work.

2nd. Is it not the duty of a deacon or deacons, when they hear of a difficulty or difference between two members of sufficient weight to disturb fellowship, to try to get them together and get them to settle their differences, and if they cannot, then take their matter to the church?

Answer—That is my understanding of the duty of church deacons.

To think that deacons have nothing to do but provide wine and bread and wait on the communion table is to have a very small conception of what the scriptures mean by the service of tables. The deacons should see that the church's financial system is looked after so that the poor of the church can be properly cared for, the running expenses of the church met, the pastor properly cared for and then to look after the peace of the membership so the pastor may give himself to the service of the gospel both in the church and in such evangelical labors as may come under his hand. Good deacons are as hard to find as good pastors and the churches make a big mistake when they try to make deacons as they do when they try to make pastors.

3rd. Let us suppose a case. Two, three or four sisters fall out with a brother through jealousy of one sister of another church. Those sisters find that they cannot, with the evidence they have, make out a case, therefore they drop that particular case and then go about and get up another charge against this same brother, that he has accused one of these sisters of speaking an untruth. At their next meeting when this brother arrives in the meeting house the two deacons with some of these sisters and some other brethren go out in the yard and, with their pastor, talk until after the appointment hour for service, then come back into the house. This brother does not know that anyone has any charge against him for all troubles so far as he knows have been settled satisfactorily to all concerned. Then, in conference, and without letting him know anything of one of there being any trouble with anyone, they line out a charge against this brother that he had said that one of these sisters had spoken falsely. This brother, who had been a member for a number of years and not one charge had ever been brought against him, denies the charge. There is another brother who had been dissipated from boyhood and had been a member only a little over a year and it is generally known that he has indulged in dissipation since he has been in the church, and they bring him up as a witness against the old and orderly brother who has done much for the church.

They continue to charge against that old brother until he becomes so provoked that he calls for his name and withdraws from the church.

Then his wife, seeing how her husband had been treated and knowing his innocence, calls for her name and withdraws. One of the before-cited deacons gets up and cries out, "Peace! peace! is what we want and what we must have. I move that she be excluded," and they exclude her at once without one moment's time for consideration or trying to labor with her and speak of her in such a way as to leave the impression that this sister had been a disturber of the peace of the church. Question—Do you think the proceedings of that conference would be in accord with the rules and regulations of the Primitive Baptist church and according to the rules laid down in the scriptures to govern the same?

Answer—I surely do not think so. It appears to me, in the first place, that the conduct of those members against that brother and sister is a clear case of conspiracy. No number of members of any church can get together and caucus against another member without being guilty of conspiracy. It does not much make any difference if the brother or sister is guilty of some heinous crime they have no right to form such a plot and they cannot do so without being guilty of conspirators. The parties thus engaged are guilty of one of the worst of public offences in the church and are entirely unfit to set on any case in conference until they have repented of their evil ways and acknowledged their wrongs. It appears to me that any brother minister who knows of the existence of such things in a church is in his own light to act as pastor of such a body for thereby he becomes a partaker of her evil deeds.

Secondly, I feel that a brother or sister thus treated and agged about are in their own light to call for their names. They should face the matter and let it come to trial. When they ask for their names that shuts off further trial and however much the church might want to adjust the difficulty it leaves her helpless to do so for then the case has come to be only a one-sided affair. Here the church actually becomes helpless and has to hold what she has even if it is the wrong side. Thus the withdrawing parties not only get more trouble to themselves, but they leave a nasty stink in the church and have placed themselves in such position that they cannot help her clean out her house.

Is there not here a big opening for a meeting for all concerned to come together and not bring up one charge against a brother nor a sister but for each one to confess his or her own faults and let all the others do the same?

Brethren, sisters, would not such meetings be profitable? Have we not all walked in muddy places until our feet have become mangy? Do we not need to come up to the washing of water by the word, that we may come up from the washing as a flock of sheep upon Mt. Gilead?

My own convictions are so strong and weigh me down so heavily that I, for one, am ready and would welcome such a day as a sweet day to enter into rest.

Your loving but troubled brother and friend,

L. H. HADY.

Reidsville, N. C.

THE TEACHER'S STUDY OF WORDS.

"I have given unto them thy words, and they have received them."—John xvii. 8, 14.

Jesus tells us our "idle words" are all gone on before us into the solemn record on high, and that his words shall never pass away, and assures us that, if we be ashamed of him and his words, he will also be ashamed of us before his father and his holy angels. His great work on earth was done in great part by the same instruments as ours—by words. Let us enter, then into the imperative need of the "study of words," remembering his solemn rendering of his account to the Eternal Father, as recorded in John xvii.: "For I have given them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me." Here we see they are given to us in sacred trust, down to the end of time, as the later sentences take us in his petitions, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." Let us try to understand some among the oft-recurring words thus given us, as "sin," which is the revolt of the human will from the divine will; "grace."—the bestowal of divine favor, free and unmerited; "revelation" is a drawing back of a veil or partition wall and God revealing himself to man—not man finding God, but God revealing himself to men. "Redeemer," "redemption," "redeeming,"—the central thought is to buy back; sin is slavery, sinners are bondslaves to Satan and sin, the price paid to redeem or ransom is the 'precious blood of Christ,' through it we are brought back to life, and liberty, and love, back to God. "Atonement!" What is it? If we divide the word, we see its meaning more clearly—at-one-ment. God and men were separated by sin; now, by the atoneing work of the Lord Jesus, the church is at-one with God. "Faith" is the mind grasping, laying hold of, that which is unseen. "Justification" is God's method of dealing with men, according to a divinely-given faith in the person and work of Christ. The more we understand these common scriptural phrases the clearer will our minds become, and we shall not be as parrots using them, when discoursing on the things of God; and under their exercise we shall see deeper and fuller meanings than we saw before! Light shines in gentle rays on the spirit and we shall see the words themselves clenched with the glorious facts imprisoned in them. As we read the utterances of prophetic souls, we see the words stretched and bleeding as it were, to convey meanings beyond the capacity of words. With hearts throbbing with joy or woe they saw the Spirit within the letter.

Words bear the marks of heroic struggle. There are single words, too, in whose significance is divine power. Take the simple word, "so"—"God so loved the world."—volumes may be written on the cause, manner, and duration of that "so." "Yet" is another. "Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter." I remember a lesson of two hours on that word "yet." "The end is not yet," said the Son of God, and O what has that yet meant to the church of God! "But" also has its pregnant meanings. "But he was wounded for our transgressions: but I will not make a full end; but I obtained mercy," and so on. The smallest words seem like golden hinges to gates that swing back and reveal fields and oceans of divine knowledge beyond our present ken.

It will be our wisdom, too, to cultivate simplicity. His words are sweetly simple. Our Lord did not say, "Consider the floral productions of the earth, how they accumulate bulk and foliage, though they perform no manual labor," etc.; but he said, "Consider the lillies, how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin." A very little child would understand much that he said.

Many sayings are hard to be understood, but the great facts of his own life, sufferings, work, death, and resurrection can be simply told to a little child, and many have received them by the Divine Spirit while very young.

Let us follow our great teacher in love and method, and in our teaching keep step with the children and try to understand, and find if they understand. Their path is full of dangers, it is ours to watch their steps as those who must give account. A fresh face in the class is an additional responsibility in instruction, and may be the only one to whom our lesson is sent. It has been so, and in after years the fact has been made known that that once was the guiding word given, and we knew it not. How greatly we need to seek the Holy Spirit for right words, pure words, choice words, forcible words, living words. Dead languages will not do in service of Christ. Formal words are of little use; it is loving words from the Fountain of love, true words from the Rock of Truth. One has said:

"Thou must be truth thyself, if thou the truth would'st teach;

Thy soul must overflow, it another's thou would'st reach;

It needs the overflowing heart to give the lips full speech."

Also—know what you want to say before you attempt to say it, is a good rule. "See your ideas" is old and good advice, and one of the secrets of successful teaching. We should cultivate power of expression and aptness of emphasis in the right word or place; there is something very dreadful in the misuse of words, seeing they are instruments mighty—"for good or ill, to soothe or pierce, kill or give life;" and as we consider the deep meaning of those words, "By the words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.,,

"Oh let your speech with charity be blent,

That all your words, pulsing with good intent,

May bear the truth, exalt the Christ, and find—

Their sacred work in showing forth his mind!"

The study of words in service for the children is one of the grandest on earth. Have we not often proved that we receive more than we give? "He that watereth shall be watered also himself." When we minister to them we learn more than we impart, and create thereby a new world of interest and delight. Who can forget the eager upturned face of a little boy, questioning and wistfully waiting an answer; of the opening mind, and the coy, shy query conveyed in the simple words of "how," "why," "where," "what for?" of the little maid, and not seek with tears of anxiety to answer truly and not mislead; so strive in simple words to convey the laws and love of the kingdom of God, never losing sight of the beautiful object lesson the dear Son of God gave when "He took a little child and set him in the midst, and said, Except ye receive the kingdom of God as a little child ye shall in no wise enter therein;" and a child's faith is implicit.

So, then, as we labor with words as our only tools, and not only so, but we labor in the shadow of faith, as it were, our tools and our work is intangible, unseen, known only to him who provides the tools and the place of labor; and in view of the world to come—Eternity is the goal for which we labor—

"Every word has its own spirit, True or false, that never dies;"

Every word man's lips have utter'd
Are recorded in God's skies."

Nor is this all; there is still a far deeper meaning in "the Word of God," as when we study John i., and Rev. xix. 13.

Dear friends: suffer the word of exhortation; the scriptures were not opened to me at first as they have been since I began at the beginning and went steadily through day by day, studying their references. We are now in our twelfth reading straight through. I began this course about 36 years ago, and have reaped a rich reward.

Your fellow teacher in love and hope,
E. LITTLETON.

West Australia, April, 1907.

Elder Monsees:

Dear Brother—As you have requested I am willing to verify the truthfulness of the statement I made in reference to what I heard Elder Sykes say at the general meeting, Crooked Creek church, Putnam county, Georgia.

Several brethren present heard him ask, "why Primitive Baptists held close communion," and he thought that Baptists should meet on the Sabbath and have Bible readings, and that our doctrine should be preached across the water. On Sunday he he preached a sermon that was indeed captivating; the language was flowery, the illustrations were grand, oh so pleasing to the natural man, and enjoyable too to those that loved the truth as he carried our blessed salvation by grace all along. But in the closing he said he would hail the day when all denominational lines would be withdrawn and we would all be brought together as one mass of christianity.

I did not deem that sound doctrine, so came home dissatisfied with what I saw and heard at that meeting. If the Lord had not have sustained me I would have faltered and fainted by the way. As I had been mixed up with that kind for so long I was seeking deliverance and If I did not find it in the old church where could I go?

After we had our bitter trials here at home, I would not discuss the past. I told several of my sisters the best way now was to never think of the past but to let our minds be at rest, that the Lord had given us peace, and I can truthfully say that there was a sweet peace with me until the day that one of the lower churches sent a letter to destroy the usefulness of one of our beloved gospel ministers. It was such a shock to me and I felt that it was persecution. After services I went to his dear companion and put my arms around her and told her that it was persecution. I never would have consented to the reading of the letters. I talked it over with the one who came bearing the letter; I knew he was in error and I told him so. I afterwards spoke of it as they have gone out from us, and all we want is to be left just where the church was left when our great head left us.

May God in his wisdom rule over Zion everywhere and keep me one of the poorest of his flock in the straight and narrow way.

MRS. A. H. RICE.

Dear Brother Gold:

I am yet very feeble but so I can be up around the house and yard. My throat is very tender and not yet healed up but I think my general condition is much improved.

I have not slept any since one o'clock because of a text which has very forcibly presented itself to my mind and I have become so restless that I must write something about it for the churches. I don't know why I am this way but these times and feelings come over me or in me and I am lashed until I comply. I write because I am as much impressed with it as I am with preaching and I try to preach because I must.

"If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed. For he that biddeth him God speed, is partaker of his evil deeds." 2nd John, 10th, 11th verses.

"A man that is an heretic, after the first and second admonition reject, knowing that he that is such is subverted and sinneth, being condemned of himself. Titus iii. 10, 11.

"And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus. This man was instructed in the way of the Lord, and being perverted in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John. And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquilla and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly." Acts 18:24-26.

These texts came to me just as I have recorded them and they appeared to me to be explanatory the one of the other.

In the first passage quoted we have the cause, and the only cause, given in the Bible that a church can possibly be justified in closing her doors on a minister. They must know that he preaches among them false doctrine, or another doctrine from that which our Lord and his apostles have taught. Salvation by grace and by grace alone for time and for eternity is the doctrine of the Bible. Then to observe the things which are taught in the Bible as the duties of believers in Christ in living in obedience to him and shunning the bewitching and enangling things of the world, abstaining from them; living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world is the doctrine of the good works which God has foreordained that we should walk in them. Any minister being faithful in these things shows that God has set him at liberty in his word and commended him to the churches of the saints, and he is to be received by them. For them to reject him and close him out of their houses brings them in the grossest of disorder and makes them offenders against the whole household of faith, and against every true gospel minister. Why do I say this? Because they have offended against God's word, that word is the standard of our faith and practice. Therefore when we turn away from that word we turn away from the standard of our professions which our God has so graciously given us that we may have peace among ourselves in this unfriendly world. When churches have done these things which are contrary to the scriptures the brethren in the ministry and the sister churches should rebuke them that they might be sound in the faith. Because if they reject one who is sound according to God's word it is proof positive that they are not sound. Then when they have been admonished and exhorted and will not hear but will persist in their evil way the brethren in the ministry and the sister churches should withdraw from them until they have evidence manifested by their turning from their evil way that the Lord has given them repentance unto the acknowledging of truth.

An heretic is a person who holds and avows religious opinions contrary to the doctrine of the scriptures, the only rule of faith and practice.—Webster.

Even a man of that type is to be labored with faithfully and in brotherly love before he is rejected. Many have been the children of God who have perished in martyrdom because they could not subscribe to the doctrines of established churches. The doctrines avowed by churches in their articles of faith are often directly contrary to the doctrine of the Bible, as taught by our Lord and his disciples and these are the only fathers who have been given authority to set bounds or landmarks which we are commanded to not remove. The Roman Catholics set up bounds and used every effort in their power to compell all men to come to their standard, claiming that all who did not do so were heretics and put to death about fifty millions of people, many of whom were the humble followers of our meek and lowly Jesus and sound in the faith and doctrine of the Bible. When the reformers came in and overcome the Catholic powers they established their own: The Lutherans, the Episcopalians, the Presbyterians, all became persecutors of the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, persecuting them unto death because they adhered to the solemn teaching of the Bible. Under the reign of one Presbyterian king eight thousand people were put to death because they would not endorse infant baptism. Today, to be consistent with their standard, the Methodists would have to look upon all who do not accept their doctrines as being heretics having received their full authority in Mr. John Westley's "Deed of Declaration." See Hassell's history, page 543. From these things we should be cautious how we pronounce any heretics just because what they hold to does not appear to us just right. In this day those of us who preach that God is an absolute sovereign over all worlds, men, devils and things are called heretics by some, and pulpits and churches claiming to be Primitive Baptist are denied us. We feel that Christ, Paul and Peter and Jude and the rest of the apostles would receive the same treatment for that is what they believed and taught. "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth" is the very voice of heaven itself. Rev. xix. 6.

That is all that we preach and yet it is said by some among us to be a damnable heresy and we who preach it to be heretics. Oh Lord, if I must be rejected or, die as an heretic because I preach this thy glorious power let it be so! I welcome the day of thy visitation!

What is to be done if one come to us preaching what we believe to be contrary to sound doctrine? The case is plain. Take him as a precious brother, and therefore without malice, but in the sincere love of God, as Aquilla and Priscilla took Apollos, and talk to him, admonish him, labor diligently with him, and try to show him his wrong, not by our rules and our practices; no, these may be wrong. They may have been the rules and practices of the church since our grand fathers' days but yet that may be wrong still. A gray headed wrong is not right. Neither is it a landmark set by the fathers.

The apostles are the fathers in the church. Our Lord left them here to set all things in order in the churches. There was no established church on the earth when he ascended up on high. Soon after his ascension the Holy Ghost came down on the apostles and brethren and it was given unto them to gather the saints (solitary ones in families) and give unto them the ordinances as the Lord had taught them. Therefore the doctrine and practice of the church are to be found in the apostolic teaching, and any resolutions, doctrines or practices outside of these are to be rejected with those who hold to them and advocate them. But let us remember that this is not to be done until we have labored faithfully the second time, being sure that we are right in that we accuse him of heresy and that it is really heresy according to the sacred word of God. To do this otherwise we make ourselves offenders against God's heritage and therefore transgressors to be despised in God's house.

When John the Baptist died his work was at an end. He was sent of God to preach repentance and baptize with the water of repentance. He was the voice of one crying in the wilderness. God sent him but he didn't commission him to send anyone else. Therefore one going out in John's baptism, was without authority. His being eloquent and mighty in the scriptures did not enable him to declare the word of truth. He needed instruction. He needed to see that Jesus, the good shepherd, should be preached, as the only way of salvation. To this end those two God-loving disciples took Apollos and taught him in the way of God more perfectly. They saw the spirit of the Lord in him. He was a living and called minister of God. The gift of the Holy Spirit to that end was in him and therefore his heart was thereby open for this instruction. When it was given it was gladly received. Thus Aquilla and Priscilla had acquitted themselves of any obligations only to love, and the servant of God had received the much-needed teaching. Each could go on their way rejoicing in the faithfulness which the Lord had given unto them.

Brethren in the ministry in particular should see that their brethren under like burden are rightly treated by the churches and if one is shut out without a scriptural cause that church or those churches should be admonished and if they will not heed then the ministry should have love enough for each to let those churches alone and remain away from them. To deal otherwise is uncourteous and unkind toward a fellow laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

Brother Gold, I have written some of the things which I feel sure these scriptures teach. If you think them unworthy of a place in our family paper, send this letter back to me and I will send you the return postage. If you send it back I request that you give your views at length on the three texts that are at the head of this article.

I am now satisfied that what I have written is true discipline of the Bible on these points.

Yours in hope,

AFFLICTIONS.

I feel this evening that I must pen a few words upon the above subject, and if grace, strength and wisdom is afforded me, to comfort the suffering ones of Christ, shall, amidst all my suffering, be fully repaid.

Suffering as I do from epilepsy (a serious bodily affliction) my mind naturally diverts to, and meditates upon this subject; but for some reason, unusually so this evening.

Having excused myself from my pastor and a friend, who expected me to journey with them this lovely afternoon, I had turned aside to my place of rest, in the hope that I might obtain rest and sleep; thus sufficiently recuperating my weakened body to enable me to keep on the go with only a few minutes' sleep however I awake, restless and sleepless, but impressed to write upon the above subject. I entered faithfully upon the discharge of my duty as I saw it, and I was enabled in consequence to attend the night service which fell from the master's table in such profusion that the suffering saints could but be edified. Ministering to the saints on this occasion, were Elders A. J. Moore, of Whitakers, N. C., and J. H. Oliphant, of Crawfordsville, Ind., and I truly felt that I could sing;

"The Lord has promised good to me,
His word my hope secures;
He will my shield and portion be,
As long as life endures."

I realize I think, as fully as it is possible for poor frail man to do, that the afflictions of God's children not only serve in the attainment of divine ends and purposes, but they bring the child of God down to his humble position which he must needs occupy, in order that he may be able to praise God for his manifold and unspeakable blessings to the children of men. And as I meditate upon the subject of our afflictions, I feel that I can explain what a blessing and a privilege we have in our afflictions, for we realize so perceptibly that they are for our good! And they are for our good in each and every case, though we may for the time, be blind to the fact. God is too good to err, and we are told that he loves us with an everlasting love, and with this assurance, we can but feel that our afflictions will redound to the glory of his precious name, and that his divine ends will be attained.

Not a sparrow falleth without his notice, and if so, why should he overlook one whom he has loved with an everlasting love; one for whom he atoned on the cross; and one who was given him before the world began?

He leads us in a way that we know not, but he will in his wisdom make crooked ways straight, so that ere our eyes are open to a clear perception of the fact, we often realize that "afflictions though they seem severe, are oft in mercy sent." The flesh is weak, and in our suffering, we cry to God for relief from our misery and pain; in our disobedience we try to ask God to have mercy upon us poor sinners; and we feel that we have been left alone in the wilderness of sin. But oh! is it not a sublime thought upon which we can feel the assurance that he will be with us if we are his children.

"Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the Lord delivereth him out of them all. As his children, we are embraced in the righteous above referred to, because we have been made white in the blood of the Lamb. Our sins have been blotted out, and will be remembered against us no more forever. So then if we are the Lord's anointed, we can trust to the blessed assurance which we have, that in our afflictions of whatever nature, the Lord will deliver us out of them all, and bring us out more than conquerors, through him that loved us.

But we are often, yes often surrounded with doubts and fears, and we cannot trust our case in the hands of him who rules and governs the universe. Here we should be more resigned than we are, in all our afflictions. If there is reason for our hope that Jesus' blood has made us white as snow, we cannot as believers in predestination and election, fear that he would withdraw from us, that efficacious atonement on the cross.

Then let those of us who entertain the little hope, take courage, even in our afflictions, ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.

The whole need not a physician, but the sick—the afflicted. If you, dear reader, feel that you are guilty and in need of Jesus in the pardon of your sins, you are afflicted, and this is, in my mind, evidence that your sins are pardoned already, though perhaps not perceivable as such to you. All the fitness he requireth is to feel your need of him. Do you, dear reader, feel your need of him? Do you feel that "in me that is my flesh, dwelleth no good thing?" If so, then substitute obedience for disobedience, by taking up your cross, following him into the liquid grave, to rise in newness of life, where we shall ever be with the Lord. Thus can we as children of the atoning Jesus, eliminate much suffering, and frequent afflictions which might be ours to share, for "as many of us as have been baptized into Christ—not into the churches of men which embody false teachings and doctrine, but into Christ—have put on Christ for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."

God help us all to be obedient and subservient to his will.

Paul to the Corinthians, while taking comfort in afflictions, says "we are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted but not forsaken; cast down but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body."

The suffering and afflicted, whether in body or mind, whether inside or outside of the church militant (provided they have a hope in the saving power of the Lord Jesus through the pardon of their sins) can take courage from the above scripture "for our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, for he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

And "now I rejoice, not that you were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing."

"Poor and afflicted Lord are thine,
Among the great unfit to shine,
But though the world may think it strange,
They would not with the world exchange."

In love,
W. R. MOORE.

LAST DAYS BEST DAYS.

"So the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning," Job 42-12. The beginning of Job's days was good, but the ending better, and the wise man says the end of a thing is better than the beginning—that is if it does not end well it is a failure.

Naturally and literally there is a tendency to contraction in a man as old age creeps upon him. His vision becomes shorter, his memory weaker, his powers of energy enervated, his sympathy soured, his enthusiasm chilled, his prospects blasted, and age seems to bury him in a cell of gloom. He finds much fault of the times, and of mankind, and complains that things are worse, and people are more corrupt than they were when he was young, unless his mind is broadened and deepened, and his heart made tender by the grace of God. But if grace warms and strengthens him in the inner man then tribulation is a blessing, and works patience in him, and patience works experience, and experience works hope, and hope makes not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost so the hope of eternity brightens his pathway towards the end of his journey; for the righteous hath hope in his death, and the light shines more and more unto the perfect day. He that puts on the whole armor of God—that gives diligence to add to his faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance godliness and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brother by kindness charity shall have an unbandant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our God.

Such as walk after the flesh and lack these things therefore do not have that abundant entrance into the kingdom of heaven.

Look at such men of faith as Abel who being dead yet speaks, Enoch who walked with God and the Lord took him away from sorrowful earth. See how blest was Noah, Abraham, and the other fathers all died in the blessed faith of Jesus. Moses died at the word of the Lord, and saw the goodly land, David's sweet song as he passed away was a glorious triumph. The prophets gloried in the Lord and were so blessed as Daniel to whom God said Go thy way and in the end thou shalt stand in thy lot. Stephen falls asleep in Jesus. Paul shouts of victory as he said I have fought a good fight, and have finished my course, and have kept the faith; and henceforth there is a crown of righteousness laid up for me and not for me only, but for all them that love the appearing of Jesus. The beloved John seemed to increase in love and peace, and was given more wonderful views of glory before he was called up higher.

But greatest of all is the shout of victory of him who endured and resisted unto blood, and as he tread the wine-press of the wrath of God alone, and overcame every enemy for all his people, and who having finished the the work God gave him to do cried in triumph it is finished. How glorious and eternal is the end that follows to this perfect life of Jesus.

"nd these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal," Matt. 25-46.

A sister of Georgia requests my view of the above scripture.

If there are not two classes of people referred to in this verse, then what language could do this? If there are not two distinct, separate places or states described in this language, then what language could be employed to do this? If the punishment of the one is not everlasting, and the happiness of the other is not eternal, then what could set forth these two states?

Sheep and goats are the two characters employed in the new testament, which sifts out the precious from the vile. Are sheep ever used to denote any but the redeemed of the Lord, and where are goats ever used to set forth the beloved of God?

The sheep and goats are separated by Jesus who shall separate them one from another. The sheep Jesus shall place on his right hand, and the goats on his left hand.

There is one mark of difference that separates them and denotes the difference of their characters. The sheep love Jesus, and it is proven by their work. What is that work? They visit and minister to his people in their affliction. Jesus said, when I was sick and in prison ye came unto me and ministered unto me, and when I was naked ye clothed me, and when I was hungry ye fed me. His people shall say, Lord when did we ever see thee thus and so minister unto thee? He shall say, inasmuch as ye have done this unto me one of the least of my people ye have done it unto me.

The great principle and mystery of the unity of Jesus and his people or body is here taught, so that what is done unto the least one of his people is done unto him.

The love that his people have for Jesus and for each other is shown in the manner of their conduct toward each other in ministering to them.

Also the character or nature of God's children is shown by the use of sheep to symbolize them. Sheep are lowly, peaceable, meek and submissive to the providence of God. They are not pretentious. They do not claim any worthiness, nor exalt themselves. They claim nothing. They are astonished when told what they had done. Character when good prompts to good deeds. Make the true good and the fruit will be good. When one leads a goodly life you know that corrupt thoughts and a wicked heart could not produce such a life. The sheep are saved by grace. Hence they never trust to anything they have done, nor consider they have ever done anything to merit salvation, which is the truth. The Lord has saved the sheep who hear his voice and follow him, and he gives unto them eternal life.

The goats are heady, highminded, pretentious, assuming merit, and are forward to claim the best. They do not love the principles the sheep love. They do not love Jesus nor his flock, nor do they minister to them in love. They do not possess the principle that brings people to heaven, or sets them on the right hand of God. They do not love grace, nor do they love those that love it.

NEW THINGS.

A new order is springing up that claims that man can perpetuate his youth and thus possess immortality. They also hold that man has a subjective mind, or a secret, hidden mind, that if he will cultivate will develop into such brightness that it becomes creative.

Satan is a great imitator and a sharp, cunning deceiver. The bible doctrine sets forth eternal life, eternal youth, blessed childhood in Jesus, where there is no sin and no death. Jesus says he that keepeth my sayings shall never see death. The bible sets forth the truth that he that is born of God has a spiritual mind that serves the law of God. But that this character, born of God is plagued with an old man, a carnal mind contrary to the law of God, and hence that there is a warfare between the two.

But greater is He that is in us than he—the devil—that is in the world. For Christ is in the child of God, and he is the hope of glory.

Is not this an age of distracting error? Why such restlessness? Why such love of money and such a spend-thrift age? Why so many suicides? Why so many more consumers than producers? People have deserted the post of the laborer. How few labor with their own hands, and are content to live within their means? The world wants new things, but God's way is the only good, safe, sensible way.

The Lord God shall make all things new in the resurrection life. John beheld the new Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven. But that is after the first heaven and first earth are passed away, and there shall be no more sea. He does not change old things into new ones. He destroys the old things, and behold all things are become new.

P. D. G.

WHY ARE PROVISIONS SO HIGH?

One reason is that there are so many more eaters than workers—consumers than producers. But few are doing the labor. Thousands are doing the eating and spending. If a baseball is held hundreds or thousands will visit that, lose their time, spend some money, and not be profited one cent by such folly: so with numbers of other ways of wasting time and spending money.

Instead of farmers preparing wheat land in time and sowing wheat, they will spend their time in going to town and neglect farm work, and say their land will not produce wheat. When I was a youth a farmer that bought his flower, pork etc., was counted a worthless farmer.

If our farmers would raise their own provisions at home speculators might get a corner on wheat or pork but that would not hurt them. If we would use common sense and regard bible teaching about what farmers should cultivate, high tariff and gambling would not hurt us. It looks like we might learn to do better.

Experience teaches a dear school but fools will learn in no other.

Where is the vigor and manliness that once marked and distinguished our farmers?

Just after the war of 1861, it was said by the large farmers, Kill out your hogs, raise cotton and compel laborers to pay a high price for meat. The advice was followed by too many. Now they say we cannot grow wheat. Let us grow cotton and tobacco and buy breadstuffs. Behold the effect such silly advice.

When I visit a farmer who has chickens, pigs, sheep, cattle, young colts, corn in his crib and wheat in his barn it reminds me of olden times, and I feel here is a man that acts on the rules of common sense, and he can rise up at night and let his friend have as many loaves as he wishes.

We never gain by leaving the old bible paths of prudence and wisdom.

"And the Philistines said, Behold the Hebrews come forth out of the holes where they had hid themselves," 1st Sam. 14:11.

In the evil days of Saul's reign there was disaster to his army and distress among Israelites. For Saul was not the gift of God to Israel as David was. God gave Saul to Israel as king in his anger, and took him away in his wrath: but of David he said, "I have found David my servant: with my holy oil have I anointed him." Also he said, David is a man after my own heart. So Saul could not be a blessing unto Israel as David was. It was during the evil reign of Saul the uncircumcised Philistines so oppressed Israel that they hid in holes and caves and dens. Nor could they have sword nor spear, nor iron tool with which to fight. They had some tools with which they could plough or otherwise cultivate their fields. But they could not sharpen them when dull unless they went to the Philistines to do that much.

How bitter it is thus to be deprived of liberty, and enslaved under cruel task masters—men that hate you and oppress you. Their king did evil in the sight of the Lord and therefore he suffered their enemies to distress them. Rulers that fear God are a blessing to men. But when they do not fear God they do not regard man or the rights nor the needs nor the good of men. It is easy to do right if we love right and love men and seek their good.

David is a notable example of a righteous ruler. He loved the Lord and served him. It is so good to read of such a ruler as David who was a type of the Lord Jesus, who is God's greatest gift to men.

During Saul's reign the people hid themselves from their enemies. Nor had they any power to stand before the Philistines. It is like when wickedness is among the people of God, and they creep about and do not show themselves or present themselves before the Lord. How easy to become slack when there is but little love to God and to one another. How easily we are frightened and imagine a lion is in the way. But when we are right we are bold as a lion, because our courage is such that we lay down our lives for the brethren, and the cause of truth is dear to us.

Jonathan and his armor bearer showed themselves to the Philistines during such an invasion into Israel the enemies had made. When the Philistines saw these men coming out of their holes they said, Behold the Hebrews are coming out of their holes and showing themselves.

The warm rays of the sun of righteousness shining within us will cause us to come forth and show ourselves.

Jonathan and his armor bearer began slaying their enemies and the battle increased, and there was a great trembling in the camp of the Philistines, and the earth trembled, and the people of Israel that had been with the enemy turned against them, and all the men that had hid themselves came out of their holes, and though Israel had no swords they did not need any weapons, for every man of the Philistines was turned against every other man, and every sword was slaying his fellow, and there was a most wonderful battle and a great slaughter, and no part of the glory belonged to King Saul; but the brave and lovely Jonathan appeared in his beauty. He was the friend of David, very lovely and faithful to David, and valient in the truth.

It is marvelous to read or see how God delivers Israel at times. How unexpected and glorious are his ways. Surely a God of truth, uprightness and power is He. None can deliver after this sort.

P. D. G.

SECRET THINGS—REVEALED THINGS.

The bible tells us that secret things belong to God, and revealed things belong to Israelites, or as Moses said to us and our children.

One of the impossibilities is to find out what God keeps in his own power or does not reveal. If it were right for him to reveal it he would do so. For all that he does is wise and right.

If we are humble we do not wish to meddle or intrude where we have no business; But if God is pleased to reveal anything unto us we desire to rejoice with fear and trembling.

Presumptuous sins have always caused great trouble. How does man know what to teach where there is no word from God? Who knows the mind of the Lord? A great curse is pronounced on the one that adds to or takes from that which God has declared. To substitute something else for what God has declared is presumption. To introduce new things instead of what He has declared is meddling and is presumptuous.

Much trouble has been caused by introducing ideas and notions that bible words are considered insufficient to express. For instance, one asserts a notion that he must coin a term which he calls time salvation, and argues and defends this until he gets up a following. Another opposes this view and forms another party of followers and so there arises a division on this matter.

If we are right the bible terms and language will tell all that we wish told. Revealed things are all we wish to know if we are right. Salvation is of the Lord. Today salvation is of the Lord, all salvation is of the Lord. No man can save himself or save any one else, if the Lord does not save him.

The scope and purpose of a word, how it is used and applied in the bible, should be considered in our employment of it. For instance, take the word predestinate for example. How is it used in the bible? For whom He did foreknow he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." He also justified and glorified them. There is the use of the same word in Eph., "Having predesti-ated us to the adoption of children," etc. Then the bible use of this word is to cause those acted upon, inwardly it is to make them holy. God's foreknowledge embraces only those beloved by him. Of course the scriptures teach that he makes the wrath of man praise him. But all things work together for good only to those that love God, and are the called according to his purpose.

If we would always use, expound and apply the scriptures as holy men of old who were faithful expositors did there would be no distress brought on the church of God in such use of words.

One constructs a theory that calls for a word not used in the bible in order to express his view. He uses the word unlimited or limited owing to the limitation he places on the operations of God, or he uses the word absolute to show the certainty of God doing his own will. There is no question among Baptists but that God does all his pleasure, but some think that wicked men do not the pleasure of the Lord, though they cannot defeat his will or purpose.

Another does not see things thus, and he objects to the views advanced and to the word emphasized.

We have a difficulty in explaining all that we wish to on scripture subjects, but we cannot do better than to hold fast the form of sound words the Holy Ghost has supplied. Nor will we be so liable to drift off and founder in unknown waters if we abide in the ship, and dwell in the field which the Lord has blest.

To get up a party and have a set of followers is what any man will be ashamed of at some time. We are to be followers of Christ who is the fulness and perfection of truth, who is the way, the truth and the life, and no man comes to the Father but by him.

Do we believe his revealed or declared well? What do we know about things he has not revealed. The most perfect submission is shown in trusting and obeying him in all things, feeling that he has declared what it is necessary for us to know. What we should know hereafter he will give or reveal to us in the right time. For the things God has put in his own power knows no man, nor the angels. Jesus said no man knows when this world shall have an end. Of that day and hour knoweth no man, nor any angel, nor even the Son but the Father only. Yet there have been many that have claimed to know when that day is. But they have all proved that they knew nothing about it.

It is certain to my mind that God works all things according to the counsel of his own will, and not according to the will of any man. It is certain also that this condition or state of things shows who is humble and who is not humble and submissive to God's will.

The desire to be considered wise or a great gift, or a great expounder of mysteries is a snare that entraps many to their fall, while the humble shuns such things and dwells in a safe place.

Why should I want to set myself in array against God, or mislead his dear people?

P. D. G.

SHOULD WE SAY,
"I'M GLAD I'M A SINNER?"

Roanoke, Va., January 23, 1909.

Among the many harsh things that are being said by our people in some quarters, I have observed the expression, "I'm glad I'm a sinner." Is this a proper expression to be used by a child of God? Is it true in doctrine that one should be glad he is a sinner? And is it true in experience that we are glad that we are sinners?

First. What is it to be a sinner?
Ans. It is to be a transgressor of God's laws? Is it right to transgress God's law? Ans. No, it is wrong. Then should one be glad that he has done or is doing wrong. Ans. No, it is not right to do wrong and one should not be glad that he is or has been a wrongdoer or sinner, and should not use such an expression either publicly or privately.

Secondly. Is it experimental, that we are glad that we are sinners? If so, when was it first true of us? Did we feel to be glad that we were sinners when the light first shone in our hearts showing us how vile we were in the sight of God? It was not so with me. I was sorry that I had sinned against a just and holy God. I hated sin in proportion as God revealed to me how sinful and vile I was. It was sin that was sending my soul to hell, as I thought, and it seemed "his righteous law approved it well." Far from being glad that I was a sinner, I would have given worlds, if mine, to be free from sin. When Christ was revealed unto me as the one that had through mercy and love taken my law—place in my stead and atoned for all my sins, it was not then my thought that I was glad that I was a sinner; in stead, I was glad that he was a Saviour of a poor, helpless and undone sinner as I felt to be. It did not once occur to me that I was glad that I was a sinner, in order that he might save me. One does not desire to fall into a stream in order to be pulled out; neither is the one that has been rescued from drowning glad that he fell into the stream. His only gladness or delight is for his deliverance and his gratitude is great toward his deliverer. So that we should not say that we are glad we are sinners, but rather we are glad we, being sinners, are saved by the grace of God. Our gladness is for our salvation, not for our sinfulness?

Furthermore, not one of the apostles or holy men of old has recorded that he was glad that he was a sinner, or that any, saint or sinner, should be glad that he is a sinner. So that there is no authority in the word of God or in our experience for such an expression, and we hope that our brethren will be careful not to use this harsh and erroneous expression. We are not commanded to feed the children or to make ourselves and our doctrine unpopular with the world, by using erroneous and unscriptural expressions.

The fact that sin was within God's foreknowledge, and even his purpose, did not make sin right or a thing to be desired by anyone. But sin is hateful to God, and should be and is hateful to his children; and we should not only not practice sin, but should not use any expression that would seem to countenance or encourage sin, or to palliate the sinfulness of sin.

SAM N. HURST.

Remarks—Those who say they are glad they are sinners have not felt such godly sorrow as works repentance unto life not to be repented of. To be glad that one has been quickened from the dead works to serve the living and true God is proof that he has served sin in the sense that he has felt its burden, and is made free from that bitter servitude, and is rejoicing in the freedom of serving the Lord Jesus, "But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed that form of doctrine which was delivered you," Rom. 6:17. I think that means that they thanked God that they had been quickened by him to feel the wretched bondage of the service of sin, and that God had delivered unto them that form of doctrine which had freed them from the bondage of sin. What is dreadful as sin? How wretched it make sone. Sin slays me by the law which is good. I think I know what a Baptist means when he says I am glad I am a sinner. He does not mean that he is a Pharisee or self-righteous, but he means that God has shown him that he is a sinner and therefore needs a Saviour. For it is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners of whom Paul said I am chief. For there is no greater ignorance, nor any that is so offensive to God as for one to be glorying in his own supposed worthiness, for it is glorying in his shame: and there is nothing that more commends one to your sympathy than for him to manifest the deep self abhorrence of his sense of sinfulness. Still he is not glad he is a sinner, but abhors himself as one that is vile.

Our words should be seasoned with salt and should set forth our true place on earth as unworthy of God's mercy, and they should exact the Lord as just and gracious.

P. D. G.

GRACE.

There is no power in me, that if myself, that can appreciate the grace of God. Nor is there anything in my nature that can desire that grace that brings salvation, or that can teach me how to ask for it, or hope for it.

There is nothing in the grace of God that is limited or hindered by my worthiness, vileness or sinfulness. Because my guilt has rendered me powerless to repent, seek for mercy, choose it or desire it this does not prevent the coming of the grace of God that brings salvation.

Where sin abounded even unto death there grace did much more abound. It is not until we are made conscious of our vile and helpless nature--made so too by our transgression--that the sufficiency of grace appears. As long as there is in one any thought that he has contributed any thing in aiding the Lord in salvation by his works, that would make it a matter of debt. It is either all of debt or all of grace, otherwise there is no grace. There is nothing that so effectually excludes works as grace does. Nor is there any thing one can be so great a gainer by than to be saved from his own works, and altogether by grace. The reward of man's work could never be anything but damnation. The reward or effect of grace could never be any thing but salvation, because grace is altogether from the Lord. By grace are ye saved through faith. This grace excludes work. Being altogether by grace which makes me what I am as saved, there can not be any salvation so glorious as that by grace, for that is all of God.

To find grace in the eyes of the Lord is the sweetest and most precious blessing ever granted to fallen man. Jesus is full of grace and truth, and of his fulness have we all received, and grace for grace—grace multiplied.

P. D. G.

SAYS THEY ARE HYPERBOLES.

Clyde, Jan. 12.—“If the right eye cause thee to stumble pluck it out and cast it from thee” is a hyperbole which no one is expected to believe literally, declares the last edition of the Biblical World, a publication at the University of Chicago, of which President Harper is the editor. The editorial states that the hyperbole is much used in the New Testament and that it is absurd to think that many of them are meant to be literally true.
Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Enclosed please find a clipping, from a newspaper which I found, and I do not know what it means. I have asked several brethren and none of them can tell me. The word “hyperbole,” said to be in the scripture is what bothers me. There is no such word in the bible. Please let me know your opinion on such stuff through the Landmark, and what that man Harper means by such words. I do not like to see the bible trespassed upon, and I believe this is a gross trespass on the word of God.

W. H. BROADWAY.

Remark—The word hyperbole is not in the bible. The man Harper referred to does not mean to state that the word hyperbole is in the bible. He means to state that it is a figure of speech that is much used in the bible. For instance, "if thy right eye causeth thee to stumble pluck it out," is a figure of speech, and does not mean that naturally or literally, if one walking along stumbles because his right eye has bad sight, and has caused him to stumble, therefore he should pluck it out and cast it from him; but it refers to a dark, corrupt principle in him that mislead him, and he should mortify that lust, deny self, or so act as to escape from under the power of that corrupt principle; for it is better to enter into life maimed than having two eyes to be cast into hell.

If a man is depending on any false prop, or following any blind guide, or trusting to his carnal reason, whatever he is leaning upon, if it be darkness or misleading, he had better pluck it out and cast it off, for it will prove a curse to him if he trusts to it.

While figures of speech are not to be taken literally, yet they are the most effective way of imparting instruction, and the wise in heart so perceive, and are instructed. A literal sheep is not a child of God, yet what a wonderful figure it is of that people.

P. D. G.

"The preparation of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue is from the Lord.

"All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes; but the Lord weigheth the spirits.

Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established.

—Proverbs xvi 1, 2, 3.

OBITUARIES

DEATH OF ALBERT LANG.

On last Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. the community of Fountain lost one of its most highly esteemed citizens.

On every hand the writer heard expressions of the high estimation in which he was held by all who knew him.

The fatal malady was pneumonia. Everything that could be done was done for him, but nothing could stay the hand of death.

Albert Lang was a man of good qualities, sober habits and fine judgment in matters of business.

As a child he was obedient to his parents. As a husband he was tender, faithful and affectionate. As a father, devoted and thoughtful, and as a citizen, patriotic and true to the core.

In conviction he was loyal to the Primitive Baptist faith, and a constant attendant upon its services.

He leaves a wife and two children—one 4 years and the other but a few weeks old—to mourn their loss.

His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lang, and one sister survive him and a host of sorrowing friends, to all of whom we tender our deepest sympathy.

His wife was Miss Mary Lewis, of Farmville, and many are the friends who deeply feel for her in this sore distress.

Last fall Mr. Lang was elected county commissioner, and the whole county feels that his death is a distinct loss.

Mr. Lang had been very successful in all of his affairs, and leaves a competency for his wife and children.

And while his death seems to be an untimely one, for a man of such true worth and capable of doing so much good; yet we bow with submission to the Supreme Ruler and say: "Thy will be done."

G. W. BELK.

JULLIUS LEON CANADY.

On the 17th day of March the death angel of heaven visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Canady and took away the sweetest bud of life, his only child, little Julius Leon Canada. He was only ill for a few days when our good Lord in his own good time took him home to heaven. But oh, isn't it hard for us to have to part from those we love. He was so sweet and cheerful that it seemed to me he was only given to us for a few days; but we know that Jesus says, suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not and his will shall be done and not ours. But how sad it is for papa and mama to lose their only sweet little darling.

He was one year, six months and ten days old when our blessed Saviour called him. All was done for him that two physicians, father, mother, relatives and friends could do, but none could stay the cold hand of death.

Dear readers, none but God knows how the hearts of those dear parents are bleeding over the loss of their darling little boy. May God in his all-saving power bind up their broken hearts and prepare them to meet their little babe. How sad and lonely their home is without little Julius, but our loss is his eternal gain.

"While we wonder sad and lonely
For the happy days gone by,
Little Julius now is singing
Praises in the shiney sky.

"A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled."

May God's people in all their prayers remember the bereaved parents and may God in all his tender mercy bind up all our broken hearts. Hoping to be remembered in the prayers of all God's dear people, written by his loving aunt,

MARTHA WILLIAMS.

GENIE DAVIS.

It is with a sad heart I attempt to chronicle the death of Mrs. Genie Davis, wife of A. J. Davis, who departed this life Jan. 26, 1909. She was afflicted with that dreadful disease, bowel consumption, for about eight years, but bore her affliction with christian fortitude until death relieved her of her sufferings.

The writer has known her for forty years to be a peaceable, good woman. She was born Mar. 18, 1851, making her stay on earth 57 years, 10 months and 8 days. She was twice married and was the mother of six children, three boys and three girls. She leaves a husband, three children, six grandchildren and several friends to mourn their loss. We mourn not as those who have no hope for we believe she is at rest from her labors. She joined the Free Will Baptist church about forty years ago but becoming dissatisfied she united with the Primitive Baptists at Beulah, Johnston county, N. C., June 19, 1892, where she remained until her death. The family has our sympathy.

ALFRED JAMES.

The subject of this notice, who resided in Pitt county, N. C., was born March 24, 1824, and departed this life June 11, 1903, making his stay here 84 years, 2 months and 27 days, which is a good old age, a little over the allotted time, even by reason of strength, yet such are soon cut off and fly away.

He was a farmer and a successful one, being very industrious, working hard during his stay here when able.

He was first married to Elizabeth Highsmith in December, 1845, to which union was born fourteen children, five boys and nine girls. He and his first wife lived together thirty-two years. Sister James was an invalid the last eleven years of her life with rheumatism which caused her death. I don't know the date, but some time after that he married Miss Maniza Highsmith, sister to his first wife. To this union there were no children. They lived together happily until January 2, 1903, when the summons came for her. That left Brother James very lonely the balance of his days, being destitute of that companionship here which is only an earthly tie to be dissolved by death.

In the late civil war between the states he volunteered and went to the army in the spring of 1863, and was a faithful soldier, prompt in every duty. He was wounded in his left arm during his stay in the war. He returned home in April, 1865, and resumed his usual vocation as a means of livelihood.

He united with the church at Flat Swamp in 1879, at their September meeting, and was indeed one of the most faithful members of that body, ever filling his seat when not providentially hindered. He greatly enjoyed the gospel preached and the fellowship of his brethren. He was of a quiet disposition and not a man of so many words as some. If all church members was as he was there would not be much trouble in churches. He was a kind husband and father, and a good neighbor, ever ready to favor anyone in need, and is greatly missed in the neighborhood as well as the church. He was not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, of which his pastor is a witness.

He was taken sick with pneumonia in January and was never able to walk anymore. During the first of his illness he talked much of wanting to get well so he could go to his meeting again. He regretted to have to give up his church. The latter part of his illness his speech changed. He wanted to die and go to rest and his faith was strong until the last.

He leaves eight children, three boys and five girls, fifty-six grandchildren and forty great-grandchildren to mourn their loss, but their loss is his eternal gain. His children regretted to give him up. He frequently asked them what they would do when he was gone.

Elder M. T. Lawrence preached his funeral to a large gathering of brethren and friends who gathered to pay their last respects to their aged brother and friend who died in that faith once delivered to the saints.

I still remember his wishful look at me when he got past speaking; I feel sure that we loved each other in the Lord. May grace be given to the needy ones.

By request of his children,

G. D. ROBERSON.

ELDER JAMES H. LATHAM.

The subject of this sketch was born on the 14th of January, 1855, and died November 28, 1908. About 1880 he was married to Miss Mary L. Respass, by which union was born unto him twelve children, four dead and eight living. His mother died when he was five weeks old and his father when he was three years old. At the death of his father his uncle, Henry Latham, took charge of and raised him. Brother Latham was connected with one of the best families of Beaufort and Washington counties, Mr. Charles Latham, the father of Major L. C. Latham, the brilliant lawyer and congressman, being his uncle.

Brother Latham united with the church at White Plains on Saturday before the first Lord's day in February, 1878, and was baptized by the writer of this notice the next day. Shortly after that date he was licensed to preach and on the first Sunday in August, 1882, he was ordained to the work of the ministry by Elders N. H. Harrison and D. W. Topping. Brother Latham acted as assistant pastor to Elder N. H. Harrison at White Plains church, up to the time of his death and no root of bitterness sprang up between them. He was dearly beloved by the church. He was a living epistle of Christ and was a bold defender of the doctrine of electing grace, and would not compromise that doctrine with the best friend on earth.

Brother Latham was a feeble man all his life and did not travel much. I have often said he did not pass for his worth. He died very suddenly from a congestive chill, with Dr. Hunter, his physician at his bedside. The writer of this sketch loved him and can truly say he carried him in his heart, and was with him when his poor body was laid beneath the silent sod. The church in her sad bereavement believes her loss is his eternal gain.

May God's richest blessings rest upon his wife and children in this world and in the world to come.

The church at White Plains desires a copy of this notice spread on her church book, one copy sent to the Landmark for publication and one copy to his bereaved family.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, at our April conference meeting a motion was made and seconded to exclude Elder Sam N. Hurst from the church for previous conduct, and,

Whereas, Dr. Hurst begged that an effort be made for peace by vote and the motion withdrawn. The motion was withdrawn and peace voted. It was understood in voting peace that all matters of confusion of the passed were to be settled and that forever. Whereupon immediately after the adjournment of said conference meeting Eldr Sam N. Hurst and Sister Dillon wrote long documents to various ministers throughout the Pig River Association, airing passed matters and giving vent to their gall of bitterness and publicity to suspicion, imaginery and vague things which would make for them and withholding such as would make against them, and charged no peace after voting peace, all of which has been a great injury to the good name of our church, pastor, deacons and members; and,

Whereas, neither of them has attended services at our church since said meeting notwithstanding we have had five services, three of which by a traveling minister of much ability, and,

Whereas, it is commonly reported that Elder Sam Hurst is going to join an Arminian church and reliably reported by eye-witnesses that he has been in constant attendance upon their services, and actually affiliated with them in their services by leading in prayer; and,

Whereas, they have have made slanderous reports to visiting ministers, who, by chance stopped with them (and they in the course of their travels have given publicity to the same, for which conduct the church votes her condemnation on these ministers); and,

Whereas, Elder Sam N. Hurst and Sister Dillon have been constant disturbers of peace for some four months, notwithstanding the church has labored with them; and,

Whereas, they have made themselves more and more intolerable in their conduct, therefore for the peace and prosperity of our church, I move we exclude them. Motion seconded. Motion amended by Elder J. C. Hurst that Sister Dillon's case be postponed until next meeting, as she could not be present, and that Elder Sam N. Hurst be severely rebuked instead of excluded.

Amendment carried, but afterwards reconsidered in the absence of Elder J. C. Hurst and Eld. Sam N. Hurst, was excluded on the charges herein, the church voting unanimous on his exclusion. Elder Sam N. Hurst was notified of the charges and to appear at said meeting, and was cognizant that he would be excluded, therefore he came and gave the clerk a letter of withdrawal, which was never read to the church, but he was excluded on the charges stated. He was present and spoke to the charges, but failed to give satisfaction. The church in this motion desires to record that Elder J. C. Hurst has never had a charge entertained against him in this church, and we hold him in love, fellowship and high esteem.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26, 1909.

I am thinking of the one that is the author of ail love and communion, the very embodiment of peace and good will toward man, the fountain of all comfort and consolation, and I go back in meditation, to the beginning when God created the heaven and the earth, and the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light, and there was light. And God called the light day and the darkness he called night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.

I am thinking of eternity, the evening that existed before the morning of time, "when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." In the order of God's creation: the evening and the morning continued for six days, "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." So we understand that there is a rest to the people of God, as Paul says in his letter to the Hebrews, 4-9, "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God, for he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his." This rest is found in the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, when we rest in the finished work of Christ as the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved; this rest is not experienced until we are delivered from under the condemnation of the law. The law is our school master to bring us unto Christ.

"Lord I believe a rest remains
To ail thy people known,
A rest where pure enjoyment reigns,
And thou art loved alone,
A rest where all our souls desire
Is fixed on things above,
Where fear, and sin, and grief expire
Cast out by perfect love."

We think of God as sovereign and self-existent, eternal and unchangeable, even before he said, "Let there be light," and we know that the glory of his kingdom and existence was not added to or taken from, in the bringing to manifestation of the natural creation. The natural creation and the spiritual kingdom are separate and distinct, and in no wise is the natural, spiritual, or the spiritual natural, for "the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

Then as man exists natural in his natural creation by the creative power of God, so does he exist and comprehend the spiritual kingdom by the spirit of God. "All thy children shall be taught of God."

My mind is dwelling upon the darkness existing in eternity, even before the beginning, and also while the heaven and the earth were being created. "And God said, Let there be light, and there was light." The light God called day, and the darkness he called night. This was before he made the two great lights: the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night; he made the stars also." The two great lights I understand to be the natural sun and the moon, the moon receives its light from the sun and represents the law: the sun represents the son of righteousness which rises with healing in his wings, the stars represent the children of God, the generation of Jesus Christ, the seed of Abraham.

So we have in the natural creation: things pointing to and directing our minds to the spiritual kingdom.

"We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

The people of God are brought from darkness into his marvelous light, and the darkness they are brought from is their existence of being dead in trespasses and in sin. They know nothing of the light or day until God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, shines in their hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

God said, "Let there be light, and there was light," and God divides the light from the darkness that we may comprehend the contrast, for in no other way do we know or understand except by contrast, as day and night, light and darkness, heat and cold, summer and winter, joy and sorrow, rich and poor, prosperity and adversity, as we know the depths of hell (darkness) so do we rejoice in the joys of heaven—light.

I understand the light to be from the realms of eternal glory, as the day dawns previous to the rising of the natural sun, and sheds light over the earth, so does the "day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts," and it is this light that God said: "Let there be light, and there was light."

It is this light that casts a shadow from death, that all the redeemed of God travel in this pilgrimage of low grounds of sorrow, "the valley of the shadow of death." As the natural sun casts a shadow, when beyond a clump of trees (and we would represent the clump of trees as natural death or separation from natural life) and one walking in that shadow toward the sun, would reach the cause of the shadow, and passing through it, would behold the sun in its radiance, so the pilgrims of Zion are in the valley of the shadow of death, traveling toward the son of righteousness, and when death shall have separated or parted the veil of the flesh, we shall awake in his likeness and be satisfied. The valley of the shadow of death is where the redeemed of the Lord are traveling in this their mortal life. The shadow is thrown only in the pathway of the saints, and is the way unto holiness. They by faith seek a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. The son of righteousness sheds his glorious beams in this city of our God, and his glory they behold while in the valley of the shadow of death, as Jesus said in his prayer unto God, "Father I will that they also, whom thou has given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." And Jesus then was approaching the time of his betrayal, crucifixion, death and resurrection, "That they may be with me where I am, and that was in the valley of the shadow of death, and David said by the spirit, "I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known."

As the natural light will draw a plant toward it (and we have noticed this in many instances, plants sitting in a room or on a porch, will grow in the direction of the light so the light of the knowledge of the glory of God draws God's children toward the light of his countenance. Jesus says, "No man can come unto me except the father which hath sent me draw him, and I will raise him up at the last day." The last day is the gospel day, the seventh day that God blessed and sanctified, and the day that has light shed upon it, that the life that we now live in the flesh we live by the faith of the son of God. "In him was life, and the life was the light of men." Jesus said, "I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

The comforting thought is: that the evening and the morning were the sixth day, and the seventh day follows the morning of the sixth day, and no more evening. I understand this to set forth the entrance to the eternal day of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The Psalmist says: "This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it;" the day that Abraham saw and was glad; the day that Jesus told the dying thief, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." And John says in Revelation, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the lamb is the light thereof, and the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day, for there shall be no night there."

Dear Brother Go'd:

The enclosed letter of sister Eva M. Bowman I think very good, and with her permission, I now send to you for publication in the Landmark, that being the paper of her choice and the one she reads. Will you please try to get it out in the May 1 issue? If you cannot, then as soon as possible.

Yours in hope of life eternal,

A. J. MOORE.

Dear Brother Moore:

For some time I have had an impression to write you and the church at Whitakers concerning what I hope has been the dealings of the Lord with me. I was born in Ontario, Canada, and lived there until my eighteenth year. My father, having a desire to go south for his health, decided to come to Virginia. I, being satisfied with the so-called "christian life" I was living, was unwilling to leave. I had always considered myself a good child, having grown up in the Sunday school and several of the young people's societies. Had at the age of 12 years been sprinkled and joined the Methodists and became a missionary and temperance worker. Actually believing that I was doing the Master's will and helping the Lord to carry on his work of saving souls and fitting them for the kingdom, but feeling it my duty to obey my parents I prayed that God would show me the path in which I should walk. That he would lead me anywhere. Do with me anything, if only it would bring me closer to him and make me know him better. In the year 1899 I was married to Walter S. Bowman, youngest son of Elder T. J. Bowman, of Chesterfield county, Va. Until this time I never knew what was meant by a Primitive Baptist. And after hearing Elder Bowman preach predestination and election (and he was very strong on doctrine) I came to the conclusion that I did not want to know them—that it would not be well for my peace of mind and that I should never as long as I should live, believe that the Primitive Baptists were the only true christians, and when scripture was read and explained in the home of Elder Bowman, and for the time being, seemed to condemn my good works, I got angry and searched my Bible for proof against them, but I never found any, and I began to feel that I might be wrong. Nothing that I read gave me any comfort, and so for a long time I could not read the Bible. I became very miserable and wondered how God could be a just God and cause me to suffer so much when I believed I was innocent. All the suffering and trouble I ever knew was, I thought, caused by the Primitive Baptists, and I hated them all, not as individuals, but as people. When I tried to pray it seemed that my prayers never rose higher than my head. Then at times I seemed to feel careless, and tried to make myself believe that if I was to be saved I would be saved, and why worry myself about it. But this feeling did not last long, and why did I have such a feeling of wickedness, which I had never felt before and why had not the Lord taken me when I was "good" before I felt so wicked and sinful. My chief desire seemed to be that God would forgive my sins, cover them up and give me rest.

Instead of this he made me feel

The hidden evils of my heart,
And let the angry powers of hell
Assault my soul in every part.

Yea, more, with his own hand he seemed

Intent to aggravate my woe:
Crossed all the fair designs I schemed,
Blasted my hopes, and laid me low.

Not until then did I feel my lost condition. Oh, what darkness, what sinfulness, what weakness, was then revealed to me. Now, it seemed that God was a just God, and I was a justly condemned sinner. Yet, satan would whisper, "You have been too good a christian to give up now. Think of your mission society, your temperance union and prayer meetings." But, oh! how I hated such as that now. How I wished I could blot it all from my memory, but could not, and what a hypocrite I felt myself to be. What had become of the self-satisfied life I was living just a few short years ago, and what did all my good works profit me now? Could it be possible that I could become so powerless, so helpless and feel myself so condemned before God as to be unworthy even to kneel before him to beg for mercy. Surely God could not save me and yet be a just God. I dreaded the night, for I was afraid of the awful darkness, and I dreaded the morning for each day brought me nearer to my eternal punishment, and then at times a sweet rest seemed to come to me, and I was led to think surely this is the work of the Lord, and if so he will perform it. But this was the Primitive Baptist belief, and I had vowed within myself that I never would believe it, and oh, how hard I tried to fight against it, and to keep from loving the Old Baptists. But I could not keep from reading their dear letters in the Landmark. They seemed so much like my own feelings, and yet so different for I felt so far beneath them.

Brother Moore, if there has been a change in me from nature to grace I cannot tell the exact time or place. But one thing I do know, that the Primitive Baptists have become very dear to me, and that I have no desire for the pleasures which I once craved, and these feelings have given me great comfort, and at times I felt that peace which passeth all understanding had filled my heart. I had a craving desire to have a home in the church, but believed that if the church only knew how I once hated them and tried to injure them they could not receive me. Then, last spring, I felt impressed to go before the church in Manchester; had a great desire to go, but felt that I could not and that I might be deceived. Sometimes I felt that if asked a reason for my hope I could give none. But I tried to pray that if I were wrong the Lord would, in some way, hinder my going, and if right, he would lead me and direct my thoughts. And how I enjoyed your preaching that morning. I could have listened all day, but when the doors of the church were opened I felt my weakness more than ever before, that I had nothing to say, and that this was the way in which the Lord would hinder my doing that which would have been wrong, but it seemed that weak as I was I must go. I intended to tell then what I have written here. I believed then I could not be received, but I was. I did not feel relieved, for I felt that I had said nothing. But a sweet peace came to me at the water. Surely my suffering was nothing to be compared to the peace which I then felt. I had no fear of the water, and although muddy, it was to me beautiful indeed. And while singing those beautiful words, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," I was filled with love, joy and peace, such as I had never known before. Surely I have been led in ways that I knew not, and in paths that I had not known. Pray for me that I may be enabled at all times to look to the Lord our God and say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him."

Your unworthy sister, if one at all.

EVA M. BOWMAN.

Dear Brother Gold:

It is with a feeling of sense of unworthiness that I thus address you, but if I had to give up my little hope which gives me the privilege of calling you brother, I don't know what would become of poor me. I do not know that I possess a hope, but only have to hope for it. One thing I do know, that I am a poor sinner, not deserving the least of God's mercies, and yet I feel that he blesses, nay, showers down his blessings upon me every day of my life, and can say with the Psalmist David, "Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Brother Gold, the past year has been fraught with much sorrow for me. I lost a very dear brother in the flesh, and his death was so sudden and unexpected that it almost took my life. For weeks and months I felt that I could not live. Oh, the days of anguish and sleepless nights that I passed. No comfort anywhere for me. One night my son was reading aloud this scripture: "Call upon me in the day of trouble." These words arrested my mind and I stopped to meditate. Who gave this command and to whom applied? Surely it was from the God of heaven and applied to believing children. Why had I not thought of this particular passage of scripture before, and why was it attended with so much sweetness now? For days while engaged in my domestic affairs I would find myself quoting this scripture, "Call upon me in the day of trouble."

"Oh, brother Gold, what precious promises are laid down in his holy word for believers in Jesus, and oh what a friend we have in him; one who sticketh closer than a brother, and who will comfort us in trouble, for he has commanded us to cast our care on him, for he careth for us. Then we will call upon him in the day of trouble.

Dear Brother Gold, I will close; did not think of writing so much, but only intended renewing my subscription. Enclosed fine $1.50 for same.

Brother Gold, pray for me. With much love to sister Gold, I am lovingly your little sister in Christ, I hope.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—It is on my mind to write you and I hope it is of the Lord, and if so it may be blessed of him to the good if those who read it. I would write out a part of my experience, but for fear it might not be profitable I shall write upon the subject of love and if I know my own heart I have a desire to edify the people of God, and I know of no subject that is more calculated to edify.

First I would quote from John, the grand text of all scripture, "God is love." If Paul was made to say in view of the great theme of the gospel, who is sufficient for these things, and he was an inspired apostle, how much more we creatures, so much less endowed. But if I can feel to say as he did, that "our sufficiency is of God," and that our God can thresh a mountain with a worm, and that the "love of God constraineth us," that through Christ that strengtheneth us we can do all things, we feel emboldened to venture and as the poet wrote:

"It means thy praise however poor,
And angels' voice can do no more."

This vast theme of boundless everlasting love, the great love wherewith he loved us, that he so loved us. That love is of God. Behold what manner of love he hath bestowed on us that we should be called the sons of God. This everlasting principle, incomprehensible, yet simple and sublime, full of deep mystery and sublimely simple, we can but wonder and adore. We feel in a measure lost in wonder, love and praise, but to realize it in our hearts, and to feel the deep experience of it in our souls, seems to more than supply our every need. When we can feel the truth and power of it, it passeth all understanding. When we are conscious of it, it arms us and prepares us for every ordeal however severe and trying. Under its glorious light and influence we are ready to face death if need be; we are ready to do his bidding. We not only love God but we love his creation, especially those who are begotten of him. This is true in the full sense of the word. It brings us into perfect harmony with his law, and from the heart we obey that form of doctrine. Under its influence we see how he has atoned for sin through his Holy Son and forever put it away. Then we can truly say,

"How happy are they who the Saviour obey,

Whose treasures are laid up above;
Tongue can never express the sweet comfort and peace

Of a soul in its earliest love.

"That comfort was mine when the favor divine

I first found in the blood of the Lamb;

When my heart first believed, O what joy I received!

What a heaven in Jesus' name!

"O for such love let rocks and hills

Their lasting silence break,

And all the harmonious human tongues

The Saviour's praises speak.

"Love divine how sweet the sound;

May the theme on earth abound,

May the hearts of saints below

With the sacred rapture glow."

When we have commanded the best of language how far short we come in describing this grand sublime principle. If the queen of Sheba should be so much astonished at the wisdom of Solomon when the half had not been told, what would she say if the curtain of revelation had been but partly raised on this grand theme? If Paul would say that time would fail him to write of the sublime principle of faith—and he declared that love was so much superior and greater—then how much would it require to write and speak of this grand theme? Whatever we may be able to write about it, and however we may be able to describe it, O how much better to feel it glowing in our hearts, and to experience it, conforming us into the image and glorious likeness of Jesus our Saviour, our Redeemer, our Captain and King.

God grant us to realize more and more of this infinite glorious principle in our lives. If it is ever in your mind and heart to come this way, write me and we will gladly receive you as a herald of the cross and this wonderful love.

Yours to serve in the gospel,
W. LIVELY.

Dear Brother Gold:

I have been reading some good pieces in the Landmark which have caused me to want to write a few words, though they may be thrown in the waste basket.

I have read that some of the Primitive Baptists have and want organs, and I just want to invite them to visit Shiloh church in Walton county, Ga., and find out if those good old gray heads don't sound better than any organ that was ever invented.

God gave us voice and a tongue to sing praises unto the Lord, and when you have the love planted in your heart you will surely sing his praises, and if you people like hearing and singing these good old songs, then you don't want an organ to spoil the sweet music. I have been to meetings when it seemed to me the music was so sweet there was nothing to compare it with except a band of angels. I wanted to go to every meeting to hear that singing if I heard nothing else, it was so sweet. There never has been a musical instrument invented by man that was worthy of being in the midst of those dear saints. I went to meeting the 4th Saturday in January and just as I got in sight of the church house I saw buggies coming from every direction. There came a strange feeling over me, and when I went in and had taken my seat and saw the people coming at every door I got in such a fix I scarcely knew where I was. It seemed to me like they were angels coming from the four winds of the earth. I just wanted to tell the brethren and sisters how I felt but could not, and when they began to sing it seemed more than I could stand. I felt that I was going to die and was ready to go. I can't express my feelings.

Oh, how well I do enjoy going and meeting with these dear old people and hearing the word of truth. I think before I get to the meetings I want to see the brethren and sisters and shake their hands, and I do want to see them, but when I get there I feel so little I try to keep just as quiet as possible, I feel so unworthy of being in their presence. I couldn't say brother or sister no matter how hard I would try.

Brother Gold, if you don't think this will do to print throw it aside, as I might have spoken too harsh about the organs, but that is just the way it is with me.

Your sister in hope,
MRS. ALMA BRASWELL

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Having been requested to give a sketch of my trip in the East I will proceed to do so.

I left my home at Crumpler, N. C., March 19, enroute to Wilmington, going by way of Old Bear Creek church in the Senter Association. This church was formed in 1832 and was without a pastor for twenty years until, by request, I took charge last July, since which time ten new members have been added. From this church I went to Old Reedy church in the Roaring River district March 10, and the same night I went to North Wilkesboro. Thursday I went to Wilmington, arriving there about 9 o'clock p. m., and made my way to the home of our dear brother, J. O. Brown, thinking to spend some time on the beach, but learning of the quarterly meeting at Yopps I left Wilmington Friday evening in company with brother Buck enroute for Yopps. Here we met our dear brethren, Elders Isaac Jones and Kit Brown. We had a good meeting, and enjoyed the kindness of the people very much. I felt that they were Baptists of the old type. From there I came back to Wilmington where I filled an appointment on the night of the 15th. Thence to Stump Sound the 17th and was met at the depot by Brother Hines with whom I stayed a couple of nights. From here he, wife and daughter went with me to Yopps and stayed with old Brother Duston. Elder Jesse Brown also stayed with us here. From this place I was conveyed by Brother Jenkins to Bay and South West, and from there to Maple Hill where we stayed two nights with dear Brother Isaac Jones, receiving from him much encouragement.

Monday Elder Jones took me to Cypress Creek where we had a good meeting; then to Muddy Creek where I was met by Elder Cavanaugh's son and that night held services at his home. From here I was taken to Wallace where I boarded the train for Goldsboro, at which place I met Elders Gardner and Roberts. I took supper with ex-Governor Aycock, his wife being the daughter of Elder Woodard, of Wilson. From this sister we received wonderful encouragement. From Goldsboro I went to Fremont where we had a good meeting at Memorial, spent the night with Brother William Hooks and visited Brother O. Y. Yelverton, Brother Clark and others. Brother Davis took me from here to Black Creek where I met Elder J. C. Hooks whom I learned to love. Stopped with Brother Mercer whose dear wife is blind. May the Lord bless her in her afflictions. Then on to Scotts, Contentnea and Black Creek churches where I met Elder Boswell who is the pastor of these churches. I esteem Elder Boswell an able, worthy preacher and pastor. We have enjoyed the company of the Baptists in the east and we esteem them as sound in the faith.

There are many churches and brethren I would like to have gone to and met, but time would not admit. We hoped to meet dear Brethren Gold, Woodard and many others. The brethren have so far administered to all my needs for which I hope I feel thankful to God the giver of all good.

I am now at Brother J. H. Renfrow's home and will go from here on my tour westward toward home. I hope to give a further sketch of my trip later.

I remain yours in the afflictions of the gospel I hope.

J. W. WYATT.

Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise; and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.

Dear Brother Gold:

It has been on my mind for some time to write my thoughts regarding the predestination of all things; not presuming in the least to teach, but surrounding circumstances being such I have a desire that my thought should be known to the brethren. I can give but a faint expression of what I feel.

We don't expect anything of the world but that they should reject the idea of God's unlimited, sovereign dominion, but for any of that remnant of poor sinners who have tasted of the riches of his grace, and have a hope that they are included in the father's will, being by nature no better than those left out of the will, to say that any of this remnant may presume to set bounds for the eternal mind and purpose of Jehovah, and question his right to do all his pleasure, and then he found with so much zeal denouncing precious brethren, is a lamentable fact it seems to me.

There may be zeal without true knowledge, "For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge." And when one is found mounting the walls of Zion as it were, in his own strength to keep off intruders, how miserably mistaken is he. When the watchman is called by the spirit to go forth how insufficient they feel for the place, and although they go forth as bold as lions, there is the harmlessness of doves with them. Instead of malice, envy and hatred, they realize the weakness of sinful flesh and amidst differences of views they love all the little ones, and the less the little one, the deeper the imprint of love. "But if ye have bitter strife and envying in your hearts, glory not and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual and devilish. For every envying and strife is there is confusion and every evil. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." James 3:14, 15, 16, 17. "The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." While the opposite is rage, envy, hasty denunciations with prejudices, and every evil work.

Now, if any man among you seem to be religious and bridled not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. James 1:26. Yes, vain to the extent of the root of bitterness which is in the heart.

Now, dear brethren, much is said about the word absolute. Pause and consider; look up the direct meaning of the word. Will any dear child of God reject the idea that God is the absolute sovereign, therefore absolute in what he does? The question then is not, Did he absolutely predestinate all things, but did he predestinate all things? For it must be admitted that all he predestinated he absolutely predestinated.

I will here quote a sentence from the London Baptist Confession of Faith, printed and sold by Elder Burwell Temple many years ago. (See page 15), also Hassell's Church History (page 670). The quotation is as follows: "God hath decreed in himself, from all eternity, by the most wise and holy council of his own will, freely and unchangeably, all things whatsoever come to pass." This sentence is but a small portion of that confession as put forth more than two hundred years ago by more than one hundred Baptist congregations in England and Wales. I will here leave the reader to decide who have departed from Primitive faith.

As to predestination of all things; if God from all eternity knew all things that should ever come to pass and at the same time have all power to prevent, what is the difference between this permission and his predestination? Had it been the eternal mind of Jehovah to have saved all or none, it was his perfect right. But this was not his mind. His mind was to choose a remnant, and in choosing purpose all things for the accomplishment of his perfect design.

We know all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made. For by all thing created, that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible, whether they be thrones or dominions, principalities or powers all things were created by him and for him; and he is before all things and by him all things all things for himself; yea, even the wicked for the day of evil." Can we see any consistency that the great God should make or create anything of all things he made, or created and have no purpose for that thing? Certainly not. Such things would be expected of changeable creatures. But there is no variability or shadow of turning with God. He is of one mind, who can turn him? Can we separate purpose and predestination? No, for predestination is defined: "The unchangeable purpose of God." May we say that only good things are predestinated? The Lord pronounced everything good and very good, yet he had made the poisonous and many other things not good, in the sense we call good, but good to fulfill his wise purpose. And though we finite, poor creatures cannot see a purpose in many things, yet he in his eternal mind had a purpose for everything he made, which was all things. "For without him was not anything made that was made."

It seems to me, to say nothing of deeper things, that the wonders of God in nature manifest him as one of magestic power in unlimited purpose. "His stormy wind fulfilling his word." He scattereth the bright cloud, he turneth round about by his counsels, that whatsoever he commandeth might be done, whether for correction, for the land or mercy. Throughout the whole volume of inspiration how dear the purpose shines to the end that the Lord's power may be made known, Israel purged from the dead works to serve the living God, and saved with an everlasting salvation, and he, the God of the whole earth, praised with never ending praises. "The Lord reigneth, let the people tremble." "The Lord of hosts hath sworn saying, surely as I have thought so shall it come to pass, and as I have purposed so shall it stand." In delivering Israel from Egypt "returned their heart to hate his people, deal subtilly with his servants." Psalms 105:25. The language to Pharaoh was, "Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show forth my power in thee and that my name might be declared throughout the whole earth." Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy and whom he will, he hardeneth." Paul in the ninth chapter of Romans shows the absurdity of the vessels in the potter's hand which is formed to dishonor, crying out against him that formed it: "Why hast thou made me thus?" Much more, what absurdity in man reply against God, or questioning any of his acts; for, "if God wills to show his wrath and take his glory known, endureth with much long-suffering the vessels of wrath, fitted to destruction, and that he might make known the riches of his glory," etc., where need helpless sinners question his right in immutable decree? Should it not rather be, are we of these vessels of mercy? or is it otherwise with us? Can we reverence the judgments of the Lord and say with David, "I was dumb and opened not my mouth because thou didst it."

As the reader passes through the prophetic age he finds the fiery indignation and wrath in judgments poured out often expressed as purposed, commanded or ordained. For Tophet is ordained of old; yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large; the pile thereof is fire and much wood; the breath of the Lord, like a stream of brimstone doth kindle it." Isa. 30:33. "Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken, the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad." Jer. 51:7. The Lord by the prophet Habakuk says, "For io, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter hasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling places that are not theirs." Hab. 1:6. What humble reverence is expressed in the 12th verse of this chapter, "Art thou not from everlasting Lord my God, mine hoïy one? We shall not die, O Lord, thou hast ordained them for judgment; and O, mighty God, thou hast established them for correction." Let the purpose be for judgment, correction or what it may, the wickedness proceeded from these wicked nations just as does all wickedness proceed from the devil, in those who act out his devilish designs. There is no unrighteousness with God. David says, "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne."

But O, dear children of the most high, he has such complete control of all the flood gates of wickedness that the proud waves are stayed at his command; just so far can they come and no further. When the innocent lamb of God was delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God to be taken by the wicked hands, crucified and slain, he said to Pilate,

"Thou couldst have no power at all against me except it were given thee from above." Satan could only go so far in afflicting Job; and though you may run far in sin and folly before Jesus is revealed to you as your righteousness, his eye is all the while on you, and not a devil dare move a tongue against you, to disinherit you, or to throw anything in your path which the blessed Lord has not purposed for your good. For, "He bowed the heavens also, and came down; darkness was put under his feet, and he rode upon a cherub and fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind." Psalms 17:9, 10. He led captivity captive, and gave (did not sell) gifts unto man.

In pouring out upon, or suffering long with the vessels of wrath, may be traced through prophesy the vessels of mercy as a remnant. "For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant and they that escape out of Mount Zion: the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this." Isa. 37:32. "And there shall be a highway for the remnant of his people." A deceitful tongue is not to be found in their mouth; but the remnant that is escaped shall take root downward and bear fruit upward.

Instead of restlessness as to how much power he has in purpose, "The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever. And my people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation and in sure dwellings and in quiet resting places." Isa. 32:17. "Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities; thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down, not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed; neither shall any of the chords thereof be broken. But there the glorious Lord shall be unto us, a place of broad rivers and streams, wherein shall go no galley with oars; neither shall gallant ships pass thereby." Isa. 32:17. No vulture's eye hath seen the path of the traveler here, no danger of sandy bars of wreckage; no turbulent waves of misrepresentation of the little ones, but all is a peaceful calm. "For the Lord is our judge, our lawgiver and our king. He will save us." And then for poor sinful creatures, atoms of the dust as it were, to presume to mark a line which the great God must come to in predestination, or else be the author of sin will never do. It would rob him of his power, whether the poor wretch marking such a line realizes it or not. The Lord by the prophet Malichi says, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." David says, "Yea, they turned back and tempted God, and limited the holy one of Israel." If any of us have such dark thoughts they grovel right down in the dust. They never rise to that high and evergreen plain where the pasturage is so succulent and sweet.

It seems to me that when the Lord demands of us as he did of Job, to gird up our strength, and answer him, unfolding his greatness to us, we find our strength wanting and the offering quite different. There will be no robbery in it. But it will be, "Behold I am vile. I will lay my hand upon my mouth. Once have I spoken, but I will not answer. Yea, twice, but I will proceed no further. I uttered that I did not understand." And gain Job says, "I know that thou canst do everything." Here it seems to me, that Job, with all the ancient worthies, instead of questioning the Lord's right in predestination, could do nothing but rejoice and praise that his arrangement in eternity, with his unlimited power could be such as to save poor, vile sinners from the dark abyss of woe and misery, and then they be presented without spot unto God.

This is enough, dear brethren for us. "For touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out." He giveth not account of any of his matters. O, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God. How unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out. For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counselor. The length, breadth, depth and height of infinite wisdom, how incomprehensible. No standard set up according to human reasoning will do to judge the Lord of hosts. No court before which to bring him; for he is judge of the highest court, is amenable to no power. He is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent. Above all and over all. He ruleth in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of earth, and none dare say what or why doest thou, "For I am God and change not." "Remember the former things of old; I am God and there is none else, I am God and there is none like me; declaring the end from the beginning; and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, my counsel shall stand and I will do all my pleasure. Calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country; yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it." Isa. 46:9, 10, 11.

And so it remains a most sublime truth, all God doeth is just, simply because the God of gods, one of purpose, and not of chance is he that reigns. Even when the vials of wrath are poured out, what strains from the altar extolling him for "His righteous judgments," and in all the sweet praises of Israel recorded, not a clog of ifs and whys as to what our God may or may not do. Not a discordant note is found, but the praise is one harmonious song of blessing, glory, honor, wisdom, thanksgiving, power and might be unto our God forever and forever, amend. And they rest not day and night, saying, holy, holy, holy. Lord God Almighty. For thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power, for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

"Praise the Lord all ye saints." From the rising of the sun to the going down of the same, the Lord's name is to be praised. "Who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord? who can show forth all his praise." 'Tis sweet to linger here with hope that, "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterwards receive me to thy glory."

For more than twenty-five years I have believed what is herein expressed. I am so poor and needy, so helpless and dependant, I need the strong arm of salvation, of mercy and protection which is in that wisdom that hath left nothing to chance, but hath all things proposed and prepared.

Brother Gold, no one is responsible for anything written here but the thoughts of my heart, so much as I have found words to express, have been penned, and now I submit it to your judgment.

Your sister in hope,

Ashboro, N. C.

I am now a doubting Thomas,
I can't embrace a single promise;
I want to look in hands and feet,
In his side my hand to thrust,
And in his power my soul to trust;
And wait my lovely father's nod,
To trust in him, my living God.
The above lines were given to me while in a deep place and when darkness prevailed as it has the most of the time for some years past. Surely, I hope this world is not my home.

WARFARE—VICTORY.

Looking abroad in the earth we see conflicting and opposing forces, sometimes in the less active form of competition that is not bitter nor unfriendly. For instance two farmers are neighbors and one does not like for the other to excel him in farming, hence there is a friendly rivalry between the two, and they rather respect each other more than they would a farmer that is too lazy to strive to make good crops, or that has no such ambition.

A sterner form of competition may appear in two men striving for trade in commerce. We see individuals wrought up to bitter feelings as they are contending for the same office.

Nations may be embroiled in such hostility that war follows with the suffering and destruction of death.

In the forces of nature we often see the strife of winds and the elements in storm, and destruction follows. The cold of winter consumes the fruitfulness of summer, the biting frosts destroying vegetation. The pining, consuming sickness preying upon the vitality of those who were healthy. Old age lays his grip of wasting and failure on youth, one striving against another. Good and evil are set over one against the other with no compromise, no toleration one for the other. The principles of good and evil operate in the man that is born from above—there being two manner of people in the same person. The flesh lusts against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other so that one cannot do the good he would. The man thus tried cannot fellowship himself. War is raging in him, and his foes are those of his own house, and this war lasts until sundown or death.

We see light and darkness, life and death, heaven and hell, the Lord God and Satan the enemy of all righteousness in many ways.

One says what good is there in this? If there were no rivalry competition in nature, if a man had no enemies to fight—if there were no hunger in him, and no weeds, thorns and briars for him to kill, what labor would he perform? His necessities compel him to strive for bread. He does not find food growing anywhere so that he does not have to labor for it. His work must overcome enemies. He that will not work shall not eat (honestly) Labor is the law of our nature.

In the matter of seeking salvation this principle is displayed. It is not that the man has it in his corrupt will to seek which he loves not. Yet it is true that the soul quickened from the dead does seek the Lord with the whole heart, and does not find the Lord until he does this, but in the very day that he seeks the Lord with the whole heart he finds him. Strive to enter in at the strait gate. The convicted one finds his enemies too strong for him, and not until he does this does he call on the name of the Lord. The way is a new way that no one can teach or show to another. Each one must walk it out for himself, and know it for himself. Salvation is by grace, yet it is through much tribulation we enter the kingdom. The worst enemies to the child of God must be slain, sin, death and the powers of darkness, the devil must be cast out. Thus the army of heaven and the powers of earth are arrayed against each other, and it is a good fight of faith, a race, a conflict all through life, and not until we are dead—die in the Lord—do we rest from our labors.

The man dead in sins is not troubled about his vileness, for he does not feel it. But it is the child of God that cries out, O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? He sees a law in his members warring against the law of his mind. This is necessary to cause him to pray, to seek, to strive for deliverance. He works out his own salvation with fear and trembling because God works in him both to will and to do. Our sins are stronger than we, but God is stronger than our sins. Satan is stronger than we, but Satan has no power against the Lord. When we are brought to know and feel the delivering power of the Lord, and can say in the depths salvation is of the Lord, we are brought off more than conquerors through him that loved us and gave himself for us. Then how great is the God of Peace.

P. D. G.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Will you please give your views through the Landmark on the following scriptures?

Psalm 50:4, Isaiah 30:1, Deuteronomy 6:13, Judges 14:15-17, Ezekiel 7:22, Ezekiel 21:23, St. Luke 12:2.

Brother Gold, I sometimes feel that I must give up and faint by the way-side. My faith is weak. I wonder if the Lord is among us or not? Some Primitive Baptists are a peculiar people. Many are concerned about doing the things they ought not to have done; but leaving undone the things we ought to have done. We worry over unreasonable things, while we should be looking after the sick and afflicted of our own ranks.

We should encourage our pastor. They are entitled to part of our living, are entitled to our respect and love. Great many brethren in Georgia have made the Organ, and protracted meetings a test of fellowship. I have heard some of those same brethren say they would join the farmers union if it were not for their church privileges. I know some who use all their influence for this same secret society. I say if it is our practice to stay out of secret societies, what should our influence be? Can we by our influence carry any away after error.

Some of our people are more in love with the world than they are with the church. I know a good man that ought to be in the church, but he has never joined any institution except secret societies. The Masons are the mother of all those societies, and I do truly believe they have done more harm than any other one thing in the world, for there are a number of regenerated men who have learned to worship such heathenish stuff. God, I hope will forgive me for detesting secret societies so much for I have had no little trouble on their account.

I am yours in great trouble,

M. E. C.

The sister who has communicated the above is in grief mourning I hope for the affliction of Joseph. Her letter gives some insight into her troubles. Israel is so joined together that when one member suffers the body also suffers. That is one reason why those that love the Lord are careful to keep from doing that which troubles Israel.

Now the Lord's doing are not done in a corner, but they are open and plain, and he calls heaven and earth to witness his glorious faithfulness. The heavens are faithful witnesses of his righteousness in all his dealings, and they declare his glory in the performance of his word. Psalm 50:

4. Does he require anything unreasonable of his people? No, his commands are the most merciful. They are clean and upright to him that loves the truth. Offer thanksgiving and praise to God for what he has done. Call on him in the day of trouble. Love the household of faith. The life of faith in God is the most trying life to live if we are wrong. If we love this world, or anything in it, then we will seek that thing, and prove that we trust not in God. Why should one profess to be a Baptist and then want to be married to any idol of earth? Why want to join a secret society and walk in darkness? Put your light on a bushel. Let it so shine before men that it will prove that you walk with God and trust him in all things.

The covenant of grace sets forth that God walks in his people. Praise waiteth in Zion for God, and to him shall the vow be performed.

Isa. 30:1. Israel wanted to go to Egypt for help. How strange that after God had delivered Israel out of Egypt with an outstretched arm and sore judgments that Israel should forsake the Lord and go down to Egypt for help. Their strength was to sit still—or keep out of Egypt, and from every false way, and trust in and serve the Lord alone. It is rebellion to distrust the Lord, and neglect to do what he has commanded, or to do what he has forbidden. The principles of the kingdom of heaven are so separate from and above the things of earth that it is going down to wicked Egypt when we do not walk in the faith of Jesus. For whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

Deut. 6:13. "Thou shalt fear the Lord and serve him, and shalt swear by his name." That is thou shalt have no false gods. Keep away from the gods of the people round about you. Look at the gins, snares, societies, traps, false ways practiced by the world. Why does a Baptist want to join them, or be married to them? How they steal your heart away from the Lord. Devote your service to relieve the distressed, help the needy, speak evil of no man, visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction, and keep yourself unspotted from the world. This is pure and undefiled religion. Sanctify the Lord God in your hearts.

Judges 14:15 and 17. Samson had no love for the uncircumcised Philistines, yet he took a wife of them. He was a man of faith, the strongest man that ever lived, but when the Philistines plowed with his heifer they learned where his strength was. Hence the strongest is not safe in the snares of the enemy. While the spirit of God in Samson slays all enemies, yet by snares of his Philistine wife they get the secret of his strength and through a Philistine woman they entangled him as a prisoner, and put out his eyes, and debased him to hard labor. How much safer when one shuns all such alliances with idolators, and abides in the doctrine of Christ. Though I have thought that Samson is a figure of the Lord Jesus betrayed by his people, and delivered to the Gentiles to be crucified. By nature his bride is unclean as an uncircumcised Philistine, and in nature false to truth.

But out of the eater comes forth meat. The lion which by nature would eat man is slain by Samson, and in his carcass is found a swarm of bees and honey. So that sweetness is found in the eater or strong one.

The lion represents death. As it roars on Samson the Spirit of God comes on him and he slays the lion or power of death. God's people therefore win great spoils from death, and Jesus makes a dying bed feel soft as as downy pillars are. Such sweetness as comes from his gracious hand when he feeds us and wipes away all tears from our eyes can only be known in the gift of life from the dead.

Eze. 7:22. The dreadful culmination of wickedness was when the Jews defiled the temple of God, the house of prayer. When they profaned the holy place with the most shameful outrages of such warship. So the Lord said he would turn his face from them or cast them off and robbers should come and pollute the secret place or the holy of holies, and the abomination that makes desolate should stand in the holy place. Sin became exceedingly sinful as vomiting filled all tables, and God's name was cast out and despised before the heathen. How were the mighty fallen and shame covered all faces.

Eze. 21:23. The worship of the Jews shall be a false divination. Their religion or worship should be their best thing, but it became their worst thing. Never was there so wonderful a people in their deliverance from Egyptian oppression. God did ride upon every element of power and destruction in exalting his people, but they had so defiled this holy place that he loathed his people and cast them out to their loathing. The wealth and wisdom of Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived, was exerted and displayed in the most wonderful outlays of the temple and palace, but all this was turned into mockery as they made God's name a by-word and a reproach among the nations, and that nation which once ranked as head now is profaned as the foot.

Luke 12:2. Every secret thing shall be brought to light. However odious and hateful it shall be uncovered. However it may be done in the secret chambers of darkness, yet it shall be exposed on the housetops. The leaven of wickedness working in darkness shall be proclaimed on the housetop. For the eye of justice looks into every hidden thing and proclaims on the housetop the vilest things that are done in secret.

Such things are felt and known when God sets up a court of judgment in the heart and conscience of the sinner, and every idle word and every abominable thing shall be brought into condemnation, and the secrets of the heart shall be made manifest, and every refuge of lies shall be swept away; and we know that God is everywhere and nothing can be hid from him.

P. D. G.

My view is requested of this scripture, "From him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away," Matt. 5:42.

In this language Jesus is tearing away the old rubbish of legalism, and preparing to establish the gospel building. The law is a measure that shows the failure of man. Under the law all manner of selfishness is shown to be in the creature. There is only the prison house of bondage, sin and death. It is an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. It worketh wrath. They that are under it dwell in a dry and barren land. There is no love, no liberty, no joy, no liberality, no abounding of grace, no salvation, no help to the poor, condemned sinner.

But Jesus comes to fulfill the law, to honor and establish it, by good measure pressed down, running over, and entering into the gospel realm where all is love, joy, peace, righteousness and truth, where there is no straitness, no bondage no retaliation, no revenge, no eye for eye, or tooth for a tooth. But where it is give, give. It is more blessed to give than to receive. The more one thus gives the richer he is. The liberal soul loves things, and by liberal things shall he stand.

When one is convicted of sin and realizes his guilt, and the justice of his condemnation, and the law says the soul that sins shall die, that convicted one pleads guilty and says, Yes, I deserve to die. If thy righteous law sends me to hell it is just. When the law smites on one cheek that soul turns the other cheek to be smitten. If the law takes away thy coat you give your cloak also. You surrender all your covering, and you are naked. Oh, how you love the justice of God's holy law, and abhor yourself. But behold you die to live, and become poor that you may find the true riches.

You are brought into fields you have not cleared, into orchards you have not planted, you gather fruit of trees you have not dressed, you enter into riches for which you have bestowed no labor.

The gospel is the fulness of grace and truth. Where sin abounded grace did much more abound. Through the death and resurrection of Jesus, who gave himself to the smiters and who became poor that we through his poverty might be rich, we receive the true riches.

How good it is to forgive, to show mercy, to labor and suffer for the comfort and profit of others, to give to him who would borrow of thee.

Do you know the gospel principal of this? If so you are rich. You do not have to borrow from any one.

You are rich and have dispersed abroad. You have all things.

P. D. G.

These questions are asked not from any critical motive, but from an earnest desire to know more of the teachings of God's people everywhere, and of all denominations.

1. What do the Primitive Baptists teach in regard to baptism? Is it a symbolic form of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ only, or is it a necessary ordinance for remission of sins, or both?

2. What is the Primitive Baptist doctrine in regard to death-bed repentance? Does the scripture contained in the 23rd chapter of St. Luke, 39 to 43 verses inclusive, have any bearing on this subject today?

3. What are the reasons for close communion?

4. Why do not the Primitive Baptists believe in foreign missions (if it is true as reported they do not)?

5. What stand do the Primitive Baptists take in regard to Sunday schools?

Answers to the above questions would be very highly appreciated. Although of a different denomination I ask these questions from a desire to know more of all teachings and not in order to criticise were I worthy or competent to do so.

Respectfully,

W. E. ALBRITTAN.

Remarks—Question: Is baptism only a symbolic form of death, burial and resurrection of Christ Jesus, or is it necessary for the remission of sins, or is it both?

Answer: All that the Lord God commands is necessary for the object of its use. There is nothing immaterial or unimportant that he has commanded. Baptism is taught in the scriptures. What is its use? It does not put away the filth of the flesh. It is not a fleshly service. It is the answer of a good conscience toward God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. It is symbolical of the burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Planted together by baptism into the likeness of his death—buried with Christ by baptism into death. Then baptism represents the death of Christ, or the burial of Christ, and also his resurrection. If the dead rise not at all why are they then baptized for the dead?

What then should be the condition of those baptized? Should they be dead before they are baptized or buried? Or should they be buried or baptized before they are dead? Which do you say?

Naturally, do we bury people before they are dead, or after? Is one prepared to be baptized before he is a believer in Jesus or not? We hold that he is not prepared for baptism until he first believes. He that believes and is baptized shall be saved. The examples in the new testament prove this, such as John's baptizing—the eunuch, the jailer, Lydia—on the day of pentecost, and all others. So that none are fit for burial with Christ by baptism into the death of Christ but believers, those dead to the law by the body of Christ. Then baptism is not a condition precedent in order to faith, but faith should precede baptism. Nor does baptism go before repentance, but repentance comes first. It is called the baptism of repentance. Repent and be baptized, is the order.

When we put on Christ by baptism it is a blessed ordinance, and we rejoice in its provisions, and fulfill the righteousness taught therein. This is the gospel, necessary way of confessing Christ. I am satisfied there is great delinquency on the part of many that profess to believe in Jesus, yet do not put on Christ by baptism. What right have we to say that one is a true follower of Jesus that does not follow him? One may profess to be a believer in Jesus, yet how is it proven if he does not obey him? Prove all things.

There are extremes in this matter. One is to hold that any form of what is called baptism, such as sprinkling, is a necessary step to prepare an unbeliever, or the observance of the proper form of baptism as a condition precedent necessary to prepare one to become a believer.

Another extreme is the omission or neglect of the baptism of many claiming that they are born again. What right have we to disjoin that which God has joined together? What right have we to teach believers that it is not necessary to be baptized? We should teach them to observe all that Jesus has commanded us.

Question: "What is the Primitive Baptist doctrine in regard to death-bed repentance?"

Answer: We preach the necessity of repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and that Jesus is exalted a prince and a Saviour to give repentance unto Israel and the forgiveness of sins, and that this repentance is good whether it is in youth, middle age, or in old age, whether when one is well physically or on a sick bed and nigh unto death. It is good at any time and we are glad to see the proof of it at any time.

Question: "Does the scripture contained in Luke 23:39-43, have any bearing on this subject today?"

Answer: No scripture is of any private interpretation. Jesus has the same power now that he had then.

Question: "What are the reasons for close communion?"

Answer: All denominations have their rules for communion. We also have our rule or qualification necessary for admission to communion. We hold that according to the bible authority and example none but believers who have been baptized and are maintaining an orderly walk are entitled to communion. The objection is made against us for holding what the world calls close communion. The objection should be made against the bible for requiring that qualification if it is wrong.

Question: "Why do not the Primitive Baptists believe in foreign missions?"

Answer: We hold that the gospel of Christ is preached in all the world, and we welcome anywhere and everywhere all that preach his gospel, in our country as much as in another. In every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him, Jesus Christ has a people in all nations, and we are glad when he is preached anywhere, and everywhere. Because we oppose the unauthorized, unscriptural money-loving, man-devised schemes of men that base salvation on the act of the creature, denying the atonement of Jesus Christ and his holy call, and the necessity of his call that alone can qualify and send preachers that preach the gospel, the cry is raised against us that we are opposed to preaching the gospel to the heathen.

Question: "What stand do Primitive Baptists take in regard to Sunday schools?"

Answer: We ask where is there any bible authority either for Sunday schools or modern missionary operations? Show us the bible authority for either and we will thank you.

We hold that parents should bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord—should encourage them to attend on the public worship of God, should read the scriptures, and do such things as the bible sanctions. Because we oppose what we hold the bible does not authorize we are ridiculed. The defenders of Sunday schools and modern missions have manufactured a sentiment in their favor and because we do not go with them in these things we are decried as opposed to all progress. Who is the guilty party, the one who insists on bible example, and authority, or the one who has set up his own gods and condemns all that will not patronize them?

P. D. G.

REVEREND.

tended in its use at first, as applied to men, has largely lost its force, and as to meaning, might be classed with those words which, for lack of meaning, have become obsolete. In a gospel sense, the word has no meaning as it is used, and is entirely out of place. It is only used once in all the scriptures, and then is applied to him who "Sent redemption unto his people: who commanded his covenant forever: holy and reverend in his name." See Psalm III. We find the term reverend is only applied to the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is holy; as he is brought to view in the salvation and redemption of sinners as the "One who dwelleth in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." This great work from first to last is by grace through the holiness of him who is harmless, separate from sinners and made higher than the heavens, and is therefore not done by men whose names are not holy, and therefore cannot be reverend.

None but these who claim there is an infinite glory to be shared with Christ in the salvation of souls by men as instruments and means under God claim, or accept the term as applied to men. To apply or accept the term as between men is Rabbinical, and the Lord says: "Be not ye called rabbi, for one is your master, even Christ;" and ye are brethren. God's people being brethren as born of him it is not possible that one should be greater than another. If one would be great let him be a servant, and if the servant is as great as his Lord, then might he be called master, but how then could he be called the servant? The master may become to be the servant, but the servant cannot become to be the master. Christ took upon himself the form of a servant and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. So that though he was Lord of all it was through obedience as the servant of all that he reigns over all. If one would be reverend, it must come through service, requiring resistance unto blood, that through death he might reign in the life born from the dead. But this is not possible, because Jesus Christ the righteous is the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, the first born from the dead, and of every creature, and is the only one that ever did or ever could resist unto blood; besides, the apostle Paul tells us that we have not resisted unto blood, striving against sin, and until we shall have so done, we have no right to reverence our brother nor to allow him to reverence us. When John would have worshipped the angel, he said unto him: "See thou do it not; I am thy fellow servant and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus; worship God." And when Cornelius fell down before Peter and worshipped him Peter took him up saying: "Stand up; I myself also am a man." When the priests of Jupiter would have done sacrifice with the people unto Paul and Barnabas these true and faithful servants of God rent their clothes and ran in among the people and cried out, saying: "Sirs, why do ye these things? we also are men of like passions with you and preach unto you that you should turn from these vanities unto the living God." Those who know the Lord are admonished to cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils, and know nothing among each other but Christ and him crucified, and should worship him. The man who holds that he should and must keep the ten commandments as a condition prerequisite to salvation should not forget that one of those commandments says: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." And the Lord has said again: "My glory will I not give to another, neither my praise to graven images. I am the Lord; that is my name." It is shown in the Scriptures that man is naturally disposed to arrogate to himself some degree of importance, either to be as gods or to be a devoted servant of some kind of god other than the living God. To prefer the creature to the Creator was one of the first developments of Adam's character as of the earth, and man has assiduously maintained that disposition until this day, by either putting a price upon himself or some one or more of his fellow creatures, and thus departing from the living God—they are turned unto fables, and through the cunning craftiness of men they turn their godliness so as to realize the greatest gain therefrom. The selfishness of men will not allow them to serve without something akin to a pecuniary consideration as a condition for their serving. But love to God and to all those born of him is the element in which the children of God dwell and the power by which they serve him, because he has shed his love abroad in their hearts by his Holy Spirit, and in meekness they serve him with reverence and Godly fear.

One of the most evident features of the Scriptures is the debasing of man and the exaltation of Christ, and the gospel follows in the same line, and is only truly and faithfully preached when man is shown to be nothing, less than nothing, and vanity and Christ as the embodiment of all fullness, and all and in all to his people.

To preach salvation by grace in such a manner as not to as clearly show that it is not by works, decisively presenting each as distinctively and gosselly true, is not a true presentation of the gospel, and will not bring forth sinners saved by grace that praise due the name of Jesus consequent upon the revelation of salvation as seen in the gospel when it is truly, fully and faithfully preached.

It seems to me that the doctrine as we understand it, and the customs which we hold to be in harmony with it, should be so clearly defined that our children and our neighbors' children might know of them, and that our children especially might respect us in them. That we do not use nor accept the use of the word reverend, and the reason, might be and ought to be known by the people to whom we preach, and our deportment individually and collectively ought to be such as to demand and maintain the respect of our friends in our customs, practices and doctrine.

The signs of the times seem to indicate a greater need of a clear, distinct, unquestionable presentation of the doctrine, discipline and order of the church than ever before. The different denominations are expunging, remodeling, revising and repudiating even the forms of doctrine originally held by their founders; and even some Primitive Baptists have felt called upon in the closing days of the nineteenth century to tell us what is really the doctrine that was once delivered unto the saints. Remove the London confession, the Black Rock declaration and the Fulton commentary, and all minor declarations, circular letters and communications, and turn toward the Mount Zion, and behold the ancient landmark which our fathers have set.

OBITUARIES

JAMES A. LEAK.

At the request of some of the surviving children of Brother A. Leak, and also by order or appointment of his church, I attempt through much weakness to record some of the incidents and character of his life and the sad statement of his death. He was born in Stokes county, N. C., June 5, 1841, and died December 21, 1908, at the age of 68 years 6 months and 16 days. At the age of 26 he was married to Drucilla F. Lackey, with whom he lived lovingly for many years and to which union were born ten children, three sons and seven daughters. Three sons and five daughters survive him to mourn their loss of a great counselor and a good and precious father who so long and faithfully labored for them. He was a hard worker on the farm and sometimes labored day and night with the vigorous help of his dear and faithful companion to obtain a good living for himself and family and the enjoyment of his many friends and strangers that often lodged with them. He was a soldier in the confederate army and was said to be a true and loyal one. In the battle of Gettysburg he was wounded in the left foot, the ball lodging in the ankle joint which caused him great suffering for several years. Dr. Bohannon, of Winston-Salem, finally extracted it, however, and it gave him great relief, although he was never entirely free from pain which sometimes threw him almost into lifeless spasms of untold sufferings. These followed him to his grave.

In the year 1867 he embraced a most wonderful hope in Christ of the forgiveness of his many sins and being led forth by the spirit of the great God he joined the Primitive Baptist church at State Line on Saturday before the third Sunday in November, 1867, and was baptized by Elder S. J. Lackey, his father-in-law. The church seeing his faithfulness and talent, soon elected him church clerk, and also being so faithful to the trust, on the 18th day of July he was ordained to the office of deacon which office he filled to the satisfaction of the church holding the mystery of godliness in a pure heart.

He was bold in the faith and was a good counsellor in the associations and churches and among his countrymen doing and transacting much business for them. He was good to the poor, often visiting the sick. He was once the representative of his county in the legislature of North Carolina, and efficiently served his people. But after all his service and moral virtues, of which we may speak he had much sorrow to encounter in the great loss of his loving companion, over which he mourned until his death, often telling his friends that he craved to die, relying on the grace of God for his salvation that he might be at rest. So on the morning of the 21st of December, after some slight suffering with his wounded foot, unexpectedly to his children he fell asleep never to awake in this life. But we have that hope that when he shall awake it will be in the likeness of Jesus. Then shall he with all the redeemed family of God shine forth as the sun in the brightness of his glory.

We say to the dear and weeping children you have lost a good father; remember the good example of his life and pattern of his unwavering faith that you may abide therein and confidently wait until your change shall come, together with all his dear brethren who loved him so much and toiled and traveled together with him be saved with an everlasting salvation to inhabit forever a home free from sorrow and death and be forever more with the Lord.

E. M. BARNARD.

THOMAS EUGENE STANDFIELD.

By request of the bereaved and heart-stricken father of the infant child, Thomas Eugene Standfield, I send for publication in the Landmark a short sketch of the little one, the son of our dear Brother and Sister Standfield, who lives near Farmville, N. C. The child first saw the light of nature, December 23, 1907, and departed this life April 11, 1909, making his stay here one year, three months and eighteen days. He was laid in his last and undisturbed resting place here late in the afternoon of the 2nd Sunday, and the writer of this sketch was called upon to hold services at the grave of the little one which he did.

I very much sympathize with our dear brother and sister because of their loss for they were much devoted to it. It is hard for our children to be taken from us after our affection for them has been deeply cemented. But the natural love has its rise here and will thus end, but the love of God which is stronger than death will take the little one out of death. The full grown man here in this life is stronger, naturally, than the little child, but in the grave the child is his equal in that respect. So there can be no going to the better world without the good Lord, for we first must meet with and be captured by death. But the children of God are more than conquerors through him that loved them.

Eugene was a bright and beautiful little child and was much loved, not only by his parents, but others of the family and friends. His illness was pneumonia and was a severe case from the first. All was done to counteract its course that could be done, a good physician and the family generally, but the Lord's call must be obeyed, his love is stronger than our's. Our's is too weak to keep those here that we love, so those who depart to be with the Lord are better off than those left here in our care.

So weep not, dear ones, your loss is his eternal gain. The child cannot return to the parents, but the parents can go to the child. This knowledge was a comfort to David, and may it also be to Brother and Sister Standfield, and that the Lord may bless them with a sufficiency of his grace to sustain them in this sore trial.

SARAH ALTIZER.

Mrs. Sarah Altizer was born November 5, 1822, and departed this life December 8, 1907. She was a daughter of Jacob and Annie Shelor, and was married to John E. Altizer, in February, 1844. Of this union there were born unto them three sons and two daughters, Judge J. Harvey, of Texas; Deacon William and Brother John L. and Sister Mary E. Thompson and Mrs. W. T. Riner.

Brother Altizer, who was a most faithful and excellent deacon, and Sister Altizer and their daughter, Mary Ellen, were received into the fellowship of the church at White Oak Grove, Floyd county, Virginia, the 2nd Sunday in July 1873, and together with the writer, who had been received at the previous meeting were baptized by Elder Amos Dickerson.

Sister Altizer's character as a woman, was much in harmony with the loveliness of woman's sphere. She was peaceable, kind and gentle. She was modestly retiring in her disposition towards others and though not much given to talk, yet she maintained such a graciousness of manner as made her very presence interesting. As a wife she was true to the divine injunction—a keeper at home, a helpmeet for her husband. As a mother she moved in the midst of her children, rehabilitating them day by day with a consciousness of the reality of life, its purposes in progression and in consummation thereby gradually but surely imbuing their lives with a store from which they might draw inspiring usefulness all along the pathway of life according as its individual eventfulness might demand. How true the saying: "What is home without a mother?" How fortunate is the child which has the presence and training of a mother in its rearing, a mother true to nature, for such is a mother, indeed.

As a neighbor Sister Altizer enjoyed the confidence of the community in which she lived. As a member of the church she was faithful, gentle, meek and humble, and rested much in a quiet assurance of the sufficiency of her hope as one knowing in whom she believed. She loved the church and the doctrine of salvation by grace, and endeavored to live as becometh one to whom the grace of God has appeared, bringing salvation.

Her later years were spent in rest and quietude, yet not without an anxiety as to the future. A few days before the end came she said to her daughter, Sister Thompson, I am seeing so much pleasure. Sister Thompson asked her if she felt that Jesus was with her and she said yes, and smiled as though looking into his blessed face as by the light of eternal life, and in this blessed frame of mind she gently passed away in the calmness of that repose which must come to them that sleep in Jesus as by that spirit which sweetly prompted these living lines—

"Jesus can make the dying bed
 Feel soft as downy pillows are,
 While on his breast I lean my head,
 And breathe my life out sweetly there."

NANCY R. VERNON.

By request of relatives and friends of old Sister Vernon, I send for publication in the Landmark her obituary:

Nancy R. Vernon was born March 5, 1829, and died March 10, 1909. She made a profession in Christ as her Saviour and joined the Primitive Baptist church at Buffalo by experience Saturday before the first Sunday in August, 1885, and was baptized the 31st of August following with two other sisters, (one being the mother of the writer), by Elder Davis Hill, and was a faithful member as long as she was able to fill her seat, often going when she was not able physically. Although in her old age her mind became scattering she honestly contended for salvation by grace and grace alone, and on the morning before she died she viewed the happy land of Canaan, and said: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

Her funeral was preached by Elder J. P. Via, her pastor, and her body was laid to rest in the family burial ground there to await the morning of the resurrection when it will be raised triumphant over death and the grave. Written by

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

CHARITY.

Dear Brother Gold:

I have a mind to write a few lines on the above subject. Charity is a large word and full of meaning. Charity created the heavens and the earth, and peopled the earth, and through charity man is preserved, who though being the greatest of God's creation is the most disobedient and disloyal to him. It is through charity we have our being and are permitted to go on in our thoughtless way, much of the time trampling the mercies of God under our feet.

When I can stop and think and take a retrospective view of my life, I can sometimes witness with one of old say, "Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all my days." When we look around and see that the greater part of the world seems to know or care nothing of God and his goodness and mercy and the greater part of the church most of the time cold, are thoughtless and indifferent, we are made to realize that the Lord is compassionate and full of mercy or he would destroy man from off the face of the earth and bring him to eternal account for his deeds. We can then, when brought to our proper sense comprehend that God is loving-charity.

Charity is love and knows no evil. When we are controlled by a spirit of charity we can look over our brethren for good and not for evil; we can then tell them of their faults for their good and for the good of the cause. And when our brethren come to us in charity and tell us of our shortcoming and we are in the spirit of charity we feel to thank them for it, and feel to praise the Lord for putting it into their hearts to do so.

Charity in the hearts of the pastors make them want to serve their churches punctually and the same charity that makes them want to serve their churches promptly should make the members of the churches minister to him of their temporal things, and if they do neglect their faithful pastors there is no evidence of that indwelling charity in them that should characterize a christian.

By their fruits ye shall know them, and a good tree cannot but bring forth good fruit. And by their works ye shall know them. If the fruit is not good how shall we know that the tree is good? And if one does not bring forth these works of charity what evidence is there that such a one is a christian?

We are exhorted in and by the word of God to maintain good works, and if we do this, this charity will shine forth, showing forth the face of Jesus in the one thus exercised. This is showing your faith by your works. This is the good tree bringing forth good fruit. This is putting the light on the candlestick. This is letting your light so shine before others, that they seeing your good works are constrained to glorify your good father which is in heaven.

Charity is that principle which causes joy to flow from breast to breast and sorrow from heart to heart.

The Lord's people are exhorted to manifest this charity that is in them; to put on the whole armor of God, etc., and if they do not this, what is the evidence that they have walked with God? If one never offers to the church, what evidence is there that he loves the church? If a young man never proposes matrimony to a young lady, what evidence is there that he loves her well enough to become her husband? So, if you never offer to the church it is poor evidence that you love the brethren. And if you are never baptized or partake of the Lord's supper, what evidence is there that you desire it?

And what does it amount to, to say to your pastor, Brother ———, I do love to see you come and to hear you preach, and never give him anything. Where is the evidence that you love to see or hear him? Let us be consistent. Bring forth the fruits as the Bible commands:

Charity covereth a multitude of sins.
It preaches the gospel to the poor.
It feeds and clothes poor pastor.
It accomplishes whatever it finds to do:

Anything else is not charity.

Humbly submitted,

H. M. BAUCOM.

Peachland, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:

My Dear Brother and Father in Israel—I was much refreshed and comforted by your editorial in Zion's Landmark of February 15. When I read your article on the talents my heart responded amen and amen, and I was saying it I guess when my wife, who was sitting by me, asked what was the matter? I told her nothing. I have believed for a long time though, that the Ten Virgins represented the people of God among the Jews at the coming of Christ. But the parable of the wheat and tares surely represent the entire world of the saved and the unsaved.

There has been a tendency in this country to represent the whole world as the children of God in obedience or disobedience—every character named in scripture as obedient or disobedient children of God. It caused much trouble among the saints here. But I hope it is now forever buried, and I would not now name it, but for fear it might give trouble some where else among the saints. It is the only heresy I know of that don't even carry morals with it. No church will prosper that suffers such heresies taught in its pulpits. Strange to say, but it seems that good, humble brethren will sometimes be ensnared by such delusions. I have gotten afraid of overmuchness, for the fact that the introducers of the above named heresies used to argue that everything was just as it ought to be—that there were just as many at our church meetings as ought to be, etc. This has often reminded me of the darkey's tree, which he declared was so straight that it leaned the other way.

Now, Brother Gold, I do not believe in making a brother an offender for a word, nor contentious over parables, nor individuals. I do not know whether Judas was saved or not, and though I feel to be very unworthy, I never felt like claiming kin with him, and although some brethren do, I don't think we should wrangle over it. I have heard some take time, (that I thought might be used more profitably) to urge that Judas was saved and contend for it as earnestly as if our soul's salvation depended on it. I think such a course out of place and injurious to the cause.

I do hope the brethren who are able will continue to sustain you financially in the publication of the Landmark—your labor of love, and may our merciful God yet spare you many years to wield the pen and tongue in defense of the truth and peace in the churches. I have been a reader of Zion's Landmark about thirty years and I don't know hardly how I could do without it, though sometimes I don't see how I am to pay for it and meet my other obligations.

Your unworthy brother,

J. T. STINSON.

Stinson, Va.

Oak City, N. C., April 15, 1909.

Dear Brother Gold:

You will find enclosed my subscription for another year. I wish I could make it more than I have. I have known so much trouble myself, I can sympathize with you and all others who are in distress. I sincerely hope, through the mercy of God, you will yet be relieved, and somehow, I believe you will.

It has been on my mind, but I have felt my incompetency to write of the death of Mr. House, my dear husband, and something of the latter part of his life. He died October 15, 1908, in the 64th year of his age, after an illness of about a week. The day of his death he had, the doctor said, another stroke (the third) of paralysis. For some time, though, he had been failing and getting more and more helpless, and we could but see that the end was coming.

He lived nearly twenty years after the first severe stroke of paralysis, and in all those twenty long years of affliction his life was one rare example of sweet and patient resignation to God's will, and with scarcely a murmur of rebellion or discontent he bore all that was laid upon him, and for many years he was bright and cheerful, although quiet. It was often the subject of remark, the gentle, quiet, uncomplaining patience with which he bore all his sufferings.

As to the son of Elder David House, he was brought up, as you know, under good influence, and always loved the Primitive Baptists, and while enjoying having all our friends to visit us, especially did he seem to enjoy the conversation of the brethren and sisters, and often have I seen him deeply affected when hearing the relation of their exercises of mind and visitations of the Lord, but when asked for his he was silent. He bore the fruit of much meekness and humility, and was fearful of claiming more than belonged to him, but he was unable to hide his feelings. They would betray him.

When I was baptized I thought it would not be long before he, too, would come in the fold, but I was disappointed. For, after awhile, he grew and remained careless and, seemingly, unconcerned, till the Lord visited him and bowed him down with affliction. He received a hope after he was afflicted, and felt to be, indeed, blest of the Lord. No wonder he bore his afflictions so patiently, after receiving such a blessing at God's hands; but the wonder to us is, he continued so, so much longer than most of us do.

God had a wise and merciful purpose in afflicting him, and I felt that I knew what it was. He was bringing him to Christ. I would think some times that if he would take up his cross and be baptized there was a chance, a hope with me, that he would be relieved of his affliction, and our youngest child, who had never seen him any other way, once said to him, "Papa, if you would be baptized, maybe you would get unparalyzed." I saw that it touched him, but it had no other effect.

He was ever a kind and loving husband, faithful and true, thoughtful for me, and attentive to my wants. He was also an affectionate father to his children and considered their needs, but was firm in his discipline of them. Just before our marriage I prayed the Lord to give me, in him, a kind husband, and he granted me my prayer. He loved me, I believe, as long as he lived. I miss him now, I can never tell how much, but I cannot find it in my heart to wish him back to his old life of suffering. He is resting now, I believe, with his Saviour. It was a comfort to me to look at him, after death, and see that restful, easy, peaceful look on his face, after so much fore his death.

For twenty years I have been fearing and expecting his death, and it has taken all that time to prepare me to meet it. For a long time it would almost take my breath to think about it. It has seemed to me that the Lord knew I could not bear up under it at first, and he gave me all that time to prepare me for it. After seeing him for so many years gradually but surely giving way, both physically and mentally, thinking every year would probably be his last, seeing him so tired, so uncomplaining and patient, so pitiful in his weakness, he who had once been so strong and self-reliant, I felt that it would be, though to his family a stroke full of sorrow, to him a happy release, could the Lord see fit to take him to himself. And now he has gone and left me in my loneliness and sorrow.^{9. 11}

The last years of his life, after having a fall that fractured a bone, he was unable to walk, and could scarcely stand on his feet, and I would have to be almost as watchful over him as over an infant to learn when anything was wrong with him, and to attend to his wants. But he is gone now, and resting from all weariness and pain. That is my consolation. He is resting, and at peace with his maker, I believe. He needs me no longer. Before he was stricken down I hoped that the Lord would take me first. I felt that I could never bear to see him leave me; but since then I have hoped that I would be spared to him while he lived, and a merciful father has provided for us.

One of the saddest times of all, after his death, was on returning from the grave to the home, to see the vacant chair, the emptiness of the room where once was the loved presence, with the knowledge that never more will we behold him with our natural eyes, never more hear his voice, never again minister to his wants, there is an emptiness, a vacancy in our lives that will never again be filled up. Another tie, the strongest of all ties to me, that bound us to this world, is broken.

I often find myself wishing when my troubles are heavier than I can bear patiently, that I could lie down beside him and cease from this life of toil and sorrow. Some times, when I think of my children there is a little clinging to them with the hope that I may be of some benefit to them awhile longer; at other times I feel that they would be better off without me. But I must wait with what patience I can the Lord's will. I have been visited, I believe, with these words, "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thy heart." Pray for me, that I may run with patience the race that is set before me, and that my children may be blest of the Lord as I believe their father was.

In hope and sorrow, your sister,
MARY W. HOUSE.

Lampasas, Tex., April 21, 1900.
Elders Gold and Lester, Wilson, N. C., and to all Household of Faith—
Greetings:

Dearly beloved in the Lord, if you will accept such application from a poor and unworthy, blind offcast as I deem myself to be:

Dear Brethren Gold and Lester, as we are commanded always to be ready to give a reason of the hope that is in us, therefore I will endeavor to relate my reasons for claiming relations with you and all the household of faith.

I will give in a short, brief way as I can and I desire that you all judge faithfully whether or not the following justifies me in claiming a hope in Christ:

I was born and raised in the state of Alabama, along the southern line of Montgomery and the north line of Lowndes counties.

I having no parents in childhood, consequently was raised an orphan boy. Growing up to manhood I was married to Miss Flora Anne Surels, and had access from my boy days to the different orders, claiming to be churches; was told by their ministers that I could obtain a hope in Christ at my own option.

I would begin at times, intending to obtain a hope in Christ by my own efforts, while yet dead in trespasses and sins would conclude at times through excitement of the flesh that I had become a child of God through and by my own efforts.

But alas! on the second Sunday in September, 1858, while sitting under the sound of the gospel, being delivered by my uncle, Elder William Finley, at the old church house where my father and mother's membership was. I trust it pleased God, through our Lord, Jesus Christ, by the operation of the holy spirit (for I was yet dead in trespasses and sins), to open the eyes of my understanding, and I found that I had been mistaken up to that date.

However, seeing my lost and ruined condition, and that I was yet a poor helpless sinner in the sight of God and I fled to the law as laid down in the New Testament scriptures, seeking justification by the deeds of the law, but oh, what did I find—but condemnation and was made to cry out, "Lord, what shall I do?"

"Here I am a poor, helpless sinner in the sight of God," could only say, when I could retire in a secret grove, endeavoring to pour out my soul and beg God to have mercy on me a poor lost and ruined sinner.

It would seem to me that my prayers would fall to the ground, my sins would open plainer and plainer and seemingly as mountain high. I could not see for my life how that God, through Christ, could be just and justify such a mortal as I was.

Going on in this way, bowed down under a burden of sin day after day and night after night, thinking that my case was hopeless, and that I had sinned away my day of grace.

I was gathering cotton about two miles from home and on Friday about 10 o'clock, on the 28th day of September, 1858, it seemed to me that my burden was so heavy that I could not possibly carry it any longer and yet live.

I thought I would once more retire to the little secret grove where I had often secreted myself, to beg for mercy, dropping on my knees as I had done before, asking God if it was possible to be merciful to me, a poor sinner. Just at this time it seemed I heard as plain as could be spoken a small still voice, saying: "Son, arise, thy sins are pardoned." Just here, brethren, my burden was gone, I felt as light seemingly as a feather and instead of begging for mercy my cry was turned into praise, shouting glory, glory to God; everything seemed lovely, seemed as the trees, the cotton stalks, were all praising God.

My mind was then directed immediately to my old mother church, and something was said I trust by the Lord, "Go home to thy mother people and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you." I conferred not with flesh and blood, but straightway accompanied by my wife, and when the opportunity offered, went before the church and told a part of what I have written here. My wife also related her hope, and to my surprise, both of us were received into the fellowship of the Bethlehem church, Montgomery county, Alabama, and the following morning, which was the second Sunday in October, 1858, were baptized by the pastor, Elder William Finley. This church is unlimited predestinarian faith.

Dear brethren, I wish you to join faithfully with me, as I have all the time had doubts and fears whether I am deceived or not in my travel from nature to grace, yet when I get low in spirit, thinking surely I am deceived, my mind reverts to that notable bright Friday, and it cheers my poor drooping mind, and I can exclaim, Glory! glory to God! And I would not exchange that little sweet hope for all this world with all its glory.

Going through the Confederate war and being thrown into all kinds of temptations, I know that only the grace of God and for a purpose known of God alone that I was kept as I trust by his power and that my life was preserved. I was brought home alive, though badly wounded and disabled from military service on the 3rd of May, 1863.

I will just here state that on the 15th of May, 1864, while riding alone a small voice spoke to me and said, Go preach the gospel. My reply was, Not so Lord, I am poor, an invalid, ignorant and unlearned, and I cannot.

Here, brethren, I set about to defeat the Lord's calling, as I believed, determining in my own mind not to obey the heavenly calling. My first leap was to unite with the Masonic fraternity, knowing then I would be justly excluded from the church. I remained with them for about three years, acting as did Jonah. I could not remain with them longer, however, and returned to the church denouncing the practical part of Masonry and asking pardon for what I had done.

They granted my pardon and restored me to the fellowship of the church again. My impression grew stronger and stronger from time to time, though my determination was still not to yield to or obey the heavenly calling, feeling myself too unworthy for such and feeling my ignorance for teaching the plan of salvation or endeavoring to proclaim eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ.

I finally decided to ask for a letter of dismissal from the church for myself and wife, which request was granted. I had determined to move from my native state to Texas, where I was entirely unknown, and intended to never by any way disclose that I had an impression to enter the sacred desk.

Finding a small party of Baptists in this county we offered to them and were received by letter into the fellowship of Bethel church, Bell county, Texas, in the fall of 1873.

After preaching one Saturday night by Brother M. H. Denman in the spring of 1874, and while I was walking about the edge of the congregation, Brother Denman called me to come to him. I went and he asked me if I did not feel sometimes like I wanted to preach. I tried to shun this question, but he insisted upon a positive answer. Right then I was put to the test, must I acknowledge the truth or tell a falsehood. I finally told him those were my impressions, and the next day at church, Elder Whitely, our pastor, and Brother Denman, called me to the stand and I could not get away without making an effort.

And, dear brethren, I have been going on since that time trying to preach and trying to quit. I was called to ordination in August, 1884.

Now, brethren, I have given you the best I can of my travels and am now as I have ever been dependent upon the Lord to aid and assist me through the remainder of my days on earth. I am now ending up my 73rd year and am nearly ready to lay down my armor and say farewell.

Brother Gold, I have been reading and hearing Zion's Landmark read since November, 1879, and I can say from the depths of my heart as I trust, that I fully endorse the editorials and good letters I find therein. It is nearly our only joy now, and I hope the Lord will bless you to publish it yet many years to come, and how thankful I feel towards you for sending it to me.

I have for many years been impressed to make this effort to write you, and if you find anything in it worthy of publication and that will be of benefit to any of God's children, please publish; if not throw it in the waste basket and all will be well with me.

I will close by asking an interest in your prayers and all the household of faith. May God bless you all. Farewell.

Your brother in hope of eternal life.

G. W. POUNCEY.

Dear Brethren Gold and Lester:

Once more I come before the people with fear and trembling and I hope to praise my maker in his name. We did not go to Flat River last 4th Sunday on account of rain, so we gathered together in song, and as I was looking over some verses, this one came to me:

"Today attend his voice,
Nor dare provoke his rod;
Come like the people of his choice,
And own your gracious God."

It seems those words were spoken to me from above, and I feel it my duty to praise the Lord abroad by writing as well as within me. We are commanded to let our light shine and not hide it under a bushel. I am not ashamed to own my Lord, and I hope he will guide my pen and direct my mind to write of what I have been impressed.

Brother Gold, when I was baptized and came out of the water with my eyes closed to all the world (I have already told you the glorious message I received while walking out), and after getting to the bank and shaking hands with the brethren my thoughts were, they look like angels, and then the weight left me and a light flashed around me. Some of the sisters said: "She will never look any prettier." A Missionary lady came to me and said: "You certainly looked very sweet while coming out," and I felt to thank them all through the mercies of God, as it was very touching to me. And some that were there saw a snake lying quietly down in the water some distance from where we were. While the works of God were going on the serpent had no power to rule. I have been blessed to enjoy that heavenly light, and I have had to contend with the spirit of that snake here of late.

A good while ago, since I united with the people of God, when I was in much distress and doubt, I could not see then why such a woe should come over me. I retired early one Monday night and in a little while was asleep, when I had a vision that was very plain to me. I saw a large multitude of people it seemed in the edge of Roxboro, and the people were all in an uproar for they thought the end of time had come. But I did not think so, although in every direction we looked we could see dense banks of smoke like burning buildings. The horses were frightened at the noise going on and in the west was a severe black cloud rising, but I was not frightened in the least. The people and I started walking up the hill, I in front and the people behind. I walked on into the yard of the Flat River church and came to a carryall where Brother Jones was sitting and a colored man was holding the horse. My father and oldest sister were standing near and Uncle Shell Brooks was sitting in a chair close by crying. The people were in sight and the black cloud was overhead and hid all the sky. Brother Jones with a solemn expression in his face said, "God has done many wonderful works and he will do more." Then I awoke, and for two days I thought over it much, and on Wednesday evening there was a black cloud rising slowly and by night it had covered the sky just like I saw it in the vision, and it troubled me so that when I retired I could not stay on the bed. I walked the floor and groaned, and felt like I had not a friend on earth nor in heaven. Oh that God would visit me and give me relief was my heart's prayer. I concluded to lie down, which I did, across another bed, and had been there a few minutes only, when suddenly I saw a large light in the hall, and it immediately entered my mind that it was an angel from heaven. I arose twice from the bed and thought I would go to the door and see it, but both times it would go back to the other end of the house, and when I went back to bed it would come back. So I laid there and thought that it was an angel on top of the house, and I said, "Lord, I will be obedient to thy commands." It came nearer and the light got brighter and brighter until there shone on the ceiling near me an extra light about the size of a large book. I looked out the window on the front side of the house and the yard was lit up and I could see the shadow of its wings, and on the opposite side of the house it was the same way. The wings appeared in motion all the time. My room as well as the whole yard was lit up brighter than any lamp could make it.

I lay there a while looking at and enjoying it, although it was still cloudy and the rain falling on the porch top sounded beautiful to me, and I thought truly what a blessing to me it is to be able to look upon it. There were three others in the room with me, but they were all fast asleep. I felt that the Lord, who had all power, was indeed a friend of mine. After awhile the angel flew back to heaven, its blessed home.

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm."

I felt he planted his footsteps in the sea and came on the storm to me that night. I turned on the side of my face and was soon asleep, and found the sweetest and pleasanter rest I ever had. The next morning when I arose I felt very solemn and did so the entire day, having little to say. That evening about 5 o'clock, I felt to say in a singing way, "The Lord sent his angel to me last night; the Lord has promised to be with me in hours of tribulations, and I can look back and see where his hand and tender mercies were underneath me. Blessed be his holy name."

Brother Gold, I will relate a dream or two I have had of late. I dreamed of having on the 4th Sunday a great contention with a certain person, and the next day it gave me trouble. I tried to pray to God to show me why was it that I had it to contend with. So that night, Monday, I dreamed I saw a snake coming up through the fireplace in the old kitchen. I made at him when he ran back, but returned and I made at him again. Again he returned, but came out again and this time he stood up and I noticed he had a crooked neck and he appeared in great agony because I would not let him do as he wanted to, though he was trying hard. I took an iron rod and struck him a severe blow near the head when he fell for good, going down in the earth and coming through in another place. It was then a dragon and was crying and groaning. On our way from burying my aunt on the following Tuesday, a snake crawled into the road and I asked my brother to let the horse step on it. I wanted to see it mashed. But he did not though the wheel struck it when it took its flight. So my daily prayer was that the Lord would be with me in the trials I was to meet with.

And in about two weeks I saw the spirit of that snake trying me, and on Monday after the 2nd Sunday in July I saw I had to fight the serpent for my good, but the manner I had to contend with it made it more trying on me. That night, Monday, the spirit of that snake stood up before me again, and it seemed he wanted his way so bad it confused me. I could not lie down, but walked the floor and cried to the Lord to help me destroy that evil spirit and not let me go into the hand of satan forever. It came to my mind that he would destroy it, so I felt better and retired. I saw that the devil had more power than man when the Lord was not with us and therefore by the help of the Lord we can destroy all our enemies. The next day it entered my mind that the Lord would destroy the spirit of the old serpent and his will shall be fulfilled. Immediately joy and gladness sprang up in my heart and I cried for joy; then I felt like going about my daily labor.

On that day something was said about there being nothing new under the sun, and I replied there was neither nothing new under the sun nor over it, as the Bible says God created everything and finished his work in six days, and truly there could not be anything taken from his labor neither added to. No man is able to destroy his foundation though often his people rebel against him, and behold he will send his chastening rod against them.

Brother Gold, near the end of six years after I was baptized the spirit of that snake that was in the water then quiet did arise repeatedly trying to mock me and did everything he could to destroy what the Lord had taught me.

Brother Gold, I had felt so impressed to go out to our association at Surl, and was preparing to go, though nearing the time, it was raining, besides I was sick with the toothache. On Friday evening I tried to pray that if it was his will for me to go to make the weather clear and for him to heal me. And these words came to me, "Go on and meet with your God in peace." I felt then that I was going. I went down stairs and different ones said, it looked like it would be too damp for me to go. I replied that if it was for me to go I would be all right in the morning. The next morning was fair and I went feeling calm and easy and received a few crumbs of heavenly food that day. However, I slept very little that night as the spirit of that serpent was still reigning. I arose with a heavy weight the next morning when you came and began to pray at the church the weight began to leave. Through the mercy of God was I blessed to feel that you prayed for me which had been my desire for a week. I would retire crying, Lord put it into Brother Gold to pray for me. Your prayer and preaching both were rich and beautifully adorned with the spirit and divine love of Jesus which cheered my drooping heart. Also Brother Simpkins' sermon was wonderful indeed. I felt that if I did not hear the gospel that morning it was never preached by mortal man. I was blessed to eat of Canaan milk and honey once more which greatly strengthened me.

On Tuesday, the 25th, while it was raining so hard, I felt it to be perfectly right for the Lord to send the rain, but there was a desire in my heart to know why the judgment was sent. That night I tried to get consolation from the Bible and the book fell open at the 22nd chapter of Isaiah. I began reading where it described the overthrowing of many cities. I read on until I got to the 27th chapter and read six verses of that which was a relief to me. I felt like praising the Lord with my whole mind and strength. I felt like the destructive rain that was falling was to destroy the old serpent to some extent that was trying to overthrow the will of God. I got up and went to the door. It was thundering loudly though the lightning was beautiful, flashing on the water, and I saw that it was the power of God, and I felt to be in his hands, and my heart and soul leaped for joy. I felt almost like crying aloud to his praise.

I was in that state of rejoicing for little over a week, fearing no one, though I began to give down in my feelings, and I could look back and see while in that state of rejoicing that the spirit of the serpent was creeping in a mild manner trying his havoc gain, though at the time, as I was lifted in his presence I did not notice it. I have had to contend with the evil spirit at times ever since, but I hope I have been changed from nature to grace. And I know there are a few enemies yet dwelling in the land of Israel to try the Lord's people.

But never before have I tried to contend with the evil spirit as I have of late. While the furious battle was raging I saw that in my own strength I could not win the victory, and I cried to the Lord for mercy. I almost gave up. I wondered if it was possible I had never known him, that I had never seen his salvation or tasted his divine love.

The Lord stretched his arm over the sea and shook his kingdom, showing to the people he has all power in heaven and earth and his will shall be established that no man is able to hinder. He says fury is not in him who would set the briars and thorns against him as he is able to consume it.

After my weak rejoicing I began to doubt a little. I concluded if there was any comfort for me again I could find it in the Bible and I felt that my eyes would light on the right verse. I took the book and upon opening it my eyes fell on this one, "Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy and nothing shall by any means hurt you." I felt to say from my heart that that was enough.

I trust in the Lord that I have written the above in the true love and meekness of our Saviour. Remember this little one in your prayers, who desires to be thankful unto the end.

Dear Brother Gold:

As I have just received a card from sister Lina Grafton telling me that Elder Wm. Grafton is very low and they have no hope of his recovery; and knowing that you and he were great friends, I take the liberty to copy what she wrote me that you may hear from him.

I esteemed him highly for the work's sake as a faithful under shepherd and father in Israel, and feel that his departure will be a happy exchange for him though I know it will be sad for his three daughters who have stayed with him and cared for him as it seems to me, as children could care for a father.

He is about 85 years of age, and I feel that it can truly be said of him that he has fought a good fight, that he has kept the faith, etc.

Hope you and Sister Gold are well as usual and the good Lord is your stay and comfort.

I have been much cast down of late—more so sometimes than others; but there is still in my breast a desire for the welfare of Zion, and I grieve when I see her departing from the old paths.

Would be glad if you could come to our association. I have some hope of going if the Lord will.

Bro. Bell writes that it is his desire to come, but that he is in feeble health and fears the trip will be too much for him; but I hope, if it is the Lord's will, he will be able to come.

Much love to you and Sister Gold.

Dear Sister:

Your nice letter received some time ago, also your kind remembrance in the way of a pretty card. But I know you will pardon my silence when I tell you that my dear father has been sick ever since January, and now he is very low. The Doctor don't give us any encouragement, and we have no hope of his recovery. His disease is of the liver and stomach. He suffers a great deal of pain at times, but I believe his worst suffering is of the nerves—he is extremely nervous. As a last resort we have to give him morphia so that he can get some rest. It nearly breaks my heart to see him suffering and O I am so unreconciled to parting with him. I try to comfort myself that the dear Lord has spared him to a good old age, and if he would lend him to us a while longer we would be just as loth to give him up. But I cannot take comfort. The Lord alone can reconcile us to his will. Pray for us, my dear sister, that we may have grace equal to our day and trial.

I felt that I wanted to write you sooner, but I am so worn out with anxiety and constant watching, and we have so much writing to do, as every mail brings in four or five letters to be answered. Of course our friends in every direction want to hear from father and I am almost too nervous to write at all—so you will please excuse a postal.

I would be glad to hear if you feel like writing—hope you are well. Rest assured I have you in loving remembrance. Craving an interest in your prayers, I am yours in sorrow, LINA GRAFTON.

(The following letter was written by Brother J. B. Farmer while on a recent visit in New York City to his wife in Wilson. P. D. G.)

My Dear Wife:

I have spent a day, the memory of which will linger with me as long as reason lasts, as one of the happiest I have ever spent among the people of the Most High God; not a single one of whom I had ever seen before, and it don't seem possible that strangers in the flesh could make one feel so perfectly at home and so heartily welcome as I felt at the Ebenezer church today in less than five minutes after I got there.

I could not describe the meeting and my feelings if I were to write all night, but they are one of the loveliest bands of Baptists that it has ever been my privilege to meet. And oh, such a hearty welcome they extended to poor, unworthy, sinful me, the thought of which, I hope, brings me nearer the foot-stool of Sovereign mercy, and to plead to the Great Physician to cure a sin-sick soul.

Those brethren in their worship are as different from business in New York as it is possible for two extremes to be. I told you in a previous letter what a hurry business New York is in, and now I will tell you something of the contrast between it and the worship of these lovely saints.

They meet at eleven o'clock a. m., and have services at our Sunday morning services at dear Old Toisnot church at home. Then they break up and serve lunch in an adjoining room, (plenty large, and all necessary conveniences), and after spending awhile in general recreation, they meet again at two-thirty o'clock in the church room and have another sermon. Then they hold conference, and such a precious conference it was, the like of which I never have seen before.

After going through the regular routine the pastor began calling on different members to speak of their religious exercises of mind, when one after another until almost every member of the entire congregation made some remarks showing forth the reason of hope that was in them, and letting their light shine as they are commanded to do in Holy Writ.

During the conference they called on poor, sinful, unworthy me. I arose and I hope I was looking for and asking divine guidance to direct my tongue and utterance to enable me to speak a word to the honor and glory of his name. I did the best I could in my poor, stammering way, and the church seemed to receive what I said gladly. I was afraid I didn't explain myself fully, but the brethren in speaking of my remarks afterwards seemed to comprehend my ideas exactly and to endorse them. Oh, what a lovely conference it was, all speaking and bearing testimony of the love of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; all speaking one and the same thing but in a manner adapted to their own case. This system produces an individual, personal love and fellowship that our churches down home do not have the privilege of enjoying as it is common for the saints in our country to seem to think that it is only proper for the preacher to speak of the things of the kingdom of God.

I could write all night of the pleasures of this day and of my thoughts and conclusions of it, but I must desist as it is getting late. I stayed with these lovely people until it was too late to catch a train that would put me in Philadelphia before night, so I decided to stay here tonight and try to catch a train for Philadelphia at 6:30 o'clock in the morning. I have no idea of getting home tomorrow night now, but the pleasure of this day has well paid me for the delay.

Fondly yours,

J. B. FARMER.

"Who hath believed our report; and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed."

They shall never know anything but joy and gladness. I have been known to feel the arm of the Lord will be revealed to every child of grace, that they have been brought up through the trials of tribulation. Tribulation worketh patience not to be repented of. Then there is no fear of being destroyed when the Lord our life shall come. For we all must appear before the judgment seat of Christ to give an account of the deeds done in the body.

Dear brethren, one and all, you need not fear the trials that are to come upon you. Your kingdom is not of this world, therefore you should not have any fears; knowing your heavenly father is able to direct and keep you all along through the journey of life.

Who hath seen a nation born in a day? Lo, who hath been in the bowels of the earth, lo these many years. These that have been awakened will never know any more sorrow. They have come up through great tribulation, washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. They are now ready to be offered on the holy cross as our Lord and Saviour was. In an hour when ye think not the Son of Man cometh.

Watch therefore and pray, lest ye enter into temptation; the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak. There is a day approaching when we must give account of every evil thought, word and deed. Therefore let us be vigilant and watchful that we be not overtaken as a thief in the night. Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak.

"I am the resurrection and the life." He that believeth in me though he is dead, yet liveth. No one cometh to the Father but by me. I am the vine, ye are the branches. Every branch in me that beareth no fruit must be cut off and burned. Burned is chastisement for disobedience. Everyone coming to me I will in no wise cast out, but will raise them up at the last day.

There is nothing in us to merit esteem or give the creator delight, but even so father it must ever be, because it seemeth good in his sight.

Brethren, you must not be conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your spirit. Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters and drink. Come unto me all ye heaven laden and drink, for I am God and beside me there is no other. Ye children of the highest, come gather around the great white throne.

Volume XLII - - No. 16

Wilson, N. C., JULY 1, 1909

Friend D. W. Smith requests my view of Isai. 51:22, "Thus saith thy Lord the Lord, and thy God that pleadeth the cause of his people, Behold, I have taken out of thy hand the cup of trembling, even the dregs of the cup of my fury: thou shalt no more drink it again":

This chapter is addressed to them that follow after righteousness, to them that seek the Lord. Therefore it is of great value to all that truly follow after righteousness, and seek the Lord. What is a nobler, safer, better object of seeking or more worthy of our attention and labor? Such are commanded to look to the rock whence they are hewn, and the hole of the pit whence they are digged. Such have a high, holy origin as hewn out of the rock, and yet are in the depths as dug from the hole of the pit. There is comfort in considering Abraham the father of the faithful as their father, and Sarah the free woman as their mother.

The Lord alone called Abraham. There was nothing in him by nature that would make him worthy of such a call. The call is all of God therefore it is holy, because all that he does is holy. Looking over this scripture one sees the work of the Lord only. God will comfort his people. He will make her waste places like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the Lord, so that joy and gladness shall be therein. The law shall go forth from the Lord and his judgment shall rest for a light of his people. His righteousness is near and his salvation is gone forth. The heavens and the earth shall vanish away like smoke, and they that dwell in the earth shall die, but God's salvation shall be forever, and his righteousness shall not be abolished.

An exhortation is given to such as forget their maker and his glorious faithful power. Remember the years of the right hand of the most high. He it is that hath cut Bahab and wounded the dragon, that has dried up the seas—that has made the depths of the sea a way for his people to pass over.

What wonderful things God has wrought for his people? Will they be in great straits and oppressed? Will they drink the dregs of the cup of trembling? Yes, Jesus drank the cup that his Father gave him to drink from, and tasted death for everyone. Then must the cup of trembling be put to their lips. Yes, they must follow him and be partaker of the afflictions of Christ. The deep convictions of sin, the sense of vileness that so deeply afflicts, the power of sin and death to cast down, the consciousness that I am in my life and nature a rebel against a holy God so oppresses me, sin slays me by the law which is good, so that the bitter cup with its dregs is placed to my lips. I am not drunk with wine, but the wretched fruit of my doings is drunk by me.

How wonderful and gracious when the Lord takes this bitter cup out of our hand, even the dregs of the cup of his fury, so that we shall no more drink it again.

We must taste the bitter fruit of our doing—sin and death. One drunk with the guilt of his own doings is full of vomiting. All tables, all his doings, all his religion is so filthy and sickening that he is full of the evil ways of his own wretched life, and drinks the dregs of that sinful doing until death stares him in the face. He reels and staggers as one having no strength of standing. How dreadful his guilt and woe. But when the Lord removes this bitter cup and gives us the cup of salvation then we know that salvation is of the Lord. Our experience of death and resurrection seals in us the assurance that God brings everything into judgment whether good or evil, and we know there is a just God. When he reveals his righteousness to such wretched, guilty and helpless sinners then we know that this just God is a Saviour. For it is just in him to justify the ungodly that believes in Jesus whose blood and righteousness take away all guilt, and give one the understanding and sobriety of those whose standing is secure in Jesus, and who are clothed and in their right mind sitting at the feet of Jesus.

P. D. G.

A friend requests my view of Mark 13:17-21.

This refers to the destruction of Jerusalem, and the manner of escape by flight of the elect people of God out of that doomed city at that time.

We should notice the history of what is written in the scriptures, for what is the use of a statment of facts or events if we disregard them in our interpretations of scriptures? By reading this chapter you will see that the matter under consideration is the destruction of the temple and of the city of Jerusalem. Signs of the coming of the notable and dreadful event are given. This should all be fulfilled during the generation then living. The sign of its near approach would be the coming of the Roman army to the city of Jerusalem, and its occupancy by them. (verse 14). Then let the christians, God's elect people, flee out of this city with great haste, not taking anything with them. Then woe be to those with child, or that give suck. Of course they could not flee well. Pray also that your flight be not in winter when the weather is severe, nor on the Sabbath day when your journey is limited to only a few miles. Dreadful will be the affliction of those days, but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened. Do not listen to what any man may tell you about safety here or there. Many shall cry to here or to there. Believe them not.

Now this is the literal meaning of this scripture. The city of Jerusalem has long since fallen and it is given to the Gentiles to be trodden under foot of them. But has this scripture any further or deeper meaning? Yes. The words of Christ never cease to have meaning. While they are fulfilling as prophesied, yet there is no limit, or end to their spiritual meaning to their application to the destiny of men, and the guidance of the Lord's people. Yesterday, today, tomorrow, forever, they have a boundless meaning.

There is a perishing of all things earthly. There must be an escape from the pollutions and defilements of carnal, worldly service. The enemy has possession of the things of earth. Let not the perishable things of earth, the cares of this world, the love of money, the deceitfulness of riches, allure you or beguile you to look on or turn back to carry them with you in your escape, or to benumb you in your flight. We are to lay aside every weight and run with patience the race set before us. Woe to such as commit fornication with the lustful, forbidden things of earth, and to such as give nourishment or encouragement to the institutions (children) of fornication, or organizations of men. Also pray that you become not listless in the wintry months of the year while men are not watchful in serving the Lord. In cold and wintry or barren times men are apt to become unconcerned about the importance of great watchfulness and great urgency of movement. Benumbed with cold and indifferent to important interests, there is great danger of ceasing to watch, and of carelessness in the escape from impending danger.

Also in times of imminent danger there are many false alarms given, some crying one thing and some another. But go not after them. In patience possess your souls. It is wise to be well informed, to give good heed to what Jesus says, to follow no other but to obey him. Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation, but that ye be found worthy to stand before the Son of Man.

P. D. G.

NO MARRIAGES IN HEAVEN.

The denial of the resurrection is of old. In the days when Christ was on earth there was an organized sect called Sadducees that denied the resurrection of the dead. They presented the case of the woman who had seven husbands. They desired to know whose wife she would be in the resurrection, Matt. 22:23-33—Mark 12:18-28—Luke 20:27-40. Marriage is common in this world; and is proper for it is ordained of God. The children of this world marry and are given in marriage: but it shall not be so with those counted worthy of the resurrection, for they are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. There is neither male nor female in that blessed kingdom of heaven. They shall be as the angels of God. There is in Christ Jesus neither male nor female, Gal. 3:28. Surely this is a new order, a new world where they cannot die, nor even have sorrow. Nothing of this corrupt, mortal, earthly life that causes sin and sorrow shall be found in the resurrection life. No fleshly love such as man has for woman shall be there. No love such as father has for his child shall be there. There shall be no cleaving to the dust. No love of money, nor pride, nor vanity, nor hate, nor selfishness shall be there. The former things shall be done away.

The power by which all this shall be wrought is the power of God, the same power whereby God raised Christ from the dead. No man can conceive of this glorious power, nor the marvelous results accomplished by it. It doth not yet appear what we shall be. For it will not be some other that is risen. It will be Paul that is risen who was once Saul of Tarsus. But while Paul never forgot that he persecuted the church, yet he had received a new life that loved the church, and that new life hated that former life that persecuted and wasted the church. But still more wonderful will be the order when Jesus changes this our vile body, and fashions it like unto his own glorious body, Phil. 3:21.

There are three dispensations. There are three heavens, first, second and third. There are three measures of meal. The whole shall be leavened.

It could not be a resurrection unless that which dies rises again. A farmer plants a grain of corn. It must die to be quickened. But that grain does not abide alone, but there is produced by the death of the grain a body or crop of the same kind but far more multiplied and valuable. The divine order of the resurrection is Jesus. Being found in fashion as a man he bears the sins of his people and dies the just one for the unjust. Though he is found in fashion as a man, and made in the likeness of sinful flesh, yet he knew no sin. He was tried and tempted in all points as we yet without sin. He went into the grave, the pit of corruption, where there is nothing but pollution, yet even there he saw no corruption. He was holy there. God did not suffer his holy one to see corruption and when he arose from the dead it was to die no more. He had abolished death, and brought life and immortality to life through the gospel. He is the first born from the dead.

His is a holy divine birth.

When we are born of the earth or naturally it is a corrupt birth, a birth of this world. It could not be any other sort or kind of birth for the parentage is corrupt: but when one is born of God it is a spiritual or holy birth, not of this world. That which is born of the Spirit is spirit. This birth with its holiness shall be fully manifested in the resurrection when a body shall be given this spirit that is a fit dwelling place for that spirit eternal in the heavens. Then love without alloy, mercy at its fountain, grace in its ocean of purity, the presence of God, the fountain of eternal joy shall all be there.

P. D. G.

HOW RISEN?

Paul states (Rom. 7:4), "Whereupon, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ: that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God."

The same Jesus was crucified and raised from the dead, but not in the same relationship. He was crucified under the law, and was delivered for our offenses: he was raised from the dead for our justification by the blood of the everlasting covenant, and manifested to be the son of God with power and great glory of the gospel. He was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit.

Now we are become dead to the law we had transgressed by his death, and therefore the law is satisfied and has no charge against us. We are married to another in the resurrection of Jesus, even to him who is raised from the dead. He dies no more therefore we shall die no more. We are married or joined unto him who is risen from the dead that we should bring forth fruit unto God. We are children of the resurrection. For if any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Old things are passed away and behold all things are become new, and all are of God.

Ye that are risen with Christ are give unto God through Jesus Christ. Ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God, and when Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory. So the believer in Jesus is not under law but is under grace. He is the same man that was a persecutor, but now he is risen with Jesus, and the love of Christ constrains him. He is a new creature, yet he laments his inability to do good. He thanks God through Jesus Christ.

One say is this the same man that once did not love or serve the Lord? Yes, he is the same man naturally, but there is another life or spirit in him. Now he is risen with Jesus, and the life that he now lives in the flesh he lives by the faith of the son of God who loved him and gave himself for him.

When relationship is changed, and the principle necessary to serve acceptably in that new relationship is implanted, then there is service in newness of the spirit.

P. D. G.

THERE IS NO UNCERTAINTY.

God hath spoken unto us in these last days by his son, and this is confirmed unto us by them that heard him. They are inspired men and empowered to interpret the teachings of Jesus. Nor is there any appeal from their word.

Then why should, why do men add to or take from the teachings of the Bible?

Because of the unbelief of men's hearts. There is a proneness in men to controversy.

Predestination is not good enough or strong enough for some, and hence they add absolute or unlimited predestination.

Whom God foreknew he predestined to be conformed to the image of his son. What language could be plainer than this? Whom or all that God foreknew them he did predestinate to be conformed to the image of Jesus, predestinating that they should be holy and without blame before him in love.

Some use the expression I am glad I am a sinner. If you are glad you are a sinner does that mean that you are glad you commit sin? Surely you do not mean that. If a man is a sinner and feels and knows it, and abhors himself as a vile man, surely he is not glorying in being a sinner; but he is glorying in the Lord Jesus who saves him from his sins. A man's sins are the worst thing he has, and they are that which abases him.

"God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin." What does that mean? If it means that one is glad he is a sinner then why rejoice in that which has delivered us from sin? A man who has felt the bondage of sin is the man who is killed to the love of sin, and rejoices in that which has delivered him from sin.

It is a blessed thing that Jesus saves sinners from their sins.

The proneness of men to exaggerate, overstate, go further than some other one, excel him, get up something new is a great source of trouble.

If we felt to abhor ourselves as sinners then we would not want any new doctrine, but the doctrine of Jesus crucified and risen would be good enough for us.

What is an antinomian? One that is against law. Is a believer in Jesus an antinomian? No. A believer in Jesus finds and feels that Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believes. He feels that the law is so pure and holy that none but Jesus has ever fulfilled it. Faith establishes the law. The man that follows Jesus is the one in whom the law is fulfilled.

If we were careful about what we say, and how we live, we would not give so much occasion to the adversary. We should be wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

The scriptures are plain to him that understands. We had better teach nothing than to teach falsehood. The scriptures are plain and leave no uncertainty in their utterance.

P. D. G.

Oh! ye men of Israel, give your hearts unto the Lord. Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters and drink; buy wine and milk, without money and without price. Lo! the winter is past, the rain is over and gone and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. Come away and be at rest for with your Saviour you shall be blessed. Now rise and come away, knowing your heavenly father is able to bring you up through all your tribulations.

No man cometh unto the Father but by me. Little children, do as I bid you. Come away, for lo! the winter is past; the rain is over and gone; and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land. Awake and come away, and be forever blest.

MRS. T.W. HOPKINS.

Dear Brother Gold:

If a church has no pastor, and they call one, and the majority vote for him but some do not vote at all, should he accept the call? If he does accept and serve some time and some of the members can't be satisfied what would be the proper step for them and the pastor to take according to gospel order?

A little one, if one at all,

Remarks—If the brethren are not satisfied with him as pastor they should tell him so, and he will resign, and that should end the trouble.

Why should a gospel preacher desire to lord it over a church? Surely if a church does not desire my service, and I am humble, if they will let me know, I will relieve them and be glad to do so. We should not desire to burden our brethren. Love is the one needful, indispensable thing in this matter.

But sometimes a majority of a church is very devoted to a preacher and greatly desire his service, but a minority of the members do not want him, and are opposed to him. What shall the preacher do in that case? He should advise his friends to be quiet and bear with the others, and he should decline to serve as pastor, for to serve them would divide a church, and no right minded man wishes that.

Self-denial is a very important thing to have. Prefer the good of others and you will in the end seek the good of all.

P. D. G.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM J. CHAMBERS.

In fond remembrance of my dear departed husband I make the attempt to write a short sketch of his life and death, although feeling incapable to the task of so grave a subject.

He was born in Person County, N. C., July 24, 1844 and departed this life Sept. 10th, 1908, making his stay on earth 64 years, 1 month and 17 days. He was a son of Benjamin and Elizabeth Chambers; he being the oldest child, was left in his fourteenth year with a widowed mother and four younger children to look after and care for. The Civil War coming on soon after, he enlisted, making a faithful soldier, but was wounded and came home just before its close.

He was married to Mary Blalock in Jan. 1866, and to them were born seven children, two daughters and five sons, one daughter and one son preceding him to the grave. His wife died fifteen years ago. He was married the second time to Martha E. Johnson the unworthy writer for thirteen years when death took him from me. I have tried with all my heart to be a comfort to him.

He united with the church at Camp Creek in 1902 and was baptized by Elder Albert Blalock and lived a faithful member until death. He was also deacon of the church, which office he filled well, never missing a meeting without being providentially hindered. It seemed his whole crave was to be with the people of God, whom he loved to talk to and was never happier than when with them. We were getting ready to go to Mt. Zion Association when he was stricken with paralysis. This was in August, 1906, when he was confined to his bed for several weeks, part of the time unconscious. Afterwards, however, he got up and was able to work a little, although he had slight strokes all along until the fourth of Jan. 1907, when he had his final stroke and was never able to work any more, and for months before he died could not even feed himself or walk without help.

He was a kind, indulgent father, loving husband, always the same. During his illness he did not want me to leave him a minute and I didn't if it could be helped. He would beg me to carry him home and oh how it grieved me when I could not convince him he was at home. I believe he bore his afflictions with more patience than any one I ever saw, never murmuring or complaining through all his illness. He would look so bright and cheerful saying, I believe the good Lord will raise me again. He often tried to sing, but never could until a few nights before he was taken worse when he began singing:

"Yea, when this flesh and heart shall fail,
And mortal life shall cease;
I shall possess within the veil
A life of joy and peace."

He sang it over and over for one hour, it being all he could remember of the song.

On Tuesday morning before he died on Thursday, I saw he was much worse and asked him if he did not want to lie down. He said, I reckon I had better. Wednesday at 11 o'clock he became unconscious and never spoke or moved again. All that loving hands could do was done to stay the hand of death.

Even though I am assured he has gone to the loving arms of Jesus, there to await our home coming, it is hard, oh, so hard to part from him, yet I hope the Lord will sustain and give me grace to bear my troubles.

"Peaceful be thy silent slumber;
Peaceful in thy grave so low;
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our song will know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed."

Written by his bereaved wife, MARTHA E. CHAMBERS.

BROTHER BENNETT BULLOCK.

Whereas, Brother Bennett Bullock departed this life on the 6th day of April, 1909, the Primitive Baptist church at Healthy Plains feels a deep sense of loss sustained in his death.

Be it resolved that Bennett Bullock was a man whose life illustrated the faith that he professed. This means that he was honest and conscientious, and that he performed to the utmost of his ability the duties of a good citizen. To the poor and distressed he was ever kind and sympathetic; in his community, he was a neighbor and a brother, whose influence was a blessing and a benediction; in his family, he was a good husband and father. We bless God for his life and example.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be by our clerk spread upon the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and that a copy be forwarded to the Zion's Landmark for publication.

ELDER G. W. BOSWELL,
Moderator.
W. F. BOYKIN,
Asst. Clerk.

OSCAR L. YELVERTON.

This brother was born Sept. 18th 1854, was first married April 26th, 1877, married again March 10th, 1887, was baptized the 4th Sunday in Aug. 1890, by Elder Wm. Woodard, and died Sunday, April 18th, 1909.

He was a native of Wayne County, N. C., His residence was in Fremont, N. C., during the writers knowledge of him. He was active in the mercantile line of business, and was a man of great activity, energy and noted for his uprightness and integrity. Few men, if any, were held in greater esteem for the noble qualities of true manhood possessed by this dear brother.

As a husband and father I consider him as faultless as any, and possessed of as much affection for his wife as any. She is a dear sister of the church at Aycock's where his membership was, and of which church he was the clerk while he lived. She found him a noble husband under whose honor she joyfully confided: and none but the bereaved widow knows her loss and sorrow.

As a father I often saw in him the love as faultless as any, and possessed of as the mild, but firm, faithfulness of a righteous discipline.

He was for years the efficient clerk of the Black Creek Association, and my intercourse with him was always of the pleasantest kind.

As a church member he held and enjoyed the fellowship of his brethren.

In the best instincts and principles of a man, deeply taught in the depths of man's vileness, and wonderfully instructed in the riches of grace revealed in and bestowed on him by a crucified Saviour, he shone forth as a beloved brother letting his light shine. True to the teachings of the Lord, Jesus, he was truthful in his words, without flattery, withholding approbation from what was dishonorable, and commending what is good. He was cordial in approving the right and ardent in his friendship with those he approved, a bosom companion where he loved, and only there, wise in counsel and useful in the true walk of life.

He fell asleep in Jesus, and such a gathering of people as assembled at his funeral and burial was seldom seen at his hospitable home where his funeral was preached by the writer who sadly misses him.

He left a large family of children. We desire that the blessing of our Father in heaven may rest upon them, and that his dear wife may find Him the Husband of the widow, and his children may find him the Father of the fatherless.

P. D. GOLD.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Resolutions of respect of Roxboro Primitive Baptist church in remembrance of our dear deceased brother, A. B. Harris.

Brother Harris was for several years a member of the Missionary church, he became dissatisfied with the Missionaries. He withdrew, and after some time he asked for a home with Roxboro Primitive Baptist Church. He was received and given the right hand of fellowship of the church on August 28, 1900, and lived a faithful member until January 19, 1909, when his day on earth was ended and the Lord called him from his pain and suffering in this life. We hope to the land of rest where all of God's people rest in a sweet sleep until the resurrection morn, then we believe and hope that this dear deceased brother will hear that welcome voice of God saying to him come up higher.

The Saviour whom I then shall see with new admiring eyes already has prepared for me a mansion in the skies.

Resolved 1, That by the death of old Brother Harris, Roxboro Primitive Baptist church has lost one dear loving member. We feel that our loss is his eternal gain and hope by the grace of God to meet this dear brother in heaven above.

Resolved 2, That we assure the family of Brother Harris our heartfelt sympathy in the loss of husband and father and a church member, and that we do humbly hope that God will bring you in the knowledge of his kingdom and save you all in heaven. Then shall you see thy lovely face with strong immortal eyes and feast upon thy sovereign grace with pleasure and surprise.

Resolved 3, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded on Roxboro Primitive Baptist church book, a copy sent to the family of the deceased and a copy to Zion's Landmark for publication.

Done by order of church in conference this April 10, 1909.

NOTICE.

The Primitive Baptists at Morehead City are now making another effort to build a church house. We have a good lot for which we have a warrantee deed and we want to build a house of worship. We are few in number and very poor and any one who will help us can send the money to me at Hollywood, N. C., or to our pastor, Elder L. H. Hardy, Reidsville, N. C., and it will be properly appreciated and applied.

UNION MEETING.

The next session of the Skewarkey Union is appointed to be held with the church at the Falls of Tar River, Friday, Saturday and 5th Sunday in August.

The next session of the Black Creek Union is appointed to be held with the church at Upper Black Creek, Saturday and 5th Sunday in August.

The next session of the Smithfield Union is appointed to be held with the church at Smithfield, Saturday and 5th Sunday in August.

We have lately received the Catalogue of the A. & M. College at Raleigh. The issue of this year includes, in addition to the various courses in Agriculture and in Engineering, a full list of the Alumni of the College. A glance at this list shows that the young men educated at the College are closely following the professions for which they were trained. These men are becoming a power in the State's industrial life. Persons desiring copies of the Catalogue may address Registrar's Office, West Raleigh, N. C.

It is a pleasure to call attention to the advertisement of the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. The State greatly needs industrially trained men, and the college is rapidly helping to supply this need. Its graduates are busy and successful in many lines. Many of our farms show the practical value of their training. The railroads, public highways, drawing rooms and shipbuilding plants call on the College for Civil Engineers. Our lighting and water plants and our machine shops are being manned by its graduates. Not a few of its men are superintending or managing cotton mills and dye-houses. Its chemists are taking high rank in experiment stations, industrial plants and departments of agriculture. Young men cannot do better than fit themselves for their vocations at the same time that they are being educated.

EXPLANATION.

As many have sent cash orders for my book Biographical History of Primitive or Old School Baptist Ministers with the expectation of receiving same in June, I beg space to say that the publishers have found it a larger undertaking than they anticipated, and that they now write me that it will be about the middle of July before the book is complete ready for shipment.

Let your order come forward which will have my careful attention and be filled just as soon as possible, and too, with a book that I trust, and have reason to believe, you will consider fully your money's worth.

ASSOCIATION.

The next session of the Lower Country Line Association will convene with the church at Ebenezer, Person County, N. C., on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in August, 1909, continuing three days. All brethren, sisters and friends are cordially invited. Those coming by railroad will get off at Roxboro, N. C., on Friday p. m. and Saturday a. m. before, where they will be met, cared for and conveyed to church 8 miles west of Roxboro, N. C.

MILEAGE REGULATION

UPHELD BY HINES.

Upon the request of the Georgia Railroad Commission, Special Attorney James K. Hines has given an interesting opinion in regard to the complaints made by the traveling public as to the exchange of mileage book coupons for straight tickets at railway agencies. Attorney Hines hold that the railroads' regulation for the presentation and exchange of coupons for mileage is entirely reasonable.

Attorney Hines was asked by the Commission to furnish an opinion upon the right of a common carrier to expel a passenger, who had failed to comply with its regulation, requiring the exchange of mileage coupons for a ticket.

Attorney Hines says that carriers of passengers may eject from their conveyances all persons refusing to comply with reasonable regulations. He says that the present mileage book arrangement is reasonable, because the purchaser enters into a contract with the railway company selling the mileage book. One of the terms of the contract is that coupons from these mileage books will not be honored on trains except at non-agency points or at station agencies not open for the sale of tickets.

The purchaser, says Attorney Hines, gets a reduced rate and he is bound by the terms of the special contract. He says in conclusion that the arrangement has already been submitted to and approved by the State Railroad Commission.—Atlanta Journal, May 8th, 1909.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

The mystery of redemption is beyond our comprehension as also the beings or intelligences of the world of spirits; beings which have to do with us rather than we with them; beings which are outside our comprehension and intelligence except so far as they are revealed in his word and experienced to be working powers within us and as in the manner that word declares. One great power was Satan, or the devil. He, by transgression even in the very presence of God, lost his first estate, and the Lord Jesus saw him, blasted with an eternal curse, "like lightning fall from heaven." Enmity against God and everything of his creation from henceforth filled his mind, and he, as we read, set his devilish malice and ingenuity to work to spoil it in its highest perfection, and beyond all else, where God's image and likeness was stamped—man. How he succeeded we can all read, and some of us feel. "The devil sinneth from the beginning," and in getting man to break God's command he got him involved in his own state and under his own curse and power, man became "evil, only evil, and that continually," from the first disobedient act. Thus are we all. All sinned in Adam as their head, and

"Each sin-infected sire, alas, Begets a sin-infected child!"

Man cannot do other than to beget "in his own likeness." That is the state in which we are all born, "Enemies to God by wicked works;" first by the work of our first parent and federal head—Adam; and then by our own works. And as the fall was total and entire in every part and principle of soul and body, so it of necessity follows that everything, whether in thought or deed, proceeding from the person partakes of the nature of that or him from whom or whence it proceeds, so all the thoughts of man are vain and unholy, and if we would sum up our whole life, being and state, it is—sin! Inconceivably solemn and incontrovertibly true! And for every act and thought we are, as in our created state, to give account to God, and each act and thought must receive its just reward of punishment. Then, as the "whole and every" part of our being is directed against an infinite being, so each act is of infinite demerit also, and so also is the reward or punishment due thereto. Where then can hope find a sure ground for its feet? Vain hope will find it anywhere, like the raven from the ark; but real or "good hope" will find it nowhere but "through grace," and from a source outside itself and all creatures.

Where, then, and in whom or what, may "good hope" be found? and who found it and made it known; who provided its possibility of being, perfected its grounds and provisions, and made it known and makes it over to sinning man? He against whom we have sinned. The same "US" who first created man, and in man us and me. And who is the great "US?" God—Father, and Son, and Spirit, in his and their eternal, inseparable, uncreated, co-equal trinity of persons. And when we mention his name, let it be with reverence and fear, for he is incomprehensible to our understanding, though blessedly revealing himself in his word and to his people's faith; so that poor sinful creatures may some of them sometimes say in truth, "We know him!" Here we remember the injunction, "God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words be few." (Eccles. v. 2.) Still, we hope not to be "rash" or "hasty" in what we may "utter" or express about or before him; may he keep us from a fool's voice" in doing so. One said, "I fly from God to God; from thy wrath to thy mercy in Jesus."

Think of the foreknowledge, foreordination, etc., of "US." We cannot conceive of a new thought or purpose in an eternal mind.

"To Him there's nothing old appears—Great God! there's nothing new!"

Read through that beautiful hymn of Watts' (1, Gadsby's); it is a volume of divinity; see how he enfolds every thing of time and eternity, nature and heaven, into the movement of one "eternal thought." Every movement of nature, every leaf and blade, every thought and act of himself, angels, or men, were all comprehended in that creating, controlling, man-redeeming and glorifying "thought." Solemn! Grand! Unutterably and inconceivably great! "I AM" is "the same yesterday, and today, and for ever." "I AM," or "US," is the father, son, and spirit, existing from everlasting in his and their own blessedness and glory, and from everlasting fixing upon a particular way in which that glory should be glorified in its own way and by his own act upon those in whom he would be glorified. (Jno. xvii.) "US" chose a vast number of beings in whom their glory should manifest itself. The father gave them to the son by eternal choice and in eternal covenant union; the son so accepted them, and undertakes for them and for the father that in the state in which they would become involved through sin, and from it, he would redeem them and bring them back; and seeing it could only be done by a payment commensurate with the offence, as against an infinite being, he would bear their "sins in his own body on the tree," and by his own infinite offering for ever put all their guilt away; more, the offering, by virtue of the greatness of the offerer, being so far exceeding in merit the offence and the offender, he would add a glory to it and to her by the imputation of his infinite merit, that she should possess it so as that she never should nor could lose it. Being God the value of his blood not only atoned for sin, but secured for her every spiritual blessing, freely given by the father in him, even to eternal glory, and man is often long in receiving, perhaps chiefly on two grounds,—the greatness of truth and the contemptibleness, as felt before God, of man in general and of conscience-and-law-convicted ones in particular. We well have in mind the time when day by day our thought was, "It might perhaps be that some might be elected, but me; impossible!" Everything, no matter what view we took, appeared against it; hence the door of hope seemed closed to us. Let us take one solemn chain of consideration here. We will assume the anxious one is well convinced that salvation can only be by the blood and righteousness of Jesus, the forgiveness and purging away of sins by the one and the meekness for and title to eternal glory by the other, yet without any real division between the two. Then must it not follow if salvation is complete, every sin which Christ bore by imputation must have been laid upon him and its full punishment of concentrated wrath poured upon and borne by him (see Isa. liii. 5, 6, marg. "made the iniquity of us all to meet on him"), and that only such exact iniquity and punishment could have in justice been laid upon him? Were it not for God's foreknowledge of every sin the elect would commit in time, whether by omission or commission, how should that punishment have been measured out? The justice of God could exact neither more nor less than the sin should demand; if less, the offering and atonement would not be complete; if more, some might perish for whom Christ either partially or entirely died. Where would infinite justice be there? It is impossible it should be so. Justice calls alike for Jesus and the sinner, for exactitude in every particular. All for whom Jesus died and whose sins he bore were everlastingly his by triune choice and gift, and were virtually in him, and hence partook of the merit and glory of every act of his vicarious life and death. All and each were in him when he rose from the dead and ascended into glory. See how this is treated upon in the Ephesian epistle especially. O, the wonders of the riches of God's grace! Let our readers ponder this and consider if it must not certainly be as we state. Then if that be admitted, how much that is advanced falls short of the truth. A firm belief in these and kindred great and "deep things of God" would prevent much confusing and "mangling" work on the part of many who profess to be teachers "sent from God," but whose fruits and works give little evidence of God-ambassadorship. If we have written "according to the scriptures," is not it a necessary consequence that all the great truths of election, predestination, final perseverance, etc., etc., are as sure and steadfast as the throne of God? These truths may stagger us by their greatness, yet they, properly received, are no real bar to our hope, rather there is no ground for real hope apart from them. The immutability of God's purpose and counsel is a blessed stay for a sinner's hope.

The great question with a convinced sinner should not properly, perhaps, so much be, "Am I elected?" but, "Am I called out of darkness into God's marvelous light?"—have I true light to see and feel my darkness; and do I long after God for salvation, and the forgiveness of my sins? If you have such feelings as these, the promises of God are favorable to your case and may be pleaded before him: "Not the righteous; sinners Jesus came to call." "True election's known by calling," sang the same poet; and this is the special work and office of God the Holy Ghost, and ever has been, although not of old so fully discovered or realized until taught by the Lord Jesus himself in clearer revelation.

As mentioned, the Holy Spirit is as much concerned in the salvation of the church as is the father and the son. No spiritual conviction ever takes place but is effected by him: no real prayer, repentance, hope, humiliation, sorrow for sin or hope of heaven, loathing of self and loving of and aspiring after God but what he truly effects in the soul, although, like the mainspring of a watch, the motive power is mostly concealed from us, and the graciousness of the feeling is accepted by God as ours and is so received and answered by him. "Although we seem to move; his spirit all the motion gives," etc. "Blessed condescending Spirit, 'For us work, and in us too, and guide us right, and bring us through;'" such is, more or less, the continual prayer of spirit-taught sinners. Here again, many scriptures and hymns come to mind to substantiate our statements. Unspeakably blessed is Paul's treatment of these great truths in Romans viii. May our readers be led of the Holy Spirit into that, and read themselves therein, not only as in the flesh but also "in the spirit;" and may we be favored to realize that, even in ever so small a measure, there is a work of conformity to Christ's image being carried on in us. Without it, we must utterly perish. There must be a conformity to, as well as a salvation from, effected in us, or we shall be "found wanting."

Having, then, laid down a few brief propositions concerning God, our creation and being, our eternal duration in infinite bliss or infinite misery, and the provision made by Jehovah for "the salvation of that which was lost," which can alone and entirely be but his own kind work in and upon the soul, let us now bring forward a few evidences which accompany and feelings which are caused by this his "strange work" upon the soul of a sinner.

God not only created man and the world, which he placed under him, his righteousness, being infinitely beyond the demerit of her sin and shame, should be imputed to her, and so imputed that it should be hers entirely even as it was his own. And by that same righteousness and in virtue of her eternal union, with him she is "justified freely" and for ever; not only though she had never sinned but as though she had ever been a glorious being; for she ever was "one with Jesus, by eternal union one." Hymns and passages crowd upon our mind to establish this blessed truth, but our readers we hope are as familiar with them as ourself, so on account of space we will only refer to hymns 10 and 405, magnificent compositions of Kent's, and to Psalm xxxii. 1. 2, just suggesting to our readers that they turn to the various marginal texts on this great subject, and then perhaps on again to the further references. And the Lord Jesus stood as head, "he is Lord of all," and as having in himself every quality of divine perfection and human relationship on her behalf; she ever was in him. By virtue of that oneness with and in him, every act or thought of guilty stain became really and truly his by God the father's imputing, and every act, thought, and meritorious quality of his became hers by his life, death, resurrection and ascension, she is not only as free from sin as though she had never sinned, but is virtually as full of the perfection of eternal glory as though she had ever been clothed in God! "The Lord our righteousness," written in large capitals, is his name and it is also hers. (Jer. xxiii. 6, xxxiii. 16.) In "this same Jesus every blessing of the covenant was secured, "treasured," and given to her, her spiritual life and everything pertaining to it and to eternal glory; so that she can never fail of them and never lose them. Adam in his first state had his life, as created, in his own hand and lost it; yet by that act of disobedience, which made a way for death and hell to enter, and by which he involved his whole race in irrecoverable ruin, as far as man was concerned, he also made a way by which the free salvation, grace, love, and mercy of God could now flow forth from, in, and through the person of Jesus. O, have we a part, an interest there? If so, nothing can touch it; but it may be revealed to us. Who earnestly longs to know it? We must pass on, though it is a field we are loth to leave. There is something heavenly in the consideration of how it became possible for God to smile upon man. The Son of God, in assuming humanity, was two natures in one person—God man and so also do "the sons of God" possess two natures—they are godly men, we know no better description of them; men with the God-begotten nature of the principles of eternal life in them. Even Paul seemed almost at a loss for a correct and comprehensive term by which to distinguish the christian in his two natures; in Romans (viii.) he does it by the terms of "flesh" and "spirit," "carnal" and "spiritual," "death" and "life;" and so on—extreme opposites in the one person."

Which thought brings us to that sacred and gracious person by whom all of salvation work is effected in us,—the eternal spirit; he "through whom," as we read, Jesus "offered himself without spot to God," and whose office it has ever been to "convince of sin," etc.; to quicken, new-beget, or "born from above" every elect vessel of mercy fore-ordained and "afore prepared unto glory." This new life is not merely the life lost in Adam restored. To have been redeemed even to that would have been unspeakably merciful, but it would still have left us where Adam stood at first, peccable and liable to fall again from our first created state; but that did not suit for the boundless love of "Us;" no, he would secure for her, added thereto, another, a nobler, a spiritual, an eternal, God-like life and nature, impeccable and unlosable; it being held and secured in the person of the Lord Jesus as his very own. The Lord Jesus, by Johns' mouth, alike in Gospel and Epistles, also Paul and the other writers, most blessedly and emphatically declares is to be so. Have we this life? Have we thus been made "partakers of the divine nature?" Wonderful words to belong to man! Not to be engrafted into the Godhead, but to be made members of Christ's mystical body, a "joint-heir" of his glory. One is lost in the greatness of the truths of it. May we be swallowed up in that greatness at length.

This leads us to another thought of God in his trinity of persons. "US" did not become a trinity for the purpose of this redemption. He ever was so. Then think, in what other conceivable way could that trinity, in each person, manifest forth their and his glory other than in the way chosen, where each person is equally engaged in the wonderful work and each equally glorified and everlastingly satisfied in the issue? We remember how we first felt the greatness of that truth, and the feeling of almost awe which stole over us as we felt it at the bedside of a dying saint. O, salvation and salvation truth is a theme glorious in every part and particle of it. Again let us ask, "What think ye of it?"

This leads us to still another great truth—the completeness of the atonement for and the application of it to every one for whom it was offered and made,—the election of grace, and none other. That is a great truth, and that which even the regenerate mind of the Lord's people cannot comprehend.

Elder P. D. Gold:

My Dear Brother in Christ—It is very agreeable to think of others of "like precious faith." The apostle Paul calls it the "household of faith." Gal. 6-10. Very blessed indeed is the tie that binds those of like precious faith together.

They are the taught of the Lord. John 6-45. I trust we are such. Less than an hour ago I was musing upon the signal mercy of the Lord in bringing such a vile sinner unto the fellowship of his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord and once more the love and grace of God shone forth in infinite splendor to the eyes of my understanding. Eph. 1-18. My soul was humbled and I felt to adore the Lord God of our salvation.

Who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? 1st. Cor. 4-7.

"The Lord doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel." Exod. 11-7. Those two texts of scripture came into my thoughts, and the effect was to bring me, in my soul's feelings, low, low down at the foot-stool of God: moved with affectionate glorying in the Lord. If our hope of eternal life in Christ Jesus were the fruit of our volitions, of our righteousnesses then there would be much selfglorying. But all who are taught of God will very readily confess that it is all of grace, and that God's divine power giveth us all things that pertain unto life and godliness through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue. 2 Pet. 1-3.

Who can measure the lengths and breadth, the heights and depths of what the hope of the gospel unfolds? I feel at times the contemplation is more than I can bear, such are my emotions (because of the infinite and eternal excellency of the revelation). I feel to be borne down, oppressed amidst faith's visions of the glories to which all the ransomed church shall be brought." Vessels of mercy afore prepared unto glory." And yet it is only through a glass darkly we see, and only in part that we know, then face to face. What must that be? What we now taste of blessedness from the Lord is sweet indeed. "How high a privilege 'tis to know our sins are all forgiven." Then also to enter into by the revelations of the Holy Spirit, that exaltation of the justification of life. Rom. 5-18.

Here no accusation can reach us, no curse can come. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again; who also maketh intercession for us. All is well, for we are reconciled unto God by the death of his Son and eternal friendship is our heritage with the holy one of Israel. Then to be moved to believe "the eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." How strong the consolation. Truly a mighty fortress is our God, Jehovah Jesus is our sanctuary. The world, the flesh and the devil make war upon us but we shall be brought off more than conquerors through him that loved us. Many waters cannot quench love.

Elder Gold and Lester,

Dear Brethren:

I feel somewhat impressed with the following scripture:

"Answer not a fool according to his folly lest thou also be like unto him. Answer a fool according to his folly lest he be wise in his own conceit." Prov. 26:4,5.

Jesus while here on earth met the requirements of this scripture in every particular, because the god-head dwelt bodily in him, so we cannot meet this requirement only by the spirit of Jesus, for the wisdom given to Solomon represents the wisdom of Jesus. And as Jesus passed by he saw a man that was blind from his birth. And his disciples asked him saying, Master, who did sin, this man or his parents that he was blind. This in part, was a foolish question, for no one sins until they are born. And Jesus answered it according to their folly, saying, neither hath this man sinned or his parents; but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. The chief priests and the elders came upon him with the elders and spake unto him saying, tell us by what authority doest thou these things or who is he that gave thee this authority. Jesus could have answered it, but it would have been according to their folly, for they would not believe it, neither was it any of their business to know. Jesus said, I will also ask you one thing, and answer me: the baptism of John, was it from heaven or of man? And they reasoned with themselves saying, if we shall say from heaven, he will say, why then believe ye him not, and if we say of men, all the people will stone us; for they be persuaded that John was a prophet. And they answered they could not tell whence it was. And Jesus said unto them, neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

The people could not withstand the wisdom of Jesus for he was wisdom itself, for Solomon said, I wisdom dwell with prudence and find out knowledge of witty inventions. In this particular wisdom was the god-head and prudence the humanity, for Jesus was perfect. The Pharisees asked Jesus and said, is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or not? Show me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny. And he saith unto them, whose is this image and superscription. They say unto him, Caesar's. Then saith he unto them, render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's.

No doubt they expected him to say it was not lawful to give tribute to Caesar. They charged Jesus with not being a friend to Caesar, but they never proved it. They charged him with being a friend of publicans and sinners, which was true. Matthew was a publican as was also the man that smote upon his breast crying, God be merciful to me a sinner. Paul said, this is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners of whom I am chief. The disciples thought they could instruct Jesus. On one occasion Jesus said, who touched me. They say, why say who touched seeing the multitude throug thee. No doubt they thought that Jesus was ignorant, but they saw their ignorance when the woman confessed why she touched Jesus. After Jesus had arisen from the dead he said to two of his disciples, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. In the absence of the Spirit of God we to the present time cannot understand the spiritual import of the scriptures. So the Lord is the great teacher, for it is said, all thy children shall be taught of the Lord and great is their peace.

Sometimes we do not do as well as we might. We should be faithful to each other and not disguise ourselves, but be open and frank one with another. I want to call our attention to a few things that we ought to leave off. I now have reference to us preachers, and it is the duty of the deacons and the lay members to say how much each one of us is guilty, and to remind us of our faults. There was once a preacher who had a habit of saying to a deacon after preaching, I was in the dark. After awhile the deacon caught on and said, yes brother, you were very much in the dark. The preacher said the dark side was to you. This preacher should have been rebuked. The answer did reprove him and he did not get the answer he desired. I can say a few things of truth and one is this: I have been talking in public for forty-one years and I have never directly or indirectly asked anyone what they thought of my preaching. If I had had a desire to ask the question I would have been ashamed to ask it. Any preacher with reasonable eyesight while preaching, if the Spirit of God is in his heart, unfolding the riches of the kingdom, can see Jesus in the hearer's face, and when this is the case it is unnecessary to hold a glass in front of them to see how they looked. One said, let me see thy countenance, let me hear thy voice; for sweet is thy voice and thy countenance is comely.

We may not be a hypocrit in the true sense of the term. I contend that a candid person never joined the church hypocritically. We may be deceived, but do we act hypocritically. I do not say I am clear of it although I abhor it in myself and despise it in others. Let us be faithful in every particular, especially with the church and in the church. Let us refrain from pretending humbleness for some of the brethren will see it and it is very disgusting to them. There is generally some in every church gifted with discerning spirit and it is almost, if not quite impossible, for us to act hypocritically without some of them finding it out. But we may hide from men but not from God, for God is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Then let us be faithful not only to God but to one another.

Yours truly,
ASA D. SHORTT.

Dear Brother Gold:—

Once more the thought or impression to write has come into my mind though I had said I never would write any more for publication. I realize that I am not my keeper and often times the very things I say I will not do are the very things I do.

I enjoyed Brother Hall's letter on predestination. Surely it is a blessed thing for us that God rules all things. We Baptists profess to believe that God has all power in heaven and earth, yet I have heard them limit the power of God in preaching and writing. Our finite minds cannot comprehend the power of God. He can make the spirits of the departed saints appear here on earth to any of His saints He chooses and they know them. This is a mystery. Another thought occurs to me that the spirits of the saints are in a conscious state after death. John saw the souls of those that were slain for the word of God and the testimony they held and they cried, "how long dost thou not avenge our blood upon those that dwell upon the earth;" showing that they were in a conscious state and remembered that they had been slain.

I have pondered over the book of Revelation a great deal and I feel that the most of it has been fulfilled. God showed John more than any of the apostles. He was the beloved disciple and God blessed him and favored him. He seemed to be of an affectionate disposition; in other words to show his love for the Savior more than all the rest of the apostles.

I haven't heard any preaching for a long while owing to my health and the weather, yet I love the Baptists, I mean true ones, and the doctrine they preach is especially dear to me. Of one thing I feel assured, that God has blessed me in times past and shown me things, yes, many of them that I did not know before. A revelation I had of you in 1901, Brother Gold, has been a lot of comfort to me because I have implicit confidence in you. I don't know that you have in me but I shall not ask you as I do not deserve it.

I was leaving the association at Mt. Zion in Pittsylvania County and was thinking of you and Brother Collins, a dear departed preacher, and how much I had enjoyed the preaching. It seems I was aware of a spirit above my head that spoke these words, "These be the men of the Most High God which show unto us the way of salvation." It is written a little different in the scriptures. I felt that this was a revelation from God. I have been warned of several things in the past that came to pass. A few days before my mother died I was ironing some clothes. She was sick but not seriously ill I thought, as she could get up and down; yet the words, "get your mother's clothes up for her burial," sounded in my mind and I looked for them and found them. She lived three or four days after that. At her death I was so overcome, being under such a burden of sin and death, that I could not go to the grave that day. A few days after I went to the grave and while there these words came to me, "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" It was an unspeakable comfort to me. I felt like rejoicing. Oh, the wonderful power of God and how weak and insignificant are we. God is pleased sometimes to let us have a glimpse of His Glory, a taste of His goodness. Can our finite minds conceive how it will be in eternity when the troubles and trials of this unsatisfying world will forever cease?

Right here I will tell you of a little dream I had some time ago. I dreamed that Brother Lester, you and I were in a place talking when I left you both and began slapping my hands together and saying as loud as I could, "Praise God, Praise God!" It seemed I was a little way above the earth. Brother Lester came to me and we walked on some distance and talked until we came to a lot of fencing which we began to pull down. This to my mind are the trials and troubles here we are to bear.

My mind some time ago was to write on the professor and the possessor, not the arminian professor, but those among us. We are told to beware of false prophets that come to you, of false brethren among you. These are the ones that give us trouble. But my letter is too long now.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother in Christ:—

Hoping I feel in the spirit to write I will endeavor to express a few thoughts concerning the one talent man as I understand it in the scriptures.

I understand the Lord's money to be his goods and it is given to his servants in the kingdom. His people are the ones that serve Him in the spirit and when the goods are given unto them they have a will to serve him before the goods are given and have faith sufficiently to feel that the Lord is able to supply and reward according to his will, and the reason that they obey Him is that he works the obedience in them and that the Holy Spirit prompts them in that obedience, and they go and follow him in love. So it is Christ in the obedience as he also is in the salvation, adding to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance and charity. If these things be in us we are not barren nor unfruitful. It is Christ in the obedience and Christ in the salvation and all in all. So without Christ there is no obedience and without Him there is no salvation. So it is Christ that filleth all and in all. But the one talent man sets forth the Jews in a state of nature, having the kingdom given unto them in the law service which is Christ and they rejected him because of unbelief. You read in John where, "He came unto his own and they received him not but as many as received him gave he them power to become the Sons of God." But when the law was fulfilled and the old covenant was taken away and the service was established in the new covenant, the kingdom of God was taken from the Jews and given unto a nation bringing forth fruit thereof. So the Jews were in disobedience in a natural way and God takes from them the kingdom of God and gives it to the Gentiles. And the Jew said, I knew you were a hard man. Lo, you have that is yours. And the answer was, "Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou shouldst have put my money to the exchangers," which means that in natural action he hid or buried what He had given them.

Should any one disagree with me I shall not think any the less of them.

Your unworthy brother in Christ, I hope,

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother:—

As our subscription to the Landmark is now due, you will please find money order for the amount enclosed. We are also due $1.50 in advance for the year 1909 for we do not want to be without such a good paper as its pages are filled with so many good letters written by the dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, that it is a source of much comfort to read them. For the Lord's people are the same everywhere and are led by the same spirit and desire to be fed with the crumbs that fall from the Master's table. What a blessing it is to be able to partake of this spiritual food? It nourishes and keeps alive the poor little child of God for they desire the sincere milk of the word that they may grow thereby.

What a blessing it is to know the joyful sound and to feel that it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. The gospel cheers the drooping spirit and satisfies the hungry soul. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled. We read in the scripture, they spake often one to another, and if I could speak and write as some of the dear sisters I would do so oftentimes, but my nothingness is so great I cannot.

Brother Gold, we so much enjoy reading the editorials and hope you will be spared to write for years to come. I will close this poor scribble, with love to all the household of faith.

A little sister if one at all.

BERTHA HILLIARD.

Dear Brother Gold:—

Please pardon me for not sending in my dues for the Landmark sooner as it was all a neglect, and I feel ashamed that I have neglected so long after it was due, as it comes laden with precious things that I love, as I am in a land of what I call self-righteousness and I never get to hear any preaching that I love. So you may know I welcome the Landmark, where I find your good letters also the experiences of the brothers and sisters, as they can tell my experience better than I can myself and thus my heart is drawn out to them until I almost feel they are present. If not deceived I love the Zion of our Lord and his dear people. I live in a town of 65,000 people but I have not met a Primitive Baptist yet, so it may be quite awhile before I could fill out the blank here. But I expect to move to Virginia, my old native home to live sometime in the near future, where I can enjoy the word of truth. I must close my uninteresting letter. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you in your declining years and that you will remember me in your prayers.

Your sister in Christ I hope,

Elder Gold and Lester,

Dear Brethren in Christ:—

I am blessed of the good Lord to see another beautiful Sabbath morning for which I hope I feel thankful to the Lord, for it is in Him we live and move and have our being. All blessings come from the hand of the Lord to us poor helpless beings. For some cause I am feeling very lonely this morning; no place to go to preaching, and it seems my mind is exercised in that way. There are but few Baptists here and we have but little preaching. Sometimes the preaching brethren come and preach for us but not as often as we would like for them to do so.

Dear Brother Gold, I feel like I am idling away my life. Yes, the life of obedience to the blessed commandments of Jesus, but I so often doubt my call to speak in His blessed name, and agin I feel the weight of mind to go and preach the preaching that God bids me preach. Sometimes the brethren, sisters and friends seem to enjoy my preaching which I hope to be the gospel of the blessed Son of God, and I can also rejoice with them when this is the case. I feel like it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes. Oh how easy to preach when we have the spirit of the blessed Lord, for where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty and without that liberty we cannot preach, for we preach not ourselves but Christ Jesus the Lord, and we ourselves your servants for Jesus sake.

Dear brethren and sisters far and near, I feel to be so unworthy and so often cast down in my poor feelings that I think I will never try to preach again because I fear it is not of the Lord. As I above stated, I feel like I am idling away my preacher life. The life of peace and happiness which God has promised His children in obedience to His commandments. Right here would say to the poor child of God that is on the outside of the church, if you wish to be relieved of that burden of mind which you are laboring under go home to thy friends and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you whereof you are glad. Oh will you hear the sweet invitation of Jesus, "Come unto me ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest, take my yoke upon you and learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." These sweet words of Jesus belong to His children and not to the world. Note how it reads; Take my yoke upon you and learn of me. Poor child of the Lord, herè is something for you to do, and that is take upon you the yoke of obedience and follow Jesus and you shall find rest to your souls. No conditions in this sweet commandment of Jesus, for he says, ye shall find rest unto your souls. This resting place is in the church of Jesus Christ here in this world. Yea, therefore there remaineth a rest to the people of God and that resting place which is the church of Christ will remain just as long as God is pleased for this world to stand. Dear child of God as ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord walk ye in Him. Now poor mourner, I turn to you who mourn on account of sin, and who feel like you are without God and that you are sinking down to eternal woe and misery and without hope in the world, let me say to you poor child of the Lord that God has begun a good work in you and he will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. Yes he will perform that work of regeneration at his own good and appointed time. There is no failure in the promises of the Lord. We never saw a true mourner go to the mourners bench to be prayed for. But if I know anything about the condition of a poor mourner he mourns by day and by night, lamenting his case, crying and begging the Lord to have mercy on him a poor sinner, Lord save or I perish. He will try and keep it concealed from everyone because he feels to be a poor guilty wretch in the sight of God and they cannot be comforted because they have not found Jesus in the pardon of their sins. Let me say to you poor mourner that God is leading you in ways you never knew and in paths you never trod. Yes the Lord has opened your eyes to see your sinfulness and you feel that you are bound to die and that hell is your doom. This is the reason that the poor mourner cries and begs the Lord for mercy. They can't see how God can be just and Holy and save such a poor wretched sinner as I am. But poor mourner the Lord will lead you on to the end of the law and then he will make himself manifest unto you altogether lovely and the chiefest among ten thousand. Now you see a new heaven and a new earth. Old things are passed away and behold all things have become new.

Now we think you are a fit subject for baptism. Go home to thy friends and tell them what you hope the Lord has done for you, a poor sinner. Although Satan will tell you that you are not fit for the church, you have a love for it and desire to live with the peope of God. Now take my yoke upon you and learn of me. The church is the place to learn of Jesus, and if you love me keep my commandments. Knowing the terrors of the Lord we persuade men but we hope to persuade them in the name of Jesus and not in our own name.

Dear child of the Lord, don't do as I did. I staid out of the church seven years waiting for a brighter evidence that I was a child of the Lord, but I hope at last I was constrained by love to go before the church and tell them a part of what I hope the Lord had done for me and I was received. Oh how much better I felt that evening and after services one dear old sister asked me if I did not feel better now. I told her I certainly did, and she said I know you do, and this gave me some encouragement. Just one month from that time I was to be baptized and this was a long month with me. Satan would often tell me I was deceived and that I had deceived the church also that I was not fit to be baptized. So on the morning I was baptized I had many fears and doubts that I was not fit. But when I stepped down into the water there was a great difference in my feelings. I felt that Satan had left me and then I could rejoice to think that I was a fit subject for baptism and if there had been ten thousand present it would not have made any difference in my feelings.

But it was not long before Satan was in company with me again, and telling me many things to discourage me, but he could not get me to say I was sorry I had joined the church. Neither has he ever gotten me to say so and I hope he never will. Oh how glad I would be to see and hear of God's dear children following the meek and lowly Jesus who has done such great things for them whereof they are glad.

I must bring my letter to a close. Dear brother, after looking over this if you do not think it worthy of space in your valuable paper, throw it aside and all will be well with me.

Your brother in sweet hope,
W. R. HELMS.

Brother A. W. Thompson requests my views of Eze. 7:3-7.

This prophecy declares the destruction of Israel as a nation. Has that been accomplished? We need only look at the facts. From ancient history, and many proofs that we cannot shut our eyes to without stultifying ourselves, we are convinced that there was no nation the equal of the Jewish nation in ancient days. It was the Lord's portion fenced, environed, walled, girded, beautified, enriched beyond any nation on earth, so that they were the wonder to the nations around them. Prophets inspired of God instructed them, Kings anointed of the Lord reigned over them, priests served them in the tabernacle ordained of God, the word of God was a lamp to their feet, the Lord God was their shield and fought their battles when they trusted Him, and chastised them when they forsook Him. No nation on earth was blest as were they. The Lord hath done great things for us, said they. Then said they among the heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them. Surely there was no people blest as were they. The eternal God was their refuge, and underneath were the everlasting arms.

But where now is their glory? Where are they? Scattered abroad over all the earth without a temple, without a priest, without a prophet, without a king, with no government. Israel is a scattered sheep. The lions have driven him away. First the King of Assyria has devoured him, and then, Nebuchadnezzar has broken his bones.

One traveling over that once favored land must be astonished at the impoverished condition of that country; and one knowing how much joy an ancient Jew had in his country, its history, its fame, as the garden of the Lord with its prophets, its worship, its songs, its scriptures, its marvelous deliverances by the loving hand of God, must be led to wonder why is this land so barren? Why are its people so driven away, why is it so down trodden by the Gentiles, and profaned by the heathens, why is Jerusalem a den of thieves?

The answer comes, This people denied and forsook their God, and sold themselves to work iniquity, and worshipped idols, and exceeded the heathen in wickedness. They did worse than any nation on earth. They crucified the prince of glory, the Son of God, and said, Let his blood be on us and on our children. Now see and behold their land left unto them desolate. Here is a standing proof, a monument filled with words of clearest proof of the wickedness of man, and of the eternal truth and righteousness of God who has done what He said He would do.

No other proof than the Jew is needed to establish the truth of the Bible, and the justice of God.

But why is it that the whole world cannot destroy the Jew as a race, though they have long since ceased to be a nation? It is to show that the Jew is yet beloved for their fathers' sake, such fathers as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. There is yet a remnant of them that shall be saved. After the fulness of the Gentiles shall have been brought in God will turn his hand to these elect Jews, and they shall be brought in to own Jesus, and so all Israel shall be saved.

P. D. G.

An old friend requests my views of feet-washing. The writer is a widow very desolate and lonely—all her family dead except two children, and they are a long distance from her. She writes she is so lonely, and often wonders why she has had to see so much trouble. But she adds God knows what is best, and He has given her strength to bear all. She states she is not a member of the church, but she hopes to be.

It looks like this widow might be humble enough to wash the saints' feet. Paul sets forth such an one. A widow, old, afflicted, desolate. How is she living? "Well reported of for good works: if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work," 1st Tim. 5:10.

It requires a meek and lowly one to wash the saints' feet. Men do not like to stoop down to such low service as that. Women often say it is indecent to go into a pond of water to baptize one. But if the Lord shows you the beauty of baptism the water is clear, and when you are buried by baptism into the Lord Jesus Christ then it is pure. To the pure all things are pure: and when your body is washed with this pure water then you go on your way rejoicing.

So when you become afflicted and poor you see much beauty in washing the saints' feet. When pride is humbled you wish you were worthy to wash their feet, but you do not feel worthy for them to wash your feet.

One wonders when he reads what Jesus did why the Saints do not wash each others feet. He said, if I your Lord and Master wash your feet ye ought also to wash one anothers feet. He gave them the example. Sure I am that when one knows what Jesus did he is happy when he follows Jesus in washing their feet.

We talk about our unworthiness, and we wish to be at our brethren's feet, but talking this way does not bring us there. If ye do these things you will know whether the doctrine is of God or not.

It was in my mind and desire to wash the saints' feet before I was received among the Primitive Baptists, and when I did wash it was a season of joy to me. If Baptists were always in the spirit of feet-washing there would be no backbiting, nor brow beating, nor butting of heads, nor striking, nor beating men servants or maid servants among us.

How useful is such a character as Paul describes this widow. She is well reported of for good works. What are the good works? If she have brought up children, not by sending them to a Sunday school to be trained by some one that denies the doctrine of the Bible, and teaches for doctrines the commandments of men. Parents are themselves to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Take your children with you to your own preaching, live humbly before them every day, let your conversation be godly in Christ Jesus, provoke them not to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

If she have lodged strangers. To be careful to entertain strangers is a different thing from entertaining your neighbors that you expect will make a feast and invite you to it. Strangers are the ones that are away from home and need food and shelter. Now to lodge them is an unselfish act that shows your generosity and good will to men.

If she have relieved the afflicted. To relieve the suffering and distressed, to deny self, and live soberly, righteously and godly, in this present evil world is among the good works that the Lord's people are careful to maintain.

If she have diligently followed every good work. The good works are such as the Bible commands and exhorts us to observe, shunning what the Bible does not command or authorize.

Now my friend, I feel like in your afflicted state if you will be baptized, putting on Christ, and if it is in your heart to wash the saints feet do so. Tell your church you wish to wash feet, and you will find some member that will wish to wash, and the church will tell you if it is your desire to wash feet to do so.

Cast your burden on the Lord and he will sustain you.

OBITUARIES

LOVA WILLIAMS.

Mr. Gold, Dear Sir:—

I will try and write a few lines in memory of Lova Williams. She was fifty years and some months of age when she died. She was the daughter of Brother Moses Stocks, and was born and raised in Pitt County, N. C., and died in Kinston, N. C., April 20th, 1909.

She was a woman of good talent, a good wife and neighbor, ever caring for her family.

She was received and baptized in the Primitive Baptist Church at Red Banks, Pitt County, about the date 1888, and lived as we hope in love and faith of the glorious Son of God. She tried to live as she wished to die, in peace with God and all mankind. She leaves a sorrow stricken husband, three children, (all boys,) six stepchildren, three brothers, one sister and a large number of kindred and friends.

"It is sad, Oh how we miss her,
But the Lord doeth all things well;
But the joy in God our Saviour,
All the world can never tell."

In love and hope beyond,

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Resolutions of respect of the Primitive Baptist church at Roxboro, N. C., involving remembrance of our deceased sister, Mrs. Ann I. Paylor.

Sister Paylor was for many years a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist doctrine of salvation by the grace of God. She truly was a good woman, a good wife, a good mother, a good neighbor and a good friend to all who knew her.

Sister Paylor united with the Roxboro Primitive Baptist church the second Sunday in May, 1908. Sister Paylor told a beautiful and rich experience of grace, was received into sweet fellowship of the church and was baptized the second Sunday in June, 1908, by her loving pastor, Elder W. A. Simpkins and Elder O. J. Denny, of Greensboro, N. C., and lived a faithful loving member of Roxboro Primitive Baptist church until the God of heaven whom she loved and served so faithfully, called her, Child come home.

She fell asleep in Jesus on the 22nd of December, 1908. Yes, asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep. Asleep in Jesus. Oh, for me, may such a blissful refuge be, securely shall my ashes lie waiting the summons from on high; therefore, be it resolved:

The church has lost one of its dear and loving members.

Resolved 2, That we assure her only child living, Mr. Robert L. Paylor, and her many grandchildren, of our heartfelt sympathy in the death of your mother and grandmother and do truly feel that our loss is her eternagain and we do humbly hope that God will enable you by his grace to bear all your trials and troubles in this life and when you must die that you will die in the triumph of God, as your dear mother did, and on the resurrection we hope that your mother, you and we, may hear that welcome voice of God say, "Come ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from before the foundation of the world."

Resolved 3, That a copy of this resolution be recorded on Roxboro Primitive Baptist church book and a copy be sent to her only child, Mr. Robert L. Paylor, and a copy be sent to Zion's Landmark and the Roxboro Courier for publication.

Done by order of church in conference this April 10, 1909.

SUSANAH LAVENDER.

Brother Gold:

You will please publish the obituary of my dear old sister in the flesh, also in the spirit, I hope, Susanah Lavender.

She was born in Franklin county, Va., in 1826. She was the daughter of Joab and Nancy Hodges, and was married to Samuel Lavender, who preceded her to the grave eight years ago. Susanah professed a hope in Christ and joined the church at Chestnut, Franklin county, Va., and was baptized by J. R. Martin in the year 1857. As a member of the church she was faithful, always filling her seat with humility and fear, and from her appearance relished and endorsed the doctrine of total depravity. She was a strong brace in the church and came up to the full measure of a Primitive Baptist. She was always ready to give an answer to every one that asked her to give a reason of her hope with meekness and fear. It was her whole theme. It did her so much good when old Brother Corn, Z. T. Turner and G. T. Dyer would come to see her, and speak together of his unity and power, and in fact every one that could testify to the truth that salvation was of the Lord was welcome.

She was one of the witnesses that our rock is not as their rock, our enemies themselves being judges, as some of the other orders would say they would like to wash Susanah's feet. Again they would say, I would rather exchange with Susanah than with anybody I know for eternal salvation. She was truly blessed with a good degree of faith, for which we should render all possible praise to his holy name.

She was confined to her room for several years, but bore her afflictions with patience and we have good reason to believe she is numbered among the saints. She was seen in her trying hours to smile, cast her eyes towards heaven and clasp her hands together as though she was having a vision of her eternal home prepared for his bride before time.

She leaves two children, Lucy and John. Lucy has gone with another order. John believes like mother. In love to you, Brother Gold.

WM. H. HODGES.

By request of the bereaved husband, I send for publication the obituary notice of his faithful wife who departed this life on Sept. 23, 1908, in her 62nd year.

This worthy lady was the daughter of John and Martha Gunn. In 1869 she was married to Mr. Bedford Page to which union were born nine children, one of which preceded her to the grave, leaving eight who together with her devoted husband mourn their loss.

I wish I was able to write as this noble lady deserves, but I know it is useless for me to attempt it, so will only attempt some things which will be endorsed by all who knew her.

As a wife she was very kind and dutiful, and as a mother she was faithful indeed. Her care and anxiety for the comfort of her family would be hard to excel. All who lived near her best loved her most. She was kind to the afflicted and sick visiting them and doing all she could for them. As a Christian woman her walk was good. In her young womanhood she professed a hope in Christ and joined the Methodists, but in after years became dissatisfied and wanted a home with the Primitive Baptists. She offered at Lick Fork church, was received and baptized by Elder James S. Daneron, and adorned her profession by an orderly walk and a godly conversation, attending her church as long as she was able to go. After becoming too feeble to attend church the Landmark was her favorite book.

Her disease was cancer of the liver and although she suffered very much she bore it all patiently without a murmur. I visited her several times during her last illness and she seemed so humble and submissive. We grieved to see her suffer, but all that loving relatives and friends could do, could not stay the hand of death. When she breathed her last I felt she had entered into the joys of her Lord.

The next day amidst a large concourse of weeping relatives and friends her body was laid to rest in the new church ground at Oak Grove, the funeral services being conducted by Elder P. Johnson.

May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved husband and children and enable them to feel that their loss is her eternal gain,

"For we feel that she is now above,
Where all is joy, peace and love."

WRITTEN BY A COUSIN.

ELIZABETH FRYAR.

One less on earth and one more in heaven

Mrs. Elizabeth Fryar, wife of Brother C. H. Fryar departed this life April 24th, 1909. She was born Dec. 19th, 1853, which made her stay on earth 40 years and 21 days. This dear sister received a hope in Christ some twenty years ago and joined the Primitive Baptist Church at Oden, Ark., fourteen years ago, being baptized by the unworthy writer. Sister Fryar lived a consistent member of the said church until her death. She was a firm believer in the sovereignty and immutability of the Almighty God, believing the doctrine of predestination and election and a strong believer in salvation by the sweet all-powerful, all reigning, all loving and saving grace of God. In regard to what is called conditional time salvation, she believed it is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure. She desired to give God all the praise and glory for the salvation of her poor soul both in time and eternity.

She had a host of friends and a loving husband and all was done by them and a good physician, besides loving children, but nothing could stay the cold hand of death. She was entombed the 25th of April, the day after she died, the unworthy writer conducting the funeral services, a large audience of friends and relatives being present.

She leaves a dear husband and seven children to mourn their loss, but without a doubt their loss is her eternal gain.

O, may God help us all to be ready to go as was this dear sister.

H.ELLISON.

Oden, Ark.

MRS. ELIZABETH SIMPSON.

The death angel visited our home and took from us our precious mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Simpson. She was the daughter of Wm. and Sena Horne and was married to Asa Simpson in March, 1875. She was born Sept. 16th, 1858 and died Feb. 15th, 1909, making her stay on earth 50 years, 4 months and 29 days.

She was afflicted with that well known, incurable Bright's disease and while her sufferings will never be known, she bore them patiently. Mother had been down most of the time for six months, and had been in declining health for several years. Oh, it was the hardest thing to do, to sit by her bed and see her suffer so, and now it is so sad to be without a mother. But we grieve not as those who have no hope, as we feel our loss is her eternal gain.

She joined the Primitive Baptist church at White Oak some ten years ago and was truly a faithful member of that church until death. Mother was as strong a Baptist as I ever saw. She was always teaching us children the Primitive doctrine, and during her first illness she talked about her church all the time, while not in so much pain. Awhile before she died, she repeated this part of a song:

"I want to live a christian here;

I want to die rejoicing;

I want to know my Savior is near,

When soul and body is parting."

And I feel assured she felt her Savior near, for she had the sweetest look on her face when dying I ever saw. Oh, I can scarcely realize at all that my dear mother has gone.

She leaves a husband, ten children, seven daughters and three sons, an aged mother, one sister, five brothers and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

She was a loving wife and mother and so good to her neighbors. I never knew her to turn any one off empty handed if she could divide what she had. Her life was surely such as we should pattern by.

Mr. Lundy came to see her just before she died, and she seemed to enjoy his visit so much. There is nothing so comforting as to know she is at rest. Mamma told me some time before she passed away that all she dreaded was the sting of death. She said to me several mornings, "Stella, I was disappointed last night," and when I asked "why," her answer would be, "because I couldn't die." I feel death is only a dream to her.

"A shadow has passed over our home,

The voice we loved so well is still;

Her place is vacant by our fire-side,

That no one else can fill."

May the Lord prepare us to meet her in a better world where pain, sorrow and death enter not.

ELDER JOSIAH ELDRIDGE.

With a sad heart I attempt to chronicle the death of my dear father, Elder Josiah Eldridge, who was born July 30, 1848 and died Oct. 11, 1908.

Words cannot express how deeply his bereaved family mourn their loss. He is survived by a wife and five children.

Father joined the Primitive Baptist Church and was called to the ministry when quite a young man and remained a faithful member and defender of the faith until it pleased God to call him beyond the river. He was always faithful to attend his churches even when the hand of affliction was laid heavily upon him and when it seemed he was hardly able to travel.

Not only is he missed greatly by his sorrowing family and churches, but also by his neighbors, for he was an example of benevolence, honesty and peaceableness. He seemed to desire to follow strictly the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Father had been afflicted for many years with bronchitis which finally developed into bowel consumption from which he died. I was away from home at school during his last illness not being aware that the end was so near as he was not confined to his bed until about a week before his death. It is impossible for me to express my sorrow upon hearing he was near the point of death and knowing that I must hurry home if I wanted to see him again before he died. As soon as I saw him I knew that the end was near. I helped to make his last hours as comfortable as possible. He was willing to go for he knew he was going where suffering and sorrow are unknown.

Oh, how we miss his bowed form before the fire. How we miss his kindly, providing care and wise counsel. His grief stricken wife and children indeed sorely miss their kind provider and loving counselor. But we have great reasons to believe our loss is his eternal gain.

He has gone to that land of heavenly rest,
Where he will be forever blest.

Written by his son,
JAMES ELDRIDGE.

LILLIE WINDHAM.

By request of her mother I will try and write a few lines in memory of Lillie Windham who departed this life in Stantonsburg, N. C., May 17th, 1909.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Owens, of Fountain, N. C., and was born July 1st, 1880. Her stay on earth was 28 years, 10 months and 16 days.

She was married to Wm. Claudia Windham in 1901, to which union was born 7 children, three surviving her. Besides these three daughters she leaves a heart-broken husband, a dear mother and father, six sisters, eleven brothers and a host of friends to mourn their loss. But we mourn not as those who have no hope, believing our loss is her eternal gain.

Lillie was not a member of any church, but died a true believer in the Primitive Baptist faith and would go to hear them whenever she could. Her mother believed that she had a bright hope and she has heard her talk often of what she thought was the dealings of the Lord with her. Her light was so clear none could help but see it and doubtless thereby some may have been constrained to glorify her Father in heaven.

Oh how we do miss her, but we bow in humble submission and say, "Thy will be done." She has finished her course on earth, she kept the faith; henceforth she enjoys a crown of righteousness laid up for her where moth nor rust doth not corrupt nor thieves break through and steal.

She has gone to be with her dear little baby, Mary Windham, who preceded her last December. Little Mary was about 4 years old and just before she died she told them she saw Jesus. This little bud was sent here on earth to bloom for a short while and then take its flight to heaven, where there is no more sickness, pain nor sorrow.

"Asleep in Jesus, Oh how sweet,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.

From the deepest cave of ocean,
From the desert and the plain,
From valley and the mountain
Countless throngs shall rise again.

In the bright eternal city,
Death can never come;
In His good time He will call us
From our toil to home sweet home."

May God's people in all their prayers remember the bereaved parents, husband, sisters, brothers and children. May the good Lord in all His tender mercy bind up all their broken hearts.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT.

Whereas, God in his mercy and in his love, saw fit on the morning of May 5th, 1909, to remove by death, from our midst one of our most humble sisters, Phebe J. Sheets, who proved to be a faithful and worthy member of our church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1st. That while we are grieved over our loss, we believe our loss is her eternal gain, and bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

2nd. That the community has lost a useful neighbor, the family has lost a loving and faithful wife, and devoted mother, and the church, one of her faithful members.

3rd. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies in their sad bereavement.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon our church record, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent to Zion's Landmark for publication.

Brother Gold:—

I do feel so incompetent to write. I have put it off thinking it was such a task for this poor worm of the dust, but if not deceived I do have a little hope through grace that God is my strength, my shield and my all.

I feel that my time is short here and I trust that I may go away as this little child, happy and rejoicing. Brother Gold, I desire that this obituary be published in one of the July numbers please. My daughter wants it to keep.

I remain your sister in Christ I hope,

CARL VIVIAN OAKLY.

I am requested to write the obituary of little Carl Vivian, the son of Charles and Aldine Oakly. He was born in June, 1908 and died May 20th, 1909.

On Saturday before the third Sunday they had his picture taken and come home with me on Sunday for dinner. In the evening Carl was taken violently sick, growing worse all the time. The doctor came and said he had dysentery and that his entire system was poisoned, also that it had gone to his brain causing convulsions. He passed away smiling as though some one was playing with him. He was never a child to laugh much and I never thought Aldine would raise him. He was always such a good child. His mother had a beautiful dream that he was standing on a white rock. This occurred the night after he was born and I told her that sometime she would have to tell that dream again. And when he was dying she did and I told her he was now standing on that white rock. She dreamed the night he died he was walking with her from the lot and she was trying to get him to go into the house but he wouldn't and passed on. I thought that was a consolation to her, for I felt he was walking in the sunshine of God's everlasting love.

Oh, but it was so hard to see him suffer and die and nothing doing him any good. It was heartrending to see its mother and father. They worshipped that child. But God in His wise providence took him to Himself to show them that they should not prize anything on earth so high as Thee, the Lord that rules the earth and sky.

"Oh Lord, it seemed good to Thee,
To take my infant dear;
I hope it will work good for me,
And cause me Thee to fear."

PIG RIVER PRIMITIVE BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother.—

Please give space in the Landmark for the Pig River Primitive Baptist Association to be held with the Bethel church, Franklin County, Va., commencing on Friday before the first Sunday in August, 1909, and continue three days. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Any brother wishing to attend this Association will be met at Glade Hill Depot on Thursday before, and conveyed to the Association.

Brother Gold, come if you can. We would be glad to have you. Hope Elder P. G. Lester will come as it is quite a while since he was with us. Any and all are welcome.

This association is in a fine section of country and among those that are able to take care of visitors and have made preparations for it.

CHESTER H. RIMMER.

By request of my aunt I will in my weak way try to write something in memory of her dear husband, Chester H. Rimmer. He was born Dec. 6th, 1866, and died Dec. 10, 1908, making his stay on earth nearly forty-two years. On Oct. 29, 1899, he was united in marriage to Miss Lettie E. Hawkins unto which union was born six children, five boys and one girl. Three boys and the little girl survive him, the oldest being only eight years old.

His disease was heart trouble from which he suffered severely, being so he could lie down but little for a long time before he died. He died setting in his chair. It was so hard to see him suffer and to realize we had no power to relieve him. But God's ways are right and we must be submissive to His will.

Uncle Chesley was not a member of any church but was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptists. He loved to read the Landmark and hear preaching.

A short time before he died Elder Monk went to see him. Uncle said he enjoyed the visit and said if it was convenient he would like for him to preach at his home.

We who were with him in his last days have good hope for him. He left evidence that he had that blessed hope that no man can give or take. So weep not dear aunt for we hope and believe he is at rest and we hope when our blessed Savior sees fit to call you that you will meet him where sickness, sorrow, pain or death are felt and feared no more.

Written by his wife's niece.

N. A. M. BRITTON.

It is with a sad heart I make the attempt to write of the death of my dear aunt who departed this life May 6th, 1909. Her stay on earth was 63 years, 5 months and 28 days.

She was always healthy as far as we knew until the first of August, 1908, when she came into my mother's room and told us she had a cancer and that there was nothing but death for her. She was one we could all look up to, as mother was always sickly and aunt Mary was so loving and kind.

It was so hard to give her up and we are so lonely without her. But now she has gone never more to answer to our call, and never again will we hear her welcome voice in our home and never again hear the sweet step that was so dear to us.

In October, 1908, she went to Winterville for treatment as that was the only place to which she would agree to go. Some of her relatives wanted her to go to Richmond but she would not. I went with her and stayed until Sunday and oh how sad it was to part from her that morning. She remained there until Monday after the third Sunday in April, 1909, when after learning she was no better but continued to get worse she wanted to come back home where she could spend the remainder of her days with her people.

After she reached home she seemed some better for nearly a week when she was taken worse and continued to decline until May 6th, when the death angel came and claimed her as his own.

It was so sad to hear her begging us to relieve her from her pain and seeing her holding her hand out to every little child who came near her and asking them if they could not help her. But all that could be done for her did not stay the icy hand of death. She bore her afflictions with as much patience as anyone could. She was never heard to murmur and seemed perfectly resigned to God's will and was often heard trying to pray.

She was not a member of any church but was a true lover and believer in the Primitive Baptists and never wanted to miss a meeting at Flat Swamp. She was devoted to Elder G. D. Roberson and enjoyed his preaching very much. He was to conduct the funeral services but found it impossible to get here in time.

She was followed to the grave by one sister and a host of relatives and friends and at her request was laid to rest by the side of her grand-mother.

She leaves two afflicted sisters, one older and one younger than herself, and many other relatives and friends to mourn their loss. But we feel our loss is her eternal gain.

Sleep on dear aunt, sleep on,

Nothing can disturb your rest.

While the angels of God with you sing,

And you reign with the ever blest.

So now we should weep not

For we all hope to say

That you have gone to heaven

And there forever stay.

So sleep on dear aunt

For while we are lonely here

Some day in that bright heaven

We all hope to appear.

HULDA JANE HINSHAW.

Aunt Hulda Jane Hinshaw was born November 1, 1827. In 1850 she was married to Mr. James Angel, who preceded her to the grave sixteen years. She died February 14, 1906, leaving two sons, three daughters, eleven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, besides a host of other relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

She never joined any church, but was a professor of religion for many years, and had no use for any other doctrine than that of salvation by grace and in the last years of her life she expressed a great desire to be baptized, but owing in part at least to her delicate health and in her old age growing so feeble that for several years she was seldom able to get from home.

The writer has often visited her in her home and has often heard her express a good gospel reason for a hope in Christ and feels sure she died in the triumphs of a living faith. Just before she died she clasped her hands and in a clear, audible voice, exclaimed, "Farewell vain world, I am going home."

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his postoffice.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold:—I send you for publication the experience of my youngest daughter which came to me a day or two ago. I know you will rejoice with me. When I received it I read, cried and rejoiced, it was such good news.

My dear brother, I will baptize five the next third Sunday at Old Camp Branch. We are having good meetings. Wish I could see you and talk some with you. May the Lord bless you in the future as he has in the past and yet spare you to publish the truth upon the pages of the dear old Landmark and also continue to preach the glorious doctrine of grace to God's dear people wherever your lot may be cast. I am satisfied that the cause is just as great to you, and if there is any difference it is that you are more burdened in your old age to preach Christ than you ever have been. You feel that you have left out so much that you would like to tell. But we can't tell it all. It seems to me, my brother, that even when I do preach afterwards I think I have left out all the best. I often think of what Paul said, "Consider what I say and the Lord give thee understanding in all things."

Publish this experience as soon as you can and oblige,

A little brother who loves Zion I hope,
Z. T. TURNER.

My Dear Papa and Mama:—

I have been wanting to answer your good letters which I enjoyed so much and would have answered before now but we have been very busy with our crop of tobacco.

Walter and I were at preaching near Jesse Jones' last Sunday and heard cousin Albert Philpott preach to a large congregation. I saw aunt Sue and aunt Fannie besides many other of our relatives. . .

Well you both have asked me if I did not have a hope. I cannot say I have, but I do have so many doubts and fears that I feel as if I have never known God as my Saviour in the forgiveness of my sins. I will try and tell you of some of my troubles and trials and I want you to tell me if you think I am deceived for of all things a hypocrite is one of the worst things and I am made to doubt and fear so much that I am afraid I am deceived and I do not want to receive myself or deceive others.

I have often wanted to fall at your feet and ask you to ask the Lord to have mercy on me but for fear of deceiving you I would not. The first and most serious thoughts about myself being a lost sinner I had on Sunday morning of the Canton Creek Association. That morning Dear Sister Nina told her experience; she told what an awful sinner she had been, viewed herself so wickedly and had seen so much trouble over her sins that after she was through talking I walked out on the porch and the thought came to me if one who seemed to do so near right as she had seen herself such a sinner what was to become of one so vile as me. I felt that none was as sinful as I. I went on in this way sometimes worse than others until eleven years ago this spring when one day I was taken down with fever and it seemed I couldn't bear up under my troubles. I told my husband I felt so awful that I didn't think I could live, that it appeared to me that I didn't have a friend on earth, that I did not feel fit to live and I knew I was not fit to die. My husband begged me not to talk that way, it was wrong. I knew if I died in that condition that hell would be my portion. I tried to pray God to pardon my sins but it seemed my poor efforts did not reach higher than my head. I felt I was too great a sinner to ever try to pray any more.

I went on in this way until one night I dreamed that you and myself were walking along a new smooth road when we came to a small stream of water. You stepped across and turned around to me and said, it is the water of life, drink of it freely. I knelt to drink when I awoke. After this I felt calm and peaceful but was afraid I had not met with a change. I love the Old Baptists better than I do any people on earth, yet I was not satisfied. I prayed to God in my feeble way to show me more evidence of a change.

Sometime after this I dreamed of being on a smooth plain and that on it was nothing but cedar trees and arbors of some kind. I did not know all the people I saw there or how many, but Grandma Turner and Mr. A. J. Castle were among them. All of us were dressed in white and had wings. Everything seemed so peaceful and calm that it made me feel better, but still doubts and fears would arise and I could not live like I thought a changed person ought to.

I have been going on in this way now for several years and for the last year or two I have seen so much trouble it seemed I would lose my mind. But since reading those dear old Landmarks you gave me, wherein the dear writers tell my feelings so well a change of some kind I have felt

My dear papa, if you think I am deceived do tell me so and pray God to remember me in the pardon of my sins. Answer this just as soon as you get it, don't delay a single day. Come as soon as you can.

Pray for me to be led in the right way for I desire to be a follower of Christ. If I was only fit to have the fellowship of God's dear children it would be the greatest pleasure to me. I desire to be with the church, and oh, if I only felt worthy to be there. I have a great desire to be baptized but my doubting heart makes me fear to go ahead.

Oh, how I wish I could be with you and talk with you upon religion. The scriptures command the Lord's people to come out from the world and be a separate people, also to take up the cross and follow him.

Write to me just as soon as you get this. Pray for me, your loving and devoted daughter, SUSIE M. TURNER.

Alumina, Va.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother:—

I have just gotten in from Ashboro where we had good meetings. A brother was there from Sugg's Creek. He said that Elder Draughn is carrying things high there—that he had gotten in seventeen members since last July, a number of them being young women. He preaches at the meeting house and around the country for from one to two weeks in each month and opens the doors at each appointment, that he has from two to three hymns sung while he walks up and down the aisle calling for members at the same time having his young women talking to their friends to get them in.

When he has baptized a number he has them all seated in a bunch and invites the church and all Christians to go and give them the right hand of fellowship, and they go irrespective of denominations. He calls all church members brother and sister. He tells them that the way young people have learned to sing they will have to use organs in the churches.

Thus the progressive movement is already introduced among us.

What kind of a storm is now introduced into our midst?

The Lord deliver us and lead us in the good old way of Zion.

That brother said he could not say in that mess if he had to turn himself out of the church to get out of it.

Affectionately,
L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I will try and relate some of the Lord's dealings with me if it is His will that I should do so.

The first of my troubles came when I was young and had a dream that the world had come to an end, and I saw that I was lost, and oh what a dreadful condition I was in. But it wore off and I went on sinning as before when it came on me again and I thought I was going to die. I tried to pray, but all I could say was, Lord have mercy on me, but it did no good as I got worse and worse. I would leave home sometimes to try and get rid of it but that did no good for it would follow me. I thought I was bound to die and that I was standing on the eaves and was about to fall down into torment. I didn't want any one to know it. I tried to pray but it did no good.

But at last the light shone around me and I was made glad. Old things passed away and all things became new and it was a happy time with me. Everything looked so beautiful. The birds sang so sweetly. My little children looked so happy. This would continue for a day or two when I would begin to doubt and fear and think I was mistaken. I read the bible and searched it to find something that would relieve my mind and sometimes I would find something that would relieve it for awhile but not for long.

I wanted to join the church but had never had that impression before and knew I was not fit. I went on in this way for about a year still I didn't feel fit to go before the church. But that was always on my mind and I felt better satisfied when I joined. I have always loved Primitive Baptists. Pray for me and mine when it is well with you.

LOU R. MARTIN.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother:—

A few days ago all appeared to be darkness and gloom to me. I could not see or feel my way out. I was trying to look forward to some enjoyment in the future when I heard a voice say, go back and take up some of the fragments. The first thing that struck my mind was my baptism. My mind dwelled upon this with some degree of delight. Then the word "shout" got fastened upon my mind and I thought of how some of God's people opposed shouting. I thought strange of that when the scriptures say, let the inhabitants of the rocks sing and shout from the top of the mountains. My mother used to shout forth praises to God in the highest at times unexpected to me the remembrance of which is sweet to this day to me. I remember when brother Isaac Webb was at Green Hill about twenty years ago, and as he led the candidates down into the water every move he made appeared to be in praise to God and how when he was preaching the dedication sermon at Dover and was telling about the convenient ways the people had to get religion nowadays. He then asked if it was convenient for Christ to leave the high climes of glory and come down into these low grounds of sorrow? Was it convenient for Him to bear the crown of thorns? Was it convenient for him to be nailed to the rugged cross? Was it convenient for him to have his side pierced with spears? Just at this moment Brother Webb put his hand over his mouth to keep from crying aloud while the tears freely rolled down his quivering cheeks. He said, glory to God, and resumed his sermon. It seemed as if my heart would almost burst into.

And how Brother D. S. Webb's voice was caught up at Brother John McReeves' school house in Grayson County, Va., when he saw the light between old Brother H. C. Booker and Brother G. O. Key. Those were baby days to me. And how I saw a lady, who is a member, one evening while I was singing, shouting praise to God who was at least thirty miles away at that time. I was so sure that it was the case that I went to see her not long after that and she acknowledged it to me.

I had a cousin whom I had as soon hear shout as to preach for the same length of time. Once when I was a boy I started to feed the stock and did not know my mother had followed me to the door. As I went I began to sing "Farewell vain world, I am going home, my Jesus smiles and bids me come." She exclaimed at the top of her voice, Glory to God! Glory to God, forevermore! Oh the strains of praise that have gone from her mouth in days past. I have been caught off a little myself and could not help it. Not long after my wife died I saw there was an influence brought to bear upon the minds of my children different from the way I believed. It worried me at first I having all the responsibility to bear, but I decided not to let that bother me, for the Lord was able to teach them right. And as I turned away I commenced to sing, "My soul repeats this praise Whose mercy is so great." Just at this moment my voice was caught up in praise to God and before I knew what I was doing I was praising God with all my might at the top of my voice. My mind was changed in a moments time to begging God to save the souls of them that were opposing my belief. As soon as I caught myself talking so loud I said I must stop this or the people will think I am crazy. I may be but the will of God will be done.

These are some of the fragments I have been feasting on, together with many others. So no more at present.

As ever yours in the bonds of love, peace and fellowship,

J. R. JONES.

Revolution Mills, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:—

While reading the Landmark for March 1st I saw the letter of Elder T. J. Bazemore to you and your very good and sweet reply to him. I feel that the brethren and sisters where I have been traveling to be very much delighted with your reply.

If Elder Bazemore had not made a very personal reference to me and enclosed the same in quotation marks I would let the matter rest just as you left it, but inasmuch as he did quote certain language and credited it to me I feel called upon to say a little to those who read his letter and who may read this.

After reading his letter I wrote to him as follows:

"Elder J. T. Bazemore,

College Park, Ga.,

Dear Brother:—

I see in Zion's Landmark of March 1st an expression from you and a quotation which you say is from me. The matter is as follows:

"What do you think of Elder L. H. Hardy's blasphemous expression, 'We do not know which to be thankful for the most, sin or salvation from sin.'"

Now, brother, I want you to write to me at once and tell me from what letter of mine you have quoted? I have no recollection of having made such an expression and I surely do not believe it. Now please write at once and let me know where the expression may be found and oblige,

Yours truly,

L. H. HARDY."

In answer to the above I have received two postal cards. The first one is as follows:

"College Park, Ga., March 10, 1909.

Elder L. H. Hardy,

Reidsville, N. C.,

Dear Brother:—

Yours of the 8th was received this morning. If I am not mistaken I saw in print where a brother stated that you used the expression you refer to. I have not the paper at hand but will write to the brother today in regard to it and will let you hear from me later. Whether you used the expression or not I am glad that you say you do not believe the expression; and it is not my intention to misrepresent anyone, and will gladly correct if I find I have done you so.

I had no thought of Elder G's publishing anything I wrote him, and cannot discern his motive for doing so. He didn't answer me privately and he knows I do not get his paper, so he did not aim for me to see his reply. If you have never used the expression, and do not believe it, perhaps it will do no harm for the truth to be known about it. You should not rest under anything hurtful to you if you are innocent. We all do wrong, but we are greatly blessed if we can confess our wrongs and repent.

Yours truly,
T. J. BAZEMORE."

The second card is as follows:

"The expression I referred to was used by another Elder in an article re-published in "Advocate of Truth," Silvertown, Texas, in Oct. No. 1908, and endorsed by the editor of that paper, Elder J. R. Hardy. Elder Webb referred to the expression in the "Trumpet" for Oct. 22nd, 1908, where I saw it. I cheerfully make the correction. Since I received your letter I have written to Elder Webb, and he has given me the desired information.

I hope this explanation will be satisfactory as I do not desire to misrepresent any one. I am not responsible for the publication of the matter in the Landmark.

Yours in hope,
T. J. BAZEMORE."

I leave that matter there and would say no more if it were not for the fact that a number of the brethren have asked me the meaning of the word, "anti-nomian." Anti (against) nomos (law), hence the meaning, against the law. This cannot be truthfully said about predestinarians. Just as far as one believes in predestination he believes that one is under it as a law or governing principle. I have traveled some among the strongest predestinarians we have and have heard a number of them preach but have heard very few use the term "absolute predestination of all things," and have never known one who made predestination a hobby.

We believe in a sovereign God and one who does all his pleasure in the heavens in the earth and under the earth and none can stay his Almighty Hand.

We do not believe that God works in man to sin, but that by man came sin and that sin is of the wicked one; but we do believe that our Omnipotent God rules over all this and says, "Thus far shalt thou come and no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."

We fully believe that everything that comes to pass was in some way embraced in God's eternal purpose and that he will rule and overrule it all to his own praise. Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee and the remainder of wrath thou wilt restrain. Joseph said to his brethren, "You meant it for evil, but God meant it for good." What God meant is that which came to pass while the evil they meant fell to the ground. Job felt that he had received the evil as well as the good at the hands of the Lord.

Our Lord taught the assurance that in the world we should have tribulation but peace in him because he had overcome the world. He learned obedience by the things he suffered and purposed that we should be made strong in weakness.

Adam received the command to multiply and replenish the earth before there was any sin in the world and while the woman by whom his seed should come forth was yet in him and undeveloped, but our Lord tells us that, "Except that a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." So far as the human race is concerned Adam is the corn of wheat. As pertaining to the people of God Christ is that corn of wheat. Both must die to bring forth. Where there is no sin there is no death. Therefore in God's divine purpose sin is embraced and, in the covenant of mercy, salvati from sin.

The apostle said, "God be thanked that ye were sinners," but he does not say, God be thanked that you commit sin. Committing sin is bearing fruit unto the carnal nature in us and that nature is God's enemy.

I never was acquainted with a predestinarian who did not believe in and teach christian obedience as a fruit of the grace of God in the heart.

We all would do well to observe the rule of God, to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. Two days ago as I thought of this these lines came in my mind:

There is a rule in scripture taught,

Which with the truth is fully fraught:

As you would that men should do to you,

You ever so to them must do.

To claim obedience as a condition,

And leave this rule out of position,

Will show that you are a pharisee,

With righteous self for men to see.

Yours in the love of truth and order.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I enclose two very important letters. One is from a cousin of mine who has the richest experience I ever heard related. She was once a catholic. She is quite a mystery as she can enter so deep into a spiritual conversation that many of us who are so weak in understanding can only be still and listen. Her conversation unfolds so much to our minds we never thought of

I would be pleased to have this letter of hers published if you have vacant space. It is rich to me while it crushes my feelings. Her mind was first directed to send it to you for publication but she was taken sick and never sent it.

The other letter I enclose is from a brother in Pa. If I know anything about the truth which makes us free it is set forth here in such plain array we can't help but understand. As I have enjoyed these so much I can't help but think that others would also.

Love to you and sister Gold. I am your unworthy sister,

AZUBAH LEE.

Dunn, N. C.

Miss Azubah Lee,

Dear Sister in Christ:—

Will you forgive me for troubling you with a few lines from me. I have not had a mind to write you until today about ten o'clock when it seemed I must write and now I make the attempt. You cannot know how glad I will be to get one more of your soul cheering letters, for I feel to say that the few I have received from you in time past have been such a comfort to me, though I feel that you have never found out how much pleasure I find in your pleasant and well chosen company. I feel it in my heart to tell you that I do believe that the loving Savior has guided you in life, and you are, I feel to say, one of his meek and lowly ones; willing to cheer the lonely and comfort the afflicted ones who love the truth.

How glad I was to have you here with me and hear you talk about the works of our dear Saviour. I feel that the good Lord directed your mind to spend that little while with us last winter and I hope it is His will that your mind will be directed to come again soon, for I will be glad to see you.

I can't say that I am much better off than I was when you were here. I have been in very feeble health for a long time but I feel that if this body was strong and well I would not catch so many sweet glimpses of His glorious work. And in my afflictions here I hope I see it as I feel it, a bright and lowly hope, illuminated by his all-powerful presence which shall shine forever and forever in my soul. Though the valley of the shadow of death has been near me and I have been so weary, yet his help fails not and he speaks as it were, words of comfort and peace to my trembling soul. And Oh what love! At times I feel like I am almost on wings of his glorious love and truth. But the greater portion of my life I am walking in dark valleys alone, and mourning because I can't live as I desire. When I would do good evil is present and I feel to be nothing, less than nothing, and at times my heart is desolate and my soul hungry and thirsty. I almost feel banished and that I must surely perish. But in his own good time he bears me up again on the strength of his love. And oh what love! He sends the famine that we may enjoy the feast more. "My Lord is precious, my soul is in a flame, I am carried into raptures while praising His name." All glory to him who opens the prison door and lets the weary captive free. What wonderful love! But Oh, if I could live as I wish

Dear sister if I only could tell of my many trials, troubles, heart-aches and sorrows I have undergone for the last week I feel that you would and could sympathize with me. It is only by the power of a dear and loving Savior that I am yet alive. He enables me to bear up under them together with my affliction.

Dear sister, you know that I am wearied with life for I have told you of some of my troubles, and since I saw you last I have been informed by my dear Lord that while my troubles have been great the greatest are to come. I feel like I am in a strange place and on a strange road, with a heavy tired feeling as if I want to rest but cannot. Neither can I find any natural rest as my health is very poor although I am able to be up almost all the time.

Please pray for me and forgive all errors. You are good and kind so please remember a poor vile sinner, who if saved at all will be saved by grace alone for there is nothing good in me. If a child of God I feel to be the least and the less than least.

You asked me to write you soon, but I have not had a mind before today. Love to you all, because I love you all with I hope a godly love. I must close. Excuse mistakes for I feel that this is an imperfect letter, but how can I do any better when I am so imperfect in all I do and say. I feel sometimes that I have the spirit but can't utter it, but blessed be he that can feel the spirit and can't utter it.

Write soon to your sister I hope in Christ,

MRS. AURIBA JOHNSON.

Benson, N. C.

Miss Azubah Lee,

My dear sister in hope of eternal life:—

Your kind letter just to hand and after reading the same I was so elated over your better health my thoughts were to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, thanking him for his great love toward the children of men. His grace is always sufficient for us, and there is no condition in which his children are placed but that his loving kindness is underneath them.

It is only through great tribulation that we can learn of the blessed Jesus. His faithfulness is so great that he never allows us to be afflicted above that which we are able to bear. The tried ones who have tasted of the bitter waters of remorse, are the only ones who can appreciate the gift of Jesus. If we were without the cross, though it be light, we should fail to receive the crown. The greatest enemy we meet with in this world is the one we have within, and until this flesh of ours is crucified, brought under subjection by being born again, not of the will of the flesh but by the spirit of Jesus, which is stronger than this fleshly house or of the prince of the power of this world.

If the ark which floated upon the deluge of waters and which had to be built exactly after the pattern shown Noah and of the kind of wood also—if the least act of disobedience could have been detected in its construction—it never would have floated upon the waters, but would have been like the rest of the huge craft of unbelievers whose ships could not float because in God they had no trust, notwithstanding Noah warned them during 120 years or during its construction. Then if the ark be a true figure of Christ and his shed blood as the only means of salvation; if the building of the ark, or the time, represents the christian era, and that time being given us which we are to so live and to show our faith in that living way in the crucified and living Jesus, it means that we must deny ourselves of all ungodliness and all worldly lust. It means of us, death to our righteousness, a resurrection to life through Christ that we may have our work unto holiness. No foreign mixture, no half way business in our faith in Jesus.

If we be in Christ then we are dead to the world—the things we loved we now hate. We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren, If we do not love them we are none of his.

We are specially told that the waters of the earth shall no more cover the face of the earth, but in its stead the horses of fire and the chariots of fire. Now then if we have builded an ark out of self righteousness will it stand the test of fire? If Daniel had not had implicit confidence in the Lord would the lions mouths have been closed? If the accusers of Daniel had been good men could the lions have had mastery over them? The three Hebrew children whose faith was only in God trusted in him for deliverance. The smell of fire was not found on their clothes. So with us, we must have that living faith or our garments will smell of fire. We shall not be able to ride home in the chariot of fire. A lip worship will never do. Unless we be dead to self and alone in Christ then and only then can we worship in spirit and in truth. God working in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure, hence it is said, we are not our own but are bought with a price, and that price the blood of Jesus. Therefore we should glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are his. Let the spirit of love and peace dwell with all the children of God now and forever is my prayer.

My dear sister, I think I have now written too much. If I could write something worth reading I should think it might be a comfort. But God knows even the thoughts and intent of the heart, and what I have written, I have written, if not in accordance with his will, he is good to forgive and always ready to instruct what is not in harmony with your way of thinking.

My sister, I hope you will pardon all inaccuracies and cleave only unto that which is good, knowing all things work together for good to those who are the called according to his purpose.

J. F. JOHNSON.

Laidig, Pa.

GOD IS LOVE.

He that loveth not, knoweth not God for God is love. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believed in him should not perish but have everlasting life. God said I have loved thee with an everlasting love therefore with my loving kindness have I drawn thee. Drawn who? Drawn his children unto himself that they may see and feel his peaceful presence and know he is God. He said if you (Who? His children) love me keep my commandments, and so fulfilled the law of Christ. He made a great display of this love towards his people when he covenanted with his only Son to come into these low grounds of sorrow to suffer, bleed and die for the sins of his people. Oh, glorious thought! He shed his precious blood, which flowed so freely to atone for the sins of his people. What great love. The world can't bestow any such love as this and though one might venture to die for his friend he can't save himself and his friend too with an everlasting salvation. His love is being made manifest daily to the subjects of his grace, and will continue so as long as time lasts.

It was the love of God in Christ that caused him to submit to the will of God, to suffer the shameful death on the cross for the sins of his people. It is the love of God in our hearts that causes us to love his name supremely and to adore him above all things for what he has done for us. He said, Oh! my love my dove, where art thou who art hid in the clefts of the rocks. Oh, my fair one, come away, thy voice is pleasant and thy countenance is comely. How illustrative of the love of God. Christ said where two or three are gathered together in my name I will be one in the midst and that to bless. Yes with a feeling sense of his love.

Did you ever see this woman, the church, the bride, the lamb's wife in her glorified state? If you did, you do love her and if you do love her come and go with her. The bride says come and the spirit says come and whosoever will let him come and partake of the water of life freely. She is beautiful to behold. She is as a speckled bird, as a harvest field ready for the sickle, as a flock of sheep well cared for by the shepherd, as a lovely little band of the household of faith, as one loved above all others, as a bride adorned for her husband. The chosen people of God, a peculiar people, a royal priesthood, a chosen nation. Did you ever see this beautiful woman, the church of God, adorned with the grace of God, and his love beaming in his countenance? What a glorious privilege it is to be permitted to enter into this family of the Most High God and be partakers of the heavenly blessings of his kingdom with children of God while we are passing through this vale of tears. One said, come and go with us and we will do thee good.

Yours in love,

J. R. JONES.

Dear Brother Gold, Brethren and Sisters:—

As I was requested to write a brief account of my April and May tour through the eastern part of North Carolina, that the many brethren and churches may hear from me, I send this imperfect sketch:

I visited first, the church at Newport, Carteret County, third Saturday and Sunday in April, where we had a most lovely and interesting meeting. Much love, peace, union and good feeling prevails among those dear people. I spent nearly a week with them, visiting in the country from house to house preaching and praying for them, ministering comfort and encouragement to them. I think it is good to do this, for while it is a blessing to them it is also a blessing to the minister, because it is obeying the teaching of the Holy word of the Lord.

From Newport I went to Morehead City where I preached at a sister's home two miles from that place and although only a few were assembled, I felt that the words of Jesus were verified "that where two or three were gathered in his name he was in the midst." Preached in Morehead at night at a brother's house. Next day went to Beaufort and stopped with our dear esteemed Sister Annie Gillican. In the evening I visited Sister Lola Garner and found her in feeble state yet trusting in the Lord. "Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him." I visited sister Hooten and another sister Went by mail boat next morning to North River. Was met by Mr. B. B. Lawrence who conveyed me to the church where we had a good and pleasant meeting. Next day to Davis Shore where I met Dear Elder Lundy That night we preached at Brother Clifford Davis to a crowded house of attentive hearers who seemed much interested. Next day went to Nelson Bay where preached in the evening at the church house to a good crowd. Was blessed with good liberty. Saturday and fourth Sunday was at Hunting Quarter, had interesting meeting, all lovely and in peace. Monday went to Portsmouth where preached at night at home of Brother Salters. Visited Tuesday among the members. Some were sick and afflicted. Preached at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at an old brother's house who is paralyzed. He seemed much comforted. At night preached at the meeting house. Enjoyed myself among these brethren, will long remember their love and kindness to me.

Wednesday morning went back and stopped at Hog Island. In the evening preached with interest at the school house. Next day to Cedar Island where I remained until Monday preaching three times. Here I enjoyed myself as I always do. I have been visiting this Island for thirty years. I taught school once at the place and became very much attached to the people. The old heads have most all passed away. Brethren Josiah Daniel, Richard Styron, John L. Godwin and many other precious brethren and sisters have gone to rest. May the Lord bless the surviving younger brethren and sisters to walk in the footsteps of their fathers, steadfast in the faith and doctrine, precepts and example of Christ and the apostles. May all our people everywhere do this, then we will have no divisions among us.

On Monday I went to Jones Bay and up to Goose Creek where I preached. Then over in Hyde County where I visited Beaulab, Rose Bay, Tiney Oak, Mason's Point and on the 3rd Saturday and Sunday the old church at North Lake. At all these meetings much love, peace and union seemed to abound. Elder E. E. Lundy serves and has labored among the churches on all the eastern coast of North Carolina and he has been a great blessing to these people.

From Hyde County I went by steamer up the Aligator river to East Lake, Dare county and preached among the brethren until Thursday, enjoying the meetings well. I went by the mail boat Thursday morning to Manteo, Roanoke Island and spent the night with Mrs. Dr. Cogswell. From Manteo to Kitty Hawk banks where I preached the 4th Saturday and Sunday to a very pleasant and interesting congregation. This is a lovely band of brethren and sisters. From here to Powells Point where I preached one night at Brother Dowdy's. From here by steamer to Elizabeth City and preached at the Primitive Baptist church. Here I spent some time with our dear Brother Aydlette and wife. From here by train to Edenton thence to the three days Union meeting at Concord. Brother Charlie Meades who was with us Saturday and Sunday did some able preaching.

This was a Union meeting indeed and in truth. I never saw more love and good feeling among our people anywhere.

In conclusion I will say this whole tour was one of special interest to me and I think to many others. I want to say to all the brethren and friends I met, that I shall ever remember your love and fellowship and encouraging words of kindness to me. I found peace and love abounding and Oh how good is this. May God continue to bless you all and keep and preserve you in His Heavenly Kingdom of eternal joy and glory above, where we hope through grace to meet ere long where parting will be no more. So farewell in the Lord.

J. E. ADAMS.

Angier, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother:—

I will say to the many sisters, brethren and friends I met at the Bear Creek Association that I am very well, my cold and larceness having left me. I got home Tuesday, May 11th, finding all well and I must say goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life.

I tried to preach at Wadesboro from this text, "Of His fullness have all we received and grace for grace." At the close of this meeting dear brother Green offered me a present in money and I could not take it from him, but before I got far from the church my heart went out in prayer to God for him and his little bunch of friends.

They are still burdened with debt in building their church house, and I felt surely, they that have received grace in their hearts are the ones that feel to give freely, and they that have not received it do not feel the need of grace nor the things of the spirit of God. And before I got to the railroad station this came into my mind, that there are twenty nine churches in the Bear Creek Association besides many sister associations. Now this is the proposition: let every member contribute ten cents to his church and the next church meeting pay it over. Then let every church pay it over to Brother Green, also let the churches in the other associations do the same that will and every church will be blessed and every member will rejoice.

Brother Gold, I had to write this to relieve my mind. At best I am a poor beggar.

I will further state the facts in the case. I did not want to preach there and did not know that sister Edwards had phoned to Brother Green that I would be down on the next train. It was on my mind not to see Brother Green at all, so I went to a private residence near the station got a room and rested until after one o'clock when to my surprise up came Brother Green who said he had made appointments for me to preach at the church at two o'clock. I saw I was not hid although I had gone nowhere to be seen. So I went with him, and my soul was drawn to him and I feel truly that God has blessed his soul above many of his brethren as his work in the cause is a fair proof.

Your brother in love and sweet fellowship,

THOMAS BELL.

Wampee, S. C.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I will write a few lines and renew my subscription to the Landmark again as I don't feel like I can do without it as long as I can pay for it.

I feel grateful to the Giver of all great and good blessings of which I think the communion of saints one; so desire to express my gratitude to the dear brethren and sisters for the editorials and communications contained in our paper. I appreciate it next to my bible, for poor and unworthy as I feel to be these messages of love have gone to my poor cold heart with melting encouraging touch. These communications from poor tired kindred hearts have overcome me with emotions of much gratitude to God my Father and to the dear brethren with a deep sense of my unworthiness.

How comforting to think the love of Christ constrains us to sweetly remember each other although we have never met in this life we hope to meet in the life beyond the grave where I soon shall be. There I hope all my dear kindred to meet and we will have joy complete, and have no trials there to meet nor no foes there to greet. Oh, wont that be a happy meeting? One in Christ complete. There names nor trials wont molest but the grace of Christ will be the test for he knows his bride from all the rest, for she is maim, halt and blind and leans upon his strong arm sublime. Nor has she forgot that healing power from that day forth to this very hour, that made strong to leap and praise and to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb.

I hope you will remember me in your prayers. May God bless you and yours in the future as I believe he has done in the past is my prayer for Christ's sake,

Your sister in hope,

MARY C. JONES.

Dudley, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold and dear brethren and sisters in a precious hope:—

It is on my mind to write to you tonight hoping it is of the Lord and not of self, although I feel to be the least in our Father's kingdom; but my unworthiness lies in Christ. He is the all-sufficient Savior, the chiefest among ten thousand and the One altogether lovely. How good it is to have a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

But of late he seems so far from me; my soul longeth, yea even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. O where is my beloved, my heart is so desolate without him. I am hungry and thirsty and my heart is faint within me, Oh that I might know where to find him. I would come even to his seat. My soul is thirsting for the living bread of life. When will he arise with healing in his wings. My soul is desolate, my harp is hung on the willow. Oh, that the Lord may put a new song in my mouth. I mourn and groan and am as a sparrow upon the housetop. These words have been implanted in my soul, "The sorrow of the world worketh death." O at times this world is death to me. I am so dead to it, but other times I hope I am alive unto Christ and when he appears I hope I shall also appear with him in glory. Whether many or few I want all of my years to be his and may they all be devoted to him.

Brother Gold, I often think of you as being a blessed minister of the gospel and may the Lord bless you and spare you to live long to comfort and cheer his sainted ones. Pray for me when it goes well with you.

I am so faint and weary by the way that without the Lord I am wretched though with him I am blessed. O that I had wings like a dove. I would fly away and be at rest; that sweet rest that belongs to the people of the true and living God.

From one who is heart-broken and faint but still trusting in our beloved Saviour, MAGGIE A. STATON.

Bethel, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother:—

The parable of the ten virgins in the 25th chapter of Matthew, has been so continuously on my mind for many days. I feel constrained, and I hope it is by God's power, to try to tell to the children of the Kingdom of Heaven what I hope, trust and cant help but believe that God has given me, trusting Him to guide my mind and pen and to give me light and liberty. I tremble with my heart full and my eyes dim with tears when I think of my inability to describe what I think I see and feel concerning this wonderful subject.

But I will trust Him from whom all blessings flow, believing He has impressed this on my mind. Oh! servants of God how careful you should be to "rightly divide the word of truth" etc. For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound who shall prepare himself for battle. When ye shall see the things spoken of in the 24th chapter of Matthew. Do we not see many of them? "Then the kingdom of heaven shall be likened to ten virgins which took their ten lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom. Five of them were wise and five foolish." Who are these virgins? "The church of Christ and the church of anti-Christ." The five wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps, and the oil here represents the grace of God, the lamps the open confession of Christ put on by baptism and the communion of bread and wine and the vessels the natural body containing the lamp and oil. There was a midnight cry, a time of great darkness spoken of in the 24th chapter of Matthew. Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye forth to meet him. They all rose and trimmed their lamps, and the oil here represents the grace of God, the lamps the open confession of Christ put on by baptism and the communion of bread and wine and the vessels the natural body containing the lamp and oil. There was a midnight cry, a time of great darkness spoken of in the 24th chapter of Matthew. Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye forth to meet him. They all rose and trimmed their lamps, (professions) and to my mind what a great trimming of the lamps there is now to be, and it must come through great tribulation, such as is spoken of in the 24th chapter of Matthew.

But the church of God must be purged before she can come into the presence of God ready, therefore the lamps must be trimmed. Both the wise and the foolish are slumbering and sleeping now—the time of great darkness is fast dawning. They all rose and trimmed their lamps but the foolish said to the wise, give us of your oil for our lamps are gone out, profession without possession is abomination to God, but the wise said not so lest we have not enough for ourselves and for you, but go ye rather to them that sell and buy for yourselves. They went, where? To my mind to the men they had hired to talk for them every Sabbath day. When they returned, did they have anything? Nothing according to scripture, for they said, Lord, Lord open to us. But Jesus said, verily I say unto you, I know you not. Do you believe he ever said that to his own children, those for whom he died and to whom he had manifested himself? I answer no. While the foolish had gone to buy the bridegroom came, and those who were ready went in with him to the marriage and the door was shut.

Oh to be robed and ready is the longing desire and continual prayer of my poor sick soul. We are told in God's holy word to put off the old man with his deeds and put on the new man Christ Jesus. By a well ordered life and godly conversation, trim our professions and walk no more with the world in its wicked deceitful ways, but earnestly desire to follow the week and lowly Jesus.

When Satan led Jesus on top of a high mountain and showed him all the beauties and glories of this vain world and told him they belonged to him and he would give them all to him if he would fall down and worship him, did Jesus worship Satan? Oh, no, there was every temptation common to mankind placed before our Savior at one time, but he said, "It is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve." Are we worshipping our God or are we worshipping those things that must soon fade away? Judge ye, did our God ever set an example of pride of any kind? Ye cannot find it between the lids of the bible. Now does any child of God of understanding think for a moment that God ever said to one of his children. I know you not. Oh no. Even to Peter who cursed and swore and denied him bitterly, Jesus said, Peter feed my sheep and lambs. 'Tis a hard saying, who can hear it, "But the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded, even so come Lord Jesus, Amen."

Affectionately,

BETTIE Z. WHITLEY.

Elder P. D. Gold:—

I send you for publication the proceedings of our Conference held in the church house at Coats, Harnett County, North Carolina, for the purpose of organizing a church.

A large concourse of people assembled and it seemed to me I can say in truth that the Lord's people were gathered in one heart and in one mind. The brethren in the ministry were greatly blessed with light and liberty to preach the gospel of peace and glad tidings of good things. Much love was manifested.

How good and how pleasant for brethren to dwell together in the unity of spirit and in the bonds of peace.

My mind was impressed and became much burdened to build a church house at Coats and make the Primitive or Old School

Baptists a present of it also one acre lot. I tried to examine myself for sometime in regard to the impression for fear it might be fleshly. In the examination I could not feel that it was for any praise or reward from any person on earth, but alone in love, if not deceived, for the precious and glorious cause of our Lord and Savior and for the benefit of the dearest people to me on earth. And I want to say to the dear Elders, brethren and sisters that the preaching and the presence of you all was one of the joys of my life and I wish to say to the many dear friends who were present that it filled my soul with joy to see so many manifesting such a feeling of interest in the preaching. I hope it may be as bread cast upon the waters to be received after many days.

Elders W. A. Simpkins and D. A. Johnson were with us but did not come in time for the conference.

I extend a general invitation to the ministering brethren and will be glad for you to visit us and preach for us at any time when so impressed. Also hope the brethren, sisters and friends will not forget us but remember to visit us again and we will do all the good we can.

May God's blessing rest and abide with us all that we may manifest to each other an humble, loving, lamb-like spirit is my desire and prayer for Christ's sake.

Yours in bonds of christian love I hope.

J. T. COATS.

FLOOD—GRACE.

Brother Reuben Deal requests my view of Gen. 6:1-8.

This portion of the word of God presents much matter of deep concern to man. Soon after his creation man begins to prove the wickedness of his nature by what he does: for ones deeds show what his nature is.

There was great difference between wicked Cain and righteous Abel. When another son was born in place of Abel then the sons of God, who were the sons of Enos, saw that the daughters of men were fair; then they chose such of them as appealed to and clamored their lust for wives. "The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose." Soon giants, men of renown, mighty hunters, men noted for their daring wickedness, multiplied and wickedness filled the land. For the imagination of man's heart was fully set in him to do evil. When men think they can do as they please, and robbery and oppression are practiced, and there is no fear of before man's eyes then they will make gain their god, and wrong and oppress the poor. These things the word of God condemns.

The true principles of righteous living, such as loving your neighbor, dealing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with thy God is good and acceptable in the sight of God.

Great wickedness calls down great wrath from heaven. While God is long suffering and merciful, yet his wrath is covenanted from heaven against all unrighteousness and ungodliness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness. It grieved the Lord God at his heart that he had made man. It repented the Lord that he had made man. In what sense did he repent—not as a man repents seeing he has done something wrong. It is no pleasure of the Lord to destroy man. That is He would not do this unless there is good cause for it. He has no delight in the death of the sinner. But the Lord Jesus must be put to grief for the sin of man, and here in the destruction of mankind by a flood of water is fore-shown that all the billows and waves of God's wrath against sin must roll over the head of Jesus, and he must be put to grief in order that He should be exalted a prince and a Savior, and that repentance and the remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations. Hence in this way sin should be blotted out, and iniquities should be no more remembered. And so the Ark with all that God had chose to save He had shut in that Ark which rose above the waters of destructive wrath, and lifted up all that God had shut in the ark, so that while the law transgressed destroyed the wicked, yet that same law fulfilled in Jesus upholds all whom God justifies, and Jesus lifted up, prefigured by the ark rising above the angry waters, sets forth the risen Lord Jesus. The like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us, not the putting away the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience towards God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

As when Noah after the flood built an altar to God and sacrificed, and God smelt the sweet savor and said I will no more destroy the earth with a flood of water, and made a covenant with all flesh, and with the beasts of the earth, that he would no more destroy the earth with a flood of water, and hath put that in the heart of every natural man, so that no man can believe that God will destroy the earth with a flood of water: and He has put his bow in the cloud after the rain as a witness that He would never again destroy the earth with a flood of water, thereby typifying the covenant of grace which he has put in the heart of every one to whom He has revealed himself so that they are established in the grace of God, which brings salvation, and know that it is God that saves.

Peter tells us that as the heavens of old and the earth was overflowed perished by water: but the heavens and the earth which are now by the same word are kept in store reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men; and that while God is long suffering to usward, not willing that any of us should perish; yet that day will come as a thief in the night. Like it was in the days of Noah; for they were eating and drinking, until Noah entered into the ark, when the flood came and they were all destroyed: so shall it also be in the days of the coming of the Son of man.

Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved what manner of person ought ye to be in all manner of holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat.

Nevertheless we according to his promise look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2nd Pet. 3:11-13.

This is yet in the future. The element of water which destroyed the world in Noah's day was stored away and kept for that purpose: so the element of fire by which the world shall be destroyed is reserved against that day. When God speaks the word it shall be done.

When God destroys the old He brings to view something better. There shall be new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. How good it is if we find favor and grace in the eyes of the Lord so that when he looks upon us it shall be a look of love.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother in Christ:—

Enclosed please find remittance for the Landmark. I know I should have sent it before as it is past due, but it seemed like other things have been in the way so that I couldn't do as I wanted to. But I hope it will be alright with you. I believe I love to pay my honest debts because when I owe a debt and pay it I am then free from that debt and can feel as though I never owed it.

A man told me once that his debts were his best servants, so I say that every man should strickly try to pay his debts and especially Primitive Baptists. I love for them to be truthful and honest in all things.

Find enclosed $2.50 which pays for the Landmark for one year and eight months. Please credit me with this amount and thank you very much. I have been taking the paper for about twenty years and don't feel I have ever missed any money paid for it. It has been a great comfort to me also others around me.

I am your brother in Christ I hope,

T. F. HOLIDIA.

REGENERATION.

Degeneration is decaying, lapsing, falling away. Nations degenerate in their standing and finally decay. There is no nation famous in ancient times for its strength and courage or its prosperity that has retained such qualities to the present time. Individuals at their best estate are altogether vanity. For man at his best estate is vanity. If the individuals are thus weak what should prevent the aggregate or lump from this corrupt tendency?

This applies to the offspring of Adam the first who is of the earth earthy. But there is another generation. A new creation or regeneration, a people formed to show forth the praises of Him who has called them out of darkness into the marvelous light of the Lord. Ye who sometimes were darkness are now light in the Lord. This is the seed counted for a generation that shall serve him. The Spirit of God moved upon the waters and order came forth. That Spirit furnished the heavens and the earth, and quickens the dead.

By the process of life—giving or multiplication in nature we see that everything begets in its own likeness, and in that sense there is nothing new under the sun. Of this life it may be said, dying thou shalt die. How soon it decays and perishes. But there is a new life of an altogether different order and nature, and this life is eternal. He that hath the Son of God hath everlasting life. Because the Lord lives he shall live also. The mysterious method and process by which this is accomplished shows how God and man so far apart by the transgression of man and eternal holiness of the Lord, are brought into the unity of the one God and Father of whom are all things, and the one Lord Jesus by whom are all things and we by him. He, Jesus the Son of God, became as one of us in the suretyship of the one living for the many and dying for the many, so that by this one they all live, being found in him, not having their own righteousness of the law, but being clothed in the righteousness of Jesus they are complete in him wanting nothing. As he is so are they. You hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and in sins, wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world.

This divine quickening is the most mysterious and glorious in its operation and effects, manifesting the glorious operation of the blood of Christ.

This regeneration or the making all things new, causing old things to pass away, and a seed to serve him which is holy, shows the work of the Spirit of God in earth which is holy. God thus dwells in men and walks in them. This people has to be formed for himself, and they shall show forth his praise.

This generation shall never die. For that which is born of God can never die, but hath everlasting life. For the life of Jesus, the second Adam, the quickening Spirit to be manifested in the offspring of Adam the first, so that the kingdom of God dwells with men is the marvel and wonder of the age. God manifest in the flesh. For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and his name is wonderful, counselor, the Mighty God, the everlasting Father, and the government shall be on his shoulder.

In the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, who was crucified or delivered for our offences and raised for our justification, we have the pledge and guarantee of the resurrection of the dead, and that He shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, this mortal shall put on immortality.

What a miracle of grace. Then shall we be satisfied when we awake with his likeness.

LOVE.

According to the divine word which cannot lie love is the greatest of all principles. God is love. The law of God, which is holy, spiritual and good, requires love as the fulfilling of that law. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor. He that loveth is born of God. It is the one fruit of the Spirit of God that never fails, nor decays, nor thinks evil, nor sins, nor ever dies. It never believes a lie, never holds to false doctrine, never puts a false construction in Scripture, never falsely accuses another. It never tries to place one portion of Scripture above another, nor endeavors to make a portion of Scripture more important than another. It brings the utmost liberty without license to its possessor. It never covets that which belongs to another. It never seeks to sow discord among brethren or divide them. It never rejoices in the downfall of another, or in his calamity. It is glad that God destroys the wicked, and rejoices that Jesus makes an end of sin. It greatly rejoices that all iniquity shall stop her mouth. It does not desire to judge and man, nor to have dominion over any one. It desires that God should rule in all things because his will is perfect. It is never so happy as when it is reconciled to God, and truly prays that his will should be done.

Happiness does not lie in the haunts of the wicked. No amount of money nor worldly promotion can make one happy. The meek and lowly spirit of Jesus makes one content and joyful if he is in the lion's den, or the burning, fiery furnace. At God's right hand there are pleasures forever more.

Charity takes no pleasure in carnal contentions or stirrings. When one earnestly contends for the faith once delivered to the saints he has the earnest or foretaste, the sweetness of faith that works by love. He holding fast that which God has given him. He is kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

He that has the love of God dwells in the house of love, the courts of our God, nor does he accuse any brother of wrong, nor wrong another, nor does he cloak himself under any false view of doctrine.

There are many sects and much contention and confusion among mankind. The cry of peace, peace when confusion prevails among those that profess to be the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. How little forbearance there is. One proclaims his views, and while professing great ignorance and humility, yet has no real love for those that do not see as he does. One says he is unworthy of the least of all God's mercies, yet if he is opposed and condemned instead of bearing it with much long suffering he resents and plans and contrives to get up with a party to sustain himself, and break down those opposed to him. The test of brotherly kindness is forbearance, forgiveness and long suffering. If I believe that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose, do I prove that I believe this by fretting and murmuring, and by angry contention against others that do not see as I think I see? He that makes full proof of his case shows that the word of God dwells richly in him, and he lays aside all malice and guile and evil speaking, and as a new born babe desires the sincere milk of the word that he may grow thereby. This man grows up into Jesus Christ in all things.

A man may preach Christ of envy or of contention and strive in the flesh, for the mastery, and may in the letter obtain the victory over another when the love of God is not in him. For he that preaches Christ of envy does not preach him of good will or of love.

When I received the Lord Jesus, or when he first appeared to me as my Saviour, I thought I never would have any more trouble. All things were lovely and every thing praised God. As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord so walk ye in him. How humble you were then. How glorious He was. One of the things the Lord held against the church at Ephesus was they had left the first love. They were commanded to repent and do the first works. As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord so walk ye in Him. Dwell in him. Put on charity which is the bond of perfectness. Perfect love casteth out all fear. When you have perfect love you trust God in everything, you know He cannot do wrong, and you rejoice in all He does. For you know all He does is right. Why should vile man call God's doctrine or judgments in question? What a broad place is love. What freedom it brings? It removes the desire to do wrong. One whose heart is full of the love of God, lives as a lovely child in the freshness of joy and peace.

Such will strive for peace and seek the things that make for peace, whereby one may edify another. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in love. The anointing of our glorious High Priest perfumes the whole body of the church, spreading the spirit of his protection, shielding love even to the feet of this blessed body.

P. D. G.

VEILED.

We cannot see into the future. But how active is our imagination. One thinks if I had done this, or not done that, it would have been better for me. Lord, if thou hadst been here our brother had not died, said the sisters of Lazarus, and they said it to Him who upholds all things by the word of his power. If we could or would do so and so then that would change the current of events we think. But truly the current of events controls us. Are we not affected, tossed about, disturbed, or comforted much more by things that come to pass than events are controlled or caused by us?

Man has in him the seeds and the germs of self-conceit. He is a god to himself, saying I will do so and so. Nor does he feel or consider that he is dependent on Him who brings to pass all his purpose and does all his pleasure.

Jesus was absent of purpose while Lazarus was sick. How good to feel that there are no mistakes of God. He works all things according to the counsel of his own will. He said to his disciples, I am glad for your sakes that I was not there to the interest that ye might believe. What is more important to a man than that he believe in the Lord Jesus? What sheds abroad in one the love, peace and glory of the Lord so much as his believing that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, for that brings him to the benefits of that gracious and blessed power of God?

What a blessed thing to have confidence in God. It brings us into the realm of peace and love. If we distrust any one that mars and spoils the feeling of assurance and quiet which is necessary for us to have in order to be in that blessed condition, which is free from all fear, doubt or misgiving. One that has confidence in another rests in his word or presence in proportion to the ability he thinks that one has in whom he is trusting. Now, if one believes in the Father and the Son, truly what is there to mar or disturb his peace? God keeps him in perfect peace whose mind is staid on Him.

If one has faith or confidence in God according to his divine character, what should he fear? What can befall him contrary to God's will? Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

If I have faith in God shall I fear any evil thing overtaking me, or harming me? Faith works by love. Then if I love God how can I feel that anything will harm me.

To distrust or doubt God shows an evil heart in me that forbids true happiness. Perfect love casts all fear out, but fear has torment. If I have that evil nature in me I have enmity in my heart that always opposes the perfect will of God, or fails to enter into the joy of the Lord.

There is nothing that can supply the place and works of faith. Without faith it is impossible to please God. He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him.

In the common events of life we prove our destitution of faith in the Lord God. If we have money we are gluttonous in meats and drinks, and distress ourselves, and take a lot of medicine, and go to this place or that one, go to some watering place. Our doctors tell us a change is necessary for our health. If we are very poor and therefore are unable to go off, or make any change, but must remain at home, and eat common, plain food, we live as long as those that travel much. You will find as old men among the poor and such as have never gone to places of recreation or health resorts as you will find anywhere.

To abide in your callings and dwell where God assigns you, to be content with your lot, and serve the Lord to the end is as well as any one can do.

Why should a man cease to do the things the Lord has commanded him as long as he is able?

This is an age of diversion, amusement, foolishness, spending money, throwing away time. The days are evil, living hard with many, provisions are high and living very expensive. There are too many eaters for the workers. I am not opposed to eating. But Paul wrote he that will not work shall not eat. There are too few producers for the consumers. It is said that now farmers cannot get hands enough to gather their crops. How would it be if men generally would labor? Look at the waste land in the country. If all the lands were tilled surely there would not be laborers enough to harvest the crops. In towns there are thousands of men that sport all the times, playing games that do not profit any one, but that do harm.

If we generally were employed at some useful labor we would be far more serviceable to the country, and have as good health. Do not think that labor will shorten one's life. Men live as long who labor according to God's word as any other class of men, and honor their station more. It is my desire to labor as long as I am able. Work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

P. D. G.

CHARACTER.

What is character?

Writers of fiction, such as novelists, draw on their imagination for data or ideas which they weave into a character according to their ideal. They construct such a creature as suits their view, or such, if they write for admiration of others, as they think the public will receive with joy, and that will bring joy, and that will bring them fame and money.

The most individual and most original writers of this class interpret their own views and thoughts which they embody in what they call character.

Historians narrate the saying and doings of nations in their organized acts as legislative bodies, or courts of law, the battles of their armies, and their other actions as the organized force of the nation. Biographers treat upon the lives of individuals showing their traits, motives, purposes, environments, reasons for their conduct, and the consequences of their doings. The aggregate of the influences affecting and controlling them, the nature of their motives and purposes, the sum of their doing with the impression left on the world they call character.

There is another class of writers and speakers who are guided—not by man's reasonings, or imaginations, or fanciful creations, who do not dig their views and utterances out of their own thoughts, but who write or speak as they are directed by that preparation of the heart in man, and answer of the tongue which are of the Lord. Hence what they utter is not a vision out of their own heart, but they utter their words before the Lord. Hence they never err nor blunder. They do not occupy the standpoint of a natural man, but they dwell in Mt. Zion, the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem. They walk about Zion, and consider her palaces, and mark well her bulwarks. Nor do they seek earthly scenes to describe, nor search for earthly readers or admirers to receive their utterances. Their message is to the flock of God, and their audiences are the inhabitants of the heavenly city. They feed the flock of God which He hath purchased with his own blood.

There never has been any mistake made, nor any false estimate by any man guided by the Spirit of God in any prophesy or utterance relating to any man or any event, whether the man was then born or not, or however unforeseen the event, or however remote. Because nothing is hid from Him who moves these servants of the Most High God to declare that which shall be.

Whether relating to individuals or the nations great or small all they utter is true, nor do they give flattering titters. They know the vanity of the man. They fear God. Nor are they forward to thrust their views on the public. Feeling their insufficiency to declare truth of God, and knowing that all else is lies and vanity, and shall perish as chaff, hence they have no desire to teach or proclaim such trash. They are not hasty to utter the weighty matter of the Lord's Works. They are slow of speech and dull of hearing, and dark in their understanding, yet they know the truth and love it, and will contend earnestly for it.

Blest with the faith of the Lord Jesus they have confidence in God who cannot lie, and they know that it shall be as he declares, for not a word of God shall ever fall to the ground, or return to Him void. Knowing the terrors of the Lord they persuade men, knowing God's faithfulness they would encourage the feeble of the flock to call on Him and trust Him.

To discern between and error to reject what is wrong and cleave to the truth to preaching nothing among men, but Jesus Christ and Him crucified is their one great aim and purpose.

While men pleasers aim to incorporate all the inventions of men all their enterprises and measures and construct a theory of religion in which all institutions of earth are branded as sacred and sanctified to the service of God so all the things of earth are joined to the Lord and their Solomon has wives and concubines many the true followers of Jesus hold only Christ as their husband and head and that his bride is one and every thing else is rejected by the true followers who know nothing among men but Jesus Christ and Him crucified He is the one perfect character they preach and they are all one in Him.

But this causes them to be hated of men unpopular and rejected old fogies behind the times for the Bible is a dead letter to the worldly religionist and the bodies of God's servants now are dead in the streets of Sodom or Egypt where our Lord was crucified.

P. D. G.

OCCASION SERVES.

"And let it be, when these signs are come unto thee, that thou do as occasion serve thee; for God is with thee," 1st Sam. 10:70.

The common notion of mankind is that men bring about their circumstances, occasion, surroundings or opportunities. But from a Scriptural standpoint it seems to be otherwise. It is not in the nature of men to create things: but to some is given an understanding to use occasions to accomplish noted and important works.

The chain of events or causes and effects following that furnish opportunities or occasion for action thus presenting themselves to supply certain ones qualified to grasp these opportunities and use them for great results, and thus bring out and show what is in these people—that other people do not see or are not aroused by them—separates them from the masses.

This also may be true of men possessed of evil desires or evil tendencies. One is ambitious to attain and wield power and perceives the opportunity that offers him what his nature covets, and he at once acts upon it. Here is one seized with lust of riches, and he sees an opportunity to enrich himself, where a man not cursed with that lust is not tempted to put forth any effort to take hold of this opportunity. The lust in him is the active principle of his nature, and greedily spies on this opportunity and grasps it. For the leading lusts or principle of a man's nature is on the watch tower looking out as a mighty hunter for this coveted game, and will at once set his dogs in pursuit.

Saul was chosen of God to be the king of Israel. Samuel is told to anoint him. After foretelling certain events which will transpire he tells him when these signs are come unto thee that thou do as occasion serve thee: for God is with thee.

Did Saul cause a single one of these signs to come to him? No. He did not create or control a single one of them. Then he did not furnish or cause or bring about this occasion or opportunity. But God controlled these things which Samuel foretold, and wisdom was given to Saul to act as occasion served. For when God gives wisdom it leads its possessor to act with discretion.

If the devil enters into a man as he did into Judas then that man will pervert or abuse an occasion to act out the wicked principles of wickedness. Satan knew where Jesus resorted, and he went to that place with the wicked intent of delivering Jesus into the hands of wicked men. He was the fit character to perpetrate this wicked act. He acted out what was in him when the occasion or time arrived.

We see a few men very successful in enterprises. We think it a matter of chance. We say they were born lucky. Was there not given such a capacity to use these occasions that present themselves, for there is in them a power that successfully uses such occasions. They do not enter into the mind of an ordinary man. There is one George Washington born for using the chain of events that were stretched out in the revolutionary that he is qualified to use for the achievement of our liberty.

Now there is shaping, urging providence that goes before and brings to pass such a chain of circumstances, and also raises up and endows the man that is made competent to act as occasion serves, and do the very things needful to accomplish what the occasion holds in its womb and demands shall be born and nurtured into being for this occasion.

If one filled with wisdom never to blunder rises up to use every thing as occasion demands where would be his failure? Where there is found one thus capable of acting is not the occasion always at hand for this emergency.

The Providence of God works in such as are chosen and ordained to bring forth fruit, and these serve God in the kingdom of his Son doing His will.

Chief and greatest of all is Jesus Christ who used every event, every circumstance, every incident of life, every enemy, every opposition for the glory of God, and the fulfillment of the purpose of his Father.

It is said of Him he did all things well. He did not fail, nor was He discouraged. He showed every thing in its true character, and built the church of God that shall never be destroyed.

OBITUARIES

APPOINTMENTS, ADS. MISCELLANEOUS.

VIRGINIA LEE COX.

In fond remembrance of my only beloved sister in the flesh and hope in the spirit. She was the daughter of Robert H. and Nancie C. Dickerson, was born April 9, 1875, and died July 11, 1908, making her stay on earth 33 years, 3 months and two days.

She was raised by strict Methodist parents and sent to Sunday school. When she was 16 years old she professed religion and joined the church and lived with them until it pleased God to show her the right church. She joined the Primitive Baptists and was baptised the second Sunday in October, 1895, by Elder Frank Stone and lived a faithful member until death.

She was married to Mr. George Cox Feb. 20, 1901, to which union was born four children. Her baby died just one week before she did. Her sickness was untold, but all was done for her two doctors, a loving husband, children and friends could do, but all in vain. The Lord had called, "Come home."

She was a good wife, neighbor and child and everybody loved her. Her sufferings were untold, but she bore them with patience and was ready to go. She said all she minded was the sting of death.

I was there on Sunday before she died the next Saturday night. She talked sweetly to me and said she was going to rest and we are sure she has. She died slapping her hands and smiling and seemed to be so happy.

She was buried on the 13th of July at the Gilliam burying ground in Alamance where she will await that day when Christ will come and call His little ones home when we all hope to meet her, where sickness, sorrow and pain is felt no more, and we ask the prayers for her three little children that she has left behind to be cared for, also we ask the prayers of all God's people for her old mother and brothers, that they may be led in the right way and be prepared to meet her in heaven around the throne of God.

Brother, please publish this in the Landmark so her friends, brethren and sisters in the church may know of her death.

J. N. SHEARIN.

It is with joy and sorrow mixed that I have to write of the death of my dear brother, J. N. Shearin, who departed this life July 12, 1909. He was 73 years old and had been in bad health for a long time. Often he told me he was only waiting for the Lord to call him and that he wanted to be resigned to his will. And all who knew him will say he was and that he walked his life out in the steps of our dear Saviour.

He was a deacon and clerk of the church at Rocky Swamp for a long time. When he became so feeble he could not attend any longer Brother Henry Warren was chosen to succeed him. Brother Warren held his hand when he died, and he told me he had never seen anyone die as he did—like one going to sleep—and I feel that he has gone to sleep in the arms of his blessed Master.

I lived with him and his dear wife when I was a boy and knew nothing of the troubles the children of God had to bear, but I could see that they had a love I had never had, and it would make me feel badly when I would think that sometime I had to die.

They were in the Missionary church first and were in that church at the time I was given a hope and it was at his house. I also joined them, but could not stand it and never did commune with them. So after I left and joined at the Falls, mother, Brother, Jim and his wife joined at Rocky Swamp.

Now, Brother Gold, that was one bright day for me. When they could all see as I did I felt that I had never loved them before. While he never had any children of his own, the little boy given him proved a faithful son. He is there now, has raised a large family and Brother Jim's dear wife has a good home.

Brother Gold, pray for his wife. She is three or four years older than Brother Jim was, and her health is very bad, but she is strong in the love of Christ.

His loving brother,

J. D. SHEARIN.

The next session of the Dutchville Union will be held with Surls church, near Roxboro, N. C., on Saturday and 5th Sunday in August, 1909. Elders, brethren, sisters and friends are cordially invited.

JOHN THOMAS MURRAY.

On the 25th of February, 1909, the death angel of Heaven visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Murray and took away their darling little son, John Thomas Murray. He was sick for two weeks when our good Lord in His own good time saw fit to take him up to Heaven. But oh, isn't it hard for us to part from those we love. He was so sweet and cheerful that it seemed to me from the first that he was only given to us for a short while. We know that Jeus says, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

He was one year, one month and seventeen days old when our Saviour called him.

All was done for him that two good physicians, grandparents, father and mother could do, but none could stay the cold hand of death.

Little Johnnie was never a child to laugh much and never seemed satisfied at home, but always wanted to go. O, it was hard to see him suffer so and no one able to relieve his pain. It was heartrending to see the father, mother and grandparents grieve for their darling baby for they loved him so much, and it was so hard for them to give him up. But he has gone and we are left to mourn for him.

The little babe has gone to rest,
To reign with God forever blest,
His little tongue will always praise
A Saviour's love redeeming grace.

Little Johnnie he has left us,
Left us, yes forever more;
But we hope to meet our darling,
On that bright and happy shore.

Lonely is our house today,
And sad our once happy home,
Since our darling babe has left us
Here to forever roam.

But oh, a brighter home than ours has been provided for him, and there in Heaven, little Johnnie, we hope to be with you.

Written by his grandfather at the request of his mother.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will ascend to the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for his paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold:

Some time ago I saw in a paper published by Elder Sills, of Savannah, Ga., a statement that the Lord had commanded them to go out and compel them to come in. Since then, I have felt much impressed to write some on the parables of our Lord in Luke, 14:16-24. "Then said he unto him, a certain man made a great supper, and bade many: and sent his servant at supper time to say unto them that were bidden, come for all things are now ready. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground and I must needs go and see it. I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife and therefore I cannot come. So that servant came and showed his Lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry, said to this servant, go out quickly into the lanes and streets of the city and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. And the servant said, Lord it is done as thou hast commanded and yet there is room. And the Lord said unto the servant, go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in that my house may be filled. For I say unto you that none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper."

Doubtless our Lord was illustrating his work in his kingdom. From their earliest existence the Lord had sent his messengers to the Jews and told them of the coming of the Messiah in the world. His character and the character of his ministry was fully pointed out by these servants. Those Jews were the people of God nationally. Of them all the prophets were chosen and to them were the prophets sent. Thus the Jews were those who were represented by those who were bidden.

At the time the gospel feast was ready our Lord Jesus was sent unto the Jews. In John, 1st chapter they are known as "His Own." John the Baptist was his forerunner, his porter, the voice of one crying in the wilderness, etc. He was not the servant represented in parable, but one testifying of that servant. We notice that the same servant was sent out at each time and that the word "servant" is in the singular number and therefore cannot be the twelve apostles nor the ministry. He can be none other than Christ as filled with the Holy Ghost then and Christ as manifested by the Holy Ghost now.

This servant knows his master's will and his people and all that he must do and he has power to do all that was and is required of him.

When he went preaching among the Jews his message was one of information: "Come for all things are now ready." This was not an invitation but only information that the things which had been told to them should come to them were now, here and ready. They were not poor and needy. One had land and his wisdom was short for he had bought it and had not seen it and must go now. The same thing is true of the man who had bought the oxen. These had wealth and therefore were not in need for anyone else to provide for them. The other had a lawful excuse to not come and did not ask further than to say, "I cannot come." He had all the comfort he wanted and had it in his own home; why should he go to that feast? Under the law when one married a wife he was given one year to stay with and comfort her. He could not be put into military or other public service, therefore he didn't ask to be excused, but absolutely refused to go. Had he been desolate and hungry for the gospel feast the law would have been no screen for him.

Here is where the anger of our God is shown against the Jews. They had no faith in him, for they had now rejected the Son whom he had sent unto them, and to know the Father was to know the Son for the one was in the other and all that the Son did he did by the Father. The Father worketh hitherto and I work, said the Son.

Here these Jews were broken off through unbelief and their fall was the salvation of the Gentiles.

But there were some among them who were ready, watching, waiting. Where were they? In the streets and lanes of the city. They were poor and afflicted. Had nothing to support or none to comfort them.

When a servant was sent unto them he was not sent to give information and say, "Come." He was sent out with power to bring in hither those poor. He could not bring in the others. Why? Because he must do the Father's will and he could not do more nor less. He was given power by the Father only to give information to them. To have told them anything but what the master of the supper had said he would not have been a faithful servant and minister of his word. When he had delivered the message there was nothing more for him to do but to return and report. When he is sent out to these others he has power to bring them into the feast and they were ready to receive him. As many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God. Being sons they were heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ Jesus, this faithful servant.

He now comes and says unto the master, "It is done as thou hast commanded and there yet is room. This same faithful servant is sent out again. The children of God are not trusted in the hands of any but the Good Shepherd for the sheep are his. To whom is he sent? To just such as he brought in from among the Jews only they are the other sheep. He said, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them I also must bring, and there shall be one fold and they must eat together of the same supper. The house (not houses) must be filled.

This same servant is sent out the third time, but not with simple information. He was sent out with power: "Go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." There must not be a member short, but its body must be complete, perfect. Therefore, he said, "All that my Father giveth me shall come unto me." It is not left optional with them. They shall come unto me. Why shall they come? Because he has power to compel them to come. That was the commandment he had received of his Father and with that power he went forth conquering and to conquer.

One said, there are some things that God cannot and will not do. He will not come in and sup with us unless we first set our hearts in order and invite him in. Another said, Christ cannot and will not save us without our consent. Another said, God will not save anyone who does not first seek salvation of him. Now all these are of the same spirit and the same class and all deny the power of Almighty God as manifest in his servant to whom he had intrusted the care of his sheep.

"One said, "there is a people who believe that what is to be will be if it never comes to pass. That people should be very careful for the devil is now standing ready to take them." He referred to the Primitive Baptists by calling their name. This was a willful slander. We believe that what is to be will be and that it as sure to come to pass as that God is God and rules in the armies of Heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth.

This servant is sent out not as an inviter to come to his supper, but with power to compel them to come. To whom is he sent? To the other sheep whom he has among the Gentiles.

Mephibosheth was compelled to go up to the king's table because he was in a land of no pasture. The man who journeyed from Jerusalem to Jerico was compelled to go to the inn for his injuries were such he had no power to refuse. Therefore there was nothing he could do, but to submit himself into the hands of the Samaritan. (The Old Fellows in their caricature of this parable would have their members believe that that poor man lay there and sought help from the priest, the Levite and the Samaritan, praying to each one of them for help. This is a miserable misrepresentation of the word of the Lord and it is dishonoring to God. Like many other of their caricatures it is stealing the very livery of Heaven to serve the devil in.)

In the work of the Lord in compelling his people to come into his feast he shows them their poverty and wretchedness and makes them willing, yes, anxious to come. So anxious that they repent of their sins, mourn their wretchedness and call on the Lord for mercy and for food. They must come or die and die they cannot and must not for the word of the Lord has been spoken to them and that word is spirit and life and must be obeyed. He compels them to come and they come with great gladness of heart and praise to him who has thus wrought in them to his praise and their salvation. Thus the house of the Master is filled.

Ministers tell their congregation that every man and every woman is bidden to come to his feast. If this is true the damnation of the whole human race is sure and the blood of Christ is all in vain, for he said that none of those men who were hidden shall taste of my supper. Then in another place he said, except you eat of my flesh and drink of my blood you have no life in you. This fully seals the matter. None of those who were bidden shall eat and unless they eat they have no life. His flesh is meat indeed and his blood is drink indeed, and they that come to this feast shall live forever and none come but those who are given to him of the Father and all that the Father giveth to him shall come, for power is given to him to compel them to come.

Then he has promised to raise them up again at the last day. He would not have said "again" if it were not a second time. He raised them here by his spirit and keeps them ready to be revealed in the last time, and at that time, and in that last day, and in the hour he has appointed, and in the twinkling of an eye he will call them all up in one general resurrection of the body—not flesh and bones as we are now in the material state—but like unto the glorious body of our Lord to be with him, to see him as he is and he like him in His Holy and blessed eternal kingdom of light, where there are no more to persecute nor molest in anyway, but to enjoy an eternal separation from every evil thing and a perpetual dwelling with all that is lovely and good and spiritual forever and forever, Amen.

Yours in this blessed hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

My Dear Sister Laura Reed:

No, I have not forgotten you in the time that has elapsed since last I wrote. I have thought of you many times, not out of charity, but because you became very dear in our short acquaintance. So of course I am glad to hear from you again.

I have just finished reading your dear letter over again and it is pleasant to know you had not forgotten me, but still remembered the poor, crippled "shut in."

I suffered greatly through the winter especially at night, so I could get no good rest, and slept very little through many weary, weary weeks. I did not have so much pain through the day. At one time this spring I had an acute attack in my right arm and for several days I could not use it at all. My niece had to brush my hair and help me about dressing, and it was a sad thought to think that I might not be able to write or sew anymore. So you may know I was thankful when the pain was relieved and I could use my arm again. And since the warm weather I am very much improved in every way. So last Sunday, July 4, I was able to be helped into a carriage and went to meeting for the first time since last September, and you may be sure it was good to once more hear the "joyful sound." During the association I could not go at all and I did not feel very reconciled to it as I desired so much to go, but we entertained a goodly company, so I saw many of our dear Baptist friends, and as I managed to get down to supper sometimes I heard some pleasant conversation.

Two dear young sisters were baptized last Sunday which was a very pleasant occasion, and my brother had liberty in preaching from the 23d Psalm. If I were like him I might tell over some of the good things, but I can appreciate them better than I can repeat.

Since I have been shut in I have heard one sermon told with great interest and satisfaction. Sister Tomlinson, an aunt to Horace Lefferts, hurried home from meeting calling to see me one Sunday, seemingly overjoyed at what she had heard, and she told over the sermon in such an animated manner that I almost felt that I had been there. She is over 70 years old.

It seems that you, too, have been ill. That is the only way for you to be in sympathy truly for those who suffer. No wonder you thought of the poor sufferers who gathered themselves unto David. How natural it is, when suffering in any way, to seek out some dear one to help us and cling to that one. O how I wish I could look always to the right source for help. I try too but so often fear I do not look in the right way—that I have not true faith.

It was a mistake about Elder McConnell changing with Brother Silas, he was not at our association even, neither was Elder Kerr. True there are many who could not hear the different gifts without the exchange of pulpits and many cannot hear at all, only get the preaching gleaned from the papers. I think the Landmark often gives us good preaching. The last Landmark had in it what I call a pretty good sermon by Elder Gold. His three little editorials made what I call an excellent sermon. We were all disappointed that he was not able to be at our association. How I would love to spend a day with him and sister Gold. But as I have no wings I cannot.

Sometimes I think over the Baptists we know scattered far and near, and in thought I settle them around us for neighbors. Then what pleasant callers we would have. These are day dreams.

I have been reading some excellent things in the Gospel Standard. Some clear explications of truth. But oh how ignorant I feel of these sacred things, and sometimes I fear I know nothing. But I do feel I hunger and thirst after them.

We have Edith and Mildred home this summer, and they are our housekeepers, and they seem to enjoy doing the kitchen work. Mildred has gone for a week to visit some relatives in Maryland and we miss her cheery face and voice very much. Sister Clarice is very well for her. She was glad to get your letter. My brother has been to attend a meeting in Canada and he is going again before long as there are some to be baptized.

With love from us all,

BESSIE DURAND.

Southampton, Pa.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother in Christ—I see in the Landmark that every one loving truth is at liberty to write. I do love the truth and am impressed to write my experience and a sketch of my life.

I was born in Newton county, Ga., March 26, 1858, and in 1877 married Phillip B. Bradley. My mother was Jane Breaner and my father was William J. Turner. He was killed in the last battle in Virginia and my dear mother had a hard time raising her children.

As far back as I can remember I have had serious thoughts of death, hell and the grave, and I loved to go with my mother to church and see the dear old Christian people and was willing to give anything to be like them.

I went on in this way trying to pray to God to have mercy on me a poor lost sinner, and when I was about 12 years old my mother moved to my grandmother's, near Stone Mountain, and we had been living there about four years when two preachers came into our settlement and held a week's meeting at the school house at Orange Hill. They organized a church and during that meeting I tried to be a Christian.

They told me all I had to do was to give my heart to God and I would be all right. I tried to do so. One day they came to my mother in regards to her holding her church letter. They told her to do her duty and perhaps I would do mine. They talked to me about being a Christian and I told them that I loved God and God's people, and I would like to be with them. They told me I was already a Christian—tha all I had to do was to join the church and they took me in, but when I was baptized I felt I was not what I so much desired to be. However, I felt alright for about fifteen years when I began to see myself a lost sinner in the sight of God. I would go to some lonesome place and ask God to have mercy on my poor soul, and I thought I had committed the unpardonable sin in joining the church without religion. Sometimes I felt I was going crazy, and oh how I hated to lose my mind and leave my little children.

These feelings would come and then they would leave me for a while. I went on this way for about two years, and during the last trouble I had I became perfectly contented to give up my mind if it was the Lord's will and even to leave my little children. I went to bed perfectly contented, and in the night I heard the sweetest singing I have ever heard. It was sweeter than human tongue could sing. It awakened me and I did not hear it again.

The next morning when I awoke the first thing I thought of was my burden, and it was all gone, and oh how happy I was.

"Tongue can never tell the sweet comfort and peace,
'Of a soul in its earliest love."

That day will ever be kept in sweet remembrance by me. I have been reading Zion's Landmark and it gives me more comfort than all the Arminian preaching in the world. I do love that doctrine with all my heart, and I have wanted to hear it that way ever since. I have been changed from nature to grace.

I would present myself to the Primitive Baptists if I was not so crippled up. I have had the rheumatism for about ten years and for the last four years I have had to go on crutches. God alone knows what I suffer. The blessed Lord says, in this world we shall have tribulations, but in me you shall have peace. Blessed thought. If it was not for my Saviour I would give up, but he helps me to bear my sufferings. Bless His Holy name. Pray for me, as I feel the need of prayer.

I will close my poor remarks, and if you feel that this is worth printing you can print it, and if not, it will be all right.

I am your sister in Christ,

MRS. FISH BRADLEY.

Stone Mountain, Ga.

Miss Elizabeth Lawrence, Hamilton, N. C.:
My Sweet Young Friend—I was surprised, as you thought I would be, at receiving a letter from you, and I assure you I was very much delighted. I had learned through Brother Pittman and Zion's Advocate that you were taken sick and had to return home sooner than you expected; yet you say it may have been all for the best. How sweetly submissive this shows you to be. It does not sound at all rebellious. If such be your faith you are well fortified against disappointment. All of us my darling, have to learn from experience, a very effectual teacher, though truly a sad one often, that affliction must come. And oh, how unprepared we are to meet them as we should.

Since your precious father wrote of your suffering in Zion's Advocate, many times have I thought of you and your loved ones, and as often have tried to beg the dear Lord to have mercy upon you and to bless and comfort you and your devoted parents. I know what it is to be sick and I know what it is to have a sick child. So you see I can feelingly sympathize with you and yours and I hope, if not already, you can say, "it's good to be afflicted."

Our dear Lord tells us by the mouth of Jeremiah, "I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people and they shall trust in the Lord." Parents are near and dear and you really cannot know what precious jewels they are until their cold lifeless forms are confined to the narrow limits of the tomb. My loving parents have long since exchanged a world of sorrow to one of pure delight, and I ever feel that I did not love and appreciate them enough, although they told me I had always been dutiful and a pleasure and had never given them trouble. This assurance of my dear good father and mother has given me great solace through all these years of sad affliction, suffering and care. But dear child, let me point you to the Lamb of God (the only perfect man), death hath no dominion over him, and he taketh away the sin of the world. May we hope that you, my sweet little girl, are embraced in the covenant of grace, and if so nothing can separate you from his love, and afflictions will draw you closer to him and make you see him as he is. He is now graciously blessing you with fond parents whose great solicitude for you, you cannot know, but you can lighten the burden by being obedient, affectionate and prudent, and I believe you to be all this. Nothing you do for your good parents will cause you sorrow after they have gone hence, but on the other hand the thought that you might have done more may give you pain.

I am such a vile sinner that my life is filled with regrets. I am ever doing that I would not and leaving undone that which I should have done. One of the happiest reminiscences of the past is my oft repeated trips with my father to his churches. The dear people of God loved him so, and loved me, his baby, for his dear sake.

I sat down to write a note, but my pen has been busy to write my thoughts. Please excuse me. Give our united love to your father, mother and accept a portion for yourself.

Sincerely yours,

LUCY G. BRUMBACK.

Mountain Home, Va.

P. S.—All of us want you to come to our union meeting at Hawksbill next May. Mr. Brumback says you must come and bring your father and mother with you. May our Great Preserver grant that we may all meet then to join in worshipping Him who has done so much for us is my humble prayer. Write us when you feel inclined and if you can devote a few spare moments to a deaf old woman it will be appreciated. God bless all of you.

L. G. B.

My dear Brother and Sister Lawrence:—

Your excellent letter of the 28th, received this morning informing us of the death of your lovely child and I feel such deep sympathy for you that I cannot lie down to rest until I write you a short letter at least. How terrible the shock! how sadly solemn to so soon after kissing your darling goodbye sitting on the porch you should be called to look upon her sweet face in the embrace of death! None but those who have similar trials can fathom the depth of the heart-aching scene, the tearing, if possible the heart strings from your bosom; casting a dark shadow over your pathway which time can never erase. Yet my precious afflicted ones, this is the dark side of life's picture. "Every cloud has a silvery lining," every affliction has its mission, and if we cannot see the wisdom of God in it, 'tis because we see through glass darkly. Here we know but in part; but my sorrowing kindred in Christ, let us think for awhile of the many unhappy marriages, the numerous woes that seem to befall the tender plants which seem to have grown up as olive branches around about our table, and we are made to feel like a precious old lady friend told me when I was in the deep waters of affliction, (had to give up three of our darling little children in ten months.) "Ah, Lucy, there are things worse than death, harder to become reconciled to. We must know that God knows best." "All things are known unto God from the beginning." I believe my sweet young friend was taken from the evil to come. Our merciful Deliverer took her out of a world of suffering before she had known the heartaches which might have been hers to bear—bereft of fond parents whose delight it was to gratify her every wish. Oh, how sad it is to feel and know I have no mother, no father to soothe my aching brow; to see that I am tenderly cared for and reared as of yore in the lap of luxury. "Doubtless some could say, far better could I mourn my child as dead than to have her live the life she does." We know not why these afflictions come upon us, but we are told, "many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord shall deliver them out of them all." It will be hard to say, "Thy will oh Lord, not mine be done." O yes, I too know the severity of sad bereavements, yet we are hoping, trusting Lord in Thee that after death our joys will be as lasting as eternity, doubts and fears all gone and death swallowed up in victory and we a happy reunited family, all clothed in spotless white worshipping at the feet of our precious Savior. Oh, may we meet our loved ones beyond the swelling tide of woes! and whilst left for a little while in this world of sorrow be comforted by the assurance, glorious hope, "that it is well with my soul," and that "my Jesus hath done all things well." Sorrow not as those without hope; the dear Lord gave, dearest Lettie, and in loving kindness called her up higher where no more sufferings can disturb her and where she is safe in the arms of Jesus.

We are so thankful we had the sweet pleasure of meeting her and that you had her here with you will always be a ray of light in the valley of sorrow. I appreciate her beautiful letters more than I can tell and think it right for me to copy her last letter to me which I will carefully preserve and return her own hand-writing to you, which you should have published in reply to mine. If you deem mine worthy have it published also. It was very poor, I know, like the unworthy writer, but it was from my heartfelt, honest convictions.

May our dear Lord, whose faithful servants you are, pity and comfort your wounded and bleeding hearts and tenderly watch over and sustain you by His grace the remnant of your days is the prayer of your devoted but unworthy sister in deep sympathy.

LUCY G. BRUMBACK.

N. B. All our family join me in love and sympathy.

Dear Brother Gold:—

It is with much fear and trembling I attempt to write you a few lines concerning my condition and feelings here of late. I suffered a great deal last winter with rheumatism which brought me very low both in mind and body. I tried many different kinds of medicine but as I found very little relief I almost lost hope of ever getting well again and was impressed to pray earnestly to God to relieve me of my afflictions and to give me strength to do my housework and other duties. Now I can never tell nor write what a sad and miserable state I felt to be in. Instead of getting better I seemed to get worse and a great fear took hold of me. My whole body gave way with nervousness, also the fearful feeling that I was sinking down in death and no one to help. I felt that God was angry with me and would not hear my cry and it seemed that the waves would close over me. Oh, Lord, forsake me not in death, was my cry. I was afraid to go to sleep. I could not recall when God was so precious to my soul; but now when I am old and afflicted and in need of him, that he should cast me off forever, it was more than I could bear. Oh miserable being that I was, who would deliver me from so great a death.

As my bodily afflictions got better I had a desire to search the scriptures to see if God had or ever would cast away his people. My mind was drawn to the book of Psalms and there I found I had been using the very words of David and did not know it and oh how glad I was that the Lord had counted me worthy to lay his chastening rod upon me, and thanks be to the God of heaven that I am not cast off. I can say I have been cast down but not destroyed.

Now, Brother Gold, I want you to examine this imperfect scribble and if you think it unworthy a place in the Landmark throw it in the waste basket and it will be alright for I feel so imperfect and unworthy myself that I fear to speak of the Lord's dealings with me, if indeed it is the Lord's dealings.

Now, Brother Gold, what seems so strange to me in the last sore trials that I have been called to pass through is this: while so cast down and in so much trouble I seemed to forget that I had ever been purged from my old sins and was so blind and forgetful of the time, thirty two years ago, when the Lord delivered me from so great a death. Oh how I abhor myself for being so forgetful of his goodness and mercy to me a poor sinful worm of the dust.

Brother Gold, I want to tell you why I have written this rambling scribble. I am impressed so in my mind to write and I can't get rid of the impression. Now why I have been impressed to write I cannot tell, but this I know, I am bound to try to write. I thought I would try to write my feelings but I can't. A few days ago I seemed to be feasting on the promises of God to us poor sinful creatures and thinking to myself I wish I could tell it to the highest heavens, when a still small voice said to me, "tell it to his saints." I do hope if any of the good brethren and sisters chance to see this they will throw a mantle of charity over it and remember me at a throne of grace. I crave the prayers of God's people the world over.

I have already been too lengthy with this writing still I have only hinted at what I wanted to tell. Pray for me, dear Brother Gold, for I think you are a faithful minister of God. Pray that I may be enabled to put my whole trust in God and be submissive to his will in my afflictions. Your little and unworthy sister if one at all,

BETTIE A. WEAVER.

LABORING AND HEAVY LADEN.

Matthew 11:28.

The dear Savior calls upon all who labor and are heavy laden to come unto him. Who are they? What condition is that which is thus described? Are all who labor heavy laden? No! A man may labor to the limit of his strength every day for many days, and yet not be heavy laden. If he accomplishes his appointed task each day though it requires his utmost strength, yet he is not heavy laden. When the work is done its burden is gone, and he can rest. The next day he does that day's work, though he has no strength to spare, and is again at rest. So in the case of religious work. The natural man feels able to do all the work that is necessary for his salvation, and so he is satisfied with his own ability, and with the work he can do. Often it is said by such a man "Can have all the religion he will live for." the more he does the better will be his reward, he believes. He knows of no righteousness but his own, and does not understand why any other righteousness can be needed. He may feel that it requires all of his mind and all of his strength but when that is given he is satisfied. He is laboring, but not heavy laden.

But if this man, whose task requires his utmost strength every day, should lose the use of his arm, and therefore be able to do only half a day's work in a day, then every day a half day's work is charged up against him. This unfinished work accumulates rapidly, and it must be done. Its burden rests upon him. He hopes to be able soon to take up some of that undone work and do it, and so, little by little, "catch up," and get even with his tasks again. But instead of that he becomes lame, and cannot move along, so that he has to leave still more work undone. Then he becomes blind and cannot do anything. Then he becomes a leper, and cannot stay any longer in the company of the workers, but must get away from his fellow-laborers. Yes, they will even drive him from them. Now he is indeed laboring and heavy laden. The work is still his to do, and he still laboring in his mind, but can do nothing, while he is crushed down under the heavy load.

This is the sad condition of the poor sinner who feels the just demands of the law resting upon him. The more he tries to fulfill the law the more clearly he sees and feels the impossibility of doing so. He learns that a sinner can bring forth no righteousness which the law can be satisfied with. He knows now that a bad tree cannot bring forth good fruit, nor a corrupt fountain send forth sweet water. He learns that there is only one thing which the sinner can do to satisfy the law he has violated, and that is to die.

It is unto those who are in this sad and helpless condition that this call of the dear Savior comes with power. It is not heard by the natural ear, nor apprehended by the natural mind. It does not come to the laboring and heavy laden sinner as something he can take into consideration and decide whether he will obey it or not. He does not know of this call but in its fulfillment in his experience. The Savior speaks to the heart. His words spoken unto us are spirit and life.

This call of Jesus is not in the nature of an invitation. Nothing in it is left dependent upon the will of the creature. An invitation is between equals. The one invited has a perfect right to decline the invitation. A king does not invite his subject. A mother does not invite her child, who is liable to creep into the fire or off a precipice. The word invitation is not used by any inspired writer. The word "invited" is used in the old Testament three times, but not in connection with anything of a spiritual nature. Jesus calls and commands, and his word is always with power.

He who has been laboring in vain to keep the law, and who has grown nothing better but rather worse and who is still laboring, though without hope, now feels a rest which he cannot account for. His burden is gone. How or where it went he cannot tell. He has done no meritorious work, and cannot feel that he is any better than he was yesterday, but the condemnation of the law seems to have passed away, and his soul is at rest. This is the experience of that sweet and powerful call of Jesus, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." This is the manner of his call, and the experience of it. He does not say, "If you will come unto me I will give you rest." The poor sinner would not know where to go. Even Job could not tell in what direction to go to find the Lord. But Jesus leads his people. He calls them with power, and they come. He never has missed one, never passed one by. When we feel the rest then we know the Savior has called us. When we see the light then we know the Sun has arisen

--we see him, not by any earthly candle, but in his own light. 'In thy light shall we see light.'

Those who have been thus sweetly called unto Jesus, and have felt this holy gospel rest, are now manifest as gospel characters, and as "under law to Christ," and he says unto them, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Every one of those who is thus called feels himself unworthy of the holy service of God, unworthy of any place in the church and especially unworthy to be mentioned as having any gift to exercise in the church. They are learning the meekness and lowliness of Jesus. This spirit is necessary in preparing them to take the yoke of Jesus upon them. They all feel something of that shrinking which Moses, Isaiah and Daniel and all the holy men of old felt when called upon by the Lord for especial service.

It was the meek and lowly spirit of Christ which was in the prophets, which prepared them to testify of him; and it is the same spirit now which causes the one who is naturally proud and haughty and self-willed, to be meek and lowly, and to esteem himself as less than the least of all saints, and as unfit to take the holy yoke of Jesus upon him. Each one feels that any one else would be more fit for the work than he, whether it be to use the office of a deacon, to preach the gospel, or do any work in the church of God.

Each thinks the yoke would be too heavy for him. But when the command comes into the heart from Jesus, a wonderful power is felt, and the love of Christ constrains the poor soul, and he is made willing in the day of the Redeemer's power to take up the yoke. Then how sweet the rest which is felt in the soul. And then what a surprise is felt when the yoke is felt to be not hard, but easy, and the burden light. With that yoke and burden upon us we can mount up with wings as eagles; we can run and not be weary; we can walk and not faint.

SILAS H. DURAND.

Reidsville, N. C., Aug. 17, 1909.

Dear Brother Gold.—

I have just received a letter from the assistant clerk of Suggs Creek church in which he says that the statements made to me and published in the Landmark for Aug. 15th are not true. I hope you will publish this matter in your next issue.

It is not my intention to misrepresent Elder Draughn, the Suggs Creek church nor anybody else neither for myself nor for any other person.

I do not know which of them is wrong, or whether both may not be, and I am no judge between them. One thing we know is that we want none of the progressive movements among us. We want our churches to abide in the good old way of the Lord and for them to stay out of the modern inventions and works of the religious world, and any preacher who attempts in any way to introduce them we cannot receive nor welcome in our midst.

Some years ago I wrote an article on the religious adultery of the church and spoke of this very thing. That article was so assailed that I was sorry I wrote it, but every word of it has come true, and now I am glad, not that it came true, but because I then believed it to be the word of God to me, and since it came out true I know it was his word and I rejoice.

I now feel sorry that I wrote the little note which has been published, but I felt the weight of it then, and if it develops to be true I shall know it is of the Lord and shall rejoice.

The prophet Jeremiah was rejected and hated by his brethren because he told the truth, and he was so discouraged and hurt that he determined to not speak any more in the name of the Lord, but his determination was not strong enough to balance the word of God which was in his heart as a burning fire shut up in his bones, and he was weary of forbearing and could not stay.

Many times I have been very much discouraged and have determined to write no more, but the first I know I become restless and cannot be still until I do write. This is my reason for writing and when I write it is for such a cause.

The Lord deliver us from error.

In love and hope.

L. II. HARDY.

Dear Brother Gold:

I wish to say to my dear kindred in Christ through the Landmark, that I am no longer Sister Annie Crisp, but that lawfully my maiden name, Redmond, has been assigned to me. This was done in March, 1909, in the courts of Virginia.

Sometime last summer, circumstances over which I had no control, forced me in defense of my character to file a crossbill through and by the laws of said state, to put away my husband (in name only). In consequence of such an action the judge heard me first, granting me a deliverance, I consider, both morally and spiritually.

Many people, perhaps think, they know what Jesus meant in regard to this serious question recorded in the gospels, but believe me, none I am persuaded, save a few heirs of promise, really and truly understand the saying. They alone, who have had the spirit of grace and supplication poured out upon them while enduring such painful and humiliating exercises are capable of sounding this depth.

I wish to declare in my own case that my testimony is not gleanings gathered from other fields but rather the fruit of result of test and experience on these shores of time.

I would so much like to draw you a picture of my wilderness journey, showing the face of Him on those dark back grounds of my past overwhelming sorrows. But without revealing His dear countenance through the lattice of my windows, would be but a doleful story of a poor weak woman's travail

In order to touch up the scene in glowing colors of His love and mercy to me, as my sun and shield, especially at the stand still periods, would call for Ebernezer's rich and rare; yea, would bring the treasure of darkness and hidden riches of secret places to view, which in times past were deep and full to protrude themselves to the surface or lips. I feel though there is yet a barrier to be burned away before I can come forth in exultant shouts of victory publicly.

In the year 1902 God made very plain to me my approaching trouble, the divorce question. I thought then oh, if such a thing ever ripens into a reality, what shall I do? I considered such a step to be awful, low, etc. I prayed most earnestly for about three months that He would not let it come. Instead of relief, I was given another token more convincing than the former that it would surely be, yet I would be victorious.

Those gloomy days, dark, lonely nights and long weary years are engravings which are not produced in every heart and life I feel sure. I feel my inability to ascribe greatness unto our King for His unspeakable graciousness toward me, His worm. He always goes before His children preparing the way, thus establishing us in the doctrine of election, predestination and final perseverance of His saints in glory.

To think of my past pilgrimage in the light of Him who was so tender toward me during my long imprisonment makes me weep in adoration and praise unto God, the Father and Holy Ghost.

So many were crumbs, yea, hand fulls thrown into my cell, making darkness light, crooked things straight and rough places smooth.

Dear friends, have you ever thought what a wonder thing it is to be brought to pray. We all desire to worship, yet we don't like the things it takes to humble us at His footstool. Our flesh draws back and chooses strangling and death rather than life. The broad road often seems a great temptation to us. So these temporal trials, these strong Goliaths, on the outside, with out enemies within, keep us in the way we should go.

How true this is! Mr. Vaughn once said in regard to approaching God: "Let your prayer be about the things that really interest you. The more minute and individualizing a prayer is, the more real it will be. You are coming to one to whom the little and great are all the same. Nothing is below His sympathy, nothing is above His power. And take care when prayer has gone up, to look up, David like, and watch for the arrows fall. It will fall feathered with blessing though the descent and the spot may be very different from what you looked for." I feel that this divinely composed quotation is the experience of many a poor child of God.

Since writing the above I will say it has been delayed and I urge the printers to insert this in the Landmark at their very earliest convenience. By so doing I will be greatly obliged, and to the household of faith I desire to remain a follower of the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.

Simply and lovingly,

ANNIE REDMOND.

CHARACTER.

What is a perfect character?

Writers of fiction, such as novelists, make crafts on their imagination for data or ideas which they weave into a character according to their fancy or ideal. They construct such a creature as suits their fancy, or such, if they write for admiration of others, as they think the public will receive with favor, and that will bring them fame or money.

The most individual and original writers of this class interpret their own thoughts and views which they embody in what they call character. Historians narrate the sayings and doings of nations in their organized acts as Legislative bodies, or courts of law, the battles of their armies, and their the nation. Biographers treat upon the other actions as the organized forces of lives of individuals showing their traits, motives, purposes, environments, reasons of their conduct, and the consequences affecting and controlling them the nature of their motives and purposes, the sum of their doings with the impression left on the world they call character.

There is another class of writers and speakers who are guided—not by man's reasonings, or imaginations, or fanciful creations, who do not dig their views and utterances out of their own thoughts or minds, but who write and speak as they are directed by that preparation of the heart in man, and that answer of the tongue which are of the Lord. Hence what they utter is not a vision out of their own deceitful heart, but they utter their words before the Lord. Therefore they do not err or blunder. They do not occupy the standpoint of a natural man, but they dwell in Mount Zion—the city of the living God—the heavenly Jerusalem. They walk about Zion considering her palaces and marking well her bulwarks that they may tell it to the generation following. Nor do they seek earthly scenes to describe, nor search for earthly readers or admirers to receive their utterances. But their message is to the flock of God, and their audience is the inhabitants of the heavenly Jerusalem. They feed the flock of God which He hath purchased with his own blood.

There never has been any mistake made, nor any false estimate of any ones character by any writer or speaker guided by the Spirit of God in any prophesy or utterance relating to any man or any events whether the man was then born or not, or however unforeseen the event, or however removed. Because nothing is hid from Him who moves these servants of the most High God to declare that which shall be.

Whether relating to individuals or to nations great or small all they utter is true, nor do they give flattering titles. They know the vanity of man. They fear God. Nor are they forward to thrust their views on the public. Feeling their own insufficiency to declare the truth of God, and knowing that all else is vain and shall fall or perish as chaff, they have no desire to teach or proclaim such trash. They are not hasty to utter the weighty matter of the Lord's works. They are slow of speech and dull of hearing they feel, dark of understanding, yet they know the truth and love it, and will contend earnestly for it.

Blest with the faith of the Lord Jesus they have confidence in God who cannot lie, and they know that it shall be as he declares, for not a word of God shall ever fall to the ground, or return to him void.

Knowing the terrors of the Lord they persuade men. Knowing God's faithfulness they would encourage the feeble of the flock to call on Him.

To discern between truth and falsehood, to reject what is wrong and cleave to the right, to preach nothing among men but Jesus Christ and him crucified is their one great aim and purpose. While man-pleasers aim to incorporate all the inventions of men, all their enterprises and measures, and construct a theory of religion in which the institutions of earth are called sacred and sanctified to the service of God, so all the things of earth are joined to the Lord, and their King Solomon has wives and concubines without number, but the true followers of Jesus hold only Christ as their husband and Head who has only one bride, and everything else is rejected by the true followers who know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified. He is the one perfect character they preach, and they are all one in him. This is perfect character.

But this causes them to be hated of men, unpopular and rejected as old fogies behind the times, for the Bible is a dead letter to the worldly religionist, and the bodies of God's servants now are dead in the streets of Sodom or Egypt where our Lord was crucified.

P. D. G.

Elder J. J. Hall states that he asked a preacher what this scripture means, "As many as were ordained to eternal life believed." He replied, when they accepted Christ then they were ordained to eternal life. I said the ordination was before the belief—that if God had not afore ordained them to eternal life then none would have believed. He replied that doctrine is that God damned one and saved another. I replied no. But this is what the bible declares. He said if you were to die now don't you know you would go to heaven. I said no, but hope I would. He replied you are a fool and liar too, and you have the spirit of the devil, and you are going to hell, and he thanked God he was not like me. I replied that is what the Pharisee said.

If you have a mind write on this scripture.

J. J. HALL.

Remarks:—The Pharisees have often tried to explain away that scripture, "As many as were ordained to eternal life believed." They want it to read, as many as believed were ordained to eternal life—that is after they believed they were ordained to eternal life. They hold that faith is the work of man, and hence it is of works or by works we are saved.

When confronted with the predestination of God they endeavor to throw reproach on the doctrine by saying this makes God the author of sin, and the author of the damnation of the lost, or that God made one man to be damned and another to be saved, and hence he is partial and unjust.

I know of only one thing that will set such an one right, and that is for God to quicken him from the dead, and show him that a just law condemns us all, and that justice consigns us all to damnation, or the reward of our own deeds calls for our damnation; but that by grace we are saved through faith, and that not of ourselves, but it is the gift of God; and that by nature we are all children of wrath.

When the Lord is revealed in us as our hope then old things are passed away, and all things are become new, and all things are of God; and he puts a new song in our mouth even praise to our God. Then we have an entirely new view and understanding of these things. This blasphemy of charging God with folly is taken away from us, and we know that God is the author of salvation to all that believe.

The enemies of the electing love of God charged our Master with being in league with devils, and the Jews said to Jesus thou hast a devil. Brother Hall, if they persecuted Jesus who is the green tree, will they not persecute his followers?

How good if we are favored to own the Lord, and to defend his doctrine through love, and pray for them that falsely accuse us, and let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven.

Who is it thanks God he is better than other men? The Pharises. Who is it that has no doubt about his salvation? The Pharisee. Who is it that does so many good works as he thinks? The Pharisee. While the Primitive Baptists feel they are vile, and do not live as they desire to do, and when they count up all the cost, if it is not by grace then they are lost and justly so.

P. D. G.

A NEW HEAVEN AND A NEW EARTH.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea," John 21:1.

While we see the first heaven and the first earth we cannot behold the new heaven and the new earth. While we look to the things that are seen we cannot behold the things that are unseen. No man can serve two masters. We cannot be in the flesh and in the Spirit at the same time. When we are with the Lord we are absent from the body.

John was in the Spirit when he saw these things not of the earth. He saw what will come into its perfect fulfillment after time shall be no more, and when there shall be no more sea, or when the sea, that womb of so much bringing forth the things of time and sense or of corruption, shall be no more. For the former things will have been done away.

Have you ever received so much of the divine witness of spiritual things as to know that they are not of the earth earthly but that they come down from heaven? Then you have the witness in yourself that these things are true.

How glorious are the things that John beheld: as the New Jerusalem the church of the living God came down from heaven and the new earth wherein righteousness dwells; for God shall dwell in his people and walk in them, and there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor pain, for God shall wipe all tears from all eyes.

But what shall become of the wicked? They shall have their portion in the lake that burns with fire and brimstone. Every unclean thing shall be there, and only those whose names are in the Lamb's Book of Life shall be in the holy city.

John saw the bride the Lamb's wife. One of the Seven Angels talked with John, and carried him away to an exceeding high mountain, even the mountain of God's holiness above the things of earth, high in the elevation of holiness, for the Lord's house is on the top of the mountains, or above the things of earth. This is the Lamb's wife, the bride, the city of the living God. In her composition appear the twelve tribes of Isarel as a Jasper stone most precious, clear as crystal, so pure is her light. A wall great and high, denoting the perfect security of the blest inhabitants of that city, wherein nothing that ever is unclean can enter or disturb that holy rest, and joy of the inhabitants of Zion, rises in eternal majesty.

There were twelve gates answering to the twelve angels or gate keepers, which are the twelve tribes of Israel. The city hath four square, and there is the equality of perfection, three gates on the east, three on the north, three on the south, and three on the west, so that an open gate is to every one coming from the east, north, south or west. The wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them are the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. The most precious metals were in the foundations, and the city was pure gold, denoting the holy love of God, and every beauty and gem of sparkling brightness shone in its walls.

The doctrine and order of God's house most glorious shone in the apostles. This is a great wonder in heaven, a woman the church clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, or the law not over her to curse her for her disobedience; but upholding her and supporting her in the perfect obedience of Jesus her husband, who has fulfilled and honored the law and become the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. Also the crown of twelve stars, or the doctrine expounded and interpreted by the twelve apostles of the Lamb of God is her glorious ornament; and she is in heaven or above all the things of time and sense. If ye then be risen with Christ seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God: because or for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God, and when Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

It was said by the Angel to Mary, "Blessed is she that believeth, for there shall be a performance of those things spoken. The believer in God and the Lord Jesus shall attain unto all these things afore declared. For every promise of God shall be performed.

John was shown that all is fulfilled. He was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and all former things or things of earth and time were done away, and there was a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

P. D. G.

.... HAPPY GREETINGS.

John the Baptist was born of woman less than one year before Jesus was born of the virgin Mary. The relationship between them as foretold by prophecy was of the closest kind in their official character, John as the forerunner of Jesus coming in the spirit and power of Elijah the great prophet, who should come as the messenger of the covenant of Peace to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and all to the wisdom of the just one, and as the morning Star coming at dawn of day, and heralding the approach of the Sun of righteousness rising with healing in his wings, giving him glory and honor greater than that ever given to any other prophet.

When it was announced to Mary that her cousin Elizabeth should bring forth such a son she visited her, and the greeting of these two famous women was the most cordial and spiritual ever manifested on earth. To John yet unborn it was such a joy in that he leaped in his mother's womb at the salutation. No two men ever showed forth such feelings as existed between these two men. John's joy must decrease, while Jesus must increase. This was such love as no natural man ever felt. We can if we love one object to see him rise if we increase too, but John's joy was full in the increase of Jesus and the decrease of himself.

There never was so glorious a time on the earth as at the birth of Jesus. Heaven came to earth, and a new thing is done on the earth. The glad tidings that a Saviour is born, that a son is given, and that the government is on his shoulders, so that God is with us in the wonderful interpretation of divinen love and peace, so fittingly expressed in the language of the everlasting song, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will to men" is sung above the earth by an angelic band, and it greets the ears of astonished shepherds.

John's preaching is the beginning of the gospel. It was more than prophecy—it was preaching. Prophecy is something yet in the future—not yet complete. Preaching is the prophecy complete. Prophecy is sowing time. Preaching is harvest time. John preached the kingdom of God is at hand. The glad tidings of repentance—a present deliverance is come. That which kings, prophets, holy men of old desired to see, but did not see, is now come. Simeon waiting for the consolation of Israel being told that he should not die until he had seen the Lord's Christ, led by the Holy Spirit goes into the temple and taking the babe in his arms blesses him, and is so filled with the glory of these things that he is at once ready to depart and be with the redeemed in glory, and behold the Lord God in peace.

When the Lord Jesus appears to one long afflicted and waiting for the consolation of Israel then the love of God fills his soul, then how glorious is the greeting, and how welcome is the sweet day of salvation.

John was sent to baptize. This is the beginning of the gospel. There was a man sent from God whose name was John. The same came baptizing. There never had been any baptizing before. This was a new thing in the earth. The people wondered if John was the Christ. He said not. Then said they, why then do you baptize? He replied, I indeed baptize with water. But one stands in your midst who shall baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire, whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into his garner, and burn the chaff with inextinguishable fire. He shall make an end of sin as to his people.

John had no aid of men, no preparation of earth—no school of worldly teachers—no polish or wealth of earth. Never was once so fully separated from men as was John. God sent him. His food was the simplest, his clothing the plainest, his doctrine all of God, his service in purity of spirit.

What a baptism was this? Was it from heaven or of men? Whoever was so endorsed as was John. He baptized Jesus, which the Father and the Holy Spirit both publicly sanctioned. Happy indeed are all that hear and receive this doctrine and cleave unto Jesus. Happy are all those that walk in the simplicity of this blessed God-given doctrine. To walk in the joy of the Lord Jesus separate from the world, and greeted with the salutations of this love of God in Christ is a joy that the world knows not of. Happy is that people whose God is the Lord.

Why should a self-righteous man pray?

The question is not why should a man conscious he is a sinner pray: but why should a man who is not dependent on God pray? If a man is a free agent then to whom should he address a prayer or a petition? For if he is the one that decides his own case to whom is he thankful but to himself for all he has?

If a man is righteous God will not condemn him. That be far from God to condemn the righteous, or to withhold any good thing from him that walks uprightly. While we cannot think of a man that is righteous unless God has made him so, yet if such an one could be found what has he the need of?

Men ought always to pray and not to faint, because they are always in need of what God only can give. Receiving mercies of the Lord continually he should always be giving thanks to God. In everything giving thanks and praying without ceasing is the business of the Lord's people. They are beggars before the throne of mercy, but what reason or cause has one to pray or give thanks for that which he has not received, nor does he ever expect to receive it, because he is able to do all that is necessary for him to do.

A self uprighteous man is righteous in his own eyes. Hence he prays with himself or to himself, and thanks God he is not as other men are. But why should he thank God for this?

Why do Pharisees pray? They pray to be seen of men, thus supposing they are obtaining praise of men: for they are fond of admiration. Feeling they are worthy they consider they are entitled to praise. But a humble man does not feel that he is worthy of any such notice. O: they think they are to be heard for their much speaking. They consider that there is merit in their words, therefore the more they speak the more they are entitled to be heard, because feeling that they are worthy they feel that they have claims that ought to be regarded. The more they speak the greater is their expectation of being received, because they love their own thoughts, and their own works. Hence they are first in their own works. Hence they are first in their own cause, and forward in speaking. How sweet their own words seem to themselves, and thus they think they shall be heard for their much speaking.

How is it with a humble man? He does not feel that he is worthy to speak, nor what his words should be heard. He is ashamed of himself. Job said he was vile and he would speak no more. Prayer is the cry of distress, the utterance and wail of grief. How expressive the prayer of the publican, "God be merciful to me a sinner."

When grief and sorrow are pent up in the soul the cry of helplessness and vileness is the utterance of worship to the God of infinite greatness and goodness. Such a sinner takes his place in the dust, and God hears his prayer. True worship is in prayer. Nor is there any ground in the heart of such a sinner for plea of work or merit: but such a soul is cast on the bosom of mercy, and receives all blessing of God. Such a soul cannot be the enemy of God. One cannot approach to God with enmity in his heart. Such a one is pure in heart, but he does not feel anything in himself but vileness. Then the blessing is altogether of God, and is purely spiritual and holy; and of his fulness such receive and grace for grace.

The rich (in their own conceits) are sent empty away, while the poor (in their own estimation) are filled with riches of grace.

OBITUARIES

APPOINTMENTS, ADS. MISCELLANEOUS.

ANOTHER INCIDENT.

About twenty-two years ago, when I was first attacked with heart trouble, I had an appointment some ten or twelve miles from home one Sunday. When the time came I was sick in bed and not able to go, but Elder R. F. Popason and Brother W. B. Griffin came to my house and they went to the meeting. Brother Popason filled my appointment, returning to my house in Northport, Ala., Sunday night. I was in bed lying on my right side. All at once I was taken with an indescribable deathly feeling. I turned upon my back and supposed

I felt the icy hand of death moving rapidly up and down from the tips of my fingers and toes, and a cold clammy perspiration burst through the pores of the skin. I said, I shall be dead in a few minutes and all the family thought so, too.

In the midst of the excitement Elder Popason said, have you got any whiskey? As quickly as possible a spoonful of brandy was given me, there was a reaction and I lived.

I lay propped up in bed and never turned on either side for the space of ten days and was confined to the room altogether for six weeks, and lost fifty pounds of flesh in ten months.

Next morning, before leaving, Elder Popason knelt by my bed and offered a fervent prayer for my recovery.

It seems to me I have suffered a thousand deaths since that memorable night, but for some purpose Almighty God has kept me alive until this writing. Both Brother Popason and Griffin died long since, and why, oh why, am I still here?

Brother Popason was an humble minister of the gospel and Brother Griffin was sweet singer in Israel. I imagine I can sometimes now hear him singing the sweet songs of Zion. I believe both are resting in the sweet arms of Jesus, and sometimes I feel that I want to go there, too, for I believe with the poet:

"When we appear in yonder cloud,
With all thy favored throng;
Then we will sing more sweet, more loud,
And Christ shall be our song."

If in this life on'y we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. Thanks be unto God that giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

In this blessed hope,

H. J. REDD.

Dear Brother Gold:

Brother Matthew Pickerel, of Sycamore, Va., has requested me to write for the Landmark something concerning Matthew 18:15, etc. There are different offenses and trespasses spoken of in this chapter. The first we wish to notice is that embraced in this verse. The trespass is private, that is, it is against the one member. No one else is offended or hurt at all for only one knows anything about it. It may be that the one hurt knows it. The brother who hath trespassed may be ignorant that he has done wrong, therefore the Lord has made it the duty of the one who feels hurt to go to the one who hurt him and as a brother and in a brotherly spirit tell him his fault. This matter must be between them. No one else is to know anything about it. Our Lord does not give the husband the privilege to tell his wife nor the wife her husband. It is to be strictly between the trespasser and the one trespassed against. If the one that feels hurt makes the matter more public than this he becomes the offender in the church and deserves the rebuke of the church. When he has complied with this requirement of the Lord and the brother hears him and gives him peace of mind this is the end of that matter. Neither of them should ever speak of that again in a way to in any wise cast reflection on the other, but to just let the matter rest between them, knowing that each has set himself right in their matters. They are to be sure that no one is there, but the trespasser and the one who goes to tell him his fault.

In case the trespasser gives to the other no satisfaction then he is to go and take with him one or two more. These should be brethren or sisters whose mind will not be biased on either side, but who love the truth of God and the order of His House. When he has thus gone he is to again tell the matter to the trespasser and if he hears them then the matter is settled and should be no further pursued. But if he will not hear the matter becomes stubborn and a sore in the church, with these two or three each of whom are now parties in the matter, the whole thing must go before the church and the one who first felt aggrieved must tell it to the church and the other one or two are witnesses. Then if he will not hear the church he is to be unto the church as an heathen man and a publican. In other words as one unclean and unworthy of fellowship. He must be excluded.

I did not once think this way, but felt that he need only be set aside in the fellowship of the one who had been trespassed against at the first, but that would not be purging out the leaven. The whole church is involved and all is one in the singular pronoun "thee." If he shall neglect to hear the church, this is the last and highest authority, let him be unto the church as an heathen man and a publican.

By this way the church is purged of stubbornness which is in direct opposition to humility. Humility is one of the greatest of all Christian graces and stubbornness tramples it under foot, and therefore it cannot be righteously tolerated in any gospel church.

This humble spirit is manifested in the question of Peter and the answer of our Lord. Not once, but times without number which is embraced in the "seventy times seven," or the perfect numbers multiplied in themselves. In Luke 17:5, "And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent, thou shalt forgive him."

This trespass is a sin where one has intended to do right, but has missed the mark. His intentions of right is shown in his turning again to you and showing repentance.

When the spirit of stubbornness is manifested it gets to be wickedness and therefore the church must cast it out.

Let us remember that the above dealings are for sin which at first was only private and not in any sense of a public or immoral nature. Now there are other sins which are wickedness in themselves from the first. Drunkenness, lying, stealing, cheating, fornication, adultery and the like are in this line. When one has been guilty of any one or more of these things Paul says he shall not inherit the kingdom of God. Gal. 5:21. I have heard of one case where one was repeatedly drunk and on a particular occasion he was down in the barn of another brother and wallowing in his own filth. Is he a fit case for the church? Can the church trust him further? Another was down on the street, and at another time had to be carried from his vehicle to his house because of his drunkenness. Can any true gospel church have fellowship for such? Such things are sins of wickedness in Israel and should be cast out to stay out, that the name of our Holy God be not blasphemed, and that His Holy cause be not trampled under our unhallowed feet.

Today is the gospel day, and if any man commit such evil and wickedness as this he is sinning in the day time, and either he is a hypocrite or he cares nothing for the Lord who bought him by the great price of His precious blood.

Sometimes such parties as these will work around churches so as to get up a party of dissatisfaction in the church in order to try to work himself in again, and those members who thus become infected with his wordy tongue of self-justification get up trouble in the church by trying to plead the cause of such a corrupt person and thus bring trouble on the innocent of the church. Now what is to be done? Take that wicked person back in the church just to please those who have become imperfect with his disease? How could the church be clear in such case? Does not a little leaven leaven the whole lump? Then we should beware and not tolerate such by receiving it back when once the Lord has given us strength to purge it out.

Think you that a leper who had been cleansed would try and get that awful disease again? I think not. But cannot one who has been guilty of any of this wickedness ever get back in the church? There was a case in Corinth where a man was living carnally with his father's wife (not widow), and Paul rebuked the church and commanded in the name of the Lord that the wicked person be given over to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. In his next letter to them he exhorted that they restore their love to that one because his punishment was sufficient and lest he be drowned with over much sorrow.

Who was it that saw his punishment was sufficient? Was it the one who had committed the wickedness? No. It was the observing Paul. Doubtless the church was one with the apostle and all had seen his great sorrow.

Did he come and ask what he could do to make satisfaction? No. The convictions of his heart were causing him to do the things which were mete for repentance, and this is what Paul saw. One shows no repentance when he is going around trying to enlist brethren and churches on his side and thus cause ruptures in the church or churches. Of such beware.

Your brother in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Remarks—The above matter I consider very rich and weighty and worthy of our serious consideration. How beautiful and glorious the truth is, and how blest are we if we give good heed thereto.

P. D. G.

ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS.

God uses methods that are always efficacious to do what he purposes. We do not like to hear one say God wants or wishes to do any thing. God does all His pleasure. But man cannot say what that pleasure is. He redeemed His own people from Egyptian bondage. He showed His power so clearly in their favor after they were greatly oppressed by Pharaoh that they knew they could not deliver themselves from Egyptian bondage, that they never could doubt: but that God brought them out of Egypt. Yet often He reminded them of this miraculous deliverance, for they soon forgot divine favors. Like when the Lord shows us our guilty, oppressed, enslaved condition under sin and death, from which when the Lord delivers us we think we shall have no more grievous trouble; but when our old enemies rise up and we sink in doubt and unbelief our hope appears quite gone and our case is desperate.

The law was given to Israel in the wilderness as they encamped at Mt. Sinai. Its solemnities were unbearable. Its commands were plain. The substance is thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind, soul, heart and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself. This excluded all false gods. There is but one true God manifested as Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and these three are one.

No greater sin could be than to worship any other God, or have any other, or own any other. To love the Lord God of Israel with all the heart, soul, mind and strength is the highest service. To fail to love one's neighbor was sin. To wrong him in any thing, or to fail to seek his happiness was sin. This law requiring these things was holy and spiritual, and he that failed or offended in one point was guilty of all.

God brought his people into a great and terrible wilderness that yielded them no sustenance, that furnished them no food, nor drink, no homes, no beauty to the eye. Why was this? What was this done for? To show Israel the necessity of trusting in the Lord for everything every day. He gave them bread from Heaven. The Rock gave them water to drink. God was to them a pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night. But they must trust Him for every thing and live alone by the faith of Jesus. This carnal men cannot do. They must be fed by their senses, by their natural eyes, natural ears, natural mouths, or through and by their natural senses, and walk by sight, or they must see the things they depend on. Flesh and blood cannot live by faith, or walk by faith. To dwell in God obeying him in all things is what fleshly man will not do. He has no mind or will of that sort. The carnal mind is enmity against God. It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

With all the training these Hebrews had they demonstrated the carnality of man to be such that he cannot, will not, does not obey a spiritual law.

Nor could the law help, incline, or enable him to keep that holy law. What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh. Moses the meekest man that was, to whom God talked face to face, as He did to no other, did not so believe God as to sanctify him in his conduct (see (20th of Numbers), and even he could not enter the earthly Canaan, much less lead the Israelites there.

How, where, by whom then can the law be fulfilled so that its righteousness shall appear and be vindicated, and the sinner justified from all things from which he could not be justified by the law of Moses, and its every precept appear glorious in the eyes of the sinner who can never keep any part of it in his flesh?

There is one blessed and holy, just and true one found in fashion as a man, the surety for Israel, the Redeemer who appeared according to Scripture going before, and was found in fashion as a man, and was qualified as the Son of God to fulfill the entire law, and satisfy and magnify it, who was made a curse for us, who suffered the just one for the unjust. He was tempted in all points as we, yet without sin. Who felt and suffered for the sins of His people, and His righteousness is given to them, and we are complete in Him.

It was his delight to do the will of God always in everything. Nor could any defilement of the flesh mar any part of his life or his deeds.

How easily a part of the world will draw off our mind from spiritual things. The devil offered Jesus the whole world if he would fall down and worship him. But he found nothing in Jesus.

When we are found in Jesus we are clothed with His righteousness, elect unto His obedience, one with him, for we live by the faith of Him. He was crucified for us, and we live by the faith of Him. There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit.

Our life is an experience of this. We are taught that by the deeds of the law no flesh can be just with God. We must be dead to the law by the body of Christ, and alive unto God by Jesus Christ. We must know that in our flesh, to the end of our life, there is no good thing in us. Without Christ we can do nothing.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—~~it~~ so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I will in my weak way, if the Lord is willing, try to pen down a few thoughts that have been on my mind for some time, but I feel so unworthy that I have put it off from time to time, thinking that it would wear off. But not so; it grows deeper in my mind. So I feel that the way for us to receive peace of mind is to be obedient to the impression of the mind. I don't know whether this impression is of the Lord or not; I only hope it is.

The subject on my mind is "charity," which is the greatest subject in all the universe. There has never been nor never will there be such a word spoken again that has any more power than charity. It is the love of God, even God himself, for I read in His blessed Word that God is love and besides Him there is none other. He speaks and it is done, commands and it stands fast. Now we see by an eye of faith which the God of mercy gave us before we were ever fashioned out of the dust of the earth. This is a God of all power. We read in His Word that He rules in heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth.

Now by that eye of faith we see that He is everywhere at once. There is nothing made that was not made by Him and for Him. It is a glorious thought to me to feel that the children of the Most High have a God of all power and knowledge and wisdom and not the God of the Amorites. But we who have tasted the Lord's graciousness to our souls do feel that if He had dealt with us according to the deeds done in the body we would have been cut off as the cumbrance of the earth. This is a merciful love, a love that has no end. It is from everlasting to everlasting. It has no beginning nor end. It is a divine love that cannot be comprehended no farther than the Lord reveals it to us. So far He allows us to go and no farther. He knows what we have need of and He has promised to supply our needs, but not our wants. What is it we need? It is Jesus, the Saviour of sinners, who has bled and died on the cross for all that believe on Him. Isn't Jesus the greatest gift ever given? Does He not bring glad tidings to our souls when in the low-grounds of sorrow? Does He not supply our need? Yes He is the altogether lovely among ten thousand, and we read in His Word that He so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son to save His people from under the curse of the law. And shall He not freely give us all things?

Dear brethren, sisters and friends, I will try to give my views on this love. If any of you who have not received a hope in the Lord and have been made to feel yourself a poor helpless sinner in the sight of God and you can't do anything but fall at His feet and the story repeat:

" 'Twas a heaven below,
The Redeemer to know,
And the angels could do nothing more,
Than to fall at His feet
And the story repeat,
And the Savior of sinners adore."

This is one that has lost all confidence in their self-righteousness, and this is when I believe the Lord reveals Himself to the poor helpless worm of the dust and he is made to rejoice in God our Savior. He feels at that time that he will never do wrong again and that he desires to go home to his friends and tell them what great things the Lord has done for him and not what he is doing for the Lord.

Dear one, let me admonish you to go home to your friends and tell them what great things the Lord has done for you whereof you are glad, and you will receive that peace of conscience towards God.

I will here relate a part of my experience. About eight or nine years ago I had a dream and I dreamed that judgment day had come. I could see the sun and I thought it was about an hour high when all at once it was darkened and the whole earth was on fire. There was no one there except papa and myself. I thought we both stepped out into the yard and papa seemed very much troubled. I could not speak, but stood still with these thoughts in my mind, that the Lord's will be done and if I was lost His righteous law approved it well, when it seemed that Jesus appeared to me and spake and said, "believe on me." And I thought I could speak then, and I said, "Lord I believe." Then he disappeared. I thought I spoke to papa and said, "trust in the Lord." Then all the fire disappeared and we walked back into the house. I awoke and wondered if it could be of the Lord or not. I tried in my feeble way to ask the Lord to lead me in that straight and narrow way that points to joys on High. It was my desire that the Lord would show me all my sins before He suffered me to join the church, for I felt to join, when unworthy, was an abomination in the sight of God. I feel to say as my dear namesake, the prophet David, surely the goodness and mercy of God has followed me all the days of my life.

Dear readers, it has been my desire ever since I was a small boy, to be like the prophet David. Not that I knew anything about the scripture, but I would hear the Primitive Baptists say that he was a man after God's own heart. I felt that if I could but know that I was one like him I would be sure to escape the punishment that is reserved for them that forget God and His righteousness. Where He is they cannot go. I hope these desires of mine are of the Lord. Ever since I received a hope, if indeed I have received one, I have had a desire to follow the dear Savior down into the sacred wave and after I was baptized it was love unspeakable. I feel that I can say, I learned something that no mortal could teach me. Our brethren can tell us how they felt, but that does not supply your case. Nothing but the footsteps of Jesus can ever satisfy a poor sinner. He is the only power under which we can be saved; the only name given under heaven whereby man can be saved.

Let me say to those out of the church who have felt the Lord precious to your soul, take up your cross and follow Him, His yoke is easy, His burden is light. And learn of Him; He is meek and lowly in heart and you will find rest unto your soul. In obedience we do abide in His love and in disobedience we abide in His wrath. He teaches us in His Holy Word, that he that knoweth my will and doeth it I and my Father will take our abode in His heart; he that knoweth my will and doeth it not will be beaten with many stripes. Here is the child in disobedience, one that has felt an impression to join the church; he waits for further evidence for fear that he may be mistaken and yet he knows no more of myself than at first. This is the way some are drawn back. The devil will say, you are too poor, you will make an attempt and fail, then you will be laughed at.

Dear brethren, we have got to overcome these things with that precious desire that the Lord has given us by asking Him in sackcloth and ashes to be ever our guide and wisdom, for without His divine power we would be like the pharisee in the temple.

Oh, what an awful thing to be banished from the presence of God forever. Let us make a comparison. Suppose a little sparrow was appointed by the Lord to fill up this world with sand by bringing it in grain by grain. Even then there would be a time we would be delivered from that awful punishment. But oh, here is a divine power that has declared it from everlasting, a world without end. If He is for us worthy He is for us to suffer the reproach of men for His blessed name's sake. I read in Rev. 5: 11, 12, 13, "I beheld and heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beast and the elders and the number of them was ten thousand and thousand of thousands saying with a loud voice, worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches and wisdom, and strength, and honor and glory, and blessing. And every creature which is in heaven and on earth and under the earth and such as are in the sea and all that are in them heard I saying, blessing and honor, and glory, and power be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever."

Dear brethren, we see here is the praise of everything that has ever been or ever will be. It is the love beyond expression. I can't tell it as I hope I feel it, but it is my desire to read His word, talk of His goodness and mercy and to sing praises to His Holy name.

Oh, if I was only able, I would never miss a Sunday being at meeting somewhere, yet I have never felt worthy to be with those dear people. I felt they were too good for me to be with, but oh, I long to go with them. And what a sweet peace it has been to meet the dear brethren and sisters and grasp their hands and call them brother and sister. But oh, I have many doubts and fears about the matter as to whether I am one or not. I read in the scripture, to work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. We see that the apostles had fears; even John the Baptist the forerunner of Christ, who had the blessed pleasure of baptizing our Savior in the river Jordan, and seeing the heaven open, and the love of God descend in a body like a dove upon Jesus, and a voice from heaven saying, this is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased.

I feel that this is one of the strongest evidences that a christian could have. But John was cast in prison and it seemed John had fears about his salvation. He sent two of his disciples to know if he was the Christ or must he look for another. And Jesus told them to go and tell John the things they saw—the lame walked, the blind received their sight, the dumb spake and the dead are raised. Surely that was gladness to John to receive that message. I feel that all who have felt His presence have received those sweet tokens of love and none but God's chosen ones will ever be able to receive the love of God. Let us praise His Holy name, yes and again praise His omnipotent name. I will bring this to a close.

Brother Gold, if you think there is anything in this letter that would be of any comfort to the household of faith you can publish it, if not throw it aside.

From your unworthy brother, if one at all,

D. P. HODNETT.

Swansboro, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold and Brethren:—

I feel too sinful and unworthy to let you hear from me but I do want you to hear from Northeast church where the division took place between Armstrong and the church and where thirty-three members went out at one time.

But few of the brethren and sisters stood by the church Brother Gold, but dear brethren I feel to say with the apostle, "for we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." I can say, blessed be the name of the Lord, bless His Holy name who works all things after the counsel of His Holy will.

Brethren, I was at Northeast the 3rd Sunday in August and the Saturday before and we had a good meeting. Brother Eli Eryan and myself were there together on Saturday and I can say that much love was manifest. Brother Ed, Kellum and his wife, both of whom went out, came back into the church. They confessed they did wrong in leaving and both were received amidst the manifestation of much love. I felt like saying, praise the Lord, Oh my soul, praise His Holy name, who adds such to the church daily, such as shall be saved.

I will mention a few who came before this meeting, confessed they did wrong in leaving the church, and were again received into the bonds of fellowship:

Brother Henry Morton and wife, Brother Major Morton and wife, Brother Bob Humphrey and wife and Brother Wilson Kellum and wife. At this meeting dear Brother Brown, who is our pastor, was not with us.

On Saturday one dear little lamb wanted to come into the fold but because no ordained minister was present and he wanted to be baptized he said he felt he could not offer to the church. However Sunday Brother Eubanks was with us and at the close of the meeting the doors of the church was opened when Brother John Waters came forward, related his feelings to the church, was received and baptized by Elder Eubanks.

Brother Gold, I write this to let Brother Vass, Brother Coats, Brother Johnson and Brother Trent all hear from us, for I feel that in the time of our trouble they all were blessed with the spirit of preaching. I want to say to them all that our churches are in peace now so far as I know.

So brethren, pray for us that we may strive for the things that make for peace and come to see us.

This is written by one who feels less than the least of all. I have not written my experience as my mind has been so much filled with the church. Some day, if it is the Lord's will, I may write it.

Brother Gold, if you see fit to publish this in your good paper do so, if not all will be well with me.

I will close by asking God to bless you all,

RILEY SHEPARD.

My Dear Brother Gold:—

My hope in Christ, if I have any, is so bright and sweet to me I feel I would be glad to write it for the dear readers of the Landmark though I know it can never be as sweet to anyone else as it has been to me, yet I feel that we ought to pass such rich blessings on to others ever feeling that it will be a comfort to some one.

When I was about fourteen or fifteen years old I became so upset about what would become of my poor soul were I to die that I could not be satisfied. I would get the bible when I thought no one knew it and would go off somewhere by myself and read it. I went on in this way a portion of my time for several years when one night just as I was about to go to sleep I saw myself carried away through a bright streak that looked to me like a rainbow only it was all one color. One end rested on my breast and at the other end, which was a great height from me, was a man with a bright robe wrapped around him. When I reached him he parted his robe and a sweet still voice said to me, "You are now in Christ's bosom," and I saw myself wrapped and folded in His bosom.

I went on then just as before, part of the time being happy and contented with the world and part of the time being so miserable I couldn't sleep. I have many times sat up and read my bible long after the other members of the family had gone to sleep. But it seemed to me that all I read was so condemning that frequently I would lay it by and thought I would not read it any more. But as I could not stop reading it I thought I had not found the right place, for I felt there must be something good in it or else the dear people of the church of God would not read it so much. So I commenced at the first verse and read it through, and if I read anything that seemed or sounded good I just knew it was not meant for such as me. There was one chapter I could hardly bear to read. This was the 8th chapter of St. Luke and especially the 7th verse, which is, "and some fell among thorns, and the thorns sprang up with it and choked it."

I would look back and think maybe there had been a seed sown in my heart and I had not heeded it and had let the ways of the world choke it out, and it seemed to me that nearly every time I opened the bible that was the very thing I would read. And oh, the misery, the woe, I have felt while trying to read that chapter I can never tell. I felt that I was lost forevermore and I knew that it was just and right, for I felt that I was not worthy to be even with God's people not even so much as to shake hands with a member of the church.

One evening Brother J. Speight was at our home. I was out of the house when he came and as I came in he was telling my husband some of the many troubles I had been through. I sat and listened to him talk for a good while then went out to get supper, feeling, oh how he is blessed and how happy I would be if I had such a hope. Very soon he came in where I was to tell me goodbye. I felt so beneath him I wouldn't have shaken hands with him could I have very well helped it. It seemed that the very touch of his hand seemed to make my heart almost cease to beat.

My burden continued to grow worse until it seemed I couldn't bear it any more. I tried to pray to the Lord to spare my strength and mind for my husband's sake. (He was an invalid.) I felt that I deserved anything the Lord saw fit to put upon me. I was taken down with fever and for several days and nights I was in so much trouble I could not sleep. My husband looked like he could not live but a short while. We also had one son down with the fever and three others that had just gotten able to be up, the two oldest of these being our dependence, to wait on us and cook. I felt sure it would throw them back, and then what should we do. I tried to ask the Lord to be with us, but it seemed to me my prayers went down instead of up.

At last one night when it seemed to me I had borne all I could, I went to sleep when all at once the room seemed to be filled with people, all just alike, with something white in their hands. I was placed on something like a sheet which had one end on the floor and the other end about two feet from the floor, so that I was lying in a slanting position. Then they began rubbing or bathing me with whatever they had in their hands. And dear reader, I lay there and saw myself all rubbed away. There was not a crumb of this old body of mine left, and I saw the filth of my flesh lying in a heap on the floor. It was the filthiest looking sight I had ever seen. Then I saw myself lying on the sheet as white as snow and was as a baby. Then they carried me to a church. I did not see the church, but only the pulpit, and it was like the one at Moore's church. I was laid on the front edge of the pulpit. Then I spoke to them and said, now sing!

They sang:

Come angels, bear me away
On your snowy wings
To my immortal home.

And as the song rose it sounded to me as if thousands were singing, and it was the sweetest song I have ever heard or ever expect to hear in this world. It lasted all night and I slept like a baby until the next morning.

I told my husband that morning that I was going to die, also I told him what I had seen the night before. I felt sure it was the sign of my death and I was willing to go. My husband and children were all in a way taken away from me and they were no more trouble to me. My husband thought I was unconscious. He said I never asked him how he was getting along for two weeks. But I knew I wasn't unconscious as I was taking two or three kinds of medicine and was keeping the time myself and I didn't get it wrong a single time. Now I seem to be left in the dark. I fully expected to die, and when I got well it all seemed, and I now sometimes think, it was all imagination. My burden for my sins had gone and I wanted it back. It seemed that it was right for me to suffer. But I did not stay in this condition long before my burden came again. But this time my condition was different. My whole desire now was to go to the church, but I was in the dark. I felt that I had nothing to go for.

I went to preaching the 4th Sunday in May, and after I left the church it seemed to me I never could live to see another meeting pass and not join. I was in so much trouble I could not sleep. All I had been through seemed to be passing through my mind, and it seemed that I was trying to sum it up for some purpose. I did not know what. My only prayer was, Lord be merciful to me a poor sinner, and lead me in the way Thou wouldst have me to go, though Thou slay me yet will I put my trust in the Lord. If it can be Thy will give me some evidence that is so bright and plain that I cannot be mistaken.

On Wednesday night after the 4th Sunday I went to bed but not to sleep with that awful condition on my mind. It seemed like my mind was almost in a whirl. I felt conscious that something was going to happen to me, and if I am not deceived something did happen.

It seemed to me that there was a blank place here and I did not know what was going on. The first thing I remember was that some small, sweet, still voice was whispering to me and saying, "you have seen yourself cleansed and made white as snow—have seen yourself as a little child and have had to give up husband, children, home and all, and have seen yourself carried where you must go."

Dear brethren and friends, my eyes I hope were opened and I felt that I knew I was cleansed with the blood of Jesus. I shall never be able to tell of the joy that filled my soul.

It was some over three weeks now before the next meeting and I felt that I could not wait until the time came. My joy was so great that I could not sleep only a few hours each night. I felt that I could go anywhere without fear with Jesus to lead me as I now felt He was doing.

At the next meeting I went, was received and the next meeting I was baptized. That has been a month ago today and I am still rejoicing. It seems my cup is filled to overflowing. I fear that the greater the feast, the sorer will be the famine, though I cannot realize it now.

If what I have written is worthy to be put in the Landmark put it in and if not cast it aside.

My husband died October 25th, 1908, shortly after I got up from the fever. He never united with the church, but he told us a few days before he died that the Lord had forgiven him of his sins, and he was so happy he said he thought he was well, but he also said he could live a few days more as the Lord had promised him that he could be on earth only few days longer.

I will close by asking an interest in your prayers.

A sister in hope of eternal life,

MOLLIE E. VARNELL.

Dear Brother Gold:—

Your most highly appreciated letter came to hand this morning, and I so much enjoyed the sympathy and respect of one who I deem so highly as a faithful servant of the Most High God. For dear Brother, I do feel so little and unworthy even to be thought of by one that I feel so high above me in spiritual things, and how poor and weak it does make me feel for you to express yourself as having had confidence in my being a child of God for I do not indeed feel like if I was destitute of my hope in my dear Savior it would be more than I could bear. And oh, it does sometimes seem so dark with poor me, and when the great billows roll so heavily on my poor heart and all seems so dark and gloomy, and my prayers but a chattering noise, and He whom my soul loveth has hid His smiling face, I can but cry out in anguish, Oh Lord, Hast thou clean gone forever, but even though I am so oppressed

I can feel that there is a little anchor in my soul that is both sure and steadfast having entered into the veil where Christ the forerunner has gone and while in my deepest trials I am made to say, though he slay me, I will trust him. For dear brother where else can I go. I have tried earthly things and find they all fail and I am cut off in everything and I know I have no aliding city here, and it not deceived I am seeking one that hath foundation whose Maker and Builder is God.

Oh how thankful I do feel when I feel to have an interest in that blessed inheritance that is incorruptible and undefiled and fadeth not away, and is reserved in heaven for those who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed at the last time. And oh, my soul, although I surely feel to be a sinner and feel like I have trampled the mercies of my dear loving Savior under my unhallowed feet and have done so many things I should have left undone, besides dear brother, resisting the impression to praise His dear name and early days of being in membership with the dear people of God, besides being strongly impressed to write for publication, and have often kept awake on my bed feeling if I could only pen down my thoughts it would be so much relief to me. But about that time, you remember dear brother, so many of the brethren wrote so much concerning the right of sisters to write for publication. So I was looking for an excuse anyway and right there I found one. But because I didn't, darkness and leanness came into my soul and I fear it is through my short comings I have been cut off from the joys of my earthly happiness also the light and liberty of the gospel in a degree, notwithstanding for many years I was highly favored of the blessed Lord. And although I now feel like my troubles are as billows I can thankfully say though he slay me yet will I trust Him for He is the health of my countenance.

Strange to say, dear brother, while I was here in the hotel Saturday morning I was made in sweet submission to trust in the promises of a dear Savior and I walked through the hall praising His Holy name.

I know I am a sinner and my trials have been great for many years, but I do hope these firey trials are working for the good of my soul, and if I can bear the yoke in submission and hold out to the end and can lay this body down to rest without sin to molest or ever cause me any more sighs, groans and tears and there to be with my dear Savior and be like Him, Oh my soul, this will be enough. Let our troubles be ever so great, what will that be compared to such an unspeakable blessing.

Dear brother, I didn't intend to write but little when I commenced, but I felt like I was writing to a dear friend and a Father in Israel and have written more than I intended and still feel as if I could write more.

I hope the good Lord will grant you a heart to prayer for this poor helpless sinner, for I do feel like when I would do good evil is present with me. I do feel that the dear Lord has forgiven my sins as He has appeared very dear and sweet to my soul and when He has tried me as by fire I shall come forth as gold. It seems to take so much more sifting for some than it does others. But dear brother, if I am deceived in this all important matter what an awful condition I will be in. But oh how hard I do try to beg my dear Father to guide and protect me and grant that I may not be deceived but that I may be drawn closer to His dear side every day I live.

Dear Brother, pray for me.

Love from us both to you and sister Gold.

As ever your sister in Christ I hope,

DELLIA BASS.

My Dear Brother Gold:—

I send you the following little incident in my own life for publication in the Landmark if you see proper.

About twenty years ago while living in Mississippi, I was requested to stop and preach for two lone women in Carrington Mississippi. I was on my way down to Brother Jones', and he and some others were with me. Right on the sidewalk was a little two room store-house where the two women, an old sister and her afflicted daughter lived, and in the rear room of this store was where we went. When we entered the room a pitiful object met our eyes. On a bed lay the afflicted daughter a growth called a goiter covering her neck and breast, sad to behold.

There were perhaps a half dozen of us in this room, but immediately adjoining this room some carpenters were at work on a building, with hammers and saws going. I fel so embarrassed I hardly knew what to do. However I ventured to read the chapter relating to the afflictions of the man at the pool and of his miraculous healing by the Savior. I thought I would try to talk just a little in a low tone so the workmen on the outside would not hear me.

Before I had talked five minutes a heavenly smile had lit up the countenance of this poor afflicted woman and I was talking at the top of my voice, my own soul being lit up with joy. I looked towards the door and the door was full of people, the saws and hammers had ceased and my own voice was all I could hear. I felt then that I should have rejoiced if ten thousand people had heard what I was saying.

This poor woman died soon after, and I doubt not that she is this day singing praises to God through the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Brother Gold, While writing the foregoing my eyes have been melted to tears and my spirit has rejoiced in God my Savior. I have other incidents in mind that I may send you in future. It does me good to think of some things connected with my past life, while there are other things that make me feel sad.

Your brother as ever I hope in Christ Jesus our Lord,

H. J. REDD.

Avondale, Ala.

Dear Brother Gold:—

Just why I have an impression to write a few lines for publication in the Landmark, if you consider it fit, I cannot tell.

I have been thinking much of late about the love of God; "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us that we should be called the Sons of God."

It seems to me that there are different kinds of love. There is the love of money which is the root of all evil. That love has an end, and if that love would end sooner with some of us, would it not be better for us? The money is all right, but it is the love of it that carries us where we would not go.

There is a love of worldly honor and popularity. That love has an end. And if that love had less influence over some of us, would it not be better for us? We love our brothers and sisters in the flesh. Such love has an end. Though we sometimes hear of them spending their last penny on each other, often they fight for each other, administer to each other when sick or in prison, clothe them when naked, feed them when hungry, etc., yet such love is perishable. There is a love we have for those who are kind to us. But when the kindness ends the love ends.

There is a love we have for our natural fathers which is very strong and makes us remember them for years after they have passed from time. But such love is earthly and perishes with the earth. There is a love for mother, and oh, what a strong tie. The word mother sounds sweet to me though my mother and father have been dead for years. But the time must come when I must pass from time into eternity, leaving the things of time and learning the things of eternity. Oh, which will it be, lamenting or rejoicing.

There is a love we have for our earthly companion a strong tie indeed. Bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh. Why do we love them so? Because they are in some way pretty to us. Either well favored, handsome, loving, kind or in some distinct way merit our love. The marriage ceremony is performed and we become partners "so long as we both shall live," not only while their cheeks are flushed with health and vigor, their form upright and handsome, but after disease has made their blushing cheeks and rosy lips pale and old age and afflictions have bent the once handsome form. We love them. Jointly with us they are the parents of our children. Their joys are our joys, their sorrows are our sorrows, their wrinkles are our wrinkles and their gray hairs are our gray hairs. "We are no more twain but one flesh. But death swallows it all up.

A mother loves her children, she suffers for them, she labors for them, she weeps over them and she takes from her own comforts to add to theirs. This is love but death gets it.

It seems to me that the love of God is different. He loved us in the creation and chose us in Christ before the foundation of the world that we should be Holy and without blame before Him in love. The love of God is as old as God is, for God is love. He is the beginning and the end, eternal. Did He not love them before they were created? I would say so. Behold what manner of love. Did he love us because in nature we were beautiful? I would say no. Did He love us because in our dead state of carnality we were good? I would say no, because we were obedient children? No, because Israel was a stiff-necked and rebellious people. Love begets love, so high above me in spiritual things, and yet did he love us because we loved Him? No, for it is exactly the other way. We love Him because He first loved us. Did He love us because we were kind to Him? No, because we were enemies to Him by wicked works. Did He love us because we were rich? No, because we brought nothing into the world and we will carry nothing out. Did He love us because we were honest? No, because our hearts were deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. God is true and every man a liar.

What have you done or possessed to merit His love? Cannot I answer by saying, nothing. By the grace of God I am what I am. He has loved us with an everlasting love and with His loving kindness has He drawn us. Ask yourself, dear sinner, why He has loved you, and is not this your answer? Because He would. Then if that is your answer, you will say, if I am saved it is by the grace of God. And if you can say that sincerely, I wish to say, intreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee, etc. Oh the love of God, how wonderful, He loved us and gave His only begotten Son, Jesus, into a sin-stricken world to heal our diseases, to die that we might live, and presented us unto His Father without spot or wrinkle or any such thing. As rebels? No. As enemies? No. But as heirs and joint heirs with Himself, as a bride loved of Himself, as children loved as Himself and as brethren loved as Himself, washed in His own blood, clean as Himself. Therefore He is not ashamed to call us brethren and the Sons of God.

The love of God did this and much more. It has been bestowed upon us and at the appointed time of the Father He sheds abroad this love in our hearts which makes us see that in us, that is in our flesh, dwells no good thing. Then we abhor ourselves and hate every false way. It makes us believe in Jesus and trust Him as our Redeemer. It shows us our own sins and prepares us to love the brethren.

If we have this love it will forever be with us, and when this mortal shall have put on immortality, and this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, then will come to pass the saying. Oh, death, where is thy sting, Oh, grave, where is thy victory.

Now, Brother Gold, if you can read this and think it fit for the Landmark, let the Landmark have it, or if you think it better for the waste-basket let the waste-basket have it and all will be well with me.

Yours in the hope of eternal life,

JESSE BARNES.

Dear Brother Gold:

A few days ago I saw in an article in the Biblical Recorder written by O. R. Mangum, one of men-made preachers, words to the effect that Johnson county had been under the influence of the Primitive and Free Will churches, and that the teachings of these two churches had so muddied the waters that it will take much hard work to ever give the people a clear vision. That the Primitives have taught the people that whatever a man is, be he murderer, adulterer, liar or thief, that God has predestinated that one for such a life and he cannot change his life, and when God gets ready He will save him. He says we seem to think that if one seeks salvation it makes it harder for God to save the soul.

I remember hearing my father say if a man told a lie big enough it didn't do so much harm, because everybody knew it was a lie. Probably this preacher looks at it in the same light.

We know predestination leads men away from and kills them to sin. May God have mercy on O. R. Mangum and all of such like. I will send you the letter he wrote and if you see fit you can reply. I was telling some of the brethren and they asked me to send it to you, that you might reply.

Will you please give your views of Matthew 11:11? "Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he

Affectionately,

Goldsboro, N. C.

Dear Brother Gold:

Your comforting, soothing and soul-cheering letter was received last Tuesday morning just as I was about to leave to come down here.

I wanted to write you immediately and tell you how much I appreciated it, and yet how humbling it was. I felt so humbled and unworthy upon receiving such a letter from you. I cannot see those good things in myself of which you speak. Truly with Paul I feel to say, "I know that in me, that is in my flesh there dwells no good thing." I am vile, very vile and hate my own ways, my own life; and yet I love those who express themselves as feeling the same way. What a nearness and dear-ness a flame of love and kindred relationship is kindled between us and those who are of like precious faith, those who can tell us our own experience, express our own very sentiments better than we even know how to express them. Does it not lift us at time above self when we feel to have the witness within ourselves testifying to the truth of the glorious things of the kingdom as they are presented to our view, either by divine revelation or by the watchmen upon the sacred walls of Zion? And how our hearts are drawn out in love unspeakable to those faithful, true and tried soldiers of the cross, the dear fathers in Israel who have taken the oversight of the flock over the which God has made them overseers, watching over them for good and not for evil.

I am down here at dear Brother Bill's pleasant home, whose aid and skill in the science of medicine is so soothing to the natural body, and whose gift in talking of the precious things of the kingdom of our God and presenting them to our spiritual minds is so soothing to the soul.

Last Thursday, the 8th, was my birthday, and Friday was his; but as you know, he is many years my senior. He is 74 and while he is somewhat feeble, he is active for a man of his age. His wife, dear Sister Eeli is also feeble, but well for her age.

I went with him to his quarterly meeting at Simpson's Creek Saturday and Sunday, where all the preachers in the Mill Branch Association were in attendance and a lovely band of brethren and sisters, among whom abounds meekness, humbleness and love without measure, and among whom friendship also seems to abound without partiality. Brother Bell preached a very interesting and comforting sermon Saturday and he and Brother Harrelson preached Sunday. Brother Harrelson's text was, "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness and princes rule in judgment," and I felt that he was given much liberty in speaking to the comfort and upbuilding of the saints.

Brother Bell's text was, "Being confident of this very thing, that He which hath begun a good in you, will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ," and he likewise spoke more comfortably unto Jerusalem, crying unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that she hath received at the Lord's hand double for all her sins. It was indeed a lovely meeting and my poor soul, which had been cast down and in a dark bewildered state for some time, was much revived and comforted and I felt renewed and built up in spirit, and was enabled to rejoice in heart and praise Him who has so abundantly favored and blessed me, a vile unworthy sinner, with the comforts and sweets of the gospel, since which my thoughts have been pleasant and my meditations sweet, and I have written you a long letter in my mind, much better than this can be.

Guess I will be here three or four weeks.

In love, I am, yours in unworthiness,

LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

THE CAYCE-PENICK DEBATE.

This able debate was held between Elder C. H. Cayce, editor of the Primitive Baptist, and Mr. I. N. Penick, at Martin, Tenn., July 9 to 12, 1907, and has recently been published.

The subjects of discussion are the extent of the Atonement and the work of Regeneration by the Holy Ghost.

Elder Cayce contends that Christ died for the elect only, and that they shall all be saved, and that the Holy Ghost quickens or gives eternal life to sinners independently of preaching, and thus prepares them to hear the gospel.

Mr. Penick disputes these positions.

Those wishing to read it will send $1 to Elder Cayce at Martinsville, Tenn.

THE TWO KINGDOMS.

The kingdom of heaven bears no resemblance to the kingdoms of this world. The two are altogether distinct, nor do they so coalesce that one is merged into the other and becomes an integral part of it, any more than if a father gives his son a tract of land that tract becomes a part of that son; for we know it becomes no part of his nature by such a gift, though it is thereby brought under his possession and power.

There is use for the kingdoms of this world, and they serve a purpose, but we cannot reason therefrom that they are similar to the kingdom of heaven. The things that are seen are temporal, while the things that are not seen are eternal. Here we have two essentially different qualities, named. One is that the kingdoms of this world are visible or can be seen, as something material, while the things of the kingdom of heaven are invisible to mortal eyes. Again, the things of this world have an end as something temporal, while the things of the kingdom of heaven are eternal or incorruptible.

Then it is only by revelation that we can know anything of the kingdom of heaven. By revelation is not meant that by natural discernment, reasoning, or research we can know these things. For instance, as a child's natural mind develops its knowledge of this world increases. But spiritual knowledge is revealed unto babes. The quality of the knowledge is different. The wise men of the east are guided by a star—supernatural guide, to Jesus. Such a thing had never been known before. Simeon was led by the spirit into the temple to see Jesus. The Christ was known to Peter by revelation. It is not that what we know naturally or as natural persons, as far as it goes, is the proper knowledge: but old things must be done away. Forgetting the things which are behind. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. If what a child of God knows here is perfect, as far as it goes, then those who know the most about the Lord here will have greatly the start in the resurrection of the dead.

The kingdom of heaven is above all things of this world, but does not proceed in contradiction to what is demonstrated as science or philosophy. For instance, we know that white is not black. We know that 2 and 2 are 4, and cannot be five. Now such things are not learned nor denied by revelation. They are known by our natural powers of observation and reasoning. Things important that could not be known by our natural powers are things of revelation. Why the bush all on fire and yet no part was burned is a matter that never could be answered by investigation of natural laws. How a lane could be made through the Red Sea so that the waters stood as a wall on each side until Israel passed through dry shod, or the rapidly flowing Jordan in flood time should divide and its waters wall up without any agency of man, or barrier of nature, could never be explained on natural principles. Hence the people that have no consciousness or knowledge of supernatural power, or no understanding of the existence of the kingdom of heaven of course cannot believe in the divine agency which is altogether above the natural.

When that which is perfect is come then that which is in part shall be done away. That which is in part even in divine things, or that partial and limited knowledge of spiritual things shall not enter heaven.

row in this world. What, therefore, is there in nature to assure us there is an existence in which there is no sorrow, nor death, trial, nor disappointment, desire nor need? Surely a kingdom or existence furnishing all this blessedness is so unlike this one that it is in its own light only we can see or believe it. By revelation only is this known. Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him, but God hath revealed them unto us by his spirit.

What a snare then for a man to be tied down to his carnal reasons for his spiritual knowledge, for carnal senses or reasoning cannot conceive of spiritual existence. Surely the wise are taken in their own craftiness.

Thomas demanded ocular proof of the resurrection of Jesus. He said, except I see the nail prints and thrust my hands into his side, I will not believe. The revelation of Jesus to him, or his appearing to him, so enlightened him that at once he worshipped. Then shall the people of God know as they are known.

If one judges only from the natural through the medium of his natural senses, when would he ever know anything of spiritual things? What is there in natural operation of laws to teach or prove a miracle? Can water rise above its level? Shall fire cease to burn? What is there in nature to prove the resurrection of the dead? Does any thing in nature live again after it is dead? If you plant dead or rotten corn will it vegetate? In the spring do dead trees ever put forth leaves?

You must first know of the true God before you will know or believe in his power to raise the dead.

What is there in nature to teach eternal existence? What form of life do we behold that will not cease to exist in nature? Decay and death is branded on everything we can behold. To believe therefore in a kingdom in which there is no decay, waste nor death requires a spiritual knowledge.

Everywhere we behold suffering and sor-shipped him as his Lord and his God.

The man blest to believe in Jesus has promise of the life that now is and which is to come, and for him to live in Christ and to die again. The possession of the principles of this world can never qualify us to come to God, or serve with him: but the possession of the kingdom of heaven gives one fitness to render unto Caesar what are Caesar's, or to use the things of this life without abusing them, and also to live unto God and seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.

MOSES AND JESUS.

"We be Moses' disciples as for this fellow we know not whence he is."—John 9:28, 29.

This conveys the idea of opposition between Moses and Jesus. But Jesus said, "If ye had believed Moses, ye would believe my words."—John 5:4.

Therefore these are not Moses' disciples in the true gospel sense, but in that generally accepted sense in which Moses answers to the law; as by the deeds of which is eternal life, as they think. This monstrous error not only places Moses in a false position as to the law, but also as to Jesus and the gospel; and thus instead of harmony, brings conflict. Yet, however, resting on error, this sentiment is almost universal, indeed revealed Jesus, and the fact that "the just shall live by faith, and the law is not of faith."

Since all the systems of salvation in the world may be reduced to two—by works, or by grace—we may divide the religious world into two classes; the larger, claiming to be disciples of Moses, we may call Pharisees, and the few—the disciples of Jesus—sinners; and then set as distinguishing opposites—law and gospel—works and grace—Moses and Jesus. The doctrine of salvation by grace through faith without deeds of the law, so acceptable to sinners—disciples of Jesus—seems perfectly contemptible, yea abhorrent to the Pharisees, making and marking them distinct.

And this line of distinction was marked from the beginning: On a Sabbath day in Jerusalem hear the sweet-toned, heart-touching sound of the silver trumpets floating down and reverberating around Mt. Zion from the Jewish and Greek temples calling to regular worship. Soon we see the vast throngs, the wise men after the flesh, the noble and the rich, amid all the appliances and splendors of wealth, ascending to worship God in the name of Moses. They know the Lord spoke to Moses, but as for that fellow out yonder—Jesus by the seaside, or on a mountain, preaching to a few poor, plain people—they know not whence he is. Observe closely, and you will see the same in substance today. They finally killed Jesus in the name of Moses, and afterwards many of his disciples. Perhaps there are some today who think they would do God's service to kill them. They are aggressive and boast of many wonderful works.

Not that the evangelical world, so to speak, professionally claim to work in the name of Moses today, but rather Jesus, though Jesus when on earth told them he knew them not. But by their fruits ye shall know them: let deeds of the law or good works as inducing salvation stand for Moses, as they hold him; and faith and the operation of the Holy Spirit stand for Jesus, and you will see they are Moses' disciples, and regard with the utmost scorn and contempt the doctrine of salvation by grace without works, and more especially the ministrations of the spirit resulting in what is commonly called an "experience of grace," as also the person claiming it. When the man once blind told how Jesus opened his eyes, they accentuated their contempt for Jesus and his work by calling him "this fellow." Let one tell today of the manifestations and revelations of the spirit, and especially in visions and dreams or other unnatural ways, and with what utter contempt and scorn they regard them as "superstitious stuff and nonsense." They know their evidences of christianity are based upon the most approved scientific principles, confirmed by the highest standard of human reason; but as for these wild vagaries of the weak-minded and ignorant, they know not whence they are.

R. A. P.

"Alas, my brother."—1st Kings 13:30.

The mystery of God's ways is great and glorious. The mystery of man's ways is often shameful and distressing. With God's mysterious ways there can be no fault finding, but with the mystery of man there is much that is distressing. We often wonder at our own shameful weakness and folly, and are also astonished at other people's. But the wisdom and glorious dealings of God always command the highest reverence from all that know his works.

The language I have quoted above was uttered by an old prophet in Israel in the days of the wicked reign of Jeroboam. The last days of Solomon were darkened by his idolatry induced by his strange wives. There is no amount of wisdom nor greatness of position that can save one from folly who transgresses God's holy law, nor any former brightness that can preserve undimmed the character of one who departs from the word of the Lord, nor any eminence of ability or service that can save one in the day of his transgression. God forbade the Israelites from intermarriage with heathen nations. This law Solomon transgressed. Furthermore, in the beginning God made only one woman for Adam, and the twain became one flesh.

Toward the end of Solomon's reign there were disturbing elements manifested. It is prophesied that ten tribes of Israel would be rent off in consequence of this conduct of Solomon. Jeroboam was stirred up to become a leader. The tribes did revolt from Israel and crowned him king. This Jeroboam became a leader and typical king in wickedness. He said in his heart, now my people will go to Jerusalem to worship and will return to Jerusalem, and I shall thus lose my kingdom. So he built an altar at Dan and one at Bethel also, and set up idols, and said to the people, it is too much for you to go to Jerusalem to worship; so he made two calves of gold, and set up one at Bethel, and the other at Dan, and said, these be thy gods, O Israel, that brought thee out of the land of Egypt; and this thing became a snare unto Israel, and they worshipped these golden calves. Jeroboam also made a house of high places, and set up the base people to be priests, and defiled and prostituted the worship of God. He radically and entirely forsook the worship of the true God, and set up a bastard form of idolatry—a kind of imitation of the worship of the true God to deceive, and it was as polluted heathenism as the Babylonians used. Jeroboam made Israel to sin, and there was no successor of this wicked king that ever served the Lord truly, or departed from Jeroboam's false worship; but they all persisted in it until God sent the ten tribes into final captivity, and they were lost among the nations of the earth, and cannot now be traced at all or identified.

Alas for false worshippers. The Lord sent a prophet during the time Jeroboam was in the act himself of sacrificing to these calves of gold (money), who cried against the altar in the word of the Lord foretelling its utter pollution. Jeroboam laid hold on him to punish him (for men will get mad and fight for false religion). God smote the king, who then entreated the prophet to pray to the Lord for his healing, which was done. Then Jeroboam desired him to go home with him and refresh himself, and he would give him a reward, "And the man of God said unto king, If thou wilt give me half thine house I will not go with thee, neither will I eat bread or drink water in this place."

Utterly disclaiming all fellowship thus with false worship, he turned to go back another way. Though he did not hasten away, but sat down under an oak tree. There was an old prophet in the country whose sons were present and saw this warning scene, and they went home and told their father of this startling occurrence. The old prophet hated this false worship, and was glad to hear that this wicked altar was denounced. So he desires to see this prophet and pursues and finds him sitting under an oak, and invites him home with him to eat bread. The man of God repeats what the word of the Lord had said to him, declining to do so. Then the old prophet said, I also am a prophet of the Lord, as thou art, and an angej spake to me and told me to bring you back and eat bread with me. But he lied unto him.

Now this seems very strange. How could the man of God conclude the Lord had changed his mind, or revoked his order to him? Do not true prophets know that the Lord is of one mind and changes not, and that he is the same always?

The old prophet appeared to love the young prophet, yet if he loved him how could he thus lie to him? It is evident that he had some love for him, yet he was not truthful? How is this? We note a great difference in the gifts of the Lord's people, and also in the degree of their faithfulness to the Lord, and to each other. We also notice much greater consistency in some than in others. The gifts of some continue longer. Some preach or labor in brightness and faithfulness to the end of their life-like Samuel. Others fight boldly awhile like Joab, and will cleave to David against long, yet will follow some vain pretender as Joab did finally. This old prophet acted very strangely toward the end of his life. Some appear to love more than others, and will lay down their lives for the brethren; yet in an unexpected time they will give evil counsel, causing distress and perhaps death to some—as this old prophet did.

Again, we are liable to put too much confidence at times in man, and not trust alone in the Lord. Perhaps this man of God wished to tarry. Perhaps he was hungry for natural food, and did not deny himself. At any rate he was found faulty. He disobeyed God and died on account of it. Yet the lion was not allowed to mangle nor devour his body, and the old prophet mourned for him, saying, alas, my brother, and buried him in his own sepulchre. Love does not fail for the Lord's people even if they die in transgression.

We must all be tried. But few pass unscathed through the ordeal of this mortal life. Blame attaches to most of us. Trials discover our weak places and we stumble. How few attain to David's first degree or number. Only two went untainted through the wilderness. There is no one of the seven churches in which all are perfect. But love still follows us in our haltings, and when we fall pities and hides us in the Lord so that our death is precious in his sight, and together with him we shall rise.

How wonderfully do the dealings of Providence develop and try the faith of the Lord's people! The trial of their faith is held in this mysterious ordeal wherein each knows not the way he is led, only as the unfolding of the Lord's providences opens the wilderness. One thing saving blesses the Lord's tried ones, namely they know that the Lord rules, and that he cannot do wrong, though often to carnal reason it appears as though the Lord does not rule.

But how glorious to be faithful unto death, and receive the bright crown the Lord shall give to all that love his appearing.

P. D. G.

WITH AUTHORITY.

"And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes." Matt. 7:28 and 29.

Jesus came in the flesh when all flesh had corrupted his way as it was in the days of Noah. How debased had the service of God become as men trampled on his mercies and polluted his sanctuary. People sat in the region and shadow of death and darkness covered the earth, and gross darkness the people.

There had been no prophet in Israel for many years. Israelites had dwarfed into the letter and mere form of worship, and there was no vitality in the service of the sanctuary. The scribes copied the letter of the word of scripture, but the power and love, the glory and life, of the worship of God was not known.

The worship and service under the law of Moses had been telling the need of a purer service than man could render. The law required a perfect obedience and a holy service to God. The fact that its offerings were repeated day after day, month after month, and year after year proclaimed the failure of man to comply with its holy requirements, and its entire inability to pardon the guilty or help the fallen.

Prophets had often uttered their fiery denunciations of the wrath of God as a consuming fire upon the transgressor, and set forth a day of vengeance of God against the sinner; also they had strangely and mysteriously foretold the coming of one who should fulfill the law that came by Moses, and take away the curse of God from the earth; yet that a child should be born unto us, and a son given unto us, whose name is wonderful, counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father and the Prince of Peace; whose goings forth had been of old, yea from everlasting, and who should stand and feed his flock as a Shepherd, the Redeemer, the Lord of the whole earth.

It was foretold that he should suddenly come to his temple; but who should abide the day of his coming?

The Old Testament scriptures in the law, the prophets and the Psalms were full of most wonderful utterances of the coming of that Just One, who should restore that which He had not taken away. Man was the sinner who had taken away or corrupted the way of truth, and perverted the right way of the Lord. By man sin had come into the world, and man had no excuse or covering for his sin. He was naked and guilty. But on the surety, the just one whom a virgin should conceive and bring forth, whose name is Emmanuel—God manifest in the flesh, should come all the guilt of the burden bearer.

There were holy men of old that looked for the coming of the Lord Jesus, but who should abide the day of his coming?

A strange and mysterious character in the spirit and power of Elijah the great reformer should come before him to prepare the way and announce his advent, not in the glory of earthly grandeur or parade of splendor that charms the natural heart of man, or exalts his pride; but it should be in the fiery, purifying power that makes manifest the holiness of God, and consumes the pride of man. What a spiritual man was John the Baptist. He should turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers, lest the Lord smite the earth with a curse. The axe is laid at the root of the tree, and every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. How spiritual and pure was the preaching of John in the wilderness of Judea? What a glorious power sent the word John preached, and how great was the effect produced. The hearts of the fathers were turned towards the children.

As the bright morning star just preceding the rising sun did John shine greater than any man born of woman, greater than any prophet. For he was shining in the light of the glorious sun of righteousness, rising with healing in his wings. Not that John contributed any thing to the glory of Jesus, but the sun cast the brightness of his rays causing John to appear in that glorious new dispensation. For the law and the prophets were until John. Since then the Gospel is preached, and John stands numbered with Jesus in the Gospel.

Soon after the baptism of Jesus he enters upon his ministry. Great multitudes gathering around him he goes into a mountain, and when he was set his disciples came unto him, and he opened his mouth, saying: When he was set. None ever sat and taught as he did. None ever spake as he did. He is the word of God made flesh, full of grace and truth. He was holy. Nothing unclean was in him. He knew no sin. None were so meek and holy. He knew his Father's will and came from heaven to do that will.

His first utterances were blessing upon the poor and needy, such as hungered and thirsted after righteousness—such as felt vile, such as suffered for doing right and for righteousness sake.

He said think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets, but to fulfill. Every jot and tittle of the law must be fulfilled by him. Every word of prophecy must be fulfilled by him. Justice and judgment must be established. The law is holy, and Jesus the holy and spiritual man must honor and establish it. Then these found in him should be righteous. For He is made of God wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption unto those for whom he gave himself, so that he should present all that his Father gave him without spot, or wrinkle or any such thing before his Father's throne without fault, but with exceeding joy and glory.

Shall there be any failure in this the most wonderful promise ever made? Who is He? Whose Son is Christ? He is the Lightness of God's glory, and the express image of his person. He shall not fail nor be discouraged. He shall bring forth judgment unto victory, and in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

He loved the law of God and came from Heaven to do his Father's will. He was able to lay down his life and to take it again. When He had fulfilled all that was written concerning him in the law and the prophets and Psalms He was delivered for our offences and raised from the dead for our justification.

In his speech how wonderful. He taught the spirituality of the law that we must be doers of the word. He that doeth and teacheth these commandments shall begreat. This Jesus did. He perfectly taught it and kept it. How can a man do this? Only as Jesus is revealed in him, and he walks by the faith of Jesus: then his work is good. Make the tree good and the fruit shall be good.

None ever taught as Jesus did. Nothing was hid from him. No unjust judgment fell from his lips. He was full of grace and truth. What mercy he showed to the helpless. What rebukes to the proud pretender. His word was always final.

What power He displayed. His word never failed. Neither disease, death, nor devil resisted Him. He spake and it was done

Surely his teaching was not like that of the scribes. There was no truth, nor power, nor spirituality in their teaching; but His teaching was with authority. His words were spirit and they were life, they never returned to him void. Men felt that his word had the power of a king, the power of truth in it. He laid a perfect foundation. He showed that men must build on that foundation if their building should stand. People were astonished at his doctrine. His doctrine is the perfect and complete truth and it shall stand because it came from Heaven.

Blessed are all they that hear him—that love and serve him, putting their trust in him.

P. D. G.

Brother T. S. Harris requests my view of Eccl. 9:14-16, "There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and beseiged it, and built great bulwarks against it.

Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man."

Solomon's theme was wisdom. God endowed him with wisdom greater than he ever did any other man.

It seems to me in this view of wisdom given to him is included the mystery of wisdom hidden in the ages past but which was in the purpose of God in the creation of the world.

The little city is the church of God. The great king who beseiged it building great bulwarks is Satan. His stratagems are his schemes to destroy the works of God. He approaches Eve aiming also at Adam. His approach is under cover of seeming friendship and effort to increase the wisdom of Eve and her happiness. Adam and Eve were the two thus far manifested; yet in their loins were hid their offspring and wrapped in the chambers of God's hidden purpose was his Son soon to be set forth by the first expressed promise "the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." In the device of this enemy of all righteousness, whose aim was to destroy the creation of God, and by whose tactics he designs to pervert the way of truth, laying an ambush to introduce his own wisdom which is devilish—a hardened heart, a proud will, feet swift to shed blood, a lying tongue, the entire debauching of the town of mansoul, is presented as the havoc wrought by this fierce and cunning warrior.

This war brings death into the world. The creation of God is affected from head to foot. Death reigns over the work of creation, and there is no exemption from the greatest to the least of all God's works.

His flattery is to make man think he is not dead, but is capable of great mastery over God's works, and to advance pretensions to great skill in finding out the mysteries of creation. He attempts to ape God in originating religion. He builds up a false worship, raises up gods many and lords many, attempts to introduce remedies for all evils. He calls evil good and puts pride in the place of humility so that in faking captive the little city and setting up his own kingdom he as usurper claims absolute dominion over all God's works. For he offered all the kingdoms and glory of the world to Jesus on the condition that he would fall down and worship him, thus claiming that all the world belonged to him.

But there was a wisdom greater than satan's found in this little city? Should one in the likeness of sinful flesh, yet embodying the wisdom and power of the godhead, appear as the seed of the woman who by his wisdom should deliver this city? It appears that the serpent feared this, and hence sought to destroy this manchild in his infancy. Persisting in his efforts through his lieutenants until the crucifixion of the Son of Man in whom satan could find no sin, nor infuse any into him though he sought it most adroitly.

The weakness by which this adversary sought to maintain his power recoiled on his own pate so that the seed of the woman destroyed the works of the devil and delivered the lawful captive and delivered the prey from the terrible one. This is the greatest and most glorious mystery in the annals of warfare, wherein the captain of the Lord's host does all the fighting alone, treading the wine press of the wrath of God with none to help. Satan's armor is taken from him, and great spoils are won from sin and death. Where sin abounded grace did much more abound. The redeemed are delivered and come off more than conquerors through him that loved them and gave himself for them.

Yet no man remembered this poor wise man. Who was ever so poor? Other warriors collect vast sums of money and great armies for their battles, but this one becomes the poorest of men. Becoming the greatest of all sufferers even unto the shameful death of the cross he rises from the dead the greatest of all heroes crowned with glory and honor.

It is the folly of men and to their shame that their selfishness does not suffer gratitude to rule in their heart's Time and again must the Lord stir up the pure mind implanted in the sinner or he would altogether forget his Maker and Redeemer.

It was a matter of wonder to Solomon that no man remembered this poor wise man. It is often a wonder to me whether I am a subject of grace, for I am so prone to forget God. The hope of the one born of God is that this blessed one holds his people in everlasting remembrance. All mothers may forget their children, if it were possible, yet God will never forget his people or forget to be gracious, for that is his perfect and unchangeable nature.

P. D. G.

"They are all plain to him that understandeth, and right to them that find knowledge."

GOD'S MANY.

Under the old covenant the one only true and living God who made the heavens and earth and all the things and hosts thereof was acknowledged and worshipped by only one nation, while every other nation made them gods. Isaiah says smiths and carpenters were employed in making some of these. it would seem, of wood and iron. David says "the idols of the heathen are made of silver and gold, the work of men's hands: they have mouths but they speak not; eyes but they see not; they have ears but they hear not; neither is there any breath in their mouth." In other places it says they had feet but could not walk, and hands but could not work. I have noted these things because it says in connection, "They that make them are like unto them: so is every one that trusteth in them." Psalm 135:15-18. This last is repeated: also they that make them "make them like unto themselves." Then truly these gods are "made like unto themselves" (the makers)' and they themselves "like unto them," are much the same in makeup, but surely the maker is superior to the made or the creator above the creature of his hand. Yet these nations built temples for their gods, set them up, deified and worshipped them. But their religion changed neither their heart or outward conduct for the better. While Israel, who claimed and worshipped the eternal God, was like Abraham the called out—called to leave his native land and idols and father's house, indeed all things, and go out to a new, strange land: that is, as born of God they were born to a new spiritual life that turned them from all former customs and fleshly desires and caused them to walk humbly with God, having no confidence in the flesh.

These types have their ante types in this day. Only Israel, or the true gospel church acknowledges and worships the one true and living God, who by spiritual birth and revelation by God know Jesus Christ to be the Son of God and their Saviour; whose spirit of life in them teaches them to de-bare or have no confidence in the flesh, and to love, honor and glorify God. Thus having ceased from their own works and entered into rest they walk humbly before God and do good to all men. Thus a change of walk, proving that of heart: and by their unity of faith and love for each other they are made manifest to all the world as the children of and worshippers of the one eternal God. "By this (love for one another) shall all men know ye are my disciples," said Jesus. How shall we distinguish the heathen or worshippers of idol gods? Mainly by the fact that instead of better, purer principle of heart manifested by a purer walk, the old or natural are rather intensified, especially in natural love and glory of self. Yet their gods as made like themselves, they very conveniently worship in worshipping self. Their god is enthroned in the high place of human reason; and human reason true to its natural household, so to speak, gauges the province of doctrine and rule of action in agreement and harmony with the natural inclination of the heart; and thus makes self, his god his sceptre; and whatever it cannot compass or reconcile is rejected. Hence whatever debases, denies or dims self is rejected. Therefore the greatest bliss anticipated in heaven is a fleshly reunion of kin or loved ones. Jesus, my heaven, is but a name to them. Hence, when you see one professing to be a Christian—for the whole lot, or seven will take hold of his name to hide their reproach while they provide for themselves at home—still vaunting and loving nature—still seeking self-glory and aggrandizement—still promoting human reason and scoffing at divine revelation, you will see a heathen in the true sense, still serving his gods. And in a spiritual sense, you will see they truly made their gods like unto themselves in that they too have mouths and cannot speak, nor is breath in them; they have eyes but cannot see; ears but cannot hear; feet but cannot walk; hands but cannot work! hearts but cannot perceive. They are as dead and helpless as their wooden gods. And after all these last are the best signs by which to distinguish them as heathen like unto their gods. And alas! alas! how many such gods and nations are there still in the world!

OBITUARIES

APPOINTMENTS, ADS. MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHNNIE R. CURRY.

Mr. P. D. Gold,

Dear Friend:—

It is with a sad and aching heart I attempt to write you a few lines concerning the life and death of Johnnie R. Curry, my dear husband. He was born June 11th, 1876 and died July 25th, 1909. He was a kind and dutiful husband and father, and oh, it is so hard to give up those we love so dear, but when the good Lord calls us we must go. Oh it is so sad and lonely now since my dear husband has gone. It seems as if I ought to see him every way I turn. I miss him so much. I hope he is at rest. He suffered so much I cannot wish him back. We were expecting his death at any time as he was very, very sick for thirteen months before he died although he was confined to his bed about a month. And until a week before he died he had hopes of getting well when he lost all hopes. He bore his afflictions with more patience than any one I have ever seen. He did not murmur at all and seemed willing to bear them until the good Lord saw fit to take him. He was not a member of any church, but he believed that the Primitive Baptists were the Lord's people, and he told me he wanted to be baptized and that he wanted Mr. Gold to baptize him. He also said, if it was the good Lord's will for him to go to Tarboro to the Primitive Baptist church he would be baptized. But he didn't get able.

All was done for him that loving hands could do but when the good Lord called him we had to give him up. He often said to me if it was the good Lord's will to take him from me not to grieve for I had done all for him that any one could do, but I could not keep off death. He told me the morning before he died that night that he wanted to go and I couldn't speak to him as he said it, but burst into tears. He told me he had a home in heaven and for me not to grieve.

All who knew him seemed to like him. He was always ready to help anyone when he could. It is so hard to give up our loved ones but it is sweet when we have a hope that they are better off.

His dear old step-mother, Mrs. Curry, was here the morning of the day he died, and he asked her to pray for him, and she asked him what did he want her to pray for. And he answered that my afflictions may be as light as they can. And she did so, and when she had finished praying, he said, I feel so much better.

He leaves a wife, three children, a father, three brothers one sister besides many relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but we hope our loss is his eternal gain.

His funeral was preached in the Baptist church in Tarboro by Elder Gold and the remains carried to the Factory cemetery and laid to rest to await the resurrection morn. That was where he so much desired to be buried.

May the good Lord bless his poor weeping wife and children that they may be prepared to meet him in heaven when they are called from this earth.

Mr. Gold, will you please publish this in the dear old Landmark as his oldest brother asked me to write, and I also desired to write his obituary.

Written by his wife,

ANNA CURRY.

Tarboro, N. C.

MRS. MARY TYSON.

By request of her daughter Mrs. R. B. Galoway, I will try to write an obituary notice of her dear old mother, Mrs. Mary Tyson. She was the daughter of Dempsey and Pollie Gay, and was born December 2, 1838, and departed this life June 30, 1909, making her stay on earth seventy years, six months and 28 days. In 1856 she was married to Gray Ellis, and unto this union were born eight children, five of them still survive. In 1877 she became a member of the Primitive Baptist church at White Oak and was baptized by Elder Jesse Baker. She was a consistent member as long as she was able to attend.

In 1903 her husband died and in 1904 she was again married to S. H. Tyson with whom she lived happily until his death which was May 1908. She stayed with her children the remainder of her days which were few in number. She was staying with her youngest daughter when she died. She was in a troubled condition for a long time but seemed to bear her sufferings patiently, her disease was heart dropsey. She told mamma some time before she died there wasn't anything in her way, that she was perfectly willing to die. She was in feeble health for about twelve months, but was confined to her bed for just five. I think she suffered for all of her sins here on earth, and I am glad they all have such a bright hope of her eternal rest.

She leaves three sisters, three brothers, five children, several grand and great-grand children, with a host of relatives and friends to mourn her departure, but we feel that our loss is her eternal gain.

Her niece,
NANNIE STOKES.

MALISA HAMILTON.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I will try and write a short notice of the death of my dear sister, Malisa Hamilton. She was my oldest sister and her name is so sweet and dear to me.

She was born near Beulah, Hyde county, N. C., April 15th, 1853, if I make no mistake, and died May 1st, 1909. She was the eldest of eight children and was the most patient person I have ever seen. She was often heard to say amidst her troubles, there is an end to it all.

She was a consistent member of the Primitive Baptist church and was always ready to do for the brethren. Since moving from her neighborhood her home has always been mine when I would go over there to church, I shall miss her so much that it will be sad there now. Her presence was so sweet to me,

She leaves a heart-stricken husband, one son, three sisters, two brothers and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. But oh, when we with an eye of faith glimpse that most beautiful place where she is, we cannot wish her back into this troublesome world.

The day she died she told me of the good neighbors she had. She said nothing hurt her and that she was in perfect peace and felt as though she was only drifting. And I feel that she was drifting across the river of death where no traveler ever returns. She passed away very quietly.

As a sister she was kind, as a child obedient, as a wife affectionate and true.

I hope all the dear brethren will remember the bereaved ones.

C. C. BROWN.

Reidsville, N. C., Aug. 21, 1909.

I wish to say to the readers of the Landmark that on May 30th, 1909, at Ashboro, N. C., a brother from Sugg's Creek church whose name I have forwarded to the clerk of said church, made certain statements to me and in a private letter to Elder Gold, I made the same statements to him, and by some mishap the statements were made public in Zion's Landmark of Aug. 15, 1909, on pages 434 and 435. Said statements, being damaging to Elder J. D. Draughn and the church at Sugg's Creek, and I having been informed by the Pastor and several members of Sugg's Creek church, that the statements made and published are false, and the making public of these statements being my unintentional wrong, I ask Elder Draughn and Sugg's Creek church to forgive me this sin.

L. H. HARDY.

I, J. D. Draughn, Pastor of Sugg's Creek church, do, on my part and in behalf of the church, accept the above confession of Elder Hardy, when the same shall have been signed and published in Zion's Landmark.

I confess that I feel unworthy of receiving confession from such a man as Elder L. H. Hardy, a servant of God as I believe.

I now cordially invite Elder Hardy to visit any of my churches, when he has a mind so to do, and preach for us.

JAS. D. DRAUGHN.

The next session of the Black Creek Association is appointed to be held with the church at Nashville, N. C., Friday, Saturday and 4th Sunday in Oct. A general invitation is extended. Persons visiting by rail should be at Rocky Mount on Thursday or early Friday morning.

Thurman, Va., Sept. 6, 1909.

Owing to sickness of my wife I will not be able to fill appointments commencing at Little Creek, Monday after the third Sunday in September on to the Smith River Association at Center.

Dear brethren, I regret very much having made these appointments, and not be able to fill them; but feel that you can excuse me under the circumstances.

Brethren, pray for me that I may be reconciled to God's will, let it be what it may.

Your distressed brother,

W. H. SHIELDS.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Wilson, N. C.

Dear Brother:—

The prospects of increased patronage, together with the installation of Commercial Business Course, Shorthand and Typewriting Course, Elocution and Orchestra Music, have forced upon us the construction of a handsome new Academy which is now nearly complete and which is expected to be complete for fall opening Oct. 12th. We are also putting in a new Piano and Typewriter, thus making three Pianos and one Organ in the Music Dept., and two Typewriters in our Typewriting Dept., and many other improvements have been made. The maintenance of an Orchestra will no doubt be a good advertisement for the school. The heavy expense at which we have been has urged us to appeal to our Baptist and friends for their patronage; and therefore, I am going to ask you, if you have such a mind, to give space in the Landmark for such expression of approval of this school as you have in heart to give. We believe we are better prepared to serve the people now than ever before and especially desire their patronage this fall. Our faculty will consist of four teachers well trained for their special work.

Yours in hope,

J. W. GILLIAM.

I consider Brother Gilliam's School a desirable place to obtain a practical, solid education. The surroundings are good and the teachers capable and attentive.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to EXPERIENCE.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Brother—Enclosed find a letter written to me by a dear sister, wife of Elder Pilot Clayton, who is a member of Antioch church, Hopkins Co., Kentucky.

You will please publish in the Landmark if you think proper, though if not all will be right. I enjoyed it very much and I feel like I want others to enjoy it also.

Your sister in hope,
ROWAN CLAYTON.

Roxboro, N. C.

Mrs. Rowan Clayton:

Dear Sister—I feel like I want to fulfill your request if it is the good Lord's will, although I don't feel as if I could interest you, for if I have an experience at all it seems to me like it is the poorest I ever heard, and still I wouldn't exchange it for all the world. If I had as good a one as you, I wouldn't mind writing it, as I enjoyed yours, oh so much.

I was raised by Methodist parents, and they were as good parents as any one ever had. I was taught that I could get religion any time I wanted it, and I thought when I got older I would seek religion. At the age of sixteen or seventeen I began to have serious thoughts about dying and would try to pray, but it didn't seem to do me and good. I would go up stairs and begin reading the bible, but if any one came up where I was I would put the bible down and take up another book. I did not want anyone to know I was reading the bible or know I was in trouble. But my troubles grew worse all the time. I would lie awake at nights and cry, but did not want Pilot to know anything about it. I begged the Lord for mercy and got into so much trouble I thought I wasn't going to live long, but I said, "If my soul is sent to hell Thy righteous law approves it well," and that it was right for me to go there I felt so sinful. But I continued to beg the Lord for mercy, when all at once my burden left me.

I did not see any big light as some do, nor did I feel like shouting, but just calm and felt that my burden was gone. I got up out of the bed and lit the lamp and thought I would try and read the bible, but Pilot's step-father was there and I was afraid I would break his rest. So I went back to bed and told Pilot how I felt. The next morning before I went into the dining room I wished I had not told any one of my feelings. I was afraid I was deceived and had deceived him and I tried to pray if I was deceived to make me right.

We were living at this time near Antioch church and the next time I went to meeting I felt that I wanted a home among the Old Baptists but felt too unworthy to be among such good people. And I don't feel worthy now to be with them, but oh, how could I be without them; where they live I want to live and where they go I want to go.

Sometimes I would go to meeting and wished I had stayed at home, for I wanted to offer myself to the church so bad but felt so vile and sinful I did not think they would receive me. I lost as much sleep over joining the church as I did when in trouble.

I went on in this way for about four years and it was on my mind almost all the time, so I said I would offer myself to the church and I did so and to my surprise and joy I was received. At this time Elder J. D. Down was pastor at Antioch and the next morning I was baptized by him.

Oh, if I could always feel as I did that day. I never felt any better than I did when I came out of the water. But troubles and trials came, and it seems like sometimes there is not much pleasure here for poor me. Sometimes I feel that if I were called to die all would be well, and sometimes I am made to doubt whether I have ever been changed or not. I feel so cast down at times that I feel as if I didn't have a friend in all this wide world. but, "What a friend we have in Jesus."

I know I don't live as I ought, and I know if I am ever saved it will be by the mercy and grace of God, for there is nothing good that I have done. I feel like sometimes if the brethren and sisters knew me as I know myself they would not let me live with them, but oh, I desire to live with them until death. I feel it is by the mercy of God that He has blessed me with the knowledge that I was a poor undone sinner without hope and without God in the world. And in blessing me with this knowledge He also blessed me with the knowledge that all preparation to meet Him in peace must come from Him through the channel of mercy.

After this I hope He has blessed me with the knowledge, by His grace and revelation of Himself, to embrace Jesus as my Savior. I feel these are great blessings to me, yet my life thus far has been a failure. I feel to have lived so far short of what I have desired. My greatest desire is to live more patient and humble, always at the feet of my precious brethren and sisters and above all at the feet of my precious Savior.

Well sister Rowan, if this is not an experience, I have none. Please remember me that I may be faithful until death and then with you receive the crown of life that fadeth not away. It will not be long before we know how sweet it will be to die and go home to be with Jesus which is better than to live here on earth with so many sorrows and heartaches. But the good Lord never puts more on us than we are able to bear.

I humbly ask you to pray for our dear little family and especially poor unworthy me, for I feel like I need your prayers every day. It is a cross for me to try to write my experience, but we are commanded to always be ready to give a reason of the hope that is within us in meekness and fear and to take up our cross and follow Him. So farewell. Your little unworthy sister in Christ I hope,

IDA CLAYTON.

Roxboro, N. C.

HOPING IN GOD.

Elder P. D. Gold:

My dear brother in Christ and father in Israel, if I be worthy to claim such sacred relationship.

I feel inclined to write you a few lines as you have been so kind and forbearing toward me. In all my blunders and imperfections you seem to be prepared by the Lord, I hope to look over them with sympathy and love. The love of God hides a multitude of faults.

Dear brother Gold, I don't ever feel that I can ever interest you or comfort you or any of the children of God, for I am so vile and sinful myself. I fear it is only a false pretense and it will be in vain. But I get so miserable and wretched at times I am bound to seek comfort from the tried people of God. I want to know if they feel as I do, and if so that soothes my sorrows, for I feel the more people see me and are with me the more they are disgusted with my silly appearance. If I could view myself as I do others and could feel as firm as they look to be, how happy I would be. While I mean to be firm and sincere, I fear there is something lacking on my part. The Lord doeth all things well, but my dear brother I am weak and sinful and fall short daily, and so disobedient that it causes me to sigh and mourn. But it seems I don't do or get any better. So even this is a comfort to me at times, if in this life only we have hope in Christ, then we are of all men most miserable. I sometimes think it is of the Lord, and again I think it is of the flesh and Satan, and if the latter is my case sad will be my fate. But I try to trust the Lord with all my heart, and do believe He will fulfill His promises if I am only one of His little ones. I hope He will deliver me out of my distress and temptations in due season. The tempter seems to be my elbow messenger. He is ever ready to work on the weak part. He is a pretty smart fellow. He often suggests plans that are easy and best. But if I do follow him or his plans it is to my shame and sorrow. Then he tells me, it is the very worst way I could have gone and then I am made to mourn over my lame steps. I cry to the Lord for mercy, for Satan has entangled me in his snare. He is a liar, but he comes to us in such a pleasant way sometimes and then is when he is most likely to deceive us. But this is only to try our faith. We must fight against evil with the sword of truth. Tell him he is a liar and the father of it is the best way to make him flee.

I have tried to pray to the Lord to guide and direct us through this low-ground of sorrow and vexation, for the Lord is merciful and kind and His mercy endureth forever.

These words have been with me at times for nearly four years, very forcible to: "Ho ye every one that thirsts, come buy milk and honey without money and without price." What a blessed promise to the poor way-worn pilgrim while journeying through this world to a better world above. This is enough to cheer the hearts of the poor and needy, and those who feel poor in spirit. But I am afraid to embrace and grasp such rich promises of the Lord. But I can't get clear of it; its with me continually. I feel poor and needy and I need the grace of God to keep me from going astray. Turn me oh Lord, and I shall be turned, for I am prone to sin and wander in forbidden paths. Lord, help Thou my unbelief and keep me in the straight and narrow way that leads to life everlasting, for I have been harrassed both in body and in mind almost beyond degree it seems, yet our greatest trials are nothing when compared with the Savior's.

Ho ye every one that thirsts draw nigh, come and buy milk and honey without money and without price. Isn't that glorious news to poor mourning souls? for blest are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled. What is sweeter than milk and honey? Nothing in this world that I know of. So trust in Jesus Christ our Savior, for he is the way, the truth and the life.

Praise His Holy name.

Your little unworthy sister in hope of a better world on high,

MARY MALISSA BROOKS.

Greenville, N. C.

REJOICING.

Dear Brother Gold:

Enclosed you will find a letter my daughter wrote me with no intention of its being published, but I thought it might be a comfort to some poor tried soul that has felt as she did. It was a comfort to me in these trying hours that one of our members should have such a feast. In time of our trials the Lord will withhold no good thing from them that thought upon His name. I feel thankful that the Lord has enabled her to express some of her feelings, even though some may say, you had better keep your mouth shut. And sometimes I feel that it would be best for me if I did and then again this scripture comes into my mind, "Them that fear the Lord speak often one to another," and I think the scripture also says, pure love casteth out fear. I think that means fear of the brethren or sisters.

I hope that the fear of the Lord will abide with me as I think that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and I feel that I have long since learned that it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, and I do feel that I fall so far short of doing my duty that the wrath of God is surely upon me.

Now brother Gold, I hope you may have a mind to pray for me that I may not be as one of the foolish women that you described in your able discourse at the Staunton River Association.

I will risk this to your better judgment whether to publish or not.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,

MRS. B. W. ASHWORTH.

Penhook, Va.

Dear Mama:

This is Monday morning after the Staunton River Association, and it seems I am bound to write to some one today and tell them some of my feelings. I have been trying to get rid of the impression to write but I can't. I thought I would put it off anyway, but I had another spell like I had yesterday, and so if the good Lord will direct my pen I will try and write just how I felt yesterday. I enjoyed Brother Gold's sermon but somehow it did not have the same weight with me Brother Jones' did. I felt I couldn't keep from getting up and giving him my hand, shouting loud and praising God, and I put my hand on my mouth to keep from shouting. But it seemed the Lord was going to take my breath from me. I even forgot I had a baby in my lap, and when I laid my head upon your breast I thought I would never raise it again and would rather die right there than anywhere else for there was a brightness that shone around that was above the brightness of the sun.

Mama, can you tell me why it is that I always draw back and try to keep from doing my duty? I saw the most beautiful light shine around Brother Jones that I have ever seen. I could see the image of the Lord in his face and it seemed His presence was all around about him.

I have not felt like the same person yesterday and this morning, but old Satan has stepped up since I have written what I have and says that I am mistaken in the whole matter—that I am just trying to make you all believe that I am something when I am nothing. But if the Lord is in the matter I do not think He will let the devil get the upper hand of me, but it does seem I am so often tempted that I sometimes think I haven't any hope at all and then again I would not take the world for my little hope.

One morning about two weeks ago I was churning when all at once it seemed that the burden of a rebellious spirit that I had been bowed down under for sometime left me and it seemed that everything was praising God. The churning even sounded sweet to me and I began singing praises to God. I thought then I would never again have so many doubts and fears. But that season did not last. I soon began to doubt as before.

I heard a lady making fun of the old ball-headed men standing around the stand just swallowing that stuff in. Mama, I wish she could see them as I did yesterday and she would never make any more fun of them, for I thought it was a lovely sight to see those old saints around the stand and it seemed to me that they were gathering crumbs from the Master's table as they fell from the lips of those dear old preachers.

I felt I could not leave without giving Brother Jones my hand and telling him how I enjoyed his sermon.

Now I have written this little bit and I am tempted not to send it. But I wrote one before to you and did not send it and it gave me so much trouble I am going to send this anyway. If I could talk to the brethren and sisters as I wish to I feel it would give me so much relief, but it seems I am afraid I will say something that I ought not to say. The scripture says it is better to have a mill-stone tied about the neck and cast into the sea than to offend one of God's little ones, and I feel that it is surely so. But I have received many stripes for not speaking when I should, but if the Lord does not put words in my mouth how can I utter them.

You must excuse me for bothering you with my troubles, and I guess I had better close lest I worry you.

Your loving daughter,

Alice Davidson.

DOOR OF HOPE.

Elder P. D. Gold, Wilson, N. C.:

Dear Elder Gold—If you will pardon this intrusion I will hand you some of my thoughts concerning a portion of scripture which has rested on my mind for several days until it became burdensome. After writing this it seemed to leave me. At the time of writing it was not clear in my mind as to what disposition to make of it, but I send it to you to make such disposition of as you see fit. It is mine no longer.

I met you two years ago in New York City and heard you preach twice one Sunday during the Warwick Association in 1907, and have held you in pleasant remembrance ever since. I had hoped to see you at the Delaware River Association this year but was disappointed.

Remember me to Sister Laura Reed when you see her.

I have suffered a great deal in the last two years. Physically my health has been very poor, kidney trouble mainly, and have not been able to work now for more than four months as I injured my spine in a fall. Spiritually speaking, it has been dark and lonely, yet I know the Lord has been good to me, and that all my afflictions, both spiritually and naturally have been good for me and though it overcomes and crushes out this life it is as He would have it and is to His glory. I realize I am in His hands to do with as is His pleasure, and as He does nothing in vain there is a grand purpose even in our afflictions though we cannot see or know what it is. We may never know but it shall not return unto Him void &c.

An unworthy brother,

S. SULLY FISHER.

Hosea 2:14, 15.

"Therefore behold, I will allure her and bring her into the wilderness and speak comfortably to her.

"And I will give her, her vineyards from thence and the valley of Achor for a door of hope, and she shall sing there as in the days when she came up out of the land of Egypt."

This portion of scripture has been on my mind for several days and of which I can give no account as why or what for. I seem to see a beauty in it, also the preceding and succeeding verses of the entire chapter. It seems to me that the whole chapter contains the experience of the Lords children wherever they may be, and the reason it seems beautiful to me is I hope I see my life and myself described.

By referring to the first of the chapter we can see this woman spoken of as an outcast. She is not his wife, neither is he her husband. That is the first thing I realized in my own travel of mind—that I was an outcast, without a home, neither here nor hereafter. That the sins I had committed and on account of the corrupt nature of which I was, had forever alienated me from the fear of the Great Jehovah whom I realize to have all power.

In this state of mind we generally begin to try to do something whereby we can in some way gain favor with God and hope to come into an acceptable condition by leading a good life, doing good and being attentive at church and saying prayer regularly. This is very good in some ways and of itself, but nevertheless with such an intent as to gain admittance to the glorious state of the Redeemer of Israel is no more nor less than playing the harlot. For if one has been brought to a sensible understanding of their condition spiritually and they realize that there must needs be some change in them before they can be a partaker of eternal bliss, they have known Christ. Now, then, having known Him, to leave and run away and try to better your condition by being a strict moral person, with the idea that your soul's salvation depends on your good conduct morally, is simply joining yourself to a false god which is adultery.

Now then in verse five we are told that the woman says she will go after her lovers which are these false gods for they are many. (Spoken of as lovers, the plural.) But He the true and only Christ is spoken of as "my love" because there is but one. The seventh verse says, "she shall follow after her lovers but she shall not find them nor overtake them." Then she comes to the conclusion that she will return, for it says, "She shall say," I will go and return to my first husband. That word shall is there and it must be as it is said, for I have never been able to jump over any of these shalls, nor she, in any way to escape a thing that the Great Jehovah has said shall be. So she shall do these things. Now then she is exposed more than ever for her wool and flax given her for covering have been taken away. (9th verse.) I will repeat the tenth verse: "And now will I discover her lewdness in the sight of her lovers, and none shall deliver her out of mine hand." More wills and shalls.

Now we come down to the particular part which arrested my attention. I suppose and I thought I was not a whit behind any one else in thinking, that when one was given a hope and made able to relate the dealings of the Lord with them to the church and be received, their troubles were all over. But I have found out in my case it was entirely different from that. For I well remember the day on which I was baptized, (fourth Sunday in May, 1907 by Elder John McConnell at foot of 155th St. Hudson river, New York City.) It was a day of darkness to me—the great unworthiness I felt in me to attempt to tread in the same steps that Jesus Christ, the mighty King of Israel did walk in when here in the flesh, that it was surely mocking on my part to go through with it. And so it has been since most of the time. My way has been dark and it is a lonely road with frightful beasts and figures, terrible and dangerous looking places.

But this woman we are thinking about was allured and brought into a wilderness. I see no account of any one else living there; there seems to be no neighbors—must be an awfully lonesome place, especially after living such a gay and happy life. But he says also, "and speaks comfortably to her." Now the beauty of it is, where we are comfortably to, and when He speaks this wilderness immediately becomes a garden, well watered and filled with all kinds of pleasant plants in full bloom and trees and nice fruit. A prison becomes a palace when He comes with His felt presence. And in this wilderness she is given vineyards.

I trust I understand this experimentally for any other understanding is unprofitable. For I have been comfortably spoken to while in this wilderness. There has been many times within the last two years which have been the darkest two years of my existence, for I have carried the greatest burden I ever carried, until my whole frame trembles with weakness. Sleep has departed from mine eyes, my joy has turned into mourning. I have tears of sadness for my laughter and I have a dry eyed grief which no mortal can describe. Yet in all this I have seen bright places that are unlawful for mortal to describe. Great and wondrous are His ways.

"The valley of Achor for a door of hope." We remember the valley of Achor was one terrible place, a place of untold agony, where Achor was stoned to death by his own people because he had troubled Israel by taking a goodly Babylonish garment, some silver and some gold. Stoned to death there, buried there, a heap of stones piled up on his grave and it is called the valley of Achor to this day. Now this terrible place where so much suffering, disgrace and humiliation is, is become a door of hope for this woman which is the church. The valley of Achor representing Jesus Christ. He is the door of hope; not only so, but the very door of heaven itself. The only entrance whereby we can enter in and go in and out and find pasture. If a man enters any other way the same is a thief and a robber, so said Christ.

Paul gloried in his tribulation. So do we when we realize what trouble is, and that it is through tribulation we enter into a fellowship with the saints here and hereafter and into eternal glory itself.

The only way to be a christian is to be like Christ. And the only way to be like Him is to be of sorrow and acquainted with grief. Then this valley of Achor or trouble becomes our hope, because tribulation works patience, patience experience, experience hope and hope maketh not ashamed for the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. Our hope is centered in Christ which is safe, and the only evidence I can see is in the spiritual trouble I see. But one who wears the same coat I do, lives in the same house I do, persists in following me around wherever I go, tells me my troubles are not genuine, nor the right kind; you are only troubled a little bit. The Lord's people see trouble that is much greater than yours. But I say to you my friends that it is trouble to hear this, to be told that you are not one of the Lord's people, especially so when told so by such an artful deceiver as the devil is. This is trouble to be told this, very great and of large magnitude, only known of by the living subject, which is an heir of glory, a child of the Great God of heaven that holds everything and works His sovereign will and none can say, what doest thou. It is the living subject the devil has his pick at. Job was a living man when the devil went after him, lived through the conflict and came out a living man with twice the possessions he had at first. My friends the devil never took the life of one of the dear children, for their lives are hid in Christ and were hid before the foundation of the earth was laid. Your very existence was hid, and if hid by God Almighty Himself how can the devil find it. It is safe as can be because God controls the devil and gives him all the power he has, that is all the power the devil has comes from God. He has no power of his own, absolutely powerless of himself, for God has all power, therefore there is none for no one else except as it is given them.

The devil is given power to tempt the Lord's people, to buffet them around and to afflict them while here, to frighten them when alone in the wilderness, to bite them as the serpents bit the Israelites away back yonder in the wilderness. But then there was the brazen serpent, (which was typical of Christ) was lifted up by Moses (which represents the law) which healed them as soon as they looked upon it. But none looks that way until they are bitten. Remember that. You have no need of relief until you are wounded. So with us the law (Jewish law) lifted up Christ and crucified Him according to their law as they understood, for it was blasphemy for any to claim an equalness with God, to claim to be the Son of God, and death was the penalty.

So then it was the law that lifted Him up above us all, so now all who look on Him after being bitten by the devil are immediately healed. But my friends, this remedy is always behind us, and we never look the right way until the voice says to us: this is the way, walk ye in it. So we do not look of our own accord and knowledge. Now these terrible bites of the old serpent, the devil himself, the loneliness and every suffering experienced in this place is given us for a door of hope as the valley of Achor is given this woman. The Lord gave to Jacob for a possession for him and his seed the land round about where Jacob had that dream when he was on his way to Laban, his mother's brother, to escape the wrath of Esau. And it is said the Lord found him in a wilderness, a dessert land, a vast howling wilderness. A terrible place this is, but for all that the Lord was with him and kept him as the apple of his eye. And this is the Lord's childrens possession here in this life, and it is the door of our hope.

"And she shall sing there as in the days of her youth." Five more letters which spell "shall." She shall sing there for that is where she lives. And he says he speak comfortably to her, and when he speaks thus to anyone immediately they sing; not a song of words, but the song that the Redeemer of Israel sings. "And they sang a new song saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and open the seals thereof for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation." "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5:9, 10.

This is the song that is sung and it is sung in the wilderness. My mind is that it will be sung with a complete fulness hereafter for the natural mind cannot conceive of spiritual blessings. We have not seen, neither have we heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man the things that God has prepared for those that love Him. So I never aim to describe how the future will be. Man is greatly blessed if he is given to understand a little of his past life for we cannot fully by any means understand our past, and it is the height of folly for us to try to describe the future. But we know that even amidst our tribulations we are spoken comfortably to and we do experience even short seasons of singing and are given a vineyard and are able to eat of the fruit at times to our fill, and also are given a hope in our trouble. It is all I have to build on.

That to my mind is Christ, He being a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, and is the chief corner stone, the foundation of the church, the support of the woman. The husband of this woman, for she has returned to her former husband, covered with shame, with no other plan but "Lord have mercy," bathing his feet with tears while others neglect to anoint his hair with oil. But this woman bathes his feet with her tears and begs for mercy, which in her own words, is the better part.

"And I will sow her unto me in the earth and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy and I will say to them that were not my people, thou art my people, and they shall say, Thou art my God." The security of these "wills" and "shalls" is very solid. Were it not that all power rested in Jehovah the scripture would be of little or no account to any one, but seeing He has all power we have a feeling of safety when it His pleasure to reveal Himself to us as our God. And He says in many places that they shall say, Thou art my God.

It is useless to try to describe what the word "all" means, for all intelligent people know that to possess all of anything leaves absolutely none for any one else, and when one is given any power it is simply given for the time being and is not a permanent possession. The same with the devil.

This letter has grown long; first thought but I put it on paper just as it came to me. I am fully aware of the fact that if the Lord impressed me to write this that He has a purpose in it and will place it where He sees fit. I know of myself I can neither write nor speak any good things, and if a profitable expression leaves me it is not of me for I ignorant wicked and rebellious; sinful beyond any expression I can give, wallowing in my own filth until it becomes loathsome to me and I desire to be rid of it but know that while in the flesh I must see such things, but if I am really what I hope I am I will at last be free from sin and wicked thoughts —will see Christ and the glory He had with the Father before the world was and be satisfied. Until then the valley of Achor is my door of hope.

BROTHERHOOD.

Please give your views on the brotherhood of man which Elder Hurst says we deny.

SALLIE B. HOLLAND.

Axton, Va.

The Primitive Baptists hold that all mankind are the descendants of Adam and Eve, and in that sense they are all brothers, though what we naturally call brothers are only those that have the same father and mother. In that sense Cain and Abel were brothers. Half brothers are such as have the same father but different mothers, or vice versa. First cousins are such whose father or mother were brothers or sisters. Now in that sense are all Adam's descendants brothers? No they are not.

In the spiritual sense brothers or brethren are all that are born of God. Such as make it manifest they are born of God have the same Father and Mother and are brothers and brethren. In this relationship there are no half-brothers nor cousins, but all are brethren. "Love the brotherhood," 1st Pet. 2:17, is this brotherhood common to all the saints or to those born of incorruptible seed, or the chosen generation of Jesus Christ, a royal priesthood, a holy nation.

We are to honor all men, but we love this brotherhood—this peculiar people zealous of good works.

All are not Israel which are of Israel, but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. The children of the flesh are not the children of promise. According to the flesh Jacob and Esau were twin brothers, yet the Lord loved the one and hated the other. The children of promise are covenanted for the seed. These are the children that are partakers of flesh and blood—that were chosen in Christ before the world began, or before the foundation of the world, and heirs of promise according to the hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie promises before the world began. These are the brethren of whom Jesus is not ashamed. They are the brotherhood. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

These are the children given to Jesus.

How is it known that they are the brethren? They love one another. We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren. He that loveth is born of God for God is love.
 Not like Cain who hated his natural brother and wherefore hated he him, because his own works were evil and Abel's works were righteous.

Hereby shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another.

He that loveth not knoweth not God,
 for God is love.

POTSHERD STRIVING.

"Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker. Let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth. Shall the clay say to him that fashioned it, what makest thou? or thy work, he hath no hands." Isa.
 45:9.

What are potsherds? They are broken pieces of pottery. When Job scraped himself with a potsherd it was showing that he was broken as a pot is shivered, and scraping himself with a piece of that broken pottery was so suitably expressive of the abased, broken condition of his vessel so frail and wretched.

Why should a potsherd—a broken piece of clay—strive with him that made it? Hath not the potter power over the clay of the same lump to make one vessel to honor and another to dishonor? We are the clay and God the potter, or maker. Literally has not the potter full power over the clay? Does the clay suggest how it is to be made or shaped, whether to honor or to dishonor? Does the clay help at all in the making? What if God willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long suffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction: And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy which he had afore prepared unto glory, &c.

Were Jacob and Esau by nature of different clay? They were twin brothers, having the same father and mother, yet God loved Jacob and hated Esau.

Now who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it why hast thou made me thus? Shall the clay say to him that fashioned it. What makest Thou?

Let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth. That would seem to be more becoming. But what would that amount to? Can it change anything, or make one hair white or black?

Is it not to God who showeth mercy that we must come?

It is in the nature of man to attempt to do what he cannot—to meddle with things he knows nothing about—to gaze into the holy of holies if allowed—to put forth his hand and steady the ark—to put forth his hand and eat and have power, if he could. The little things that he can do, if so minded, are so much easier. Be still and know that God is the Lord, and that man is less than nothing and vanity is taking ones place as becometh him. To lay ones hand on his mouth, and to put his mouth in the dust surely becomes vain man. To abhor ones self and repent in dust and ashes is surely becoming for vain man.

When one is forward to assert his opinion, and to lay down or set up his notion as final and declarative of what the truth is, and hence that all should accept his utterances as ending all controversies is surely presumptuous.

Man knows nothing of himself, God is the judge. He will make it plain. He speaks but man perceives it not. God makes wars to cease to the ends of the earth. Why should man vain and proud as he is, and conceited and ignorant as he is reply to God or think he has done so?

P. D. G.

MODERN TIMES.

So great is the progress so-called of men's works of late, and such great changes are wrought that a new religion is needed—a new faith, new doctrines, and a new application of the same to suit and fit the times.

Is it possible that the doctrine of Jesus is not enough to satisfy his people? It is true the world grows too large to be suited with Jesus. Was it not true when he was on earth that he did not suit the world? Did they not say away with this man? We will not have him to reign over us; and is it not true that the world is no better than it was of old?

We are told in scripture to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. That faith is perfect, and we are not to receive them, nor bid them God speed.

It is common to see in the newspapers and periodicals many new ways and doctrines that are not of God, and a denial of the doctrine of Jesus. The tendency is to deny the doctrine of Jesus and preach only the works of men. That is the new doctrines. Whatever men teach is their doctrine. If it be money, human effort, worldly learning, or whatever it is that is their doctrine and their faith.

P. D. G.

"O ye simple, understand wisdom: and ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart."

LEAST.

Elder John W. Gardner requests my view of Matt. 11:11, "Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he."

Two plain, direct declarations are here set forth. 1st, that there is none born of women as great as John the Baptist. 2nd, that the least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he. Then it sets over one against the other—those born of women and those born of God, or born in the Kingdom of heaven. Jesus was born of woman, but not as an ordinary birth of woman—not as a natural birth. Then considering John with all other men born of woman none were as great as John. He was more than a prophet. He was not as a prophet foretelling what shall be, but yet not at hand, but John was serving in the Kingdom of heaven. He preached the Kingdom of heaven or gospel. The law and the prophets were until John. Since then the Kingdom of heaven is preached, see Mark 1:1-5.

Here is a distinct declaration that John's ministry was the beginning of the Kingdom of heaven. Then his service was more noble than that of any prophet under the law service, or in the prophetic Kingdom. That was a wonderful service, more honorable than that of any other class of men, for prophets ranked higher than kings or any other class of men; for they rebuked kings. But John's labor was in a greater field, in the light of the coming Messiah, in the spirit and power of Elias, and still greater in the light of Jesus the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. He was nearer to Jesus than any king or prophet born of woman. He baptized Jesus and was sent from heaven to do that wonderful deed. He was to announce or herald his coming. He was to make ready a people prepared for Jesus. He was to make them ready—not to make them—but to make them ready—to present them to the Lord as his followers. All the preparation is of the Lord. John is sent by the Lord. His birth was marvelous, his preparation for this work was by the Spirit of God. No man had anything whatever to do in this preparation. For he was in the wilderness until the time of his showing forth or entrance upon his ministry. John wrought no miracle, but how glorfous his preaching. All things he spake concerning Jesus were true. None could excel this service. To speak every thing he was sent to speak, and honor Jesus as he did, and point him out as he did, and handle him as he did gives him a greatness surpassing that of any man ever born of woman.

2nd. But he that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than John, or greater than any man born of woman.
Then the greatness of the Kingdom of heaven causes the difference. It must be considered and remembered that so great is the Kingdom of heaven that the least one in it is greater than the greatest ever born of woman, or coming into the world in the ordinary generation of Adam. This gives us a startling view of the greatness of the Kingdom of heaven. Because in this Kingdom of heaven there is nothing natural. For Jesus said my Kingdom is not of this world. Nor does it come by observation as things of earth come. While the subjects of this Kingdom are by nature children of wrath as others, yet being born again—not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible seed by the word of God—not of man, nor of the flesh, nor of the will of them to the Lord as his followers. All the preparation is of the Lord. John is sent by the Lord. His birth was marvelous, his preparation for this work was by the Spirit of God. No man had anything whatever to do in this preparation. For he was in the wilderness until the time of his showing forth or entrance upon his minis-

If you consider Jesus as the least one in the Kingdom of heaven as being servant of all, as suffering more than any other, or as bearing all the burdens of others—as humbling himself to the lowest service of washing away all their filth by laying down his life for those that were his enemies and slayers, and never could reward him, or whether you consider the promotion, favor and everlasting blessings and honors conferred on them of eternal glory,—Jesus as the servant of all these makes himself less than the least one he serves. For he that sits at meat is greater than he that serves, but Jesus the Son of Man is as he that serves and therefore the least.

Or whether it is considered that the least one born of God or born in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than the greatest one born of woman it is true as Jesus speaks. We should have no question as to the truthfulness of all that Jesus said, but how to understand or explain this to the satisfaction of our darkened minds is the difficulty with us often.

P. D. G.

DEVELOPMENT.

This is bringing out and manifesting what is the seed of ones life and character. If one is without the principle of faith in the Lord Jesus then he is wanting in every principle of true or eternal life so that there is no development or growth of the life spiritual. His life is only the natural life of one that if of the earth. Man may be what is called moral and yet possess only this natural life. For there is no seed or germ of eternal or spiritual life in one who is not born of God. He is of the earth earthy and cleaves to the dust.

One born of God has eternal or spiritual life, and this becomes the controlling, governing principle or power of his character enabling him to seek those things which are above this world. His confidence is in God, and he feels that God rules and therefore that all things work for good to them that love God and are the called according to his purpose. Such are quiet and composed in storms or distresses feeling that the Lord reigns. How good is confidence in God. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee because he trusts in thee.

This development of character is necessarily good and true, for the principle engrafted in him is from God and perfects the character of its possessor.

P. D. G.

I, J. B. Smith, to the Primitive Baptist Church, do want to express my feelings to you. I was one that was born a gentile and loved the works of them until it pleased God to let me see myself as He saw me, and I saw this the day I joined the Missionary church. I did not stay with them because I was not of them.

Now what comfort I get is from the poor, who have no confidence in the flesh, or from the fountain that flows to all that are in the house. In this house is the elect who had been called. I was in the act of being examined by the pastor and he asked me if I had a hope that God for Christ's sake had pardoned my sins. I said yes. Then the Lord of heaven spoke and said, you told a lie.

Brethren, that was the first time the Lord ever spoke to me. It brought forth condemnation and death in me. To the wise a few words are sufficient—to those that have been called to judgment. First condemned, then forgiven. This was revealed to me twenty-one years ago on Friday, and now I am out of the wall of the Primitive Baptist church which I love and believe to be the church of the living God.

Now unto the church when such little ones come to you, you will not receive them unto fellowship until you have carried them to some pond or creek and have baptized them in the water that we drink to satisfy our fleshly wants. I say to you that the Lord does not require this for he will receive them without it. Satan himself will receive that baptism which is of man and not of God.

Brethren, examine yourselves and the bible and see if your communion is in harmony with Paul. He asks his brethren, is not the cup which we bless the communion of the blood of Christ, and the bread which we break is it not the communion of the body of Christ? I believe that I see communion as he did and not as I see ' done by making the bread with your hands and wine from wild grapes.

Now the cup which we should drink is the New Testament, and the bread that we should eat is Christ. When we eat this bread and drink this cup we show the death of Christ one to another the way the church eats and drinks.

Now I want to say something about feet-washing. I do not see it as I see it done. I believe all the things that the Lord tells to do are of the spirit, and we should wash with the water that flows from the rock which is Christ. Now if my brother tells me a truth and I say you have said well in this, I wash his feet. Now the water springs up in us and flows into the basin which is in our brother.

Now, brethren, our baptism must be from heaven and not from man, for we all are baptized by one spirit into one body. This water was in Phillip when he preached Jesus to the eunuch, and the church having the spirit in him saw that certain water. Now this water was from heaven.

Brethren I have written this because I love you and would not that we should worship idolatry.

Brother P. D. Gold please publish this for a poor sinner.

Remarks:—

While the Spirit and power of truth are felt in a deeper and higher sense than words, or literal water, or natural bread, or natural wine can discover: yet it is true that John did baptize Christ in the water of Jordan, and Phillip and the Eunuch did both go down into the water and Phillip baptized the Eunuch, and they both did come up out of the water. While Jesus gave himself the bread of heaven, and his life or blood to atone for sin, yet literally he took bread and blest and brake it, and he took the cup and blest it—the fruit of the wine, and they drank it.

These were literal acts. But the Spirit —the wheel in the middle of a wheel—guiding and sanctifying all this, as the Spirit in a man gives vitality to the physical, literal act of the body and finishes the work if good, and defiles it if bad.

The outward act is needful to complete the deed. As the body without the Spirit is dead so faith with works is dead. Faith shows itself by what it does. What God hath joined together we should not put asunder.

The doer of the word is blest in the deed. If ye know these things happy are ye if ye do them. The spirit of obedience to Jesus that sees the quality of service required and that performs is that which causes the reaping of the fruit. When the faith of Jesus is present to heal and perform then the body is brought under the true service is rendered to the Lord, and there is a performance that proves all things. This is entering into the joys of the Lord.

The Kingdom of God is with men—in men—causing them to bring forth the fruit thereof. It is shown by what it causes one to do who puts his money to the ex-changers.

The true performer feels the imperfection of the deed, yet he does it. The gospel preacher has an impression to preach, but suppose he says this is all spiritual. I will not utter a word.

How should there be a hearer where there is no speaker? One says I feel a desire to minister to the sick, but I will just think about it, but not give the needy one any thing. How is he benefitted, or how am I benefitted.

P. D. G.

FAITH—THE GIFT OF GOD, EPH. 2:8.
Faith is coupled with grace. "By grace are ye saved through faith." That grace is not of works.

For faith excludes boasting. If one is saved by works then he has ground for boasting, and most surely he occupies that ground. He then has whereof to boast. The principle and ground of salvation is all of the Lord, and hence it is all glorious. It is as much greater if it is all of the Lord than what God does is greater than what man does. Such is the harmony and perfection of God's work that it will never allow nor admit of any part of man's work joined unto it, for that would be like putting an old patch on a new garment which would mar the Lord's work.

Sure I am that when a man feels the vileness of his own doings and beholds the glory of the Lord's works he is truly glad that salvation is altogether of the Lord.

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Then faith is not in any sense the work of the creature, for it is not a thing in sight or that can be seen. We do not hope for a thing we see.

Nor do we believe things that we see with our natural sense. We do not need evidence or testimony to enable us to believe things that we see. One sees his neighbor with his natural eyes, and he does not say it must be proven that his neighbor was there. He knows he was there with him. It is not a matter of faith, for, faith depends upon or is proven by the word or evidence of another. There must be in the one in whom we believe such merit, such worth, such power, such goodness as will produce in us love, respect, confidence, trust, rest, assurance, regard, superiority, that will command in us and work in us the feeling necessary to honor and serve him.

How could one have faith in God and yet feel that God could do wrong? How could one have true faith in God and not love him? How could one have faith in the Lord and yet feel that he cannot do all his pleasure? How could one have faith in God and yet not love what God loves, or if he loved what God hates, or if he desires that which is contrary to God? If I love what is contrary to God how could I be the friend of God or be on his side?

Faith in God displays and proves a heart that is cleansed of enmity to God, and shows a state of reconciliation to God.

It works by love, it purifies the heart and overcomes the world. Hence he that has this precious faith obtained through the righteousness of God and our Saviour is pure and is saved, because the glorious work of the Lord is wrought in him. God is in him, and Jesus is in him, and the finished, perfect obedience of Jesus is wrought in him. By this faith he stands and hence he is complete in Christ. By Jesus all that believe in him are justified from all things from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses, and if not by the law of Moses then surely not by any works of the flesh, for the law that came by Moses was holy and just and good, or is spiritual; but I am carnal, sold under sin.

We are shut up under the curse of that law until faith comes. Faith then must come to us, and we are shut up and cannot come forth until that faith comes.

What must we do to work the works of God? This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent. God sent Jesus into the world. To believe on Jesus is the work of God, and hence it is a perfect work. Being justified by faith we have peace with God. Without faith it is impossible to please God. For he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of those that diligently seek him.

Some one says there is something that man can do to save himself. Well another says to him, what is it that he must do? What is it that Christ has left for the sinner to do? If Jesus has finished the work that God gave him to do what is it in addition that the sinner can do or must do? To believe on Jesus Christ and him crucified is the work pleasing to God because it is of God.

There must be a preparation in the man—a new heart must be given him, a right spirit must be renewed in him. This preparation of the heart is of the Lord. A new tongue must be given him, and this answer of the tongue is of the Lord. The eyes of his understanding must be enlightened. He must be a new creature.

Old things must have passed away, and all things become new. He must be born again. What can he do by himself to obtain this? One says he must repent. Yes, but Jesus is exalted a prince and a Saviour to give repentance to Israel and the forgiveness of sins. When one finds in himself a hating of his own life, a loathing of self, then the works is begun in him that will work out and show itself. Make the tree good and the fruit will be good. Then this character searching the scripture will find himself condemned justly, and has the witness in himself that the bible is a faithful record of fallen man, and testifies of a Redeemer for lost man. This one then being humble desires to hear the gospel preached—not to hear what man can do for the Lord, or for himself, but he desires to know what the Lord has done for such a poor vile sinner as himself. The preacher tells him of his wicked heart and life, and he knows the preacher is sent of God to preach. Faith comes to this poor mourning soul, and with the heart he believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believed.

Now there is in this manifested subject of grace a witness that he loves the truth. He that believes hath the witness in himself. Here is a character that loves the Lord—that believes God—that has faith which is the gift of God, and he is a righteous man—righteous in the Lord who is made of God unto him wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption, and he glories in the Lord.

JESUS.

"And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins," Matt 1.21.

Joseph a just man was troubled because of the condition of his espoused wife, and was minded to put her away privily, for he did not wish to make her a public example. While he thought on these things behold the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream saying, Joseph thou Son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. What a blessed message that was to him. Every thing relating to the Lord Jesus brings its blessing in some way.

1st. A virgin shall bring forth a Son.

2nd. His name shall be called Jesus.

3rd. He shall save his people from their sins.

Here are three simple declarations.

People of all classes accept the 1st as true—that a virgin shall bring forth a son.

The second is generally accepted—that his name is called Jesus.

But the dispute is concerning the third proposition—that he shall save his people from their sins. Yet this proposition is as boldly and clearly affirmed as either one of the other two.

1st. It is a miracle that a virgin should conceive a child; yet it was foretold. In Isaiah (1st chapter) it is said by the prophet, the Lord himself shall give you a sign. When the Lord gives one that sign how full and wonderful the evidence of salvation. Isaiah said, For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and his name shall be called wonderful, counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. What more glorious names were ever borne by any one. His name shall be called Jesus.

This child must come into the world born of woman, for the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. Men by nature are born sinners, but since by man came sin and death, by man must come the resurrection. One must be made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that are under the law. There must be a clean, holy one who is able as a man to end sin and transgression, and abolish death. He must never have been a sinner. He must be holy. A glorious high throne from the beginning must be the place of our sanctuary, so that our conception must be holy and we must be born of God.

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds,
In a believers ears."

There is no name so sweet to one who has tasted that the Lord Jesus is precious.

It was foretold in the volume of the Book (the scriptures,) that Jesus should come in the flesh and condemn sin in the flesh. The time and place of his birth was foretold. In due time—while she and Joseph were at Bethlehem the time drew near that she should bring forth her first son which was holy and one who is God manifest in the flesh. For in the beginning was the Word and that Word was made flesh. What a miracle.

2nd. His name is called Jesus, Saviour, for he shall save his people from their sins. Then he has a people. His Father gave them to him. They were chosen in him from the foundation of the world, and he came to seek and to save them.

How came they sinners? Not by any act of the Lord Jesus, but by the disobedience of Adam their natural, earthly father. Death passed upon all in Adam's transgressions, because all sinned in him.

While by nature they were children of wrath even as others. Yet God who is rich in mercy with the great loved where-with he loved them, even when they were dead in trespasses and sins, quickened them together with Christ. Then they were the people of Jesus who loved them, and the scripture is true: his name is Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins. If he does not save them is his name Jesus which means Saviour?

We love that name and feel that surely it belongs to him—a most precious name.

3rd. He shall save his people from their sins. No other name has ever been given whereby they could be saved. They are convinced that they cannot save themselves, and that no man can save them.

They are also convinced that Jesus, Christ the Son of God is come in the flesh. They are believers of this truth and that makes them free.

It is from their sins he saves them. To them sin is the most hateful thing, and they abhor themselves as sinners. To them there is no greater proof that Jesus is the Son of God than that he has power on earth to forgive sin. There is no greater blessing to them than to believe that Jesus is able to do these things. For one clothed in flesh or manifest in the flesh as God the interpretation whereof is "God with us," brings heaven to earth, and all blessings come to us. If God be for us who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? God with us in all that could be desired. How greatly one is enlarged with divine blessing to know that God is with us—that it is God that justifies us. Then who can be against us?

Faith embraces this glorious doctrine, and brings us into the power of its fellowship, and rest its joy and love.

To whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Who believes this report? To whom is the arm or power of the Lord manifest, and in whom is it felt? Who believes the Lord Jesus is come in the flesh, and that all these blessed things are fulfilled? Who has ceased from his own works and dwells in the Lord?

Who rests in the finished works of the Lord and therefore proves this by the fruit he bears? For make the tree good and the fruit will be good also.

SOWERS, MORE THAN REAPERS, NEEDED.

Johnston County, excepting the towns and a few country districts, is a field where sowers are needed as never before—needed more than reapers. The territory is comparatively new, and it is fast becoming fallow ground fit for seed. Under the wise and efficient leadership of Mr. J. M. Beaty the Association has built a large number of church houses over the county. Most of these are in thickly settled communities—those in easy reach varying from one hundred to five hundred. It is nothing unusual to find no more than a dozen or two Christians in these communities. The large percentage of the people never go to any church at all. The only church influence that has been in the major portion of the county, until the Baptists began, was that of the Primitive and Free-Will churches. The teaching of these two churches has so muddled the waters that it will take much hard work to ever give the people a clear vision.

The Primitive Church in this county has drifted into fatalism pure and simple. They have taught the people that whatever a man is, be he murderer, adulterer, liar or thief, that God has predestinated that one for such a life; and that he cannot undo his kind of life by any choice of his own, but that when, in some future day, God gets ready He will save that soul. They thus destroy by one stroke, free will and choice and degenerate the man into a mere machine. They seem to believe that if God intends for them to be saved He will save them without any effort on their part, and that their seeking salvation makes it harder for God to save the soul. This teaching has bred in the older generation indifference and carelessness, and with the younger generation it has given license to sin with impunity for they know that where there is no choice there can be no guilt. This condition of affairs is far worse than when the Catholic Church sold license to sin, for then men felt a responsibility for sin and so sought freedom through license. But under the present conditions, men are beginning to believe that they may sin without responsibility, that God has predestinated that they should live thus.

The Free-Will churches, in a majority of the cases here, have been swallowed by the "Holiness Movement." They come to a man who has just been saved and say: "You must be sanctified, holy, or be lost." In other words, they say to the infant Christian: "Be grown this minute or be damned." The idea of growth in grace seems never to have occurred to them.

Thus, you see that all the knowledge of the Bible in these communities comes from one or the other of these churches that had gone off at a tangent; and it has been so warped and twisted that were the writers to come to earth again they would not recognize it as having come from their pen.

Jesus, one day said: "Lift up your eyes upon the fields, for they are white already unto harvest." Jesus said that not in the beginning of His ministry, but after He had preached over a year. This county is not "white unto harvest." Reapers are not needed half so much as sowers. The ground has been broken and is fast being made fallow, but where are the sowers? The present force ought to be doubled immediately. It almost wrings one's heart to see the awful need, Mr. Beaty's anxiety over the work, and the almost hopeless lack of sowers to enter the field and take it for God. Surely there is no place in North Carolina where a life would count for so much as here. At the last day the result is going to depend more upon "as ye have sown" than "as ye have reaped."

There is no time to be lost in the sowing. Already with many it is too late to sow. The parable of the sower is suggestive just here. It represents the four periods in every life, in a way. In youth the seed will fall on "good ground" and will produce a harvest according to conditions that surround the life. The second period is that of "the thorns," the doubting period that follows youth. The Gospel is often choked out during this period. It didn't have a chance in the life. It was killed before birth. Then comes the "stony" period, when the life is hardened in sin and the Gospel can make but little appeal, and then old habits quickly "wither away" that impression. Finally, there is a "wayside" period when the seed are wasted to be sown. There is no chance then. It is too late. There is no fallow ground there. If anything is ever to be done in Johnston County, it must be done now before the fallow ground is hardened and our opportunity taken away.

SLANDER.

The above is a sample of the spirit of accusation that the Missionary Baptists hurl against our people. I have often visited Johnston County, and do not know a better behaved citizenship than the Primitive Baptists and their friends in that county. They are honest, industrious, sober, pay their debts, cultivate the soil, have meat and bread at home, the fruit of their labor. They are not meddlesome, not false accusers. They mind their own business. They attend preaching. They believe salvation is by grace. They do not favor these money beggars, nor do they believe that preachers—even if the Lord send them—can save sinners.

Jesus is the SOWER of good seed in the Lord's field, and his servants he sends are the reapers. Though Paul may plant yet God gives the increase.

These men—made preachers are great sowers, but what do they sow? Falsehood, discord and strife.

Why should not Primitive Baptists believe in predestination? It is Bible truth. But they do not hold that we should sin that good may come thereby. They do not hold that predestination is the cause of our sinning, but that whom God foreknew he did predestinate that they should be holy and without blame before God.

We are not ashamed of the God of predestination. He is the author of all holiness, and condemns wickedness.

If these Missionaries have to cleanse the muddy, foul waters of Johnston county then pity it is for those people.

The water of life clear as crystal flows not in such chanel as men can foul.

P. D. G.

WE BE BRETHERN.

One reading the book of Nehemiah must be impressed, if he reads it with understanding, with the great importance of loving the Lord and his people, and not loving the filthy lucre of earth. It is easy for one to be hardened under the deceitfulness of sin so that he cares not for the poor brethren, and is swallowed up with the cares of this life.

The people of Israel had returned from their Babylonish captivity, and were rebuilding the temple and restoring the true worship of God, and Nehemiah was the governor in charge of these important matters. A great cry came to him from the poor of the people that their lands were mortgaged for corn for food and for taxes, and their vineyards were mortgaged. Our sons and our daughters are sold in bondage and we cannot redeem them, said they. Nehemiah rebuked the nobles and the rulers because of their oppressions of the poor, and reminded them that they were brethren.

In the church of God the members are all brethren. The rich should not only not oppress the poor but they should help them with such things that are needful. It corrupts a man to amass riches and shut up his bowels of mercies against the poor. One can easily find excuses for not helping the needy, if he does not love them, or is not pitiful to them, or if he loves money or riches of earth, or is covetous. We can frame excuses for not doing what we do not want to do.

This is a day of worship of worldly wealth, and of great corruption, and of much suffering of the poor.

It is so good and nice when we are forward to remember the poor, and when the poor are not left to harbor hard thoughts or make complaints that they are neglected in the daily ministrations, or in the conduct of the rich toward the poor. When the poor hold no suspicion against the rich, but are content with their lot, and can rejoice that they brought nothing into the world, nor can they take anything out then God hath chosen the poor in this world's good, rich in faith and heirs of the Kingdom which he hath given to them that love him. How blest is the poor in that sense.

If a poor man trusts in God he is richer than one that loves the things of earth and is perplexed with its vanities.

Each one should seek to do that which is right before God and good and profitable unto men.

P. D. G.

FULLNESS OF GRACE AND TRUTH.

"And of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace," John 1:16.

The fullness of Jesus is illimitable, and that fullness is grace for grace. He is full of grace and truth. His fullness fills all in all, for the fullness of the Godhead dwells bodily in him. How precious therefore is Jesus. Full of grace and truth. What is better for a sinner than grace? What is more holy than truth? How that will regulate the life of a man.

The fullness of Jesus cannot be diminished. However much he gives there is no decrease. A spring or fountain of water that is good keeps flowing without any exhaustion. Surely this is true of Jesus who is full of grace and truth. There is nothing in him but grace and truth. Of this fullness have all we received and grace for grace. For the law came by Moses. Its demands on us are just and righteous, nor can we question or dispute a single one of them. While we cannot pay any part of these just demands, yet when the fullness of grace and truth in Jesus meets these demands and fully pays them all we honor Moses. For it is of the fullness of Jesus that honors and satisfies Moses' demands. When we believe in Jesus we honor Moses, and proclaim the justice and grace of God. While Moses was a faithful servant of God Jesus is the well beloved Son of God, and by so much as Jesus is above Moses by so much does grace and truth shine in glory, and deliver the sinner from all guilt, and array him in the glory of Jesus.

PROHIBITION LAWS.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I see in the Landmark of Aug. 1st. that Brother Richard Moore requests me to write something on the prohibition laws for publication.

You know and all who read the Landmark know that I have never indulged in any political or other public matter in that paper—only the subject of religion in the house of our God. I believe it to be exceedingly wrong to ask for space in our papers for such things and very much more wrong to take them in our pulpits where we should know nothing but Jesus Christ and Him crucified.

I would say to Brother Moore that our prohibition laws do not pretend to prohibit anyone from making wine for church purposes, and our brethren have no need to be without wine for communion service. The most of them who live on farms have grapes and can make wine and should do so and keep it on hand for that purpose. Then you know what you are using.

I remember on several occasions I have been compelled to use port wine because no other could be had at the public bars and the brethren had not provided themselves with the pure juice of the grape.

This is wrong and very improvident. I see no excuse for such things in any of our churches.

If one brother does not have grapes another has, and it appears to me that it would be rather covetous for a brother to want to speculate on his own or his sister church by selling wine for communion purposes.

If our brethren had as much thought for the necessities of our churches as they have for many worldly indulgences there would be no lack for these needed things.

I hope this is all that may be necessary they are content.

on this question.

Your brother in hope,

L. H. HARVEY.

Reidsville, N. C.

MRS. LULA WEEKS.

It is with a sad heart I chronicle the death of my much esteemed friend, Mrs. Lula Weeks, wife of Mr. A. M. Weeks of Carteret County, N. C., and daughter of our much beloved brother S. C. Bell and sister Elizabeth Bell, who were highly esteemed and beloved by all who knew them, both being members of Hadnott's Creek Church.

The subject of this notice was born June 17th, 1863 and died June 1st, 1909. I must say of a truth I have never missed any one more than I have her. She was a regular attendant at Hadnott's church ever since I have been going there which has been for about twelve years. Her seat was always filled unless she was prevented from attending by sickness or some unavoidable circumstance. She was beloved by all who knew her, and while she never professed religion she was a strong believer in the Primitive Baptist doctrine and we do believe she was a dear child of God. But He saw cause to take her to Himself and we don't wish to complain or grumble, believing He knows best and works everything after the counsel of His own will. But oh, our nature is such we miss and grieve for her so much, but none can miss her like her broken hearted husband who is left all alone.

She had five children but they all preceded her to the final resting place in 'n fancy. She took our little child, which was one of her neices to care for.

Oh that the good Lord may bless this sad bereavement to the good of her sorrowing husband, brothers and sisters that they may realize that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord and are the called according to His purpose, and that our loss is her eternal gain.

It seems to me it is a blessed thing to die if we can die in the Lord, since precious in the eyes of the Lord is the death of His saints, for this is a world of trouble at best. One trouble gets out of the way to make room for another and we are looking forward to a house not madt with hands eternal and on high where no sorrow nor sighing nor sickness can ever reach, but all will be joy and peace and pleasure and His praises shall be sung in a world that shall have no end.

The Greatest Spectacle
THE WORLD HAS EVER SEEN

Excursion Rate of $17.70 Via the Atlantic Coast Line to New York and Return For the Famous HUDSON-FULTON CELEBRATION

This Historic Celebration will take place from Saturday, September 25 to Saturday, October 9. The principal events during the first eight days will occur in Greater New York and in the Hudson river opposite the city. The following week the celebration will continue at the Hudson river cities and villages from New York to Troy.

This event, commemorating the five hundredth anniversary of the Navigation of the Hudson River by Hendrik Hudson and the 103d of the operation of the first steamboat by Robert Fulton, will present a spectacle in land and water parades and illumination such as the world never witnessed.

All the great navies of the world will be abundantly represented, which with other craft, including replicas of the historic "Halfmoon" and "Clermont" will go to make up a water parade of a thousand or more vessels and on the land there will be a gorgeous spectacle in floats, parades, reviews, exhibitions, decorations and a thousand and one object lessons in our 300 years' progress.

Every day will be a picture of a veritable fairyland and millions of electric lights of all colors and sizes will fairly turn night into day.

For this occasion the Atlantic Coast Line will sell on September 23d to 30th inclusive, round trip tickets to New York at the low rate of $17.70 from Wilson. The tickets will be limited returning to leave New York any time up to and including October 10. O. D. Stanley, the ticket agent will be pleased to answer inquiries regarding schedule and make reservations, and this matter should be attended to at once by those desiring to take the trip.

Dear Brethren Gold and Lester:

At the request of the family I send you a notice of Brother J. A. Bennett's death.

Johnson A. Bennett was born in Pittsylvania County, Va., Oct. 30th, 1825, and died Sept. 10th, from general debility and old age. He was the eldest son of William and Polly Linsey Bennett. His father was a man of sterling worth. They moved to this county (Rockingham, N. C.) about 1835 and settled near Reidsville, which was his home all of his life. He married Bettie Smith, of Caswell County, N. C., who was a helpmeet indeed and in truth. To this union were born nine children, six daughters and three sons, all living. The daughters are all married to worthy men, one is the present wife of Elder Isaac Jones, and two of his sons are married. Brother Bennett served his day and generation as faithfully and satisfactorily as any man this writer has ever known, privately and officially, he served as justice of the peace and deputy sheriff for many years, and served as postmaster of Reidsville four years under Cleveland's first administration. He was a Democrat of the strictest type from principle, not for the loaves and fishes. He was a strong predestinarian Baptist all of his life in principle and had a hope about forty years before he died. He never joined the church till twelve or fifteen years ago, when he was received into fellowship of the church of Wolf Island, one mile of his home. He was baptized by Elder J. S. Dameron, who was then pastor of said church. Brother Bennett was a dear lover of peace and of all good men and especially if they were Democrats or Primitive Baptists. He was always careful to look after the poor and needy and the welfare of the pastor at Wolf Island, and never seemed to be able to do as much as he wanted to do for traveling people, and help them on in a Godly way, but few men ever equalled him in this respect in proportion to his means.

His beloved wife preceded him to the beyond about six or eight years ago. But few mothers or wives have been more missed in a family. She had been a strong believer in Baptist faith for many years but never felt worthy to ask for the membership of the church. This was her reason to the writer a few weeks before she died, also his brother William and sister Martha Williams who died about two years ago. He has a brother Jas. K. Bennett and a sister Sarah who survive him. All are members of Primitive Baptist church, and so was his mother.

His funeral took place at his residence, conducted by his pastor Elder J. F. Spangler, assisted by the writer. The large concourse of people who attended the services attested their esteem for him. May we who survive him and his children and grandchildren give all diligence to imitate all the good traits of the deceased, remembering that a GOOD NAME IS RATHER TO BE CHOSEN THAN GREAT RICHES, AND LOVING FAVOR RATHER THAN SILVER AND GOLD." Prov. 22:1. And the good Lord who is the father of all mercies and the God of all comforts, comfort and bless all who feel bereaved, remembering their loss is his gain, is the prayer of one who esteemed him highly as friend and loved him for Christ sake.

THEAATERS G. FULGHUM.

It is with a sad heart that I attempt to write a notice of my darling baby's death, Theaaters G. Fulghum.

She was born June 25th, 1908 and died June 12th, 1909, making her stay on earth 11 months and 16 days.

She was a bright little baby but never appeared to be very well. She was easy to nurse only when in pain. She was taken on Thursday, May 27th and lived until June 12, suffering for sixteen days. She suffered with sore mouth and stomach trouble. I suppose she was cutting teeth and began doctoring her as I had the others. On Friday, however, she quit nursing and on Sunday we went for the doctor. He said she was inflamed. He continued to come and did all he could as the rest of us did for her, but none could stay the hand of death.

She never refused to take her medicine, and bore her sufferings with more patience than any one I have ever seen. Although her mouth was terribly swollen and raw her eyes were bright and strong until the very last.

"A precious one from us has gone,

A voice we loved is still;

A place is vacant in our hearts,

Which none but God can fill.

Two dark brown eyes from us are closed,

The dark brown hair is hidden;

The lovely body slumbers here,

Her soul we hope is in heaven."

I gave her up to her Saviour who suffered more to bring her into life than I did.

MRS. LOUISA EASON.

Dear Mr. Gold:—

Will you please publish an account of my dear aunt's death, Mrs. Louisa Eason.

She was born Aug. 18th and died February 28th, 1909, making her stay on earth 26 years. She was the daughter of W. H. and Florence Brown.

She was not a member of any church, but we all think she had faith in the Primitive Baptists.

Four month before she died she was at her father's and asked them to sing the song "While sorrows encompass me around," and said she wanted them to sing that song over her grave when she died.

Her home was in Rocky Mount, N. C., but she died at her old home near Crisp, N. C., and was buried in the Eason graveyard.

She leaves a husband, three children, an aged father and mother and several sisters and brothers to mourn their loss, but we believe their loss is her eternal gain.

They sung the song spoken of above her grave.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,

Peaceful in thy grave so low;

Thou wilt no more join our number,

Thou no more our song wilt know.

JAMES MASON CORBETT.

The angel of death entered the home of George M. and Anes L. Corbett and took from them their infant son James Mason Corbett. He was born July 2, 1899 and died Sept. 9th of the same year.

His life here on earth was not very long, but he will find sweet rest in the arms of Jesus, for He says He will suffer little ones to come unto Him for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

The little babe is dead and gone,

He's gone to that eternal home;

He sweetly sleeps in Jesus' arms,

And Jesus keeps him from all harm.

SARAH KING AND JAMES S. KING.

By request I send for publication the deaths of Sarah King and James S. King. They were members of the church at Flat River for several years and lived and died in fellowship with the presence of the good Lord to encourage them in their journey and having a good fortaste of heaven and immortal glory when it pleased the good Lord to take them away.

We believe they are now enjoying the presence of Christ and the Holy angels.

CONSIDER,

This is a year of high priced provisions, labor, and all printer's material. Also it is a high priced year for farm labor, so that we all feel it.

The price of the Landmark has not been increased since the panic began. My receipts have been very small of late, and I am feeling greatly the need of money to pay expenses.

If those that are behind in the Landmark will please send me the pay it will be a great favor to me.

GEORGE HILDARD GAY.

With a sad and heavy heart I will try to write the obituary notice of my little darling son George Hildard Gay, who was born May 9th, 1906 and died Aug. 22d 1909 making his stay on earth three years three months and thirteen days.

He was the sunshine of our home and it seemed that my own life went with him. Brother Gold, it is so hard to give up our loved ones, but the Lord giveth and He taketh away and blessed be His Holy name. I sometimes feel that I can't bear it, but the blessed Lord never puts any more on any of us than we are not able to bear.

He was such a loving child; I felt like the family loved him to much for him to stand this troublesome world of sorrow and pain. I feel that we all ought to feel satisfied about him for he is not dead but asleep, yes blessed sleep, whence no one ever makes to weep.

He leaves father mother two brothers and four sisters to mourn their loss but I feel like our loss is his eternal gain for I believe he is at rest in the arms of Jesus where all his troubles are at an end.

Brother Gold please pray for a grief stricken father and mother.

Now we are bound to kiss the rod

And say Thy will be done;

While George is sitting with his God

We have our race to run.

Still every effort did we use,

To save him from the grave;

But George's death brings to my view,

That only God can save.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been received, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

lders Gold and Lester:

Dear Sirs—It has been on my mind for some time to write and relate a dream I had when I was about eight years old.

The Lord appeared to me and said, this Jesus Christ who was born in Bethlehem Judea and cradled in a manger; He then turned, walked away and said, follow me. He led me toward the East to a beautiful field which was all covered with all light colored weeds as far as I could see. He then said I must leave you here. I loved Him better than any one I had ever seen and I stood and looked at him just as long as I could see him, then I burst into tears and awoke in that condition. Then I saw myself a sinner.

When morning came I had an impression to pray. So I went to a thick place in the woods and fell on my knees and said Lord be merciful to me a sinner.

My next serious trouble was when I was about fourteen years old. One morning the impression came to me to sing the song, "Free Grace"; and I sang the words, and I burst into tears again, and I soon decided I had not sinned but two years and could soon get clear of that. So then the Lord appeared to me and said I am God, I will show you when you became a sinner. You were in Adam and when Adam sinned you sinned in Adam. Then I was taken to a place where I saw divine justice and she said pay what thou owest. She said you are ten thousand talents in debt and nothing to pay with. And Jesus appeared on the cross and I saw the Roman soldier with the spear in his hand and he thrust it in Jesus' side and the blood and water poured out of his heart. Divine Justice said back and said, I am satisfied.

Years after this I had a vision. Brother Gold Brother Wm. Woodard Brother James Woodard and myself besides several other preachers were tried some were white and some black. Brother Gold, the two brother Woodards and myself were found sound while some of the white and some of the colored preachers were not found sound. I was the last that was tried and I was found sound. After that I traveled on and when I reached a certain place I was commanded to look up. I saw a man between the heavens and the earth and under his feet was pure gold and a voice said to me, this is your brother, James Woodard shod with the gospel. Then I awoke.

Here are some of the texts that were given to me to quote to the preachers several years ago: 48th Psalms, 12, 13 and 14th verses, Luke 10:2.

Brother Gold, if you think best you can publish this and if not please send it to Brother Wm. Woodard and Brother James Woodard, for I want them to read it.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,
GREEN AYCOCK (Col.)
Pikeville N. C.

Dear Brother Gold—

I feel so disappointed to think I cannot be at the Upper Country Line Association but I shall be reconciled to it if the dear Lord makes me so and I will try and not complain for I know I ought not, seeing I have been so highly favored and blessed and knowing that what He does is right.

I hope you will have a pleasant meeting—that the gospel will be preached to the comfort of the saints and that they may be enabled to rejoice and praise His Holy name who has done so much for them. After I wrote you while at Brother Bill's I attended two quarterly meetings. (I don't think I had attended but one when I wrote you which was at Simpson's Creek at Pee Dee 3rd Sunday in July, and Bethel 4th Sunday.) I enjoyed the preaching at each of these meetings and especially on Sunday and how often I was made to remember the sure mercies of David—how that goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and desiring that I might be kept by His power from bringing reproach upon His sacred cause—that I might trust in His great name forever.

On Saturday night of the Bethel meeting, while at Mr. Lum Gore's I had a dream which I think was a warning to me of some approaching trouble, and yet there was some comfort in it. I saw myself in a large field wherein was a great monster lion, and every time I would come near him he would rear on his hind feet and appear as if he could almost swallow me; and just before I would get near enough to him for him to touch me some invisible power and unseen hand would lift me up and I would sail victoriously over his head just high enough to be out of his reach. I was carrying, without any effort it seemed to me and almost unconsciously, a little child in my arms, and as I did so I feared not the great monster lion which was as black as black could be.

The field belonged to my father and was of very fertile soil and well broken up and prepared for planting. But I saw nothing growing on it. I cannot see through it all to see what it means but if Jesus the Holy Comforter will only be with me in all my travels will not that be enough? The storm may be raging the clouds dark and threatening, and I can scarcely see my hands so to speak, before my eyes yet if I can but realize that He is near me what need have I to fear?

I reached home in time to attend our communion on Sunday, Aug. 1st where we partook of the bread and wine—an emblem of the broken body and spilt blood of our loving Lord and Savior after which we engaged in the lowly act of washing each others feet after the example that Christ taught His brethren just before His departure saying unto them, "Ye call me Lord and Master and ye say well, for so am I. If I am then your Lord and Master and have washed your feet, ye ought also to wash one another's feet." How meek and lowly, how lovely to engage in this pleasing act knowing that our dear Savior set the example. Brother Gold, what could be more Christ like?

I am feeling real well. Hope you and sister Gold are well. Lovingly, your little sister in hope, LOUISA A. EDWARDS.

SOME OBSERVATIONS FOR THE PAST TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Twenty-seven years ago last July I went before the church and asked for a home if they judged me a fit subject which was granted and I then and there promised by word and action to live up to and obey the rules and obligations of the church when not providentially prevented which obligation I have endeavored to keep to the best of my ability. But my mind has been made sad many many times since then to see so many vacant seats, and it is generally by the same members every-time.

If my memory serves me correctly I have never seen all the members of our little church present at any one time. I have been keeping a record of the members present at our quarterlies and it is seldom that more than two-thirds answer to their names and more often one-half is the usual number. And this I suppose, is about the case with most of the churches or at least at those I have visited. Now suppose the pastor should fail one-half the time that some of the members do do you think he would be a faithful pastor? He is under no more obligation than you are and he has not promised to do any more than you have.

Brethren, these are sad things to think about. At first it generally takes pretty large obstacles to keep a member from attending his church meetings but as time passes by a little less obstacle will keep him away and so on until after awhile he will almost forget his church meeting days. Then the unpleasant duty falls upon the brethren deacons to look him up and make inquiries as to what is the cause of his long absence, and if the church has done anything to wound his feelings.

Brethren this is an unpleasant duty to the deacon, and you can save them this unpleasantness by doing your duty, and you and the whole church will feel better, also the pastor will feel better and will feel that his services are acceptable. Just think what a happy family it is when the whole family can all sit down around the table at the same time and enjoy the meal together. But think what a sad feeling it must be when supper time is announced and one-half the seats are empty and the parents do not know where the absent ones are.

Brethren where is the church drifting? Where did Israel go when she refused to obey the Lord and wanted to be like other (people) nations? Are we better than they were? I am afraid not.

Another observation I will mention, and that is "discipline." Where there is no discipline there is no life, let it be a private family, church or society. Sometimes we do not love to enforce strict discipline, but if necessity requires it we ought to love to do it but let it be done with love and not by force. It is a different matter to whip a child and make him love you at the same time but if we can point out the evil course that they are in and what it will lead to should they continue therein and get them to understand it it will have more bearing upon them than many stripes.

One other common error we get into sometimes, and that is in choosing a presiding officer. Some brother will make a motion that brother "B" act as moderator before the conference has been opened for him to be moderator, or putting the cart before the horse. When a church chooses a pastor she chooses a presiding officer over all church meetings and whenever a brother makes a motion for some one else to preside it shows weakness on his part or like of confidence in his pastor I do not ever recollect having attended a Union meeting but that the cart has been put before the horse in choosing a moderator before conference was opened. In the Contentnea Union the clerk of the church when the Union is to be held is clerk of the Union and it is his duty to have the conference of the Union opened and then announce the Union ready for business.

Brethren if we would get to doing business in a business way we would find it much more pleasant.

Yours unworthily

L. H. J. MEWBORN.

Dear Brother Gold:

If I know my heart's desire it is to let you a few lines this evening and tell you of some of the thoughts I have had lately. I was happy and felt satisfied after joining the church until of late. Now sometimes I fear my troubles have just begun. I am made to feel my weakness and sinfulness more than ever. The thought occurred to me the other day, if the Lord had forgiven me, what was his motive for doing so? I know there is nothing good in me—what good am I to anybody or anything? I don't know. Some times I feel so cast down, so weak, so sinful and discouraged, I feel like giving up. I hate my own existence and don't deserve anything. And then again, I feel that I have everything to be thankful for, that He surely must be a merciful God.

"Father I am weak and sinful,
 Ever prone to go astray,
 Like a wayward child of error,
 I so often lose my way."

If I am saved it is by the grace of God.
 "By grace are we saved, through faith, not of ourselves."

In the beginning of my trouble these words were presented to me so often:

"Father I stretch my hand to thee,
 No other help I know,
 If thou withdraw thyself from me,
 Oh, whither shall I go."

But so often now I fear I am deceived, but I do know I do love the Primitive Baptists, and I do love my father better than ever. He has been such a dear father to me. I feel I cannot say too much in his praise.

Your little sister I hope,
 LAILA FERGUSON.

Ringgold, Va.

I was so sorry I was sick and couldn't go to hear you and Brother Jones preach at Cane Creek as I expected to, but was fortunate to hear you in Danville.

"Tongue cannot express the sweet comfort and peace you and Brother Jones' sermon afforded my poor soul. As you came in I felt as if you were two saints. I never enjoyed preaching more in my life. As they sang the last song Brother Jones was standing in plain view of where I was sitting, and I thought he was the most beautiful human I ever looked upon. If I have any religion at all, the Lord surely gave it to me. I have read the Bible, but little in my life, and when I did it seemed so deep, so far beyond my comprehension,
 I did not feel benefited. But when I feel so lonely, I can do nothing else but read it to comfort myself.

"Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of them all."

ADDRESSED TO THE PRIMITIVE BAP-TIST CHURCH AT REED CREEK,
 Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I have felt impressed with a desire to write to you all ever since I moved from up there, and I truly hope that I am led by the spirit and love of Christ that gives me the mind to write. I pray that the good Lord will direct my thoughts and give me something to write that will comfort the blessed children of God, although I feel my dependence upon my God for every good and perfect thought that comes out of this corrupt heart of mine.

This leaves me thanking God for his many blessings to me and my family, for the good health we receive at his hands, for I don't believe one can appreciate good health until they have suffered and know something of sickness. There were many years of trouble and I know something of sickness. There were many years of trouble and bad health for me and I didn't expect relief until death does it for me. But oh, the goodness and mercy of God, how wonderful; I do believe, if my poor heart deceives me not, that he cured me both in soul and body, brethren and sisters, tongue cannot express such gratitude for the abundant mercy and many blessings that my precious Saviour has bestowed upon me. How often the thought is with me that we have been kept by the power of God. How good it is that we are not left alone. I often think what a world this would be if man could rule; but what a blessing it is that no one can rule this boundless universe, but God the Father, who worketh in us both the will and to do of his own good pleasure.

A man once said to me if he believed as we Baptists he would do just as he pleased—that he would have his fill of sin, and that for his life he didn't see why they preached or prayed, for according to our belief, we would be saved anyway, and that it made no difference if we never thought of such a thing. I told him if he believed as the Primitive Baptists he would do just as they did. I told him that God's people were a praying people, and as to preaching, I believed that when God calls and qualifies one for that purpose he will be sure to preach. I do believe that it is both food and drink for every child of grace, and as to our having our fill of sin we have that; we are tired and sick of it and are always striving to flee from it, and my constant prayer is, Lord keep me from sin, show me thy ways, teach me thy paths, for thou art the God of salvation. Oh yes, I have feasted on preaching often after returning home late in the evening. I was not in the least hungry and would sometimes forget to eat; then again I get down so low and feel that I am forsaken and almost in the pit of darkness. And when I get the lowest can never think of anything that is comforting to poor unworthy me. And again when I am lifted up out of the miry clay I can think of so much to comfort and edify the blessed children of God. When I get low down I often wonder if I have ever been called out of darkness into that marvelous light, and at other times I have been so overjoyed, as poor as I am in this world's goods, I felt as though I was laden with riches, crowned with honors, blessed with happiness and was made to cry, blessed be the name of the Lord. Oh, the depth of riches, both of the riches and knowledge of God. How unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out.

Dear brethren and sisters, I often think that I am only absent from you in the flesh, that I am with you in spirit. I want all of you to visit Camp Branch as often as you can. I have seen some of the brethren and sisters this summer and I wish I could see you all. I want to go and see you the October meeting if not before. I have a bad chance to go any distance from home, but you don't begin to know how thankful I am that I can go as often as I do, for I have never missed a month since I moved from up here that I don't go to Camp Branch and sometimes I go oftener.

Now I have been blessed so much more than I deserve. And again we never think of being disappointed, for we have such a good and true pastor, most willing and always ready to serve. I am often made to say if Elder Z. T. Turner, our pastor and beloved brother, was taken from us, his place would never be filled again. Now don't understand me to say that God could not fill it, for I believe he could, but would not, for we do not know how to appreciate such blessings until we are deprived of them, until too late we are not mindful of such things. We have another pastor, Elder W. M. Minter, which I truly believe is a chosen vessel of God's mercy and one that preaches the gospel in all of its purity and shuns not to declare the whole counsel of God, but owing to infirmities of age he cannot serve us as he once did. But he comes every time he can and has been serving at Camp Branch somewhere in thirty years if I am not mistaken. I heard him say how long, but can't remember exactly. He also serves other churches. Our brother has been a brave soldier of the cross and has not given away to the weakness of the flesh as some do.

Brethren and sisters, I have been made to think we are the most blessed people on earth, for we can hear preaching almost every Saturday and Sunday. Now, is not that something to be thankful for? There are so many of God's children that do not hear preaching once a year, I mean gospel preaching, not what the world call preaching. How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace and bring glad tidings of good things. That's the kind of preaching I am trying to tell about.

Well, I will have to bring my letter to a close, as it is getting too lengthy to be no better, for I feel I have not been interesting as I should have been, for I have told you nothing more than you already know. I don't know that this will be any comfort to any of God's people, but I have written just as my mind led me and whether it be carnal or spiritual I can't tell. I have been asked to write for the Landmark and say that I am not fit or don't feel to be and that's why I haven't written before this, and if this ever reaches you, you may say the same. Please forgive me for writing so much. I will close by asking the prayers of all God's people.

Your unworthy sister, if one at all,
 MARY E. CARTER.

Elder P. D. Gold:

Dear Sir—Have the Primitive Baptists a creed? If so what do they believe? All I have talked to seem to have drawn their own ideas.

Does any believe in absolute predestination? That makes God the author of sin.

Does any believe that man has no power to do anything? That makes God's laws useless and void. Is God so foolish as that?

I was told yesterday I could not ask God to protect me from the devil unless God did it for me. That would make me wholly bad. Do you believe any one wholly bad?

Yours truly,

ERNEST SEEKER OF TRUTH.

Remarks—The Primitive Baptists claim that they believe what the scriptures teach. Each one must have a reason of the hope that is in him. Each one must appear for himself before the judgment seat of Christ to receive according to that which he has done whether it be good or evil. He that believes that Jesus is the Christ, has the witness in himself. How can a man prove his case without a witness? You must be ready to give to every one that asks you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.

If a man has not the Spirit of God to guide him how can he understand the scripture?

Do you believe that man is a sinner? Do you believe that there is none that does good—no not one?

Do you feel that you know nothing of yourself as you ought to know?

Do you lack wisdom? If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God who giveth liberally and upbraideth not, but let him ask in faith. If you believe that God has all power, then you trust him for all things.

Search the scriptures for they testify of Jesus who has eternal life.

Why do you wish to get up questions about things not revealed?

It is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners of whom Paul said he was chief.

The devil seeks to get poor, vain man to disputing about things not revealed. Hidden things belong to God, and revealed things belong to us and to our children.

Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.

Dear Brother Gold and the Household of Faith:

After reading a portion of God's word this morning I began to meditate and muse upon the sacredness of God's love and mercy unto the children of men, and in company myself with them, I, one who professes to have been led unto a knowledge of divine life, pause when I look within and realize the great depths of iniquity that dwell there, and the night of the barren mind which attends me so continually until I sorrowfully inquire into the words of the Psalmist: "How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord? Forever? How long wilt thou hide thy face from me? Sorrow is in my heart daily because of the enemy sin and it is exalted over me. Is there no awakening? Shall I continue thus, and sleep the sleep of death? Surely I am afar from the Lord.

How I love the courts of the Lord and her solemn assembly. In my view I see her a grand, a glorious possession, steadily marching toward Jerusalem the heavenly city, with the banner of love over her. Yea, such love as man has never known, save through the precious blood of the cross of Christ.

What a sure and solid foundation is the doctrine of revelation, Jesus Christ the rock upon which the christian hope is founded? It proceeds from the throne of God and is as pure as Himself. How dare weak man claim any honor for the salvation of sinners? Surely he who does has never felt himself to be "the chief of sinners" as the Great Apostle declared himself to be when brought to a knowledge of his helplessness and dependence upon God. What a great perversion of the teachings of the scripture that God is not able to save all that call upon his name. Yea, I can but weep to think of such coldness and leanness of soul, dwelling so long in this wilderness, and as I am reminded of this procession of the family of God, all are better and stronger than I and with steady and unfaltering step they keep pace with melody of praises unto our God.

Brother Gold, my health has been poor this summer. I have been denied the privilege and pleasure of being assembled with our people, and partaking of their feasts but little, and while I hope I have been submissive, yet the spirit of joy and gladness is so withheld as to produce a famine. I have thought to write you many times, and at times was restless about this reflection, but was unable, so unbelieving and unfit to be remembered by any. And now I am penning these lines more in the hope of deliverance than of its being comfort to any eye, and also of an expressed assurance of my continued love and anxiety for the welfare of Zion.

Please remember me in love to sister Gold. I hope each of you are blessed with reasonable health and that your declining years are fraught with the pleasures and joys of a well spent life.

With greetings of love to all the saints,
Yours, unworthily,

BETTIE G. WILLIAMS.

CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

To Whom It May Concern:—

Be it known that at the request of some brethren and sisters who had been dismissed from High Hill church a council met at a new meeting seven miles northwest of Monroe, Union County, N. C., on Friday, the 17th of September, 1909, the council being composed of Elders J. F. Mills, H. Taylor, H. M. Williams and Deacons W. D. Benton, W. E. Williams and Joel Mullis.

The council organized by choosing Elder H. Taylor, Moderator and S. A. Helms, Clerk. Then the letters were called for when the following presented letters, to-wit:

Elder W. R. Helms and wife, M. M. Helms, T. M. Broom and wife, Rebecca Broom and sister, and A. E. Harkey. The letters were examined by council, then the articles of faith and practice as held by the sister churches of the Bear Association were read and adopted by the above named members. Then the council pronounced them a church in Gospel order and the moderator extended to them the right hand of fellowship.

Signed by order of council,

ELDER H. TAYLOR, Moderator,
S. A. HELMS, Clerk.

The church then went into conference and agreed to be known as Brooms Grove Primitive Baptist church, also agreeing to hold their meeting on the fourth Sunday and Saturday before in each month.

Elder W. R. Helms and W. E. Edwards, Pastors.

ELDER J. F. MILLS, Moderator.
S. A. HELMS, Clerk.

The following account of a horrible event occurred about the year I was born. The woman broke jail, assisted by her friends, dressed in men's clothes, but was caught about five miles from where I was born and taken back to Morganton about forty miles and hung.

in put forth her voice?"

REMARKABLE CASE OF MURDER AND DETECTION LONG AGO.

There has for years been a report current in this county to the effect that a woman who lived somewhere in the eastern section of Union county killed her husband and was detected as a result of a remarkable dream by a neighbor. The incident did not occur in this county, but the fact that some of the people concerned in it were natives of Union probably accounts for that belief. Mr. C. S. Jones, who now lives in east Monroe township, but who formerly lived in the western part of the State, gives a true account of the matter.

The young man who was murdered was Charles Silvers. He had married a young girl by the name of Frances Stewart, whose father and his brother, Isaiah and Jackson Stewart, were born somewhere in the section that is now New Salem township, this county, then Anson county. They must have left this county sometime about the year 1800 as young men.

Charles Silvers, his wife and their little daughter lived on Toe river in what was then Mitchell, now Yancey county, half a mile from the home of his father, Jacob Silvers who was a Primitive Baptist preacher. One morning Frances Silvers came to the house of her father-in-law and asked if they had seen anything of Charles. She said they were to have had a log-rolling that day and that he had gone off the day before to get a jug of whiskey and had not come back. As he did not appear, a search was begun for his body. The country was searched for three weeks. On the twentieth day after Silvers' disappearance a man rode up to the house of Elder Jacob Silvers and told him that for twenty days he had not been able to rest on account of a strange dream or vision that he had had on a certain night. Thenight proved to be the same one on which Charles Silvers disappeared, but the man, whose name was Robinson and who, though he lived twenty miles away was a friend of the lost man, had not heard of his disappearance. He said that on this particular night he had seen in a dream the picture of Charles Silvers being murdered with an ax by his wife Frances, who after burning a part of the body, had carried the remainder to the woods and hid it in a hollow tree. On learning that Silvers had in fact disappeared, he was so certain of the reality of his vision that he went to the spring where Frances Silvers was then at work at the home of her father-in-law, and charged her with the crime, though up till this time no suspicion had rested upon her. To prove his assertions he volunteered to go and find the remains that had not been burned and also those that had been charred and buried. The men went to the spot, carrying the woman with them, where they found everything as Robinson said they would, and Mrs. Silvers confessed the crime. She was arrested, tried and hanged in the year 1833. Her people came down through their old home in this section for the purpose of securing money to aid in her trial.

There is in that section of New Salem a tract of land known to this day as the Cash land. Squire Simpson says he has heard that when the Stewarts came there to raise money for the trial this piece of land was sold or mortgaged either by them or their friends to a man at Wadesboro by the name of Cash to raise the money required, and that the land thus acquired this name. Mr. Jones says he has heard Elder Jacob Silvers tell the story of his son's death many a time, as the old gentleman lived to be nearly a hundred years old and was 96 when he last saw him. Mrs. Silvers never gave any adequate reason for the murder of her husband. Once she said it was jealousy although he was known to be one of the most upright young men in the community. She afterwards told his sister that she killed him because he was too good for her to live with. But there was a belief that her people had something to do with it as she said that others were implicated but she would never tell who and the story goes that her father told her as she appeared on the scaffold to let everything she

Frances Silvers Confession.

Under the gallows at Morganton, N. C., July 12th, 1833.

"This dreadful dark and dismal day
Has swept my glories all away,
My sun goes down, my days are past,
And I must leave this world at last.

Oh Lord! what will become of me?
I am condemned you all now see,
To heaven or hell my soul must fly
All in a moment when I die.

Judge Daniel has my sentence passed;
Those prison walls I leave at last,
Nothing to cheer my drooping head
Until I'm numbered among the dead.

But oh, that dreadful Judge I fear;
When I that awful sentence hear;
Depart ye cursed down to hell
And there forever to dwell!

I know that frightful ghost's I'll see
Gnawing their flesh in misery,
And then and there attended be,
For murder in the first degree.

There shall I meet that mournful face
Whose blood I spilled upon this place;
With flaming eyes to me he'll say,
Why did you take my life away?

His feeble hands fell gently down;
His chattering tongue soon lost its sound,
To see his soul and body part
It strikes with terror to my heart.

I took blooming days away,
Left him no time to God to pray
And if his sins fall on his head,
Must I not bear them in his stead?

The jealous thought that first gave strife
To make me take my husband's life,

For months and days I spent my time,
Thinking how to commit this crime.

And on a dark and dreadful night,
I put his body out of sight;
With flames I tried him to consume,
But time would not admit it done.

You all see me and on me gaze,
Be careful how you mend your days?
And never commit this awful crime,
But try to serve your God in time.

My mind on solemn subjects roll,
My little child, God bless her soul,
All you that are of Adam's race,
Let not your faults this child disgrace.

Farewell good people you all now see
What my bad conduct has brought on me;
To die of shame and of disgrace,
Before this world of human race.

Awful indeed to think of death,
In perfect health to lose my breath;
Farewell my friends I bid adieu,
Vengeance on me must now pursue.

Great God! how shall I be forgiven?
Not fit for earth, not fit for heaven;
But little time to pray to God,
From now I try that awful road.

Elders Gold and Lester,
Dear Brethren;

Roidsville, N. C., Sept. 29, 1909.

It is with fear and trembling that I address the household of Faith but I have impressions that I feel are of the Lord, furthermore I have been requested to write a short article for the Landmark on the New Birth, but am unable to write a short letter on any subject and express my views satisfactorily to myself, much less to your learned readers, yet notwithstanding my infirmities like Ellhu, I feel to give my opinion. I propose to base my remarks on John III, IV., V.

Jesus answered and said unto him verily I say unto thee, except a man (not his spirit J. M. H.) be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him. How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mothers womb, and be born? Jesus answered verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and the spirit, (the water of life. J. M. H.) He cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. This scripture teaches that the man must be born again and not his spirit. Man is composed of three component parts, soul, body and spirit. Paul prayed that his friend and brother might be blessed in soul, body and spirit. Job in describing a man, a convicted sinner says If there be a messenger with him and Interpreter among a thousand to show unto man his uprightness, then he is gracious unto him (not his spirit. J. M. H.) and saith deliver him from going down to the pit; for I have found a ransom Job 33; 23, 24. The quicken man or sinner after being told by Him who cannot lie, that notwithstanding he had been a lawful captive he is ransomed and he is enabled by the spirit of God that is in him to say that I know that my Redeemer liveth. And I shall see His face for myself and not for another. The man that is born again has the Spirit of Christ bearing witness with His spirit, that he is a child of God.

And if a child an heir of God and joint heir with the Lord Jesus Christ, and are sons of God's Grace and the man that was once lost is now found. And by faith this same man sees his everlasting Father. We do not understand that the man is wholly spiritual but is under the influence of God's spirit. The spirit which he is born of. Further more Paul teaches the church of Rome 8: 21, 23, because the creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of sin and corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Even we ourselves grown within ourselves waiting for the adoption to wit the redemption of our body. "We hope we are the children of the resurrection." 1 John, 39, teaches whosoever is born of God (not that which is born of God J. M. H.) doth not commit sin, for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin for he is born of God. See Galatians 4: 4, 5, 6, Ephs. 2: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. I sometimes rejoice in spirit that the Heavenly Father is mine inheritance and if not deceived that Jesus the great I Am who appeared to Moses is all and in all to me. But of Him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom righteousness sanctification and redemption. 1 Cor. 1, 30. Now this spirit which man is born of, and which he is a part of is a satisfying spirit, and is a spirit of mortification for it through the spirit that they are of. They mortify the deeds of the body. Rom. 8: 13. Sin is crucified in them Gal. 15: 24. They are planted together with Christ in the likeness of His death which was a lingering death. Paul said he died daily. That man that is born of God is killed to the love of sin and all uncleanness, and sometimes thinks he will never commit another sin, but will often find as the Apostle did that when he would do good evil is present with him. I have found after fifty eight years that this has been the case with me, until I was twelve years old I thought I could do as good as anybody, and did, I thought a little better than most of folks, but when my eyes were opened and I was enabled to see and feel the exceeding sinfulness of sin, I was made to abhor myself and felt that I had never said or done anything that was good only from a selfish motive, and for seven years that I was under the bondage of sin and condemnation, and I felt that eternal punishment was my just dues. But the first day of March, 1850 I found a sin bearer and not only one that was able but one that was willing, to save to the uttermost them that come unto God by Him, seeing that He ever liveth to make intercession for them that was given him of the Father. That is just such a character that I felt to be, that He has had an everlasting love for me and it was by this love that He had for me, that He through this spirit drawn me to Him, and I was not only willing, but gladly lay my burden upon Him. And He said 'because I live ye shall live also. And I have often realized with Jacob that He found me where He did him, in a waste howling wilderness and I sometimes feel that He has led me about and instructed me and kept me as the apple of His eye, and I hope there will never be any strange God found with me. I often feel that I have been led astray and yielded to temptations, but they were after my own lust, and not ordained of God, for I believe that all His decrees are righteous decrees and are for the good of all His people and for His own glory, and I find Him a place of refuge and I sometimes feel to praise Him for "His mercy endureth for ever," and I say to all the little trembling ones who are fearing that they have no friends here and none in heaven, He says fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom, without money or price, that you have been born into the Kingdom soul, body and spirit, and notwithstanding we sin or do wrong, and even made to abhor ourselves, we have a living fountain to bathe in; which cleanses us from all sin and uncleanness, this fountain was open to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. My faith in this fountain was brought to a test two months ago. And I thought I was sick unto death, and this scripture came to my relief "It needs be that all must die, and be as water spilt upon the ground and cannot be gathered together again, for God respecteth no person, yet doth God devise means that His banished shall not be expelled from Him."

Beloved brethren, in conclusion I will say that to my weak mind it seems evident from the above scriptures, and many others that I could cite you to, that there shall be a time for the gathering together of the saints which are born of the spirit—young and old, I mean infants also. I could cite you to many other scriptures and no other will be from all parts of the bible. See Psalms 22, 25, 35, 18, 41, 9 and 10. Deut. 33 and 10, Daniel 7 and 10. Paul says that the power of the Savior is such that He is able to subdue all things unto Himself. From the testimony, all who are born of God will be satisfied when they awake in His likeness, for we will be perfect and Christlike. For John tells us, It doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as he is. The same man that is born again shall be sown in corruption. These same natural vile bodies shall be fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body, and the wages of sin, which is death, shall be satisfied and they will be freely justified from all things, which they could not have been in any other way, only in the death and resurrection of our Elder Brother.

I further believe that these same natural or fleshly bodies will be raised spiritual bodies, and caught up to heaven to dwell with God forever. Good Lord may I be one of them, and be given that rest that remaineth to the children of God.

Brethren I trust you will bear with me in the time I have taken in relieving my mind on this subject, for how sinners are saved, why they are saved and by whom they are saved has occupied my mind ever since I can remember. It has given me more trouble and distress and at other times more peace and joy than every thing else combined. Now brethren, my prayer is, that I may not be forsaken nor forgotten in my old age. I feel I have been much better treated by the good Lord and the brethren than I deserve, yet I feel that I need your prayers and God's mercy

J. M. HARRIS. Reidsville, N. C.

Elders Gold and Lester,

Dear Brethren:

Realizing my inability to interest any of God's children, I have for some time past crushed the impression to write some for publication.

I was reared by Primitive Baptist parents, though not tyrannically taught religion, as they have been accused of. I, like all Adam's race, loved the world and its fascinations and tried every scheme to believe the do and live system right, though God in His wisdom and mercy willed it otherwise. In my blind and helpless condition I saw no reason why I could not at any time, when tired of the gaities of life, lay such aside, do good get religion and join the church. Oh, what a change when I saw my mistake—all the good deeds I once thought I could do were nothing—not one half hour could I control my sinful thoughts. My desire was for God's mercy not justice. How wonderfully blessed are the Lord's people who have underneath them a strong arm, an ever present help in the time of need. Every promise is to them. Could I but feel sure such sweet, rich promises are not too rich for poor sinful me.

The above thought gives me much trouble and oftimes it seems my hope has almost vanished. Then again I am strengthened and made to rejoice, and when I am permitted to gather a few crumbs my hope is strengthened and I have a sweet reason for rejoicing, and then it is I would not exchange my humble hope for all this world contains. It was my privilege to be baptized last August, one year ago, by Elder W. M. Monsees. Before this time I moped through life feeling burdened, cast down and that I must die and be eternally punished. I wanted some one to talk to me and could not get rid of this desire and I thought that a word or two would relieve and comfort me. In some way it fell to my lot to take Brother Monsees to the station from my home, and in a short while after leaving the house he said, "I believe you have a hope." Oh, how my heart rejoiced I can never tell, and 'twas in a way I had never known before. These words were constantly on my mind, also the promise I had made to offer to the church, if anyone ever mentioned the subject to me. I then put it off thinking I was deceived and had deceived him. My desire to be baptized in a pond which the Missionaries used for this purpose troubled me. I could not understand how it could be, for I had never known it to be used by Primitive Baptists whom I knew I wanted to be with.

Without any ones knowledge of my desire, I offered to the church at Malmaison in Brother Monsees presence, was received and baptized by him in the pond I so much desired to be.

This was a happy day for me. Everything seemed to praise God. How wonderful are His works, His ways past finding out. What a glorious privilege to worship such a God, one who makes no propositions, but said, "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

How easy to bear the frowns, hard names and unkind remarks that are made by a people who know no better? when we are called from this sinful world to that vast beyond where we shall see Him and be like Him. Is it not sufficient?

With love to the household of faith.

Your humble sister I hope,

ELLA WILLIAMS.

Elders Gold and Lester:

Dear Brethren—I send you for publication in the Landmark a sweet letter I received from Sister Louie T. Edwards. It made my heart glad to read it, and I hope it may comfort some one else. Also she is one of the lambs I hope that has recently come home to the Lord's people, and told them what great things the Lord has done for her.

It makes my heart rejoice, my brother, to see the humble poor coming home to their friends. Lord bless Zion everywhere, for the Lord reigneth.

Your brother in love,

A. M. CRISP.

Macclesfield, N. C.

Elder Amos Crisp, Macclesfield, N. C.:

Dear Brother in Christ—With fear and trembling I now make the attempt to write you, in part, what I feel to hope the Lord has done for me, a poor, vile sinner, as I could tell so little of my feelings and sufferings when I was received into the church. I humbly beg you to bear with me in my weakness, for the desire has continually followed me and has been impressed on my mind to do so, and hoping to get relief by so doing. I hope the blessed Lord will guide and help me, for without Him I can do nothing. My prayer to Him is, to protect, direct and guide me in the right way; help me to live right, act right and do right in all things every day of my life. My health is much improved and I am better than I have been for many long months. The terrible burden has been removed, the awful weight upon my heart has gone, and I feel, oh so thankful. My greatest desire was to be baptized, and I felt, oh so calm and peaceful, light and free, and I felt that I could then bid the world adieu and go on praising my Redeemer forever. I feel to say that I believe that His own appointed time had come for me to go forward, it was all so wonderfully done. I felt that I should never live to see another day if I was not enabled to go forward, and I was up there before I knew it and oh how thankful to my blessed Savior for giving me strength and enabling me to go, for in obedience I have found a blessed peace of mind and rest, which is worth far more than all things in this world. Pray for me that I be steadfast to the end. I was first made to see and to feel myself a poor, helpless vile sinner while down upon the bed of affliction.

I felt to be the worst sinner on earth, condemned and bound to die, and felt there was no hope for one in my condition. I would try to beg the Lord to help me and to have mercy on me, a vile, wretched sinner, and thought if I should die what would become of my soul. I felt I should be cast into eternal torment. I tried to pray, but it seemed my prayers would go no higher than my head. I begged the Lord if he would spare my life I would try and live better. My mind seemed to be gone and my body racked with pain; I was a mere skeleton. I tried different physicians, but they gave me no relief. I stayed in this condition for nearly two years and no mortal man can describe my sufferings. I felt that everybody knew my feelings. I thought I would gladly exchange places with any beast. I felt in my heart that everything and everybody was better than I, and that I was doomed to eternal torment, and oh, how I feared death. I would go to church and felt that I was not worthy of a place to sit or to stand, and felt that the preaching was directed and aimed at me, for I felt that everybody knew what a sinner I was, and how miserable I was. When I would read my Bible everything seemed to condemn me and I could find nothing to justify me. My continual cry was, Lord, have mercy on a sinner. I felt to be deranged and acted in a strange and cramped manner, fearing that every day was my last on this earth.

The more I tried to do right the worse I grew, it looked to me. I gave up in despair, but cried, Lord, whatever thou doest is just and right, for I know I can do nothing within myself. I was so helpless, and I felt that if I was cast into eternal punishment it would be right and just. The misery, grief and sorrow of heart is beyond expression.

I remember at that time that some traveling preachers preached at Sparta and I felt that I was bound and compelled to go, yet thinking I would not return alive, I was in so much trouble and distress of mind. When I went into the house my heart seemed to stand still, and I felt that I should faint, but I strived to compose myself, and after listening to their remarks I felt a little better, but it did not last longer than when I got home. That night I retired, feeling in my heart that I would not live to see the dawn of another day. I lay there thinking when all at once I felt to be perfectly happy. A calm and peaceful feeling came upon me, and I felt almost bound to shout aloud, and these words came to me, "The Lord loveth whom he chasteneth." I could hear the most beautiful singing, and oh, my soul; I felt I could then say:

"Oh Jesus, my Savior, I know thou art mine, Thy spirit first taught me to know I was blind."

How happy I was. The next day I felt like I wanted to tell everybody what I hoped the good Lord had done for me. I felt his blessed presence. I believe I was made to realize the sinfulness of the flesh and that there was no good thing in me. He led me by paths I knew not, and in the way I had not known.

I heard a sermon preached very soon after that from these words: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." And, oh my very soul seemed to rejoice in me. I could then feel the beauty of his words, for I felt that my blinded eyes had been opened and my deaf ears unstopped and I could more clearly see the beauty of his eternal salvation by grace.

I kept on in this manner from the time of my deliverance for a long time, having doubts and fears. At times the burden seemed more than I could bear. I thought the Baptists were the most lovely people on earth, and oh how I loved them and longed for a place among them, but felt so unworthy and unfit.

The desire for baptism was impressed heavily upon my mind in May, 1907, one night while sitting up with my sick husband. He was resting quietly and I picked up my Bible to try to read, and I was in so much trouble. But I did not read many verses before I felt I should die immediately. Such a burden as I never felt before was laid upon me, and I tried to pray to the Lord to have mercy on me and help me when instantly a voice said to me these words; "If you do not do your duty everything you have in this world will be taken from you." Oh how I begged the good Lord to spare me, and I promised if He would only spare my life I would try and perform every promise I had ever made to Him, and I begged Him to show me what was my duty. Immediately the same voice seemed to say, arise and be baptized, take up your cross and follow me. Oh, how wretched I felt, and I thought good Lord, I am such a great sinner, and I am so unworthy—I cannot live as I desire and cannot serve my Maker as I wish. Then these words were spoken to me, "How can he that is dead to sin remain any longer therein," and I tried to do what was bidden me. I suffered untold agony and grief of mind. I went about as one in a dream; every breath being a prayer to God to help me and make me worthy. I was so unfit, stumbled along, halting and limping, seeing and feeling my unworthiness more and more each day. I feel that when the light of the knowledge of God shines in a poor sinner's heart that one is made to rejoice in an All Powerful righteous, Omnipotent Savior, feeling his own helplessness and sinfulness so much. I feel that I cannot praise my God enough. He is so good to me, a vile, helpless worm of the dust. I do feel to be the greatest of sinners, and I pray to the Lord to keep me in the way He would have me to go, for without His help I shall go astray. I feel that afflictions are good for me. They keep me nearer to my Savior and make me look upon Him as He is. "My very best friend" in every time of trouble, sickness, sorrow and distress.

Please forgive me for trougling you with so long a letter, but I have not told the half; it cannot ever be told.

If the Lord wills, I want to stop with you at the next meeting, if I am blessed to be able to go, and I want you and your family to come and see me. I have left out so much that I desired to say, but will write no more now. I hope to hear you preach again soon, and you will never know the comfort and joy I have received from the words that have fallen from your lips. I pray God to bless you and family and please remember me in your prayers.

I went to Cross Roads Saturday and Sunday and heard Brethren Strickland, Staton and Harrison preach, and how I feasted—such good preaching. Love to all.

Your unworthy sister,
LOULIE T. EDWARDS.

The same things are still occuring among our people—an old man that each one is sure he has, and cannot get rid of nor manage as he would wish, yet cannot get along without. At times each one hopes he has a new man, but is not so sure of that. Yet if we have an old man is there not also a new man? Putting off the old man is closely connected with putting on the new man. They do not agree. When one is up the other is down.

"She standeth in the top of high places, by the way of the places of the paths."

Judge not that ye be not judged. With what judgment one condemns another he shall also be judged. But if you so love one that you see no fault in him then you have no judgment to render, and hence there is none against you.

A CROWN OF REPROACH—A BADGE OF SHAME.

Friend George D. Wade, of Virginia, requests my views of Isaiah, 3:16.17.

This scripture sets forth the women of Israel arrayed in garments of vanity and pride. Instead of being attired as Sarah was, in modest apparel, they displayed much haughtiness and naughtiness of spirit in silly dress to attract the admiration of men, and to encourage wantonness which no prudent, godly woman would dare to do.

Neatness of dress, the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit and modest behavior—preaching places not spualid with floors covered with filth, and walls open to the shivering blasts of winter, a filthy, slack extreme on the one hand, to be condemned as one with such ragged clothing as would expose his person: or very costly, gorgeous meeting houses with lofty spires, stained windows, and velvet pews, on the other hand, to faten pride, to be eschewed as one whose person is decked with kings' royal apparel, as proclaiming their pride, an impudent extreme on the other side, are also to be condemned.

One's worship should be an expression of what he is, and is an exponent of what he feels himself to be, and should be a declaration of what the object he professes to worship is, and it does show forth the character in which he holds his object of worship.

How shamefully the Jews, shadowing forth their worship through these women putting on ornaments that showed their lewdness God would put a scab on their head, crown showing they were decayed under disease, loathsome in their filthy conduct; and he would degrade them as without understanding, strength or honor and would mar their beauty, and cause them to be loathed by their filthy lovers: and he would strip them of their false covering and expose their secret parts, or bring to light the filthiness and lewdness of their fornication, or secret worship of idols, and their shame should be upon themselves.

How were they stripped of their pride when the daughter of Zion sat solitary in Babylon and none of her lovers comforted her, the sport and jest of all passers-by who said, "Is this the city that men call the perfection of beauty, the joy of the whole earth?"

P. D. G.

Friend G. F. Tolan requests my view of Matt. 12:43,46.

We should look at the subject matter under consideration when we seek to understand a question, always feeling our dependence on the Lord to give us the true understanding.

The Pharisees charged that Jesus cast out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils—see 24th verse; also certain of the Scribes and Pharisees asked Jesus for a sign. They asked for that sign tempting him. Both things showed the utter depravity of these Jews. What could be a more bitter charge than that Jesus was in league with Beelzebub, the most unclean of all devils?

Jesus reasons that a house divided against itself cannot stand. If satan is therefore divided against himself his kingdom cannot stand. To charge Jesus with such a thing constitutes the unpard-nable sin, because it showed their malice.

Jesus could not cast out devils until he first binds satan, the strong man. If this is not done then devils or unclean spirits would of their own will and voluntarily go out of a man, and when they desire they would return to him and bring other unclean spirits more corrupt than themselves, and all of them would dwell in that man, and his last state would be worse than the first.

But if Jesus first binds satan, and then casts out the unclean spirit, that unclean spirit cannot return to that man because a stronger man than he possesses him, even Jesus, and that man is kept by the power of God through faith ready to be revealed in the last time.

But when satan or the unclean spirit goes out of his own will he will come back there when it suits him, and he will dwell there, for he will find this man ready to receive him, and his last state will be worse than the first, because he will take other unclean spirits more wicked than himself.

Is it not true that when a man makes up his carnal mind to become a christian, as he calls it, that he seems to become worse—a great hater of true religion—a discontented scoffer against religion? Hypocrisy begets a rapid increase of wickedness. This was true of the Jewish nation that wicked generation. In consequence of the fact that the devil had complete control of them, they were more corrupt than the cities of Sodom or than Nineveh. Hence it would be more tolerable for any of those cities than for Jerusalem. Their exceeding wickedness showed that they were waxing worse and worse. There had been a great increase of unclean spirits among them. They did soon miserably perish as a nation.

But the Jerusalem above is free. The devil has no power there because Jesus reigns there, and no unclean thing can enter there.

P. D. G.

1901.

Nearly six thousand years ago, according to accepted chronology, the world was created and began its career. Four thousand years after this the Maker of the world appeared as the Redeemer in the likeness of sinful flesh. During these two thousand years now expired, wars have not ceased. The end of the world is not yet. They shall marry and give in marriage while nature is as it is, or while time lasts.

An impression has been prevalent with some that the next thousand years would answer to the seventh day, and therefore be a time of rest corresponding to the Sabbath day—a freedom from strife, labor, war and toil—a millennium. But we cannot safely interpret from dates or years, times or seasons, as analogical. For God has hid the future from mortal vision. We know not what even a day may bring forth, much less do we know what a year will do.

There is nothing new under the sun. Nations and kingdoms shall rise and fall as of old. Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived.

The comfort to me is that the same Lord Jesus rules that has ruled hitherto, and works all things according to the counsel of his own will, and that all things—as of old—work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

It is in my mind to contend, God being my helper, for the doctrine of truth as heretofore. With me there is nothing special in this year more than any other year. All mysteries are in his hand. All time is good if we are wise redeeming the time.

This is the opening of a new century—the twentieth—the last one to complete the two thousand years. Perhaps not one in a million of those now living will witness its close. We rush along at rapid speed, not knowing what awaits us—not a man, woman or child, with all our increase of knowledge, knows when, where or how he or any one else shall die.

P. D. G.

PREACHING—MANNER AND MATTER.

No man is qualified or sent of God to preach the gospel who is not clothed and filled in spirit with the weight, the importance, the solemnity of the call. He must feel his own utter insufficiency and also feel assured that God is able to grant him this treasure, or that he speaks with the ability that God gives.

He must feel that it is the gospel of God—that the cause is God's, and the people are his also. Feed the flock of God which he has purchased with his own blood.

He must possess the gravity of the gospel. He must not say things to make people laugh.

That will destroy the savor that should be felt—as one hears the gospel preached. What would you think of such a preacher as Paul telling anecdotes, or telling things for amusement, or to make people laugh?

Jesting is not convenient. Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to have an ill savor or odor. A little folly in a man that should occupy the place of the wise, diminishes his good effort of his preaching. A preacher is on a hind, every one is noticing him. Here is an enemy watching for a stone to cast at him. If he does or says anything that can be gainsaid that is what he wants to hear, and brands the entire body with it. One sinner in this sense can destroy much good.

Suppose one attends the preaching that is enquiring where the shepherd feeds his flocks, and sees or hears a preacher that is full of levity so that this enquirer feels that that man is false to his profession, and loves folly more than he loves the Lord Jesus: what hurt this will make.

The preacher in his manner must be sober minded, grave. He will be if he is a follower of Jesus. One may rejoice in the Lord and yet be free from levity and full of gravity. One may preach and speak the truth in love, peace and good will to men without uttering any foolish jesting. If he comes in the name of Jesus his manner will show forth the character of Jesus.

The true preacher does not seek to offend men, or drive them off, or so act that serious minded people will not wish to hear him. Paul says we persuade men—knowing the terrors of the Lord we persuade men. Reproof is to encourage men to better living. To exhort men is to present to them reasons and motives for righteous living.

The preacher is not to please the flesh. Suppose he is given to jesting or telling anecdotes to provoke laughter, is he not pleasing his OWN flesh in acting that way? It is a man's own flesh he is to watch and guard against.

Suppose there are two preachers, one given to telling anecdotes; the people fond of hearing such things will flock around him. Another preacher of a sober, serious mind is fond of talking in a serious way on bible subjects; the people that love such conversation will follow him, or love to hear him. Now which of these do you more enjoy? which would you prefer to hear preach?

The matter to be preached is Jesus Christ and him crucified. The end or substance of the conversation, the theme, of a gospel preacher, that which he always preaches, is Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever. Beside him all things else are trash and vanity. He is the chiefest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely. So glorious is his character, so full, inexhaustible, unspeakable and so varied are his beauties that there is no such thing as exhausting this most wonderful of all subjects. Preach the Word. That word is Jesus Christ and him crucified. There is no distress of a christian but it is met and relieved in Jesus Christ and him crucified. It needs no flattery or ornamentation of human speech to commend Jesus to a hungry soul.

Strip of all gloss of flattering speech and preached in the simplicity of truth he is commended in righteousness.

P. D. G.

Brother Gold—While preaching about Esau and Jacob the 2nd Sunday I thought it was as rich as it could be for I had never thought of it in the light you preached it.

We understand in that day and time the birthright belonged to the oldest child, and when Jacob bought it from Esau it was his by purchase. Now he had to go to his father in his brother's name in order to receive the blessing that his father had to bestow.

While a poor sinner is going with that weight of sin and condemnation he learns at the appointed time of God when to go. He goes to God and he does not go in his own name for he has tried self and found it a failure every time. I know it was so with me, and is so until now. My experience teaches me to be one of the least to whom this grace is given. About 25 years ago I feel the good Lord spoke to me and said, I have loved thee with an everlasting love, and I feel to say that his word will never return unto him void.

Since that time I have had many trials, and have undergone many conflicts; but my faith is as strong today as it was when I received that hope. I feel that the God whom I try to serve has been with me until now and has blest me and I hope I thank Him who has given me an ear to hear the truth, for it is meat indeed and drink indeed.

REUBEN DEAL.

Remarks:—Brother Deal is a deacon at the Falls of Tar River, and has been for many years, and is a very pleasant, faithful brother. About 35 years ago I baptized him. Few men have labored together as long as we have.

I remember very well the day he refers to when I dwelt upon the types of Jacob and Esau; how that Jacob shows the vessel of mercy elect of God, and Esau the vessel of wrath against whom God had indignation forever. Esau shall be stubble, (Obadiah 18 verse.) Esau is the flesh, the carnal man, the first born—while Jacob is the one that is saved. The elder shall serve the younger. Esau despised his birthright and was a profane man, a fornicator who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright, Heb. 12:16. Is it not a matter of joy that God will destroy wickedness and that this body of death so besets and attacks the child born of God shall be consumed and come to desolation.

The elder is the flesh that is carnal and is enmity against God; while the younger represents the new man, or that which is born again, and is a spiritual man.

How does the elder serve the younger? The oppression, the affliction and distress that is brought on the new man by the old man impels and constrains him to pray, and cuts off all reliance on the flesh. In the day of Jacob's trouble, when Esau was coming to meet him with 400 men, and Jacob was in such great distress that he gave up every thing, and a man wrestled with Jacob until the breaking of the day, and he said unto Jacob, let me go, and Jacob said I will not until thou bless me, and he said to Jacob, what is thy name? and Jacob said my name is Jacob; and he said thy name shall no more be called for thou hast prevailed (see the 32nd chapt. of Gen.) The necessities of Jacob pressed up on him in having to meet his brother was the occasion of this most wonderful prayer, and when every thing was given up and his thigh out of joint, and he had no power, behold what a victory he obtained. Our necessities, our weaknesses, our old man the flesh, the eldest becomes our servant, and that which we do not want we cannot do without.

How glorious it will be in the resurrection life when sin and death shall be swallowed up in victory. For there is nothing more glorious than the destruction of the enemies of God, and sin is one of these, and so is the carnal mind.

How grace leaps over the wall and prevails, for where sin abounded grace did much more abound. By the law is the knowledge of sin, and by sin comes death. The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be unto God that giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

In Deut. 21: 15-18, there is the case that it seems would forever exclude Jacob from the blessing of the first born, as when one is under the power of conviction, and the letter and power of the law cuts him off forever from hope of mercy, when lo and behold power is given unto Jacob even before his birth, Hosca 12: 3-5.: Jacob's prevailing is a mystery of grace.

P. D. G.

Objectionable words and phrases used among Primitive Baptists.

"How does man know what to teach, where there is no word from God?"—Elder P. D. Gold.

For instance, one asserts a notion that he has a right to coin the term "Time Salvation." But it has become offensive, and an issue is raised over it, and the love of peace among us should bring us back to the bible term as expressed by James, "The common Salvation." Another moulds the term, "Absolute Predestination," another unscriptural term, regarding of which untold sorrow exists. Predestination is God's term, and is wholly sufficient without human agency using the prop "Absolute" to make it any more secure. We should remember how Uzzah put forth his hand to support the ark of God, for which sin God slew him. The term "unlimited" is now injected, and is equally as objectionable. The term "God's Sovereignty" is intended to supply these deficiencies. Now for peace and union, let us use scriptural terms, and as Brother Gold said, neither add to, nor take from the word. I wrote a communication a few years ago, stating that certain words formed no part of the bible. When some Missionary fellow said that it was allowed by the law of common parlance. The words Sunday school, Mission and Missionary were the words that I wrote were not in the scripture. I was arguing that we should earnestly contend for the faith, which was once delivered to the saints, and with scriptural terms. Issues had been raised on these points, followed by much strife and division. I am so sensitive about these unscriptural titles that I wince when a brother in preaching, tells the congregation that a certain element of the gospel is his "mission" to preach and that Christ's "mission" was to save sinners. I think the law of common parlance would require the precautions to conform to the word. When I read communications containing these worldly terms, I do not swallow them nor any margin of the intelligence near them. Issues of departures and divisions lie at their door, unscriptural at best. The command that Christ gave to his disciples in Matt. 28: 19-20 is called the "Commission." He told them to teach the observance of all things whatsoever he had commanded them.

It is command instead of commission. It is more sure than Commission, for that is only authority. Predestination needs no human auxiliary, any more than to say, cold ice, wet water and similar prefixes. We revere predestination, and the "Sovereignty of God," but not used in such connections. We make no tests of fellowship regarding it, any more than we do regarding the washing of feet. Nor should not unless continually annoyed by extremists.

ISAAC WEBB.

Remarks—It seems to me that brother Webb is correct in the above view. Is it not safe to observe the mind of the Holy Ghost?

Men that crave changes introduce new words or terms to add to or take from or to make some change. If not why do they use them? For instance the word mission (though not in the bible) is made one of great prominence by modern denominations, Brother Webb calls attention to that word. Arminians use it to cover, protect, authorize and defend all their missionary operations. Thus they give it great weight and cause the world to regard it as sanctioned—with all the meaning they attach to it—by the bible, when there is no truth in it.

Are you opposed to missions? If so you are a heathen they think.

Sins of omission are bad, but sins of presumption are far worse. Sins of ignorance are bad, but sins of pride and arrogance are far more dangerous.

At the very last of the New Testament a warning stands against any man that adds to or takes from the word of the Lord. Let that blessed book stand as delivered to us.

OBITUARIES

NANCY C. THOMPSON.

Nancy Catherine Thompson, youngest child of David and Catherine Weddle, was born April 14, 1839, and departed this life March 19, 1909. August 22, 1865 she was married to James J. Thompson. To this union there were born 5 children, three sons and two daughters, four of whom survive her, one son and her husband having preceded her to the infinite realities of the life beyond the grave. One brother Simon P. Weddle and one sister, Mrs. Margaret J. Bailiff survive her.

About 16 years ago she came before the church and on confession of repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ she was baptized by Elder Q. D. Weeks and remained steadfast in the faith thus confessed to the end of this life.

Sister Thompson was truly faithful to her privileges in the church. She beautifully adorned her profession with a meek and quiet life in godliness and honesty. Her life clearly and truly indexed her religion. She went forth on her way with clean hands and grew in strength and in the confidence and fellowship of the brethren.

Her life was clean inwardly and outwardly. She was truly a keeper at home, both spiritually and domestically. Order, cleanliness and neatness prevailed everywhere and in everything throughout her household. The brightness of her home was an inspiration to industry. Her examples demonstrated her precepts and though she is dead, yet they live in the hearts and minds of her children and neighbor's children. One could hardly think of Sister Thompson as being other than what she appeared to be. All who knew her sorrow because she is not, yet they sorrow not without hope. How sweet is the savor of such a life, and how blessed of the Lord is the one possessed of it.

P. G. LESTER.

GEORGE W. WILLIARD.

George W. Williard, son of G. W. and Rachel Williard, deceased, died very suddenly at his home four miles southeast of Winston-Salem, N. C., on the 22 day of June, 1909, in the fifty-sixth year of his age. He was brought to a knowledge of his sinful condition in early manhood and after laboring in prayer for years, the Lord was revealed to him as being the end of the law for righteousness to them that believe. He remained out of the church for years on account of a feeling sense of unworthiness, but about seven years ago his love for the brethren, a desire for fellowship with the people of God, and a duty which he felt to be imposed upon him; drew him to the church at Saints Delight, where he was joyfully received and he was baptized by his brother Elder P. W. Williard.

He was modest in appearance, moral from childhood, deliberate in conversation, rarely ever mentioning the faults of others and peaceable in the church, his neighborhood and home, thus making a model husband and father, and a useful man in the vicinity. He was twice married, the first marriage being to Miss Sarah A. Clinard, on March 7th, 1878. She was spared to him only a little more than seven years, leaving him with the care of three little daughters and a son.

The second marriage was to Miss Mary E. Lashmit on the 23 day of Sept. 1888. To them were born two daughters and a son.

Brother Williard was never a strong, healthy man, but labored with his own hands, and provided well for his family, whom he dearly loved. He was at work in the field when he died. His wife and children were devoted to him, and feel that with the head of the house gone, a great power has gone out from them.

They mourn and weep for him, but are not alone in this, for all who knew him mourn the absence of so good a man, yet we feel that for him, it was better to depart and be with Christ. About eleven days before his death he visited the writer and in conversation rehearsed the dealings of the Lord with him, seeming to feel impressed that he was nearing the end of his earthly journey, and with tears flowing freely from his eyes, he said, "If I am saved it is the mercy and goodness of the Lord toward me, and I am leaning on His rod and His staff for comfort." He remarked to his beloved and faithful companion on Sunday evening before his death on Tuesday that he felt like he would be with her only a little longer.

The burial services were conducted by his two brothers Elders Wess and Mode Williard, after which his remains were consigned to the earth in the graveyard at Saint's Delight. All of his children and his poor, heart-broken wife were present to witness the return of his body to its mother earth, and oh, how loth they were to see it go down. We hope and believe he will be raised again, and be made like unto his dear Lord in whom he trusted for salvation. His loved ones feel that

He went hence from their home, when they treasured him most,

When their reason could measure his worth,

And they know but too well, that the treasure they've lost,

Can be never replaced upon earth.

MRS. E. A. BURTON.

HENRY MULLIS.

Dear Brother Gold—

If it is the Lord's will I will try and write of the death of my dear husband. He was so good and kind and it is such a grief to me to have to part from him. He died March 31, 1909 after a stay on earth of 28 years, one month and two days. He was sick for about two years, suffering from that dread disease the dropsy. Oh, how he suffered, being hungry and could not eat anything except milk and crackers, and oh what a grief it was to me to see him want to eat and could not.

How lonely the days are to me now, no one knows except those who have felt the sorrow of losing a kind, loving, tender husband. I cannot help but feeling though that he has gone to heaven and if only me and my dear children can meet him there I will be satisfied. I have written this hoping it might be some comfort to those that have had an experience of grace.

I now have no one to talk to but my little children and I don't know what will become of us unless the good Lord guides and teaches me how to raise them. They miss him so much, and all they do is to cry and ask me when is Papa coming back. Sometimes I think it will drive me crazy.

He believed in the Primitive Baptists and only a few moments before he died he was reading the Landmark. Towards the last he often called for his song-book and the last song was, "Do not shed any tears for me." But how can we help from shedding them.

Won't every one who reads this remember me and my children in their prayers.

May the good Lord prepare us to meet him in that bright world above where there will be no more suffering or sorrow. We deeply feel our loss, but God knows best.

His funeral was preached at Reddy

Spring by Elder Louis.

THE PURPOSE OF ZION'S LANDMARK

"Ask for the old paths where is the good way."

By the help of the Lord this paper will contend for the ancient Landmark, guided by its stakes of Truth, and strengthened by its cords of Love.

It hopes to reject all traditions and institutions of men, and regard only the Bible as the standard of Truth.

It urges the people to search the scriptures, and obey Jesus, the king in the holy hill of Zion, keeping themselves unspotted from the world.

It aims to contend for the mystery of the faith in God, the Father, Jesus, the Mediator, and the Holy Spirit, the blessed Comforter.

When a subscriber desires his paper changed he should state plainly both the old and new postoffices. When one wishes his paper stopped, let him send what is due, and also state his post-office.

Let each subscriber pay his paper in advance if possible, and when he renews give the same name it has been going in, unless he wishes it changed, then he should state both the old and the new names.

If money sent has not been receipted, please inform me of it. When you can always send money by money order, check or draft, or registered letter, or by express.

Each subscriber can tell the time to which he has paid for the paper by noticing the date just after his name.

All brethren and friends are requested to act as agents.

All names and postoffices should be written plainly.

All lovers of gospel truth are invited to write for it—if so impressed.

May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to all lovers of truth.

All communications, business letters, remittances of P. O. Orders, money, drafts, etc., should be sent to

ZION'S LANDMARK

DEVOTED TO THE CAUSE OF JESUS.

"Is There Not a Cause"?

It is, we take it, universally lamented that we as a denomination, or section, have for a long season been in a grievously declining state, which state seems generally to increase. Different reasons are given for it, and different remedies are applied or suggested. We hear of organs costing three figures in pounds in some places. How any gracious person can suppose spiritual life is to be increased this way we cannot conceive. One thinks only one of two reasons can account for such a course,—either the "salt" of the ministry has no savour, and so outside aids, as "instruments without life giving sound," are sought unto to supply something in the place of what is lacking, or else the people have no taste for the pure gospel, and must have flesh-pleasing somethings to get them to attend at all; and this extravagance occurs while many of God's dear saints are suffering from want of ordinary necessities of life. Is it possible to spiritually pray for the Holy Spirit's blessing upon or by such means? Then we have other means, utterly and entirely dissociated from all such extravagances as the foregoing, favored by some of our most highly-esteemed friends during the past year or two, to seek, by prayer-meetings and other means, if it may be the Lord will hear prayer and give more prosperity to us. We do not know that any distinctive title has been given to it, but the Editor of the "Christian's Pathway," one of the Committee, defines it as the "Present Movement." We have been asked our views upon it, and have not known what to say; nor do we now know. It seems to us something of the nature of an experiment; and while we have every confidence in and esteem for the friends more immediately concerned in it, we have to lament that we do not understand entirely what is intended, nor fully what is aimed at, or for. Two well-attended General Meetings, and others, have been held; still our uncertainty remains.

Let us, however, try and direct our thoughts to a head, or heads; and we assume and believe the great desire of all to be that, the Lord willing, a better state of things may be brought about; further that it is desired to be brought about in ways "according to the Scriptures;" indeed, real blessing and increase can come in no other way. We take it also, that it is universally allowed that the degeneration (or give it what term we may) has gradually come about from causes which may be classed under two principal heads—First, and chiefly, the removal home of so many saints from our midst, while others have not been "called" to fill their places. Secondly, partly as the result of this, and partly (as seem to be assumed) from a kind of general "looseness" in the churches, perhaps amounting to carelessness in some, and unholy practices in others; the Lord has been pleased to "hide his face from us." Indeed, the latter case seemed at first to be much pressed, which caused us in our last year's "Greeting" to wonder where the inquiry was to begin, and where end. That point seems less pressed now. It seemed to us to involve all "in the like condemnation," without much distinction; and we also wondered, if inquiry was made, whether it would "begin at the head," where the Lord told Ezekiel to begin. It was partly to see whether the Report of the last meeting, or the Editor's address in the "Gospel Standard," or of the "C. P.," would give us enough information to come to some practical to defer our remarks for another month.

Our first point deals with the loss of so many gracious persons from our causes—and alas! how many have been so lost, even of late—and the few who seem to be "called by grace." What can we answer to this? Not much; but we think all that can properly be said—"Divine Sovereignty!" Extended inquiry seems to us scarcely permissible here, if, as one good man put it, we "believe what we do believe." If we asked some friends with one or more children the reason why others were not born, might not the very question be received as suggestive of evil, and would it be wondered at if our friends felt grossly insulted, and ordered us out of their home and ended their friendship? And dare we question the Eternal, where questioning sinners might not be permissible? Natural causes limit the families of most, or debar them; no such cause can be assigned to the family of heaven. Changes of increase and barrenness, prosperity and adversity, have been the experience of the Church in all ages, and God giveth not account of his purposes or working. The Lord bade his disciples pray, "Thy kingdom come," but never a word as to inquiring about the reasons of its increase or otherwise. We hope in effect we all pray, "Thy kingdom come." There it must be left. How sweetly hymn 64 expresses the assured belief that the exact moment is decreed for every one's "call," and every attending circumstance. Many hymns and scriptures teach the same as our friends will well know. Again we say—"Divine Sovereignty" answers the question, and forbids curious inquiring here.

Secondly, the causes of the low estate of things, and the partial withholding of the Holy Spirit's more powerful operations. Which again seems to fall under two heads i. Divine Sovereignty again, and ii. Man's procuration. The first point suggests the question whether the blessed Spirit has so far withdrawn as different assertions or evidences seem to indicate. As with his varying seasons of the prolific regeneration of souls or the reverse, so with his more powerful operations on those regenerated. It seems to us too common and thoughtless a practice to attribute all the sensible withholdings of his holy manifestations in the individual soul, or in the Church collectively, to allowed sin. We would not be misunderstood; much of it, perhaps most, might have "Yes" appended to the question, "Hast thou not procured these things to thyself?" But not all; and here we differ from some friends. We think it is clearly taught in the Word that "The Lord trieth the righteous;" and we judge the keenest part of that "trying" is the hidings of his face in time of trouble. Is it answered, "because of sin?" We do not agree with it as an invariable rule. Was Job guilty of sin when afflictions and darkness, alike of dispensation and of soul desertion, came upon him? God speaks very differently, alike to satan at the commencement, and to his friends, who had been so busy with their charges at the close, as the history proves. We think the often experience of the Lord's hiding himself from the house of Jacob comes upon the most tender and circum-spect of Christians; one sang,

"The very hiding of His face Shall train thee up to joy."

Are we not on Scriptural ground in our remarks (see also Isa. viii. 17 and connections,) which are much briefer than the questions require. A combination of circumstances and exercises have decided us to close our "Greeting" here, and we purpose continuing our remarks under a different heading.

We commend the Report of the Meeting referred to; it contains an excellent sermon by Mr. Popham.—Selected.

Dear Brother Gold:—

Please find enclosed $1 which all I have to spare just now having sold but a few pounds of my tenants tobacco crop with my part less than $5.00. But I know you have a pressing need for money and I feel that every little will help some, so send this along.

I have been to Texas since I saw you last and have been spared to get home once more, and since May have been here alone except for the tenants. I seldom go anywhere as I keep no horse and can only go on the train.

I got to Reidsville the fourth sabbath in August and enjoyed preaching at our church; then I went up to Lickfork the first Sunday in September, but no preacher came and I was greatly disappointed and worn out as it is fourteen miles there and back. I grieve over the condition of the church there and can see no sign of an improvement, but I know God can and will revive it in His own good time, and I hope I can feel His will not mine be done.

I was reading the Landmark of October 1, last night and saw the letter from the Missionary, O. O. Mangum, and it grieves me to read such charges, and I wished I could explain it to others as you do, for I hear a great deal like that and often from those who are near and dear to me who cannot understand predestination; but I try to console myself by thinking He only can make the blind see and will do all things well in His own good time and way, and will bring all of his sheep out and not a hoof will be left behind.

I hope you and your dear family are well and enjoying the blessings of God in an especial manner and I do ask you to remember me in your prayers as one who feels the need of them.

With much love, I am your unworthy sister,

N. B. BLACKWELL.

Pelham, N. C.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Very dear and precious Brother:—

Enclosed you will find a letter written by Sister Azubah Lee which is too good for ^{me} to myself. I feel it will be comforting to others as it was to me.

Hoping that you and your dear ones are all well and that you will remember me at a throne of grace. I am your little unworthy brother I hope in bonds,

A. D. JOHNSON.

Benson, N. C., Route 3.

Elder A. D. Johnson,

Dear Brother in hope of life eternal:—

The question arose in my mind concerning the first line, why should I claim the sweet fellowship of one who is so superior as you are to me—I who feel to unworthy to even say brother. But with the hope that it is the love of Jesus Christ which constraineth us to remember one another, I once attempted to write you as I have been impressed to for more than twenty-four hours. Not that this can be beneficial to you as I am to ignorant to elevate your mind but for peace and comfort for my own self.

I wish to speak of some things which often dwell on my mind, and if I could only be present with you perhaps I could give you better understanding of what I am attempting to write.

Duty has long been a subject of importance with me, and I feel there is a duty for me and for all, and what can I tell you when behold to my surprise I heard a sermon delivered yesterday by Brother B. Wood at Hickory Grove that was just what I wanted to hear, and as I told him I desired to hear not only this but many more. I so often desire to speak of our duty to others, but I feel to embarrassed because my conscience tells me I do not do mine. But my dear brother, do we not know that an example by older ones often is quite instructive to younger ones. I want to see love, fellowship, &c. extended beyond and outside the boundaries of the church-yard. Let brotherly love continue. By our faith let our works manifest our faith, outside of a "good morning" brother, and a warm grasp of the hand, is about as far as our love proves itself. But dear brother, when we attempt to prove a christian life, is not that life to be a follower of Christ—to live Christ-like—so far as possible as this old earthly body will admit? Was not the life of Christ spent most in ministering? Should we all not be ministers? We cannot all be ministers of the gospel, but we all have talents and if we do not use these talents what is the result? Are they not taken away and given to another? Yea, Paul was a son but he counted himself not a son but a servant, surely as he was a minister he was a servant of God, a servant of Christ and of the church, and our servant for Jesus' sake. While all are not ministers of the gospel I believe they should be ministers of other things; ministers to one another in need, in distress, in affliction—to comfort the comfortless, speak words of cheer, do every act that is possible to help each other—not only one another, but all humanity who need the arm of help. Oh dear brother, how do you suppose I feel when I tell you I have for a long time been where I needed assistance, and oh how it quenched my faith—how I stumbled in my belief, when, oh I cannot frame words to tell you how killing to my poor feelings when I would usually receive more relief, more help, more attention and more love from those who had never professed any hope and from those of other denominations. Oh, my greatest desire above all is to prove my faith by my works, for can a barren tree be of any use in God's vineyard. Sometimes it makes me start and question the Father in heaven, oh, where can the child of God be found. Could I but pour out my heart's feelings just as I feel them. But oh, I feel too guilty to unworthy to condemn others. By their fruit shall ye know them, and oh what power did these words have. Did not Christ say, if ye love me keep my commandments, and He commanded us to love one another and if we love one another will we not minister to others' needs, like visiting them when in sickness or distress?

Let us notice how many times Christ ministered to the afflicted. I don't mean giving them things of this world, but to visit them and by any act that can be done to relieve or ease their distress. Oh how blessed. Often in my afflictions have the presence of one of my nieces seemed to me like an angel, turning my heavy burdened heart into one of rejoicing and causing me to bless God for such a minister to my needs and cheer to my heart.

So with others it would be the same. Here within three-quarters of a mile lives our afflicted sister in Christ, a beloved neighbor of mine. Her life to my view since I could remember has been one of perfection. Oh, how she is neglected. Now why could not the sisters and brethren visit her more? Oh, if I could only impress on others how it feels I would gladly do so. Just let any one get sick for a few days or weeks, how forsaken and neglected they feel, but oh, let them remain sick for years their sad expression grows a great deal more.

If we love these sisters and brothers let us prove it and only by our acts and deeds can we do it.

Now when we feel so poor in spirit we think, if I could but meet with some one who has had those same feelings what a comfort it would be to hear them talk of the riches of the blessed kingdom, also of their experience in the way they have travelled. To know others can sympathize and do for us in our lowly forsaken feelings, and one who can feel to sympathize with us and come to us to help us bear our sorrows and give us their sympathy, what consolation.

Peace be still is spoken.

How can anyone give us comfort or sympathy unless they too have suffered. Well do I remember the visit made down here over a year ago by you. Oh how unworthy I felt to even be allowed the privilege of meeting one who I felt to know could not see and know my vileness and ignorance. I felt unworthy that such a one as you are should ever come under the roof of one so imperfect as I. Yet what comfort beyond words to express to know that love, keeping His commandment, constrained you to come. Were you not one of Christ's ministers come bringing the message of love, fulfilling His commandments, ministering to the poor and afflicted? And oh how soothing to my poor aching heart and how touching to see the image of that lowly Christ stamped on your features as you sat by the lounge where I was reciting while you were preaching of the blessed Saviour's love. Well do I remember those sacred moments, yet it fanned the flames of my heart with desire to hear and talk more. For oh, so many times have I been present with those who I knew were experienced and rich in spiritual knowledge that I wanted to hear talk of spiritual things. But after hearing them I was disappointed. Never have I seen any one who seemed more humble and more like one of the lowly meek followers of Christ than you did that well remembered day. You came, sent on purpose, I felt to believe, by Him who hath said, "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people."

But my letter is getting to be too lengthy and as I felt a desire while writing this letter to tell you, I hope you will lay before the people the 'mportance of duty and how much we need admonishing and waking up.

Please throw the mantle of charity over my ignorance and imperfect letter, and if I have said anything wrong, please pardon and correct, remembering that it is from the most ignorant that ever attempted to put lines before you.

Hope you and family are well.

Father, sister and I are yet spared to be living, though my father remains very feeble in both body and mind. I am thankful to say my sister and I are some stronger than we were a year ago.

Dear Brother, please remember me to our High Priest who remembereth our infirmities and healeth our diseases.

Your little sister, if one at all.

AZUBAH LEE.

Dear Brother Cold:-

The following letter from Sister L. E. Lilley is too good for me to keep all to myself, therefore I send it to you and if you think proper you may give it to the brethren through the Landmark.

Yours in hope,

L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Elder L. H. Hardy,

Dear brother in the Lord:—

As my mind travels one sees so much of the wonderful works and the goodness, mercy and love of God that it seems I must tell some of these glorious things to somebody. I am such a poor writer and so unworthy to see the glorious things that do appear to me. What a sure foundation is laid and what a wonderful work is prepared in the salvation of God's people. If I could know I am one for whom Jesus died I would doubt no more, for in the wonderful works of God's salvation there is a blood bought robe of righteousness prepared for God's people, and as Aaron's robe was all of a piece, so is the blood-bought robe of righteousness a seamless, a finished garment with no seam nor place left to add to nor take from; and when I look and see where we stood, how deep down in sin we had gone, so low in sin and degredation that we could rise no more. But Jesus paid the debt we owed and He will raise us in His own good time.

Oh, the goodness, mercy and love of God! He sent Jesus to save His people from their sins, and sent the spirit in our hearts that made us cry "Abba Father."

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believers ear;
It soothes his sorrows, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fear.

It makes the wounded spirit whole,
And calms the troubled breast;
'Tis manna to the hungry soul,
And to the weary rest."

Oh what a sweet word to me to meditate upon!

"Dear name the rock on which I build;
My shield and hiding place—
My never failing treasury Filled with boundless stores of grace."

What a glorious treasury in Jesus is given! for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, and I am so glad we are told to go and tell what great things the Lord has done for us instead of being told to tell what great things we have done, for to be told to tell what great things the Lord has done leaves a little hope for me, even me, the chief of sinners, for it matters not what is taken from us or kept back from us, yet there are so many things that I see for which to thank and praise God, for I surely do know that goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and I do feel to hope that Jesus died for me. And if He died for me then I am redeemed by the blood of the Lamb, and no power in heaven, nor in the earth, nor under the earth can pluck my life out of His hand for it is eternal. See what a foundation is laid for our faith.

A three in one God: the Father, the Son and the Holy spirit in our God. Our Savior, shield and hiding place. Therefore we will look to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith to lead us in the way we should go, for we know not the way to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, only as God works in us. God must lead us and teach us and work in us all the way if we are able to show our faith by our works.

When God works in us to walk not after the flesh but after the spirit then we can tell what great things the Lord has done for us and for all that Jesus died to redeem. But if God should leave us to walk alone even for a minute we should go to walking or living after the flesh, and then we would begin telling what we can do and must do. Then the next thing we know our peace of mind would be gone, the yoke would seem hard to wear and the burden heavy to bear with no rest to the soul to be found. But when God works in the heart again we so quickly see and tell what the Lord has done for us, and then the yoke is so easy and the burden so light and rest is found to the soul even while we journey as strangers in a strange land. Oh how sweet it is to rest the weary soul, leaning by faith upon the arm of everlasting love where nothing can disturb us.

There is a fear that comes up that it is not the work of God in my heart. But that can keep me calm and peaceable when I can freely say, even though He slay me yet will I trust Him. Sometimes I have no desire to be aroused from that calm, restful and trusting feeling that I have so long possessed, but at other times it seems sure I must fight if I reign with Jesus and then I desire to arise and travel on. Yet if anything enters that disturbs that calm feeling that is within me, some sweet word or thought and drives out whatever has entered, and leaves all so peacefully at rest within me. Then I wonder, can it be of the Lord. Then hope comes in to drive out fear, therefore Lord, I do believe Thou hast prepared,

"Unworthy though I be

For me a blood-bought free reward,
A golden harp for me."

I must say if the Lord is leading me in this calm, peaceful and trustful frame of mind where affliction in the flesh and temporal losses and crosses cannot move me, surely He is leading me in a way I knew not.

Dear brother I must tell you that I have not been able to go to preaching since the second Sunday in April, and I am not able to take any paper, but when I was able to go to the meetings at the church Sister Ware would bring her Landmark and lend it to me, but it is so far to her house that I cannot get the Landmark. I have plenty of good neighbors but their God is not like my God and I would be so glad to get a letter from you at any time and from any other brother or sister that would speak freely any word of exhortation or admonition to edification. I often feel so lonely and desire to hear preaching. There is nothing on earth I enjoy more than meeting with the brethren and sisters at our church meetings where Jesus leads and feeds His sheep with the word of truth, where His banner over us is love.

My husband is sixty-two years old and we two and one adopted daughter make up our family. My husband cannot read but he likes to hear me read letters that I get from the brethren and sisters and for me to write to them.

"Oh to grace how sweet a debtor,
Daily I am constrained to be;
Let Thy grace Lord, like a fetter,
Bind my wandering soul to Thee.

Prone to wander, Lord I feel it,
Prone to leave' the God I love,
Here's my heart Lord, take and seal it,
Seal it for Thy courts above."

No good deeds I have done or can do Lord. It is all of Thee. If I have anything to boast of or to rest in it is the goodness and mercy and love and faithfulness of God.

I long to go and be at rest beyond the river, yet I want to wait patiently 'till God's appointed time without a murmur of complaint. Oh that I could love and thank and serve and praise God as I feel I ought, for His goodness, mercy and love endureth forever.

The Lord bless you and all the faithful and lead more to be faithful.

My letter is so long. Please forgive and correct all errors you see in this and pray for me, the most unworthy mortal that ever enjoyed a hope in Jesus, and write to me when you have time.

Your sister,
L. E. LILLEY,

Madden, Miss.

Dear Brother Gold:—

I have just been reading the Landmark and I feel worse than I did before I read it.

I see from the writings of some that there are troubles in places among our people, and how sad it makes one feel to know of such. What is the matter? Surely there is something very wrong. Have all connected with these troubles observed the bible rule?

Surely not or these troubles would not have occurred, and surely would not have been published in the Landmark. I could admonish others with more grace if I did not fall so far short of doing my full duty.
But I love peace brethren and do not desire to read of your troubles and derangements.

If you have a word of comfort let us have it. That will edify. But if you can't bring forth anything but the faults of some brother or brethren for publication, do not bring forth anything, for that makes our souls sick.

I can see faults enough at home in my own self, and it hurts me to see or hear of yours or your brotneers. Notwithstanding if you come to be telling me of your faults and shortcomings I have fellowship for you; but if you come telling of the faults of a brothe I have none for you in that act.

If a brother trespass against you go to him in the spirit of love not in an independent and harsh spirit, and labor with him, and if he will not hear you then take one or others and labor with him likewise, and then if he will not hear you carry the matter to the church, and if he will not hear the church, after it has labored with him earnestly, then he shall be delivered over to satan for the destruction of the flesh. Then as I see it he is to be to you as any other worlding; you are no more as a church accountable for his deeds, and there is no scriptural authority for writing him up and publishing him even though he has sinned a sin unto death.

If one has sinned a sin unto death and you have excluded him, then I think you have done with him unless he goes out trying or pretending to act under authority of the church falsely, then I think he should be published and not otherwise.

How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity of the spirit, in the bonds of peace! When a brother sees another rejoicing, can rejoice with him, or if weeping can weep with him, then is brotherly love manifested.

Brethren I feel of a sad heart. I know I love the Baptist cause. I believe it is the cause of Christ and it grieves me to see brethren go wrong, and I believe sometimes that whole churches get wrong. They did in olden times and I believe they are no better now.

As we receive Christ Jesus the Lord so we should walk in him. How did we receive him? We received him with thanksgiving and rejoicing. We did not feel to fight then, but praised the Lord for what he had done for us and loved those of like precious faith. Because iniquity abounds the love of many wax cold. I can of a truth say that I can experimentally say this is so.

If a wrong is perpetrated by a brother or a church all of a like precious faith will suffer more or less who learn of it. Then do not publish these things illegally—but in the first place how much better it is to do right and obey the bible rule and avoid the troubles from first to last. We neither should quarrel over unlearned questions, i. e., questions that we do not understand, neither should we cavil over absolute predestination nor time salvation for neither is a bible term. We are agreed that salvation is of the Lord and that all the Savior died for in a special sense will be saved and that all who sin after they have tasted how precious the Lord is to their souls shall suffer for it. That is enough.

It grieves me to see Baptists, especially preachers, manifest jealousy.

Brethren there is something wrong in the camp. Let us look carefully unto ourselves first and I will assure you that if the light of the Holy Spirit illuminates our hearts so that we can see its full contents we will be slow to write or speak of our brother's faults.

If each brother and sister would pattern their lives by our Savior's pattern how beautifully grand the church would be. She would be as a city set upon a hill that cannot be hid. No sad news as heart aches, no word to come that a brother or preacher in whom we had had implicit confidence had been overtaken in a fault and had been excluded.

I know not what I may do or come to before I die, but I desire if I am not deceived, not to reproach the cause of our Master or to hurt the feelings of my brethren.

I have written the above I know not why but to relieve my feelings. I feel that I can witness with Paul and say, "That my heart's desire and prayer to God is that Israel may be saved."

Humbly submitted,

Dear Brother Gold:—

This letter is a matter about which I have been much impressed for a long time and now I have written.

This course once caused a big trouble in Elder Lester's country. Once Hunting Quarter was torn asunder by these things. The Little River trouble, several years ago, was caused in this way. That trouble went out from White Oak and Contentnea. The present trouble in Newport was gotten up in the same way and the Armstrong trouble in the White Oak came by this misconduct.

If you think my letter worth noticing why not add some remarks. These things should be corrected.

Affectionately,

L. H. HARDY.

THERE ARE EVILS UNDER THE SUN.

It appears to me that the management of our church affairs belongs to the members composing the churches. What is best as a system for one church may not be the best as a system for another church. The pastor, deacons and other business members of an individual church should take into consideration what is the best thing to do for their individual church and then follow that rule.

Some churches can put up with services quarterly; while others complain of the length of time from one 1st or 2nd Sunday to another and there are others that feel that it is a long time from one Sunday to another. Now in either case is a church unchurched? Just after the day of Pentecost it appears that the communion service was a daily thing, later it was done on the first day of the week and now some churches do so monthly, some quarterly and some semi-annually while still others only once a year. Does this say that one of these is not as much a church as another?

Some churches wash feet at each communion service, others annually, others semi-annually while others do not wash at all. Is not one of them as much a church as another? And whose business is it except the members of the said churches?

Why should a visiting minister meddle with these things? If they are not done just as he has things done at his home church is that a thing he should stir up strife about? Is he sure that he is infallible and that his own system may not be faulty? Suppose his system is what has been the common system since he and his father and his grand-father have known the church is that any reason at all that it may not yet be wrong? A wrong man becomes very gray headed and yet not be right. Satan brought confusion in the human family thousands of years ago and yet it has never changed to peace. He is the author of confusion while Jesus is the author of peace. This is a rule by which we may be governed.

Some brethren's minds appear to be to have regular pastorate work and to look after the flocks under their care. Others appear to have a mind to travel much. Both of these should be of much profit to the churches. But suppose when that traveling brother gets within the bounds of a certain pastor's churches he finds things that just do not suit his idea of church matters, what is his duty? Should he begin to advise the members contrary to the teaching and advice of the pastor? Would not he thus become a sower of the seed of discord and a divider of the brethren? Is that the gift of a true gospel minister? What does brotherly courtesy require in such a case. It seems to me that if he feels that he must say anything about the matter he should go to the pastor and as a brother, full of love for that brother, reason the matter with him and if there is an error let that pastor set the matter right. This would hold the membership together while the course of talking to the members and declaring to them that the course being pursued under the advice of the pastor is wrong and contrary to Baptist usage is surely sowing the seed of discord and creating strife in the churches and trouble for the pastor. Then in the majority of cases, that very preacher who has caused the strife is the first man to talk about that pastor and the great amount of trouble he has in his churches.

This is a great evil and the members of churches are very wrong to listen to the advice of any such traveling preacher. If the Lord has sent him to preach the gospel let him preach the gospel and both pastor and church will rejoice together and he will find a welcome in their hearts.

Some churches have no financial system at all and that is true of the majority of our churches, while others find it convenient to have a financial system to meet such expenses as they have to contend with. Some have a custom of taking up a collection quarterly by each member or friend coming forward and putting their contribution on the table and whatever is thus raised is disbursed as the church directs. Now whose business is it but that church? Has any one the right to go and raise trouble among the members and divide the house of the Lord? At other churches a deacon or some other member or even a friend goes out among the congregation and collects what he can and gives it to the pastor or other minister. Is that wrong? No, it is a commendable act anywhere and at any time. Another church has a different system. They think it best to go in the congregation with hat or basket and take up a collection to meet the church expenses or to help their pastor or other preacher who is visiting them. Is it wrong? No, it is right. The church has a right to establish a financial system. Now if I, as a traveling preacher should go to a church and meddle with those things the scriptur condemn my course and the membership is advised to mark me because I am causing division in that congregation and it is an evil.

We are all yet in the flesh and none of us are infallible and therefore we may not expect anything else than that we should have differences of opinions and questions will arise among us, but why should those questions become hobbies that we should ride them from day to day and from year to year to the hurt of the people of the Lord. Do we not know that when we are on a hobby we are not on the white horse of the gospel? Those steeds do not work in the same harness nor to the same chariot.

If the Lord has chosen one as a pastor it is to comfort and feed his sheep. If he has sent one out as a traveling minister it is for the same purpose and not to tear down what the pastor has built up.

Brethren, beware of any minister who comes among you crying against the advice of your pastor. Know this, that if that preacher was the right kind of man he would go to your pastor if he saw wrongs that needed correcting and talk to him privately and not play the part of a sneak to steal away your pastors good name from your heart and leave you in confusion. These things often cause many exclusions from the churches and then the pastors, who would have been innocent, have to bear the blame of having confusion in their churches.

You brethren in the ministry who visit the churches that are served by other ministers let their business alone. You have no right to express even a private opinion about these things unless you know as much about the condition of things as they do. Attend to your ministry when the Lord gives you any to attend to and when he does not then attend to your secular affairs and don't meddle yourself in other men's matters.

I feel that I have written in love to Zion and hope that it may be printed and that all who read it may read it in a spirit of love and that they may be given a heart to pray for this poor worm that he may follow this rule.

Your brother for the good of Zion,

L. H. HARDY.

Reidsville, N. C.

Remarks—The principle of this advice I feel is good and should be heeded. Preachers that travel and preach should preach Jesus, and not meddle with strife nor produce strife. If they go where strife is get out of it without making it worse. Do not think you are some great one that all will hear. If you give advice that suits people they will hear you, but that may be all of the flesh.

LOVE'S NATURE AND WORK.

"O love divine, how sweet thou art!
When shall I find my willing heart
All taken up by thee?

For love I sigh, for love I pine,
This lovely portion, Lord, be mine,
Be mine this better part."

(249, altered.)

The above verse was written while longing for and trying to analyze the heavenly gift of love. (1 Cor. xiii.)

The favored Apostle Paul, among the treasurers of divine grace, gives us a New Testament Psalm of Love in 1 Cor. xiii., similar to xiv. Psalm of Loves. He had been writing of gifts necessary and good in the Church of God, and then sums up the whole in an inspired energy of love, declaring that, though he possessed them all, and even the exalted tongue and language of an angel, without this heavenly principle "it profiteth me nothing." "I am nothing," he says. What a marvelous compound it is, as we carefully study its elements or ingredients, if we may use the words, as we read the list he gives us, the negative and positive evidences contained in the single word of four letters—love.

It is not envious; it is not rash, nor vaunteth itself; it is not puffed up or proud; does not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not its own, is not easily provoked, does not think evil; does not rejoice in iniquity; but does rejoice in the truth; does bear all things, does believe all things, with a spiritual mind; does hope all things, does endure all things; yea, and love never faileth, but suffereth long, and is still kind. This last and first reminds us of him who came to unseal the fountain of love. His was a lifelong suffering, ever kind; and in Gethsemane at last, when they essayed to bind those kind hands, he said, "Suffer ye thus far," let me touch the severed ear; "and he touched his ear and healed him." His friend was it? no, his enemy; and nearly his last words in his own agony he spoke kind words of pardon and peace to a poor dying sinner. What a display of love! Nor did he seek his own; stripped of everything save a cross of wood, a crown of thorns, piercing nails, and a drink of vinegar and gall. What a return for love's intrinsic essence! Still he "suffereth long, and is kind" to every poor sinner, and his "tender mercy is over all his works" still.

It is a wide field for thought that its virtues are chiefly in consideration of those about us, with whom we come in contact every day in every path of life—love may find a place. How much the world needs kind looks, kind words, kind deeds. Oh, why are we not kinder? How easily we might be, when love prompts it. Kindness is the activities of love. All the activities of Christ were from love. We speak of our love to God; Christ spoke much of our love to our fellows, as an inspiration from our love to God, a breathing of the Eternal Spirit through our life. Its pre-ominant attitude seems to be patiently, calmly, passively waiting, even in suffering to serve with meek and quiet spirit. And how a kind act is remembered, especially if undeserved; and how abundantly it repays itself. There is no debtor in the world so honourable as love; it is the real energy of true happiness and unfailling success; in all our experiences of joy or woe we have opportunities of learning what and how love may be ours. As a true benefactor to ourselves we sow seed every day, as every day leaves us—never to return; only once shall we pass through it; it bears us onward, yielding fruit tomorrow, and tomorrow, and on to the unknown eternity beyond.

As children of God we meet with envy, competition, pride, selfishness, and much beside; and when love has said all that is necessary in and with love, she closes her lips and draws back into the shade, and says, "Let it lie at the dear Savior's feet; if he indeed deem it treasure in heaven." So, in the beautiful garments of humility she "does not behave unseemly;" in courtesy she is gentle, sympathetic, and self-denying. Courtesies are love in trifles, if indeed there are trifles in words or smiles.

"A smile! Who can refuse a smile,
The sorrowing heart to cheer?
To turn to love the heart of gulle,
And check the falling tear.
A pleasant smile from every face,
O, 'tis a blessed thing;
It will the lines of care erase,
And marks of beauty bring."

It has been said that "Nothing in the domain of animated nature approaches the charm of the human smile, or excels its power; or, with the varied expressions of the eye, reveals so much of the divine character and man's true origin."

It is also very remarkable to find, almost in the center of this treasure field, the declaration, "Is not easily provoked," or, has not a bad temper. Many look on a bad temper as a harmless weakness, or an hereditary family feature, not at all to be taken seriously as to the estimate of Christian character. Yet here, in the Spirit's definition of a renewed mind, it has a central place; and the Word of God again and again condemns it as one of the most distinctive elements of sin. One of the peculiarities of ill-temper is, that it is "a vice of the virtuous," and often the one blot on the otherwise best of dispositions. Some do not even regard it as sin, though its fruits are among the saddest of our nature.

We get a good illustration of it in the incomparable narrative of the returned prodigal. The two sons may set forth sins of the body and sins of disposition or spirit. The younger has been brought back from his follies, degradation and disgrace, and has been met with the love of a father's heart. The elder is a well-behaved and apparently truthful son; yet, as he draws near to the sounds of joy and understands the cause, he is angry, "provoked," even sulks; though entreated by a father's love, "he would not go in," but goes farther even to insult the father's dignity. "Thy son," he says, as if to cast off his own bond of brotherhood, and, "Thou hast killed the fatted calf," while I have not even a kid. What a cluster of hidden evils revealed themselves in this hitherto faultless son. Jealously, pride, selfishness, cruelty, and bad temper; and what effect had it upon the father's heart, the friends and servants, to say nothing of the poor returned one, who, in his deepest distress, had remembered he was still a son, that there was still a father's house, and any capacity in it he would gladly fill as a servant, but yet a son. Now, while his heart was overflowing with a sense of forgiveness, and new springs of joy arose in the father's heart and household, there is a thunder-cloud on his brother's brow, an evil struggling in his dark loveless soul! There are few things that so embitter life as an easily-provoked temper; it enters every walk of life. The sacred communities of the Church of God are divided and pained beyond words; committees broken up; well-meant effort hindered, and many a returned prodigal, weary of his loneliness and the converse of the world, is kept outside the Church—"The Temple of Love," by some unlovely member inside, whose frowning aspect and its temper, like the elder brother's, casts a shrinking influence over the humbled soul for a more or less length of time. When the grey experience of elder brethren should be as the Cities of Refuge to the babes and youth in Christ, the first-fruits of grace seem scorched, as it were, for a time. Alas that this is too often true!

Then, how often it breaks up friendship, ignores relationships, breaks up happy homes, casting a withering influence over the whole, and takes the bloom off childhood; in short, for sheer misery-producing power, it stands alone. Verily there is a need of its central position when we think of its far-reaching results. The words of irritability pierce the soul as a sword-thrust, which time cannot heal, and brings a veil over the mercy-seat for the irritable one, and closes the gate of sweet communion with God till repentance is granted, for love and anger cannot dwell together, nor suspicion with the sweet grace, "thinketh no evil." When we feel a person has no confidence in us, we draw back, while in the atmosphere of love we expand and feel encouraged. What an unutterable compound is love; similar to light and life; all of which is of God, for God is life, God is light, God is love—a threefold expression of him who, comprehending all things, is incomprehensible.

"O love divine, how sweet thou art!

When shall I find my willing heart

All taken up by thee?" &c.

EXPERIENCE OF L. A. HAMPTON.

By the help of an alwise and just God, I, L. A. Hampton will attempt to write my experience spiritually and try to tell the great and good things the Lord our Savior has done for me.

My first thoughts and impressions occurred when my oldest sister was struck down under conviction and made a profession of religion, and I thought if I could get off by myself and pray, or repeat over prayers that I had heard, I also could get religion. But all my trying seemed to do me more harm than good and I went on from bad to worse, at times trying to pray or rather repeating prayers.

I can see now that it all was nothing more nor less than fleshly desire. Finally I became so wicked and case-hardened that I thought I had sinned a way my day of grace and that there was no chance for me. I lived under this impression for several years.

In February 1900 one of my dear little children was taken sick, and after lingering for over a week died. I was so attached to him it seemed my heart would break. I tried to ask my Maker to spare him and give me a prayerful heart, also I tried to tell my little sweet child to intercede for me with our Lord Jesus Christ when he got to heaven to give me a prayerful heart and make me prepared to finally meet Him where parting is no more.

The first time I ever remember being able to ask the Lord from the very depths of my heart to have mercy on me was after my little one died, and then I wanted to be alone. Although my little son could not talk I have told several he preached the biggest sermon to me I ever heard, but I should say, our Lord and Savior preached it through him. As he lay a corpse I came to the point when I thought I would rather die and go with him than live. I heard the sweetest music I ever heard or ever expect to hear again. I finally became reconciled however, and would not have the child back if I could, but still would not own that I had been forgiven of my sins. I was honest in it—knew that there had been a change in me—that I had a small hope and that sooner or later I would be changed from nature to grace but did not know that it had already been done; and when my fellow-believers told me I had a change, I did not believe it. So I drifted along in this line for about eight years, gradually growing from bad to worse, forgetting and neglecting all the promises I had made to my Maker, and putting my whole mind on worldly things, and trying to accumulate worldly goods and had, it seemed, almost forgotten there was a God.

There was a revival on at Horseshoe Lake School House. (The name of the denomination was New Minanites and the place being situated in Alberta Province, Canada.) Some of my children had been going and my oldest daughter had been up to the mourner's bench. Then my wife and oldest son went to church one night, and when they came back I asked them how many mourners they had. After awhile my wife answered and said, one. I asked, who? She said, me, also she said that she intended to keep right on trying to get religion no matter what any of us said until she knew she had religion, and that she wanted the kind that everybody could see and know. Well of course that made considerable impression on me, she seemed to be so determined.

In the meantime I had promised two of the smaller children to take them the next night, so my wife and I and the two children went. I knew this denomination was very much opposed to the use of tobacco, so before I went in I threw my chew out and got a seat near the stove. I don't think I ever wanted a chew worse in my life, so I took a chew very bold, not caring who saw me, but rather wanted them all to see me.

After they sang and had prayer the preacher read the biggest part of a chapter and when it read to suit his doctrine he talked a little on it. By and bye they called for mourners and my wife was the only one that went up. The preacher then called on all the members to form a circle and kneel down so they could pray her through right then. After singing and praying for perhaps an hour their lady preacher said in her prayer, "we can't do anything, if we could we would." I thought, now you told the truth once whether you have belief or not. I can hardly describe my feelings during the time. If I had done as I felt like doing I would have thrown preachers and members right and left and taken my wife away from there. It seemed to me as if it was making a mock of God and after we got home that night I wouldn't sleep in letting my wife know what I thought of such religion, and I read the same chapter the preacher had to show her that he had stopped just where it suited his doctrine. If he had read on it would have given God all the praise and man none. I don't think they went the next night.

In a day or two my wife told me she was going to quit snuff, that she had decided she was making it a worship. Well that struck me very hard. I told my oldest son that his mother was certainly in earnest, but if she wanted to go to church some of the others would have to take her, still I did not want her to go and I got a terrible load in my breast. I thought I was under conviction and the way I had talked about the Minanites was the cause of it, and that likely before I got relief I would have to send for them and beg their pardon.

This devil, or whatever it was, in my breast kept getting larger and larger, and finally got me down helpless and me doing all in my power to throw it off. I got to where I had to gasp for breath, but could not pray. While I was in such a strain I could hardly breathe, it seemed that if I could have only spoken I would have asked the Lord to have mercy on me a poor sinner, but as soon as the terrible misery eased I did not want to pray, nor could I.

In the meantime my wife had gone to church once or twice more, and she wanted to go to one of the neighbors to prayer-meeting in the day time, and some of the children asked her if she was going? She said no, your papa doesn't want me to go. I heard her and said, go on, that it did not matter what I wanted if she thought it was right, that I had all the lead in my breast I wanted. She went but I could hardly bear to see her go. When she came back, she asked me how I felt? I told her, no better, worse if possible. I asked her how she felt, and she answered "Oh, not so bad." That seemed a peculiar way to express one's self in a spiritual view I thought.

That night I couldn't sleep and decided it was the devil's work from start to finish and told my wife that it was the devil in me, and that I must have a legeon of them, and that I got them all the night I went to the revival, and that they ought to do some good as I had brought all the devils away. I also told her, hell was my doom, that I was bound to go there, but I wanted to take her along with me, and could not get the consent of my mind to go any other way.

So that night my past life was opened up before me, and of all lowdown degraded wretches on earth, I saw myself one of the worst. I never had done anything good in my life, but had done all the low-down things that was in man's power to do. I was strongly tempted then and there to end my days. The next morning I promised myself to starve my body into subjection. I fed up, went to work and when breakfast was ready I would not eat. My wife begged me to eat and I was tempted to offer her a chew of tobacco, but did not. About ten o'clock I went into the house and thought I would see if I could read the bible. My wife begged again for me to eat. I told her what I had promised. I was sorely tempted to eat, but did not and opened the bible at random. It opened at the 10th chapter of St. John and I began to read to myself. I hadn't read long before I tumbled over and fell, and it wasn't long until I could say, Lord have mercy on me a sinner from the very bottom of my heart, and I couldn't help from saying it, and I did not care who heard me. My wife and all the children, who were at home, were around me, some trying to pray for me and some crying to see me in such a condition. The first I knew instead of praying for myself I was praying for us all, and that load was gone from my breast and I was at peace with myself and all mankind. However I did not stay at peace long.

During the time of this experience I was told as plainly as anything that this was not the first work that the Lord had with me, that I was changed from nature to grace away back yonder, eight years ago, and that this was for another purpose, that there was a small fold for me to gather together. But in what way I am to do the work I do not know. This may be a starter for all I know. But I do think that whenever the Lord sees fit and proper to do a work through me he is able, and not only able, but can put his subjects in a shape that they are glad to do His will, and I hope and pray if I don't do His will willingly, He will lash me as He has done heretofore.

I didn't tell my wife for a few days what was told me, and she was sure I had just then had my first change, (and I would have thought the same had I not been told different) and of course she expected me to be willing and ready to go and let her go to the revival that was still going on, but I tell you I was farther from it than ever. So my wife decided at once there was no religion attached to me or my way, and to look at it from a spiritual standpoint, I can't blame her; but from a fleshly one I do blame her for not seeing as I do. The scripture plainly says, we cannot understand without we are given a spiritual understanding, a spiritual eye to see with, a spiritual ear to hear with and a spiritual heart to understand with.

Mr. A. Spurlin came to see us the next day, after I got relieved of my great burden, and I was glad as I wanted to tell Mr. Spurlin what good things the Lord had done for me. I undertook to tell him within myself or the outward man and I made a complete failure, and I wished that I had said nothing about it and that he had not come. I was so bothered about it I could not sleep, and after all the rest were asleep I felt the power of God in my heart and all over me until I was all in a tremble from head to foot. While in this condition I was told I was receiving my baptism; and such a glorious baptism it was.

The next day I told Mr. Spurlin from start to finish, without any trouble, because it was the inward man talking and not of the flesh and blood.

Now I give an Allwise and Just God all the praise, honor and glory, and myself none whatever, for the glorious things that have been revealed to me. Amen.

"She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors."

"Unto you O men, I call: and my voice is to the sons of man."

Hard indeed is it to do wrong. Easy indeed to do right in the sense that what wrong we do shall be returned unto us as a plague. But if we do right the reaping is so good.

It is easy and pleasant living where there is no evil surmising, but love lights up the home and peace abides in the courts. There is no need of sheriff nor police force.

Considerable numbers are baptized in some churches.

MANAGEMENT. MANTLE OF CHARITY.

When we think all or any should do as we do, and censure and condemn them if they do not think as we think, and act as we do, we should be well assured that we have a thus saith the Lord that we are surely right, and that the Lord has constituted us judges of the matter that others should believe, and of the way they should go. Pride is such a master that it leaves no room for anything contrary to what it demands.

Humanity is so small that it always finds room for others, listen to them, hears them, bears with them, is more ready to condemn self than others. Indeed humanity is so unnatural and strange in its conduct that we wonder at the ease with which it moves, and the little it requires, and we feel that it bears so much, endures so much, and is still gentle and kind.

One of its strange ways is to think no evil, nor suppose that a brother means wrong by what he does.

If humility were dressed in a garb suitable to its rank and standing, and you should behold it you would wonder where that suit is woven, what it cost, and how well it becomes the wearer who is never conscious of its beauty, nor does he ever think it is too good to work in, nor ever should be thrown away, nor does it ever become threadbare, or need a patch, nor to be washed but is always clean. It is not kept for sale as other goods in the mercantile line. One is born with that suit on him, nor does he ever outgrow it. Nor does it rust or fade. It is not a cloak that can hide hypocrisy, nor in which what is stolen may be harbored. It allows no place for vermin or what is infested with evil. It does not show off the owner to be handsome or vain or proud. It thinks not of its own interests, has no fear of being neglected or improperly valued. It is not afraid that men will not think enough of the wearer. There is only one suit or garment. No change is ever needed. Nor are two coats allowable. The wearer never goes into the battle disguised. His dress is uniform and always known in the royal household as always suitable for all work, and always ready to be presented to the chief members of the family, or to any of the most noble visitors.

It is a very odd fashion when compared with worldly styles that change so much, and are intended to cover up and conceal so much in us that is uncouth and uncomely. But this inhabitant of Mt. Zion that is clean and pure is just suited in this comely apparel.

FAITH,

There is a glorious energy, an overcoming power in the faith of Jesus that displays its triumphs most sweetly and wonderfully as flesh or man's works and pretended power and merit all fail. Indeed faith does not work nor do miracles while flesh is pretending to act. Flesh must fail. When He slew them: then they trusted in Him.

Faith overcomes the world. Not the deadness of Sarah's womb, not the wrath of an impending flood, not the terror of Pharaoh's decree that all the male children should be slain could weaken Abraham's faith, or prevent Noah from building an ark, or keep those that saw that Moses was a proper child from hiding him in the ark of bulrushes. This faith is born of God, and therefore it overcomes the world. It rides above all the principles and works of the flesh, and proclaims the saving power and glory of God. It sets God against and above all opposition, and sings aloud of his glorious triumphs. It gladdens the soul of him that has this faith with the fruit of love, joy and peace in the Lord. This faith is born of God and is the most wonderful witness of God, for it works by love, and rejoices in the overcoming, prevailing power of God.

We are exhorted to lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despoising the shame. Foes we have and fight we must. What a good fight it is. How pure its victory and eternal its rewards, sealed with the blood of Jesus the first born of God who brings us into the merit of Him who loved us and gave himself for us.

Faith is the plea of the merit and worthiness of Jesus, and it obtains divine blessings. For by Jesus all that believe are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses. That spiritual, holy law that God gave and that came by Moses could do nothing to justify the sinner, but faith establishes this law, and sets the ungodly as an inheritor of the throne of glory with princes as it proclaims the merit of Jesus who is become the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believes. What a mount of holiness is this upon which the feet of him that publishes peace dwells, and how such shine in the light of love of the Lord Jesus.

Surely there is an overcoming power of faith in him that walks by faith which is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, by which such good reports are always obtained. Without faith it is impossible to please God: for the just shall live by faith. God has no pleasure in him that draws back. How blessed is it to believe to the saving of the soul.

P. D. G.

SCRAPS.

One thinks he has views and opinions that are better than other peoples.' He is clamorous to enforce them. Nor does he desire to consider what another may say, for he is so full of conceit he thinks he knows more than any other one. Therefore it matters not how wise may be the utterances of another they never profit him. For a fool thinks more of his own notions than he does of the utterances of seven men who can render a reason. That is one reason why a fool never learns any thing. To be a learner one must be a receiver. He must be at the feet of his teacher. He must be conscious of his inferiority. When Mary sat at the feet of Jesus she was a most wonderful learner. All the saints set down at the feet of their Lord and hear his words.

"For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God." Anger rests or dwells in the bosom of fools. An angry man has not the discretion and wisdom of one that is sober minded and humble. Wherefore how important it is to lay aside all superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save your souls. When a child I remember noticing my father graft a limb or twig of a good fruit tree into the body or some part of a tree that did not bear any good fruit, and that graft though living in a tree that bore only bad fruit would yield fruit of the good kind, and would in no sense be affected by the bad fruit of the old, native, sour stock. Now the word of God engrafted within a man brings forth fruit unto God, though the fleshy, corrupt members of the old man still bear only wild, bad fruit.

One quickened by the Spirit of God has a knowledge of the difference between flesh and Spirit, and he is exhorted to lay aside all anger, wrath, malice, and evil speaking, that he may receive the sincere milk of the word and may grow thereby.

According to the figure of grafting where is the old man in people who claim fleshly holiness and sanctification? In grafting no part of the tree in which the graft is placed bears the same fruit of the engrafted part, nor is the fruit of any other part of that tree a particle changed or improved by the good limb that is grafted in; nor is the engrafted limb at all injured or changed by the tree in which it is grafted. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, while that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. The old man or old stock is to be destroyed in death, and we are to put on the new man by laying aside all anger, wrath, malice &c.

"Not a forgetful hearer but a doer of the word." To look into the perfect law of liberty leads one to be a doer of the word. He sees the perfect law of liberty in the man that is strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man to endure, to serve the Lord, to be a doer of the word. That man will visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction, and will keep himself unspotted from the world. The man who is delivered from the snare of free will, and who worships the true and the living God of all power, and who holds the truth in love is the man that is faithful in all his relations of life. He will swear to his own hurt and change not. His yea is yea, and his nay is nay. His words are few, but he says what he means.

His character is fixed and established on principle. He has the faith of Jesus which strengthens him to endurance. He keeps himself unspotted from the world. For he loves not the world nor the things of the world, because the love of the Father is in him. He seeks first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and the image of truth shines in his conduct, and the spirit of truth shines in his person.

Are ye partial in yourselves, and are ye judges of evil thoughts?

If you judge the outward appearance to show character then are ye partial. For instance, if one come in among you with vile clothing on, and another come in with gay clothing and a gold ring, and you prefer the man with gay clothing on, then ye are judges that have evil thoughts. Your judgment is not correct or just. It shows that you love wealth and honors of the world, and are carnal.

What sort of people has God chosen? Are there many rich or mighty or great? Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he has promised them that love him? Are not poor men more humble than rich ones? Are they not more dependent?

What doth it profit a man to say he has faith, if he has no works? It is not what faith says, but what it does that proves its true character. If it is the true faith of Jesus Christ it never fails to heal, to save, to overcome the world.

One may say he ye warmed, or filled, or clothed, yet he does not give you anything with which to warm, or feed, or clothe those destitute, are his words worth anything? So if one says he has faith, but that faith does not feed him, or clothe him, or warm him, what is that faith worth to him? Nothing in the world. If I have faith it will feed me with the bread of life, it will clothe me with the righteousness of Jesus. That is the work it does because it is not alone. A faith that is without works is dead being alone; but the faith of Jesus will show its true character by what it does, and its works will prove that faith to be the true faith of God.

If any man offend, not in word the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body."

The tongue is a little member, but who can rule his tongue? Horses and other animals much larger and stronger than man are controlled by bridle bits; but the tongue of man has never been tamed. One may be considered wise, but he has never mastered that little member the tongue.

James presents a picture or rather a description of the tongue that few feel is true of themselves. If they did they would prefer to be dumb rather than so offend. Does the best man talk two ways? Here-with bless we God even the Father; and therewith curse we men which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessings and cursing. If these things are true and by idle words we are condemned who can stand before God unless it be by grace? James is the great authority among Arminian preachers for justification by works, and yet every one of such preachers is condemned by James, and all of the rest of us are condemned and guilty.

Few if any men realize and feel the guilt of false speech—of an unruly, unbridled tongue which sets the course of nature on fire, and it is set on fire of hell. How wonderful if one is moved by heavenly fire or by the Holy Ghost to speak the words of God which are holy. But how wicked is that tongue which is set on fire of hell. Alas that is the natural tongue of every son and daughter of Adam, unless preparations of the heart and the answer of the tongue in man are of the Lord. It is no bad sign to see one that is slow to speak. But how few of such there are. People generally are slow to hear and quick to speak. They are forward to pass judgment when they know but little about a case. If they knew more they would speak less.

The more Job knew of the truth the less he spoke, and when he saw and felt and understood as he never had before then he ceased to speak altogether, and after this he had and enjoyed his best days.

God is in heaven and we are on earth. Therefore let our words be few. I suppose if we knew things as they truly are we would be ashamed of much we have said, and would desire to recall it, and feel like we should be dumb. Let God be true but every man a liar, and our prayer would be Lord set a seal on my lips, and bridle my tongue with a bit stronger than steel.

If many a man that desires to preach could see the folly of his utterances he surely would be ashamed of his words, and would speak no more.

"All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2nd Tim. 3: 16, 17.

1st. If one is blest with a true desire to know the will of God the above declaration would be a most wonderful proclamation to him, and he would seek to know the teaching and import of the book containing such gracious matter, and he would search for its true meaning as for hid treasure. If he should be assured that he cannot understand this book except some one guide him how eager would he be to find one that could guide him, and how ready he would be to obey when told what he should do.

2nd. Paul loved Timothy and mentions the fact that Timothy knew the scriptures from youth, which were able to make him wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. Observe then how good it is if one from his youth reads the scriptures. Beware of saying that, because I cannot understand the mysteries of inspiration therefore I might as well read an almanac as the Bible, for I cannot understand it. Do you desire to understand it? Do you feel that you cannot understand it, yet much desire that you should be led by the Spirit of the Lord. Remember that the scriptures are able to make one wise unto salvation through faith that is in Christ Jesus. It is so much wiser to search the scriptures than to read novels and other writings that contain nothing good.

3rd. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God." Does that mean every thing that is written in the Bible? If not who shall say what part is inspired and what is not? If man is left to judge he would say the part that does not suit him, or that he does not believe, is not inspired. If all of the Bible is not inspired then what part is not, or what part is inspired? If one part is not inspired, then why should another part be inspired? I believe it is all inspired. Do you believe, says one, that what the serpent said to Eve is inspired? Was not that a lie, and is a lie inspired? It is a fact that the serpent said to Eve what is stated in the Bible. That is it did occur. The thoughts of wicked men are declared in the Bible. What man knew them? What man was present on the first day of creation? What man was present the second day, or the third &c.? Now how did any man know what to write, if he did not move some man to write these things that occurred before any man lived? Holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

There is no more difficulty in the Lord God moving holy man to write things they never knew of than it is for my pen in my hand to write what I move or use it to write. What I move my pen to write may be false or not the full truth through my partiality or ignorance, but not so with the Almighty; who cannot lie. Hence there cannot be any false utterances in the bible. Every word of the scripture is truth in the sense in which it was given of God, and blessed is the man that knows the scripture. He that is of the truth loves the truth, and believes. He that believes the record that God has given of his Son is saved, and shall be saved.

The scriptures are written to furnish or supply the man of God thoroughly unto all good works. John says these things are written that ye might believe this is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his nam .

4th. All scripture is profitable. We are told that Godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

Then it is profitable for time and for eternity. It furnishes thoroughly for this life and for eternity. Whom does it furnish. The man of God—the man born of God or born from above, and it fully, completely furnishes or equips him.

(A.) It is profitable for doctrine. What is doctrine? It embraces the faith the man of God lives by. It is the system of truth declared in the word the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes; how that Christ died for our sins, and rose from the dead and ascended to heaven for his people, and ever lives to make intercession for them. This truth or the doctrine must be held in a pure conscience. It is one doctrine only, all ways in the singular number, because there is only one Jesus Christ, and he died once. Hence there is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one hope of his calling. The scriptures fully declare and set forth this one Jesus assuring us there is no other one. When we search the scriptures we find they testify of Christ, and are profitable for this doctrine, or they declare Him.

(B.) It is profitable for Reproof. There is a great liability and proneness in us to depart from the truth. We see that set forth in scripture concerning the Lord's people in all ages and times, and we are no better than others. Therefore we need all the scripture to reprove our wrongs, to show us wherein we have departed from the faith once delivered unto the saints.

(C.) It is profitable for correction. It is to set us right or correct us wherein we are wrong that the lameness may be cured, the stumbling stones removed, that there may be a plain path for our feet, that our walk may be correct and our knowledge of the right way may be saving.

(D.) It is profitable for instruction in order that we may be fully taught so that we shall go on to perfection, or he so fully established in the righteousness of Jesus that we shall be thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

5th. We hold that every thing wrong is condemned in scripture, and that every thing we should hold and observe or do is taught in scripture, and hence that there is nothing that men hatch up, or concoct, or invent can be right, if it is not taught in scripture.

While there are many new things hatched up out of men's devices, yet the man of God is to reject every one that there is not a thus saith the Lord for. No changes of circumstances, or fashions of men warrant any new thing, nor create any demand for any new doctrine. We are to enquire for the old paths and walk therein. We are to live by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God. The false teachings and lies of men and devils, and the sinful conduct of men set forth in scripture with the punishment that befalls the ungodly are warnings to us, so that every thing in the bible has its use for the man of God, and he needs nothing else but this which thoroughly furnishes him unto all good works.

What we preach and teach according to the scriptures is good and strengthening and warning to the man of God and there is use for that as there is use for preaching and exhortation, for we are to labor in word and doctrine.

OBITUARY

SIDNEY JEFFERSON SYKES.

On Wednesday morning June 16, 1909, just as the first rays of dawn were wending their way over the eastern horizon, the angel of death came softly into the little town of Marion and took from loved ones Sydney Jefferson Sykes in the bloom of manhood.

He was a native of Franklin County, N. C., but for three years had resided in Marion, S. C., where he held a position with the Marion Co. Lum. Co. He was a son of the late Edmond Sykes, whose early training had so implanted itself in Sid that time could not erase the lessons learned from father, and he lived an honest, honorable life beloved by all who knew him.

He was a kind, gentle and affectionate husband and father, a good neighbor and a dutiful son. He was born April 12, 1869.

He was twice married and leaves a wife and three children to mourn their loss. The funeral services were conducted by G. M. Duke and the remains laid to rest in the Boone burying ground in Cedar Rock, Franklin County, June 17, 1909, amid sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Papa we miss thy loving face,

And wonder why it was,

That God saw fit to take from us,

The one we loved so well.

A. C. S.

Albert Clairbourn Thompson, son of James J. and Nancy C. Thompson, who was born August 20, 1870, and died Feb. 24, 1909. Clairbourn Thompson was a young man of excellent character and held the most appreciable confidence of all who knew him. If one could be honest, truthful, conscientious and strictly reliable to a fault Clairbourn Thompson was. His purpose was to be a teacher, but being from early life disposed to bronchial affections, after a few years, he was forced to give up teaching on account of his health. Though he was disposed to be reserved, yet there was, as it were, a quiet, silent aggressiveness about his life and character that gave them wholesome prominence in the mind of the thoughtful observer.

Though not a recluse, yet he was not disposed to assume the spirit of the age and don the habits and habiliments of the life and character so common with the young men of this day, but was of sober, temperate, conservative demeanor of character, and exhibited much of that life which has for its foundation the old time hearthstone and for its inspiration the life culture of the family circle. He had a good hope, and died in the faith, but never joined the church. He loved the church and would often join in singing, and often led the singing. He loved his home and his parents, and together with his faithful sister Miss Mollie, was the stay and solace of his mother while he lived, leaving the sister to tenderly and vigilantly watch, care and serve until the end came which severed the final and most precious cords which bind in a bundle the precious ones which made up the family and the things which make the home the life and love of mother.

Elder P. D. Weeks and the writer preached to the memory of these loved ones the doctrine or faith which they loved, by which they lived and in which they died.

P. G. LESTER.

Elder P. D. Gold,

Dear Brother:—

We find in Revelations 12:7 that there was war in heaven and that Michael and his angels fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels and prevailed not. Neither was their place found any more in heaven. Christ said, in the world ye shall have tribulations, but in Him peace. When we are living after the mind of the flesh or after the world we shall have tribulation, but when we are living after the mind of the spirit we have peace in Christ Jesus the Lord. The tribulation or war we have to encounter or fight is here in the world. The christian character has the world, the flesh and the devil to war against which is a daily fight with the saints of God against the evils of the world only as it pleases God to keep us above the evils of the world for awhile.

I know there is a restlessness going on within me a great deal of the time, and I am enabled at times through the power of the spirit or of that little "I" that is within me and then I have peace in Christ which is sweet to my soul.

Christ said, I in you and you in me and I in my Father and I and my Father are one. Oh! The oneness in the trinity, the unity, love, joy, peace and fellowship, how sweet it is to those that love the Lord. But oh, I so often feel destitute of anything that is good, or like the man going about in his own strength without the feeling sense that Christ and God is mine and I am His, and at war a great portion of the time in some way or other with the world, flesh or the devil or those that war against my spirit or the spirit of eternal life which is within me if I be not deceived in the whole matter, the hope of glory, the anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast.

Charity vouteth not itself, neither is it puffed up. It beareth all things, it endureth all things and suffereth long and is kind; easy to be entreated. Charity is love. Of faith, hope and charity, charity is the greatest of them all. Oh, the sweet feeling sense of this love that flows so freely into the souls of His people in time of great need. All glory to God. They that feared God overcome the evil one through the power of the Spirit of God and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. It is through the power of the Spirit that we overcome the evils of this world and are brought into a godly land where all is joy, peace and love.

The Lord is the Keeper and Preserver of His people and will be a God unto them in time and all eternity, and its powers of darkness shall not prevail though they walk through the valley of the shadow of death Christ will bring them out victorious conquerors over death, hell and the grave and gather them home into ultimate glory there to reign with Him in righteousness forever with God and His angels. I have long desired to see this and will you all pray for me that I may see it. I had rather have the prayers of the righteous than all the world besides. As ever yours in love,

J. R. JONES.

END OF VOLUME 42.

This issue closes the 42nd year of the publication of Zion's Landmark.

I would that it should prove to be a labor of love writing none other things than those covered by prophecy, and unfolded in the lives of the saints of the Most High God. The things written concerning that peculiar people have no interest to those that have no love for Israel, but they are of the deepest concern to such as love Israel.

They are a people linked one to another and fitly joined and banded together. The same eternal life animates and upholds each one of them—the life of Jesus revealed from faith to faith. For all the just live by faith. This people sink into great depths of gloom and horror at times, and if any thing should be written that may be a blessing unto any of the dear saints then this is strengthening to the writer.

For nearly forty years he has been contending for this faith once delivered to the saints, and has received many encouraging letters from these dear brethren.

Much forbearance is needful to overlook our shortcomings and this has been shown again and again.

This has been a year of trials to many—a year of labor and sorrow to the poor in this world's goods—a year of difficulties financially to many. These things I have felt much. Yet it is a year that has many things which we should be thankful.

There has not been much increase in the membership of our churches. Israel is still in a state of warfare, and there will be no truce nor peace until the sun goes down.

There is need of a strong picket line, and many are setting in their wards whole nights to guard the inmates of Israel. But the best of all is that Jesus guardest and preserves us all.

P. D. G.

SOME OF JOHN BUNYAN'S SAYINGS.

Until God has been with a man, and has left some impression of the glory of his holiness upon him, that man cannot be willing to come to him aright. It was this glory of God revealed to Abraham that moved him to leave his country and kindred and come after God.
