THE LIBRARY OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF
NORTH CAROLINA
AT CHAPEL HILL

THE COLLECTION OF
NORTH CAROLINIANA

FC282
C363c
v.13
2003-2004

FOR USE ONLY IN
THE NORTH CAROLINA COLLECTION

UNIVERSITY OF N.C. AT CHAPEL HILL
00047472554

Form No. A-368, Rev. 8/95

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2014

https://archive.org/details/catholicnewsher2003unse_0

FC 372
C36.3c
Vol. 13,
2003-2004

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

SEPTEMBER 26, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 1

Parish Profile

Holy Cross Church is testimony to growing congregation

| PAGE 16

SACRAMENTAL LIFE

Breaking of the Bread

COMMUNION IS 'SOURCE AND SUMMIT OF CHRISTIAN LIFE'

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

Editor's note: This is the fourth story in a series on the seven sacraments.

CHARLOTTE — If she still lived in her native Colombia, 10-year-old Ximena Pereira would have received her first Communion two years ago. But before she was able to take part in this important sacrament, she and her family were forced to leave Colombia following assassination and kidnapping attempts.

Like the Holy Family escaping to Egypt, the Pereira family left Colombia for their own safety.

Ximena's mother, Adriana Pereira-Canas, worked for her brother's security firm, which accidentally uncovered information about people involved in the drug trade. Following attempts to kidnap Ximena and Guillermo and the murder of Adriana's other brother, the family sought refuge in the United States.

So Ximena waited until last August to share the experience with her 8-year-old brother, Guillermo.

As they lit two candles at the foot of the statue of the Virgin Mary, their faces beamed with excitement at the prospect of receiving Communion. Later, as they read the Old Testament reading and prayers of the faithful in Span-

See COMMUNION, page 9

Soaring spirits

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

St. Matthew School kicks off Festival of Faith

"5, 4, 3, 2, 1, go!" With the go-ahead from Kevin O'Herron, principal of St. Matthew School, hundreds of red balloons sailed into afternoon sky as part of St. Matthew Church's 2nd Festival of Faith, in celebration of the new school.

The Festival of Faith is an annual event featuring carnival games and activities, face painting, music, dancing and food from around the world.

Attached to each balloon was a card with the student's name and the school's address. On each card was a note asking anyone who finds the balloon to send the card back to the school. Students will see where the balloons traveled by charting them on a map of the United States.

On fire with faith through confirmation

Catechists learn history of sacraments

BY ELLEN NEERINCX SIGMON
CORRESPONDENT

HICKORY — "There is a gap of Grand Canyon proportions between what the Church teaches, what the people think it teaches and what the people think it should teach," said Sister of Divine Providence Linda Gaupin, Ph.D., in a talk to parish catechetical leaders at the Catholic Conference Center Sept. 18.

Sister Linda, director of religious education for the

See PCL, page 4

Proposed Vatican document on liturgy returned to drafting

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ROME (CNS) — A proposed Vatican document on liturgical norms was sent back to its drafting committee after cardinals and bishops raised some objections and encouraged some changes.

Among other things, the draft presented to consulting prelates in June reportedly discouraged the distribution of Communion under the forms of both bread and wine and said altar girls were permis-

See VATICAN, page 8

#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
#420836# S239 P2
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

'Triumph of the Cross'
Arden conference explores Eucharist, faith
| PAGE 5

Practice makes permanent
St. Matthew School students brush up on study skills
| PAGE 7

Aspects of Appalachia
Conference to highlight western North Carolina
| PAGE 13

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

VOCALIZING FOR AFRICA RELIEF

CNS PHOTO BY PAUL HARING

Bono, lead singer of the rock group U2 and advocate for Africa, addresses the media Sept. 16 in Washington. He was joined by religious leaders, including Bishop John H. Ricard of Pensacola-Tallahassee, Fla. (left), in urging President Bush and Congress to ensure the $15 billion, five-year AIDS relief plan and maintain current spending on other development and humanitarian assistance.

Rock star Bono, bishops team up to seek greater U.S. AIDS effort

BY MARK PATTISON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Rock star Bono teamed up with bishops from three Christian denominations to ask that President Bush and Congress live up to their pledge to commit $3 billion in the year ahead to combat AIDS in Africa.

Calling on America to "keep its promise to Africa" during a Sept. 16 press conference at St. John Episcopal Church near the White House, Bono was joined by, among others, Bishop John H. Ricard of Pensacola-Tallahassee, Fla., chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on International Policy.

"The United States is the richest nation on earth," Bishop Ricard said. "And it is a scandal that we are the last among industrialized nations in terms of per capita spending on development assistance for the poorest countries in the world."

Bono, lead singer of the rock group U2, met with Bush at the White House before the press conference. He said Bush was "very passionate about the problems. I believe him when he says he's committed to the long term on AIDS. ... We just can't agree on the numbers."

According to Bono, Bush is willing to commit only $2 billion for the coming fiscal year, contending that it would be impossible for aid organizations to absorb a full $3 billion. "We want to build the infrastructure" that can distribute drugs and conduct education programs in up to a dozen African countries ravaged by AIDS, the singer said.

Bono praised the work of Catholic Relief Services, the U.S. bishops' overseas relief and development agency. "They treat 4 million people in Africa — not all HIV patients, but orphans, the problem as it breaks out," he said.

A new child is orphaned every 14 seconds in Africa because of AIDS — or more than 2.25 million a year — with a current total of 14 million orphans, according to Bruce Wilkinson of World Vision US. "That would be like the total populations of New York City and Washington, D.C., consisting of nothing but parentless children," he said at the press conference.

Bono founded DATA — Debt, AIDS, Trade, Africa — to address health and development issues on the continent. According to a Sept. 9 letter from DATA executive director Jamie Drummond to U.S. senators, "Spending an additional $1 billion would save 2 million lives — by giving life-saving treatment to an additional 400,000 people who would otherwise die and preventing an additional 1.6 million people from ever contracting HIV/AIDS."

Such an expenditure would save the international community $1 billion a year in AIDS treatments, Drummond added.

Bono encouraged Americans to write and to call their members of Congress to fully fund Bush's AIDS in Africa initiative.

League criticizes Democrats' link to Catholics for Free Choice

WASHINGTON (CNS) — In an ad in The New York Times Sept. 16, Catholic League president William Donohue said the Democratic National Committee is openly "insulting Catholics" with its links to Catholics for a Free Choice on the committee's Web site.

Catholics for a Free Choice is "a profoundly anti-Catholic organization" that should not be linked to by the Democratic National Committee, Donohue said.

Catholic News Service was unable to reach Terry McAuliffe, Democratic National Committee national chairman, for comment.

On its "links" page, the Democratic National Committee Web site has three links to the Catholics for a Free Choice Web site — under its "pro-choice," "women" and "religious affiliated" headings. It also links to almost 50 organizations that support legalized abortion.

Donohue said the head of Catholics for a Free Choice, Frances Kissling, "has worked tirelessly to discredit the Vatican and has even sought to oust the Holy See from the U.N. She has consistently mocked the pope and has even gone so far as to brand the U.S. Conference of (Catholic) Bishops as 'the enemy.'"

Catholics for a Free Choice was denounced by the U.S. bishops 10 years ago as a group which "merits no recognition or support as a Catholic organization" and is funded mostly by non-Catholic sources.

Donohue has unsuccessfully lobbied the Democratic National Committee to drop the Catholics for a Free Choice links since last year. He said Catholics were once an integral part of the Democratic Party, but that relationship has become strained "ever since Democrats alienated Catholics on key cultural issues."

Diocesan planner

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — There will be a music concert held at St. Gabriel Catholic Church, 3016 Providence Rd., on Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. John Apple, organist/music associate at St. Gabriel, is celebrating his 10th anniversary with the parish with this concert to be performed with local musicians. There will be music for organ solo and duo, flutes, voice, cello and piano. For more information, contact (704) 567-1066.

CHARLOTTE — St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St., will offer Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of every month following the 12:10 p.m. Mass and Benediction at 1:30 p.m.

CHARLOTTE — St. Ann Church, 3635 Park Rd., invite all people to hear the Sung Rosary Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m. the free one-hour program, "the joyful mysteries," will be sung by Michael and Terese Rowe, special music ministers and will be a candlelight meditation. For more information, please call the church office at (704) 523-4641.

CHARLOTTE — The bereavement support group every first Monday meets 6-7:30 p.m. in the Family Room at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. This support group is for anyone who has experienced the loss of a loved one. For details, call Ruth Posey, CSS counselor, at (704) 370-3238.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Mondays of every month 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

CHARLOTTE — The cancer support group for survivors, family and friends meet every first Tuesday at 7 p.m. at St. Matthew Church. For more information, call Marilyn Borrelli at (704) 542-2283.

CHARLOTTE — The Happy Timers of St. Ann Church will have a meeting with a luncheon and program at 1 p.m. in the parish activity center. All adults age 55 and older are welcome. For more information, call Charles Nesto at (704) 398-0879.

CHARLOTTE — St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St., will offer Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of every month following the 12:10 p.m. Mass and Benediction at 1:30 p.m.

CHARLOTTE — The St. Maximilian Kolbe Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order meet the first Sunday of each month at 2 p.m. at Our Lady of Consolation Church, 2301 Statesville Ave. Those interested in learning more about the SFO and the Franciscan way of life are invited to attend. For more information, call Skyler Harvey, SFO, at (704) 545-9133.

HUNTERSVILLE — A Fall Day of Reflection for seniors over 55 will be held Oct. 9 at St. Mark Church, 14740 Stumptown Rd., 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Benedictine Father Kieran Neilson, will address spiritual topics relative to seniors. Please call Sandra Breakfield at (704) 370-3220 by Sept. 30. This event is

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

SEPTEMBER 26, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 1

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Vatican says weapons inspections crucial to detecting secret programs

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — After the International Atomic Energy Agency demanded that Iran open its nuclear facilities to U.N. inspectors, a Vatican representative said "impartial, international inspections" were crucial to detecting clandestine nuclear weapons programs.

Msgr. Leo Boccardi made the comments in a speech Sept. 17 to a meeting of the agency in Vienna, Austria. Msgr. Boccardi, the Holy See's permanent observer to the atomic energy agency, said verification was proving to be a challenging task.

"This core activity becomes more and more crucial in the efforts of the international community to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons," he said.

"It is important that verification is done through impartial, international inspections, because only such activities can generate credibility and bring about good results," he said.

The question of impartiality has been raised in the debate over Iran's nuclear weapons program. On Sept. 12, after strong lobbying from the United States, the International Atomic Energy Agency gave Iran until Oct. 31 to provide detailed information about all its nuclear-related activities, to suspend uranium-enrichment activities and to allow unlimited access to U.N. inspectors.

The United States has said it fears Iran is developing nuclear weapons. Iran has said its nuclear programs are for peaceful uses, and that the energy agency was merely carrying out U.S. political wishes.

Msgr. Boccardi emphasized that in the Vatican's view verification of nuclear weapons, while very important, is not enough to "make the world more secure."

"We need to reinvigorate the nuclear disarmament process, including real progress in nuclear weapons dismantlement," he said.

sponsored by the elder ministry of Catholic Social Services.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO— Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians, Guilford County, Division 1, an Irish-Catholic social, cultural and charitable inter-parish group, meets the first Thursday of every month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Pius X Church, Kloster Center, at 2210 N. Elm St. RSVP to Elaine McHale, President, 292-1118 to attend meeting. All Catholic women of Irish birth or descent are welcome.

HIGH POINT — A Salesian leadership seminar, "Becoming Blessed Givers," will be held at Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, 4154 Johnson St. Oct 3 7-9 p.m. and Oct. 4 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. This interactive program offers Salesian perspectives on the beatitudes and the seven gifts of the Holy Spirit. For registration information, call Brenda Agnew at (336) 869-8075 or e-mail bbrendamae@aol.com.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, holds a charismatic Mass the first Thursday of each month in Sebastian Chapel at 7 p.m. For further information, contact Joan Moran (828)-327-0487.

HICKORY — The Confraternity of Christian Mothers is open to all women in the Hickory area. Meetings are held 6:45-8 p.m. the second Wednesday of each month in the St. Catherine of Sienna room of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. for details call Kathy Kohrs at (828) 324-6575.

HICKORY — A Fall Day of Reflection for seniors over 55 will be held Oct. 16 at St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St., 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Father Ed Sheridan, pastor of St. Aloysius, will address spiritual topics relative to seniors. Please call Sandra Breakfield at (704) 370-3220 by Oct. 2. This event is sponsored by the elder ministry of Catholic Social Services.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — Father Jozef Sekete, SJ, will present "A Walk through the Mass" at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. Sept. 28 at 10:15 a.m. and Oct. 1 at 4:30 p.m. This class will examine the Mass and its historical origins. Father Sekete will discuss current practices and how the celebration of the Mass remains the greatest prayer of the church. For details, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

MOORESVILLE — St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., has an ongoing "Landings" group for returning Catholics. In small faith-sharing groups, returning Catholics are provided a comfortable spot to touch down and share faith journeys, prayer and Catholic spirituality with other Catholics trying to live their faith. For further information, call Jim or Penny at (704) 664-5196.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

SYLVA — Father Matthew Kauth will present "Theology of the Body" at St. Mary Church, 22 Bartlett St. Sept. 29 at 6 p.m. This event is sponsored by the Catholic Young Adult Group. For more information about the presentation or the group, call Susie Bryson at (828) 293-9374 or e-mail:susiebryson@catholicexchange.com.

SYLVA — St. Mary Church offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Saturday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 3 p.m. For information, call (828) 586-9496.

FRANKLIN — The Women's Guild of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 299 Maple St., meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center. The meetings feature guest speakers and special events periodically. For more information, call Claire Barnable at (828) 369-1565.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in Conference Room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

Please submit notices of parish events for the diocesan planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

October should be a busy month in the busiest pontificate in history

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II's frailty during a visit to Slovakia prompted some to wonder whether the duties of his office are finally overwhelming the 83-year-old pontiff.

But the pope is hardly preparing to ride into the sunset, as October promises to be one of the busiest periods of any pontificate with a marathon of meetings, liturgies and celebrations — including festivities for the 25th anniversary of his election.

The pope starts off October with a general audience, a two-hour event that brings him into weekly contact with pilgrims from all over the world. Over the years, he's presided over more than 1,100 of these audiences, attended by an estimated 16.8 million people.

The same day, he begins a 12-day series of "ad limina" visits with bishops from the Philippines, one-on-one encounters followed by a group meeting.

In early October, the pope will meet with the president of Lithuania; the Australian and Lebanese foreign ministers; and the Anglican primate, Archbishop Rowan Williams of Canterbury, at the Vatican for the first time.

The pope will preside over a canonization Mass in St. Peter's Square to honor three new missionary saints, then helicopter to a Marian sanctuary in Pompeii to say Mass and close out the Year of the Rosary. It will be the 144th Italian visit of his pontificate.

In mid-October, the College of Cardinals descends on Rome to help the pope celebrate his 25th anniversary. After signing a post-synodal document on the role of the bishop in the church Oct. 16, the pope will say Mass in the evening for what is expected to be a huge crowd.

The pope will next attend a concert in his honor, hold a retrospective gathering with the cardinals and heads of bishops' conferences, preside over the three-hour beatification of Mother Teresa, and then meet with members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican.

October finishes with more liturgies, audiences with world leaders, foreign ministers and "ad lima" meetings with English and Welsh bishops.

Pope John Paul shoulders the blame for his heavy schedule. His ambitious papacy has helped change the way popes operate: once remote and regal, the head of the church is now expected to be in a state of perpetual pastoral motion.

Cleaning up after Isabel

CNS PHOTO BY NANCY WIECHEC

The Catholic University of America worker Julian Bennett cleans up downed tree branches outside Spalding Hall Sept. 19 after Hurricane Isabel blew through Washington. The massive storm, blamed for at least 11 deaths, left more than 3.5 million people without power and shut down the federal government for two days in Washington. The morning after the storm, the capital area was dealing with downed trees and tree limbs, power outages and flooding. Areas along the East Coast from North Carolina to Maryland suffered more extensive damage. Catholic Charities was soliciting funds to help those hardest hit by the storm.

DID YOU KNOW?

According to the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops, 81,240 people have been received into full Communion in the Catholic Church through conversion from another Christian church. There are now 65,270,444 Catholics in the United States (23 percent of the U.S. population), and 1,018,257,000 Catholics in the world (17.3 percent of the world population).

CORRECTION

Last issue, Rev. Mr. Gene Gillis' name was misspelled in a photo caption.

Confirmation: On fire with faith

PCL, from page 1

Diocese of Orlando, is a noted author and speaker on the topics of liturgy, catechesis and sacramental catechesis and holds a doctorate in catechesis and liturgy from the Catholic University of America.

At the parish catechetical leaders' in-service day, she spoke about the church history and teachings on the sacraments of baptism, Communion and confirmation in a talk entitled "Confirmation: The Spirit Sets Us Free."

"In the last few years, several dioceses mandated the restored order of the sacraments of initiation," said Dr. Cris Villapando, director of the diocesan office of faith formation. "Eastern Catholic and Orthodox churches have expressed reluctance to join the Roman Catholic Church if the liturgical practice of putting confirmation after the Eucharist persists."

"In order to understand the theological and liturgical issues involved, the Office of Faith Formation invited Sister Linda Gaupin to shed some light on this debate," he said.

Photo by Ellen N. Sigmon

Sister of Divine Providence Linda Gaupin talks with parish catechetical leaders during a PCL in-service day at the Catholic Conference Center in Hickory Sept. 18.

History of sacraments

"In the Catholic Church, most people's concept of history is from 1930 on," she said. "Our recent memory is a problem. We think it's the way the church has always been."

Offering a brief history of the sacraments in the early church, Sister Linda said that up until the 500s, converts to the faith were fully initiated at Easter and received baptism, confirmation and the Eucharist in that order all in one ceremony.

"The church had one rite of baptism, no matter what your age," she said.

After the 500s, said Sister Linda, those being initiated into the church went from being mostly adults to mostly infants, but the ceremony remained the same, with deacons and adults answering for the infants. Infants received Communion just as other church members would.

But around the 900s in some areas of the Latin rite church, said Sister Linda, there began to be a separation of confirmation from baptism and the Eucharist. This was mainly due to bishops keeping the right to confirm for themselves.

"The time of initiation would come, but the bishop would not be present," she said. "It would be done when the bishop could get there. The church was very concerned about this."

Over the next several hundred years, the separation of confirmation from the other sacraments became longer (from months to years) and the practice of separating the sacraments became more widespread, said Sister Linda. In some areas, baptism was separated from first Communion, although none of this was done because of official church teachings, she said.

As the sacraments of initiation separated, local churches started to require preparatory education and proof of moral worthiness for first Communion and confirmation, and the ages for these sacraments varied widely, depending on the preferences of the local clergy.

"This Jansenism (the idea of having to earn a sacrament) was ultimately condemned by the church as heresy," said Sister Linda.

Sister Linda listed several church documents issued in the 1700-1900s discouraging the delay of confirmation, and said children should receive it at the "age of reason" (typically around the age of 7), before or at the same time that they received their first Communion.

Still, she said, there continues to be a "gap between official church teachings and pastoral practices."

"No one is doing this out of maliciousness," said Sister Linda. "We are dealing with major confusion."

Essence of confirmation

Sister Linda also talked about what confirmation should and should not be, adding the current structure signals to adolescents that achieving confirmation signals the end of their religious education. She said confirmation should be seen as a sacrament of initiation that bestows the gift of the Holy Spirit, endows the recipient with special strength, and makes the recipient an anointed Christ figure.

Confirmation should not be presented as a sacrament of maturity in which adolescents decide on their personal commitments to the church and proves their wisdom to make moral decisions, said Sister Linda.

"We make people show us they have the gift of the spirit before we even give it to them," she said.

The type of people chosen to instruct confirmands is also very important, said Sister Linda. "We get involved in religious education by knocking on a rectory door for a Mass card," she said. "We come out the D.R.E. (director of religious education)."

"People leading people to conversion have to be people of conversion themselves," she said. "They need to have the fire and energy and passion of the faith. We need to enable children, youth and adults to understand the spirit that transforms us."

The Diocese of Orlando, she said, has implemented a confirmation program that involves the entire faith community, not just the confirmands. Parents and siblings of the confirmands come to the program, as well as other adults of the parish who need to deepen and enrich their own understanding and spirituality of sacramental life, she said.

"Teenagers begin to get a different attitude when they begin to see the body of Christ gathered — people who don't have to be there," said Sister Linda. "A child has a right to the love and help of the community."

"We should be on fire with the faith, because we have all been confirmed," she said.

MOVING?

Take us with you!

Please help us reduce postal fees and give us your NEW address (or cancellation notice) BEFORE you move.

If you have your address label, include that, too.

Name

Old address

Old city zip

NEW address

NEW city/state zip

Date of move/cancellation:

Mail changes to:
The Catholic News & Herald
Address Changes
1123 S. Church Street
Charlotte, NC 28203

Or e-mail this info to:
catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

Thank you.

COME AND HEAR

Christopher West – "Theology of the Body"

Wednesday through Friday, Oct. 8 - 10 at 7 pm each evening

St. Thomas Aquinas Catholic Church
1400 Suther Road - Charlotte

One of the top Catholic speakers in the world, Christopher West's talks regarding Pope John Paul II's "Theology of the Body" are riveting and life changing!

West teaches theology of the body and sexual ethics at Denver's St. John Vianney Theological Seminary and is also a visiting faculty member of the John Paul II Institute for Studies on Marriage and Family in Melbourne, Australia. His books, extensive lecturing and tapes have sparked an international ground swell of interest in John Paul II's theology of the body.

Tickets: $12 for all 3 nights or $5 for each night.
(Workbook is an additional $5)
For information: Tony Gagliardo - 704-439-0533 or 704-655-9090

BOOK SIGNING: West will sign his book "Good News about Sex and Marriage" on Thursday, Oct. 9, 1:00 pm at the new store location of The Catholic Company at LAKE NORMAN (next to the Goodwill), 19905 West Catawba Avenue, #106, Cornelius (Exit 28 off I-77, 1/2 mile west on Catawba Ave.)

Many experience 'Triumph of the Cross'

Arden conference explores Eucharist, faith

BY CAROLE McGROTTY
CORRESPONDENT

ARDEN — Wearing red in honor of the Sept. 14 feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, Father Roger Arnsparger and Rev. Mr. Arthur Kingsley led a colorful procession to the altar of St. Barnabas Church Friday evening, Sept. 12.

The procession included Columbian Squires carrying a statue of the Blessed Mother. So began the second annual "Triumph of the Cross" conference.

"Triumph of the Cross: Building Catholic Families, Building a Catholic Culture" took place at the church Sept. 12-13. Sponsored by St. Barnabas, Saints and Scholars Bookstore and Nazareth House, a center for Catholic resources, the conference featured presentations and 16 workshops such as "Taking Your Toddlers to Mass," "Prayer" and "The Moral Imagination of Children."

"It was a much needed nourishment and a booster shot for our souls," said Karen Jambon, a parishioner of the Basilica of St. Lawrence in Asheville. "We need the community of the church as a support group."

Approximately 220 people participated in the conference, according to Jeff Minick, conference coordinator.

In his homily, Father Arnsparger, pastor of St. Barnabas, said, "Never forget God loved us so much that he was ready to give himself up ... This is the reason we have crosses, venerate the cross and make the Sign of the Cross."

PHOTO BY CAROLE McGROTTY

Adults and teen-agers questions about faith to a panel of priests during the "Triumph of the Cross" conference at St. Barnabas Church Sept. 12-13.

After Friday night's Mass, Father Paul Scalia, a pro-life activist and parochial vicar of St. Patrick Church in Chancellorsville, Va., offered the keynote on "The Eucharist and the Family."

Father Scalia, one of the nine children of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, offered a lively presentation on how the Eucharist can transform people. He focused on the three aspects of the Eucharist — sacrifice, presence and Communion — and demonstrated how they correspond to "evangelical councils of poverty, chastity and obedience."

Addressing parents in the audience, Father Scalia encouraged them to teach their children to go without some of the things they want; to sacrifice "for the good of their souls." He pointed out that parents can not see God's work in their child's soul, that the "Lord enjoys an intimacy with your child greater than the intimacy you have with your child."

He cautioned them to show a reverence for their child's soul, "a place where parents can't go."

Jim Burnham, author of the "Beginning Apologetics" series and a frequent guest on the Eternal World Television Network, offered two lectures and a meeting with teen-agers during a workshop Sept. 13.

Speaking on "Anchoring Your Family in the Faith," Burnham compared the Catholic faith to a Ferrari that needs "to be taken from the garage onto the highway in fifth gear." Burnham stressed Catholics have the body and blood of Christ, and "most personal relationship this side of Heaven."

During his "Teen Talk" session, Burnham stressed the importance of teen-agers learning about their faith, especially before attending college. He told the teens to know their Bible because their non-Catholic friends will know theirs, and said they could always find answers when non-Catholics attack their faith.

"Because the Catholic Church is true, it can defend itself," he said.

Noah Carter, a teen parishioner from St. Barnabas, said what he learned "will help me defend my faith."

Teens and adults benefited from the "Father Knows Best" panel, which consisted of Father Arnsparger; Father Scalia; Father Ray Williams, pastor of St. Mary Church in Sylva; and Father Patrick Winslow, parochial vicar of St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte. Often with humorous insight, the priests answered questions that ranged from the difference between an atheist and an agnostic to how to answer non-Catholic friends who say Catholics worship idols and saints.

Father Arnsparger summarized the session with: "The only way to the true happiness that God desires for us to when we live the life God has designed for us."

"(The panel) made clear the understanding of what it means to be Catholic and what teen-agers should do when confronted with questions," said Jacob Wolfe, a parishioner from St. John the Baptist Church in Tryon.

"It was really informative," said April Hansbury, a teen-age parishioner of the Basilica of St. Lawrence in Asheville. "It gave teens a chance to ask questions in an open environment and have discussion."

"(It) was a good opportunity to ask question that most teen-agers have and to know that other teens have the same questions that you do," said Samantha Rutherford, a teen-age parishioner from the Basilica of St. Lawrence.

Father Williams offered a workshop on "Educating Children for Heaven." June Sullivan, a St. Mary parishioner who attended the workshop, said the main goal of education is to know God.

"If we can inspire that in our children, and keep the end goal in mind, we will do the right things to get to that goal," she said.

Other workshops included the work of Rachel's Vineyard, an outreach of American Life League that offers post-abortion healing; stewardship, by Jim Kelley, director of the diocesan development office; and Pope John Paul II's "Theology of the Body," by Father Matthew Kauth, pastor of St. Francis of Assisi Church in Franklin.

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

Can you answer "YES" to any of these questions?

1. Do you need a good buyer for a car, house, property, etc.?
2. Do you need a renter for a vacation place, house, or other property?
3. Do you need qualified employees for your business?
4. Does your church or organization need good employees?

If so, put THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD to work for YOU!
Over 125,000 READERS could see your classified ad in this paper every week - for only 60 cents per word ($12 minimum)!
CALL Cindi Feerick at (704) 370-3332 today!

ST. MICHAEL'S SCHOOL FUN FAIR
SATURDAY, OCT. 11
8:00 am — 3:00 pm
"A Faith-filled Future"
Come and participate in
Games - Rides - Prizes -
Bingo - Bake Sale - Silent Auction -
Raffle - ...and MUCH MORE!
Activities for the whole family and all ages!!
FOR INFORMATION CALL (704)865-4382

St. Michael School
Tiger Run 5k
& 1 Mile Cub Trot
FOR MORE INFORMATION OR TO REGISTER ONLINE:
ActiveZach.com
Saturday, October 11th - 8:00 A.M.
St. Michael School - Gastonia, NC
704-829-7778
Part of FunFair, the annual day-long family carnival.

"The mountains shall yield peace for the people." Psalm 72:3
JESUIT HOUSE OF PRAYER
HOT SPRINGS, NC
Welcoming all Christians seeking prayer and quiet in a busy life
Situated in the heart of Pisgah National Forest, the area's peace and beauty offer the perfect haven for quiet prayer and reflection.
Ignatian directed retreats
Private retreats
Group retreats
Call: 828-622-7366
e-mail: vpaul@madison.main.nc.us

KETTLES AND CAMARADERIE

COURTESY PHOTO

Women gather to share tea, faith

SAPPHIRE VALLEY — Approximately 100 women attended the Ecumenical Tea for Women of Faiths took place at St. Jude Church Sept. 13.

The gathering was an opportunity for women of different faiths to share fellowship and refreshments, and partake in an inspirational sermon and meditation by Rev. Ann Dotson from Rowlett, Texas.

Father William Evans, sacramental minister for St. Jude Church, welcomed the women and said, to his knowledge, this meeting was the first ecumenical effort by women in the area.

The gathering was considered a success by those in attendance, according to Mary Phillabaum, St. Jude Family Life Commission chairperson, and the participants agreed to meet again to share their similarities rather than differences early in 2004.

Wine tasting event to raise funds

CHARLOTTE — The 2nd Annual Vineyard of Hope Wine Tasting and Auction fundraiser will be held to benefit the Charlotte Regional Office of Catholic Social Services Oct. 24.

Over 400 people are expected to attend the event to enjoy wines from local and national wineries and creative cuisine from Mimosa Grill. As an added attraction, chefs from Johnson & Wales University will be on hand to demonstrate cooking techniques and offer a virtual tour of the new university, slated to open in September 2004.

Emcees Ty Boyd and Jim Babb will lead the evening's festivities, which will include a silent auction with donations from local and regional businesses, and a live auction featuring vacations, rare bottles of wine, personal chef services, and other unique items.

The Charlotte Regional Catholic Social Services (CSS) is a non-profit human services agency that provides services to those in need, regardless of economic, soci8al, religious, racial or ethnic background. Services include: adoption services and pregnancy support counseling; material assistance; holiday outreach; burial assistance; services to Charlotte's increasing Hispanic community

WANT TO GO?

This fundraiser will take place at the Wachovia Atrium in Charlotte Oct. 24. Tickets are $40 per person, or $75 per couple. To purchase tickets or request additional information, call (704) 370-0560. RSVPs are required by Friday, Oct. 17, 2003.

The Franciscan Center

Catholic Gift & Book Store

Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!

Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday

(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

St James Catholic Church 49th Annual BBQ

Wednesday October 1, 2003

50 Elm Ave, NW, Concord, NC

Between Union St N & Spring St N

From 10 AM to 7 PM

Dinner or 3 BBQ Sandwiches $6.50

Large take-out orders please call ahead and we'll have it ready.

Voice 704-720-0600 * or by fax 704-720-0610

School of Healing Prayer begins in Diocese of Charlotte

HIGH POINT — The first class of the Level I School of Healing Prayer was held at Maryfield Nursing Home.

Bruce and Ellen Brodowski of Carolinas Ecumenical Healing Ministries (CEHM) facilitated the class of 52 students organized by Rev. Mr. Ron Steinkamp, permanent deacon at St. Pius X Church in Greensboro, and his wife Bette.

CEHM is a nonprofit organization under the spiritual direction of Father Dean Cesa, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church in Tryon. The organization strives to help heal the mind, body and soul through prayer. The School of Healing Prayer seminars equip individuals, churches and prayer groups to minister healing prayer through training video's and a workbook featuring Dr. Francis MacNutt and other leaders in the healing ministry.

CEHM plans to hold a School of Healing Prayer in the Charlotte area in the future. Those called to a Christian ministry of prayer, faith and healing can obtain information by contacting Bruce or Ellen Brodowski at (704) 845-4638.

United States Postal Service

Statement of Ownership, Management, and Circulation

| 1. Publication Title | 2. Publication Number | 3. Filing Date |
|---|---|---|
| The Catholic News & Herald | 0 0 7 - 3 9 3 | 9/5/03 |
| 4. Issue Frequency: Weekly except bi-weekly during Jun/July/Aug. No Christmas/Easter. | 5. Number of Issues Published Annually: 44 | 6. Annual Subscription Price: $15 for enrollees in parishes, $23 all others. |

7. Complete Mailing Address of Known Office of Publication (Not printer)(Street, city, county, state, and ZIP+4): 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203-4003 — Contact Person: Kevin Murray; Telephone: (704)370-3334

8. Complete Mailing Address of Headquarters or General Business Office of Publisher (Not printer): P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237

9. Full Names and Complete Mailing Addresses of Publisher, Editor, and Managing Editor (Do not leave blank)

Publisher (name and complete mailing address): Very Reverend Mauricio West, Administrator of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203-4003

Editor (Name and complete mailing address): Kevin Murray, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237

Managing Editor (Name and complete mailing address):

10. Owner (Do not leave blank. If the publication is owned by a corporation, give the name and address of the corporation immediately followed by the names and addresses of all stockholders owning or holding 1 percent or more of the total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, give the names and addresses of the individual owners. If owned by a partnership or other unincorporated firm, give its name and address as well as those of each individual owner. If the publication is published by a nonprofit organization, give its name and address.)

| Full Name | Complete Mailing Address |
|---|---|
| Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte | 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203 |

11. Known Bondholders, Mortgagees, and Other Security Holders Owning or Holding 1 Percent or More of Total Amount of Bonds, Mortgages, or Other Securities. If none, check box → None

| Full Name | Complete Mailing Address |
|---|---|

12. Tax Status (For completion by nonprofit organizations authorized to mail at nonprofit rates) (Check one)
The purpose, function, and nonprofit status of this organization and the exempt status for federal income tax purposes:
✓ Has Not Changed During preceding 12 Months
Has Changed during Preceding 12 Months (Publisher must submit explanation of change with this statement)

PS Form 3526, October 1999 (See instructions on Reverse)

| 13. Publication Title: The Catholic News & Herald | 14. Issue Date for Circulation Data Below: 9/5/03 | |
|---|---|---|
| 15. Extent and Nature of Circulation | Average No. Copies Each Issue During Preceding 12 Months | No. Copies of Single Issue Published Nearest to Filing Date |
| a. Total Number of Copies (Net press run) | 49,059 | 48,542 |
| b. Paid and/or Requested Circulation (1) Paid/Requested Outside-County Mail Subscriptions Stated on Form 3541 (Include advertiser's proof and exchange copies) | 48,584 | 48,092 |
| (2) Paid In-County Subscriptions (include advertiser's proof and exchange copies) | 0 | 0 |
| (3) Sales Through Dealers and Carriers, Street Vendors, Counter Sales, and other Non-USPS Paid Distribution | 0 | 0 |
| (4) Other Classes Mailed Through the USPS | 48,584 | 48,092 |
| c. Total Paid and/or Requested Circulation [Sum of 15b (1),(2),(3),and (4)] | | |
| d. Free Distribution by Mail (Samples, complimentary, and other free) (1) Outside-County as Stated on Form 3541 | 200 | 150 |
| (2) In-County as Stated on Form 3541 | 75 | 100 |
| (3) Other Classes Mailed Through the USPS | 275 | 250 |
| e. Free Distribution Outside the Mail (Carriers or other means) | 48,859 | 48,342 |
| f. Total Free Distribution (Sum of 15d and 15e) | 200 | 200 |
| g. Total Distribution (Sum of 15c and 15f) | 49,059 | 48,542 |
| h. Copies not Distributed | 99% | 99% |
| i. Total (Sum of 15g and h) | | |
| j. Percent Paid and/or Requested Circulation (15c divided by 15g times 100) | | |

16. Publication of Statement of Ownership
✓ Publication required. Will be printed in the 9/26/03 issue of this publication. Publication not required

17. Signature and title of Editor, Publisher, Business Manager, or Owner: Kevin Murray — Date: 9/5/03

I certify that all information furnished on this form is true and complete. I understand that anyone who furnishes false or misleading information on this form or who omits material or information requested on the form may be subject to criminal sanctions (including fines and imprisonment) and/or civil sanctions (including civil penalties).

Instructions to Publishers

1. Complete and file one copy of this form with your postmaster annually on or before October 1. Keep a copy of the completed form for your records
2. In cases where the stockholder or security holder is a trustee, include in items 10 and 11 the name of the person or corporation for whom the trustee is acting. Also include the names and addresses of individuals who are stockholders who own or hold 1 percent or more of the total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities of the publishing corporation. In item 11, if none, check the box. Use blank sheets if more space is required.
3. Be sure to furnish all circulation information called for in item 15. Free circulation must be shown in items 15d, 3, and f.
4. Item 15h., Copies not Distributed, must include (1) newsstand copies originally stated on Form 3541, and returned to the publisher, (2) estimated returns from news agents, and (3), copies for office use, leftovers, spoiled, and all other copies not distributed
5. If the publication had Periodicals authorization as a general or requester publication, this Statement of Ownership, Management, and Circulation must be published; it must be printed in any issue in October or, if the publication is not published dunng October, the first issue printed after October
6. In item 16, indicate the date of the issue in which this Statement of ownership will be published.
7. Item 17 must be signed.

Failure to file or publish a statement of ownership may lead to suspension of Periodicals authorization.

PS Form 3526, October 1999 (Reverse)

Practice makes permanent

Photo by Karen A. Evans

Charlynn E. Ross, director of The University Learning Center at University of North Carolina at Charlotte, helps fourth and fifth graders hone their study skills Sept. 23 at St. Matthew School.

St. Matthew students brush up on their study skills

by KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — "Practice makes permanent," said Charlynn Ross to the fourth- and fifth-grade students of St. Matthew School Sept. 23.

Ross, director of the University Learning Center at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, spent the next 30 minutes teaching the students techniques to improve their study skills, something that they will use for the next 12 (or more) years.

"Study skills are the foundation for a successful academic career," said Debbie Mixer, assistant principal of St. Matthew School. "The earlier you begin learning those skills, the more successful you become."

If students learn good study and time management skills early, those skills are second nature when they enter high school, said Ross.

Ross addressed the primary components of studying efficiently: avoiding distractions; breaking down assignments into smaller, more manageable tasks; taking frequent short breaks; answering study questions while reading; and taking notes effectively.

Ross further helped the students identify what type of learners they are, visual, auditory or tactile/moving learners. She gave suggestions for each specific type of learner.

"For example, my son always had to be moving when he was young," she said. "So I gave him a small, soft ball that he could hold in one hand while he wrote with the other." It kept him from swinging his legs and kicking other students under their desks, she explained.

A separate training session was held in the evening for the parents to enable them to help their children study more effectively.

"Studying effectively is more important than studying a lot," Ross said.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

Study tips from The University of North Carolina at Charlotte University Learning Center

Maximizing Study Time

Write down all assignments.

Keep a daily "To Do" list.

Pace yourself — don't cram!

Break big assignments and projects into smaller daily tasks.

Set a time limit for studying and reward yourself with a healthy break (eat fruit, stretch, try light exercise or take a quick shower).

Use the "25/5 Method" — for every 25 minutes of studying give yourself a 5-minute "health break" before returning to your assignments. Your brain will be at its maximum operating power!

Avoid the "Sirens' Call" of distractions during homework — relax and have fun with friends during your free time.

You should make time to enjoy yourself everyday. But teach yourself to say "NO" to behavior that will harm your learning and your grades.

Reading Textbooks

Read the "Chapter Summary" first.

Write down the questions at the end of the chapter on flashcards.

Then answer the questions as you find them in your reading.

Think as you read, " What would be a good test question?" Make you own practice test, then match your test with the teacher's test. You will be surprised how many test questions will be alike!

Taking Notes

Don't try and write down everything the teacher says — just important key words.

Do write down information that the teach writes or displays.

Use abbreviations. RW = Revolutionary War.

Rewrite your notes after class while your memory is still fresh.

Use different colors to highlight your notes. For examples, use the color green for information about oxygen, orange for carbon dioxide, yellow for photosynthesis. It is fun and you will remember more!

Make flash cards out of your notes!

How do you best learn?

Through what you see? What you hear? While you move?

Visual Learners

Use colored pens, note cards and highlighters.

Draw diagrams, maps, charts and picture of information that you need to remember.

Imagine information as pictures or movies in your head.

Auditory Learners

Read difficult information out loud.

Practice questions and answers with a study partner/parent.

Summarize paragraphs, chapters, stories and directions in your own words.

Tactile/Moving Learners

There is memory in your muscles!

Try a rocking or swivel chair while you read.

Hold a smooth stone, small soft ball, etc. in one hand while you study.

Create flash cards with questions on the front and answers on the back.

Type your notes/study guides.

Use the suggestions that help you learn best!

Wild but not crazy:

Your nose knows: Study with a super scent. Try rubbing a little scented lotion under your nose while you study. Then use the same lotion under your nose while you take a test. Your recall should increase. Our sense of smell is a strong trigger of memory. Check with your parents first before trying!

Last but not least. Think positively about your assignments. Top leaders, teachers, musicians, athletes and other successful people will tell you that keeping a good attitude is the key to overcoming any problem.

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection Lowest Prices
Drivers wanted.
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!
Ask about our Stairway lifts.
- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

Document on liturgy returned

VATICAN, from page 1

sible only for a good reason.

The Rome-based magazine Jesus, a publication of the Pauline Fathers, reported Sept. 22 it had obtained a copy of the June draft.

Cardinal Achille Silvestrini, a member of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, said the draft was discussed by members of the doctrinal congregation and the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Sacraments in June.

"Many observations were made, both negative and positive," he told Catholic News Service Sept. 24. "The document which will be released eventually will not be the same document I saw" because it was sent back for revision.

Another prelate who received the draft said members of the two congregations were asked not only for observations about specific points in the draft, but also whether they believed it was "opportune" to publish the document.

Pope John Paul II, in his April encyclical on the Eucharist, asked the congregations to prepare a document, "including prescriptions of a juridical nature," on the obligation to follow church rules for the celebration of Mass and adoration of the Eucharist.

A Vatican official, who asked not to be named, said it is normal for a document to be returned to its drafting committee for revision prior to publication.

According to Jesus magazine, the draft released in June emphasized the importance of maintaining the distinctions among the roles of the priest, deacon and laity at Mass, reaffirming the Vatican's ban on anyone but the priest or deacon giving the homily.

The magazine did not give any more details on distribution of Communion under both species, but said the document also:

— Specifically discourages lay "pastoral assistants" in a parish from assuming liturgical roles during the Mass.

— Recognizes a bishop's authority to permit girls and women to serve at the altar, "but never without a just pastoral reason, and priests must never be obliged to call girls to this role."

— Reminds Catholics that "the minister of the Eucharist" and the only celebrant of the Mass is the priest.

The Mass is not a "concelebration" of the presiding priest and the congregation, therefore the expressions "celebrating community" or "celebrating assembly" should be avoided.

The magazine said the draft document also states that:

— "Applause and dance inside a sacred building, even outside of the eucharistic celebration" are not allowed. The rule could mean a change in liturgies at which Pope John Paul is present; he is always greeted with applause and, with congregations from certain parts of the world, dance has been permitted, particularly during the offertory procession.

— Under most circumstances non-Catholics are not allowed to receive the Eucharist at a Catholic liturgy. Ministers from other Christian communities should not stand next to Catholic celebrants during a Mass, and they should not be asked to give a blessing to the Catholic congregation.

Liberian Boys Choir entertains parishioners

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

MINT HILL — The Liberian Acappella Boys Choir sang for about 130 friends and parishioners at St. Luke Church in Mint Hill Sept. 14.

The group of orphans from the war-torn African nation consists of 13 boys ages 9-16. The choir demonstrated phenomenal harmony accompanied by only an African (deer) drum in a few of their songs.

The choir is currently supported and sponsored by Perry Bown of Waxhaw until Dec. 1, when they are required to return to their country.

For further information or bookings, please call (206) 270-9600 or write Liberian Acappella Boys Choir, P.O. Box 1238, Lancaster, S.C. 29722.

CHILDREN'S CONSIGNMENT SALE

hosted by St. Gabriel Christian Mothers' Group

CONSIGNORS NEEDED!

(receive 60% for quality children's clothing and equipment; maternity clothes welcome,too)

Saturday, Oct. 11th 8 am - 2 pm

St. Gabriel Church, Providence at Sharon Lane, Charlotte

E-mail or call Renee Foster rfoster2@carolina.rr.com or (704-366-2073) between 9/29 and 10/3 to set consigning appointment.

RENEW YOUR Romance

Has squeezing the toothpaste tube from the middle doused the flames of romance in your marriage? A Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekend can rekindle the sparks you felt on your wedding day! Marriage Encounter is 44 hours where married couples can get away from jobs, kids, chores, and phones—and focus only on each other. If you'd like greater depth, growth, and enrichment in your relationship, you'll like the difference a Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekend can make! Join millions of couples worldwide who have learned how to keep their marriages vibrant and alive.

Next Weekend Dates:

October 24-26 — Airport Holiday Inn, Charlotte

November 7-9 — Courtyard Marriott, Wilmington

Call Tom and Emilie Sandin (336) 274-4424 for info

A weekend of discovery... a lifetime of love

Visit our website at www.triadneighbors.com

BECOMING "BLESSED GIVERS"

*

Join your friends and fellow parishioners at the Salesian Leadership Seminar.

This interactive program offers Salesian perspectives on the Beatitudes and the Seven Gifts of the Holy Spirit.

*

Presented by Loretta Bedner and Michael S. Murray, OSFS

Friday Evening, October 3:
7 pm - 9 pm
Saturday, October 4:
9 am - 3:30 pm

Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church

4145 Johnson Street
High Point, NC 27265
(at the corner of Skeet Club Rd. and Johnson St.)

Please contact Brenda Agnew at 336-869-8075 (or BbrendaMae@aol.com) for registration or information. We suggest a free will offering of $10 to cover the cost of materials and Saturday's lunch.

De Sales
SPIRITUALITY CENTER

1120 Blue Ball Road
Childs, MD 21916-0043
410-398-3040, ext. 237

www.oblates.org/spirituality

Communion: The 'source and summit'

COMMUNION, from page 1

ish, their parents, grandparents and aunt smiled proudly at the accomplishment of these two young people.

"It's important to feel the presence of God in our lives," said their mother, Adriana Pereira. "We receive Jesus because, as he said, 'Do this in remembrance of me.'"

The center of Catholic life

"The font of all the sacramental celebrations is the Eucharist," said Cris Villapondo, director of the diocesan office of faith formation.

The Eucharist is one of the three sacraments of initiation, along with baptism and confirmation. According to Father Peter Klein's "The Catholic Source Book," baptism "immerses a person in their identity" and confirmation "immerses a person in their mission." Eucharist "immerses a person in their destiny."

In the time of the early church, the sacrament of holy Communion was first given to infants at the time of their baptism. Over the centuries, the custom became to wait until the age of 14. In the 20th century, Pope Pius X declared that children "of the age of reason" — 7 years old — were to receive first Communion.

"The Church draws her life from the Eucharist. This truth does not simply express a daily experience of faith, but recapitulates the heart of the mystery of the Church," Pope John Paul II wrote in his April 2003 encyclical letter "Ecclesia De Eucharistia."

"In a variety of ways she joyfully experiences the constant fulfillment of the promise: 'Lo, I am with you always, to the close of the age' (Mt 28:20), but in the Holy Eucharist, through the changing of bread and wine into the body and blood of the Lord, she rejoices in this presence with unique intensity," the pope stated.

"The Second Vatican Council rightly proclaimed that the Eucharistic sacrifice is 'the source and summit of the Christian life,'" Belleville Bishop Wilton D. Gregory, president of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops wrote in response to the encyclical.

"The Church was born of the paschal mystery," said Bishop Gregory. "For this very reason the Eucharist, which is in an outstanding way the sacrament of the paschal mystery, stands at the centre of the Church's life."

"By giving the Eucharist the prominence it deserves, and by being careful not to diminish any of its dimensions or demands, we show that we are truly conscious of the greatness of this gift," Pope John Paul II said in his encyclical letter.

"We are urged to do so by an uninterrupted tradition, which from the first centuries on has found the Christian community ever vigilant in guarding this 'treasure,'" he continued. "Inspired by love, the Church is anxious to hand on to future generations of Christians, without loss, her faith and teaching with regard to the mystery of the Eucharist. There can be no danger of excess in our care for this mystery, for 'in this sacrament is recapitulated the whole mystery of our salvation.'"

Celebration of the sacred

Following the Mass, family and friends gathered to celebrate Ximena and Guillermo's first Communion. The children handed out silver angel bookmarks with their names, the date and "First Communion" engraved on them. Although they counted and recounted their monetary gifts, it was their love of God and their family and friends that was the focus of that special day.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

THE BREAD OF ANGELS

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Ximena and Guillermo Pereira eagerly wait for their turn to walk up the aisle at St. Ann Church. The children are Colombian natives, and had to postpone making their first Communion until they had settled in the United States.

You're Invited!
to
Room At The Inn's
Ninth Annual Banquet
"In His Image"
The Westin Charlotte
Thursday, October 23, 2003

Featured Speaker
The Honorable J.C. Watts

Registration/Reception: 5:30pm
Dinner: 7:00 pm

Reservations are free, but required.

To reserve your reservation or to host a table of ten, contact Megan Kimmel (704) 521-2774 ext.10, iroomattheinn@carolina.rr.com by October 6th.

Room At The Inn is a pro-life Catholic maternity home providing an alternative to abortion for single pregnant women.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels
www.visitingangels.com

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Author aims to help Catholics 'pummeled' by those who quote Scripture

BY CHRISTINE ALEXANDER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

TOLEDO, Ohio — If you've ever been bombarded by a well-intentioned friend throwing Bible verses at you, then you'll appreciate how Greg Oatis happened to write "Catholic Doctrine in Scripture," published by Coming Home Resources in Zanesville.

"I never intended to write a book," he said. "I just wanted to compile verses for RCIA candidates for times when they would be confronted by well-meaning, but not well-informed folks regarding the Bible — those who know diddly about the Catholic faith."

So in 1996, Oatis started to comb through Scripture for explanatory verses giving background to what Catholics believe. "As I read the Bible, the list just grew and grew," he explained in an interview with the Catholic Chronicle, newspaper of the Toledo Diocese.

He looked for "hot-button" topics and issues directed against Catholic doctrine and views: papal infallibility; the real presence of Jesus in the Eucharist; calling priests "Father"; statues in church; Mary; infant baptism; and the Trinity.

"Unless you're schooled in apologetics, most people can't confront this — they're frequently at a loss and can be thrown for a loop," he said.

Once his list was fairly complete he started to pass it on and people would request copies. Then an RCIA director requested 20 copies.

"I was up to 50 topics," the author explained, and his own search was bearing personal fruit.

"It was moving for me to spend time in Scripture and also readings of the early (church) fathers," he said. "You cannot help but be impressed by seeing how the Hebrew traditions and Catholic faith are a seamless garment. It's like an electrical net with the references of Old and New (Testaments) all connected. It really is one work — a set of books but one Word."

He said the unraveling was both "awe-inspiring and humbling." And he discovered "no faith tradition captures it in all its immensity like the Catholic faith does."

Oatis stresses that he is no theologian. "I'm just a guy who came to love the faith late in life," he said.

But his humble search gained a greater audience when he was involved in an Internet chat. "It was a Protestant-Catholic dialogue kind of thing and I was getting pummeled," he said. "A lot of Christ-loving Protestants just have so many misconceptions about the church."

Into the dialogue came a nun from the Southwest who "rode in on her white horse and rescued me," he said, joking. Oatis sent her a copy of his quotes and the next thing he knew 100 copies were requested in the Southwest.

Then the "Coming Home" show led by Marcus Grodi, a TV show host spotlighting Protestants who have come to Catholicism, wanted to publish the manuscript.

"Every step of the way this has been a Spirit-led project," Oatis said. "If the Holy Spirit had asked me directly to write a book, I would have said, 'I'm not your man.' There are many books that do a wonderful job affirming the scriptural basis for Catholic beliefs. They're deeply educational but you pass through a lot of prose to get to the meat of the verses. This one is more streamlined."

Although the average Catholic can feel overwhelmed when facing a scriptural assault, Oatis said this shouldn't be the case.

"Catholics don't realize how much Scripture they know," he said. "We absorb it through years of hearing it at Mass, but it's not arranged topically. We can't quote chapter and verse, but we know the Bible."

Is he critical of those who lob Bible verses at Catholics? "God bless evangelicals," he said. "I love evangelical Protestants. We (Catholics) probably agree with them on a lot more than they would think."

Rather than being at odds with one another, he said, "We are allies against the pagan influence in our culture. We should be shoulder to shoulder."

Editor's Note: More information on "Catholic Doctrine in Scripture," which costs $10.95 plus shipping and handling, is available on the Coming Home Resources Web site at: www.chresources.com; or by calling: (877) 455-3208; or by writing: CHResources, P.O. Box 8290, Zanesville, OH 43702.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: SEPT. 28, 2003

Sept. 28, Twenty-sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle B Readings:
1) Numbers 11:25-29
Psalm 19:8, 10, 12-14
2) James 5:1-6
3) Gospel: Mark 9:38-43, 45, 47-48

BY BEVERLY CORZINE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Last spring I made one of my life's great decisions. I retired from teaching so that I could work full time in my parish as pastoral assistant. I found the process of saying goodbye to the classroom forever a daunting experience. Outside the classroom windows the oak trees have stood as silent witnesses, marking the seasons and noting the collage of students who have worked at the art of growing up. Inside this room the pilgrims have ridden to Canterbury, Macbeth always has been fooled by the witches and seniors impatiently have looked toward graduation.

However, now was the time to sort and clean. Every dusty piece of paper and book seemed to have a memory attached. Leaving room A-104 was an intense time of reflection for me.

This classroom, designated A-104 on the school map, has welcomed students from the hot spots of the world and from all religions. I guess one might say ours has been a dialogue comprised of hundreds of voices communicating, discussing and pondering life's secrets over the years.

In the classroom we shared the common language of English, which helped to develop the common language of respect and acceptance of the dignity and worth of each student without regard to homeland or religion. We learned from each other. Conversations often started with "In my country we ...," or "We do this in my religion because ...," or "I don't understand why Americans ..." Youth whose countrymen might be trying to kill each other in other parts of the world were at home, sitting next to each other in this classroom, sharing ideas and learning to communicate.

Closing the door one last time, I was again reminded that the diverse group of young people who had been entrusted to my care taught me more than I may have taught them.

Today in Numbers and Mark's Gospel, we have stories of the unexpected. The Spirit moves beyond the tent and into the camp; likewise, the healing power of Jesus moves beyond the ranks of the Twelve and surprises John. In our own era of separation of church and state, the Spirit of God goes where it will to help facilitate understanding among people of good will.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 28 - OCTOBER 4

Sunday (Twenty-sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Numbers 11:25-29, James 5:1-6, Mark 9:38-43, 45, 47-48; Monday (Sts. Michael, Gabriel, and Raphael), Daniel 7:9-10, 13-14, James 1:47-51; Tuesday (St. Jerome), Zechariah 8:20-23, Luke 9:51-56; Wednesday (St. Therese of the Child Jesus), Nehemiah 2:1-8, Luke 9:57-62; Thursday (Guardian Angels), Nehemiah 8:1-4, 5-6, 7-12, Matthew 18:1-5, 10; Friday, Baruch 1:15-22, Luke 10:13-16; Saturday (St. Francis of Assisi), Baruch 4:5-12, 27-29, Luke 10:17-24

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 5 - OCTOBER 11

Sunday (Twenty-seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time), Genesis 2:18-24, Hebrews 2:9-11, Mark 10:2-16; Monday (Bl. Marie-Rose Durocher), Jonah 1:1—2:1, 11, Luke 10:25-37; Tuesday (Our Lady of the Rosary), Jonah 3:1-10, Luke 10:38-42; Wednesday, Jonah 4:1-11, Luke 11:1-4; Thursday (St. Denis and companions, St. John Leonardi), Malachi 3:13-20, Luke 11:5-13; Friday, Joel 1:13-15; 2:1-2, Luke 11:15-26; Saturday, Joel 4:12-21, Luke 11:27-28

K OF C ®

Please pray for the following priest who died during the month of October

Rev. Msgr. William Wellein 1997

Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus

'PASSION' IN FILMMAKING

CNS PHOTO FROM ICON PRODUCTIONS

Mel Gibson directs Jim Caviezel as Jesus in the movie 'The Passion' during filming in Italy. While the film was still being made this summer, Gibson and his production company, Icon, had given screenings of parts of the movie to select viewers.

Vatican official, archbishop praise Gibson's 'Passion'

FROM
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ROME — The head of the Vatican Congregation for Clergy said he hopes every Catholic priest will see Mel Gibson's film, "The Passion."

"One of the great achievements of this film is to have shown so effectively both the horror of sin and selfishness, and the redeeming power of love," said Cardinal Dario Castrillon Hoyos, the congregation prefect.

An interview with the cardinal about the film was published Sept. 17 by ACI Prensa, the Latin American Catholic news agency, and Sept. 18 by the Italian newspaper La Stampa.

La Stampa said Cardinal Castrillon had seen a rough cut of the film, which is scheduled for a spring 2004 release. The paper said Gibson came to Rome the first week of September and "a private viewing was organized for a few Catholic personalities," including the cardinal.

Cardinal Castrillon also is president of the Pontifical Commission "Ecclesia Dei," the office established by Pope John Paul II for the pastoral care of Catholics attached to the liturgy as it was celebrated before the Second Vatican Council. While in Rome shooting the film, Gibson arranged for a priest to come to the set to celebrate a Tridentine Mass each morning.

In the interview, Cardinal Castrillon said the film is "faithful to the meaning of the Gospels as understood by the church" and is not anti-Semitic. Some Catholic and Jewish scholars have expressed concern that the film blames Jews for the death of Jesus and could fuel anti-Semitism.

"It captures the subtleties and the horror of sin, as well as the gentle power of love and forgiveness, without making or insinuating blanket condemnations against one group," he said.

"Anti-Semitism, like all forms of racism, distorts the truth in order to put a whole race of people in a bad light," the cardinal said. "This film does nothing of the sort."

Cardinal Castrillon said the film, although at times graphic, "provokes love and compassion."

"It is my belief that if we could understand what Jesus Christ did for us and we could follow his example of love and forgiveness, there would not be hatred or violence in the world," he said.

The short clips of "The Passion" shown during the August convention of the Knights of Columbus left U.S. Archbishop John P. Foley "very impressed."

The archbishop, president of the Pontifical Council for Social Communications, was at the Washington convention Aug. 7 when Gibson made an unexpected appearance and screened 10 to 12 minutes of his film on the suffering and death of Jesus.

"What I saw was very good," Archbishop Foley told Catholic News Service Sept. 15. "I thought it just reported what the Gospel describes."

Archbishop Foley said the few scenes he saw made it clear that, as the Catholic Church teaches, "we are all responsible for the death of Jesus, and in my conversation afterward with Mr. Gibson he told me that is what he believes."

"This is his meditation on the Passion," the archbishop said.

Archbishop Foley said that the scenes he saw showed no evidence of "prejudice or a desire to inflame any anti-Semitism."

The archbishop said he did tell Gibson that if he really wanted to be accurate he should not have had the Roman officials speaking Latin, but Greek — the administrative language used in Palestine at the time of Jesus; and that the inscription placed over Jesus' head on the cross should have been written right to left in the Semitic style.

FUN AND PROPHETS

ACROSS
1 Playwright Cocteau
5 Exclamation
8 Sicilian volcano
12 Killer whale
13 Dude
14 ___ of Judah
15 Butcher a manuscript
16 Crunch target
17 Golf club
18 ___ out
20 Ancient Hebrew ascetic
22 Singer DeFranco
23 Companion to 5 Across
24 Brain lobe
28 Loony
32 Upside down mom
33 "A Hymn to ___" (My Fair Lady song)
35 Labor group
36 Whale of a prophet
39 Papal headquarters
42 Dwarf in Snow White
44 ___ Vegas
45 Passover seder prophet
48 Ancient Spanish kingdom
52 Restaurant's offerings
53 Joan of ___
55 Small amount
56 Red planet
57 Japanese drama
58 Andy's prophetic partner?
59 Entry
60 Letters after personal revelation
61 Nelson's exclamation in "The Simpson's"

DOWN
1 Musician Billy's prophetic last name
2 Earth goddess
3 Victim of Polyphemus
4 David's advisor
5 Prophet between 36 and 58 Across
6 Sphere
7 Prophet with marital woes
8 Follower of 45 Across
9 Grow weary
10 High ___
11 Wife of Henry VIII
19 Tolkien creature
21 Witnessed
24 German philosopher ___ Schelling
25 Kanga's son
26 Possess
27 Actress ___ Tyler
29 D minus CC
30 Car maker
31 Thither
34 Last prophet in Hebrew Bible
37 Adapt
38 Condo org.
40 Pitch
41 Advent prophet
43 Gregorian ___
45 Austen novel
46 Pb
47 Cross letters
49 Spanish glue
50 Star Wars city: ___ Gunga
51 Space agency
54 One of Paul's ltrs.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

GENESIS 46

'Lyon's Den' holds promise

CNS PHOTO FROM NBC

Rob Lowe stars as attorney John "Jack" Turner in the new NBC drama "The Lyon's Den." The series premieres this fall on Sundays in prime time. Catholic News Service describes the show as a show that 'holds promise.'

TV WATCH

NBC continues to push envelope

BY ANNE NAVARRO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — NBC continues to push the envelope by introducing some racy new programs which, without their vamped-up sex quotient, are clearly just derivative, stale shows that rehash familiar themes. However, one bright note is the sweet "Miss Match" starring Alicia Silverstone, whose charm helps to hide some of the program's flaws.

None of the shows can be wholly recommended as appropriate family viewing because of mature themes and the casual (and by now pervasive in practically all network shows) attitude toward premarital sex.

NBC'S NEW FALL SERIES AT A GLANCE:

— "The Lyon's Den," Sundays, 10-11 p.m. EDT.

Rob Lowe returns to Washington in this law drama in which a do-good lawyer is plucked from an inner-city law clinic to replace the managing partner of a lucrative and possibly shady law firm who died mysteriously.

Holds Promise: This mixture of soap opera-melodrama and lawyerly intrigue is strangely appealing with the love-to-hate sleazy characters pitted against an implausibly good and decent guy as a potential hook for audiences.

— "Las Vegas," Mondays, 9-10 p.m. EDT.

Drama set in Sin City which revolves around a high-stakes casino's surveillance and security team headed by James Caan.

Some Interest: It's all smoke and mirrors as fast cuts, sharp camera angles and low necklines are used to distract audiences from shallow characterizations and mediocre writing. However, Caan and newcomer Josh Duhamel have a certain zing in their master-apprentice interactions that can be appealing.

— "Whoopi," Tuesdays, 8-8:30 p.m. EDT.

Comedy starring Whoopi Goldberg as the owner of a small New York City hotel where her unemployed lawyer brother hangs out a shingle and an opinionated Iranian handyman keeps things lively.

Some Interest: Stereotypical characters and jokes that can be racially and politically charged may be insulting to some or just plain funny to others. The topical humor may get a mixed reception depending on which side of the political fence the viewer is on.

— "Happy Family," Tuesdays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

Christine Baranski and John Larroquette star as soon-to-be empty-nesters who find their three adult children may not have turned out as well as they thought. Now they end up seeing them more often than when the kids were living at home.

Holds Promise: The writing is smart, insightful and a few times even laugh-out-loud funny. Baranski and Larroquette have a convincing relationship. The supporting characters, however, need to be better fleshed out, and the mature situations do not make it family fare despite the show's name.

— "Coupling," Thursdays, 9:30-10 p.m. EDT.

Sitcom about six thirtysomething singles who are either involved, formerly involved, or looking to become involved with one another, and basically just "hang out." Sound familiar?

Don't Bother: Aside from the wall-to-wall sex talk that is supposed to pass for witty repartee, the pilot's blatant rip-off of a "Seinfeld" episode is just one example of how this "Friends" replacement-hopeful sinks to new lows in its quest to imitate the edgier cable TV shows with its coarse attitude toward sex. Based on a BBC/Hartswood Films series.

— "Miss Match," Fridays, 8-9 p.m. EDT.

Drama about a young divorce lawyer (Alicia Silverstone) who has a knack for matchmaking despite her profession.

Good Bet: The show takes a refreshingly pleasant look at finding true love, and Silverstone's charm and infectious smile help hide the program's few flaws.

Navarro is a part-time reviewer for the Office for Film & Broadcasting of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

ASSISTANT EDITOR: Excellent opportunity for Journalism graduate to work full time as Assistant Editor for weekly, statewide Catholic publication with approx. 29k household circulation. Previous related experience/internship preferred. Travel required. Knowledge of Catholic faith, Quark Xpress, Adobe Photoshop, strong writing skills and some photography experience required. For consideration mail or fax resume with salary requirements and non-returnable clips/photos to: HR, 1662 Ingram Rd., Charleston, SC 29407. (843) 402-9071

BUSINESS FOR SALE: Cabinet Shop business. Smoky Mountains, near Maggie Valley. Great buy. Owner must retire. (828) 452-3828 (day) or(828) 926-1958 (evening).

CHOIR DIRECTOR: St. Philip's Catholic Church is looking for an experienced part-time director for Saturday night and Sunday morning Masses. If you live within a reasonable driving distance of Statesville and have an interest, please call the church office at (704) 872-2579. Great part-time salary.

PRODUCTS & SERVICES

INSURANCE: Best Health, Life, LTC and Medicare supplements at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704) 845-1416.

REAL ESTATE

2.4 ACRE LOT: Gorgeous lot in private, gated community. Across the road from boat and beach facilities on High Rock Lake. Planned amenities include pool, tennis, clubhouse. $50,000. Call (919) 481-1682.

TOWNHOUSE: Charlotte A4, Sardis Forest - Beautiful. Brick. 2 Bedrooms, 1.5 Baths, 1,176 square feet. New carpet, paint, vinyl. $112,500. (704) 708-8596.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

JOHN T. WEISENBERGER

EXECUTIVE CLUB Hendrick AUTOMOTIVE GROUP 2001

Hendrick Acura
6824 E. Independence Blvd.
Charlotte, NC 28227

704-566-2317
704-566-2320 Fax
800-763-7811 Toll Free
www.hendrickacura.com

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926

McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.

Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

Put away your apron tonight.

Give your order to the chef.

For the retirement lifestyle of choice, independence and flexibility, call today for pre-construction pricing. Reserve now — move later.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN
AT MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community

1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444

Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Aspects of Appalachia

UPCOMING CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA

BY
JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

LAKE JUNALUSKA — "Appalachia makes us think of people who live in the hills, who love nature's freedom and beauty, who are alive with song and poetry. But many of these people are also poor and suffer oppression" ("This Land is Home to Me — A Pastoral Message on Poverty and Powerlessness in Appalachia").

In fact, while some may think of Appalachia as poor, rural and somewhere in the Southern mountains, Appalachia comprises areas of 13 states, from New York to Mississippi. Twenty-nine of the Diocese of Charlotte's 46 counties and 33 percent of its Catholics are in Appalachia.

Retirees are moving to western North Carolina to take advantage of the beautiful scenery and temperate climate. Immigrants from Latin America and other areas of the world also come seeking opportunities they didn't have at home. Others, residents who've lived a long time in Appalachia, are stuck in poverty and joblessness, and like the new immigrants, often are without power.

The Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia, scheduled for Oct. 10-12 at Lake Junaluska Conference and Retreat Center, offers an opportunity to learn more about this diverse region of North Carolina.

Sponsored by the diocesan Office of Justice and Peace of Catholic Social Services, the conference will explore Appalachian socio-economic issues and look at Catholic-sponsored grassroots community development efforts. Sessions will also assess the current and future importance of 1975 and 1995 pastoral messages from the Catholic bishops of Appalachia, the aforementioned "This Land is Home to Me" and "At Home in the Web of Life — A Pastoral Message on Sustainable Communities in Appalachia," respectively.

The conference is named in honor of Bishop Michael J. Begley, the first bishop of Charlotte.

"When Bishop Begley had been our bishop for just one year, he took on the role (in 1973) of president of the Catholic Committee of Appalachia," said Joseph Purello, Office of Justice and Peace director. "It was under his leadership that 'This Land is Home to Me' was written."

"He was the one who wrote to all the other bishops in Appalachia to encourage their being part of this letter to address issues of powerlessness and poverty in Appalachia," said Purello. "So, in a way, our diocese had a special role in that letter. We thought it was time to revisit those issues."

Bishop Walter F. Sullivan, bishop of Richmond, Va., will give the opening address, "Raising a New Consciousness of What it Means to be Church — The U.S. Bishops are Called to Respond to Powerlessness and Oppression in Appalachia." The conference brochure notes that "Bishop Sullivan will discuss the years preceding the publication of ... 'This Land is Home to Me,' highlighting Bishop Michael J. Begley's work during he pastoral letter's formative years ...."

Attendees can choose from 12 workshops, interspersed with the talks throughout the weekend. The final plenary session of the conference will feature the work of three diocesan outreach offices in Appalachia, including the Office of Economic Opportunity of the Diocese of Charlotte in Murphy.

Evening programs will focus on Appalachia's cultural richness. Looking first at the region's earliest inhabitants, Freeman Owle, Cherokee storyteller and member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, will recount Native American stories and legends on Friday evening. Barbara Freeman will offer traditional Appalachian storytelling, along with music from the group Smoky Mountain Melodies, on Saturday evening.

Sunday morning, Hispanics, the region's newest residents, will be remembered in the liturgy. Msgr. Mauricio W. West, diocesan administrator, will celebrate "The Mass of the Immigrants." Bishop Sullivan will preach the homily.

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

WANT TO GO?

The Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia will take place at Lake Junaluska Conference and Retreat Center Oct. 10-12. The $60 registration fee does not include meals or lodging. Call the Office of Justice and Peace at (704) 370-3225, (704) 370-3231 or e-mail justicepeace@charlottediocese.org for registration information.

Both pastoral letters on Appalachia can be purchased for $7.50 from the Catholic Committee of Appalachia (CCA). To order the letters, contact CCA director Franciscan Sister Robbie Pentecost at (606) 297-8792.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE — CALL NOW!

You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!*

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Letters to the Editor

Darwin book review in question

I am continually amazed at how little discernment goes into various items that appear in The Catholic News & Herald; this is especially true of many of your book reviews, including John Haught's "Deeper Than Darwin" ("Turning Darwin's theory into a theology of evolution," Sept. 12).

As Haught is a "Catholic theologian" from Georgetown, one's suspicions are immediately engaged with respect to this author. This no-longer-Catholic university just finished pillorying Cardinal Francis Arinze during his commencement address because he defended the family and Catholic Church teaching. The university also gave us Monika Hellwig, another "Catholic theologian" who proposed Jesus was the result of a Roman soldier's rape of his mother.

So, I was curious how this particular book would be reviewed; would it be along positive or negative lines in respect to the faith? The author clearly subscribes to Darwinian theory with its underpinning corollary, Natural Selection. There is not a shred of evidence that supports macroevolution unequivocally. There are a number of recent studies that do not support the Darwinian thesis at all, or at least cast credible doubt.

The bottom line here is such information, especially from so-called Catholic theologians, only serve to further confuse an already woefully under-catechized Catholic population.

Dr. George Knauer
Sylva

Editor's response: The Catholic News & Herald does not endorse any of the books reviewed by Catholic News Service and featured in our Culture Watch section. The Catholic News Service reviews offer analyses of books from a Catholic perspective, and often inform readers whether or not the books are in line with Catholic teaching.

The full title of the book in question is "Deeper Than Darwin: The Prospect for Religion in the Age of Evolution." As that title may be misleading, our intent was to inform readers of the book's content and its author's intent so informed decisions could be made on whether or not to read the book.

Similarly, we often choose to print movie reviews that the U.S. bishops' Office of Film and Broadcasting have declared "morally offensive" (such as the review of "The Order," which also appeared in the Sept. 12 issue). Our intent is again to inform our readers to the content of the movies so informed decisions can be made before deciding to see the movie.

Guest column gets almost everything right

Dr. Cris Villapando gets almost everything right in his guest column ("Adult faith formation: Antidote to five myths in the Catholic Church," Sept. 12). However, his Myth No. 2 about "going to war is a matter of national security" is highly flawed.

Discussions that the just war theory was inadequate were commonplace in the news media. Even past administrations admit that Saddam Hussein had chemical, biological and planned nuclear weapons. It has been documented that Hussein tortured using electricity, routinely cut out people's tongues, forced men to watch as their wives were raped and children tortured, plunged men to die in plastic shredders, violently suppressed the 1991 Kurdish uprising (30,000 civilian deaths) and routinely executed thousands of political opponents.

It's always wise to plan a peaceful avenue to stopping this evil. The pope advocated peace as the best possibility. But even the pope understands some injustices have to be stopped, even with something as bad as war. Without any better answers, a just war can end such evils as slavery, fascism, Nazism and Communism. Has the pope ever met evils as bad as Hussein? Meeting these evils is the only way to defeat them.

The pope is infallible when it comes to doctrine and morality. As great as he is, he's only human. We hope that he deals with his next encounter with evil as efficiently.

Kevin Roeten
Asheville

Dr. Cris Villapando's response: The pope, the world community and I agree with him that Hussein was horrendously barbaric. However, Mr. Roeten misses the following points:

The just war theory is not an official doctrinal prescription to pre-empt evil. I and the 100 ethicists who condemned the war in Iraq believe the pope is not fallible on this doctrine. Check the catechism.

There are more than 1,000 ways of waging peace. Has Mr. Roeten tried any of them? We shamed the early Christian martyrs who for 300 years confronted evil with evangelical love. These martyrs were not dumb, stupid or naïve.

Column proves more work ahead

In response to Dr. Cris Villapando's guest column ("Adult faith formation: Antidote to five myths in the Catholic Church," Sept. 12), I would hope to see greater rigor in defining such an important concept as faith.

Dr. Villapondo's premise that "faith is the ongoing search for meaning" describes philosophy rather than faith, which is a gift from God, "the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen." (Heb 11:1) It is precisely faith that "gives light to man's search for the meaning of his life." (CCC #26)

The statistics cited by Dr. Villapondo regarding Mass attendance and those concerning belief in the Eucharist prove we are not successfully conveying to our children the essential truths of the faith, so it is irrefutable that in recent years Christian education has been deficient, as he states.

That Catholic adults still "search for meaning" implies we have yet to properly introduce them to Him who is Truth. Dr. Villapondo's quote from the U.S. bishop's pastoral letter, "Our Hearts Were Burning Within Us," stating adult faith formation as the central task of catechesis omits the paragraph's final sentence which prescribes its focus: "This can be done specifically through developing in adults a better understanding of and participation in the full sacramental life of the Church."

This brings us to his third point on which we also agree: the adaptation of the liturgy is hopefully ongoing. The liturgy as it stands today cannot support the great mystery of God's true presence on the altar of sacrifice.

The vocabulary of any program of faith formation — child or adult — must include sacraments, grace and Jesus Christ, and must proceed from a proper articulation of what faith is.

Linda Knauer
Greens Creek

Dr. Cris Villapando responds: Faith is the ongoing search for meaning in the sense of "Fides Quaerens Intellectum" (St. Anselm).

For the rest of your life

BY GINA RHODES
DIRECTOR OF PLANNED GIVING

For the rest of your life, the Diocese of Charlotte will send you a check every quarter, or annually if you wish. The amount will be the same every time. While the economy may rise or recede, your check will remain the same. You can count on it because we back our commitment to you with the full assets of the Diocese of Charlotte.

The total amount you receive every year is determined in advance and depends on several things, including your age and the amount you give to establish the arrangement. For example, if you're 75 years old, you'll receive more than someone younger who gives the same amount.

Furthermore, for the rest of your life and your spouse's life, you will enjoy the satisfaction that your arrangement with the Diocese of Charlotte will someday provide your parish with much needed financial resources. By letting us help you with lifetime support, you enable us to serve future generations.

The IRS favors these arrangements and provides the donor with a charitable income tax deduction. It's one way the government encourages the private sector to support the charitable community.

The arrangement we are talking about here is the charitable gift annuity. Year in and year out, it is the most popular life income-planned giving vehicle available.

Would you like to learn more about charitable gift annuities and how they can benefit you and your parish? To review a tailor-made illustration for your consideration, please call me at (704) 370.3320 or e-mail me at gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org.

I hope to hear from you soon, so that I can begin sending you an annuity check on a regular schedule — for the rest of your life!

(Please complete and return this form.)

☐ Please send me (us) a free illustration to show the benefits of having a gift annuity with the Diocese.
Age(s) _____ / _____ Amount $ _____

☐ Please contact me (us) about a personal visit. The best time to call me (us) is: _____.

☐ I (we) do not have a current will. Please send your free "How To Make a Will That Works" brochure.

Please send information about the Catholic Heritage Society.

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____

State: _____ Zip: _____ Phone: _____

Mail this form to: Gina Rhodes, Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte, N.C. 28203

'Rose stories' received from readers

Our Turn

THERESE J. BORCHARD
CNS ColumnistGuest

Last October, I wrote a column about my devotion to St. Therese and shared with readers a "rose story" about receiving a shower of roses after praying to God through the intercession of St. Therese.

I asked readers for their rose stories and was amazed to find my mailbox flooded with intimate and faith-filled testimonies to the power of praying to the "Little Flower," the simple Carmelite nun who has been called the "greatest saint of modern times" by our popes.

After reading more than 200 accounts of healings and miracles, I felt empowered and inspired in my devotion to the French saint, and compelled to gather even more stories for a collection I hope to publish in the near future.

Since it is time again to celebrate the feast of my patron saint, I wanted to share with readers another rose story:

The wedding invitations had been sent. The reception hall was booked. My bridal gown hung in my mother's closet waiting to be worn for the special occasion most girls dream about their entire lives.

But I couldn't quiet the anxiety that lurked in my heart: Was marriage my calling? I was about to commit myself to a life that was entirely different from the vocation I always had envisioned for myself as a missionary or member of a religious order.

Moreover, was the man with whom I was about to exchange vows really the right one for me?

Three weeks before wearing white, I became crippled by doubt and confusion. I finally called my mother in tears and asked her to pray to St. Therese. I needed a sign, something to confirm that this was the right move for me.

I confided in a priest friend of mine who, in his wisdom, helped me to separate my anxiety from the important questions. We talked every day. He counseled me. He prayed for me.

On the fifth day of the novena to St. Therese that my mother was making, she left a message on my voice mail to call her back immediately. I could hear the excitement in her voice and hoped for directions out of my inner chaos.

"Do you know the rose bush that you bought me a few years ago for Mother's Day?" she asked me.

"The one that you wanted to get rid of this spring because it hadn't bloomed more than two roses a season?" I queried.

"Yes, that one," she said. "I walked outside this morning and was shocked to see about 200 buds on it. I can't believe it. You got your sign."

I couldn't say anything for what felt like hours. I needed guidance, as the decision to cancel or continue with the wedding was too big for me to make. But I never expected such a tangible sign or gesture of love.

My mother picked all of the roses after they bloomed completely. She dried the petals and collected them in more than 100 pouches of dried rose petals that the guests threw at the bride and groom upon leaving the church.

More than seven years later I know that marrying Eric was one of the best decisions I ever have made.

So, again, I invite you to share your rose story with me. Write to me c/o Catholic News Service, 3211 Fourth Street NE, Washington, D.C., 20017.

Catholic jurors and the death penalty

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS Columnist

Q. Is it true that a Catholic juror who votes for a death sentence commits a sin? In our diocese recently, a man convicted of murder received a life sentence. A defense attorney had told the jury (two members were Catholic) that the Catholic Church does not allow its members to vote for capital punishment. (Louisiana)

A. There is no question that today the strong teaching of the Catholic Church is that the death penalty is unjust and immoral, at least in nearly all cases. Nine years ago the American bishops taught that "violence is not the solution; it is the most clear sign of our failures.... We cannot teach that killing is wrong by killing" ("Confronting the Culture of Violence," 1994).

The following year Pope John Paul II noted the growing opposition to the death penalty, and said that cases where executing the offender is necessary are "very rare, if not practically nonexistent" ("The Gospel of Life," 56).

These kinds of statements have been repeated numerous times by church leaders here and throughout the world, though the death penalty already was abolished years ago in Europe, Canada and most other developed countries.

I give this brief background because it is an important part of the answer to your question: If I understand correctly, you are asking whether voting for the death penalty is automatically and objectively a sin. The answer is no. The church's teaching is clear, but it does not decree that kind of penalty. It is not, however, just that simple and easy.

The opposition to capital punishment is based on many factors, including the large numbers of people sentenced to death but later proved innocent; racial inequalities (nonwhite murderers are given the death sentence at a much higher rate than whites, and killers of white people are executed far more often than killers of black people); and social inequalities (poor defendants receive a death sentence much more often than the more affluent).

There are also staggering regional inequalities. Approximately 80 percent of the executions in the United States during the last 27 years took place in nine Southern states, nearly a third of them in Texas. There is also of course the larger question of whether, and how, we human beings ever have the right to directly kill one another.

In such drastic situations, serious and conscientious individuals must act out of their own sincere and well-formed consciences, considering the above factors to determine what is just.

For Catholics, of course, the teachings of the church and the reasons for those teachings should have some considerable significance.

Miriam and Aaron

Q. One of my parishioners asked a question I can't answer. The book of Numbers tells how one day Miriam and Aaron, brother and sister of Moses, protested that they also should be recognized as prophets, like Moses. God wasn't pleased with this and afflicted Miriam with a form of leprosy, from which, however, he soon healed her.

Why wasn't Aaron afflicted also? They both were jealous of Moses and not happy with God. Was God just picking on women? (Iowa)

A. This sounds like a good Bible trivia question. Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses, complaining that God had spoken through them as well as through Moses, but they weren't getting any credit (Numbers 12:2).

Maybe Miriam's grumbling had some merit. She had in fact been called a prophetess previously (Exodus 15:20). But the Hebrew verb "spoke" in verse one is feminine, perhaps indicating that Aaron was just tagging along for the complaint. At any rate, it ended happily, and Moses as usual came out on God's side, or vice versa.

A free brochure in English or Spanish, answering questions Catholics ask about baptism practices and sponsors is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Father John Dietzen, Box 325, Peoria, IL 61651.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

God helps us overcome trials of life

The Pope Speaks

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Below is the Vatican text of Pope John Paul II's remarks in English prepared for his weekly general audience Sept. 24 and read by a Vatican official. The pope, suffering from an intestinal disturbance, did not return to the Vatican Sept. 24 for his weekly general audience.

However, with an audio hookup from his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo, the pope offered visitors and pilgrims in the Vatican's audience hall his blessing.

Dear brothers and sisters,

Today's psalm praises the greatness of God and the dignity of man. The Letter to the Hebrews invites us to read certain expressions of the psalm in relation to Christ. By becoming man, Jesus was "for a little while made lower than the angels" (Heb 2:9). Now we see him "crowned with glory and honor." St. Ambrose applies the message of the psalm to our lives: God helps us to overcome the trials of this life, and will lift us up, in Christ, to glory.

I offer a warm welcome to all the English-speaking pilgrims and visitors present at today's audience, especially those from England, Scotland, Ireland, Denmark, India, Indonesia, Australia, Canada, the Philippines and the United States of America. Upon all of you I cordially invoke joy and peace in Our Lord Jesus Christ.

Pope says 'mysteries of light' show splendor of God through Jesus

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (CNS) — The new "mysteries of light" Pope John Paul II proposed for meditation when praying the rosary are events that show the splendor of God's nature shining through Jesus, the pope said.

"Jesus, with the power of his word and his works, completely reveals the 'face' of the heavenly Father, inaugurating his reign of love, justice and peace," the pope said Sept. 21 during his midday Angelus address.

In his October 2002 letter on the rosary, the pope encouraged people to meditate on "the mysteries of light": Christ's baptism in the Jordan; his self-manifestation at the wedding of Cana; his proclamation of the kingdom of God; his transfiguration; and his institution of the Eucharist.

Holy Cross Church is testimony to growing congregation

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

The new Holy Cross Church in Kernersville, dedicated by Bishop William G. Curlin Sept. 13, 2003, is almost 14,000 square feet and seats approximately 800 people.

Holy Cross Church
616 S. Cherry Street
Kernersville, N.C. 27284
(336) 996-5109

Pastor: Oblate Father Joseph Tustin
Number of families: 600

KERNERSVILLE — Although Holy Cross Church's history only dates back to the late 1960s, the parish has enjoyed tremendous growth over that time. With humble beginnings as a mission of St. Benedict the Moor Church in Winston-Salem, Holy Cross's existence is testimony to a desire to expand the Catholic Church in the Triad area through an established parish with a growing congregation active in church and community life.

Father William Pharr, at that time pastor of St. Benedict the Moor, approached then-Bishop Vincent Waters of the Diocese of Raleigh with a request to establish a mission church in Kernersville. Local residents, including 41 children, signed a request for the church, and the bishop agreed, thereby establishing the mission in August 1969.

The first Mass was celebrated Sept. 7, 1969. The building, a former antiques shop with residence, was furnished with pews, an organ and other items collected from other churches in the diocese.

The mission status continued until 1973, when Oblate Father Leon Bolich became resident pastor. The mission was elevated to a parish and in September was named Holy Cross Church.

The growing parish began plans for a new church facility in 1974, when land was bought on Southern Street. The Diocese of Charlotte received building plans for the church in January 1978, and the parish held its groundbreaking ceremony in April of that year. On Oct. 29, 1978 then-Bishop Michael J. Begley dedicated the new building, a multipurpose structure complete with a 325-seat sanctuary, classrooms and other facilities.

By 1980, registered families numbered 140, and the parish continued to grow by dozens each year. The need for more space again led to construction, and in October 1982, Bishop Begley blessed the newly expanded church area, which was reconstructed to accommodate 500 churchgoers.

More than 1,300 people joined the Holy Cross family over the next decade, and the parish became involved with a number of ministries and programs, including faith formation, Catholic Youth Organization, Cub Scouts, Boys Scouts, day care, Knights of Columbus, Columbiettes and Squires.

Hispanic ministry was established in the early 1980s and is presently staffed by one pastoral care assistant and 35 volunteers. Approximately 600 Hispanic families attend the weekly Mass in Spanish.

Continued parish growth dictated the need for more space, and so began the 14-month construction process of an almost 14,000-square-foot facility. On Sept. 13, 2003, Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus, dedicated a new Holy Cross Church with seating for approximately 800 people, the largest facility that could be built on the existing property. The Mass was celebrated in English and Spanish, with sign language for the hearing impaired.

The parish is celebrating the church's 30th anniversary with a picnic Sept. 28.

Situated between Winston-Salem and Greensboro, the Kernersville area is currently home to about 20,000 people, and that number is expected to grow in the next few years. An influx of Catholics is expected, and nearby Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School will help draw parents to the church who want their children to receive Catholic education.

As such, Holy Cross Church stands as a reminder of the extension of the Catholic Church in the Triad area and in western North Carolina.

Sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Elder Ministries

Share your day and lunch with friends!

Fall Day of Reflection for Seniors

TWO DATES & LOCATIONS TO CHOOSE FROM! 9:30-3:30

Thursday, Oct. 9 — St. Mark, Huntersville
Deadline: Sept. 30th

Thursday, Oct. 16 — Catholic Conference Center, Hickory
Deadline: Oct. 2nd

For more information, call Sandra Breakfield (704) 370-3220

To register, send form and $10.00 fee (includes lunch) to:
Sandra Breakfield, Catholic Social Services
1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203

Name _____ Phone _____

Address _____

City _____ Parish _____

I will attend: ☐ St. Mark, Oct. 9 OR ☐ Catholic Conference Center, Oct. 16

 SEE REGISTRATION DEADLINES ABOVE ***

$10.00 fee per person — Make checks payable to Catholic Social Services
Group registration forms and directions to the Conference Center are available at church offices and with Club leaders.

Would YOU, YOUR FAMILY or YOUR BUSINESS like to send

Congratulations to Bishop Peter Jugis

on his installation as Bishop?

The Catholic News & Herald will publish a special Commemorative Edition highlighting this special occasion. If you would like to include a message in this edition, please call Cindi about rates (from $115 to $918). We will be happy to fax/mail you an EASY ORDER FORM.

704-370-3332
The Catholic News & Herald

FC 282
C 31 35

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

OCTOBER 3, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 2

Parish Profile:

St. John Lee Korean Church

| PAGE 16

PILOT CLASSROOM BRINGS DOWN SYNDROME STUDENTS INTO CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

Spelling success

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Multicolored foam letters are spread out on the carpet of the classroom floor. 13-year-old Matthew Isley carefully constructed his spelling words — sick, pick, tick, pack, look and make.

"Which ones rhyme?" asked Kitty Cypert, a special-education teacher with five years' experience.

Nearby, 13-year-old Jenna Clayton and 17-year-old Morgan Grier worked diligently in their workbooks, circling matching words and filling in the blanks to form words that end is "-ess."

Soon, three third-graders arrived to read with Matthew, Jenna and Morgan.

See SUCCESS, page 7

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Morgan Grier reads to Matt Mankowski in the Matthew-Morgan Pilot Classroom at St. Patrick School. Morgan is one of three students with Down syndrome enrolled in a pilot program funded by The Foundation for Children with Down Syndrome. With capacity for three additional students, the foundation is hoping to expand the program in the near future.

RAINing awards

AIDS organization honors local

BY STEPHEN UZZELL
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLOTTE — Many area Catholic churches and their volunteers received special recognition by the Regional AIDS Interfaith Network (RAIN) Sept. 23.

The interfaith organization, which provides compassionate care for individuals and families affected by HIV/AIDS, honored parishes and volunteers at the Annual Covenant Renewal Service and Celebration at First United Methodist Church on North Tryon Street.

Members of Our Lady of

See RAIN, page 8

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Catholics rallying for pro-life issues

Respect Life Sunday kit materials available to dioceses

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

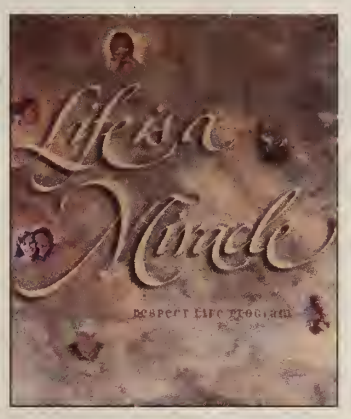
CHARLOTTE — Across the Diocese of Charlotte and the United States, Catholics are gearing up to fight for life.

The U.S. Catholic Church observes October as Respect Life Month, with Respect Life Sunday — this year themed "Life is a Miracle" — falling on Oct. 5.

The 31st anniversary Respect Life kit materials are available to dioceses and parishes from the U.S. bishops' Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities. The Secretariat, under the guidance and direction of the Committee for Pro-Life Activities, works to teach respect for all human life from conception to natural death, and organize for its protection.

"The materials are designed not only to educate Catholics about current and emerging threats to human life and dignity, but also to awaken in them a desire to

See RESPECT LIFE, page 13



The cover to "Life is a Miracle," a Respect Life package available from the U.S. bishops' Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities.

Cardinal's secretary downplays German news report on pope's health

MONSIGNOR CALLS REPORT 'COMPLETE EXAGGERATION'

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — German Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger has asked Catholics to pray for Pope John Paul II, not out of any new sense of alarm but because the pontiff continues to struggle with infirmity, the cardinal's personal secretary said.

See HEALTH, page 8

#BXNPDVQ*3-DIGIT 275
#4208364 S236 P2
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

...e who sing, pray twice'
...ke music ministry tunes
...r encore performance
| PAGE 4

A 'special moment' in history
Korean-American Catholics celebrate faith and heritage
| PAGE 6

Ordination update
Questions and answers
| PAGE 9

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

LETTING EVERY ACTION BE SOMETHING FOR GOD

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Missionaries of Charity Sister Theresina feeds a seriously ill man at the Nirmal Hriday Home for Dying Destitutes in Calcutta, India, Sept. 24. Mother Teresa and her sisters opened the facility in 1952 after the well-publicized case of a young man dying alone in a gutter on the street. "Let every action of mine be something beautiful for God," the words of Mother Teresa, hang in a frame on the wall of the facility.

Missionaries of Charity prepare relics before beatification

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

CALCUTTA, India — The Missionaries of Charity motherhouse in Calcutta became a beehive of activity as the scheduled Oct. 19 beatification of their founder drew near, reported UCA News, an Asian church news agency based in Thailand.

Some of the nuns classified relics of Mother Teresa of Calcutta into three categories, following the tradition of the church, said the founder's successor, Sister Nirmala Joshi.

First-class relics come from the body of a person declared blessed or a saint. Sister Nirmala explained that though Mother Teresa's body was not exhumed, the sisters have some of her hair and blood.

"These had to be sealed, authenticated with a certificate and the postulator's seal, and treated with reverence," she said.

Second-class relics are articles used by a beatified or canonized person, and third-class relics are items touched by first-class relics.

Sister Nirmala said second-class relics in the sisters' possession include Mother Teresa's clothes, sheets, bed and things she used in their various houses when she visited them.

Some of these relics have already been sent to Rome, Sister Nirmala said.

The nuns made small relics of Mother Teresa's clothing, placed in plastic-covered prayer cards and authenticated with the postulator's seal.

Third-class relics, to be made for public distribution, will generally be made from cloth that has touched Mother Teresa's tomb. Pieces of the cloth will be fixed on prayer cards and authenticated.

Catholics praised for opposition to U.S. military training center

WASHINGTON (CNS) — A federal legislator praised Catholic priests and nuns Sept. 23 for raising public awareness of evidence that Latin American military graduates of a U.S. training center have been involved in human rights violations.

Rep. James McGovern, D-Mass., said continued pressure by religious organizations and individuals is needed to get congressional action to shut down the program.

McGovern is the sponsor of a House bill to temporarily close the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation at Fort Benning, Ga., while a congressional review is done of the program. The institute is the successor of the School of the Americas, which was closed about three years ago.

The institute is "a stain on the honor of the U.S. community," said McGovern at a news conference in Washington.

McGovern and other critics of the institute said its graduates have been involved in killing and torturing people in Latin America, including Latin American and U.S. church people.

Despite the name change, "it's still the same old school," he said.

Thirty-seven faith-based organizations, including many Catholic groups and religious orders, visited their congressional representatives to ask them to support McGovern's bill. The lobbying day was organized by School of the Americas Watch, which sponsors yearly protests at Fort Benning involving civil disobedience.

Lee Rials, public information officer for the Western Hemisphere institute, denied the institute or the school has taught graduates to violate human rights.

"We teach respect for the rule of law, human rights and the rights of their citizens," Rials told CNS.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

HICKORY — A Peace and Tolerance Workshop will be held Oct. 25 at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. in the St. Francis Room 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Everyone is invited for a day of prayer, discussion and reflection. Special focus will be given to our sacred calling at Christians to be peacemakers. This is a meaningful way to promote peace in the family, classroom and workplace. To register, call Sandy Donecho at (828) 697-7420.

ASHEVILLE — The St. Martin De Porres Pro-Chapter of the Dominican Laity meets the third Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in St. Justin's Center at the Basilica of St. Lawrence, 97 Haywood St. Inquirers are welcome. For more information, contact Beverly Reid, OPL, at (828) 253-6676.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — Crisis Assistance Ministry is in need of volunteers. Please contact St. Gabriel parishioner Ed Powers at edpowers@mindspring.com to volunteer.

CHARLOTTE — The bereavement support group meets every first Monday 6-7:30 p.m. in the Family Room at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. This support group is for anyone who has experienced the loss of a loved one. For details, call Ruth Posey, CSS counselor, at (704) 370-3238.

CHARLOTTE — English as a Second Language classes are being held Monday and Wednesday evenings 6:30-8 p.m. at St. Ann School, 600 Hillside Ave. For more information, call the church office at (704) 523-4641.

CHARLOTTE — The loss of a parent as an adult is the single most common form of bereavement in this country. Whether you had a good, bad or indifferent relationship with the parent who died, your feelings for him or her were probably quite strong. Join others who have lost a parent or those ministering to the bereaved at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., Oct. 15 7-9 p.m. in the Ministry Center. Presented by Hospice of Charlotte.

CHARLOTTE — The cancer support group for survivors, family and friends meets every first Tuesday at 7 p.m. at St. Matthew Church. For more information, call Marilyn Borrelli at (704) 542-2283.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information, call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

CHARLOTTE — The St. Maximilian Kolbe Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order gathers the first Sunday of each month at 2 p.m. at Our Lady of Consolation Church, 2301 Statesville Ave. Those interested in learning more about the SFO and the Franciscan way of life are invited to attend. For more information, call Skyler Harvey, SFO, at (704) 545-9133.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

OCTOBER 3, 2003
VOLUME 13• NUMBER 2

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Blackout doesn't stop pope's announcement of new cardinals

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — A massive nine-hour blackout across Italy shut down electrical power in Vatican City, but it did not stop Pope John Paul II from announcing 30 new cardinals to a crowded St. Peter's Square.

Using a reserve generator, Vatican officials were able to operate the sound system from the pope's apartment window Sept. 28. The power outage that began early on a Sunday morning caught everyone by surprise. The Vatican Museums kept their doors locked, turning thousands of tourists away.

Among the new cardinals is Philadelphia Archbishop Justin F. Rigali. The new cardinals represent 18 countries from all six continents. Seven are Vatican officials, 19 are heads of archdioceses around the world and four are priests over 80 years old being honored for their service to the church.

The pope also preserved the name of one new cardinal "in pectore," or in his heart. In the past, such cardinals have served in places where public knowledge of their appointment might provoke hostility against the church.

The appointments will bring the total number in the College of Cardinals to 194, a record high number of cardinals from 69 countries. After the last consistory of 2001, there were 184 cardinals.

The pope will induct the cardinals in a consistory at the Vatican Oct. 21, adding a major event to an already heavy program of celebrations for the 25th anniversary of the pope's election.

Vatican, interfaith officials condemn violence in name of religion

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — In a statement issued at the end of a two-day meeting in Kazakstan, Vatican officials joined representatives of other faiths in condemning terrorism and violence in the name of religion.

The declaration also warned that chronic poverty, ecological degradation and declining respect for human life were threats to world peace.

Participants agreed to hold the meeting every three years. The interreligious initiative, praised by Pope John Paul II, will be called the "Congress of Leaders of World and Traditional Religions."

The meeting brought together Christians, Muslims, Jews, Buddhists, Hindus, Shintoists and followers of 11 other religious faiths.

The final statement highlighted the right of every person to freely practice religion and said dialogue and tolerance were essential building blocks to global harmony.

The statement condemned "the misrepresentation of religions and the incorrect use of differences among religions as a means for achieving selfish, violent and disruptive goals."

Religions must make every effort to press this point, it said, in order to "save mankind from a global conflict of religions and cultures."

"Extremism, terrorism and other forms of violence in the name of religion have nothing to do with genuine understanding of religion, but are a threat to human life and hence should be rejected," it said.

Other threats, it said, include the "declining sense of respect for the sanctity of human life and the dignity of every human person"; challenges posed by poverty, illiteracy, disease and immorality; and the ecological crisis, with its grave consequences for future generations.

the first and third Monday of every month 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

CHARLOTTE — The ordination Mass of Bishop Peter Jugis will be celebrated Oct. 24 at 12 p.m. at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — The music ministry of Our Lady of Grace Church will celebrate 50 years of sacred music with a hymn festival Oct. 9 at 7 p.m. in the church, 2205 W. Market St. A Mass in recognition of the 50th anniversary of the parish will be celebrated Oct. 12 at 11:30 a.m.

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

LENOIR — The Hickory Vicariate will offer two evangelization retreats for Hispanic adults at St. Francis of Assisi Church, 1025 College Ave. SW. The women's retreat will be Oct. 17-19 and the men's retreat will be Oct. 24-26. To register, please contact Sister Joan Pearson at (828) 758-4207.

MORGANTON — Free Pastoral Care Training workshops will be held Oct. 7 and 14 at St. Charles Borromeo Church, 714 W. Union St. 7-9 p.m. This program will train parish volunteers to provide pastoral care to the elderly. Register to Sandra Breakfield, Elder Ministry, at (704) 370-3220.

HICKORY — A charismatic Mass is celebrated the first Thursday of each month in Sebastian Chapel of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, at 7 p.m. For further information, contact Joan Moran (828)-327-0487.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

SALISBURY — Sacred Heart Church, 128 N. Fulton St., celebrates a charismatic and healing Mass the first Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. Prayer and worship with prayer teams will be available at 3 p.m., and a potluck dinner will follow the Mass. Father John Putnam, pastor, will be the celebrant. For further information, call Bill Owens at (704) 639-9837.

MOORESVILLE — A support group for parents who have lost a child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

FRANKLIN — The Women's Guild of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 299 Maple St., meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center. The meetings feature guest speakers and special events periodically. For more information, call Claire Barnable at (828) 369-1565.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

CLEMMONS — The OLM Little Rock Scripture Study for Women offers a bible study Monday evenings 7:30-9 p.m. in the library of Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd. Classes meet until Nov. 24. For more information, call Anne Gannon at (336) 727-4591.

WINSTON-SALEM — This fall's Theology on Tap will meet Wednesday evenings Oct. 22- Nov. 12 at Mi Pueblo Restaurant, 644 Stratford Rd. Social hour begins at 7 p.m. and a featured speaker will begin at 8 p.m. For details e-mail ws_tontap@yahoo.com.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Calling for reform

CNS PHOTO BY JIM WEST

Participants in a cross-nation ride for changes in U.S. immigration policy demonstrate in Detroit Sept. 27. The Immigrant Workers Freedom Ride was making stops across the country calling for reforms in the U.S. immigration system.

THIS MONTH IN —1996

CATHOLIC STUDENTS HELP FIGHT FRAN

As the ill effects of Hurricane Fran were still being felt in the Diocese of Raleigh, Catholic school students in the Diocese of Charlotte came together to collect close to 4,000 non-perishable food and household items. The effort, reported in the Oct. 4, 1996 issue of The Catholic News & Herald, was part of a Harris Teeter and Metrolina Food Bank food drive that began the month prior.

DID YOU KNOW?

CARDINAL NUMBERS

According to the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops Web site, there are currently 13 U.S. cardinals. Six cardinals currently head U.S. dioceses; one cardinal is currently an apostolic administrator; three cardinals are not diocesan bishops; and three cardinals are retired.

'Those who sing, pray twice'

St. Luke music ministry tunes up for encore performance

BY STEPHEN UZZELL
CORRESPONDENT

I was on the outside
No power and no name
A woman and a pagan —
So they say....

MINT HILL — So begins an aria in the musical "Song of Mark" by Marty Haugen.

"Song of Mark," based on the Gospel of Mark, will be performed by the St. Luke Church music ministry next week. The musical pulls and arranges a number of the Gospel stories into a dramatic and powerful presentation. Several of the musical's numbers speak from the marginal drawn from the fringes of society by Jesus to share in his kingdom.

The upcoming presentation will be an encore performance led by parish music director Marti Dushak. The musical, first presented in February and March of this year, was performed to more than 250 viewers on its closing night. Demand from parishioners and friends called for a repeat performance; after seven months, Dushak and the music ministry have worked to bring back the musical to the parish.

Dushak has been a shepherding hand in the music ministry with St. Luke Church since 1998.

"I am a pastoral musician, which is what I like to be called now," she said. "To me, it is more encompassing because you are pastoring to people through music."

Dushak said the parish is abundant with talented people in three adult groups, two children's groups and a teen group. She sees herself as an umbrella figure who serves and supports these groups, which she describes as a ministry.

"Some churches call it a music program. But if I'm going to call myself a pastoral musician, then it's really a ministry, like hospitality is a ministry," said Dushak.

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Pastoral musician Marti Dushak (left) and youth choir leader Theresa Lloyd lead in the song and action of a musical production at St. Luke Church in Mint Hill.

"One of my goals was to try to bring them (the music groups) together to form a community three or four times a year," she said. "As I went to the NPM (National Pastoral Ministries) conventions and heard the musicals and got to meet Marty Haugen and some of the other famous composers in Catholic worship, I got really inspired because I knew we had the ability here."

"Song of Mark" is composer Haugen's fourth musical to be performed at St. Luke. According to the author, St. Luke is the only church in the country to have produced all four — "Tales of Wonder," "Agape," "The Feast of Life" and "Song of Mark." The ministry has also presented "We Shall Prepare" by Mark Friedman and Janet Vogt and "Like Winter Waiting" by John Foley.

"What astounded me from the very first one was that everyone needed to complete the cast and the band was here," said Dushak. "Once in a while, I might have to get a timpani player or an unusual instrument, but never a singer."

"Marti (Dushak) has done a lot for organizing the music. And St. Luke (parish) has done a lot toward bringing 'praise and glory' style to the worship service," said parishioner Bob Smith, who plays John the Baptist in the musical.

"Early on, we were given freedom to express with different sounds to make music an integral part of the celebration," he said.

"Music is such a powerful tool," said April Ryder, who plays the woman in the crowd (Mark 5:25-34) in the musical.

Ryder described "Song of Mark" as a "healing peace."

"Practicing is one thing. But that night (of the performance) was incredible because the Spirit just took over," she said.

"For me, in studying the Gospel of Mark, it was the women who understood the message of what Jesus was trying to do," said Theresa Lloyd, who sings as the Syro-Phoenician woman (Mark 7:25-30) in the musical. Lloyd also organizes the youth choir for ages 7-12.

As practice sessions are scheduled, excitement among the music ministry and parish builds toward opening night once again. There is a confidence and a feeling of familiarity coming back into the songs and the music.

Shelly Earnhardt, who organizes the youth choir for ages 4-6, appreciates the support of the pastor, Father James Hawker, and others.

"One of the best things is that Father Jim has been very supportive of the music ministry here and realizes that it is a vital part of the community," she said.

"St. Augustine reminds us that 'those who sing, pray twice,'" said Father Hawker, pastor. "We, as members of the St. Luke faith ministry, have been and are blessed beyond measure by the magnificent music ministry within the parish."

WANT TO GO?

"Song of Mark" will be presented at St. Luke Church in Mint Hill at 7 p.m. Oct. 11-12. For more information, call (704) 545-1224.

Peace, Tranquility
A Place Apart...

You've heard about our attributes, but have you experienced them?

Call the Catholic Conference Center today and get in on what you're missing!

Toll free 888-536-7441
(Hickory residents: 828-327-7441)

The Catholic Conference Center

Check out our website
www.catholicconference.org
info@catholicconference.org

Sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Elder Ministries
Share your day and lunch with friends!
Fall Day of Reflection for Seniors
TWO DATES & LOCATIONS TO CHOOSE FROM! 9:30-3:30

Thursday, Oct. 9 — St. Mark, Huntersville
Deadline: Oct. 6th

Thursday, Oct. 16 — Catholic Conference Center, Hickory
Deadline: Oct. 8th

For more information, call Sandra Breakfield (704) 370-3220

To register, send form and $10.00 fee (includes lunch) to:
Sandra Breakfield, Catholic Social Services
1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203

Name _____ Phone _____
Address _____
City _____ Parish _____
I will attend: ☐ St. Mark, Oct. 9 OR ☐ Catholic Conference Center, Oct. 16

 SEE REGISTRATION DEADLINES ABOVE ***
$10.00 fee per person — Make checks payable to Catholic Social Services
Group registration forms and directions to the Conference Center are available at church offices and with Club leaders.

A day of Mercy

Courtesy Photo by Kris Reich

From left, Mercy Associate Eleanor Taddie; Franciscan Sister Jane Russell; and Maryknoll Sisters Eleanor, Therese, Peg and Mary Lou join Mercy Sisters Mary Eugenia Hartman and Mary Agnes Solari in prayer during Mercy Day celebration Sept. 24.

Sisters of Mercy, others reflect on past, present, future

BELMONT — The Sisters of Mercy of the Americas, Regional Community of North Carolina, gathered with more than 100 of their friends to celebrate Mercy Day Sept. 24.

Oblate Father Joseph Zuschmidt, pastor of Queen of the Apostles Church, presided at the afternoon eucharistic liturgy at which Sisters of Mercy, Mercy Associates, Mercy friends and co-ministers, gathered to celebrate their past, enjoy their present and dream about their future.

Mercy Day commemorates the day in 1827 that Catherine McAuley, foundress of the Sisters of Mercy, first opened her doors to the public on Baggot Street in Dublin, Ireland. By coincidence or act of providence, Sept. 24 is also the feast of Our Lady of Mercy, who would lend both her identity and spirit to the building and its works, when it was named the House of Mercy.

Prior to founding her religious order, Catherine's lifelong dream came true when she used her inheritance to build a home where women and children in dire need would be provided with housing, education, religious and social services, enabling them to find a far brighter future than was generally available to the Irish, particularly Irish women, of the time.

Catherine's innovative approach to housing and educating young women and children from the slums was considered shocking, especially since it brought the poor, the sick and the uneducated into an affluent neighborhood. Within three years, over 200 girls were enrolled in the school at House of Mercy and volunteers, inspired by Catherine's spirit and compassion, were numerous.

In 1831, upon founding the Sisters of Mercy, the House of Mercy also became the first convent of the Sisters of Mercy. As Catherine's passion for the poor took root in the hearts of her companions, the charism of Mercy spread rapidly across Ireland and England. By 1839, a mere eight years after being founded, the Sisters of Mercy numbered over 100 women religious and in the 10 years between the founding of the order and her death, Catherine had founded nine Convents of Mercy.

In an 1841 letter to Sister Elizabeth Moore, Catherine described the spirit which characterized the congregation and its members: "All are good and happy. The blessing of unity still dwells amongst us and oh what a blessing, it should make all else pass into nothing. All laugh and play together, not one cold, stiff soul appears. From the day they enter, reserve of any ungracious kind leaves them. This is the spirit of the Order, indeed the true spirit of Mercy flowing on us ..."

Today, the special charism and spirit of Venerable Catherine McAuley remains alive and well within the Sisters of Mercy and Mercy Associates. She continues to draw women to minister to the poor, the sick, the uneducated and the underserved. Almost 5,000 Sisters of Mercy of the Americas currently serve in 11 countries and one territory, while other Mercy foundations and institutes can be found in Aotearoa/New Zealand, the Philippines, Australia, Great Britain, Ireland and Newfoundland.

In 1994, the original House of Mercy was restored and opened to the public as Mercy International Centre, an important historical link for Sisters of Mercy and Mercy Associates from all over the globe. Although Catherine died Nov. 11, 1841, at her Baggot Street convent, her spirit of hospitality and her legacy continue today embodied within each Sister of Mercy. Mercy International Center allows all to reflect on Catherine's passion for helping the poor, which continues to inspire women as they carry forth the contemporary ministry of Mercy worldwide.

Courtesy Photo by Kris Reich

Oblate Father Joe Zuschmidt at the altar following his reception of a lei and a mwar-mwar during the presentation of the gifts on Mercy Day Sept. 24.

Sisters of Mercy announce grants to area organizations

CHARLOTTE — Sisters of Mercy of North Carolina Foundation announced grant awards totaling $390,204 to 15 non-profit organizations located in several North Carolina counties.

The grant funds will be used for a wide variety of purposes by the organizations. Supported programs include affordable housing, children's services, education, food distribution, health care, immigration assistance, services to the elderly, social services and transportation.

The organizations include:

Assistance League of Charlotte, Charlotte; Buncombe County Council on Aging, Asheville; Children & Family Resource Center, Hendersonville; Communities in Schools of High Point, High Point; Davidson Medical Ministries Clinic, Lexington; Family Services, Winston-Salem; Hinton Rural Life Center, Hayesville; Hispanic Liaison of Chatham County, Siler City; Regional AIDS Interfaith Network, Charlotte; Second Harvest Food Bank, Charlotte.

Since 1996, the Foundation has awarded 394 grants totaling more than $17,700,000 to organizations serving underserved populations. For more information on the Foundation, call (704) 366-0087 or visit www.somncfdn.org.

We beat the banks!

IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

CHILDREN'S CONSIGNMENT SALE

Quality infant and children's clothing, furniture and accessories — plus, maternity clothes!

Saturday, October 11th 8 am - 2 pm
(1/2 price sale noon - 2 pm)

St. Gabriel Church Christian Mothers' Group
Ministry Center, 3016 Providence Road, Charlotte (corner of Sharon Amity)

Day celebrates faith and heritage of Korean-American Catholics

St. John Lee Korean parishioners join festivities in Washington

BY MARK ZIMMERMAN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON (CNS) — A faith planted in Korea by lay people two centuries ago bloomed in a special way Sept. 21, as more than 4,500 Korean-American Catholics crowded into the nation's largest Catholic church for a day in their honor.

The nation's Catholic bishops had declared Sept. 21 as Korean-American Catholic Day, and lay people from nearly every state — including North Carolina — and Canada, along with priests and women religious, gathered at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington for the Mass.

A dozen parishioners from St. John Lee Korean Catholic Church in Charlotte were among the congregation greeted in Korean by Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick of Washington. He said the day was "a special moment in the history of the church in this country. I am so overwhelmed by the numbers of people here. I thank the Lord for your presence, and I thank the Lord for your faith."

At the Mass, Korean-American Catholics filled the pews, stood along the walls and side chapels, and knelt in the aisles. Many of the women wore traditional silk dresses in bright colors, including turquoise, purple, yellow and pink.

Francis Ahn of St. John Lee Korean Church said the crowd at the shrine was an incredible sight. "I've never seen so many Koreans in America in one place," he told the Catholic Standard, newspaper of the Washington Archdiocese.

Along with the singing of Korean hymns and the proclamation of the Gospel, Our Father and creed in Korean, the Mass also featured a display near the foot of the altar of a relic of St. Andrew Kim, Korea's first native priest who was martyred in 1846. Families knelt before the relic in prayer after the Mass.

In his homily, Cardinal McCarrick noted that the "the church of Korea was founded by lay people" in the late 1700s and grew through the witness of faith of 10,000 martyrs killed during a series of four persecutions in that next century.

CNS PHOTO BY MARTIN LUEDERS

Korean Catholics pack the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington for a special Mass Sept. 21. The service marked the 100th anniversary of Korean immigration to the United States and the heritage of Korean Catholics.

He called on Korean-American Catholics likewise to promote lay leaders as apostles and missionaries in today's world, to offer their lives for their faith, and to encourage vocations among young people, whom he called "the hope for tomorrow."

When Pope John Paul II canonized 103 Korean saints in 1984 in Seoul, South Korea, he said, "The death of these martyrs became the leaven of the church and led to today's splendid flowering of the church in Korea."

According to the Catholic Almanac, South Korea has more than 4 million Catholics, about 8.5 percent of the country's population and the third highest percentage of Catholics in Asia, after East Timor and the Philippines.

The Sept. 21 Mass also marked the 100th anniversary of Korean immigration to the United States. An estimated 1 million people of Korean descent, including about 70,000 Catholics, now live in this country.

Mark Lee, one of the shrine pilgrims and a member of St. Bartholomew Parish in Bethesda, Md., said the Korean Catholic community feels honored to be "the descendants of martyrs. Our ancestors paved the way with their blood. We're seeing the benefit of that. We feel obligated to do something about that. We'll start with our families first, to make sure we hand down our heritage, our faith, the gift we have received."

Agnes Kim of St. Paul Chung Parish in Fairfax, Va., wore a gray and green traditional dress with woven golden-colored butterflies as pendants. "Thanks (be) to God," she said, smiling. "I'm here to pray and sing."

Lee said the cardinal's message to encourage vocations among youths was one that many Korean-American Catholics have taken to heart. He said he recently took his two daughters and his son to witness three women profess vows as Little Sisters of the Holy Family, a Korean religious community serving in Maryland.

His brother, Father Paul Lee, serves as the president of the National Korean Pastoral Center and as pastor of Our Lady of Victory Parish in Washington. The priest joined Coadjutor Bishop Thomas G. Wenski of Orlando, Fla., in reading the U.S. bishops' proclamation of Korean-American Catholic Day. Bishop Wenski, a concelebrant at the Mass, serves as chairman of the bishops' Committee on Migration.

The proclamation also praised the Korean Catholic community for its work in fostering vocations.

Concelebrants at the Mass included Archbishop Andreas Choi Chang-mou of Kwangju, South Korea, the president of that nation's Catholic bishops' conference, and Bishop Peter Kang U-il of Cheju, South Korea, chairman of the Korean bishops' committee on migrants and refugees.

That afternoon, the site of a planned Korean Madonna mosaic in the shrine was blessed. The night before, the community's celebration included a gala at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington.

In conjunction with the day in their community's honor, Father Lee noted that Korean-American Catholics have begun a drive to pray 10 million decades of the rosary "to pray and work hard for renewal and healing of the U.S. Catholic Church, for evangelization of ourselves and our neighborhoods, and to pray for vocations to the priesthood and religious life."

Contributing to this story was Paul Storer in Darien, and editor Kevin E. Murray.

St. Michael School
Tiger Run 5k
& 1 Mile Cub Trot
FOR MORE INFORMATION OR TO REGISTER ONLINE:
ActiveZach.com
Saturday, October 11th - 8:00 A.M.
St. Michael School - Gastonia, NC
704-829-7778
Part of FunFair, the annual day-long family carnival.

ST. MICHAEL'S SCHOOL FUN FAIR
SATURDAY, OCT. 11
8:00 am — 3:00 pm
"A Faith-filled Future"
Come and participate in
Games - Rides - Prizes -
Bingo - Bake Sale - Silent Auction -
Raffle - ...and MUCH MORE!
Activities for the whole family and all ages!!
FOR INFORMATION CALL (704)865-4382

THE ORATORY
434 Charlotte Avenue, P. O. Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586
(803) 327-2097
A Day with the Gospel of Luke
Thursday, Nov. 20 or Saturday, Nov. 22
9 am - 4 pm
Father David Valtierra, C.O.
Our fall Scripture day is annually dedicated to the Gospel of the new liturgical cycle: Luke (C Cycle). An overview and an outline of the Gospel, reading of representative passages, prayer and Eucharist are included.
Cost: $30 (includes lunch)

Pilot program takes off

SUCCESS, from page 1

"Did he spell that?" Matt Mankowski asked Cypert, pointing to the words laid out on the carpet.

"Yes," she answered.

"Cool," he responded.

It's clear to the third-graders that Jenna, Morgan and Matthew do not look like the other students at St. Patrick School, but they are treated with the same kindness and respect as the other students.

Matthew, Jenna and Morgan each have Down syndrome, a congenital condition characterized by moderate to severe mental retardation, slanting eyes, a broad short skull and broad hands with short fingers.

They are the first students in the Matthew-Morgan Pilot Classroom at St. Patrick School. Now in its second year of existence, students are taught basic academic curriculum as well as life skills based on their levels of ability. Students join the St. Patrick students in the lunchroom, on the playground, at Mass and in some of the special classes.

Cypert said the main goals of the program are to make the students employable and educate more students. There is a focus on learning time and money management skills.

The pilot classroom (three now with capacity for six) was previously operated out of Village Park Traditional School, but the students' parents wanted their children to be able to experience a Christian environment in which the children could pray, learn and grow.

After discussion with the Mecklenburg Area Catholic School Board, the board recommended that accommodations be made for the group in an empty room at one of the schools.

Angela Montague, principal of St. Patrick School, came forward and said she would be willing to let them use space in the trailers at the school. She felt it would be a wonderful learning experience for the St. Patrick students.

"These children have enriched our lives," Montague said. "The fourth-graders are upset because they don't have any classes with Jenna, Morgan and Matthew."

Heleen Hogan, a parishioner at St. Matthew Church, was influential in instituting the pilot program. Currently serving as Cypert's assistant, Hogan has 17 years of experience working with children, the last 10 of which have been spent with special-needs children.

"The parents and I wanted a Catholic-based education," Hogan explained, "one with a Christian emphasis, including prayer in a loving atmosphere."

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Kitty Cypert congratulates Matthew Isley on completing his spelling lesson in the Matthew-Morgan Pilot Classroom. As the original students in the Pilot Classroom, the program is named for Matthew and Morgan Grier.

Both Hogan and Cypert praised the students and faculty of St. Patrick School for their inclusion of Jenna, Matthew and Morgan.

"When we go into the lunchroom, students always ask Jenna, Morgan and Matthew to sit with them," Cypert said. "They are so accepting and welcoming."

The St. Patrick students and the pilot program students have a unique opportunity to share their individual gifts, said Hogan. That is a key to the success of the pilot program.

The parents are thrilled with the response to the pilot classroom.

"It's the answer to a prayer," said Alice Grier, Morgan's mother. Her husband, Riley, is the treasurer for The Foundation for the Education of Children with Down Syndrome, which helps to cover the costs of operating the pilot classroom, along with tuition.

"The reception from the school has been so warm and welcoming," Grier said. "The children feel like a part of the school family."

Principal Montague stated, "Catholic education should be for all children, incorporating all types of students into mainstream society. They are a part of our community, and we would be lost without them."

For more information on The Foundation for the Education of Children with Down Syndrome, please call (704) 554-8216.

You're Invited!
to
Room At The Inn's
Ninth Annual Banquet
"In His Image"
The Westin Charlotte
Thursday, October 23, 2003

Featured Speaker
The Honorable J.C. Watts

Registration/Reception: 5:30pm
Dinner: 7:00 pm
Reservations are free, but required.
To reserve your reservation or to host a table of ten, contact Megan Kimmel (704) 521-2774 ext.10, iroomattheinn@carolina.rr.com by October 6th.
Room At The Inn is a pro-life Catholic maternity home providing an alternative to abortion for single pregnant women.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!
We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!
Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.
Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.
704-549-4010
Visiting Angels
www.visitingangels.com

AIDS organization honors parishes

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Volunteers and clergy united to form a great candle-light circle around the perimeter of the sanctuary during last year's covenant renewal service for RAIN at First United Methodist Church in Charlotte. The ceremony was repeated at this year's event Sept. 22.

RAIN, from page 1

Consolation Church's choir and organist Eric Massey led the special service titled "In Celebration and Recognition of Your Leadership."

September marked 11 years of care and service in the Charlotte region, including prevention education. Approximately 250 people attended the annual renewal service that showcased highlights of the past year and honored churches that have sponsored care team ministry for at least five years.

"Last year, we (RAIN) received the 'Leadership for a Changing World Award' from the Ford Foundation and Advocacy Institute," said the Rev. Debbie Kidd, program director. "And as a result, we decided to award our volunteers also, since they are involved in changing the world as well."

As leadership by volunteers on parish care teams is an integral part of RAIN, the organization awarded 40 Celebration of Leadership plaques at the service.

"Volunteers have a tremendous impact not only on the lives of care partners but on the way HIV/AIDS is viewed by the community as well. Many have dared to break silence about AIDS or HIV in the workplace, in church and in community. They live out the ancient teaching of compassion that we find in the scriptures, and we want to honor them," shared the Rev. Deborah C. Warren, president and chief executive officer.

Eight area Catholic churches were recognized for more than five years of service. For seven years of service: St. Gabriel Church and St. Thomas Aquinas Church. For eight years of service: Our Lady of Consolation Church, St. Ann Church and St. John Neumann Church. For nine years of service: St. Luke Church and St. Matthew Church. For 10 years of service: St. Peter Church.

In addition to care teams being honored, the annual Agnes Barry Volunteer Service Award — named for RAIN's first board of director's chairperson — was given to Scott Vitez, a parishioner of St. Peter Church.

Barry, a parishioner of St. Patrick Cathedral, was a major contributor in guidance and service who helped RAIN gain a strong foundation. Like Barry, Vitez, who has worked with his parish care team since 1996, serves on the board of directors and has been instrumental in fundraising efforts for RAIN.

"It is such an honor to be recognized, given the contributions of the past award winners," he said. "It is an honor to be in their company since they made RAIN what it is today."

Vitez attributes his commitment to having known others who had been involved and having also known many friends and co-workers who died. He also lauds the late Jesuit Father Gene McCreesh of St. Peter Church for guiding him to the care team's mission.

"Father McCreesh steered me in that direction (to be a RAIN volunteer) when he asked me, 'What are you doing in the community?'" recalled Vitez. "He was one of the first Catholic pastors in Charlotte to get involved with RAIN and to make that a key ministry at St. Peter. It is in line with the parish's mission to reach out to the poor and the marginalized."

The renewal service was completed by a community prayer of recommissioning, followed by participants linking into a great perimeter circle with lighted candles. Our Lady of Consolation Choir led the congregation in singing, "Rain down your love on your people, rain down your love, God of life." Msgr. Mauricio W. West, diocesan administrator, led the Benediction.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information about RAIN, call (704) 372-7246 or go online at www.carolinarain.org.

Report on pope

HEALTH, from page 1

The secretary, Msgr. Georg Ganswein, downplayed a report by the German magazine Bunte, which quoted Cardinal Ratzinger as saying in an interview: "(The pope) is in a bad way," and "We should pray for the pope."

Cardinal Ratzinger, head of the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, did not give an interview to Bunte, Msgr. Ganswein told Catholic News Service Sept. 30.

What happened, he said, was that Cardinal Ratzinger met Sept. 22 with representatives of two German beer companies and was explaining to them why the pope could not grant them a private audience. Apparently journalists in the group picked up some of the cardinal's comments.

"The cardinal said, certainly, we all have to pray for the pope. The pope himself asked us to do this. But that is something that can be said at any time," Msgr. Ganswein said.

As for the pope's health, Msgr. Ganswein said, Cardinal Ratzinger was "more or less expressing what anyone can see with their eyes and hear with their ears, that the pope is not well and speaks only with difficulty."

"All this was not said in any manner that could give a sense of alarm. Not at all," the cardinal's secretary said.

"To present this as a piece of news is a complete exaggeration," Msgr. Ganswein said.

The pope was forced to skip his final Wednesday general audience in September because of an intestinal ailment, but spoke to those attending via an audio connection. He was back at work the next day with a full slate of appointments.

The 83-year-old pontiff, who suffers from a neurological disorder believed to be Parkinson's disease, has appeared increasingly weak and frail in recent weeks. During a September trip to Slovakia, he was unable to stand, walk or pronounce his speeches in their entirety.

Carolina Volkswagen

7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte

(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection

Lowest Prices

Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction! C'mon in and see why!

Leave a Legacy Through an Endowment

When you establish an endowment with the diocesan foundation, you...

Enable Perpetual Support. Every year, your "legacy" flows with financial aid to the ministry you choose.

Ensure a Strong Future. Allow a parish, school, agency or the diocese to look ahead and plan with confidence.

Enact a Lasting Legacy. Provide your loved ones with a continuing reminder of your values – your faith and the mission of the church.

The Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

For more information contact Gina Rhodes, Director of Planned Giving, 704-370-3320, or Jim Kelley, Director of Development, 704-370-3301, 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203. gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org

Choirs being formed for ordination Mass

CHARLOTTE — A diocesan choir is being formed for the Oct. 24 ordination and installation Mass of Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis at St. Matthew Church.

"We welcome the singers of the diocese to joint together to celebrate this wonderful occasion," said Dr. Larry Stratemeyer, director of music at St. Patrick Cathedral.

A diocesan children's choir is also being formed for third-graders and older. Music is available from Stratemeyer for both choirs.

Rehearsals are on Sunday, Oct. 12, from 4-5:30 p.m. at Our Lady of the Assumption Church, 4207 Shamrock Drive, and on Sunday, Oct. 19, from 4-5:30 p.m. at St. Patrick Cathedral, 1621 Dilworth Road East.

A rehearsal will be scheduled at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Parkway, on Tuesday or Wednesday, Oct. 21 or 22, at 7:30 p.m.

Contact Stratemeyer at (704) 334-2283, ext. 22, to sign up. Please identify your voice part: soprano, alto, tenor or bass.

Parochial patriotism

COURTESY PHOTO

Students of St. Leo the Great School hold hand-painted flags representing their classes during a school ceremony commemorating the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

The Diocese of Charlotte
CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES
1123 South Church St.
Charlotte, NC 28203
www.cssnc.org

Executive Director:
Elizabeth Thurbee (704) 370-3227
Refugee Office:
Cira Ponce (704) 370-6930
Justice & Peace:
Joe Purello (704) 370-3225
Special Ministries:
Gerard A. Carter (704) 370-3250

Charlotte Region: 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203
Area Director: Geri King (704) 370-6155
Western Region: 50 Orange Street, Asheville, NC 28801
Area Director: Sister Marie Frechette (828) 255-0146
Piedmont-Triad: 621 W. Second Street, Winston-Salem, NC 27108
Area Director: David Harold (336) 727-0705
Greensboro Satellite Office: (336) 274-5577
High Point Hispanic Center: (336) 884-5858

For information on specific programs, please call your local office.

D®
like no other uniform
since 1920 · school uniforms · logo wear
19725 Oak Street, #4 · Cornelius, NC 28031
phone 704.895.7474 · 888.895.0071
Ann Hoffman · Branch Manager
Order online www.dennisuniform.com
National Customer Service 800.854.6951
DENNIS
formerly Uniforms Direct 2U

ORDINATION UPDATE

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis listens to suggestions for his October ordination and installation Mass at a planning committee meeting Aug. 29.

Committee finalizing details of Bishop Jugis ordination ceremonies

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — The countdown has already begun.

The ordination and installation Mass of Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis is now only three weeks away, and the planning committee is working diligently to hammer out all the details.

"Our committee of 10 has worked collaboratively in planning, and I'm glad to say that the bishop himself has been actively engaged with us every step of the way," said Father Frank O'Rourke, pastor of Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro and coordinator of the ordination festivities.

Bishop-designate Jugis has worked with the committee on a variety of details, from music at the ordination Mass to his prayer card, which will be handed out at his ordination Mass.

"We continue in all the decisions to attempt to be as inclusive and welcoming to all who wish to join us for this special day in the history of the diocese," said Father O'Rourke.

Two representatives from each parish, mission, institution and organization in the diocese will join in the procession that includes bishops, priests, deacons, religious, seminarians and others.

Father O'Rourke has prepared a series of answers to commonly asked questions about the ordination ceremonies:

Who can come? Who is invited?

People across the Diocese of Charlotte are welcome to attend the ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church on Friday, Oct. 24.

What time will it begin, and how long will it last?

The Mass will begin at 12 p.m. and will last about two hours.

What kind of seating is available?

St. Matthew Church can seat more than 2,000 people. There will be 1,300 non-reserved open seats in the church. An additional 600 seats will be available in the parish hall with closed circuit television. The reserved seating is for Bishop-designate Jugis' family and personal friends, bishops, priests, deacons, religious, choir, parish and institutional representatives.

Who is in the procession?

Two representatives from each parish, mission, institution and organization in the diocese will join in the procession that includes bishops, priests, deacons, religious, seminarians and others. Those participating in the procession should arrive at the church by 11:15 a.m. so they can be directed to a special area in the parish pastoral center.

Is there a reception afterward?

Light refreshments will be served at the church following the Mass.

Will parking be available?

St. Matthew Church has parking for over 900 cars and there is overflow available in the shopping center across the street from the church.

DIRECTIONS TO ST. MATTHEW CHURCH (FROM THE NEAREST INTERSTATE)

I-77 to I-485 East to Rea Road exit. Turn right and go about two blocks. Take right onto Ballantyne Commons Parkway. Church will be on the left.

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Book good for pastors, catechists, not for others

REVIEWED BY FATHER JAMES MASSA
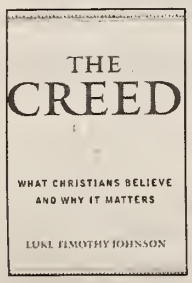
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

"The Creed: What Christians Believe and Why It Matters" belongs on the shelf of every pastor and catechist — but not, unfortunately, in the hands of their students preparing for baptism. This new book by Luke Timothy Johnson, one of America's foremost scholars of early Christianity, is marred by occasional lapses into partisan rancor against certain official Catholic teachings.



"The Creed: What Christians Believe and Why It Matters," by Luke Timothy Johnson. Doubleday (New York, 2003). 336 pp., $23.95.

Johnson structured the book according to the articles of the two great Western creeds, the Apostles' Creed and the Nicene-Constantinopolitan Creed. He discusses the prayers' historical genesis in the ancient liturgies and their relevance to contemporary Christian living.

The creed is one of the great unity-building prayers of the Christian people. It is the hinge uniting the two parts of the Mass — Liturgy of the Word and Liturgy of the Eucharist. It begins every rosary, forms the structure of most catechisms, and is professed today by over a billion and half Christians. No wonder every Catholic child learns it by rote, after memorizing the Our Father and the Hail Mary.

So why not a presentation of the Christian faith based on a historical and theological investigation of this prayer?

Few Catholic scholars around today would seem to be as up to the job as Johnson. A former Benedictine monk, he is Emory University professor of New Testament and author of 20 books on Scripture. He is known for defending the claims about Christ's resurrection and divinity against the radical skepticism of the Jesus Seminar.

Yet in this most recent book Johnson's credentials as a defender of orthodoxy seem less certain, at least from a Catholic perspective. Written as a parish-based adult education course, "The Creed" appears to be addressed to a broader ecumenical readership, perhaps one that reflects the student body of the divinity school where the author teaches.

What has authority for Johnson is the biblical story faithfully interpreted by the first two ecumenical councils — Nicea I (325) and Constantinople I (381). On the one hand, the biblically shaped view of reality that Johnson proposes has the advantage of tolerating a wide diversity of opinion on matters that have traditionally divided Christians (Christ's presence in the Eucharist, the papacy, the role of Mary, etc.). On the other hand, it has the disadvantage of giving less weight to the authentic Catholic tradition that has faithfully transmitted and applied the biblical message to countless generations of believers.

Catholic religious educators face special challenges today. The community of Christian scholars using historical and linguistic methods of analysis has opened up new worlds of meaning in sacred texts and doctrines. However, some of these scholars fail to test their own historical theories and theological positions against the inherited Catholic wisdom of the ages.

In this admirable book Johnson's learning sheds light on the ancient prayer still professed by Christians of varying traditions. But Catholic readers should approach with caution the spin that Johnson has given to some of the creed's core tenets.

Father Massa teaches at the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception in Huntington, N.Y.

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530
Assuring Absolute Integrity
Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535
Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: OCT. 5, 2003

Oct. 5, Twenty-seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle B Readings:
1) Genesis 2:18-24
Psalm 128:1-6
2) Hebrews 2:9-11
3) Gospel: Mark 10:2-16

BY BOZENA CLOUTIER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Shirley was a young Australian girl making the grand tour of Europe when I first met her many years ago. Her funds had run dry, so she had taken a job, and we found ourselves in the same office. She was a very sociable, fun-loving person and quickly made friends.

Inside the same building worked Mike, and his visits became increasingly frequent to our office. It was soon apparent that his interest lay in Shirley, and a romance between them blossomed.

Mike was very different from Shirley. He was tall and large, while she was petite. He was very quiet, shy and ill-at-ease in social gatherings; Shirley was the very opposite. He was deliberate and solid, she was spontaneous and quick.

A few weeks ago they called unexpectedly in response to some news I'd given them. During our conversation Mike told me that Shirley had had a recurrence of cancer. This time it was in her spine. She would never walk again.

I have had much time to think about them, and as I went through the readings for this Sunday it was Shirley and Mike who came to mind.

There are almost as many different styles of marriage as there are married couples, but occasionally one stands out as an example of complementarity. As different as Shirley and Mike are in physique and personality, they not only complement each other, but in some way their union is greater than the sum of their two individual personalities.

That I think is the ideal of which the first reading from Genesis speaks, and it is echoed and even quoted in the Gospel as Jesus teaches about marriage and the standard to which God calls men and women as they unite in a sacramental bond.

As weak and fallible human beings, we so often fall short of this ideal. Shirley and Mike have had their share of life's difficulties and marital struggles, yet what they have always reflected to the world and continue to do in this latest crisis is that seamless, complementary union of "one flesh" that this week's Scriptures present to us.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 5 - OCTOBER 11

Sunday (Twenty-seventh Sunday in Ordinary Time), Genesis 2:18-24, Hebrews 2:9-11, Mark 10:2-16; Monday (Bl. Marie-Rose Durocher), Jonah 1:1—2:1, 11, Luke 10:25-37; Tuesday (Our Lady of the Rosary), Jonah 3:1-10, Luke 10:38-42; Wednesday, Jonah 4:1-11, Luke 11:1-4; Thursday (St. Denis and companions, St. John Leonardi), Malachi 3:13-20, Luke 11:5-13; Friday, Joel 1:13-15; 2:1-2, Luke 11:15-26; Saturday, Joel 4:12-21, Luke 11:27-28

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 12 - OCTOBER 18

Sunday (Twenty-eighth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Wisdom 7:7-11, Hebrews 4:12-13, Mark 10:17-30; Monday, Romans 1:1-7, Luke 11:29-32; Tuesday (St. Callistus I), Romans 1:16-25, Luke 11:37-41; Wednesday (St. Teresa of Avila), Romans 2:1-11, Luke 11:42-46; Thursday (St. Hedwig, St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, St. Marguerite d'Youville), Romans 3:21-30, Luke 11:47-54; Friday (St. Ignatius of Antioch), Romans 4:1-8, Luke 12:1-7; Saturday (St. Luke), 2 Timothy 4:10-17, Luke 10:1-9

HELP!
The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!
If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.
Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

APOSTLES

ACROSS
1 One of Zebedee's sons
6 Rocky apostle
11 Biblical River
12 MC ___
14 Tampa univ.
15 Anthropologist
17 North American Indian
18 One of 13 original col.
19 Music embellishment
20 Spielberg movie
21 Rental bldgs.
24 Upon (prefix)
25 French painters Laon, Louis, and Antoine
27 ___ of Turin
29 Spanish rice dish
31 Newark airport (abbr)
32 'This was the unkindest ___ of all"
33 Nine day devotion
36 Twisted
39 Arab prince
40 Extreme degree
42 Nabisco cookie
43 Existential verb
44 "It is a tale told by an ___"
46 Title for 3 Down.
47 East Indian shrub
49 Shakespearean work
50 Jewel
51 ___ clef
53 Armpit
55 Slanted
56 Name of 6 Across

DOWN
1 Biblical dreamer
2 Sandy's cry
3 Sawbones
4 Cain settled ___ of Eden
5 Trapped
6 One of the Twelve
7 British nobleman
8 Popular 60's spiritual exercise
9 Australian bird
10 Sell
11 Betrayer
13 Spanish queen
16 Great Expectations protagonist
22 Roman fountain
23 Field hand
25 Type of surgery
26 Church part
28 Coffee pot
30 German exclamation
33 Jeroboam's father
34 Golfer Mark ___
35 Brother of 56 Across
36 His name means "twin"
37 Skiing technique
38 ___ Rae
41 ___ Maria (liqueur)
44 Eric ___
45 Andy Kaufman TV show
48 ___ Miserables
50 Day ___
52 McD's competitor
54 "___ Always Chasing Rainbows"

FUN AND PROPHETS

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!*

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic News & Herald

THE LAST SUPPER, WORD FOR WORD

CNS PHOTO FROM DEMOSS GROUP

'Gospel of John' makes for repetitive, yet rewarding film

BY DAVID DiCERTO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK (CNS) — "The Gospel of John" (ThinkFilm) is a reverently filmed, word-for-word version of the life, ministry and death of Jesus Christ, as recounted by the fourth evangelist.

Beautifully shot on a modest budget and with a running time of three hours, the film, directed by Philip Saville, eschews biblical pageantry in order to paint an intimate portrait of Christ true to its source material. Far from the stolid good shepherd of "King of Kings" (1961) and "The Greatest Story Ever Told" (1965) — which tended to shy away from, if not completely ignore, Christ's humanity — Saville's Jesus (played by Henry Ian Cusick) is a flesh-and-blood manly savior.

Cusick admirably brings an appealing blend of warmth and virility to the role of Jesus. His is no milquetoast messiah, but a true lion of Judah, a firebrand rabble-rouser only too eager to ruffle the status-quo feathers of the Temple authorities in order to complete his appointed mission.

While much of his public ministry as told by John is paralleled in the other three canonical versions, many scriptural touchstones found in the synoptic gospels of Mathew, Mark and Luke — including the Nativity, the Sermon on the Mount, the parables and the institution of the Eucharist — are not recorded by the fourth evangelist. Yet in their absence, John's Gospel contains some of the most spiritually pregnant passages in the New Testament, among them the protracted Last Supper discourses leading up to Christ's passion. The wordy narrative is held together by the soulful reading of the text by Christopher Plummer.

Despite its literary eloquence, St. John's text was written as Scripture, not as a screenplay. And while adhering to it word-for-word affords viewers an opportunity to experience the Gospel message undiluted, many of the passages that make up the film's dialogue contain superfluous redundancies. This narrative repetition (a style of prose common throughout the Bible), though highly effective for contemplative reading of Scripture, at times weighs down the pacing of the film.

When dealing with dramatizations of Christ's passion and death, Catholics and others should keep in mind the words of the Second Vatican Council's "Nostra Aetate" that, while Jewish authorities and their followers "pressed for the death of Christ," at the same time "his passion cannot be charged against all the Jews, without distinction, then alive, nor against the Jews of today."

Saville's handling of this may get mixed reviews from people of both faiths. The film opens with onscreen text affirming the Jewishness of Jesus and his disciples and explaining that John's Gospel was written during a period of factional tension between the early Christian communities and the Jewish establishment.

In an effort to avoid broad brushstrokes when assigning blame for Jesus' death, Saville has gone with the Good News Bible's translation of the original Greek "Ioudaioi" as meaning "the Jewish authorities" rather than the more collective "the Jews." However, these attempts to sidestep controversy are undermined by a caricatured depiction of several Jewish characters — among them a villainous-looking Pharisee.

Despite some hokey moments — including Jesus' baptism, where he rises out of the water like a glittering shampoo model — Catholic viewers cannot help but be moved by the sublime power of the divinely inspired, if at times uncomfortably challenging, words. And while some may feel their viewing is hampered by the restrictions imposed by the film's verbal straitjacketed literalness, others may find its unapologetically unwatered-down approach spiritually edifying.

Due to crucifixion violence, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-II — adults and adolescents. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

The clock's a'ticking

CNS PHOTO FROM FOX

Actor Dennis Haysbert stars as President Palmer, who is fighting to retain the White House amid terrorist attacks and internal conspiracy in Fox's returning and much-anticipated drama series "24."

EWTN launches live radio talk show

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (CNS) — EWTN Global Catholic Network has launched a new live radio talk show, airing 3-4 p.m. Eastern time Monday through Friday. "EWTN Open Line," which began Sept. 8, will have a different host and church-related topic each day. Here is the schedule: Mondays, Marcus Grodi, on personal conversion stories and how a specific church teaching or experience can influence those decisions; Tuesdays, Barbara McGuigan, president of Voice of Virtue International, on family matters, pro-life and chastity issues; Wednesdays, Jesuit Father Mitch Pacwa, on the Bible; Thursdays, John Martignoni, president of the Bible Christian Society, on Catholic apologetics; and Fridays, Colin Donovan, EWTN vice president of theology, on theology questions. Listeners in North America can call in with questions at: (800) 585-9396. Outside North America, the number is: (205) 271-2985. Questions also can be e-mailed to: openline@ewtn.com.

TV WATCH

Fox's fall lineup is a bust

BY ANNE NAVARRO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Fox's new fall lineup runs the gamut from wacky to weighty but, unfortunately, most of it is forgettable junk. Top-heavy with sitcoms, the fall schedule includes only two dramas, neither of which seems worth the effort.

Jumping on the bandwagon to attract more Hispanic viewers with Hispanic characters, Fox has included two sitcoms revolving around Latino families. Yet in both shows, the characters take potshots at Hispanics for a laugh, seemingly following some unspoken rule that if you are a member of the ethnic group you can make fun of yourself without reprisal.

Another program features a married gay couple as supporting characters. While the couple is not the main focus of the show, the program's tone suggests that the homosexual lifestyle will be presented in a positive light or, at the very least, for some cheap laughs.

Fox's new fall series at a glance:

— "The Ortegas," Sundays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

Sitcom set in California about an immigrant Mexican family (including Cheech Marin) who build a studio in their garage for their son to host a talk show.

Don't Bother: Based on a BBC series, the program stars minor celebrities as guests and strains under the weight of corny jokes and ad-libbing cast members who need to brush up on their improv skills.

— "Arrested Development," Sundays, 9:30-10 p.m. EDT.

Jason Bateman returns to television as the only responsible member of a wealthy, eccentric family whose patriarch has just been jailed for shifty accounting practices in his real estate development company. Now Bateman must teach his greedy, spoiled kin how to live frugally.

Some Interest: Quirky characters placed in unfamiliar situations (e.g., getting a job, earning a living) are the basis of this sitcom, but it may not be enough to keep an audience coming back week after week for a whole season.

— "Skin," Mondays, 9-10 p.m. EDT.

Los Angeles drama that sets a pornography mogul against the city's district attorney, while their teen-age children fall for each other against their parents wishes.

Don't Bother: Taking a stab at adapting the Bard's "Romeo and Juliet" for modern times, the program throws in cliched twists such as the porn king as a truly caring family man and the district attorney as an ambitious absentee father. But the stale writing fails to generate excitement despite attempts to tantalize with the risque story line.

— "A Minute with Stan Hooper," Wednesdays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

Norm MacDonald plays an Andy Rooney type — sharing his observations about American life at the end of a TV news program — who decides to move from New York City to a small town in Wisconsin to give his remarks a more authentic flair.

Don't Bother: Forced and predictable, the sitcom is also troublesome as it features as supporting characters a cutesy married gay couple who run the town's local diner.

— "Tru Calling," Thursdays, 8-9 p.m. EDT.

Drama about a recent college grad working in the city morgue who develops a strange ability to see people's untimely deaths before they happen and is therefore compelled to save them.

Don't Bother: Trite dialogue, one-note characterizations and a far-fetched plot merge to form a forgettable program.

— "Luis," Fridays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

Luis Guzman stars as a Puerto Rican donut shop owner living in New York City's Spanish Harlem trying to live out the American dream.

Don't Bother: Flat, canned and forced with a slew of trying-too-hard-to-be-madcap characters, the sitcom just doesn't work and Guzman can't carry the load.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CHOIR DIRECTOR: St. Philip's Catholic Church is looking for an experienced part-time director for Saturday night and Sunday morning Masses. If you live within a reasonable driving distance of Statesville and have an interest, please call the church office at (704) 872-2579. Great part-time salary.

PRODUCTS & SERVICES

INSURANCE: Best Health, Life, LTC and Medicare supplements at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

REAL ESTATE

2.4 ACRE LOT: Gorgeous lot in private, gated community. Across the road from boat and beach facilities on High Rock Lake. Planned amenities include pool, tennis, clubhouse. $50,000. Call 919-481-1682.

FOR SALE

FOR RENT OR SALE: Denver/Maiden. 3-bedroom, 2-bath home on private .5 acre lot. Accessible to St. Joseph or Holy Spirit parish. 828-428-8512.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm

5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.

CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening!

Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm

In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
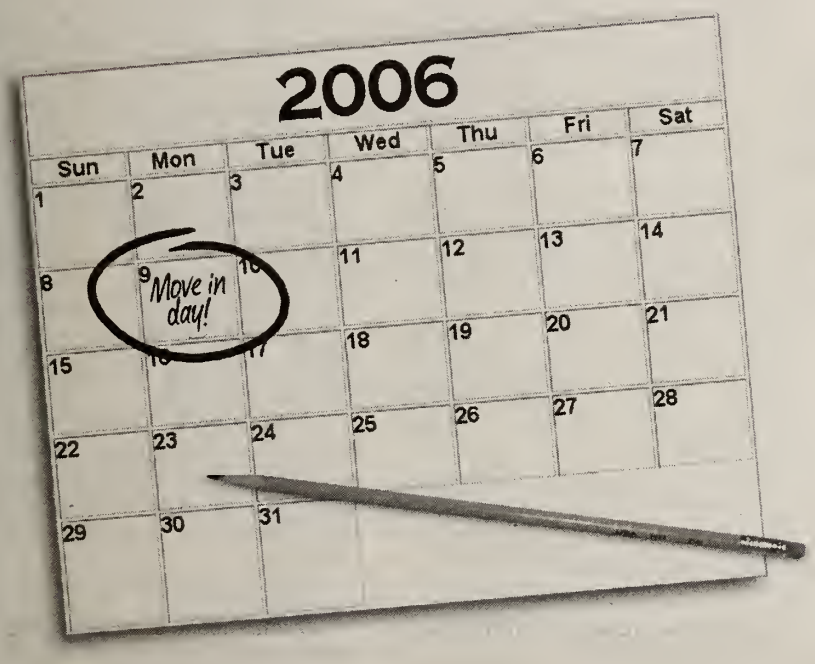
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.

LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Reserve now.



Move later.

For the retirement lifestyle you're planning now but putting off until later, call today for pre-construction pricing.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN
AT MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community

1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444

Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Rallying for pro-life issues

RESPECT LIFE, from page 1

celebrate and bear witness to God's creative and redeeming love for every human being," said Cardinal Anthony J. Bevilacqua, retired archbishop of Philadelphia and chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Pro-Life Activities, in a letter to his fellow bishops.

Essays included as part of the materials focus on abortion, end-of-life care, the death penalty, cloning and the political debate surrounding life issues.

There is also a liturgy guide with homily hints and reflections for all Sundays from October through December 2003, as well as Christmas and selected Sundays and feasts in 2004.

Published in "user-friendly" packet form since 1993, the Secretariat states these materials are especially helpful for priests, parish groups and other organizations.

Included with the materials is a "Life Is a Miracle" poster and one sample copy of both an English- and a Spanish-language Respect Life flier for parish bulletin inserts. The fliers can be ordered in bulk.

In addition, there is Respect Life clip art for use in bulletins, newsletters and other printed matter, and a brochure featuring a wide selection of pro-life publications and resources.

For many parishes, the Life Chain is a notable kickoff event of Respect Life Month.

Held on Respect Life Sunday, the Life Chain is one of the more visible signs against abortion as people line city streets while holding placards with messages such as "Abortion kills children" and "Abortion hurts women."

This year, hundreds of Life Chains are expected to form across the United States. In the Diocese of Charlotte, parishes are participating along property lines of their respective churches, on city sidewalks and with other church groups in their towns Oct. 5.

In Sterling, Va., a coalition of Catholic lay organizations is urging individuals, parishes and schools to join in the 11th International Week of Prayer and Fasting Oct. 5-16 for "the conversion of nations, the end to abortion and world peace."

The week — actually 12 days — opens Oct. 5. The event is usually scheduled for nine days but was extended this year to devote more time to the rosary in the year Pope John Paul II dedicated as the Year of the Rosary, according to an announcement released by event organizers in Sterling.

The International Week of Prayer and Fasting will include an all-day eucharistic prayer vigil Oct. 13 at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington. The vigil will include Catholic religious and lay speakers; Mass, confessions and recitation of the rosary; eucharistic adoration throughout the day; and a preview of Mel Gibson's film, "The Passion," in the shrine's lower Crypt Church.

Editor's Note: Copies of the complete Respect Life Sunday kit are $5 each. A program packet, which deletes the liturgy guide, poster and clip art from the kit, is available for $4.25 each. Orders may be placed by calling: (866) 582-0943.

COME AND HEAR

Christopher West – "Theology of the Body"

Wednesday through Friday, Oct. 8 - 10 at 7 pm each evening

St. Thomas Aquinas Catholic Church
1400 Suther Road - Charlotte

One of the top Catholic speakers in the world, Christopher West's talks regarding Pope John Paul II's "Theology of the Body" are riveting and life changing!

West teaches theology of the body and sexual ethics at Denver's St. John Vianney Theological Seminary and is also a visiting faculty member of the John Paul II Institute for Studies on Marriage and Family in Melbourne, Australia. His books, extensive lecturing and tapes have sparked an international ground swell of interest in John Paul II's theology of the body.

Tickets: $12 for all 3 nights or $5 for each night.
(Workbook is an additional $5)
For information: Tony Gagliardo - 704-439-0533 or 704-655-9090

BOOK SIGNING: West will sign his book "Good News about Sex and Marriage" on Thursday, Oct. 9, 1:00 pm at the new store location of The Catholic Company at LAKE NORMAN (next to the Goodwill), 19905 West Catawba Avenue, #106, Cornelius (Exit 28 off I-77, 1/2 mile west on Catawba Ave.)

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Photos and memories

LIVE LIFE TODAY AND EVERYDAY

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

My nephew recently showed me pictures he took on his last vacation. But instead of opening a photo album, he simply pressed a button on his computer. His file of photos appeared on screen and he was able to highlight, enlarge and even print the photos. In this, as in so many things, I felt just a little bit older, especially when he remarked: "You mean you keep all your photos in those old albums, Uncle Jim?" Thanks a lot!

Photographs, in old albums or envelopes in a drawer or on the latest computer, are a special gift. They give us both slices of our past and a reality check. I still look at photos from my ordination to the priesthood and think of it as "just a few years ago." Twenty-two years ago, in fact. Where did they go?

Recently, I came upon pictures from a California vacation I'd taken a dozen or so years ago. My favorite photo was taken at a restaurant in Palm Springs. I'm in the shot, along with my oldest and dearest friend, Father Joe Lukaszewski. Next to him is the legendary film director Frank Capra, who often helped us with charity benefits; next to him was the cutting edge photographer, Berry Berenson, and at her side was her husband, actor Anthony Perkins. I remember that my friend Joe was particularly delighted to meet the star of the movie classic Psycho. He couldn't believe that such a sweet man could portray such a frightening character. He even told Perkins that. To which the actor responded: "It's called acting, Father Joe!"

The photo was striking for another reason. It suddenly hit me that all my companions at dinner that night are now with God. Father Joe and Anthony Perkins, lost to disease. Frank Capra, giving way to old age. The beautiful and kindly Berry Berenson was one of those who were tragically taken from us on Sept. 11, 2001. She'd been on a plane from Boston to Los Angeles, returning to see her son in a musical concert. She, and too many others, never reached their destinations. None of us that night would ever have imagined that not much more than a decade later, all but one of those at that table would be leaving their earthly home.

Since no one knows the future, we probably should live as if every day was the last. And live the life we desire to instead of the one we sometimes settle for. The photo led me to a number of resolutions I'm trying to embrace more fully. Maybe they would be good for you too.

(1) Live it today and don't delay. For too many of us, we mean to and intend to do the living someday soon. Just not today. There is, in fact, no time like the present to accomplish the good we intend to do.

(2) I don't know anyone who doesn't aspire to be more generous. We fully intend to actually make that charitable donation or perform that kind deed. The good we know we should do is usually best accomplished when we think of it. In other words, right now!

(3) The overwhelming majority of people believe in God, but many postpone building a spiritual relationship and practicing their faith. If we put off our Creator until we're ready, He may get to us before we find the time to get to Him.

(4) Most of us have loose endings in our lives; people with whom we have grudges or major disagreements. We may even intend to make it right someday, but why be arrogant enough to imagine that somedays are up to us? It's God's calendar that counts. Let's make the time to reconcile while we can.

And consider the scripture verse: "For everything there is a season, and a time for every matter under heaven." (Ecclesiastes 3:1) Let's not presume on the Lord's time. Let's do all the good we can today.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "Works of Mercy, Gifts of Love," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

Struggling at times, pope holds weekly audience

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

The Pope Speaks

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Although he cut significant portions of his main talk and appeared to lose his voice at one point, Pope John Paul II returned Oct. 1 to his normal general audience practices, including a tour around St. Peter's Square in an open popemobile.

When the pope stopped and shook his head in the middle of a sentence, tears flowed from the eyes of several women in the square; the crowd burst into an encouraging applause and, after a few seconds, the pope resumed reading.

Although he read less than a third of his main talk, Pope John Paul read all of his prepared remarks in French, English, German, Spanish, Portuguese and Polish.

Marking the beginning of the month dedicated to the rosary, Pope John Paul told Polish pilgrims that, "God willing," he would go to the Shrine of Our Lady of the Rosary in Pompeii, Italy, Oct. 7 "to thank God for the great work of the sanctification of hearts accomplished uninterruptedly thanks to this marvelous prayer."

The pope had missed his general audience the previous week because of an intestinal ailment.

At the beginning of the audience, he was driven around the square, waving at the estimated 12,000 visitors and pilgrims present. For the Sept. 10 and 17 audiences, he was driven in a closed car to a stage in the square without first making the rounds in the popemobile.

In his main audience talk, the pope said he was concluding his long-running series on the psalms and canticles used in the church's morning prayer.

The pope focused on Zechariah's "Benedictus," a hymn of praise for God's gift of salvation, which speaks of "the tender mercy of God by which the daybreak from on high will visit us."

Zechariah's prophecy proclaims that with Christ "there will appear the light that will enlighten every creature and make life flourish," the pope said.

Welcoming the gift of salvation in Christ, Christians must commit themselves to walking in his light, he said.

"Our uncertain steps, which during the day frequently wander onto dark or slippery streets, are guided by the light of truth which Christ spreads in the world and in history," Pope John Paul said.

The pope said, "We continually ask his help so that he will preserve in us the light of the knowledge which he has given us and will lead us to the day of perfection."

After the 45-minute audience, the pope spent almost an hour greeting individual bishops and pilgrims, posing for photographs with groups and blessing dozens of newlyweds who knelt in front of him, one couple at a time.

Letters to the Editor

No welcome for the stranger

I just read Catholic News Service writer Agostino Bono's article entitled "Tacos, pizza and French fries: Fast food and immigration patterns" (Sept. 12) in which Ronaldo Cruz, executive director of the U.S. bishops' Secretariat for Hispanic Affairs, states: "For the church the only passport you need is your baptism."

I find it unacceptable that the church condones the blatant violation of federal immigration laws! I doubt even Jesus would tell people to violate the law! "Render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and render unto the Lord that which is the Lord's."

If an immigrant illegally enters the United States, they should be arrested and deported — no questions asked!

My family on my father's side emigrated from Poland and they came through Ellis Island; they did this legally. Shame on the church for condoning anything other than following the law. No one has to like or agree with any law, but until those laws are changed, we are bound by our civic duty to follow them.

Mike Basiewicz
Dana, N.C.

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Catholic News & Herald welcomes letters from readers. We ask that letters be originals of 250 words or less.

To be considered for publication, each letter must include the name, address and phone number of the writer for purpose of verification. Letters may be condensed due to space limitations and edited for clarity, style and taste.

Send letters to Letters to the Editor, The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, N.C. 28237, or e-mail catholicnews@charlottediocese.org.

Lean on me

Defeating loneliness with activism

Guest Column

FATHER JOHN AURILIA, OFM Cap

What do Mother Teresa of Calcutta, St. Pio of Pietrelcina and St. Francis of Assisi have in common? The desert experience, the journey and the "Lean on Me."

In spite of the noises, mass media and activism, we live in an age of loneliness. The heroes I just mentioned found a healthy prescription to cure the existential loneliness, which has been treated as a disease that has reached epidemic range. Fortunately, there is a cure for it, if we look for it. The origin of this illness comes from the obsessive compulsion to activism, which deprives us of the necessary solitude needed for our survival.

The Gospel, being the good news and the book of life, gives us some hints in Luke 4:1: "Jesus full of the Holy Spirit, then returned from the Jordan and was conducted by the Spirit into the desert." From time to time, Jesus felt the need of being alone out in the desert or on the peaks of mountains, where he could recharge the battery and embark on his public ministry.

The desert experience, however, does not necessarily require the Sahara Desert. It may be our daily life of faith, hope and love. Both experiences, the desert of the city and the wilderness of the forest, remind us that solitude, not loneliness, is badly needed. There is a big difference between solitude (positive) and loneliness (negative). The beauty of solitude makes us aware of the old "spiritual" line: "We come out of the wilderness, leaning on the Lord."

Mother Teresa, Pio Forgione, Francis Bernardone knew very well what desert experience was: the crowded streets of Calcutta; the rugged mountains of the Gargano Peninsula; and the leprosy camps of Rivotorto. The saints survived the desert by being very active and by leaning on the Lord. Activity doesn't hinder our relationship with God, it actually may help. Activism shuts the door and builds a cage with no exit door. The silence of the city and of the wilderness makes us hear what God is saying, rather than what we say. "Be still and know that I am God," says the Lord.

The prophet Hosea has a more compelling approach by putting in God's mouth the following words: "I will espouse you, and lead you into the wilderness, and there I will speak to your heart." (3:16) He speaks to the center of our being, rather than to our "head." Do we really hear what God says?

A man had just retired and was sitting at the breakfast table, reading the morning paper and feeling very well. His wife, on the other hand, was bustling around the apartment. She had both the dishwasher and the clothes dryer going, and she was pushing the vacuum cleaner. Her husband looked up from the table and said to her, "I'm proud of you." With all the noise, she couldn't hear properly. "What did you say?" she shouted. "I am proud of you," he repeated. She snapped back, "I'm tired of you too!"

When we are surrounded by noises, we cannot hear the "love you" of God and others. And yet, God lives where we are and where our neighbors are.

A little girl, who had just moved, went with her family to their new church for the first time. The church was just a block from their house. On the way back from the church, she said, "Boy, we sure are lucky to live in the same neighborhood as God." Are we not all?

Our direction to God is easy: make a right turn and go straight always.

A gentleman called me a few days ago. He was proud to tell me that he was a parishioner for the past 23 years and he didn't live far from the church. Before hanging up, he said, "By the way, Father, since you are on the line, could you give directions to the church?"

My friends, "Lean on me," says the Lord ... and don't call.

What to pray for when hurricanes threaten

Parish Diary

FATHER PETER J. DALY CNS Columnist

As I write this, Hurricane Isabel is 24 hours away. We have spent the last couple of days preparing for it — parking parish vehicles away from trees and stowing anything that can get airborne in high wind or float away in high water.

People say things like, "Father, pray that the storm misses us" — as if God steers hurricanes around because I ask him to.

When we are young, we pray about the weather. Children pray for snow when they have tests. It is OK for children to pray for the weather they want, but when we grow up we should get an adult's idea about "weather prayers."

Weather is part of nature. It is governed by the laws of nature. We cannot change it by wishing for it.

Of course, miracles can and do happen. The disciples saw Jesus calm the Sea of Galilee. But the point is the wind and waves obeyed him, not us. The laws of nature obey the will of God, nature's author.

The Catholic Church accepts the idea that "God's will" is reflected in the laws of nature. That is partly (though not totally) what we mean by "natural law."

We accept the laws of nature, which we discern in the study of physics, chemistry, biology, geology and the other natural sciences. Our job is to try to understand these laws and use them to our benefit in medicine or meteorology or the other scientific arts.

We do not expect God should change the laws to suit us — God does not take orders from us. Our job as believers is to try to discern the will of God and to live accordingly. Servants of God accept the facts. They do not try to become God.

Prayer is about changing us, not God. By definition, God is the "unchanging" one. That's good, since we all rely on the stability of the laws of nature.

So what do we pray for in regard to the weather?

We can pray for people. We pray for courage to accept the storms of life and wisdom to learn from them. We pray for generosity to help those harmed, healing for the injured, comfort for those who mourn and peace for the dead.

These are all prayers to change us, not nature.

We don't expect God will change the path of hurricanes for us. With them we simply batten down the hatches and get out of the way.

Will a husband and wife be united in Heaven?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN CNS Columnist

Q. My wife of 54 years died last spring, and I'm having a hard time. There is still a lot of suffering and grief, and wondering about the future. At her funeral the priest said a prayer that "we will be with her again." Is there anything in the Bible or church teaching that tells us a husband and wife will be united in heaven? (Iowa)

A. The sadness and terrible pain you feel over the loss of your wife is truly a heavy cross to bear. But it is also something to be lovingly grateful for. It is a tribute to the long, devoted and happy life you had together during those 52 years that makes her death such a heartache for you.

The Gospels do tell us much about the answers to your questions. We know that the heavenly Father was intimately present to Jesus always, even in the midst of his passion and death.

He knew that, even for his Son, this and other suffering was part of coming to a good and full human life, that it would lead to a joyful and eternal union at the completion of our earthly existence.

I believe it all comes down to a good bit of humility, being able to acknowledge that some truths of human existence lie beyond our comprehension in this life. Our doctrine of the communion of saints, which we profess in the Apostles Creed, means that we are already in union with those who have gone before us, that they support us by their spiritual presence as well as by their prayers for us before the throne of God — which is, of course, why we pray to the saints asking for their intercession.

As for you and your wife, it is true that there is no married life in heaven, at least in the physical reproductive dimension we experience here. That is not the whole story, however.

Some years ago, Pope Pius XII had some enlightening and consoling words to say on the subject. Speaking to engaged couples, he noted that while marriage itself may not endure in heaven, married love will continue. What does that mean?

Christian tradition is clear that part of heaven will be our conscious union and intimacy with those who were dear to us here on earth. Beyond that, however, is the fact that our personalities, our ways of loving, our way of being "ourselves," which we will carry into eternity, are molded largely by the people with whom we shared our lives here.

It is a fact that you are a significantly different person today than you would have been had you followed another vocation than marriage or if you had married a different person than the woman you did.

Her love for you and yours for her, the many ways you assisted each other, with your Christian faith, to grow and mature, the friends and other individuals who deeply affected you through the years — all these helped you become the persons you are at the end and who you will be in eternity.

All that goodness never will end. In that sense the answer to your question is yes. You will without question be husband and wife, sharing your married love, in heaven.

I'm sure some will respond, but what about people who are married two or three times because their spouses died or for other reasons? Doesn't that nullify what you are saying?

Not at all. It may add other dimensions to the husband-wife relationship and personal identities, but the truth that we are affected and formed by others close to us remains the same. Whatever good we accomplish with and for each other never dies and by God's providence will find its fulfillment in his presence.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

St. John Lee Korean Church symbolic of growing Korean-American culture

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

St. John Lee Korean Church in Charlotte, built in 1994, now has 130 registered families.

ST. JOHN LEE KOREAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

7109 Robinson Church Rd.
Charlotte, NC 28215
(704) 531-8471

Vicariate: Charlotte
Pastor: Reverend Soo Tae Bak
Number of families: 130

CHARLOTTE — As the diversity of the multicultural landscape increases throughout the Diocese of Charlotte, so too does the need for liturgical and ministerial outreach to all Catholics of western North Carolina. St. John Lee Korean Catholic Church is one center of ministry tending to those needs.

The historical tie between the martyred John (Yoon-Il) Lee and the community of Charlotte Catholics who now gather under his patronage dates back to 17th-century Korea, where Catholicism was brought in from China. Persecutions began in 1839, and over the next few decades thousands of Korean Catholics were killed. Lee was arrested in November 1866, imprisoned for two months and, in late January 1867, was decapitated.

On May 6, 1984, Lee and 102 others martyred during the 19th-century persecutions were canonized by Pope John Paul II. In January 1987, St. John Lee was named patron saint of the Archdiocese of Taegu, the very region in which he was executed a century earlier.

In Charlotte, seven Korean Catholic families began gathering in the early 1980s for liturgical celebrations. A Korean priest from Atlanta began traveling in July 1980 to St. Patrick Cathedral in Charlotte once a month to celebrate Mass in Korean. Soon after, the group relocated to nearby St. Ann Church.

With the Korean Catholic community growing larger during the 1980s, members formed a committee to explore the possibility of building a church. A fund drive was begun, and the committee began searching for an appropriate location.

In June 1990, the community purchased four acres of land in east Charlotte along Robinson Church Road. On site resided a house that was put to use as a rectory and meeting center. Later that year, the Archdiocese of Taegu agreed to send a Korean priest to the Charlotte Diocese to serve the local Korean community.

With the arrival of Father Dong-Su Won, services were moved to Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Charlotte. Father Won was eventually succeeded by Father Hwan-Kil Cho, and during his period of service the rapidly growing Korean community again looked to increase its worship space.

Father Kyung-Hwan Choi was the next priest for the Taegu Archdiocese to come to Charlotte, and the plans for a new church — to be built on the Robinson Church Road property — continued to develop during his stay.

In May 1994, the community gathered for a groundbreaking ceremony. By October, the 5,000-square-foot building was completed and the first Mass was celebrated there. On May 7, 1995, Bishop William G. Curlin presided over the dedication ceremony, and the church was officially declared to be St. John Lee Korean Catholic Church.

In September 1995, Father Jae-Yeong Choi was appointed to serve at St. John Lee Church. The church community has proven to be an active one, as 70 people were confirmed during a September 1996 Mass, and a variety of groups and outreaches have been formed, including prayer groups, a choir, a golf club and a youth group.

In 1998, with a parish of about 97 families, a committee was formed to oversee construction planning of an education center on the church grounds. Education of and ministry to the second generation of St. John Lee Church parishioners is an emphasis of church life, as members strive to teach Korean culture, identity and language to those young members of the community who have been raised in the United States.

The church dedicated 1998 as a year to "Learn the Bible by Heart," in which members not only paid special attention to the Scriptures, but also devoted time to evangelization among their families, friends and neighbors.

Teaching catechism and church doctrine presents challenges, especially given language barriers that exist even within the family unit. As such, St. John Lee Church seeks assistance from English-speaking volunteers to assist in catechesis for the younger Korean American generation. In addition to the Mass celebrated in Korean at 11 a.m. each Sunday, a Mass in English is said on Sunday at 9:30 a.m., primarily for these younger Korean Catholics.

In November 2001, Father Soo Tae Bak was appointed to St. John Lee Korean Church, and by 2003 the number of registered families had grown to 130.

On Sept. 21, 2003, several parishioners traveled to Washington and joined 4,500 Korean-American Catholics to celebrate Korean-American Catholic Day at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, a positive sign that Korean-American Catholics are growing across the nation, and in Charlotte.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm
Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas
704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Unit # 10 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS
MOVING SPECIALS
NEW HOLIDAY GIFTS
OPEN
Tuesday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

TOO BUSY FOR ONE LAST KISS? DO YOU EVER FORGET TO KISS YOUR LOVED ONES AS YOU SAY YOUR DAILY "GOOD-BYES"? HOW DEVASTATED WOULD YOU BE IF YOU MISSED YOUR LAST CHANCE TO KISS THAT PERSON WHO MIGHT BE GONE FOREVER?
"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley
Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!
"A gorgeous work...AN ILLUMINATING, REVELATORY BOOK."
—Basil Sharp, Author of The Adventure of Being Human
To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to: Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Parish Profile: St. Francis of Assisi Church

| PAGE 16

OCTOBER 10, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 3

MAKING SAFER SCHOOLS

Immaculate Heart of Mary School battens hatches

Students safe inside while police nab suspect

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

HIGH POINT — It began as a normal school day for students at Immaculate Heart of Mary School.

Around 9:45 a.m. on Thursday, Sept. 25, students were outside practicing a fire drill. Half an hour later, the High Point police came to the kindergarten-through-eighth-grade school and advised the staff to keep the students inside and the doors locked. A man with a gun had been spotted nearby.

"They commented to a counselor that a person was in the vicinity with a shotgun," said Principal Robert Wehde. "They recommended that we shut down the facility."

Wehde notified Superintendent Linda Cherry and his staff, and the school quickly followed the police's instructions — students were kept inside and did not have morning recess. A second-grade class on a morning field trip was advised not to return to the school.

But classes continued as normal. At the school, the exterior doors are always locked and visitors must be buzzed in at the administrative offices for entrance into the building.

"It was a little unnerving, but the teachers did an out-

See LOCKDOWN, page 4

Merriment in the mountains

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

St. Francis of Assisi parishioners prepare for a hayride at the Macon County Fairgrounds Oct. 4. The ride was part of a parish festival commemorating the 50th anniversary of the church.

Three churches celebrate anniversaries

Clear skies over St. Francis of Assisi jubilee Mass

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

FRANKLIN — Tucked into a valley in the Smoky Mountains, St. Francis of Assisi Church has fostered a thriving multicultural parish for 50 years. In honor of its patron saint's feast day, the parish celebrated its golden anniversary Oct. 4.

See ST. FRANCIS, page 7

Our Lady of the Highways becomes multicultural family

BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY
CORRESPONDENT

THOMASVILLE — Several years ago, the parishioners of Our Lady of the Highways Church were informed all parishes had a feast day in honor of their patron saint.

Since there is no feast to Our Lady under that particu-

See THOMASVILLE, page 8

Basilica of St. Lawrence marks 10 years as minor basilica

BY CAROLE MCGROTTY
CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — Melodious strains of a string trio echoed through the church as early arrivals entered for the celebration of the Basilica of St. Lawrence's designation anniversary as a minor basilica.

Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus flanked the main

See ST. LAWRENCE, page 9

Papal envoy to Bush says events proved Vatican right about Iraqi war

CARDINAL LAGHI RECOUNTS DETAILS OF BUSH MEETING

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

CAMALDOLI, Italy — Seven months after he tried to convince President George W. Bush not to invade Iraq, Cardinal Pio Laghi, papal envoy, said events have proved the Vatican right about the consequences of war and the difficulties of consolidating peace.

Cardinal Laghi recounted in detail his meeting last March with Bush and other White House officials in a talk Oct. 4 at a conference on "God and the Meeting of Civilizations" at the central Italian monastic center of Camaldoli.

In March, three weeks before the United States launched its offensive against Iraq, Pope John Paul II sent Cardinal Laghi, a former ambassador to the United States, to plead the case against war with Bush and his aides, but the cardinal said he did not feel his arguments were given much weight.

"I had the impression they had already made their decision," Cardinal Laghi said.

Today, as U.S. and allied forces try to resolve vast problems in Iraq, "Events have shown that the worries of the Holy See were well-founded," he added.

Cardinal Laghi said that when he sat down to talk with

See LAGHI, page 13

Pope John Paul II
Health reports prompt media speculation, prayers
| PAGE 3

Transitus of St. Francis
Death, history of saint recalled at service
| PAGE 5

Spiritual batteries
Hispanic youth learn about God, overcoming setbacks
| PAGE 12

FC 362 C36c

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
S237 P2
#420836#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

SHATTERED DREAMS

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Two unidentified women from Haifa weep outside Maxim restaurant Oct. 5. The restaurant, owned jointly by an Israeli family and a Melkite Catholic family, was the site of a suicide attack that killed 19 and injured more than 50 people. The popular beachfront restaurant was a symbol of Israeli-Arab coexistence for more than 40 years.

Bombed Haifa restaurant was symbol of Jewish, Arab coexistence

JERUSALEM (CNS) — The beachfront restaurant damaged in a suicide bomb attack in Haifa, Israel, has been a symbol of coexistence between Arabs and Jews for 40 years.

Nineteen people were killed and about 60 injured in the Oct. 4 bombing at Maxim, a restaurant co-owned by Jewish and Melkite Catholic families. Among the dead were five Israeli Arabs who were Melkite Catholics. Two complete families — including grandparents and grandchildren — where killed in the blast.

Immediately upon hearing the news of the bombing, Miri Taiyar and her daughter, Orly Taiyar Nir, members of the Jewish family that co-owns the restaurant, were among the first people to console the Matar family, the Melkite-Arab co-owners, five of whose members had been injured and two others killed.

"I was only one of three people who left the restaurant on his own two feet," said Pierre Matar, 29, who was slightly injured in the blast. "Everywhere else there were bodies strewn around."

His father cousins and uncle were injured. Two cousins who worked as waitresses were killed in the blast.

The long-term relationship between the Taiyar and Matar families is one built on trust, he said.

"These are more than partners in the restaurant — we are all one family," said Orly Taiyar Nir.

Nir told the Ha'aretz newspaper: "When my boys were drafted into the army, the Christian women went and lit candles for their welfare. ... I'm in contact with these (Christian) families more than I am with the Jewish families."

More than 1,500 people from the surrounding villages and towns — Jews, Christians and Muslims — attended the funerals.

"The fact is that we are living together and no one has the right to (make us) do any different — not Sharon, not Arafat, not Islamic Jihad nor Hamas," said Fassouta Mayor Geries Khoury, a relative of the Matar family. "No one has the right to kill such a common life together that we have, despite all the discrimination there is against (Israeli Arabs)."

He said villagers do not want revenge, only peace and an end to the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territories.

Virginia priests sign letter supporting celibacy

ARLINGTON, Va. (CNS) — Ninety priests from the Arlington Diocese have sent a letter to Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Belleville, Ill., president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, in strong support of mandatory priestly celibacy.

In the Sept. 27 letter, the priests rejected a proposal advanced by Milwaukee priests in August that called for the ordination of married men to generate more vocations to the priesthood. The Milwaukee priests also sent their letter to Bishop Gregory.

"Common sense and historical experience indicate ... that reducing the demands of the priesthood will not increase vocations, because lessening sacrifice never inspires men to offer their lives to Christ," the Arlington priests said. "In times of crisis, the wisdom and instinct of the church have always been to respond with greater sacrifice, not less. What will inspire more vocations is celibacy lived well, not celibacy set aside."

Citing the Second Vatican Council, the "Catechism of the Catholic Church" and the writings of Pope John Paul II, which have all explicitly affirmed mandatory celibacy, the letter also called for an end to further discussion of changing the requirement, since it "only confuses the faithful and deprives the church of the clarity needed to inspire vocations."

The signers represented some 60 percent of the 151 active and retired diocesan priests in Arlington. The priests said they wanted Bishop Gregory and other bishops to know of their "devotion to this source and sign of pastoral charity" and their desire that it remain mandatory for priestly ordination.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

ASHEVILLE — The St. Martin De Porres Pro-Chapter of the Dominican Laity meets the third Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in St. Justin's Center at the Basilica of St. Lawrence, 97 Haywood St. Inquirers are welcome. For more information, contact Beverly Reid, OPL, at (828) 253-6676.

HENDERSONVILLE — A Peace and Tolerance Workshop will be held Oct. 25 at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. in the St. Francis Room 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Everyone is invited for a day of prayer, discussion and reflection. Special focus will be given to our sacred calling as Christians to be peacemakers. This is a meaningful way to promote peace in the family, classroom and workplace. To register, call Sandy Donecho at (828) 697-7420.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — The loss of a parent as an adult is the single most common form of bereavement in this country. Whether you had a good, bad or indifferent relationship with the parent who died, your feelings for him or her were probably quite strong. Join others who have lost a parent or those ministering to the bereaved at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., Oct. 15 7-9 p.m. in the Ministry Center.

CHARLOTTE — Father Duc Duong will lead a roundtable discussion on "Multiculturalism in the Catholic Church" Oct. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in room 203 of the Life Center of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. Log on to www.home.catholicweb.com/stmatthewff and click on Café, to link to two articles from US Catholic to read before the meeting.

CHARLOTTE — The ordination Mass of Bishop Peter J. Jugis will be celebrated Oct. 24 at 12 p.m. at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy.

CHARLOTTE — Catholic Social Services will host an informational meeting on their adoption programs in Russia & China Oct. 25, at 2 p.m. The meeting will be at the Diocesan offices at 1123 South Church St. If you have any questions, please call Carol or Michele at (888) 990-4199.

CHARLOTTE — Jesuit Father James Keenan will present "Living with an Adult Conscience" Oct. 25 8:30 a.m.-2 p.m. at St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St. Our ordinary lives offer ample opportunities to think and grow in our practice of virtues. For details, call the church office at (704) 332-2901.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — Father Bill Parent will discuss "Catholic morality at the end of life," a look at Catholic teachings concerning issue of life and death. This free presentation will begin at 7 p.m. Oct. 16 in the Kloster Center of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

OCTOBER 10, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 3

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Cardinal Stafford named to head Vatican office dealing with penance

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — U.S. Cardinal J. Francis Stafford has been named by Pope John Paul II to head the Apostolic Penitentiary, the Vatican office that deals with matters of conscience involving the sacrament of penance and procedural issues concerning indulgences.

Cardinal Stafford, 71, will leave the Pontifical Council for the Laity, where he has served as president since 1996. One of the main tasks of the laity council is to coordinate World Youth Day celebrations with local organizers, and Cardinal Stafford presided over preparations for youth-day events in Paris in 1997, in Rome in 2000 and in Toronto in 2002.

The new head of the laity council is Polish Archbishop Stanislaw Rylko, 58, who had been council secretary.

The Vatican announced the appointments Oct. 3. They were among the first of a series of expected changes in the Roman Curia.

Cardinal Stafford will oversee a Vatican department that is not very well understood by outsiders. The "penitentiary" in its name refers to the penitential issues it handles.

The Apostolic Penitentiary is one of three tribunals of the Holy See. The penitentiary is divided into two offices: One governs indulgences, and the other is a court that handles cases of conscience and absolves individuals from sins reserved to the Holy See.

Cardinal Stafford will be called the "major penitentiary." The agency also commissions priests to serve as confessors in Rome's major basilicas.

St. For more information, call the church office at (336) 272-4681.

HICKORY VICARIATE

LENOIR — The Hickory vicariate will offer two evangelization retreats for Hispanic adults at St. Francis of Assisi Church, 1025 College Ave. SW. The women's retreat will be Oct. 17-19 and the men's retreat will be Oct. 24-26. To register, please contact Sister Joan Pearson at (828) 758-4207.

MORGANTON — A free Pastoral Care Training workshop will be held Oct. 14 at St. Charles Borromeo Church, 714 W. Union St. 7-9 p.m. This program will train parish volunteers to provide pastoral care to the elderly Register to Sandra Breakfield, Elder Ministry, at (704) 370-3220.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — The adult enrichment program of St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., will present "I'm married, we're together, but alone" Oct. 12 at 10:15 a.m. and Oct. 15 at 4:30 p.m. This presentation will explore how married couples can recapture the closeness in their relationships. For more information, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

MOORESVILLE — The adult enrichment program of St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., will present "One face, four portraits" Oct. 19 at 10:15 a.m. and Oct. 22 at 4:30 p.m. This presentation will explore how Jesus Christ was portrayed by each of the Gospel writers. For more information, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

MURPHY — St. William Church will sponsor a bereavement support group that will meet Mondays for six weeks beginning Oct. 13, 10 a.m.-noon at the Glenmary Center. This group is for anyone who is grieving over any loss of a loved one, a job, friend, divorce, etc. Call Pat Levy at (828) 837-9517 for more information.

BRYSON CITY — "Catholics and Cherokees: Learning from Each Other," a workshop hosted by the Smoky Mountain Vicariate, will be held on Oct. 18 1-4 p.m. at St. Joseph Church, 316 Main St. This free workshop is open to the public and will help participants to better understand the history of the Cherokee and current issues of major concern to them. A part of the program will be the linking of Catholic Social Teachings to Cherokee issues and the importance of advocacy and dialogue in contemporary society. For details, call Mary Herr at (828) 497-9498 or email maryherr@dnet.net or call St. Joseph Church at (828) 488-6766. This workshop is funded by a grant from Operation Rice Bowl.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

CLEMMONS — The OLM Little Rock Scripture Study for Women offers a bible study Monday evenings 7:30-9 p.m. in the library of Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd. Classes meet until Nov. 24. For more information, call Anne Gannon at (336) 727-4591.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

WINSTON-SALEM — This fall's Theology on Tap will meet Wednesday evenings Oct. 22-Nov. 12 at Mi Pueblo Restaurant, 644 Stratford Rd. Social hour begins at 7 p.m. and a featured speaker will begin at 8 p.m. For details e-mail ws_tontap@yahoo.com.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Fraternity of St. Clare invites anyone interested in learning more about the Secular Franciscan Order and the Franciscan way of life to an orientation and reception Oct. 23 7:30-8:30 p.m. at Our Lady of Fatima Chapel, 211 W. Third St. For more information, contact Sharon Jackson, SFO Minister, at (336) 722-7001.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Pope's health prompts media speculation, prayers among Catholics

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — At the beginning of one of the busiest months of his pontificate, Pope John Paul II's continuing health problems prompted speculation in the media, concern among some cardinals and prayers by the faithful.

After announcing 30 new cardinals Sept. 28, the 83-year-old pontiff carried out a full week of scheduled events appearing has he has over the last few months: tired, unable to stand or walk, struggling at times to speak, but soldiering on to the end of each event.

The pope suffers from a degenerative neurological disorder believed to be Parkinson's disease and has been slowed by arthritis of the knee and the effects of several surgeries.

His recent physical decline, although not drastic to those who have followed him closely, has prompted intense media interest, which in turn has generated comments by church leaders.

The most striking remarks — intended "philosophically" but which ended up in headlines around the world — came from Cardinal Christoph Schonborn of Vienna, Austria.

"The entire world is experiencing a pope who is sick, who is disabled, and who is dying — I don't know how near death he is — who is approaching the last days and months of his life," Cardinal Schonborn said Oct. 2.

The cardinal's comment prompted anxiety among many Catholics, but several Vatican cardinals quickly downplayed concern about the pope's health.

Cardinal Giovanni Battista Re, head of the Congregation for Bishops, said "there's no cause for alarm" about the pontiff.

"The pope is a strong man with a sharp mind and a clear vision of the world. I saw him today at lunch," Cardinal Re said later Oct. 2.

"Certainly he has difficulty with speech, especially when he's tired, and he has problems walking. But he's still a strong man," he said.

Asked about the possibility of papal resignation, Cardinal Re responded: "The Holy Father is obedient to God's will."

Cardinal Jose Saraiva Martins, head of the Congregation for Saints' Causes, said the fact that the pope's heavy October schedule was being maintained showed there was no sense of panic at the Vatican. In fact, the Vatican added two major events to the schedule.

Polish Archbishop Stanislaw Dziwisz, the pope's longtime personal secretary, did not seem overly concerned about the pope's health as he chatted with reporters Oct. 2. The pope was meeting with Lithuanian President Rolandas Paksas in an adjacent room.

Archbishop Dziwisz told the reporters jokingly that many journalists who have predicted the pope's demise "are already in heaven."

Blessing 'Muffin'

CNS PHOTO BY KAREN CALLAWAY, NORTHWEST INDIANA CATHOLIC

"Muffin" is held by parishioner Karen Vine as Precious Blood Fathers John Kalicky and Gary Scherer read a blessing for animals on the feast of St. Francis of Assisi Oct. 4. The priests at St. John the Baptist Parish in Whiting, Ind., were among clergy a round the world offering special prayers for pets on the feast of a saint noted for his love of all God's creatures.

DID YOU KNOW? — ST. TERESA OF AVILA

Born at Avila, Castile, Spain, on March 28, 1515, Teresa became a Carmelite in 1536. She founded St. Joseph Convent at Avila in 1562 for nuns who wished to live a more enclosed spiritual life. In 1568, she founded the first reformed Carmelite monastery for men. Teresa wrote many letters and books that have become classics of spiritual literature. Teresa died in October 1582, and was canonized in 1614 by Pope Gregory XV. Pope Paul VI declared her a doctor of the church in 1970 — the first woman to be so honored. Her feast day is Oct. 15.

Charlotte Catholic seniors C.A.R.E. a lot

COURTESY PHOTO

Charlotte Catholic High School seniors rally at the Camp C.A.R.E. annual walkathon Sept. 20.

CHARLOTTE — Senior pride was evident when approximately 80 Charlotte Catholic High School seniors participated in the Camp C.A.R.E. 10th annual P.J. Martin Memorial Walkathon Sept. 20.

Assistant principal Steve Carpenter, faculty and parents joined NBC6's weatherman Larry Sprinkle at the 5-mile walk held at Butler High School to help raise money and send children with cancer to summer camp.

Camp C.A.R.E. (Cancer Ain't Really the End) is for children with cancer that are being or have been treated in the Charlotte area. The camp provides children with a normal camping experience and activities for them and their families. Camp C.A.R.E. staff is comprised of all volunteers and all monies raised goes toward camp and monthly activities.

Proudly wearing their red "Senior Pride" T-shirts, the Charlotte Catholic seniors and faculty showed their strong sense of community by collecting pledges and giving up their Saturday morning to raise more than $2,100 for Camp C.A.R.E.

Beth St. Martin, a Camp C.A.R.E. board member, was "overwhelmed by the tremendous show of support by these students and the Charlotte Catholic community."

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information on Camp C.A.R.E., call (704) 384-7568.

A MATTER OF MERIT

Charlotte Catholic students named semifinalists

CHARLOTTE — Charlotte Catholic High School seniors Michael Florack, Sarah Knish, Stephen Norris and Geoff Sholler were among approximately 16,000 seminfinalists named in the 4th annual National Merit Scholarship program.

These scholastically talented seniors have an opportunity to continue in the competition for some 8,000 Merit Scholarship awards, worth $32 million, that will be offered next spring. To continue, semifinalists must fulfill several requirements and advance to finalist standing, a prerequisite to being considered for a Merit Scholarship award.

The annual Merit Scholarship competition is conducted by National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), a not-for-profit organization that operates without government assistance. Scholarships awarded through the National Merit Program are underwritten by approximately 500 business organizations and higher education institutions as well as by NMSC's own funds.

Merit Scholarship winners are academic champions who will be the leaders of tomorrow, according to the NMSC. Winners will be selected on the strength of their accomplishments and abilities and without regard to gender, race, ethnic origin or religious preference.

Merit Scholarship winners of 2004 will be announced in four nationwide news releases beginning in April and concluding in July. These scholarship recipients will join more than 218,000 other distinguished young people who have earned the Merit Scholar title.

School battens hatches

Lockdown, from page 1

standing job. They continued without missing a beat," said Wehde. "They reacted in a professional manner and reassured the children they were safe and continued with their classes."

"I am proud of the reaction and behavior of the faculty and staff, as well as the students, during this situation," said Cherry.

While the school does have lockdown procedures in case of an intruder on the property or in the building, Wehde described the Sept. 25 situation as more of a "shut-down" situation.

"We have gated areas in the parking lot. I felt OK that there would be no access to the administrative building or the classrooms," said Wehde. "When we deal with our greatest commodity — children — we have to be absolutely certain of their safety."

"While we hope we never have to use lockdown drills in our schools, the purpose of those drills is to plan for situations we can never expect," said Cherry. "Our children's safety was and is the most important factor in any situation."

About an hour later, police called the school and said they apprehended the man "fairly close to Immaculate Heart of Mary," said Wehde. Police did not find a gun, though witnesses earlier had seen him with one, according to the Greensboro News & Record's High Point bureau.

The man, who had been in an argument earlier with people who lived in his girlfriend's apartment complex, was charged with assault on a female, communicating threats and assault with a deadly weapon. He was also served two outstanding warrants and was being held Thursday at the Guilford County Jail in High Point under $25,000 secured bond.

"It's another reminder that the world we live in today is one of potentially great violence," said Wehde.

Although a letter was sent home to all the parents, Wehde said some parents heard about the situation that morning.

"Overall, they understand we have a professional staff that loves the children and will protect them as best as we can," he said. "They know we have safety protocols in place. They see our diligence for the concern and the safety of their children."

Wehde said the school regularly meets with law enforcement authorities to maintain a high level of security and safety at the school.

"We're re-evaluating plans to get better and better," he said.

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

Faith, Tradition, & Academic Excellence

"The values that are taught at home are reinforced through a Catholic school education."
- St. Ann's Parent

MACS
Mecklenburg Area Catholic Schools
www.charlottediocese.org/catholicschools.html
or call the Admissions Office
704.370.3273

OPEN HOUSES

Charlotte Catholic High School (9-12)
7702 Pineville-Matthews Road
Charlotte, NC 28226
Oct. 12 3:00-6:00 pm

Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School (6-8)
3100 Park Road
Charlotte, NC 28209
Oct. 12 1:00-3:00 pm

Our Lady of the Assumption Catholic School (K-5)
4225 Shamrock Drive
Charlotte, NC 28215

St. Ann Catholic School (K-5)
600 Hillside Avenue
Charlotte, NC 28209

St. Gabriel Catholic School (K-5)
3028 Providence Road
Charlotte, NC 28211

St. Mark Catholic School (K-5) & (6)
14750 Stumptown Road
Huntersville, NC 28078

St. Matthew Catholic School (K-5)
11525 Elm Lane
Charlotte, NC 28277

St. Patrick Catholic School (K-5)
1125 Buchanan Street
Charlotte, NC 28203
Oct. 26 1:30-3:30 pm

MACS proudly offers Catholic Christian values to a diverse community of boys and girls in grades K-12.

The Transitus of St. Francis

Death, history of saint recalled at service

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

HENDERSONVILLE — The Transitus of St. Francis — the celebration before the feast.

Franciscans throughout the world honor St. Francis of Assisi on Oct. 4, but they also celebrate, on Oct. 3, the Transitus: St. Francis' passing from earthly to eternal life.

"It's like a wake service because we remember the person's life, but it's also joyful," said Franciscan Father John Salvas, parochial vicar at Immaculate Conception Church.

St. Francis' attitude, Father Salvas said, "puts life in perspective. For me, he saw it as an old, worn-out shoe that you discard for something new and better. He died resembling Christ right at the end, stripped of everything."

On Oct. 3, the Capuchin Franciscan friars from Immaculate Conception and members of the St. Francis of the Hills Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order, which meets there, processed down the church's center aisle.

Readers recounted the saint's last days, described by Thomas of Celano, his fellow friar and first biographer.

Thomas' account says "the friars sang the Canticle (of the Creatures) many times a day to comfort the saint's failing spirit, and sometimes into the night as well."

St. Francis wrote this joyful canticle to praise God through all creation. It ends with, "All praise be yours, my Lord, through Sister Death, from whose embrace no mortal can escape."

Throughout the service, the story was interspersed with everyone singing verses from "All Creatures of Our God and King," a version of the canticle.

St. Francis blessed each of the friars, and, Thomas said, "asked for bread, and he blessed it and, like Christ at the last supper, distributed it to all present, while the Gospel of St. John was read beginning with the Passion."

As Rev. Mr. Tony Marini read the Passion at the service, Father Salvas blessed a round loaf of freshly baked bread, which was broken into pieces and distributed to the participants.

The story states St. Francis saw Death enter the room, "and he asked a brother to announce as a herald of arms does, the solemn arrival of his expected guest...."

He requested the friars place him on the ground. His nakedness covered with sackcloth and his head covered with ashes and dust, he recited Psalm 142. After which, Thomas wrote, Francis "died singing, in the forty-sixth year of his age, and the twenty-fifth of his conversion."

Those in Friday's congregation also recited the psalm.

As is traditional at the Transitus, the friars renewed their vows to "observe the Rule of the friars Minor ... living in obedience, without property and in chastity." The Secular Franciscans renewed their commitments to "live all the days of my life the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ in the Secular Franciscan Order by observing its rule of life ... so that I may reach the goal of perfect Christian love."

"I've always loved the Transitus," Brother Francisco said. "It's probably the only celebration where all the orders come together."

The Transitus "reminds us death is not the end," said Lazaro, minister (president) of the St. Clare Fraternity in Asheville. "It should not be a sad occasion, it's happy, from this place to a better place."

Larry Carter, who made his permanent Secular Franciscan profession in June 1941, said the Transitus is "just reliving the death of Francis .... He wasn't afraid of death, but welcomed it. Too bad we can't all look at death that way."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI

Oct. 4 is the feast day of St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint of animals, the environment and merchants.

St. Francis gave up his wealth to serve the poor, and is also remembered for his deep affection for other creatures and his thankfulness to God for the wonder of creation. St. Francis is considered the founder of all Franciscan orders. The mission and, subsequently, the city of San Francisco were named in his honor.

During the last years of his relatively short life (he died at 44) he was half blind and seriously ill. Two years before his death, he received the stigmata, the real and painful wounds of Christ in his hands, feet and side.

Catholic Social Services

Catholic Social Services
Adoption Information Meeting
for Russia and China

Saturday, Oct. 25 - 2pm
Diocesan office: 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte
Info: Michele or Carol at 888-990-4199

Secular Franciscans celebrate Transitus with new candidates

Participants reflect on St. Francis' inspiration

BY ELLEN NEERINCX SIGMON
CORRESPONDENT

LENOIR — Each year at their Transitus service, the Hickory Secular Franciscans celebrate the passage of St. Francis of Assisi from earthly life to everlasting life. They do so with hymns, prayers and readings from accounts of the saint's life.

Six candidates for profession into the Secular Franciscan Order participated in this year's Transitus service held at St. Francis of Assisi Church Oct. 3. The feast of St. Francis, the patron saint of animals and the environment, is Oct. 4.

Secular Franciscans strive to observe the Gospel by following the example of St. Francis, founder of the Franciscan Order who made Christ the inspiration and the center of his life. They promise to devote themselves especially to careful reading of the Gospel — going from Gospel to life and from life to the Gospel — as St. Francis is known for taking the Gospel literally.

To become a member of the order, an interested person goes through an inquiry stage of four to six months before applying for candidacy. Candidates wait 18 months, participating in meetings and events with their local groups, before they can go through the rite of profession.

The Hickory Secular Franciscans will have 17 members after their current candidates make their rite of profession at the church Oct. 12, and have two potential members in the inquiry stage. Several of the candidates read accounts of St. Francis at the Transitus service.

Candidate Bill Borst read an account of the appearance of the stigmata — the marks of Christ's crucifixion — on the hands, feet and side of St. Francis after he prayed to experience the pains of Christ's Passion.

Borst has traveled to Assisi, Italy, three times and originally became interested in St. Francis as an historical figure. St. Francis, born at Assisi in Umbria around 1181 or 1182 (the exact date is uncertain), died there in October 1226.

"I knew what an influential person he was, but after I went to Assisi, I did some reading," said Borst. "I got fascinated with him, with the power he had in communication, in getting to all those people in a time frame when communication was word of mouth or occasionally written."

Candidate Yong Sun Thompson said her mother was a Secular Franciscan in Korea.

"She was very devoted to it. I grew up with it," said Thompson.

Born in Korea, Thompson immigrated to the United States with her mother 28 years ago. She and her 9-year-old son live in Lenoir and are parishioners at St. Francis of Assisi Church.

PHOTO BY ELLEN N. SIGMON

Ruth Thoni, a Secular Franciscan, holds a replica of her husband's San Damiano cross at the Transitus service at St. Francis of Assisi Church in Lenoir Oct. 3.

"I was in charismatic prayer groups and felt the Holy Spirit calling to me," she said. "I wanted to do something better, something more than just going to Mass on Sundays."

Candidate Dr. Doug Miller, a parishioner at St. Joseph Church in Newton, read during the service an account of how a brother saw the soul of St. Francis ascending after his death. It was St. Francis who interested Miller in the Secular Franciscans.

"My approach to religion has always been intellectual," said Miller. "St. Francis had a very simple, pious, loving relationship with Christ. I needed that to balance my personality."

Candidates Becky Snow of St. Francis of Assisi Church and Ellie Obrist of St. Elizabeth Church in Boone also credit St. Francis with inspiring them.

"I've always loved St. Francis," said Snow, who read from the Rule of the Secular Franciscan Order during the service, became interested in the group after attending an earlier Transitus service.

"I am drawn to him (St. Francis), and his love of people and animals," said Obrist, who grew up around Franciscans.

"I was raised by Franciscans and received all my sacraments from Franciscans," she said. "I was raised with stories of the kindness and gentleness of Franciscans."

Candidate Marilyn Dunphy worked for Franciscan organizations in many capacities in New York for several years.

"They treated me like family," she said. "I was their sister. I got to know their way of life. They wanted me to join, but I didn't do it. Now, years later, I'm doing it."

"I think if more people thought they could live the Gospel way of life, it would be a better world," Dunphy added. "It starts with one person, so I'll do my bit."

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information on the Secular Franciscans, call (800) FRANCIS or, in the Hickory area, call Bill Brockhoff at (828) 464-5113.

Upcoming workshop to discuss Cherokee, Catholic issues

BRYSON CITY — Many new residents in western North Carolina know the Cherokee people have roots that go deeply into the history of the area. What is often not known is the history of the Cherokee, their contributions to the culture and the travails they have faced. The events of the past still have implications for the life of present-day Cherokee people.

"Catholics and Cherokees: Learning from Each Other," a free workshop hosted by the Smoky Mountain Vicariate and funded by an Operation Rice Bowl grant, will examine these and other issues at St. Joseph Church Oct. 18.

The workshop will help participants to better understand the history of the Cherokee and current issues of major concern to them. A part of the program will be the linking of Catholic social teachings to Cherokee issues and the importance of advocacy and dialogue in contemporary society.

Presenters include Patty Grant, social worker advocate for the Tribal Diabetes Program and member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, who will present information on historical trauma and intergenerational grief and its impact on the lives of Cherokee people today, and Cherokee culture and spirituality.

B. Lynne Harlan, public relations assistant to Joyce Dugan at Harrah's Cherokee Casino and a member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, will discuss tribal government and sovereignty, and the political, economic and social impact of high stakes gaming in Cherokee.

Father Shawn O'Neal, administrator at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Cherokee and St. Joseph Church in Bryson City, will link Catholic social teachings with Cherokee issues.

Russ Townsend, archeologist with EBCI Cultural Resources Department and a member of the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma, will discuss Cherokee history including the Trail of Tears and cultural values.

WANT TO GO?

The free workshop will be held 1-4 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 18 at St. Joseph Catholic Church, 316 Main Street in Bryson City. For more information or to register, contact Mary Herr at (828) 497-9498 or maryherr@dnet.net; or call St. Joseph Church at (828) 488-6766.

COURTESY PHOTO

From left: Architect David Clinton; building committee members Nora Resa, Laura Rolls, Father Ricardo Sanchez; architect Michael Hining; and Frank Murphy.

Parish plans expansion, fall fiesta

BISCOE — Once a sleepy little parish, Our Lady of the Americas Church is now home to approximately 1,000 Catholics. A mission of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church in Albemarle, the church's growth has demanded expansion and its new location is now one step closer to reality.

The parish building committee recently presented the master plan and architectural sketches to its members for approval, and is now working with a budget to present the plans to the Diocese of Charlotte. Rev. Mr. Guy Piche, director of diocesan properties office, has been working with the committee to create a road map to bring the project into being.

The parish will celebrate a fall fiesta at the new church site on Sunday, Oct. 12. The event begins with a bilingual Mass at 10 a.m. and following festivities include authentic Mexican food, live music, auction, beauty pageant and a raffle with a $1,000 cash prize.

WANT TO GO?

Our Lady of the Americas Church fall fiesta will take place on Highway 221, one road east of I-220. For more information, contact Laura Rolls at (910) 673-4077.

Brothers in service

COURTESY PHOTO BY R.W. KEENAN

From left: John, Jared and Jesse Keenan are brothers and altar servers serving their first Mass together at Immaculate Conception Church in Hendersonville Sept. 20. The brothers' 92-year-old grandmother, Margaret Keenan, made the trip from Wichita, Kan., for the occasion.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

Golden jubilee

ST. FRANCIS, from page 1

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of the church, parishioners observed 50 hours of eucharistic adoration beginning Thursday morning and ending shortly before the anniversary Mass Saturday morning. Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis concelebrated the Mass with Father Matthew Kauth, administrator, and Father Richard McCue, former pastor of the parish, for a congregation of 200 people.

In recognition of its growing Hispanic population, the Mass was celebrated in both English and Spanish. Bishop-designate Jugis gave his homily in both languages.

Father Kauth and the parish had been anxiously awaiting the arrival of a new crucifix and two statues — Mary of the Immaculate Conception and St. Joseph the Worker with the infant Jesus — which Father Kauth purchased on a recent trip to Spain.

At 10:30 p.m. Friday, the shipment arrived and the statues were put into place for Saturday's celebration. During the Mass, Bishop-designate Jugis blessed the crucifix and statues.

At the conclusion of the Mass, Bishop-designate Jugis led a eucharistic procession to three altars outside the church and concluded with a benediction.

Afterward, parishioners of all ages celebrated their parish anniversary at a church festival at the Macon County Fairgrounds Saturday afternoon, where they enjoyed carnival games, hayrides, a craft fair, a flea market sponsored by the Knights of Columbus and, of course, lots of food.

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis blesses Jack Lehtinen at the church festival Oct. 4. Lehtinen has been a parishioner of St Francis of Assisi Church for 25 years — half the history of the Franklin Catholic church.

St. Francis of Assisi Church was established in the early 1950s by then-Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh. With just eight members, the parish was originally a mission of St. John Church in Waynesville.

By the time the Diocese of Charlotte was established in 1972, St. Francis of Assisi Church had grown at such a consistent pace that then-Bishop Michael J. Begley extended the church's boundaries to include most of Macon county and include Our Lady of the Mountains Church as a mission church.

The Catholic population continued to grow throughout the next decade, and in 1981 a new church was constructed across the street from the original location.

Under the direction of then-pastor Father Richard McCue and then-parochial vicar Father James Collins, an expansion project added a new parish center that included faith formation classrooms, a chapel and pastor's office.

In 1998, Father C. Morris Boyd became the pastor of St. Francis of Assisi, where he served for the next five years. In order to better serve Hispanic Catholics, Father Boyd took a yearlong sabbatical to Mexico to study Spanish and serve two churches with 64,000 parishioners. He returned to the Diocese of Charlotte this past summer to serve as administrator of St. Francis of Assisi Church in Jefferson and its mission, St. Frances of Rome Church in Sparta.

Today, St. Francis of Assisi Church represents a wide cross-section of the mountain population — retirees, young families and a growing Hispanic population. The parish community is thriving, not just in its population, but also in its spiritual mission. The parishioners attribute this in large part to Father Kauth.

Like Bishop-designate Jugis, Father Kauth is fluent in Spanish, having spent a month in Spain prior to his coming to St. Francis of Assisi. With this fluency, Father Kauth has been able to minister to the Hispanic parishioners as well as Anglos.

"Father Kauth has done so many wonderful things for my soul," said Rosa Hoffart, a parishioner of St. Francis of Assisi Church for the past 17 years. "He is doing the job he is supposed to do — bring people closer to God."

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

HIGH-ADVENTURE HAYRIDE

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

St. Francis of Assisi parishioners enjoy a bumpy hayride across a field at the Macon County Fairgrounds.

4TH ANNUAL KENNEDY LECTURE

OCTOBER 25, 2003

LIVING WITH AN ADULT CONSCIENCE

BY

JAMES F. KEENAN, S.J.

professor of moral theology at Weston Jesuit School of Theology, Cambridge, Massachusetts

9:00 AM - 2:00 PM
St. Peter's Catholic Church
Charlotte, N.C.

Admission is free, but please phone to reserve your place. 704-332-2901, ext. 12. Light lunch will be served.

www.stpeterscatholic.org for more information

The Catholic News & Herald

Can you answer "YES" to any of these questions?

1. Do you need a good buyer for a car, house, property, etc.?
2. Do you need a renter for a vacation place, house, or other property?
3. Do you need qualified employees for your business?
4. Does your church or organization need good employees?

If so, put THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD to work for YOU!
Over 125,000 READERS could see your classified ad in this paper every week - for only 60 cents per word ($12 minimum)!

CALL Cindi Feerick at (704) 370-3332 today!

CFCC

Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center

Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity

5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com

Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

THE BEST OF WALL STREET JUST DOWN YOUR STREET.

- Stocks
- Mutual Funds
- Government Securities
- Corporate Bonds
- Tax-Free Bonds
- IRA's and Pension Plans
- Annuities
- Money Management

FOR MORE INFORMATION, CONTACT:

Les Davaz
Member, St. Patrick
Financial Consultant

(800) 438-0397
(704) 331-2233

100 N. Tryon Street, Suite 3300
Charlotte, NC 28202

SMITH BARNEY citigroup

©2003 Citigroup Global Markets Inc. Member SIPC. Smith Barney is a division and service mark of Citigroup Global Markets Inc. and its affiliates and is used and registered throughout the world. CITIGROUP and the Umbrella Device are trademarks and service marks of Citicorp or its affiliates and are used and registered throughout the world.

Half-century of multiculturalism

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Parishioners of Our Lady of the Highways Church in Taylorsville enjoy international cuisine during the 50th anniversary celebration of the church Oct. 5.

THOMASVILLE, from page 1

lar title, the parish and pastor Franciscan Father Thomas Fitzpatrick developed a floating feast day on the fourth Sunday of September.

This year, however, the feast day was pushed back to Oct. 5 to coincide with the parish's 50th anniversary celebration of Our Lady of the Highways Church.

"It was in 1953 that the cornerstone was placed on the 3.5 acre plot on which Our Lady of the Highways stands today," said Father Fitzpatrick.

Father Fitzpatrick speaks proudly of the church's exquisite Spanish mission style architecture, which is unusual for the Carolinas.

"Perhaps it was a sign of prophecy, because at that time the Hispanic population was zero and today the Hispanic population of the parish has grown to better than half," said Father Fitzpatrick.

Marci Garcia, a parishioner of Mexican heritage, said there has been much Hispanic growth since she arrived at the church 13 years ago.

"There were only three or four Hispanic families. We celebrated Mass in Spanish maybe once a year (in the summer)," said Garcia, who runs the youth group and serves as a translator at Mass.

Our Lady of the Highways Church developed a Hispanic ministry in 1983, which began as a 17-week program.

"Now there are many members of the Hispanic community," said Garcia. "The community has grown to the point that we have Spanish Masses every week, as well as Hispanic youth groups."

Delfina Paniagua, a native of El Salvador and a parish coordinator for the Hispanic community, expressed satisfaction with the growth rate of Hispanics in the parish.

"(What I like most) is that we understand that there are other customs and backgrounds that are good to learn about," she said.

Hispanic cultures are among 21 countries that make up the parish, which now boasts over 450 families.

Irene Poppe and Louise Rawlins, who were among the original 12 families involved in the establishment of Our Lady of the Highways Church, agreed the parish has come a very long way in the last 50 years.

"It is good to see so many people celebrating as a parish family," said Poppe, who emigrated from Poland to escape war. "It means that we are growing."

The festive 50th anniversary celebration began with a Benediction by Father Fitzpatrick. During his homily, he tied in the worship practices of Israel, wherein the temple was the center of prayer and sacrifice and also the place in which the Ark of the Covenant rested.

"This building (named in honor of the new Ark of the Covenant — Mary) is where the people of God come to worship Jesus Christ, who sacrificed himself for our salvation," said Father Fitzpatrick.

"This church is a symbol of the presence of God. It is a beacon of the charity and love of God," he said. "People put a lot into making this church; not for themselves, but for the love of God. The images and icons on the walls and windows throughout the entire church tell the story of the life, Passion, death and resurrection of Christ."

Father Fitzpatrick concluded by thanking both the "old timers and "new timers" of the parish, for all the sacrifices they made to build and keep the church going.

Founded as a mission church in the early 1950s, Our Lady of the Highways Church was under the administration of either Holy Rosary Church in Lexington or Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in High Point until July 1970, when the Oblates of St. Francis de Sales assisted Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh in establishing Our Lady of the Highways as a parish.

"(The festival) celebrates the perseverance and longevity of the faith and discipleship, as well as the commitment of the parishioners of Our Lady of the Highways for the last 50 years," said Dr. Cris Villapando, director of the diocesan Office of Faith Formation, who joined in the festivities.

In 1980, the parish added a picnic center and mobile classroom units for faith formation classes.

Rev. Mr. Wayne Adams, a convert since 1989 and permanent deacon to the parish since 1995, said both he and the parish "have gone through a multitude of changes. Among the (recent) changes I have witnessed is the addition of both the rectory and the parish center."

Those additions were dedicated Sept. 17, 1989.

"Today is a great opportunity to put our two communities together (Hispanic and Anglo)," said Garcia. "It shows that we can work together, even as we see and learn the customs of each other's countries."

Editor's Note: For more on the history of Our Lady of the Highways Church, please see the Parish Profile in our next issue, Oct. 17.

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Irene Poppe, a long-time parishioner of Our Lady of the Highways Church, displays icons from her native Poland at the anniversary celebration Oct. 5.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

Carolina Volkswagen

7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte

(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection

Drivers wanted.

Lowest Prices

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

The Franciscan Center

Catholic Gift & Book Store

Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!

Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday

(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Decade as minor basilica

ST. LAWRENCE, from aisle as Father Wilbur Thomas, pastor, and others processed to the altar for the bilingual celebration Mass Oct. 5.

"(The church) is a major presence of Christ in western North Carolina," said Father Thomas, "(and) a celebration of the reality and growth since the building was dedicated as a basilica."

In 1993, Pope John Paul II designated St. Lawrence as a minor basilica — from the Greek word for "house of the king," basilica is a term of special designation given by the Holy Father to certain churches because of their antiquity, dignity, historical importance or significance as a place of worship. Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta, former bishop of Charlotte, said it was a "great honor" for him to dedicate the church as the Basilica of St. Lawrence in October of that year.

During his anniversary Mass homily, Father Thomas spoke about how one visitor, Rafael Guastavino, was unable to find a seat during a Mass in the earlier St. Lawrence Church sanctuary in the summer of 1905. Guastavino, a renowned Spanish architect working in the area on the Biltmore House, believed a Catholic church should have enough seats for all strangers and offered to design a grander facility.

Guastavino crafted the new church in the style of Spanish Renaissance, rarely found in this area of the country, and donated the church's elliptical dome, which has a span of 58 by 82 feet — the largest freestanding elliptical dome in North America. When Guastavino died in 1908, his son took over construction and Bishop Leo Haid dedicated the new church in October 1909. Cardinal James Gibbons consecrated the church — the first one to be consecrated in the Vicariate of North Carolina — in October 1920.

The church, now on the National Register of Historic Places, houses the crypt of Guastavino.

"Many strangers have made it (the basilica) their home, a place of solace," said Father Thomas.

The challenge now, he said, is "how to make this wonderful environment a place to call home and to feel at home with one another. The church is not complete but a work in progress, being fleshed out by our living relationship in coming together within these walls."

After the anniversary Mass, approximately 500 parishioners joined a catered reception at the Asheville Civic Center.

COURTESY PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

The Basilica of St. Lawrence, designed by a Spanish architect in the early 1900s, was designated by Pope John Paul II as a minor basilica in 1993.

Lucille Lamy, a parishioner for 76 years, recalled many changes since joining the church at age 2 — the baptismal font had been moved several times and a side door had been added to accommodate the increase in Mass attendance.

In keeping with Vatican II, in 1968 the altar was moved to the middle of the sanctuary; the altar's fresco of the Last Supper and its flanking panels were removed and topped with a 1,800-pound block of Tennessee marble to form a new altar table.

Tommy Davis, whose Sicilian grandfather helped build some of the church's interior, has been a parishioner since birth. "(The basilica) is a place that makes me feel holy," he said.

"It's very special to have a church of this caliber ... and the devotion of the parishioners and priests to maintain the basilica as a historic site," said Joanne Coates, a parishioner.

"It's not easy to build a community of people," said Father Joseph Dinh, parochial vicar. "No community is perfect. We need to recognize our weaknesses and our strengths to move forward."

The basilica, which now boasts over 930 families, offers perpetual eucharistic adoration, instituted by then-pastor Father Clark Kaltreider in 1989, and a weekly Spanish language Mass.

"It's good seeing the interaction among people, some who go to different Masses and don't get to see each other often, in a parish setting at home with each other," said Father Thomas.

"We needed something to draw us together as a community," he said. "The church is an expression of faith and sacrifice of many people over the years."

MOVING?

Take us with you!

Please help us reduce postal fees and give us your NEW address (or cancellation notice) BEFORE you move.

If you have your address label, include that, too.

Name

Old address

Old city zip

NEW address

NEW city/state zip

Date of move/cancellation:

Mail changes to:
The Catholic News & Herald
Address Changes
1123 S. Church Street
Charlotte, NC 28203

Or e-mail this info to:
catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

Thank you.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd). Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue:10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
- Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

JOHN T. WEISENBERGER

EXECUTIVE CLUB Hendrick AUTOMOTIVE GROUP 2001

Hendrick Acura
6824 E. Independence Blvd.
Charlotte, NC 28227

704-566-2317
704-566-2320 Fax
800-763-7811 Toll Free
www.hendrickacura.com

Culture Watch

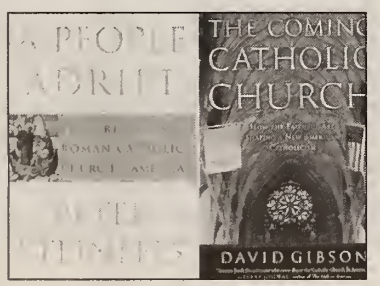
A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Two books take a long view of the U.S. Catholic Church

REVIEWED BY BRIAN T. OLSZEWSKI
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

During 2002, books with "Catholic" and "crisis" in the title were a staple in a bookstore's religion section. Their focus was the crisis of 2002 — sexual abuse of children by clergy. These two new books by Peter Steinfels and David Gibson recognize that, while sexual abuse by clergy is a part of it, the Catholic crisis is deeper, wider and more than an annual event.

Unlike some authors who, in writing about the sexual abuse crisis, cited a specific cause, such as dissent or homosexual clergy, Steinfels and Gibson demonstrate that the crisis is the result of multiple factors. Each factor, explained in a tone that is calm but emphatic, will give readers cause to think.



"A People Adrift: The Crisis of the Roman Catholic Church in America," by Peter Steinfels. Simon and Schuster (New York, 2003). 392 pp., $26.00

"The Coming Catholic Church: How the Faithful are Shaping a New American Catholicism," by David Gibson. Harper (San Francisco, 2003). 350 pp., $23.95.

As an editor, writer, and university instructor, Steinfels has the credentials to state, "American Catholicism, to put it bluntly, is in trouble." He thinks decisions in the next decade or two will determine the church's direction for the remainder of this century.

His opening chapter provides a concise overview of the scandal and the issues it raised. Steinfels sees a "vacuum of leadership," not only during the sex abuse scandal, but also in liturgy, catechesis, the role of women, institutions, and among the bishops themselves.

As he ends one chapter, Steinfels links it to the next. For example, concerns about worship lead to how the faith is being handed on from one generation to the next. A short but thorough history of catechetics in the U.S. leads him to conclude that adults must be the prime market for religious education.

In regard to women, Steinfels maintains, "Catholicism is at a very strange juncture." He is thorough in delineating church teachings and attitudes toward sexual matters and the role of women, including the ordination of women to the priesthood.

"To forbid discussion of a church practice is a virtual admission that it cannot withstand scrutiny," he writes of women's ordination. He states, "If the church's case against ordaining women to the priesthood is valid, it should withstand the test of Catholics' becoming familiar with women ordained to the diaconate and women holding positions of real decision-making power."

In his chapter on leadership Steinfels not only speaks of bishops, priests, religious and laity, he also speaks to them. His critique of bishops' leadership cites failures of comprehension, empathy, decisiveness, focus, persistence, follow-through, openness and explanation.

Maintaining that as a group U.S. bishops are less likely to take the initiative on issues than they did 20 years ago, he asks, "Why are American bishops so consistently spineless in their dealings with Rome? Why are they so pliable before the nation's handful of cardinals? Do they fear being excluded from the club of other bishops? Do they fear the low-level harassment that Vatican offices can conduct?"

Meanwhile, in "The Coming Catholic Church," his first book, Gibson touches upon most of the same topics as Steinfels, as well as clericalism and the church after Pope John Paul II. He is optimistic about the reform process, acknowledging it as a "difficult road ahead," while calling it "inspiring and invigorating."

He says that women, Latinos and young people are the "tripod on which the future of American Catholicism rests. Remove any of them, and the church will be in serious trouble."

Gibson is a former religion writer at the Newark Star-Ledger daily newspaper and a former Vatican Radio reporter who converted to Catholicism as an adult. His book draws upon polling research, Catholic thought over the last couple of decades and interviews with people who bring an educated perspective to aspects of the crisis.

Both books are must reading.

These books are a source of personal, prayerful reflection, a basis for candid discussion and an inspiration for action to correct those flaws that threaten to weaken, and possibly destroy, the institutional church. Their words are too important to be ignored if Catholics are to witness a church — their church — as one, holy, catholic and apostolic rather than as one that is perpetually in crisis.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: OCT. 12, 2003

Oct. 12, Twenty-eighth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle B Readings:
1) Wisdom 7:7-11
Psalm 90:12-17
2) Hebrews 4:12-13
3) Gospel: Mark 10:17-30

BY JEAN DENTON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

He was a skilled laborer, unobtrusive of personality, who lived quietly and simply in a one-room apartment. He enjoyed his work and his co-workers, and was a loyal, caring friend and family member. When he died in his 70s, those who knew him were left scratching their heads in bewilderment. Through savings and careful, wise investment, he'd amassed a small fortune and bequeathed it, in the form of a foundation, to meet the educational needs of the indigent youth of his community. Maybe you read his story in the newspaper, as I did.

His family and neighbors had no idea he had all that money, not to mention such acumen in investing. They wondered: Why did he never buy himself a house or even a car? Why didn't he ever go on a nice vacation? Why didn't he get a stylish wardrobe or own a computer?

My guess is that he had an Old-Testament sense of wisdom as revealed in this weekend's reading. He preferred the simple life of work, friends and family so much that he eschewed even the smallest excesses that would detract from it.

Rather than comfort, he preferred the intensity and beauty and love of the everyday dance with humanity: toil, conversation, conflict and reconciliation, hurting and healing, quiet, resting.

And likely, he decided not to give away his money while he was still alive because the attention and admiration would change all his relationships.

That was the spirit of wisdom he chose. The scriptural version explains it metaphorically: "I preferred her to scepter and throne, and deemed riches nothing in comparison with her.... Beyond health and comeliness I loved her, and I chose to have her rather than the light because the splendor of her never yields to sleep.... All good things together came to me in her company."

Questions:

What creature comforts in your life do you mistakenly consider to be necessities? How do these comforts lead you to sleepwalk through life and miss some of the divine gifts it offers?

Scripture to Illustrate:

"Go and sell what you have and give to the poor; you will then have treasure in heaven. After that, come and follow me" (Mark 10:21cd).

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 12 - OCTOBER 18

Sunday (Twenty-eighth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Wisdom 7:7-11, Hebrews 4:12-13, Mark 10:17-30; Monday, Romans 1:1-7, Luke 11:29-32; Tuesday (St. Callistus I), Romans 1:16-25, Luke 11:37-41; Wednesday (St. Teresa of Avila), Romans 2:1-11, Luke 11:42-46; Thursday (St. Hedwig, St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, St. Marguerite d'Youville), Romans 3:21-30, Luke 11:47-54; Friday (St. Ignatius of Antioch), Romans 4:1-8, Luke 12:1-7; Saturday (St. Luke), 2 Timothy 4:10-17, Luke 10:1-9

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 19 - OCTOBER 25

Sunday (Twenty-ninth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Isaiah 53:10-11, Hebrews 4:14-16, Mark 10:35-45; Monday (St. Paul of the Cross), Romans 4:20-25, Luke 12:13-21; Tuesday, Romans 5:12, 15, 17-19, 20-21, Luke 12:35-38; Wednesday, Romans 6:12-18, Luke 12:39-48; Thursday (St. John of Capistrano), Romans 6:19-23, Luke 12:49-53; Friday (St. Anthony Mary Claret), Romans 7:18-25, Luke 12:54-59; Saturday, Romans 8:1-11, Luke 13:1-9

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

TV WATCH

UPN aspires to mediocrity

BY DAVID DiCERTO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK (CNS) — UPN once again aspires to mediocrity and achieves it with the most anemic lineup since the hapless 1962 New York Mets. What else should viewers expect from a weekly programming schedule in which the highlight is its Thursday night "WWE Smackdown"?

With its prime-time powerhouse, "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," hanging up her wooden stakes, UPN's parent company, Viacom, has threatened to shut down the network unless its new offerings — none of which can be wholly recommended as appropriate family fare — pay Nielsen dividends. A word of advice to UPN execs: Start sending out those resumes.

UPN's new fall series at a glance:

— "Eve," Mondays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

Hip-hop artist Eve plays an up-and-coming fashion designer trying to navigate the Miami singles scene in search of true romance.

Don't Bother: UPN is crossing its fingers that Eve's popularity will translate recording platinum into prime-time gold, but the show's canned situations and forced humor — some of it sexually laced — should make channel-surfing the second most popular sport on Monday nights this fall.

— "All of Us," Tuesdays, 8:30-9 p.m. EDT.

Domestic comedy executive-produced by Will Smith and actress-wife Jada Pinkett-Smith about a Los Angeles entertainment critic refereeing hostilities between his new fiance and his ex-wife, with his 5-year-old son caught in the crossfire.

Some Interest: Despite its lackluster writing, the show does take the potentially detrimental effects of divorce on young children seriously. Unfortunately, the solution offered subscribes to the fatuous assumption that the family unit is a malleable concept which can accommodate any domestic arrangement, as long as everyone plays nice.

APOSTLES

STANDING FIRM AGAINST THE 'RIVER'

CNS PHOTO FROM WARNER BROS.

Sean Penn and Kevin Bacon star in a scene from the dramatic movie "Mystic River," a provocative, morally ambiguous tale of three former childhood pals contentiously thrown together after the daughter of one is murdered, the second becomes a suspect and the third is the homicide detective on the case.

'Mystic River' deep with plot, suspense

BY GERRI PARE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK (CNS) — A childhood incident has shattering consequences when a murder reunites three former friends in the Clint Eastwood-directed "Mystic River" (Warner Bros.).

Eastwood seems to have come full circle, from once having starred as vigilante cop Dirty Harry in action movies that glamorized violence to directing more mature films such as "Unforgiven" and this gritty drama to address the horror and human consequences of violence.

Although this is not a morally satisfying film where the clarity of black-and-white characterizations leads to good triumphing over evil, it is a work that screams its repulsion at those who have harmed a child — and demonstrates the terrible effects that can have, even decades later.

The setting is a working-class Boston neighborhood where three boys are carving their name in wet cement when a car pulls up and two men claiming to be cops scold them — and order Dave, the most timid boy, into their car. Three days later Dave escapes from them, forever haunted by the sexual abuse he suffered at their hands.

Nearly 30 years later, the three are no longer friends, although Dave (Tim Robbins) and Jimmy (Sean Penn) have married cousins. Sean (Kevin Bacon) is a troubled homicide detective whose wife left him months ago, gave birth and phones him periodically — but never answers his plea to come home or at least tell him the baby's name. Jimmy went to the other side of the law, served time, and now is a corner-store owner and devoted family man, father of three girls. Katie (Emmy Rossum), the oldest at 19, is the apple of his eye.

Underachiever Dave has a little boy and an earnest wife, Celeste (Marcia Gay Harden), who tolerates his moodiness and secretive ways.

The story kicks into high gear when Katie and her girlfriends go out barhopping the night before her planned elopement with a young man (Thomas Guiry) her dad detests. In the middle of the night, Dave arrives home in bloody clothes and tells Celeste a suspect story about overreacting to a mugger, killing him and fleeing.

But the next day, Katie's bloodied body is discovered and detective Sean is assigned to the case. An enraged Jimmy promises to get the killer himself and uses his thuggish brothers-in-law to scour the neighborhood for information.

As Sean focuses on Katie's boyfriend and his tangled family history, he can't ignore a very nervous Dave as an emerging suspect, but determines to sort it all out before a near-crazed Jimmy falls off the straight and narrow.

With a script by Brian Helgeland ("L.A. Confidential") from Dennis Lehane's riveting best seller, Eastwood has a taut narrative to work with and gets some remarkable performances from his cast. Hands down, Penn steals the movie from the ensemble cast, his grief fueling the emotional heart of the story. His portrayal, at once intensely reined in yet explosive, may be impossible for Academy members to ignore at Oscar-nomination time.

Bacon's detective fills the bill, as does Laurence Fishburne in a smaller role as his police partner, but another standout is Robbins, who conveys how deeply frightened and vulnerable Dave is. As Jimmy's wife, Laura Linney shows her cold practicality when push comes to shove and justice be damned, while Harden as Dave's wife gradually unravels on screen.

In addition to directing, Eastwood produced the film and composed the music score which uses fiery, dramatic passages to underline key plot points. Visually, the on-location shoot in Boston serves the film well — unlike the preponderance of foul language, which may be realistic but is still unnecessary and unwelcome.

These are morally complex, fleshed-out characterizations that defy easy categories. What is of interest is not the lack of a crime-does-not-pay finish, but the inescapable conclusion that the murderous violence that resulted had its genesis in a life-deforming act of sexual molestation. We are shown how violence begets violence and its reach can extend to a new generation. This is quite different from the kind of mindless action film where violence seems to have no consequences and violent perpetrators are often made to look heroic.

Though grimly disturbing, "Mystic River" manages to be both a suspenseful and sobering meditation on our flawed human nature and capacity for evil.

Because of brief but intense violence, much rough language and occasional profanity, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is R — restricted.

Pare is the director of the Office for Film & Broadcasting of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

SALE: Further reductions through October!!
Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm
Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas
704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926
McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.
Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

RECHARGING SPIRITUAL BATTERIES

Hispanic youth learn about God's presence, overcoming setbacks

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

HENDERSONVILLE — Half the people in the group sat blindfolded, thinking about their lives. As they listened to soothing, spiritual music, Claretian Father Jorge Iban Gallo spoke softly of the presence of God within them, of forgiveness, family, friends and being able to accept love.

Some 46 Hispanic youth, ages 15 to 25, from parishes in Hendersonville, Asheville, Canton, Andrews, Franklin and Murphy, gathered in the Immaculata School gym for a confidence-building workshop Oct. 4-6.

The other half of the group returned, laughing, shouting and clapping, before switching places with the blindfolded group and repeating the exercise.

Clapping, said Eduardo Bernal, Hispanic ministry coordinator of the Smoky Mountain Vicariate, was a form of encouragement. Being blindfolded, he said, emphasized that eyes are not the only way to see.

Father Gallo, originally from Bogotá, Colombia, is an instructor at the Southeast Pastoral Institute in Miami, Fla., which trains Hispanic parish leaders. Bernal contacted him after Franciscan Father John Salvas, parochial vicar at Immaculate Conception Church in Hendersonville, asked Bernal for a youth activity. Bernal organized the event with Inocencia Chacón, the Asheville Vicariate's Hispanic ministry coordinator; and her husband, Jorge, Hispanic choir leader at the Basilica of St. Lawrence in Asheville.

"A lot of these people are not in any youth group, so that is why I needed them to come to this," Bernal said.

Father Gallo spoke about being able to bounce back from setbacks, about not being possessive of people and things.

"I liked how [Father Gallo] is really dynamic; he expresses serious topics with jokes and things that youth can understand," said Irene Medina, a team member from Hendersonville and a computer-science student at the University of North Carolina at Asheville.

Among the ideas Father Gallo conveyed: "The most important thing is the meaning of life, to pray for life, have a plan for your life. (We must) erase from ourselves the wrong ideas about our life, such as when you're in love, you think the other person is your whole life and that's not true."

In one exercise, Father Gallo had each person write on pieces of paper things that made their lives either worthwhile or difficult.

Small votive lights, representing Jesus as the light of life, surrounded a colorful serape on the floor. By placing the pieces of paper in piles on either side of a Bible on the serape, the youth symbolically gave both the good and bad things in their lives to Christ.

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Claretian Father Jorge Iban Gallo makes talks about spirituality and life during the Hispanic youth workshop at Immaculata School in Hendersonville Oct. 4-6.

Sergio Ruis from Franklin said the workshop had recharged his "spiritual batteries."

"I know more about how to talk to people about my faith and to trust them," said, Viris Marin of Hendersonville. "If the person is really your friend, he will help you any time you need it."

"I know [the workshop] is going to have some kind of effect," Bernal said. "After other similar gatherings, people have a more positive attitude."

The youth took home pamphlets Bernal provided on such topics as the Mass, sacraments, Mary and Scripture. The workshop concluded with an afternoon Mass in Immaculate Conception Church.

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

Padres meet with bishop-designate

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

The Hispanic priests of the Diocese of Charlotte met with Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis at the diocesan pastoral center Sept. 24. The bishop-designate and the priests got to know one another, learned about the diocesan plan for Hispanic ministry and exchanged their experiences in the priesthood. From left: Father Enrique Gonzalez, parochial vicar of St. Aloysius Church in Hickory; Redemptorist Father Alvara Riquelme, administrator of St. Joseph Church in Kannapolis; Capuchin Father Juan Carlos Hildalgo, parochial vicar of Our Lady of Mercy Church in Winston-Salem; Father Fidel Melo, administrator of new Boonville mission; Father Julio Cesar Dominguez, parochial vicar of Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury; Bishop-designate Jugis; Vincentian Father Jaime Gonzalez, parochial vicar of Our Lady of Guadalulpe Church in Charlotte; Father Jose Antonio Juya, Gastonia Vicariate coordinator of Hispanic Ministry; Father Luis Osorio, parochial viacar of Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro; and Father Ricardo Sanchez, administrator of Our Lady of the Americas Church in Biscoe.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

SALES: #1 Health and Nutrition Company expanding. Full training provided. $25-$75/hour part-time/full-time. 1-888-724-7425. http://www.wisdomofwealth.com/?refid=n3

PRODUCTS & SERVICES

INSURANCE: Best Health, Life, LTC and Medicare supplements at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

REAL ESTATE PROPERTY

2.4 ACRE LOT: Gorgeous lot in private, gated community. Across the road from boat and beach facilities on High Rock Lake. Planned amenities include pool, tennis, clubhouse. $50,000. Call 919-481-1682.

FOR SALE

FOR RENT OR SALE: Denver/Maiden. 3-bedroom, 2-bath home on private .5 acre lot. Accessible to St. Joseph or Holy Spirit parish. 828-428-8512.

FOR SALE: Real estate steal. $163,000. Matthews. Tax value $171,600. Market value $182,900. 4 bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths. 2-car garage. Interior completely updated 6 years ago. 704/370-3339 (day); 704/688-0997 (night)

FOR RENT

Snowbirds - Family Vacations - Weekend Getaways. OCEANFRONT condos in Charleston, SC and Hutchinson Island, FL. www.bedonthebeach.com or 704-895-3214

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Vatican right about Iraq

LAGHI, from page 1

Bush on March 5 the president began expounding the reasons for war at length, until the cardinal interrupted to say: "I did not come here only to listen, but also to ask you to listen."

Bush listened to the cardinal, but raised objections to the Vatican's moral arguments against use of force, its rejection of "preventive war" and its warnings about the practical consequences for Iraqis and others.

When Bush said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was training members of the terrorist organization al-Qaida, Cardinal Laghi said he asked him: "Are you sure? Where is the evidence?"

Cardinal Laghi also questioned the administration's conviction that Iraq possessed and was ready to use weapons of mass destruction.

But Bush had no doubt that he was right, the cardinal said. The president acted almost as if he were divinely inspired and "seemed to truly believe in a war of good against evil," Cardinal Laghi said.

"We spoke a long time about the consequences of a war. I asked: 'Do you realize what you'll unleash inside Iraq by occupying it?' The disorder, the conflicts between Shiites, Sunnis and Kurds — everything that has in fact happened," the cardinal said.

Bush insisted that democracy would be the main result.

At the end of the encounter, Cardinal Laghi recounted, Bush said that although they disagreed about many points at least they held common positions on the defense of human life and opposition to human cloning. The cardinal replied that those issues were not the purpose of his mission.

On his way out of the White House, Cardinal Laghi said his sense that Bush and his aides had already made up their minds to attack Iraq was confirmed when a Marine general came up to him, shook his hand and said: "Your eminence, don't worry. What we're going to do, we will do quickly and well."

Three weeks later, air strikes and the ground campaign against Iraq began.

The cardinal said that, in the end, the pope and the church did not appear to have much influence on the decision to go to war or even in prompting a deeper reflection on the issues.

But to a wider global audience, he said, the church made the point that it was committed to peace.

According to a number of other speakers at the conference, the continuing lack of basic services and order in Iraq, along with continuing violence against U.S. occupation forces, demonstrated that the war was a practical mistake as well as a moral failure.

Cardinal Laghi said that in making his case to Bush he was guided by the pope's statements on Iraq and those of the U.S. bishops' conference.

In a written paper submitted to the conference, Bishop Donald W. Wuerl of Pittsburgh detailed the response of U.S. bishops to the terrorist attacks and to the military response that followed.

Bishop Wuerl said, however, that the bishops' moral voice had been weakened by the clerical sex abuse scandal in the United States and the scandal's "spectacular" exploitation by the media.

"As a faith community the church in the United States had never experienced such a scandal or been the object of such intense media coverage and in too many instances manipulation of the story," he said.

"In spite of the scandal the bishops have continued to speak out as a voice of moral authority. However it is only fair to say that that moral authority has been diminished by the scandal," he said.

The conference was sponsored by Il Regno, an Italian Catholic magazine published by the Priests of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, also known as the Dehonians.

Standing up for life

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Parishioners of St. Benedict Church in Greensboro were part of the Greensboro Life Chain on Respect Life Sunday, Oct. 5.

Parishioners join others in Life Chain

GREENSBORO — Parishioners of St. Benedict Church in Greensboro were a part of the 1,700-member interdenominational Life Chain on Battleground Avenue on Respect Life Sunday, Oct. 5.

Father Robert Ferris, pastor of St. Benedict Church, and Rev. Mr. Phillip Killiam, permanent deacon at St. Benedict, were among the participants who stood with placards along the Life Chain, which stretched from Brassfield Avenue to Cornwallis Avenue, to protest abortion to motorists and others.

"This is a solidarity movement showing that we can respect life from conception to the moment of natural death," said Father Ferris. "This is a statement for the culture of life."

Father Ferris said only God has the right and authority to take life.

"By killing the unborn, we don't know what gifts we are rejecting from the Lord," he said. "Even in doubt, we must defer that decision to him."

Retreat to fire up faithful enthusiasm

LAKE JUNALUSKA — "Creating Enthusiasm for the Faith" is the theme of the upcoming 2003 Fire in the Mountains retreat in November. The annual one-day retreat seeks to connect people to each other and to God through faith sharing focused on issues critical to their immediate community and the modern world.

A program of the diocesan Office of Faith Formation and sponsored by the Asheville and Smoky Mountain vicariates, is a gathering for those seeking ways to grow spiritually and share their faith with fellow Christians.

Speakers will discuss what it means to be a disciple in the 21st century and how to bring about a sense of the sacramentality of all creation. Like last year, presentations will be in both English and Spanish.

Featured speaker will be Father Francis Cancro, pastor of St. Eugene Church in Asheville, whose presentations will be in English. Vincentian Father Vincent Finnerty, pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Charlotte, will speak in Spanish.

Msgr. Mauricio W. West, diocesan administrator, will present his reflections on the retreat's theme.

WANT TO GO?

Fire in the Mountains will be held in Harrell Hall at Lake Junaluska (near Waynesville) Nov. 8. Registration begins at 8 a.m. and the event concludes at 3:30 p.m.

Costs (including lunch and refreshments): $20 per person if registered before Oct. 25; $25 per person afterward.

For registration forms, scholarship and additional information, contact Mary Ann Wharton at (828) 667-4227, e-mail fitm@dnet.net or go online at www.fireitm.org. Registration deadline is Oct. 26.

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

The secret of sanctity and happiness

Fidelity to the present moment is key

Spirituality for Today

FATHER JOHN CATOIR
CNS Columnist

Jesus said: "Do not be worried about the food and drink you need to stay alive. After all, isn't life worth more than food and the body worth more than clothes?"

Obviously a mother worries about what she's going to serve for dinner. There are countless legitimate concerns that ordinary people have to deal with every day. The Lord is not asking us to be brain-dead in carrying out our normal duties, he is telling us not to be anxious.

Webster defines anxiety as an intense state of emotional disturbance characterized by varying degrees of psychic tension. God wants us to control our fears. Unless we manage to do this, we never will know the meaning of true joy.

I have been a worrier since I was a little child. Now, as a priest in my 70s, I have come a long way in controlling my fears. In doing so I have liberated the Spirit of Joy within me. I know that Jesus wants me to worry less and trust him more.

"Do not be afraid.... I tell you this that your joy may be full." He wants you and me to be free of all anxiety.

"Take no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take care of itself. Come to me you who are burdened, and I will give you rest." He wants us to cancel the inner noise that awakens fear by immediately coming to him for help. Trust casts out fear.

The secret of sanctity and happiness, according to the great spiritual writers, rests in fidelity to the duty of the present moment. This is key. Most of us live too much in the future. We must learn to reject all the dark thoughts and fears that our imagination conjures up. When the stress mounts, come back to Jesus who abides in you. He will help you to smell the roses, to live in the present.

We owe the Lord our trust. Begin looking at your worries as unwelcome intruders, and do not identify with them. Stand apart from them as an observer. In more severe cases, like those involving temptations to commit suicide, realize that these thoughts come from a dark place outside of you.

Self-identification with your thoughts can cause great suffering. Your fears are not you. Your feelings are not facts. Jesus says, "Be not anxious." Come to him again and again. Simply say: "Jesus, hold me. Jesus, comfort me." This will put you in the present moment immediately. Return to that inner stillness where the Spirit of Joy abides.

Let me repeat this point: You can chase anxious thoughts away by repeating the name of Jesus. Come back to your spiritual center. That is where he abides.

You are the guardian at the gate, the observer who sees certain thoughts as enemies. This very act of observing your thoughts separates you from them.

Fear usually means that you are living too much in the future and not trusting enough in divine providence. Guilt usually means you have forgotten to trust the past to God's mercy. Trust is the only thing we have to give to the Lord.

Live joyfully in the present moment by calling on the name of Jesus in times of distress. Dorothy Day called this the duty of delight.

The knowledge of God's love combined with the practice of observing your thoughts eventually will heal you and introduce you to the joy of being.

Morning, evening prayer orient daily journey toward Christ, pope says

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Marking the rhythms of the day and of life, Christians for centuries have given priority to morning and evening prayer, Pope John Paul II said.

"Tied to important moments of our lives and work," he said, morning and evening prayer are effective ways "to orient our daily journey and direct it toward Christ, the light of the world."

Appearing to be suffering from a cold, the pope read about half the text of his main talk in Italian and only the greetings to pilgrims in other languages at his Oct. 8 general audience.

Among those he greeted, and later posed for a photograph with, were 20 students from the North American College who were to be ordained to the diaconate in St. Peter's Basilica Oct. 9 by Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick of Washington.

"May the light of Christ always shine brightly in your lives," the pope told the U.S. seminarians.

In his prepared text, the pope had written that even though the lives of most men and women today are not strictly regulated by the rising and setting of the sun, the phases of the day still provoke reflection on beginnings and ends and on spiritual light and darkness.

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

"As the sun sets, Christians know that God illuminates even the darkness of night with the splendor of his presence and with the light of his teaching," the pope wrote.

"Evening is the appropriate time to consider before God, in prayer, the day just past," thanking God for the gifts he has given and asking pardon for errors or sins committed, he wrote.

Prayer at the end of each day, he wrote, is also an expression of hope and expectation of the "perennial day," which believers will enjoy at the end of time with Christ, the light of the world.

Meet Chris Godfrey

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

Former members of the New York Giants gave their "Alumni Man of the Year" Award to Chris Godfrey not long ago, but the story was buried under a wave of other football news — especially the opening of the season. That's too bad, because Chris Godfrey is a very special guy, and people everywhere should know more about all the things he's done.

At the University of Michigan, he played in three Rose Bowls, and his nine-year all-star career as a pro was highlighted by a Super Bowl championship with the 1986 Giants. But he wasn't given an award simply because he once happened to be an outstanding right guard. He's also the founder and president of Life Athletes, and the driving force behind the organization's ongoing success. And if the story of his award didn't get much of a play anywhere else, his hometown paper made sure his Indiana neighbors knew all about it.

After his football career was over, Godfrey received his law degree from the University of Notre Dame and decided to make South Bend his home. He and his wife, Daria, now have six children, ranging in age from three to 19, and, as he recently told Bill Moor of the South Bend Tribune, he's even become a Notre Dame fan — except when the Irish play Michigan.

Moor's interview with Godfrey focused on Life Athletes, the primary reason the one-time ballplayer was honored by the Giants. Godfrey founded the organization in 1992, and now counts on some 300 former and present athletes — collegiate, professional and Olympic — to help him achieve its goal: inspiring young people to live lives of virtue and chastity, with a respect for all life. He's written curriculums and made videos, all centered on the theme of honoring life.

Here are the four key commitments that Life Athletes promotes:

1. I will try to do what is right even when it is difficult.

2. I will give myself only to that special person I marry as my partner for life.

3. I will respect the lives of others, especially the unborn and the aged.

4. I will not quit or make excuses when I fail. I will try again.

Want to know more about this outstanding organization? Check out its Web site at www.lifeathletes.org.

Chris is on the road almost half of each year, giving talks to youth groups and meeting educators. He likes to reach parents, too.

"Through what must be some kind of misguided sympathy, many parents seem afraid to set standards for their children," Godfrey told the Tribune's Moor. "Knowing where the fence lies is very important to kids. They need to know what side of it they are on..

"It even goes with the TV. If people in a certain sitcom aren't the kind of people you would invite over to your home, then you probably don't need to have them on your TV either."

Chris Godfrey's entire family was on hand to cheer him on at Manhattan's Sheraton Hotel, where the "Alumni Man of the Year" Award was a highlight of the Giants' annual Kickoff Luncheon. So were about 1,300 other people, giving Godfrey the kind of ovation he used to hear at Giants Stadium.

"The kids are far removed from my playing days," he said to the Tribune. "It was nice for them to see how big a part the Giants were in our lives."

Plumbing the depths of celibacy

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

As I listened to Father William Jarema of the Mercy Center in Colorado Springs speak at an annual vocation directors' seminar on the topic of celibacy and personal wholeness, three thought-provoking statements of his had me thinking about celibacy in ways I never thought of it before.

1. "Healthy and conscious celibacy is a matter of life and/or death for clergy, religious and professional helpers. There is little room or no room in the eyes of the public for error in one's practice and application of celibacy."

As much as some people would like to do away with celibacy and have married priests, the public still has certain fixed ideas about how a celibate person should conduct himself or herself. There may be forgiveness when a celibate breaks his or her promise or vow of celibacy, but the person is also stigmatized because celibacy is still considered a sacred undertaking.

2. "Celibacy is a powerful force in our life that can be used to either enhance our life or hinder our spirit. The personal meaning and value of celibacy must outweigh the law of celibacy. If not, the experience of celibacy will be labored and burdensome."

Celibacy can never end up as just a condition for ordination; it must be a state of life one embraces as a way of complementing one's personality. Without this personalization, it is a meaningless rule, not the wholesome spirit it is intended to be.

3. "Celibacy can either be a choice or a consequence. If celibacy is reduced to a consequence, then there is less chance for personal growth and happiness. ... Today there are millions of men and women who have been forced into celibacy because of separation, divorce, widowhood, health or personal trauma. ... You will need to learn how to manage the biological, psychological and social dimensions of this powerful discipline called celibacy."

The way to manage these dimensions is to better know our thoughts, emotions and inner world. We need also to understand how family background, culture and religion relate to our celibacy.

To achieve this understanding, we must ask: Who best represents the beauty of celibacy for me? How exactly does this person fit my idea of it? How does celibacy lend character to my ministry? Do I ever thank God for the gift of celibacy, and exactly what is it in celibacy that I thank God for?

Questions such as these help to drive a celibate deeper into his or her inner self, and it is only there that the gift and mystery of celibacy can truly be understood.

Are there animals in heaven?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. My dog recently died and I feel such a loss. He was a real comfort for many years. I'm wondering, since animals are God's creation and another testament of God's glory, and since we have St. Francis as patron saint of animals, do animals have some part in eternal life?

A. I suspect certain readers might consider your question a bit ridiculous, but it isn't silly at all. Theologians have wondered and speculated about this subject for centuries.

One way of answering is to note that heaven is where we will be perfectly happy. If we really need a dog to be perfectly happy, surely God will see that we have one. I don't believe anyone could argue with that.

Questions about what eternal life with the Lord will be like are treated brilliantly and with wide scholarship in the book "Land of the Living" by Father James O'Connor (1992, Catholic Book Publishing Company).

In a Foreword to the book, the late Cardinal John O'Connor of New York speaks of the harmony God will bring to that transformed but enduring universe. Explicitly referring to dumb animals, he writes, "If indeed all things were made 'through him (Jesus),' and if he is the same yesterday, today and forever, then should it be out of the question that all things will somehow endure?"

The church has no specific teaching on your question one way or another. In a nutshell, however, this reflects the way most Christians have answered it through the centuries.

Prayers after death

Q. I read your column in the newspaper of our archdiocese and would like to see a discussion of ways to secure prayers after death. I seem to recall some programs for perpetual prayers. No one else in my immediate family is a practicing Catholic, though they would follow my wishes in this matter. (Maryland)

A. First and most important, if you listen carefully to the Eucharistic Prayers at Mass you will discover that a constant intention of every Mass that is offered, anywhere and anytime throughout the world, is offered for all who have died, especially "our brothers and sisters in the faith," and that includes you.

This is a beautiful and consoling truth many Catholics forget. Sometimes one hears pious prayers for "the most abandoned soul in purgatory." As far as the Catholic Church and its beliefs and liturgy are concerned, there is no "abandoned soul in purgatory."

Every celebration of the Eucharist, as an unbloody renewal of the sacrifice of Calvary, has the same worldwide reach and efficacy as the first offering of that sacrifice by Our Lord. The entire human family, living and dead, are recipients of the merits of that supreme act of redemption.

Beyond that, of course, there are other ways Christian tradition provides for the spiritual good of those who have died. We can ask people to pray for us. We can request a few Masses to be offered for our special intentions, remembering again that every Mass is offered for everyone.

Or maybe even more practically, through a gift to one or more charitable, humanitarian or religious organizations, you can arrange for some good work to be carried on, for God's glory and in your name, after you die.

Try these. And as you think of death, give yourself over to the loving care of our heavenly Father as Jesus did when he died, and you will do well.

A free brochure on ecumenism, including questions on intercommunion and other ways of sharing worship, is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Father John Dietzen, Box 325, Peoria, IL 61651.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

St. Francis of Assisi Church thrives in Smoky Mountain air

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

St. Francis of Assisi Church sits atop a small hill in Franklin. The nave's back wall is composed entirely of windows, letting in natural light and heating the worship space in the winter. A statue of the church's patron stands in the courtyard. St. Francis of Assisi celebrated its 50th anniversary Oct. 4, St. Francis' feast day.

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI CHURCH
299 Maple Street
Franklin, N.C. 28734
(828) 524-2289

Vicariate: Smoky Mountain
Administrator: Father Matthew Kauth
Number of parishioners: 700
Number of households: 400

Father Matthew Kauth

FRANKLIN — A small group composed of eight people made up the first Catholic congregation to celebrate Mass in Franklin. During the early 1950s, these townsfolk gathered at the home of local residents to assist in the celebration of Mass with Father Lawrence Newman, who traveled more than 40 miles from his resident parish, St. John Church in Waynesville, to share the liturgy.

Father Newman met with then-Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh to discuss the building of a church in Franklin. They agreed on the need, and in 1953, the first St. Francis of Assisi Church had been constructed and deemed a mission of St. John Church. The same eight parishioners attended, although the church had a capacity for 108 parishioners. The church community did begin to enlarge at a steady pace, however, and in 1955, St. Francis of Assisi became a Glenmary parish.

Due to a growing Catholic population in Franklin as well as geographical considerations, then-Bishop Michael J. Begley of Charlotte adjusted St. Francis of Assisi's boundaries to include most of Macon County in 1972. As such, it then included Our Lady of the Mountains as a mission church.

Back home in Franklin, a larger congregation marked the need for expansion. The parish bought land and a house adjacent to the church property, the latter of which was utilized for the pastoral team staff, parish meetings, religious education classes and babysitting during Mass.

Soon parishioners again saw the need to expand, this time in terms of worship space. During the assessment period, the parish established a building fund. Although original plans, begun in 1976, centered on adding onto the existing church, other options arose. During the summer of 1977, a sizable contribution allowed the congregation to explore the possibility of building a new structure.

The next year, land was purchased on Maple Street and plans were underway for the creation of a new church facility. A parish building commission was established, and construction on the new church began in January 1981. It housed its first Eucharistic liturgy on Christmas Eve of that year. Meanwhile, St. Francis of Assisi parish had made arrangements with the local Lutheran community, which was searching for a new church. The first church was sold to the Lutherans on Dec. 31, 1981.

The St. Francis of Assisi Church family continued to grow in the follow years. By 1996, then-pastor Father Richard McCue and then-parochial vicar Father James Collins were overseeing a large expansion project to improve the church's educational facilities. The new parish center features faith formation classrooms, a chapel and pastor's office.

The parish had also gained an active Knights of Columbus council noted for its support of schools, especially those for mentally handicapped persons.

Like many of the cities of the Smoky Mountain Vicariate, Franklin has a growing Hispanic population, with approximately 120 Hispanics in the parish of St. Francis of Assisi Church.

In July 2002, Father Matthew Kauth transferred from parochial vicar of St. Matthew Church in Charlotte to administrator of St. Francis of Assisi Church. In October 2003, the parish celebrated the church's 50th anniversary with a Mass celebrated by Bishop-designate Peter Jugis and a church festival.

Church life is vibrant in the mountain town of Franklin. From its early status as a small mission to today's ever-growing congregation, St. Francis of Assisi Church strives to meet the spiritual, educational and social needs of its community.

"Creating Enthusiasm for the Faith"

Come and join us for the

FIRE IN THE MOUNTAINS
gathering of God's people.

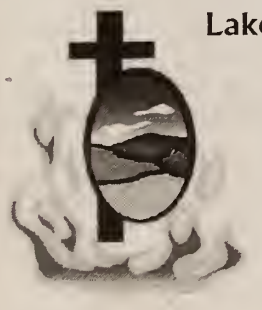
November 8, Saturday
8 am - 3:30 pm
Lake Junaluska, Harrell Hall



At this one-day annual mountain retreat, we'll focus on connecting to each other and to God by faith sharing on issues critical to our community and the modern world. Topics include what discipleship means today and how to bring about a sense of the sacramentality of creation.

PRESENTERS:
Rev. Francis Cancro, pastor, St. Eugene, Asheville (English)
Rev. Vincente Finnerty, C.M., pastor, Our Lady of Guadalupe, Charlotte (Spanish)
Rev. Msgr. Mauricio West, Diocesan Administrator, sharing reflections

Cost: $20 before Oct. 25; $25 after - lunch and refreshments included (scholarships available)

To register or for more info: call 828-667-4227, or email fitm@dnet.net, or visit www.fireitm.org

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

FC 2042
C 3 0 3 C

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

OCTOBER 17, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 4

Parish Profile:
Our Lady of the Highways Church
| PAGE 16

Shepherd to the World

In 25 years, pope has shaped events, inspired millions

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — As Pope John Paul II celebrates 25 years in office, the world is taking stock of a pontificate that has helped shape political events, set new directions for the Catholic Church and offered spiritual inspiration to millions of people around the globe.

By any measure, this is a papacy for the ages. Since his election Oct. 16, 1978, Pope John Paul has delivered more speeches, met with more world leaders, canonized more saints and kissed more babies than any previous pontiff.

Visiting 129 countries — from the steppes of Asia to the Rocky Mountains — he has implemented the church's own form

See SHEPHERD, page 8

CNS FILE PHOTO BY ARTURO MARI

Pope John Paul II raises the book of the Gospels at an outdoor Mass he celebrated in Poland in 1991. In his travels he visited his home country the most and preached the Gospel on six continents.

COUNTDOWN TO THE ORDINATION

Ceremony to be broadcast live on Internet

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — The ordination and installation Mass of Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis is just a week away.

Thirteen bishops, 125 priests and 80 deacons are expected to participate in the special two-hour Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24.

Two representatives from each parish, mission, institution and organization in the diocese will join in the entrance procession that includes the bishops, priests and deacons as well as religious, seminarians, the Knights of Columbus and others.

See ORDINATION, page 12

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Altar servers lead a procession of lay people into Our Lady of Grace Church Oct. 12 to commence the Mass for the church's 50th anniversary.

FULL OF GRACE

Our Lady of Grace celebrates 50 years in Greensboro

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

GREENSBORO — More than 500 people gathered to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Our Lady of Grace Church Oct. 12, crowding the pews and aisles of the gothic-style church. More parishioners overflowed into the parish school's gymnasium, where they watched the Mass via closed-circuit television.

"Beginning with our concert on Thursday night, continuing with our school's reunion and Saturday's events with our yard sale, carnival and homecoming dance, and finally today's liturgy, this has been a great weekend, and we have been truly blessed," said Father Francis O'Rourke, pastor.

Thirteen priests, including former pastors of Our Lady of Grace Church, concelebrated the Mass with Archbishop John F.

See GRACE, page 7

Mother Teresa's 'miracle' to receive Communion from Pope John Paul II

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ROME — Dressed in a pink sari accented with shimmering silver thread, Monica Besra, a mother of five, is without a doubt a member of the Missionaries of Charity family.

Amid the unusual hustle and bustle of the missionary sisters' convent at Rome's St. Gregory Church the week before Mother Teresa of Calcutta's beatification, the sisters greet her in the traditional Indian way — hands

See MIRACLE, page 12

#BXHPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
#420836# S239 P2
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

'S.T.O.P. and Change Direction'
St. Gabriel parishioner's prison pilot program
| PAGE 4

From NC to Alaska
Retired priest ministers in new frontiers
| PAGE 5

Walkabout
St. Gabriel students focus on their community
| PAGE 6

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

DEFENDING MARRIAGE

CNS PHOTO BY GREGORY L. TRACY, THE PILOT

Ron Crews, president of the Massachusetts Family Institute, and Democratic state Rep. Philip Travis address the "Summit of October to Save Marriage" Oct. 2 in Wayland, Mass. Travis is sponsor of a legislative initiative that would define marriage as the union of one man and one woman in the Massachusetts Constitution.

Redefining marriage would harm families, says Boston archbishop

WAYLAND, Mass. (CNS) — "The institution of marriage, so crucial to the raising of children and a sound family life, is in crisis," Boston Archbishop Sean O'Malley said at the "Summit of October to Save Marriage" in Wayland.

"Any redefinition of marriage must be seen as an attack on the common good. The weakening of the institution of marriage has already had too high a social cost," he said Oct. 2.

He called for respect for the rights and dignity of homosexuals but said that does not mean same-sex unions are entitled to be granted the same status in society as marriages.

"Marriage is not a creation of the state nor of the church, and neither has the legitimate authority to change its nature," the archbishop said. "To dismiss people's legitimate concerns about the institution of marriage as an unjust discrimination against homosexual persons is to miss the point of the centrality of marriage for the well-being of society."

About 200 people, including several religious leaders, attended the summit "to arm ourselves with the tools to defend (marriage)," said Ron Crews, president of the Massachusetts Family Institute.

"Our concern must be to strengthen marriage and create a climate that will be supportive and indeed promote the traditional paradigm of marriage," said Archbishop O'Malley.

"The divorce revolution has taken its toll on family life," he said. "Between 1960 and 1990 the number of (U.S.) children who experienced the divorce of their parents increased from less than 1 percent to more than 50 percent, and one-third of the children born today are born out of wedlock."

He cited other statistics and studies to highlight the ill effects divorce and the breakdown on the family have had on society, including an increase in violence against women, poverty, and the physical and sexual abuse of children.

"I am not so naive as to think that saving the definition of marriage is enough to undo all the harm suffered by society caused by a weakened institution of marriage," he said. "I would hope that those who promote same-sex unions will not be so naive as to fail to recognize the impact that redefining marriage will have on American culture, which has already suffered too much because of the deterioration of family life."

In 2002, about 130,000 people signed a petition for a constitutional amendment defining marriage as a union of one man and one woman. The Massachusetts Catholic Conference, the public policy organ of the state's bishops, backed the amendment.

Official concerned over low number of refugees being admitted to U.S.

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The Bush administration says significant progress has been made in improving how refugees are admitted into the United States, but for the third year in a row the number of refugees who reached the country was significantly below expectations.

Refugee policy experts at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops are taking the government's assurances that procedures have been greatly improved with a grain of salt, according to Kevin Appleby, director of migration policy for the USCCB's Migration and Refugee Services.

"They're saying the right things," Appleby said. "But we're not seeing the corresponding actions."

An administration report to Congress released in late September said new procedures are, "after many difficulties, streamlining security processing in a meaningful way."

Still, only about 28,000 refugees arrived in the United States out of an allocation of 70,000 for the 2003 fiscal year. In 2002, about 27,000 reached the country.

Catholic agencies working through MRS typically resettle more refugees in the United States than any other entity.

The administration proposes the same ceiling of 70,000 refugees for 2004, with 20,000 of those slots allocated for emergency situations.

The United States admits more refugees than any other country, but since the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks fewer have been allowed entry each year than in decades. The United States instituted new security procedures both to protect personnel who process applications and to more thoroughly investigate incoming refugees.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

HENDERSONVILLE — A Peace and Tolerance Workshop will be held Oct. 25 at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. in the St. Francis Room 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Everyone is invited for a day of prayer, discussion and reflection. Special focus will be given to our sacred calling as Christians to be peacemakers. This is a meaningful way to promote peace in the family, classroom and workplace. To register, call Sandy Donecho at (828) 697-7420.

HENDERSONVILLE — The St. Francis of the Hills Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order will meets the fourth Sunday of each month 3-5 p.m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. West. Visitors and inquirers are welcome, so for more information, call Helen Gillogly, SFO, at (828) 883-9645.

BOONE VICARIATE

BOONE — St. Elizabeth of the Hill Country, 259 Pilgrims Way, will dedicate its new 72-niche columbarium on All Souls' Day, Nov. 2, following the 11 a.m. Mass. For more information, e-mail Tom Bracken at redfishy@intergate.com or call (828) 264-1445. This event will take place weather and job schedules permitting.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — The ordination Mass of Bishop Peter J. Jugis will be celebrated Oct. 24 at 12 p.m. at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy.

CHARLOTTE — Catholic Social Services will host an informational meeting on their adoption programs in Russia & China Oct. 25, at 2 p.m. The meeting will be at the Diocesan offices at 1123 South Church St. If you have any questions, please call Carol or Michele at (888) 990-4199.

CHARLOTTE — Jesuit Father James Keenan will present "Living with an adult conscience" Oct. 25 8:30 a.m.-2 p.m. at St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St. Our ordinary lives offer ample opportunities to think and grow in our practice of virtues. For details, call the church office at (704) 332-2901

CHARLOTTE — Father David Valtiera will provide methods of enrichment for all families, in "Family Spirituality," Oct. 27 at 7 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Call Susan at (704) 362-5047, ext. 271 to register.

CHARLOTTE — A Women's Talk will be held Oct. 29 at 7 p.m. at St. Vincent Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. The speaker will be Father Bittner. For more information, please call Peggy at (704) 588-7311.

CHARLOTTE — Natural Family Planning classes will begin Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the Life Center, room 102, at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. For more information, call Judy Townsend at (704) 846-6983. Please reserve a space before Oct. 28.

CHARLOTTE — New Creation Monastery invites you to a day of silence and solitude in the presence of Almighty God. The monastery offers private spiritual retreats for lay people. Write to Father John Vianney Hoover at New Creation Monastery, 11517 Spreading Oak Ln., Charlotte, NC 28226 about why you want to go on retreat and when. For more information, call (704) 541-5026.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

OCTOBER 17, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 4

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope's chief liturgist defends use of dance in papal Masses

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II's chief liturgist, Archbishop Piero Marini, has defended the use of dance in papal Masses abroad and at the Vatican.

Archbishop Marini said liturgical celebrations presided over by the pope have a "universal" character that should accommodate the legitimate cultural elements of Catholic communities around the world.

He made the comments Oct. 15.

Some church officials have criticized Archbishop Marini because they think the papal liturgies in recent years have been too outlandish. Reflecting strong sentiment in some Vatican quarters, a draft version of a recent Vatican document on liturgical norms recommended no dance inside churches — even outside celebration of the Mass.

In contrast, an Oct. 5 beatification Mass in St. Peter's Square featured African dance at the offertory and Indian dance at the consecration.

Archbishop Marini, who has designed papal liturgies for 17 years, said the criticism was off the mark.

"To introduce dance at a parish Mass in Italy would be pointless. But the celebration (on Oct. 5) was a missionary celebration, for the beatification of three people who evangelized Africa and Asia," Archbishop Marini said.

"Papal celebrations have a markedly universal character and therefore need the adaptation and inculturation foreseen by the Second Vatican Council," he said.

Archbishop Marini said dancing and other elements are in line with what the pope has said he wants in papal liturgies.

"Pope John Paul II has always appreciated the various cultures, even the poorest and the most distant ones," he said.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — Father Bill Parent will discuss "Catholic morality at the end of life," a look at Catholic teaching concerning issue of life and death. This free presentation will begin at 7 p.m. Oct. 16 in the Kloster Center of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St. For more information, call the church office at (336) 272-4681.

HICKORY VICARIATE

LENOIR — The Hickory vicariate will offer two evangelization retreats for Hispanic adults at St. Francis of Assisi Church, 1025 College Ave. SW. The women's retreat will be Oct. 17-19 and the men's retreat will be Oct. 24-26. To register, please contact Sister Joan Pearson at (828) 758-4207.

HICKORY — St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, is hosting their annual Family Rosary in various languages Oct. 26 at 5:15 p.m. in the main sanctuary. The parish will pray for unity and healing in our nation and in the world, as well as special intentions. Participants are asked to bring their favorite statue or picture of the Blessed Mother for display. The evening is sponsored by the Confraternity of Christian Mothers and will conclude with a social in Holy Family Hall. Bring a dessert to share.

HICKORY — The annual World Community Day ecumenical worship service will be held at St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St., Nov. 7 at 7 p.m. This year's theme is "Circles of Love." Come and join us in extending our own circle outward in peace for sake of justice. For details, call Carole Marmorato at (828) 256-8956.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — The adult enrichment program of St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., will present "One face, four portraits" Oct. 19 at 10:15 a.m. and Oct. 22 at 4:30 p.m. This presentation will explore how Jesus Christ was portrayed by each of the Gospel writers. For more information, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

MOORESVILLE — The adult enrichment program of St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., will present "And you shall call him" Oct. 26 at 10:15 a.m. and Oct. 29 at 4:30 p.m. This class will examine the many names of Jesus and their origins. See how the name of one man and elicit joy and tranquility in some people while bringing out anger in others. For more information, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

MURPHY — St. William Church will sponsor a bereavement support group that will meet Mondays for six weeks beginning Oct. 13, 10 a.m.-noon at the Glenmary Center. This group is for anyone who is grieving over any loss — of a loved one, a job, friend, divorce. Call Pat Levy at (828) 837-9517 for more information.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

CLEMMONS — Separated/Divorced Catholics of the Triad will host Maureen deLyon, M.A Ed., N.C.C. and St. Leo the Great parishioner, who will speak on "Working through the grief of divorce and healing" at Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd. Oct. 23 at 7 p.m. Please contact Donna Kronner at (336) 631-8892 for more information.

WINSTON-SALEM — This fall's Theology on Tap will meet Wednesday evenings Oct. 22-Nov. 12 at Mi Pueblo Restaurant, 644 Stratford Rd. Social hour begins at 7 p.m. and a featured speaker will begin at 8 p.m. For details e-mail ws_tontap@yahoo.com.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Fraternity of St. Clare invites anyone interested in learning more about the Secular Franciscan Order and the Franciscan way of life to an orientation and reception Oct. 23 7:30-8:30 p.m. at Our Lady of Fatima Chapel, 211 W. Third St. For more information, contact Sharon Jackson, SFO Minister, at (336) 722-7001.

CLEMMONS — The OLM Little Rock Scripture Study for Women offers a bible study Monday evenings 7:30-9 p.m. in the library of Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd. Classes meet until Nov. 24. For more information, call Anne Gannon at (336) 727-4591.

LEXINGTON — Our Lady of the Rosary Church, 619 South Main St., is sponsoring a parish mission Oct. 26-29, hosted by Franciscan Father Thomas Vigliotta. For details, please call (336) 248-2463.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Democracy weakened when faith excluded from public life, pope says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — While governments should not have a religious identity, they weaken democracy if they try to limit their citizens' expressions of faith to the private sphere, Pope John Paul II said.

"While respecting a healthy sense of the state's secular nature, the positive role of believers in public life should be recognized," the pope said Oct. 10 during a meeting with the parliamentary assembly of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Some 330 parliamentarians from 49 countries were in Rome for the assembly's Oct. 9-10 conference on the freedom of religion.

Pope John Paul told the group, "It is true that many young people today grow up without being aware of the spiritual heritage that is theirs."

But, at the same time, he said, religious faith continues to influence large groups of citizens who have a right to bring their religious and moral values to bear on public life.

When believers are free to express their faith and when they respect the religious beliefs of others, a "healthy pluralism" and an increase in democracy follow, he said.

"When states are disciplined and balanced in the expression of their secular nature, dialogue between the different social sectors is fostered and, consequently, transparent and frequent cooperation between civil and religious society is promoted, which benefits the common good," the pope said.

The defense of religious freedom, he said, "is a strong deterrent to the violation of human rights on the part of communities that exploit religion for purposes that are foreign to it."

Bruce George, a member of the British Parliament and president of the OSCE parliamentary assembly, congratulated the pope on behalf of the group.

"In these past 25 years, the world has significantly changed," he said. "We all appreciate with great gratitude your important contribution and your efforts to shape this new world."

HOLY SMOKE!

Priest wears several hats including firefighter's helmet

CNS PHOTO BY PAUL FINCH, CATHOLIC SUN

In firefighter garb, Father John Canorro stands in front of Engine No. 2 at the fire station in Dewitt, N.Y. The priest, who is parochial vicar of Holy Cross Church and religious education teacher at Bishop Grimes High School, recently completed training to become a volunteer firefighter for the town.

THIS MONTH IN —1995

SACRED HEART KICKS OFF HISPANIC MINISTRY

In an effort to attract more of Rowan County's growing Hispanic population, Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury celebrated is first Spanish-language Mass on Sunday, Oct. 22, 1995. The Mass not only marked the start of a full-time Hispanic ministry for the church, but was in memory of Nixsa Guadelupe Martinez, a 2-year-old girl who died of congenital heart disease that summer and captured the hearts of local Hispanics.

CORRECTIONS from last issue

Overflow parking for the Oct. 24 ordination Mass of Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis will not be in the shopping center across from St. Matthew Church; instead, it will be at nearby All Saints School and buses to and from the church will be provided.

Oblate Father Thomas Fitzpatrick was incorrectly listed in a story. Our Lady of the Highways Church in Thomasville was incorrectly listed in a photo caption.

Helping inmates 'S.T.O.P. and Change Direction'

St. Gabriel parishioner brings pilot program to prison

BY STEPHEN UZZELL
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLOTTE — When Joseph Charles Marinello reports to his job site, he must pass through five mechanical release doorways to get to his office, stopping at each passage to wait for security clearance before entering the interior of Albemarle Correctional Institution in Badin, N.C., just west of Albemarle.

But Marinello is pleased to enter into the ACI labyrinth four days a week after driving some 40 miles to Stanly County. The St. Gabriel Church parishioner is a determined educator and counselor in a full-time violent offender's treatment program within the medium security unit that houses over 850 inmates.

Marinello teaches the S.T.O.P. and Change Direction program for the North Carolina Department of Correction Division of Prisons. The words of the pilot program's acronym, "Survey, Think, Options, Prevention," are designed to slow the participating individuals to check emotions rather than to act on impulse.

"It's the only program like this in the state," said Russell Ramsey, ACI program director. "We have seen improvements in their (the inmates') behavior. We've seen more positive attitudes. We've seen fewer infractions. We've seen them continue with aftercare, after completion. We've seen them become peer counselors in the program for the new guys."

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Joseph Marinello stands outside the Albemarle Correctional Institute in Badin, where he works as an educator and counselor to 850 violent offenders.

The intense 20-week program consists of 28 men agreeing to live together in a dormitory setting. In the beginning, the group encounters a lot of trust issues. Many inmates do not want to talk about why they are incarcerated.

"When the program first starts out, there's a lot of anxiety with the men; they don't know each other," said Marinello. "And of course, I force cultural diversity. I try to put African Americans at the same table with European Americans and Latinos, because I really feel that's an important part of the program's learning about each other."

Marinello encourages the group to use more appropriate behaviors with regard to interpersonal communications and relationships. He teams with two other staff members to teach inmates through an experiential curriculum utilizing personal sharing, role-playing and one-on-one counseling. Three inmates — former graduates of the program — participate as peer counselors within the group.

Posters displayed in the ACI library, where the group meets, contrast "power and control" behaviors with "equality" behaviors. Men are learning how to be responsible for their own behaviors and how to recognize and to express a myriad of feelings that may underlie their anger.

Both the inmates and personnel speak of the positive results from the curriculum.

"When I first came into the class, I had a bad temper and I didn't really know how to deal with it," said an inmate who calls himself "Little Wayne." "This class helps. I've picked up strong bonds with this class. It's like a family, and it's going to be pretty hard to walk away from that."

Jennifer Langley, ACI superintendent, praises the program and Marinello.

"We've been very pleased with it. In fact, we have a waiting list," she said. "Joe has the ability to truly give himself. He has the heart for it, he's dedicated to it and he's very valuable to have in the program."

"Joe is the S.T.O.P. program," said inmate "Howard." "The Scripture popped in my mind, 'Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.' If there's anyone that I've ever known to truly be a peacemaker, that's Joe Marinello. ... He can come in here and relate to us because he gives of himself."

Langley said 90 percent of the inmates will eventually be released.

"And if those people do not re-offend because of skills that they have learned in the domestic violence program here, then it will save us a lot of money and a lot of pain," she said.

There are almost 90 men on the waiting list for the next course, to be offered in 2004. The present group, entering its 15th week, contains five inmates with life sentences who transferred to ACI from other maximum-security units within the N.C. Division.

The strategy of Marinello's program is to educate and create "agents for change." The men will return to their populations after graduation in December and may demonstrate they can walk away from adversity and still feel good about themselves.

"It's not just a program. I consider it to be an option for life," said an inmate "Baby Boy Norm." "It gives you a chance to live. For you to care for somebody, you have to care for yourself, also."

Although Marinello is not allowed to accept gifts as a state employee, inmates have given him artwork, ceramic sculptures and other crafts they've made. One inmate, a Baptist, made a rosary for Marinello; the inmate learned from a Catholic pen pal how long the rosary should be when finished.

"He took plastic stirring sticks, cut them into little pieces, melted them and rolled them into beads. He used staples to hook the beads together," said Marinello. "And then he used a paper clip and dental floss to weave and bind plastic pieces together into a cross. It's very special to me."

Contact Correspondent Stephen Uzzell by calling (704) 545-0498 or e-mail hatz@infionline.net.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information about domestic violence prevention education opportunities, e-mail Joseph Marinello at mjc31@doc.state.nc.us.

Spiritual gathering

COURTESY PHOTO BY KRIS REICH

Women religious from around the Diocese of Charlotte gathered for a conference conducted by Paula D'Arcy, author and retreat leader, at Sacred Heart Convent in Belmont Oct. 8.

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month

Domestic Violence Awareness Month evolved from the first Day of Unity observed in October 1981 by the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence. The intent was to connect battered women's advocates across the nation who were working to end violence against women and children.

The Day of Unity soon became a special week when a range of activities were conducted at the local, state and national levels.

In October 1987, the first Domestic Violence Awareness Month was observed. That same year, the first national toll-free hotline was begun. In 1989, the first Domestic Violence Awareness Month Commemorative Legislation was passed by the U.S. Congress. Such legislation has passed every year since with NCADV providing key leadership in this effort.

For more information, visit: http://www.ncadv.org/community/dvamonth.htm.

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Unit # 10 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS
MOVING SPECIALS
NEW HOLIDAY GIFTS
OPEN
Tuesday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

From North Carolina to Alaska

Retired priest ministers in new frontiers

BY MARY MARSHALL
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLOTTE — Msgr. Richard Allen, retired pastor of St. Ann Church, chuckles as he repeats the phrase, "Have I got a deal for you," pitched to him first by then-Bishop Vincent S. Waters of Raleigh and 50 years later by Archbishop Francis Hurley, retired Archbishop of Anchorage, Alaska.

In both instances, the Plattsburg, N.Y. native accepted the challenge, acknowledging he's not much of a planner but more of an impulse type of guy.

It was during his freshman year at St. Bonaventure University that Msgr. Allen learned about the "missionary" of North Carolina and accepted an invitation from Bishop Waters to visit the state.

He returned the next summer to work at a plumbing company outside Raleigh. When Bishop Waters approached him with "Have I got a deal for you" and encouraged him to enter the seminary, he decided to give it a try.

In 1956, Msgr. Allen was ordained in Durham. He was immediately elevated to pastor and assigned to the rural areas of eastern North Carolina. His sense of adventure followed him throughout the years.

"I began ministering in the small community of Newton Grove, which at the time was dirt crossroads surrounded by cotton, peanut and tobacco fields," said Msgr. Allen. "Small groups of Catholics gathered in houses to celebrate their faith at a time when most Catholics in the state were ignored."

COURTESY PHOTO

Msgr. Richard Allen stands with his Subaru sport utility vehicle, a gift from St. Ann Church parishioners when he retired, that he uses to traverse the Alaskan wilderness.

Noticing that many children in his parishes had never been to the beach or outside their hometown, Msgr. Allen began organizing youth trips, introducing them to exploring, fishing and hiking.

The years passed; his parish assignments changed — including St. Ann Church in Smithfield; St. James Church in Concord; St. Patrick Cathedral in Charlotte; St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem; Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury and St. Ann Church in Charlotte — and the travel groups got bigger. The destinations became more elaborate, but it was always a learning experience, a sense of adventure.

When a visitor, who turned out to be Archbishop Hurley, arrived at St. Ann Church's rectory inquiring about his retirement plans, Msgr. Allen was stunned to hear the words, "Have I got a deal for you."

A week's visit to Alaska and Msgr. Allen was hooked, enticed by the rural areas that brought flashbacks to his first ministry in Newton Grove.

In June 2000, at age 70, with the blessings of his parishioners and then-Bishop William G. Curlin, Msgr. Allen joined two other priests in Anchorage to become a pastor of people living in the state's rural areas, ministering to them on their terms. Known as circuit priests, they reach out to those who don't live in a city or community. A priest in charge of operations based in Anchorage prepares the schedules for the circuit priests.

Organizational fundraisers, donations and grants from foundations help them meet expenses. With a diocese encompassing over 138,000 square miles, the biggest obstacle is financing travel expenses, which can be over $900 for one commercial airline ticket.

"The structure in Alaska is much different than we are used to," said Msgr. Allen. "You have to be more creative, part of a team and sensitive to the environment, area and people. You respond to where people are and to their needs within their communities."

With a priest visiting only once every four to six weeks, lay people elect church administrators as "pastors," who serve as spiritual leaders. The appointment is confirmed by the bishop, and circuit priests train them in preaching, scripture and leadership to help bring the Catholic communities together

"They give excellent homilies, intertwining the lives of the people with the scriptural readings," said Msgr. Allen.

There is no "typical day" for Msgr. Allen.

"I have an apartment in Anchorage and travel by private, chartered or commercial planes, boat, car and snowmobile to the outlying areas," he said. "I also rely heavily on people helping me get from place to place."

"Each destination is different. I average seven Masses a weekend, some said in small churches, others in homes, schools, cinder-block basements, fish canneries and even on the wing of an airplane," he added. "The people have a strong faith and make every effort to come to church whether there is a priest there or not. Some travel up to 100 miles for Sunday Mass."

One difference in Msgr. Allen's current ministry is that he no longer engages in administrative responsibilities.

"I concentrate on what I am asked to do, be it Sunday Mass, a funeral or hospital visits in Anchorage," he said. "I may be asked to go to a fishing village and spend the day with a fisherman. I might not fish, just converse with him about his faith."

"I've served as a mate on a boat chartered by a National Geographic photographer," he added. "Meeting interesting people is a bonus to my ministry."

A firm believer in giving back to the community, getting involved in community activities and letting people experience the presence of a Catholic priest, Msgr. Allen continues to make his presence known in Alaska. He was instrumental in starting a quarterly newsletter for the diocese called "Crosswinds" to education people about their missionary endeavors. He's also a member of the production staff for a public radio station show in Anchorage, "The Talk of Alaska," where he screens callers for the once-a-week program.

HEAR WHAT OUR ADVERTISERS SAY!

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

The Center is centrally located in the Piedmont of North Carolina. Located only an hour's drive from three major cities assures meeting planners and attendees a meeting that is more accessible than ever. Being accessible to the country and a peaceful setting is a meeting place only we can offer!

1551 Trinity Lane
Hickory, NC 28602

(828) 327-7441
Toll-free (888) 536-7441
info@catholicconference.org
www.catholicconference.org

CFCC Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center

Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity

5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com

Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

HAVING A BLAST

COURTESY PHOTO

St. Gabriel School students visit Charlotte fire department Station No. 14 during their community walk Sept. 23-24.

St. Gabriel students focus on their community

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel School students focused on being part of their community recently by visiting the businesses and institutions surrounding their school.

Forty-four parents joined the four second-grade classes in a "community walk" as 100 students walked from the school to various establishments in the Cotswold area Sept. 23-24. Students brought together their lessons from religion and social studies with a focus on people working together in a community and making a difference as good citizens and members of the Catholic Church.

Objectives of the community walk were to spotlight similarities and differences among businesses and institutions in neighborhoods; describe the roles performed by adults in the community; identify distance and directions and to recognize the vegetation and animal life indigenous to their school community, according to Sharon Broxterman, principal.

On their first stop, students met with Msgr. Richard Bellow, pastor of St. Gabriel Church. After touring the church building, Msgr. Bellow recapped the students' connection with the church and the community.

Next on the students' walk was the neighborhood Harris Teeter, where they got a behind-the-scenes view of the store's daily operations. After having lunch at the local Pizza Hut, students visited with the fire department, Station No. 14, where they learned about the assistance and support firefighters provide to the community.

The last stop was at the local Wachovia bank, where students received information about the new $20 bill. Emphasis was made on the importance of savings and the services a bank offers to the public.

Back in their classrooms, the students created murals, flow charts and made maps of their community.

The walk was an excellent way to provide the children with a view of the role various individuals and organizations play within their own community, said Broxterman.

SALE: Further reductions through October!!

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Taking the plunge

Father Mulligan makes a splash at Fun Fair

BY ELLEN NEERINCX SIGMON
CORRESPONDENT

GASTONIA — "Fa-ther Joe! Fa-ther Joe! Fa-ther Joe!"

The chant arose from the gathered crowd as Father Joe Mulligan, pastor of St. Michael Church, climbed up to the seat at the top of the dunking booth.

The dunking booth was one of many attractions at the St. Michael School Fun Fair and Silent Auction Oct. 11. Fair organizers collected $1,600 in pledges to persuade Father Mulligan to take the plunge that afternoon.

Fairgoers participated in regular and inflatable games, obstacle courses and a climbing wall. Music played while volunteers led students in various dances and musical games.

Several tables in the school gym displayed auction items donated by area businesses, baked goods donated by parents and parishioners, and theme baskets sponsored by each grade level at the school. Children could get their hair or face painted, or have a picture taken with a miniature pony.

The parent organization at St. Michael School sponsors the Fun Fair each year to raise money for school improvements, programs and materials.

St. Michael Church is celebrating its centennial this year with a series of events.

PHOTO BY ELLEN N. SIGMON

Father Joseph Mulligan, pastor of St. Michael Church in Gastonia, enjoys cheers of the crowd while sitting, still dry, on top of the dunking booth at St. Michael School's Fun Fair Oct. 11.

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530

Assuring Absolute Integrity

Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535

Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

D®
like no other uniform
since 1920 · school uniforms · logo wear
19725 Oak Street, #4 · Cornelius, NC 28031
phone 704.895.7474 · 888.895.0071
Ann Hoffman · Branch Manager
Order online www.dennisuniform.com
National Customer Service 800.854.6951
DENNIS
formerly Uniforms Direct 2U

Celebrating 50 years

GRACE, from page 1

Donoghue of Atlanta. Concelebrating the Mass were Father O'Rourke; Father Luis Salvador Osorio, parochial vicar; Msgr. Joseph Showfety; Msgr. John Wall; Marian Father David Lord; Father William Gurnee; Marian Father Joseph Roesch; Father Richard T. McCue and former pastors Msgr. William N. Pharr, Marian Father Walter M. Dziordz, Father Thomas P. Clements and Father Mark H. Lamprich.

"There have been many wonderful, picture-perfect moments," Father O'Rourke said. "I have been most touched by the many people who have come home here — the great excitement people have found in rediscovering each other at Our Lady of Grace."

"This church has been a source of grace and blessing for numerous parishioners," said Msgr. Pharr.

In his homily, Msgr. Pharr shared the history of the church, which was constructed in 1952 through funds provided by Julian Price in memory of his wife, Ethel Clay Price. The church is therefore known as The Mrs. Julian Price Memorial.

Our Lady of Grace Church is intrinsically connected to Ethel Clay, a convert to Catholicism. She married Julian Price, a Baptist, in 1897. The Prices lived in Greensboro for the next five decades, raising two children in a city where Catholics were a small minority of the population.

In the summer of 1946, Price approached then-Bishop Vincent S. Waters of Raleigh with the idea of building a Catholic church as a memorial to his wife and arranged to provide funds for its construction. Price chose the Church of Our Lady of Refuge in Brooklyn, N.Y. as a model. Henry V. Murphy, architect of Our Lady of Refuge, agreed to scale down the design to a seating capacity of 500.

Price presented Bishop Waters with $400,000 to build the church, but Price died in an automobile accident before construction could begin. World War II delayed construction efforts, and rising building costs subsequently made the original plan beyond reach. An additional gift of $300,000 from the Price children made the building of the church possible, and construction began in the spring of 1950.

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta celebrates Mass at the altar of Our Lady of Grace Church Oct. 12 in celebration of the church's 50th anniversary. More than 500 people gathered for the Mass and afternoon lawn party.

The first Mass was celebrated July 13, 1952 and the church was dedicated Sept. 14, 1952 by the late Cardinal Ameleto Cicognani, then-apostolic delegate to the United States. At the celebration the Raleigh Cathedral Choir; visiting clerics, including five bishops and two abbots; and 600 lay participants of various faiths witnessed the placing of the cornerstone and the blessing of the outside walls.

The original school building was built in 1953 and was dedicated by Bishop Waters Nov. 15, 1953. The kindergarten- through eighth-grade school was staffed by the Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary from Scranton, Pa. for the next 26 years.

Msgr. Arthur Freeman served as the first pastor of Our Lady of Grace. Then-Msgr. Michael J. Begley, the fifth pastor of Our Lady of Grace, was installed in 1972 as the founding bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte. Father Francis M. Smith, who had served as assistant to Msgr. Freeman when the church first opened, returned to serve as pastor.

In the summer of 1988, the Marians of the Immaculate Conception were appointed by then-Bishop Donoghue to pastor Our Lady of Grace. The Marians remained until February 2000, when diocesan priests resumed pastoral leadership.

The new Parish Activity Center was dedicated Nov. 14, 1976 by Bishop Begley. The Parish Activity Center houses a gymnasium, kitchen, cafeteria, six classrooms, school library and church and school administrative offices.

In October 1977, the parish celebrated it 25th anniversary. As part of the celebration, a new 2,226-pipe organ was dedicated. It took more than a year to design the organ and build a gallery for it over the front entrance of the church.

The parish school celebrated its 25th anniversary in 1978 by burying a time capsule containing national and international events from 1953 to 1978, plus other items of interest and meaning to students. The capsule will be dug up and opened this year as part of the ongoing celebration of Our Lady of Grace's 50th anniversary.

In 1995, a major renovation of the church was made possible through the financial support of parishioners. The renovation included painting the interior of the church, refinishing the pews and installation of new carpeting in the congregational area. Stained-glass windows in the vestibule depicting the Assumption and the Immaculate Conception were installed.

A Respect Life Garden, featuring a statue of Our Lady of Grace, was blessed Jan. 19, 1999 by then-Bishop William G. Curlin. Inscriptions at the base of the shrine include the words of Pope John Paul II encouraging respect for the gift of life at every stage of life.

Striving to be a welcoming community, the parish has evolved into one reflecting a cultural diversity that includes many from Africa, Eastern Europe, Asia and an ever-increasing number of Hispanics from Mexico and Central and South America.

In 2001, with the encouragement of the parish pastoral council, Our Lady of Grace opened wide its doors to the growing Hispanic community of Greensboro by scheduling a weekly Mass celebrated in Spanish. Under the care of Father Osorio, this ministry has flourished.

"Our Lady of Grace Church is a wonderful place to join others in echoing Mary's proclaiming the greatness of the Lord," said Father O'Rourke.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

SOUTHEAST FIRE RALLY presented by Good News Ministries

EXPERIENCE THE 'NEW SPRINGTIME' OF THE THIRD CHRISTIAN MILLENNIUM

FAITH
—a challenge to Catholics to renew and deepen their relationship with the Lord.
RALPH MARTIN
Ralph is the founding President of Renewal Ministries, a Catholic mission organization, and hosts a popular weekly television series, The Choices We Face. Ralph is also the founding editor of New Covenant magazine and author of several books. He presently leads The Word of God, an ecumenical Christian community in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

INTERCESSION
—a call to united prayer as our most important spiritual weapon available for renewing the face of the earth.
SR. ANN SHIELDS, SGL
Sr. Ann is the superior of the Servants of God's Love in Lansing, Michigan, and is a regular co-host on the television program, The Choices We Face. She also hosts a radio program, Food for the Journey. She is the author of several books, including Fire in My Heart, and is a frequent conference speaker.

REPENTANCE
—an exhortation to turn away from sin to a Christ-centered, Spirit-filled life.
FR. MICHAEL SCANLAN, TOR
Fr. Michael is the Chancellor and former President of Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio, and was ordained in 1964. In 1990, he was awarded the Cross Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice by Pope John Paul II. He has authored several books including his autobiography, Let the Fire Fall.

EVANGELISM
—an invitation to spread the Good News of salvation and the gift of authentic Catholicism.
PETER HERBECK
Peter is Director of Missions at Renewal Ministries and has served numerous retreats, conferences, rallies, and events around the world. Much of his work has been devoted to helping equip Catholics for ministry through training in the exercise of spiritual gifts. Peter and his wife Debbie have four children and live in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

CLOSING LITURGY
CELEBRANT & HOMILIST
MOST REV. ROBERT J. BAKER, STD
Bishop Baker is shepherd to Catholics throughout the state of South Carolina. He has served as a pastor, counselor, mentor, and professor during his priesthood and was appointed as the 12th Bishop of Charleston in 1999 by Pope John Paul II.

"My hope and prayer is that all who attend the FIRE Rally will experience a deeper conversion, a greater desire for reconciliation, and a willingness to be more fully involved in the New Evangelization to which our Holy Father has called us in the new millennium."
—Most Reverend Robert J. Baker, STD
Bishop of Charleston

FIRE
A CATHOLIC ALLIANCE OF FAITH, INTERCESSION, REPENTANCE, AND EVANGELISM

CHARLOTTE BOBCATS TRAINING CENTER
FORT MILL, SOUTH CAROLINA
(I-77 exit 88)

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 2004
9:00 am – 6:00 pm
(Doors open at 8:00 am.)

DYNAMIC, INSPIRED MUSIC BY HEARTS OF FIRE
Bookstore & Ministry Fair

FURTHER INFORMATION
Phone: (704) 521-9949
Email: carolinaevents2@aol.com
ONLINE REGISTRATION:
http://www.fireministry.org/charlotte

In 25 years, pope has shaped events, inspired millions

CNS FILE PHOTO

Young descendents of a group of converted headhunters perform a song as Pope John Paul II visits Shillong in India in 1986. The pope was welcomed to the mostly Hindu country as a "white holy man," said Cardinal Jozef Tomko, recently reflecting on the pontiff as an evangelizer.

SHEPHERD, from page 1

of globalization.

And in more than 50 major documents, on themes ranging from economics to the rosary, he has brought the Gospel and church teachings to bear on nearly every aspect of modern life.

Everyone agrees this pope already has left a moral legacy, inside and outside the church. But the pope also has weathered his share of disappointments in recent years, including the U.S. clerical sex abuse scandal, the ecumenical rupture with Orthodox leaders, legislative defeats on pro-life issues in many countries and the frustration of not being able to visit Russia and China.

Vatican officials are focusing on the accomplishments, but are going out of their way to make sure the anniversary celebration does not take on the tone of a retirement party.

"The pope still has an important message to deliver, and people are listening — perhaps more than ever," Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said in an interview with Catholic News Service.

"He is the only global leader who is worried about the spiritual well-being of today's men and women, as opposed to their material well-being. He asks, 'Who are you?' instead of 'What do you want to do?' or 'What do you want to buy?' And people understand this and respond to it," he said.

At the start of the 21st century, a time of rapid changes in technology and biology, the pope has hewed closer to this dominant theme, Navarro-Valls said.

For papal biographer George Weigel, the pope has had tremendous impact on the world and the church precisely because "he's been the great Christian witness of our time, the man who has most persuasively embodied the liberating power of Christian faith."

"That had concrete, measurable political results in east central Europe in the revolution of 1989; but it has also had an immeasurable impact on innumerable lives throughout the world," Weigel told CNS.

History in the making

As the analyses and accolades rolled in ahead of the 25th anniversary celebration, the pope was busy keeping a low profile. He purposely upstaged himself by scheduling the beatification of Mother Teresa of Calcutta for Oct. 19 — a Sunday that falls between the anniversary of his election and his inaugural Mass.

Whether for Mother Teresa or Pope John Paul, tens of thousands of Catholics are planning to converge on Rome and join in the festivities. The world's cardinals have been invited, too.

So far, the pope has avoided great retrospective speeches or documents on his first quarter-century. In fact, he has spoken more about Mary, to whom he's dedicated this year in a special way, than about his own accomplishments.

At 83, he is frail and hobbled by Parkinson's disease and other ailments. He no longer walks in public; instead, he sits and rides on a variety of newfangled mechanisms that allow him to keep celebrating liturgies and meeting with groups.

But, thanks in part to a new regime of therapy, he has regained strength in his voice and seems to breathe easier than he did a year ago. Those improvements have encouraged aides and put an end to speculation over papal retirement — at least for now.

Many at the Vatican believe the pope's infirmities have added a new dimension to his message.

"When the Mass is celebrated by someone in his condition, the sacrifice of Christ becomes even more evident," Cardinal Jozef Tomko, a longtime friend and retired Vatican official, said in an interview with CNS.

"What comes through is a deep spirituality and the acceptance of his limitations. I think in these conditions he is winning even more people to Christ than before," Cardinal Tomko said.

Taking a stance

The first non-Italian pontiff in 455 years, Pope John Paul II declared early on that the Second Vatican Council had set his agenda. In particular, his global ministry quickly focused on Vatican II's engagement of modern culture.

At the teaching level, the pope has penned three major encyclicals on economic and social justice issues and has addressed the rich-poor imbalance continent-by-continent in post-synodal documents.

Over the last 10 years, he also has authored three other encyclicals that strongly challenge what he sees as a prevailing moral relativism in postmodern society. "Veritatis Splendor" spoke of the truth of the church's moral teachings, "Evangelium Vitae" defended the inviolability of human life against what the pope calls a "culture of death," and "Fides et Ratio" argued that human reason cannot be detached from faith in God.

Meanwhile, under his guidance, Vatican agencies have issued important instructions on such specific questions as foreign debt, in vitro fertilization, the arms industry, the role of the mass media and the impact of the Internet.

Through all these pronouncements runs a central theme: that human freedom becomes destructive when people forget they are created in God's image. Whether an unborn child, an impoverished African or an elderly shut-in, the pope says, every human being has a value that goes beyond earthly advantages and accomplishments.

While pushing Catholic teaching into virtually every area of modern life, the pope also has taken the measure of the church's past mistakes. At his insistence, the church acknowledged historical errors in condemning 16th-century astronomer Galileo Galilei, in participating in European religious wars, and even in its missionary approach in some New World territories.

Against considerable resistance within his own Vatican hierarchy, the pope commissioned critical studies on the church's role in the Inquisition and the Crusades and on the failings of Christians during the Holocaust.

Shepherding a global flock

On an interreligious level, Pope John Paul has reached out in ways that were once considered impossible or even heretical. In 1986 he visited a Jewish synagogue in Rome, then in 2000 prayed at the Western Wall in Jerusalem — a gesture that won the hearts of many Jews worldwide.

In Syria, he became the first pope to visit a mosque, and in Morocco he spoke to thousands of cheering Muslim youths.

Twice he convened leaders of other religions and other churches for prayer meetings in Assisi, where participants denounced all acts of war and terrorism carried out in the name of religion.

Within the church, the pope has been no less dynamic. He has disciplined dissenting theologians and self-styled "traditionalists," promulgated a new Code of Canon Law, issued new directives calling for clearer Catholic identity in church universities, and defended with the full weight of his authority the church's all-male priesthood.

Some critics have said that in dealing with in-the-field church problems, the pope's management style is too detached. They cited the clerical sex abuse crisis as an example of where the pontiff should have called bishops and others to closer accountability.

Vatican officials reject that criticism, pointing out that the pope has several times pronounced prophetically against sex abuse and other moral failings by church ministers. The pope's job is not to pore over dossiers but to set clear directions, they say.

"This is not a pontificate that acts in a crisis management style. He goes beyond crisis management, to the root of the problem. And in the case of sex abuse, the real problem is in formation," said Navarro-Valls, the Vatican spokesman.

As a teacher of the faith, the pope has been exhaustive, demanding and authoritative. The "Catechism of the Catholic Church" is his longest document and will no doubt be seen as one of the great accomplishments of this pontificate; a shorter compendium of church teaching is also in the works.

The pope brooks no dissent among the faithful, and in a 1998 document he

Continued next page

4TH ANNUAL KENNEDY LECTURE

OCTOBER 25, 2003

LIVING WITH AN ADULT CONSCIENCE

BY

JAMES F. KEENAN, S.J.

professor of moral theology at Weston Jesuit School of Theology, Cambridge, Massachusetts

9:00 AM - 2:00 PM
St. Peter's Catholic Church
Charlotte, N.C.

Admission is free, but please phone to reserve your place. 704-332-2901, ext. 12. Light lunch will be served.

www.stpeterscatholic.org for more information

Continued from previous page

invoked penalties against Catholics who reject the church's wide range of "definitive" positions, including those on human sexuality.

That has prompted criticism by some groups of laity and theologians, especially in Europe and the United States. Such groups say the pope has presided over an excessive centralization of church power and authority at the expense of local churches.

While supporting Vatican II's promotion of the laity in the church, the pope has warned against confusing the roles of lay Catholics and ordained priests. He has supported clerically managed lay organizations like Opus Dei, which has grown in influence.

As opposed to models of power-sharing in the church, Pope John Paul has proposed models of holiness to the world's 1.1 billion Catholics. He has canonized more than 470 people from dozens of countries and beatified more than 1,300 — including the first lay couple.

Critical moments

At the 25-year mark, the pope's record on ecumenism contains a long list of agreements, joint declarations and mutual gestures of good will, especially with some ancient Eastern churches.

But as common ground has been staked out among the churches, the remaining obstacles have stood in even higher relief. The Vatican's clear injunction against shared Eucharist with Protestant churches may seem arbitrary to critics, but the pope views it as a painful reminder of the distance yet to travel in ecumenical dialogue.

In recent years, relations with the Russian Orthodox Church have sharply deteriorated as a result of the pope's determination to rebuild Catholic communities in Russia and other parts of Eastern Europe. Surely one of the pope's biggest disappointments after 25 years has been the failure to visit Moscow, which he would undertake only with the Orthodox Church's blessing.

Reaching far and wide

Pope John Paul's pontificate is the fourth-longest in history, and perhaps more than any of his predecessors he has shaped the hierarchy in his image. He has named more than three-fourths of the world's active bishops and 96 percent of the cardinals who will elect his successor.

During his papacy, the church has expanded greatly in Africa and made significant advances in Asia and Oceania. This distinctly Third World tilt has been spotlighted during the pope's more than 100 foreign trips, when he has used local customs in his liturgies, spoken the native language and praised indigenous writers and thinkers.

But the trips have enormous missionary objectives, as well. While respectful of the non-Catholic or non-Christian majorities along his itinerary, the pope has always presented the figure of Christ and the Gospel message to any and all of his listeners.

That's in keeping with the pope's conviction that while all people can be saved Christ is the unique savior for all people — a point made forcefully in the controversial document "Dominus Iesus," which emphasized proclamation of Christ over dialogue.

Visiting India in 1999, the pope delineated the church's approach on the Asian continent, where he predicted "a great harvest of faith" in the years to come. He praised his hosts' non-Christian spiritual traditions but also preached the Gospel, and said the best way for Christians to evangelize was by living the Gospel values.

The pope and youth

As the pope has aged, his rapport with young people has remained consistently — and sometimes amazingly — fresh and energetic. World Youth Day celebrations, like the last one in Toronto in 2002, seem to bring out the pope's good humor and vigor. He jokes more easily with the young, but there is a serious side to all this, too.

Papal biographer Weigel, who has attended the youth day celebrations and spoken extensively on Catholic college campuses, said it is striking how young people welcome the pope's challenge "not to settle for anything less than the religious and moral grandeur that they're capable of, under grace."

"He's had a tremendous impact on the young, not by pandering to them, but by holding the bar of expectation high, all the time letting them know that he loves them and that Christ loves them," Weigel said.

Moving forward

As the years of this pontificate roll by, the encyclicals and teaching documents have become fewer and the speeches shorter. Those close to him say the pope has clearly not run out of things to say, however — he's just saying them in different ways.

"At the start of the 21st century, the pope continues to open people up to the transcendent, telling them that we're more than genetics, we're more than psychology, we're more than DNA," said Navarro-Valls, the Vatican spokesman.

This is a message that is resonating with Catholics and non-Catholics around the world, he said.

The pope is also finding time for more reflective writing. Earlier this year, he published a small book of poetry, meditations that were inspired by the Sistine Chapel frescoes.

As his 25th anniversary approached, the pope was in the final phase of writing a book on his 20 years as a bishop in Poland. He authored a similar volume in 1996 on his life as a priest, an intensely personal review of the spiritual path that eventually led to the papacy.

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Pope John Paul II arrives at the Sanctuary of the Blessed Virgin Mary of the Holy Rosary in Pompeii, Italy, Oct. 7. Closing a year dedicated to the rosary, the pontiff called for prayer and peacemaking to help heal the "conflicts, tensions and tragedies of every continent."

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

Catholic Social Services

Catholic Social Services Adoption Information Meeting for Russia and China

Saturday, Oct. 25 - 2pm
Diocesan office: 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte
Info: Michele or Carol at 888-990-4199

TOO BUSY FOR ONE LAST KISS? DO YOU EVER FORGET TO KISS YOUR LOVED ONES AS YOU SAY YOUR DAILY "GOOD-BYES"? HOW DEVASTATED WOULD YOU BE IF YOU MISSED YOUR LAST CHANCE TO KISS THAT PERSON WHO MIGHT BE GONE FOREVER?

Last Kiss

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!

"A treasure trove of heavenly perceptions! LUSCIOUS, TENDER, ATTUNED TO THE EAR OF THE SPIRIT. Last Kiss gives lasting pleasure to all ages and every walk of life!"
—Rev. James Sheehan, author of The Father Who Didn't Know My Name

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Science and religion in the creation of the universe

REVIEWED BY WAYNE A. HOLST
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

"The Seashell on the Mountaintop" and "Jesus in the New Universe Story," read together or separately, help contemporary Christians formulate an integrated understanding of religion and science.

"Seashell" is a book about the earth's story — a geological history of how our material world has evolved. "Jesus" is a universe story in which evolving faith engages unfolding creation.

Alan Cutler's "Seashell," written for general readers, recounts the life and times of Nicolaus Steno (1638-1686), a Danish anatomist who studied the rock formations and fossils. His insights on "The Seashell on the Mountaintop: A Story of Science, Sainthood and the Humble Genius who Discovered a New History of the Earth," by Alan Cutler. Dutton/Penguin Group (New York, 2003). 228 pp., $23.95.

"Jesus in the New Universe Story," by Dominican Father Cletus Wessels. Orbis (Maryknoll, N.Y., 2003). 240 pp., $25.00.

minerals and their growth helped establish the new science of geology. Both traditional scientists and theologians resisted the earth science revolution that Steno began.

Steno sought a holistic explanation of creation that would link religious testaments to scientific knowledge. He was beatified by Pope John Paul II in 1988 and is known in his native Denmark as Blessed Niels Stensen. In his later years, Steno — a Lutheran convert to Catholicism — gave up scientific study for theology, becoming a priest and later a bishop serving Nordic missions. Known as the founder of geology, Steno is still remembered for his contributions to world knowledge as a Christian scientist.

How to explain a seashell embedded in a mountaintop? In a literal reading of Genesis, God produced the solid earth during those first "seven days" of creation, and later came Noah's flood. Before Steno it was presumed that receding floodwaters left seashells on mountains. Steno pioneered "observation" rather than relying on the pre-scientific wisdom of the ancients. He was convinced that a history of the earth could reconcile both the biblical narrative and empirical discoveries.

Steno taught that the earth has a history, revealed in its own rocks. He enhanced the meaning of the Hebrew creation myth by giving it an open-ended interpretation. He devised principles that helped his successors better understand the development of various strata or rock sequences. He demonstrated that water is the source of all sedimentary rock formations.

In "Jesus in the New Universe Story" Dominican Father Cletus Wessels, a preacher, retreat leader and parish educator, affirms the biblical account of Jesus while interpreting that narrative through the lens of an "emerging" universe. In his book for educated though not scholarly Christians he asks: "Where does (Jesus) fit into this 'new universe story' and this new cosmology? What does this story tell us of Jesus?"

The "new universe story" is profoundly influenced by evolutionary theory. It is the foundational teaching in most classrooms from junior high to university. It is commonly accepted by the scientific community worldwide. For the first time in history a creation story is shared by all cultures throughout the world.

Father Wessels describes how the human drama has evolved within the context of this larger cosmology. He addresses the meaning of such classic Christian themes as revelation, original sin, incarnation, resurrection, salvation and Jesus as Savior. He proposes that as we experience the presence of God in new ways in an emerging, non-confined universe. It is not surprising that we must now revision and reinterpret the traditional teachings.

Borrowing a key insight from Thomas Berry ("The Dream of the Earth," 1988; "The Great Work," 1999) Father Wessels believes the "new universe story" and humans that live within its embrace are evolving neither randomly (as scientism would claim) nor in a predetermined fashion (as advocated by intelligent design creationists) but in relation to a living Creator.

"An emerging universe," he says, "provides us with a new and powerful way of depicting our experience of the world and the presence of God in that world. ... Because of the unconditional love of God within us, there is no doubt in my mind that the human race will move (from adolescence) into (spiritual) adulthood and that the earth will be transformed."

In exciting, expansive ways, Culter and Father Wessels weave together the essential threads of classic Christian teaching and the discoveries of science as a new, blended tapestry takes shape.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: OCT. 19, 2003

Oct. 19, Twenty-ninth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle B Readings:
1) Isaiah 53:10-11
Psalm 33:4-5, 18-19, 20,22
2) Hebrews 4:14-16
3) Gospel: Mark 10:35-45

BY JEAN DENTON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Our parish is building a new church, a process that's taken about 12 years from vision to final construction phase. It has been an arduous process. To give you an idea, the building campaign was named "Project 2000." The new sanctuary will be dedicated in the last month of 2003.

Of course, not all parishioners have "financially participated" in the project, and over the years there was plenty of concern voiced as to whether a new church was affordable or even needed. Still, a core of committed members of the church community has seen it through.

I know a few parishioners who, although they are faithful, active church ministers, have insisted that they will not contribute to bricks and mortar. And then there is Norman.

Norman is a good family man who, for years, has served quietly and dependably in numerous parish ministries. Emphasis on the "quietly." While participating financially in the new church, he's been participating physically as well, being part of the sweat equity crew sharing wiring, carpentry and plumbing tasks. Now, as construction winds down, new offices are completed, staff and furniture are being moved, new classroom space is being opened, Norman is at the church on Saturdays and several nights a week painting an entire wing! (And yes, he has a regular job.) All those hours — Norman, his wife, son, sister and brother-in-law. If you tell him you appreciate all the work and time he's putting in, he just says, "Oh, I like to do it." At 11:30 at night?

Norman, really!

This weekend's readings are about servant leadership and servant love. They remind me of Norman and his attitude — so different from the one that says I will not contribute to any effort I deem not valuable or important. In the Gospel, Jesus is talking about his disciples' blind spot. Yes, he tells them, as disciples you will suffer in this life (drink the cup), and you will be offered the strength and guidance of the Holy Spirit (be baptized). But don't assume "success" in the eyes of God if you won't humble yourself to be a true servant of all.

Questions

'What is the prevailing attitude in your actions as a disciple of Jesus? What differences have you seen in the effects of ministering when you are motivated by wanting to feel good compared to wanting simply to serve another?

Scripture to Illustrate:

"Whoever wishes to be great among you will be your servant; whoever wishes to be first among you will be the slave of all" (Mark 10:43-44).

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCT. 19 - OCT. 25

Sunday (Twenty-ninth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Isaiah 53:10-11, Hebrews 4:14-16, Mark 10:35-45; Monday (St. Paul of the Cross), Romans 4:20-25, Luke 12:13-21; Tuesday, Romans 5:12, 15, 17-19, 20-21, Luke 12:35-38; Wednesday, Romans 6:12-18, Luke 12:39-48; Thursday (St. John of Capistrano), Romans 6:19-23, Luke 12:49-53; Friday (St. Anthony Mary Claret), Romans 7:18-25, Luke 12:54-59; Saturday, Romans 8:1-11, Luke 13:1-9

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCT. 26 - NOV. 1

Sunday (Thirtieth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Jeremiah 31:7-9, Hebrews 5:1-6, Mark 10:46-52; Monday, Romans 8:12-17, Luke 13:10-17; Tuesday (Sts. Simon and Jude), Ephesians 2:19-22, Luke 6:12-19; Wednesday, Romans 8:26-30, Luke 13:22-30; Thursday, Romans 8:31-39, Luke 13:31-35; Friday, Romans 9:1-5, Luke 14:1-6; Saturday (All Saints Day), Revelation 7:2-4, 9-14, 1 John 3:1-3, Matthew 5:1-12

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

SONG OF SONGS

ACROSS
1 States
5 Pa's partner
7 Law's limb?
10 Florida city
12 A fool and his money ___
14 Summer song
16 A drink with jam and bread?
17 Giant armadillo
18 Hamlet's country (abbr.)
19 Arnold's state (abbr.)
21 Gov't agency
23 Mature acorn
25 Cry
26 Beach Boys song
31 Five-dollar bill (slang)
32 Popular ISP
33 Dixie Cups song
39 Above (poetic)
40 They exist
41 Cute starter
43 Ad field
44 Film co.
46 Bird home
49 Atop
50 Harrison song
54 American conductor
55 French love
57 Buddhist temple
58 Adverb maker
59 Pear

DOWN
1 Extremely
2 Hurting
3 Scottish one
4 Strip of wood
5 Handbook
6 Ship of pairs
7 Dilbert intern
8 Quarrel
9 Russian capital
11 Frank's wife
13 Conclude
15 British school
16 Titanium
20 Stomach muscles
22 "__ so good."
24 Derby State (abbr.)
25 Decipher
27 Party fare
28 "Chorus Line" song
29 Clark Kent's real name: __ El
30 "Smart drugs": __tropic
33 "Kindergarten __"
34 Religious recluse
35 "__ is my Lady"
36 Crotchety
37 Cold __
38 Genesis follower
42 Printer's measure
44 Gov't food agency
45 Piercing tool
47 Hearst kidnapper
48 Empty on Easter
51 Verily
52 Lamprey
53 Winnie-the-Pooh character
56 Pepsi competitor

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

HARDLY WORTH TESTIFYING

CNS PHOTO FROM 20TH CENTURY FOX

Dustin Hoffman stars in a scene from the movie "Runaway Jury," a middling courtroom drama based on the John Grisham novel.

'Jury' verdict is anything but suspenseful

BY GERRI PARE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK (CNS) — A juror and his girlfriend conspire to buy a verdict for the highest bidder in the workmanlike courtroom drama "Runaway Jury" (20th Century Fox).

Based on the 1996 John Grisham novel, the lawsuit in the movie was switched from the tobacco industry to the gun industry after Big Tobacco began to lose cases. But, as often happens in a book with many characters (the opposing legal teams, their clients, jury consultants, judge, jury and alternates) the film must pare down the characterizations to quick thumbnail sketches. And the film suffers as a result, especially in comparison to the novel. Although director Gary Fleder sets a fast pace and has a great cast at his disposal, these characters simply aren't emotionally involving enough to make us care deeply.

Gene Hackman plays Rankin Fitch, a ruthless jury consultant for the gun industry who promises the rich CEOs paying him that with their lawyer (Bruce Davison) obeying his instructions to accept or reject a given juror, they will bring in the not-guilty verdict so crucial to prevent a slew of class-action suits that could bankrupt the gun industry. Fitch has a huge staff — both high-tech types researching each potential juror and lowlifes to intimidate or blackmail them for the "right" verdict.

The wild card in the equation, however, is juror Nick Easter (John Cusack), whose background cannot be traced by Fitch's minions before the trial begins. Bringing the suit against the gun manufacturer whose firearm a disgruntled employee used to murder 11 employees is a widow represented by crusading New Orleans attorney Wendall Rohr (Dustin Hoffman).

In short order, Fitch and Rohr are each contacted by Nick's girlfriend, Marlee (Rachel Weisz), who proposes that for millions Nick can swing the jury to the desired outcome for whoever takes her up on the offer. Idealistic Rohr is appalled; Fitch wants to gets the goods on her pronto, but is persuaded to listen to her when she proves Nick is able to manipulate the jurors to do unheard-of things such as bursting forth with a pledge of allegiance in the courtroom. As Rohr finds his key witnesses suddenly compromised, he too considers the despicable offer.

But are Nick and Marlee as mercenary as they seem, and are they in actual danger from Fitch's thugs?

Despite the director's snazzy camera moves, action elements and zippy pacing, the sense of urgency isn't there, so the suspense isn't sizzling. While never boring, the film plays like a competent police procedural as the pieces in the puzzle eventually fit together. Yet the ending is far too easily accomplished to be very credible, with its morally ambiguous characters shown in a more favorable light than deserved.

Ironically, there are scenes in a church, with a cabbie whose rosary is prominently positioned and in a store featuring candles to honor different saints, but the supposed moral victory dished out is hollow.

Due to a cynical view of the legal system, some violence and minimal rough language and profanity, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

Pare is the director of the Office for Film & Broadcasting of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Countdown to ordination

ORDINATION, from page 1

Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta will celebrate the ordination Mass. Archbishop Gabriel Montalvo, apostolic nuncio in Washington, and Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus of Charlotte, will concelebrate.

For the first time in the history of the Diocese of Charlotte, the bishop's ordination will be broadcast live on the Internet.

"Now the faithful of the diocese can participate in the ceremony via a live Webcast," said Father Francis O'Rourke, pastor of Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro and coordinator of ordination ceremonies.

From any computer with Internet access, people can watch a live video and audio feed from St. Matthew Church. The Web site hosting the video will be accessible through the diocesan Web site (www.charlottediocese.org) at 12 p.m. Oct. 24.

"I am really excited to be a part of this historic moment, to capture and archive it for future generations to enjoy," said Mark Martindale, the ordination's videographer.

"Through this technology, we are able to offer direct access to this historic event to the people of our diocese and beyond," said Father O'Rourke, "and it gives us the possibilities of future uses for this medium."

"Using the Internet for online ministry will enable us to reach out to others more effectively and find new ways of participating in the church's mission of evangelization," said Frank Villaronga, director of diocesan evangelization and ministry formation and ordination planning committee member.

The rite of reception of the bishop in his cathedral church will take place at St. Patrick Cathedral Oct. 25.

The rite of reception prescribes the new bishop be greeted on his arrival at the cathedral by an assembly of priests, deacons and the faithful of the diocese, according to Father O'Rourke.

"After reverencing a crucifix presented to him by the rector, Father Paul Gary, the bishop will bless the congregation using holy water," said Father O'Rourke. "Upon entering the cathedral, the bishop will take his place at the cathedra — the seat that signifies his being bishop of the diocese — and then proceed with the celebration of the Eucharist."

"This special ceremony is open to all who wish to join in the celebration," said Father O'Rourke.

WANT TO GO?

The ordination and installation Mass will be at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Parkway in Charlotte, 12-2 p.m. Oct. 24. The rite of reception of the bishop will take place at St. Patrick Cathedral, 1621 Dilworth Road East in Charlotte, 5:30 p.m. Oct. 25.

Mother Teresa's 'miracle'

MIRACLE, from page 1

pressed together — then they grasp her hands or her wrist.

Besra, who is in her late 30s, played a key role in the process leading to Mother Teresa's Oct. 19 beatification.

Suffering from a huge abdominal tumor, Besra was being cared for by the Missionaries of Charity in West Bengal state. The sisters prayed for Mother Teresa's intercession, and Besra was healed on the first anniversary of their founder's death.

With one of the Indian nuns translating, Besra told Catholic News Service she has been smiling ever since.

A Hindu at the time of the healing in 1998, Besra became a Catholic and was scheduled to receive Communion from Pope John Paul II during the beatification Mass.

"I hope people who see me will feel happy, too," she said in an Oct. 14 interview.

Besra came to Rome with a group of Mother Teresa's sisters for the ceremony. With the demands of work and school, her husband and children stayed behind in India.

The slender woman who speaks softly and laughs often said she had heard about Mother Teresa for years.

"I had heard the Mother did good for others, taking care of the sick and the poor," she said.

Besra said that although she was Hindu "I always loved Christianity and named all my children with Christian names. Even before I became Christian, I loved Jesus.

"I had Mother Mary's picture in my house and I would pray to her," she said. "I felt I was not loved enough, my life was very sad, so I turned to Mother Mary."

Besra said her husband often stayed away from home or would come home drunk.

"After my cure, my husband stopped drinking. Now if he drinks, he gets sick right away," she said, giggling.

"There is so much joy in my house now; we laugh all the time," Besra said. "That is another miracle."

In October 2002, the leader of the Science and Rationalists Association of India, as well as a former state health minister and the director of the hospital where Besra was treated for tuberculosis, claimed the healing was the result of medical treatment, not prayers to Mother Teresa.

Vatican medical consultants had examined the woman's medical records and concluded there was no medical explanation for the disappearance of the tumor.

Vatican sources said the consultants specifically considered whether medication used for treating her tuberculosis could have caused the tumor to disappear, and they concluded it could not.

But Besra did not need the input of medical experts; she was convinced from the beginning that her healing was a miracle.

"Those who believe in God and in Mother believe it is a miracle," she said. "Those who love God, they believe in miracles; Hindus, too, if they have a pure mind."

The smile faded from her lips as she explained: "I was so sick and I was healed. That is why I became a Christian.

"From the time Mother and God made me all right, all I have wanted is to honor him," she said.

"No matter what anyone says, I am convinced and I will follow my faith," Besra said.

LOCAL CELEBRATION

A Mass of Thanksgiving in honor of the beatification of Mother Teresa will be held at St. Patrick Cathedral at 9 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 25. Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus, will be the celebrant of the mass. All are welcome. St. Patrick Cathedral is at 1621 Dilworth Road East in Charlotte.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

FAITH FORMATION DIRECTOR: St. Patrick Cathedral in Charlotte. Full-time position with good salary (range $31-$35K) is currently available. Duties involve supervising religious education program for young people on Sunday morning. If you have experience or a degree in theology or religious studies, please send resume and cover letter to: Fr. Paul Gary, 1621 Dilworth Road E., Charlotte NC 28203, or fax to St. Patrick Cathedral at 704-377-6403.

SALES: #1 Health and Nutrition Company expanding. Full training provided. $25-$75/hour part-time /full-time. 1-888-724-7425. http://www.wisdomofwealth.com/?refid=n3

PRODUCTS & SERVICES

INSURANCE: Best Health, Life, LTC and Medicare supplements at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

FOR SALE

FOR RENT OR SALE: Denver/Maiden. 3-bedroom, 2-bath home on private .5 acre lot. Accessible to St. Joseph or Holy Spirit parish. 828-428-8512.

FOR SALE: Real estate steal. $163,000. Matthews. Tax value $171,600. Market value $182,900. 4 bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths. 2-car garage. Interior completely updated 6 years ago. 704/370-3339 (day); 704/688-0997 (night)

FOR RENT

SNOWBIRDS - FAMILY VACATIONS - Weekend Getaways. OCEANFRONT condos in Charleston, SC and Hutchinson Island, FL. www.bedonthebeach.com or 704-895-3214

VACATION RENTAL: Hilton Head Island. 2-bedroom Villa, sleeps 6. Weekend, weekly and monthly low owner rates. Call Chris @ (704) 321-1939.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Aging with GRACE

Featured Guest
David Snowdon, author of Aging with Grace: What the Nun Study Teaches Us About Leading Longer, Healthier and More Meaningful Lives

November 3-5, 2003
Kanuga Conference Center
Hendersonville, North Carolina

Sponsored by Western Carolina University, Kanuga Conferences, Inc., Pardee Hospital, MAHEC, the Community Foundation of Henderson County, the Henderson County Office of Smith Barney, AARP-North Carolina, WHKP Radio, Strauss and Associates, P.A., Procter & Gamble Pharmaceuticals & The Alliance for Better Bone Health, Whitley Home Medical Equipment, Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Hendersonville, the Hendersonville Times-News, Lilly Pharmaceuticals, the Land of Sky Regional Council, and Janssen Pharmaceutica.

For more information call 828-694-1829 or visit
http://cess.wcu.edu/aging

Boy Scout wins Eagle Award for handiwork

COURTESY PHOTO

WINSTON-SALEM — Padraig Hugh O'Doherty, of Boy Scout Troop 958 at St. Leo the Great Catholic Church, received the Eagle Scout Award Aug. 30.

O'Doherty's Eagle project was to construct nine stackable benches for the religious education program of the Hispanic ministry of St. Leo the Great Church. The benches, which are portable and fit in the rear of the church's 15-passenger van, are sturdy enough for long-term use yet light enough for movement by the students and teachers.

O'Doherty, a graduate of North Forsyth High School, is a freshman at Western Carolina.

Greenway fun raises funds

COURTESY PHOTO

Annual golf tournament a success

CRAMERTON — Although threats of rain from an impending hurricane were in the forecast, the sun shone bright at Cramer Mountain Country Club for Holy Angels' 12th Fall Golf Classic.

With a ceremonial first drive, Holy Angels resident Trey and emvee Jeff Johnson opened the Sept. 15 tournament in which 139 golfers participated.

All proceeds raised through the tournament help support programs and services of Holy Angels. In the past 12 years, the golf outing has raised nearly $500,000.

Golfers gathered in the clubhouse ballroom following play for a reception and the awarding of prizes. Winners of the Captain's Choice tournament included the following teams:

1st Place — Ryan's Friends: Mike Warchol, a parent of Holy Angels' resident, Ryan; Doug Lyerly; Tom Wright; and Curt Pritchard.

2nd Place — WJZY UPN46/ Charlotte's WB: Jeff Johnson, Bobby Hitchcock, Chyne Rubuer, Mat McIntyre.

3rd Place — Nationwide Insurance: Bill Gary, Arnie Broome, Chuck Norton, Tim Hausemann.

Holy Angels, founded in 1956 by the Sisters of Mercy, is a private, nonprofit corporation located in Belmont that provides residential services and innovative programs for children and adults with varying degrees of mental retardation and physical disabilities, some of whom are medically fragile.

Programs include the Holy Angels Residential Center, four Community Group Homes, four Intermediate Care Facilities for the Mentally Retarded group homes, Little Angels Child Development Center, Great Adventures, Camp Hope and Cherubs Café & Candy Bouquets in downtown Belmont.

ORDER FROM CANADA & SAVE 30-70% ON ALL PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

You do not have to travel to Canada in order to receive your prescriptions. We have licensed Pharmacists and Physicians who can review & fill your orders and send them directly to you via mail.

SEE EXAMPLES OF THE SAVINGS APTECHA OFFERS:

| | Strength | QTY | Walgreen's | Costco | CVS.com | APTECHA | SAVINGS |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Celebrex | 200mg | 100 | $255.98 | $244.27 | $269.99 | $130.10* | 53-55% |
| Detrol | 2mg | 60 | $101.99 | $99.41 | $108.99 | $59.45 | 44-49% |
| Flomax | 0.4mg | 100 | $196.65 | $173.69 | $190.99 | $93.45 | 46-52% |
| Fosamax | 10mg | 90 | $206.97 | $199.07 | $215.99 | $145.68 | 27-33% |
| Glucophage | 500mg | 100 | $74.99 | $72.57 | $76.99 | $16.80 | 77-78% |
| Lipitor | 10mg | 90 | $199.58 | $178.89 | $200.99 | $148.03 | 23-31% |
| Norvasc | 10mg | 100 | $199.97 | $187.39 | $203.99 | $174.07 | 14-21% |
| Neurontin | 300mg | 100 | $123.99 | $122.17 | $129.98 | $69.30 | 43-47% |
| Plavix | 75mg | 28 | $101.72 | $102.84 | $106.99 | $64.53 | 37-40% |
| Pravachol | 20mg | 100 | $283.30 | $266.69 | $288.99 | $105.65 | 60-63% |
| Premarin | .625mg | 100 | $97.99 | $80.77 | $94.99 | $23.58 | 71-76% |
| Prevacid | 30mg | 30 | $127.99 | $116.97 | $134.99 | $61.95 | 47-54% |
| Prilosec | 20mg | 28 | $114.99 | $110.48 | $126.99 | $57.75 | 48-55% |
| Zocor | 20mg | 100 | $377.38 | $385.47 | $432.20 | $161.70 | 57-63% |
| Zyrtec | 10mg | 100 | $206.63 | $184.27 | $200.99 | $58.79 | 53-58% |

Products mentioned are trademarks of their respective companies.

U.S. Citizens by law, are allowed a 90 day supply of each individual drug.

You will have to provide a copy of the Original Prescription with your order via Fax or Air Mail.

This is just a sample of the 2000 different medications that APTECHA carries. For more information on our complete line of brand name and generic prescription medications, to get pricing or to obtain your FREE Patient Information Kit, CALL.

VISIT OUR WEBSITE www.APTECHA.com

CALL US ABOUT HELPING YOUR GROUP OUT WITH FUNDRAISING EFFORTS!!

CALL TOLL-FREE 1.877.278.3242

Include this Ad when placing your order and receive our X-Press Shipping Service for the price of Regular Ground Shipping. $10 VALUE

Mention the CATHOLIC NEWS of N.C.

APTECHA... Canadian Drugstore. World Class Service.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company

Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte

The Catholic Company Outlet Store

228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715

803-396-5399 ext. 240

Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm

5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485

I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd). Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.

CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman

The Catholic Company – Lake Norman

19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031

704-655-9090

Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm

In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's

I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave. Go west for ½ mile. The store is on the North side of street.

LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Beyond the big issues: Ideas for the church

C-SPAN window on a Catholic world needed

Looking Around

FATHER WILLIAM J. BYRON, SJ
CNS COLUMNIST

If you ever wonder why we don't have a Catholic C-SPAN, or a Catholic equivalent of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, you are doing the kind of thinking that the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops never gets around to at its annual November meeting in Washington, D.C. This is not necessarily because the bishops and their conference staff have "better things to think about." It's simply because they've got so many frontline, high-priority things to discuss that they don't have time on their agenda for smaller, quieter ideas that could, if translated into programs, contribute to the vitality of the church the conference exists to serve.

A great form of lay participation in the life of the church would be "out of the box thinking" that could lead the bishops to set up a task force or two during their annual meeting in Year 1, and commission them to produce a report that could result in an action item on the November agenda two or three years later. Any action item would, of course, have to have budgetary legs to bring it to the floor for serious debate.

Out of the box thinking would mean out of the chancery, out of the sanctuary, out of the social, theological, liturgical, educational and public-policy arenas where the bishops' agenda normally and quite properly sinks its roots. Those who come up with interesting small ideas (there are plenty of experts in the conference to generate the big ideas!) might be invited to take a place on a task force with the opportunity to speak up in support of their proposals in one of the November meetings.

What if there were a Catholic C-SPAN (the cable, satellite, public affairs network)? C-SPAN is financed by the cable industry; it began in 1979 with four employees and one telephone line. What if there were on cable television a Catholic Booknotes every weekend? What if a Catholic C-SPAN had bureaus in Washington, New York, Boston, Chicago, New Orleans, Denver, San Francisco and other Catholic centers of influence in between — South Bend, for example? Wouldn't it be great to be able to tune in to the classrooms, cultural centers, panel discussions, lectures, debates and exhibitions in Catholic institutional settings?

Catholic hospitals would surely have interesting fare to offer to interested viewers. And just as C-SPAN is on Capitol Hill every day, a Catholic counterpart could cover the daily activities of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington and maybe even provide a regular call-in program with conservative, moderate and progressive lines!

Those who admire the resourcefulness of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in bringing to the nation the beautiful voices of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir (while deriving a well-deserved public relations benefit in return), might sometimes ask, Why not a National Catholic Chorale with a home at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington? The church could surely use the PR bonus, and the nation would be enriched by the cultural contributions of Catholic singers and instrumentalists.

Just as there are many other places and events that could attract Catholic cable TV cameras, there are also a lot of other small ideas worthy of consideration by the body of bishops for the betterment of both church and nation. The task force mechanism can be utilized at any time to put wheels under good ideas. And lots of good ideas are out there between the ears of thinking Catholics whose eyes would welcome a C-SPAN-like window on their Catholic world.

E-mail: wbyron@loyola.edu.

Buoyed by cheers, frail pope kicks off 25th anniversary celebrations

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Buoyed by the cheers of pilgrims and serenaded by Polish choirs, a frail Pope John Paul II kicked off 25th anniversary celebrations with a reflection on prayer and divine grace.

Addressing some 20,000 people in St. Peter's Square Oct. 15, the pope spoke about the value of evening prayer for modern Catholics. Then he greeted a seemingly endless line of cardinals, bishops, dignitaries and the sick — many of whom brought a gift for the occasion.

The general audience was the first official event of a weeklong calendar of ceremonies and liturgies to mark the anniversary of the pope's election Oct. 16, 1978. For the occasion, the Vatican's Web site (www.vatican.va) invited people around the world to send greetings to the pope at his e-mail address: john_paul_ii@vatican.va.

The 83-year-old pontiff rode through a crowded St. Peter's Square seated on a throne in an open jeep, looking alert and waving to the thousands of cheering well-wishers. He spoke in a relatively strong voice, although at times he seemed short of breath.

The pope's talk recommended evening prayer, or vespers, as a way to draw close to God through a sequence of psalms, canticles, readings and intercessions, culminating in the Lord's Prayer, the "perfect expression of the church's praise of God."

Like all general audiences, this one had a down-home atmosphere. The 70-person Immaculate Conception Church Choir of Port Clinton, Ohio, sang a hymn to the pope, and other groups chanted messages to him.

"He is the one pope I've known and is very special. We thought this might be our last chance to see him," said Vivian Palmer of Dearborn, Mich., who sat with her mother in the square as the pope's jeep passed.

The pope, seated on a platform in the sunny square, abbreviated some of his remarks, but still managed to express greetings in several languages.

"I want to acknowledge the wishes and prayers that have been offered for me on (the) occasion of my 25th anniversary of my pontificate," he said at the end of the audience.

"I'm happy that I can count on your spiritual support," he said.

Among the U.S. prelates who greeted the pope personally afterward were Cardinals Roger M. Mahony of Los Angeles, Theodore E. McCarrick of Washington and Bernard F. Law, retired archbishop of Boston.

The gifts for the anniversary were piling up at the Vatican, and more were dropped off at the audience. A Japanese delegation brought a bronze bust of the pope, Africans brought a crucifix and individuals presented books, silver plates and decorated ceramic ware to the pope, who let aides carry them away.

As usual, the biggest group of people allowed to kiss the pope's ring was the sick, including dozens who were taken up to the seated pontiff in wheelchairs. Then the pope posed patiently for group photos with pilgrims for almost an hour.

The pope began the week by remembering the day of his election and thanking everyone — especially young people — for their prayers and enthusiasm over the years.

"I look out at young people, with whom I've established a preferential dialogue from the beginning of my Petrine ministry," he said at a blessing from his apartment window Oct. 12.

He said he recalled telling young people at his first Angelus talk in 1978, "You are the future of the world, you are the hope of the church, you are my hope."

"I have to recognize that the response of young people has been truly encouraging. Today I would like to thank them for always being close to me during these years, and I'd like them to know that I continue to count on them," he said.

Speaking in a pre-recorded TV transmission to Poland Oct. 13, the pope said that at the 25-year mark the words of St. Luke's Gospel came to mind: "We are useless servants. We have done no more than our duty."

The pope said he wanted to "thank God for all the good he has caused to spring from the hearts of individuals, the church and the world" throughout the 25 years of his ministry.

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Catholic News & Herald welcomes letters from readers. We ask that letters be originals of 250 words or less.

To be considered for publication, each letter must include the name, address and phone number of the writer for purpose of verification. Letters may be condensed due to space limitations and edited for clarity, style and taste.

Send letters to Letters to the Editor, The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, N.C. 28237, or e-mail catholicnews@charlottediocese.org.

A little courtesy goes a long way

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

Most of us take courtesy for granted. We extend it in a mild way by holding doors open, or saying "please" and "thank you," or letting somebody with a single item go first at the grocery store. And we notice it when people don't do these things, when a driver cuts us off or someone plays a radio so loudly it hurts our ears.

Still, I don't believe we often appreciate the potential power a simple act of courtesy can exert on people. Not long ago, I read about such an incident concerning the respected religious and civil rights leader Desmond Tutu, which turned into a life-changing moment.

As a boy, Tutu saw firsthand the evils of South Africa's apartheid system. Injustice and indignities were the norm. One day, as he walked down the street with his mother, a white Anglican priest politely stepped aside and tipped his hat to Tutu's mother. Surprised, young Desmond asked her, "Why was that white man so nice to you?"

She replied, "That man is a minister of the Gospel. People like that are courteous to everyone."

Tutu later said it was at that moment he decided he, too, would be a minister of the Gospel. He also became an Anglican priest, later archbishop, and a world renowned and respected human rights advocate and winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize.

Now, I'm not suggesting that every time you say "Have a nice day!" it will change someone's life. Yet there's no doubt that we all have a far greater influence on others than we credit ourselves. We are part of a human community and while we think of ourselves as pretty self-sufficient, that's not really the case. The littlest acts of courtesy and kindness are life-affirming gifts and, of course, that applies to the reverse: the smallest barbs of thoughtlessness, rudeness and pettiness cause wounds that can last a day or a decade.

Who would ever want to admit to being thoughtless, rude or petty? The other guy maybe, but not me! If we are inconsiderate, it's only because we've been provoked. If we tell people what we think of them, we're just being frank. Sound familiar? We all have our mean moments. But it's nothing to be proud of — and no way to live.

Archbishop Desmond Tutu has some thoughts on being more aware of our connection with others, too: "You can't be a solitary human being. (We're) all linked. ... Because of this deep sense of community, the harmony of the group is a prime attribute. And so you realize that anything that undermines the harmony is to be avoided as much as possible. Anger and jealousy and revenge are particularly corrosive, so you try ... to enhance the humanity of the other, because in that process, you enhance your own."

The consideration and civility we share makes our world a bit less difficult, a bit more grace-filled for us not only as individuals, but as members of one human community — children of our Divine Creator. "The grace of God is in courtesy," said the writer Hilaire Belloc. It's true, and it's worth remembering whenever you're tempted not to make time for courtesy.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "Respectfully Yours," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

Understanding: the heart of dialogue

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

"Permit me, then, with the last breaths the Spirit gives me, to implore you: Do not be afraid to embrace the spirituality of communion, this 'little way' of dialogue with one another, with your priests, with all God's faithful. Doing so, you will touch not only the hearts of your brothers and sisters, you will draw closer to the very heart of Jesus, the Lord and brother of us all."

When I read these dying words of Msgr. Philip Murnion, I thought: If this is the most important thing he sees in this life as he leaves it, how do we translate his vision into action? I found my answer.

Before a recent funeral Mass, an elderly man dressed in a cream-colored suit entered the sacristy. Later I learned he was a priest who works with Hispanics.

Another gentleman entered the sacristy with hair down to his ears wearing layman's clothes. As he put on an alb, I realized that he too was a priest and later learned he was working in one of the toughest neighborhoods in Washington, D.C.

The celebrant at the Mass was black. When he began the funeral ceremony, it was unlike any I usually experience. Throughout it he sang. It was one of the most uplifting funerals I have ever concelebrated.

I must frankly admit that at first I felt I was among a group of maverick priests. They just didn't fit the mold of priests coming to a funeral. But the more I learned about these men, the more I came to respect them as persons.

When I read Msgr. Murnion's plea for dialogue and spiritual communion, my first reaction was: Our priests and bishops are all characters in one way or other. How could you ever have a true dialogue with so many diverse personalities? Follow the beautiful counsel of the book of Proverbs: "Wisdom is the principle thing; get wisdom and with all thy getting get understanding."

If Msgr. Murnion's vision is to materialize, it must start with a desire to look into each other much more deeply than we do, to put aside labels and first impressions, to forget biases and prejudices, and to open our hearts to each other so that we can speak heart to heart.

Understanding is at the heart of dialogue. More important, it gives heart to the priesthood.

Preparing for marriage after age 75

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. If both of a couple are over 75 years old and have known each other for 45 years, are they required to take premarriage classes? We would feel out of place with the young couples. (Iowa)

A. As most other pastors, I have helped many older couples prepare for marriage, and we always work out some alternative to the usual preparation programs. We understand your potential embarrassment and that much of the usual information would be irrelevant for you.

On the other hand, some parts of the typical preparation programs, such as premarriage inventories, which explore your similarities and differences on numerous subjects like finances, religion, even recreational activities, could prove beneficial for both of you.

Please talk with your pastor together, and explain your concern. I'm nearly positive he will help you prepare in way you will feel comfortable with.

Confusion over Our Father

Q. After a recent Mass, a friend told me the Our Father we say at Mass is Protestant. She belongs to some "new" Catholic group that does things differently and was told our prayer after the Lord's Prayer (For the kingdom, the power ...") is wrong. I've never heard that. Is it true? (Illinois)

A. No, it is not true. That prayer, called a doxology (prayer of praise), was used very early in Christian liturgical worship, possibly because a similar prayer had been common in Jewish worship for a long time.

Eventually some, perhaps overzealous, copiers of Scripture (this was long before the printing press) began placing these words after the Lord's Prayer in the Gospel of Mathew (6:9-13) as a gloss — marginal interpretations or pious notes which they occasionally inserted, possibly just to break the monotony of a tedious job.

In later centuries, some glosses, including this one, found their way into the Bible text itself. This was the situation when the King James Authorized English translation was published in 1611.

The King James version, in general use by Protestants for more than 300 years, included this addendum to the Lord's Prayer.

As biblical scholarship developed, however, it became clear to everyone, Protestant and Catholic, that this addition was not originally part of Scripture, but was inserted afterward.

Thus, Protestant Bibles since the King James translation have, almost universally, eliminated the sentence from the Scripture, mentioning it at most as an unauthentic, or liturgical, addition to the sacred text. Bible translations under Catholic auspices have never included the sentence.

For centuries, however, the doxology was included in the Mass shortly after the Our Father. We continue the ancient liturgical tradition, of course, even today by offering this prayer of praise together at Mass, not as part of, but shortly after the Our Father.

Oriental-rite Catholics, however, and many Latin-rite Catholics in other countries, still use it regularly as a concluding doxology to the Lord's Prayer.

A free brochure in English or Spanish, answering questions Catholics ask about baptism practices and sponsors is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Father John Dietzen, Box 325, Peoria, IL 61651.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

Our Lady of the Highways Church home to multicultural family

File Photo

Our Lady of the Highways Church was designed in 1953 and its first service was a reading of St. John's Passion of Christ on Good Friday, April 16, 1954. The parish, now made up of 450 families, celebrated the church's 50th anniversary Oct. 5.

OUR LADY OF THE HIGHWAYS
943 Ball Park Road
Thomasville, N.C. 27360
(336) 475-2732

Vicariate: Greensboro
Pastor: Oblate Father Thomas Fitzpatrick
Deacon: Rev. Mr. Wayne Adams
Number of Families: 450

Oblate Father
Thomas Fitzpatrick

THOMASVILLE — It was through the presence of sports that the Catholic Church arrived in Thomasville. Catholic members of the Hi-Toms Ball Team, a minor league baseball squad, attended the first Mass celebrated in the area more than a half-century ago. In the summer months during the late 1940s, Father Robert McMillan of Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in High Point said Masses in a Thomasville funeral home.

In June 1951, before the founding of the Diocese of Charlotte, Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh arranged for Masses to be celebrated at a home on College Street in Thomasville. Father McMillan was celebrant, although Father Hugh Kennedy became the town's pastor that same month. Holy Rosary Church in Lexington later took the newly founded chapel on as a mission church. Named in honor of St. Thomas Beckett, the chapel was designated a mission on Dec. 28, 1951.

Increasing numbers of local Catholics soon led to expansion. The "twin priests," Fathers Clarence and Lawrence Hill, designed plans for a permanent church in 1953. Dubbed Our Lady of the Highways Church, its first service was a reading of St. John's Passion of Christ on Good Friday, April 16, 1954. The congregation attended its first Mass that Easter Sunday, when the church was blessed.

Until 1970, Our Lady of the Highways Church continued as a mission church, either under Holy Rosary Church in Lexington or Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in High Point. In July 1970, the Oblates of St. Francis de Sales assisted Bishop Waters in establishing Our Lady of the Highways as a parish. By 1972, the church boasted membership of 72 families.

Parish growth continued over the years, and a new parish picnic center and mobile classroom units for faith formation classes were added in 1980. Within two years, 95 families comprised the church community. In March 1988, plans were drawn for the construction of a parish center and a rectory on the church grounds. The additions were dedicated Sept. 17, 1989.

Our Lady of the Highways Church developed a Hispanic ministry in 1983. Beginning with a 17-week program, the ministry expanded to include weekly Spanish Masses each Sunday. A growing year-round Hispanic population enhanced parish life, and in 1996 two faith formation programs were formed: one for English-speaking parishioners, the other a bilingual program for English- and Spanish-speakers.

Parishioners and clergy became active in other ministries, as well, providing assistance to the staff of Community General Hospital, and — along with a local grocer — operating a food-collection-and-distribution project for the area's needy.

Each September, parishioners gather together on Our Lady of the Highways Day, when the varied international backgrounds of the parishioners are celebrated with a dinner and Mass.

Oblate Father John Murphy, who became pastor of the church in 1977, oversaw much growth in the parish with the addition of over 100 new families. In June 1997, Oblate Father Thomas Fitzpatrick became pastor.

On April 21, 2001, Bishop Curlin presided at a bilingual Mass and blessed a refurbished church including double the worship space, a new cry room, a sacristy and a reconciliation room. Other features included new carpet, new windows depicting images of saints and biblical scenes and new marble surrounding the altar and tabernacle area. Renovations took less than five months, thanks to the generosity of local contributors and the spirit of the faith community.

"The amazing part of this church is the architecture," said Father Fitzpatrick at the ceremony. "It looks like a Spanish mission, and there wasn't a Hispanic in sight when the church was built. Now, half our parish is Spanish. It was a prophecy. It's wonderful."

The church currently has 450 families made up of 21 different nationalities. On Oct. 5, 2003, the parish celebrated the church's 50th anniversary with a special Mass and dinner featuring ethnic cuisine of the various nationalities in the parish.

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection Lowest Prices
Drivers wanted.
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

We beat the banks!
IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.
Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com
Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net
7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210
IMS Mortgage Service

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

OCTOBER 24, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 5

Special Insert:

Included in this issue is the annual diocesan finance report, 'Building Hope, Changing Lives.'

Mother Teresa beatified in Rome

Pope offers thanks for her witness, courage

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

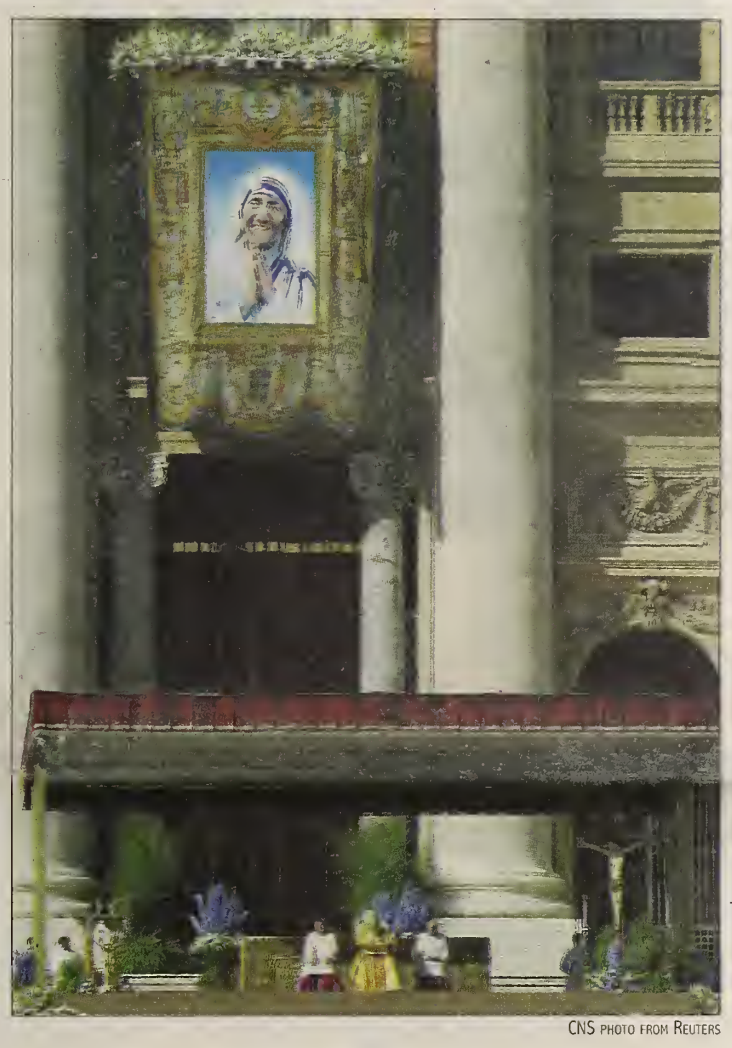
VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II offered his thanks to Blessed Mother Teresa of Calcutta, founder of the Missionaries of Charity, for being close to him in her lifetime and for courageously showing the world what it means to love and serve Jesus completely.

"The venerable servant of God, Teresa of Calcutta, from this moment on will be called blessed," the pope said at the Oct. 19 beatification Mass as the crowd burst into applause.

In the homily he wrote for the ceremony, the 83-year-old pope said: "We honor in her one of the most relevant personalities of our age. Let us accept her message and follow her example."

For the first time at a major event, Pope John Paul did not read even one line of his own homily. A Vatican official said that with the pope's difficulty speaking clearly, the crowd would not have been able to understand much of his message, so others were asked to read for him.

See BEATIFIED, page 13



CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Pope John Paul II presides at the beatification Mass for Mother Teresa of Calcutta Oct. 19 in St. Peter's Square.

LONG-LIVED FAITH

Seniors gather for day of reflection

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

HUNTERSVILLE — Laughter resonated throughout St. Mark Church as Benedictine Father Kieran Neilson shared jokes with 100 seniors who gathered Oct. 9 for a day of reflection, prayer and laughter sponsored by the elder ministry for Catholic Social Services.

Unlike the Spring Fling, when parishioners from across the diocese congregate to enjoy games and enrichment activities, the annual Senior Fall Day of Reflection is a time for seniors to come together to explore and challenge their faith, said Sandra Breakfield, program director for diocesan elder ministry.

"Seniors are very spiritually grounded," Breakfield said. "They need, and want, a day to increase their faith."

See SENIORS, page 7

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Pope John Paul II acknowledges the cheers of pilgrims at his weekly general audience in St. Peter's Square Oct. 15. Tens of thousands of pilgrims from around the world made their way to Rome to mark his 25th anniversary as pope Oct. 16 and to celebrate the beatification of Mother Teresa of Calcutta Oct. 19.

CELEBRATING 25 YEARS

Anniversary Mass, pope prays for 'wisdom, holiness and strength'

At anniversary Mass, pope prays for 'wisdom, holiness and strength'

by JOHN THAVIS
catholic news service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — As the world offered congratulations and encouragement, Pope John Paul II celebrated a 25th anniversary Mass and prayed for the "wisdom, holiness and strength" to keep leading the church.

The Oct. 16 liturgy in St. Peter's Square brought together church leaders, civil authorities and some 50,000 faithful from many countries, all of them eager to share the moment with the aging and fragile pontiff.

The Mass was an emotional high point of the anni-

See POPE, page 12

Bishop Jugis ordained as fourth bishop of Charlotte

Bishop Peter J. Jugis was ordained and installed as the fourth bishop of Charlotte in a Mass at St. Matthew Church today, Oct. 24.

Look for complete coverage of the Mass, as well as Bishop Jugis' rite of reception at St. Patrick Cathedral Oct. 25 and other events, in a special commemorative issue to Bishop Jugis in next week's The Catholic News & Herald.

Ministering through music
St. John Neumann music director wins national recognition
| PAGE 4

Spreading Jesus' love
Women's Guild distributes funds to many
| PAGE 5

Aging with Grace
Upcoming conference to feature 'Nun Study' results
| PAGE 6

#BXNPDVQ#3-DIGIT 275
#420836# S239 P2
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

FIGHTING FOR LIFE UNTIL THE VERY END

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Protesters hold up signs and a photograph of Terri Schiavo with her mother outside the Pinellas Park Hospice in Florida Oct. 15. By order of a circuit court judge, Terri Schiavo's feeding tube, which was keeping her alive, was removed that afternoon.

Fight continues after woman's feeding tube removed, replaced

PINELLAS PARK, Fla. (CNS) — As protestors held signs outside the Pinellas Park Hospice, Terri Schiavo's feeding tube was removed inside by order of a circuit court judge Oct. 15.

The tube had kept Schiavo, a 39-year-old Catholic woman, alive since a 1990 collapse, believed due to a potassium imbalance, which left her with severe brain damage.

She has since become the subject of a bitter battle between her husband, who claimed further treatment was useless and sought to have nutrition and hydration ended, and her parents and other relatives, who were fighting to keep her alive.

Schiavo has no will or advance health care directives, and her husband, Michael Schiavo, had won $1.3 million for her care but has had to be brought to court to authorize routine treatment for his wife's infections.

Michael Schiavo now has a child — and a second one on the way — with another woman but remained married to Terri and in control of her medical fund and her fate.

Despite the best efforts of Terri's parents, the feeding tube — through which she has received food and water for the past 13 years — was removed and she was expected to die within two weeks.

But Oct. 20, the Florida House passed a bill to give Gov. Jeb Bush the power to have her feeding tube restored. A Senate panel approved the bill early Oct. 21 and a full Senate vote was scheduled for that evening. Meanwhile, a federal judge in Tampa, Fla., turned down a state agency's request to keep Schiavo alive while it investigated whether removal of the feeding tube could be considered a form of abuse.

"Tragically, denial of basic sustenance to people with disabilities is neither unusual nor new in our country," the National Right to Life Committee said in an Oct. 15 statement. "For about two decades, the law in virtually every state has decreed that 'surrogates' may authorize denial of treatment to those who cannot speak for themselves."

No medical consensus exists that Terri Schiavo is in a persistent vegetative state.

"Over the last 13 years, Terri has laughed with us, cried with us, talked with us, and even tried to get out of her chair," said her parents in an Oct. 13 statement. "The accusations that Terri is in a coma or is a 'vegetable' are a lie."

Msgr. Thaddeus Malanowski, a retired priest of the Diocese of Norwich, Conn., is a Schindler family friend and frequent visitor to Terri Schiavo's bedside. Shortly after the feeding tube was removed, he gave her the anointing of the sick and touched a relic of Mother Teresa of Calcutta to Schiavo's forehead, cheek and throat.

The Florida Catholic bishops have urged that artificial nutrition and hydration be continued until "a more clear understanding of her actual physical condition" could be reached.

Poll: Believers say religion not to blame for violence around world

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Even though much of the world's violence is often linked to religious beliefs, a new survey of believers of the world's major faiths says religion is not to blame.

And a consensus among the more than 4,000 people worldwide who were polled for the survey released Oct. 16 by the polling firm Zogby International and University of Rochester's religion and classics department was that increased religious practices within their countries would only be a benefit.

The survey, conducted from January through March this year in seven countries, polled Russian Orthodox Christians, South Korean Christians and Buddhists, U.S. Catholics and Protestants, Indian Hindus and Muslims, Israeli Jews and Muslims, Saudi Arabian Muslims and Peruvian Catholics. Also included in the U.S. sample were those who identified themselves as born-again Christians.

John Zogby, founder and CEO of Zogby International, said the study, which is the first in a series on world religions, would be "mined" for years to come to more fully understand how people's religious beliefs shape their lives.

In India, a country torn by frequent violence, 65 percent of Muslims and 55 percent of Hindus said they disagreed that religion was the source of trouble and unrest. In Israel, 90 percent of Muslims and 44 percent of Jews also disagreed. Eighty-one percent of Peruvian Catholics and 63 percent of U.S. Catholics disagreed that religion antagonized violence within countries.

U.S. Catholics and mainline Protestants gave similar answers to many questions. For example, 15 percent of U.S. Catholics and 16 percent of U.S. mainline Protestants said they believed their religion offered the one true path to God.

Diocesan planner

ALBEMARLE VICARIATE

ALBEMARLE — The Forever Young Club of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church, 416 N. 2nd St., meets the first Wednesday of each month in the Family Life Center at 10 a.m. For details, call Gerald Maiden (704) 982-5261.

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

HENDERSONVILLE — The St. Francis of the Hills Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order meets the fourth Sunday of each month 3-5 p.m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. West. Visitors and inquirers are welcome. For more information, call Helen Gillogly, SFO, at (828) 883-9645.

ASHEVILLE — St. Joan of Arc Church, 919 Haywood Rd., will host a parish mission Nov. 2-4. The theme will be Forgiveness, a Bridge to New Life. The facilitators will be Deacon Eddie Ensley and Deacon Robert Hermann, contemplative brothers. Topics will include "How life's losses can become stepping stones to new beginnings," "How to forgive from the heart" and "Recognizing the sacred moments of our lives." Each session begins at 7 p.m. For details call the church office at (828) 252-3151.

BOONE VICARIATE

BOONE — St. Elizabeth of the Hill Country, 259 Pilgrims Way, will dedicate its new columbarium on All Souls' Day, Nov. 2, following the 11 a.m. Mass. For more information, e-mail Tom Bracken at redfishy@intergate.com or call (828) 264-1445. This event will take place weather and job schedules permitting.

SPRUCE PINE — St. Lucien Church, 695 Summit Ave., offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of each month following the 9 a.m. Mass with benediction at 4 p.m.

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Please call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — Catholic Social Services will host an informational meeting on their Adoption Programs in Russia & China Oct. 25 at 2 p.m. The meeting will be at the diocesan offices at 1123 South Church St.

CHARLOTTE — This fall's Theology on Tap concludes Mon. Oct. 27 at Fuel Pizza on the Green, 500 S. College St. Social hour begins at 6:30 p.m. and a featured speaker will begin at 7:30 p.m. For details e-mail Aschmidt@charlottediocese.org

CHARLOTTE — Father David Valtiera will provide methods of enrichment for all families in "Family Spirituality" Oct. 27 at 7 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Call Susan at (704) 362-5047, ext. 271 to register.

CHARLOTTE — Natural Family Planning classes will begin Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the Life Center, room 102, at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. For more information, call Judy Townsend at (704) 846-6983. Please reserve a space before Oct. 28.

MINT HILL — St. Luke Pax Christi will spon-

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

OCTOBER 24, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 5

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Vatican nuncio to U.N. urges Africans to guard 'authentic values'

UNITED NATIONS (CNS) — The Vatican nuncio to the United Nations warned Oct. 16 that Africans working for the development of their continent should resist individualism and maintain "the authentic values of Africa."

Archbishop Celestino Migliore emphasized "respect for the family" as the most significant of those values, and said the extended African family reflected a "sense of solidarity and community life."

"The Holy See is confident that Africa will always preserve this priceless cultural heritage and never succumb to the temptation to individualism, which is so foreign to its best traditions," he said.

Archbishop Migliore spoke at a session of the U.N. General Assembly devoted to the New Partnership for Africa's Development, a program adopted by the African Union and designed to express a commitment by African governments to take more responsibility for improving their own economies.

The program was endorsed by the General Assembly last year, and Secretary-General Kofi Annan is scheduled to set up a panel to advise him on what African countries are doing to carry out the new partnership and how the international community could help.

Archbishop Migliore said that, "in the face of the current marginalization of Africa" and the General Assembly's action, the international community had a duty to move forward with "a new pattern of solidarity and cooperation between the wealthier nations and the peoples of Africa."

Among steps he said the international community should take was solving the problem of Africa's foreign debt. But he said the program would "become fully African" only if it was manifested through African values, particularly respect for the family.

Vatican asks English-speaking officials to air translation concerns

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Continuing concerns over English-language liturgical translations will be aired at a Vatican meeting.

Nigerian Cardinal Francis Arinze, prefect of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Sacraments, has invited the presidents of English-speaking bishops' conferences to the Oct. 23 meeting that will focus on improving understanding and cooperation between bishops' conferences, which approve liturgical texts, and the congregation, which must authorize their use.

The liturgical texts used in most English-speaking countries are developed by the International Commission on English in the Liturgy, formed in 1963 by 11 bishops' conferences.

In 1999, Cardinal Jorge Medina Esteves, the congregation's previous prefect, ordered the revision of ICEL's statutes, including a provision that the Vatican approve the people employed to develop the translations.

The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops approved the revised statutes in June. Other conferences have yet to vote on them or, as in the case of New Zealand, have made it clear they are opposed to doing so.

In addition, the congregation's 2001 document, "Liturgiam Authenticam" ("The Authentic Liturgy"), set out new rules for such international commissions and required that the commissions have their statutes approved by the Holy See.

Some conferences have objected that the document, in effect, established new laws, which overrode the Code of Canon Law's precise indication that bishops' conferences are responsible for liturgical translations.

In addition to an explanation of the role of "Vol Clara," a committee of English-speaking bishops who help evaluate the English texts that bishops' conferences submit for approval, one of the most practical concerns facing Cardinal Arinze and the English-speaking bishops is the preparation of a new Missal containing the prayers for Mass.

Currently English-speaking Catholics use a 1973 translation of the first Latin Missal issued after the Second Vatican Council; the proposed English translation of the second Latin edition was never approved by the congregation, and a translation of the third Latin edition promulgated by Pope John Paul II in 2002 is under way.

sor a potluck supper and educational seminar on the death penalty in North Carolina and the Catholic Church's teaching on the issue. Presenters include James Cooney, Esq. and Fr. James Hawker. Cooney, an attorney in Charlotte, is active at the Center for Death Penalty Litigation. Fr. Hawker is the pastor of St. Luke Church. The event will take place Nov. 8 at 6:30 pm in the St. Luke Family Life Center, 13700 Lawyers Rd. For details, call Laura Laney (704) 764-8169.

CHARLOTTE — A Women's Talk will be held Oct. 29 at 7 p.m. at St. Vincent Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. The speaker will be Father Bittner. For more information, please call Peggy at (704) 588-7311.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

BELMONT — The Gaston Coalition for a Moratorium Now (GCMN) will host a candlelight vigil Nov. 6 in prayerful witness to the scheduled Nov. 7 execution of Timmy Keel. The vigil will be held on the front lawn of Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St. The purpose is to honor the humanity of the murdered victim and family as well as Keel and his family. Following the ceremony, a GCMN spokesperson will present an update on the progress of the proposed state resolution for a two-year moratorium on executions in North Carolina. For more information, call George Burazer, (704) 822-6350.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — The annual World Community Day ecumenical worship service will be held at St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St., Nov. 7 at 7 p.m. This year's theme is "Circles of Love." Come and join us in extending our own circle outward in peace for sake of justice. For details, call Carole Marmorato at (828) 256-8956.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — A support group for parents who have lost a child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

MOORESVILLE — The adult enrichment program of St. Therese Church will present "And you shall call him" Oct. 26 at 10:15 a.m. and Oct. 29 at 4:30 p.m. This class will examine the many names of Jesus and their origins. See how the name of one man and elicit joy and tranquility in some people while bringing out anger in others. For more information, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

WAYNESVILLE — For seniors who have difficulty attending Mass, there will be a Mass and Anointing of the Sick by Rev. Dennis McGowan 11 a.m.-1 p.m. Nov. 6 at St. John the Evangelist Church, 234 Church St. (wheelchair accessible). RSVP to Dot Luce at (828) 648-7369 or Beverly Vignochi at (828) 452-4249. Local transportation will be provided and lunch will follow. This event is sponsored by the Senior Ministry.

WAYNESVILLE— St. John the Evangelist Church offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Friday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 4:15 p.m. For information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707 or Christine Ryan at (828) 926-1331.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offer Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

LEXINGTON — Our Lady of the Rosary Church, 619 South Main St., is sponsoring a Parish Mission Oct. 26-29, hosted by Franciscan Father Thomas Vigliotta. For details, please call (336) 248-2463.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Reliving history

PHOTOS BY JOSEPH PURELLO

Native American topics discussed at conference

As members of the Qualla Boundary — Eastern Band of the Cherokee, John Toineeta (above left) performs a Native American hoop dance and Freeman Owle (above right) shares history of the Cherokee people at the Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia at Lake Junaluska Oct. 10-12. The conference, attended by 119 people from 12 states, explored socio-economic concerns and church-funded and sponsored programs addressing those concerns. The framework of the conference consisted of plenary addresses on two pastoral letters by the U.S. bishops of Appalachia, "This Land is Home to Me" and "At Home in the Web of Life," workshops and cultural enrichment activities.

In this issue on page 14, Joe Purello writes about "The Trail of Tears," one of the topics raised at the conference. Future issues will explore other topics raised at the Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia.

DID YOU KNOW?

NO MASS ON ALL SAINTS DAY

This year, because All Saints Day, Nov. 1, falls on Saturday, the usual obligation of U.S. Latin-rite Catholics to attend Mass that day is abrogated, said a July newsletter of the bishops' Committee on Liturgy. However, the Mass obligation remains for the feast of the Immaculate Conception, Dec. 8, even though that is a Monday.

MINISTERING THROUGH MUSIC

St. John Neumann music director wins national recognition

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — R. Lance Burnette, director of music for St. John Neumann Church, has been awarded the 2003 National Minister of Music Award. Ten such awards are given out annually by the National Religious Music Week Alliance, selected from thousands of nominees from across the United States.

Burnette was nominated by the choir at St. John Neumann for his outstanding contributions to the parish's music ministry.

"It was a complete shock to find out that I had won," Burnette said. "It's an incredible feeling to know that people care so much about this ministry."

"I am very proud of what Lance has brought to our parish and how it has enhanced the quality of worship at St. John Neumann Church," said Father Thomas Meehan, pastor.

"He is a terrific individual and uses his many gifts to make us into worship leaders and enhancers," said Suzie Nichols, a member of the choir. "Our choir is very proud of his accomplishments and how much he has built our skills and enriched our church's level of worship."

Burnette is currently in his fourth year at St. John Neumann Church. He serves as director of music for a folk choir, traditional four-part harmony main choir, as well as the youth and children's choirs.

Having a pastor who is willing to support the music ministry is critical, Burnette said. When he was hired, the church did not have even a piano or organ. With Father Meehan's support, the church now has both.

"Not only is Lance a pleasure to listen to, but he also makes the choir a rewarding way to give back to God and our congregation," said Nichols. "He constantly reminds us that we are singing to enrich and lead the worship service — not singing to give a grand performance, emphasizing that we are to impress the Lord, not just his people."

The church had struggled for many years with maintaining a choir. With Burnette's leadership, many parishioners were motivated to join the choir.

The choir has grown from one member to 18. Nichols said Burnette has a charismatic gift that lends itself to every balancing act he must endure.

"Lance spends countless hours planning, organizing and practicing," Nichols said. "He strives to be the best as well as make us our best — all for the glory of God."

Burnette said he hopes the music ministry will continue to grow as it has the past three years. For Advent, he is planning a festival of lessons and carols, a large undertaking for a young music program.

"Lance is a gifted musician and leader who uses his gift for praising God and enriching church worship," Nichols said. "He has truly changed the quality and quantity of music at our church, even the sound coming from the congregation — no small task for Catholics."

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

COURTESY PHOTO

Augustinian Father Thomas Meehan, pastor of St. John Neumann Church, presents to R. Lance Burnette, director of music, the 2003 National Minister of Music Award.

Song and dance at OLC

PHOTOS BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Liturgical dancers accompanied the Our Lady of Consolation Gospel Choir in a formal concert at the church in Charlotte Oct 12.

SUPPLEMENTAL HEALTH CARE
STAFFING SPECIALISTS

is proud to announce the opening of a new allied health division in North Carolina!

PTs and OTs up to $36/hr
PTAs and COTAs up to $30/hr
Speech Therapists up to $40/hr

Per diem and contracts available

Contact me today to find out what Supplemental Health Care has to offer you!

Deena Taylor
Toll free (877) 781-9565
Fax (919) 781-9564
Dtaylor@supplementalhealth.com

Visit our website: www.ncalliedstaffing.com

Spreading the love of Jesus

Women's Guild distributes funds to many

HENDERSONVILLE — The Women's Guild of Immaculate Conception Church held its second Presentation Luncheon Oct. 16, to distribute funds raised through a rummage sale and fashion show held last spring.

Beneficiaries of the fashion show included the Meals on Wheels program of the Council on Aging of Hendersonville, Immaculata School and Immaculate Conception Church. The three-day rummage sale, held annually for more than 20 years to benefit the church and charities, raised approximately $7,500.

Dr. Dorice Narins, president of the Women's Guild, presented checks to representatives of several organizations, including Bill Meehan, principal of Immaculata School, which received funds for scholarships. Meehan expressed his thanks for the many years of support provided by the Women's Guild.

Immaculate Conception Church also received a check, plus a contribution for the Good Samaritan Ministry, which helps the needy of the parish and the community.

The Women's Guild made a donation to the diocesan seminarian fund and to a Franciscan brother now studying for the priesthood. In addition to the financial support, Women's Guild members regularly remember religious in their prayers.

Representatives of Mainstay, Healing Place, Storehouse, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, Operation L.A.M.B. of the Knights of Columbus and Catholic Charities were also present to receive checks.

For the second year, the Women's Guild sponsored a grandmother in Bogotá, Colombia through the Christian Foundation for Children and Aging. Support by the guild enables the foundation to give the woman clothing and food, and opportunities to join social activities. Guild members regularly send her short letters, group pictures and small gifts. She responds to the letters and prays for the members of the guild, as they continue to pray for her.

Also for the second year, the Women's Guild made a donation to Alaska Radio, an award-winning station that transmits religious programs and general programs to the widely scattered people living in northern Alaska.

Through the Maryknoll sisters, the Women's Guild donated funds to help a village rebuild houses destroyed by Hurricane Mitch in 1998. This year, on the recommendation of Sister Theresa Mangieri, the funds will help sisters in Zimbabwe build a school for AIDS orphans.

Donations were also made to Food for the Poor and the Walk for Hunger.

The annual luncheon is not the only time the Guild donates money to charitable organizations. Throughout the year, the women collect toiletries for Mainstay, a shelter for battered women.

At a September meeting, pet food was collected in honor of St. Francis of Assisi for needy people with pets. At a Christmas luncheon, baby clothes and diapers were given to the local health department. For the first time this year, the Women's Guild donated books to the Boys and Girls Club summer reading program, which is run by a local bookstore.

At the October luncheon, the Women's Guild also recognized two of its own as Woman of the Year. Usually one woman is recognized for her contributions to the guild and the church; however, two women — both past presidents — were recognized this year due to their unique efforts: Evelyn Bree, for her many contributions over the years; and Kit Daly, for her overall contribution to the guild and her outstanding work on the pictorial directory of the parish.

COURTESY PHOTO

The Women's Guild of Immaculate Conception Church presented checks to representatives of various organizations during the presentation luncheon Oct. 16.

For the children

COURTESY PHOTO

Father Eric Kowalski, administrator of Holy Angels Church in Mount Airy, stands with Knights of Columbus during the blessing of the new parish memorial to unborn children Sept. 14.

OPERATION CHRISTMAS CHILD
A PROJECT of SAMARITAN'S PURSE

You can reach needy children worldwide with the wonder of Christmas by filling a simple shoe box with small gifts and toys. Since 1993 Operation Christmas Child has brought Christmas joy and the Gospel message to millions of boys and girls in over 110 countries. Call (704) 583-1463 or e-mail occcarolinas@samaritan.org today to get involved.

FRANKLIN GRAHAM
President, Samaritan's Purse

(800) 353-5949
www.samaritanspurse.org

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

AGING WITH GRACE

Upcoming conference to feature 'Nun Study' results

HENDERSONVILLE — Strategies for reducing age-related illness and helping seniors to remain independent for a longer time will be offered to the region's aging population and those who serve them at the "Aging with Grace: New Frontiers — Research to Practice" conference in Hendersonville Nov. 3-5.

Keynote speaker will be David Snowdon, author of "Aging with Grace: What the Nun Study Teaches Us About Leading Longer, Healthier and More Meaningful Lives."

Snowdon, a professor in the neurology department at the University of Kentucky, will share his experience as director of the nationally known School Sisters of Notre Dame Health and Aging Study — and unofficially known as the Nun Study — a longitudinal study of health and aging that focused on 678 members of the School Sisters of Notre Dame.

Findings of the nun study have been featured on CNN, NBC's "Today Show" and ABC's "Nightline," among other television programs. Stories on the study have also appeared in the New York Times, Chicago Tribune, Washington Post and Wall Street Journal newspapers, and Time, Newsweek and National Geographic magazines.

CNS PHOTO BY MARTIN LUEDERS

Sister Mary Virgina Geiger of Baltimore, an 11-year member of the Nun Study, combats the old-age stereotype today by maintaining an active writing schedule. Findings of the study include the observable benefits of early education and living in community, as evidenced in the lifestyles of the School Sisters of Notre Dame.

Ideal subjects

A shared lifestyle and careful record keeping through the years made the group of elderly nuns ideal subjects for a major research project on Alzheimer's disease. The program involved almost 700 volunteers from the order's seven U.S. provinces. All were 77 or older.

Participants were being assessed annually on their mobility and memory. In addition, they agreed to donate brain tissue to be examined after their death.

Getting volunteers for the project was easy, provincial councilor Sister Carol Ann Collins told the St. Louis Review, archdiocesan newspaper. Many sisters, long accustomed to serving others, welcome a chance to help toward an understanding of what happens to the Alzheimer's patient and how to prevent the disease.

"They want to continue to teach people during the latter part of their life when they may not be able to speak or be totally disabled and after their death they continue to want to be of service," said Snowdon. "They just won't quit."

The study's primary focus was on Alzheimer's, but the underlying theme was an examination of factors connected with aging, "accelerated aging as well as successful aging," said Snowdon.

The project was "like an 80-year-long study following a group of 20-year-old women throughout their adult life and particularly concentrating on what happens to the survivors in old age."

He said information available in the community's archives helped in an investigation of what factors determine which of the women entering at age 20, died 10, 20 or 30 years later and which of them have maintained their mental and physical function to age 90 or older.

"We're not just looking at function in old people. Aging is something that occurs across the whole adult life span," said Snowdon.

He began pilot studies for the project in the late 1980s as an epidemiologist at the University of Minnesota, working with nuns in Mankato. He recognized they were a unique population for research because the nuns had lived in community most of their lives, ate the same meals, had equal access to education and health care and, for the most part, were engaged in the same occupation of teaching.

In 1992, Snowdon and a team of scientists organized the nun study project at the University of Kentucky's Sanders-Brown Center on Aging. He received more than $1 million from the National Institute on Aging and expects the study to be funded by several more millions of dollars.

Alzheimer's is a progressive, age-related incurable illness involving memory disorder. In the mid-1990s, more than 4 million Americans were said to be afflicted, including more than 11 percent of those over age 65. That jumped to 25 or more percent of those over 85.

Sisters appear to be "an exceptionally long-lived population," said Snowdon. "Their increases in life expectancy throughout the century have increased at dramatic rates," more so than the general population of women.

In his earlier studies, Snowdon compared sisters of similar age and a wide range of function — from those who were bedridden and confused to those still working full time. He found that those with a higher degree of education lived approximately four years longer with better mental and physical functioning than those who did not.

"We can see that this difference in health between the high and low (education level) started when they were in their 20s and it's there in their 30s," he said. "There are differences in their mortality and it goes on throughout their whole adult life."

At every age between 20 and 95, he reported that the less-educated sisters had twice the mortality rates of the more educated.

"Education in general is a very, very crude marker of many things, including intelligence and early-life socioeconomic status," said Snowdon. In the general population, lower education may be associated with various factors, such as poor diet, higher levels of stress and underemployment, and lack of health care, but with the nuns those factors are not an issue.

Ongoing benefits

Organizers say the "Aging With Grace" conference is an effort to ensure the region's aging population will experience a high quality of life with increased independence and extended longevity. The conference will provide multiple opportunities for professionals and adults of all ages to explore effective strategies for postponing age-related disabilities through lifestyle and public policy.

"There is no doubt that our population is aging, and the trend is especially evident in the Southeast," said John Bardo, chancellor of Western Carolina University, which is presenting the conference. "How we manage the aging trend will make an enormous difference to our region."

The conference is designed to be of interest to professionals who work with the elderly, adult children of aging parents and everyone interested in living a longer, healthier life.

"If we can keep seniors healthy and active longer, community life and our economy will be the richer for it," said Bardo. "Failing to do so will have enormous social and economic consequences."

Catholic News service contributed to this story

WANT TO GO?

The "Aging With Grace" conference will take place at the Kanuga Conference Center in Hendersonville Nov. 3-5. Snowdon's presentation begins the conference at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 3 (after a 5:30 p.m. social and 6:15 p.m. dinner). For more information, call (828) 694-1829 or visit http://cess.wcu.edu/aging.

"The mountains shall yield peace for the people." Psalm 72:3

JESUIT HOUSE OF PRAYER
HOT SPRINGS, NC
Welcoming all Christians seeking prayer and quiet in a busy life
Situated in the heart of Pisgah National Forest, the area's peace and beauty offer the perfect haven for quiet prayer and reflection.
Ignatian directed retreats
Private retreats
Group retreats
Call: 828-622-7366
e-mail: vpaul@madison.main.nc.us

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926
McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.
Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Benedictine Father Kieran Neilson distributes communion during Mass at the Senior Fall Day of Reflection at St. Mark Church Oct. 9. The event gave seniors the opportunity to focus on their Catholic faith and commune with other seniors.

Reflections on faith

SENIORS, from page 1

Recent studies have shown that faith, love and laughter are important factors in living a longer, more fulfilling life. According to the Web site Senior World Online, University of California-Berkeley scientists studied 8,000 men and women and found death rates were two to three times lower for those who had social ties, such as healthy relationships and deep religious beliefs.

Father Neilson stressed all of these aspects during the Day of Reflection.

"I've always had a love for the elderly and the young," said Father Neilson, who serves as chaplain to the students of Belmont Abbey College. "Sometimes we forget about the elderly."

Punctuating his address with frequent jokes, Father Neilson said laughter is great therapy. However, he first and foremost urged the seniors to pray every day.

"We can't pray just when we feel like it; we have to pray every day," he said.

Urging special attention to the rosary, Father Neilson noted the rosary is a prayer for all seasons. "It is never out of date and is always appropriate because it is a meditation on Christ."

You don't have to pray the rosary perfectly, or read Scripture with complete concentration, Father Neilson explained. However, it is important to take the time and effort to pray, and to "get back on track" when you get distracted from your prayers.

"We fail, we make mistakes," he said. "God knows how many mistakes we make." As it is written in the Our Father, we are forgiven by God to the extent that we forgive others, Father Neilson said.

"God is perfection; there is no hate in God," he continued. "Hate is in man. Jesus can change us, if we want to be changed."

Father Neilson congratulated the audience for their long-lasting marriages. "The bonds of marriage are a good investment only when the interest is kept up," he said.

According to Father Neilson, selfishness is one of the greatest problems in today's society, leading to the breakdown of marriage and other problems. "Two selfish people can't make the sacrifices necessary for the vocation of marriage," he said.

In his homily, Father Neilson encouraged the congregation to pray for an increase in faith. "God will bless us in his terms," he said. "God will never be outdone in his generosity."

"Seniors are the backbone of our ministry," said Breakfield. "This growing population is full of individuals that we look to for insight and wisdom."

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

Sister of Mercy professes perpetual vows

BELMONT — Joann Margaret Ury professed her perpetual vows in the Institute of the Sisters of Mercy of the Americas, Regional Community of North Carolina Oct. 18.

Mercy Sister Joann, originally from Ottawa, Ohio, moved to Charlotte in January 1977 with her husband, John, a radio newscaster. When her husband died unexpectedly a year later, Joann remained in Charlotte and eventually founded her own company, Joann Accounting and Bookkeeping Services.

Always an active member of St. John Neumann Church in Charlotte, Joann began working with Laotian and Vietnamese refugees, taking care of the church books and visiting shut-ins. During her volunteer work, Joann came in contact with several Sisters of Mercy who worked in the adult education program at the church — Mercy Sister Donna Marie Vaillancourt, Mercy Sister Brigid McCarthy and Mercy Sister Carolyn Mary Coll.

"They always seemed joyful in everything they did," said Sister Joann. "They were out there among the people."

Several years later, the thought of becoming a women religious began to appeal to Joann. However, she didn't act upon the calling until 1996, when she entered as a candidate. For two years, she lived in the community while continuing to run her business. In 1998, she moved on to the novitiate level, spending a year exploring a wide variety of ministries. A second year of study was spent at the Collaborative Novitiate in St. Louis, Mo., where she spent time exploring the deep and committed involvement necessary to be a Sister of Mercy.

On Oct. 7, 2000, she publicly professed her first vows. From that time on, she has done double duty, serving in pastoral care by working with the senior sisters at Marian Center in Belmont and visiting shut-ins from St. Michael Church in Gastonia.

"The profession of vows by an individual sister is a celebration of the whole religious community, in which we gather to praise God who loves us, and by this profession, witness to God's presence in all creation, particularly in the church," said Mercy Sister Rosalind Picot, president of the Sisters of Mercy Regional Community of North Carolina.

During several years of Sister Joann's formation, Mercy Sister Pauline Clifford served as her spiritual director and mentor.

"It was my privilege to mentor Joann, beginning with her entrance into the Sisters of Mercy and to help her learn about religious life and the Sisters of Mercy," said Sister Pauline.

"Joann brings to our community a great compassion and love of people, which is rooted in her deep love of God," she said. "She has an innate respect for the dignity of each person. We, the Sisters of Mercy, and the church are blessed to have Joann as a vowed member willing to give her life to God and to God's people."

COURTESY PHOTO

Mercy Sister Joann Ury receives a solemn blessing from Mercy Sister M. Rosalind Picôt, president of the Regional Community of N.C., and from Mercy Institute Leadership Team member, Mercy Sister Patricia McDermott.

JOHN T. WEISENBERGER

EXECUTIVE CLUB Hendrick AUTOMOTIVE GROUP 2001

Hendrick Acura
6824 E. Independence Blvd.
Charlotte, NC 28227

704-566-2317
704-566-2320 Fax
800-763-7811 Toll Free
www.hendrickacura.com

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Two tough questions on Christianity

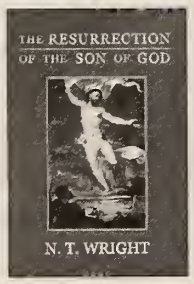
REVIEWED BY PATRICK J. HAYES
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

It is sometimes said that we know more about Jesus than his contemporaries ever could. These two books cut through the accretions of centuries of commentary to an understanding of Jesus in his own milieu and in ours.

Bishop N.T. Wright, the great British New Testament scholar and newly appointed Anglican bishop of Durham, England, and Father Jacques Dupuis, a French Jesuit who taught theology in India and later at the Gregorian University in Rome, tackle two of the most vexing problems in Christology: How can we understand the Resurrection? And, how can Christianity dialogue with other religious traditions and also say that Jesus is the way of salvation?



"The Resurrection of the Son of God," by Bishop N.T. Wright. Vol. 3 of "Christian Origins and the Question of God." Augsburg Fortress Press (Minneapolis, 2003). 817 pp., $49.00.

"Christianity and the Religions: From Confrontation to Dialogue," by Jesuit Father Jacques Dupuis. Orbis Books (Maryknoll, N.Y., 2002). 276 pp., $30.00.

In "The Resurrection of the Son of God," the third pillar in a series of equally lengthy volumes on Christian origins, Bishop Wright shows that there is a compelling case for the Resurrection.

His scholarship — unmatched by most New Testament scholars today — explains the happenings on Easter morning through a close inspection of the ideas of life after death and "appearances" in the Hellenistic world of first-century Palestine. He then moves through the scriptural evidence to decipher how early Christians could hold out "hope beyond death." Finally, he looks at the noncanonical literature of the apostolic fathers and others.

All of this is preliminary grounding before entering into the Easter narratives themselves, which comes in part four (at page 587!). After supplying a tentative summary, he poses a crucial question: "Where did Resurrection show up in what the early Christians habitually did? Briefly and broadly, they behaved as if they were in some important senses already living in God's new creation."

His masterful concluding chapter on how early Christians could call the resurrected Jesus "Son of God" sets up a future volume. The scholarship is extremely sophisticated — bibliography and indexes swell to 80 pages of small type — but this book is accessible to the layperson.

Bishop Wright's question leads to those of Father Dupuis. Does the compelling case for the Resurrection lead the believer to hold a "Christocentric" or "ecclesiocentric" view of salvation, where Christ and his church are the exclusive mediators for eternal life? Father Dupuis — and the Second Vatican Council — say no. Indeed, while Jesus makes the divine-human link more intimate, other religions have their own role to play in the economy of salvation.

In his book, "Christianity and the Religions: From Confrontation to Dialogue," Father Dupuis says a theology of religions based on dialogue is needed. This is not always easy, even when the parties observe conventions of respect.

For starters, Father Dupuis argues that there is no substitute for a proper understanding of one's own faith tradition. For many, this will demand a shift in perspective when reading the Scriptures or a new assessment and application of the magisterial teaching on other religions. It might also mean pushing the "pause" button on zeal in defending the faith.

In 1998 the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith asked Father Dupuis to clarify his position on this point. The congregation, as a guardian of faith and a promoter of the Gospel, has questions when prominent theologians seem to question the Lord's mandate to "go and teach all nations." In a postscript to this book Father Dupuis explains that the examination by the congregation reached a happy conclusion.

I found this to be one of the best treatments of religious pluralism currently available.

Holiday Celebrations
—with—
The Pampered Chef®
The Kitchen Store That Comes To Your Door®
Kitchen/Catalog Shows
Fund-raisers
Individual Orders
Book a holiday show or place an order before Dec. 10 and receive a free gift.
Teresa R. Scott
Independent Kitchen Consultant
704-814-9101

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: OCT. 26, 2003

Oct. 26, Thirtieth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle B Readings:

1) Jeremiah 31:7-9
Psalm 126: 1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 6
2) Hebrews 5:1-6
3) Gospel: Mark 10:46-52

BY DAN LUBY
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

It is almost cinematic, this scene Mark paints for us in Sunday's Gospel. Bartimaeus, the blind beggar, sits outside the city gates, wrapped in a cloak to ward off the dust of the road. His ears catch the tumult of the crowd following Jesus. He turns his sightless eyes toward the noise, expectantly.

Perhaps he hears the name of Jesus shouted out by the enthusiastic swarm of onlookers; perhaps a friend whispers it to him over the noise. His desperation to see and his hope in Jesus' power embolden him to shout out his affliction and his need. The anguished longing of his cries pierces the excited conversation surrounding Jesus.

For a moment, silence falls. Then angry voices all shout at once, trying to drown him out.

Were they just killjoys, these self-appointed protectors of Jesus who hoped to silence Bartimaeus' cries? Were they civic boosters, embarrassed that a beggar was accosting the famous visitor to their city? Did they fear that their moment in the limelight with Jesus would be eclipsed by this dramatic plea?

Whatever their motives, the ploy backfires, as Bartimaeus calls out all the more forcefully. In the end, the goodness and mercy of Jesus overcome the meanness and self-interest of the naysayers. In spite of themselves, they convey his message to the beggar and bring him to Jesus. With a word, the blind man's longing is fulfilled, he receives his sight and the freedom that goes with it.

Immediately, Mark tells us, he followed him on the way.

May God make of us who are his disciples willing partners in Christ's ministry of healing, bringing to him all those in need. May he give us the grace to be as bold as Bartimaeus in facing our infirmities and voicing our need. May he move us, when we receive his many blessings, to follow him more faithfully.

Questions:

Who do I know that might need my help in coming to church or to other places of healing? What is one infirmity for which I need help in seeking healing?

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 26 - NOVEMBER 1

Sunday (Thirtieth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Jeremiah 31:7-9, Hebrews 5:1-6, Mark 10:46-52; Monday, Romans 8:12-17, Luke 13:10-17; Tuesday (Sts. Simon and Jude), Ephesians 2:19-22, Luke 6:12-19; Wednesday, Romans 8:26-30, Luke 13:22-30; Thursday, Romans 8:31-39, Luke 13:31-35; Friday, Romans 9:1-5, Luke 14:1-6; Saturday (All Saints Day), Revelation 7:2-4, 9-14, 1 John 3:1-3, Matthew 5:1-12

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 2 - NOVEMBER 8

Sunday (All Souls Day), Isaiah 25:6-9, Romans 6:3-9, John 6:37-40; Monday (St. Martin de Porres), Romans 11:29-36, Luke 14:12-14; Tuesday (St. Charles Borromeo), Romans 12:5-16, Luke 14:15-24; Wednesday, Romans 13:8-10. Luke 14:25-33; Thursday, Romans 14:7-12, Luke 15:1-10; Friday, Romans 15:14-21, Luke 16:1-8; Saturday, Romans 16:3-9, 16, 22-27, Luke 16:9-15

Aging with GRACE
Featured Guest
David Snowdon, author of Aging with Grace: What the Nun Study Teaches Us About Leading Longer, Healthier and More Meaningful Lives
November 3-5, 2003
Kanuga Conference Center
Hendersonville, North Carolina
Sponsored by Western Carolina University, Kanuga Conferences, Inc., Pardee Hospital, MAHEC, the Community Foundation of Henderson County, the Henderson County Office of Smith Barney, AARP-North Carolina, WHKP Radio, Strauss and Associates, P.A., Procter & Gamble Pharmaceuticals & The Alliance for Better Bone Health, Whitley Home Medical Equipment, Immaculate Conception Catholic Church of Hendersonville, the Hendersonville Times-News, Lilly Pharmaceuticals, the Land of Sky Regional Council, and Janssen Pharmaceutica.
For more information call 828-694-1829 or visit
http://cess.wcu.edu/aging

GOOD GOD

ACROSS
1 Exec's palm pilot entry
5 Pagoda
7 Money machine
10 Spanish painter
11 Russian ruler
13 Cereal
14 All-powerful
17 Actor Michael ___
18 _ fixe
19 Omniscient
22 Mauna ___
23 To be Latin
24 Chips ___
28 Proper partner
30 Nile River island
31 Greek body
32 Pain
36 Chinese unicorn
37 Immutable
40 NOAA picture
42 American poet
43 Oil
46 School organization
47 Penny
48 Egyptian goddess
50 Dad's partner
51 Oz character
52 Jacob's twin

DOWN
1 Unit of electricity
2 3.14...
3 "I will ___ you Lord among the nations" (psalm 18)
4 Japanese Playstation 2 game
5 "The ___ of Pooh"
6 "____ Me" (Jars of Clay)
7 Tops
8 Bewitched boss
9 ___ Everest
11 Greek island
12 Erupts
15 Broadway musical number
16 First name in American writers
19 Swiss mountains
20 Spanish parrot
21 That is
25 "Bow down to the Lord, splendid in ___" (psalm 96)
26 Norse god
27 Yin opposite
29 Polish Lake
32 Electric current
33 "___ of Fools"
34 Ghost role
35 -thermic
38 Dorothy to 51 Across
39 Lamp dweller
40 Holy Roman Emperor
41 Travesty
44 Est ending
45 Chung Chi ___ (Chinese mathematician)
46 Second part of day
49 US state (abbr)

MOVING?

Take us with you!

Please help us reduce postal fees and give us your NEW address (or cancellation notice) BEFORE you move.

If you have your address label, include that, too.

Name

Old address

Old city zip

NEW address

NEW city/state zip

Date of move/cancellation:

Mail changes to:
The Catholic News & Herald
Address Changes
1123 S. Church Street
Charlotte, NC 28203

Or e-mail this info to:
catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

Thank you.

SONG OF SONGS

ROCKING AND RELIGIOUS

CNS PHOTO BY MICHELLE ZOTTER, MICHIGAN CATHOLIC

Joey Gaydos Jr. poses for a photo with Felician Sister Virginia Gola, principal at St. Stephen Elementary School in New Boston, Mich. The seventh-grade guitar player stars as Zack in the current movie, "School of Rock."

Catholic seventh-grader hits high note in 'School of Rock'

BY MICHELLE ZOTTER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW BOSTON, Mich. — Playing the guitar is also the means he uses to pray, said 12-year-old Joey Gaydos Jr., who recently encountered fame through his role as Zack in the current hit movie "School of Rock."

Joey, a seventh-grader at St. Stephen Elementary School in New Boston, southwest of Detroit, says he feels the most spiritual when his fingers move across the strings of a guitar. "Jimi Hendrix, (Led) Zeppelin and Ozzy (Osbourne) are my (musical) role models," he told The Michigan Catholic, newspaper of the Detroit Archdiocese.

As a result of his 2002 guitar performance at Dayjams, a music camp in Ann Arbor, he won the role of Zack, the lead guitar player in "School of Rock," starring Jack Black. The film was the top ticket at the box office in its first weekend of release.

"He's so talented," said his mother, Margie, a parishioner at St. Stephen. "It's funny now to look back. ... Even at age 2 and 3, we have Joey on tape walking around with a toy guitar making up songs, singing 'Hey baby!'"

She was on her way home from a hair salon last year when she received the call that her son got the part.

"I cried instantly," she recalled. "Joey was so excited. To have other people recognize him in a wider realm is really satisfying."

Although Joey was gone from school while filming from September to December last year, his teachers at St. Stephen worked with tutors on the set who helped Joey keep up with his homework.

"We would Fed Ex his homework," said Kathy Krajewski, who teaches language arts. "We'd check it and send it back. He was really great with his homework."

Felician Sister Virginia Gola, the principal, stresses the importance of fine arts in any educational setting, and Joey is a prime example. "We encourage children to develop their talents and to bring them out more," she said. Besides musical talent, she said, she definitely sees acting talent in Joey.

Sister Gola, who saw "School of Rock" in its first week out, said she "really enjoyed it ... well, except for a few inappropriate words."

The U.S. bishops' Office for Film & Broadcasting classified the movie A-III — adults, for "some crude humor and language, as well as several drug references." The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

Not being in a classroom setting was something Joey missed, but Krajewski said the boy still learned a lot because "he really had to juggle his time. He's really self-motivated."

She added that his fellow classmates treat him like everybody else: "He doesn't have a big head," she said.

Despite his newfound fame, there are still the everyday activities he is obligated to do, Joey said. "I still live in the same house, I still do the same everything," he explained. This includes taking out the trash and washing dishes, something his mom says he could still improve on.

As far back as he can remember in his 12 years, his passion has always been music. Where his future is concerned, he said, "There's not even a doubt — it will always be with music."

"If I never do any more acting again, I'm glad I had the experience," added Joey, who said he tries to play the guitar for at least two hours every day. "That's just what I do."

To promote the movie, Joey has already appeared on "The View," "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno," and "Regis and Kelly." He's scheduled to go to the United Kingdom for more "School of Rock" promotions when the film opens there.

COURTESY PHOTO

Dancers from Rince Na h' Eireann School of Traditional Irish Dance are among the dancers that will participate in the 4th Annual Feis (Irish Dance Competition) at the Charlotte University Hilton Oct. 24-25. More than 700 students have registered to compete and more than 1300 spectators are expected to be in attendance.

Toe-tapping fun

Charlotte to host annual Irish dance

CHARLOTTE — Rince Na h' Eireann School of Traditional Irish Dance will host its 4th Annual Feis (Irish dance competition) Oct. 24-25. More than 700 students have registered to compete and more than 1,300 spectators are expected to be in attendance.

"We are very excited about hosting our 4th annual competition," said Sandra Connick, school founder. "Over the past few years, attendance has more than doubled and Charlotte has provided an enthusiastic and welcoming community for this growing cultural event."

Rince Na h' Eireann school has over 300 students from five studios located throughout the Carolinas. The schools' talented dancers include the current Boys Southern Regional Champion as well as many other dedicated and equally as gifted solo and team dancers. Many of these students traveled to Ireland for the Annual Irish Dance World Championships held in April.

The annual feis will feature more than just dancing — this year, two musical competitions featuring amateurs and professionals from across the southeast region will be held. Competitions include traditional Irish instrumentals, singing and speaking. New this year for accomplished musicians and vocalists is the Carolinas championship for the Irish fiddle, flute, whistle and song.

WANT TO GO?

The feis will be held at the Charlotte University Hilton at 7 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 24 and at 8 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 25. The music competitions are free on Friday, and admission is $8 on Saturday, free to children under 18. For more information, contact Casey Corser at (704) 752-1147 or visit www.rincenaheireann.com.

'Building the Kingdom' at Our Lady of the Annunciation

ALBERMARLE — A new series of suggestions for Christians in a changing world is coming to Albemarle.

"A unique and dynamic opportunity for personal growth and spiritual renewal is being offered to all members of the community," said Father Lawrence Heiney, pastor of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church.

"Building the Kingdom in a Changing World" is the newest in a series of Isaiah Parish Missions presented nationally and presented by Father Peter Jaramillo from Kansas City at the church in November.

A professional Catholic evangelist, Father Jaramillo will offer down-to-earth, practical suggestions for believers to cope in the midst of a radically and rapidly changing world.

"The emphasis of the mission at Our Lady of the Annunciation is not to offer solutions, or to 'fix' anything, or to place blame anywhere for the wide range of crises that have assaulted us since Sept. 11, 2003, but to enable Christians to identify, name and deal with their feelings," said Ann Rowe, parish mission coordinator.

Isaiah Parish Missions, part of Isaiah Ministries, Inc., are designed to continue after the four mission days, according to information provided by Father Heiney. A six-week follow-up seminar, "Christ the Cornerstone: Christians Coping in a World of Chaos and Confusion," will begin the week following the mission with parishioners as facilitators.

The Isaiah Parish Mission was first offered at St. Ann Church in Hempstead, N.H., in 1984. To date, Isaiah Parish Ministries has presented nearly 1,100 missions in 142 dioceses in 49 states and several provinces in Canada. Sequels to the mission were necessitated when parishes began to invite back facilitators for additional series.

The content and ritual of the missions are based on Scripture, Vatican II theology, various papal and Episcopal documents, sound adult education principles and lived experience. Unlike typical parish missions of the past, where a priest comes and goes, Isaiah Missions involves the laity in collaborative ministry training, formation and adult religious education before, during and after the mission.

Our Lady of the Annunciation, formed as a parish in 1934, serves individuals, families and communities in Stanly and Montgomery counties through a variety of parish ministries and partnerships with area churches and civic organizations.

WANT TO GO?

"Building the Kingdom in a Changing World" will be presented at Our Lady of the Annunciation Church, 416 N. 2nd Street in Albermarle, 7-8 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 9-Wednesday, Nov. 11. Childcare is available. For more information, contact Ann Rowe at (336) 461-5141.

SALE: Further reductions through October!!

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

CFCC

Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center

Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity

5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com

Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!*

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic News & Herald

Pope creates 30 cardinals, asks them to be 'fearless witnesses'

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — In a ceremony that combined solemn tradition and the cheers of the faithful, Pope John Paul II created 30 new cardinals and asked them to be "fearless witnesses of Christ and his Gospel" on every continent.

The liturgy Oct. 21 in a sunlit St. Peter's Square highlighted the international mix of the College of Cardinals, the group that will one day elect a new pope. New members from 22 countries were added, including Cardinal Justin Rigali of Philadelphia.

The pope said the new cardinals reflected the "multiplicity of races and cultures that make up the Christian population." He also created one cardinal "in pectore," or in his heart, withholding publication of his name.

In his sermon and prayers, the pope emphasized the cardinals' special duty to preach the Gospel and serve others.

"Only if you become the servants of all will you complete your mission and help the successor of Peter to be, in turn, the 'servant of the servants of God,'" he said in his sermon, which was read by an aide.

Throughout the ceremony, called a consistory, the 83-year-old pontiff looked pleased and alert. From an altar area decorated with thousands of red and yellow tulips, he gazed out and waved to a crowd dotted with flags and banners from many countries.

But because of his increasing difficulty in speaking, the pope let others speak for him at several key points, including the reading out of the new cardinals' names.

"All of us were pleased to be here today, although there was a hint of sadness with the manifest decline of the Holy Father," Australian Cardinal George Pell said after receiving his red hat.

The liturgy included several time-honored traditions. After pronouncing a profession of faith and an oath of obedience to the pope, the cardinals came forward and knelt one by one before the pope, who handed them a four-cornered red biretta. The cardinals placed the birettas on their own heads.

The pope explained to the cardinals that the red color signified that "You must be ready to act with strength, unto the spilling of blood, for the building up of the Christian faith, for the peace and tranquility of the people of God, and for the freedom and growth of the holy Roman church."

Pope John Paul also gave each cardinal a scroll assigning titular churches in Rome, symbolizing the cardinals' new status as members of the clergy of Rome and their new relationship with him as bishop of Rome.

Cardinal Rigali told reporters after the ceremony that when he worked at the Vatican for 30 years he never dreamed that one day he would be inducted into the College of Cardinals. He said he thought preaching and living the Gospel were the greatest challenges facing the church today.

Canadian Cardinal Marc Ouellet of Quebec said the new cardinals had already formed bonds of friendship and camaraderie. Now they need to form relationships with the more veteran cardinals, he said.

Each of the new cardinals had a rooting section of well-wishers in the square; crowd members applauded and cheered as their favorite received the red hat.

The new cardinals included seven Vatican officials, 19 resident archbishops around the world and four theologians over the age of 80 with personal ties to the pope.

Their induction left the College of Cardinals with 194 members — a new record. Of these, 135 were under the age of 80 and therefore eligible to vote in a conclave; that matched a record high set at the last consistory in 2001.

In his sermon, the pope told the new cardinals he was counting on their collaboration and prayers. He asked them to preach the Gospel "with words and with example" and to serve the church humbly, "refusing every temptation of career or personal benefit."

Selfless service is a difficult ideal to realize, he said, but "the Good Shepherd assures you of his help."

Seated apart on his throne, the pope appeared to share in the joy experienced by the cardinals as they greeted each other following distribution of the red hats.

"In this square today ... shines the church of Christ, ancient and always new, gathered around the successor of Peter," he said in his sermon.

Speaking on behalf of the new cardinals, Cardinal Jean-Louis Tauran said their only ambition was to love the church and help it develop in the third millennium.

"We feel that we are servants, mindful that in the church every authority is nothing more than service," Cardinal Tauran said.

"Holy Father, you can count on us," he said.

The Franciscan Center
Catholic Gift & Book Store
Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!
Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday
(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Reveling in red

New Scottish Cardinal Keith O'Brien celebrates in St. Peter's Square following the consistory led by Pope John Paul II Oct. 21. The archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburgh was among 30 new cardinals created by the pope during the ceremony.

List of new cardinals created by pope at October consistory

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Here is the complete list of new cardinals, in the order in which they were inducted into the College of Cardinals by Pope John Paul II at a consistory at the Vatican Oct. 21:

— French Cardinal Jean-Louis Tauran, 60, who recently retired as an assistant secretary of state for foreign affairs.

— Italian Cardinal Renato Martino, 70, president of the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace.

— Italian Cardinal Francesco Marchisano, 74, archpriest of the Basilica of St. Peter.

— Spanish Cardinal Julian Herranz, 73, president of the Pontifical Council for the Interpretation of Legislative Texts.

— Mexican Cardinal Javier Lozano Barragan, 70, president of the Pontifical Council for Health Care Workers.

— Japanese Cardinal Stephen F. Hamao, 73, president of the Pontifical Council for Migrants and Travelers.

— Italian Cardinal Attilio Nicora, 66, president of the Administration of the Patrimony of the Holy See.

— Italian Cardinal Angelo Scola, 61, patriarch of Venice.

— Nigerian Cardinal Anthony Olubunmi Okogie of Lagos, 67.

— French Cardinal Bernard Panafieu of Marseilles, 72.

— Sudanese Cardinal Gabriel Zubeir Wako of Khartoum, 62.

— Spanish Cardinal Carlos Amigo Vallejo of Seville, a 69-year-old Franciscan.

— U.S. Cardinal Justin Rigali of Philadelphia, 68.

— Scottish Cardinal Keith O'Brien of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, 65.

— Brazilian Cardinal Eusebio Scheid of Rio de Janeiro, 70, a member of the Congregation of the Priests of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

— Italian Cardinal Ennio Antonelli of Florence, 66.

— Italian Cardinal Tarcisio Bertone of Genoa, a 68-year-old Salesian.

— Ghanaian Cardinal Peter Turkson of Cape Coast, 55.

— Indian Cardinal Telesphore Toppo of Ranchi, 64.

— Australian Cardinal George Pell of Sydney, 62.

— Croatian Cardinal Josip Bozanic of Zagreb, 54.

— Vietnamese Cardinal Jean-Baptiste Pham Minh Man of Ho Chi Minh City, whom the Vatican lists as born in 1934.

— Guatemalan Cardinal Rodolfo Quezada Toruno of Guatemala City, 71.

— French Cardinal Philippe Barbarin of Lyons, 53.

— Hungarian Cardinal Peter Erdo of Esztergom-Budapest, 51.

— Canadian Cardinal Marc Ouellet of Quebec, a 59-year-old Sulpician.

— Swiss Cardinal Georges Cottier, an 81-year-old Dominican, theologian of the pontifical household.

— Belgian Cardinal Gustaaf Joos, an 80-year-old moral theologian and former classmate of the pope's at Rome's Belgian College.

— Czech Cardinal Tomas Spidlik, 83, a Jesuit expert in Eastern spirituality who led the pope's Lenten retreat in 1995.

— Polish Cardinal Stanislas Nagy, an 82-year-old Dehonian theologian who taught with the pope at Lublin University in Poland.

Pope prays for strength at Anniversary Mass

POPE, from page 1

versary events, which included a conference of cardinals and bishops discussing the pontificate's major themes, the release of the pope's post-synodal document on the role of bishops and heartfelt expressions of support from average Catholics.

"I'm 26 years old, and I've followed him all my life. I see Christ in him," Rome resident Cecilia DiCarlo said. "He invites everyone to be Christian, even when it is difficult. He knows how difficult this is for young people, and that is so special, especially from someone his age," she said.

The liturgy in St. Peter's Square was joyful and poignant, a celebration of what the pope has accomplished in 25 years and a reminder of how much his physical strength has slipped.

Youthful and energetic when he greeted the world Oct. 16, 1978, the 83-year-old pontiff had to be wheeled on a chair to the altar and struggled to pronounce the Mass prayers.

In a sermon read in part by an aide, the pope alluded to his physical difficulties and asked for continued prayers and support from Catholics all over the globe. He said that, aware of his "human fragility," he meditated daily over his ability to meet the demands of the papacy.

"I renew, through the hands of Mary, beloved mother, the gift of myself, in the present and the future: All will be accomplished according to your will," he said in a prayer to Christ, the church's "good shepherd."

The pope told the gathered crowd their support helps him carry on his ministry.

"God alone knows how much sacrifice, prayer and suffering have been offered up to support me in my service to the church," he said.

Introducing the prayer of the faithful, the pope asked that God "continue to pour upon me the Holy Spirit, the spirit of wisdom, of holiness and strength, in order to serve his holy people and proclaim to all people the Gospel of salvation and peace."

At 25 years, this papacy has become the fourth-longest in history and has left a defining mark on the church and the world beyond its borders.

One person who was in St. Peter's Square the night of the pope's election in 1978 was Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Belleville, Ill., president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. A student in Rome at the time, Bishop Gregory said he was immediately struck by the new pope's vigor and youthful enthusiasm.

Today, frail and weakened by illness, the pope is "witnessing to us the human dignity that is present at all moments in life and that we never lose, even though we lose our physical strength or physical beauty, and even though we become dependent on others," Bishop Gregory said.

President George W. Bush said in a message that the pope has left the United States and the world a better place.

"For the past 25 years, His Holiness has led worldwide efforts to develop a new culture of life that values and protects the lives of innocent children waiting to be born. He has also brought the love of the Almighty to people of all ages, particularly those who suffer or live in poverty, or who are weak and vulnerable," Bush said.

"Pope John Paul II has shown the world not only the splendor of truth, but also the power of truth to overcome evil and to redirect the course of history," he said.

Living rosary for the Holy Father

COURTESY PHOTO

In thanksgiving for Pope John Paul II, Father Thomas Kessler, pastor of St. Leo the Great Church, and faculty and students of St. Leo the Great School in Winston-Salem formed a living rosary around a statue of Mary. Student council officers led the group in reciting the rosary.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

SALES: #1 Health and Nutrition Company expanding. Full training provided. $25-$75/hour part-time/full-time. 1-888-724-7425. http://www.wisdomofwealth.com/?refid=n3

FOR SALE

FOR SALE: Real estate steal. $163,000. Matthews. Tax value $171,600. Market value $182,900. 4 bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths. 2-car garage. Interior completely updated 6 years ago. 704/370-3339 (day); 704/688-0997 (night)

FOR RENT

Snowbirds - Family Vacations - Weekend Getaways. OCEANFRONT condos in Charleston, SC and Hutchinson Island, FL. www.bedonthebeach.com or 704-895-3214

Vacation Rental: Hilton Head Island. 2-bedroom Villa, sleeps 6. Weekend, weekly and monthly low owner rates. Call Chris @ (704) 321-1939.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Carolina Volkswagen

7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte

(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection — Lowest Prices

Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" — Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

Mother Teresa beatified by Pope John Paul II

BEATIFIED, from page 1

St. Peter's Square and the surrounding streets were a crush of some 300,000 pilgrims and admirers of Mother Teresa.

Under a bright sun, which weather forecasters had said would not appear, the scene was awash with vibrant colors: flags from dozens of countries, banners in languages from Polish to Hindi, the blue-trimmed saris of the Missionaries of Charity, and the colorful traditional dress of Guatemalans and Nigerians.

In an unusually personal homily, read by a Vatican aide and by Indian Cardinal Ivan Dias of Mumbai, the pope wrote, "I am personally grateful to this courageous woman, whom I always felt was alongside of me.

"An icon of the good Samaritan, she went everywhere to serve Christ in the poorest of the poor. Not even conflicts or wars could stop her," the pope wrote.

Mother Teresa was beatified in record time — just over six years after her death — because Pope John Paul set aside the rule that a sainthood process cannot begin until the candidate has been dead five years.

Like the pope, many people in the crowd knew Mother Teresa, volunteered in one of her homes or soup kitchens, or at least heard her speak when she came to their home towns.

They carried official posters as well as their own photographs of the small, stooped nun who died in 1997.

Jack Griffith, 42, of Menasha, Wis., was with a group doing a "saints pilgrimage" around Italy.

"For us, Mother Teresa is important because she is a saint of our own time," he said. "Her mission of mercy was among the poorest of the poor, and in that way she was countercultural.

"She shunned everything and focused on two things: Jesus in the Eucharist and serving the poor," Griffith said.

Before the Mass began, pilgrims swapped stories about when they met Mother Teresa or recounted tales of her audacity: For example, when a bank offered her $1 million, she said it was not enough; she wanted $2 million.

Retired Australian Cardinal Edward I. Cassidy, former president of the Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity, was among the attendees with a story. He was a secretary in the Vatican Embassy in India from 1955 to 1962, the early years of the Missionaries of Charity.

"She was a frequent visitor," coming to inform the nuncio of her plans and occasionally asking for help, he said.

"The nuncio and I kept saying, 'Go slowly. You are building for the future, build solidly,'" the cardinal said.

Cardinal Cassidy returned to Calcutta, India, in 1975 to celebrate Mass with Mother Teresa and her sisters to mark the 25th anniversary of the Missionaries of Charity.

"She said, 'Remember when you used to tell me to go slowly? I always went away thinking, 'You'd think the representative of the Holy Father and his secretary would have more faith.' That was her little dig at us," the cardinal said.

The congregation at the beatification Mass included official delegations from the Orthodox Church of Albania, Albania's Sunni and Bectascian Muslim communities, and from 26 governments, including the United States, the Canadian province of Quebec, India, Albania and Macedonia.

Aferdita Berisha, 35, a Muslim from Kosovo, said: "All the good things Mother Teresa did cannot be divided according to faith. She helped everyone who needed help, regardless of religion."

Several royal guests were seated not far from 2,000 people who eat or sleep at the missionaries' facilities in Rome.

The royals included Queen Fabiola of Belgium, Princess Mona of Jordan, Princess Elena of Romania and Prince Emanuele Filiberto of Savoy, the former Italian royal family.

In his homily, Pope John Paul wrote that Mother Teresa's life was "a radical living and a bold proclamation of the Gospel."

"Her life is a testimony to the dignity and the privilege of humble service," he said. "Her greatness lies in her ability to give without counting the cost, to give 'until it hurts.'"

The pope met Oct. 20 with Sister Nirmala Joshi, Mother Teresa's successor as superior of the order, and with hundreds of Missionaries of Charity and pilgrims who had come to Rome for the beatification.

Mother Teresa, he told them, "was one of the greatest missionaries of the 20th century," a missionary who preached the Gospel around with world "with daily gestures of love for the poorest."

Mother Teresa was born to Albanian parents in 1910 in what is now Macedonia; in 1946, she experienced a call to found the Missionaries of Charity and live among the poorest of the poor in Calcutta.

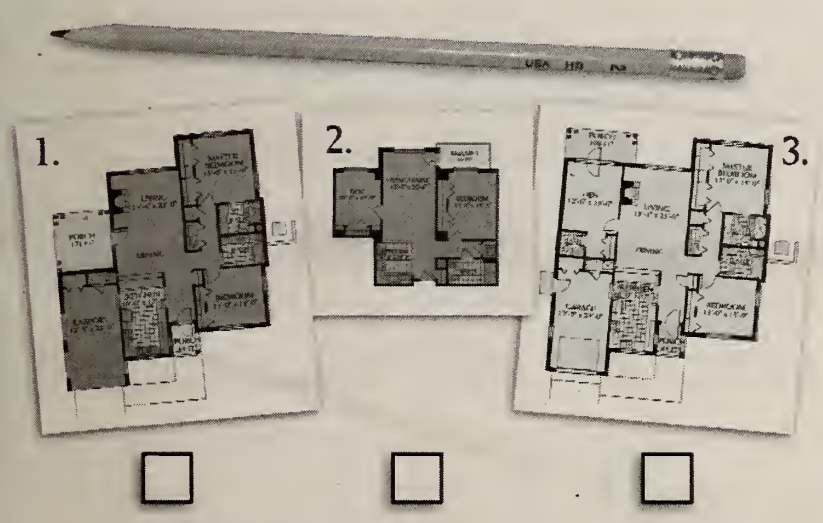
Mother Teresa — always smiling — rapidly expanded the order and opened hospices, clinics and shelters around the world, but her letters to her spiritual directors express a feeling that God had abandoned her.

"Mother Teresa shared the passion of the Crucified One, particularly during her long years of 'interior darkness,'" the pope wrote in his homily. "In the darkest hours, she clung with even greater tenacity to prayer before the Blessed Sacrament.

"This harsh spiritual struggle allowed her to identify even more with those she served every day, experiencing the pain and even rejection they felt," he wrote.

The people participating in the processions, readings and dances at the Mass included active and contemplative nuns, contemplative brothers and priests belonging to the various branches of the Missionaries of Charity, as well as lay coworkers and children adopted from the Missionaries' orphanages.

Get out your pencil.



Choose all of the above.

For the retirement lifestyle of your size, choice, or combination, call today for pre-construction pricing. Reserve now — move later.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN AT MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community
1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444
Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Join our Oratorian Congregation to
SERVE GOD AS PRIEST OR BROTHER
As priests and lay men, our community lives without vows and serves God's people numerous ways, including:
Parishes Youth Camps Nursing
Retreats Campus Ministry Hospital Chaplains
Find out more about serving God with us:
Fr. Ed McDevitt, CO The Oratory
P O Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Bishop Begley Conference spotlights 'Tail of Tears'

Guest Column

JOE PURELLO
DIRECTOR, OFFICE OF JUSTICE & PEACE

The Sunday readings from the Gospel of Mark in October call us to share our riches, be servants and have pity on those who suffer (Mark 10:17-30, 35-45, 46-52). Our reflections should include when we have failed to share, when we have coveted what others have and when we have sought to make others serve us rather than seeking ways to be servants to them. Such reflections might also include thoughts on our behavior in the realm of public policy.

As the U.S. bishops say in a recent statement prepared for the 2004 election year, we are to practice "faithful citizenship." A new kind of politics is called for, "focused on moral principles not on the latest polls, on the needs of the poor and vulnerable, not the contributions of the rich and powerful, and on the pursuit of the common good not the demands of special interests." Read "Faithful Citizenship" in its entirety at www.usccb.org/faithfulcitizenship/index.htm.

Our nation's commitment to the democratic process, our defense of human rights and our entrepreneurial spirit are models followed, and aspired to, by many nations. We must acknowledge, however, that much of our nation's history has included injustices. I heard one commentator on a PBS show call slavery "the indelible stain on the fabric of our nation's history." We cannot pretend slavery did not happen, nor can we pretend its devastating effects are now just a part of history. Similarly, we cannot sweep under the rug other actions of our nation that have contradicted values we as Americans hold dear.

My awareness of one of our government's largely forgotten and unjust policy decisions was recently rekindled at the Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia (Oct. 10-12 in Lake Junaluska). Freeman Owle, a member of the Qualla Boundary — Eastern Band of the Cherokee who live in western North Carolina, spoke of the "Trail of Tears." This is the name given to the forced migration of the Cherokee from their southeastern homeland in parts of what are now Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia, to "reserved" lands west of the Mississippi.

This year marks the 175th anniversary of the start of the "Trail of Tears." In 1838, President Andrew Jackson, with the support of Congress, issued orders to remove the Cherokee from their ancestral homelands. Why? Because gold had been discovered in north Georgia and because the prevailing prejudice of the day could not fathom Native Americans living side by side in peace and prosperity with white Americans. The Cherokee — who lived in towns, went to churches, attended schools and had their own written language; who lived in peace with their neighbors — were forced to move.

Thousands of Cherokee died from starvation, disease and exposure on their western migration. Some Cherokee managed to escape from the migration routes and return to the hills of Appalachia. They joined many of their brothers and sisters who had already chosen to live under cover of the hills rather than migrate. This remnant of the Cherokee Nation formed the basis of the now roughly 13,000 members of the Cherokee living in North Carolina.

After attending the conference, I came home desiring to learn more about this terrible chapter in our nation's history. For many of us, our knowledge of American history begins at the War for Independence and then fast-forwards past 80 years of national growth to the Civil War. It is simply wrong that the incredible hardships and injustices brought on by the Indian Removal Act of 1830 (when Native Americans in the eastern United States were ordered to move west of the Mississippi) remain largely unknown to the America public.

One tragic historical fact is this land's original inhabitants were either pushed to the periphery as our nation grew, or simply eliminated (even though European settlement would have never succeeded without the advice and material assistance offered by Native Americans). Any serious reflection on our nation's failings must include the unjust treatment of Native Americans. As we shape our nation's public policy, we should be mindful of the unfortunate conditions in which many Native Americans continue to live.

According to the 2000 U.S. Census, 4.1 million people identify themselves as Native Americans. Roughly 12 percent are Roman Catholic (from diocesan records). There are two Native American bishops, Bishop Donald Pelotte of Gallup, N.M., and Archbishop Charles Chaput of Denver, Colo. A June 2003 report from the U.S. bishops states in our country, 322 individuals currently work in Native American ministry. Let us remember in prayer those in the Church who work with Native Americans.

Pope tells cardinals, bishops to preach Gospel

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Editor's note: Due to an early publishing deadline this week, we were unable to print the pope's weekly general audience.

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II told cardinals and bishops assembled for his 25th anniversary that their common duty was to preach the Gospel "to the last breath."

The pope said that in evangelizing the credibility of church leaders depends on the unity they show among themselves and the commitment they show to the world's poor.

The pope addressed more than 250 cardinals and heads of bishops' conferences Oct. 18 at the close of a four-day conference that reviewed the main themes of his pontificate's first 25 years.

In the face of the many changes over the last 25 years, he said, the need for the pope and bishops to be fearless witnesses of truth and hope has remained constant.

"The courage in proclaiming the Gospel must never lessen. In fact, it must be our main task to the last breath, faced with ever-renewing dedication," he said.

But to announce the one Gospel with a "single heart and soul," the church must demonstrate internal agreement, he said.

"Therefore, it is indispensable to cultivate a profound unity among us, which is not limited to an affective collegiality, but is founded on a full doctrinal sharing and is translated into harmony at an operational level," he said.

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

"How can we be authentic teachers for humanity and credible apostles of the new evangelization if we allow the weeds of division to enter into our hearts?" he asked.

The pope said the credibility of the church's hierarchy depends upon this unity and on showing "the face of a church that loves the poor, that is simple and that is on the side of the weakest." He said the perfect example was Mother Teresa of Calcutta, whom he beatified the next day.

The pope told the church leaders personal holiness also must be an essential component of their leadership and was "the secret of evangelization" in today's world.

At the close of his talk, the pope asked the cardinals and bishops to "pray for me, so that I can faithfully carry out my service to the church as long as the Lord shall desire."

The pope greeted participants one by one after his talk and handed each a gift: a pectoral cross for bishops, and for cardinals, a manuscript reproduction of a Greek text of a letter from St. Peter.

Bush right, Vatican — and everyone else — wrong

I write to let you know I am embarrassed and disgusted at the arrogance of Cardinal Pio Laghi as reiterated by John Thavis in the article on the front page of The Catholic News & Herald ("Papal envoy to Bush says events proved Vatican right about Iraqi war," Oct. 10). Again petty, but profound arrogance with the headline where the article continues on page 13: "Vatican right about Iraq."

Where were the articles from The Catholic News & Herald and Mr. Thavis when the "leaders" of Iraq were torturing and murdering their own countrymen?

Where were the articles from The Catholic News & Herald and Mr. Thavis when people were and are murdered all over the world thanks to this horrible global — and organized — terrorism?

Where were the articles from *The Catholic News & Herald*and Mr. Thavis when the schools opened and the students found them actually clean, newly painted and when mayors, councilmen, etc., were elected to various towns in Iraq?

I suggest The Catholic News & Herald and Mr. Thavis get their heads out of the sand and smell the love of life and respect for mankind, as is being allowed and presented anew in Iraq — thanks to President George W. Bush!

Wanda Carton
Charlotte

Letters to Editor

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Catholic News & Herald welcomes letters from readers. We ask that letters be originals of 250 words or less.

To be considered for publication, each letter must include the name, address and phone number of the writer for purpose of verification. Letters may be condensed due to space limitations and edited for clarity, style and taste.

Send letters to Letters to the Editor, The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, N.C. 28237, or e-mail catholicnews@charlottediocese.org.

The Saints are marching in and on

Guest Column

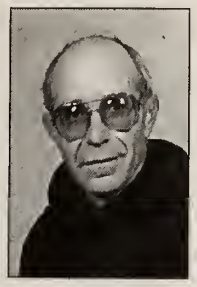
FATHER JOHN AURILIA, OFM Cap



On Nov. 1, the world celebrates men and women who were not necessarily popular when they were alive, but as time went on became more popular than ever. I am talking about the heroes called saints. They had a clear purpose in life: to overthrow the stagnant system of mediocrity and to begin a revolution of love and values.

Every year since 610, the church brings to our attention their triumphant anniversary. The peculiarity of the greatest women and men who ever lived is they are strangely oblivious to flattery. They are not affected by our compliments, because they direct them to God, who accomplished wonders in their lives.

When the great Italian conductor Arturo Toscanini rehearsed with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to perform Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, he took the musicians to heights they had never before known. When the rehearsal was finished, the musicians stood and cheered their conductor. Toscanini, visibly embarrassed with tears in his eyes, did his best to stop them. When the ovation ended, in a voice of gentle rebuke, he said, "Your applause, ladies and gentlemen ... not for me, but for Beethoven."

What makes the saints close to us is the fact "They have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." (Rev. 7:15) That is to say their sins have been forgiven through the sacrificial death of Christ. They were sinners as we are. They needed forgiveness and cleansing as we do. The American journalist, Ambrose Bierce, enjoyed making fun of religion and Christianity in particular. He once defined a saint as "a dead sinner, whose life has been revised and edited." That was his way of saying the saints were not really saintly. The church has simply rewritten the stories of their lives to make them appear better than they were. You and I may be offended by that suggestion, but I doubt the saints are. It never occurred to them that they were anything other than ordinary people. I'll say they did the ordinary things in an extraordinary way, therefore they are the giants of our faith. They were real people, who lived real lives in the real world.

I am convinced the saints would like us to continue their work on earth, their cause for which they lived and died. They devoted themselves to projects too big to be finished, too challenging to be completed. The unfinished work of God is still in our hands. Our lives are powerful movies with the subtitle "to be continued."

While holiness has been connected with piety, which may have a legalistic and negative connotation, the saints simply showed us that holiness is a way of life. They were people who marched to the beat of a different drummer; they had to be unpopular and revolutionary to the point of being killed or persecuted by fellow human beings. Popularity has never been a mark of true Christianity. While the saints were not superhumans, they were indeed courageous enough to defeat human logic and the best marketing technique. They are models for us as they teach us the real meaning of life, which is being rather than doing, loving rather than bargaining.

For instance, an outstanding quality of every saint is humility. They knew not the proud and violent but the lowly and meek conquer the world. History, in fact, is on their side. When Jesus was born in Bethlehem, Rome was the undisputed ruler of the world. Caesar's legions marched on every roadway and controlled every sea lane. Then the message of Jesus came along "Love your enemies, forgive 70 times seven." In that world of violence and hatred, Jesus was a misfit, a loser, so it seemed. The truth is that humility triumphed over pride: the Roma Empire fell along with hundreds of violent regimes and dictators, Christ conquered the world and legions of saintly men and women proved that time may annihilate and wipe out everything, except the great heritage of our Christian faith.

Agreeing to raise children Catholic

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN CNS Columnist

Q. Thirty-eight years ago I married a Catholic lady. She is still my wife, and I converted to the Catholic faith since then. Before our marriage I had to sign a promise to bring our children up Catholic; today all three love and respect the Catholic religion.

Soon our son will marry a nice young lady who is not Catholic. Our pastor informed him that he (not his future spouse) must sign a paper promising to raise the children Catholic.

He feels he would not be truthful in signing it. After all, he says, the wife will be with the children more than the husband and perhaps would wish to bring them up in a religion she is more familiar with. Doesn't that put unnecessary pressure on a marriage that is just beginning? (Pennsylvania)

A. We Catholics consider it of major importance that children born into this faith be offered the spiritual and cultural advantages of Catholic religious life, particularly the sacraments (baptism, Eucharist, penance and so on), but also the support of a Catholic community, Sunday Eucharist, daily prayer and all the other helps which enrich a Catholic life.

These are gifts of faith we, individually and as a Christian community, have a responsibility to give to our children as effectively as we can.

In light of this, the church has an obligation to assume that its members who come to be married as Catholics possess a basic Catholic knowledge and commitment sufficient to desire and provide this religious heritage for their children.

For a variety of possible reasons, no one can absolutely guarantee that this nurturing to a mature Catholic adult faith will actually happen in a marriage. Thus, the Catholic does not promise (in your words) to raise the children Catholic, but "to do all in my power to share my faith with our children by having them baptized and raised as Catholics," an entirely different promise, of course.

Such a policy simply respects the fact that the Catholic has, by God's grace, a bond with the Catholic faith, for which he or she is accountable.

(Of course it can happen, and sometimes does, that no genuine personal commitment to the Catholic faith is present at all; the desire to be married in the church could be motivated more by culture and family than by religious conviction. But that is another story.)

The church assumes furthermore that the other partner also holds important personal beliefs about God, family, marriage and similar religious matters. While it doesn't presume to know what those beliefs are, it is concerned that the beliefs of both parties be respected and confronted so any critical differences may be resolved.

Without question, the time to do this is before the marriage. It doesn't become easier later when children begin arriving and even less leisure and objectivity are available to make wise decisions about these responsibilities.

You and your son seem to have a good relationship. Might you discuss these points with them? If the Catholic faith is at all important for him, why? What do he and his future wife want for their children? If Mass, the sacraments, Communion are at all valuable for him, wouldn't he strongly desire them for his sons and daughters? What does his fiance really want? Do they feel it would it be better for their family to go into the future without these religious helps and supports?

It seems to me this is the direction from which they need to examine the questions you raise. Years from now there will be no police force to monitor their spiritual lives on this or any other matter. Ultimately it is between them and God.

But the church tries every way it can, including through its marriage-preparation programs, to assure them the happiest possible relationship through the years, with each other and with God.

Getting a grip on trust

Spirituality for Today

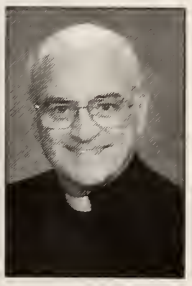
FATHER JOHN CATOIR CNS Columnist



It is the supreme law that we love and honor God.

But in order to honor God we at least have to trust him. Every time you make a decision to turn away from your fears, you please and honor him. The saints and mystics agree on this.

Julian of Norwich wrote, "The greatest honor you can give to almighty God is to live joyfully because of the knowledge of his love." She got this from St. Paul who said: "Rejoice always. In all circumstances give thanks to the Lord for this is the will of God for you in Christ Jesus."

Decide once and for all to live joyfully? It doesn't mean good feelings follow immediately. It is simply a choice of joy over fear. Be patient.

People get into a bad habit of thinking fear helps protect them from danger. In fact, fear only adds to the woes of life. Psychologists tell us 95 percent of our worries are about future things that never happen. Trusting God eliminates all this the needless worry. You have to learn to go against your natural fears.

Living joyfully is possible, but not for those who cling relentlessly to their fears. They would rather see themselves as victims than as carriers of divine love and joy. They do not have faith enough to trust that God will supply whatever they are lacking. This is not an easy leap of faith I admit, but trust demands a radical change.

Those who do not choose to change will continue to wallow in self-pity. Some present themselves as helpless creatures in order to get attention and sympathy. By reacting fearfully to the traumas of life with little or no trust in God, they forfeit joy.

When people like that tell me their story, I try not to give them pity; instead I usually ask this disturbing question: "What would happen if today you decided to be joyful? What changes would you make in your thinking, in your activities, in your relationships?"

Sometimes they say: "Haven't you been listening? You can't just decide to be joyful." I smile and answer: "Oh, but yes you can."

Jesus said "Stop thinking about tomorrow, sufficient unto the day are the day's troubles."

To honor God, you first have to put your trust in him. The decision to be joyful is the first step. Living in fear is not a happy alternative. Contemplate the joyful presence of God within your soul. Always remember pleasure comes from the delights of the senses, but true joy comes from within.

The joy of being is another name for the divine Trinity dwelling within your soul. Train your will to obey the Lord, and be joyful.

Basilica of St. Lawrence rises as spiritual harbor for western North Carolina

COURTESY PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

The Basilica of St. Lawrence, designed by a Spanish architect in the early 1900s, was designated by Pope John Paul II as a minor basilica in 1993.

THE BASILICA OF ST. LAWRENCE
97 Haywood Street
Asheville, N.C. 28801
(828) 252-6042

Vicariate: Asheville
Pastor: Father Wilbur Thomas
Parochial Vicar: Father Joseph Long Dinh
Number of Families: 931

Father Thomas Wilbur

BY CAROLE McGROTTY
CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — In 1840, when Father John Barry visited Catholic families and celebrated Mass in Asheville, it marked the first time Mass was said in the mountain area, according to earliest written records.

For many years, Mass was sporadically celebrated whenever missionary priests traveled through the mountains. Little else is recorded concerning Catholicism in western North Carolina until Father J.J. O'Connell recalled his experience celebrating Mass on the summit of Mount Mitchell on the feast of St. Rose of Lima in 1866.

Bishop James J. Gibbons, then newly consecrated apostolic vicar of North Carolina, traveled by stagecoach and horseback to Asheville in 1868 and arranged for the purchase of land on which to build a church. Sibling Fathers Lawrence and Jeremiah O'Connell raised funds, even traveling abroad, for the new church that Bishop Gibbons dedicated two years later.

The mission church had no resident pastor for the next 17 years and relied on priests who could be spared for a month or two at a time. One of these dedicated missionary priests was Father Thomas Price, a native North Carolinian, who later cofounded the Maryknoll Mission Society.

In 1887, Father James White became pastor, and St. Lawrence, named in honor of Father Lawrence O'Connell, became a parish church. Father White obtained the current property in 1899 and built a small wooden church. When poor health forced Father White to resign, he recommended Father Peter Marion be appointed pastor. Then-Bishop Leo Haid also appointed Father Marion's younger brother, Father Patrick Marion, as assistant pastor.

The new church was only half filled during the off-season, but overflowed during the summer months when tourists joined the local parishioners. In July 1905, one visitor unable to find a seat during Mass was the famous Spanish architect Rafael Guastavino, who was in town during the mid-1890s to work on the Biltmore House. He told Father Marion that a Catholic Church should be large enough to accommodate everyone and offered to draw plans for a new, fireproof church and donate an elliptical dome, the largest freestanding elliptical dome in North America.

With Bishop Haid's consent, construction started shortly after parishioners helped dig the cellar. Father Marion — who worked alongside construction workers each day, mixing mortar and carrying bricks — wrote and sent 3,000 letters throughout the country for donations; only two refusals were returned. Donations of money, materials and labor helped the completion of the new church.

In 1908, Guastavino died and his son, Rafael Jr., took over with help of another famous architect, Stanford White. Bishop Haid dedicated the new church in October 1909. When Father Peter Marion's health declined and he transferred to Hendersonville, Father Patrick Marion took his brother's place as pastor and oversaw final completion of the church, which consisted of the placing of the copper roof and paying off the debt so the church could be consecrated.

On Oct. 13, 1920, Cardinal James Gibbons consecrated St. Lawrence Church, the first church consecrated in the Vicariate of North Carolina.

The church, now on the National Register of Historic Places, houses the crypt of Guastavino.

Father Louis Bour, appointed pastor in 1922, built a new rectory next to the church in 1929 and served as pastor for 40 years. During the Great Depression, the church was without heat except on Sundays and for funerals. The church basement became a USO-type canteen during World War II, serving servicemen and women stationed in the area, and attendance at Mass and devotions increased as visitors and parishioners prayed for peace.

In keeping with the spirit of Vatican II, changes took place under Father Robert Wilkin. In 1968, in order for Mass to be said facing the congregation, part of the altar was moved to the middle of the sanctuary with the fresco of the Last Supper and its flanking square panels moved 10 feet and topped with an 1,800-pound block of Tennessee marble for the altar table.

Lay committees and a parish council formed soon afterward. The parish of St. Anthony of Padua, with predominantly black parishioners, merged with St. Lawrence Church in 1969, and its pastor, Father Joseph Howze, became pastor of St. Lawrence.

Father Justin Pechulis, pastor from 1977 until 1983, purchased the building across the street from the church and named it the St. Justin Center in honor of his patron saint. The building served religious education classes and various parish functions.

In 1993, Pope John Paul II designated St. Lawrence Church as a minor basilica, a term of special designation given to certain churches because of their antiquity, dignity, historical importance or significance as a place of worship. Archbishop John F. Donoghue, then-bishop of Charlotte, dedicated the church as the Basilica of St. Lawrence in October of that year.

Eighteen priests — two who became bishops — have served the church as pastors along with three administrators. Msgr. John McSweeney, former chancellor of the Diocese of Charlotte and first priest ordained in the diocese, also served as pastor. Father Wilbur Thomas, a native North Carolinian, became pastor in July 2000. Father Joseph Long Dinh is the current parochial vicar.

The city of Asheville recently purchased the St. Justin Center for a parking garage as part of a new plaza to be dedicated to the Basilica of St. Lawrence. Parishioners will have use of 200 free parking spaces on weekends and 150 spaces during the week. The rectory will be renovated with a new addition to house a parish life center.

The basilica offers perpetual eucharistic adoration, instituted by former pastor Father Clark Kaltreider in 1989, and for many years was the only church in North Carolina to have this devotion.

The parish recently celebrated the 10th anniversary of the church being designated a minor basilica. Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta returned for the anniversary celebration Mass Oct. 5.

As the parish moves toward the future, the Basilica of St. Lawrence remains a spiritual harbor for residents and visitors of the western North Carolina city.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening!
Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

OCTOBER 31, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 6

FC382
C34 C

Bishop Jugis ordained as fourth bishop of Charlotte

New shepherd calls on all to help 'make known the love of Christ'

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Speaking in both English and Spanish, Bishop Peter J. Jugis asked the faithful gathered for his ordination to help him carry on the church's mission of salvation.

"All of us, regardless of our particular vocation, are involved in this grand mission of salvation," he said.

An estimated 3,000 people crowded St. Matthew Church for Bishop Jugis' spectacular two-hour ordination. Attendees overflowed into the church's gymnasium, where they watched the Mass via closed-circuit television.

Bishop Jugis, 46, a native of Charlotte, succeeds Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus, as shepherd of the 46-county Diocese of Charlotte, established in 1972.

The multicultural Mass, broadcast live on the Internet, featured West African drummers, Vietnamese children from St. Joseph Vietnamese Church dancing with candles in the aisles and music — including songs in Spanish, Korean and Vietnamese — that was representative of the diverse cultures of the diocese.

"We are a young church. We are a rapidly growing church, filled with joy and vitality and holiness and the love of Christ," said Bishop Jugis. "We come from many different ethnic backgrounds and together we form the body of Christ — a living sacrifice of praise."

Approximately 400 people participated in the opening procession, including priests, deacons, seminarians, abbots and representatives

See ORDINATION, page 25

PHOTO BY JOANN S. KEANE

Bishop Peter J. Jugis was ordained as the fourth bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte Oct. 24 at St. Matthew Church in Charlotte. A native of Charlotte, Bishop Jugis prepared for the priesthood at the North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome, and was ordained as a priest by Pope John Paul II in 1983.

#BXNPDVQ*3-D1611 275
#415489#
ST EUGENE CHURCH
PO BOX 188
MENDELL NC 27591-0188
S304 P3

Shepherding many flocks
Bishop Jugis contemplates his call to serve
| Page 3

Rite of Reception
Bishop Jugis received in his cathedral church
| Page 4

Bilingual bishop
Bishop Jugis ministers to many cultures
| Page 37

ARMING A BISHOP

Bishop Jugis devises personal coat of arms, motto

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

Editor's note: The terms "dexter" and "sinister" (below) are historical, since the shield was borne on the same arm of medieval days.

CHARLOTTE — It is tradition for every bishop to have his own coat of arms and motto.

Similar to many bishops' coats of arms, Bishop Peter J. Jugis' coat of arms is composed of the shield with its charges, motto and external armaments. But the details of the design and the motto have special significance to Bishop Jugis.

"Bishop Jugis impales his personal heraldic device onto the arms of this diocese to represent his governance of the people of God in the church of Charlotte," explained Father James Parker, a priest of the Diocese of Charleston, S.C., who designed the coat of arms.

Father Parker is a heraldic designer who has devised arms for cardinals, other members of the hierarchy and various church institutions. He is a member of the Heraldry Society of England, Scotland, Canada and the American Society of Heraldry.

The coat of arms' artwork is by Father Larry Lossing, a priest of the Diocese of Orlando, Fla., and a professional artist.

The impalement also represents the mystical "marriage" between the local ordinary and his jurisdiction, said Father Parker.

To the viewer's right (the shield bearer's left or sinister side behind the shield) is a gold field, which represents the great treasure of the faith and the hope of salvation offered to us all by the gift of redemption, according to Father Parker. Gold also stands for the enrichment of life given by redemption, he said.

"With the gold background, I wanted to tie in the years that I studied in Rome and my priestly ordination by the pope," said Bishop Jugis. "The colors of Vatican City are gold and silver, so I chose the gold background for my coat of arms."

"Gold is also a reference to Our Lady, who in the Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary, is called 'House of Gold,'" said the bishop. "Gold is a precious metal, and Mary, as the mother of Christ, was the most precious 'house,' or dwelling place, of God."

The cross is in a style called "bottony" in heraldry because it has three circles at the end of the staff and the cross arms. This has personal significance to the bishop and thus is a personal "badge" for him, said Father Parker.

"The design of the cross that I chose was inspired by a crucifix hanging in the living room of the rectory at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Monroe," said Bishop Jugis. "It is a beautiful wood-carved crucifix that I believe goes back many years at the parish there."

"The cross reminds us of salvation wrought by Jesus Christ crucified and the red color suggests the precious blood, the cost of redemption," said Father Parker.

"Red is to emphasize the blood and sacrifice of Christ for us," said Bishop Jugis. "The paschal mystery — one of the central mysteries of our faith; the mystery of the suffering, death and rising of Christ — is all symbolically represented right there in the cross."

"The three circles on the cross ends denote the Blessed Trinity, whom we worship," said Father Parker.

The arms to the viewer's left (the shield bearer's right or dexter side behind the shield) are the escutcheons of the Diocese of Charlotte, explained Father Parker.

"The field is divided horizontally into green and blue portions. In the chief or upper half is a Celtic cross of silver-edged gold, which represents St. Patrick, patron saint of the cathedral church of the diocese," said Father Parker. "In the lower left part, the crown denotes Queen Charlotte, consort of George III of England. The see city is named for her."

Behind the coat of arms is a gold processional cross.

The shield is ensigned with the green heraldic hat having six "houppes," or tassels, depending from either side, denoting the hierarchical rank of a bishop in accordance with the Instruction of the Holy See (March 31, 1969). Before 1970, the pontifical hat was worn at solemn cavalcades in conjunction with papal ceremonies. The color of the hat and number of tassels were signs of the rank of the prelate, a custom still preserved in ecclesiastical heraldry.

Bishop Jugis' motto, "Caritas Christi Urget Nos" ("The Love of Christ Urges Us On"), comes from St. Paul's second pastoral letter to the Corinthian Church, said Father Parker, and offers the inspiration for growth and formation in the faith, which the bishop wishes to inspire in the people as their pastor.

"I wanted to have a motto that would somehow include Christ's love in it," said Bishop Jugis. "The love of Christ is planted in our hearts from the day of our baptisms. I remember the line from Paul's letter to the Romans — "the love of God has been poured out into our hearts through the Holy Spirit, who has been given to us." That love should be the reason and motivation for everything we do as Christians, and for me as shepherd of the diocese."

"After I had chosen it, I discovered the saint whose feast day is celebrated Oct. 24 — St. Anthony Mary Claret — the very day I'm being ordained, has the same motto," he said. "I thought it was an interesting coincidence."

Welcome to a special issue of The Catholic News & Herald devoted to Bishop Peter J. Jugis, who was ordained as the fourth bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte Oct. 24.

Bishop Jugis, a native of Charlotte, succeeds Bishop William G. Curlin, who retired in September 2002 after nine years as shepherd of the diocese.

This issue will highlight Bishop Jugis' ordination and installation Mass at St. Matthew Church (see page 1), his rite of reception at St. Patrick Cathedral as well as other attributes of our new bishop.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

OCTOBER 31, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 6

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

SHEPHERDING MANY FLOCKS

Bishop Jugis contemplates his call to serve

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — It was more than 20 years ago when Bishop Peter J. Jugis discerned his calling to the priesthood.

Back then, he never imagined the July phone call from Archbishop Gabriel Montalvo, apostolic nuncio, which literally brought him to his knees.

"Suddenly, in a single instant, God changes your life," said Bishop Jugis. "... You don't expect someone on the other end to tell you you've been appointed the next bishop of Charlotte ... I couldn't believe what I was hearing."

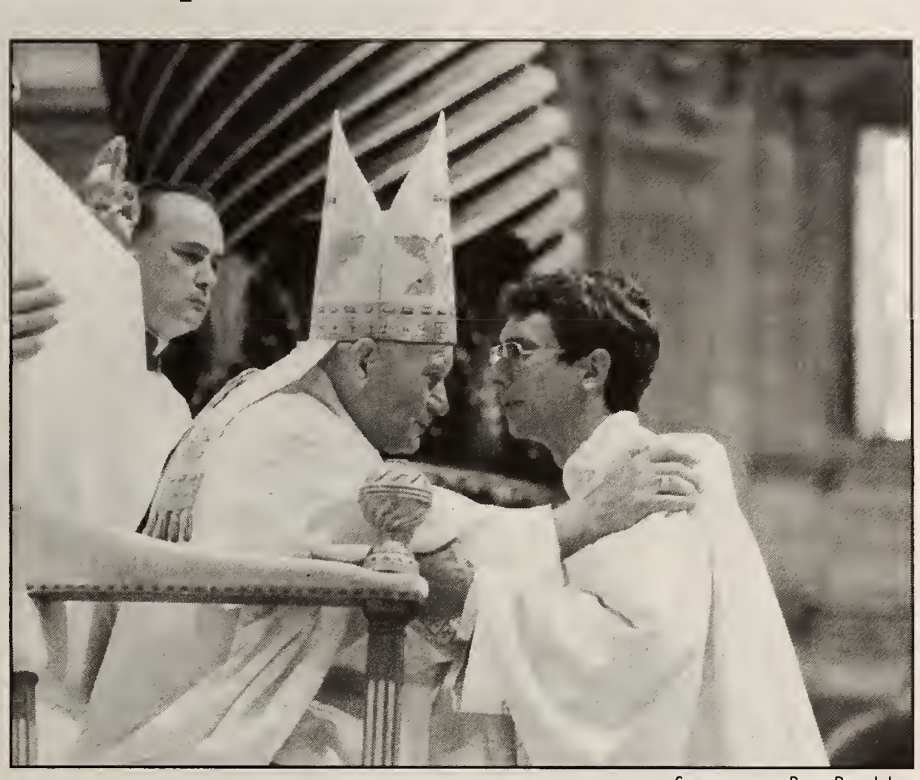
When he told his parents of his new appointment as bishop, they were pleased, yet surprised.

"They both started crying," he said. "It's something that was completely unexpected; it came out of the blue."

His decision to become a priest, however, did not surprise them.

"It was my mother who said, 'Well, Peter, we were thinking that you had been moving in this direction for a long time, but we didn't want to say anything to see if you would arrive at that conclusion on your own,'" said Bishop Jugis.

"It was a tremendous affirmation and confirmation of what I had been feeling and discerning privately for many months," he said. "They were validating the external signs of the interior vocation I had been considering."



COURTESY PHOTO BY BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

Pope John Paul II embraces Bishop Peter J. Jugis at his priestly ordination June 12, 1983.

The calling

A native of Charlotte born March 3, 1957, Bishop Jugis is a third-generation American hailing from a diverse background including Hungarian, German, Irish, Lithuanian and Czechoslovakian descents. After graduating from South Mecklenburg High School in 1975, he studied accounting at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. He supplemented his educational expenses by playing the organ during weddings at local parishes.

PHOTO COURTESY OF BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

Then-Father Peter J. Jugis in a portrait taken in the early 1980s while he was a seminarian.

"I just began to realize my heart wasn't in the accounting field," he said. "I could do it intellectually, but I just didn't feel that this was what I wanted to give my life to totally."

While visiting St. Gabriel Church, where he was to play at a wedding, he met Msgr. John McSweeney, then-associate pastor for the church and vocations director for the Diocese of Charlotte.

"I had seen him at other events, and noticed there were good similarities between us," said Msgr. McSweeney. "For a young man, he had a good sense of humor ... and a deep sense of faith, and where that would go, I wasn't sure."

"After the wedding rehearsal, he asked me in passing if I had ever thought of being a priest," said Bishop Jugis. "I told him, 'No, I never had.' He said, 'Well, think about it, would you?'"

And so he did — a lot over the following year — "about what I could really give my heart to completely," he said. "I started to realize more and more that giving my life to God and serving the church as a priest seemed to be agreeable at the time. Of course, I had to continue to discern and think, and to talk with priests."

He discussed the idea with Msgr. William Wellein, then-pastor at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte. "I spent time talking with him and learning more about the priesthood and being a parish priest," he said.

After graduating with a bachelor's degree in business administration, Jugis, with his parents' full support, applied to be a seminarian of the diocese in 1979. He interviewed with Bishop Michael J. Begley, who, as former pastor of St. Ann Church in Charlotte, baptized the infant Peter Joseph Jugis in 1957.

"I had the honor of being baptized by the future bishop of the diocese," said Bishop Jugis.

During the interview, Bishop Begley had spoken about his concern for the "unchurched" in the state.

"I remember him saying to me, 'There's a lot of work we have to do in North Carolina,'" said Bishop Jugis. "He was inviting me to study for the priesthood and to join him in the mission of the Catholic Church in North Carolina. I received from him a missionary spirit."

He studied at the North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome, and was ordained in 1983 by Pope John Paul II in St. Peter's Basilica. His parents and brothers were present at the ordination, as were Bishop Begley and Msgr. McSweeney.

Serving the diocese

Since then, he has served in numerous parishes across the Diocese of Charlotte, including St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem, Holy Infant Church in Reidsville, St. John Neumann Church in Charlotte, Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury and Queen of the Apostles Church in Belmont.

In November 1985, he was appointed as a diocesan tribunal judge and parochial vicar of St. John Neumann Church. In August 1987, he began studies for his doctorate in canon law at The Catholic University of America in Washington.

"It was the bishop who first asked me to study — Bishop Begley and then-Bishop (John F.) Donoghue — they always made the opportunities available," said Bishop Jugis.

In August 1988, he returned to the Diocese of Charlotte as parochial vicar of Sacred Heart Church before heading back to Washington to continue his studies in the fall of 1989.

In 1992, Bishop Jugis became the first priest of the diocese to receive a doctorate in canon law, defending his thesis at The Catholic University of America. Six years later, he began working full-time for the tribunal while regularly serving as administrator or pastor in churches around the diocese.

In 2001, Bishop Jugis became pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Monroe. While overseeing a $1.5 million building campaign for a new church, Bishop Jugis was making a weekly 40-minute trip to the diocesan pastoral center in Charlotte to manage the marriage tribunal as judicial vicar.

And then Archbishop Montalvo called in July 2003. It was a very humbling moment, said Bishop Jugis, who, at 46, may be the youngest bishop in the United States.

"I'm sure there may be some auxiliary bishops who are younger than I am, but I don't know if I am the youngest bishop," said Bishop Jugis. "I'm very honored by it if it is true, but I'll leave that up to others to research."

"(Being bishop) is a tremendous responsibility, and I'm still in awe of the great responsibility that I have," he said. "I try not to think of the enormity of the task, but just want to serve the best that I can, and let the Holy Spirit guide and show me what has to be done."

"(And) I can count on the help and support of all of the priests and all of the people in the parishes to do the work of the Lord," he said.

Shepherding the flock

On Oct. 24, 2003, he was ordained and installed as the fourth bishop of Charlotte at St. Matthew Church, at which Msgr. McSweeney is pastor.

"To me, with Bishop Jugis' ordination, the Catholic Church of this young diocese is truly coming into its own," said Msgr. McSweeney. "This local church has produced a bishop of its own — it gives this diocese a sense of maturity."

"The Diocese of Charlotte is growing," said Bishop Jugis. "There is much work to be done as we continue Christ's mission of salvation, which he entrusted to his Catholic Church."

Having served in the Diocese of Charlotte for two decades, Bishop Jugis got to know many of the priests and laity through his service in various parishes, on the diocesan Respect Life committee and the Cursillo movement, "which has put me in touch with people all over the diocese," he said.

While attending the 50th anniversary of St. Francis of Assisi Church in Franklin Oct. 4, "Although I've never served in Franklin, I knew people at the Mass," he said. "But even if I had not been here for the last 20 years, it would not have taken me too long to begin

See CALLING, next page

What Others Say

TOM LALLEY, PARISH COUNCIL, OUR LADY OF LOURDES CHURCH:

"We are thankful to God for this special gift to our parish and our diocese of Bishop Peter Jugis, our beloved pastor. His devotion to and love of the holy Eucharist is an inspiration to us all. Our prayer is that our Lord and His Blessed Mother will keep Bishop Jugis ever close to their Sacred Hearts and grant him abundant graces for a long and holy tenure as the shepherd of the Diocese of Charlotte."

Bishop Jugis contemplates his call to serve

CALLING, from previous page

meeting people and to know their names and feel right at home. I think that's one of the things that makes this all so awesome and humbling."

"It is a special grace and a blessing to be chosen as a bishop where I've already served, where I've really spent all of my life," said Bishop Jugis. "I was once one of the priests helping to build up the diocese. Now I'm building up the diocese in a different way as bishop."

PHOTO COURTESY OF BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

Then-Deacon Peter J. Jugis at Charlotte-Douglas Airport on his way back to the North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome, Oct. 4, 1982.

A BISHOP IN THE MAKING

Bishop Jugis fills may posts over two decades

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Before his Oct. 24 ordination and installation as bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte, Bishop Peter J. Jugis served in many capacities and in many parishes throughout the diocese.

With a degree in business administration from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, Bishop Jugis prepared for the priesthood at the North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome.

After his ordination June 12, 1983, then-Father Jugis was briefly in residence at St. Ann Church in Charlotte before returning to Rome to complete his licentiate in canon law.

In 1984, he was appointed parochial vicar of St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem while serving as temporary administrator of Holy Infant Church in Reidsville in the summer of 1985. In November 1985, he was appointed as a diocesan tribunal judge and parochial vicar of St. John Neumann Church in Charlotte.

In August 1987, he began studies for his doctorate in canon law at The Catholic University of America in Washington. In August 1988, he returned to the Diocese of Charlotte as parochial vicar of Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury before returning to Washington to continue studies in the fall of 1989.

In July 1991, he returned to St. Leo the Great Church as parochial vicar and was appointed as judicial vicar of the diocesan tribunal. He received his doctorate in canon law in May 1993.

That same year, he returned to Holy Infant Church as pastor. In March 1996, he was appointed pastor of Queen of the Apostles Church in Belmont until June 1997. He worked full-time for the tribunal until November 1998, when he became administrator of Holy Spirit Church in Denver, N.C.

PHOTO COURTESY OF BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

Then-Father Peter Jugis with the first Communion group at Holy Spirit Church in Denver May 8, 1999.

From June 1999 to June 2001, the future bishop returned to working full-time with the tribunal until he was appointed pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Monroe. As pastor, he would travel to Charlotte one day a week to work in the tribunal as judicial vicar.

In August 2003, Pope John Paul II named him as the fourth bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte. Archbishop Gabriel Montalvo, apostolic nuncio to the United States, announced the appointment in Washington Aug. 1.

Msgr. Mauricio W. West, administrator of the Diocese of Charlotte, made the announcement to the media and diocesan administrative staff at the Pastoral Center the same day.

"I have accepted our Holy Father's appointment to me as bishop of Charlotte, and I am very humbled by the confidence he has placed in me," said Bishop Jugis, after Msgr. West's remarks.

Bishop Jugis, 46, succeeds Bishop William G. Curlin, who retired in September 2002. Church canon law requires bishops to turn in their resignations when they reach 75. Bishop Curlin, bishop of Charlotte since 1994, turned 75 on Aug. 30, 2002.

"I pray I will be a worthy successor to Bishop Curlin, and serve with just as much zeal for souls as he, and Archbishop John F. Donoghue, our second bishop, and Bishop Michael J. Belgey, our founding bishop, did in their years as shepherd," said Bishop Jugis.

MASTER CRAFTSMANSHIP

Morrison Smith jewelers craft bishop's ring

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — For Bishop Peter J. Jugis' ring, the bishop and Father Francis O'Rourke consulted with Charles W. Smith, Jr. of Morrison Smith Jewelers.

"The ring is a symbol of the bishop's faithfulness to the church of Christ, and especially to the local manifestation of the church — the Diocese of Charlotte," Bishop Jugis said.

The design of the ring, proposed by Smith, was crafted by several Morrison Smith master craftsmen. The wax model was made and cast by Jorge Chabia and final polishing was done by Peau Lorth. John Flitton, who has designed for the Queen of England, did the hand engraving of the bishop's ring.

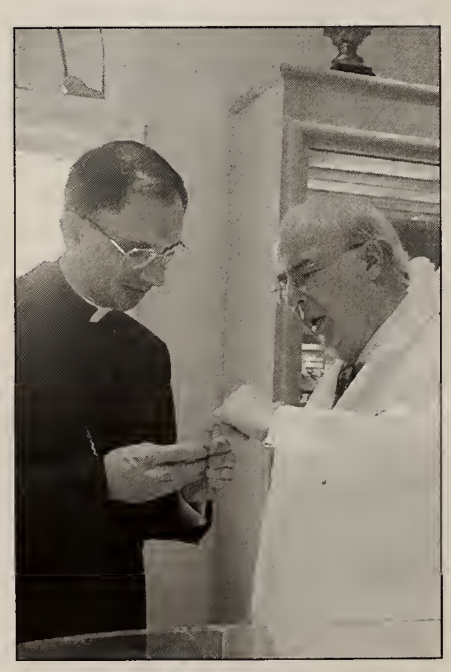
The ring is engraved with Bishop Jugis' coat of arms, his name and the date of his episcopal ordination inside the band and a pair of interlocked rings on the side of the ring. The two rings symbolize his parent's 50-year marriage, which they will celebrate on Thanksgiving Day.

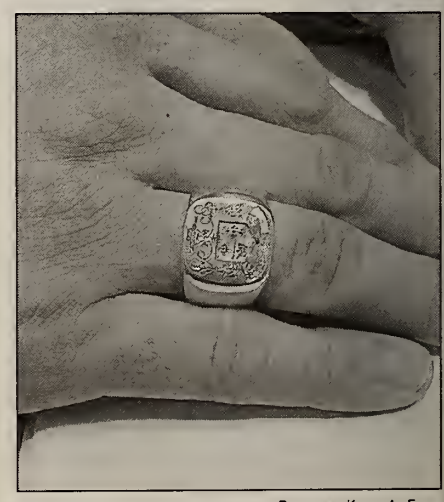
"I am very grateful to Charles Smith for the work he did engraving," said Bishop Jugis. "I'm amazed at how fine the detail is."

Smith has worked on several priests' chalices by adding the parent's wedding rings and diamonds or colored stones. He made the amethyst ring of Charlotte's first bishop, Bishop Michael J. Begley, and engraved a gold cross for the Bishop Walter Hurley of Detroit.

A native North Carolinian, Smith was raised in Asheville, where he attended St. Lawrence Church and Catholic schools. He studied at St. Jerome's College Seminary in Kitchner, Ont., and later left the seminary with Bishop Vincent Waters' permission and blessing.

Smith then attended Asheville Biltmore College (now the University of North Carolina at Asheville) and Memphis State University. In July 1962, he and Judy Lance were married at St. Joan of Arc Church in Asheville.





PHOTOS BY KAREN A. EVANS

Charles Smith, owner of Morrison Smith Jewelers, shows Bishop Peter J. Jugis the ring he designed for the bishop's episcopal ordination.

In 1954, Smith began working as a jeweler in Asheville, continuing to work in the industry while in school in Memphis. Over time, Smith became a master jewelry craftsman, diamond setter, designer, salesman, gemologist, appraiser, machine engraver, general manager and storeowner.

In 1965, with the goal of owning his own store, Smith and his wife moved to Charlotte, where they became parishioners of St. Ann Church. In 1983, that goal was achieved when he purchased Morrison Jewelers.

"When I left the seminary studies, Bishop Waters told me that, he needed many good layman in North Carolina which I am trying to be," Smith said.

We've lost our Beloved Pastor
but gained a devoted Shepherd.

Bishop Jugis, we pray that the light of God's Grace and Blessings will continue to guide you along your holy path.

The parishioners of
Our Lady of Lourdes
Monroe

---

Perdimos nuestro querido Párroco pero ganamos un devoto Pastor.

Obispo Jugis, nosotros oramos para que la luz, la gracia, y las bendiciones
de Dios continúen guiándolo por su santo camino.

Los feligreses de Nuestra Señora de Lourdes

Our Lady of Lourdes

Monroe

Congratulations Bishop Peter Jugis!
We thank God for your devoted service to our diocese and pray that, together, the faithful will continue to grow.

May God Bless you in all your endeavors.

Basilica of Saint Lawrence
Deacon and Martyr

Fr. Wilbur N. Thomas — Fr. Joseph Dinh and the parishioners of the Basilica of St. Lawrence

Asheville, NC

Bishop Paul S. Loverde
and the Faithful of the Diocese of Arlington

Offer prayerful support and congratulations to

Bishop Peter J. Jugis

On the occasion of his Installation as the Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte, North Carolina

Jesus said:

"Whoever serves me must follow me, and where I am, there also will my servant be."

(John 12:26)

Blessings as you serve the Diocese of Charlotte

Your friends at Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe — Charlotte

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

The Faithful in the Archdiocese of Atlanta

offer their prayers & sincere congratulations to Bishop Peter Jugis as he begins his new journey to serve the Body of Christ in Charlotte, NC.

May God strengthen you and always keep you safe in His love.

+ John F. Donoghue

Most Reverend
John F. Donoghue
Archbishop of Atlanta

Bishop Peter Jugis
CNS photo by Kevin E. Murray, Catholic News and Herald

The staff & residents of Catherine's House, Inc.,

a transitional residence for homeless women & children sponsored by the Sisters of Mercy

Photo courtesy of Catherine's House

extend our prayerful good wishes to

Peter J. Jugis

on his installation as Fourth Bishop of Charlotte

Visit us at http://www.orgsites.com/nc/catherineshouse/index.html

The staff of the

CATHOLIC CONFERENCE CENTER

welcomes our new Shepherd with great joy and anticipation!

May God bless you and guide you in your new appointment.

The Catholic Conference Center

Hickory, North Carolina
888-536-7441

Bishop Peter J. Jugis

Congratulations on your ordination and installation as Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte.

We assure you of our prayers, our love and our support.

Your friends and neighbors,
Bishop Robert J. Baker,
the clergy, religious and faithful of the Diocese of Charleston

Congratulations & Our Best Wishes

Bishop Peter Jugis

"God give you Peace!"

The Franciscan Friars, Sisters & Secular Franciscan Order

from Winston-Salem

Congratulations Bishop Jugis and Best Wishes as you embark on this opportunity to lead the Diocese of Charlotte for many years to come.

citistreet℠

Ken Altman (toll free) 866-886-3673
— proudly serving the retirement needs
of diocesan employees for seven years —

Congratulations

BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS —

May God Bless You Always

Diocesan Association of Permanent Deacons

Congratulations

to

Bishop Peter J. Jugis

on his installation as Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte.

May the Lord's choicest blessings be upon you and your people as you begin your new ministry.

from Bishop F. Joseph Gossman and the Clergy, Religious and Laity of the Diocese of Raleigh

Prayerful Best Wishes

to

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

from Fr. Thomas F. McKenna, C.M. & Vincentian Priests and Brothers of the Congregation of the Mission "Vincentians"
Philadelphia, Charlotte and Greensboro

La Comunidad Hispana de la Diócesis de Charlotte quiere felicitar a nuestro nuevo Obispo Peter Jugis. Tenemos la esperanza de que su conocimiento de nuestra realidad y su ministerio episcopal aumente la unidad de nuestra Iglesia local. Como Ministerio Hispano estamos deseosos de poder contribuir con nuestras oraciones, sacrificio y trabajo a la realización del Reino de Dios.

Felicidades, Señor Obispo Peter Jugis!

The Franciscan Center

Congratulations
and God's special blessings
to Bishop Peter J. Jugis

From the Franciscan Friars and Staff
The Franciscan Center, Greensboro

Good News Ministries

organizers of the Southeast FIRE Rally

congratulate
Bishop Peter Jugis,
the fourth
Bishop of Charlotte.

FIRE
A CATHOLIC ALLIANCE OF FAITH, INTERCESSION, REPENTANCE, AND EVANGELISM

May you experience a profound outpouring of the Holy Spirit throughout your ministry to the Body of Christ.

With joyful prayers and thanksgiving
on the ordination and installation of our fourth Bishop of Charlotte,
PETER JOSEPH JUGIS, J.C.D.

Family Life Office
Catholic Social Services
1123 South Church Street
Charlotte, North Carolina 28203-4003
704-370-3228

Programs: Elder Ministry, Family Life, Marriage Preparation, Natural Family Planning, and Respect Life

Congratulations
Bishop Peter J. Jugis
Diocese of Charlotte

Bishop Joseph E. Kurtz and the Diocese of Knoxville offer best wishes and prayers to our neighbor and friend, the new bishop of Charlotte.

Best wishes and blessings!

Good Shepherd Church
King, NC

"Ad Multos Annos"

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

With prayers,

Holy Angels Catholic Church
Mt. Airy

Congratulations
to Bishop Peter Jugis
on the occasion of his ordination and installation
as Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte, North Carolina from the Staff and Parishioners of St. Matthew Catholic Church
Msgr. John J. McSweeney, Pastor

"A bishop takes the place of Christ Himself as teacher, shepherd, and priest and acts as His representative."
—Lumen Gentium 21

CONGRATULATIONS BISHOP JUGIS

Ad multos annos.

Fr. Michael Kottar and the Parishioners of Holy Redeemer, Andrews and Prince of Peace, Robbinsville

Congratulations
Bishop Peter Jugis!

We look forward to seeing you here at our parish.

Immaculate Conception
Roman Catholic Church
Forest City

St. Mary's Catholic Church

818 McGowan Road
Shelby, North Carolina 28150

Congratulations & Best Wishes to

Bishop Peter Jugis

Christ the King Mission

714 Stone Street
Kings Mountain, North Carolina 28086

Congratulations to Bishop Peter Jugis

The parish families of Sacred Heart Church and Sacred Heart School pledge our prayerful support to you as you begin your service as our Shepherd.

Salisbury

THE MONKS OF BELMONT ABBEY

AND THE BELMONT ABBEY COLLEGE COMMUNITY

OFFER PRAYERS AND BEST WISHES TO

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

ON THE OCCASION OF HIS EPISCOPAL ORDINATION

AND INSTALLATION AS THE ## FOURTH BISHOP OF CHARLOTTE.

SIGILLUM COLLEGII ABBATIAE BELMONTANAE
U-I-O-G-D
1876

CRESCAT

Above left: Then-Rev. Mr. Peter Jugis and other transitional deacons of the diocese in Maggie Valley July 20, 1982. Clockwise from left: Rev. Mr. John Hanic, Rev. Mr. John Schneider, Rev. Mr. Ron Marecki, Rev. Mr. Bob Choquet, Rev. Mr. Jugis, Rev. Mr. Ray Berg. Above top right: Bishop Peter J. Jugis at Mass at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Monroe in August 2003. Above right: Bishop Peter J. Jugis offers Communion at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24, 2003. Below left: Bishop Jugis at a parish picnic in Monroe in September 2003. Below right: Bishop Peter J. Jugis prays at his ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24. — Staff and courtesy photos

Office of the Cardinal
222 N. 17th Street
Philadelphia, PA 19103-1299

August 4, 2003

Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
Our Lady of Lourdes Parish
725 Deese Street
Monroe, NC 28112

Dear Bishop-Elect Jugis:

Please accept my sincere congratulations on the occasion of your appointment as Bishop of Charlotte.

The news of this appointment has been a source of great joy for me. I know that you are extremely well qualified to fulfill the responsibilities of your new and important assignment. Certainly the priests, the religious and the faithful of the Diocese of Charlotte will be blessed by your faithful and wise service in their midst.

While you are undoubtedly conscious of the weight of your new office, you can also be encouraged by the knowledge that God will ever be with you. Please be assured of my prayerful support and that of your brother Bishops in the United States.

As you are ordained to the Episcopacy, may you rejoice in the new life of Jesus Christ, Our Savior and Lord.

With every best wish, I remain

Fraternally yours in Christ,

Anthony Cardinal Bevilacqua

Anthony Cardinal Bevilacqua

THE DIOCESE OF CHARLESTON

August 18, 2003

Bishop-elect Peter J. Jugis
Diocese of Charlotte
Post Office Box 36776
Charlotte, North Carolina 28236

Dear Peter:

My warmest congratulations to you as you embark upon your new responsibilities as Bishop of Charlotte.

The prayers and support of your brother bishops are with you as you begin this important service to the Church. The Diocese of Charleston joins the universal Church in extending to you our love, good wishes, and prayers.

I offer you
my sincere support
in the days ahead.
Call on me anytime!

Fraternally yours in Christ,

+Bob

Most Reverend Robert J. Baker
Bishop of Charleston

RJB/sw

Office of the Bishop

119 Broad Street • Charleston, South Carolina 29401
P.O. Box 818 • Charleston, South Carolina 29402 • Phone (843) 853-2130 ext 5 • FAX (843) 724-6387

BELMONT ABBEY
Belmont, North Carolina 28012-1802

Office of the Abbot

(704) 825-6675
FAX (704) 825-6680

August 1, 2003

The Most Reverend Peter Jugis
Bishop-elect of Charlotte
1123 South Church Street
Charlotte, North Carolina 28203

Dear Father,

Please accept my congratulations and best wishes, offered on behalf of our entire monastic community, on your election as Bishop of Charlotte. Each day through these past eleven months we have prayed at the Abbey during Mass "that God provide a good bishop for our Church of Charlotte." O ur g ood G od h as i ndeed a nswered o ur p rayers m ost generously. Be assured that I and our monastic and college communities at Belmont Abbey look forward to assisting you in any way we can in your service to our diocese.

With best wishes and an assurance of a daily remembrance in my prayers, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

Placid, O.S.B.

Placid D. Solari, O.S.B.
Abbot

227 South Third Street
Belleville, Illinois 62220

Tuesday 30 September, 2003

The Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
Bishop-Elect of Charlotte
Diocese of Charlotte
1123 South Church Street
Charlotte, North Carolina 282203

Your Excellency,

I renew my best wishes and congratulations at your nomination as the Fourth Bishop of Charlotte. I am certain that the people of your home diocese are overjoyed with this appointment. I am confident that they will cooperate enthusiastically with all your efforts to serve them.

Unfortunately, I cannot attend your Episcopal Ordination and Installation on Friday 24 October, 2004 because I will be returning home from Rome on that date. I want to assure you, however, of my prayers on that happy day for you, your family, friends, and colleagues. May the Lord be with you as you begin this new ministry and bring you every blessing and happiness.

I look forward to working with you in our Episcopal Conference.

With cordial good wishes, Peter, may I remain,

Fraternally yours in Christ,

✝Wilton D. Gregory,
Bishop of Belleville

WDG:wdg

Bishop Jugis benefits from tribunal work

Experiences helped guide marriage preparations

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — In November 1985, while serving as parochial vicar of St. John Neumann Church in Charlotte, Bishop Jugis was appointed as a judge to the diocesan tribunal by then-Bishop John F. Donoghue.

The tribunal examines cases of marriage nullity when married couples petition for a marriage annulment, necessary in order to remarry in the Catholic Church.

"Theoretically, the tribunal can also handle other matters, but it mostly deals with marriage matters," said Bishop Jugis.

Over the years, Bishop Jugis has often served dual roles as pastor or parish administrator while working on the tribunal. In July 1991, while serving as parochial vicar of St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem, he was appointed as judicial vicar of the tribunal.

"Whether I was looking for grounds of nullity or preparing a couple for marriage, I would just put on a different hat depending on whether I was in the tribunal office or at a parish," said Bishop Jugis.

Despite the extra work and the travel to and from the diocesan pastoral center in Charlotte, where the tribunal offices are located, Bishop Jugis said he benefited from the experience.

"Working on the tribunal was a tremendous help to my marriage preparation with couples," he said.

While studying the jurisprudence of the church on marriage annulments and grounds for nullity, he said, he would look for "defects or deficiencies that were present at the very beginning of the marriage."

"Thinking in those terms, when I would meet with a couple in a parish setting to prepare them for marriage, I was made a little more aware if there were serious problems that might not have struck me in the same way if I had not been involved in the tribunal," said Bishop Jugis.

"I could see the beginning stages of a problem unresolved, and in the tribunal I could see what havoc that it reeks 10 to 15 to 20 years later," he said. "I could bring that information to bear and talk with the couple and say, 'This matter that is a problem for you in your relationship now is something you really have to give a lot of attention to, because my experience from others is that it's not going to go away and could eventually destroy your relationship if you're not serious on working on it.'"

His tribunal work "enriched my understanding of studying relationships," said Bishop Jugis.

"The most important thing is that God has to be first in the marriage, because in any relationship — including the relationship of marriage — there's going to be differences of opinion, there's going to be problems that arise," he said. "There has to be some spiritual depth to the relationship in order for that relationship to not only survive, but to prosper and to move forward."

While on the tribunal, Bishop Jugis said he has seen some relationships where God is not present and there's no spirituality or religion involved.

"There was no unity and many times couples were going for other goals in life, material possessions or things that were not going to help the couple when difficult times arose and would not see them through those difficulties," he said.

"There comes a problem upon a problem, and the couple may get through it, work through it, but it remains forever as a deep wound in a relationship that never gets resolved or forgiven," said the bishop. "But when God is there, and if each of the parties is serious about their own relationship with God, he's the one who strengthens and heals and gives the couples the grace to really forgive and build an even stronger marriage and relationship, rather than one that's just kind of drifting along."

"It's God's grace that makes the marriage something beautiful and a sacrament of Christ's love," he said.

Bishop Jugis celebrated the annual diocesan 25th and 50th wedding anniversary Mass at St. Gabriel Church in Charlotte Oct. 26; his parents, Joe and Peggy Jugis, were among the participants celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary.

In his homily, the bishop stressed Christ's grace, which gives couples "all that you need to live your marriage." He said it is Christ's love that teaches spouses how to be patient, compassionate and forgiving — crucial qualities for a sacramental marriage.

To honor his parents' union, Bishop Jugis had intertwined circles symbolizing the marriage bond engraved into his bishop's ring.

FILE PHOTO

Father Peter J. Jugis, Msgr. John J. McSweeney and retired Bishop Michael J. Begley examine the future bishop's 400-page dissertation, "Marriage in the New Code of Canon Law" in 1992.

What Others Say

MARY LOU HILDRETH, DIRECTOR OF THE TRIBUNAL & DEFENDER OF THE BOND:

"I've been privileged to work with the bishop since he returned from Rome and was assigned as a judge in the tribunal. As a young man and new priest he was always obedient and served admirably where the need was, but he made no secret of the fact he was always happiest when he was in the parish, ministering to the people. How fitting and right that he's now shepherd to all of his people. And how blessed we are."

MSGR. JOSEPH KERIN, RETIRED PRIEST OF THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE:

"I'm very happy that Bishop Jugis is our new bishop. He really has North Carolina in his heart - he was raised here, became a priest here and is now our bishop. I think he'll have a lot of respect and a great deal of help from the priests and the people. I do look forward to him being successful, even though as a bishop he'll have to face many tough and difficult decisions."

Bishop Jugis awarded doctorate in canon law

First priest of diocese to receive degree

WINSTON-SALEM — Following the completion of doctoral studies in 1993, Bishop Peter J. Jugis, then-parochial vicar of St. Leo the Great Church, became the first priest of the Diocese of Charlotte to be awarded a doctorate in canon law.

Bishop Jugis defended his thesis at the Catholic University of America in Washington in November 1992.

Even though the doctorate was a personal achievement, Bishop Jugis looked at the degree as a diocesan degree.

"It was the bishop who first asked me to study — Bishop (Michael J.) Begley then Bishop (now Archbishop John F.) Donoghue," said Bishop Jugis. "They always made the opportunities available."

Studies for the doctorate began in August 1987, two years after being appointed as parochial vicar of St. John Neumann Church in Charlotte and a judge on the diocesan tribunal, which studies cases of marriage nullity when married couples petition for a marriage annulment in order to remarry in the Catholic Church.

In August 1988, he returned to the Diocese of Charlotte as parochial vicar of Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury before returning to Washington to continue studies in the fall of 1989.

In July 1991, he returned to St. Leo the Great Church as parochial vicar and was appointed as judicial vicar of the diocesan tribunal. He received his doctorate in canon law in May 1993.

With the conclusion of his studies, Bishop Jugis resumed his part-time work on the tribunal as judicial vicar while serving as pastor of Holy Infant Church in Reidsville that same year.

"I am very pleased that he has the degree," said Archbishop Donoghue. "It will be helpful for the diocese, especially in the tribunal, and also with canonical research."

"I consider the degree for service to the diocese," said Bishop Jugis in 1992. "Whatever Bishop Donoghue wants me to do to serve the diocese, I'm there for that."

Eleven years later, Archbishop Donoghue ordained Bishop Jugis as the fourth bishop of Charlotte at St. Matthew Church in Charlotte Oct. 24.

The Capuchin Friars of Charlotte

with the Parishioners

of St. Thomas Aquinas and

Our Lady of Consolation

wish every blessing

on our new

Bishop PETER J. JUGIS.

Ad Multos Annos

The Most Rev. Gerald M. Barbarito
With the entire diocesan family of

Palm Beach

Offers prayerful best wishes to the Most Rev. Peter J. Jugis as the New Shepherd of
The Diocese of Charlotte

Congratulations,

Bishop Jugis,

and Best Wishes!

High Point

Blessings be upon you,
BISHOP PETER JUGIS!

Jesuit House of Prayer
Hot Springs, North Carolina

The Charlotte Knights and Dames of Malta

congratulate you on your appointment.

Congratulations
on your appointment

The Pennybyrn at Maryfield family and the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God congratulate Bishop Peter Jugis on his ordination and installation as the next Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte.
God's blessings
be with you.

PENNYBYRN
at MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260 • 336.886.4103

Bishop Jugis,

May your episcopal ministry be characterized by the compassion, wisdom, and openness to all God's people which have been the hallmarks of the ministry of Bishop Gossman with whom we have served in the Diocese of Raleigh.

Students from the Diocese of Charlotte who attend
UNC-Chapel Hill
will be well cared for!

Newman
Catholic
Student Center
Parish

Father Phillip Leach
www.Newman-ChapelHill.org

Best Wishes
from Charlotte's ONLY
Catholic Assisted Living Community

The Residents and Staff of
The Little Flower Assisted Living Community
Charlotte

IHS

The Maryland Province
of the Society of Jesus extends prayerful congratulations to
Bishop Peter J. Jugis
on his ordination and installation as Bishop
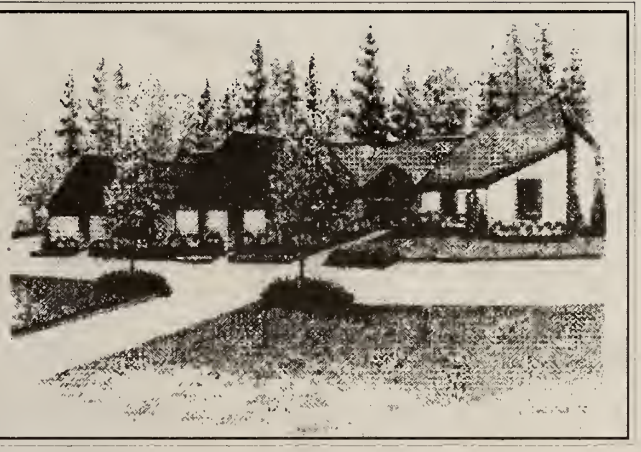
of the Diocese of Charlotte, North Carolina



ST. BARNABAS PARISH IN ARDEN

SENDS OUR PLEDGE OF PRAYER AND SUPPORT TO OUR NEW BISHOP --

HIS EXCELLENCY, THE MOST REVEREND PETER J. JUGIS, J.C.D.

St. Barnabas Parish
Arden, NC

THE ORATORY

Bishop Jugis

Prayers and Best Wishes

The Oratorians
Rock Hill, SC

---

Bishop Jugis,

THE HISPANIC COMMUNITY OF OUR LADY OF GUADALUPE, WITH MUCH JOY, OFFERS ITS PRAYERS AND BEST WISHES TO BISHOP PETER JUGIS

Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church
Charlotte

---

Congratulations!

Dear Bishop Jugis,

Our Faith Community pledges our prayerful support and loyal commitment to you as our Shepherd.

As the successor of the Apostles, may you teach, govern and sanctify us as Jesus' Chosen Servant.

May the Lord bless you with a loving and fulfilling ministry.

May you have many more years of God's blessings.

Our Lady of the Rosary, Lexington, NC

---

The pastor and parishioners of
Our Lady of the Highways
wish our new Bishop
a long, fruitful and happy service
in his ministry as chief shepherd in
the Diocese of Charlotte.

Our Lady of the Highways Church
Thomasville

---

The Priests of the Congregation of the Mission of St. Vincent de Paul, at Our Lady of Guadalupe in Charlotte, promise their continued prayers and support for Peter Jugis
on his Installation as Bishop of Charlotte.

VINCENTIAN COMMUNITY
Congregation of the Mission

J.S. Paluch Company

"Serving the Catholic Church for over 90 years"

Prayerful Congratulations
and
Best wishes
Bishop Peter Jugis
on your appointment as
Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte

Greg Duncan, Parish Consultant
Parishioner of St. Mark Church, Huntersville NC

Queen of the Apostles Church Congratulates Bishop Jugis

From a small parish with a small budget, but a big heart.--
We salute our former pastor and our Shepherd/Bishop.

Queen of the Apostles Church
Belmont

The Most Reverend Thomas G. Doran
and the
Clergy, Religious and Laity
of the Diocese of Rockford offer prayers and best wishes
on the occasion of the Episcopal Installation of
The Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
as the Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte

Bishop Peter J. Jugis & fellow canon lawyer, Mercy Sister Jeanne-Margaret McNally.

Congratulations on your Installation as the Fourth Ordinary of the Diocese of Charlotte. Thank you for your willingness to lead God's people and for living your motto:

CARITAS CHRISTI URGET NOS
The love of Christ urges us onward.

You will be remembered daily in our thoughts and prayers as you shepherd your flock.

Sisters of Mercy of the Americas
Regional Community of North Carolina

Bishop J. Kevin Boland and the people of the Diocese of Savannah extend prayerful best wishes to

Bishop Peter Jugis

on his installation as Bishop of Charlotte.

CONGRATULATIONS!

We are privileged to serve in the Diocese of Charlotte.

The Sisters of St. Francis of Tiffin, Ohio serving the Diocese of Charlotte since 1964.

Las Hermanas de San Francisco de Tiffin, Ohio

"Thus, as St. Irenaeus testifies, through those who were appointed bishops by the apostles, and through their successors down in our own time, the apostolic tradition is manifested and preserved." —Lumen Gentium 20

CONGRATULATIONS!
BISHOP PETER JOSEPH JUGIS
MAY OUR LORD BLESS YOU ABUNDANTLY.

THE MOTHERS AND BABIES,
STAFF, AND BOARD

of

ROOM AT THE INN
3737 WEONA AVENUE
CHARLOTTE, NC 28209

"You shall receive power when the Holy Spirit comes upon you, and you shall be witnesses for me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and in Samaria, and even to the very ends of the earth." —Acts 1:8

Congratulations and God's blessings

St. Aloysius Church
Hickory

Most Reverend Michael F. Burbidge, Rector,
And
The Administration, Faculty, Deacons, and Seminarians

Of

Saint Charles Borromeo Seminary
in the Archdiocese of Philadelphia

Extend Prayerful Best Wishes

To

Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
on the Occasion of His appointment
as
the Fourth Bishop
of the Diocese of Charlotte

The Parish of St. Eugene offers prayerful support and gives thanks to God
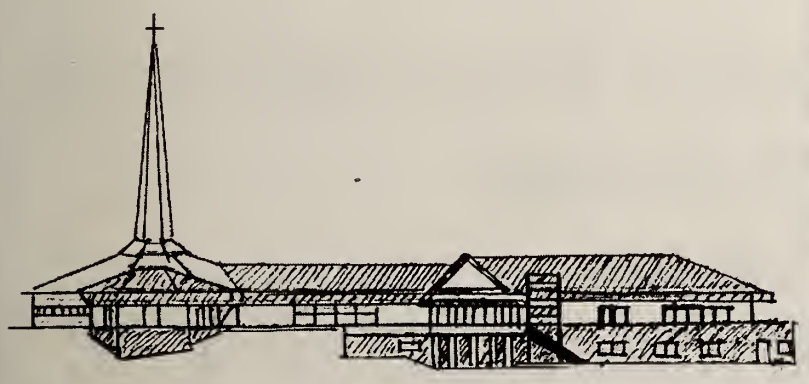
for our new Shepherd,
Bishop Peter Jugis.



Asheville

Our congratulations and prayers
to Bishop Peter Jugis.

From the Catholic community of southwestern North Carolina, north Georgia,
and southeastern Tennessee.

St. William Church
Murphy

Immaculate Heart of Mary
Hayesville

Congratulations and prayers for your service as our Shepherd.

St. Benedict the Moor
Winston-Salem, NC

Congratulations

BISHOP JUGIS

Be assured of our prayers that the Holy Spirit
grant you the graces to teach, rule and sanctify God's people.

The Parishioners of St. James in Concord, St. Joseph in Kannapolis, and the Redemptorists who serve them

St. James,
Concord

We keep you
in our prayers.

St. Joseph,
Kannapolis

Charlotte Cursillo

The Cursillo Movement sends our heartfelt congratulations on your appointment as Bishop of Charlotte.

You are a blessing to both Cursillo and the diocese.

Your zeal for the Lord inspires us all.

Know that our prayers and support are forever with you.

Immaculate Conception

Roman Catholic Church

208 7th Avenue West,
Hendersonville, NC 28791-3602
Church Office: (828)693-6901
Church Fax: (828) 697-1656
Website: www.immaculateconceptionchurch.com

Mission Statement:

Inspired by the life, death, and resurrection of our Savior Jesus Christ and empowered by our sacramental life, we share with all people His compassion, forgiveness and healing, while celebrating the diversity of our community.

Pax et Bonum

The friars, staff and parishioners of

Immaculate Conception Church

welcome our new Bishop

with prayerful support and good wishes.

Ad multos annos!

New shepherd calls on all to help 'make known the love of Christ'

ORDINATION, from page 1

from diocesan parishes, missions, organizations, institutions and schools. Also included were clerical representatives of the Lutheran, Episcopal, United Methodist and Baptist denominations in North Carolina.

"God has given us great blessings on this day of joy, and it is a sign of His people's love that we are gathered in such great numbers to witness the ordination of the Diocese of Charlotte's fourth bishop, and to welcome him into the midst of his flock," said Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta, the principal ordaining bishop and the second bishop of Charlotte.

Joining Archbishop Donoghue was Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus of Charlotte; Bishop F. Joseph Gossman of Raleigh; Bishop Robert J. Baker of Charleston; Bishop David B. Thompson, bishop emeritus of Charleston; Bishop Raymond J. Boland of Savannah; Bishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Knoxville; and Archbishop Gabriel Montalvo, apostolic nuncio to the United States.

Archbishop Donoghue called on the people of the diocese to love and support Bishop Jugis, to seek his guidance and to accept his teaching in his role as their shepherd.

"Father Peter Joseph Jugis has already shown the people of this diocese his dedication and love, and it is because the Lord recognizes his abilities, his gifts and his potential in the souls of the faithful that the church now calls him to be your bishop," he said.

Archbishop Donoghue called Bishop Jugis "a man for the times and for the place."

"Your heart, your soul, your roots are here in the hills and plains of North Carolina," said the archbishop. "You carry in the record of development of your vocation the blessing and encouragement of two of the finest servants of the Lord — Bishop (Michael J.) Begley and Msgr. (John) McSweeney."

Msgr. McSweeney, then-vocations director for the diocese, proposed the idea of being a priest to Bishop Jugis in the late 1970s. Bishop Begley interviewed Bishop Jugis as a potential seminarian in 1979.

Continuing, Archbishop Donoghue said to Bishop Jugis, "You carry into the future the same blessing and encouragement of Bishop Curlin and myself, who have known your goodness and your devotion to the faithful of North Carolina."

"And ... you were ordained by the hand of our most beloved and remarkable pope, John Paul II," said Archbishop Donoghue. "But do not forget that it is Christ the Lord who has chosen you, and that when he chooses a bishop, he also chooses a martyr. And martyrs must be strong, for themselves and for the church they live and die to foster."

Flanking a kneeling Bishop Jugis, Msgr. McSweeney, now pastor of St. Matthew Church, and Msgr. Anthony Kovacic, a retired priest of the diocese, requested Archbishop Donoghue confer ordination on Bishop Jugis.

Archbishop Montalvo then read the apostolic letter of Pope John Paul II. The document authenticates the Holy Father's appointment of Bishop Jugis as spiritual leader of the diocese.

Archbishop Donoghue questioned Bishop Jugis in the presence of the gathered people on his resolve to uphold the faith and to discharge his duties as bishop. Bishop Jugis then lay prostrate as the Litany of the Saints was sung.

Next was the laying on of hands by the bishops on Bishop Jugis' head. The ancient gesture, expressing the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, has been used since apostolic times for transmitting the authority and offices in the Catholic Church.

Rev. Mr. Ben Wenning, diocesan coordinator of the permanent diaconate, and Rev. Mr. Louis Pais of St. Gabriel Church in Charlotte, then held the Book of the Gospels over Bishop Jugis' head, a gesture expressing the burden the bishop will assume of proclaiming the Gospel as a member of the college of bishops, as the ordaining bishops prayed the prayer of ordination.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Flanked by Msgr. Anthony Kovacic and Msgr. John McSweeney, Bishop Peter J. Jugis lies prostrate during the Litany of the Saints at his ordination Mass.

Bishop Jugis' head was then anointed with sacred chrism, signifying the full share in the priesthood of Jesus he received through the laying on of hands and the prayer of ordination.

The Book of the Gospels was presented to Bishop Jugis as a symbol of a bishop's ministry of teaching and preaching. He also received his ring, miter and crosier, which are signs of the office of bishop. Bishop Jugis then took his seat in the cathedra, the bishop's chair, and received a round of applause from the bishops and congregation.

In remarks at the end of Mass, Bishop Jugis resolved "to pray without ceasing to Almighty God for the holy people."

"We all must know that the Lord's work cannot be done without prayer," he said.

Bishop Jugis thanked Archbishop Montalvo for his presence at the Mass.

"Your excellency, you are the personal representative of our Holy Father, and through you we send him our affection and esteem on the occasion of his 25th anniversary as the vicar of Christ," said Bishop Jugis. "We promise our continued prayers for his ministry."

Bishop Jugis expressed his gratitude for the priests and deacons of the diocese. "We are to guide the holy people of God in the way of salvation, to shepherd souls into eternal life," he said. "What a glorious calling, the work of salvation."

Bishop Jugis also addressed the importance of the laity in salvation.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

As Archbishop John F. Donoghue prays the prayer of ordination, Rev. Mr. Ben Wenning and Rev. Mr. Louis Pais hold the Book of the Gospels over Bishop Peter J. Jugis' head during his ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24. The gesture expresses the burden the bishop will assume of proclaiming the Gospel as a member of the college of bishops, as the ordaining bishops prayed the prayer of ordination.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

The newly-ordained Bishop Peter J. Jugis prays during his ordination Mass.

"The Second Vatican Council taught that sacred responsibility is given to the laity to grow in personal holiness day by day and to see to it that you make known the Gospel message of salvation to all people," he said, "and that you transform our modern culture with the spirit of the Gospel."

"All of this springs from prayer and from our celebration of the sacraments, especially from our communion with the Lord in the holy Eucharist," said Bishop Jugis. "The Holy Spirit will guide us in helping make known the love of Christ."

Bishop Peter J. Jugis received in his cathedral

Bishop stresses importance of prayer, faith in God

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — It was standing room only at Bishop Peter J. Jugis' first Mass in his cathedral church.

Bishop Jugis, ordained one day earlier as bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte, celebrated his rite of reception in St. Patrick Cathedral Oct. 25.

"On this happy and joyful day, we are happy, excited and very proud to welcome you to your cathedral church of St. Patrick," said Father Paul Gary, rector of St. Patrick, to Bishop Jugis. "We promise you our love, our prayers, our obedience, and we pray that the Lord may give you many wonderful, fruitful years as the fourth bishop of Charlotte."

"I think he's going to be a wonderful bishop," said Joyce Toomey, one of the original parishioners of St. Patrick Cathedral, consecrated in September 1939. "I'm thrilled that he's going to be here."

Concelebrating the Mass with Father Gary was Benedictine Abbot Placid Solari, abbot of Belmont Abbey; Father Lawrence LoMonaco, parochial vicar of St. Patrick; Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus of Charlotte, Msgr. Mauricio W. West, diocesan administrator since Bishop Curlin's retirement in September 2002; and other priests of the diocese.

Assisting were Rev. Mr. Carlos Medina and Rev. Mr. Nicholas Fadero, permanent deacons of the cathedral.

Before processing into the cathedral, Bishop Jugis sprinkled the congregation with holy water from the baptismal font. He then took his place on the cathedra, the bishop's seat, and received a round of applause from the congregation.

Bishop Jugis thanked the cathedral clergy, staff and parish for their gracious welcome to him. He then acknowledged the priests, deacons and seminarians in attendance, as well as parishioners from churches at which he had previously served, including Our Lady of Lourdes in Monroe, Queen of the Apostles in Belmont and St. Leo the Great in Winston-Salem.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis sprinkles the congregation with holy water at his rite of reception Mass at St. Patrick Cathedral Oct. 25.

Bishop Jugis also expressed his gratitude to Bishop Curlin, who acted "as spiritual director for the people of our diocese, helping us and guiding us in the ways of holiness ... and fixing our sights on Jesus."

Reiterating some of his remarks from his ordination Mass, Bishop Jugis stressed the importance of prayer and faith.

"All of this is the work of the Holy Spirit, and anything we do for Christ in the church has to spring from prayer," he said. "I trust, as we all do, in the guidance and help of the Holy Spirit in all that we do for our Lord."

Bishop Jugis said our souls are searching for God, whether we know it or not, and Jesus is "calling you every day in every moment of your day to take courage to get up and follow him."

"Without faith, our intellect cannot understand the mysteries of our faith," said Bishop Jugis. "Without the help of God's grace, it is beyond our comprehension. Faith sheds light on our intellect ... Faith puts us into union with God and orients our entire life in the direction of Heaven, and focuses all of our energies to achieve that goal — heaven, eternal life."

Bishop Jugis asked the congregation how much time they spend "nourishing" their faith with prayer, spiritual and Bible readings and at Mass "compared to the time spent reading novels, magazines, newspapers and watching television."

"The more novels, magazines and newspapers I read and television I watch, my thoughts and my speech begin to be indistinguishable from the media at large," he said. "But the closer I stay to Christ, in prayer, with Mass and spiritual readings, the more my faith grows and I stay oriented in the direction of eternal life."

Speaking of the day's Gospel reading, Bishop Jugis said, "The first few sentences spoken to the man by the roadside leaving Jericho are fresh and full of life for us today. 'Your faith has saved you. Take courage. Get up. Jesus is calling you.'"

What Others Say

MSGR. JOHN J. MCSWEENEY, PASTON, ST. MATTHEW CHURCH:

"He's always a man of faith. In his prayer, he's very serious and contemplative in nature. He's a man of intelligence, integrity and he has a tremendous sense of humility."

ARCHBISHOP JOHN F. DONOGHUE OF ATLANTA:

"I was delighted when I heard the Holy Father had chosen Bishop Jugis. I called him and told him I was pleased (with the appointment). The Diocese of Charlotte is very lucky to have him. He has many virtues, particularly his humility."

VALERIE GEBHARDT, ST. PATRICK CATHEDRAL PARISHIONER :

"It's a blessing by God that he chose Bishop Jugis to be the bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte. It's an honor for us. We prayed so hard for a holy bishop and the fact that he's from North Carolina is wonderful. He's a bishop of our own, and we're so thrilled."

GEORGE COBB, QUEEN OF THE APOSTLES CHURCH:

"What most impresses me about Bishop Jugis is his sensitivity to the community — his ability to listen to all sides and come to a decision that both meets the needs of the parish and seems to satisfy most people involved. We talk about a spiritual discernment in making our decisions. Bishop Jugis shows us, by teaching and example, how to do that.

MARY KING, PARISHIONER AT HOLY INFANT CHURCH IN REIDSVILLE:

"Bishop Jugis will lead this diocese in the right direction."

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis receives applause from the clergy participating in his rite of reception Mass at St. Patrick Cathedral.

SILVER, GOLD AND DIAMONDS

Couples shine at anniversary Mass

Spouses celebrate seven millennia of matrimony

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Newly ordained Bishop Peter J. Jugis gave 198 married couples a special gift Oct. 26 — the gift of his prayer.

He told the couples who gathered for the diocesan wedding anniversary celebration at St. Gabriel Church that he had prayed for each couple as he signed their congratulatory certificate in recognition of their 25th, 50th or 60th wedding anniversaries.

"My prayer is that you realize that the greatest gifts are the spiritual ones, for they come directly from God," said Bishop Jugis.

"Christ's grace and presence has made your marriage come alive," said the bishop in his homily. "That grace, so rich, gives you all that you need to live your marriage — the grace of Christ flowing from the redemption, the gift of his love."

The anniversary Mass honors those couples who represent the perseverance and commitment symbolized in the sacrament of matrimony, said Gerard Carter, diocesan director of family life for Catholic Social Services.

"In this time when the average marriage lasts seven years, these couples symbolize the resolve required to live out marriage for 25, 50 years or longer," Carter said.

Peter and Tina Desrosiers of St. Philip the Apostle Church in Statesville recommended listening, being patient and "taking it slow" as the ingredients to their 25-year happy marriage.

"The first 49 years are the hardest," teased Peggy Jugis, the mother of Bishop Jugis.

Joe and Peggy Jugis were married on Thanksgiving Day, 1953 at St. Patrick Cathedral in Charlotte. Bishop Jugis will celebrate Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Church this year on Thanksgiving Day, when he will bestow a special blessing on his parents in honor of their 50 years of matrimony.

Prior to the Aug. 1 announcement of his designation as the fourth bishop of Charlotte, Bishop Jugis thought he would not be able to attend the Anniversary Mass. As it turned out, he not only attended the Mass, but celebrated it, receiving the offertory gifts from his parents.

Above even love, Peggy Jugis cites trust and respect as the most important qualities in a marriage. "I completely trust Joe, except when I see him heading out the door with the pruning shears in his hands," she said.

She doesn't believe in love at first sight, because "You can't truly love someone you don't know."

Kate Boschini said when one of her sons announces his engagement, she will tell him if his bride doesn't have sense of humor "then join the priesthood." She and her husband George, parishioners of St. Pius X Church in Greensboro, are celebrating their 25th anniversary this year.

"Many of these couples have seen incredible happiness and sadness throughout their lives together, but they come here today to renew their commitment to one another — not always an easy task," Carter said. "We are exceptionally lucky to have such sterling examples of fidelity to one another and honor to the vows into which they entered."

George and Grace Savaria are among 13 couples from St. Margaret Church in Maggie Valley celebrating 50th wedding anniversaries in 2003.

"We have had a great life together," said George Savaria. "(My wife) took care of me in sickness and in health."

"This diocese is exploding with families of all ages," said Carter. "What a wonderful opportunity we have with a bishop who is able to honor his own parents in their life of commitment, and the commitment of so many other couples."

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

From left, Msgr. Mauricio W. West, Bishop Peter J. Jugis and Father Francis O'Rourke at the diocesan wedding anniversary Mass at St. Gabriel Church Oct. 26.

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Roses were given to the married couples participating in the diocesan wedding anniversary Mass.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis accepts the gifts from his parents, Joe and Peggy Jugis, during the diocesan wedding anniversary Mass.

What Others Say

PEGGY JUGIS, BISHOP JUGIS' MOTHER:

"Once (Bishop Jugis) became an adult, he was in the Lord's hands. That's the way it is with all parents — you have to let them go, but be there to catch them when they fall. (Bishop Jugis) was always very deep — he had an adult mind in a child's body. The people will see his quiet strength. Don't be fooled by the quietness."

LEE ACCETTULLO, LEADERSHIP OF THE CURSILLO FOR THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE:

"It's very special to have one of our own become bishop, and to have watched him grow in his ministry."

Above left: Archbishop Gabriel Montalvo, apostolic nuncio, reads Pope John Paul II's apostolic letter at Bishop Peter J. Jugis' ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24. Above right: Vietnamese youth dance with candles at Bishop Jugis' ordination Mass. Below left: African drummers perform outside the ordination Mass at St. Matthew — Staff photos

Best Wishes to Bishop Peter J. Jugis and the priests and people of the Diocese of Charlotte, North Carolina

Gratitude to Bishop Curlin

Archbishop Harry J. Flynn,
Bishop Frederick F. Campbell,
Bishop Richard E. Pates, and the people of the Archdiocese of Saint Paul and Minneapolis

Bishop Jugis,

Congratulations on your ordination and installation as Bishop of the Charlotte diocese.

May God fill you with the Holy Spirit and guide and direct all of your endeavors as His faithful servant.

The Parish Family at St. Benedict Church
Greensboro

Congratulations and Best Wishes

Lynn Murphy

Nationwide Discount Office Products
Negotiable Pricing

Free Next Day Delivery
Office Furniture Layout & Design
Printing - 2 and 4 color

Star Stationers OFFICE PRODUCTS

349-E West Tremont Ave.
Charlotte NC 28203
704-375-3206, Ext. 20
800-832-6218, Ext. 20
Fax: 704-342-1904

Cell: 980-721-8112
lynnmurphy@ starstationers.com

St. Gabriel Catholic Church

Blessings and prayers to

BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

as you begin your ministry as our Shepherd.

With joy we welcome you.

The Parish Family of St. Gabriel

Rev. Msgr. Richard M. Bellow
Pastor

3016 Providence Road
Charlotte, NC 28211
704.364.5431

Our Lady of Mercy Catholic Church/School
1918 South Main Street/1730 Link Road
Winston-Salem
&
Our Lady of Fatima Chapel
211 West Third Street
Winston-Salem

Wish to Congratulate and extend Best Wishes and Prayers to our new Bishop
The Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis

Our Love and Prayers to
Bishop Peter Jugis

St. Helen Catholic Mission
Spencer Mountain

The parishioners of St. Lucien and St. Bernadette offer our prayerful support to Bishop Jugis on this joyous occasion of his Episcopal ordination and installation.

St. Lucien
Spruce Pine

St. Bernadette
Linville

To Bishop Peter Joseph Jugis,

Your family and friends of the Parish of St. Vincent de Paul celebrate with you and we pledge to you our support and our continued prayers for your ministry.

You will always be at home at St. Vincent's!

Jesus said to His disciples: "...But seek first the kingdom of God and
His righteousness and all these things will be given you besides." (Matthew 6:33)

Parish and Staff of St. Vincent de Paul Church
Charlotte

Congratulations
and Best Wishes

From the Augustinian Friars and the Parish Community of St. Margaret of Scotland

Maggie Valley

Congratulations
and Best Wishes

Holy Spirit Church
Denver, NC

Our Prayers and Blessings extend to

Bishop Peter Jugis

from the Augustinian Friars

of the Province of St. Thomas of Villanova serving the Diocese of Charlotte at

St. John Neumann Parish, Charlotte
St. John Parish, Waynesville
Immaculate Conception Parish, Canton
St. Margaret of Scotland Parish, Maggie Valley
Living Waters Reflection Center, Maggie Valley

The parishioners of St. Joseph Catholic Church offer Prayers and Congratulations to our new Bishop. May the Holy Spirit guide and be with Bishop Jugis as he begins his new ministry.

Newton

To Bishop Jugis

Prayerful Best Wishes

St. Luke Parish Mint Hill, NC

BISHOP JUGIS -

The people, deacon and pastor of Sacred Heart Church send their warmest regards and choicest blessings upon your ordination and installation as fourth Bishop of Charlotte.

Sacred Heart Catholic Church
Brevard

The Family of
St. Ann's Parish
is Pleased to Extend Warmest Congratulations
to

Bishop Peter Jugis

We Are Honored to Be the Parish of
Your Baptism
by Michael J. Begley,
First Pastor of St. Ann's Parish,
First Bishop of Charlotte.

St. Ann's Parish
3635 Park Road
Charlotte, NC

"The little parish with the big heart."

Bishop Peter Jugis

May you be blessed
in your good work
for the Church

God, our Father,
our shepherd and guide,
look with love on
Peter your servant,
your appointed pastor
of the Church.
May his word and example
inspire and guide the Church;
may he, and all those in his care,
come to the joy
of everlasting life.

Our Lady of Grace
Greensboro

50th Anniversary Year

Proclaim the Greatness of the Lord

Congratulations and Good Luck!

St. Jude Catholic Church
Sapphire Valley

The St. Therese Guild of St. Leo the Great Church would like to congratulate
BISHOP PETER JUGIS
on his ordination and installation as fourth Bishop of Charlotte.

St. Therese Guild
St. Leo the Great Church
Winston-Salem

CONGRATULATIONS

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

On your Ordination
and
Installation
as
Bishop of the Diocese of
Charlotte

From

Saint Therese
Parish
Mooresville, NC

Congratulations Bishop Peter Jugis

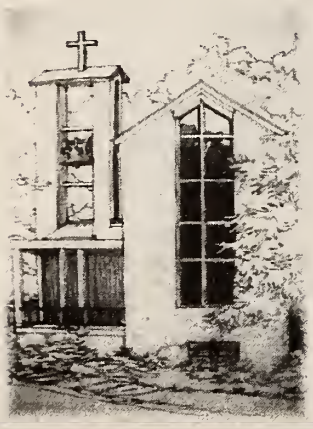
St. Elizabeth Church
Boone



May the Lord enrich you,
Bishop Jugis,
with the gifts and virtues
of a true apostle for the good of your people.

St. John the Baptist Church
Tryon

The Parish Staff and Parishioners of St. Paul the Apostle in Greensboro join in prayer and gratitude for Bishop Peter Jugis as he assumes the position of Chief Shepherd of our diocese.

ST. PAUL
THE APOSTLE
CATHOLIC CHURCH

Congratulations

May God send His choicest blessings on you always.

George and Carol Stratton
Stella Saksa

WACHOVIA
SALUTES
BISHOP PETER JUGIS,

a guiding light whose leadership,

philanthropy and dedication

have made a difference

in the lives of many.

WACHOVIA
Uncommon Wisdom

©2003 Wachovia Corporation: Wachovia Bank, N.A. 034520

Bishop Jugis

The Parish Family of St. Mark Church offers you their hearty congratulations and prayerful support as you take on this most trusted assignment!

We are so proud of you!

SAINT MARK CATHOLIC CHURCH

Huntersville

14740 Stumptown Rd. Huntersville, NC, 28078 704-948-0231

The parishioners of Saint Pius the Tenth in Greensboro &
Monsignor Anthony J. Marcaccio
offer our heartfelt congratulations to
The Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
as the new Shepherd of the Diocese of Charlotte.

Saint Pius X
CATHOLIC CHURCH

The parishioners and staff of The Cathedral Church of St. Patrick pray for an abundance of God's blessings on

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

during his years of service to our Diocese.

"... the Lord your God will bless you in all you produce and in all the work of your hands, so that you will be altogether joyful."
— Deuteronomy 16:15

Very Reverend Paul Gary
Reverend Lawrence LoMonaco
Reverend Mr. Nicholas Fadero, Deacon
Reverend Mr. Carlos Medina, Deacon

St. Patrick Cathedral
1621 Dilworth Road East
Charlotte, NC 28203
704.334.2283

BILINGUAL BISHOP

PHOTO COURTESY OF BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

Then-Father Peter J. Jugis at the baptism of Alejandro and Shonna Trinidad at Hispanic Mission in East Bend Jan. 29, 1989.

Bishop Jugis ministers to many cultures

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Since being named bishop of Charlotte, every Mass Bishop Peter J. Jugis has celebrated has been at a church where a considerable population of the parish speaks Spanish. He understands that addressing parishioners in their native language is part of his ministry, and is happy to be able to offer that gift to Spanish-speaking Catholics of the Diocese of Charlotte.

"At every parish celebration I have been present at so far, whether it's the anniversary Masses in Jefferson and Franklin or the confirmation Masses I've celebrated in Hendersonville and Winston-Salem, in my conversations with the pastor prior to the Mass, I always ask 'do you want me to give some comments in Spanish?'" the newly ordained bishop said.

"It is a significant part of my ministry," said Bishop Jugis. "Since I have that gift to offer, I want to make it available whenever it would be called upon."

There are an estimated 140,000 Hispanic Catholics living in the 46-county Diocese of Charlotte, and that number is growing every day. The significant increase in Hispanic households, who normally do not register at parishes, may double the number of Catholic households to more than 300,000 by 2020, according to the diocesan Office of Planning.

Like most teen-agers, Bishop Jugis began studying Spanish in the eighth grade while attending Quail Hollow Junior High School in Charlotte (now Quail Hollow Middle School) and continued with his studies at South Mecklenburg High School.

"I loved it so much, and I seemed to have a talent for it, so I took it ... through the 12th grade."

Bishop Jugis' involvement in multicultural ministry goes back to his high school days in the late 1970s, when Father Joseph Waters offered a Spanish Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Church, the Jugis family's parish.

The future bishop helped at the Mass by playing the music (he plays six instruments). Myrna Hoffmann, his high school Spanish teacher and a St. Vincent de Paul parishioner, helped him become accustomed to the songs and to the Mass.

While attending the North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome, the seminarian tried his hand at Italian. Following the completion of his studies in 1984, he returned to serve the Diocese of Charlotte and found it to have an exploding Spanish-speaking population.

"There were very few Spanish-speaking priests," said Bishop Jugis. "There was a great need, and I wasn't shy to offer my services."

As parochial vicar at St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem, the young priest would also say Mass in nearby East Bend, alternating weekends with Msgr. Anthony Kovacic, the then-pastor at St. Leo the Great.

"Whatever the status of an immigrant, whether they are documented or undocumented, there is nothing illegal about coming to the Mass," Bishop Jugis said. "Many parishioners are documented or children who are citizens, born in the United States.

"They have the right to receive the sacraments. It would be unjust not to make that available to them," he said.

Concurrently, a steady increase in the number of individuals from Southeast Asia over the years has led the Diocese of Charlotte to establish a Korean and a Vietnamese mission in Charlotte in the 1990s. There is a combined 1,000 registered individuals at the missions, St. John Lee Korean Church and St. Joseph Vietnamese Church.

Bishop Jugis expressed a willingness to learn Korean and Vietnamese in a continued effort to shepherd the immigration populations of the diocese.

"What is already beginning to happen in the parishes should be continued," he said. "That is, bilingual Masses and parish celebrations, so that the Catholic Church stays one and united and does not fall along parallel tracks according to diverse ethnic origins."

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis stands with Ms. Okwara, a parishioner of Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Monroe, after his ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24.

"All of the pastors are making heroic efforts and doing a very good job of planning bilingual celebrations," the bishop commented. "This brings people together — they begin worshipping together, they become familiar with each other. The parish grows and is enriched, rather than remaining two ethnic groups coincidentally occupying the same (worship space)."

"These are our brothers and sisters in the faith, and I want to make sure to welcome them," said Bishop Jugis.

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Rev. Mr. Edwin Rodriguez stands with then-Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis at the Our Lady of Lourdes Church parish fiesta Sept. 7. The parish's Hispanic and Anglo communities and the Knights of Columbus presented Bishop Jugis with plaques and gifts during the event.

What Others Say

SISTER ANDREA INKROTT, DIOCESAN DIRECTOR OF HISPANIC MINISTRY:

"Bishop Jugis has been active in ministry with the Hispanics in our diocese from the beginning of his priestly ministry. His comments to the Hispanic community in their language were received by the Hispanics present as signs of his love for them and as a challenge for the community to continue working in Hispanic Ministry in the years to come. The whole celebration was an effort to represent the diversity of our diocesan community and to be a diocesan celebration. And that it was."

Above: Bishop Robert J. Baker of Charleston; Bishop J. Kevin Boland of Savannah; Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta; Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte; Archbishop Gabriel Montalvo, apostolic nuncio to the United States; Bishop David B. Thompson, bishop emeritus of Charleston; Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus of Charlotte; and Bishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Knoxville at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24. Below: Bishop and members of the diocesan Catholic schools office in the pastoral center's chapel Oct. 29. The schools office made and presented the bishop with a stole, a cloth used when celebrating Mass, on which are the names of all 18 diocesan Catholic schools. Right: Bishop Jugis offers Communion to his uncle, Rev. Mr. Michael Misulia, at his ordination Mass. — Staff and courtesy photos

Above left: Bishop Peter J. Jugis touches his ring during his ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24. He said he had a pair of interlocked rings engraved on the side of the ring, which symbolizes his parent's 50-year marriage. Above right: Archbishop John F. Donoghue places the miter on Bishop Jugis' head during his ordination Mass Oct. 24. Below bottom left: Bishop Jugis' miter and ring sit next to the chrism oil at his ordination Mass. Below left: Bishop Jugis prays during his ordination Mass. Below right: Bishop Jugis smiles after his ordination Mass.— Staff photos

A GROWING DIOCESE

Bishop Jugis sees changes over two decades, looks to future

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Bishop Peter J. Jugis became a priest of the Diocese of Charlotte 20 years ago. He has served the faithful of the diocese in many ways at many parishes, and he has seen a number of changes over the years.

His parents, Joe and Peggy Jugis, were born and raised in New York but relocated to Charlotte and married in St. Patrick Cathedral on Thanksgiving Day, 1953. When St. Ann Church was established in August 1955, the Jugises were among the original families.

At the time, the Diocese of Raleigh — established in 1924 — encompassed the entire state of North Carolina and only half a dozen Catholic churches existed in the Charlotte area.

As the Jugis family began to grow, they moved to a bigger house and joined St. Vincent de Paul Church, a mission of St. Ann which became its own parish in 1965.

The Diocese of Charlotte was established in January 1972, with a Catholic population of just over 34,000. Bishop Michael J. Begley, who baptized Bishop Jugis in 1957, served the diocese as shepherd until his retirement at age 75 in May 1984. Bishop John F. Donoghue succeeded him in December 1984. Bishop William G. Curlin was installed as the third bishop in April 1994 and served until his retirement at age 75 in September 2002.

The Diocese of Charlotte, which encompasses 20,700 square miles and includes the 46 western counties of the state, has seen steady growth over the years. Currently, there are more than 54,000 registered Catholic households and almost 140,000 registered Catholics, who make up 3.5 percent of North Carolina's population of 4 million.

"North Carolina itself is growing, and probably in the last 20 years, I would dare say almost every parish has had some kind of building project or capital campaign to add on a social hall or buy a rectory, or add onto or build a new church," said Bishop Jugis.

"It seems like every time I turned around, I would hear about another parish that would be building this or building that," he said. "The diocese has grown quickly, considering we're only 31 years old."

The diocese is expected to have an estimated 300,000 registered Catholics by the year 2020, and more than 300,000 Hispanic Catholic households, who normally do not register at parishes, in addition to the registered Catholics.

When Bishop Jugis returned to the Diocese of Charlotte in 1984 from his studies at the North American College, the U.S. seminary in Rome, "there were very few Spanish-speaking priests," he said. "There was a great need, and I wasn't shy to offer my services."

Masses in Spanish are becoming common at parishes throughout the diocese, and in June 2002, more than 600 Hispanics attended the dedication of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church by then-Bishop William G. Curlin. Vincentian Father Vincent Finnerty, pastor, participates in a Spanish-language radio program broadcast from the church built to served the needs of Charlotte's Hispanic population.

"This means a lot for the Hispanic people," said Father Finnerty, who came to the Hispanic community seven years earlier when they were holding Mass in the gymnasium of the old Our Lady of the Assumption School in Charlotte.

There has also been a steady influx of individuals from Southeast Asia to the Diocese of Charlotte, which established a Korean mission and a Vietnamese mission in Charlotte in the 1990s.

Western North Carolina has become a preferred resettlement community for foreign refugees, according to Cira Ponce, director of the diocesan refugee resettlement office. The diocese is currently the only one in the nation that resettles Montagnard refugees, who began arriving in 1986.

Bishop Jugis expressed a willingness to learn Korean and Vietnamese in a continued effort to shepherd the immigration populations of the diocese.

"What is already beginning to happen in the parishes should be continued," he said. "That is, bilingual Masses and parish celebrations, so that the Catholic Church stays one and united and does not fall along parallel tracks according to diverse ethnic origins."

The fourth bishop of Charlotte said the diocese has been enriched by his predecessors, as well as the many priests and women religious who have served in the diocese.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop William G. Curlin, bishop emeritus of Charlotte, stands with the newly-ordained Bishop Peter J. Jugis after Bishop Jugis' ordination Mass at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24.

In 2002, there were almost 70 active diocesan priests, almost 60 religious priests, almost 80 deacons and more than 100 women religious.

Bishop Jugis' ordination was the first in the history of the Diocese of Charlotte to be broadcast live on the Internet. The broadcast, viewed by more than 1,000 people, allowed many within and beyond the diocese who could not attend the ordination to view the event.

"It is opening a door for future uses of the Internet for other diocesan events," said Bishop Jugis. "It is breaking new ground for a new mode of communication for us in the future."

In light of the clergy sex scandal that recently rocked the U.S. Catholic Church, Bishop Jugis is aware that some faith must be rebuilt in the church.

"I think continuing to be faithful to the diocesan policy on dealing with sexual misconduct and the 'Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People' is the best way to assure people that children are safe," he said.

The charter was approved in June 2002 by the U.S. bishops and slightly modified last November after consultations with Vatican officials.

This year, the "Policy of the Diocese of Charlotte Concerning Ministry-Related Sexual Misconduct by Church Personnel" was revised in accordance with the charter, and in August the Diocese of Charlotte was audited to verify compliance with the charter. The U.S. bishops mandated an audit of 195 U.S. Catholic dioceses and eparchies to examine their policies on the problem of sexual abuse of children and young people by clergy.

"If matters come to my attention — hopefully the worst is behind us — we will follow scrupulously the policies that have been established," said Bishop Jugis. "I think that is the best way to ensure and build trust."

Bishop Jugis is eager to visit the many parishes and missions across the 10 vicariates of the Diocese of Charlotte. Although he has served in several of them, and has met many of the priests over the years, "to come back as bishop, it will be essential to learn the character and makeup of the vicariates as they are today, who the priests are and what they express as the concerns and needs of the people," he said.

"I don't come in with a preset agenda," he said. "My goal is to continue to build on what we have, and I don't foresee any abrupt changes that would be necessarily required.

"We already have a very strong, vibrant diocese and parishes," said Bishop Jugis. "So the goal would be as spiritual leader to continue the good work that's already being done."

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Then-Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis raises the host during the 40th anniversary celebration of St. Francis of Assisi Church in Jefferson Sept. 6. The parish celebrated the event with a Mass and fiesta, hosted by the church's Hispanic community.

YOUR ARE CORDIALLY INVITED

Bishop Jugis to visit vicariate celebrations

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Thousands of the diocese's faithful came to Charlotte for Bishop Peter J. Jugis' ordination at St. Matthew Church Oct. 24, and now the new bishop will soon be traveling to the faithful.

Beginning in early November, Bishop Jugis will attend celebrations in his honor in each vicariate of the diocese.

"I am looking forward to the vicariate celebrations," said Bishop Jugis. "It will be an opportunity for people who were not able to attend the ordination Mass to meet me at a celebration closer to their parishes."

"Effort is being made across the diocese to celebrate the cultural diversity within these gatherings," said Father Francis O'Rourke, pastor of Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro and chairperson of the ordination planning committee.

"I know some of them will be bilingual and a Hispanic presence is expected at the celebrations," said Bishop Jugis.

A vicariate, also known as a deanery in some dioceses, is a form of division of a diocese into smaller groupings of parishes. Usually, vicariates are formally named by geographic designation.

In the Diocese of Charlotte, there are 10 vicariates: Albemarle, Asheville, Boone, Charlotte, Gastonia, Greensboro, Hickory, Salisbury, Smoky Mountain and Winston-Salem.

"The celebrations will allow me to meet the priests of the vicariates on their home turfs, to talk to them and hear about some of the issues with which they are concerned in their vicariates," said Bishop Jugis.

Because of Bishop Jugis' long service to the Diocese of Charlotte, he said he has previously visited many of the parishes in one capacity or another.

"But now to come back as bishop, it will be essential to learn the character and makeup of the vicariates as they are today, who the priests are and what they express as the concerns and needs of the people."

WANT TO GO?

The Charlotte Vicariate celebrations consisted of the Oct. 24 ordination Mass at St. Matthew and Oct. 25 rite of reception at St. Patrick Cathedral. Other vicariate celebrations with Bishop Peter J. Jugis are as follows:

— Monday, Nov. 3 — Salisbury Vicariate
7 p.m. Mass followed by reception at St. Joseph Church, Kannapolis.

— Friday, Nov. 7 — Smoky Mountain Vicariate
5 p.m. reception at Tsali Manor; 6:30 p.m. Mass at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, Cherokee (transportation from the church to the reception will be provided).

— Monday, Nov. 17 — Greensboro Vicariate
7 p.m. Mass followed by reception at St. Paul the Apostle Church, Greensboro.

— Thursday, Nov. 20 — Boone Vicariate
7 p.m. bilingual Mass followed by reception at St. Elizabeth of the Hill Country Church, Boone.

— Monday, Nov. 24 — Winston-Salem Vicariate
7 p.m. Mass followed by reception at St. Leo the Great Church, Winston-Salem.

— Tuesday, Nov. 25 — Hickory Vicariate
7 p.m. Mass followed by reception at St. Aloysius Church, Hickory.

— Monday, Dec. 1 — Albemarle Vicariate
7:30 p.m. Mass followed by reception at St. James Church, Hamlet.

— Wednesday, Dec. 3 — Asheville Vicariate
7 p.m. reconciliation service followed by reception at Immaculate Conception Church in Hendersonville.

— Friday, Dec. 5 - Gastonia Vicariate
7 p.m. Mass followed by reception at St. Mary Church in Shelby.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis greets two Sisters of Mercy prior to his ordination mass Oct. 24 at St. Matthew Church.

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Then-Bishop-designate Peter J. Jugis blesses a young girl during communion at Our Lady of Lourdes Church Sept. 7.

What is entrusted to Bishop Peter J. Jugis as the fourth bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte?

A 31-year-old mission diocese made up of 46 counties.

A diocese with more than 54,000 registered Catholic households and almost 140,000 registered Catholics, who make up 3.5 percent of North Carolina's population.

A faith community with an annual growth rate of 6 percent over the last five years.

A diocese that will have an estimated 300,000 registered Catholics in the year 2020.

A diocese that is expected to have over 300,000 Hispanic Catholic households in 2020 in addition to 300,000 registered Catholics.

A diocese with 18 diocesan Catholic schools.

A diocese that is a preferred resettlement community for refugees. The diocese is the only one in the nation that resettles Montagnard refugees from Vietnam.

A diocese with a nationally recognized stewardship and development campaign, copied by scores of other dioceses across the country.

A diocese that is opening new parishes and expanding others. The diocese currently has 91 parishes and missions.

An award-winning diocesan newspaper.

A diocese that has formed a covenant with the Lutheran Church and is a strong supporter of ecumenical efforts.

Congratulations & Blessings

TO

BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

IN RECOGNITION OF

YOUR INSTALLATION AS THE BISHOP
OF THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE.

◆ ◆ ◆

MAY THE LOVE OF GOD
BE YOUR FOUNDATION

◆ ◆ ◆

Peace and Love

FROM JOHN SCHULTZE, BRYAN KNUPP AND THE EDIFICE FAMILY

EDIFICE

25 YEARS OF EXCELLENCE

Giáo Xứ Thánh Giuse

Chúc Mừng

Chúc Mừng Giám Mục Yêu Mến, Hiền Lành Và Nhân Ái.
Giáo Xứ Chúng Con Hết Lòng Cộng Tác Và Vâng Phục.

St. Joseph Vietnamese Catholic Church

CONGRATULATION!

OUR BELOVED, KIND AND GENEROUS BISHOP PETER JUGIS.
WE PRESENT OUR SPIRIT OF COOPERATION AND OBEDIENCE.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis

Congratulations and Best Wishes on your installation as Bishop of Charlotte.

Saint Vincent Archabbey. College and Seminary

300 Fraser Purchase Road
Latrobe, PA 15650-2690
724-532-6600
http://benedictine.stvincent.edu/seminary/

Our prayers and best wishes.

Beatrice and Ernest Stroupe
Charlotte

Congratulations and Blessings to BISHOP JUGIS

May St. Michael and all the angels and archangels watch over you and the diocesan Church of Charlotte.

Celebrating 100 Years of Service in Gaston County

The Church of St. Michael,
The Archangel
Gastonia

Saint Michael Catholic Church
708 Saint Michael's Lane
Gastonia, North Carolina 28052-6198

Catholic Social Services offers its warm regards and pledges its support on the solemn occasion of your ordination and installation as fourth Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte.

CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES OF THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE, INC.

Congratulations and Best Wishes to

BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

on his Ordination and Installation as Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte

From the North Carolina Knights of Columbus and Their Families

State Deputy
David L. Onofrio and Anne

State Chaplain
Most Reverend William G. Curlin

Associate State Chaplain
Reverend Monsignor Anthony J. Marcaccio

State Secretary
Robert J. Grabasky and Maryann

State Treasurer
John C. Gouldie and Kathy

State Advocate
David R. Jones and Cheryl

State Warden
Gregory S. Kent and Tricia

Immediate Past State Deputy
Anthony M. Petite and Candy

K OF C

The Knights of Columbus of North Carolina

Holy Family parish of Clemmons,
North Carolina congratulates you on your appointment as
Bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte.

Our Holy Family parishioners extend their warmest wishes and welcome
you with open arms!

May the Lord bestow
His blessings upon you.

Holy Family Parish
Clemmons, North Carolina

CONGRATULATIONS TO BISHOP PETER JUGIS!

We treasure our years of friendship and look forward to many more. Catholics in North Carolina are fortunate to have you as our spiritual leader, and we anticipate many years of joy and fulfillment under your guidance.

Sincerely,
Rev. Joseph Long Dinh,
Tien Bui and his family

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic
Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926

McEWEN
FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.

The staff at McEwen Funeral Service, Inc.

proudly congratulates

BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

on the occasion of his Ordination and Installation as
BISHOP OF CHARLOTTE.

Charlotte 704-334-6421 Pineville 704-544-1412 Mint Hill 704-545-4864 Derita 704-596-3291

Blessed John XXIII National Seminary

offers prayerful congratulations to

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

for many years of fruitful service.

Monsignor Francis D. Kelly, Rector

and

The Blessed John XXIII
National Seminary Community

including these Charlotte seminarians:

John Starezewski James Stuhrenberg

Robert Conway Fred Werth

558 South Avenue - Weston, Massachusetts 02493
781.899.5500 - Fax: 781.899.9057

Best wishes to
Bishop Peter J. Jugis
as you start a new stage in your ministry serving as the fourth bishop
of the Diocese of Charlotte.

Proud printer of The Catholic News & Herald since its inception.

Mullen
PUBLICATIONS, INC.
FOUNDED IN 1945
publishers of Southern Textile News
and
Senior Directions

9629 Old Nations Ford Road • Charlotte, NC 28273
704.527.5111 • www.mullenpublications.com

Best Wishes from

KEITH HAWTHORNE
Ford

BELMONT
MT. HOLLY

NAI SOUTHERN REAL ESTATE SINCE 1899
COMMERCIAL REAL ESTATE SERVICES, WORLDWIDE

Congratulations and heartiest best wishes to

BISHOP PETER JUGIS

on your ordination and installation as fourth Bishop of Charlotte.

May your years of service to the people of the diocese be long and fruitful
as you serve them for Christ.

FROM YOUR FRIENDS AT NAI SOUTHERN REAL ESTATE

1701 East Third Street • Charlotte, NC 28204 • Office: 704 375-1000 • Fax: 704 375-2384 • www.srenc.com

To Bishop Peter Joseph Jugis —

Congratulations and Best Wishes on your Ordination and Installation as Bishop of Charlotte.

"Entrust your works to the Lord,
and your plans will succeed."

Proverbs 16:3

Your friends at the Pastoral Center

FC 2x2
C 312 c

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Parish Profile:
Our Lady of Grace Church
| Page 16

NOVEMBER 7, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 7

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Senator recalls partial-birth abortion ban battle

Bishop Jugis calls ban a victory

BY JENNIFER BRINKER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ST. LOUIS (CNS) — In 1998, the year President Clinton vetoed a ban on partial-birth abortion for the second time, Republican Sen. Rick Santorum felt "this call to say more" on the floor of the Senate in the debate on a vote to override the veto.

"But the next morning, we didn't get one more vote" and the override failed, the senator from Pennsylvania told a pro-life convention in St. Louis. "We lost. To me and the world, I wasted my time."

But five days later, Santorum received an e-mail from a Michigan State University student who said he and his pregnant girlfriend had seen television coverage of Santorum's remarks in the Senate. The girlfriend, who was scheduled to undergo an abortion, changed her mind as a result of watching his debate.

"Today, there is a 4-and-a-half-year-old little girl," the senator said. "She was given up for adoption. But even if you don't have that gift of knowing that you touched someone else's life, remember that God is not calling you to be successful. He called you to be faithful."

On Oct. 21, Santorum, a Catholic and chief Senate spon-

See BAN, page 13

LIVING STEWARDSHIP

COURTESY PHOTOS BY COURTNEY EMERSON

Ken Marino (foreground), a parishioner at St. Barnabas Church in Arden, joins members of a Baptist ministry group to build an addition on the home of a family whose youngest child was severely burned in an accident.

Arden couple make stewardship 'a way of life'

More Coverage

page 8 | Consolation youth collect clothes

page 9 | Parishes promote stewardship

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

Editor's note: The names of a woman and child in this story have been changed.

ARDEN — The sun was shining and the sky was blue on a recent Saturday, but Ken and Isabelle Marino weren't savoring nature's beauty. They were helping build an addition on a house in a rural area near Mars Hill.

"While Ken worked on the

See STEWARDSHIP, page 8

MAKING SAFER SCHOOLS

St. Michael School locks down

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

GASTONIA — St. Michael School's lockdown procedures were tested two days in a row last month.

"We had two separate incidents — one on campus and one on a street beyond the campus," said Principal Joe Puceta. "Nobody was in any danger, but we went into lockdown to be safe."

On the afternoon of Monday, Oct. 27, Gastonia police chased a robbery suspect across part of the St. Michael Church and school campus. Puceta immediately notified Superintendent Linda Cherry and locked down the school, which involved all students being directed to and kept inside their classrooms until the incident was over.

"We make sure all students are accounted for and wait for the police to tell us everything is OK," said Puceta. "We practice this procedure as part of our diocesan and state regulations. We practice this like we do fire drills."

The school was only locked down for 10 minutes or less, said Puceta.

"By the time I got out there to check what was going on, the suspect was already in custody and in the police car," he said.

The next afternoon, Oct. 28, someone entered St. Michael Church looking for food. When the church secretary went to find food, the

See LOCKDOWN, page 6

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
#4208364 S237 P2
#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275

Fiesta of health and culture
Hispanics learn about good health
| Page 4

Room at the Inn
Event supports mothers, children
| Page 5

Catholic Heritage Society
Members honored at Mass
| Page 7

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

LIFE IN 3-D

CNS PHOTO BY DAVE HRBACEK, THE CATHOLIC SPIRIT

Jessica Kasel of Woodbury, Minn., catches sight of a three-dimensional ultrasound image of her daughter, Emma, on a monitor (out of view) at Grand View Ultrasound in St. Paul. Sonographer Ronda Rosenthal operates the machine that allowed Kasel to see "the form and fat cheeks and the features" of her new daughter.

Of 'boo-boos' and baby pictures: Medical advances aid pro-life work

WASHINGTON (CNS) — "They fixed my boo-boo."

With those words in a U.S. Senate hearing room, Samuel Armas, nearly 4, put into simplest terms the medical advances helping to convince even the most hardhearted about the humanity of unborn children and the need to protect them in the womb.

In-utero surgery — like what Samuel underwent in August 1999 — and three-dimensional ultrasound technology both offer new ways of looking at unborn children as patients and as unique people in their own right.

Samuel's surgery came just 21 weeks after his conception; he was diagnosed with spina bifida. Freelance photographer Michael Clancy, hired by USA Today to photograph fetus surgical procedures, captured Samuel's hand reaching out of his mother's women and grasping a doctor's finger. An operating room nurse told Clancy unborn babies undergoing surgery "do that all the time."

The now-famous "Fetal Hand Grasp" photograph is featured on Web sites, billboards and posters.

Samuel responded with the "boo-boo" remark when Sen. Sam Brownback, R-Kan., showed him Clancy's picture during a Sept. 25 hearing before a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation and asked, "Have you seen this picture of you?"

Despite the risky surgery, Samuel's mother Julie Armas said, even at 21 weeks' gestation, "Samuel was not a hypothetical; he was already a member of our family, our son, and deserved our best efforts to improve his life."

Also testifying was Dr. Jim Thorp, a specialist in maternal fetal medicine, who quoted from Sir Albert William Liley, who is credited with performing the first fetal surgery in 1963: "From my clinical experience, I am convinced that unborn children are individuals and human beings who are capable of receiving and responding to medical care and who should have legal protection."

"It is extremely difficult not to see the fetus as a child before birth with the same value as a child after birth, especially after one sees her smiling, grimacing, moving, sleeping, yawning, stretching, sucking a thumb, as well as responding to pain from needle sticks," Thorp testified.

Some parents are getting a similar view from the detailed color images provided by three-dimensional ultrasound machines, sometimes called 4-D.

Expectant mother Jessica Kasel of Woodbury, Minn., went to Grand View Ultrasound in St. Paul for images of her unborn daughter, Emma.

"With 4-D, you can see the form and the fat cheeks and the features."

Patty McGinnity, a Catholic and co-owner of Grand View Ultrasound, said, "At 20 weeks, sometimes women don't really feel pregnant. But to see the baby just makes it so real. If they saw their baby, it would be very difficult for them to abort that child."

"There is little debate about whether the child in utero is alive, but (there is debate) about whether it is a life worthy of protecting," Brownback said at the Senate hearing. "That is a debate we will continue to have and will have another day."

Bishops to vote on revised rites for worship without priest

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The U.S. bishops will be asked to approve a revised version of the liturgical book, "Sunday Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest: Leaders Edition," when they meet in Washington Nov. 10-13.

One of the main changes in the proposed new text is the shift of the act of thanksgiving in such services to after Communion if the service includes a Communion rite. In current practice, when there is a Communion rite the act of thanksgiving precedes it.

Because the act of thanksgiving follows Communion, the revised version eliminates the current prayers after Communion that change each week.

Another major change involves permission, when the rite of morning prayer or evening prayer is used, to omit the second reading of the Liturgy of the Word.

The revised document includes an expanded introduction, with detailed treatment of the liturgical year, the importance of singing and the participation of the assembly.

Like the current document, the proposed new text offers three main forms for Sunday worship without a priest: the Liturgy of the Word alone, or the Liturgy of the Word preceded by either morning prayer or evening prayer. A Communion rite is optional with all three forms.

The bishops first approved a book of rites for Sunday worship in the absence of a priest in 1989, following publication of a 1988 Vatican directory setting out norms and rules for such celebrations.

Use of the U.S. text, which received Vatican approval in 1993, began in January 1994.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

ASHEVILLE — The St. Martin De Porres Pro-Chapter of the Dominican Laity meets the third Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in St. Justin's Center at the Basilica of St. Lawrence, 97 Haywood St. Inquirers are welcome. For more information, contact Beverly Reid, OPL, at (828) 253-6676.

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Please call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

BOONE — Father David Valtierra of the Oratory will present an introduction to the Book of Revelation, Reading and Praying the Book of Revelation: Challenge and Vision at St. Elizabeth of the Hill Country Church, 259 Pilgrims Way, Nov. 15 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Participants will read representative passages and learn solid tools for understanding the language, background and issues of Revelation. To register, contact Carol Brown at (828) 264-8338 or stelizabeth@boone.net.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Mecklenburg County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is conducting an open membership meeting at 8 p.m. Nov. 13 for interested parties. The meeting will be held at the KC Council 770 Hall, E. Kingston Ave. off South Blvd. Contact Tim Lawson at (704) 522-9728 or e-mail ncaoh@aol.com for further information.

CHARLOTTE — A Women's Talk will be held Nov. 19 at 7 p.m. at St. Vincent Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. The speaker will be Father Mark Lawlor. For more information, please call Peggy at (704) 588-7311.

CHARLOTTE — Holidays can create feelings of dread and anxiety in those who are bereaved. Creating new rituals and new traditions that pay tribute to the memory of the deceased is one way to survive and even embrace the holidays when a loved one has died. Janice Olive of Hospice of Charlotte will offer suggestions for dealing with Grief and Loss During the Holidays Nov. 19 7-9 p.m. at St. Gabriel Ministry Center, 3016 Providence Rd. If you have questions, call BJ Dengler at (704) 364-5431.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Monday of each month 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information, call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

NOVEMBER 7, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 7

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope names scholars, including American, to sciences academy

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II named Kevin Ryan, founder of the Center for the Advancement of Ethics and Character at Boston University's School of Education, to be a member of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences.

Also named Oct. 30 to the prestigious body were a Japanese Nobel laureate in chemistry, a Chinese Nobel winner in physics, a Greek biologist who studies malaria and a Spanish biologist whose research focuses on genetics.

The academy, which traces its roots back to 1603, includes about 80 scientists from around the world. The members, many of whom are Nobel winners, are chosen for their excellence in science and mathematics, not on the basis of their religious affiliation.

Ryan is one of the few members of the academy who does not specialize in hard science.

Born in 1932, he began his research in the field of education in the 1960s, focusing on moral education and the development of personality.

He has written 18 books, including "Reclaiming Our Schools: A Handbook for Teaching Character."

The other scholars named Oct. 30 by the pope were:

— Antonio Garcia-Bellido, a genetic biologist from Spain.

— Fotis C. Kafatos, a Greek biologist who has focused his research on malaria and malaria-carrying mosquitoes.

— Tsung-Dao Lee, the Chinese winner of the 1957 Nobel Prize in physics; he has worked principally in the United States.

— Ryoji Noyori, a Japanese scientist who shared the 2001 Nobel Prize in chemistry.

Pope says fraternal religious orders offer witness in modern world

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II said fraternal religious orders offer an important witness of charity and poverty to the modern world.

The pope made the remarks in a message to Franciscan Capuchin friars, who were meeting to reflect on their future ahead of a plenary council. The Vatican published the papal message Oct. 29.

The pope reminded the Capuchins that the original desire of St. Francis was to form a community of brothers who would live as true disciples of Jesus. Today, this kind of religious life can offer a form of "spiritual therapy" for humanity, he said.

"This form of life in fraternity constitutes a challenge and a proposal for the current world, which is often torn by ethnic hatred or by homicidal madness, filled with contrasting passions and interests, eager for unity but uncertain about which road to take," he said.

The pope said the Capuchins and similar orders can carry out "a type of globalization of charity" through their presence and works in many countries.

Through their example, they can remind modern men and women that they belong to a "great family without borders" and invite them to work for the "development and liberation of the whole person," he said.

The pope encouraged the Franciscans of the 21st century to remain true to their founder's emphasis on poverty and closeness to the "humble and simple" people.

He also asked them to show love and obedience for the church with the same spirit as St. Francis.

In reflecting on the future of their order, the pope said, the friars should keep in mind especially a basic Gospel teaching about conversion to Christ — that a change of heart requires a true change of life.

Without such true conversion as a goal, the effort to devise spiritual and apostolic plans and programs would turn out to be wasted energy, he said.

HUNTERSVILLE — Natural Family Planning classes are being held the third Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. at St. Mark Catholic Church, 14740 Stumptown Rd., Room 200. Classes are taught by Dr. Matthew Harrison. All are welcome to attend, no registration required. Call (704) 948-0231 for directions and more information.

CHARLOTTE - The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians Division 1 Mecklenburg County-St. Brigid, an Irish-Catholic social and charitable inter-parish group, meet the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Anyone interested in their Irish-Catholic roots, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720 for further information.

CHARLOTTE — Thank God It's Friday (TGIF), a weekly support group for separated and divorced women, meets the third Friday of each month at 7 p.m. in the St. Matthew Church parish center, 8015 Ballantyne Pkwy., with a potluck dinner with a guest speaker from the community. TGIF is a healing ministry sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Charlotte Regional Office and St. Matthew Church. For details, call Trish Wilson at (704) 543-8986.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

BELMONT — Dennis Teall-Fleming will lead a video presentation on the movement to close the military training School of Americas and a discussion on how to get involved in this movement. Many of the school's graduates have returned to their countries to take part in Latin America's worst human rights atrocities. The event will take place Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St. For details, e-mail teallfleming@yahoo.com or call (704) 825-9600, ext. 26.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Division #1 Guilford County, AOH will meet Nov. 19 at 8 p.m. in the Knights of Columbus Hall on Horse Pen Creek Rd. followed by fellowship. AOH is the oldest Catholic Fraternal Organization for men in America. All Catholic men who are of Irish heritage are invited to contact us about joining the Division. For more information and membership application, contact Patrick C. Tracey, Divisional President at (336) 662-8421 or e-mail ptracey@bellsouth.net.

GREENSBORO — The Greensboro Council of Catholic Women invite all to their annual Mass of Remembrance Nov. 20 at 11 a.m. at the Franciscan Center, 233 Greene St. with lunch following. For details call Janet Law at (336) 288-6022.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — A support group for parents who have lost a child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

MURPHY — St. William Church will sponsor a bereavement support group that will meet Mondays through Nov. 17, 10 a.m.-noon at the Glenmary Center. This group is for anyone who is grieving over any loss — of a loved one, a job, friend, divorce. Call Pat Levy at (828) 837-9517 for more information.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

CLEMMONS — The OLM Little Rock Scripture Study for Women offers a bible study Monday evenings 7:30-9 p.m. in the library of Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd. Classes meet until Nov. 24. For more information, call Anne Gannon at (336) 727-4591.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Unholy fires

CNS PHOTO BY VINCENT GRAGNANI, THE SOUTHERN CROSS

Father Robert Irwin, pastor of St. Louise de Marillac Parish in Crest, a community near El Cajon, Calif., shows San Diego Bishop Robert H. Brom the fire damage in the church from local wildfires. The structure is sound, but the church sustained damage to some windows, walls and its roof, as well as extensive smoke damage inside.

CORRECTIONS — FROM THE OCT. 24 ISSUE

Father Wilbur Thomas was incorrectly identified in a photo caption; Father Carl Kaltreider was misidentified in a story; The Trail of Tears was misspelled in a headline.

Fiesta of health and culture

Hispanics learn importance of good health

BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY
CORRESPONDENT

GREENSBORO — Greensboro Catholic churches are reaching out to help Hispanics.

Hispanic community representatives of each church in the Greensboro vicariate held a combined celebration with several hospitals and health agencies at Our Lady of Grace Church Oct. 26. "The Festival of Health and Hispanic Culture" included cultural exhibits, skits, music and food, as well as health and wellness exhibits with free clinical care.

"This is a city-wide event that gives everyone a chance to sample traditional foods and learn about each other's culture," said Maureen Cavanaugh, a registered nurse and one of the event's organizers.

"In addition, the health clinic is set up to accommodate the health needs of the community," she said. "Among other things, the Hispanic population can have blood pressure checks, blood tests, cholesterol tests and even child identification cards printed."

There is a need to meet the spiritual as well as the physical and health needs of the Hispanic community, said Father Luis Salvador Osorio, parochial vicar of Our Lady of Grace.

"When I arrived at Our Lady of Grace, there was only one parish, St. Mary (in Greensboro), with a Spanish Mass," said Father Osorio, who is originally from Colombia.

St. Mary's Hispanic Mass was already overcrowded at the time, he said, and it was the parish's Anglo community who determined the need for additional Spanish-language Masses.

The growing Hispanic population soon dictated the need for a Spanish-language Mass at Our Lady of Grace, which was instituted two years ago upon Father Osorio's arrival.

"We started with about 200 people," said Father Osorio. "And today we are well over 600 in attendance at our Mass with nearly the same number still attending at St. Mary as there was before."

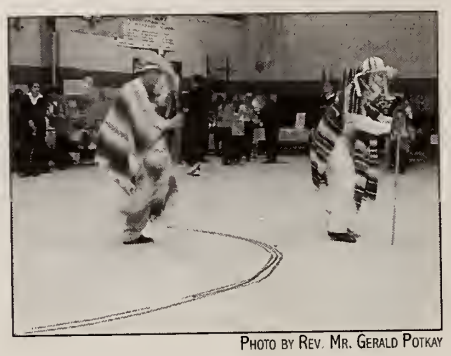

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Skits are performed at Our Lady of Grace Church's Festival of Health and Hispanic Culture Oct 26.

As the Hispanic population grows, so do their health issues, which is a concern to local health organizations. The event, held on a Sunday, was an ideal way to reach the Hispanic community, organizers realized.

"It is an easy transition for the people to go from Mass to a fiesta," said Father Osorio. "Then, as the people were celebrating local customs and traditions, to incorporate a free health clinic open to all those in attendance."

Over 1,000 people were estimated to be in attendance from Our Lady of Grace Church, St. Mary Church, Holy Infant Church in Reidsville, Holy Family Church in Clemmons, Our Lady of the Highways Church in Thomasville and Christ the King Church in High Point, according to Rev. Mr. Timothy Rohan, permanent deacon at Our Lady of Grace.

"Based upon the success of today's festival, this type of event will probably be ongoing," said Cavanaugh.

Contact Correspondent Rev. Mr. Gerald Potkay by calling (336) 427-8218 or e-mail gpotkay@triad.rr.com.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

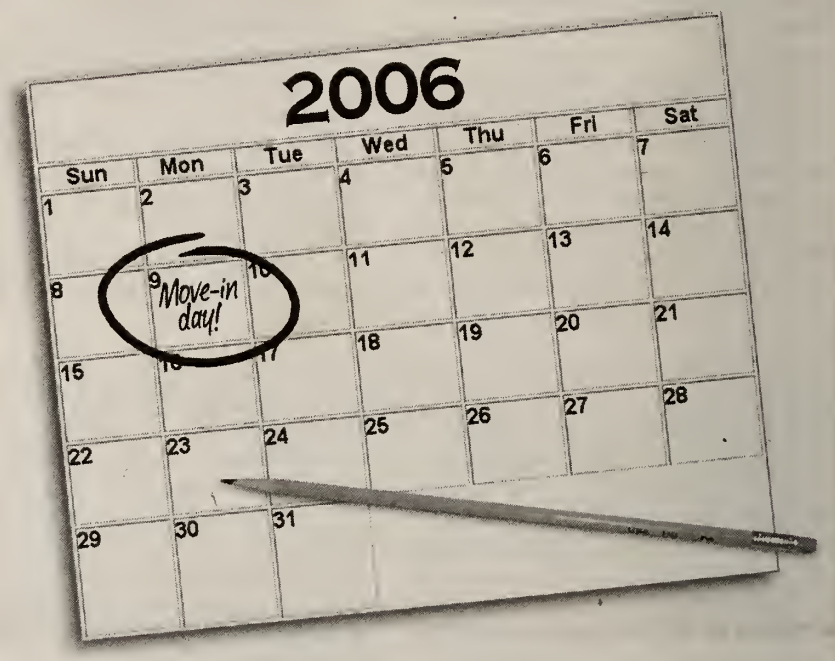
Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

Reserve now.



Move later.

For the retirement lifestyle you're planning now but putting off until later, call today for pre-construction pricing.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN AT MARYFIELD

A Continuing Care Retirement Community

1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260

336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444

Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Helping make Room at the Inn

Annual dinner supports mothers and their children

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — There's a special place in heaven for those at Room at the Inn, according to Congressman J.C. Watts.

"There are many crises that young women find themselves in from time to time, and were it not for places like Room at the Inn ... we would lose those young ladies and the lives of those young kids," he said.

Watts was the keynote speaker for the Room at the Inn's ninth annual banquet and fundraiser, themed "In His Image," at the Westin Charlotte Oct. 23. Eleven hundred people attended the event that helps support the Charlotte-based Catholic maternity home offering assistance for single women and their babies, both born and unborn.

An ordained Baptist minister, Watts was elected to the House of Representatives from his native Oklahoma in 1994 and has been an outspoken voice on issues he championed in Congress, including redeveloping communities, strengthening education and restoring values.

"I just think there's a special place in heaven for all the people who work in the organization and contribute to the organization," said Watts.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Eleven hundred people attended the ninth annual Room at the Inn banquet and fundraiser at the Westin Charlotte Oct. 23.

"The young ladies" who go to Room at the Inn "need someone not to be judgmental but to see them through their crises and their circumstances," he said. "I can't say enough about organizations like this who make that commitment."

"What makes our maternity home unique is that we not only provide maternity care, but also aftercare, serving the mother and her newborn following birth," said Cindy Brown, executive director.

Since opening its doors nine years ago, Room at the Inn has served more than 300 women and their children. More than just a place to live, Room at the Inn offers women a Christ-centered rehabilitation program, based on education, personal responsibility and spiritual direction punctuated with mental health and adoption counseling services.

Transportation to the hospital, medical and social appointments, and work and school is provided, as is training in parenting, nutrition, budgeting, chastity and job skills. Mothers often work to pay off past creditors and to restore their credit rating and good name.

Guests at Room at the Inn are allowed to stay up to 24 months, so long as they are working toward independent living.

"One thing that is very gratifying is watching new mothers grow into mature mothers," said Brown.

Many of the mothers who find Room at the Inn arrive broken in heart and spirit, often rejected by their families and the fathers of their babies.

"Most women choose abortion out of fear," said Brown. "Fear of their family's response, fear of losing their partner, fear of not being able to raise a child alone."

"It's a great cause and the young mothers who are pregnant need to know they have a place to turn," said Carly Simmons, one of 40 Belmont Abbey students to attend the dinner. "We're here to help and support Room at the Inn, because life is sacred."

"Room at the Inn is an endeavor to help those who cannot help themselves," said Mercy Sister Rosalind Picot, president of the Sisters of Mercy Regional Community of North Carolina. "It's something that we as Christians are responsible for. This is certainly evidenced by the number of people who are here to serve this cause through their donations. It's very edifying to me that so many people are involved."

"I think it's part of the mission of the Catholic community in Charlotte to make an effective statement on pro-life," said Benedictine Abbot Placid Solari, abbot of Belmont Abbey and chancellor of its college, who was on hand to encourage financial support.

"Women have a choice; that is, to give birth to their children," he said.

A signature of Room at the Inn is its annual banquet and subtle fundraiser. Invitations are issued in abundance and the dinner is free due to pre-event fundraising that pays for the costs. Dinner guests have the opportunity to hear firsthand accounts of life-altering experiences of Room at the Inn mothers.

"By far, the proceeds for this event are the second highest we've had in nine years," said Brown. "We raised $189,000."

Watts commented on the large number of people at the dinner.

"It obviously speaks to the mission, the cause, but it also speaks to the work and the service and the credibility that this organization has," he said. "I think it speaks to the leadership of the organization and the results of the work that they do."

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

A living testament

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Students form living rosary for pope

On Oct 22, in honor of the anniversary of Pope John Paul II's 25th anniversary, students at St. Pius X School in Greensboro dedicated the Mysteries of Illumination as a spiritual bouquet to the pope as part of their Living Rosary.

The students were positioned as a "rosary" at the school's main entrance. Each student led the rosary by saying the prayers and describing the mysteries, accompanied by the entire student body, teachers, administrators, parents and invited guests.

The actual rosaries were a gift from Msgr. Anthony Marcaccio, pastor of St. Pius X Church, who purchased them on his trip to Rome on Sept 15-Sept 26.

The rosaries were especially significant because of their centerpiece image of Mother Teresa, whom Pope John Paul II recently beatified.

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

School locks down

LOCKDOWN, from page 1

individual attempted to break into a church office, said Puceta. The school went into lockdown again and the police were called; the suspect was quickly arrested and the school lockdown was lifted within 15 minutes.

After both incidents, the police came back to "revisit the grounds and make sure everything was safe," said Puceta. "On the second day, an officer walked the halls and checked all the doors and bathrooms, just to be sure."

And during both lockdowns, the students and staff reacted admirably, said Puceta.

"It was just like we practiced in the drills," he said. "The students paid attention. The first time they thought it was a drill, but they still took it seriously."

"The faculty was cool, calm and collected," he said. "They did an excellent job."

Letters were sent home to parents to inform them of the incidents. Puceta said he received feedback from several parents complimenting the actions taken to ensure the students' safety.

Immaculate Heart of Mary School in High Point utilized their lockdown procedures in September while police searched for and apprehended a suspect near the school.

"When we deal with our greatest commodity — children — we have to be absolutely certain of their safety," said Principal Robert Wehde.

"While we hope we never have to use lockdown drills in our schools, the purpose of those drills is to plan for situations we can never expect," said Cherry. "Our children's safety was and is the most important factor in any situation."

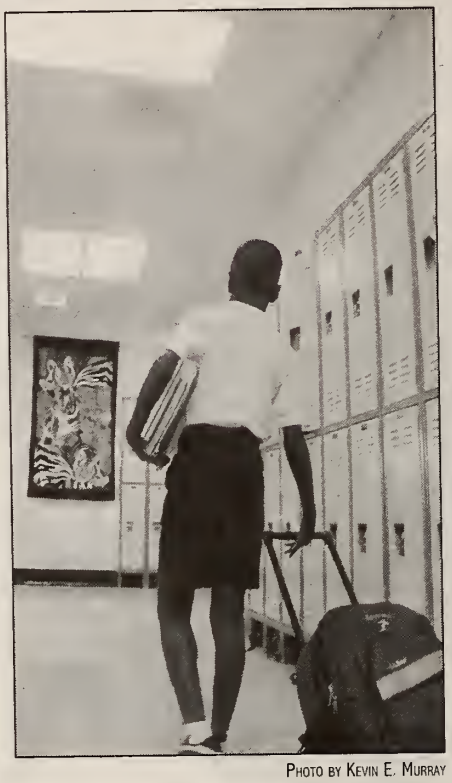

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

A student heads to class at St. Michael School in this photo taken August 2003.

"It's unfortunate that we have to practice these drills, but they obviously paid off nicely this week," said Puceta. "We'll follow whatever procedure we can to make sure our students are safe."

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

ONE LAST KISS OF YOUR LIFETIME

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!

"A rare gift for writing that is so graceful, so natural... an ability that is both remarkable and unique."
—Billie Marie Zal, Author of The Fabric of Our Lives

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

Sat., Nov. 15th — 8 am til 2 pm

St. Joseph's Ladies Guild

FALL BAZAAR

Arts & Crafts - Gifts for All!

- $5 Raffle for 62" Big Screen TV
- DVD/VCR Combo • $100 Cash

108 St. Joseph St., Kannapolis Info: (704) 932-4607

GREAT BBQ LUNCH W/ DRINK - ONLY $5

12 Days of Christmas

November 13-23, 2003

Charlotte Merchandise Mart

Windows of Christmas. New this year, each morning a Christmas Window will open with momentous and festive fanfare revealing a special celebrity ready to welcome guests to the show.

Happiness is a Seat with Santa. And Santa is here, ready lor photographs, secret wishes and treats for girls and boys of all ages.

All the Trimmings. Christmas trees, doors, and mantels adorned with skill and imagination compete for "best of show" attention. There's inspiration to share, so bring your camera.

Sing Your Favorite Carol along with choirs from local schools and churches. Or, enjoy puppets, magic, dancers and musicians.

Visions of Sugar Plums as well as gingerbread cookies, strudel, special coffees, marvelous breads, jams and jellies bring smiles to faces young and old.

Hear that Whistle Blowing and watch those model trains whizzing through tunnels, around mountains and through little villages. And, there are special steps so small people can see.

Decorations & Gifts Galore. Hundreds of colorful boutiques fill three adjoining halls packed with favorite decorations, ornaments and fabulous gifts.

Olde Towne's Sparkling Shops festooned with garlands, tempt you inside with ornaments, gifts, books, gourmet treats and friendly shopkeepers.

Magical Miniature Houses and scenes in their own Village and dressed in their holiday finery are a feast for the eyes.

Craft Tents by the Score offer pottery, hand-made Santas, jewelry, exquisite blown glass and one of a kind gifts for teachers, neighbors and discriminating friends.

Come and be a part of this festive tradition!
It's all about Christmas.

Weekdays and Saturdays
10 am to 9:30 pm
Sundays
10 am to 6 pm

Adults: $8.00 door/$7.00 advance
Discount Tickets Available at Harris Teeter
Youth 6-12: $3.00 • Under 6 free with paying adult
Group rates available

For More Information
please call (704) 376-6594

A Southern Shows, Inc. Production

www.SouthernChristmasShow.com

Southern Christmas Show®

The Charlotte Observer
CONNECTING

Catholic Heritage Society members honored

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Members of the Catholic Heritage Society were honored at a Mass celebrated at St. Vincent de Paul Church Nov. 2. Eighty members of the society attended the Mass concelebrated by Bishop Peter J. Jugis; Father Mauricio W. West, vicar general and chancellor; Father Mark Lawlor, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul; and Father Patrick Winslow, parochial vicar of St. Vincent de Paul.

The Catholic Heritage Society was formed in 1994 to recognize those people who have indicated that they intend to leave gifts in their wills and estate plans to a parish, school, the diocese, the foundation or other Catholic organization in the diocese.

There are currently more than 500 members of the society, some of whom have chosen to leave their gifts to the Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte. Currently, the foundation has more than $8.5 million in assets. Most of the 115 endowments in the foundation are designated for parishes.

Contributions may be designated or undesignated gifts for a specific parish, school, foundation or organization, or to the Diocese of Charlotte in general.

According to Gina Rhodes, diocesan director of planned giving, an estimated 6 percent Catholics in the diocese have remembered the Catholic Church in their estate plans.

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Bishop Peter J. Jugis stands with Msgr. William Pharr and Nancy West, members of the Catholic Heritage Society, following the annual Catholic Heritage Society Mass and dinner at St. Vincent de Paul Church Nov. 2.

"We encourage all Catholics to consider becoming members of the Catholic Heritage Society," Rhodes said.

"The Catholic Heritage Society provides Catholics with an opportunity for people to leave a legacy and assure the continuation of the Catholic Church and all the initiatives it is involved in within the community," said Dr. Patricia Skinner, foundation board member and president of Gaston College.

"The parish of Sacred Heart Church has become like a family to me," said Katherene Kruckel, a member of the Catholic Heritage Society. "The best way to say 'thank you' for the graces and blessings God has showered on me is to share with the Catholics of the future."

However large or small the amount, contributing to the foundation joins your funds with others' gifts to make a greater contribution, Kruckel said.

"Through their gifts, members of the Catholic Heritage Society are leaving a legacy that will help meet the needs of individuals in the Diocese of Charlotte for generations to come," said Jim Kelley, executive director of the Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte. "More and more parishioners across the diocese are following their example by remembering the church in their current and future estate plans."

Kelley said individuals establishing endowments take another step in living out the life of stewardship.

"Just as we make gifts from our monthly income, we also have an opportunity to give from our accumulated assets to endow the church of the Diocese of Charlotte," he said.

For Information about planned giving, contact Gina Rhodes at (704) 370-3320 or e-mail gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org.

AP SCHOLARS

Charlotte Catholic High School students earn designations

CHARLOTTE — Twenty-five students at Charlotte Catholic High School have earned the designation of AP Scholar by the College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Program Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program (AP) Exams allows students to take challenging college-level courses while still in high school, and to receive college credit, advanced placement or both for successful performances on the exams.

Almost 15 percent of the more than one million high school students worldwide took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to merit the recognition of AP Scholar. Students took AP Exams in May 2003 after completing challenging college-level courses at their high schools.

The College Board recognizes several levels of achievement based on the number of yearlong coursers and exams (or their equivalent semester-long courses and exams).

At Charlotte Catholic, 13 students qualified for the National AP Scholar Award. These students are Meredith Bivens, Eric Chow, Anne Garvey, Devin Hahn, Margaret Harouny, Elizabeth Johnson, Karen Kolman, Patrick Kopfle, Lindsey Keuser, Christopher Maher, Alexander Queen, Christina Valeri and Daniel Yarborough.

Seven students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award. These students are Jack Carley, Lauren Florack, Wade Sample, Courtney Tighe, Lindsey Tighe, Lauren Trojan and Maria Usher.

Five students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award. These students are Robert Alexander, Ryan Burke, Erica Cloer, Julia Harding and Jennifer Romano.

BISHOP McGUINNESS
CATHOLIC HIGH SCHOOL
EST. 1959

Triad Leader in Catholic Education

With a future of bright prospects guaranteed by a new facility and expanded programs, BMCHS continues its mission of unique service to the communities of the Triad. Over forty years of excellence as a first-class preparatory school conducted in the Catholic tradition is the hallmark of our history, and planning for your future is our privilege.

Come visit us at our Open House on Wednesday, November 12 at 7:30 pm. or, for a personal tour, please contact our Admissions Office at (336) 564-1011.

BISHOP McGUINNESS (336)564-1010
1725 NC HWY 66 SOUTH KERNERSVILLE, NC 27284
www.bmhs.us

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat: 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

IT'S BACK....
THE ST. THERESE BAZAAR!
Sat., November 15
8 am - 3 pm

"Crafty Ladies" gifts for all

Colossal bake sale
Gift wrapping
Photos with Santa
Third world crafts
Christmas cards
Breakfast and lunch, too

Plus entertainment all day!
DON'T MISS IT!!
217 Brawley School Road, Mooresville

Arden couple embody stewardship

STEWARDSHIP, from page 1

house, I helped out in the house," Isabelle said.

The Marinos, parishioners at St. Barnabas Church in Arden, joined a Baptist ministry group to build the 24-foot-by-18-foot addition — two bedrooms and a porch — for a family whose 2-year-old daughter is still recovering from near-fatal burns.

"Emily" was 9 months old, out in her playpen in the yard, when the accident happened. Her mother, "Rita" had set up tiki torches in the yard to ward off mosquitoes she feared might carry West Nile virus. One of the torches fell on the baby, causing third-degree burns over 85 percent of her body.

Ken and Isabelle knew the family and wanted to help.

"I volunteer at the Mountain Area Hospice Foundation (in Asheville)," Isabelle said. "Usually, I go in once a week to do office work, and I work on special events. This is how I met the burned baby's mother."

Rita, formerly head of the foundation, now stays home to care for Emily, the youngest of three children, while her husband is at his restaurant job. The toddler has had multiple surgeries and needs constant care.

Every week, Isabelle goes to Rita's house and helps with the washing, cleaning and "whatever she needs," said Isabelle. "It's really important because she just needs all the support she can get."

It's one of the many stewardship facets in the Marinos' lives. They give financially to church and various causes, but, "Giving generously doesn't mean just money," Ken said.

While raising their son and daughter, the Marinos lived in Rochester, N.Y., where Ken was a data processing manager for Chase Manhattan Bank. They weren't too busy to be involved.

"You have to give back," Ken said. "It can't be just for me. Don't ignore your family, but do for others."

"We used to do Open Door mission, serve food, in Rochester," Isabelle said. "When I first came here, I volunteered (as a receptionist) at Asheville-Buncombe Christian Community Ministry."

She also gave time at Mission Hospital in Asheville, cuddling premature babies whose parents lived some distance from the hospital and couldn't be there every day.

Now, Ken and Isabelle are involved in fundraising events for the Mountain Area Hospice Foundation. Ken's part-time job leaves him time to do handyman tasks for anyone who needs assistance.

The Marinos are members of the St. Barnabas Stewardship Committee (Ken is the chair), formed three years ago out of the church's visioning meetings to set goals for its future. They are also on the parish council. Ken is on the finance council, is a eucharistic minister and usher and helps out around the church with painting and other maintenance work.

"Other people have questioned, 'Why do you do this? Works won't get you into heaven.'" Ken said. "We know that, but it doesn't stop us from doing it. There is a reward: it makes you feel good."

"Something drives me from the inside, and it's got to be God who does it," he said. "[The inspiration] comes and I feel like I can help out, and I just do it."

Isabelle is a member of the St. Barnabas Women's Guild, participates in adoration of the Blessed Sacrament, and washes and irons altar-server vestments.

"I think as you grow older in your life, certain things become more important," Isabelle said. "The Lord is important in my life. You say, 'Lord, what can I do in my life?' How can I repay him for having a good life? This is my way of giving thanks. I can wash and iron."

"Stewardship is a way of life," Ken said. "To do it is a kind of attitude change. You have to be willing to do things. It gives you good feelings, but it can't be just for me. It has to be for other people."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

Consolation kids collect clothes for community

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Bianca Graham smiled and waved to passing vehicles as she stood outside Our Lady of Consolation Church. She held a sign that read "Free Clothes."

Graham, one of 60 youth ministry members at Our Lady of Consolation, was helping out at the ministry's clothing drive Nov. 1.

The youth, ages 7-18, spent two weekends collecting and then sorting over 1,000 items of new and used clothing, plus shoes, donated by Our Lady of Consolation parishioners.

"We talked about a garage sale, but realized it would be better to give the clothes away," said Nanette Lide, one of the three youth ministers.

"The location of the church is in a less-fortunate location, so we'd rather give the clothes away," said Cortney Colon, 17.

Approximately 30 people showed up within the first 30 minutes of the drive to browse the tables of clothes.

Graham, 20, who's been in the youth group for four years, said this year's focus of the church's youth ministry was to reach out to the community.

"Hopefully, we'll give all the clothes away," she said.

"It's a source of evangelization," said Lide. "It shows the youth how privileged they are, and teaches them respect for the community in which they come to worship. Ninety-nine percent of us don't live in this community."

"We should be helping the community, because as a church we're supposed to help others," said Whitley Lide, 12.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Over 1,000 items of free clothes and shoes were being given away at Our Lady of Consolation Church's youth ministry clothing drive Nov. 1.

"It makes a whole lot of difference," said Virginia Robinson, who recently moved to Charlotte from Winston-Salem. She found several garments at the clothing drive.

"They've helped me," she said. "It's a blessing."

The youth ministry members were glad to help.

"I feel this was something God wanted me to do to help the community," said Julian Tucker, 12. "It doesn't matter how old or how small you are, you can still help somebody."

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic News & Herald

The Diocese of Charlotte
CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES
1123 South Church St.
Charlotte, NC 28203
www.cssnc.org

Executive Director:
Elizabeth Thurbee (704) 370-3227
Refugee Office:
Cira Ponce (704) 370-6930
Justice & Peace:
Joe Purello (704) 370-3225
Special Ministries:
Gerard A. Carter (704) 370-3250

Charlotte Region: 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203
Area Director: Geri King (704) 370-6155
Western Region: 50 Orange Street, Asheville, NC 28801
Area Director: Sister Marie Frechette (828) 255-0146
Piedmont-Triad: 621 W. Second Street, Winston-Salem, NC 27108
Area Director: David Harold (336) 727-0705
Greensboro Satellite Office: (336) 274-5577
High Point Hispanic Center: (336) 884-5858

For information on specific programs, please call your local office.

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

STEWARDSHIP OUTREACH

Parishes find new ways to promote stewardship

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE —Throughout the Diocese of Charlotte, churches are striving to involve their parishioners in stewardship on a variety of levels. St. Therese Church in Mooresville and St. Pius X Church in Greensboro, have successfully found new ways to serve their parishes through time, talent and treasure.

Gathering the shepherds

In a growing parish, needs and opportunities for stewardship grow as well. St. Therese Church is attempting to meet the needs of more than 1,700 families.

When the stewardship committee was originally formed in 1983, it was one of the first such committees in the Diocese of Charlotte, according to Barbara Gaddy, diocesan associate director of development. Last year, in an effort to foster a "sense of belonging" in the parish, the pastoral council revitalized the stewardship committee.

"This is a way of thanking God for all that he does for us," said Kerry Ann Tornesello, stewardship committee chairperson and a member of the pastoral council.

To kick off the new program, the committee held a "Stewardship Summit" in the spring of 2003 in which they brought the spiritual meaning of stewardship to the parish leaders. They brainstormed, planned and prayed as a group to bring new life into the parish. Of the 50 ministries at St. Therese Church, 46 sent representatives to the summit.

The purpose of the stewardship committee is to make the six commissions and their ministries accountable for setting goals and creating mission statements, said Tornesello.

"We offer them help and a hand to hold," she said. The committee supports the ministries' missions and efforts to increase membership.

The stewardship committee began the annual parish stewardship campaign in August, using the parish Web site, newsletter, bulletin inserts and a stewardship fair to promote opportunities.

On Commitment Sunday in September, members of each ministry carried in banners representing their ministries. The banners were hung in the church as a reminder to parishioners of the importance of contributing their time, talent and treasure to the church community.

Stewardship pledge cards were mailed to each family prior to Commitment Sunday. During each Mass, parishioners were asked to demonstrate their commitments to the parish by bringing their pledge cards to the altar, rather than putting them in the offertory baskets.

More than 760 families have responded to the call for stewardship.

"We definitely got the message of stewardship out to the community," Tornesello said.

A little child to guide them

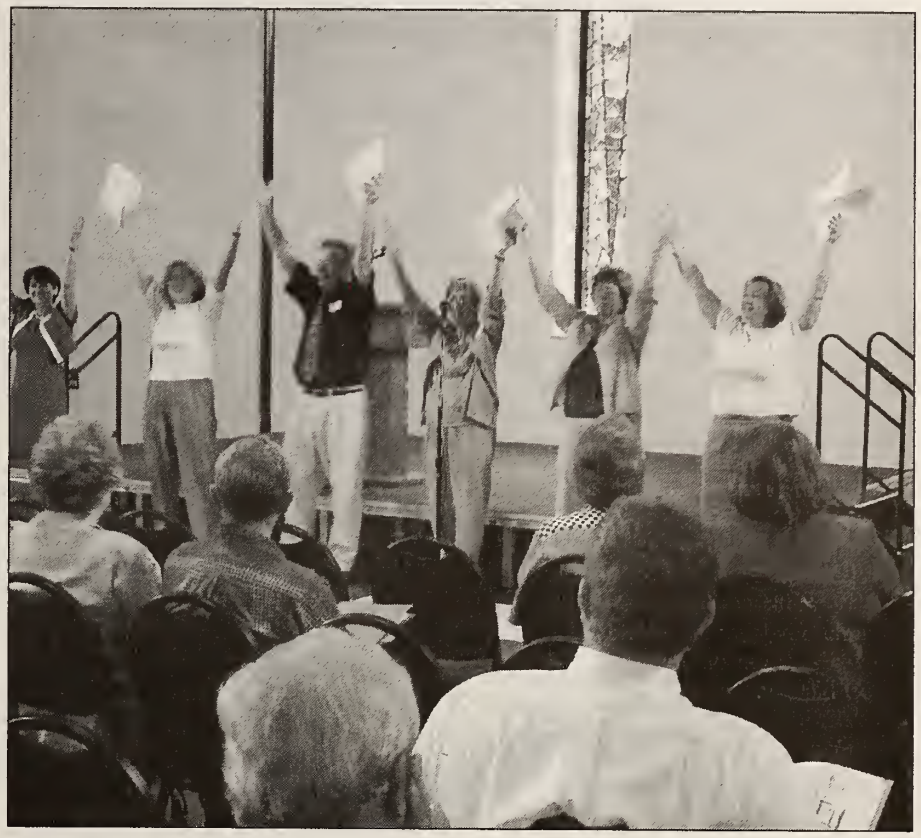
At St. Pius X Church, the focus has been on getting the youth of the 1,033-family parish involved.

"We want our youth to be more active in stewardship," said Patti Dunning, chairperson of the Stewardship Committee for St. Pius X. "Our goal is to have two high school students, two middle school students and two grade school students on the youth stewardship committee."



COURTESY PHOTO

Members of St. Therese Church's stewardship committee teach stewardship through song at the parish's "Stewardship Summit" in the spring of 2003.

One way the committee is increasing gifts of treasure from the youth of the parish is by using personalized children's offertory envelopes. The envelopes have different designs for each age group, said Dunning.

Young people donate their time to projects such as Operation Christmas Child, a worldwide gift distribution project for needy children' Urban Ministry; and Mary's House, a shelter for women and their children.

These projects help the children to understand what stewardship is and the importance of their participation, Dunning said.

Although it took one year to get the youth stewardship program running, the parish has seen steadily increased participation, with as many as 50 people, including families, participating in the projects.

In an effort to further increase their stewardship efforts, St. Pius X is changing their stewardship drive to the spring for 2004 and will host a fair to showcase the ministries in need of time and talents donations.

Dunning and Tornesello are confident that their efforts will bear fruit as more members of their parishes, and more Catholics in the diocese, participate in stewardship efforts.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information on stewardship, contact Barbara Gaddy at (704) 370-3302 or e-mail bagaddy@charlottediocese.com

THE IRISH SOCIETY OF CHARLOTTE PRESENTS...

an evening of IRISH FUN!

Friday, Nov. 14 — 7:30 pm

Tickets $20 - info: 704-720-0963 or 704-708-6789

Featuring Andy Cooney ("Irish America's Favorite Son" by The New York Times) and his band from New York! He has performed with the Oak Ridge Boys, Larry Gatlin, the Statlers and others and is best known for Boston Rose and Shannon River.

Special appearances by Rince na hEireann & Walsh Kelley stepdancers!

tickets at the door, too

Oasis Shrine Club, 604 Doug Mayes Place, Charlotte (university area)

We beat the banks!

IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

Please pray for the following priests who died during the month of November:

| | |
|---|---|
| Rev. Msgr. John P. Manley | 1981 |
| Rev. John J. Hyland | 1975 |
| Rev. John S. Regan | 1976 |
| Rev. Stephen A. Sullivan | 1989 |

Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Two new books on prayer and meditation

REVIEWED BY BRIAN T. OLSZEWSKI
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

If "Sabbath Moments: Finding Rest for the Soul in the Midst of Daily Living" was produced in an audio version, it would be a relaxation tape. However, you could not listen to it while operating a motor vehicle for fear of having your attention diverted from the road to your heart and soul.

Author Adolfo Quezada puts readers at ease as he lulls them toward a place of peace. He describes sabbath moments as "more than a time for doing; they are a time for being." In each of the daily exercises into which he coaxes readers, that "being" is with God, and it is done in silence. He refers to the sabbath moments as a refuge, a retreat, and they are. He prescribes one each day for six weeks — long enough for practitioners to build them into their daily routines.

"Sabbath Moments: Finding Rest for the Soul in the Midst of Daily Living," by Adolfo Quezada. Resurrection Press/Catholic Book Publishing Corp. (Totowa, N.J., 2003). 110 pp., $6.95.

"Jacob's Hip: Finding God in an Anxious Age," by Kerry Walters. Orbis Books (Maryknoll, N.Y., 2003). 103 pp., $12.00

Sabbath moments are unlike most people's lives. They are silence, not cacophony; they are peacefulness, not stressfulness; they are a place where readers can approach God, and God can approach them, not a Godless existence.

Quezada is realistic in understanding the hectic. That is why he suggests practitioners schedule their sabbath moments, that they make time to replenish themselves by listening to the God within.

"Sabbath Moments" draws from the discipline of meditation. On consecutive days during the fifth week, Quezada refers to meditative state. He talks about breathing and being aware. Those uncomfortable or unfamiliar with meditative prayer should not be discouraged from "Sabbath Moments." Rather, they would do well to accept the prodding Quezada offers, and to listen, in silence, with their hearts. Ultimately they will — by finding their sabbath moments — learn how to relax with God.

While the term "countercultural" has been overused and misused, it is apropos in describing "Jacob's Hip: Finding God in an Anxious Age." What author Kerry Walters offers is something with which many people — particularly in the wake of Sept. 11, which serves as a reference point for the author — will not be comfortable.

Walters fortifies his case for living the unsettled life, for downward mobility, for being vulnerable, with numerous quotations from Henri Nouwen, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Karl Rahner, and Archbishop Oscar Romero, among others. Readers steeped in philosophy and theology may have an easier time comprehending what Walters offers if they are familiar with the lives and works of these people.

This book requires contemplation as Walters challenges readers: "When it dawns on us that we are lovable (because God loves us), we also realize that God loves us because we are made in the supremely loving and lovable God's likeness. This, in turn, pushes us toward the discovery that, like the God on whom we are modeled, our nature is to reciprocate love, and that our hearts are restless until we do."

That thought is indicative of what he offers throughout the book; it requires at least one rereading, as well as time for digesting. In other words, this is not an "easy read."

Nor should it be, for what he proposes is intense; it cuts to the heart in that it exposes how willing or unwilling we are to depend upon God — unconditionally. Those who follow what Walters advises can expect to live a life in which turning the other cheek is a given, for human reasoning of this unquestioned link with God will not suffice.

"Jacob's Hip" will certainly get readers to think. Whether they are willing to invest themselves in what Walters advocates may be determined by how well they comprehend his train of thought, or whether or not they are comfortable with living a life that is, in fact, countercultural.

Olszewski is editor of the Northwest Indiana Catholic, newspaper of the Diocese of Gary, Ind.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: NOV. 9, 2003

Nov. 9, Dedication of the Lateran Basilica in Rome

Cycle B Readings:
1) Ezekiel 47:1-2, 8-9, 12
Psalm 46:2-3, 5-6, 8-9
2) 1 Corinthians 3:9c-11, 16-17
3) Gospel: John 2:13-22

BY BEVERLY CORZINE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

The double schoolhouse doors crashed behind us as my friend Nancy and I went racing into the glory of a crisp fall afternoon. The excitement of Friday filled the air. What could be better than to be free from the tedium of our fourth-grade classroom? During these fall days we savored the walk home through the brilliant leaves that covered the yards and sidewalks of the houses and churches on our way.

Each day St. Leander's Church marked the half-way point in our journey home. No matter how many times we passed by, I found myself consumed with curiosity about what lay beyond its mysterious doors. We often tried the door, but always found it locked, which left me with a sense of disappointment mixed with relief. On this day my friend Nancy said, "Let's see if the door is open today."

I had long-standing instructions. If we were ever to enter the church, we must cover our heads and remain deathly quiet. Nancy pushed the great metal latch down. The door opened a few inches. I trembled with fear and anticipation. We slipped through the narrow slot. I followed my friend's lead and dipped my fingers in the holy water and made the sign of the cross. Afternoon shafts of light poured through the stained-glass windows. I recognized some of the statues that seemed to wait in the shadows. I breathed in the leftover spicy smells of incense. I stood in the main aisle, looking at the crucifix above the white marble altar. To me the holy had become palpable. For the first time in my young life I experienced sacred space.

The readings for this weekend remind us of the importance of sacred space in our lives as we mark the dedication of St. John Lateran Basilica in Rome on Nov. 9, 324. However, sacred space is not only like that which we find in a magnificent cathedral in a faraway land, it is also the sacred space that lies within our hearts and souls. In his first letter to the Corinthians, St. Paul reminds us that if the foundation of our lives is Jesus the Christ, then we are the temples of the Holy Spirit.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 9 - NOVEMBER 15

Sunday (Dedication of the Lateran Basilica in Rome), Ezekiel 47:1-2, 8-9, 12, 1 Corinthians 3:9-11, 16-17, John 2:13-22; Monday (St. Leo the Great), Wisdom 1:1-7, Luke 17:1-6; Tuesday (St. Martin of Tours), Wisdom 2:23—3:9, Luke 17:7-10; Wednesday (St. Josaphat), Wisdom 6:1-11, Luke 17:11-19; Thursday (St. Frances Cabrini), Wisdom 7:22—8:1, Luke 17:20-25; Friday, Wisdom 13:1-9, Luke 17:26-37; Saturday (St. Albert the Great), Wisdom 18:14-16; 19:6-9, Luke 18:1-8

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 16 - NOVEMBER 22

Sunday (Thirty-third Sunday in Ordinary Time), Daniel 12:1-3, Hebrews 10:11-14, 18, Mark 13:24-32; Monday (Elizabeth of Hungary), 1 Maccabees 1:10-15, 41-43, 54-57, 62-63, Luke 18:35-43; Tuesday (St. Rose Philippine Duchesne), 2 Maccabees 6:18-31, Luke 19:1-10; Wednesday, 2 Maccabees 7:1, 20-31, Luke 19:11-28; Thursday, 1 Maccabees 2:15-29, Luke 19:41-44; Friday (Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary), 1 Maccabees 4:36-37, 52-59, Luke 19:45-48; Saturday (St. Cecelia), 1 Maccabees 6:1-13, Luke 20:27-40

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection Lowest Prices
Drivers wanted.
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

'Love Actually' ain't bad

CNS PHOTO FROM UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

Keira Knightley stars in a scene from Universal Studios' "Love Actually," a romantic comedy set in London which interweaves 10 stories of love. From romantic to puppy love, from love between spouses, friends and families to unrequited love, writer-director Richard Curtis has composed a touching if uneven film that pleases despite familiar cliches and overworked situations. However, unnecessary extended sexual scenes detract from the film's overall drollness. Several scenes of sexual encounters with nudity, a few sexual references and innuendoes, and intermittent rough language with an instance of profanity. The USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is L — limited adult audience, films whose problematic content many adults would find troubling. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is R — restricted.

'Revolutions' doesn't revolve around a good plot

BY DAVID DICERTO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — At one point during the grandiose climax of "The Matrix Revolutions" (Warner Bros.), Smith, the film's virtual villain, experiences a sense of digital deja vu and snarls, "I've seen this before." That sentiment may be shared by the audience throughout this final installment of Larry and Andy Wachowski's bloated cyber-noir "Matrix" trilogy.

All three movies consist of protracted, ultraviolent action sequences stitched together by dollops of pretentious, pseudo-philosophical dialogue and allegorical symbolism, with over-the-top, gravity-defying brawls serving as the visual centerpiece of each movie. Though the Wachowskis rein in the existential banter in this third go-round, the stylized carnage remains at full throttle. And while the franchise continues to push the envelope of technical wizardry, it's in inverse proportion to narrative and character development. The result is an overstuffed maelstrom of noise and violence, a sound and fury signifying nothing. Like the Matrix itself, the film looks substantial, but is ultimately empty of any real content.

For those who missed the first two films, Keanu Reeves plays Neo, a computer hacker turned reluctant messiah who discovers what he thought was the real world was just a computer simulation piped into his brain by sentient machines which, in some distant dystopian future, have taken over the world and which keep him — along with most of Earth's population — imprisoned in this illusory reality known as "the Matrix" in order to harvest their neural electricity as a fuel source.

A few hundred stalwart humans have escaped to the subterranean stronghold of Zion — the last outpost of humanity — in the hope of overthrowing the machines.

As the curtain rises on "The Matrix Revolutions," Neo's mind is trapped between the Matrix and the real world. Trinity, Morpheus and Seraph track down the elusive Trainman — the only program who can release Neo from his psychic waylay. Meanwhile, Zion prepares for an Armageddon-like last stand against an invading machine army.

Once reawakened, Neo borrows a hovercraft in order to reach Machine City, a menacing mechanized metropolis on the Earth's apocalyptic surface, and confront the machine monarch.

Visually, this exercise in bland grandiosity does not make the exponential leaps in special effects that helped the original redefine the sci-fi genre. The pioneering "bullet time" effect, thought so cutting-edge in 1999, is now de rigueur in less lavish films, and even commercials.

As in the two earlier films, "Revolutions" draws themes from a broad range of mythological and theological traditions. Yet much of its metaphysical musings are weighed down by its sturm-und-drang sententiousness and blustering banality. Still, enough breaks through the fray to serve as an opportunity for discussion between Christianity and pop culture, elevating the film above the morass of more mindless action movies.

Due to much stylized violence as well as recurring profanity, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-IV — adults, with reservations. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is R — restricted.

DiCerto is on the staff of the Office for Film & Broadcasting of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

GOOD GOD

Come eat, shop and have fun at

ST. LUKE'S ARTS & CRAFTS FESTIVAL

Saturday, Nov. 15th 8 am until 3 pm

Hand-made gifts and treasures featured by more than 40 artists and craftsmen!

Plus, a fish fry and bake sale!

13700 Lawyers Road, Charlotte Info: (704)841-1372

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company

Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte

The Catholic Company Outlet Store

228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715

803-396-5399 ext. 240

Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm

5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485

I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd). Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.

CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman

The Catholic Company – Lake Norman

19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031

704-655-9090

Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm

In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's

I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave. Go west for ½ mile. The store is on the North side of street.

LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926

McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.

Charlotte 704-334-6421

Pineville 704-544-1412

Mint Hill 704-545-4864

Derita 704-596-3291

Holiday Celebrations

—with—

The Pampered Chef®

The Kitchen Store That Comes To Your Door®

Kitchen/Catalog Shows
Fund-raisers
Individual Orders

Book a holiday show or place an order before Dec. 10 and receive a free gift.

Teresa R. Scott
Independent Kitchen Consultant
704-814-9101

Father Willis made mark on Hispanic community, students' lives

BELMONT — Benedictine Father Lawrence Willis died in his room at Belmont Abbey Oct. 26.

A Mass of Christian burial was Oct. 29 by Abbey monks and diocesan priests in the presence of Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte, the Belmont Abbey College community and Father Lawrence's friends. He was buried in the Abbey Cemetery.

Father Willis had served as a Belmont Abbey College professor since 1967 and as a member of the College's Board of Trustees, 1979-1982.

As an instructor, he was a pioneer audio-visual instruction and outfitted his classroom with the latest in audio and video technology.

He generously shared his talents and regularly hosted special sessions for colleagues and their classes, outside groups and individuals. Although Father Lawrence taught in a variety of fields, he particularly enjoyed teaching the mythology of various world cultures.

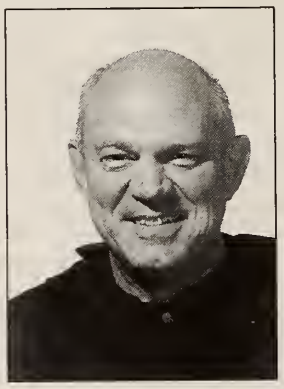
Born in Greensboro on Nov. 30, 1939, he matriculated at Belmont Abbey College in 1957, where he earned his bachelor's degree. While a college student, he entered the novitiate at Belmont Abbey and received the name Lawrence. His first profession of monastic vows was Feb. 1, 1961.

Father Willis pursued theology at the international Benedictine college, Sant' Anselmo, in Rome, where he earned a licentiate in sacred theology. While in Rome, he professed solemn vows at Sant' Anselmo in October 1964. He was ordained to the priesthood in Assisi on July 10, 1966.

Following his theological studies, Father Willis continued studies in Italian at the Università per Stranieri in Perugia and earned a master's degree in Spanish at the Universidad Ibero-Americana in Mexico City.

In addition to linguistic skills, Father Willis had a virtual photographic memory. He was a walking encyclopedia filled with information on a vast array of topics.

In his priestly ministry, Father Willis placed his language skills at the service of the church, and for many years was devoted to the pastoral care of the growing Hispanic community at St. Dorothy Church in Lincolnton.



Benedictine Father Lawrence Willis

In recent years, Father Willis suffered from diabetes. Throughout his declining health, he constantly edified his confreres and all who knew him by his patient acceptance of his infirmities and his unwavering determination to return to his beloved classroom.

The weight training of his younger years helped as he rolled himself everywhere in his wheelchair, actively and eagerly participating in all aspects of the life of his monastic and college communities. It was with great shock and sadness that the Belmont Abbey community learned of his passing.

Mercy Sister Mary Loreto's dedicated prayer life remembered

BELMONT — Mercy Sister Mary Loreto Brown, 93, died Oct. 28 at Marian Center, Sacred Heart Convent in Belmont.

A Mass of Christian burial was held Oct. 30 with burial following at Belmont Abbey Cemetery.

Sister Mary Loreto was born March 27, 1910 in Washington, D.C. Her secular name was Elizabeth Valliday Brown; she took the name Sister Mary Loreto upon entering the religious order of the Sisters of Mercy on Oct. 30, 1954. She was received as a Sister of Mercy on Aug. 15, 1955.

Sister Mary Loreto taught at St. Michael School in Gastonia, 1956-1958, and at Sacred Heart School in Salisbury, 1958-1960. She served as a caregiver for residents at Holy Angels Nursery, 1960-1964.

She served her community in a variety of roles from 1964 until 1970: From housekeeping and driving duties to handling the reception desk to spiritual direction. In conjunction with her motherhouse duties, she administered in the residence halls at Sacred Heart College.

Sister Mary Loreto began as assistant librarian at Charlotte Catholic High School in 1970. In 1974, she became a pastoral visitor at Mercy Hospital in Charlotte. Although unable to continue for long due to health problems, she shared and brought God's word to the sick.

Her earlier apostolic works included teaching faith formation classes, working with prisoners and visiting the homebound, all of which she wholeheartedly relished.

She was also a dedicated member of the Catholic Daughters of America in Bethesda, Md., until her death.

She will be remembered for her infectious smile, gentle nature, devout demeanor and her dedicated prayer life.

Mercy Sister Mary Loreto Brown

Memorials may be made to the Sisters of Mercy, Sacred Heart Convent, 100 Mercy Drive, Belmont, N.C. 28012-4805.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

SALES: #1 Health and Nutrition Company expanding. Full training provided. $25-$75/hour part-time/full-time. 1-888-724-7425. http://www.wisdomofwealth.com/?refid=n3

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

FOR SALE

GRAVES: Three in Floral Garden Cemetery, High Point. Section KK-349. Priced at one-half cemetery's current price per space. 336-883-8954.

FOR RENT

Snowbirds - Family Vacations - Weekend Getaways. OCEANFRONT condos in Charleston, SC and Hutchinson Island, FL. www.hedontheheach.com or 704-895-3214

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

SUPPLEMENTAL HEALTH CARE
STAFFING SPECIALISTS

is proud to announce the opening of a new allied health division in North Carolina!

PTs and OTs up to $36/hr
PTAs and COTAs up to $30/hr
Speech Therapists up to $40/hr

Per diem and contracts available

Contact me today to find out what Supplemental Health Care has to offer you!

Deena Taylor
Toll free (877) 781-9565
Fax (919) 781-9564
Dtaylor@supplementalhealth.com

Visit our website: www.ncalliedstaffing.com

To the millions of Catholics across the nation:

Thank You!

For your postcards, your letters, your phone calls, and most of all, your prayers.

After eight years, you've made history.

This marks the first federal restriction of an abortion procedure in 30 years.

The struggle over partial-birth abortion is not over, and the ban faces a court challenge. But today our nation is one step closer to a culture of life.

God Bless You

The Catholic Bishops of the United States

Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus and the USCCB Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities.

Respect Life Office - (704) 370-3229
Maggi F. Nadol, Director
Catholic Social Services — Diocese of Charlotte

Ban signed into law

BAN, from page 1

sor of legislation to ban partial-birth abortion, and his colleagues successfully passed the measure 64-34. The vote came three weeks after the House passed the same measure with a 281-142 vote.

On Oct. 28 Congress sent the bill to President Bush, who signed it into law Nov. 5. The U.S. bishops' Committee on Pro-Life Activities and the Knights of Columbus praised the ban.

"The ban on partial-birth abortion is a testimony to the dedication of so many who believe in the sanctity of life," said Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte. "I am thankful for those who stayed the course and 'fought the good fight,' often at great personal sacrifice."

"Although this partial-birth abortion ban will be questioned and opposed by some, we join people of goodwill in many faith traditions who recognize the inherent truth of the Gospel of Life," said the bishop. "The truth of the Good News is stronger than campaigns of misinformation and innuendo. This victory encourages us to remain vigilant in our work to secure protection for all God's children."

During Clinton's presidency, the Senate passed the ban twice and he vetoed it both times. A third attempt was stopped by the courts.

Santorum's was a keynote speaker at the St. Louis Archdiocese's 27th annual pro-life convention came a couple days before Senate passage of the ban.

Santorum said pro-lifers are engaged in a culture war that requires several actions: getting involved in politics, which includes voting for pro-life leaders and being aware of the judges being appointed to the courts; showing that the pro-life movement is one of love and not hate and anger; and prayer, including for those in leadership positions and on the front lines.

Editor Kevin E. Murray contributed to this story.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

DIOCESE OF CHARLOTEE PASTOTRAL CENTER
THE CHANCERY

7 November 2003

My Dear Friends in the Lord:

Despite the best efforts of concerned Catholics, the number of people living in poverty in our country increased by 1.4 million during the past year. Almost 35 million Americans are caught in the cycle of poverty. Children are growing up in an age beleaguered with terrorism, war, violence, and intergenerational cycles of poverty that weaken the human spirit.

I urge you to give generously to the Catholic Campaign for Human Development when the annual collection is taken in your parish on November 22-23, 2003. The major portion of the collection is used by the national offices of CCHD to support anti-poverty projects across the country; the remainder stays here in our diocese to fund self-help initiatives that benefit our local communities, and to educate Catholics and the general public about CCHD. Among the 13 projects that received local funding from the 2002 collection are the Adequate Housing for Latino Population in Franklin, the Ellerbe Hispanic Center, an After School Enrichment Program in Waynesville, and the Far West Affordable Housing Action Program in Hayesville.

Together we can brake the cycle of poverty. With an increase in the collection, CCHD could fund many more of the groups that apply for help.

At the Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia last month, cosponsored by CCHD, I was awed by the statistics cited by CCHD Executive Director Rev. Robert Vitillo in his remarks on the state of poverty in the United States. To read his entire speech, please visit http://www.cssnc.org/uploads/BBCAVitilloAddress.pdf. We must increase our efforts to respond to those in need.

Thanking you for your continued generosity and wishing each of you God's blessings, I am

Sincerely in Christ,

Mauricio W. West

Very Reverend Mauricio W. West
Vicar General and Chancellor

POVERTY VIEWS

More than 32 million U.S. residents live in poverty. U.S. adults who...

| Are concerned about poverty in America | Know someone living in poverty | Lived in poverty at some point |
|---|---|---|
| 87% | 41% | 33% |

Sources: U.S. Census Bureau and Cathalic Campaign for Human Develapment; "Poverty Pulse" survey, 2001

© 2001 CNS Graphics

Pope says God welcomes prayer offered with heart full of praise

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Prayer offered to God with a heart full of praise and a clear intention to follow the path of goodness is welcomed by God as a sacrifice, Pope John Paul II said.

When, as in the Psalms, believers praise God in prayer and beg for God's help in avoiding sin, they are acknowledging the close tie between "worship and life, prayer and existence," the pope said at his Nov. 5 general audience.

Under a bright morning sun in St. Peter's Square, the pope's teaching focused on Psalm 141 and its use in the church's evening prayer.

The psalmist prays, "Let my prayer come like incense before you, the lifting up of my hands like the evening sacrifice."

Pope John Paul said the psalm illustrates that "prayer made with a pure and sincere heart becomes a sacrifice offered to God."

The psalm also includes petitions that God will protect his faithful from evil and give them the strength to avoid temptation, the pope said.

"Words and works are, in fact, the expression of a person's moral choices," he said.

The psalm's references to the wicked being cast down into the depths or trapped in snares and their bones being scattered is a "picturesque" way of affirming "hostility to evil, the choice of goodness and the certainty that God intervenes in history with his judgment of severe condemnation of injustice," the pope said.

Pope John Paul told the estimated 18,000 visitors at the audience that the psalms are "invocations which the Lord himself wants addressed to him. He loves to listen to them, feeling the hearts of his beloved children vibrate through them."

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Non-Catholics receiving Communion in Catholic churches

Q. We have encountered some confusion in our area about when people who are not Catholic may receive Communion in the Catholic Church. Some say the conditions for interfaith reception of Communion are different now than a few years ago.

One priest told us non-Catholics cannot receive Communion in the Catholic Church because they can receive in their own churches. What is the present requirement or is it different from one place to another? (Florida)

A. The conclusions from various Vatican directives, and seemingly official practices, can be confusingly varied.

The latest general Catholic Directory on Ecumenism (March 1993) lists four conditions for reception of the Eucharist by a baptized non-Catholic Christian in the Catholic Church, unless a bishops' conference or the local bishop has established other norms.

The individual must (1) request the sacrament freely and on his or her own initiative, (2) manifest the faith the church professes concerning the Eucharist, (3) be spiritually prepared and motivated to receive, and (4) have no access for the sacrament in his or her own church or religious denomination (No. 131).

That seems straightforward enough, but in a later (1995) encyclical, "Ut Unum Sint," Pope John Paul II seemed to eliminate the fourth condition. It is a source of joy, he says, "that Catholic ministers may administer the Eucharist to Christians who are not in full communion with the Catholic Church, but who greatly desire to receive these sacraments, freely request them and manifest the faith" which the church professes about them (No. 46).

The pope quotes that same passage again in his new encyclical on the Eucharist released last Holy Week, "Ecclesia de Eucharistia" (No. 46).

The possible significance of these reduced conditions is highlighted by several relatively recent incidents, including the pope's administering Communion to Tony Blair, prime minister of Great Britain, in March of this year at a papal Mass. Mrs. Blair is Catholic, but he is not.

Pope John Paul's comments in the two encyclicals and the reception of Communion by Mr. Blair in the pope's chapel are interpreted as possibly minimizing or eliminating the 1993 requirement that a non-Catholic not have access to his or her own clergyman for the sacraments.

The above regulations do not apply to Eastern churches who are not in communion with Rome, for whom other rules apply.

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Pope John Paul the Great

Reflecting on pope's ministry, virtues

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

I was just leaving work after a long day at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops when word came that I might want to greet a group of visiting Polish bishops. Dutifully I walked to our conference room and greeted them, one of whom just happened to be Archbishop Karol Wojtyla.

The next time I met him he was Pope John Paul II, speaking to us about the glories of research and theology at The Catholic University of America, and then extolling the wonders of our priesthood in Washington's St. Matthew's Cathedral.

My first recollection of John Paul II is of a man with amazing energy and intellectual power. He was athletic and photogenic, conversant in several languages. He spoke with deep conviction and addressed issues in a philosophical, down-to-earth manner.

This April I saw the pope again in Rome. He was slumping over in his chair; he drooled and slurred his words. Though he made an effort to put gusto into them, his words were a whimper compared to times past.

As broken as he was, his determination to push on was very inspiring. Even more awesome was his courage in displaying his frailty in public. Like other fading greats, he could have hidden behind the scenes, only appearing when at his best. But he didn't do this.

Over the last few weeks Pope John Paul II has been lauded for being a champion of human dignity, befriending the poor and defending refugees, apologizing to the Jews, breaking down the Iron Curtain, traveling the world and working ferociously for world peace and Christian unity. I've come to think of him as a man with a mission to keep him going despite the circumstances.

One virtue of this pope that I feel writers often have overlooked is a first fervor he never lost. No doubt he, like all young priests, had aspirations to change the world through Christ and wanted to make a mark on it by serving Christ as well as possible.

Illness and old age have a way of cooling our fervor, causing us to think more of our health than of more important matters. Often they cause depression because we know we aren't our real self and that we will never have the energies to regain that self. And, too, when we get older many of our pet projects are reversed. Close friends die, leaving us with no one to share our concerns. And although we may enjoy it momentarily, we come to realize that peace can never fully be achieved in this life.

A pope is human, yet for good reason people think of Pope John Paul as a man of enthusiasm. A dreamer of new ideas; a lover of youth and, like them, forward-looking; the direct antithesis of someone who no longer has anything to live for: We all know these as characteristics of Pope John Paul.

Many feel this pope one day will be called John Paul the Great. Of all his great accomplishments, persisting in his first fervor and forever seeing life filled with God's uplifting spirit should be counted as his greatest.

Working for peace in the "Great War"

Rembering two great churchmen

The Bottom Line

ANTOINETTE BOSCO
CNS COLUMNIST

Eighty-five years ago, on Nov. 11, 1918, World War I ended, with an infamous tragedy. My late son Peter, who wrote a book on this war, told me with tears in his eyes of a decision made by Allied representatives on the early morning of that Nov. 11.

At 5 a.m., Germany signed an armistice with the Allies. But then someone got a brilliant idea. For the sake of "historical drama," news of the armistice could be held until 11 a.m. Then the news could report that the armistice had taken effect on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month.

In those six hours, many more soldiers on both sides were killed — for the sake of a catchy headline!

This was also the war that, because of the explosion of new technology, would forever change how war is fought, leaving millions of casualties, civilians as well as soldiers. It initiated a new globalism that would now characterize our foreign policy. It spawned the rise of communism that would rule in Russia and its satellites for the next 70 years. It accounted for the anger and madness of Hitler, a German soldier in World War I, who was infuriated at the peace treaty that demeaned Germany; his rise to power was another chance to get back at the Allies.

Sadly, World War I shaped the 20th century as the warring time that it became.

While nations continued the killing from 1914 to 1918, what few Catholics know is that Pope Benedict XV poured out love. He established an Office for Prisoners in the Vatican, making it possible for prisoners of war and soldiers at the front on all sides, as far as possible, to maintain contact with their families. He gave money to set up welfare works for war victims in all countries, getting them food, warm clothing and medical care. He insisted on help worldwide to ease the pain and deprivations endured by countless widows and orphaned children suffering hunger and homelessness.

Pope Benedict, emphasizing Christian love, proclaimed, "It is the duty of every person to run to help another human being who is in danger of death."

That war was to greatly affect another man of God, a young priest by the name of Angelo Roncalli assigned to a medical unit, "primitive at best," in a military hospital and serving also on the horrific battlefields. "The war was a time of intense suffering for Don Angelo, a time of testing and of learning through sorrow," wrote a biographer, Alden Hatch.

Like Pope Benedict, the young priest called this war "a useless massacre." Influenced by the pope, he founded a house for soldiers and worked to search for soldiers unaccounted for.

Clearly, as he brought the love of Jesus to soldiers, the seeds were sown of his yearning for "pacem in terris" — peace on earth. That wartime priest decades later became Pope John XXIII. In 1963 he published his great encyclical on peace, "Pacem in Terris."

On this anniversary we should remember with pride and gratitude those two great churchmen, who tried to bring Christ's compassion and peace to the world. Our pope today speaks also as they did, pleading for the end of hate and killing among nations.

Pope Benedict argued that if a peace settlement was not built on Christian principles of justice and, above all, charity, latent hostilities between peoples would rise again and there could be no real reconciliation and therefore no lasting peace. His words have been, sadly, prophetic.

Stewardship Awareness Sunday

Guest Column

BISHOP PETER J. JUGIS

On Sunday, November 9th, we celebrate our fifteenth annual Stewardship Awareness Sunday.

Personally, it provides an opportunity for me to reflect on my own gratitude to God for his abundant blessings in my life. I am always humbled by the generosity of God, who has given us everything-even His only Son. I am in awe when I consider every breath that I breathe, every drop of water that I drink, every faith-filled moment of my life is a gift from God. I constantly look for ways to give thanks to God through my stewardship of time, talent, and treasure.

I encourage you to take some time today to reflect on your own gifts of time, talent and treasure and give prayerful thought as to how you can best respond to God's generosity. Perhaps it might mean making a concerted effort to improve your prayer life, giving God the first fruits of your time. It could involve taking an inventory of your talents and finding ways to use those talents in service to God through your parish, the diocese or your community. It may be a time to take another step in giving a proportionate amount of your financial resources to support your parish, the diocese or other charities.

We all need to ask ourselves what kind of stewards we are of the Catholic faith that we cherish and of the natural resources God has provided the world in which we live.

I am aware that many of you have already completed your annual parish stewardship renewal. Others will be making commitments of time, talent and treasure on Stewardship Awareness Sunday or later in the spring of the year. Whether you make a formal pledge in your parish or a simple private renewal, I encourage you to give proportionately of the first fruits of God's many gifts. Jesus assures us that the good and faithful steward will "share in the master's joy" (Matt 25:21).

Through Baptism we are called to be faithful disciples of Jesus Christ. We must make a conscious choice to follow His way-a way of life that embraces stewardship.

Our Lady of Grace serves as spiritual dwelling for Triad Catholics

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro, established in 1952, is now home to over 2,300 registered families.

Our Lady of Grace Church
2205 West Market Street
Greensboro, N.C. 27403

Vicariate: Greensboro
Pastor: Father Francis O'Rourke
Parochial Vicar: Reverend Luis S. Osorio
Deacons: Reverend Mr. Timothy Rohan; Reverend Mr. Paul Teich
Number of families: 2,353

Father Francis O'Rourke

GREENSBORO — In January 1952, Bishop Vincent S. Waters of the Diocese of Raleigh (which encompassed all of North Carolina at the time) established Our Lady of Grace Church as a division of St. Benedict Church, the mother parish of Greensboro.

Construction funding came from Julian Price, a Baptist, whose wife, Ethel, a convert to Catholicism, died in 1944. Price donated $400,000 for the project, but died in 1946 before building of the 500-seat church began. World War II and rising building costs delayed construction, but the Prices' children gave an additional $300,000 to ensure the memorial church would be built.

Construction finally began in the spring of 1950. Modeled after the Church of Our Lady of Refuge in Brooklyn, N.Y., Our Lady of Grace hosted its first Mass in July 1952 and was dedicated by the late Archbishop Amleto Cocognani (then-apostolic delegate to the United States) in September of that year. Msgr. Arthur Freeman was appointed as pastor.

The parish quickly established a school, dedicated by Bishop Waters in November 1953. Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary from Scranton, Pa., arrived in August to staff the school for the next 26 years. The school opened in 1954 to 175 students in kindergarten through eighth-grade.

Additions and renovations to the church property were made during the following years. The current rectory was purchased in 1954, and the convent in which the sisters lived was expanded in 1963. The convent, which originally served as rectory, was also furnished with a chapel at that time.

Then-Msgr. Michael J. Begley, the fifth pastor of Our Lady of Grace Church, was installed as the founding bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte in 1972. Father Francis Smith, who had served as Msgr. Freeman's assistant, returned as pastor.

In 1973, a nearby house was purchased for parish meetings and social activities. The structure, named St. Agnes House, was sold in 1982.

Bishop Begley dedicated the new parish activity center Nov. 14, 1976. The three-story center houses a gymnasium, kitchen, cafeteria, six classrooms, school library and church and school administrative offices.

In 1977, the parish celebrated the church's 25th anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McKinley Bryan — the latter of whom is the daughter of Julian and Ethel Price — donated money for the 2,226-pipe "jubilee organ." It took more than a year to design the organ and build a gallery for it over the front entrance of the church.

The parish school celebrated its 25th anniversary in 1978 by burying a time capsule containing national and international events from 1953 to 1978. A growing student body led to further expansion of the school, which now teaches over 400 students.

In summer 1988, the Marians of the Immaculate Conception were appointed by then-Bishop John F. Donoghue to pastor Our Lady of Grace Church. The Marians remained until February 2000, when diocesan priests resumed pastoral leadership.

In 1995, parish financial support funded a church renovation, including painting the interior, refinishing pews and installing new carpeting. Stained glass windows in the vestibule depicting the Assumption and the Immaculate Conception were installed, and a Divine Mercy chapel was added to the sanctuary.

A Respect Life Garden was blessed Jan. 19, 1999 by then-Bishop William G. Curlin. In June 2001, Father Francis O'Rourke and Father Luis Osorio were appointed as pastor and parochial vicar, respectively.

Parish growth has been steady. In 1952, the congregation comprised 300 families; by 1982, 775 households made up the church community. In the mid-1990s, more than 1,700 families called themselves Our Lady of Grace parishioners.

Striving to be a welcoming community, the parish has evolved into one reflecting a cultural diversity that includes many from Africa, Eastern Europe, Asia and an ever-increasing number of Hispanics from Mexico and Central and South America. In 2001, Our Lady of Grace Church began a weekly Mass celebrated in Spanish.

More than 500 people gathered to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the church Oct. 12, 2003. Thirteen priests, including former pastors of Our Lady of Grace Church, concelebrated the Mass with Archbishop John F. Donoghue of Atlanta.

Our Lady of Grace is more than a loving memorial to Ethel Price. From its beginnings a half-century ago to the present, it has also served as a spiritual dwelling for the ever-growing numbers of Catholics who call the Triad region of North Carolina home.

Make the right move to finding your dream home. See Chase first... because home ownership matters.

TAILORED MORTGAGE PROGRAMS

- Chase mortgage programs are tailored to fit your individual needs
- Experienced mortgage specialists will personally work with you from application through closing
- A free mortgage affordability estimate can show you how much home you can afford*
- A Chase mortgage preapproval will make you feel more confident knowing you have "cash in hand" when shopping for a home

Make the move to Chase Home Finance—call today.

Paul McClure
(704) 553-1202 Ext. 203

CHASE
THE RIGHT RELATIONSHIP IS EVERYTHING®

*Results of the mortgage affordability estimate are guidelines; the estimate is not an application for credit and results do not guarantee loan approval or denial. A fee for preapproval may be applied. All loans are subject to credit and property approval. Program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. Not all products are available in all states or for all loan amounts. Other restrictions and limitations apply. All loans offered through Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corporation ("CMMC"). Corporate headquarters: 343 Thornall Street, Edison, New Jersey 08837, (732) 205-0600. © 2003 J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. All Rights Reserved. 10/03 0504

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

The Franciscan Center
Catholic Gift & Book Store
Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!
Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday
(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
HAS MOVED TO
3816 South New Hope Rd UNIT # 27
(in the NewHope Small Business Center)
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
OPEN Monday thru Saturday 10 AM to 6 PM
Special Christmas selections in stock
(quantities and availability limited)
SHOP EARLY and OFTEN!

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

NOVEMBER 14, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 8

FC282
A3630

Parish Profile: St. Leo the Great Church

| Page 16

TO FEED THE HUNGRY

Catholic Social Services Food Pantry in need of restocking

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Every year, more than 1,200 people in western North Carolina turn to the Catholic Social Services (CSS) Food Pantry to help feed their families. More than 2,500 bags of non-perishable food were donated to the Food Pantry in 2002.

However, with an increasing population and declining economy, 2,500 bags of food will not feed the hungry of western North Carolina in 2003, said Geri King, director of the Charlotte Regional Office of CSS.

In the past two years, CSS has noticed a significant increase in the number of first-time Food Pantry clients. King said this is a commentary on the state of the economy and the effects of Sept. 11. Even though the economy is improving, there are still many families in need of assistance until economic progress affects them in a positive manner.

"The Food Pantry used to be so full we could send our overstock to the Metrolina Food Bank," said Barbara Grisinger, a social worker for the Charlotte Regional Office. Now, the pantry is barely stocked to meet the needs of its own clients.

There is always an increased need in the colder winter months, King said.

"It's very hard on the staff when there is nothing to give out to a needy family," she said. "We are grateful for the sources that have been with us for years, but we need more people to respond."

See PANTRY, page 4

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Barbara Grisinger, a social worker for the Charlotte Regional Office of Catholic Social Services, examines the inventory of the Food Pantry. Food Pantries throughout the Diocese of Charlotte are experiencing shortfalls in their stock as donations fail to meet steadily increasing requests for food.

A HELPING HAND

Breaking poverty's cycle through CCHD

BY TERRI JARINA
SPECIAL TO THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CHARLOTTE — P.T. Barnum said "money is a terrible master but an excellent servant."

Experts tell us the economy is on the rebound, yet unemployment figures and our own observations present a conflicting message. As we approach the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons, we are bombarded with marketing that lures us with false hopes that we will find happiness in materialism and excessive consumerism.

Throughout the year, our Catholic faith challenges us to be the master of our money when we respond to the needs of others in our families, in our communities, in our nation, and in our world.

In his speech at the Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia in October, Rev. Robert J. Vitillo, executive director of the Catholic Campaign for Human Development (CCHD), stated the U.S. Census Bureau had announced in September that the number of people living in poverty in our country increased by 1.4 million over the past year. Father Vitillo also contrasted quotes on poverty by Washington's political "wonks" with a poignant statement by Pope John Paul II.

According to the Washington sources, the Census Bureau statistics were a "fairly predictable product of the slowing economy" and the "results of the surveys have been

See POVERTY, page 12

PHOTO BY SUSAN DEGUZMAN

Seventeen priests joined more than 250 parishioners in celebrating the 75th anniversary of St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem Nov. 10, the feast day of St. Leo.

A 'MONUMENT TO GOD'

St. Leo the Great Church celebrates 75th anniversary

BY SUSAN DEGUZMAN
CORRESPONDENT

WINSTON-SALEM — More than 250 parishioners gathered with nearly two dozen religious to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Saint Leo the Great Church Nov. 10, the feast day of St. Leo.

Benedictine Abbot Placid Solari of Belmont Abbey celebrated the Mass, concelebrated by 17 priests including former St. Leo the Great pastors Msgr. Anthony Kovacic, Msgr. Joseph Showfety and Father James Solari.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis was unable to attend the celebra-

See ANNIVERSARY, page 6

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
#420836# S237 P2
#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275

'Fire in the Mountains'
Exploring enthusiasm, discipleship
| Page 5

'Circles of Love'
Celebrating World Community Day
| Page 7

Christian initiation
Teaching catechists to echo God's word
| Page 8

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

SIGNING FOR LIFE

CNS PHOTO BY BOB ROLLER

Members of Congress surround President Bush as he signs the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act into law Nov. 5 at the Ronald Reagan Building in Washington. The bill prohibits the partial delivery of a fetus "for the purpose of performing an overt act that t he person knows will kill the partially delivered living fetus."

Signing of partial-birth abortion ban called 'vital step' for nation

WASHINGTON (CNS) — In what a U.S. archbishop called "a vital step in the right direction for our nation," President George W. Bush signed the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act into law Nov. 5 at a Washington ceremony attended by many Catholic leaders.

"The facts about partial-birth abortion are troubling and tragic, and no lawyer's brief can make them seem otherwise," Bush said. "By acting to prevent this practice, the elected branches of our government have affirmed a basic standard of humanity, the duty of the strong to protect the weak."

The president said a partial-birth abortion "involves the partial delivery of a live boy or girl, and a sudden, violent end to that life. Our nation owes its children a different and better welcome."

The partial-birth abortion procedure, used only in the second half of pregnancy, is defined in the law as the partial delivery of a fetus from the womb "for the purpose of performing an overt act that the person knows will kill the partially delivered living fetus" and then performing that act, killing the partially delivered fetus instead of delivering it alive.

"We commend the president for his action, and we pledge our prayers and support to see that this brutal procedure remains prohibited by law and intolerable to the American people," the Archbishop Charles J. Chaput of Denver, chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Pro-Life Activities.

Pro-life members of Congress have worked since 1993 to ban the procedure. Bills barring partial-birth abortions were twice vetoed by President Bill Clinton on grounds that there was no health exception in them. A health provision would have rendered the legislation virtually meaningless because of the broad definition of maternal health given by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1973 in its decisions to legalize abortion.

"For years, a terrible form of violence has been directed against children who are inches from birth, while the law looked the other way," Bush said. "Today, at last, the American people and our government have confronted the violence and come to the defense of the innocent child."

He also pledged to "vigorously defend this law against any who would try to overturn it in the courts."

Less than an hour after the president signed the legislation, U.S. District Judge Richard Kopf of Lincoln, Neb., issued an injunction against implementation of the law. The ruling applied only to Dr. LeRoy Carhart of Bellevue, Neb., and three other abortion providers who had filed suit against the law.

Nuncio says market economy helps nations but can't solve all problems

UNITED NATIONS (CNS) — Relying on a market-based economy will benefit developing countries, but "markets by themselves do not solve every social problem," the Vatican nuncio to the United Nations said in New York Nov. 5.

Archbishop Celestino Migliore said that governments, while respecting the principle of subsidiarity, may need to play an important role in the economy to deal with problems such as poverty and unemployment.

"The relationship between government and markets should be viewed as complementary rather than competitive or even antagonistic," he said.

Addressing a committee of the U.N. General Assembly reviewing trade and development issues, the nuncio said "removal of artificial restraints" could produce economic growth, but might also bring "social distortions."

Those distortions, particularly in less developed countries, may "require government measures" to alleviate the suffering of the poor, and "international trade rules should not hinder the ability of governments to adopt such measures," he said.

Archbishop Migliore also spoke of the "distorting" effects of agricultural tariffs and export subsidies maintained by rich countries, and the failure to get these reduced at the September meeting of the World Trade Organization in Cancun, Mexico.

He expressed hope that "the tense situation" at the Cancun meeting would not "jeopardize the possibility of building ... a strong and more multilateral system in the areas of trade and development."

"What is needed is a greater degree of international solidarity among all the nations of the world and abandonment of those group interests that can promote their own selfish objectives while disregarding the common good," he said.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

ASHEVILLE — The Celebrant Singers and Orchestra will perform a community-wide Christian concert Nov. 26 at 7 p.m. at St. Eugene Church, 72 Culvern St. The Celebrant Singers are an internationally known Christian music ministry performing concerts of praise and worship for more than 20 years. The concert is free and open to the public. For details, contact Nancy at (828) 254-5193.

HENDERSONVILLE — The St. Francis of the Hills Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order meets the fourth Sunday of each month 3-5 p.m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. West. Visitors and inquirers are welcome. For more information, call Helen Gillogly, SFO, at (828) 883-9645.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel Catholic School, 3028 Providence Rd., will hold a Meet and Greet Coffee for Prospective Parents at the school cafeteria Nov. 18 at 9:30 a.m. Current students, parents and faculty will be available to share information about the school and answer any questions. If you have questions, please call (704) 366-2409.

CHARLOTTE — Do you want to tone down the commercialism of Christmas? Are you wondering how to approach Christmas in a more prayerful way? St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., will host an Advent Reflection Nov. 17 at 7 p.m. in the Ministry Center. Father David Valtierra of the Oratory will present the reflection. For details, call the church office at (704) 364-5431.

CHARLOTTE — A Women's Talk will be held Nov. 19 at 7 p.m. at St. Vincent Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. The speaker will be Father Mark Lawlor. For more information, please call Peggy at (704) 588-7311.

CHARLOTTE — Holidays can create feelings of dread and anxiety in those who are bereaved. Creating new rituals and new traditions that pay tribute to the memory of the deceased is one way to survive and even embrace the holidays when a loved one has died. Janice Olive of Hospice of Charlotte will offer suggestions for dealing with "Grief and Loss During the Holidays" on Nov. 19, 7-9 p.m. at St. Gabriel Ministry Center, 3016 Providence Rd. If you have questions, call BJ Dengler at (704) 364-5431.

CHARLOTTE — C.A.F.E. (Catholic Adult Faith Exploring), a web-based learning experience with a monthly roundtable discussion of a current issue in the Catholic Church, will meet Nov. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the St. Matthew New Life Center, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. Deacon Jeff Evers will facilitate a discussion on "Orthodoxy in the Church." For more information connect to http://home.catholicweb.com/stmatthewff/ and click on "Links," look for CAFE and click on the web-based article to read for this month's discussion.

CHARLOTTE — A Natural Family Planning class will be taught Nov. 20, 7:30-9 p.m. in the Life Center, room 102, at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Com-

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

NOVEMBER 14, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 8

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope reiterates warning against use of embryonic stem cells

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Stem-cell research opens new hope for curing diseases, but such cells must never come from human embryonic tissue, Pope John Paul II told scientists at the Vatican.

"Any treatment which claims to save human lives, yet is based upon the destruction of human life in its embryonic state, is logically and morally contradictory, as is any production of human embryos for the direct or indirect purpose of experimentation or eventual destruction," the pope said Nov. 10.

He made the remarks to members of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, which was meeting to discuss "stem-cell technology and other innovative therapies." The pope pronounced a small part of his text and let his aide say the rest.

The church's teaching that all human life — even embryonic — must be respected and protected has placed it in opposition to researchers who use stem cells from human embryos, which are then destroyed.

The pope acknowledged the potential of stem cells in the treatment and possible cure of "ills affecting many people." But he said it was clear that "stem cells for purposes of experimentation or treatment cannot come from human embryo tissue."

He noted that instead he has encouraged stem-cell research on adult human tissue or tissue superfluous to normal fetal development.

mons Pkwy. The method being taught is the Billings' Ovulation Method. For more information, call Judy Townsend at (704) 846-6983. Please reserve a space before Nov 18.

CHARLOTTE — New Creation Monastery, 11517 Spreading Oaks Ln., invites you to join in celebrating Christ the King Nov. 23 as our patronal feast with festive Mass at 10:30 a.m. Young professionals and new friends are especially welcome. The monastery will also offer sung vespers and Benediction at 5 p.m. For details, call Father John Vianney Hoover at (704) 541-5026.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

BELMONT — Dennis Teall-Fleming will lead a video presentation on the movement to close the military training School of Americas and a discussion on how to get involved in this movement. Many of the school's graduates have returned to their countries to take part in Latin America's worst human rights atrocities. The event will take place Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St. For details, e-mail teallfleming@yahoo.com or call (704) 825-9600, ext. 26.

GASTONIA — Educator Dr. Allen Queen will present "Transitions of Children and Youth" at 6:45 p.m. Nov. 19 in the Parish Center of St. Michael Church, 708 St. Michael's Ln. The presentation will follow the Wednesday evening dinner that begins at 6 p.m. Activities for children ages 4-12 will be provided in the Rose Room. For details call the church office at (704) 867-6212

BELMONT — The Burke family invites friend to attend a memorial Mass for the repose of the souls of Sister Mary Thomas Burke and her brother, Msgr. Thomas P. Burke, to be celebrated on the occasion of the anniversary of their deaths Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. at the Sacred Heart Convent, 100 Mercy Dr.

GASTONIA — St Michael Church, 708 St. Michael's Ln., will host a free Thanksgiving celebration Nov. 27, 12-3 p.m. in the parish center. Family and friends are all invited for food and fellowship. Transportation is available for those needing rides. Meal will be delivered to those who cannot attend. Call the church office at (704) 867-6212 for details.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

NEWTON — The Little Flowers Catholic Girls' Group is for all Catholic girls ages five and up. The group meets the fourth Monday of each month at St. Joseph Church, 720 West 13th St., at 4 p.m. in the Holy Family Hall. For more details, call Debbie Vickers at (828) 495-2039.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

SALISBURY —Sacred Heart School, is having its first reunion of alumni, faculty, parishioners and friends Nov. 29 at the Salisbury Civic Center, 6-9 p.m. The program for the evening will honor the past; rejoice in the present and present plans for our future. For details, call Sacred Heart School at (704) 633-2841.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — Rachel's Vineyard Retreat is a weekend of hope and healing for anyone who has personally experienced an abortion or anyone who have been involved in the decision to choose abortion: husband, boyfriend, sister, parent. The retreat will take place Nov. 21-23. For details, call Martha Shuping at (336) 659-1342 or the diocesan Respect Life office at (704) 370-3229.

CLEMMONS — The OLM Little Rock Scripture Study for Women offers a bible study Monday evenings 7:30-9 p.m. in the library of Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd. Classes meet until Nov. 24. For more information, call Anne Gannon at (336) 727-4591.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Vatican aims to create 'sacred vernacular language,' official says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The Vatican's new rules and structures for translating the prayers and readings used at Mass aim to create a "sacred vernacular language" that is easy to understand but more formal than everyday speech, a Vatican official said.

The Vatican "contests the affirmations that do the rounds in certain circles to the effect that the language of the liturgy should slavishly reflect the development of local speech," said Father Anthony Ward.

Father Ward, an official at the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Sacraments, wrote about Vatican rules on liturgical translations in the congregation's bulletin, Notitiae.

Father Ward's article looked specifically at the congregation's 2001 instruction "Liturgiam Authenticam" ("The Authentic Liturgy").

Some English-speakers saw the document as a sharp criticism of the approach their bishops had taken toward translations, as an attempt by the congregation to take control over liturgical translations from bishops' conferences and as a move to impose a style of English that does not reflect the way most people speak the language.

However, Father Ward wrote, "The document takes a fundamentally positive tack, planning for the future rather than expending any great energy on criticizing the past."

Father Ward also disputed the charge that the congregation improperly had taken upon itself the bishops' authority to oversee translations.

The 2001 document, he said, "aims at promoting a collaborative or a collegial model," ensuring that bishops, and not the translators they hire, are directly responsible for the translations.

When a translation is being prepared for use by more than one bishops' conference — as is common with Spanish, English and German texts — it is "necessary that some guaranteeing authority enter the scene, and the only candidate is the Holy See," he said.

The Vatican, Father Ward wrote, is the proper authority for establishing translation commissions such as the International Commission on English in the Liturgy and for approving the commission statutes.

In addition, he said, the Vatican must be involved in translations into the world's major languages because those translations are used by the Vatican and its embassies around the world.

To heal a flock

CNS PHOTO BY PAUL HARING

Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Belleville, Ill., president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, addresses the nation's bishops at the opening session of their general meeting in Washington Nov. 10. Bishops, including Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte, were scheduled for three days of meetings to discuss such issues as food, farmworkers and clergy sex abuse. Bishop Gregory urged healing and reconciliation be part of efforts to address the clergy sex abuse crisis.

Fighting hunger pains

PANTRY, from page 1

"Everybody thinks about giving during the holidays, but we need people to continue donating food well into the new year," said Becky DuBois, a social worker for the Piedmont-Triad Office of CSS. "Give now, but keep giving in February and March."

The Food Pantry serves people who are homeless, unemployed and the working poor. Many of the working poor must spend their meager earnings on rent, utilities and medicine, leaving little or no money for food, King said.

Many Food Pantry clients are not eligible for food stamps or donations from relief organizations such as Loaves and Fishes. Also, the rations eligible clients do receive from these agencies may not be enough to sustain their families until they are next eligible to receive food, according to King.

The requirements are less strenuous for the Food Pantry than other organizations. However, clients are encouraged to apply elsewhere before coming to the CSS Food Pantry.

The Food Pantry receives its donations through a variety of sources, King said. Several Charlotte churches regularly collect food from parishioners. The CSS office also welcomes donations from individuals.

St. Gabriel School sponsors an outreach ministry once a month and has chosen the Food Pantry for November. Each student and faculty member who brings in a can of food is allowed to "dress down" for the day. Sharon Broxterman, principal, said she expects all 530 students and 60 staff members to participate. While many students bring in one can, others will donate a whole bag of food, she said.

"It's a non-exclusionary way for all the children to minister to the poor," Broxterman said. "Everyone has one item in their pantry they can donate."

King said the most valued donations the pantry receives are cash and store vouchers. The vouchers, which cannot be used to purchase alcohol or tobacco products, allow clients to buy perishable and specialty foods, and non-food items, including medicine.

"We honor their dignity by letting them buy their own food," she said.

According to Grisinger, a number of their clients are seniors or have special dietary needs due to high blood, diabetes or other conditions. For this reason, cash and voucher donation are also valued.

The work of the Food Pantry is a way of living out the gospel message of feeding the poor, said King. It also carries out the mission of CSS, which reads, "Catholic Social Services is a Christian ministry of love, service and justice dedicated to supporting and empowering individuals, families and faith communities as they meet the challenges of life and address the conditions of society."

"In a ministry like this, you truly see the hand of God," King said.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

WANT TO HELP?

The CSS Food Pantry will gladly receive donations at the following locations:

Charlotte Regional Office
1123 S. Church St., Charlotte
9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday

Piedmont-Triad Office
627 W. Second St., Winston-Salem
9 a.m.-5 p.m., except 12:30-1:30 p.m. Monday through Friday

Western North Carolina

Lilies of the Field Food Pantry
35 Orange St., Asheville
9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday
Designate for "Lilies of the Field"

The Food Pantries are in need of the following items:

Cash donations
Vouchers from supermarkets and Target, Wal-Mart and Kmart
Non-perishable foods, especially:

- Rice
- Canned vegetables
- Canned fruit
- Unsweetened fruit
- Canned soup
- Pasta and pasta sauce
- Canned tomatoes
- Canned tuna and tuna helper
- Canned meat
- Macaroni & cheese dinners
- Dried beans
- Oatmeal
- Grits
- Dry cereals
- Powdered and canned milk
- Boxed baking mixes that only need water
- Ensure nutritional supplement

Household cleaning supplies
Toiletries
Baby care needs
Paper products — toilet paper, paper towels
Laundry detergent

Lilies of the Field will also accept:

- Diabetic sweeteners (Splenda)
- Meat
- Pet Food
- Medicines — vitamins and Tylenol

Experts at Vatican conference split on genetically modified foods

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Although affirming principles such as the goodness of creation, human responsibility and the need for solidarity, two priests looking at the morality of using genetically modified foods drew different conclusions.

U.S. Jesuit Father Roland Lesseps, an agricultural scientist working in Zambia for the past 15 years, and Legionaries of Christ Father Gonzalo Miranda, dean of the bioethics faculty at Rome's Regina Apostolorum Athenaeum, spoke Nov. 11 at a Vatican conference.

Father Miranda said if, as most scientists claim, the risks of genetically modified foods for human health and the environment are no greater than with traditional foods, then it could be considered morally obligatory to promote their use to feed the poor.

Father Lesseps said Catholic moral teaching requires caution when intervening in God's creation, leading to a rejection of genetically modified crops until their long-term impact on human health, on the environment and on the poor is evaluated.

Father Miranda was asked if he came upon a starving person and the only food he had might be poisonous would he give it to the starving person.

"No," the priest answered. "But we are not in that position. We know that competent authorities have said genetically modified foods are safe."

Father Lesseps objected to attempts to focus on the morality of genetically modified foods strictly from the point of view of their potential for reducing world hunger.

"There are better ways to address the problem of world hunger, and debating genetically modified organisms is distracting us from the real debate about poverty," he told reporters.

"It is clear that hunger is not primarily a matter of scarce food resources, but of the economic structures of distribution and accessibility and the social structures of traditional practices and education," he said.

"There are other and more suitable ways to feed a hungry world than adopting genetic engineering of crops," the priest said. They include increasing general health and education, improving food distribution and battling trade barriers that keep products from poor countries out of the international marketplace.

Father Lesseps said his position stresses "the respect due to all of God's creation, a respect that recognizes the sacredness and inherent value of the cosmic order."

The need to exercise caution in manipulating creation, he said, is especially important when dealing with "something as basic to human life as food."

Father Miranda said it is incorrect to present as a Catholic position the idea that any action that alters nature is ethically wrong.

He said human beings are just one part of creation, but "man was created as a being superior to all other visible creatures."

Human beings were created "with the ability to understand nature and the laws of nature and to intervene to modify living and nonliving beings in order to defend themselves from danger or to gain a determined advantage," he said.

Father Miranda agreed that human beings do not have a right to damage or destroy nature or to risk human health.

But if genetic engineering does not harm nature or human health, then the use of the technology is an opportunity for people "to cooperate, using the power of their intelligence, in the work of creation begun on the first day of the world," the priest said.

THE BEST OF WALL STREET JUST DOWN YOUR STREET.

- Stocks
- Mutual Funds
- Government Securities
- Corporate Bonds
- Tax-Free Bonds
- IRA's and Pension Plans
- Annuities
- Money Management

FOR MORE INFORMATION, CONTACT:

Les Davaz
Member, St. Patrick
Financial Consultant

(800) 438-0397
(704) 331-2233

Visit me at www.fc.smithbarney.com/davaz

100 N. Tryon Street, Suite 3300
Charlotte, NC 28202

SMITH BARNEY citigroup

©2003 Citigroup Global Markets Inc. Member SIPC. Smith Barney is a division and service mark of Citigroup Global Markets Inc. and its affiliates and is used and registered throughout the world. CITIGROUP and the Umbrella Device are trademarks and service marks of Citicorp or its affiliates and are used and registered throughout the world.

CFCC

Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center

Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity

5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com

Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

MAKE ROSARIES

Call for catalog and introductory offer or visit
www.rosaryparts.com

LEWIS & COMPANY

PO Box 268-K,
Troy, NY 12181
800-342-2400

Conference explores enthusiasm, discipleship

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

LAKE JUNALUSKA — "Amen" and "Right on" rang out during Father Francis Cancro's presentation on "Creating Enthusiasm for the Faith."

Father Cancro, pastor of St. Eugene Church in Asheville, was a speaker at the 10th annual Fire in the Mountains (FITM) Nov. 8. Some 300 people attended the event, sponsored by the Asheville and Smoky Mountains vicariates.

Father Cancro said enthusiasm for the faith comes from such aspects as belonging to a faith community, zeal for the Eucharist, continuing education including learning Catholic history, and putting faith into practice in the world.

"We are called to share our faith," he said. "Faith is not something we do alone. In the Tridentine liturgy, you could come to Mass with your missal and your rosary and sort of be alone. The revisions of Vatican II changed that, taking us back to the golden age (of more communal celebration)."

"You're not doing this salvation thing alone. You're connected through those baptismal waters," Father Cancro said. "We are in union with God and with each other through Communion. It isn't just about me and Jesus, it's about all of us together."

Eucharist is the best expression of Catholic community, he added; it's "about people coming together with unique roles, not for position, but to celebrate unity. The determining factor in who receives Eucharist in a Catholic church is not belief that it's the body and blood of Christ. Eucharist is a sign of denominational unity, as Catholic believers gathered around the table."

"Eucharist pervades everything we do when we leave the table," said Father Cancro. "The most important words of the Mass are the last words, 'Go in peace.' They allow us to be broken and shared with one another."

Father Vincent Finnerty, pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Charlotte, spoke in Spanish about "Being a Disciple of Christ."

"Jesus spent a good amount of time forming those 12 men," said Father Finnerty. "That's the main thing that he did in his life. We'll be looking at how we're all called to be disciples."

"All the people were so excited, because we're learning how we can be disciples of Christ," said Jaime Sevilla, Hispanic ministry coordinator for the Boone Vicariate. "We must minister according to who we are," he added.

Sevilla learned that one must be a listener (a disciple) and a doer (an apostle).

"The people are now learning to be disciples," he said. "After they learn, they can be apostles. Many times, we are apostles but not disciples. To be a disciple is to be with Jesus and to listen to him, and then you can be an apostle. Many people are good disciples, but that is not enough."

Echoing what Father Finnerty said in his presentation to the Hispanic attendees, Father Cancro said, "The primary challenge for enthusiasm is to understand what it means to be a disciple of Jesus. The first disciples were disciples in their own context. We are called to discipleship in the same way."

That means being able to "engage the world to help it understand the Gospel," he said, and using things like modern technology to help evangelize.

"Vatican I (1869-1870) saw the church as a perfect reality in and of itself," Father Cancro said. "That isn't the reality of most of our history. Our Catholic worldview is that all is grace. For us, everything in the world is grace unfolding. A Catholic stance should not make us run away from the world. We are challenged to embrace the world and use it for the Gospel. Our perspective celebrates God's giftedness in all creation, even the most broken parts."

"How do you fit 'all is grace' into situations like adultery and pedophilia?" an audience member asked.

"All is grace, but humans screw it up," Father Cancro replied. "[Sin] started with us. It's the choices we make."

Dr. Cris Villapando, diocesan director of faith formation, said the event's turnout "shows how people here treasure their faith."

"People come to this who are not just catechists but who are interested in exploring their faith," he said. "The reason it's important to come to this event is that our faith has always been given to people. ... This doesn't preclude individual conversion, but faith is communal, and for Fire in the Mountains people gather from many communities."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

'FIRE IN THE MOUNTAINS'

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Linda Elrod (at the piano) and other musicians from St. Joan of Arc Church in Asheville and the Boone Vicariate lead the singing during the opening prayer service at Fire in the Mountains Nov. 8.

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection Lowest Prices

Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

Bring friends and family and join us for
THANKSGIVING DINNER
12-3 pm

A FREE celebration on Thanksgiving Day to share a meal and fellowship

For free transportation or information,
Call (704) 867-6212

St. Michael Church
708 St. Michael's Lane
Gastonia, NC

Painting history at St. Michael

Courtesy By Photo by Mike Ford

GASTONIA — St. Michael School students holding a painting of St. Katharine Drexel stand with Olga and Ivan Horvat, refugees from Croatia, and Father Joseph Mulligan, pastor of St. Michael Church. Ivan made the painting and donated it to the school during an all-student Mass Oct. 30.

"Its significance is St. Katharine Drexel helped fund the beginning of our parish, primarily for African Americans to be included in worship and education at that time," said Principal Joseph Puceta.

Ivan Horvat also painted a rendition of the Last Supper, which took him over a year to complete, and donated it to the church.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

75th anniversary

ANNIVERSARY, from page 1

tion due to the annual bishops' conference in Washington, but sent a video greeting that was played during the dinner following the Mass. Bishop Jugis spoke of his two assignments at St. Leo the Great, and shared fond memories of being warmly welcomed by both pastors and parishioners.

"I'm thinking of you this evening and remembering you in my prayers," said the bishop.

During the celebration, Father Paul Gary, a former parochial vicar at St. Leo the Great, told the history of the church, for which Bishop William Hafey of Raleigh placed the cornerstone in January 1928. Many parishioners shared their memories of the church during the dinner that followed.

"I received all the sacraments but Holy Orders here at St. Leo," said Mary Lib Daye, one of the founding parishioners who was baptized in the original church structure, a small frame church purchased in 1891, and was 11 years old when the present church was dedicated.

Barry Schline, a parishioner for 22 years, served on the building and finance committees during the construction of the church's current activity center in the 1980s.

"The major thing that I think this parish center has helped to bring is a wonderful sense of community to the church," said Schline. "It offers a place for parish-wide activities to be held such as this event tonight."

The celebration also included the unveiling of a special 75-year parish booklet detailing significant milestones of Saint Leo the Great Church and of those who helped achieve them, including clergy members and the Sisters of Saint Joseph who were instrumental in running the parish school founded in 1953.

St. Leo the Great School's 50th anniversary and the Sister's 60 years of service in the area were recognized at the celebration. Sister Dennis Eileen, eucharistic minister at Baptist Hospital and former teacher at Bishop McGuinness High School; Sister Emma Yondura, first-grade teacher at Saint Leo the Great School; and Sister John Christopher, a Bishop McGuinness teacher, attended the event.

Two Sisters who once worked at St. Leo the Great also returned for the celebration — Sister Jeanne Morgan, former director of faith formation, and Sister Joan Pearson, former director of Hispanic ministry and St. Leo the Great School teacher.

"I am literally a daughter of the parish," said Sister Joan. "I went all through grade school here. The Knights of Columbus, the St. Theresa's Guild and the Sisters all prayed for me and got me ready for the convent. The lifeblood of this parish is in my veins."

A history committee, with more than 20 people to archive the history booklet, worked on the Nov. 10 anniversary celebration and two other anniversary events for over a year.

"This was a lot of hard work with many hours, particularly in the formation of the booklet," said Joyce Anderson, co-chair of the history committee. "There are so many people who contributed to this and we couldn't have done it without any one of them."

St. Leo School Librarian Christine Hurley and the audio-visual club, comprised of eighth-graders, worked for six months — including summer vacation — to create a video archive for the celebration.

"I learned a lot about video editing right along with the kids," said Hurley. "The students were so enthusiastic, and they worked very hard."

Approximately 20 older parishioners as well as Msgr. Showfety were interviewed on camera and six hours of tape was edited down into a 45-minute video for the school.

"Having the opportunity to meet some of the elderly parishioners meant a lot to me," said Hurley. "Many of them are also those who have been so generous over the years."

"All of us who are privileged to worship here should be appreciative of all those who have supported the church all these years," said Joseph Williams, a longtime parishioner.

Father Thomas Kessler, pastor of St. Leo the Great, was grateful to the parishioners and religious who helped celebrate the church's anniversary.

"We are certainly celebrating a certainly joyous occasion — the 75th anniversary of our beautiful monument to God, the church we have here in Winston-Salem," he said.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more on the history of St. Leo the Great Church, see the Parish Profile on page 16.

THE ORATORY

434 Charlotte Avenue, P. O. Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586
(803) 327-2097

Iconography Retreat

7 pm Wednesday, Jan. 28 -
3 pm Sunday, Feb. 1

FATHER DAMIEN HIGGINS

Students will pray, study and be instructed in the traditional method of egg-tempra icon writing/painting.

Each student will take home a completed icon.

Cost: $250 tuition —
$160 room and board

'CIRCLES OF LOVE'

Many denominations celebrate World Community Day

Participants promise commitment to humanity's future

BY ELLEN NEERINCX SIGMON
CORRESPONDENT

HICKORY — Representatives from 20 Hickory-area churches formed a circle around St. Aloysius Church's sanctuary and prayed for forgiveness for the times they had excluded others from their own circles with their words, deeds or attitudes.

"Is not all that is unjust caused by one person overlooking the needs of another?" asked Rev. Christie Page, associate pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Hickory.

Rev. Page was the guest speaker for the annual World Community Day service at St. Aloysius Church Nov. 7. The theme of this year's service, "Circles of Love," came from the writings and songs of Medical Mission Sister Miriam Therese Winter, a professor of liturgy, worship and spirituality studies at Hartford Seminary in Connecticut.

"We cannot love on our own. We can only love through God," said Rev. Page. "Giving up the rights to ourselves is love. Love is praying that God will bless the person who hurt you."

"Love is turning the other cheek when someone strikes you, not dropping a bomb on them so they won't do it again," she said.

The first World Community Day was celebrated at another time of war 60 years ago during World War II. The idea came from a meeting of the United Council of Church Women as a way of showing unity across their various churches to promote peace.

Women across the country were asked to participate, and positive responses came from 90,000 women representing 46 states. The women voted to encourage the United States to join and take full responsibility in a world organization, and to affirm their willingness to continue wartime rationing so that the needs of victims of the war overseas could be met.

The women and men participating in this year's service in Hickory promised their commitment to the future of humanity by reading together a pledge from a manifesto developed by UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) in the year 2000. In it, they promised to respect life, reject violence, share their time and resources, listen with open minds, preserve natural resources and work for solidarity.

Youth from the participating churches made peace ribbons to decorate St. Aloysius' pews. Dennis Jones of Temple Beth Shalom sounded the shofar, a ram's horn trumpet used by the ancient Hebrews during high religious observances, at the beginning and the end of the service. Members of the St. Aloysius contemporary choir provided the music.

"We pray today for the peace that we all hope will come about," said Father Ed Sheridan, pastor of St. Aloysius Church. "May we respect the lives of all people."

PHOTO BY ELLEN N. SIGMON

Women leading the World Community Day Service at St. Aloysius Nov. 7 demonstrate the farther they move away from the center of the circle (representing God), the more remote they become from one another.

Scouting trek scholarships

CHARLOTTE — The Diocesan Committee on Scouting is sponsoring scholarships for up to two Scouts from the Diocese of Charlotte to participate in the St. George Trek at Philmont Scout Reservation in New Mexico July 4-19, 2004.

Applicants must be between the ages of 15 and 17; active, registered members of a Boy Scout troop of Venture crew; and active, registered members of a Catholic church in the Diocese of Charlotte.

Applications must be received prior to Dec. 6, 2003. For more information, contact George Waddell at (828) 437-8049 or Joe Vari at (704) 846-5155.

Holiday Celebrations
—with—
The Pampered Chef®
The Kitchen Store That Comes To Your Door®
Kitchen/Catalog Shows
Fund-raisers
Individual Orders
Book a holiday show or place an order before Dec. 10 and receive a free gift.
Teresa R. Scott
Independent Kitchen Consultant
704-814-9101

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm
Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas
704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Is That Your Final Answer?
"When I'm gone, who will receive the gifts God gave me?"
A will is your final answer to the question. 60-70% of Americans die without a valid will. If you die without a will, the laws of the state you live in will determine how your assets are divided including assets to your family. Without a will or other charitable estate plan, charitable desires you may have for your parish, Catholic school, agency, diocese or the diocesan foundation will be ignored. Don't let your final answer be silence.
The Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte
To receive a free booklet "Better Estate Planning" contact Gina Rhodes, Director of Planned Giving, 704-370-3320, 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203, gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org

Groce FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530
Assuring Absolute Integrity
Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535
Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

Christian initiation of adults

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Catechists from the Diocese of Charlotte practice a method of "Echoing God's Word" at an institute presented by the North American Forum on the Catechumenate Oct. 16-18. The three-day institute is designed to teach catechists how to use their own encounters with God's word to enhance the spiritual lives of RCIA candidates and catechumens.

Teaching catechists to echo God's word

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

BROWNS SUMMIT — Eighty catechists from the eastern United States gathered at the Episcopal Summit Conference Center Oct. 16-18 to experience "Echoing God's Word," an institute sponsored by The North American Forum on the Catechumenate (Forum).

"Echoing God's Word" is one of the Forum's Initiating Community Institutes, which trains catechists to learn and rehearse a method and the related skills to prepare for the Liturgy of the Word, and to prepare catechists and homilists to help people move beyond a fundamentalist and privatized approach to both Scripture and Catholic teaching.

"This weekend is to help catechists, especially during the catechetical process, to learn to attend to the word," said Sister of Charity Donna Steffen, one of the institute's presenters and a member of the Forum.

According to Sister Donna, the method primarily consists of listening to the word and reflecting on 'what struck me?' about the passage.

Unlike many institutes that focus on the practical applications of the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (RCIA) for catechumens and candidates, "Echoing God's Word" concentrates on teaching catechists how to better reflect on the Gospel, thereby passing their enhanced understanding on to the catechumens and candidates of their parish.

"The purpose of the workshop is to reinforce our encounters with God's word," said Father Tim Fitzgerald, director of adult faith formation and lay ministry for the Diocese of Des Moines, Iowa and institute presenter. "(These encounters) are a cornerstone of God's church and the initiation of adults into God's faith."

"The value of the institute is twofold: it helps ministers of the Diocese of Charlotte to understand how to approach Scripture in preparation of a catechetical session and it helps us implement that knowledge in our own lives," said Linda Licata, chair of the Diocesan RCIA Commission and Forum team member.

"God's word has the power to change us," Licata said.. "Reliable resources help us to be changed and formed by God's word."

The method helps adult believers to realize they can read Scripture from the perspective of their own lives, Father Fitzgerald said. The liturgical life of a parish is the foundation of the parish, he said.

"The models presented in the institute help catechists implement the ideas in their parishes," said Pat Millar, member Diocesan RCIA Commission. "We are able to walk the faith journey with the inquirers and show them what this journey is all about — and that it is based on Scripture and liturgy."

According to its Web site, the Forum is an international network of people dedicated to the full implementation in parishes of the RCIA and its implications for reconciliation. Members of Forum share ideas and offer support for initiation and reconciliation as well as collaborate with other ministries and organizations whose mission includes elements of the initiation process such as evangelization, conversion and discipleship.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

College mourns death of former president

Father John Bradley remembered for wisdom, faith

BELMONT — The namesake of Belmont Abbey College's Bradley Institute for the Study of Christian Culture, Father John Paul Bradley, died peacefully Nov. 8.

The Mass of Christian burial was celebrated Nov. 13 by Benedictine Abbot Placid Solari of Belmont Abbey, monks of Belmont Abbey, priests of the Diocese of Charlotte and Father Bradley's friends. Father Bradley was buried in the Abbey Cemetery following the service.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland on June 18, 1919, Father Bradley entered the Roman Catholic priesthood at age 25. After serving as a parish priest, Father Bradley was awarded a scholarship to Oxford University, where he completed one of the university's most prestigious degrees, Literae Humaniores.

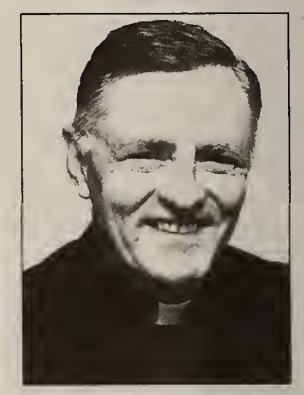
He also pursued a position on the university's soccer team, which would eventually turn into a lifelong love of the sport. After extensive studies in literature, philosophy, education and the classics in his native Scotland and at Oxford, Father Bradley came to the United States to work as an assistant to Archbishop Fulton Sheen in New York City.

In 1952, Father Bradley came to Belmont Abbey College, where he served in a variety of roles from moderator of athletics to head of the department of philosophy. This assignment helped forge a relationship with Belmont Abbey that would continue the rest of his life. During this time he also became editor-in-chief of Good Will Publishers, Inc.

Father Bradley had also served as a senior editor at J.G. Ferguson Publishing Company, a subsidiary of Doubleday.

In 1970, Father Bradley accepted the position of president of the college, a position he held for eight years. After retiring as president, he served as provost of the college from 1978 until 1981, and thereafter served as a member of the board of trustees of the college. At the time of his death, Father Bradley was the chairman emeritus of the board of directors of Good Will Publishers and a retired priest of the Diocese of Charlotte.

A longtime resident of Charlotte, Father Bradley was known to his many friends and associates as a uniquely warm and engaging man of letters whose wisdom, wit and great faith were at all times put to use in the service of others. Friends say his Scottish charm was exceeded only by his love for truth, his faith and the virtuous life.



Father John Paul Bradley

Father Bradley's work and great deeds have had a lasting impact on the many friends who had become family to him; converts to the Catholic faith; a host of former students; the many business and professional leaders who were drawn to him and Belmont Abbey; a community of scholars who respected his passionate commitment to truth and fellow clergy.

He is survived by his devoted sister, Rose Bogan; by her daughter and son-in-law, Ann Michelle and John Monaco; and their children, Joseph, Rosemary, Catherine, and Gregory.

TAKE YOUR EVENT
somewhere unusual...

The Catholic Conference Center offers the exuberance of nature in a celestial environment unlike any you've ever been to before. Eight meeting rooms. Fifty hotel-style lodging rooms. Bountiful dining and a staff ready to serve you in style! All this and more on 172 beautifully landscaped acres offering that special "retreat" environment in a modern conference setting.

1551 Trinity Lane, Hickory, NC 28602
(828) 327-7441 or Toll-free (888) 536-7441

The Catholic Conference Center

Check out our website
www.catholicconference.org
info@catholicconference.org

SPIRIT FILLED BLESSING COMING SOON

NCBCC
North Carolina Black Catholic Conference

June 25-27, 2004

Sponsored by the Office of African Ancestry Ministry & Evangelization, Diocese of Raleigh and African American Affairs Ministry, Diocese of Charlotte

Rooted in Faith
Transformed by the Spirit
Empowered for Ministry

Rooted in Faith
Transformed by the Spirit
Empowered for Ministry

Opening Keynote Speaker

Monsignor Raymond East
Archdiocese of Washington, D.C.

Sheraton Hotel Four Seasons
Joseph S Koury Convention Center
Greensboro, NC

Closing Liturgy with
Bishop Joseph F. Gossman - Diocese of Raleigh
Bishop Peter J. Jugis - Diocese of Charlotte

For more information, please contact: Deacon Curtiss Todd at cptodd@charlottediocese.org
Martha Carter-Bailey at Martha.bailey@raldioc.org or call 919-821-9762

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Book looks at church authority sources

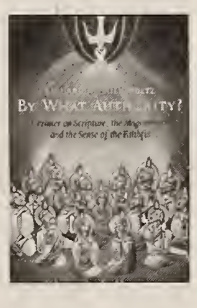
REVIEWED BY
BROTHER JEFFREY GROS, FSC
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

School boards and parish councils, bishops' conferences and synods, priests' councils, diocesan assemblies and many new ecclesial lay ministries: All were created as part of the renewal of the Catholic Church after the Second Vatican Council. They were new structures for managing authority in the church.

Now the sexual abuse crisis, Pope John Paul II's offer to discuss the papacy with other Christians, and new scientific advances in areas from sexuality to genetic engineering have sparked new discussions about the source of church authority. There is a pressing need for widespread grounding in Catholic sources of authority.



"By What Authority? A Primer on Scripture, the Magisterium and the Sense of the Faithful," by Richard Gaillardetz. Liturgical Press (Collegeville, Minn., 2003). 155 pp., $14.95.

"By What Authority? A Primer on Scripture, the Magisterium, and the Sense of the Faithful" by Richard Gaillardetz answers this need. It is a brief and readable contribution to the educational challenge of this revolution in leadership.

The Second Vatican Council teaches that there is one source of divine revelation: God's self-disclosure in Jesus Christ, kept alive in the church by the power of the Holy Spirit. This revelation is mediated to us in the church by the tradition embodied in the Scripture and in the ongoing life of the community. The fidelity to this revelation is served by the authority of the magisterium.

Gaillardetz begins with what the Catholic Church believes about Scripture, its inspiration, canon and relationship to tradition. He carefully recounts the history, controversies and the teaching of Vatican II. The second part of the book outlines the nature and purpose of the church's teaching office — the magisterium — and how it is understood today. In a simple but clear fashion the author explains the roles of bishops, the papacy, councils, synods and bishops' conferences, and the difference between dogma and doctrine.

The third section covers the authority of the believing community. The Second Vatican Council, understanding church as a communion, renewed focus on the Holy Spirit's action in all baptized believers. Here Gaillardetz discusses the sense of the faithful and its relationship to the other elements of Christ's authority in the church. He includes a timely chapter on disagreement in the church and the appropriate role of authorities in dealing with them.

The book is designed to be reader-friendly for the informed-but-not-specialized Catholic. It is not overly technical, but provides a useful bibliography at the end of each chapter. Charts and analogies make for both readability and clarity. Each chapter not only presents the official positions but also closes with a list of disputed questions. These resources enrich the usefulness of the volume for the teacher and those in ministry formation processes.

This will be an important volume for teachers, preachers, ecclesial lay ministers — anyone exercising leadership in the Catholic community.

Brother Gros is associate director in the U.S. bishops' Secretariat for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs in Washington.

MOVING?

Take us with you!

Please help us reduce postal fees and give us your NEW address (or cancellation notice) BEFORE you move.

If you have your address label, include that, too.

Name

Old address

Old city zip

NEW address

NEW city/state zip

Date of move/cancellation:

Mail changes to:
The Catholic News & Herald
Address Changes
1123 S. Church Street
Charlotte, NC 28203

Or e-mail this info to:
catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

Thank you.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: NOV. 16, 2003

Nov. 16, Thirty-third Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle B Readings:

1) Daniel 12:1-3
Psalm 16:5, 8, 9-10, 11
2) Hebrews 10:11-14, 18
3) Gospel: Mark 13:24-32

BY SHARON K. PERKINS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

My paternal grandmother has been dead for several years, but I remember in my childhood spending hot summer days at her house, frequently visiting the fig tree by the garage, waiting for the figs to become ripe so I could gather and eat them. Later, as a teenager, I found a recipe for fig jam and put up several jars to enjoy and to give away to friends. Despite the risk of seeds clinging to front teeth, the recipients seemed to love the treat that could not easily be found on store shelves.

The Gospel of Mark uses the maturing fig tree as a metaphor for the watchfulness that is characteristic of a follower of Jesus. At the time of the Gospel's writing, Mark's faith community was dealing with the political and social upheaval of Roman occupation in Palestine, which resulted eventually in the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple, their center of worship and ancient site of God's visitation. What had been their supreme symbol of religious stability now was reduced to rubble. Jesus is assuring his followers that these events, catastrophic though they would be, would serve as a reminder that God's visitation is nearer to them than ever.

I find myself thinking of the unfolding events of history — both in my personal life and in the world around me — and the gradual change and even deterioration of the structures in my life that had seemed so stable. The perfect vision that I once took for granted must now be aided with reading glasses; my grandmother's house with the fig tree has long been occupied by strangers; my neighborhood parish has experienced three pastors and two building projects since we came here; my eldest daughter's room is empty after her departure for college. These are but a microcosm of the more global political, social, cultural and economic changes reflected in the news each day.

Jesus calls us to watchfulness of the signs around us, but not to the point of panic and despair. Distress is unavoidable in times of uncertainty, but rather than succumb to the distraction and drama of events beyond our control, we must remain fixed on the assurance that "he is near, at the gates." He has "made my destiny secure," and, unlike property, health, finances or even political and religious structures, his "words will not pass away."

Questions:

What signs of upheaval or instability in your personal life or in the world around you cause you the most distress? What words of today's Scriptures give you the most hope and assurance?

Scripture to Illustrate:

"I keep the Lord always before me with the Lord at my right, I shall never be shaken" (Psalm 16:8).

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 16 - NOVEMBER 22

Sunday (Thirty-third Sunday in Ordinary Time), Daniel 12:1-3, Hebrews 10:11-14, 18, Mark 13:24-32; Monday (Elizabeth of Hungary), 1 Maccabees 1:10-15, 41-43, 54-57, 62-63, Luke 18:35-43; Tuesday (St. Rose Philippine Duchesne), 2 Maccabees 6:18-31, Luke 19:1-10; Wednesday, 2 Maccabees 7:1, 20-31, Luke 19:11-28; Thursday, 1 Maccabees 2:15-29, Luke 19:41-44; Friday (Presentation of the Blessed Virgin Mary), 1 Maccabees 4:36-37, 52-59, Luke 19:45-48; Saturday (St. Cecelia), 1 Maccabees 6:1-13, Luke 20:27-40

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 23 - NOVEMBER 29

Sunday (Christ the King), Daniel 7:13-14, 5 Revelation 1:5-8, John 18:33-37; Monday (Andrew Dung-Lac, Priest, Martyr and His Companions, Martyrs), Daniel 1:1-6, 8-20, Luke 21:1-4; Tuesday, Daniel 2:31-45, Daniel 3:57-61, Luke 21:5-11; Wednesday, Daniel 5:1-6, 13-14, 16-17, 23-28,Luke 21:12-19; Thursday, (Thanksgiving Day), Sirach 50:22-24, 1 Corinthians 1:3-9, Luke 17:11-19; Friday, Daniel 7:2-14, Luke 21:29-33; Saturday, Sirach 44:1, 10-15, Mark 10:17-21

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

'Elf' is big at heart

CNS PHOTO FROM NEW LINE PRODUCTIONS

Will Ferrell stars in "Elf," a warmhearted yuletide comedy about a foundling (Ferrell) raised by elves in Santa's workshop who travels from the North Pole to New York City in order to reconnect with his long-lost father (James Caan), a workaholic scrooge bereft of Christmas cheer. Full of goofy candy-cane humor, the holiday film imparts a strong family-friendly message, but uses a secular sieve to filter out any religious references about the true meaning of Christmas. Minimal mildly crude language and humor. The USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-II — adults and adolescents. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG — parental guidance suggested.

'Far Side' a masterful, commanding film

BY DAVID DICERTO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK (CNS) — An intrepid British navy captain must seek and destroy a Napoleonic frigate menacing the waterways of the early 19th century in the lavish historical high-seas adventure "Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World" (20th Century Fox).

Director Peter Weir is at the helm of a $135 million budget, in order to bring the movie, based on Patrick O'Brian's highly popular maritime novels, to the big screen.

Russell Crowe plays "Lucky" Jack Aubrey, the stalwart but affable captain of the HMS Surprise, whose seafaring exploits fill the pages of O'Brian's swashbuckling series — 20 in all (the film combines elements of the first and 10th books).

Set seven years earlier than the 10th novel — in 1805 rather than 1812 — during the Napoleonic wars, the film opens with an overlay of text explaining, with military economy, the mission facing Aubrey and his crew — hunt down and seize the Archeron, a French man-of-war which represents the evolutionary next step in naval warfare.

Tracking his prey with Ahab-like tenacity, Aubrey must weather titanic squalls, near mutinies and omen-tainted dead calms. Yet, in true heroic fashion, it is the inner storms — the tidal waves of pride, which dwarf the outer swells — that Aubrey must master and command if he is to win the day.

Firing a shot at the bow of would-be Oscar contenders, Weir has achieved a stunning victory on both a large and intimate scale. The film contains the grand spectacle of the original source material, as well as its painstaking attention to detail, proving effective as both a work of historical realism and escapist fare. And while the movie echoes the thrills of such past classics as "Captain Blood" (1935), Aubrey and his mates are endowed with complicated inner lives absent from their silver-screen antecedents.

Following in the swashbuckling footsteps of fellow Aussie Errol Flynn, Crowe is well-cast, exuding a sense of steely determination tempered by blithe humor and genuine affection for his men.

Beneath its epic rigging, "Master and Commander" explores deeper thematic waters, including friendship versus duty and the role of hierarchy in staving off anarchy. While containing several graphic naval battle scenes, the film shows their consequential toll exacted in human life, with Weir's hand maintaining a strong hold on the wheel, steering the narrative ship clear of the morally treacherous reefs of gratuitous violence. On a pleasantly surprising note, rather than sailing around the topic of religion — or tossing it overboard completely — the film contains a touching moment of Aubrey leading his crew in reciting the Lord's Prayer at a funeral service for their fallen comrades.

Due to naval battle violence with related gory images, a suicide, and minimum mildly crude language, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

FOR ALL THE SAINTS

ACROSS
1 Buenos _
6 Eagle's nest
11 Citrus soda
13 Holiday beverage
14 ISP
15 Chemical compond containing hydroxyl
16 Ford model
17 FAA relative
18 Hospital emp.
19 Vatican basilica
22 Time suffix
23 Little Flower
25 Cut
27 Alias
28 "You're the __"
31 Lamprey
32 Ancient Roman spirit
33 Asian cuisine
35 Dull finish
38 "White Flag" singer
39 OP Founder
42 Backstreet boy
44 Infirmary of song
45 College degree
47 Stern opposite
49 Object orientation
50 Dorothy's aunt
51 Admirer
52 Refrain
54 "__ the Clowns"
56 Grimace
57 Carotid's relative

DOWN
1 From a distance
2 Golf club
3 Catholic school subj.
4 Is in Spain
5 Great ___!
6 Concur
7 For example
8 Genetic material
9 Miniscule amount
10 Mild oath
12 "I am the ___ and the Omega"
13 Sugarless gum
19 Motor oil or rock band
20 "A mouse!" preceder
21 Q-U connector
23 Paul's companion
24 Borne by the wind
25 Gel
26 Ezr. biblical follower
29 Home (slang)
30 Sellout
34 Possessive pronoun
35 Magic charms
36 Medical grp.
37 Letter x
38 Insult a homie
40 Delirious' live album
41 Ancient Greek valley
42 Alphabet
43 Apostle
45 Lure
46 "__ and the King of Siam"
48 Misery
51 HST predecessor
53 Musical syllable
55 "__ way!"

Breaking poverty's cycle through CCHD

POVERTY, from page 1

consistent with what one would expect during a down economic period." On the other hand, Pope John Paul II said, "Precisely because people have been endowed by ... extraordinary [human] dignity, they should not be reduced to living in sub-human social, economic, cultural or political conditions."

Since 1970, CCHD has addressed the root causes of poverty and funded groups working to break the cycle of poverty. CCHD has made more than 6,000 grants to self-help projects within the United States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands that are created and managed by low-income people.

CCHD's primary source of funding is the annual parish collection. Among the organizations in the Diocese of Charlotte receiving national CCHD funding is the Center for Participatory Change (CPC), based in Asheville. CPC works with approximately 30 grassroots partner organizations in western North Carolina providing technical support for collective entrepreneurship, communities of color organizing, community support and participatory development. The far western counties of North Carolina are home to many of the poorest citizens in our state.

A collaborative effort between the Yancey County School System, the Yancey County 4-H Program and Mars Hill College provided an innovative bilingual camp for more than 100 kindergarten-through-eighth-grade children last summer in Burnsville.

County Extension Director Joyce Watts said, "This project provided Hispanic and non-Hispanic youth [with] the opportunity to interact with each other in a week-long day camp setting."

In this program, the youth learned more about themselves and their own culture and environment as well as developing an appreciation of other cultures.

By supporting the grassroots efforts of community groups, CCHD brings hope, fosters self-sufficiency and provides the tools for permanent improvement. Help continue these efforts with a generous donation during the annual CCHD collection in your parishes Nov 22-23.

Contact Terri Jarina, program director for parish social ministry in the Office of Justice and Peace, by calling (704) 370-3234 or e-mail thjarina@charlottediocese.org.

COURTESY PHOTO

Joyce Watts helps Kelsie Surrett sew Boo-boo Bunnies for a service project during the All Stars Language Summer Institute in Burnsville.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information on the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, visit www.usccb.org/cchd and www.povertyusa.org.

To read the complete text of Rev. Robert J. Vitillo's speech, visit http://www.cssnc.org/uploads/BBCAVitilloAddress.pdf.

For a complete list of the nationally- and locally-funded CCHD projects in the Diocese of Charlotte, visit www.cssnc.org/uploads/CCHDLocalGrants2003.htm.

Painting a warm welcome

COURTESY PHOTO

St. Gabriel School third-grader Ashton Kloiker paints her "spot" on a pottery platter, to be presented as a gift to Bishop Peter J. Jugis. The school's faith advisory committee sponsored the painting of the platter, and students painted little black and white sheep on the platter that contains the inscription, "Jesus said to him, Tend my sheep. (John 21:16) From your flock at St. Gabriel Catholic School."

SUPPLEMENTAL HEALTH CARE
STAFFING SPECIALISTS

is proud to announce the opening of a new allied health division in North Carolina!

PTs and OTs up to $36/hr
PTAs and COTAs up to $30/hr
Speech Therapists up to $40/hr

Per diem and contracts available

Contact me today to find out what Supplemental Health Care has to offer you!

Deena Taylor
Toll free (877) 781-9565
Fax (919) 781-9564
Dtaylor@supplementalhealth.com

Visit our website: www.ncalliedstaffing.com

Classifieds

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

EMPLOYMENT

PART-TIME RN: Visiting Angels of South Charlotte seeks RN to supervise field staff providing home-based custodial care. Flexible hours. Please call 704-544-9006.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

12 Days of Christmas

November 13-23, 2003

Charlotte Merchandise Mart

Windows of Christmas. New this year, each morning a Christmas Window will open with momentous and festive fanfare revealing a special celebrity ready to welcome guests to the show.

Happiness is a Seat with Santa. And Santa is here, ready for photographs, secret wishes and treats for girls and boys of all ages.

All the Trimmings. Christmas trees, doors, and mantels adorned with skill and imagination compete for "best of show" attention. There's inspiration to share, so bring your camera.

Sing Your Favorite Carol along with choirs from local schools and churches. Or, enjoy puppets, magic, dancers and musicians.

Visions of Sugar Plums as well as gingerbread cookies, strudel, special coffees, marvelous breads, jams and jellies bring smiles to faces young and old.

Hear that Whistle Blowing and watch those model trains whizzing through tunnels, around mountains and through little villages. And, there are special steps so small people can see.

Decorations & Gifts Galore. Hundreds of colorful boutiques fill three adjoining halls packed with favorite decorations, ornaments and fabulous gifts.

Olde Towne's Sparkling Shops festooned with garlands, tempt you inside with ornaments, gifts, books, gourmet treats and friendly shopkeepers.

Magical Miniature Houses and scenes in their own Village and dressed in their holiday finery are a feast for the eyes.

Craft Tents by the Score offer pottery, hand-made Santas, jewelry, exquisite blown glass and one of a kind gifts for teachers, neighbors and discriminating friends.

Come and be a part of this festive tradition!
It's all about Christmas.

Weekdays and Saturdays
10 am to 9:30 pm

Sundays
10 am to 6 pm

Adults: $8.00 door/$7.00 advance
Discount Tickets Available at Harris Teeter
Youth 6-12: $3.00 • Under 6 free with paying adult
Group rates available

For More Information
please call (704) 376-6594

A Southern Shows, Inc. Production

www.SouthernChristmasShow.com

12 DAYS OF CHRISTMAS
Southern Christmas Show®

The Charlotte Observer CONNECTING

St. James parishioners celebrate ancestry, good food

HAMLET — St. James Church held its annual fall education fundraiser on the feast of All Soul's Day, Nov. 2.

Over 180 people attended the fundraiser, this year titled "Ancestral Festival," which was designed to bring together all of the parish's nationalities.

Festivities included a "human rosary" for the eternal life of deceased loved ones, a bilingual children's liturgy; a cook-off contest, silent auction and a raffle.

Cook-off contest winners were Jerry Lindstrand for his homemade salsa, Ursula Wallace for her German potato salad and John Jackson for his gourmet grilled salmon.

COURTESY PHOTO

Jerry Lindstrand, Ursula Wallace and John Jackson were the cook-off contest winners at the St. James Ancestral Festival Nov. 2.

'Safari' wrangles in school funds

COURTESY PHOTO

Dot Herron, Beth DePopas and Bridget Delaney planned and organized Bishop McGuinness High School's annual fundraiser and auction, "Sunset Safari," which exceeded its goal by raising $75,000. The money will be used to provide items from teacher wish lists, teacher enhancements, a Triad Area Catholic Schools donation, technology updates and other items.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!*

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

The what and the who of Thanksgiving

Guest Column

FATHER JOHN AURILIA, OFM Cap

Here comes another Thanksgiving, when the Christmas shopping begins and the turkeys run for their lives. We all rejoice in celebrating Thanksgiving, except the turkeys!

I like this holiday, so distinctively American and so symbolic with positive and spiritual attitude toward God. Gratitude, after all, depends not upon physical or material well being, but on "something bigger and deeper."

If Thanksgiving were simply good food and good cheers, then our first Thanksgiving Day should have its origin in the Jamestown Colony of Virginia, which enjoyed marked comfort and prosperity, rather than in Plymouth Colony in New England, where hardships, misery and destitution were the living conditions.

When our Pilgrim Fathers instituted this anniversary, it was for them no holiday. They were separated by the breadth of the ocean from home and family and friends. Neither were there abundant harvests nor peace, prosperity and wealth for which to give thanks. A bleak prospect confronted them and foes surrounded them.

For what and whom then did they give thanks? They thanked God for God, not for "things." They were thankful not for the misery and starvation, but for the hope that wealth and food would come, as it did.

I understand that for some, Thanksgiving is not a holiday, but a hollowday. Our faith, however, teaches us that light always follows the darkness and the tunnel will eventually end ... so we are thankful for what's coming.

There is a huge difference between superficial Thanksgiving and sacrificial Thanksgiving. It is easy to hold a Thanksgiving service. It is much more difficult to translate thanksgiving into life.

A little schoolboy living in the most poverty-stricken part of a great city found his way into a Mission Sunday School and became a good Christian. Not long after, someone tried to shake his faith by asking him some puzzling questions: "If God really loves you, why doesn't He take better care of you? Why doesn't He tell someone to give you a pair of shoes?"

Thinking a moment, with tears rushing suddenly to his eyes, the boy replied: "I think He does tell somebody, but they are not listening."

The Holy Bible gives us three levels of Thanksgiving. The first level is found in Luke 18:11: "I give thanks, o God, that I am not like the other men." You remember who said that: the Pharisee. Sometime in our lives we may have been just like him or we may have met somebody just like him. He is the self-made man who is so very grateful for himself, his fame, his country. He uses God to congratulate and applaud his accomplishments. He is not like the other men; he is better and better off. There is a definite line between gratitude and self-glorification.

The second level is outlined in Philippians 1:3: "I thank my God every time I remember you." That's much better. St. Paul had the humility to acknowledge the power of God in his friends living in Philippi. Remembrance is an important element of our thanksgiving. We need to remember what the Pharisee forgot: most of the good things are not necessarily fruit of our skills and talents, but gifts of the infinite generosity of God as well as the skills and talents of other people.

Retrace your steps of this day: You were awakened this morning by an alarm clock invented by a Swiss mechanic. You crawled out from between sheets made of cotton grown by a Southern farmer. You stood in the bathroom on a tile floor processed by the Romans. You washed your face in a porcelain bowl developed first in China. You dried yourself with a Turkish towel. You put on a suit made by a Jewish craftsman in New York and a pair of shoes taken from the hide of a Texas steer. You ate breakfast out of dishes that originated in England. Your cereal came from a Kansas wheat field and your coffee from a Brazilian plantation. You went to work driving a car manufactured in Detroit or Singapore. You walked into the office, built by hands you never saw.

Yes, indeed, I thank God every time I do something and many people have prepared the path for me.

The third level and the highest level is Jesus himself when He said: "I thank you, Father." (John 11:41). Someone said that the worst moment for an atheist comes when he wants to say "thank you" and has no one to say it to. Jesus knew to whom to say it. We sometimes forget or take for granted what is given to us every day. You never miss the water until the well is dry.

Pope says prayer should lead to sharing of others' joy, pain

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The sufferings and joys of individuals must find an echo in the Mass and other Christian prayer gatherings, Pope John Paul II said.

"The pain of the individual must find an echo in the hearts of all and, in the same way, the joy of each person must be lived by the entire praying community," he said at his Nov. 12 general audience.

The main audience talk focused on Psalm 142, the psalm St. Francis of Assisi recited as he was dying Oct. 3, 1226, the pope told an estimated 11,500 people gathered in St. Peter's Square.

The psalmist begs for the Lord's help and, at the same time, professes his faith that safety and happiness are found in God alone, Pope John Paul said.

The psalmist promises that if God hears his prayer and rescues him, he will offer his praise in the midst of the liturgical assembly, the pope said.

"This atmosphere also must pervade Christian celebrations," he said. The just "experience the salvation of a brother or sister as a gift given to them as well."

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Pope John Paul said the psalm recognizes God as the one who provides safety and refuge, the one who saves believers from the traps set by their enemies.

Reading the psalm and its references to being trapped and suffering, Christians have connected the psalm to Christ and his capture, suffering and death, the pope said.

Christians read the psalm remembering that God not only rescued Christ, but raised him to glory and promised that those who believe in Christ will be raised with him, he said.

Enlist in the CCHD

Looking Around

FATHER WILLIAM J. BYRON, SJ

In 1969, the U.S. Catholic bishops faced up to the fact that the church had no national program funds for direct assistance for the poor. They launched the Campaign for Human Development to fill this vacuum and began providing direct anti-poverty grants for projects that meet three criteria: 1) Recipient organizations have to be working for institutional change that gets at the causes of poverty; 2) the principal beneficiaries of the projects have to be poor people; and 3) at least 50 percent of those who plan and manage the projects have to be involuntarily poor.

Now officially labeled the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, this anti-poverty initiative passes the basket in Catholic parishes across the country every year on a Sunday close to Thanksgiving. The connection is obvious. Show your gratitude by sharing what you have with the poor.

Here in America we used to say "much obliged" to express our gratitude for favors small or large. Some of our elders still use that expression. All of us should hear in that phrase an echo of a moral obligation to share with those less favored than we in the possession of income and wealth.

"Credible Signs of Christ Alive" is what John P. Hogan calls CCHD projects. That's the title he put on his just-published (Sheed & Ward) book presenting six case-studies that convey the substance and style of the good works made possible by CCHD funding. The selected projects "tell the story behind the poverty statistics and the hope behind the headlines," says Hogan.

Conscientious Catholics who puzzle over the question of why the church calls for a "preferential love of the poor" will be helped by this author's reflection on the famous parable of the Good Samaritan.

The Samaritan in the Gospel story is "a member of an outcast minority." He takes a risk and "opts for the victim." The story makes the point, says Hogan, that God "is on the side of the victim — the poor, the outcast. But that doesn't mean he's not on our side. It means rather that God is pushing us to see, understand and identify with the less fortunate in our society. That is the meaning of the church's 'option for and with the poor.'"

The parable ends with Jesus' instruction to the lawyer to "go and do likewise." The Catholic Campaign for Human Development puts the same challenge before contemporary Catholics at the time of Thanksgiving.

The six "credible signs" of Christ alive in the midst of poverty are an organization in Pocomoke City, Md., that brings justice to poultry workers; an Alexandria, Va., Tenants' and Workers' Support Committee; a Camden, N.J., group called "Churches Organized for People"; a Southeast Iowa citizens organization aimed at stemming forces that are destroying the family farm; an "Anti-Displacement Project" in Springfield Mass., that links community organization to economic development and control of assets by low-income people; and a Los Angeles, Calif., parish-based "Safe Passage" program for the defense of children in troubled neighborhoods.

Jack Hogan laces his narrative with excerpts from important documents in the body of Catholic social teaching. Readers will come away from a reflective reading of this book with a better ability to "see, understand and identify with the less fortunate in our society."

Not a bad way to spend a few hours as well as part with a few dollars in the spirit of a CCHD Thanksgiving observance.

Ugly Americans? Is that all there is to it?

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

The United States increasingly is hated by other countries. We aren't acting right in Iraq, Western Europe despises our belligerence, the Arab world distrusts our handling of the Israeli-Palestinian war, and South America considers our tariffs unjust. The world community also believes we care nothing about global warming. Worse than this, we are pictured as an opulent nation living off the fat of the land. We could end up thinking we are just ugly Americans after all!

There is some truth in the accusations, but there also are signs to show we are a thoughtful, caring nation. Take our present efforts to conserve resources and reduce pollution. In the automobile industry, one of the chief polluters and wasters of resources, we now are witnessing a proliferation of hybrid cars. The motors run off gasoline and battery power, getting as much as 59 miles to the gallon with minimum pollution.

Because they carry a large pack of batteries, they have sufficient weight to ride comfortably on open, windy highways. The same technology now is being planned for gas-guzzling SUVs and oversize sedans.

Is there hope that we can become true conservers of energy? Consider:

—In Washington, as in other big cities, we are seeing more buses and taxies run on natural gas.

—It is now common to see people installing thermal windows to save on natural gas and electricity when remodeling a home. This is even more apparent in big high-rise offices and apartments.

—At a convention center I stayed in last year, I noticed that all the light bulbs were energy savers, known for long wear.

—Every week when the garbage men come to our building they have the threefold task of picking up raw garbage, old newspapers and plastic and glass separately.

—When you drive through America's windy plains, every so often you'll see hills dotted with windmills to generate energy.

—And if you walk the neighborhood, every so often you'll see solar panels mounted on roofs.

These are just a few success stories. In disturbing times that could leave us feeling like reckless culprits, we need to dwell more on these successes. We are called to be God-loving people and good stewards, and yes, there's still much to do.

But our successes should help lift our spirits and reaffirm that we are reasonable people concerned about the world's well-being.

Did Mary ever die?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. A sister in our city, who recently worked in Israel, spoke of visiting the tomb of the Blessed Virgin Mary. I didn't know there was one! Did Mary die? Why would she have needed a tomb? (California)

A. On the southwest side of old Jerusalem, on a hill called Mount Zion, there is a church named the Dormition (falling asleep) of the Virgin. Christians often referred to death as falling asleep, awaiting the resurrection.

That church's establishment goes back nearly 1,500 years, to fifth-century writings referred to as the Transitus Mariae, the passage of Mary. Christians, especially pilgrims to the Holy Land, wanted to know more about the death of the mother of Jesus; these works, which are largely inventive and fictitious, attempted to satisfy that curiosity.

During the fifth, sixth and seventh centuries, a feast of the Dormition was established in various areas of the Christian world on Aug. 15, honoring all her prerogatives as the mother of the Lord. Later the celebration was re-titled the Feast of the Assumption.

The crypt in the Dormition church contains a sculpture of Mary lying peacefully in death. But no one today hints that this is her tomb or even that there is a tomb.

Did Mary actually die? The question has been debated for centuries. The church has not declared authoritatively one way or the other.

When Pope Pius XII defined the dogma of the Assumption in 1959, he avoided the subject of her death. He said simply that Mary, "having finished the course of her earthly life" (in Latin, "expleto terrestris vitae cursu"), was taken body and soul into heavenly glory. That's where the question rests.

Laicization and married priests

Q. Your recent column on laicization of priests was interesting. But I'm confused. Outside of the Eastern churches (with which we in the West have little contact) and a few former Lutherans and Episcopalians who are now married and active Catholic priests, do we really have "many married priests in the church"?

Why do you say "it's obviously different with marriage." If you can vacate your vows in one vocation, why not in the other? (New York)

A. I'm not sure what constitutes "many," but I believe we have in the neighborhood of 100 former non-Catholic men who now serve as married priests in the United States, perhaps more. Additional numbers are active married priests of the Catholic Church in other countries, particularly in Europe.

A priest's ordination is not "vacated" through laicization, unless the ordination itself was found invalid — for reasons similar to those which may invalidate marriage vows.

When a priest loses the clerical state, he remains a priest, just as, for example, a baptized Christian does not lose his baptism if he later becomes a Buddhist. The priest is no longer permitted to exercise his sacramental ministries, or publicly function as a priest.

He still, however, in severe emergency situations such as danger of death, may validly celebrate Mass and minister the sacraments of penance, Eucharist and anointing of the sick. He is, in other words, still an ordained priest. In fact, it is possible, with the necessary processes and arrangement with his bishop, for such a priest to return later to active ministry.

A laicized priest is normally free to marry. The rule of celibacy is a longtime tradition and law of the church, but, unlike the marriage covenant which we believe was established by God, celibacy is a church law, not a divine command. It can therefore be dispensed by the church.

In a somewhat similar way, marriage vows are not "vacated" unless the marriage is declared invalid or is superseded by dissolution through a Pauline Privilege or other tribunal procedure.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

St. Leo the Great Church is 'active parish' of faith

PHOTO BY SUSAN DEGUZMAN

St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem was built in 1928 and is now home to over 1,300 families.

St. Leo the Great Church

335 Springdale Avenue
Winston-Salem, N.C. 27104
(336) 724-0561

Vicariate: Winston-Salem
Pastor: Father Thomas Kessler
Parochial Vicar: Reverend Johnathan Hanic
Deacons: Rev. Mr. Dennis O'Madigan; Rev. Mr. Robert De Sautels; Rev. Mr. Thomas O'Connell
Number of Families: 1,360

Father Thomas Kessler

WINSTON-SALEM — The Benedictine monks of Belmont Abbey were the first Catholic clergy to minister in Winston-Salem. During the 1880s, the monks celebrated Mass in the homes of the few Catholic families in town.

Those early visits laid the foundation for what would become a major Catholic house of worship in Forsyth County — St. Leo the Great Church.

The gradual addition of Catholic families to the area presented a need for a permanent structure in which to gather for Mass. In 1891, Bishop Leo Haid of Belmont Abbey, then-vicar apostolic for North Carolina, purchased a small frame church in downtown Winston-Salem. A rectory was added in 1903, and Father Thomas Stapleton soon became the first resident pastor. The congregation grew, and by 1916, plans were underway to construct a larger church.

A local Catholic, Zaffaroni Angelo, donated the site of the present church in 1924. Benedictine Father Michael McInerney of Belmont Abbey, the renowned architect of hundreds of churches through the Southeast, was called upon to design the building. Bishop William Hafey of Raleigh placed the cornerstone in January 1928 and the church was placed under the patronage of St. Leo the Great. Construction was completed the following year.

Above the main altar was placed a large crucifix, whose corpus was carved by Anton Lange, the famed portrayer of Christ in the Oberammergau Passion Play. In 1930, enhancements were made to the church landscape and a 1,000-pound bronze bell, originally from St. Paul Episcopal Church in Winston-Salem, was purchased and placed in the St. Leo the Great bell tower.

Decades of Benedictine pastorate in the parish ended when then-Msgr. Michael J. Begley was appointed as the church's first diocesan priest in 1942. During his ministerial time there, he furthered educational causes in Winston-Salem and welcomed Sisters of St. Joseph from Chestnut Hill in Pennsylvania to teach religion classes at the church.

A house adjacent to the church property was purchased for the Sisters' convent. The original school, Villa Maria Anna, opened in 1947.

Just over 1,000 parishioners composed the congregation by 1953. Thanks to the zeal of the sisters; Msgr. Begley and Msgr. Dennis Lunch, pastors; and Bishop Waters, the religion classes led to later developments that included the founding of St. Leo the Great School in 1954 and Bishop McGuinness High School in 1959.

While serving as director of Catholic Charities for the Diocese of Raleigh, Msgr. Begley returned to St. Leo the Great Church as pastor from 1966 until 1971. In 1972 he received even more far-reaching pastoral responsibilities by serving as the first bishop for the new 46-county Diocese of Charlotte.

A major renovation project ensued at St. Leo the Great Church and school during the mid-1970s. A church nursery and library were also added and the rectory was expanded.

Largely aided by industry, the 1970s and '80s marked continual growth in the number of Catholics in the Triad region and throughout North Carolina. In 1978, Holy Family Church in Clemmons joined Christ the King Church in Kernersville and St. Leo the Great Church in Winston-Salem on a list of Catholic sanctuaries opening their doors to Forsyth County Catholics.

During the pastorate of Msgr. Joseph Showfety, St. Leo the Great Church experienced yet another renovation. A parish center, housing the parish office, meeting rooms, library and an activity center with a kitchen, was built over the site of the former rectory and dedicated in honor of Bishop Emeritus Michael J. Begley in 1990.

Father James Solari arrived as pastor at St. Leo the Great Church in July 1993 and continued to help build up the local community of faith at what he called "a very active parish" with extensive service projects to the area's needy and poor at Christmas and Easter. With the intention of providing for the area's growing Hispanic community, the Hispanic Family Ministry was formed in August 1996 to help people sacramentally, catechetically, financially and in other ways.

In 1998, the parish acquired a house across the street from the church for the priests' residence.

The church now boasts a youth ministry, Knights of Columbus council and a special needs ministry, among others. The Sisters of St. Joseph continue to assist in the faith lives of St. Leo the Great parishioners and members of the community through a variety of ministries including education, hospital ministry and faith formation. St. Leo the Great School enrolls almost 300 students in pre-kindergarten through eighth grade, thereby advancing the educational mission of the church in Winston-Salem.

More than 250 parishioners and nearly two dozen religious, including former pastors and parochial vicars and Sisters of St. Joseph, gathered to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Saint Leo the Great Church Nov. 10, the feast day of St. Leo.

Like that small gathering of Catholics in Forsyth County in the 1880s, the parish of St. Leo the Great Church — as conveyed in its mission statement — continues to strive in its "sense of mission and service to all of God's people through liturgy, prayer and formation of activities that will foster our growth in spiritual and community life in and through Jesus, our Lord and Brother."

GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

THE "LAST KISS" OF YOUR LIFE

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

"'Last Kiss' by Richard Staley is the superbly written story of Patrick, an ordinary man who is always busy...perhaps too busy to give one last kiss to one near and dear to him. Yet an extraordinary angel shows him the importance of never taking people for granted in this often chaotic and ever-changing world. 'Last Kiss' is commended as an especially thoughtful, original, and heartwarming novel."

—James A. Cox, Editor-in-Chief, The Midwest Book Review

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

To order, mail check or money order to: Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Parish Profile:
St. James Church
| PAGE 16

NOVEMBER 21, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 9

EC 282
C362c

REFLECTIONS OF AFGHANISTAN

Holy Spirit parishioner finds calling overseas

COURTESY PHOTOS BY AMY SCHULTZ

Members of the Koochi nomad tribe travel from Jalalabad, Afghanistan.

Holy Spirit parishioner Amy Schultz shakes hands with Afghan President Hamid Karzai after a health care meeting.

Schultz helps to build hospitals, clinics in Afghanistan

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

DENVER — It's only been a few months since Amy Schultz returned from her tour of duty, but the experience will last her a lifetime.

"It was very humbling," she said. "It has definitely changed my outlook on life."

Schultz, 31, is a Civil Affairs Specialist and a parishioner of Holy Spirit Church who left her marketing job and her fiancé in North Carolina when her unit was activated in October 2002.

Schultz was with the unit

See SCHULTZ, page 6

A matter of marriage

Boston archbishop says Massachusetts same-sex decision is 'alarming'

BY NANCY FRAZIER O'BRIEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Reacting to an "alarming" decision by Massachusetts' highest court to overturn a ban on same-sex marriages, Archbishop Sean P. O'Malley of Boston said he hopes the state's legislators "will have the courage and common sense to redress this situation for the good of society."

The Boston archbishop's statement followed a Nov. 18 ruling of the Supreme Judicial Court in the case of Goodridge vs. Department of Public Health.

In a separate statement, the Massachusetts Catholic Conference said the decision "defies reason" and was a rejection of "an understanding of marriage tested over thousands of years and accepted nearly everywhere as the key to a stable society."

The agency representing Massachusetts' Catholic bishops said the decision "must be reversed."

"As devastating as the ruling is, it will not end the debate," the Catholic conference statement said. "We urge the state Legislature to send the Marriage Affirmation and Protection Amendment Act to the 2006 ballot. Thus the people of Massachusetts can reaffirm marriage as the union between one man and one woman, overriding the court's misguided decision in further-

See MARRIAGE, page 8

AROUND THE WORLD IN FIVE DAYS

Holy Trinity students go international

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Students milled through the crowded gymnasium, pausing to examine displays of the accomplishments of President Benjamin Harrison, the history of Arlington National Cemetery and the development of the Pullman Sleeper Car.

The three-dimensional displays were the culmination of International Week, Nov. 10-14, when the student body of Holy Trinity Catholic

See WORLD, page 7

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Kevin McManamy presents the model of Arlington National Cemetery his team constructed for International Week.

Making opportunities
OEO grants, awards for deserving recipients
| PAGE 5

Up and away
OLA students to take flight to Kitty Hawk
| PAGE 7

Bishops' meeting
Conference covers sex abuse crisis, farms, budget and devotions
| PAGE 8-9

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
#420836# S237 P2
#BXNPDVQ*3-D1611 275

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

MOURNING THE VICTIMS

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

A priest prays during a ceremony at the An Nasiriyah, Iraq, airport Nov. 15 as coffins of Italian military police killed in a suicide attack are taken on a plane for return to Italy. A suicide bomber attacked the Italian military headquarters Nov. 12, killing 19 soldiers. Pope John Paul II called for a global movement against terrorism Nov. 16.

Pope criticizes Israel over wall, deplores attacks in Iraq, Turkey

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II criticized Israel's building of a wall to keep out Palestinians and called for a global movement against terrorism following deadly attacks in Iraq and Turkey.

"In reality, the Holy Land does not need walls, but bridges. Without reconciliation of souls, there can be no peace," the pope said at a Sunday blessing Nov. 16.

He renewed his "strong condemnation" of all acts of terrorism in the Holy Land and said it was disappointing that the peace process seemed blocked.

"The construction of a wall between the Israeli and Palestinian people is seen by many as a new obstacle on the road to peaceful coexistence," he said.

The Vatican has stepped up criticism of the Israeli security barrier, which when completed will stretch more than 200 miles along the Israeli border and deep into sections of the West Bank.

The pope said he was concerned that in recent days "terrorism has once again accomplished its wicked work." He spoke the day after two synagogues were bombed in Istanbul, Turkey, and in the wake of a suicide attack that killed 19 Italian soldiers and more than a dozen civilians in Iraq.

While condemning the attacks, the pope said the reaction cannot be one of more violence.

"No one can abandon themselves to the temptation of discouragement or of revenge," he said. "The respect for life, international solidarity and the observance of the law should prevail over hatred and violence."

The synagogue bombings left at least 20 people dead and more than 300 injured. The synagogues were filled with Jewish families attending bar mitzvahs; the blasts also killed 11 Muslims in the vicinity.

Turkey, a predominantly Muslim country with a Jewish community of about 30,000, has close ties to the United States and Israel.

The pope sent his "deepest condolences to the entire country and to all those concerned" and said he was praying for the dead, the wounded and their families, and for "all believers touched by this new drama."

He urged "men and women of the whole world to mobilize in favor of peace and against terrorism, in the respect for the freedom of personal beliefs and convictions."

"Never again should religious identity be a source of conflict that bloodies and disfigures humanity," the pope said.

On Nov. 12, a suicide bombing on a military police headquarters in Iraq left 19 Italian soldiers dead in the city of An Nasiriyah. The pope briefly embraced one soldier's widow and baby girl during an audience at the Vatican Nov. 15.

Brochure to help explain church's teaching on contraception

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Too many Catholics misunderstand and ignore the church's teaching on contraception, the U.S. bishops agreed, as they approved the drafting of a new brochure to help explain it.

In a voice vote Nov. 12 during their annual meeting, the bishops authorized their Committee on Pro-Life Activities to prepare a simple brochure for popular use that explains the church's opposition to artificial means of contraception and the alternatives it considers morally acceptable.

Denver Archbishop Charles J. Chaput, interim chairman of the committee, said an outside writer "who thoroughly understands the church's teaching" would be commissioned to draft the brochure. It would be ready for comment, amendment and approval at the bishops' meeting next November.

Coadjutor Bishop Joseph A. Galante of Dallas encouraged the committee to emphasize the church's support of natural family planning.

"So many Catholics think in terms of 'rhythm,'" he said. But there has been a great deal of advancement in family planning without artificial means since that system was recommended by the church, he said. Natural family planning supporters emphasize it not only works as a way of planning families, but helps married couples become closer.

Bishop Allen H. Vigneron of Oakland, Calif., said he thinks the document "will help us get at the problem people have with seeing a vocation in marriage."

Bishop Joseph F. Martino of Scranton, Pa., described the use of artificial contraception as a silent marriage killer in much the same way that high blood pressure is considered a silent killer of people.

Diocesan planner

ALBEMARLE VICARIATE

ALBEMARLE — The Forever Young Club of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church, 416 N. 2nd St., meets the first Wednesday of each month in the Family Life Center at 10 a.m. For details, call Gerald Maiden (704) 982-5261.

BOONE VICARIATE

SPRUCE PINE — St. Lucien Church, 695 Summit Ave., offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of each month following the 9 a.m. Mass with benediction at 4 p.m.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — Father Efiri Matthias Selemobri of The Missionaries of St. Paul, the first indigenous missionary society from Africa, will celebrate Mass at Our Lady of the Assumption Church, 4207 Shamrock Dr., Dec. 6 at 5:30 p.m. and Dec. 7 at 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. A reception will follow the 11 a.m. Mass sponsored by the African American Affairs Ministry.

CHARLOTTE — A Service of Lessons and Carols will premiere at St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., Dec. 7 at 6 p.m. The program will consist a 55-voice choir, including the children's and youth and choirs. Prelude music will begin at 5:30 p.m.

CHARLOTTE — The cancer support group for survivors, family and friends meets the first Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. For more information, call Marilyn Borrelli at (704) 542-2283.

CHARLOTTE — The St. Maximilian Kolbe Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order gathers the first Sunday of each month at 2 p.m. at Our Lady of Consolation Church, 2301 Statesville Ave. Those interested in learning more about the SFO and the Franciscan way of life are invited to attend. For more information, call Skyler Harvey, SFO, at (704) 545-9133.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Monday of each month 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

GASTONIA — St. Michael Church, 708 St. Michael's Ln., will host a free Thanksgiving celebration Nov. 27 12-3 p.m. in the parish center. Family and friends are all invited for food and fellowship. Transportation is available for those needing rides. Meal will be delivered to those who cannot attend. Call the church office at (704) 867-6212 for details.

BELMONT — Dr. William F. Powers will give a talk entitled "Catholicism in North Carolina: Periods of Frustration and Growth," Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Commons at Belmont Abbey College. Admission is free and open to the public. Dr. Powers served as a professor of sociology for 30 years at Suffolk Community College on Long Island. He was ordained in the Diocese of Brooklyn and resigned from the ministry ten years later. He holds a doctorate from St. John's University in New York.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENBORO — Pilgrim icons of Our Lady of

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

NOVEMBER 21, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 9

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Bible shows evidence of depression, offers a cure, official says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The Bible contains evidence that depression was experienced in ancient times and outlines the kind of spiritual activity needed to combat it, a Vatican official said.

In particular, the hope of everlasting salvation offered by Christianity is an antidote to the fear and anguish that leads to depression, Portuguese Cardinal Jose Saraiva Martins told a Vatican conference on clinical depression Nov. 13.

"Whoever really believes in the paschal mystery of Christ and identifies with him should never be depressed," the cardinal said.

Cardinal Martins, head of the Vatican's Congregation for Saints' Causes, offered a wide-ranging overview of depression as experienced by modern people and those in biblical times.

He said several Psalms could be read as "expressions of a depressive state," with symptoms of sadness, lack of interest, diminished work capacity, sleep disturbances, weight loss, sense of guilt and suicidal thoughts.

The cardinal quoted several examples, including Psalm 55 and the distressed author of Psalm 102: "I am withered, dried up like grass, too wasted to eat my food."

But he said many Psalms offer a response and remedy: the conviction that "man is always loved and appreciated by God," that the world is not hostile but good, and that is it normal to express one's emotions.

The cardinal said recent research has shown a healthy spiritual life can "prevent neuroses, including reactive depression" by moderating negative and stressful experiences, and it also favors greater self-awareness among individuals, which helps prevent depressive reactions.

Guadalupe and St. Juan Diego will be on display at St. Mary Church, 812 Duke St., Dec. 1 beginning with Mass at 7 p.m. A Mass in celebration of Our Lady of Guadalupe will be celebrated on Dec. 12 at 8 p.m. For details, call the church office at (336) 383-8650.

GREENBORO — The Greensboro Council of Catholic Women invite all to their Christmas Tea Dec. 11, 2:30–4:30 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 2780 Horse Pen Creek Rd. Food will be collected for a local food pantry. For details call Janet Law at (336) 288-6022.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — A charismatic Mass is celebrated the first Thursday of each month in Sebastian Chapel of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, at 7 p.m. For further information, contact Joan Moran (828)-327-0487.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

SALISBURY —Sacred Heart School, is having its first reunion of alumni, faculty, parishioners and friends Nov. 29 at the Salisbury Civic Center 6-9 p.m. The program for the evening will honor the past, rejoice in the present and present plans for our future. For details, call Sacred Heart School at (704) 633-2841.

SALISBURY — Sacred Heart Church, 128 N. Fulton St., celebrates a charismatic and healing Mass the first Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. Prayer and worship with prayer teams will be available at 3 p.m., and a potluck dinner will follow the Mass. Father John Putnam, pastor, will be the celebrant. For further information, call Bill Owens at (704) 639-9837.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

WAYNESVILLE— St. John the Evangelist Church, 234 Church St., offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Friday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 4:15 p.m. For information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707 or Christine Ryan at (828) 926-1331.

SYLVA — St. Mary Church offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Saturday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 3 p.m. For information, call (828) 586-9496.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

CLEMMONS — Father Adrian Porras will celebrate a Healing Mass at Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., Dec. 1 at 7:30pm. Reconciliation will be offered at 7p.m. and a laying on of hands will follow the Mass. Please join us for praise, worship and healing. For more information, call Jim or Monie Passero (336) 998-7503.

WINSTON-SALEM — Parents Together and the Knights of Columbus Council #2829 will host its Breakfast with Santa for special-needs children and their families Dec. 13 9:30-11:30 a.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. The Knights will supply a pancake buffet as Parents Together welcomes families for face painting, crafts, breakfast and an opportunity to meet Santa and have a photo taken with him. The event provides families with a special-needs child to meet other families who have similar challenges. Space is limited. To register your family or to volunteer, call (336) 924-5301.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Two Iraqi priests concerned country slipping into chaos under U.S.

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Two Iraqi priests said they are deeply concerned Iraq is slipping into chaos and terrorist violence under U.S. occupation.

One of the priests said Catholic institutions were being targeted for intimidation in the northern part of the country, presumably by Muslim extremists.

"We do not want Iraq to be another Palestine — without a state, abandoned and left to the mercy of terrorist groups, and its people dying of hunger," said Father Denka H. Toma, superior general of a Chaldean-rite order of 45 monks. "Everything depends on the United States, which has absolute power. It can do our nation good or cause it harm."

Father Toma said U.S. forces need to put security back in Iraqi hands, or at least involve them more directly in national security.

"Most people are not satisfied with the situation," Father Toma said. "They are grateful to the Americans for liberating Iraq from the dictatorship. But today, six months after the war ended, the people lament the lack of social, civil and economic reconstruction. They are beginning to think the real aim of the Americans was to take control of Iraq's oil."

Father Toma said it would not work for U.S. administrators to turn over authority to the temporary Iraqi Governing Council.

"(Council) members obey the Americans, and they are Iraqi businessmen who have lived abroad," he said. "They have not shared the Iraqis' suffering in recent years. The people consider them 'foreigners.'"

Father Nizar Semaan, a Syrian-rite priest working in the northern city of Mosul, said in early November a bomb was defused in front of the city's Catholic school, and the local Syrian-rite archbishop's office had been fired upon with machine guns.

The priest said the attacks were probably carried out by local Wahhabite Muslims, a term for followers of a strict form of Islam practiced in Saudi Arabia. Wahhabites were around under former Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, but since his downfall they have raised their profile.

Raising the roof

CNS PHOTO BY JONAH DYCUS, TEXAS CATHOLIC HERALD

Teenagers raise their hands in song during the opening ceremony of the 2003 National Catholic Youth Conference "River of Life" celebration in Houston Nov. 13, sponsored by the National Federation for Catholic Youth Ministry. Bishop Joseph A. Fiorenza of Galveston-Houston welcomed some 23,000 young people, including youth from the Diocese of Charlotte, to Reliant Stadium for the event. Look for more coverage in the next issue of The Catholic News & Herald.

CORRECTION

Osvaldo Gentile and Diane Moffa were not identified in an Oct. 31 issue photo caption as the designers of the stole presented to Bishop Peter J. Jugis by the diocesan Catholic schools office Oct. 29.

Episcopal calendar

Bishop Peter J. Jugis will participate in the following events:

November 24 — 7 p.m.
Winston-Salem Vicariate Mass and reception
St. Leo the Great Church, Winston-Salem

November 25 — 7 p.m.
Hickory Vicariate Mass and reception
St. Aloysius Church, Hickory

November 27 — 10 a.m.
Thanksgiving Day Mass
St. Vincent de Paul Church, Charlotte

December 1 — 7:30 p.m.
Albemarle Vicariate Mass and reception
St. James Church, Hamlet

December 3 — 7p.m.
Asheville Vicariate reconciliation service and reception
Immaculate Conception Church, Hendersonville

Vatican officials say migration brings opportunities for Catholics

By CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ROME — Migration brings with it an opportunity for Catholics to experience the universality of their church, to forge bonds with other Christians and to discover the way God is at work in other religions, Vatican officials said.

Migration and the need for dialogue with other cultures, other Christians and other religions was the focus of Nov. 19 presentations at the Vatican-sponsored World Congress for the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Refugees.

In societies increasingly marked by the presence of people from different cultures and religions, dialogue must be the Catholic response, said Archbishop Agostino Marchetto, secretary of the Pontifical Council for Migrants and Travelers.

"Dialogue, the transformation of closed minds and a love that is open to the innovation of life and history ... hold central positions in our Christian identity: They are the positions of Jesus Christ," the archbishop said.

In meeting those with different cultures and faiths, he said, the first step for Christians is "discovering Christ in the faces of our brothers and sisters from far-off places."

When welcomed into a parish community, Catholic immigrants are concrete signs for local Catholics of the reality of the universality of the Catholic Church, he said.

A genuine Christian love, Archbishop Marchetto said, leads to a spirit of welcome and hospitality, respect for others and a desire to learn from and share with them through dialogue.

Cardinal Walter Kasper, president of the Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity, said his native Germany's encounter with Catholic "migrants and refugees led to the growth of a new awareness of the universality of our church and of our catholicity."

Throughout the world, he said, "through an encounter and an exchange with the religious cultures and customs of immigrants, our Catholic communities lose the characteristic of often being too national, ethnic or limited by social class and become more catholic."

"Immigrants not only receive from us, but also have much to offer," Cardinal Kasper said.

Migration also brings Catholics into closer contact with other Christians, providing opportunities for ecumenical dialogue and for appreciating aspects of Christian life which one community may emphasize more than another, he said.

For example, Cardinal Kasper said, many Catholics have rediscovered the importance of the Bible from their Protestant friends, Protestants rediscover the importance of the Lord's Supper from Catholics, and both can learn from the Orthodox the importance of mystery in the liturgy.

At the same time, he said, an increasing mix of Christian communities can lead some people to thinking there are no differences among Christians or to thinking those differences are not important.

The goal of ecumenical dialogue is to discover the truth in love, Cardinal Kasper said.

Full communion, he said, "is not a pluralism of churches which live in friendship alongside each other, but it consists of communion in faith, the sacraments, especially the Eucharist, and apostolic governance."

Archbishop Pier Luigi Celata, secretary of the Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue, said migration is forcing more and more communities to take seriously the need for interreligious dialogue.

The Christian inspiration for dialogue is the recognition that God created each human being in his image and calls all people to himself, he said.

The Catholic Church believes God's spirit may be at work in other faiths, and Christians are called to discover traces of God's work within them without neglecting their obligation to witness to the fullness of faith in Christ, he said.

Interreligious dialogue, the archbishop said, also has practical motivations, including the commitment to protecting the right of each person to worship according to his or her conscience and to fostering peace within communities, nations and the world.

"It is unfortunate that religions are sometimes held to be one of the causes behind many problems in the world today," Archbishop Celata said.

While religions can be exploited for political reasons, he said, religious leaders have an obligation to ensure their faithful know what they teach and to protect their faith from political manipulation.

Cardinal Paul Poupard, president of the Pontifical Council for Culture, told the conference, "Many politicians and media, together with international organizations, are justifiably concerned about conflicts which mix God and political ambitions, revolutionary violence, fundamentalism and destructive hatred."

Equally worrying, he said, are "arrogant attempts to dominate the world according to simplistic models whose error lies primarily in the lack of any serious and fair recognition of the culture of others."

A truly human culture, he said, develops out of a group of people living together, trying to make sense of their lives and to give meaning to them.

True culture is not static, Cardinal Poupard said, but develops as new situations and challenges arise and as new peoples are encountered.

Intercultural dialogue is essential in multicultural societies in order to emphasize the positive values that all people share as well as to promote an awareness of the weaknesses of each culture that may impede the full protection of human dignity, justice and charity, he said.

GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

5-STAR RATED BOOK SIGNING

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

'"Last Kiss' by Richard Staley is the superbly written story of Patrick, an ordinary man who is always busy...perhaps too busy to give one last kiss to one near and dear to him. Yet an extraordinary angel shows him the importance of never taking people for granted in this often chaotic and ever-changing world. 'Last Kiss' is commended as an especially thoughtful, original, and heartwarming novel." ★★★★★

Saturday — Nov. 29 — 1 to 3 pm
Park Road Books, 4139 Park Rd., Charlotte
(Park Road Shopping Center)

$13.95

MOVING?

Take us with you!

Please help us reduce postal fees and give us your NEW address (or cancellation notice) BEFORE you move.

If you have your address label, include that, too.

Name

Old address

Old city zip

NEW address

NEW city/state zip

Date of move/cancellation:

Mail changes to:
The Catholic News & Herald
Address Changes
1123 S. Church Street
Charlotte, NC 28203

Or e-mail this info to:
catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

Thank you.

Make the right move to finding your dream home. See Chase first... because home ownership matters.

TAILORED MORTGAGE PROGRAMS

- Chase mortgage programs are tailored to fit your individual needs
- Experienced mortgage specialists will personally work with you from application through closing
- A free mortgage affordability estimate can show you how much home you can afford*
- A Chase mortgage preapproval will make you feel more confident knowing you have "cash in hand" when shopping for a home

Make the move to Chase Home Finance—call today.

Paul McClure
(704) 553-1202 Ext. 203

CHASE
THE RIGHT RELATIONSHIP IS EVERYTHING®

*Results of the mortgage affordability estimate are guidelines, the estimate is not an application for credit and results do not guarantee loan approval or denial. A fee for preapproval may be applied. All loans are subject to credit and property approval. Program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. Not all products are available in all states or for all loan amounts. Other restrictions and limitations apply. All loans offered through Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corporation ("CMMC"). Corporate headquarters: 343 Thornall Street, Edison, New Jersey 08837; (732) 205-0600. © 2003 J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. All Rights Reserved. 10/03 6564

Making opportunities

OEO grants, awards for deserving recipients

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

STECOAH VALLEY — It was just one word, but no one at Pathways for the Future had ever heard the woman speak.

One day, though, she finished painting a wooden silhouette of a watering can.

"Before she left, she said 'Paint,'" said Kate Sullivan, Pathways director, holding up the artwork at the second annual Office of Economic Opportunity awards and grants presentation Nov. 11.

That one word was the kind of miracle that happens through grants from the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO), a project of Catholic Social Services of the Diocese of Charlotte.

An OEO grant last year helped buy materials for Pathways, a facility for mentally and physically challenged adults.

At the Stecoah Valley Arts, Crafts and Education Center in Graham County this year, Msgr. Mauricio W. West, chancellor and vicar general of the Diocese of Charlotte, presented grants totaling $11,865 and community service awards.

"After tonight, we will have given out about $90,000 to 38 agencies," said Joan Furst, OEO director.

Where does the money come from?

"It was about six years ago that [Father Mo] had a vision," said Father George Kloster, pastor of St. William Church in Murphy and Immaculate Heart of Mary in Hayesville, and OEO advisory board chair. "Father Mo commissioned a study on the needs here. Out of that study came the Office of Economic Opportunity."

During a brunch in his honor at St. William Church Nov. 12, Msgr. West said when the diocesan-sponsored Good Shepherd Home Healthcare and Hospice in Hayesville was sold to the local hospital, the diocese wondered what to do with the proceeds.

"I decided it would be best to ask the local people," Msgr. West said. "Given my ethnic background, I was tired of people telling me what I needed. The people here certainly know (what they need) better than me, sitting in Charlotte."

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Karen Wilson displays material woven at Stecoah Valley Weavers. The cloth will become placemats. Stechoah received a $2,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity to train weavers and buy colored yarn.

OEO, serving Cherokee, Clay, Graham and Swain counties, opened four years ago in the Bishop Begley Center in Murphy. Its goal, Furst said, is to "attack poverty at its roots by systematic programs."

The grants awarded Nov. 11 will provide help to a number of programs, including those which preserve mountain heritage. In an area where there is little industrial development or flat land for large factory complexes, traditional crafts are among the region's most precious commodities.

Karen Wilson explained what that means when she thanked OEO during the awards program. Wilson is a student and instructor at Stecoah Valley Weavers (SVW), which received $2,000 last spring to train weavers and buy colored yarn.

Wilson works in a greenhouse, but the employment is seasonal. Learning to spin and weave has added income and a new dimension to her life.

"I love it," she said. "I grew up here in Graham County. [SVW] is looking forward to being here for many more years."

Wilson works at home on two looms loaned by SVW. Five other women are learning to spin and weave, and four more work at home, making table linens and other items sold locally and as far away as Florida.

Demand is high.

"We just can't make enough," Wilson said.

She teaches youngsters to spin and weave. "It's a wonderful opportunity to learn a heritage craft and pass it on," she said.

"I think that we as a diocese need to continue what we've begun here," Msgr. West said at the brunch. "I think that there's so much more we can do. I'd like to commit once more to supporting your efforts here."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

GRANTS AND AWARDS

Below is a list of grants and awards handed out by the Office of Economic Opportunity at a presentation Nov. 11.

Grant recipients:

— Pathways for the Future: $1,500 for its independent living skills, craft and creativity program;

— Far West Mountain Economic Partners: $3,000 for tools and training for building-construction apprentices;

— Hinton Rural Life Center: $2,365 for vehicle maintenance and homebuyer education in its program to repair existing homes and build new ones for low-income families;

— Latino Outreach: $2,500 for "Latino fairs" to educate Hispanics in health matters and in resources available to them;

— Appalachian Heritage Crafters: $1,500 for seed money to fund its first arts and crafts festival;

— Stecoah Valley Center: $1,000, for marketing for the Graham County Artisans Drive-About, during which visitors drive to crafters' studios throughout the area.

Community award recipients:

— Leadership: Barbara Hughes for community involvement in Murphy and Rev. Ben Bushyhead for his work with the Cherokee;

— Community Advocacy: Ida Timpson, helping families be able to purchase homes through the Hinton Rural Life Center;

— Community Development: Linda Cable-Thomas, initiating projects benefiting Swain County; Yellow Creek Botanical Institute, native plant marketing and cultivation research;

— Women and Family: Dora Ochoa, Latino outreach;

— Empowerment: Alicia Campbell, working with Far West Families First.

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

"The mountains shall yield peace for the people." Psalm 72:3

JESUIT HOUSE OF PRAYER
HOT SPRINGS, NC
Welcoming all Christians seeking prayer and quiet in a busy life
Situated in the heart of Pisgah National Forest, the area's peace and beauty offer the perfect haven for quiet prayer and reflection.
Ignatian directed retreats
Private retreats
Group retreats
Call: 828-622-7366
e-mail: vpaul@madison.main.nc.us

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

Reflections of Afghanistan

SCHULTZ, from page 1

of Army reservists who in August returned from a nine-month deployment to Afghanistan.

"It's easier now for me to prioritize what's important in life, and to be a good neighbor," she admitted.

Schultz grew up in Babbitt, what she describes as a "small north Minnesota town," about 100 miles from Canada. There were only 32 seniors in her graduating class, she said, and they all longed to leave the community.

"It's a beautiful place; definitely God's country," said Schultz. "(But) we wanted to get educated and have some adventure."

When all of her fellow graduates enrolled in colleges and technical institutes, Schultz and her best friend joined the U.S. Army Reserve.

"We thought it was a great opportunity," said Schultz, who enlisted as a medical specialist.

"I felt the need to help people," she said, admitting she was intrigued to go overseas to find her adventure.

Her quest eventually brought her to Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan.

Afghan mission

Afghanistan's recent history is characterized by war and civil unrest. The Soviet Union invaded in 1979, but was forced to withdraw 10 years later by anti-Communist forces supplied and trained by the United States, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan and others. Fighting continued among various tribal factions, giving eventual rise to the Taliban, which captured most of the country until Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks on U.S. soil forced the group's downfall.

"Eighty percent of Kabul was destroyed from years of war," said Schultz, a member of the Civil Affairs for six years.

Civil Affairs units serve as liaisons between the U.S. government and the host country, said Schultz. Schultz's unit helped reopen schools for both girls and boys and coordinated the building of medical clinics, the repair of roads and bridges and drilling of water wells. The efforts were to help establish stability and order in Afghanistan, which is still rebuilding two years after the United States launched its first raids on Oct. 7, 2001, against Osama bin Laden and the Taliban.

"People welcomed us with open arms," said Schultz. "They had a safety and calmness they hadn't had in years with the Taliban."

Especially appreciative of the soldier's efforts were women, who were not able to attend school under Taliban rule.

"Women weren't allowed to go to school for more than 10 years," said Schultz.

While in Afghanistan, Schultz worked with about 25 different ministries, but was mostly aligned with the Ministry of Health. Much of her time was spent in meetings to coordinate the rebuilding of hospitals, clinics and health care facilities, schedule surgeons for operations and help find ways to fight infectious diseases such as whooping cough, an infection of the respiratory system that results in severe coughing spells.

She was apart of a team effort to establish pharmaceutical companies and worked with WHO (World Health Organization) and UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) to acquire in vaccinations for diseases not commonly found in the United States.

Schultz said she employed her marketing skills and experience during the meetings with Afghan ministers and other government officials.

"The military depends on Civil Affairs to help rebuild the infrastructure," said Schultz. "They want people with real-life experience."

"There's a lot of good things happening, but you'll never see it in the media," she said. "Soldiers are doing a lot of good things in conjunction with the community. We were helping rebuild Afghanistan."

One large project of which Schultz was especially proud was the rebuilding of a women's hospital, the only one in the country.

"It was wonderful to see three shifts of women go back to work," she said.

"Seeing women and children getting access to health care and going back to school — and seeing the joy and happiness on their faces — was incredible," said Schultz.

Many women, said Schultz, were attending classes with their children.

"How challenging that must have been. But they rejoiced for that opportunity," she said. "We have kids in this country who don't see (education) as a privilege, yet Afghanistan has kids who die for that privilege."

Faithfully united

Schultz worked with representatives of many countries, including France, England, Germany, Turkey, Romania and the Netherlands. She often attended non-denominational religious services and Bible studies several nights a week with her comrades.

"The services helped bring people together," she said. "Our faith helped bring us together."

A German Catholic priest would often come to offer Mass, said Schultz, but it depended on the area's threat level. In recent months, several U.S. soldiers have been killed by Afghan insurgents.

During her time in Afghanistan, Schultz and other members of her unit lived and worked at a heavily armed, walled-off compound in the heart of Kabul. The compound was down the road from the U.S. embassy. As such, due to possible attacks, the compound was occasionally locked down, preventing Schultz from attending services.

Security precautions were taken when Schultz traveled with her two-person team (including another soldier and an interpreter).

"It gave us an increased awareness. But even when there was a threat, we knew what our jobs were," she said. "We were building bridges to help the Afghan people. When you see such need in people, you're willing to forge ahead. They're dependent on you."

"People need to help those who can't help themselves, and (Afghans) are not in a position to help themselves," said Schultz. "When you can make a difference in the life of one person, or in many people's lives, those are the heartfelt moments."

Lasting memories

Although back at her marketing job for Sagebrush Steakhouse in North Carolina, Schultz would return to Afghanistan, "if I was single," she said.

"The most difficult part of my tour in Afghanistan was the pre-deployment phase," said Schultz. "Saying goodbye to my fiancé and family was difficult because we didn't know how long we'd be separated."

While she now looks forward to her December wedding, she still looks back to her overseas adventure.

"Afghanistan is not just a place on the map for me anymore," said Schultz. "There are some wonderful and talented people there. (Afghans) are just like you and me, just born in a different country and without the privileges we've had."

"I've developed friendships and left some good friends behind," she said. "It was hard to leave, and was a bittersweet goodbye."

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Vatican agency concerned about Afghanistan's draft constitution

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Afghanistan's draft constitution would declare the country an Islamic state and curtail freedoms of other religions, a Vatican agency said.

The constitution, unveiled in early November, does not provide much more religious freedom than the policies of the previous Taliban government, said a Nov. 10 article published by Fides, the Vatican's missionary news service.

"The hope is that in this discussion phase of the constitution, Western diplomats can exert pressure and ask that authentic freedom of religion be recognized in the new Afghanistan," the agency said.

The constitution, which will be debated in the Afghan Parliament Dec. 10, establishes Islam as the state religion but says that other religions would have freedom of worship.

Father Giuseppe Moretti, who heads the church's missionary jurisdiction in Afghanistan, told Fides that "it remains to be seen what is meant by freedom of worship — whether the interpretation will be restrictive or whether, for example, authorities would allow the construction of a church outside an embassy compound."

"In the draft of the constitution, freedom of worship is conceived in terms foreseen by Shariah (Islamic law), and therefore does not admit the possibility of evangelizing or making conversions," Father Moretti said.

The draft constitution has a "decidedly Islamic tone" throughout its 160 articles, Fides said.

The date on the cover is 1382, following the Islamic calendar. It states that it is the duty of the government to institute and organize mosques and Islamic religious centers. It says Afghan citizens are free to organize political parties and social organizations — which must, however, conform to the principles of Islam.

"These instructions are in contrast with other sections of the constitution that affirm the state must respect and protect the freedom and dignity of every person" and ensure democratic policies for all, Fides said.

Father Moretti said that aside from the constitution he is hopeful about the future of interreligious relations in Afghanistan. Some Muslim leaders there have already shown a positive interest in the Catholic Church's activities.

He said Fazul Shinwari, an Islamic mullah who heads the Afghan Supreme Court and the Department of Justice, attended the opening of the Vatican's mission in Kabul and expressed his desire to meet some day with Pope John Paul II.

Students learn about world

WORLD, from page 1

Middle School was immersed in the cultures of the United States and other nations.

"International Week is centered on the social studies curriculum for each grade and its connection between the United States and international events," said Carol Belle, the eighth-grade social studies teacher who brought the concept of International Week to Holy Trinity eight years ago.

"With the Internet and today's current affairs, it's a little easier to spark the interest of our students about what is happening in parts of the world other than Charlotte, North Carolina," Belle said. "It is truly an interdisciplinary experience with all areas of the curriculum involved an contributing to the student's learning."

For International Week, social studies and history teachers assist students in deciding on exhibits for each team in each grade. Other core class instructors such as English, math, science and religion work closely with the students to enhance their projects. Other teachers focus on various aspects of international culture. For example, physical education classes participate in games played by students in other countries and the foreign language classes share information about the clothes, customs and special events in various countries with their teams.

"Our theme is that we are a global community and we have more things in common than things that are different with people of other nationalities," said Belle.

International Week began with students and teachers of different ethnic backgrounds participating in the Mass Nov. 10. Throughout the week, students said prayers in different languages. Flags from various nations were hung in the gym and the cafeteria served international foods.

"Our world in changing," she said. "There is more for our students to try and comprehend about our neighbors. Helping our children learn more about other countries through International Week is an easy was to help promote peace and harmony."

One goal of International Week is to help students understand the dynamics of working in groups, learning skills they will need for the business world.

According to Belle, a key principle of middle school education is learning to work cooperatively together and integrating all curricular areas. International Week accomplishes this by having the whole school and all subjects involved in the project.

"By studying other countries, students learn about peace, justice and inequality in the world, including civil and individual rights," Belle said. "They also consider the response we have as Catholics to be servants and to preach peace and justice through words and actions."

OLA students take flight to Kitty Hawk, in classroom

CHARLOTTE — Spirits and lesson plans are soaring at Our Lady of the Assumption School as students, faculty and parents prepare for the school's most ambitious field trip — a two-night, three-day journey to the Wright Brothers National Memorial Dec. 10-12 to take part in the centennial celebration of the Wright brothers' historic first flight.

The field trip will include more than 60 students from the school's third, fourth and fifth grades, along with more than 30 parents and four faculty members. Traveling by bus, the group will stay at a hotel in Corolla and plan to be on hand for the opening day of the First Flight Centennial Celebration at Wright Brothers National Memorial in Kill Devil Hills Dec. 12.

The fun begins for Our Lady of the Assumption students several days before the actual trip, as teachers in third, fourth and fifth grades, along with the school's learning enrichment instructor, have planned many special activities and lesson plans to enrich the learning experience of the trip.

Among the activities planned is a school-wide paper-airplane exhibition, with students in kindergarten through fifth grade receiving instruction on how to make their own paper airplanes. The event will culminate with a competition at the school in early December that will include such categories as longest flight distance, longest air time and most creative design.

Other special lessons will include:

Third-graders will re-create a newspaper from Dec. 17, 1903, that reports on the historic Wright brothers' flight. They also will create their own diagrams of the Wright Flyer and make a timeline of the history of flight.

Fourth- and fifth-graders will build their own kites, just as the Wright brothers did to test flight theory, and will research and write reports on inventors and make their own inventions. Fifth-graders also will practice perspective writing by making their own diary entries for Dec. 17, 1903.

Students will leave for the Outer Banks in the early morning of Dec. 10. They will spend Dec. 11 at the North Carolina Aquarium on Roanoke Island. The group will head to the Wright Brothers National Memorial on Dec. 12 for the opening-day celebration that will feature exhibits, speakers and entertainment designed to inspire the next generation of aviators by engaging children of all ages in the power of flight.

They got milk

COURTESY PHOTO

St. Ann School students enjoy ice cream sandwiches, thanks to Harry the Dragon, who visited the school from Harris Teeter Oct. 28 as part of the Harris Teeter Milk Challenge. Harry also brought pens, pencils, rulers and notepads, and a video explaining how milk gets from cows to the stores and how ice cream sandwiches are made. Students have participated in the milk challenge since the start of school. Students collect caps from Harris Teeter and Hunter Farm milk products and bring them to school. At the end of the year, the students will turn in the milk caps for money.

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection Drivers wanted. Lowest Prices
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

ST. JAMES CATHOLIC BOOKSTORE
• CHRISTMAS MUSIC
• CARDS
• RELIGIOUS GIFTS
• BEAUTIFUL ROSARIES
• MEDALS
• CRUCIFIXES
• BIBLES
• INSPIRATIONAL BOOKS AND MORE!
WED: 9 AM-NOON AND 6:30-8PM
SAT: NOON - 5PM
AFTER MASS:
SAT. 5PM, SUN. 8, 10:45, 12:30
(704) 720-0600, EXT. 36
251 UNION ST. N., CONCORD

Holiday Celebrations
—with—
The Pampered Chef®
The Kitchen Store That Comes To Your Door®
Kitchen/Catalog Shows
Fund-raisers
Individual Orders
Book a holiday show or place an order before Dec. 10 and receive a free gift.
Teresa R. Scott
Independent Kitchen Consultant
704-814-9101

A matter of marriage

MARRIAGE, from page 1

ance of sound public policy."

In its 4-3 decision, the court said that "barring an individual from the protections, benefits and obligations of civil marriage solely because that person would marry a person of the same sex violates the Massachusetts Constitution."

The court stayed the opinion for 180 days "to permit the Legislature to take such action as it may deem appropriate in light of this opinion."

Calling marriage "a vital social institution" that both "provides an abundance of legal, financial and social benefits" and "imposes weighty legal, financial and social obligations," the majority opinion by Chief Justice Margaret H. Marshall said the Massachusetts Constitution "forbids the creation of second-class citizens."

The commonwealth, the court said, "has failed to identify any constitutionally adequate reason for denying civil marriage to same-sex couples."

"We are mindful that our decision marks a change in the history of our marriage law," the decision said.

"Many people hold deep-seated religious, moral and ethical convictions that marriage should be limited to the union of one man and one woman, and that homosexual conduct is immoral," it said. "Many hold equally strong religious, moral and ethical convictions that same-sex couples are entitled to be married, and that homosexual persons should be treated no differently than their heterosexual neighbors. Neither view answers the question before us."

State legislators have twice sidestepped action on a popular petition, signed by 130,000 residents, seeking a state constitutional amendment to preserve the traditional definition of marriage as a union of one man and one woman. In order to get on the ballot for a popular referendum, such constitutional petitions must be approved by at least 50 of the state's 200 legislators gathered jointly in at least two separate legislative sessions.

Under this process, the earliest possible vote on the measure by Massachusetts citizens would be in 2006.

If it takes effect in 180 days, the decision changes the law only in Massachusetts.

The majority decision said the Massachusetts Constitution "is, if anything, more protective of individual liberty and equality than the federal Constitution; it may demand broader protection of fundamental rights; and it is less tolerant of government intrusion into the protected spheres of private life."

Each of the three dissenters — Justices Francis X. Spina, Martha B. Sosman and Robert J. Cordy — issued an opinion of his or her own and concurred in the dissents of the other two justices.

"What is at stake in this case is not the unequal treatment of individuals or whether individual rights have been impermissibly burdened, but the power of the Legislature to effectuate social change without interference from the courts," Spina wrote. "Today, the court has transformed its role as protector of individual rights into the role of creator of rights."

Sosman said the decision, "as a matter of social history, ... may represent a great turning point that many will hail as a tremendous step toward a more just society. As a matter of constitutional jurisprudence, however, the case stands as an aberration."

At their just-completed fall general meeting in Washington, the U.S. bishops approved a 2,000-word teaching document on why same-sex unions should not be given the social or legal status of marriage.

"Marriage, whose nature and purposes are established by God, can only be the union of a man and a woman and must remain such in law," it said.

The statement is to be published in brochure form, with plans for wide distribution in parishes.

In September, the U.S. bishops' Administrative Committee issued a public policy statement calling for a constitutional amendment to protect the unique social and legal status of marriage as a union of a man and a woman.

Bishops' meeting covers sex abuse crisis, farms, budget and devotions

Bishop Jugis impressed with range of topics discussed

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The U.S. bishops opened their annual fall meeting with a challenge from their president to direct "the energy of the whole church" to the eradication of sexual abuse and the healing of its victims. They also heard from the review board they established to respond to the abuse crisis.

During general sessions the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops also discussed and voted on a vast array of issues from same-sex unions, agricultural concerns, popular devotions, socially responsible investment, stewardship, conflict-of-interest policy and several liturgical matters. The bishops elected a new secretary, a pro-life committee chairman and chairmen-elect for eight other committees.

"Being my very first meeting with the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, I was very impressed with the range of issues the bishops covered," said Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte. "Also, with the amount of work we got done in the short amount of time."

The meeting, initially scheduled for Nov. 10-13, finished one day early as the bishops moved up their scheduled items of business to conclude at the end of the day Nov. 12.

On the first day of the annual fall meeting, held at Washington's Hyatt Regency Capitol Hill, the bishops approved the addition of one full-time and two part-time staff members for their Office for Child and Youth Protection at a cost of more than $265,000 through 2005.

Failure to approve the new posts "would look like our institutional memory has been lost" on the abuse issue, said Coadjutor Bishop Joseph A. Galante of Dallas.

The bishops heard a presentation on the work of their National Review Board, formed last year in the wake of

CONTINUED next page

CNS PHOTO BY BOB ROLLER

Bishop J. Kevin Boland of Savannah, Ga., chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Marriage and Family, discusses his committee's proposed statement "Between Man and Woman: Questions and Answers About Marriage and Same-Sex Unions," at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops' fall general meeting in Washington Nov. 12.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic News & Herald

BOY SCOUTS

OF CHARLOTTE DIOCESE

Two scholarships available for:
The "St. George Trek"
Philmont, NM -- July 2004
Apply before December 1
CALL GEORGE WADDELL 828-437-8049

All Scouts and Cubs - plan now to attend!
Catholic Camporee 2004 - March 26-28
Camp Grimes, Dysartsville, NC

From previous page

ıe clerical sex abuse crisis, and were ›ld of major national studies on the risis and the U.S. bishops' response to it ıat will be released early next year.

The studies will include a report on ıe extent of sexual abuse of minors by atholic priests and deacons since 1950 y the John Jay College of Criminal ıstice in New York and the review oard's consensus report on interviews ith bishops, priests-abusers, victims nd a wide array of professionals re-arding the "causes and context" of the buse crisis.

On Nov. 12, the bishops over-helmingly approved a short teaching ocument on why same-sex unions hould not be given the social or legal tatus of marriage. The bishops were ›ld that rapid developments on the is-ıe across the country led the USCCB dministrative Committee in Septem-er to seek development of the statement ı time for the November meeting.

The 2,000 word statement, "Be-ween Man and Woman: Questions and nswers About Marriage and Same-ex Union," states that marriage be-ween a man and a woman is God's plan, een in nature and in divine revelation. It as approved in a 234-3 vote.

The same day, they also unani-ıously approved their first new docu-ıent on agriculture in 14 years: "For I Vas Hungry and You Gave Me Food: atholic Reflections on Food, Farmers nd Farmworkers." The document, hich examines agricultural issues from enetically modified crops to crop subsi-ies and market forces affecting rural life oth in the United States and in the ation's trading partners, passed with a 37-0 vote.

The bishops spent time Nov. 10 dis-ussing the need for guidelines on how hey should handle relationships with atholics whose actions in public life are ot in accord with church teaching.

The guidelines, which are not ex-ected to be in final form until after the 004 elections, are meant to help bish-ps make distinctions between "respect for the office and approval of the office-holder ... to distinguish between fundamental moral principles and prudential judgments on the application of those principles," said Bishop John H. Ricard of Pensacola-Tallahassee, Fla., chairman of a new task force charged with addressing the issue.

On other political matters, Mark Chopko, the bishops' general counsel, told the bishops Nov. 12 that the church faces a "multifaceted affront" to its integrity and identity from regulatory and legislative pressures.

Those pressures include laws that require church-run social service agencies to include contraceptives in prescription drug plans for employees, or that seek to use charitable trusts or tax exemptions as ways of forcing changes in policies based on church teachings.

He warned that if Catholic and other faiths' agencies are confronted by the choice of conforming to some societal standards or withdrawing from society, they might have to stop serving the poor, the vulnerable and needy.

That same day, the bishops approved, in 236-6 vote with two abstentions, a pastoral statement encouraging popular devotions but cautioning that those devotions should never supplant the liturgy, the primary form of the church's worship and sacramental life. The 21-page statement is called, "Popular Devotional Practices: Basic Questions and Answers."

During the meeting the bishops also approved:

— A stewardship document that encourages young adults to change the world by using their gifts and skills to embrace the church's social teachings.

— A policy to prevent conflict of interest in conducting business and an updated version of their guidelines on socially responsible investing, by voice vote.

— A revised edition of "Sunday Celebrations in the Absence of a Priest" and a revised edition of "Guidelines for the Concelebration of the Eucharist."

— A 2004 budget for the USCCB that shaved $4.5 million off the 2003 expenditures.

The bishops elected Archbishop Michael J. Sheehan of Santa Fe, N.M., as the new secretary of the USCCB, succeeding Bishop William B. Friend of Shreveport, La., who completed a three-year term.

CNS PHOTO BY PAUL HARING

Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Belleville, Ill., president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, addresses the nation's bishops at the opening session of their general meeting in Washington Nov. 10.

They also elected Cardinal William H. Keeler of Baltimore to a three-year term as the new chairman of their Committee on Pro-Life Activities. He succeeds Cardinal Anthony J. Bevilacqua, now retired archbishop of Philadelphia. They also chose new chairmen-elect for eight other committees who will automatically succeed the current chairmen at next year's fall meeting.

The bishops also agreed to extend for another three years 14 USCCB ad hoc committees, including stewardship, Spanish-language Bible, sexual abuse, Native American Catholics and aid to the church in Central and Eastern Europe. They disbanded the Ad Hoc Committee on Agriculture Issues since the conference approved a statement raising concerns about the ethical dimensions of policy on agriculture and trade.

They heard a report Nov. 10 on plans for their 2004 special assembly in Denver, which will involve discussions of a possible plenary council of the U.S. church. No decision will be made on that issue at the June assembly, however, said Archbishop Daniel M. Buechlein of Indianapolis, chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee on a Plenary Council.

Another report, given by Archbishop Alexander J. Brunett of Seattle, Catholic co-chair of the Anglican-Roman Catholic International Commission, spoke of Anglican-Catholic dialogue and urged bishops to remain committed to dialogue despite challenges raised by the recent ordination of an openly gay bishop in the U.S. Episcopal Church.

Bishop Stephen E. Blaire of Stockton, Calif., chairman of the Catholic bishops' Committee on Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs, gave a report on the preparations for a new ecumenical forum in the United States that would embrace a wider range of churches than the National Council of Churches currently does. He said the bishops may be asked to make a decision about joining this body next year.

"Many of the committees are ongoing and are working on future document, such as adult and adolescent catechism, support for the church in Africa and other issues," said Bishop Jugis.

The bishops were asked to consider formalizing economic support for pastoral programs in Africa similar to what they now provide to the Catholic Church in Central and Eastern Europe and Latin America.

The first two days of the meeting had an international flavor, with reports from the president of the Vietnamese bishops' conference, a former Vatican justice and peace official and African bishops seeking renewed attention to the plight of their continent.

Coadjutor Archbishop Diarmuid Martin of Dublin, Ireland, former Vatican representative at U.N. agencies that are based in Geneva and former secretary of the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace, spoke on issues of war and peace 40 years after the encyclical "Pacem in Terris." He said international cooperation and gathering accurate intelligence about terrorist groups are preferable to war in combating terrorism.

Editor Kevin E. Murray contributed to this story.

The Franciscan Center

Catholic Gift & Book Store

Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!

Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday

(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Join our Oratorian Congregation to SERVE GOD AS PRIEST OR BROTHER

As priests and lay men, our community lives without vows and serves God's people numerous ways, including:

Parishes Youth Camps Nursing
Retreats Campus Ministry Hospital Chaplains

Find out more about serving God with us:

Fr. Ed McDevitt, CO The Oratory
P O Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586

KTC SUPERSTAR Coach Systems

KTC Transportation Co. Inc

CALL 704-532-7605

Convention Services Long & Short Tours
Airport Beach Vacations
Hotel Games
City Tours Sports
Groups Special Events

Fax 704-532-7661

www.ktctransportation.com

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Protestants and Catholics discuss the role of Mary

REVIEWED BY
BROTHER JEFFREY GROS, FSC
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

All Christians recognize Mary as the mother of God, as attested in Scripture and the Christian tradition. However, among Catholics, Orthodox and the Reformation churches, such as Lutherans, there have been a wide variety of devotions and a wide range of opinions of each other's practices.

Martin Luther had a higher regard for the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception than did St. Thomas Aquinas. Most of the reformers presumed the Assumption, and some kept the feast day. However, all Protestants were wary of some Catholic practices, and evangelical Christians particularly so, even accusing Catholics of idolatry because of our Marian piety. On the other hand, the Catholic Church has always upheld the appropriate veneration of Mary while warning against practices that go beyond the bounds of faith and question the centrality of Christ's unique mediation role.

"Mary: A Catholic-Evangelical Debate," by Dwight Longenecker and David Gustafson, with forewords by Father Richard John Neuhaus and J.I. Packer. Brazos Press (Grand Rapids, Mich., 2003). 240 pp., $14.99.

In our own day there have been important agreements between Protestants and Catholics on the role of Mary — in the U.S. Lutheran and Catholic dialogue, among Catholics and Calvinists in France in the Groupe des Dombes, and in an important forthcoming statement among Anglicans and Catholics. Even as early as 1983 the subject was treated in the important Evangelical and Roman Catholic Dialogue on Mission.

"Mary: A Catholic-Evangelical Debate" is a significant contribution to that literature and an important educational resource for evangelicals and Catholics alike.

Although this book is called a debate, it often rises above that level. It is a good example of ecumenical dialogue in action. It has these important characteristics of dialogue:

— Clarification, without stereotype, of the other's positions.

— Appreciation of the truth in one another's positions.

— Recognition of misunderstandings and abuses in one's own community.

— Finding common ground in the shared truth of the Gospel without compromise.

The book has 12 chapters. The first three look at common ground: the biblical evidence, common faith in Mary as mother of God, and the virginity of Mary. The next three chapters take up contentious titles and the doctrines that stand behind them: Spouse of the Holy Spirit, Immaculate Conception and the Assumption.

The following three chapters explicate the devotional life of Catholics that is so easily misunderstood by Protestants, especially evangelical Christians: veneration, apparitions and the rosary. These chapters will be of interest to Catholics as much as to Protestants because of the distinctions the authors attempt to clarify among Catholic faith, the official devotion of the church and the variety of private practices, some of which clearly go beyond Catholic teaching.

There is a chapter on the titles for Mary which are controversial even within Catholicism: co-redeemer, mediatrix and advocate. The book ends with a summary and conclusions. The volume has a helpful bibliography, two indices and useful study questions at the end of each chapter.

This book is designed as a suitable resource for an evangelical-Catholic dialogue in a local setting of a parish or school. It will also be a valuable resource for those working with evangelicals interested in Catholicism, with candidates in the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults or with Catholic students who live in an evangelical environment.

Mary is central to Catholic devotional life as model of the church and as pointer to Christ in her own role in the plan of salvation. Catholics will be enriched in their own understanding of Mary by appreciating the reservations serious Christians have about our faith and practice. By reading a volume like this, Catholics will also be equipped to renew and reform their own Marian piety and communicate the Catholic culture and faith to fellow Christians in dialogue.

Brother Gros is an associate director of the U.S. bishops' Secretariat for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs in Washington.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: NOV. 23, 2003

Nov. 23, Our Lord Jesus Christ the King

Cycle B Readings:

1) Daniel 7:13-14
Psalm 93:1, 1-2, 5
2) Revelation 1:5-8
3) Gospel: John 18:33b-37

BY JEAN DENTON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

The 8-year-old was helping the 6-year-old set the table. She consulted the 11-year-old: "Which cup do you want?"

"The blue one."

"Put the blue one there."

"No! I already put the red one there. The blue one goes over here!"

"Well, Zack wants the blue one. So give Mom the red one."

"No! Mom gets the one with the flowers!"

"Then put the red one over here and the blue one there."

"No!" The 6-year-old was bellowing now, "I'm in charge!"

"No you're not."

"Yes, I am! Mom, didn't you say I'm in charge of setting the table?"

When our kids were young it seemed that their continuing power struggles usually came down to someone's claim that "I'm in charge!" And the arbiters to that claim always were Dad and Mom — which proved who really was "in charge."

That's pretty typical of family life. Parents give various tasks to different children. They do this to nurture the needs of each child as well as to serve the good of the family as a whole.

When the children overstep their own bounds of authority — which they do because they care more about their authority than the good of the family — there is strife, and the ultimate authority (Dad and Mom) must step in to restore peace.

With this weekend's readings for the feast of Christ the King, we are reminded that Christ is the ultimate authority amid constantly competing cries of "I'm in charge!"

Although God has offered us responsibilities for this world and our relationships with each other, we God's children, regularly overstep our bounds in our desire to call the shots. More concerned with being in control — of others' actions or our own agendas — we forget or refuse to serve the greater good of all.

So, often despite our efforts to the contrary and after we cause some suffering and harm, Jesus — we are assured — will come, ultimately, in some way and step in to restore peace to God's family.

For this he was born to us.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 23 - NOVEMBER 29

Sunday (Christ the King), Daniel 7:13-14, 5 Revelation 1:5-8, John 18:33-37; Monday (Andrew Dung-Lac, Priest, Martyr and His Companions, Martyrs), Daniel 1:1-6, 8-20, Luke 21:1-4; Tuesday, Daniel 2:31-45, Daniel 3:57-61, Luke 21:5-11; Wednesday, Daniel 5:1-6, 13-14, 16-17, 23-28,Luke 21:12-19; Thursday, (Thanksgiving Day), Sirach 50:22-24, 1 Corinthians 1:3-9, Luke 17:11-19; Friday, Daniel 7:2-14, Luke 21:29-33; Saturday, Sirach 44:1, 10-15, Mark 10:17-21

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 30 - DECEMBER 6

Sunday (First Sunday of Advent), Jeremiah 33:14-16, 1 Thessalonians 3:12—4:2, Luke 21:25-28, 34-36; Monday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 2:1-5, Matthew 8:5-11; Tuesday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 11:1-10, Luke 10:21-24; Wednesday (St. Francis Xavier), Isaiah 25:6-10a, Matthew 15:29-37; Thursday (St. John of Damascus), Isaiah 26:1-6, Matthew 7:21, 24-27; Friday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 29:17-24, Matthew 9:27-31; Saturday (St. Nicholas), Isaiah 30:19-21, 23-26, Matthew 9:35-10:1, 5a, 6-8

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

He's the One, but he's no Savior

CNS PHOTO FROM WARNER BROTHERS

Keanu Reeves stars as Neo, also called the One, in "The Matrix Revolutions." Vatican Radio calls the film a "superficial commercialization of Christian ideas and symbols." The movie, which received a USCCB classification of A-IV — adults, with reservations — engages in "open looting of the Christian story," Vatican Radio said.

Bishops sign petition to rerelease film about Irish Catholic soldiers

BY MARK PATTISON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The quest to get a 4-year-old movie back on the big screen took its next step as more than two dozen bishops signing a petition asking the studio to either rerelease the film or to sell the rights to a studio that will.

The movie, "One Man's Hero," deals with the San Patricio Battalion, a group of Irish immigrant soldiers who deserted the U.S. Army after promises of citizenship were not honored and the soldiers were mistreated because of their Catholic faith. The men fled to Mexico before and during the Mexican-American War amid a new promise of citizenship, plus land.

"One Man's Hero," which stars Tom Berenger, was screened before about a dozen bishops — and an equal number of reporters — Nov. 11 at the Washington hotel hosting the U.S. bishops' fall general meeting in Washington. After the movie, the bishops in attendance signed the petition.

The movie was made for Orion Pictures, but Orion was sold to MGM before the film was released. MGM showed the film in 60 theaters, mostly in the U.S. Southwest, then issued the film on video.

MGM controls the film's rights in the United States, Canada, Ireland and Northern Ireland; "One Man's Hero" was not released in the last three countries. The movie has already been shown in Mexico.

"We exhort MGM to rerelease the movie in major markets that have large Catholic populations," the petition says, identifying New York City, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Detroit, Washington and Philadelphia.

"We believe that not only the Catholic faithful in the United States would profit from viewing this film, but also people of different faiths and other backgrounds," the petition said.

The petition adds that the movie should also be released in Ireland and Northern Ireland. "The San Patricios are heroes and not only to the people of Mexico but, first and foremost, (to) their own countrymen in Ireland," it says.

Tom Nash of Catholics United for the Faith, who has spearheaded the rerelease campaign, said he believes MGM is acting with "bias" and "animus" against Catholics in its refusal to rerelease "One Man's Hero" or sell the rights. He cited MGM's negotiations with a prospective English distributor that broke down even after the distributor, he said, had met all of MGM's conditions for distribution rights.

Paul L. Newman, one of the film's associate producers, said that, with the MGM takeover of Orion, "Orion people who loved the idea and would have fought for this idea weren't there anymore." Likewise, he added, "the people at MGM who made the decision (to withdraw 'One Man's Hero') probably aren't there anymore."

"This is great," said Auxiliary Bishop Emilio Allue of Boston after seeing the movie. "It's very historical," he said, alluding to an incident that occurred earlier in U.S. history when an English governor in colonial South Carolina destroyed the Spanish missions there. "It's happened to us the same as it happened to the Irish," said Bishop Allue, one of 24 active U.S. Hispanic bishops.

Bishop Allue doesn't agree with the contention that "One Man's Hero" is anti-American because it shows the Army in a bad light. "It is not anti-American; it is very factual," he said. "You cannot deny history."

For bishops who couldn't make the hotel screening, Silver Lion Films, which made "One Man's Hero," arranged to have the movie shown on closed-circuit TV in their hotel rooms.

The movie can be seen occasionally on cable television, and is available on videocassette and DVD.

FOR ALL THE SAINTS

SOUTHEAST FIRE RALLY presented by Good News Ministries

EXPERIENCE THE 'NEW SPRINGTIME' OF THE THIRD CHRISTIAN MILLENNIUM

FAITH
—a challenge to Catholics to renew and deepen their relationship with the Lord.

RALPH MARTIN
Ralph is the founding President of Renewal Ministries, a Catholic mission organization, and hosts a popular weekly television series, The Choices We Face. Ralph is also the founding editor of New Covenant magazine and author of several books. He presently leads The Word of God, an ecumenical Christian community in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

INTERCESSION
—a call to united prayer as our most important spiritual weapon available for renewing the face of the earth.

SR. ANN SHIELDS, SGL
Sr. Ann is the superior of the Servants of God's Love in Lansing, Michigan, and is a regular co-host on the television program, The Choices We Face. She also hosts a radio program, Food for the Journey. She is the author of several books, including Fire in My Heart, and is a frequent conference speaker.

REPENTANCE
—an exhortation to turn away from sin to a Christ-centered, Spirit-filled life.

FR. MICHAEL SCANLAN, TOR
Fr. Michael is the Chancellor and former President of Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio, and was ordained in 1964. In 1990, he was awarded the Cross Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice by Pope John Paul II. He has authored several books including his autobiography, Let the Fire Fall.

EVANGELISM
—an invitation to spread the Good News of salvation and the gift of authentic Catholicism.

PETER HERBECK
Peter is Director of Missions at Renewal Ministries and has served numerous retreats, conferences, rallies, and events around the world. Much of his work has been devoted to helping equip Catholics for ministry through training in the exercise of spiritual gifts. Peter and his wife Debbie have four children and live in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

CLOSING LITURGY
CELEBRANT & HOMILIST

MOST REV. ROBERT J. BAKER, STD
Bishop Baker is shepherd to Catholics throughout the state of South Carolina. He has served as a pastor, counselor, mentor, and professor during his priesthood and was appointed as the 12th Bishop of Charleston in 1999 by Pope John Paul II.

"My hope and prayer is that all who attend the FIRE Rally will experience a deeper conversion, a greater desire for reconciliation, and a willingness to be more fully involved in the New Evangelization to which our Holy Father has called us in the new millennium."
—Most Reverend Robert J. Baker, STD
Bishop of Charleston

FIRE
A CATHOLIC ALLIANCE OF FAITH, INTERCESSION, REPENTANCE, AND EVANGELISM

CHARLOTTE BOBCATS TRAINING CENTER
FORT MILL, SOUTH CAROLINA
(I-77 exit 88)

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 2004
9:00 am – 6:00 pm
(Doors open at 8:00 am.)

DYNAMIC, INSPIRED MUSIC BY *HEARTS OF FIRE
Bookstore & Ministry Fair

FURTHER INFORMATION
Phone: (704) 521-9949
Email: carolinaevents2@aol.com
ONLINE REGISTRATION:
http://www.fireministry.org/charlotte

TOO BUSY FOR ONE LAST KISS? DO YOU EVER FORGET TO KISS YOUR LOVED ONES AS YOU SAY YOUR DAILY "GOOD-BYES"? HOW DEVASTATED WOULD YOU BE IF YOU MISSED YOUR LAST CHANCE TO KISS THAT PERSON WHO MIGHT BE GONE FOREVER?

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!

"A gorgeous work...AN ILLUMINATING, REVELATORY BOOK."
—Basil Sharp, Author of The Adventure of Being Human

To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

Racing for the cure

COURTESY PHOTO

A team of students, parents, teachers and staff of St. Gabriel School raised over $900 for breast cancer during the Race for the Cure event in Charlotte Oct. 4. Molly Sweeny, a third-grader, raised $307 and Hank LeFlore, a fifth-grader, raised $235.

Dr. William Powers to speak at Bradley Institute

BELMONT — Dr. William F. Powers will give a talk entitled "Catholicism in North Carolina: Periods of Frustration and Growth," in the student commons at Belmont Abbey College at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 4. Admission is free and open to the public.

Powers served as a professor of sociology for nearly 30 years at Suffolk Community College on Long Island. He holds a doctorate from St. John's University in New York. He moved to Chapel Hill in 1999 to work on his book "Tar Heel Catholics: A History of Catholicism in North Carolina," which was published in September 2003.

The talk is part of the Bradley Institute for the Study of Christian Culture, which provides opportunities for business executives, career professionals and clergy to examine relevant ethical, theological and philosophical topics within the context of their modern lives. Program topics range from business, legal and medical ethics to history and philosophy.

The Institute, sponsored by Belmont Abbey College, was founded in 1996 and is named for Rev. John P. Bradley, former president of Belmont Abbey College and former CEO and chairman of the board of Good Will Publishers of Charlotte.

Annual Catholic Camporee for Scouts and Cubs

NEBO, N.C. — Catholic Camporee XXIX, an annual camping event for Scouts and Cubs, will be held at Camp Grimes March 26-28, 2004.

All Catholic Scout troops, Cub Packs, individual Catholic Scouts or units led by Catholics are encouraged to attend the weekend camporee, and awards for the winners of Scout competitions will be distributed after the Sunday Mass.

Camp Grimes is located on the Mecklenburg Scout Reservation in McDowell County, nestled in the foothills of the South Mountains.

All parties interested in attending are encouraged to make plans now. For more information, contact Joe Vari at (704) 846-5155.

We beat the banks!

IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

PART-TIME RN: Visiting Angels of South Charlotte seeks RN to supervise field staff providing home-based custodial care. Flexible hours. Please call 704-544-9006.

PRINCIPAL: St. Anthony of Padua Catholic grade school, Southern Pines, NC is accepting curriculum vitae for the position of principal. School curriculum is faithful to the magesteruim of the Church. Applicants must have master's degree and be state certified in education. Salary commensurate with experience. Please send Curriculum vitae to: The Very Reverend Jeffrey A. Ingham, V.F., St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church, 175 E. Connecticut Avenue, Southern Pines, NC 28387

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

HOME: Senior Citizens Community. Lake Norman area. 2 bedrooms, kitchen, living room, dining area, 2 bathrooms. Interior completely updated. Community has lots of friendly people. Call owner: 704-662-9318.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

SUPPLEMENTAL HEALTH CARE
STAFFING SPECIALISTS

is proud to announce the opening of a new allied health division in North Carolina!

PTs and OTs up to $36/hr
PTAs and COTAs up to $30/hr
Speech Therapists up to $40/hr

Per diem and contracts available

Contact me today to find out what Supplemental Health Care has to offer you!

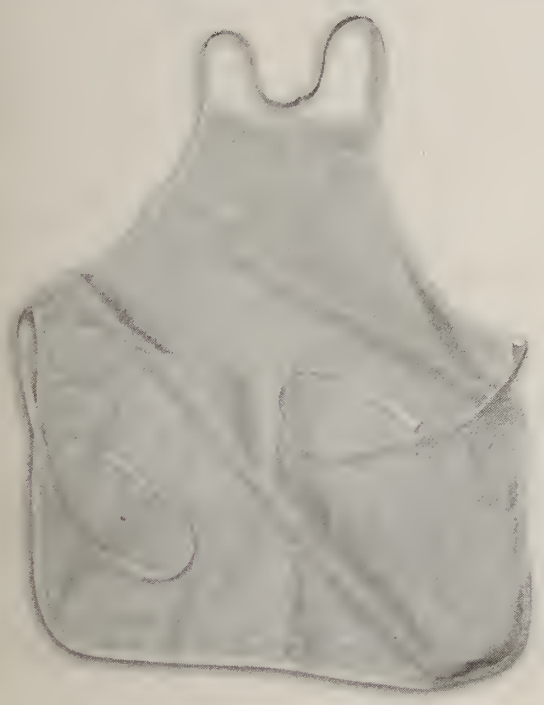
Deena Taylor
Toll free (877) 781-9565
Fax (919) 781-9564
Dtaylor@supplementalhealth.com

Visit our website: www.ncalliedstaffing.com

Put away your apron tonight.



Give your order to the chef.

For the retirement lifestyle of choice, independence and flexibility, call today for pre-construction pricing. Reserve now — move later.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN AT MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community
1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444
Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Interpreting Mary

COURTESY PHOTO BY PEG RUBLE

Students create their interpretations of Mary during the Fall High School Retreat held at St. Eugene Church in Asheville Oct. 17-19. Almost 40 youths from nine parishes throughout the diocese explored the theme "Behold Your Mother," which was the theme of World Youth Day celebrated nationally Oct. 26.

Breaking ground

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Redemptorist Father James Geiger shovels dirt as Rev. Mr. Daniel Carl and Rev. Mr. Guy Piche watch during the Nov. 16 groundbreaking ceremony for the new St. James Church in Concord. The new facility will be several miles from the current church and is expected to be complete next year. See Parish Profile on page 16.

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926
McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.
Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Unit # 27 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS
CHRISTMAS GIFT SPECIALS
OPEN
Monday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Drawing unfortunate conclusions on intercommunion

Clarifying recent column with church teaching

Guest Column

FATHER JOHN PUTNAM
GUEST COLUMNIST

In responding to a question regarding intercommunion, Father John Dietzen in his Nov. 7 column "Non-Catholics receiving Communion in Catholic Churches") is misleading. As Catholics, we recognize the Eucharist as the source and summit of our Catholic life. Because of this, the church is very clear on who may and who may not receive Communion during the celebration of the Eucharist. The U.S. bishops issued norms in 1996, and these can be found in the missalettes used by most parishes. Those norms, as printed in Father Dietzen's column, have not changed.

Father Dietzen's conclusions can lead to error in at least two ways. First of all, his presentation of certain passages in the papal documents "Ut unum sint" and "Ecclesia de Eucaristia" is taken out of context. In the former, Father Dietzen notes the first few lines of No. 46 but omits reference to the previous paragraph, No. 45, and the remainder of the paragraph quoted. In these passages, the Holy Father notes that "Certainly, due to disagreements in matters of faith, it is not yet possible to celebrate together the same Eucharistic Liturgy ... (where the sharing of sacraments can occur) The conditions for such reciprocal reception have been laid down in specific norms; for the sake of furthering ecumenism these norms must be respected."

In the latter, the Holy Father does indeed reiterate No. 46 of "Ut unum sint," but he also includes the following passage that Father Dietzen omits: "These conditions, from which no dispensation can be given, must be carefully respected, even though they deal with specific individual cases, because the denial of one or more truths of the faith regarding these sacraments and, among these, the truth regarding the need of the ministerial priesthood for their validity, renders the person asking improperly disposed to legitimately receiving them."

And the opposite is also true: Catholics may not receive Communion in those communities that lack a valid sacrament of Orders. These documents are certainly instruments of the clear and consistent teaching of the ordinary magisterium of the church; however, neither document set out to nor effected a change in the current norms of the church with respect to intercommunion sacramental sharing.

Secondly, Father Dietzen refers to certain actions of the Holy Father with regard to the British prime minister. None of us knows the exact circumstances of that situation, and we really do not have to. Simply because the Holy Father does something or does not do something does not make it the definitive norm for church practice. If such was the case, we would be subject to widespread chaos and confusion.

Should the Holy Father wish to change the current practice of the church with regard to intercommunion and sacramental sharing, he certainly has the authority to do so, but there is a clear and precise manner in which this has to be accomplished. Such a change has not taken place, and even Father Dietzen notes that his observations are simply speculation.

Unfortunately, even with an article that admits speculation, many individuals read such a column in a Catholic newspaper and draw unfortunate conclusions. This can lead both to hurt and misunderstanding. While we continue to pray for the unity of all Christians, that all may be one (ut unum sint), that unity has not yet been realized. Hence, intercommunion can only take place in certain specific circumstances as indicated in the law of the church.

Father John Putnam is pastor of Sacred Heart Church in Salisbury and judicial vicar for the Diocese of Charlotte.

At audience, pope urges pilgrims to remember importance of prayer

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — At a flag-waving and song-filled general audience, Pope John Paul II greeted pilgrims from all over the world and urged them not to forget the importance of prayer.

The 83-year-old pontiff appeared in good form as he spent nearly two hours in a packed Vatican audience hall Nov. 19, delivering brief talks in 10 languages. His voice sounded relatively strong, although he skipped over parts of his main speech.

The pope continued his series of audience talks on evening prayer, highlighting the canticle from St. Paul's letter to the Philippians, which is chanted each Sunday at vespers.

That ancient liturgical hymn, the pope said, captures the entire mystery of Christ, his humbling incarnation as man and his triumphal ascent to heaven at Easter. He said it was important for the modern church to keep its connection with such forms of prayer that go back to the early days of Christianity.

Those in the hall added music and spirit to the encounter, serenading the pope with hymns and folk songs. Five choirs from the United States were among those present, and the pope thanked them for their "praise of God in song."

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

He also greeted a delegation of Jewish war veterans from the United States, who sat near the front of the audience hall.

National and local flags unfurled as the audience groups were called out by name. Members of a national pilgrimage of Hungarian Gypsies stood and sang a traditional hymn.

At the end of his audience talk, the pope offered special words in support of the cloistered nuns around the world. He asked all Catholics to give spiritual and material support to cloistered religious orders.

"We are, in fact, greatly indebted to these people who consecrate themselves entirely to incessant prayer for the church and for the world," he said.

Before leaving the hall, the pope greeted dozens of pilgrims, tracing a cross on each forehead, accepting their gifts and caressing their babies. Then, seated in his mobile throne, he posed for several group photos.

Letters to the Editor

High praise for bishop tribute

What a wonderful special edition (Oct. 31) to celebrate the ordination of Bishop Peter J. Jugis. I suspect Bishop Jugis' humility might say it was maybe a little too much to do over him, but I would say that issue of The Catholic News & Herald accurately reflects the excitement and joy we feel over our new bishop (and I'm not even Catholic).

While we welcome Bishop Jugis, we are also grateful for Bishop William G. Curlin's dedication and service to the Diocese of Charlotte. We have every confidence Bishop Jugis will continue the high Christian ideals set by Bishop Curlin.

Bob Gunn
Black Mountain

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Catholic News & Herald welcomes letters from readers. We ask that letters be originals of 250 words or less.

To be considered for publication, each letter must include the name, address and phone number of the writer for purpose of verification. Letters may be condensed due to space limitations and edited for clarity, style and taste.

Send letters to Letters to the Editor, The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, N.C. 28237, or e-mail catholicnews@charlottediocese.org.

Actor knows keys to successful life, family

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

This fall marks the 51st season of Christopher television. In a world where new programs can come and go in a matter of weeks, I think we have the right to be just a little proud of our longevity. Far more than that, we continue a tradition of presenting guests who are doing their bit to change the world for the better in an amazing variety of positive ways.

The current Christopher Closeup line-up includes a high school principal who helps inner-city children succeed, a singer who volunteers as a mentor and a minister and author who helps people find peace in times of anxiety. I was delighted to interview these interesting and, yes, inspiring people.

Among the other equally entertaining and thought-provoking guests was an actor I had really looked forward to meeting. As a fan of Cuba Gooding, Jr.'s performance in "Jerry Maguire" (for which he won an Academy Award), and his costarring role with Robert DeNiro in "Men Of Honor," I wanted to know more about him. I went to see his newest movie before I interviewed him for Christopher Closeup. I'm happy to report "The Fighting Temptations" is good fun. It's also blessed with sensational music, most of which is performed in a southern Baptist church. To say it is music with gusto is an understatement. You'd be hard pressed to be unmoved by this soulful singing.

At a time when many movies make us cringe with poor values and language, "The Fighting Temptations" is different. And it was a particular joy to find that the star of the film not only speaks words of value in the movie, but tries to live those words in real life.

Cuba Gooding, Jr. is charming, articulate and delightfully sincere. He's also obviously a religious man. In fact, in an earlier interview, he'd said every night before he goes to bed, he recites the Scripture verse, "I can do all things through Him who strengthens me." (Philippians 4:13) He clearly sees all life as a gift from God and has his priorities straight. I asked him how he lives out The Christophers' message: How is he making the world a better place? How is he making a difference for the good?

From a career point of view, he wants to be a role model for every young African-American who aspires to act. He wants to send the message that nothing is beyond their dreams. He says his life should make believers of all who think there are limits. From a personal point of view, he said the kind of father and husband he is will determine his real success. Family is the place where he wants to make the biggest difference. I couldn't help but think if every father and husband had this priority, our whole society could be much healthier. It's great to be a movie star, but it's even more vital that a man star in his own family as a source of goodness, stability, good values and direction.

I'm not sure why it's so hard for us to get our priorities straight, but it is. Time and again I hear about people who put so much energy into work they have little left for their families. Yet, a key to a meaningful life is deciding what — and who — is really important to us. It's unrealistic to say that success doesn't matter in this world. But if we just spent a bit more time thinking about the kind of success we really want to achieve, then we — and the people who are dear to us — would gain more than we ever dreamed.

What is the right method of baptism?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. My question involves the process of baptism. Is immersion the only fully authentic way to administer baptism, as some non-Catholic religions teach? I know some Catholic churches have immersion "pools" for baptism; but is pouring the water over the head just as proper? (Ohio)

A. Either way is proper, according to the practice and rituals of the Roman Catholic Church. The reasons are important and, I think, interesting.

The Catechism of the Catholic Church reminds us of a significant truth about the sacraments. "All sacramental celebrations," it says, "are woven from signs and symbols. In keeping with the divine pedagogy of salvation (that is, God's method of teaching us about his way of saving the human race), their meaning is rooted in the work of creation and in human culture" (No. 1145).

From the beginning, the church has taken that idea seriously. It is essential that all material elements and actions used in the liturgy (bread, wine, oil, water, words) be recognized for what they should be, authentic "signs" of what Jesus Christ accomplishes in us through these rituals.

What is Jesus really doing in baptism? From the beginning, Christians were familiar with several biblical images of the effect of baptism. Through it "we put on a new self" like a new garment (Col 3:10). We are "enlightened," and we taste "the good word of God" (Heb 6:4-5).

The central image, however, was the one indicated by Jesus to Nicodemus in the Gospel of John, "We are born of water and Spirit" (3:5). That's the way St. Paul saw baptism. We were "buried with him (Jesus) through baptism into death, so that just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, we too might live in newness of life" (Rom 6:4).

Immersion of people receiving baptism — standing in water which is then poured over the heads of the baptized — was seen as a fuller expression of this burial and rising to new birth. It continued to predominate in the church for hundreds of years.

Interestingly, early Christian art and literature reveal that, already in the first decades and centuries after Christ, the method of baptism with which we are more familiar, pouring water over the head (called infusion), was also acceptable. This form of the sacrament has grown more common since the 14th century, as the "washing away of original sin" became the more prevailing symbol of the effects of baptism.

The Catechism of the Catholic Church (No. 1239), continuing the ancient tradition, says, "Baptism is performed in the most expressive way by triple immersion in the baptismal water."

However, the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (No. 213), the Rite of Baptism for Children (No. 18), and the catechism, all indicate that either immersion or infusion may be chosen, according to local traditions and circumstances.

A free brochure describing basic Catholic prayers, beliefs and moral precepts is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Father John Dietzen, Box 325, Peoria, IL 61651.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

Smile, God — and the camera — loves you!

Murray's Musings

KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

Let me begin by thanking the millions of you who have written, called, e-mailed or sent singing telegrams in regard to the redesign of The Catholic News & Herald. To the reader who sent the note with the home-baked cookies, that was an especially nice touch! I only wish other readers would take such initiative (wink, wink).

We're still making changes here at your diocesan newspaper and plan to introduce several new features in the coming weeks.

I've also received a few letters about recent national and religious coverage — conservative readers have called me a "left-wing liberal" and liberal readers have labeled me a "right-wing conservative." I'm not entirely sure if everybody's reading the same newspaper, but at least I can't be faulted for taking sides. If anything, it can be said there's content for everybody in The Catholic News & Herald.

If I try to do anything, though, it's present the Catholic perspective on issues. Why I have a few readers claiming I'm in league with the devil, and worse, with The New York Times, is beyond me.

But as many of you have kindly noticed, the amount of local content continues to go up. This is, in part, thanks to you. We've received a plethora (I'm trying to make use of my thesaurus) of submissions, including photos and press releases and, in some cases, short stories from the churches, schools and ministries of the diocese. These are usually the stories that run without bylines, the photos that run with "Courtesy Photo" captions.

Unfortunately, our small staff can't be everywhere all the time, so these reader submissions are very welcomed, and while I unfortunately can't promise to include them all in the newspaper, they certainly add a nice (and increased) local element to the pages of The Catholic News & Herald.

So take a camera to your next church, ministry or school event and snap some photos, then send them in with a brief description. Or come to our office, stand in the doorway with your arms crossed, and glare at us until we are intimidated enough to go out and photograph your event.

Either method will work, but standing around all day with arms crossed is just simply bad for your circulation.

So, grab your cameras and start snapping. I look forward to your submissions and immortalizing you in The Catholic News & Herald.

Now if you'll excuse me, I have some cookies to eat.

St. James Church serves as spiritual home to Concord Catholics

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

St. James Church in Concord, which now boasts more than 800 families, sits on land acquired by a parishioner during an auction.

CONCORD — In the 1800s, Cabarrus County Catholics, like many others in the state, had to travel elsewhere for Mass.

Joseph Barnhardt, a convert to Catholicism, dreamed of having a church built in Concord, but died in 1858 before he could help plan it. But when Barnhardt's father-in-law died in 1869, he deeded a picturesque plot of land for the future church.

With the help of the Concord-area Catholics, the first St. James Church was built and dedicated on Aug. 1, 1869. Father Joseph J. O'Connell, who would later write a book about Catholicism in the South, became the first pastor of the parish.

In the 1950s, a parishioner named J.B. Williams attempted to buy a piece of property inside the town for the church. When non-Catholic residents discovered his intention for the property, he was immediately outbid. A short time later, another property was auctioned for which Williams bid — he purchased the property and turned it over to the church. This became the property on which the church currently stands.

The first pastors of the church were Benedictine priests from Belmont Abbey and other areas of the diocese. In 1944, Bishop Vincent Waters of the Diocese of Raleigh (which covered all of North Carolina) asked Redemptorist Fathers to begin priestly ministry work at St. Joseph Church, built in 1945 in nearby Kannapolis. In 1974, the Redemptorist Fathers came to St. James Church and remain today.

In 1954, Charlie Williams, a St. James parishioner, started an annual barbecue to raise money for the church. The event, open to the entire community, became the largest fundraising project for the church.

In August 1969, St. Joseph Church became a mission of St. James Church. Redemptorist Father Alvaro Riquelme, a current parochial vicar of St. James in Concord, now serves as St. Joseph's pastor.

In a double celebration July 31, 1994, then-Bishop William G. Curlin dedicated a new 12,000-square-foot parish center — complete with 11 classrooms, a large central area and a kitchen — and helped commemorate the church's 125th anniversary. The parish was presented with a proclamation signed by Concord Mayor George Liles declaring that date as "St. James Catholic Church anniversary day."

In 1993, Redemptorist Father Daniel Carboy, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel, became pastor of both St. James and St. Joseph. In 1994, Father Carboy started an endowment for the church with a $4,000 donation from a parishioner. By 1997, the endowment, used to generate funds for the church, had grown to $30,000.

In 1995, St. James Church hosted its first "Jimmy Murphy's Christmas Dinner," an event to bring people of the growing parish and community together on Christmas Day.

Redemptorist Father James Geiger became pastor in 2002 and helped the 800-family parish push forward with plans for a larger church. On Nov. 16, 2003, the parish celebrated a groundbreaking ceremony on their new property, which will include a larger church and two additional buildings for parish activities expected to be complete by Christmas of 2004.

ST. JAMES CHURCH

251 Union Street North
Concord, N.C. 28026
(704) 720-0600

Vicariate: Salisbury
Pastor: Redemptorist Father James Geiger
Parochial Vicars: Redemptorist Father Edward Gray, Redemptorist Father Alvaro Riquelme
Deacon: Rev. Mr. J. Daniel Carl
Parish Administrator: Redemptorist Brother Darrell Cevasco
Mission: St. Joseph Church, Kannapolis

Redemptorist Father James Geiger

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue:10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!
Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.
Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.
704-549-4010
Visiting Angels
E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

NOVEMBER 28, 2003

SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE

VOLUME 13 Nº 10

Parish Profile: St. Mary Church in Greensboro

| PAGE 12

WALKING TOWARD JESUS

Kairos ministry brings prayer, hope to inmates

BY STEPHEN UZZELL
CORRESPONDENT

MINT HILL — There was great singing and praising, spontaneous hugging and dancing. Strangers joined together in emotional praying and sharing.

Participants in Kairos 23 inside Evans Correctional Institute in Bennettsville, S.C., reached a spirit-filled level of energy during their "Walk" Oct. 16-19. Forty-two inmates in the all-male medium security facility met daily with 55 male members of the interdenominational Christian team from the Carolinas. Nine parishioners from St. Luke Church in Mint Hill comprised the Kairos ministry team.

"I had never even considered this ministry," said parishioner Gay Loesch. "I wouldn't expect a woman to be called to go into a prison to minister. But it begins when you are volunteering to be a minister to others, and it grows into a very humbling experience that shows you that God calls us all to love one another."

The ministry of Kairos, the

See KAIROS, page 6

More Coverage

page 7 | St. Margaret Mary parishioners assist women prisoners

page 7 | Bishops support legislation for mentally ill offenders

Catholic youth share faith at national conference in Houston

North Carolinians connect to other Catholic teens

BY JONAH DYCUS AND ERIK NORIEGA
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

HOUSTON — A shared faith, a sense of communion and plenty of song and prayer flowed through the 23,000 young people attending the 2003 National Catholic Youth Conference, held at the Houston sports complex of Reliant Park Nov. 13-16.

High-school-age teens from all over the nation, including 38 representatives from the Diocese of Charlotte, gathered at the "River of Life" celebration sponsored by the National Federation for Catholic Youth Ministry and hosted by the Diocese of Galveston-Houston.

"You have come from different parts of this wonderful country to gather here together as a body of Christ, to express the great faith you have in Jesus and the love that you want to bring to the world," said Bishop Joseph A. Fiorenza of Galveston-Houston as he welcomed the thousands of young guests in Reliant Stadium.

The aquatically decorated stage in Reliant Stadium featured waterfalls, pools and vegetation in keeping with the conference's "River of Life" theme. A large crucifix, positioned on the south end of the floor, shadowed the entire centerpiece, while colored lighting enhanced the stage.

"This stadium was built for professional football, but

See YOUTH, page 6

COURTESY PHOTO BY PEG RUBLE

Young people from western North Carolina stand in front of Houston's Reliant Park in November. Thirty-eight teen-agers, representing six parishes and Bishop McGuinness and Charlotte Catholic high schools, attended the 2003 National Catholic Youth Conference, which gathered teen-agers from across the nation to expand and express their faith.

75 YEARS OF FAITHFULNESS

St. Mary Church celebrates history, diversity

BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY
CORRESPONDENT

GREENSBORO — It was a milestone of time and diversity.

Nov. 22 marked the final day of a celebration that began Jan. 14 for the 75th anniversary of St. Mary Church.

"Today is a time to

See ST. MARY, page 9

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Vincentian Father Michael Manh Nguyen (center) stands with Vietnamese parishioners at St. Mary's anniversary celebration.

Project of Life
Hispanic youth craft book on vocation of laity
| PAGE 4

Silent generosity
Anonymous benefactors provide for students
| PAGE 5

National Night of Prayer
Churches to participate in pro-life event
| PAGE 9

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
S236 P2
#420836#
#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

REMEMBERING A PRESIDENT

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Members of the Kennedy family pray as U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., lays a flower at the gravesite of his brother, President John F. Kennedy, at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va., Nov. 22. It was the 40th anniversary of the assassination of President Kennedy.

Mourners mark 40th anniversary of JFK's death

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Four decades ago, royalty, heads of state and government officials filled the Cathedral of St. Matthew the Apostle in Washington for the funeral Mass of President John F. Kennedy, who was assassinated Nov. 22, 1963.

Forty years later, almost 800 everyday Catholics from across the region gathered at the cathedral to pray for and remember the slain president, who was the first Catholic to be elected to that office, at a Mass of remembrance offered on the anniversary day his tragic death.

In his homily, Father J. Bryan Hehir, outgoing president of Catholic Charities USA, said the Mass was "a time to reflect and to pray (in the place where) President Kennedy was entrusted into the hands of God for eternity."

The priest said Americans old enough to remember President Kennedy's death would "never forget the time, place and impact" of that day in history.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., President Kennedy's youngest brother, and the senator's wife, Victoria, were also in attendance.

Father Hehir described President Kennedy as a leader who sought "to change the world in which he lived."

"He expanded people's sense of possibility and responsibility. ... He captured people's imagination, interest and raised their hopes," the priest said.

Earlier in the day, Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick of Washington led a private prayer service for members of the Kennedy family at the Arlington National Cemetery grave site of the slain president.

Following the evening Mass many attendees stopped to view the marker in front of St. Matthew's main altar that memorializes the spot where President Kennedy's casket was placed during his funeral Mass.

John Whelan, a longtime parishioner at St. Matthew, said he wanted to attend the anniversary Mass to honor and pray for the late president.

A former employee of National Geographic magazine, Whelan said he can vividly recall the funeral's events.

"I will never forget it as long as I live," he told the Catholic Standard, newspaper of the Washington Archdiocese. "I remember standing along Seventh Street. There were thousands of people watching the procession and you didn't hear a sound. There was utter silence."

Ron Linton, a former staff member in the Kennedy administration who also attended the Mass, said the 40th anniversary of the president's death "is no more important than the 39th or 41st, but what is important is to pray and to remember what he was, what he did and what we lost."

Relief agencies assess impact of international AIDS efforts

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Initiatives to combat AIDS in Africa and elsewhere continue to grow, with hopes by many charitable organizations that additional federal funds will increase efforts.

With an expected $2.4 billion earmarked by Congress to be available next year, religious charities are eager to apply for grants. The funding is part of President Bush's pledge made in last January's State of the Union address to deliver $15 billion in African AIDS prevention and treatment funding over the next five years.

Dozens of religious charities gathered Nov. 19-20 at Georgetown University in Washington for "Faith-Based Initiatives and the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief."

Catholic Relief Services, the U.S. bishops' overseas aid and development arm, currently works on AIDS relief in 30 countries with $45 million in grants from various sources.

Catholic Medical Mission Board spends about $8 million a year on anti-AIDS programs in South Africa, Namibia, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland and is starting programs in Kenya, Ghana and Nigeria.

Two critical nations facing the disease are China and India. "You've got a billion (people) in India, more than a billion in China," said John Galbraith of Catholic Medical Mission Board. "If we don't work now to stop AIDS in those countries, pretty soon we're going to be seeing numbers there like we're seeing in Africa."

Bishop Franklyn Nubuasah of the Apostolic Vicariate of Francistown, Botswana, said AIDS is "devastating" his nation. With 40 percent of the population infected, "We have 15 funerals a week" from AIDS-related deaths, a number so high that "you have to choose which ones you are going to attend."

Diocesan planner

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursday of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — Father Efiri Matthias Selemobri of The Missionaries of St. Paul, the first indigenous missionary society from Africa, will celebrate Mass at Our Lady of the Assumption Church, 4207 Shamrock Dr., Dec. 6 at 5:30 p.m. and Dec. 7 at 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. A reception will follow the 11 a.m. Mass sponsored by the African American Affairs Ministry.

CHARLOTTE — A Service of Lessons and Carols will premiere at St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., Dec. 7 at 6 p.m. The program will consist a 55-voice choir, including the children's and youth and choirs. Prelude music will begin at 5:30 p.m.

CHARLOTTE — St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., will sponsor a family potluck on Dec. 12 at 6 .m. in the New Life Center Banquet room. After dinner our special guest speaker will be Linda Schaefer, the last photojournalist personally invited to make a photographic journey through Mother Teresa's world. Linda also attended Mother Teresa's beatification in Rome with Bishop Curlin. Call Sue VanderJeugdt (704) 541-8362 for more information.

BELMONT — Dr. William F. Powers will give a talk entitled "Catholicism in North Carolina: Periods of Frustration and Growth," Dec. 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Commons at Belmont Abbey College. Admission is free and open to the public. Dr. Powers served as a professor of sociology for 30 years at Suffolk Community College on Long Island. He was ordained in the Diocese of Brooklyn and resigned from the ministry ten years later. He holds a doctorate from St. John's University in New York.

GASTONIA — Is peace possible in our time? What can we do to bring peace to our world? Join us for the next Prayer Vigil for Peace Dec. 15, 7-8 p.m. at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 258 W. Franklin Blvd. Come pray with people of all faiths - Jewish, Christian, Muslim and others - as we gather together to ask the Lord for peace in our time. If you have any questions or need directions, contact St. Mark's Church, (704) 864-4531, or Dennis Teall-Fleming at (704) 825-9600, ext. 26, or teallfleming@yahoo.com.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENBORO — The Greensboro Council of Catholic Women invite all to their Christmas Tea Dec. 11, 2:30–4:30 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 2780 Horse Pen Creek Rd. Food will be collected for a local

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

NOVEMBER 28, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 10

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope assigns new cardinals to Vatican congregations, councils

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Highlighting the role cardinals play in assisting the pope to govern the church, Pope John Paul II has given the newest group of cardinals their assignments as members of Vatican congregations and councils.

The pope created 30 new cardinals in late October; their Vatican assignments, which they are expected to fulfill in addition to their primary ministries and offices, were announced Nov. 24.

Cardinal Justin Rigali of Philadelphia was named a member of the Congregation for Divine Worship and the Sacraments, a position he already had in his former position as archbishop of St. Louis. He also was named a member of the Administration of the Patrimony of the Holy See, a Vatican office that oversees investments and properties.

Australian Cardinal George Pell of Sydney was named a member of the presiding committee of the Pontifical Council for the Family and a member of the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace, both positions he held previously.

Scottish Cardinal Keith O'Brien of St. Andrews and Edinburgh was named to the pontifical councils for social communications and for migrants and travelers.

Indian Cardinal Telesphore Toppo of Ranchi was named a member of the Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples and of the Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue. He had been a member of the council before being named a cardinal.

Bridging the gap: Israeli ambassador uses personal touch at Vatican

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — As Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon visited Rome, the gulf between Israel and the Vatican appeared to be growing.

Israeli and Jewish leaders were miffed that upon Sharon's arrival Nov. 17, the pope for the first time publicly criticized Israel's construction of a security barrier to shut out Palestinians. In Rome, Sharon said he understood the pope's view that the Holy Land needs "bridges, not walls," but he added. "Bridges cannot be built over the corpses of Israeli civilian victims."

While stating Italy was Israel's best friend in Europe, Sharon noted the Vatican was surrounded by a tall brick wall. The fact that there was no Vatican meeting during his three-day visit spoke volumes.

While it looked to some like the Vatican and Israel were busy building their own dividing wall, a Nov. 16 invitation-only event at a Jewish cultural center brought members of Rome's Jewish community together with Oded Ben-Hur, Israel's ambassador to the Holy See, who explained diplomacy is more than formal briefings — sometimes it requires personal overtures.

Ben-Hur has spent much time visiting with Vatican officials regarding Israel's motives, and recently met with Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, the Vatican's chief doctrinal official, about changes in church teaching on the Jews introduced by the landmark Second Vatican Council document, "Nostra Aetate," which called for an end to anti-Semitism.

Aware the doctrinal congregation was working on a "mini" version of the "Catechism of the Catholic Church," Ben-Hur asked if highlights of 'Nostra Aetate could be included. Cardinal Ratzinger agreed.

Ben-Hur said he saw little change for effective dialogue with Muslims because, as he put it, moderate Muslims have little if any influence on the extremists. At the Vatican, he said he is trying to build a "network of Catholic-Israeli friendship."

food pantry. For details call Janet Law at (336) 288-6022.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — A charismatic Mass is celebrated the first Thursday of each month in Sebastian Chapel of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, at 7 p.m. For further information, contact Joan Moran (828)-327-0487.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — A support group for parents who have lost a child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

MOORESVILLE — Seniors ages 55 and up are invited to St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., the second Saturday of each month following the 5:30 Mass for Senior Games Night, featuring games and a potluck dinner. Call Barbara Daigler at (704) 662-9752 for details.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

FRANKLIN — The Women's Guild of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 299 Maple St., meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center. The meetings feature guest speakers and special events periodically. For more information, call Claire Barnable at (828) 369-1565.

WAYNESVILLE — The Catholic Women's Circle of St. John's Catholic Community meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the church hall. For more information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved, which meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

WINSTON-SALEM — Parents Together and the Knights of Columbus Council #2829 will host its Breakfast with Santa for special-needs children and their families Dec. 13 9:30-11:30 a.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. The Knights will supply a pancake buffet as Parents Together welcomes families for face painting, crafts, breakfast and an opportunity to meet Santa and have a photo taken with him. The event allows families with a special-needs child to meet other families who have similar challenges. Space is limited. To register your family or to volunteer, call (336) 814-5301.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Episcopal calendar

Bishop Peter J. Jugis will participate in the following events:

December 1 — 7:30 p.m.
Albemarle Vicariate Mass and reception
St. James Church, Hamlet

December 3 — 7p.m.
Asheville Vicariate reconciliation service and reception
Immaculate Conception Church, Hendersonville

December 5 — 7p.m.
Gastonia Vicariate Mass and reception
St. Mary Church, Shelby

December 12 — 7p.m.
Feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe Mass
Wait Chapel, Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem

Out in the cold

CNS PHOTO BY SAM LUCERO, CATHOLIC HERALD

Cardinal Stritch University students huddle in their sleeping bags the morning of Nov. 21 after sleeping outdoors on campus in Milwaukee. Seven students and a campus minister braved the cold in an effort to raise awareness of inadequate housing and to help fund a spring trip to North Carolina, where they will construct homes with Habitat for Humanity. Pictured from left are campus minister Jeff Montoya and students Jocelyn Schmitz, Sara Klos, Erin Strube and Katie Pagel.

THIS MONTH IN —1997

Holy Angels, founded by the Sisters of Mercy to provide residential and health care services to adults and children with varying degrees of mental retardation, opened "Cherubs," a craft and coffee shop in downtown Belmont Nov. 29, 1997. The shop, which would later become known as "Cherubs Café and Candy Bouquet," featured gourmet coffees, espressos and specialty coffees such as cappuccinos and lattes, sandwiches, gourmet cookies and ice cream confections.

'THE PROJECT OF LIFE FOR HAPPINESS'

Hispanic youth craft book on vocation of laity

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

HENDERSONVILLE — When the vocal voting was over, 28 choices had been narrowed to the winner: "Proyecto de Vida Para Felicidad: Vocatión" ("The Project of Life for Happiness: Vocation").

Hispanic youth, ages 16-27, were at the second session of Taller Pascua (Easter Workshop) 2004, held in the Immaculata School gymnasium and Immaculate Conception Church hall Nov. 15-16 to finalize chapters for a book the Southeast Pastoral Institute (SEPI) will publish prior to Ash Wednesday 2004.

"Proyecto," which has six chapters, is designed for use during the six weeks of Lent.

Vocation, as defined in "Catechism of the Catholic Church," "belongs to the laity to seek the kingdom of God by engaging in temporal affairs and directing them according to God's will."

"Proyecto de Vida" will be a guide to that search.

Piarist Father Mario Vizcaino, SEPI's southeast regional director for Hispanic ministry and one of the workshop facilitators, explained that discerning vocation is a lifelong project. Using the talents God has given a person is one way to determine if he or she is living according to God's will.

"How do you discover the project of your life?" he asked. "This project has to coincide with the will of God. How does God speak to you? If you're not a good mathematician, forget about being an engineer."

The Diocese of Charlotte has participated in SEPI book projects for the past three years, but this was the first year the diocese was host for a workshop.

Sixteen of the Taller Pascua attendees were from the Diocese of Charlotte. Others were from the dioceses of Mobile and Birmingham, Ala.; Atlanta, Ga.; Charleston, S.C.; and St. Augustine, Venice, St. Petersburg, Pensacola-Tallahassee, Tampa, Palm Beach, and Orlando, Fla.

Taller Pascua's first session, Bienvenidos (Welcome) 1, took place in Charleston, S.C., Oct. 11-12. The youth explored the paschal mystery as it relates to vocation and received the materials they would work on in their own dioceses. Two groups worked independently on each chapter. Charlotte and Venice, for instance, concentrated on the chapter on resources and instruments an individual can use in practicing his or her vocation.

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Ricardo Veloz distributes bags of lollipops to Hispanic youth during the second session of Taller Pascua 2004, held at the Immaculate Conception Church and Immaculata School Nov. 15-16.

This month, during Bienvenidos 11, the diocesan groups critiqued the chapters.

Now, SEPI will edit the material and publish the book, the sixth bilingual (Spanish and English) title in the series.

"It's an activity book with prayers, reflections, dynamics and activities," said Ricardo Veloz, associate director for Hispanic youth and young adult ministry for the Diocese of Charlotte.

"All the topics are related to the theme and how it relates to the paschal mystery," he said.

Adults as well as younger people can use the book, because vocation is the work of a lifetime.

"This is a topic you can always reconsider in your life," Father Vizcaino said. "It's not so that you can change your vocation, but so that you can refocus and consider your vocation as a mission. We all have a mission to enrich the world."

Bienvenidos III is scheduled for Feb. 14-15 in St. Augustine. Attendees will receive the book and learn how to use it in their communities.

This is SEPI's 23rd book produced with the assistance from Hispanic youth. Past titles include "Morals: The Way to Full Humanity"; "Catholic Youth Identity and Image"; "Family"; and "Human Sexuality."

"We create a book every year with a theme chosen by the kids," said Laura Flores of Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro. "We explore the paschal mystery as it relates to that topic."

Advisors attend each workshop to assist the youth, but the books are written entirely by the young people, Veloz said.

The diocesan groups brainstormed about how they could make the books available to more people. The Diocese of Charlotte group suggested Lenten programs be held in every vicariate instead of one program for the whole diocese, as in the past.

"My dad participated in the retreat last year, and he liked it," Flores said. "After that, he started talking to other adults about how valuable the book was. Our priest (Father Francis O'Rourke) let him talk about it during Mass, and we sold the books after Mass."

In his homily at Sunday Mass in the gym, Father Vizcaino asked the youth what would inspire them to pursue their vocations.

"If we ask God's help to serve him, then we will be able to serve him and be happy with it," said Jose Marie Gutierrez of Charleston.

"God is love," Father Vizcaino said. "The more possessed I am by love, the more possessed I am by God. The more possessed I am by myself, the more my life will be messed up.

"If you serve happily, you will be truly happy in life," he said. "People who serve are those who are happy with themselves. ... Everyone is called to sainthood, which is in service and service is love."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information about how to obtain this book and others in the series, contact Ricardo Veloz at velricardo@aol.com or at 704-370-3355.

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530
Assuring Absolute Integrity
Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535
Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

The Catholic Conference Center
www.catholicconference.org
1551 Trinity Lane, Hickory, NC 28602
(828) 327-7441 or Toll-free (888) 536-7441
info@catholicconference.org

SILENT GENEROSITY

Anonymous benefactors provide Catholic education for students

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

Editor's note: To protect the identity of the benefactors and recipients, names have been changed.

CHARLOTTE — Some students in Charlotte are receiving a two-fold education — a typical Catholic education designed at developing students spiritually, intellectually, emotionally, physically and socially; and the lesson of charity.

Anonymous donors have enabled several students to attend Charlotte-area Catholic schools by providing funds for tuition, books, uniforms, school supplies and extracurricular activities.

Last summer, "Edward and Elizabeth Smith" contacted Linda Cherry, superintendent of diocesan schools, with the idea of providing a full scholarship for a needy minority student. The scholarship will be renewed annually as long as the student, "Jane," remains in the Mecklenburg Area Catholic Schools (MACS) system, enabling her to attend Catholic schools through high school.

"We recognized the importance of, and need for, more diversity in Catholic schools," said Elizabeth Smith, whose two grandchildren are Catholic school students in Charlotte. "We felt all the students would benefit from a more diverse student body."

Since tuition costs are a limiting factor for many minority families, the Smiths decided to provide a scholarship to allow a minority student to benefit from a Catholic education.

"When I first received a call in June with an offer to assist a child with tuition, it took no time for me to respond that I would be happy to find a student," said Cherry. "This family has given a student and family the gift of being part of our Catholic school system. This gift from their hearts is what being Catholic and Christian is all about."

COURTESY PHOTO BY MIKE FORD

Students process down the staircase at St. Patrick School in Charlotte. Anonymous donations are enabling students in the Diocese of Charlotte to attend Catholic schools, an opportunity they would not have without the generosity of their benefactors, most of whom choose to remain anonymous.

The Smiths have been angels for Jane, said Angela Montague, principal of St. Patrick School. They not only provide tuition funds, but also pay for her field trips and extracurricular activities.

"Jane spoke almost no English at the beginning of the school year," Montague said. "She is becoming very Americanized — she emulates the other students."

Their generosity has proved contagious.

"When a second family heard of this special gift through an order of religious sisters, they offered to assist with the tuition for someone they knew who really wanted to attend our schools," said Cherry.

"William and Emma Jones" helped a young man they know, "Michael," apply for a scholarship to Charlotte Catholic High School. Their family, friends and a Charlotte Catholic teacher provided uniforms, books, a computer and school supplies.

Michael was apprehensive when he learned which public high school he would be attending, Emma Jones said. Now, he is thriving at Charlotte Catholic.

"He is a great example of how our faith is supposed to be lived," she said.

"Throughout our diocese, each of our 18 schools could tell the story of something similar in each of their schools and parishes," Cherry said.

"We have five or six families helping other Charlotte Catholic families," said Gerald Healy, principal of Charlotte Catholic. "There is a solid core of people who I've known for years, and all I have to do is pick up the phone and ask. They will always step up to help."

The benefactors don't want recognition, Healy said. "They just want to give back some of what they've been given," he said.

"We have many stories of families wanting to be able to give that experience (of a Catholic education) to their children, but are unable to do so, because of the cost and lack of enough tuition assistance money," said Cherry. "We have now begun the 'Least of My Brothers' scholarship fund, using the motto 'For whatever you do to the least of my brothers, that you do unto me.'"

"If anonymous donors want to fill my school, I'd be happy to have them," said Montague.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

WANT TO HELP?

Linda Cherry welcomes calls, e-mails or letters to discuss providing partial or full scholarships to needy students. Every gift would remain anonymous, if wished by the donor. Interested parties may contact Cherry by e-mailing llcherry@charlottediocese.org or calling (704) 370-3271. You may write to her at 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

Happy Holidays from Central Equity Mortgage

Consolidate High-interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Interest Rate: 3.75%
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

No Payment until February 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams this holiday season.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

Catholic youths share faith at conference

YOUTH, from page 1

by having more than 20,000 young Catholic people here who want to be great witnesses for Jesus Christ in the world, you have made this a very sacred place," Bishop Fiorenza said.

"These few days that you will be together will be a time to increase your love for Jesus, and to be renewed in your efforts to bring the knowledge and love of Jesus to the world," he added.

"We want the teens to bring back a sense of connectedness to the greater Catholic Church," said Peg Ruble, associate director for the office of youth ministry for the Diocese of Charlotte.

Keynote speakers at the event were Bud Welch, a death penalty opponent whose daughter was killed in the 1995 Oklahoma City bombing, and Craig Kielburger, a 20-year-old advocate for children's rights.

"This is actually the sixth youth congress; during the last ... congress (in Indianapolis), we asked the young people what they wanted to talk about, and social justice was very high on their list," Carolyn Adrian of the Diocese of Victoria told The Texas Catholic Herald, newspaper of the Galveston-Houston Diocese.

"For this congress we wanted to affirm the work young people are doing around the issue of social justice," she added. "We obviously wanted them to learn more about Catholic social teaching. And most important, we wanted to inspire them to go out and do more within their own parish community and in the community in which they live."

Through the conference, Charlotte teenagers "gained a sense of how to bring Christ into their lives on a daily basis and live out his message, especially the message of justice," said Ruble.

Bishop Edmond Carmody of Corpus Christi was impressed with the teenagers participating in the discussion group he led.

"Realizing that we have young people of this caliber, of this commitment, gives me great hope for the future," he said. "I see great things happening in our communities through the work of the young people gathered here today."

Outside of the conference's general sessions, concurrent meetings tackling issues like violence, social justice and relationships were conducted.

Some of the young people from the Diocese of Charlotte met with the bishops to discuss the issue of poverty, as seen through the lens of Catholic social teaching. They talked about how they experience poverty and how their churches and schools are addressing the issue, Ruble said.

The facilitators encouraged young people to show their faith beyond the conference, said Myra Jones-Romain, music director at St. Matthew the Evangelist Church in Houston.

"It is so easy to feel isolated when you are around friends who don't share your beliefs," said Jones-Romain. "But this conference shows that there are a lot of young people — not only in the United States, but in the world — who have the same fervor for Christ and for God. You can love God, praise God, and still have fun."

Staff Writer Karen A. Evans contributed to this story.

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

K OF C

Please pray for the following priests who died during the month of December:

| | |
|---|---|
| Rev. Msgr. Francis M. Smith | 1983 |
| Rev. Vincent M. Stokes | 1979 |
| Rev. Thomas McAvoy | 1978 |
| Rev. Michael J. Hoban | 1995 |

Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus

Ministry brings hope to inmates

KAIROS, from page 1

Greek word for "God's time," was preceded by the Cursillo movement within a maximum security prison in Florida in 1976. The very concept of time carries a heavy significance within the penal environment.

"The inmates feel that what they have done is so bad that God could never forgive them. It blows them away when they see the great lengths God goes to bring them back to him," said parishioner Cindy Platko. "The love that they feel on that weekend is God's love calling their name. And it knocks down walls that have taken years to build."

The Walk began Thursday afternoon and finished Sunday night, carefully planned around a systematic, structured program. The outline of activities followed a series of talks by individual team members and a number of daily chapel services that engaged the entire group as a growing body of Christ.

"It is incredible to witness the change in the residents over the course of the three days," said parishioner Greg Platko. "They arrive on Thursday unsure, frightened and untrusting. On Sunday, they are filled with joy they thought they could never experience. They are smiling, laughing, singing and sharing their dreams."

"It's as though all of us, team and residents, are swept along in a current of God's powerful love," said Platko, who has served with 12 Kairos teams since 1996.

A very strong force in the formation of this new faith community was its shared praise through music. Music ministers and inmates led the group's singing of various hymns and inspirational tunes.

"The thing about the music is that it is participatory. And that's what moves their spirit," said parishioner Bob Smith, music team coordinator. "It includes some old and some new which touches their memories and makes them feel comfortable with upbeat praise and glory."

The entire effort was closely assisted by a team of men and women who prepared and delivered meals from Camp Pee Dee, the off-site support headquarters for the Kairos team.

"The accommodations are very Spartan and the bunks aren't that comfortable. Sleeping on the first two nights is very difficult," said parishioner Dee Smith.

"When you work in the kitchen, you get up at 4 a.m. and stand on a concrete floor for 12-14 hours, working very hard," she said. "But when you walk away after the closing, you feel like it was the greatest weekend ever. It has to be God."

The Kairos ministry worked to establish strong Christian communities among the inmate populations. During the Walk, inmates joined into small groups at separate tables with two Kairos group leaders. These peer groups began to thrive and energize as they listened to the personal presentations of Kairos team members.

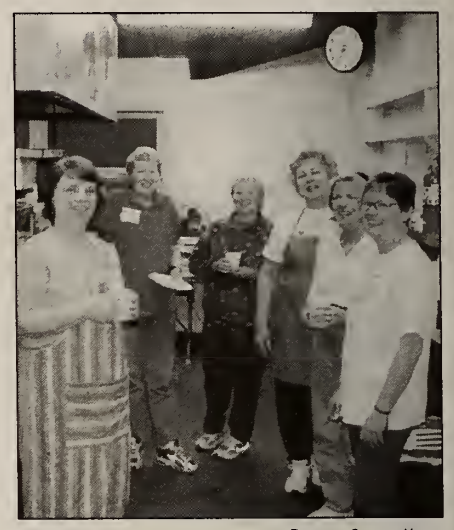

Photo by Stephen Uzzell

Kairos 23 team members regroup between meal preparations and support for the October prison ministry in Bennettsville, S.C.

"A lot of good things happened on this weekend and a lot of hearts were cracked open. Now it is up to the individuals to take the next steps on their spiritual journey," said Smith. "One of the best parts of Kairos is that we go back every month and help with those steps."

The inmates also gained support from beyond the walls of the prison. During the weekend, they heard and read prayer wishes and Christian greetings from other Kairos groups from prison units throughout the United States and abroad.

"So many people from the outside care for us here on the inside," said an inmate. "Now I can embrace another brother without fear."

Prayer wheels, each representing a 24-hour period, were posted daily in the meeting area of the gymnasium. Men found hope and courage as they saw many names of parishioners within other churches who were praying for them at any given hour.

"I never felt so much love; never from my family," said another inmate. "This is real, and God is coming back."

Parishioners also baked dozens of cookies for inmates. The 42 inmates who participated in the Walk shared the cookies with the other 1,800 residents in the facility each day of the Kairos weekend. The sharing helped to bond many together in prayer and through words of support.

"I used to always hear a voice saying, 'Serve the devil, serve the devil.' But here all I could hear was, 'Serve Jesus, serve Jesus,'" said an inmate. "My graduation from high school and the birth of my baby girl were proud days. Now I can add Kairos to that list."

Contact Correspondent Stephen Uzzell by calling (704) 545-0498 or e-mail hatz@infionline.net.

Bishops support bill to treat mentally ill offenders

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Washington Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick, chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Domestic Policy said legislation that would ensure mentally ill criminal offenders get the treatment they need is a good start to address the needs of mentally ill prisoners.

Cardinal McCarrick commented on the Mentally Ill Offender Treatment and Crime Reduction Act of 2003 in a letter to Sen. Mike DeWine, R-Ohio, who introduced the bill.

The cardinal noted that while the mentally ill population poses a difficult challenge to society and to the criminal justice system, many individuals suffering from a mental illness are being housed in prisons and jails across the country.

He quoted the bishops' 2000 pastoral statement, "Responsibility, Rehabilitation and Restoration: A Catholic Perspective on Crime and Criminal Justice," which stated that "while government has an obligation to protect the community from those who become aggressive or violent because of mental illness, it also has a responsibility to see that the offender receives the proper treatment for his or her illness."

The legislation passed in the Senate Oct. 29. The House has yet to vote on a similar measure.

The cardinal praised the legislation for promoting collaborative efforts to help the mentally ill.

"Establishing a network of services for offenders with mental illness would also promote public safety by curbing recidivism among this population," he added.

GIVING 'THE HOPE OF A NORMAL DAY'

St. Margaret Mary parishioners assist women prisoners

BY DIANNE M.A. RIGGS
CORRESPONDENT

BLACK MOUNTAIN — Volunteers can be far more important to inmates than many people realize.

For many inmates who earn "off-site" privileges from Black Mountain Correctional Center for Women, a minimum security prison, they are unable to leave the facility on temporary allowances because there are no volunteers to accompany them.

"Some women have been (in prison) for years," said Mary White, a prison volunteer from St. Margaret Mary Church in Swannanoa. "How ready can they be to reenter society if they never go out? Taking women out is a simple thing."

Volunteers accompany inmates to do ordinary things: to go shopping, to get fast food, to take a walk at Lake Tomahawk, or to go to church. For women who have been in prison for a long time, said White, some ordinary things can become very different because of technology, such as the self-checkout counters at grocery stores.

White became involved in prison ministry more than seven years ago after reading in the church bulletin about women wanting to go to Mass but having no one to take them.

"That seemed terrible to me for someone to be in trouble and be unable to go to Mass," said White.

The first time White took out an inmate, she was nervous and "stumbling, bumbling." However, the experience turned out to be a very enjoyable.

"I have always been treated with respect, thanked," she said.

PHOTO BY DIANNE M.A. RIGGS

Father Frank Seabo, pastor of St. Margaret Mary Church in Swannanoa, stands with inmate Darlene Dills and volunteer Kathleen Sacco. Attending Mass is considered a vital step in a Catholic inmate's rehabilitation and re-entry into society.

"Jesus said we have to visit people in prison. (He was) pretty specific ... he said for us to do that," said White. "We are all made in his image."

White recruited Kathleen Sacco to take prisoners on outings. Sacco, who has taken one woman to Mass for almost five years, believes if more Catholic volunteers took an interest in prisoners, inmates would return to the Catholic Church.

White said the stereotype of a female prisoner is that of a loathsome person.

"You meet them and discover they are like anyone else ... they are like your next-door neighbor's daughter," she said.

Because the women's prison is relatively small — only 80 inmates — it is not eligible for a state-provided chaplain. However, the Black Mountain ecumenical Christian community considers a chaplain essential. White became involved in the chaplaincy committee several years ago and is currently serving as its chair. This committee, she said, exists only to raise the needed $38,000 per year to supply the prison with a half-time chaplain.

"People incarcerated have no one to share their faith with," said Margaret Knopt, a St. Margaret Mary parishioner and certified public accountant who serves as the committee's treasurer. "Can you imagine any more of a (time) when you would need your faith?"

Knopt believes it is important for Catholics to be represented on the ecumenical committee. She is also hopeful that more Catholics will financially support the chaplaincy effort at the prison.

"I think all churches in our diocese have a social responsibility to this ministry and to the women who are struggling to rebuild their lives without a whole lot of help," said White.

She said there are "more and more Catholic women" in prison.

According to Rev. Debra Rice, an Episcopal priest and chaplain, being in prison is especially difficult for women because most of them are mothers or grandmothers and they are often the primary care givers.

She said prison is devastating for them because they miss the "everyday milestones" in their children's lives, such as the baby's first step, the first baseball game. A fundamental issue for them is "who will care for my children?"

Religious volunteers can give "the hope of a normal day," said Rice.

"The women here want to feel normal and that means being accepted by others and by God — and (to know) that they haven't been discarded."

Rice stressed the need for "off-site" volunteers. She said it is especially important for Catholics — volunteers and prisoners — at certain liturgical times of year.

"Nothing is quite as satisfying and uplifting as being part of a community you're familiar with," she said.

WANT TO HELP?

For more information on St. Margaret Mary's prison ministry, contact Mary White at (828) 669-4543.

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

THE "LAST KISS" OF YOUR LIFE

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!

"A treasure trove of heavenly perceptions! LUSCIOUS, TENDER, ATTUNED TO THE EAR OF THE SPIRIT. Last Kiss gives lasting pleasure to all ages and every walk of life!"
—Rev. James Sheehan, author of The Father Who Didn't Know My Name

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

Can you answer "YES" to any of these questions?

1. Do you need a good buyer for a car, house, property, etc.?
2. Do you need a renter for a vacation place, house, or other property?
3. Do you need qualified employees for your business?
4. Does your church or organization need good employees?

If so, put THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD to work for YOU!
Over 125,000 READERS could see your classified ad in this paper every week - for only 60 cents per word ($12 minimum)!

CALL Cindi Feerick at (704) 370-3332 today!

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Book to help find 'small s' sacraments

REVIEWED BY ELIZABETH RACKOVER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

This book is a "small s" sacrament.

Let me explain: Life, as described by author Kathy Coffey, is a series of minor blessings, prayers and surprises masquerading as daily chores, getaways, errands, sidebars and commitments. In the same way, a series of memories, meditations and "small r" revelations together shape the enlightening message of "Immersed in the Sacred."

Samuel Taylor Coleridge said it pretty well several centuries ago: "He prayeth best, who loveth best / All things both great and small." It's easy to see the great miracles of this world — birth, heroic rescues, selfless sacrifices, the outpouring of human compassion in response to a great tragedy. Coffey, an editor and frequent workshop speaker, shares with her readers the "small s" sacraments of daily life.

"Immersed in the Sacred: Discovering the "Small S" Sacraments," by Kathy Coffey. Ave Maria Press (Notre Dame, Ind., 2003). 191 pp., $12.95.

"The only door we have to the absolute, the only bridge to the sacred begins in this world, opens through concrete and specific places," Coffey writes in a chapter called "Gazebo: Place of Reconciliation." If we can see the divine in the mundane, it makes each day holy.

Coffey writes that grace "creeps into the unlikeliest cracks and the most unseemly surprises." The possibility of grace "helps alleviate the burden of dragging ourselves to ... yet another drudgery. We begin to see how 'sacramental rites wait to be replicated in our quotidian lives: simple grace.'" She says that these "small s" sacraments "transcend denominational boundaries and open a way to all seekers who want to deepen their ordinary experience."

In this diary of extended personal essays Coffey proposes scenarios for readers to discover their own prayers and blessed surprises. She finds sacramental moments not just in a snowbound hotel room but also in a department store dressing room. (I can't wait for my next run-in with the ironing, for instance, so I can see just how much holiness I can divine from pressing table linens and blue jeans!)

Coffey has chapters on the sacraments of friends, family, strangers and my personal favorite, since I discovered "The Power and the Glory" only recently, "Graham Greene's Unlikely Saints."

Coffey is a very good writer. Her style is very informal with a friendly tone, and her structure is superb. She writes, "The crafting of words has always delighted me; I play with their beauty and weigh their meanings as some would handle precious stones."

To tell the truth, I feel a bit shy writing about her book because her communication skills are vastly superior to my own. I can only encourage you to take a moment to find this book and tuck into it a pen to make notes about some of her precious stones.

Then, armed with new eyesight for "small s'" sacraments, go on out to the garden, or your office, or the laundry room, or out into rush hour traffic and create something precious of your own. You'll be surprised by what's out there — your own divinity, your own spirituality. Your own "small s" sacraments.

Enjoy.

Rackover, a writer and publicist, lives with her family in Rochester Hills, Mich., and teaches in the religious education program at St. Irenaeus Church.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: NOV. 30, 2003

Nov. 30, First Sunday of Advent

Cycle C Readings:

1) Jeremiah 33:14-16
Psalm 25:4-5, 8-9, 10, 14
2) 1 Thessalonians 3:12-4:2
3) Gospel: Luke 21:25-28, 34-36

BY DAN LUBY
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

When we left our son at college, the dean's office was eager to assist parents in dealing with this momentous transition. In the information packet, they gave us was a sheet outlining various key experiences students inevitably have.

"During the first semester," the paper read, "your student will ..." followed by a laundry list of things to expect. Some of these guaranteed experiences were reassuring, precisely what you hope for your children when you send them off to college:

"Your student will ... make new friends, be exposed to life-changing ideas, deal with new responsibilities and freedoms," etc. Others were, frankly, somewhat scary: "Your student will ... have relationship problems, be homesick, feel overwhelmed by academic challenges, embrace ideas and values different from their parents." The last item on the list was designed to allay parental fears: "Your student will be OK."

Transitions are difficult, and the bigger the transition the stronger the impulse to anxiety and panic. In today's Gospel reading, the transition Jesus warns his disciples about is the biggest of all: the radical transformation of the world and his return as glorious judge. It's no wonder that he predicts terror and dismay. But note that he does so neither to demonstrate his knowledge of the future nor to frighten his listeners, but to warn and reassure them.

The key to surviving the tribulation of great upheaval is staying awake, avoiding the impulse to shut our eyes until it's over or to distract ourselves from our experience in hopes that it might not really be happening.

As Advent advances, let us pray for the grace to recognize in the turmoil and tribulation of the world and of our lives signs of Christ's imminent presence — coming not to frighten but to heal and save us.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF NOVEMBER 30 - DECEMBER 6

Sunday (First Sunday of Advent), Jeremiah 33:14-16, 1 Thessalonians 3:12—4:2, Luke 21:25-28, 34-36; Monday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 2:1-5, Matthew 8:5-11; Tuesday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 11:1-10, Luke 10:21-24; Wednesday (St. Francis Xavier), Isaiah 25:6-10a, Matthew 15:29-37; Thursday (St. John of Damascus), Isaiah 26:1-6, Matthew 7:21, 24-27; Friday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 29:17-24, Matthew 9:27-31; Saturday (St. Nicholas), Isaiah 30:19-21, 23-26, Matthew 9:35-10:1, 5a, 6-8

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 7 - DECEMBER 13

Sunday (Second Sunday of Advent), Baruch 5:1-9, Philippians 1:4-6, 8-11, Luke 3:1-6; Monday (The Immaculate Conception), Genesis 3:9-15, 20, Luke 1:26-38; Tuesday (St. Juan Diego), Isaiah 40:1-11, Matthew 18:12-14; Wednesday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 40:25-31, Matthew 11:28-30; Thursday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 41:13-20, Matthew 11:11-15; Friday (Our Lady of Guadalupe), Zechariah 2:14-17, Luke 1:39-47; Saturday (St. Lucy), Sirach 48:1-4, 9-11, Matthew 17:9a, 10-13

Carolina Volkswagen

7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte

(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection Lowest Prices

Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

CROSIER CARVING

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

GREENSBORO — Bishop Peter J. Jugis, with Paul and Francesca Nixon, holds the wood crosier carved by Paul at the Greensboro Vicariate celebration at St. Paul the Apostle Church Nov. 17.

Paul, a well-known woodcarver in the Triad area, incorporated Celtic symbolism into the ceremonial crosier, which is currently on loan to St. Paul the Apostle Church.

Carved into the crosier are a Celtic Lion (symbolic of St. Mark), a snake (symbolic of rebirth to the Celtics), two intertwined dragons (symbolic of two powerful belief systems). Also represented is a monk looking forward to Christianity and a Celtic warrior looking backward to the past with his pagan tendencies.

The crosier took seven months to complete. Paul says he intends to donate the crosier to Bishop Jugis in the very near future.

St. Mary celebrates 75 years

ST. MARY, from page 1

celebrate and give thanks for all of the blessings God has showered upon our parish over the last 75 years," said Vincentian Father Michael Mahn Nguyen, who was first assigned to St. Mary Church in 1995 as a transitional deacon and is now pastor.

St. Mary Church kicked off its 75th year celebrations with a Benediction and Mass in January, the first of many events planned throughout the year to celebrate the multicultural growth of the parish. On Nov. 22, 2003, the parish celebrated the 75th anniversary of the church with a special dinner.

"Seventy-five years is a relatively short period of time, but it is a milestone that we celebrate today," said parishioner Michael Diamond, who served as emcee. "We have evolved from a small missionary African-American church to a full-fledged, diverse, three-language, one-faith service community."

Consecrated in September 1928, the African-American mission has grown to include a broad cross section of nationalities and customs from every continent in the world except Antarctica.

"I am happy to be here to witness all of the accomplishments that were made by the parishioners (and the priests) of St. Mary," said Virginia Smith, a longtime parishioner.

Smith was baptized at two years old in the church in 1937. She said the final celebration of the 75th anniversary year was "very important because it is one of those occasions that bring many of St. Mary's diverse people together united as the Body of Christ."

Smith recalled "the parish starting out with 12 people and rapidly growing to 100 people, while today there are over 390 families in the parish and it is still growing."

Growth dictated the need for expansion, and on June 23, 2002, St. Mary parishioners broke ground on their new parish center to replace the facility that once housed a middle school. In addition to eight classrooms, three offices and a full-size kitchen, the new center was designed to seat 350 people for Mass or 250 for a sit-down dinner.

"It is good for us to be here as a people united in Christ, ever reaching out to more diverse groups as we work together at building the community of God," said Madaline Shaw, a parishioner who converted to Catholicism in the 1950s.

The parish welcomed Catholic Vietnamese and Montagnards as they arrived in the area and by October 1995, Sunday Mass in Vietnamese became a reality with native Vietnamese Father Nguyen as celebrant.

That same year, the Vincentians sent Father Joe Elzi to celebrate Mass for the growing Hispanic population.

In 2000, the parish celebrated its first multicultural Mass and festival. By 2001, more than 500 parishioners celebrated at this annual event.

"Ours is a parish that lives the message of the Gospel, because we literally clothe the poor and shelter the homeless as we go about looking for opportunities to unite our parish," said Diamond.

The parish has become involved in a variety of ministries, including the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the SHARE food ministry program, faith formation and Knights of Columbus.

"Today is the culmination of 75 years of fidelity and faithfulness to the teachings and commands of Jesus Christ," said Vincentian Father Robert Stone, parochial vicar. "It is an opportunity to thank God for giving us another day as we continue (our fidelity) each day. This is a wonderful challenge that the parish will face for many years to come."

WANT MORE INFORMATION?
For the history of St. Mary Church, read the Parish Profile on page 12.

National Night of Prayer for pro-life issues

CHARLOTTE — The National Night of Prayer will be held Dec. 8-9, on the eve of the feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The event is a pro-life prayer service involving exposition and adoration of the Blessed Sacrament, recitation of the rosary, silent meditation and Benediction.

"People assemble to ask God's help and forgiveness for sins against our most vulnerable brothers and sisters — the unborn," said Maggi Nadol, director of the diocesan Respect Life Office.

Parishes are to begin the night at 9 p.m. Dec. 8, the feast of the Immaculate Conception, and continue until 1 a.m. Dec. 9, when Our Lady of Guadalupe appeared to Juan Diego in Mexico.

Fourteen churches will participate in the National Night of Prayer:

Albemarle Vicariate
Sacred Heart Church, Salisbury

Asheville Vicariate
Basilica of St. Lawrence, Asheville
Immaculate Conception Church, Hendersonville (Dec. 9 only)

Boone Vicariate
St. Lucien Church, Spruce Pine

Charlotte Vicariate
St. Gabriel Church, Charlotte
St. Matthew Church, Charlotte
St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Charlotte

Gastonia Vicariate
Holy Spirit Church, Denver

Greensboro Vicariate
Our Lady of Grace Church, Greensboro
St. Joseph Church, Asheboro
St. Pius X Church, Greensboro

Hickory Vicariate
St. Aloysius Church, Hickory

Smoky Mountain Vicariate
St. Francis of Assisi Church, Franklin

Winston-Salem Vicariate
Good Shepherd Church, King

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

PRINCIPAL: St. Anthony of Padua Catholic grade school, Southern Pines, NC is accepting curriculum vitae for the position of principal. School curriculum is faithful to the magesteruim of the Church. Applicants must have master's degree and be state certified in education. Salary commensurate with experience. Please send Curriculum vitae to: The Very Reverend Jeffrey A. Ingham, V.F., St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church, 175 E. Connecticut Avenue, Southern Pines, NC 28387

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704)845-1416.

HOME: Senior Citizens Community. Lake Norman area. 2 bedrooms, kitchen, living room, dining area, 2 bathrooms. Interior completely updated. Community has lots of friendly people. Call owner: 704-662-9318.

FOR RENT

RETAIL STORE: 800 square foot building in Chimney Rock, NC in the heart of thriving tourist village. $1000/month. Call Peter O'Leary (828) 625-2479.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Cronos and Kairos of Advent 2003

Jesus challenges us to reach our goals

Guest Column

FATHER JOHN AURILIA, OFM Cap

I asked a friend of mine if she was a cronos-person or a kairos-person. She replied: "I am a Sagittarius."

Advent 2003 invites us to really reflect on the meaning of waiting and looking — for whom, for what? In both instances, time is the key.

There are two Greek words in the New Testament for time. One is "cronos," which indicates time that can be measured by the clock. The second is "kairos," which means a particular moment of time that gives meaning to our lives.

Our technological world speaks about quantity-time (cronos) and quality-time (kairos). The cronos affects our punch card, the kairos touches us and unfolds a new discovery, when we say, "Aha, I see!"

Advent 2003 perhaps is simply cronos, therefore not different from Advent 2001 or 2002; and 2004 will not be different either. The clock will never change or challenge our lives. The wonder of Advent is that it is or should be always a kairos in our lives. What are we looking for?

As Jesus was walking one day, John looked upon Him and said to those nearby, "Behold the Lamb of God!"

Two of the disciples heard John and followed Jesus.

He turned to them and said, "What are you looking for?" (Jn. 1:38).

Their reply was: "Where do you live?"

Jesus answered: "Come, and you will see."

Jesus' question and answer to the disciples is a timeless one (kairos). It applies to all people of all generations.

Whenever we are looking for someone or something, we probably will find it. If we are looking for goodness in people, we can find it; if we are looking for the evil, we can find that, too.

This Advent season should make us aware of our life's goal. How many are not really clear about what they want and where they are going?

When Jesus saw the two disciples, they followed Him. Their goal was clear and unmistakable. When we set our goals, we want to make sure that they are definite, concrete and reachable. It doesn't matter if they are short-range or long-range goals as long as we apply the principle of the "maximum required not the minimum necessary."

The task of reaching our goals is a lifetime project and it requires hard work. Genius has been defined as 10 percent inspiration and 90 percent perspiration.

Furthermore, if a goal can be reached easily, it is, in all probability, not a worthy goal.

A young man, who was fascinated by the mastery and dexterity of an outstanding pianist, said, "Master, I would give my whole life to play as you do." The master replied, "I did."

Maybe in this process, we experience days of failure and days of success, days of disappointment and days of optimism. So be it. That's part of the whole package. It's OK to say, "This is one of my bad days. Tomorrow will be better."

The last requirement of reaching goals is to have patience. Rome was not built in one day, but it was destroyed in an hour. The courage to wait (Advent) for what we are looking for is already a progressive step toward fulfillment.

So much depends on whom or what you are looking for and if you know how to wait. Let us not forget that for every thousand people who can talk, there is one who can think; for every thousand people who can think, there is one who can see.

My friends, when I ask you if you are a cronos-person or a kairos-person, don't tell me you are a Sagittarius. During Advent, perhaps, we may ask ourselves, "What or whom are we waiting for?" Are we hearing Jesus saying, "Come and see?"

Father John Aurilia is pastor of Immaculate Conception Church in Hendersonville.

After concert, pope tells musicians song is pathway to Christ

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Editor's note: Due to an early publishing date, we are unable to print text from the pope's weekly general audience this week.

The Pope Speaks

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II was treated to a concert of choral music at the Vatican, and he told the musicians that song was a way to move closer to Christ.

The pontiff attended the concert at the Vatican audience hall Nov. 22, the feast of St. Cecilia, traditionally honored as the patron saint of musical performers.

"May St. Cecilia accompany each of you from heaven, dear brothers and sisters, and help you fully realize your mission in the church," the pope told the musicians after the performance.

The saint, a Roman martyr who according to legend played the organ, "invites believers to walk with vigilance toward the encounter with Christ, gladdening the earthly pilgrimage with the joy of song and music," he said.

Some 20,000 musicians and singers came to Rome in mid-November for the International Festival of Sacred Music and Art, held to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Italian St. Cecilia Association. Among those attending were several choirs from the United States.

Speaking at an Angelus blessing the next day, the pope greeted the musicians and artists who participated in the encounter. The pope, speaking with a relatively strong voice from his apartment window, was applauded by thousands of people in St. Peter's Square.

He said the feast of Christ the King, celebrated Nov. 23, was an important day for all Christians, who are reminded of their relationship with Christ and his kingdom.

The contemplation of Christ as king and creator of all things highlights "the mission of believers, who are called to cooperate in a variety of ministries and charisms in the construction of his kingdom," he said.

A heartfelt Thanksgiving prayer

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

You can understand it if Jamie Luketic says an extra Thanksgiving prayer this year. Next year, too, and, in all likelihood, for a good many years to come. Jamie will be thankful for many things, among them the sheer fact that she's around to enjoy the holiday — not to mention the hand of fate that placed a total stranger in the right place at precisely the right time.

I read about Jamie and her extraordinary story in a feature by Wayne Coffey in the New York Daily News, and it moved me so much that I wanted to be sure to share it with you. I think you'll see what I mean.

It all happened earlier this year, on Saturday, Sept. 13, at Bowling Green State University in Ohio, where Jamie, a 21-year-old junior at Baldwin-Wallace College of Berea, Ohio, was running in a meet along with other members of the women's cross-country team. She loves the sport. She didn't always; as a high school freshman she quit track after two weeks. But as Coffey explains, that was the last time she quit anything.

She's a go-getter with a 3.9 grade average, and somehow she still finds time to captain the cross-country squad. "She's the kind of athlete who keeps you in coaching," her coach said. "She's an overachiever."

The second person in the story — the fellow who happened to be in the right place at the right time — is Mark McClure, cross-country coach at John Carroll University, another of the Ohio schools taking part in the meet. He came to John Carroll last August, after nine years as an assistant coach at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. Before leaving Miami, McClure took a refresher course in CPR and emergency medical training. That turned out to have been a pretty good decision.

The men's cross-country event had gone off at 10 that morning; now it was 2 in the afternoon and the women were about to start. McClure found the finish line area was too crowded, and he wanted to urge his runners on as they came down the home stretch. So he walked up the course, to a deserted area a few hundred yards from the end. Then the runners began to stream by.

One of them was Jamie, and it didn't take the coach's trained eye to see she was in trouble. She was choking, and suddenly went down on all fours near the spot where McClure was standing.

"What's wrong?" he called out as he rushed to her aid. She grabbed her throat and began to turn pale. McClure pulled her up and put one hand on her back while he pressed in her abdomen. A stone the size of penny shot out of Jamie's mouth, a stone another runner had kicked up in such a way that, in what must have been a million-to-one shot, it lodged in Jamie's throat. There it would have stayed — unless, in another million-to-one shot, somebody had been there in that deserted area and came to her aid. Someone with first aid training. Someone who saved her life.

Jamie cried that night as she wrote McClure a letter of thanks. He cried when he read it. "I just know God was looking out for me," she said. And at two festive holiday tables this year in Ohio, there'll be words of thanksgiving as usual. This year, though, they'll be more heartfelt than ever.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "The Greatest Gift — Celebrating Life," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

The bells of forgiveness

Guest Column

KATHY SCHMUGGE
GUEST COLUMNIST

I have one object that holds a special place in my heart and it is a gold orthodox cross that sits on my mantle, the remains of a crystal bell that a friend brought from Russia years ago. She bought it when she traveled abroad to bring home her 18-month-old Russian child, Grace, whom she and her husband adopted.

This fragment of a bell symbolizes so much to me. Because the religious piece was made during a time when it was against the law to even sing a Christmas carol, I appreciate that someone risked his life so that I could have it in my home. I also am thankful I live in a country where I am free to practice my faith, thankful I can share this reflection with you and not have to fear persecution.

A few years ago, my beloved bell came crashing to the floor of my fireplace. My daughter had reached for it, hoping to ring it without my notice. I remember hearing it shatter from several rooms away. I was devastated and sent everyone out of the room, weeping as I carefully picked up hundreds of glass slivers scattered about the floor.

After an hour, my four-year-old bravely came into the room. As I held tight to the only salvageable piece of the bell, the cross, he said gently, "Mom, you know you have to forgive, because God forgives."

At that moment, I knew that the bell and cross — and the faith they symbolized — was only a token of sentimentality if I did not look beyond my treasured bell and see an opportunity to show forgiveness to the children I treasure so much more. I called everyone into the room where the "I am sorry" and "I forgive you" were joined with loving hugs.

So why am I thankful for this orthodox cross that once sat on top of a delicate crystal bell? First, it represents how precious life is because my friend traveled many miles and spent money she did not have so Grace could have a mom and dad and know what love looks, smells and feels like. It represents the value of faith and how some Christians persevered even during the most difficult times, taking risks and never looking back. Its brokenness reminds me of how fragile I am and yet God in his mercy reaches out with a helping hand that can come in the whisper of a small child.

The bell fragment continues to be a symbol to me of God's goodness and generosity. We all need to be thankful for the gift of faith that is more precious than any object or earthly possession and thankful for a country that allows each of us to share this faith with others.

God bless and Happy Thanksgiving.

Did the prime minister receive Communion in Rome?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. I am writing in response to your recent column about non-Catholics receiving Communion in the Catholic Church. You said the Holy Father gave Communion to British prime minister Tony Blair, and indicated that event as one possible indication of a change in conditions for Protestants receiving Catholic Communion. Three of our parishioners were disturbed and asked me about it.

Blair's wife is Catholic, he is not. Did the pope give Communion to Mr. Blair at a papal Mass earlier this year? There were rumors to that effect, but they were never confirmed and were publicly rejected by some who were there.

I give below some information from John Allen of the National Catholic Reporter, in an article of March 28, 2003. "I don't like to write about rumors," he said, "unless I'm in a position to settle them.... I don't know what really happened.... Several readers have contacted me, however, wanting to know about the incident."

The story first broke in the Church Times, an Anglican publication, Allen reported, which attributed the information to a Roman liturgist. This liturgist was not at the Mass, denied having privileged information and later denied having said that Mr. Blair received Communion.

Both the Vatican and 10 Downing Street are treating the matter as a strictly private affair. A Vatican spokesman told Allen it would be "incorrect" for the Holy See to confirm or deny an incident pertaining to the prime minister's private life.

Aside from the Blair family, the Mass was attended by a few seminarians. One said Mr. Blair went in the Communion line with his arms crossed, as if wanting to receive a blessing, but a priest (not the pope), perhaps unaware of the meaning of the gesture, gave him Communion anyway.

Other seminarians say they saw no such thing. Another journalist described someone who was "fully briefed" about the Mass and who is adamant that Blair did not receive Communion. "I [Allen] don't know what happened, and short of a personal statement from Blair, I doubt the uncertainty can be resolved."

Thus far Mr. Allen. The implication that the Holy Father gave Holy Communion when there's no proof that he did can scandalize the faithful. I'm hoping you will clarify this in the immediate future. (Massachusetts)

A. The alleged ministration of the Eucharist by the pope to a Protestant head of state was widely discussed and analyzed last spring, with several usually reliable sources implying the rumors were true.

I'm grateful to the pastor who passed along the above information. Obviously, there is no present basis for using that event as a credible element in evaluating the lawfulness of Communion to people who are not Catholic.

The conditions listed in the 1993 Vatican ecumenical directory still apply. Any official changes would not find their way into Catholic policy so obliquely, but would be promulgated much more specifically and directly.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

St. Mary Church evolves as center of diversity for Greensboro Catholics

Parish celebrates 75 years of multiculturalism

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

In June 2002, St. Mary Church broke ground on their new parish center to replace the facility that once housed the middle school. In addition to eight classrooms, three offices and a full-size kitchen, the new center was designed to seat 350 people for Mass or 250 for a sit-down dinner.

GREENSBORO — St. Mary Church was established in the late 1920s to support increasing numbers of Greensboro-area Catholics. Today, the 391-family parish joins five other Greensboro Catholic churches to compose one of the highest concentrations of Catholics in the Diocese of Charlotte.

St. Mary Church, originally comprised of a mostly African-American congregation, was consecrated with its first Mass by Bishop William J. Hafey of Raleigh on Sept. 16, 1928. That same month, at the invitation of Bishop Hafey, Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul from Baltimore, Md., opened the parish school to a dozen children. The student population rapidly grew to exceed 100.

The church was soon given parish status with Josephite Father Charles Hannigan, a missionary priest known for building churches, as the founding pastor.

Due to the growing number of Catholics in the area, a new church building, with the Blessed Mother as its patron, was constructed in 1936 to accommodate 150 people and it was dedicated on Nov. 1 of that year under the guidance of Passonist Father Patrick Darrah

In August 1939, the first priests of the Congregation of the Mission arrived to minister at St. Mary Church, thereby beginning a pastorate that continues today. This order of priests, also known as Vincentians, was founded in France in 1625 by St. Vincent de Paul, who also co-established the order of sisters who arrived in Greensboro in 1928 to staff the school.

In the late 1940s came a name change for St. Mary Church — in 1948, Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh granted a request that the church be called Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal. This church was officially known as such until 1972, when again the church was placed under the patronage of St. Mary.

The St. Mary Church community played a role in the building up of the Catholic Church in western North Carolina during the 1950s and beyond. In 1951, the priests of the Greensboro parish began ministering to the mission congregation of Reidsville. Their pastorate lasted until 1968, when Holy Infant Church was given parish status.

Dwindling enrollment forced the parish to close its four-room middle school in 1972. The building, however, remained a part of the parish landscape, serving as a parish center and host to a variety of ministerial and social activities, including those of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the SHARE food ministry program, faith formation and Knights of Columbus.

Because of the welcoming atmosphere of St. Mary Church, Catholic Vietnamese and Montagnards soon came to worship. By October 1995, Sunday Mass in Vietnamese became a reality with Vietnamese Vincentian Father Michael Mahn Nguyen as celebrant.

That same year, the Vincentians sent Father Joe Elzi to celebrate Masses for the growing Hispanic population.

The parish has become a multicultural community consisting of people and races from every continent in the world except Antarctica. In 2000, the parish celebrated its first multicultural Mass and festival. By 2001, more than 500 parishioners came to celebrate this annual parish event.

Parish growth continued over the years, and on June 23, 2002, parishioners of St. Mary Church broke ground on their new parish center to replace the facility that once housed the middle school. In addition to eight classrooms, three offices and a full-size kitchen, the new center was designed to seat 350 people for Mass or 250 for a sit-down dinner.

St. Mary Church kicked off its 75th year celebrations with a Benediction and Mass Jan. 14-15, 2003, the first of many events planned throughout the year to celebrate the multicultural growth of the parish. On Nov. 22, 2003, the parish celebrated the 75th anniversary of the church with a special dinner.

Vincentian Father Vincent Finnerty, former priest in residence at St. Mary Church and diocesan director of Hispanic ministry, is now pastor at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Charlotte. Vincentian Father Nguyen, former parochial vicar of St. Mary under Vincentian Father Robert Prior, now serves as pastor.

Today, between 1,000 and 1,2000 people attend Mass every Sunday at St. Mary Church.

St. Mary Church
812 Duke Street
Greensboro, N.C. 27401
(336) 272-8650

Vicariate: Greensboro
Pastor: Vincentian Father Michael Manh Nguyen
Parochial Vicar: Vincentian Father Robert Stone
Number of Families: 391

Vincentian Father
Michael Manh Nguyen

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

15% off with this coupon
Now at 2 great locations!
The Catholic Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts
South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com
Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

FC 282
C363c

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

DECEMBER 5, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 11

Parish Profile: St. Helen Church
| PAGE 12

A country of conflict and crisis

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Followers of a radical Shiite cleric pray in front of a U.S. Army tank during the Islamic festival of Eid al-Fitr in the Baghdad, Iraq, suburb of Al Sadr Nov. 25. The Vatican's representative in Iraq has said a military withdrawal now would be the worst option.

HAS VATICAN CHANGED POSITION ON IRAQ WAR, OR HAS WAR CHANGED IRAQ?

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Early this year, during the countdown to the Iraq War, Pope John Paul II and his Vatican aides wasted no opportunity to broadcast their opposition to a U.S.-led invasion.

They warned that besides being unjust, an invasion would be counterproductive — it would leave many dead and wounded, destroy Iraqi infrastructure, increase the hardships on civilians, increase political pressures on Iraqi Christians, ignite civil strife in the country, weaken the United Nations and foment global terrorism.

Fast-forward eight months, and it seems that most or all of the Vatican's warnings were accurate, but

See IRAQ, page 6

World AIDS Day draws support from churches

BY PATRICIA ZAPOR
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — From Washington to Dakar, Senegal, Catholic bishops joined in marking World AIDS Day Dec. 1 with promises of support for those with HIV/AIDS and encouragement to change behaviors that lead to the spread of the disease.

In Rome, Pope John Paul II and the head of the Vatican office for health care encouraged Catholics to join them in praying for people with HIV/AIDS and to care for those with the disease.

Catholic organizations worked on AIDS prevention across Asia.

In Dakar, the Symposium of Episcopal Conferences of Africa and Madagascar, which represents the bishops in Africa, issued its first collective statement on HIV/AIDS, proposing a plan of action involving work with parishes,

See AIDS, page 6

FROM LEBANON TO NORTH CAROLINA

Maronite Catholics seek to strengthen, grow their church in Southeast

BY JOHN STRANGE
NC CATHOLIC STAFF

DURHAM — Father Joseph Thomas has a gift for some North Carolina Catholics — a gift of "self-knowing" and a return to the traditions of their ancestors in the Maronite Catholic Church.

"I encourage the people of Maronite origin, people who all their lives have heard the word 'Maronite' but never knew what it meant, to make themselves available" and open-minded when considering the Eastern church, Father Thomas, pastor of the Maronite Catholic mission of St. Sharbel in Raleigh, told the NC Catholic.

St. Sharbel hosted the Nov. 14-16 Southeast regional conference of the National Apostolate of Maronites, where much of the focus was on how to strengthen and grow the Maronite Catholic Church in the Southeast.

The Maronite Church is one of 22 Eastern Catholic churches with origins in Eastern Europe, Asia or Africa, often identified by a national or ethnic character. The Maronites, for example, trace their history back to St. Maron

See MARONITE, page 9

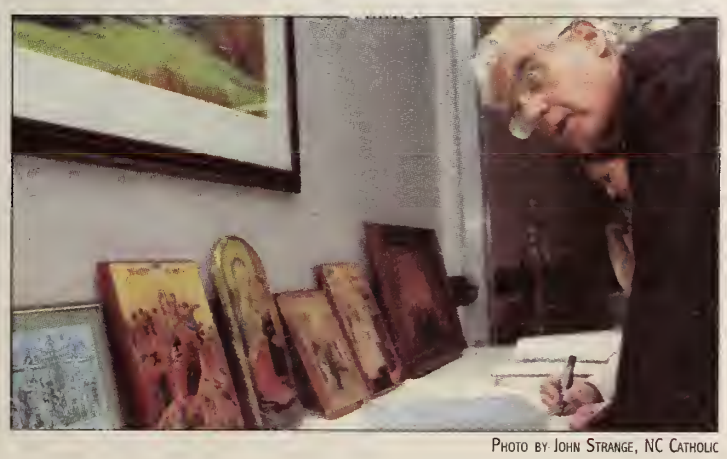

PHOTO BY JOHN STRANGE, NC CATHOLIC

Father Joseph Thomas, pastor of St. Sharbel's Maronite Catholic mission, identifies Maronite icons for a display at the Southeast regional conference of the National Apostolate of Maronites in Durham Nov. 14-16.

#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
#420836#
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
5235 P2

Dreams of Eagles
Student project beautifies Immaculata School
| PAGE 4

Sister Evelyn Mattern
Raleigh Diocese loses crusader for justice
| PAGE 5

Culture Watch
Children's books for Christmas gift-giving
| PAGE 8

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

REMEMBERING RACHEL

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Family members of Rachel Scott, one of those killed in the Columbine High School shootings, write messages May 27 on Rachel's cross, which is part of a permanent memorial to the victims at Chapel Hill Cemetery in Littleton, Colo. From left are Rachel's sisters Bethanee Scott McCandles and Dana Scott and cousin Jeff Scott.

Slain Columbine student's parent addresses Catholic high school

LOS ANGELES (CNS) — Beth Nimmo, mother of Rachel Scott, one of the Columbine High School students killed during a shooting rampage at the Littleton, Colo., school four years ago, said the tragic event "demands a spiritual response."

During a November ceremony at St. Genevieve High School in Panorama City, the mother of 17-year-old Rachel told students and faculty members that God was preparing people before the killings on April 20 "for his witness."

According to Nimmo, Rachel — whom she described as someone with "a strong love and devotion to Jesus Christ — had a premonition of her death and wrote in a journal on May 2, 1998: "This will be my last year."

Other journal writings, gathered in a book by Nimmo called "Journals of Rachel Scott," reveal that the teen had a "heavy heart" over the society "we've created" where kids kill kids.

Nimmo displayed a drawing Rachel had made in class the morning of her death, which shows 13 tears falling from a pair of eyes and a rose watered by 17 drops of blood. She said the drawing symbolically represents the 13 Columbine victims, killed by two fellow students, and the 17 years of her daughter's life.

"There is triumph in Columbine — many wonderful things have come out of it," said Nimmo. "I'm proud that my daughter died for something that's worthy," she said, pointing out that the Columbine killers were overheard taunting Rachel for her Christian faith.

"Her life was all about character," the mother added.

Nimmo's address was part of a St. Genevieve High School celebration recognizing the school's 2003 National School of Character Award. More than 700 people attended the event.

According to Principal Dan Horn, the staff at St. Genevieve's made a conscious decision to learn lessons from the Columbine tragedy by creating a "more welcoming environment for all."

He said the staff members also envisioned the school as "a living monument to all of those who had lost their lives or who had lost loved ones to school violence."

Catholic educators attend regional meetings to discuss future roles

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Many Catholic educators across the country have been doing some extra homework this fall looking at where they want Catholic schools, religious education and campus ministry programs to be in the future.

More than 100 regional meetings, sponsored by the National Catholic Educational Association, were scheduled from August to December and the findings from all of these meetings will be compiled for a symposium on Catholic education to be held Jan. 8-11 in Washington to mark NCEA's 100th anniversary.

The results from that symposium will then be presented at the annual NCEA convention in Boston next April.

About 90 Catholic educators attended one of the regional meetings Nov. 20-21 in Washington. Participants — including faculty members, diocesan officials, catechetical and campus ministry leaders — came from the dioceses of Wilmington, Del., Arlington and Richmond, Va., and Wheeling-Charleston, W.Va., and the Baltimore and Washington archdioceses.

They spent the greater part of two days in small groups discussing the importance of Catholic identity, how to shape future leaders, and the role of Catholic schools and religious education programs in society.

"What we're about today is to create a shared vision of the mission of Catholic education for the 21st century," Dan Curtin, NCEA's executive director of Chief Administrators of Catholic Education, told participants.

He urged them to reflect on their own experiences in Catholic education and to relate them "to the larger world of the American culture through the eyes of faith" to come up with strategies for the future.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

ASHEVILLE — Paul Tate, with Deanna Light and the St. Eugene choir, will perform a community-wide Christian concert Dec. 12 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Eugene Church, 72 Culvern St. Tate is nationally recognized for his work as a composer, pianist and vocalist. He is the director of music and liturgy at St. Brendan Church in Cumming, Ga. The concert is free and open to the public. For more information, call Nancy at St. Eugene, (828) 254-5193.

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Please call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., will sponsor a family potluck on Dec. 12 at 6 p.m. in the New Life Center Banquet room. After dinner, the special guest speaker will be Linda Schaefer, the last photojournalist personally invited to make a photographic journey through Mother Teresa's world. Schaefer also attended Mother Teresa's beatification in Rome with Bishop Curlin. Call Sue VanderJeugdt (704) 541-8362 for more information.

CHARLOTTE — Father Patrick Winslow will present an Advent retreat Dec. 20, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. at St. Vincent de Paul Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. Call Peggy at (704) 588-7311 for reservations or e-mail bhoppy57@aol.com.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information, call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

CHARLOTTE — The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians Division 1 Mecklenburg County-St. Brigid, an Irish-Catholic social and charitable inter-parish group, meets the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Anyone interested in their Irish-Catholic roots, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720 for further information.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

BELMONT — Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St., will host a Supper-Study Series Dec. 10 and 17 in the Family Center. Dinner begins at 6 p.m. with children's activities at 6:30. Catechesis will take place 6:45-7:30 p.m. Father Joe Zuschmidt will speak on the sacrament of reconciliation, in preparation for the parish Advent reconciliation service Dec. 16 at 7 p.m. in the church. For details, call Dennis Teall-Fleming at (704) 825-9600, ext. 26 or e-mail teallfleming@yahoo.com.

GASTONIA — Is peace possible in our time? What can we do to bring peace to our world? Join us for the next Prayer Vigil for Peace Dec. 15, 7-8 p.m. at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 258 W. Franklin Blvd. Come pray with people of all faiths — Jewish, Christian, Muslim and others — as we gather together to ask the Lord for peace in our time. If you have any questions or

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

DECEMBER 5, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 11

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend or guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Vatican trims pope's Christmas schedule, omitting some January events

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II's Christmas season schedule has been trimmed, apparently excluding his usual ordination of new bishops on the Jan. 6 feast of the Epiphany and his custom of baptizing infants on the feast of the Baptism of the Lord.

The pope's liturgical schedule for December and January lists him as presiding over six events, but does not specify if he will be the principal celebrant of the liturgies.

The Vatican released the 83-year-old pope's schedule Nov. 25. The schedule includes:

— Laying a wreath at a Marian statue in central Rome on the Dec. 8 feast of the Immaculate Conception, but not making his annual visit afterward to the Basilica of St. Mary Major.

— Christmas Mass at midnight in St. Peter's Basilica.

— The Dec. 25 solemn blessing "urbi et orbi" (to the city and the world) at noon.

— An evening thanksgiving prayer service Dec. 31 in St. Peter's Basilica.

— The Jan. 1 Mass for the feast of Mary, Mother of God, and World Peace Day in St. Peter's Square.

In addition, Vatican Radio reported the pope would not hold his weekly general audiences Dec. 24 and 31. A Vatican official said because the calendar did not go beyond Jan. 1 indicated no other papal liturgical events were scheduled for the month.

Pope: Catholics in the Americas must reach out to people with Gospel

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Millions of people in the world are yearning for meaning in their lives, Pope John Paul II said, and Catholics in North and South America must reach out to them with the Gospel.

"Show your desire to be joyful witnesses and enthusiastic apostles of the Gospel to the ends of the earth with the example of your holy lives," the pope told some 3,200 people gathered in Guatemala City for the American Missionary Congress.

Pope John Paul sent a message to the Nov. 25-30 gathering of bishops, clergy, religious and lay people, who met to coordinate and increase missionary activity among the continent's Catholics.

"Millions of men and women who do not know Christ or have only a superficial knowledge of him live in the hope — at times, unconsciously — of discovering the truth about man and about God and about the way which leads to liberation from sin and from death," the pope said.

Because the answer is Christ, Pope John Paul said, the proclamation of the Gospel is a vital and obligatory task.

The pope said God has given the peoples of North and South America "beautiful fruits of holiness in men and women, who, faithful to the missionary mandate of the Lord, have spent their lives proclaiming the Christian message, including in heroic circumstances and conditions."

The example of how holy individuals supported by holy communities resulted in the massive evangelization of the continent hundreds of years ago is a reminder that holy people and holy communities are still the most effective means of spreading the Gospel, he said.

New programs or more efficient organizations are not the answer, the pope said.

"It is necessary to give rise to a new yearning for holiness" among believers so that people can see in their lives the rewards of faith, he said.

need directions, contact St. Mark's Church at (704) 864-4531 or Dennis Teall-Fleming at (704) 825-9600, ext. 26, or teallfleming@yahoo.com.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — The Greensboro Council of Catholic Women invites all women to its Christmas Tea Dec. 11, 2:30-4:30 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 2780 Horse Pen Creek Rd. Food will be collected for a local food pantry. For details, call Janet Law at (336) 288-6022.

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — The fourth annual presentation of the reenactment of the St. Francis of Assisi Crib at Greccio will be held at the Catholic Conference Center, 1551 Trinity Ln., Dec. 7 at 3 p.m. The theme for this year's live nativity scene will be St. Francis and the sermon to the birds.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — A support group for parents who have lost a child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

MOORESVILLE — Seniors ages 55 and up are invited to St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., the second Saturday of each month following the 5:30 Mass for Senior Games Night, featuring games and a potluck dinner. Call Barbara Daigler at (704) 662-9752 for details.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

SYLVA — St. Mary Church offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Saturday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 3 p.m. For information, call (828) 586-9496.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — In recognition of the ministry of Betsy Meehan, who is presently on sick leave from her position as music director of St. Leo the Great Church, the St. Leo choir will present "Encounters with Christ: A Celebration of the Birth, Passion, Death and Resurrection of Our Lord." The concert will be held Dec. 14 at 2 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. Admission is free. For details call the church office at (336) 724-0561.

WINSTON-SALEM — Parents Together and the Knights of Columbus Council #2829 will host its Breakfast with Santa for special-needs children and their families Dec. 13, 9:30-11:30 a.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. The Knights will supply a pancake buffet as Parents Together welcomes families for face painting, crafts, breakfast and an opportunity to meet Santa and have a photo taken with him. Space is limited. To register your family or to volunteer, call (336) 814-5301.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478

Episcopal calendar

Bishop Peter J. Jugis will participate in the following event:

December 12 — 7p.m.
Feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe Mass
Wait Chapel, Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem

Celebrating history

PHOTO BY CAROLE MCGROTTY

Black Catholic History Month was celebrated with a special Mass at the Basilica of St. Lawrence in Asheville with Father Wilbur Thomas, pastor, and Rev. Mr. Curtiss Todd, vice chancellor for the Diocese of Charlotte and vicar for the diocesan African American Affairs Ministry. The National Black Catholic Clergy Caucus of the United States designated November as Black Catholic History Month on July 24, 1990 to celebrate the long history and proud heritage of black Catholics.

DID YOU KNOW?

ST. EUSTRATIUS AND COMPANIONS

Eustratius, an Armenian, was tortured during Dioclestian's persecution of Christians — first by Lysias, the governor at Arabraca, then by Agricolaus, the governor in Sebasta. He was then burned to death in a furnace about the year 304. Also martyred with him was his servant Eugenius; two friends who had pleaded for his life, Mardarius and Auxentius; and Orestes, a soldier who was converted by Eustratius' courage under torture. The feast of St. Eustratius and his companions is Dec. 13.

DREAMS OF EAGLES

Student project beautifies Immaculata School

HENDERSONVILLE — In need of a project to qualify for an Eagle Badge, Taylor Lantrip, a Boy Scout and Immaculata School student, approached the faculty regarding an extensive project to beautify the front of the school.

The project had been a topic already under discussion for several years, but little action had been taken, according to William Meehan, principal.

"This is an example of widespread involvement and commitment by many people in a project of this magnitude that began as a dream of one student," said Meehan. "(It) just seemed to mushroom and grow."

The project was divided into three phases. The first phase involved the creation of a courtyard, complete with two benches, pavers and a statue of Mary, the patroness of the school. Lantrip assumed responsibility for this phase, which was completed in June.

Phase Two involved moving and refurbishing six benches along the front of the school. Lucas Sofie, Taylor's classmate and fellow Scout striving for an Eagle Badge, assumed responsibility for this phase and the project was completed in August.

Phase Three involved the removal of scrubs and the planting of perennials and shrubbery more conducive to the aesthetics of the school. The Immaculata School student council, with assistance from Marti Sofie (Lucas' mother), oversaw the project, completed in October.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Above: Immaculata School students and parent volunteers work to beautify the front of Immaculata School in Hendersonville.

Marti Sofie expressed her appreciation to the students, volunteers and "the Scouts, Taylor Lantrip and Lucas Sofie, who got the ball rolling with their Eagle projects."

"I hope all those involved feel a sense of pride in their contribution to our school community," she said.

Meehan called the project a "tremendous learning experience for students."

"It captured a special spirit in the community and is a concrete manifestation that dreams can come true and that young people can make a difference when guided and supported by the adults in their lives," said Meehan.

Bishop McGuinness students plan mission south of the border

KERNERSVILLE — The Campus Ministry Office of Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School is currently enlisting students and adults to participate in an April 2004 special mission experience in Mexico.

The program is designed to heighten students' awareness of conditions in a nation and culture the resources of which are quite different from their own.

Traveling to San Luis de Posoti during Holy Week, students will spend Easter weekend experiencing the special worship activities for that feast in a small-town setting. This will be followed by a bus excursion to the village of El Realejo, where students will work with children in their church and school environments, teaching them English and reinforcing their own Spanish language skills. They also plan to leave a memorial gift for the people of the parish.

Students will then travel by bus to Mexico City, stopping in the city of San Miguel de Allende and Doris Hidalgo. While in the city, they plan visits to the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe, the Zócalo and the Museo de Anthropologia before returning to North Carolina.

. Staff members traveling with the students include Martin Mata, campus minister; and Juanita Abreu, Maryann Tyrer and Shirley Shaw, members of the faculty.

The students are holding numerous fundraisers to offset the cost of their excursion, and the school asks the community to help support this outreach.

Want to Help?
To help support the outreach efforts, call Martin Mata at (336) 564-1012 or e-mail mmata@bmhs.us.

Bishop McGuinness United Nations team scores big

KERNERSVILLE — In its first year, the Model United Nations team of Bishop McGuinness Catholic School distinguished itself with awards earned during the recent annual conference at Appalachian State University in Boone.

Two teams of Bishop McGuinness students were cited for excellence: Andrew Heberling and Megan Wizke; Greg Means and Matt Ingersoll. David Seidel, history teacher and the groups' moderator, praised their performance as exceptional for a first-year effort.

The program has been established at the school to complement the long-standing and award-winning Harvard Model Congress program, which takes groups of more that 20 students to congressional simulations in Boston each year sponsored by Harvard University.

The school chose the Appalachian program for the current year and is currently investigating other options for the following year, including the Duke University Model U.N.

The ASU simulation involved 85 competing teams from 45 North Carolina high schools. The Model U.N. team will compete again in the spring when ASU holds its Model Security Council session in March.

Seidel's group, assembled for this inaugural effort, included seniors Dunia Fleihan, Katie Preske, Meghan Witzke, Megan Good, Matt Ingersoll, Greg Means, Andrew Heberling, J.P. Delaney and freshmen P.J. Dascoli and Michael O'Shea.

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926
McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.
Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

The Diocese of Charlotte
CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES
1123 South Church St.
Charlotte, NC 28203
www.cssnc.org
Executive Director:
Elizabeth Thurbee (704) 370-3227
Refugee Office:
Cira Ponce (704) 370-6930
Justice & Peace:
Joe Purello (704) 370-3225
Special Ministries:
Gerard A. Carter (704) 370-3250
Charlotte Region: 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203
Area Director: Geri King (704) 370-6155
Western Region: 50 Orange Street, Asheville, NC 28801
Area Director: Sister Marie Frechette (828) 255-0146
Piedmont-Triad: 621 W. Second Street, Winston-Salem, NC 27108
Area Director: David Harold (336) 727-0705
Greensboro Satellite Office: (336) 274-5577
High Point Hispanic Center: (336) 884-5858
For information on specific programs, please call your local office.

Home for the Holidays
We Can Share The Care!
Visiting Angels can help put your family together this Holiday Season!

Visiting Angels® provides experienced caregivers to thousands of seniors each and every day across America.
You Select Your Caregiver!
Up to 24 Hour Care
Hygiene Assistance
Meal Preparation
Respite Family Care
Appointments / Errands
Rewarding Companionship
All Caregivers Thoroughly Screened
Bring Your Parents Home For The Holidays!
Call 704-549-4010
Visiting Angels LIVING ASSISTANCE SERVICES
Learn more at: www.visitingangels.com/charlotte

Raleigh Diocese loses crusader for justice

NC's ecumenical, social justice community says goodbye to Sister Evelyn Mattern

BY JOHN STRANGE
NC CATHOLIC STAFF

RALEIGH — Christian Community Sister Evelyn Mattern, founder of the Diocese of Raleigh's Peace and Justice Department and former program associate at the North Carolina Council of Churches, died Nov. 30 in a nursing home in Philadelphia.

Her work covered almost every aspect of social justice, from obtaining housing for poor immigrant workers to demonstrating against the death penalty, from environment to gender equality to interfaith issues to pro-life work. Through the years, she made many friends, but also foes, of politicians, farmers, business owners and others.

The North Carolina community of Christian social activists celebrated Sister Evelyn's ministry Oct. 1 as the longtime North Carolina resident and activist, dying of cancer, prepared to leave for her native Philadelphia. Hundreds filled Our Lady of Lourdes' Fallon center in Raleigh for the luncheon, which was filled with tears and laughter as various leaders of the ecumenical and social justice community came to pay tribute to Sister Evelyn.

Father George Kloster, pastor of St. William Church in Murphy and former president of the Council of Churches, recalled how he and Sister Evelyn worked to address the miserable living conditions of migrant workers by building new housing in Johnston County.

"The people of Johnston County did not exactly welcome us with open arms," he said. Sister Evelyn's efforts "stirred up the populace from the KKK to Jesse Helms." Town leaders complained that "Catholics are taking over Johnston County," said Father Kloster, a native of the county.

"It never happened," he said. "But just because it didn't happen doesn't mean it wasn't good."

Christian Community
Sister Evelyn Mattern

North Carolina desperately needs people like Sister Evelyn, Bishop Joseph Gossman or Raleigh said. "We need someone to come forward and replace her. But she is irreplaceable."

Father Kloster recommended forming a North Carolina Justice Hall of Fame, with Sister Evelyn joining the late Father Charles Mulholland and the Rev. Collins Killburn, former executive director of the Council of Churches, as charter members.

Rev. George Reed, executive director of the Council of Churches, said Sister Evelyn's gift to the Council was a "real sense of justice rooted in deep spirituality."

Sister Evelyn was part of a U.S. peace delegation to Iraq in October 1990. The visit brought Iraqis 1,000 pounds of vitamins and medicines and helped prepare for an ongoing presence of American peace advocates in Iraq during the first Gulf War.

In a pre-trip interview with the NC Catholic, Sister Evelyn said she had some fears about going to Iraq, such as being in Baghdad if U.S. planes bombed the city and "being taken hostage or being kept as a 'guest.'"

Sister Evelyn said if she met Saddam Hussein, she would listen first. "The first step in reconciliation is to listen, try to feel for the common human dimension that is present.

Sister Evelyn's most recent work, Rev. Reed said, was in the environmental arena. She and others worked for the formation of "GreenPower," a way for consumers, congregations and small businesses to work with their power company to purchase electricity from renewable sources. The program is just now being offered to some consumers, he said.

During the luncheon, Rev. Reed announced the Council of Churches had collected more than $14,000 for the new Sister Evelyn Mattern Fund, to be used to support issues of peace and justice. The fund, he said, will "guarantee we will remember you in Raleigh. Fifty years from now people here will still have occasion to say, 'Let me tell you about Sister Evelyn Mattern.'"

After the final speaker, Sister Evelyn spoke not of herself, but of others in her ministry.

She said she is "very struck by what is unique of North Carolina, something which may not be true of other places: We work together in collaboration. We are on the line, holding hands. We work together. We collaborate."

Sister Evelyn had helped with "Of One Heart and One Mind," the joint pastoral letter issued in 1997 by then-Bishop William G. Curlin of Charlotte and Bishop John F. Gossman of Raleigh calling on North Carolinians to reach out to those in need.

Sister Evelyn's funeral arrangements were not available at press time.

Editor Kevin E. Murray contributed to this story.

Vocation director's father dies

CHARLOTTE — Barton R. Allen, 82, father of Father John Allen, vocations director, died at his home in Charlotte on Sunday, Nov. 23.

A funeral Mass took place Nov. 26 in St. Patrick Cathedral. Interment was at St. Gabriel Church.

Notes of condolence may be sent to Father Allen at the following address:

Rev. John Allen
2744 Tiergarten Lane
Charlotte, NC 28210

Holy Trinity students score tops honors with Duke University

CHARLOTTE — Duke University notified Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School that its eighth-grade class received the highest number of participants in North Carolina for the Duke Talent Identification Program.

The Talent Identification Program identifies academically talented seventh-graders on the basis of standardized test scores taken in elementary and middle school. A minimum qualifying score of 96 percentile on the ITBS test is one of the standards used for participation. Qualifying students are then invited to complete the SAT1 or ACT Assessment college entrance examination.

Seventh-graders participate in college entrance exams for several reasons, including gaining experience taking the college entrance exams, identifying areas of strength and weakness and receiving recognition for their achievements.

Holy Trinity was notified in August of last year's results. The students, now in eighth grade, continue to excel academically as they prepare for the transition into high school.

Winners on and off the field

CHARLOTTE — Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School's eighth-grade football team won the conference championship against Weddington Middle School Nov. 1 with a score of 30-0.

The team has played together since the sixth grade and has won the conference championship for three consecutive years, losing only two games in the 2001, 2002 and 2003 seasons combined.

Included on the team are many honor roll students who also have qualified for the Duke University Talent Identification Program, which recognizes students based on academic excellence. The eighth-grade class this year has 52 percent of its students qualifying for the Duke program, which is the largest percentage from any one school in state. The eighth-graders also work every week as volunteers at Crisis Assistance Ministry.

Most of the football players will be moving on to Charlotte Catholic High School next year, taking their enthusiasm for football, academics and community service with them.

Make the right move to finding your dream home. See Chase first... because home ownership matters.

TAILORED MORTGAGE PROGRAMS

- Chase mortgage programs are tailored to fit your individual needs
- Experienced mortgage specialists will personally work with you from application through closing
- A free mortgage affordability estimate can show you how much home you can afford*
- A Chase mortgage preapproval will make you feel more confident knowing you have "cash in hand" when shopping for a home

Make the move to Chase Home Finance—call today.

Paul McClure
(704) 553-1202
Ext. 203

CHASE
THE RIGHT RELATIONSHIP IS EVERYTHING

*Results of the mortgage affordability estimate are guidelines; the estimate is not an application for credit and results do not guarantee loan approval or denial. A fee for preapproval may be applied. All loans are subject to credit and property approval. Program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. Not all products are available in all states or for all loan amounts. Other restrictions and limitations apply. All loans offered through Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corporation ("CMMC"). Corporate headquarters: 343 Thornall Street, Edison, New Jersey 08837; (732) 205-0600. © 2003 J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. All Rights Reserved. 10/03 6504

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection

Drivers wanted.

Lowest Prices

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
Beautiful Christmas Items
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
Christmas Cards
Advent Wreaths
Advent Calendars
704-342-2878
Fax(704)334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road
Charlotte, NC

We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Has Vatican Iraq position changed?

IRAQ, from page 1

no one is saying "I told you so."

On the contrary, several top cardinals have warned against a pullout of U.S. and allied troops from Iraq, especially after deadly attacks on soldiers there. The Vatican's own representative in Iraq has said military withdrawal now would be the worst option.

And the Vatican has offered zero support to those who view Iraqi attacks on U.S. soldiers as legitimate resistance to an illegal operation.

After a recent truck bomb at an Italian army headquarters left 19 dead, Italian bishops denounced the attack as terrorism. The pope seemed to sign on to that definition a few days later when he spoke of the "wicked work" accomplished by terrorists in Iraq.

The pontiff and Italian bishops joined in honoring the dead Italian soldiers, saying they were engaged in a mission of peace.

Has the Vatican changed its mind about the war in Iraq?

"It's not that the Vatican position has changed, but the situation in Iraq has been completely transformed," said one Vatican official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"The Vatican clearly said 'no' to the war. But at a certain point, you have to manage the situation that's been created in the way that does the least damage," he said.

"If the military pulls out of Iraq now, the country would fall into chaos. The vase has been broken, and we have to try to find a way to mend it. Of course, there is the problem that the more deeply one becomes involved in this project, the greater the tendency to justify that involvement," he said.

Before the war, Cardinal Angelo Sodano, Vatican secretary of state, raised U.S. diplomatic hackles when he warned that the United States might find itself in a Vietnam-like quagmire in Iraq.

But today, as the problems mount and the death toll rises in Iraq, Cardinal Sodano has said "now is not the time for recriminations."

What the Vatican emphasizes is the need for Iraqis to govern themselves as quickly as possible and for the United Nations to have a greater say in the interim running of the country.

But with Iraq's political vacuum, self-governance seems impossible now.

"Any country that finds itself under occupation does not think the ruling authority represents the people," Archbishop Fernando Filoni, apostolic nuncio to Iraq, told the newspaper Corriere della Sera.

"But there's a crisis of power in Iraq. The people need a leader, someone who talks to Iraqis as an Iraqi, and that leader isn't there," he said.

Archbishop Filoni said that with no short-term political solution in sight and no real plan for civil harmony that involves Iraq's ethnic and religious communities, a military pullout now would leave Iraqis in a "terrible crisis."

Before the war began, the Vatican frequently relied on then-Archbishop Jean-Louis Tauran, an assistant secretary of state, to articulate the arguments against use of force. He was recently named a cardinal and left his diplomatic post, and the Vatican has generally fallen silent on the day-to-day situation in Iraq.

At the same time, Cardinal Camillo Ruini, papal vicar of Rome and president of the Italian bishops' conference, has assumed a higher profile. His public influence peaked during the national mourning and state funeral for the Italian soldiers killed in Iraq, when the cardinal said there should be no withdrawal of Italian troops from their "great and noble mission."

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

L. Paul Bremer, the U.S. civilian administrator of Iraq and a Catholic, attends a Nov. 18 memorial service at St. Joseph's Chaldean Catholic Church in Baghdad for the 19 Italians killed in an attack in An Nasiriyah.

To those asking whether the soldiers died in a war that should not have been fought, Cardinal Ruini replied: "They are victims of terrorism, pure and simple."

The handful of European countries that have contributed soldiers to the current military operation in Iraq include four with heavily Catholic populations: Italy, Poland, Portugal and Spain.

Even many Europeans opposed to the war supported sending soldiers to help restore order in Iraq in the immediate aftermath of the hostilities. But now the soldiers are coming under fire, and there is debate over whether their engagement is part of an illegal occupation, a peacekeeping mission or a reconstruction project.

"That's the $100 million question," said one Vatican official. He noted that no one at the Vatican had really spoken on this issue.

"Rather than define what it is, right now we need to try to help make things work as much as possible," he said.

Catholics vs. HIV/AIDS

AIDS, from page 1

other faiths, medical institutions and religious formation programs. It focuses on changing behavior and accepting responsibility for tackling the problems of HIV and AIDS.

"Poverty facilitates the transmission of HIV, makes adequate treatment unaffordable, accelerates death from HIV-related illness and multiplies the social impact of the epidemic," they said.

More than 11 million children in Africa under age 15 are AIDS orphans, and in sub-Saharan Africa, as many as 28 million people have HIV/AIDS.

In Washington, the U.S. bishops' Committee on African-American Catholics and the Committee on Hispanic Affairs issued a joint letter urging Catholics to fight the crisis. They said more than half of all new HIV/AIDS cases in the United States are among African-Americans, with 61 percent of those cases among teens, and Hispanics account for 20 percent of the total reported AIDS cases. And 78 percent of all cases of women with HIV/AIDS are either African-American or Hispanic.

African-Americans make up 12 percent of the U.S. population. Hispanics account for 14 percent.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates between 700,000 and 800,000 people in the U.S. are infected with HIV or have AIDS.

The pope said Nov. 30 to "pray for those struck by this plague," and to "encourage all those in the church who provide a priceless service of welcome, care and spiritual accompaniment to these brothers and sisters of ours."

KTC Transportation Co. Inc

CALL 704-532-7605

Convention Services
Airport
Hotel
City Tours
Groups
Long & Short Tours
Beach Vacations
Games
Sports
Special Events

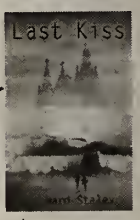
Fax 704-532-7661

www.ktctransportation.com

GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

ONE LAST KISS OF YOUR LIFETIME

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley



Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!

"A rare gift for writing that is so graceful, so natural... an ability that is both remarkable and unique."
—Billie Marie Zal, Author of The Fabric of Our Lives

To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

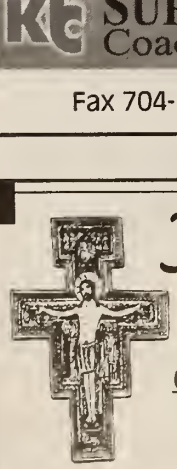
$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping



The Franciscan Center
Catholic Gift & Book Store

CHRISTMAS IDEAS!! Cards, Ornaments, Nativities, Angels...
Plus Bibles, Religious Plaques, Medals, CDs, and over 700 book titles!

Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday

(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Happy Holidays from
Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Interest Rate: 3.75%*
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

Consolidate High-interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

No Payment until February 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams this holiday season.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

St. Patrick Cathedral

The Very Rev. Paul Gary
Rector

Rev. Mr. Nicholas Fadero
Deacon

Rev. Lawrence LoMonaco
Parochial Vicar

Rev. Mr. Carlos Medina
Deacon

CHRISTMAS EVE MASSES
4 p.m. - Children's Mass
6 p.m. - Children's Mass
Midnight - Bishop Peter Jugis

CHRISTMAS DAY MASSES
8 a.m., 9:30 a.m.
11 a.m. - Bishop Peter Jugis

NEW YEAR'S EVE MASS
Midnight Mass
Doors open at 11:00 p.m.

NEW YEAR'S DAY MASSES
9 a.m.
11 a.m. - Bishop Peter Jugis

Come celebrate the Birth of Our Savior.

1621 Dilworth Road East
Charlotte, NC 28203 (704) 334-2283
Visit our website at www.stpatricks.org

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

DIOCESAN CAMPUS MINISTRY/Adjunct Catholic Chaplin: For Davidson College. Graduate theology training required. Send resume, three reference letters, cover letter to: Mary Wright, Director of Campus Ministry, 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203-4003 by January 9.

PRINCIPAL: St. Anthony of Padua Catholic grade school, Southern Pines, NC is accepting curriculum vitae for the position of principal. School curriculum is faithful to the magesteruim of the Church. Applicants must have master's degree and be state certified in education. Salary commensurate with experience. Please send Curriculum vitae to: The Very Reverend Jeffrey A. Ingham, V.F., St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church, 175 E. Connecticut Avenue, Southern Pines, NC 28387

RN/LPN: FT/PT/PRN. SouthPark Pediatrics (Charlotte) needs office nurse with pediatric skills. Phone triage experience preferred. Flexible work schedule. Old-fashioned care and family friendly employment. E-mail resume/salary requirements: sopkpeds@bellsouth.net.

FOR SALE

HOME: Senior Citizens Community. Lake Norman area. 2 bedrooms, kitchen, living room, dining area, 2 bathrooms. Interior completely updated. Community has lots of friendly people. Call owner: 704-662-9318.

FSBO Brick Executive Home: 2758 Sq Ft., 4 BR, 3 full BR, bonus room, many upgrades inside and out. 30 minutes to uptown Charlotte, NOT using Interstate. Asking $295,000. 5205 Featherstone Ct., Gastonia. 704-824-9099 nights.

FOR RENT

RETAIL STORE: 800 square foot building in Chimney Rock, NC in the heart of thriving tourist village. $1000/month. Call Peter O'Leary (828) 625-2479.

PRAYERS & PETITIONS

Thank you for prayers answered, St. Jude. KJM

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News & Herald."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

Reserve now.

Move later.

For the retirement lifestyle you're planning now but putting off until later, call today for pre-construction pricing.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN AT MARYFIELD

A Continuing Care Retirement Community

1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260

336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444

Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Children's books for Christmas gift-giving

REVIEWED BY BARB FRAZE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The following children's books are suitable for Christmas giving.

"The Invisible Seam," by Andy William Frew, illustrated by Jun Matsuoka. Moon Mountain Publishing (North Kingstown, R.I., 2003). 28 pp., $15.95.

"The Invisible Seam" is a well-woven story of a young Japanese girl who must apprentice as a seamstress when her aunt can no longer care for her. Michi's stitches are small and tight and bring great pride to her teacher but cause tensions with the other apprentice seamstresses. As the plot unfolds, Michi deals with peer pressure, the need to keep her promise to do her best, and the discovery that different people have different talents. Matsuoka's watercolors help illustrate Michi's feelings of pride, aloneness, conflict and joy. For younger readers, this is a good read-aloud book. Ages 7-10.

"Little Pierre: A Cajun Story from Louisiana," by Robert D. San Souci, illustrated by David Catrow. Silver Whistle (Orlando, Fla., 2003). 28 pp., $16.

This colorfully illustrated yarn is a great read-aloud book, mixing some Cajun dialect with outrageous adventure. Brothers Big Pierre, Fat Pierre, Wise Pierre and Foolish Pierre have special talents, but they are no match for their youngest brother, Little Pierre. Catrow's illustrations and caricatures stretch the imagination; the watercolors dominate the pages, with text blended in. Be prepared to read this book to the children multiple times. Ages 5-9.

"Dinosailors," by Deb Lund, illustrated by Howard Fine. Harcourt Inc. (Orlando, Fla., 2003). 29 pp., $16.

With a rocking rhythm, clever wording and humorous illustrations, Lund and Fine have rigged a swashbuckling story that children will love. The "Dinosailors" — dinosaurs who take off on a ship — are ready for adventure, until their vessel hits a squall. "Their dinotummies slosh and churn. They groan with every twist and turn. Their paling faces dinofrown. 'Heave ho!' they cry. 'It won't stay down.'" This book rose dinoheads and scaley tails above the rest. Ages 4-9.

"Mint's Christmas Message," by Mary Y. Spitz, illustrated by Joanne Y. Pierce. Mother Moose Press (Potomac Falls, Va., 2003). 32 pp., $17.95.

"Mint's Christmas Message" is an unusual twist on the message of Christmas. A grandfather who does not believe in Christmas receives the message of its real meaning when Mint, a retired champion, and other horses refuse to come in during a snowstorm. Pierce's illustrations are designed to look like old-fashioned oval-framed pictures, and they face text of a story told quite conversationally by Spitz. The result is an appealing story. All ages.

"The Wondrous Adventures of St. Francis of Assisi," by Tricia Gray, illustrated by Vicki Shuck. St. Anthony Messenger Press (Cincinnati, 2003). 164 pp., $14.95.

Fifteen tales about St. Francis, his life and miracles are retold in short vignettes that teach without preaching. With enticing titles like "The Three Murderous Robbers" to "The Wicked Wolf of Gubbio," the vignettes clearly convey Francis' love of God and his belief that God is reflected in every human, good or bad. Early elementary children will find the vignettes interesting to listen to if read by an adult; older readers will find the chapters quick reading. Ages 7-12.

"When We Were Saints," by Han Nolan. Harcourt Inc. (Orlando, Fla., 2003). 291 pp., $17.

"When We Were Saints" is not a historical tale, but the modern story of a young man struggling to find his identity after his grandfather's last words, "Young man, you are a saint." In a complex search that involves a teenage girl who thinks she is St. Clare and calls him Francis, Archie Caswell takes a spiritual journey into prayer and a physical journey to New York, all the while struggling to combine his common sense and love for his ailing grandmother with his discovery of religion. The book deals with some difficult topics, including anorexia and the stigmata, but will keep readers turning pages, trying to see how Archie resolves his conflict. Ages 11-15.

"Saints And Angels," by Claire Llewellyn. Kingfisher (Boston, 2003). 64 pp., $14.95.

"Saints and Angels" is a collection of portraits and profiles of famous saints, from St. Anne to St. Thomas Aquinas, as well as some famous archangels. The illustrations, taken from portraits at internationally renowned galleries, dominate the book. Llewellyn presents one-page profiles of the saints and angels. Each profile also has outtakes that include the saint or angel's feast day as well as what they are patron of. This beautiful book is a nice introduction to saints from ancient to modern times. All ages.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: DEC. 7, 2003

Dec. 7, Second Sunday of Advent

Cycle C Readings:

1) Baruch 5:1-9
   Psalm 126: 1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 6
2) Philippians 1:4-6, 8-11
3) Gospel: Luke 3:1-6

BY BEVERLY CORZINE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

The door burst open on a dreary winter afternoon. I heard the smack of books on the kitchen counter and the familiar sound of foraging for an after-school snack that would sustain a teenage boy until dinner. Then the call came, "Mom, I need to talk to you."

Walking into the kitchen, I unwittingly went to heart of the matter. "Hi. How was school?"

Immediately, I was told that Mark's American history teacher, having lost contact with reality, had given the class the most nonsensical of assignments known to humankind. I was forewarned that his American history grade would plummet to unsalvageable depths. Each student was required to interview someone who had served in World War II and be prepared to share the findings with the class.

At that moment I could have hugged the teacher. "What a super idea!" I thought to myself. To my son I said, "I think we know someone you can interview."

"Who? Where am I going to find someone?"

"Remember, Mr. Julson, who moved in next door, is a World War II veteran. Interview him."

After spending two hours interviewing our neighbor, Mark came home filled with astonishment and admiration for a man who had fought in Gen. Patton's army at the Battle of the Bulge and later witnessed, firsthand, the ravages of the Holocaust.

"Mom, can you believe that Mr. Julson lived through all that? I just thought he was a nice retired guy who went around taking food and clothes to church — somebody who bought day old bread for the ducks on the lake. What do you suppose helped him through it?

St. Paul describes a dynamic faith, in his letter to the Philippians, as a "partnership for the Gospel." Paul prays that the "good work" that has taken root in his readers will flourish throughout their lives until they meet Christ.

We witnessed the partnership with the Gospel that Paul mentions in the life of our friend in the good years of his retirement and through years of deteriorating health that left him a wisp of a man.

On Oct. 16, American flags flew in our neighborhood to mark his passing. In his heart faith never failed.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 7 - DECEMBER 13

Sunday (Second Sunday of Advent), Baruch 5:1-9, Philippians 1:4-6, 8-11, Luke 3:1-6; Monda (The Immaculate Conception), Genesis 3:9-15, 20, Luke 1:26-38; Tuesday (St. Juan Diego Isaiah 40:1-11, Matthew 18:12-14; Wednesday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 40:25-31, Matthew 11:28-30; Thursday (Advent Weekday), Isaiah 41:13-20, Matthew 11:11-15; Friday (Our Lady o Guadalupe), Zechariah 2:14-17, Luke 1:39-47; Saturday (St. Lucy), Sirach 48:1-4, 9-11, Matthew 17:9a, 10-13

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 14 - DECEMBER 20

Sunday (Third Sunday of Advent), Zephaniah 3:14-18a, Philippians 4:4-7, Luke 3:10-18; Monda (Advent Weekday), Numbers 24:2-7, 15-17a, Matthew 21:23-27; Tuesday (Advent Weekday Zephaniah 3:1-2, 9-13, Matthew 21:28-32; Wednesday (Late Advent Weekday), Genesis 49:2, 8-10, Matthew 1:1-17; Thursday (Late Advent Weekday), Jeremiah 23:5-8, Matthew 1:18-25; Frida (Late Advent Weekday), Judges 13:2-7, 24-25a, Luke 1:5-25; Saturday (Late Advent Weekday Isaiah 7:10-14, Luke 1:26-38

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

Maronite Catholics seek to grow in Southeast

MARONITE, from page 1

(born about 350) and the ancient monasteries in the mountains of Syria and Lebanon.

The Eastern churches are in full communion with the Roman Catholic Church, equal parts in the body of the Catholic Church, although they have their own distinctive liturgical and legal systems.

It is not known how many of today's North Carolina Catholics have their roots in Lebanon and the Maronite Catholic Church. What is clear, however, is that the Diocese of Raleigh owes much of its early development to Lebanese immigrants who settled in North Carolina years ago.

No other state in the country has had more early influence from Maronites than North Carolina, Father Thomas said.

Father Robert Lawson, a retired priest of the Diocese of Raleigh, said during the conference that to find Lebanese immigrants in North Carolina one had only to "follow the railroad."

The rail brought immigrants from the north, branching off through Raleigh in the east and Charlotte in the west. Many of these new Americans found their homes in these cities and at other railroad stops.

They came to the United States to escape religious persecution in Lebanon, Father Lawson said, but in North Carolina they found no established Maronite church and much prejudice. Not only were they foreigners in early 20th-century North Carolina; they were also Catholics.

They found Catholic parishes struggling to get their footing in often hostile communities. There were few Catholics, few priests, few churches.

"People rightly came to the country and joined the Latin Rite Catholic Church," Father Thomas said.

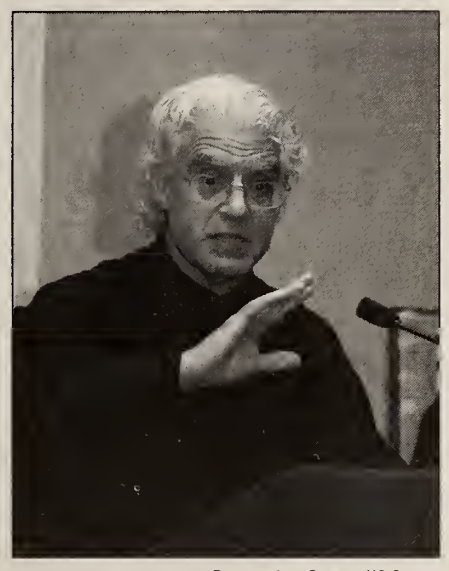

PHOTO BY JOHN STRANGE, NC CATHOLIC

Father Joseph Thomas, pastor of the Maronite Catholic mission of St. Sharbel in Raleigh, speaks at the Nov. 14-16 Southeast regional conference of the National Apostolate of Maronites.

Father Lawson was born in Durham in 1923, the year before the Vatican established the Diocese of Raleigh.

"It was the last mission territory in all of the United States," Father Lawson said. "It was called the China of the Americas."

There were 5,000 Catholics in the whole state, he said, and of those, "at least 1,500 were Lebanese."

Father Lawson said he and other pioneering priests in North Carolina came to appreciate and love the Lebanese Catholics for their undying faithfulness and devotion to the Catholic Church.

He said that before the conference he had spoken to retired Msgr. James Jones, who asked Father Lawson to bring a message to the conference: "Tell them that no one in the state of North Carolina has been better, more faithful to the Church than the Lebanese Catholics. They kept the faith in the state when there was nobody else."

He and Father Jones represent two of the oldest priests of the Diocese of Raleigh. "We both say we depended on the faithfulness of the Lebanon people. This is your diocese. We are very proud of you."

For his part, Father Thomas first came to North Carolina in the early 1970s. Bishop Vincent Waters had long lobbied the bishop of the Eparchy of St. Maron of Brooklyn, the Maronite diocese that covered the entire eastern seaboard, to send a Maronite priest who could serve the Maronites living in North Carolina.

Father Thomas was assigned to establish a mission in Fayetteville, now St. Michael the Archangel Church on Arsenal Avenue.

He found initial resistance on the part of Lebanese Catholics to join the mission. They had become ensconced in their Roman Catholic parishes and in the traditions of the Roman Catholic Church. Further, they expressed concern that to move to the Maronite community would be to segregate the Lebanese Catholics from the rest of the community, something they hated to do in the racially divisive South.

But Father Thomas said many came to a "growing love and admiration for the tradition that was their own, but one that they never knew."

It is the same today for Catholics who have a Maronite tradition in their past, he said. "They have never known what it meant to be a Maronite Catholic."

Father Thomas and others at the conference said that while they wish to reach North Carolina Catholics who have Maronite roots, they are in no way in "competition" with the Roman Catholic Church. Indeed, they said, they want to especially reach those Maronite Catholics who have "fallen away" and are not active in either church.

In addition, they said, in today's modern Catholic Church, it is acceptable for Catholics of both traditions to participate in both rites if they wish.

What is important, said Ed Shiner, said executive director of the National Apostolate of Maronites, is that people are aware of what is available to them.

"They should be aware of who they are and where their roots are," he said.

Shiner said the Maronite liturgy is a traditional one usually featuring three languages: Arabic, Syriac, and English. People are "intrigued" by the liturgy, he said, its spirituality, and the "poetry of our liturgical texts."

While the Maronite Catholic Church is a traditional Eastern Catholic church with roots as far back as the year 350 with St. Maron's birth, it is growing and changing with the times. Especially in the United States, Father Thomas said, it is no longer "only" an ethnic Lebanese church.

"We were never meant to be an ethnic church," he said.

Boston's Roseanne Solomon, a past president of the national apostolate, said the Maronite Church has roots in Lebanon, but being Lebanese is not the most important thing about being a Maronite.

"My father was Irish and English," she said, "and he was a very good Maronite. He had not one ounce of Lebanese blood."

Good Maronites are faithful, she said, and "we open our arms and take in anyone who wants to be a part of us."

Shiner predicted that in 50 years the Maronite Church will still have a core that is distinctly Lebanese, but its members will be a "tossed salad" of different races and nationalities.

Father Thomas likened the synod in importance and impact to the Second Vatican Council. It was the first such synod since 1736, he said, and while the second session of the synod begins next October, already it has sent an important message to Maronite Catholics worldwide.

Before the synod, Father Thomas said, the Maronite Church outside of Lebanon was known as the "Church of the Diaspora," or the church of immigrants.

But one of the first findings of the synod was that the Maronite Catholic Church in the world will be known instead as the "Church of the Expansion."

"It is the very nature of the church is to extend itself throughout the world," Father Thomas said. "It is within our nature to expand ... for the church to spread all around the world, bringing our traditions and enriching the Catholic Church in its full glory."

John Strange is the editor of the NC Catholic.

Editor's note: For more on the Maronite Catholic Church, to go www.stmaron.org.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

We beat the banks!
IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.
Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com
Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net
7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210
IMS Mortgage Service

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Unit # 27 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS
CHRISTMAS GIFT SPECIALS
OPEN
Monday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Cracking the real 'Da Vinci Code'

Exploring anti-Catholic themes in novel

Guest Column

FATHER MICHAEL BUETTNER

(From Father Buettner's homily given at St. Gabriel Church Nov. 16, 2003)

Well, have you cracked "The Da Vinci Code" yet? It seems this book is the newest fad that has recently dominated not only The New York Times bestseller list, but also television documentaries and coffee break conversations. A number of parishioners have even asked whether I have read the book yet, seeking some feedback and guidance on this book. Since I am not normally taken by modern fads and since I approach most modern innovations with a bit of healthy skepticism, it took me a while to buy the book.

The fast-paced action and intrigue grabbed my attention from the very beginning. I could see why so many are drawn into this story. It is like a puzzle or a riddle waiting to be solved. But I had to stop about halfway through. My threshold for anti-Catholic bigotry had reached its breaking point. In our day, anti-Catholic bigotry is about the only acceptable prejudice that is not only permitted, but also supported by the vast majority of the secular media. So, I asked myself, "Why should I continue to read a book that disparages the Church?" It would be like reading a scathing criticism of my own mother, which is not such a strange analogy considering the Church is our mother.

But it doesn't take long to see the author's direction, as well as the lies and misrepresentations that will lead him to his conclusion. So, what's this book all about?

In one sense, the book is nothing more than the perennial quest for the Holy Grail: the search for the original vessel that held the blood of Christ at the Last Supper. You may recall recent renditions of the ancient tale in such movies as "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" and the slightly more risqué "Monty Python's Holy Grail."

Although it's the same adventure, Dan Brown, author of "The Da Vinci Code," not only repackages the story, but completely reinterprets the Grail legend. Brown takes the insight that a woman's body is symbolically a container for new life and applies this truth to the Grail legend. He gives the container a Christian name that everyone should recognize, Mary Magdalene. Then Brown suggests the theory that St. Mary Magdalene was actually the vessel that held the blood of Jesus Christ in her womb while bearing his children. This, of course, would mean that Our Lord took St. Mary Magdalene to be his bride to continue his bloodline through the centuries.

Consequently, Brown claims "the quest for the Holy Grail is the quest to kneel before the bones of Mary Magdalene" rather than the traditional legend of the search for the chalice used at the Last Supper.

So, does Brown prove his case? First of all, he is not proving a case. Dan Brown is not a lawyer. He is an author: his job is to sell books. As an author, he is successful, by stirring up interest and reaching the bestseller list; but at the same time, Brown is a poor writer, with a superficial writing style filled with historical errors and characters as flat as the paper on which they were printed. If you are interested in the many historical inaccuracies, I would direct you to an article in Crisis Magazine from September entitled "Dismantling The DaVinci Code" by Sandra Miesel, a Catholic journalist (www.crisismagazine.com/september2003/feature1.htm). She does a splendid job of responding to Brown's implausible book.

In the end, cracking "The DaVinci Code" is not all that difficult. The answer to Brown's success is printed on page 169 where he writes, "Everyone loves a conspiracy." "The DaVinci Code" is a fictional tale, a novel, retelling the famous quest for the Holy Grail in modern, anti-Catholic language.

But in the midst of all such lies remains a bit of truth that has been covered up. If we investigate Brown's claim that Christ took to himself a bride to continue his bloodline and his lineage throughout each generation, we will discover that Brown was on to something, a truth that is deeply Catholic, despite his prejudices.

Before Jesus Christ ascended into heaven, He did indeed take to himself a bride, in fact, the Church, and prepared her to receive a divine gift. And after Our Lord ascended into heaven, he sent his Holy Spirit upon his bride at Pentecost, impregnating her with divine life. Why? So that his bride, the Church, would produce sons and daughters of us for the glory of the Father.

In the sacrament of baptism, you and I are given divine life by water and the Holy Spirit and become sons and daughters of the Father. It is the Bride of Christ, the Church, our mother, who produces this divine life in our souls.

And not only does Christ's lineage continue in the Church, but also his bloodline, in the holy Eucharist. For 2000 years, the Church has taught the holy Eucharist, instituted at the Last Supper, is the living body and blood, soul and divinity of Jesus Christ, donated by the bridegroom to impregnate his bride and give her divine life; that is, Christ, the bridegroom gives to you and me, his bride, the unsurpassing gift of his Body and Blood. At every Mass, the bridegroom gives himself to his bride so that "the two will become one flesh."

For a Catholic, the search for the Holy Grail is not legend but reality, it is not lost, but found. The perennial quest for the chalice that holds the blood of Christ does not begin here, but rather ends here. For, the truth that here and now, 2000 years after the Last Supper, Christ will come again at this holy Mass and change wine into his blood, changing a simple chalice into the Holy Grail out of love for you and me, is much more exciting than any fictitious novel or modern theory.

No, I have not finished "The Da Vinci Code" and I don't plan to do so. My quest for the Holy Grail is ultimately satisfied with the truth — with the marvelous truth that Christ's love for you and me impels him to give us his body and blood so that we might become one with him.

Father Buettner is parochial vicar at St. Gabriel Church in Charlotte.

Pope says God saves people from political, spiritual oppression

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — From the beginning of time, God has acted to save his creatures from oppression, both political and spiritual, Pope John Paul II said.

Reflecting on Psalm 114 during his Dec. 3 general audience, the pope said that just as God led the Israelites out of slavery in Egypt across the Red Sea he saves his people from slavery to sin through the waters of baptism.

For Christians, he said, the psalm's hymn of praise extends to "a more radical and universal liberation," freedom from sin and death through new life in Christ.

Pope John Paul said that in "The Divine Comedy" Dante placed the hymn on the lips of those in purgatory, "seeing in the psalm the hymn of expectation and hope of those who, after purification from every sin, are headed toward the ultimate destination of communion with God in paradise."

The psalm's final verse praises God for having "turned the rock into pools of water, the flint into flowing springs."

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

Pope John Paul said the new springs of water are "the sign of the salvific love of the Lord who sustains and regenerates humanity as it advances across the desert of history."

As St. Paul explained in his First Letter to the Corinthians, Christ is the rock that is the source of life-giving water, he said.

The pope read most of his prepared Italian text and greetings to pilgrims in seven languages. With fewer than 6,000 people at the audience, the pope spent just an hour in the audience hall, about a half hour less than normal.

Everything old is new again

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

Most people divide the year in ways that have nothing to do with nature's winter, spring, summer and fall. Religion and tradition make this time "The Holidays" for many. In the world of sports, fans know that everything has its season.

At the moment, football, basketball and hockey are prime topics of conversation and speculation. Even those of us who are not avid enthusiasts can't miss the extensive coverage of major sporting events. That was certainly true this autumn, when baseball's post-season created a number of dramatic situations. Cubs and Red Sox fans believed for a while that this really would be their year to win. It wasn't. And Yankee fans (who are everywhere in my part of the world) had faith that they would win, yet again. They didn't.

The World Series belonged to the Florida Marlins. Not a team of lore and legend, at least not yet, but they won it all. They played a beautiful game of baseball, not only going after the division, the pennant and the Series, but through most of the season. Starting in May, that is. And that's a great story, in itself.

The Marlins began the year with 16 wins and 22 losses. That's when a new guy took over as manager. His name is Jack McKeon. Although, as one wag put it, you might think his full name is "72-Year-Old Jack McKeon," since reporters and commentators keep making such a big deal about his age. Already retired from over a half-century in baseball, managing both minor league and major league teams, when he was called to interview for the job, he took charge of the young team. They had talent, but needed leadership. McKeon managed the Marlins to a 75-49 record. And kept going from there.

Described by a sportswriter as a "an incongruous mix of salt and sweetness," McKeon encouraged the players to "use their imaginations out there. They have to have fun." On the other hand, he never worries about simply being liked. Early on, he had the clubhouse door locked when he found several players relaxing there during a game. The combination of turning a team into winners and his colorful style made the manager with his trademark cigar a natural for media attention. Here was a man who was obviously enjoying himself.

He also enjoyed his first-in-a-lifetime opportunity to share the success with his family. McKeon and his wife Carol have been married for 49 years and have four children and nine grandchildren. The close-knit family has a lot to do with Carol McKeon's efforts at home in North Carolina, while her husband traveled across the country and the years. She was the one who got them to classes, after school activities and church. But they made sure they spent their summers together — wherever Jack McKeon happened to be working.

He's also someone who takes his faith and his prayer life seriously. Though he doesn't bring up the subject himself, he attends Mass daily. When questioned, McKeon just says something like "Isn't that a great way to start the day?" Then lights another cigar.

At a time when too many sports stories seem to focus on money, not to mention sex, drugs and even crime, I like this one about an old man in a young man's game, about a guy who cares about family and faith — and who knows the value of honesty, humor and having fun.

By the way, the Marlins have signed Jack McKeon for next season. He's just turned 73.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "Be a Good Sport — Keeping Athletics in Perspective," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

Love postponed: an Advent reflection

Guest Column

FATHER JOHN AURILIA, OFM Cap

As we go through the Advent season, we hear the solemn proclamation, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is close at hand," (Mt.3:2) and the challenging question: "Are you the one who is to come or must we wait for someone else?" (Mt. 11:3).

In both instances, there is a sense of emergency today, rather than to enjoy our past goodness or guilt, or in our future greatness and fictional world. We seem to love the future, because it is not here yet, and the past, because we can dwell on memories rather than realities. It's easy to say we will be better, spend more time with our families, help a person in need, pray more tomorrow. This is the love-postponed syndrome. Advent is coming today.

The Gospel doesn't languish in the past nor dream in the future. It speaks about today. You remember John the Baptist being arrested and beheaded for his courageous confrontation with King Herod. The story's peak is when John sends his disciples to Jesus to ask: "Are you really the Messiah our people are waiting for?" Jesus' answer is not in the form of a scholarly set of religious, historical and philosophical proofs. Rather, he says: "The blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are healed, the deaf hear, the downtrodden are being liberated." (Mt.11:5).

Did you notice all the verbs are in the present tense? What a great statement, when we are able to say, "See what I do and you know who I am."

Another example is the dialogue between St. Peter and Jesus, who asks three times, "Do you love me?" The triple emphasis is not an effort by Jesus to test Peter's sincerity. Nor did Peter later deny Jesus three times because he cured his mother-in-law! You can almost read between the lines: "Peter, do you love me not next week, but now?"

There is a sense of urgency in loving today and tomorrow, but real love involves change and renew, which are the qualities of true repentance so often repeated during Advent.

Repentance is not easy because we are creatures of habit; we don't want to change because it is uncomfortable. Modern society encourages change, but only in a superficial and commercial fashion. Advertising deals with changes, but is about shirts, perfumes, cars, houses. All of the above will definitely enhance a new image of ourselves, a new lifestyle, but will not affect our hearts, our values, our souls.

For Jesus, the change has to be radical: to forgive those who hurt us, pray for those who mistreat us, bless those who hate us, humble ourselves before the dregs and outcasts of society.

What distinguishes the good and the bad people are love and willingness to renew themselves every day. Love is contagious, and so are joy and faith.

Coming home for Christmas

Spirituality for Today

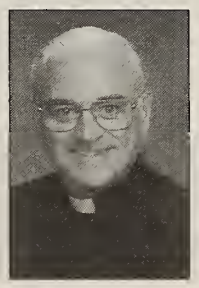
FATHER JOHN CATOIR
CNS Columnist



The Gallup Poll says there are more than 100 million unchurched Americans, 20 million of whom are lapsed Catholics. Those who leave the church have reasons for doing so; some were driven away by the scandals. The poll goes on to say that nearly half the fallen-away Catholics feel spiritually dry and confused. They actually admit they would be willing to come home to their faith if they were prodded.

Many of them stopped believing the claims of Catholicism for personal reasons, so it is not an easy sell. But faith opens a thousand eyes. For those who are no longer believers, there is always hope. Never underestimate the power of God's grace.

Lorene Hanley Duquin told the story of her departure from the church in her book "Could You Ever Come Back to the Church?" (Alba House). She grew up in South Buffalo. The nuns who taught her were rigid and demanding. After learning and believing that eating meat on Friday could earn eternal damnation, she and her classmates were scandalized by these same nuns who were leaving the church to marry priests. It's all lies, she thought.

Only to please her parents, who were annoyed at her rebellious streak, she went to a Catholic college and took a course in religion, "if only," as she puts it, "to convince myself that they had lied to me." In her senior year, she fell in love with a fallen-away Protestant named Dick Duquin; they married, had four children and never bothered to baptize any of them.

Somehow the first son became an altar boy and invited a priest home to dinner. The priest suggested that the father take an adult education class in Catholicism. Being a teacher, Duquin wanted to know what his son was learning at school, so he took the course and to everyone's amazement decided to convert to Catholicism. At first his new fervor confused his wife, but gradually her faith reawakened. She called it "a miracle of grace."

Lorie Duquin was a successful feature writer for national magazines, and one day while browsing the Internet she found that there were many other lapsed Catholics like herself who had returned to the practice of their faith. She began collecting their stories and got the idea for her book, "Could You Ever Come Back to the Church?"

Now she has written two new resource books for people who are searching for answers: "A Century of Catholic Converts" (Our Sunday Visitor, Huntington Ind.) and "When a Loved One Leaves the Church" (Our Sunday Visitor).

In the first book, the stories of converts like Trappist Father Thomas Merton, Cardinal Avery Dulles, Clare Booth Luce, Scott Hahn and many others make fascinating reading. What do these people, and others such as J.R.R. Tolkien, author of "Lord of the Rings," and Jane Doe of "Roe v. Wade" have in common? They are all 20th-century converts to Catholicism. I think "A Century of Catholic Converts" would make a great Christmas gift for a loved one who is drifting.

Catholicism has inspired and attracted billions of people down through the ages. In view of that, let me mention another great book from Our Sunday Visitor publications: "Treasury of Catholic Stories," by Gerald Costello. It is the best anthology of heartwarming Catholic stories by saints and scholars that you will find anywhere.

Fill your mind with good spiritual reading, and your soul will be refreshed and gladdened.

St. Helen Church serves Catholics of Gaston County

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

St. Helen Church, originally built in the 1910s to serve the black Catholic community of Spencer Mountain, is the spiritual home to 50 families.

SPENCER MOUNTAIN — The Catholic church in Spencer Mountain placed under the patronage of St. Helen was built in the mid-1910s, but it was from the 19th century shadows of the Benedictine monastery in Belmont that this mission church was born.

Bishop Leo Haid, the Benedictine abbot of Belmont and apostolic of North Carolina, directed the building of St. Benedict Church just south of the abbey to serve the black Catholic population in the area. But with the building of the abbey church in the early 1890s, most St. Benedict parishioners assimilated into that new church community.

ST. HELEN CHURCH

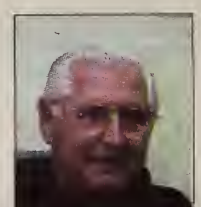
341 Dallas-Spencer Mountain Road
Gastonia, NC 28056
A mission of Our Lady of Consolation, Charlotte
(704) 922-0670

Vicariate: Gastonia
Pastor: Capuchin Father Jude Duffy
Deacon: Rev. Mr. Guy Piché
Number of Families: 50



Capuchin Father Jude Duffy

St. Joseph Church near Mount Holly — one of the oldest existing churches in western North Carolina, built in 1843 — became a mission for black Catholics for a brief period as well.

By the mid-1910s, Benedictine Father Michael McInerney, a renowned architect, was designing plans for a new church to be built in Spencer Mountain, north of the abbey. The site for the church — and, in part, its inspiration — came from Robert Gardin, a former Baptist who in his younger days converted to Catholicism after having a dream in which St. Peter called on him to continue his faith by way of the Catholic Church.

Local lore? Perhaps, but Gardin's conversion is said to have brought hundreds of friends, neighbors and family members — including eight siblings — into the church. With Gardin's enthusiasm and Father McInerney's plans, the red brick building was constructed.

Benedictine Father McIchior Reichert, one of the original monks who traveled from Pennsylvania to help establish Belmont Abbey, was the first priest assigned to St. Helen Church. He later founded St. Joseph School for the black children in nearby Dallas.

By the mid-1930s, when Abbot Vincent Taylor began his pastorate of the abbey and its territory, the black parishioners of St. Joseph Church in Mount Holly had transferred to St. Helen Church. The school in Dallas was also closed.

The Spencer Mountain church would remain in the care of the Benedictines for decades to come, and except for the period from 1926 until 1934, when St. Helen was a weekend assignment, there was a regular ministerial presence at the church.

The nullius territory of Belmont Abbey was partitioned in 1960, placing St. Helen Church under the administration of the Diocese of Raleigh (which encompassed all of North Carolina at the time). The church became a mission of Queen of the Apostles Church in Belmont, one of the many parishes established with the help of the missionary zeal of the nearby Benedictines.

In November 1991, the Benedictine pastorate officially ended in Spencer Mountain, and St. Helen Church became a mission of St. Michael Church in Gastonia, with then-pastor Father George Kloster serving as pastor of the two communities.

With the diocesan landscape growing and changing during the 1990s, St. Helen Church was again placed in the care of Queen of the Apostles in July 1995. In addition to his duties in Belmont, then-pastor Father Richard Hokanson also ministered to the almost 50 household comprising the Spencer Mountain church family.

In 2000, St. Helen became under the care of Our Lady of Consolation Church in Charlotte, with Capuchin Father Judy Duffy as pastor. In November 2002, Rev. Mr. Guy Piché diocesan director of properties, became the church's permanent deacon.

In August 2003, the church celebrated a homecoming at which original families of the church were invited. More than 150 people attended the special event.

Other activities over the past year and a half included the annual blessing of the cemetery on All Soul's Day, blessing of pets on the feast day of St. Francis of Assisi, a Halloween carnival for the children of the parish, a men's club and weekly Scripture and spiritual studies groups.

On Nov. 23, 2003, National Black Catholic History Month and the history of St. Helen Church was recalled during a special Mass celebrated by Msgr. Mauricio W. West, chancellor and vicar general of the Diocese of Charlotte.

Through Benedictine cultivation and ancestral heritage, St. Helen Church in Spencer Mountain conveys in its mission statement a dedication to tradition — that of the Catholic Church and of African and African American culture.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic
Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972
by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

DECEMBER 12, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 12

FC 282
C 282 c

Parish Profile:
St. Michael Church
| PAGE 16

Driving literacy one book at a time

PHOTOS BY KAREN A. EVANS

Students in the Charlotte area collected nearly a thousand books for local organizations in November.

Above, Sarah Kramer, a kindergartner at St. Mark Catholic School, reads one of several hundred new and gently used books collected as part of National Children's Book Week, which will be distributed to the battered women's shelter, homeless shelter and the Children's Hospital at Carolinas Medical Center.

At left, D'arcy Kenworthy sorts through the box of books collected by Boy Scouts Pack 9 Bear Den at St. Patrick Church. The eight-member troop collected more than 200 books for the Charlotte Reads book drive. Charlotte Reads supports Reach Out and Read, The Family Literacy Program, Bright Beginnings and Workplace Basic Skills.

Scars and lies

One woman's journey from abortion to healing

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Constance Russo knows first-hand how it feels to be young, alone and pregnant. She also knows the pain of choice.

As a teenager, Russo looked for the love she was missing in her home and turned not to God but to men. She became promiscuous. At age 19, she became pregnant.

She went to a Planned Parenthood clinic where she felt pushed into having an abortion. Abortion had been legal for only five years and the counselors never discussed the emotional or physical repercussions an abortion could cause. She was scared and uninformed.

According to Russo, the counselors at Planned Parenthood compared having an abortion "to having a wart removed." The counselors made it seem as if after the abortion, time would turn back and the experience of being pregnant and having an abortion had never happened. She was also told that she could "get married and have babies later."

At a Kaiser hospital in California, there was an assembly line of gurneys holding young women waiting to have abortions, Russo said.

"We were all crying, all shell-shocked," she said. The procedure was not explained to

See ABORTION, page 9

Bishops told of national sex abuse response plans

AUDIT, INVESTIGATIVE RESULTS TO BE RELEASED EARLY 2004

BY JERRRY FILTEAU
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Major national studies on the crisis of clergy sexual abuse of minors and the U.S. bishops' response to it will be released next January and February, members of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops learned Nov. 11.

Justice Anne Burke, interim chair of the National Review Board monitoring diocesan compliance with the bishops' program to protect children and respond to clergy sexual abuse, told the bishops that the board plans to release two major studies Feb. 27 at a press conference in Washington.

They are the national study on the extent of sexual abuse of minors by Catholic priests and deacons since 1950 by the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in New York and the board's consensus report on interviews with bishops, priests-abusers, victims and a wide array of professionals regarding the "causes and context" of the abuse crisis, she said.

Burke, a justice of the Ap-

See ABUSE, page 8

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
#420336#
#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
5235 P2

Seeking La Posada
Sacred Heart students' search for shelter
| PAGE 5

December ordination
Three seminarians to become transitional deacons
| PAGE 7

Culture Watch
2003's top movies, Santa style
| PAGES 10-12

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

FIGHTING FOR HER CAUSE

CNS PHOTO BY ALESSIA GIULIANI, CATHOLIC PRESS PHOTO

New Jersey Sister Margherita Marchione displays a portrait of Pope Pius XII in St. Peter's Square in early December. The 82-year-old member of the Religious Teachers Filippini order appealed to Pope John Paul II and various Vatican officials for the beatification of Pius XII. Her admiration for the World War II pontiff stands in sharp contrast with some historians who have portrayed him as silent on the treatment of

New Jersey nun keeps up pressure for beatification of Pius XII

ROME (CNS) — New Jersey Sister Margherita Marchione, one of the most energetic defenders of Pope Pius XII, didn't surprise Pope John Paul II when she asked him in a late November audience: "Your Holiness, almost 50 years have passed. When will Pope Pius XII be beatified?"

Sister Marchione explained hundreds of people around the world had asked her to implore the pope's help in speeding up the beatification process. The pontiff smiled and acknowledged her interest, but made no commitments.

She took it up with the pope's secretary, Archbishop Stanislaw Dziwisz, who said the pope had read all her letters and appeals. She went to the Congregation for Saints' Causes, where Cardinal Jose Saraiva Martins promised her things were moving along at the proper — and careful — pace.

Those who know the 82-year-old Sister Marchione, a member of the Religious Teachers Filippini order in Morristown, N.J., are not surprised at her in-your-face approach, event at the Vatican. She says criticism about Pope Pius' alleged "silence" on the treatment of the Jews during World War II is a "smear campaign."

She wonders why Jewish organizations today don't highlight testimonials from Jews who were saved through the late pope's efforts. And she is a little disappointed, after writing five books on the subject, few opponents will debate with her.

"I'm waiting for the opportunity, because I've got the documentation for everything," she said.

Her interest in Pope Pius's wartime papacy grew in the 1990s, when she listened to older members of her religious order describe how they and other Catholic institutions in Rome hid and saved many Jews. Her 1997 book on the subject credited Pope Pius with making this protection mission possible.

Her latest book, "Pope Pius XII," sketches a case for the late pontiff as someone who prudently and quietly helped the Jews, opposed Hitler at every turn and practiced the virtues of a saint. She calls it her "positio," a reference to the term used by the Vatican for the dossier that launches a person's sainthood cause. In the case of Pope Pius XII, the Vatican's "positio" is still being prepared.

Sister Marchione would like to help move things along, though she's aware this sainthood cause is controversial. Jesuit Father Peter Gumpel, who is helping to document Pope Pius XII's sainthood cause, said it would take several years for the beatification.

Religious groups look at raising profile of nuclear disarmament

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Participants in an interfaith consultation on nuclear disarmament in Washington believe it's time to raise the profile of the issue — 25 years after the SALT II treaty led to the United States and the Soviet Union scaling back their weapons.

At a Dec. 3 consultation in Washington, representatives of several dozen religious organizations acknowledged that, amid the global debates about terrorism and weapons of mass destruction over the past couple of years, concerns about nuclear disarmament have been little more than part of the babble.

The conference included status reports on nuclear weapons policies and weapons development. Speakers discussed strategies for bringing concerns about nuclear weapons to the attention of the White House and members of Congress, and how to mobilize religious congregations to support disarmament.

Gerry Powers, director of International Justice and Peace for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, reminded participants that with their 1983 pastoral letter, "The Challenge of Peace," the U.S. bishops "made it OK to talk about morality and nuclear weapons."

Until that point, public discussion about nuclear weapons was primarily about limiting the arms race, but not for reasons based in morality, he said. Now, "everyone knows religious leaders think nuclear weapons are problematic."

Others at the conference proposed strategies for appealing to members of Congress and presidential candidates; they include using people's enthusiasm on other political issues as a way of reaching politicians to lobby for disarmament.

Diocesan planner

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Please call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — Father Patrick Winslow will present an Advent retreat Dec. 20 9 a.m.-3 p.m. at St. Vincent de Paul Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. Call Peggy at (704) 588-7311 for reservations or e-mail bhoppy57@aol.com.

CHARLOTTE — The Charlotte Catholic High School Alumni Association is hosting the annual Alumni Basketball Tournament Dec. 26. All alumni are welcome to participate. To register, please visit www.CharlotteCatholicAlumni.org or call Jennifer B. Johnson at (704) 543-9118. Alumni and their families are also invited to the Alumni Christmas Party Dec. 27 at 8 p.m. at the Gin Mill, 1411 S. Tryon St. No RSVP required.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Monday of each month, 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

HUNTERSVILLE — Natural Family Planning classes are being held the third Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. at St. Mark Catholic Church, 14740 Stumptown Rd., Room 200. Classes are taught by Dr. Matthew Harrison. All are welcome to attend, no registration required. Call (704) 948-0231 for directions and more information.

CHARLOTTE - The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians Division 1 Mecklenburg County-St. Brigid, an Irish-Catholic social and charitable inter-parish group, meet the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Anyone interested in their Irish-Catholic roots, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720 for further information.

CHARLOTTE — Thank God It's Friday (TGIF), a weekly support group for separated and divorced women, meets the third Friday of each month at 7 p.m. in the St. Matthew Church parish center, 8015 Ballantyne Pkwy., with a potluck dinner with a guest speaker from the community. TGIF is a healing ministry sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Charlotte Regional Office and St. Matthew Church. For details, call Trish Wilson at (704) 543-8986.

CHARLOTTE — New Creation Monastery invites you to a day of silence and solitude in the presence of Almighty God. The monastery offers private spiritual retreats for lay people. Write to Father John Vianney Hoover at New Creation Monastery, 11517 Spreading Oak Ln, Charlotte, NC 28226 about why you want to go on retreat and when. For more information, call (704) 541-5026.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

GASTONIA — Is peace possible in our time? What can we do to bring peace to our world? Join us for the next Prayer Vigil for Peace Dec. 15, 7-8 p.m. at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 258 W. Franklin Blvd. Come pray with people of all faiths - Jewish, Christian, Muslim and others - as we gather together to ask the Lord for peace

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

DECEMBER 12, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 12

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published b the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Churc St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except fo Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durin June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishe of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per yea for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserve the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deeme appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-clas postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citie POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 3726 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope meets Dalai Lama in strictly religious encounter, Vatican says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II held talks with the exiled Tibetan spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama, in a meeting downplayed by the Vatican for fear of political reaction by China.

The Dalai Lama spoke privately with the pope Nov. 27 in an audience not listed on the pontiff's official activities. A papal spokesman said afterward "it was a brief courtesy visit, of an exclusively religious nature."

An informed Vatican source said the Vatican recognizes the Dalai Lama as a world religious leader and for that reason the pope was pleased to meet with him. But the Dalai Lama has also been pushing for autonomy for Tibet, a land he fled with about 100,000 Tibetan Buddhists when it was occupied in 1959 by China, which has placed tight controls on Buddhist monasteries.

"The Vatican's concern, of course, is to avoid repercussions by the Chinese government on the Chinese Catholic community," the Vatican source said.

China routinely objects when foreign government officials meet with the Dalai Lama, who is still recognized by many of his followers as the spiritual and temporal ruler of Tibet. He has met with Pope John Paul several times.

Speaking to reporters after the papal audience, the Dalai Lama said he had come simply to pay his respect to the pope and show appreciation for the pope's efforts to promote peace and interreligious harmony.

in our time. If you have any questions or need directions, contact St. Mark's Church at (704) 864-4531 or Dennis Teall-Fleming at (704) 825-9600, ext. 26, or teallfleming@yahoo.com.

BELMONT — Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St., will host a Supper-Study Series Dec. 17 in the Family Center. Dinner begins at 6 p.m. with children's activities at 6:30. Catechesis will take place time 6:45-7:30 p.m. Father Joe Zuschmidt will speak on the sacrament of reconciliation, in preparation for the parish Advent reconciliation service Dec. 16 at 7 p.m. in the church. For details, call Dennis Teall-Fleming at (704) 825-9600, ext. 26 or e-mail teallfleming@yahoo.com.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

MARION — Our Lady of the Angels, 258 North Garden St., will host a one-day retreat, "A Preparation for Christmas," Dec. 17, 9 a.m.-1 p.m. The guest speaker will be Father Thomas Selvaraj, pastor of Saint Joseph of the Hills Church in Eden. The retreat will consist of talks, reflections, exposition of Blessed Sacrament, reconciliation, Benediction and refreshments. For more information please call (828) 652-6851.

NEWTON — The Little Flowers Catholic Girls' Group is for all Catholic girls ages five and up. The group meets the fourth Monday of each month at St. Joseph Church, 720 West 13th St., at 4 p.m. in the Holy Family Hall. For more details, call Debbie Vickers at (828) 495-2039

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — St. Therese Catholic Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., will present the annual Advent Service of Lessons and Carols Dec. 17 at 7 p.m. This service will celebrate the preparation of the season through music and scripture by the Chancel Adult and Handbell Choirs and the Lake Norman Ensemble. Call the church office at (704) 664-3992 for more information.

MOORESVILLE — The adult enrichment program of St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., will present "The True Story of Birth of Jesus Christ" Dec. 21 at 10:15 a.m. For more information, call Tom Calabro at (704) 664-7762.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — In recognition of the ministry of Betsy Meehan, who is presently on sick leave from her position as music director of St. Leo the Great Church, the St. Leo choir will present "Encounters with Christ: A Celebration of the Birth, Passion, Death and Resurrection of Our Lord." The concert will be held on Dec. 14 at 2 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. Admission is free. For details call the church office at (336) 724-0561.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478

Episcopal calendar

Bishop Peter J. Jugis will participate in the following events:

December 21 — 11:30 a.m.
Transitional diaconate ordination Mass
St. Vincent de Paul Church, Charlotte

December 24 — Midnight
Christmas Eve Mass
St. Patrick Cathedral, Charlotte

December 25 — 11 a.m.
Christmas Mass
St. Patrick Cathedral, Charlotte

January 1 — 11 a.m.
New Year's Day Mass
St. Patrick Cathedral, Charlotte

Pope urges Catholics, Muslims to increase dialogue for peace

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — In a speech to Iranian Muslim leaders and in a letter to international Catholic organizations, Pope John Paul II urged renewed efforts to increase respect among peoples to build peace.

"Religion is, in fact, called to build bridges between individuals, peoples and cultures, to be a sign of hope for humanity," the pope told nine Iranian Muslim leaders participating in a Dec. 2 meeting at the Vatican.

The leaders, led by Ayatollah Mahmood Mohammadi Araqi, head of the Organization for Islamic Culture and Communications in Tehran, were participating in their fourth colloquium with members of the Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue. The meeting's theme, "Truth, Justice, Love, Freedom: Pillars of Peace," was taken from Blessed Pope John XXIII's encyclical, "Pacem in Terris" ("Peace on Earth").

"Today there is an especially urgent need for dialogue, understanding and cooperation between the world's great religions, especially Christianity and Islam," said the pope.

He asked the Iranian leaders and "all men and women of good will to join your voices with mine as I repeat that the holy name of God must never be used to incite violence or terrorism, to promote hatred or exclusion."

Asking God's blessings on all efforts to promote Catholic-Muslim cooperation for peace, the pope also prayed God would grant "to all mankind the courage and strength to embrace truth, justice, love and freedom as true pillars of peace."

In a message published Dec. 2 by the Vatican, the pope also encouraged Catholic organizations to take a more active role in building a culture of peace.

The Conference of International Catholic Organizations, which includes some 40 groups ranging from the International Catholic Conference on Scouting to the International Catholic Union of the Press, was meeting Nov. 30-Dec. 6 in Rome.

The pope told the group that building a culture of peace requires an awareness that human rights have corresponding human duties.

'You can't sleep in'

CNS PHOTO BY OWEN SWEENEY III, CATHOLIC REVIEW

"You can't sleep in, because if you do, you're buried," says Mary Maureen Shanklin, who is raising 15 children — 13 through adoption. She is pictured, seated at center, with her children outside their Baltimore home.

DID YOU KNOW?

FEAST OF OUR LADY OF GUADALUPE

The feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe, celebrated Dec. 12, celebrates the apparitions of Mary to a devout Nahua Indian, Juan Diego, on Tepeyac Hill in December 1531. Mary's message of hope was for a fusion of the two cultures, Spanish Catholic and Native American. As a result of the apparitions and the miracles attributed to Mary, 8 million Mexicans converted to Catholicism within a few years.

CORRECTION

Father Matthew Buettner was misidentified in a column headline in the Dec. 5 issue.

'A LIVING LEGACY'

Greensboro builder endows funds for St. Pius X Church

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

GREENSBORO — Roger Kavanagh is still finding ways to get it done.

"He was well known for his leadership in the business community and his concern for the citizens of Greensboro," said Msgr. Anthony Marcaccio, pastor of St. Pius X Church in Greensboro.

Kavanagh, a St. Pius X parishioner and leader in Greensboro's home building industry, died July 25, 2002. In his more than 30-year career, his company built 25,000 single-family homes and apartments in North and South Carolina.

"He was very successful in the business world, but you wouldn't know it from his demeanor," said Father George Kloster, pastor of St. Pius X Church from 1979 until 1988. "He was a quiet, private person."

He was also a supportive person, said Father Kloster, especially from behind the scenes.

"In all my years in Greensboro, I don't recall him being out front about anything, but he was very supportive of others," said Father Kloster. "If Kavanagh could offer (financial or moral) support to a project, he would."

"Mr. Kavanagh was a long-standing, generous and faith-filled member of our church who supported every major effort in our parish and diocese," said Msgr. Marcaccio.

"Catholicism was very engrained in his culture," he said. "He was always faithful to the church in his own quiet way."

Kavanagh helped build Dolan Manor, a housing complex for low-income seniors, on the property of St. Pius X Church.

"It had never been done in the diocese before," said Father Kloster, "(but) it happened, and part of it was because Roger was in the background encouraging to make it happen."

When he died, Kavanagh left money to various charities around Greensboro. Several years before his death, Kavanagh had met with Jim Kelley, director of the Foundation for the Diocese of Charlotte, to find a way to keep supporting his Greensboro parish after he was gone. Kavanagh decided to set up endowments to support St. Pius X.

"Mr. Kavanagh's estate has provided funds to endow our parish and its future needs, as well as provide our school with much-needed financial assistance for tuition," said Msgr. Marcaccio.

Those two endowments total more than $430,000.

An endowment is a permanent fund placed in the diocesan Foundation that earns income over time. The original amount is not spent, but the income can be used in a manner stipulated in a person's estate plan or in an endowment agreement, according to Kelley.

The Foundation is a non-profit organization established to provide endowments for the Diocese of Charlotte and its parishes, schools, agencies and organizations.

People in the diocese are giving not only of their current income, said Kelley, but more and more people are taking another step in stewardship by giving their cumulative assets to take care of the church.

"The endowments established in Mr. Kavanagh's name are a living legacy that will help us answer the call to ministry together," said Msgr. Marcaccio.

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

In addition to a bequest in a will — in which you can stipulate that the Foundation or named endowment receives a specific amount, a percentage of your estate, or remainder after other bequests are filled — there are five other primary ways to donate an endowment to the diocese, according to Gina Rhodes, diocesan director of planned giving. They are:

— Gifts of cash, securities or real estate.

— Gifts of life insurance, which allow you to make a gift that might be larger than if you were to give an asset outright. You can donate a paid policy that you already own, or you can purchase a policy to donate.

— Life income arrangements, in which allow you to make a gift during your lifetime while retaining and even increasing your income from those assets for the remainder of your life. This includes trusts and charitable gift annuities.

— Gifts from retirement plans, which you can designate your endowment as the remainder beneficiary of an IRA, 401K, or annuity to receive what is left in your retirement plan after your death.

— A gift of life estate in real property, which allows you to enjoy your home or vacation property during your lifetime, while giving you the satisfaction of knowing your church will benefit from the gift after your death.

To learn more about planned giving or to set up an endowment, call Jim Kelley at (704) 370-3301 or e-mail jkkelley@charlottediocese.org, or Gina Rhodes at (704) 370-3320 or e-mail gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org.

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

Beautiful Christmas items!

Christmas Cards, Nativity Sets,
Special Christmas Gifts & Books

www.carolinacatholicbooks.com

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road,
Charlotte, NC

We welcome mail orders and special orders!

UNCC Catholic campus ministry lends hands to society

BY COURTNEY CLIFFORD
SPECIAL TO THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CHARLOTTE — Imagine a world void of compassion; a place where no one attempts to feed the hungry, clothe the naked or shelter the homeless; a war-torn land free from peace promoters and volunteers.

Fortunately, this fictitious world could not succeed for long. In reality, there are compassionate volunteers and peace promoters who help the world stay afloat today.

The University of North Carolina at Charlotte's Catholic Campus Ministry is one group that, little by little, strives to make the world a better place.

"Our Catholic faith teaches us to use the gifts God gave us to help others," said Justin Schumacher, ministry intern. "We're taught that meeting human needs comes before satisfying our desires for luxuries."

Catholic Campus Ministry's devotion to service projects demonstrates its efforts to help the less fortunate. Group members have raised life-saving dollars for the American Cancer Society by participating in its signature event, Relay For Life.

In November, the group constructed a house for a low-income family through Habitat for Humanity. The ministry's members have also participated in food and clothing drives, recycling programs and services for the Catholic Church.

In addition to these corporal works of mercy, Catholic Campus Ministry members aid others through spiritual works of mercy. The spiritual works of mercy are counseling the doubtful, instructing the ignorant, admonishing sinners, comforting the afflicted, forgiving offenses, bearing wrongs patiently and praying for the living and the dead.

"We try to lend a helping hand to those less fortunate," said student-leader Josh Hallingse. "We can truly see the love of God in our everyday lives when people come together and put their good deeds into action by simply helping."

Although the university's Catholic Campus Ministry members can't move mountains or turn tree leaves into money, they can help improve the quality of life for some people.

All they have to do is remember the words of Dorothy Day, co-founder of the Catholic Worker Movement: "We can, to a certain extent, change the world; we work for the oasis, the little cell of joy and peace in a harried world. We can throw a pebble in a pond and be confident that its ever-widening circle will reach the world."

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

To learn more about Catholic Campus Ministry at UNC-Charlotte, visit www.uncc.edu/catholic_community, or e-mail Josh Hallingse at joshhallingse@hotmail.com.

ANOTHER BLESSING FROM LOURDES

PGA Golf Pro Ron Garcia, member of Immaculate Conception Church, tells of a religious experience that led to a cure for asthma and year-round allergies. By sharing the story of his spiritual enlightenment, he hopes to help others with similar ailments.

For a copy of his complete manuscript, mail check or money order for $14 (includes handling) to:
Ron Garcia, PO Box 1817, Hendersonville, NC 28793 Visit www.rglourdes.com

Ever wonder how to answer kids, relatives or neighbors about Catholic traditions? Do you know if Noah and the Ark is real history, or if your dog will go to heaven? Which came first: the Bible or the Church? If not, then you'll want to read the brand new book

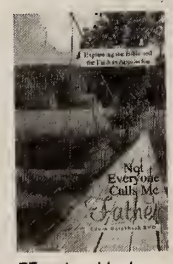
"Not Everyone Calls Me FATHER"

Explaining the Bible and the Faith in Appalachia by Edwin Daschbach SVD



77 topics with photos
copyright 2004

"An interesting, well-written, clear and direct but warm and humorous explanation of Catholic traditions. Father Daschbach, pastor in a mission territory of few Catholics, bases his short essays on the best of Protestant and Catholic Scripture studies. With a photographer's eye, he draws his comparisons from the life he observes in the area. Father Daschbach's pastoral concern and love for the people shine through, making this book a people-friendly resource for answering fundamentalist claims against the Catholic Church."
— Father David Mayer, SVD Professor of American Literature, Japan

"This book is a significant contribution to a more accurate understanding of the Truth of Sacred Scripture among the Christian faithful, and I am happy to endorse it."
— +Bishop Bernard Schmitt Bishop of Wheeling-Charleston

ISBN 0-9664525-1-8
$8.95 (plus $3.95 shipping/handling ) - $12.90 total

Divine Word Missionaries
Appalachian Book Order #2
PO Box 6099
Techny, Illinois 60082-6099

Phone orders: (800) 828-8738 Fax orders: (847) 272-8572 e-mail: info@svdmissions.org

SEEKING LA POSADA

Sacred Heart students reenact Holy Family's search for shelter

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

SALISBURY — Mary and Joseph knocked on each door, Joseph asking for shelter for his pregnant wife and himself. In each classroom of Sacred Heart Catholic School, they were turned away, told there was no room for them. Nine times they sang their request, and nine times the refusal came back to the same tune.

Students at Sacred Heart School reenacted La Posada, a Mexican tradition that recollects Mary and Joseph's search for lodging on the eve of Jesus' birth, for nine days beginning Dec. 9. La Posada means inn or lodging in Spanish.

Commemorating the Holy Family's journey to Bethlehem, the origins of La Posada can be traced back to St. Ignatius Loyola in the 16th century. He suggested a Christmas novena, and in 1580 St. John of the Cross made a religious pageant out of the proceedings. Seven years later the nine-day remembrance was introduced to the Indians in Mexico by Spanish missionaries.

Kathleen Miller, principal of Sacred Heart School, decided to celebrate La Posada this year as a way of preparing the students for Christmas by teaching them about novenas and other cultures' traditions. A different pair of eighth-graders are taking on the roles of Mary and Joseph each of the nine days.

"Instead of getting (the students) ready for Santa, we're getting them ready for Jesus," Miller said.

Maria Rivera, who portrayed Mary the first day of Sacred Heart's La Posada, took part in La Posada seven times in her native Honduras.

"(As Mary and Joseph) it's hard, to need something and be turned away," Rivera said.

On the ninth day, Dec. 19, Mary and Joseph will be welcomed into one of the classrooms and a Mexican family from Sacred Heart School will provide traditional Mexican treats for the students.

Father Julio Dominguez, parochial vicar for Sacred Heart Church and a native of Mexico, translated the La Posada songs into English. Cynthia Desch, second-grade teacher at Sacred Heart School, taught the songs to the students.

Students also learn about the anticipation of waiting to see who will eventually welcome them and give them la Posada, Miller said.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

PHOTOS BY KAREN A. EVANS

Eighth-graders Maria Rivera and John Simpson portray Mary and Joseph on the first day of Sacred Heart School's La Posada reenactment Dec. 9. Over nine days, different students will play the couple seeking lodging to commemorate the Holy Family's journey to Bethlehem. La Posada, a Mexican tradition, can be traced back to the 16th century.

Holy Trinity student to run in National Junior Olympics

CHARLOTTE — Alex Focht, 13, will compete in the National Junior Olympics Cross Country 2003 Championships to be held in Albuquerque, N.M., Dec. 13.

Focht, a seventh-grader at Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School in Charlotte, is an honor student and year-round swimmer on the New South Swim Team.

She qualified for the National Junior Olympics after placing ninth in the USA Track & Field state meet and then 19th in regional competition for cross country.

Happy Holidays from
Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Interest Rate: 3.75%
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

Consolidate High-interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

No Payment until February 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams this holiday season.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News & Herald."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection Lowest Prices

Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction! C'mon in and see why!

WELCOMING THE STRANGER

Government looking to reach out to immigrants with new assistance

BY PATRICIA ZAPOR
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The federal agency charged with settling immigrants will enlist churches and community organizations to provide a range of services to help newcomers with the transition to life in the United States.

Alfonso Aguilar, chief of the new Office of Citizenship under the Department of Homeland Security, said in November that in the next six months his agency would launch a test run of a program that follows the models of Canada and Australia when it comes to helping new immigrants adjust to the country.

Among the differences between the current U.S. approach and that of the other countries are things as simple as providing basic information would-be immigrants need in an easy format on agency Web sites, and efforts such as Canada's practice of pairing new immigrants with Canadians who serve as mentors while they get settled.

Other aspects of the proposal would include having community groups and churches provide classes in English, American history and U.S. culture, in addition to similar courses already directed at immigrants who are at the point of seeking naturalized citizenship.

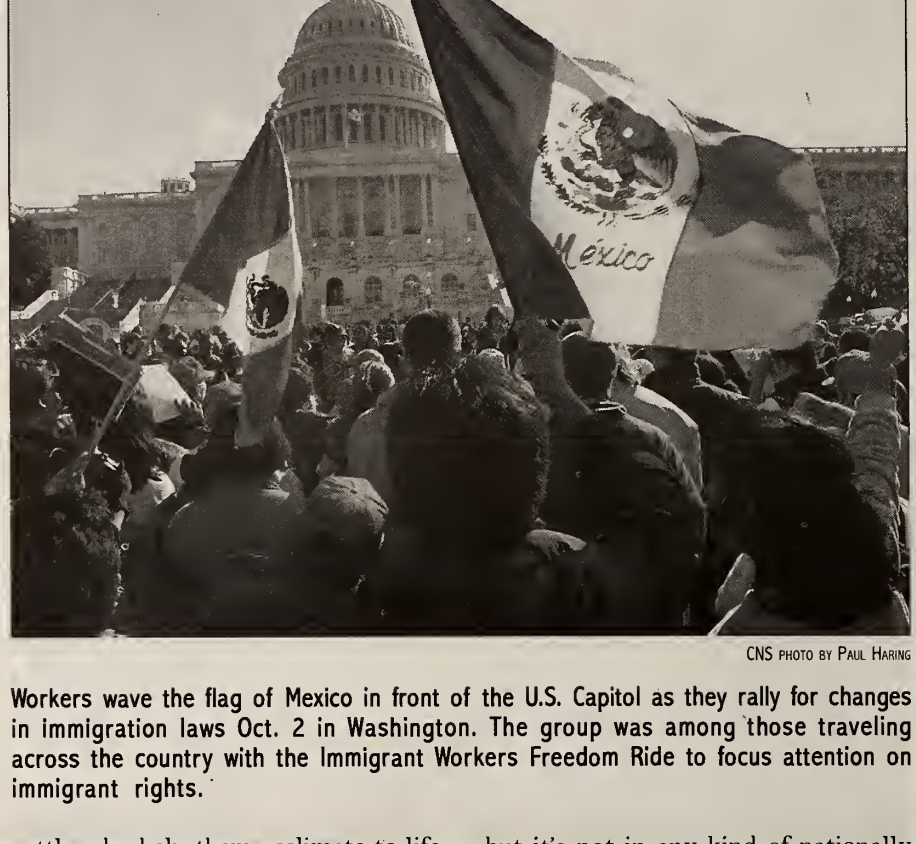
Aguilar told Catholic News Service he hopes to have a pilot program running in a handful of cities by March.

Mark Franken, director of Migration and Refugee Services for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, said he thinks Aguilar's concept is "right on."

"We've tried to influence the government on this in the past," he told CNS.

But he's concerned that there has been little mention of any financial resources to support the churches and community organizations being asked to provide a range of new services to immigrants.

Franken said he has argued for years that the government should provide all immigrants the kind of resettlement assistance it currently offers to refugees. That includes helping refugees find jobs, providing English classes and matching them with people in the communities where they settle who help them acclimate to life in the United States. Refugees also are given a monthly stipend for about eight months, as well as medical coverage and assistance in finding employment.



CNS PHOTO BY PAUL HARING

Workers wave the flag of Mexico in front of the U.S. Capitol as they rally for changes in immigration laws Oct. 2 in Washington. The group was among those traveling across the country with the Immigrant Workers Freedom Ride to focus attention on immigrant rights.

Refugees come to the United States after fleeing their homeland, typically because of war or natural disasters. Their status of being unable to remain in their own countries distinguishes them from the general immigrant population, including people who come to the United States to reunite with family members, for better jobs or for education.

Through MRS-affiliated programs in dioceses, the Catholic Church resettles more refugees than any other entity in the country. That work is largely funded by the federal government through grants.

MRS also provides a range of services, from legal aid to pastoral programs for migrants, for other kinds of immigrants.

Franken said he believes some of the kinds of services Aguilar is promoting are currently being offered to other immigrants through parishes and dioceses operating on their own, but it's not in any kind of nationally coordinated system, as Aguilar envisions.

Aguilar said he thinks such efforts will help newcomers become more integrated into their new home.

"Many people arrive skeptical of government," he said. "The Canadians have found that this helps them understand how government functions in a place where government actually functions well."

He said the Canadian experience after 30 years of this kind of outreach has been that immigrants' perceptions of how government works is dramatically better because of the outreach.

Retired Jesuit's modesty belies efforts on behalf of world's refugees

WASHINGTON (CNS) — It shouldn't have come as a surprise to those gathered to honor Jesuit Father Frank Moan at the National Migration Conference in Washington this summer that he was a no-show.

A modest man, the founder of Jesuit Refugee Service USA and "Refugee Voices," an educational radio program about refugee life, can be engaged in conversation for almost a full hour before mentioning his trip to Bosnia-Herzegovina in the early 1990s at the height of sniper activity in Sarajevo.

"That was probably the most daring thing I ever did, because I had to go in by a U.N. plane and I couldn't go in without a flak jacket and helmet," said the 76-year-old priest.

"At that time, even though you landed supposedly in a safe place," he added, "when the plane landed, we were told we had to run from the plane to the hangar."

It was for this work in Bosnia, and for his efforts on behalf of refugees in Cambodia, the Philippines, El Salvador, Jordan, Israel and around the globe that the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops and the Catholic Legal Immigration Network honored Father Moan.

CNS PHOTO FROM REFUGEE VOICES

Jesuit Father Frank Moan, right, holds a baby while visiting a refugee camp on the Thai-Cambodian border in this 1986 photo.

GREAT CHRISTMAS GIFT

THE "LAST KISS" OF YOUR LIFE

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

"'Last Kiss' by Richard Staley is the superbly written story of Patrick, an ordinary man who is always busy...perhaps too busy to give one last kiss to one near and dear to him. Yet an extraordinary angel shows him the importance of never taking people for granted in this often chaotic and ever-changing world. 'Last Kiss' is commended as an especially thoughtful, original, and heartwarming novel."

—James A. Cox, Editor-in-Chief, The Midwest Book Review

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

To order, mail check or money order to: Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

The Center is centrally located in the Piedmont of North Carolina. Located only an hour's drive from three major cities assures meeting planners and attendees a meeting that is more accessible than ever. Being accessible to the country and a peaceful setting is a meeting place only we can offer!

1551 Trinity Lane
Hickory, NC 28602

(828) 327-7441
Toll-free (888) 536-7441
info@catholicconference.org
www.catholicconference.org

Bishop Jugis to celebrate first ordination

Above are, from left to right, seminarians Timothy Reid, Robert Conway and John Starczewski who will ordained to the transitional diaconate at a Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte at 11:30 a.m. Dec. 21.

Three seminarians to become transitional deacons

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Bishop Peter J. Jugis will ordain three seminarians to the transitional diaconate at a Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte at 11:30 a.m. Dec. 21.

Those to be ordained are Timothy Reid, Robert Conway and John Starczewski.

Reid, a native of Martinsville, Ind., is the son of Gordon and Sharon Reid. He earned his bachelor's degree in 1988 from the University of Indiana and his master's degree in philosophy at Theological College of the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., and is presently concluding his studies at Immaculate Conception Seminary in Huntington, NY.

He has undergraduate and graduate degrees from Catholic University of America and was employed in the Office of Migration and Refugee Services of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington, D.C. prior to his acceptance as a seminarian for the Diocese of Charlotte.

Reid has served pastoral internships at St. Gabriel Church in Charlotte and St. Andrew Church in Mars Hill. He will return to the seminary in January 2004 to complete his final semester.

Robert Conway, a native of Moorestown, N.J., is the son of the late Thomas and Marion Reid Conway. Widowed in 1988, he was the husband of the late Joan Conway. A graduate of LaSalle College in Philadelphia, he worked for many as a corporate accountant in New Jersey before entering the seminary. He has prepared for the priesthood at Mount St. Mary's Seminary in Emmitsburg, Md. and at Blessed Pope John XXIII National Seminary in Weston, Mass.

Conway has served pastoral internships at St. Gabriel Church and Holy Infant Church in Reidsville. He will return to the seminary in January 2004 to complete his final semester.

John Starczewski, a native of Utica, N.Y., is the son of Evelyn and the late Francis Starczewski. He is a 1976 graduate of Clarkson University in New York with a bachelor's degree and earned a Masters of Business Administration in 1990 from the University of Wisconsin. He worked for several years in manufacturing research and development in western North Carolina. He is preparing for the priesthood at Blessed Pope John XXIII National Seminary.

Starczewski's pastoral assignments have been at Our Lady of the Assumption Church and St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte. He will return to the seminary in January 2004 to complete his final semester.

· Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

WANT TO GO?

Bishop Jugis will ordain three seminarians to the transitional diaconate Dec. 21 during a Mass at 11:30 a.m. at St. Vincent de Paul Church.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

THE BEST OF WALL STREET JUST DOWN YOUR STREET.
■ Stocks ■ Tax-Free Bonds
■ Mutual Funds ■ IRA's and Pension Plans
■ Government Securities ■ Annuities
■ Corporate Bonds ■ Money Management
FOR MORE INFORMATION, CONTACT:

Les Davaz
Member, St. Patrick
Financial Consultant
(800) 438-0397
(704) 331-2233
Visit me at www.fc.smithbarney.com/davaz
100 N. Tryon Street, Suite 3300
Charlotte, NC 28202
SMITH BARNEY citigroup
©2003 Citigroup Global Markets Inc. Member SIPC. Smith Barney is a division and service mark of Citigroup Global Markets Inc. and its affiliates and is used and registered throughout the world. CITIGROUP and the Umbrella Device are trademarks and service marks of Citicorp or its affiliates and are used and registered throughout the world.

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!
You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!
Call (704) 370-3332 now!
THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

The #1 Catholic Book in the Country and a #1 Amazon.com Bestseller
An Amazon.com Top Ten Inspirational Pick of the Year
This Christmas, Give the Gift of Heaven...
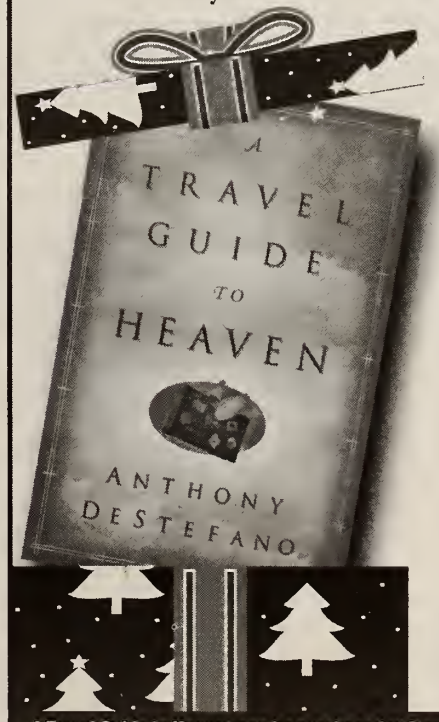
Have you ever lost someone you loved? Have you ever been afraid of death? Do you know someone whose spirits can use a lift this holiday season?



If the answer to any of these questions is yes, there is an amazing new book that has just been released by Doubleday that will make you feel better than you ever have in your entire life. It's called A Travel Guide to Heaven, and it is being hailed as a modern spiritual classic by top religious leaders as well as famous celebrities throughout the country.
Quincy Jones says: "This book is a work of joy, harmony and celebration. It's sure to inspire millions."
Regis Philbin says: "It will be the best trip you ever took."
Susan Lucci says: "I've never read anything like it before in my entire life. It's incredibly inspirational."
Fr. Benedict Groeschel says: "Amazingly lighthearted and engaging...Prayer provoking and thought provoking."
Raymond Arroyo of EWTN says: "An airy, whimsical tour of the great beyond. What a trip!"
Fr. John Catoir says: "It makes you feel heaven is more wonderful than we had ever hoped."
A Travel Guide to Heaven is the best gift you can ever give to anyone, because it is the gift of hope for eternal joy, excitement, youth, vitality, and Life! Give the gift of heaven to someone you love this Christmas.
A Travel Guide to Heaven can be purchased at Barnes&Noble.com, Amazon.com, or your local bookstore. Go to www.travelguidetoheaven.com to enter the Ticket to Heaven Sweepstakes. Win a FREE trip for two to Paradise Island in the Bahamas! Also find out about the FREE CHRISTMAS GIFT with every purchase!

Bishops told of national sex abuse response plans

CNS PHOTO BY BOB ROLLER

U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops' president Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Belleville, Ill., and National Review Board interim chairwoman Justice Anne Burke answer questions during the USCCB general meeting in Washington Nov. 11.

ABUSE, from page 1

pellate Court of Illinois, has headed the all-lay National Review Board since the resignation last June of its chairman, former Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating.

William Burleigh, a review board member and veteran communications professional with the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, told the bishops that nearly two months before the release of the two studies the board intends to release on Jan. 6 the first annual audit of dioceses. The audit will measure diocesan compliance or failure to comply with the mandates of the "Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People."

The charter, adopted by the bishops in June 2002, established the review board and the policies and procedures all dioceses must meet to assure that minors are protected from sexual abuse in church environments and that allegations of abuse are dealt with promptly and adequately.

William Gavin, a former FBI official and head of the Boston-based Gavin Group commissioned to audit compliance of all U.S. dioceses with the mandates of the bishops' charter, commended the bishops for their cooperation with his audit teams as they traveled the country in the past six months to investigate how well or poorly each diocese is meeting the charter mandates.

"It was difficult," he said. "Difficult for the clergy, as it was really the first time that the laity has had such in-depth access to the problem of sexual abuse of minors within each diocese. It was difficult for the auditors, as they worked very hard to uphold the principles of a valid audit and remain sensitive to the concerns of the victims and the clergy."

He said the audits, which typically lasted a week, required "comprehensive documentation" of what each diocese is doing to respond to allegations of sexual abuse, along with interviews with the local bishop, "diocesan personnel, victims, abusers, prosecutors and (diocesan) review board members."

Each diocesan audit ended with instructions if a diocese was found not in compliance with a charter mandate, recommendations if compliance with some segment of a mandate was deemed lacking, or commendations if the diocese "was determined to have addressed issues prior to the charter or had taken actions above the demands of the charter," Gavin said.

Gavin also reported that the diocesan audits had come in "under budget," with an average cost of $2,200 per auditor per audit, not counting travel costs.

Burke told the bishops that the National Review Board's interviews with a wide range of church officials, abuse victims and perpetrators, professionals in various fields and others represented a "pro bono" contribution of at least $500,000 by the law firm of board member Robert Bennett.

Archbishop Harry J. Flynn of St. Paul-Minneapolis, chairman of the bishops' Ad Hoc Committee on Sexual Abuse, urged bishops to participate in a process to develop candidates for replacement of the current members of the National Review Board, saying his committee and the board will soon offer suggestions for qualifications of future replacements of current members of the board.

At a press conference following the session, Bishop Wilton D. Gregory of Belleville, Ill., USCCB president, defended a recent comment in an interview with the Boston Globe daily newspaper in which he said the bishops have "turned the corner" on the sexual abuse issue.

He cited the progress the bishops have made in the past two years in removing priests from ministry who have sexually abused children, reaching out to victims for reconciliation, and taking other actions that signal a new seriousness about dealing with the problem.

"Turning the corner does not mean crossing the finish line," he said.

The U.S. church still has a long way to go to complete the job of protecting children and reaching out to victims of clerical sexual abuse of minors, but "we certainly have made significant progress" along that path, he said.

USCCB opposes proposal for over-the-counter emergency contraception

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration should reject a proposal to change the status of emergency contraceptives from prescription-only to available over the counter, according to the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

In comments filed with the FDA Dec. 5, the conference's general counsel, Mark Chopko, listed six reasons why the bishops object to the proposal to change the prescription category of levonorgestrel-only emergency contraception, known as EC in the documents.

The FDA has scheduled Dec. 16 meetings of two of its advisory committees to consider the reclassification. It invited written comments before the meeting of the Nonprescription Drugs Advisory Committee and the Advisory Committee for Reproductive Health Drugs.

Among the reasons cited by the USCCB for opposing the change are:

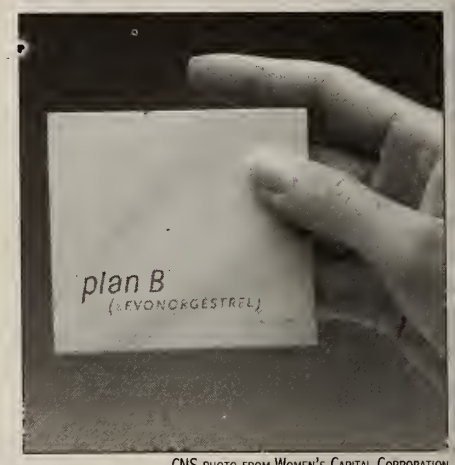
— The drug can be used as an abortifacient, rather than as contraception before fertilization. Chopko said making an abortifacient more readily available "would conflict with a trend in law and medicine which recognizes the human embryo as a human subject and a patient deserving of protection."

— Many women are unaware that the drug can work as an abortifacient. Making it available without requiring a physician to prescribe it "will only guarantee continued unawareness."

Catholic teaching rejects both artificial contraception and abortion, but it also distinguishes between the two: If a pill or device works only by preventing conception, it is a contraceptive; if it prevents the already fertilized egg from implanting in the womb or dislodges it from the womb, it is an abortifacient. Some methods can do either.

— Emergency contraception also carries significant risks, and should not be used by women with certain conditions, Chopko said. "Making EC available over the counter would eliminate the clinical oversight necessary to ensure that EC is not used routinely," his letter said.

For instance, clinical studies of the risks of emergency contraception have been based on occasional or one-time use, while over-the-counter availability might encourage more frequent use, the risks of which are unknown, he said.



CNS PHOTO FROM WOMEN'S CAPITAL CORPORATION

Women's Capital Corporation, makers of the emergency contraceptive Plan B, has petitioned the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to change the prescription category to over-the-counter availability. In a statement to the FDA Dec. 5, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops urged the agency to reject the proposal.

— "The potential for misuse of EC is especially grave in the case of minors," his letter said. Easy availability may increase risky sexual behavior by minors, who already have higher rates of sexually transmitted diseases than teens in other countries, it said.

— The drug is unlikely to significantly reduce the number of abortions, as has been found in regions where the drug is readily available.

— Pharmacists would be under increased pressure to violate their consciences by more readily providing a drug to which they may already have moral objections.

"Already, a bill in Nevada has been introduced to override pharmacists' moral or religious objections and require them to fill prescriptions for EC," Chopko wrote. The American Pharmacists Association has passed a resolution recognizing pharmacists' rights to exercise conscientious refusal to dispense certain drugs, he said.

The Catholic NEWS & HERALD

Can you answer "YES" to any of these questions?

1. Do you need a good buyer for a car, house, property, etc.?
2. Do you need a renter for a vacation place, house, or other property?
3. Do you need qualified employees for your business?
4. Does your church or organization need good employees?

If so, put THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD to work for YOU!
Over 125,000 READERS could see your classified ad in this paper every week - for only 60 cents per word ($12 minimum)!
CALL Cindi Feerick at (704) 370-3332 today!

Abortion: from anguish to self-forgiveness

ABORTION, from page 1

her, and she hadn't grasped what the abortion would do to her physically, emotionally or spiritually.

For more than a decade, Russo suffered from the emotional aftereffects of her abortion. She and the father of her baby broke up, and she slid into a lifestyle of drinking and drugs for the next 15 years.

"I has a sense of longing, that something was missing," Russo said. "I was missing God in my life."

Russo eventually quit her self-destructive lifestyle and confessed her abortion in the sacrament of reconciliation.

"Even though I had confessed, I couldn't forgive myself," she said. "I felt like I had a poison in my system, like I was disconnected."

In her early 30s and newly married, Russo returned to the Catholic Church, grasping for forgiveness and thought she was "doing all right."

Ready to finally have a family, Russo could not conceive. She was diagnosed with fibroid tumors and her obstetrician/gynecologist recommended a hysterectomy, a procedure that would eliminate any chance Russo had of conceiving and bearing her own children.

At an appointment prior to her surgery, her doctor told Russo she was late. Russo apologized for her tardiness.

"I'm always running late, so I kept saying 'I know I'm late, I'm sorry,'" she said. "The doctor said, 'No, you're late for your period.'"

Russo was finally pregnant again. She and her husband could now add their own child to their family, which included two daughters from his first marriage. But their happiness was short lived. Less than three months into her pregnancy, Russo suffered a miscarriage while on a business trip. It was virtually the same point at which she had aborted her first pregnancy.

"I was angry at God — I had been praying for children," said Russo. "I threw away that gift 26 years ago." She wondered if she was being punished.

Once again, Russo struggled with the pain of losing a child. But unlike the abortion, which pushed her and her teenage boyfriend apart, mourning her miscarriage drew Russo and her husband closer together. They became "spiritually intimate" because of the maturity of their faith, Russo said.

Russo also credits her doctor, Joseph Narins, with helping her heal following her miscarriage. A Christian, Narins has his new patients sign a consent form granting permission for him to pray for them.

"Dr. Narins dealt with the physical and emotional aftereffects of my miscarriage," Russo said. "When I had my abortion, I was alone. This time I had my husband and my doctor."

At the time, the Russo family was living in Greensboro and worshipped at St. Paul the Apostle Church. One Sunday, there was a notice in the church for a Rachel Network Evening of Prayer. Rachel Network is a ministry set up to provide a range of post-abortion services.

"I needed to get over the miscarriage, the abortion and my feeling of being punished," Russo said.

She first attended the Evening of Prayer service, then a Rachel's Vineyard weekend retreat, and felt the Holy Spirit working through her.

Rachel's Vineyard retreats are centered around Scriptural meditations, called "Living Scriptures" in which people listen to a passage of Scripture, such as Jesus meeting the woman at the well, and then imagine themselves in that story.

At the retreat, Russo said she realized Jesus' love and forgiveness for her, not his condemnation.

"I was able to meet Christ through the retreat," she said. "Thorough the Living Scriptures, I was able to reconcile with Christ and forgive myself."

Russo said the toxic poison she had felt for so long was finally gone. She truly forgave herself for her abortion.

"It's a wonderful experience to feel God's love and forgiveness," she said. She could visualize Jesus playing with her children in heaven.

"The child I aborted is not in some dark horrible place," said Russo. "He is with Christ. I did this horrible thing, but my child isn't being punished because of it."

"I still miss him," she said. "This would have been his 26th Christmas. I did not give him a chance to come into this world."

Russo said knowing that both of her sons are with Christ, she feels peace, not torment.

Now living with her family in Fort Worth, Texas and a member of Holy Redeemer Church in Aledo, Russo shares her experiences with abortion and miscarriage as a volunteer with Rachel's Vineyard.

"I see women come in (to a weekend retreat) angry, anguished and scared," said Russo. "They leave healed by the Holy Spirit — emotionally and physically changed. On Sunday, they are joyful."

Russo admitted that having an abortion was the most traumatic event in her life.

"It's a death that I chose," she said. "Grieving an abortion is a forbidden grief. You're supposed to feel anguishing guilt or empowerment, but you're not allowed to grieve. That's not like the death of a parent or sibling."

According to Planned Parenthood's Web site, "For most women who have had abortions, the procedure represents a maturing experience, a successful coping with a personal crisis situation (Lazarus, 1985; Zabin et al., 1989; Russo & Zierk, 1992; DeVeber et al., 1991). In fact, the most prominent emotional response of most women to first-trimester abortions is relief (Adler et al., 1990; Lazarus, 1985; Armsworth, 1991; Miller, 1996)."

When she decided to have her abortion, Russo said she lost her faith in God for a long time. She also believes the counselors at Planned Parenthood lied to her. They did not discuss options such as adoption or the long-term physical and emotional consequences.

"I lost those 15 years of not living my life, not being in control," Russo said. "Instead of surrendering to God's will, I tried to be in control of my own life."

Unlike many women, she did not suffer a major depression after her abortion. But she was thrown into an adult world she wasn't ready for.

Russo considers her teenage stepdaughters to be her children and hopes they will have better informed consent if they are ever faced with the choice of terminating a pregnancy. She was not told by Planned Parenthood counselors about the emotional consequences, increased likelihood of developing breast cancer or future miscarriages. She said she would tell them about the loss, depression and regret — that having an abortion is a tragic experience.

"If more post-abortive women would talk about the trauma of the experience, it would change society's view of abortion — it would make abortion more rare," said Russo. "It would be about individual women, instead of being a political issue."

Russo said churches need to support Rachel's Vineyard retreats because they work by providing a support network for women who have had abortions.

"Women who have had abortions are the best people to speak out about abortion," said Russo.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?
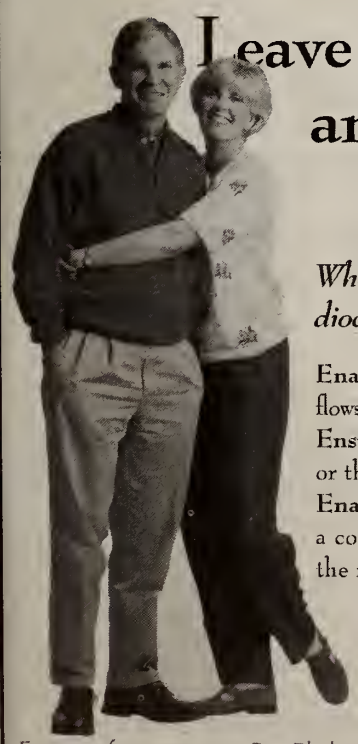
For more information about Rachel's Vineyard visit www.rachelsvineyard.org.



Leave a Legacy Through an Endowment

When you establish an endowment with the diocesan foundation, you...

Enable Perpetual Support. Every year, your "legacy" flows with financial aid to the ministry you choose.
Ensure a Strong Future. Allow a parish, school, agency or the diocese to look ahead and plan with confidence.
Enact a Lasting Legacy. Provide your loved ones with a continuing reminder of your values – your faith and the mission of the church.

The Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

For more information contact Gina Rhodes, Director of Planned Giving, 704-370-3320, or Jim Kelley, Director of Development, 704-370-3301, 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203, gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org

Home for the Holidays

We Can Share The Care!
Visiting Angels® can help put your family together this Holiday Season!

Visiting Angels® provides experienced caregivers to thousands of seniors each and every day across America.

You Select Your Caregiver!

Up to 24 Hour Care
Hygiene Assistance
Meal Preparation
Respite Family Care
Appointments / Errands
Rewarding Companionship
All Caregivers Thoroughly Screened

Bring Your Parents Home For The Holidays!

Call 704-549-4010

Visiting Angels® LIVING ASSISTANCE SERVICES

Learn more at: www.visitingangels.com/charlotte

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Four slices of American Catholic history

REVIEWED BY FRANK ALLEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Based on new historical research, these four books describe the arduous work of pioneering Catholic leaders in the early 19th century. These leaders overcame hardships of geographical distance and ethnic and racial prejudice to establish education and religious institutions and to make significant contributions to "the embattled life of the nascent Catholic Church in America," in the words of Jesuit priest and historian Father Thomas C. Hennessy.

The most comprehensive of these four histories is Diane Morrow's "Persons of Color and Religious at the Same Time," the inspiring story of the early years of the Oblate Sisters of Providence, the first permanent community of women religious of African descent.

The order, founded in Baltimore in 1828, is celebrating its 175th anniversary this year. The founding members were French-speaking "free women of color" who had fled the revolution in Haiti, then known as the French colony of St. Domingue. Morrow says that as the official seat of the Catholic Church in the United States Baltimore was a "logical haven for Catholics fleeing revolutions in France and the Caribbean." Many refugees from Haiti settled in the same city where the Sulpicians fleeing the French revolution had founded the first Catholic seminary.

With "unstinted zeal" the capable French Sulpician priest Father James Joubert directed and encouraged Oblate communal life. Morrow says Father Joubert advocated forcefully for the "right of black women — a doubly despised minority — to access to formal education." As teachers, nurses and convent superiors, these French Caribbean women strived for self-dignity in a restrictive society that denigrated all black women — slave or free — and kept adherence to celibacy in a time when women were urged to accept marriage and motherhood.

In 1847-1860, Oblate sisters broadened their "cultural identity" to include pastoral ministry to other black congregations. Their "genuine concern for the welfare of antebellum black Catholics" spread beyond the archdiocese to other parts of Maryland, the District of Columbia and New York and addressed spiritual and social needs of immigrants and other minorities. Morrow argues that an "assertive and confident black community" sustained this order through violence and political threats in the oppressive and sometimes violent pre-Civil War era.

The Oblate Sisters contradicted expectations of women of color, Morrow writes, by "forging a positive, assertive, and empowered communal self-image" that anticipated acceptance of black women by other religions and secular society by a half-century. The affirmation of humanity and high standards of "ethnic ecumenism" by this pioneering Southern black sisterhood is a remarkable achievement.

In "Uncommon Women, Unmarked Trails," Suzanne Schrems vividly depicts the "courageous journey" of women missionaries traveling to Montana and throughout the West to build and administer mission schools. Teaching Native American girls domestic skills and caring for the sick and needy, experiencing "hardship, sacrifice, and poverty," they established hospitals and orphanages. In doing so, they created new opportunities for women as "teachers, missionaries, and reformers" journeying down "unmarked trails" of frontier life.

Father Thomas J. Steele has annotated and edited the "Historical Sketch of the Catholic Church in New Mexico," which was written by Father James Defouri in 1887. Father Defouri was the secretary of the famous Archbishop Jean Baptiste Lamy, the subject of Willa Cather's novel, "Death Comes for the Archbishop." Correcting inaccuracies in Father Defouri's account, Father Steele shows how pioneering priests in the Southwest had to overcome a brutal climate, vast region, and entrenched traditional customs of Native Americans in the Land of Enchantment.

Father Hennessy's well-informed "How the Jesuits Settled in New York" brings to light fascinating documents from Jesuit archives, which illuminate the founding of Fordham University and other colleges in Kentucky, New York state and Canada. Using original historical sources (correspondence, diaries and manuscripts) from the 1840s and earlier, he chronicles how world-class colleges evolved from the hard work and inspiration of diverse individuals.

Concern for the quality of life of the community in the rapidly changing terrain of pre-industrial America took pragmatic toughness and devotion to the spiritual life. These accounts pay tribute to men and women from various ethnic and national backgrounds who established institutions that played a significant role in the equality and openness of American culture and education.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: DEC. 14, 2003

Dec. 14, Third Sunday of Advent

Cycle C Readings:
1) Zephaniah 3:14–18a
(Psalm) Isaiah 12: 2-3, 4, 5-6
2) Philippians 4:4-7
3) Luke 3:10-18

BY JEANE DENTON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Emily, Katie and Amie, best friends, were off to the inner-city soup kitchen. In my mind's eye, I could imagine those three "bopping" into the dining area and raising the enthusiasm level with their teenage fun-loving attitude. Peppy, popular varsity athletes, they'd recently been taken down a notch by a minor incident at school, for which they were required to perform community service. So when the opportunity came to serve a Sunday dinner at the soup kitchen together, they happily signed on.

Later that evening, Emily and Katie were responsible for our church youth group's prayer activity. As their youth director, I offered ideas for a nice reflection on Thanksgiving and Eucharist. They worked on it, then told me: "We're also going to get Amie to tell about going to the soup kitchen this afternoon. It was so cool, and we just want everybody to know about it."

There could've been no better prayer than what Amie gushed: "The three of us went to the soup kitchen today and we had the best time! Omigosh, you wouldn't believe! We talked to so many people, and then afterward, we talked to this one man — about the Redskins (football team)! I swear, we just sat and talked for an hour after lunch, we were having such a good time. And it made his day."

It was true. They had stayed an extra hour to talk because they enjoyed being with this man so much.

After the prayer that night I stopped Amie on her way to class. "It sounds like it made your day, too," I said.

She put her hand on my shoulder, "Like no other! You would not believe!"

I believed. The three girls had an experience they couldn't keep inside. They had to share it so that their friends might go and see for themselves.

That's the Advent answer to the Gospel's question by the people: "What should we do?"

Go out, as Amie did. Go out, and "share with the person who has none," and you'll realize, as she did, what the prophet Zephaniah foretold, "The Lord, your God, is in your midst, a mighty savior; he will rejoice over you with gladness and renew you in his love."

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 14 - DECEMBER 20

Sunday (Third Sunday of Advent), Zephaniah 3:14-18a, Philippians 4:4-7, Luke 3:10-18; Monday (Advent Weekday), Numbers 24:2-7, 15-17a, Matthew 21:23-27; Tuesday (Advent Weekday), Zephaniah 3:1-2, 9-13, Matthew 21:28-32; Wednesday (Late Advent Weekday), Genesis 49:2, 8-10, Matthew 1:1-17; Thursday (Late Advent Weekday), Jeremiah 23:5-8, Matthew 1:18-25; Friday (Late Advent Weekday), Judges 13:2-7, 24-25a, Luke 1:5-25; Saturday (Late Advent Weekday), Isaiah 7:10-14, Luke 1:26-38

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 21 - DECEMBER 27

Sunday (Fourth Sunday of Advent), Micah 5:1-4, Hebrews 10:5-10, Luke 1:39-45; Monday (Late Advent Weekday), 1 Samuel 1:24-28, Luke 1:46-56; Tuesday (Late Advent Weekday), Malachi 3:1-4, 23-24, Luke 1:57-66; Wednesday (Late Advent Weekday), 2 Samuel 7:1-5, 8-11, 16, Luke 1:67-79; Thursday (The Nativity of the Lord), Isaiah 52:7-10, Hebrews 1:1-6, John 1:1-18; Friday (St. Stephen), Acts 6:8-10; 7:54-59, Matthew 10:17-22; Saturday (St. John), 1 John 1:1-4, John 20:2-8

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS
1 Make up
6 Middle East country
11 Reddish blue
13 ___ of fish
14 Great ending
15 __ crossing
16 Sun god
17 Airplane
18 Blood factor
19 Make ready
22 Spanish is
23 Aroma
25 Reed musical instrument
27 MSN rival
28 Mound
31 DIII + DCI
32 Margarine
33 Lucy's husband
34 Perceive
37 Shakesperean villain
38 Biblical part
41 Dominican
43 Expecting
44 That is
46 Bone
48 Trendy
49 The __ of Piglet
50 Tolkien creature
51 Interested
53 Biblical city
55 "The game is ___"
56 Leaven

DOWN
1 Assert
2 Plate
3 Abraham's nephew
4 State abbreviation
5 Baseball player Yogi
6 Crave
7 Spielberg movie
8 Everest and McKinley
9 Instead
10 Nabs
12 Trillion prefix
13 Elephant enclosure
19 Sneak peek
20 Expert
21 Resounding
23 Cheat
24 Israel seaport
25 British pop group ("If You Leave")
26 Biblical time abbr. (var.)
29 Limb
30 Lavatory
34 Police member
35 Munch
36 Gives out
39 Holy person
40 Foe
41 Marine mammal
42 French singer
44 Taverns
45 French state
47 Sis' sibling
50 Epoch
52 Jupiter moon
54 Archaic pronoun

For the best prices around, come visit
CELTIC JEWELERS
Gloria & Wayne Moore, owners
(parishioners of St. Michael's)
Artist on premises specializes in family crests and Celtic design rings.
10-6 M-F
10-4 Sat
704-861-8777
2503 E. Ozark Avenue
Gastonia
Beautiful custom crosses
Religious medals
Gold, silver, diamonds and unique custom work!
Prompt repairs!

2003's top movies, Santa style

— by DAVID DiCERTO
Catholic News Service

'Twas the night before Christmas
And all through the land
All the theaters were empty
'Cause the movies were bland.

The studio execs were tucked in their beds
While visions of Oscars danced in their heads.
While Ma in her kerchief and I in my cap
Were perched on the sofa, the remote on our lap.

We checked local listings, we even checked twice
But most shows were naughty, and too few were nice.
We surfed through the stations, and what did we see?
Tabloid-style tell-alls and reality TV.

When up on the roof I heard a loud swish,
I jumped up and moaned, "Not that darn satellite dish!"
When what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer.

With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
Was it a "Queer Eye" guy, or jolly St. Nick?
No sooner down the chimney did he appear,
Than he informed me he's changed his career.

He said with a sigh, "I'm old and arthritic,
I'm giving up toys, I'm now 'Santa Critic.'"
So, just which movies did make Santa's Top 10?
I'll give you a hint: None starred J-Lo and Ben.

"'Finding Nemo' was great, 'Big Fish' ranked quite high,
'Spellbound' is a gem, 'Seabiscuit' made Rudolph cry.
'Master and Commander' is up there, so's 'Return of the King,'
Perhaps 'Mystic River' or 'The Triplets of Belleville's' your thing.

"While 'Cold Mountain' and 'Last Samurai' have grand scope and size,
In truth, 'Winged Migration' should take home the prize.
More films to see before my work is done,
But could you give my red suit to Paris Hilton?

"Such a request, I know, sounds rather bold,
But from what I hear, she might be quite cold."
Then I heard him exclaim, as he drove out of sight,
"Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night!"

St. Patrick Cathedral
The Very Rev. Paul Gary, Rector
Rev. Mr. Nicholas Fadero, Deacon
Rev. Lawrence LoMonaco, Parochial Vicar
Rev. Mr. Carlos Medina, Deacon

CHRISTMAS EVE MASSES
4 p.m. - Children's Mass
6 p.m. - Children's Mass
Midnight - Bishop Peter Jugis

CHRISTMAS DAY MASSES
8 a.m., 9:30 a.m.
11 a.m. - Bishop Peter Jugis

NEW YEAR'S EVE MASS
Midnight Mass
Doors open at 11:00 p.m.
Bishop William Curlin

NEW YEAR'S DAY MASSES
9 a.m.
11 a.m. - Bishop Peter Jugis

1621 Dilworth Road East
Charlotte, NC 28203 (704) 334-2283
Visit our website at www.stpatricks.org

Come celebrate the Birth of Our Savior.

THE KING OF ALL TRILOGIES

CNS PHOTO FROM NEW LINE CINEMA

The battle for the Ring of Power comes to life in the film version of J.R.R. Tolkien's "The Lord of the Rings: Return of the King."

All good things ...

'Return of the King' is grand conclusion to epic trilogy

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — The king has indeed returned.

In "The Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King" (New Line), the title refers to Aragorn, the reluctant warrior who assumes his kingship to help defeat the evil forces of Sauron from conquering Middle-earth.

But the king's return also refers to the arrival of the much-anticipated third and final epic installment of J.R.R. Tolkien's classic fantasy trilogy "The Lord of the Rings." The first two films — "The Fellowship of the Ring" and "The Two Towers" — are among the highest grossing movies in box office history. They have taken in a combined $1.8 billion.

This is credited to the apparent king of all directors, Peter Jackson, who has once again orchestrated an army of technicians and crew and a cast of thousands, seamlessly blending live action and cutting-edge digital effects in bringing to life a timeless fable of the eternal struggle between good and evil.

With an epic price tag of $300 million for the trilogy, New Line has a lot riding on the film's ability to not only work similar magic at the box office as its predecessors did, but bring a satisfying conclusion to the classic story.

It's safe to say this "King" will rule with a golden crown.

"The Return of the King" begins where the last film left off. Valiant Aragorn (Viggo Mortensen) and his companions — reborn wizard Gandalf (Ian McKellan), elfin archer Legolas (Orlando Bloom) and bellicose dwarf Gimli (John Rhys-Davies) — joined forces with the people of Rohan to repel invading Uruk-hai orcs. Pippin (Billy Boyd) and Merry (Dominic Monaghan), hobbits of the Shire, led Treebeard (voice of John Rhys-Davies) and the tree shepherd Ents to victory over the corrupt wizard Saruman (Christopher Lee).

And Frodo (Elijah Wood), on whose shoulders the fate of all Middle-earth rests, continues his arduous trek toward shadowy Mordor to destroy the evil One Ring in the fires of Mount Doom with fellow hobbit and trusted friend, Sam Gamgee (Sean Astin) and a not-so-trustworthy guide Gollum (Andy Serkis), a pathetic, mercurial creature, himself warped by the Ring.

From his tower fortress of Baraddur, the dark lord, Sauron, who forged the Ring ages before, has set his malicious will on reclaiming it, and wielding its power to master all of Middle-earth.

This film brings together mostly all of the players, including Rohan's king Theoden (Bernard Hill) and shield maiden Eowyn (Miranda Otto) in an impossible battle against Sauron's vast armies marching on the capital of Gondor. Spectacular visual effects have helped create some of the most impressive combat sequences on film, but it is Jackson's understanding and love of the characters that makes the action so compelling.

Sacrifice seems to be a common thread among many of the players, and Jackson makes us feel every emotion as if we were standing beside them. And while Aragorn and company wage war against impossible odds, Frodo and Sam's grueling climb up the lava-covered slopes of Mount Doom is a true test of determination and character. It is the strength of the friendship of two little hobbits that will either bring victory or defeat for the people of Middle-earth.

As much of the previous "Ring" film's box-office appeal were generated by the effects and epic scope, Tolkien — a lifelong, devout Catholic — chose to emphasize the underlying religious concepts as the wellspring of his story's lasting appeal.

While borrowing heavily from classical Celtic and Norse mythology for inspiration, especially the Icelandic sagas, it is orthodox Catholic theology that forms the bedrock upon which the various themes explored are built.

True to the spirit of the book, Jackson incorporates several such themes into the films. Like in "The Two Towers," "The Return of the King" is a veritable passion play, with Frodo serving as a Christ figure, bearing the Ring, an emblem of sin, like a cross on his own Via Dolorosa — selflessly exercising free will, willing to sacrifice even his life so others might live.

The Ring symbolizes the Catholic understanding of the parasitic nature of evil. The Ring, in and of itself, has no power beyond its subtle but potent ability to corrupt the desires of all who come in contact with it.

Gandalf who was seemingly killed in the "The Fellowship of the Ring," was resurrected and transfigured as an ethereal Christ-like figure in "The Two Towers." Other motifs included the redemption of sinners (Gollum), communion with nature versus materialistic industrialization, death and immortality. Even the Elfin "Lembas bread," which sustains Frodo and Sam throughout their trials, echoes the Eucharist.

The story's overall message of hope in strife, and the ultimate victory of light and goodness over darkness are as reassuring to our troubled times as they were when Tolkien wrote it during the horrors of the Second World War.

Fans of the books and previous films should not be disappointed by the trilogy's conclusion, although true aficionados will suspect some scenes may have been cut despite the film's three-and-a-half hour running time. In the end, however, remains a thrilling cinematic experience that people — and even hobbits — will talk about for a long time.

Due to many gory scenes of battle violence with several frightening images, the Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

David DiCerto of Catholic News Service contributed to this story.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CAREGIVERS: Experienced, compassionate caregivers wanted for senior home care, south Charlotte area. Top pay and good working conditions. Call 704-321-2240

CERTIFIED NURSING ASSISTANTS: Warm and caring for home care assignments in greater Charlotte area. Full-time and part-time. Call 704-945-7177.

DIOCESAN CAMPUS MINISTRY/Adjunct Catholic Chaplin: For Davidson College. Graduate theology training required. Send resume, three reference letters, cover letter to: Mary Wright, Director of Campus Ministry, 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203-4003 by January 9.

PRINCIPAL: St. Anthony of Padua Catholic grade school, Southern Pines, NC is accepting curriculum vitae for the position of principal. School curriculum is faithful to the magesteruim of the Church. Applicants must have master's degree and be state certified in education. Salary commensurate with experience. Please send Curriculum vitae to: The Very Reverend Jeffrey A. Ingham, V.F., St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church, 175 E. Connecticut Avenue, Southern Pines, NC 28387

FOR SALE

HOME: Senior Citizens Community. Lake Norman area. 2 bedrooms, kitchen, living room, dining area, 2 bathrooms. Interior completely updated. Community has lots of friendly people. Call owner: 704-662-9318.

FSBO: Brick Executive Home. 2758 Sq Ft., 4 BR, 3 full BR, bonus room, many upgrades inside and out. 30 minutes to uptown Charlotte, NOT using Interstate. Asking $295,000. 5205 Featherstone Ct., Gastonia. 704-824-9099 Nights.

FOR RENT

RETAIL STORE: 800 square foot building in Chimney Rock, NC in the heart of thriving tourist village. $1000/month. Call Peter O'Leary (828) 625-2479.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Applications invited for local poverty grants

CHARLOTTE — The Diocese of Charlotte's office for the Catholic Campaign of Human Development is accepting grants for the 2004 funding year.

CCHD makes small grants from $500 to $5,000 to organizations without regard to religious affiliation. Applications must be postmarked by Feb. 16, 2004.

Established in 1970 as the U.S. bishops' domestic anti-poverty program, CCHD is a response to the biblical call for justice for those who are poor. The Diocese of Charlotte CCHD committee solicits programs and projects that:

— seek to affect the root causes of poverty in the target community;

— involve genuine participation of the people served in the planning and decision-making of the sponsoring organization;

— indicate potential for institutional change, empowerment of the people and community involved, and the development of local leadership; and;

— conform to Catholic social teaching.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For an application, contact Terri Jarina by writing Terri Jarina, Diocesan Director, CCHD, Office of Justice and Peace, 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte N.C. 28203-4003; or calling (704) 370-3234.

To obtain the application as an e-mail attachment in a Word document, send an e-mail request to thjarina@charlottediocese.org. The application is also available online at www.cssnc.org/justicepeace.

Father Paquet, former St. Peter parochial vicar, dies

PHILADEPHIA, Pa. — Jesuit Father Robert Joseph Paquet, former parochial vicar of St. Peter Church in Charlotte, died Dec. 2, 2003, at Manresa Hall Assisted Living Facility in the Jesuit Community at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia, Pa. He was 87.

A Mass of Christian Burial took place in the chapel of St. Joseph's University Dec. 6.

Father Paquet was born in St. Romald, Province of Quebec, Canada, Sept. 2, 1916. He entered the Society of Jesus (Jesuits) Sept. 7, 1932 at St. Andrew-on-Hudson Novitiate in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where he made his initial ascetical and literary studies until 1936.

On completion of his A.B. and licentiate in philosophy from Woodstock College, Md., in 1939, Father Paquet was assigned to teach at St. Joseph's Preparatory School in Philadelphia from 1939 until 1942. He then returned to Woodstock for theological studies and was ordained to the Catholic priesthood by Bishop John McNamara June 17, 1945. Father Paquet made profession and last vows in the Jesuit Order at the Church of the Gesu in Philadelphia Feb. 2, 1950.

He spent several years performing both teaching and ministerial duties in Pennsylvania and Maryland. In 1989, Father Paquet's attention turned to the Jesuit apostolate in Appalachia when he was appointed parochial vicar of St. Peter Church in Charlotte, where he served faithfully for the next 13 years.

By 2002, declining health prompted Father Paquet's retirement to the Manresa Hall Assisted Living Facility. There, he exercised his apostolate of prayer for the Society of Jesus and the Catholic Church until his death. He is survived by a sister, Marguerite B. Paquet of Havertown, Pa.

Condolences may be sent to:
Ms. Margaret B. Paquet
Haverford Arms, Apt. 21A
66 South Eagle Road
Havertown, Pa 19083

Memorial contributions may be sent in Father Paquet's name to:
The Jesuit Seminary and Mission Bureau
C/O Jesuit Community
261 City Ave.
Merion Station, Pa. 19066

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530
Assuring Absolute Integrity
Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535
Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

Welcoming a shepherd

COURTESY PHOTO BY REGINA MILLER

Bishop Peter J. Jugis celebrates a Mass during his Albemarle Vicariate celebration at St. James Church in Hamlet Dec. 1. From left: Benedictine Father David Draim, Rev. Mr. Jesus Reyes, Father Ricardo Sanchez, Bishop Jugis, Augustinian Father James Cassidy, Father Lawrence Heiney and Benedictine Father Patrick Shelton.

BISHOP JUGIS HONORED IN ALBEMARLE VICARIATE

HAMLET — Bishop Peter J. Jugis celebrated the Mass at the Albemarle Vicariate celebration held in his honor at St. James Church in Hamlet Dec. 1.

The bishop has attended similar celebrations held in all 10 vicariates of the Diocese of Charlotte since his Oct. 24 ordination and installation as bishop.

The other nine vicariates are: Asheville, Boone, Charlotte, Gastonia, Greensboro, Hickory, Salisbury, Smoky Mountain and Winston-Salem.

The Albemarle Vicariate consists of St. James Church, Our Lady of the Annunciation Church in Albemarle, Our Lady of the Americas Church in Biscoe, Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Monroe and Sacred Heart Church in Wadesboro.

Each parish's choir participated in the Mass, as well as a children's bi-lingual choir.

Bishop Jugis, speaking in both English and Spanish, spoke of the diversity of cultures in the parishes and stressed how they can all learn from each other.

Catholic Social Services
Western Regional Office

Is currently seeking an Office Director for the western regional office in Asheville. This position's responsibilities include the supervision of staff and the delivery of programs including immigration services, refugee resettlement, counseling, international and domestic adoption; development and maintenance of relationships with the community and other agencies; identification of community needs and planned agency growth in response to those needs; development of financial and volunteer support in the community and service on the Management Team of Catholic Social Services of the Diocese of Charlotte, Inc. Qualifications include master's degree in social work or a related human service field and three years of experience in supervision and/or administration of social services programs.

Send resume and cover letter by January 5, 2004 to:
CSS/WRO
ATTN: Elizabeth Thurbee
50 Orange Street
Asheville, 28801

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Faith, state and fatherhood

How faith can offer strength during crisis

Looking Around

FATHER WILLILAM J. BYRON, SJ

This could be considered a Fathers' Day story, but it's worth telling now to get parents thinking about spending time with their children at Christmas.

Former Pennsylvania Governor and U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh was the dinner speaker at Princeton Theological Seminary during a recent seminar on "Faith, Ethics and the Law." Panel discussions earlier in the day encouraged participants, mostly lawyers, to reflect on the relevance of their religious faith to a variety of ethical challenges in life and law. Thornburgh's speech was titled "The Role of Faith in Decision Making."

His approach was personal. His thoughts were influenced by the launch that evening of his autobiography, "Where the Evidence Leads" (University of Pittsburgh Press). Written originally as a narrative to be shared with his children and grandchildren, the writer received encouragement to publish it for a broader audience. Many will be glad he did.

Politically, he had to deal with the Three Mile Island disaster in his first year as Pennsylvania's governor. He commented how much his faith had influenced his decision making in that unprecedented moment of crisis.

Personally, he had, at age 28, to deal with the death of his 26-year-old wife Ginny in an automobile crash, minutes after she and their three young sons had delivered their dad to his downtown Pittsburgh law office for what would otherwise have been an ordinary day's work. The boys were not yet school age; the youngest, Peter, was just 4 months old. The two older boys, John and David, survived the crash without serious injury; Peter, who suffered multiple skull fractures, nearly died. Faith kept this family together.

Thornburgh spoke movingly of Peter that evening at Princeton and spoke with gratitude to God for Ginny Judson, who, three years after that tragic day in 1960, became the second Ginny Thornburgh. The boys had a new mother; she formally adopted them one year later. Not long after, she and Thornburgh presented the boys with their new baby brother Bill.

Peter, whose mental capacity remains limited as a result of the brain trauma he suffered in the accident, became, said Thornburgh, "the conscience of the family, somehow bringing out our very best. Through him we learned to be more tolerant and appreciative of diversity and more committed to the general welfare of persons with disabilities."

When his parents moved into the governor's home in Harrisburg, Peter, age 19, and his other brothers moved in with them. Dick and Ginny soon noticed the attentive house staff and the friendly and ever-present state troopers, there to provide security and transportation, were doing so much for the likable Peter that his self-reliance skills began to erode and the household chores that had served to build up his self-esteem were disappearing.

Trusting in God, they decided it would be best to move Peter into supervised living in a nearby group home where he would share common facilities with other clients and participate in some kind of protected workshop employment.

Peter, now 43, tells people he "works for the poor," a reference to his regular volunteer service at the Community Food Bank in Harrisburg. Occasionally he spends weekends with his parents in Washington. And that brings me to the point of the story.

Father and son spent time together recently at the Washington Zoo. At the end of the day, Dick, with elephants, tigers and giraffes in mind, asked Peter, "What did you like best?" Peter looked at his dad and said, "Being with you."

Amen, everybody!

E-mail: wbyron@loyno.edu.

Pope, at audience, says God intervenes in history to save oppressed

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — God watches over each person and all peoples, intervening to save those who are oppressed and to judge those who do evil, Pope John Paul II said.

"God is present in history, taking the part of the just and of victims," he said Dec. 10 at his weekly general audience.

Continuing a series of audience talks about the psalms and canticles used in the church's evening prayer, the pope focused on a hymn of praise from the Book of Revelation.

"Our prayer," he said, "must invoke and give praise for divine action, for the effective justice of the Lord and for his glory obtained with his triumph over evil."

The canticle from the 19th chapter of Revelation begins with a "festive hymn of praise" sung by "a great multitude in heaven" giving witness to the fact that "the Lord is not indifferent like an impassive and remote emperor before the events of human history."

The chapter continues by celebrating "the wedding day of the lamb," the union of Christ with his church and with each individual.

Signs of the Advent preparation for Christmas permeated the audience: the pope already was wishing people a Merry Christmas; a group of children from Poland, who had their photo taken with the pope, wore Santa hats; and shepherds from Italy's Abruzzo region played "Silent Night" on their pipes.

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

Pope John Paul also thanked the people from Zakopane, Poland, who once again have brought to the Vatican several small Christmas trees for the papal apartment.

At the end of the audience, the pope prayed that all the visitors and pilgrims would prepare themselves "to welcome Christ who comes to realize his kingdom of justice and peace."

After the audience, Pope John Paul greeted several thousand members of the Italian air force who were celebrating the feast of Our Lady of Loreto, patron of flyers.

The air force's "Frecce Tricolori" jet team had been scheduled to fly over St. Peter's Square demonstrating their acrobatic flight maneuvers for the pope, but thick clouds and rain forced its cancellation.

Pope John Paul, speaking from the window of his apartment, encouraged the military to invoke Mary's help in every situation, saying, "She will be your support, your comfort and your hope."

He also said, "I will use this opportunity to wish you and your families a happy and holy Christmas."

'Here I Am, Lord'

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

When Phyllis Willerscheidt agreed to take on a job for the Archdiocese of St. Paul-Minneapolis 13 years ago, she never dreamed it would become as all-consuming as it has. Then again, she never dreamed the Catholic Church would be caught up in the kind of sexual abuse scandal we have, as major as any other crisis in the history of the American Catholic Church.

The job Willerscheidt took on back in 1990 was that of lead advocate for victims of sex abuse, and not surprisingly it's an assignment that has taken on added dimensions in the last two or three years as revelations of long-ago incidents came to light. That doesn't faze the Minnesota woman. "I always like challenges," she said. "They kept increasing."

Reporter Christina Capecchi told the story of Willerscheidt in a recent issue of The Catholic Spirit, newspaper of the Archdiocese of St. Paul-Minneapolis. She pointed out that Willerscheidt sees the mere fact of her presence with abuse victims as the first step in helping them heal. It's fitting, then, that she finds inspiration in her favorite song: "Here I Am, Lord."

Willerscheidt was director of her archdiocese's Commission on Women (a position she still holds) when she accepted the invitation to work with victims of clergy abuse, serving as their advocate and helping them to get on with their lives.

"There's no simple recipe," she said. "It's a matter of offering victims options so they can feel empowered." No two victims deal with their past in exactly the same way, she added, although sharing their stories always seems to help. "The more they can talk about it, the faster they'll heal."

She didn't set out to make a career of healing others. Married at 19, she and her husband, Tony, raised five children. She didn't start college until her oldest child began studies at the University of St. Thomas and she enrolled as well. She completed her bachelor's degree there in 1982, and went on to earn a master's at the University of Minnesota.

Willerscheidt sees her ministry as one of "filling a need," and says that at the outset she never could have imagined the depth of the pain and suffering she would witness.

Her greatest challenge, she told Capecchi, is convincing victims they're not at fault. Joining in victim support groups has been a major help in that direction, she noted.

How many victims of abuse has she helped personally? It's hard to put a figure on it, she said, but at least 50, and possibly as many as 75. One she remembers in particular is a woman who endured 52 years of sexual and emotional abuse from a priest in another state. The woman later said of Willerscheidt's healing concern: "If our paths had not crossed, I would have committed suicide."

Willerscheidt's dedicated work recently earned her the Crosier Ministry Award, but obviously she doesn't do it for public acclaim. "This is my church and Jesus is a part of it," she said. "I see Jesus in priests, lay people and religious. We're all part of the church."

Nor is she likely to call it quits if the task becomes more demanding. "I always dig deeper because I always feel that's what Jesus would do," she said. "He would never turn people away."

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "Scandal: From Whispers to Headlines," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

Along the Good Shepherd's Path

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Lord, you rise up in the fog's breathing stillness.

O God, you bring life into my nostrils full and deep.

Ahead of me you watch my path and my steps.

Answered prayers like friends and family gather

Around me in quiet warmth.

— morning submission

Home again, home again

Our Turn

THERESE J. BORCHARD
CNS Columnist

Arnold Schwarzenegger isn't the only guy uttering the admonition "I'll be back." So are more than half the college students polled in a survey by Monster.com (the job-search Web site) who plan to move back in with Mom and Dad after commencement.

It's not that they are homesick for Mom's cooking or the household rules they abided by for 18 years. They simply can't afford a place of their own or haven't found a job yet.

With young adults delaying marriage and the job market in the pits, approximately 4 million Americans between 23 and 34 are heading home to live. Some of these "adultolescents," as they were labeled by Newsweek magazine, are enjoying all the amenities of their childhood home without paying the dues.

And that's a problem in terms of becoming self-supporting, conscientious and responsible people.

"There's a later passage to adulthood," said Frank Furstenberg, a sociologist who directs a MacArthur Foundation project studying the transition into adulthood, "and at the same time it's less orderly. There's more moving in and out."

Some parents are thrilled to hear the question "Can I move back home?" But others enjoy their empty nest.

"Children should be raised so they truly are adults when they legally become so," said author LaVonne Neff. "By age 18, young adults should be self-supporting, responsible for their own debts and decisions. Teach the birdies to fly, and then shove them out of the nest."

I don't think there is anything wrong with helping young people out as they find themselves, go back to school or try a few entry-level jobs before committing to a career path. But I do think during the interim period they shouldn't be exempt from financial or household contributions. Treating them as dependents might put a Band-Aid on the problem, but it ultimately enables and encourages laziness and irresponsibility.

If I've learned anything in my young-adult years, it's that I am fully accountable for my decisions. If I accidentally bounce a check, it shows up on my credit report five years down the line when I apply for a mortgage loan. If I accrue debt, I have to work twice as hard to pay it off.

And when everything is on the house, we are deprived of the true joys of adulthood such as turning up the thermostat as high as we like, pigging out on ice-cream for breakfast and being in control of the remote. Such freedom is surely worth working for.

St. Michael Church grows in richness and diversity over 100 years

New church symbolic of growing, diverse parish

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

St. Michael Church above, a 13,500 square foot building, was designed to accommodate 750 people and dedicated on March 9, 2002.

GASTONIA — It was 100 years ago that St. Michael Church was born. Founded at the request of workers who were in the area building a mill, the church became a possibility with the help of a $1,500 donation from Mother Katherine Drexel of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People.

In 1902, Bishop Leo Haid, vicar apostolic of North Carolina and abbot of Belmont Abbey, began construction of the church dedicated April 1903 as a mission of Maryhelp of Christians Church in Belmont, which in 1910 became Belmont Abbey Cathedral.

Fewer than 15 churchgoers attended Mass in the early years, although by 1922 the congregation had grown to 56. Priests from Belmont Abbey administered the church. In 1925, St. Michael Church attained parish status and Benedictine Father Walter O'Brien became its first resident pastor.

Father O'Brien added a rectory beside the church and began offering daily Mass. When Benedictine Father Alphonse Buss became pastor in 1936, he initiated a parish vocation school in religious instruction and organized Boy Scout Troop 13.

Through the years, the Belmont Abbey Benedictines assisted St. Michael's growth in many ways. From architecture to construction, ecclesiastical duties to teaching, Belmont Abbey's clergy proved instrumental in St. Michael's development.

Parish life grew further to enhance the lives of children in 1942, when a five-room house was converted into a first-through sixth-grade Catholic school at the request of parishioners. By mid-decade, while the parish comprised 165 people, land on Gravely Avenue (now St. Michael's Lane) was bought to accommodate a new, permanent kindergarten- through eighth-grade school building, which was dedicated in February 1952. The school, staffed by Sisters of Mercy from Belmont's Sacred Heart Convent, hosted more than 120 students in its first year.

Parish membership continued to expand during the 1940s, '50s and beyond. Structural failures and a steeple collapse forced then-pastor Benedictine Father Gregory Eichenlaub to initiate designs for a new church beside the school. That church, a granite-faced structure which cost $160,000, was dedicated in 1958 and seated 350 people in its 4,700 square foot building.

The project marked the third time Benedictine Father Michael McInerney's talents were called upon by the parish of St. Michael Church — the architect, who designed more than 500 buildings during his career, had designed plans in 1903 for the original church and in 1944 for the school building.

Parishioners broke ground for the construction of a parish center in 1978, a time during which more than 1,400 people attended St. Michael Church. The addition was dedicated in late April 1979.

In 1962, St. Michael Church was merged into the Diocese of Raleigh, which at the time encompassed all of North Carolina, and again 10 years later with the formation of the Diocese of Charlotte. Still, the church was staffed with Abbey Benedictines until 1989 when then-Bishop John F. Donoghue installed diocesan priest Father George Kloster as pastor.

Over the years, the parish grew to almost 3,200 people and became involved in community projects, parish council activities, Knights of Columbus, nocturnal eucharistic adoration, faith formation, Scouting, sports and Experienced Articles, a thrift shop that generates money that through the St. Vincent de Paul Society was filtered back to the community. St. Michael parishioners also became actively involved with the area's Lutheran community and played roles in ecumenical services and projects.

Gaston County's Hispanic population grew by 562 percent after 1990, leading to a regular Spanish-language Mass on Sundays. In 1992, Father Kloster initiated the long-term Project 2000 Building Fund, which was handed down to three subsequent pastors: Father Larry Heiney in 1998, Father John Allen in 1999 and Father Joseph Mulligan in 2000.

On March 9, 2002, then-Bishop William G. Curlin of Charlotte dedicated a new St. Michael Church, built to accommodate 750 people, more than double the capacity of the old church. Abbot Placid Solari of Belmont Abbey concelebrated the Mass in the 13,500-square-foot church featuring a symbolically placed baptistery, the St. Katherine Drexel Chapel, a Blessed Sacrament adoration area, reception rooms, a nursery and hospitality space.

The new church also incorporates many elements of the old church, including statues and Stations of the Cross.

In an area that honors one of North Carolina's earliest and most important Catholic laymen, Judge William P. Gaston, St. Michael Church remains a vital presence in the Gaston Vicariate.

ST MICHAEL CHURCH
708 St. Michael's Lane
Gastonia, NC 28052
(704) 867-6212

Vicariate: Gaston
Pastor: Father Joseph Mulligan
Regional Hispanic Ministry: Father Jose A. Juya
Deacon: Rev. Mr. John Weisenhorn
Number of Families: 900

Father Joseph Mulligan

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

A book on the history of St. Michael Church is now available. Contact the church at (704) 867-6212.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company

Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte

The Catholic Company Outlet Store

228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715

803-396-5399 ext. 240

Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm

5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485

I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd). Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.

CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman

The Catholic Company – Lake Norman

19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031

704-655-9090

Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm

In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's

I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave. Go west for ½ mile. The store is on the North side of street.

LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

SMITH & SMITH, PA

Timothy M. Smith, Attorney  Jacquelyn A. Smith, Attorney

Members of St. Mark's Church

NO FEE UNTIL WE WIN ON PI CASES

FREE INITIAL CONSULTATION

convenient free parking

EXPERIENCED - AGGRESSIVE - CARING

CRIMINAL LAW
Traffic Tickets (Meck. only)
DWI
Expunctions
Felonies & Misdemeanors

PERSONAL INJURY
Auto Accident
Workers' Compensation
Wrongful Death
Whiplash - Back, Neck, Head Injuries

10% off attorney fee—10% of net fee donated to Catholic Social Services Food Pantry

704-331-3092 www.smithandsmithpa.com 900 Baxter St., Suite 109, Charlotte

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

DECEMBER 19, 2003 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 13

FC282 C363c

Parish Profile: Holy Spirit Church

| PAGE 16

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas

SANTA GETS HELP FROM ST. GABRIEL STUDENTS

BY KRIS REICH
SPECIAL TO THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

BELMONT — It may have been cold, rainy and gloomy outside, but the weather didn't dampen the spirits or the warm, giving hearts of students, staff and families from St. Gabriel School in Charlotte.

Fifteen student council members from all four fifth-grade classes, along with Principal Sharon Broxterman and four assistants, managed to figuratively and literally blanket with a dazzling display of Christmas generosity the 12 women and 13 children living at Catherine's House.

Located in Belmont, Catherine's House is a transitional facility for women and their children who are homeless and is sponsored by the Sisters of Mercy.

"I first brought the idea to collect gifts for Catherine's House to our Parent Teacher Organization and they were all in favor of it," said Broxterman. "The Sisters of Mercy opened our school and staffed it for many, many years, so it was time to do something for them."

See STUDENTS, page 4

COURTESY PHOTO BY KRIS REICH

Students from St. Gabriel School in Charlotte recently brought gifts and needed items to the residents of Catherine's House, a transitional facility for women and their children, in Belmont.

Hussein's capture may bring peace, doesn't excuse war, cardinal says

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — The capture of Saddam Hussein may help bring peace to Iraq, but it does not change the fact that "the war was useless, and served no purpose," a top Vatican official said.

Cardinal Renato R. Martino, head of the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace, said the Vatican wants Hussein to receive a fair trial for alleged crimes during his long dictatorship. But the Vatican is opposed to the death penalty for the fallen Iraqi leader, he said.

Speaking during a Dec. 16 press conference, Cardinal Martino offered the first substantial Vatican reaction to the capture and detention of Hussein by U.S. forces.

The cardinal said he hopes Hussein's capture "contributes to peace and the reconstruction of Iraq. But it would be illusory to think that it will repair the damage caused by that great defeat for humanity which war always represents."

"I hope his capture does not have other, serious consequences. But this is not the total solution to the problems in the Middle East," he said.

Cardinal Martino voiced displeasure at the broadcast of TV images showing a bedraggled Hussein undergoing a medical examination shortly after his detention.

"What caused me pain was seeing this ruined man,

See HUSSEIN, page 12

Spreading sunshine

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Jane Bodem, a member of St. William Church's Sunshine Kazoo Band, chats with patient Devota Jarrett at Murphy Nursing Home Dec. 10. See story page 5.

FOSTERING HEALING

Rachel's Vineyard harvests hope in Ireland

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Rachel's Vineyard Ministries, the support network offering retreats for healing after abortion, has recently expanded into unlikely territory: Ireland.

In a nation where 88 percent of the population is Catholic and abortion is illegal, it may seem there would be no need for post-abortion counseling services.

Not so, according to Martha Shuping, M.D., a volunteer with Rachel's Vineyard and a member of its board of directors.

An estimated Irish 6,000 women travel to England each

See VINEYARD, page 7

#BXNPDVQ*3-DIGIT 275
#420836#
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

A Christmas story
St. Ann students ponder their Christmas roles
| PAGE 4

Turning frowns upside down
St. Leo students hop aboard The Smile Train
| PAGE 6

A mother's influence
Songwriter draws inspiration from Mary
| PAGE 8

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

STUDENT TO STUDENT

CNS PHOTO BY KAREN CALLAWAY, NORTHWEST INDIANA CATHOLIC

Second-graders Ariel Stamper and Aja Taylor talk about a class project during an exchange that brought suburban Catholic school students from Indiana to a Catholic school in Chicago. Stamper, from St. Thomas More School in Munster, Ind., and Taylor, a student at St. Dorothy School on Chicago's South Side, met in November through a program to help youngsters learn about their cultural, geographic and economic differences.

More than a bus ride separates inner-city, suburban Catholic schools

MUNSTER, Ind. — What do the students at St. Dorothy School, on Chicago's South Side, and the suburban St. Thomas More School in Munster have in common?

Quite a bit, it turns out — including a healthy interest in lunch.

In November, when about 270 students from St. Dorothy, most of them African-Americans, took a half-hour bus ride to visit St. Thomas, which serves a predominantly white community, the thing most talked about first was lunch: corn dogs and peaches and pretzels and a choice of white, chocolate or strawberry milk.

The next thing they talked about was church.

"One thing I noticed about their church — it was a little more traditional than ours," said Ashley Ambrose, an eighth-grader at St. Dorothy. "They sing more all together, and they sang some of the same songs we sang last year. We switch up a little bit more."

Russell Gonzalez and Mallory McShane, eighth-graders at St. Thomas More, also noticed the difference in the Masses.

For Gonzalez, it was the music. "Theirs was more interactive," he said, recalling an earlier visit St. Thomas More students made to St. Dorothy.

For McShane, it was the dance. "They do what I guess you would call Christian dance during church," she said. "I studied dance, and I'd like to do that."

The St. Dorothy students will again host their friends from St. Thomas More in February as part of the second year of the "Thinking Globally, Acting Locally" exchange between the two schools.

While they aren't very far apart geographically, St. Thomas More serves mostly middle- to upper-middle-class white communities, and has 640 students enrolled in pre-K to eighth grade. St. Dorothy's students are racially mixed, the majority African-American, and come from households that don't necessarily have the same economic advantages as those at St. Thomas More.

While the St. Dorothy students said the Indiana school was bigger, they also discovered eighth-grade algebra is the same in any neighborhood.

"We're really trying to build an awareness and an acceptance that people are different, and that being different is actually a good thing," said Noreen Bickel, development director at St. Thomas More.

"But also, that 'Gosh, they really aren't that different. The color of the skin might be different, but the thoughts and ideas are pretty much the same.'"

Bill reintroduced to bar discrimination for not providing abortions

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The U.S. bishops' pro-life spokeswoman praised a bill to forbid discrimination against health care providers who do not want to be involved in abortion.

The Abortion Nondiscrimination Act was reintroduced in the House Dec. 8. A Senate version was introduced in July and assigned to the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee.

"No one should be forced into the practice of abortion," said Cathy Cleaver Ruse, director of planning and information for the Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. She urged Congress to act quickly "to pass this common-sense protection for the rights of conscience of all health care providers."

Similar legislation was approved by the House in 2002 by a vote of 229-189, but never came up for a vote in the Senate before the 107th Congress adjourned.

The bill would expand upon current federal law that protects "health care entities" from having to perform or provide for abortions.

"No one who provides health care should be forced to participate in abortion," said Ruse.

She said the legislation is necessary because of coordinated efforts to force hospitals, insurance providers and outpatient clinics across the nation to provide, pay for and make referrals for abortions.

She said it is ironic that "the same abortion advocates who promote a 'right to choose' deny the right of health care providers to choose not to perform abortion. They tell us, 'If you don't like abortion, don't have one.' Pro-life health providers must be able to say: 'We don't like abortion, so don't force us to perform them.'"

Diocesan planner

ALBEMARLE VICARIATE

ALBEMARLE — The Forever Young Club of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church, 416 N. 2nd St., meets the first Wednesday of each month in the Family Life Center at 10 a.m. For details, call Gerald Maiden (704) 982-5261.

BOONE VICARIATE

BOONE — All Catholic young adults in the Boone Vicariate are invited to a Potluck Supper and Christmas Party hosted by Elizabeth Rupp Jan. 3, 5:30-7:30 p.m. at 325 Poplar Summit. Singles, married couples and children are welcome. Come have a great time and meet new friends as we craft an identity for our group. Please RSVP to Matt or Amber Mellon at (828) 265-2581 before Dec. 30.

SPRUCE PINE — St. Lucien Church, 695 Summit Ave., offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of each month following the 9 a.m. Mass with benediction at 4 p.m.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., will celebrate a Polish-language Mass Dec. 21. Reconciliation will be offered at 2 p.m. and Mass will be celebrated at 3:30 p.m. For more information, call Elizabeth Spytkowski at (704) 948-1678.

CHARLOTTE — The St. Maximilian Kolbe Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order gathers the first Sunday of each month at 2 p.m. at Our Lady of Consolation Church, 2301 Statesville Ave. Those interested in learning more about the SFO and the Franciscan way of life are invited to attend. For more information, call Skyler Harvey, SFO, at (704) 545-9133.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Monday of each month, 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

CHARLOTTE — The Cancer Support Group for survivors, family and friends meets the first Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. For more information, call Marilyn Borrelli at (704) 542-2283.

CHARLOTTE — New Creation Monastery invites you to a day of silence and solitude in the presence of Almighty God. The monastery offers private spiritual retreats for lay people. Write to Father John Vianney Hoover at New Creation Monastery, 11517 Spreading Oak Ln. Charlotte, NC 28226, stating why you want to go on retreat and when. For more information, call (704) 541-5026.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Msgr. Mauricio W. West
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

DECEMBER 19, 2003
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 13

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published b the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Churc St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except fo Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durin June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishe of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per ye for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserve the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deeme appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-clas postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citie POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 3726 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope, Israeli foreign minister meet, discuss Middle East tensions

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II and Israel's foreign minister, Silvan Shalom, met privately at the Vatican Dec. 11 to discuss the ongoing tensions in the Middle East.

Shalom also met with Cardinal Angelo Sodano, the Vatican secretary of state.

"In the course of the meetings, both sides expressed their points of view on the path to follow in order to obtain peace in the Holy Land," a Vatican statement said.

The pope, the cardinal and the foreign minister agreed a "way out of the current situation" must be found, and "concrete acts of reconciliation" by both Israelis and Palestinians are necessary, the statement said.

Israel's foreign ministry said Shalom told the pope, "We all hope that peace will happen next year."

The foreign minister said Israel is committed to reaching a peace agreement through direct negotiations with the Palestinians, and Israel would do everything it could to ensure Christian pilgrims would have access to Bethlehem and other holy places during the Christmas holidays.

Jonathan Peled, a foreign ministry spokesman, told The Associated Press that at Christmas Israel would increase officers on duty at its checkpoint between Jerusalem and Bethlehem to allow tourists to pass through more quickly.

"It's a goodwill gesture on the part of Israel," Peled said. "We appreciate and respect the wishes of all those who want to celebrate Christmas here."

Pope tells university students God will show them the right path

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II told university students that if they trust in God and turn to him in prayer, they can be assured he will show them the right path for their lives.

During a Dec. 11 Mass in preparation for Christmas, the pope focused on a verse from the Book of Isaiah, in which God tells his people, "Fear not; I will help you."

God's promise to be near and assist each person was fulfilled with the birth of Christ, the pope said. "In him, God became one of us. This is why we do not have to be afraid."

The pope sat facing the altar during the Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, leading some of the prayers, but allowing Cardinal Camillo Ruini, his vicar for Rome, to be the main celebrant.

Joining Rome university students for the annual Advent Mass were delegates from dozens of universities throughout Europe.

Reading his homily in a clear voice, the pope told he students they must play their part in ensuring European integration is built on common humanitarian and spiritual values, and not just on common economic and political policies.

"It is indispensable that today's Europe safeguards its patrimony of values and that it recognizes that Christianity has been the primary force to promote, reconcile and consolidate them," he said.

Pope John Paul told the students Christmas is a privileged time to recognize one of the greatest values, the value and dignity of human life.

"With the birth of Jesus, in the simplicity and poverty of Bethlehem, God restored dignity to the existence of every human being," he said. "He offered everyone the possibility of participating in his own divine life."

The pope prayed that "this immeasurable gift always would find hearts ready to receive it."

He encouraged the students to seek God as they continue their studies.

"Do not stop in the face of doubts and difficulties," he told them. "God, as the prophet said, will take you by the right hand, he is alongside of you."

Jesus is the reason for the season

CNS PHOTO BY CATHY LOCHER, CATHOLIC TIMES

Bruce Frank, 18, moves a Christmas tree while working on his family's tree farm in Athens, Ill. Behind him is a sign that reminds customers that Jesus is the reason for the season.

them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

NEWTON — The Little Flowers Catholic Girls' Group is for all Catholic girls ages five and up. The group meets the fourth Monday of each month at St. Joseph Church, 720 West 13th St., at 4 p.m. in the Holy Family Hall. For more details, call Debbie Vickers at (828) 495-2039.

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For more information, call the church office at (828) 327-2341.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

SALISBURY — Sacred Heart Church, 128 N. Fulton St., celebrates a Charismatic and Healing Mass the first Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. Prayer and worship with prayer teams will be available at 3 p.m., and a potluck dinner will follow the Mass. Father John Putnam, pastor, will be the celebrant. For further information, call Bill Owens at (704) 639-9837.

MOORESVILLE — A Support Group for Parents Who Have Lost a Child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

SYLVA — St. Mary Church offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Saturday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 3 p.m. For information, call (828) 586-9496.

FRANKLIN — The Women's Guild of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 299 Maple St., meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center. The meetings feature guest speakers and special events periodically. For more information, call Claire Barnable at (828) 369-1565.

WAYNESVILLE — The Catholic Women's Circle of St. John's Catholic Community meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the church hall. For more information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Episcopal calendar

Bishop Peter J. Jugis will participate in the following events:

December 21 — 11:30 a.m.
Transitional diaconate ordination Mass
St. Vincent de Paul Church, Charlotte

December 24 — Midnight
Christmas Eve Mass
St. Patrick Cathedral, Charlotte

December 25 — 11 a.m.
Christmas Mass
St. Patrick Cathedral, Charlotte

January 1 — 11 a.m.
New Year's Day Mass
St. Patrick Cathedral, Charlotte

TO OUR READERS

We will not publish next week, Dec. 26, due to Christmas. Our next issue will be Jan. 2. We wish our readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

St. Gabriel students help out Santa

STUDENTS, from page 1

"About a month ago, each class took a list supplied by individual families at the residence and began to collect items on the list," she said. "Before we packed up the presents, our entire lobby was filled. It was overwhelming. Our families are wonderful. All we have to do is ask and they respond."

Overwhelming indeed. A jam-packed busload of infant and children's car seats, cribs, mattresses, vacuums, lamps, paper towels, diapers, detergent, soap, gift certificates, clothing, dishes, dozens of sheets and comforters, pots and pans, toys, candy and even several checks. All the students and staff pitched in to help unload the wide array of items.

"One of our donors bought a purse for each woman, then filled it with jewelry and cosmetics, something special just for them, something to boost their self-esteem," said Broxterman. "Another made hand-knit scarves for each."

Organizers ensured that each child was outfitted with essentials such as socks, underwear, pajamas, jeans and sweatshirts, and that each woman would receive a complete outfit. There were also plenty of gift-wrapped, age-appropriate toys as well as other gifts for the adults.

"I was simply overwhelmed at the generosity of St. Gabriel School parents and children," said Mercy Sister Bernadette McNamara. "What an example the parents are setting for their children — teaching them to share with people who are less fortunate."

"Sometimes it is difficult for children who have everything to realize that there are other children who have nothing, not even a place to call home," she said. "This experience today, seeing love in action, convinced me once again that when we serve the poor, God's special children, He always provides."

As the youngsters brought bag after bag of presents into the facility, the faces of Sister Bernadette, Sister Maureen Dees, Sister M. Carmelita Hagan, Sister Virginia Raymond and Sister Pilansia Karsom — all of whom minister at the residence — reflected their amazement. But their astonishment paled in comparison to that of one very small

COURTESY PHOTO BY KRIS REICH

Hank LeFlore, a St. Gabriel School student, helps deliver presents at Catherine's House in Belmont.

Catherine's House resident, Riana.

"Why are they bringing us presents?" she asked Sister Bernadette, with her eyes wide.

Ever ready to respond with a totally truthful answer, Sister Bernadette replied, "Riana, that's easy to explain. They're Santa Claus' helpers."

And, indeed, they are.

Kris Reich is the communications director for the Sisters of Mercy of the Americas Regional Community of N.C.

WANT TO HELP?

Catherine's House is always in need of donations to continue providing necessary services to residents, such as transportation to school and/or work, child care, counseling for both women and children, parenting classes and many other services that encourage residents to become financially independent, responsible parents and contributing members of society.

Contact: Catherine's House, P.O. Box 1633, Belmont, NC 28012-1633; phone (704) 825-9599; or online at http://www.orgsites.com/nc/catherineshouse/index.html.

A CHRISTMAS STORY

St. Ann students ponder their Christmas roles

CHARLOTTE — St. Ann School third-graders were asked what part they would play in the Christmas story. Here are their responses.

If I had a part in the Christmas story and could be at the stable with Jesus, I would be ...

"An angel, and I would tell the people that the baby Jesus is born. I would tell baby Jesus: 'I hope you will grow up and be nice and kind.'"
— Flannery Kuhn

"Joseph, and I would try to keep baby Jesus safe. I would tell baby Jesus: 'You will always be safe with Mary and me.'"
— Gregory Pascarella

"Mary, and I would cradle and love him very much. I would tell baby Jesus that he was the Son of God and that I would be with to the end."
— Elli Lybrand

"The donkey, and I would give warmness to baby Jesus by my breath. I would tell baby Jesus: 'You have a very good life.'"
— Jenna Pauli

"The sheep, and I would keep Jesus warm. I would tell baby Jesus: 'You are the light of the world.'"
— Felipe Riedener

"An angel, and I would send the message that Jesus is being born. I would tell baby Jesus: 'You have a very big job now. But I will watch over you.'"
— Toria Roth

"The star, and I would show the wise men the way to Bethlehem. I would tell baby Jesus: 'I will shine over your stable and you are the light of the world.'"
— Kevin McCarthy

"A cow, and I would give baby Jesus milk. I would tell baby Jesus" 'Thank you for coming and being born in my house.'"
— Kevin Cassaway

"A donkey, and I would breathe hot air on baby Jesus. I would tell baby Jesus: 'Hee haw — that means, you are the chosen one.'"
— Chris High

"A wise man, and I would be there to see the newborn child. I would tell baby Jesus: 'I came a long way to see you.'"
— Andrew Loesch

"One of the wise men, and I would give him my gift of gold. I would tell baby Jesus: 'Here is your gift,' and "You are a king, too.'"
— Liam Anderson

"A wise man, and I watched the star leading to you. I would tell baby Jesus: "You are very special because you are God's son.'"
— Michael Parra

"The star, and I would show the shepherds where to go and show the kings where to go if baby Jesus needed something. I would tell baby Jesus: 'If there is anyone who wanted to see you, I would show them how to get to the stable.'"
— Anthony DellaMea

For the best prices around, come visit

CELTIC JEWELERS
Gloria & Wayne Moore, owners
(parishioners of St. Michael's)

Artist on premises specializes in family crests and Celtic design rings.

10-6 M-F
10-4 Sat
704-861-8777
2503 E. Ozark Avenue
Gastonia

Beautiful custom crosses
Religious medals
Gold, silver, diamonds and unique custom work!
Prompt repairs!

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

THE CATHOLIC NEWS HERALD

Please pray for the following priests who died during the month of January:

| | |
|---|---|
| Rev. Msgr. Eugene H. Livelsberger | 1987 |
| Rev. Msgr. Lawrence Newman | 1981 |
| Rev. Arthur J. Racette | 1975 |

Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus

IT'S A REAL HOOT

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

The Sunshine Kazoo Band from St. William Church in Murphy kazoos its way from Murphy Nursing Home to Murphy Hospital's Alzheimer's unit Dec. 10.

Kazoo band brings sunshine to the masses

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

MURPHY — In the Murphy Nursing Home lounge, the residents are eagerly waiting.

It's Dec. 10, and over in the break room Jane Bodem, Rev. Mr. Carl Hubbell, Chung Jang, Joan Kennedy, Lois Miller and Babs Truro are putting on their red-velvet-banded straw boaters, going over the selections for the Christmas program and tuning up their bugle-shaped kazoos.

At 10:30 a.m., kazoos buzzing, the Sunshine Kazoo Band makes its grand entrance into the lounge.

The band, from St. William Church in Murphy, has entertained the St. William's Ladies' Guild and at Helping Hands, a daycare center for the handicapped. But it's the monthly visits to the Murphy Nursing Home and the Murphy Hospital's Alzheimer's unit that is the band's special ministry.

Members practice the week before their performances, kazooing or singing along with music tapes.

"I was in a kazoo band in Florida," Bodem said. "My leader made all these tapes for me so I could do it here."

The band has a different program for each month. There are patriotic songs for July 4. For "I've Been Working On the Railroad," band members don railroad engineer hats and add wooden railroad whistles to their instrumentation.

Christmas selections include "Christmas Island," with the band singing about gift-laden canoes and Christmas fun on a tropical island. Bodem ties on a funky hat and puts caps over her front teeth for a rousing rendition of "All I Want for Christmas is My Two Front Teeth."

The band invites the audience to join in on Christmas songs such as "Jingle Bells" and gives bells to some of the residents so they can help make the music. There's applause after each selection.

"I like to bring joy where joy is needed," Rev. Mr. Hubbell said. "Sadness is a terrible disease in our society, and loneliness. Mother Teresa said that — that the most terrible disease in America is loneliness."

"I think it's wonderful to make people laugh and forget their troubles, for a few minutes anyway," resident Cordie Griggs, 97, said. "They do a good job making people laugh. I enjoy it."

When the music ends, the band disperses around the room to spend time chatting with the residents.

Then, kazooing their way down the hall and popping into rooms to say "Hi" to those who couldn't make it to the concert, they head for the hospital's Alzheimer's unit, where they repeat their program for those gathered in the bright, airy lounge.

The residents sing along to songs they remember from their childhoods. A tall, white-haired man, holding an attendant's hand, gets up to dance in place, weaving back and forth and grinning happily. As in the nursing home, the band members spend time chatting with the residents.

It's time they gladly spend spreading sunshine. For Babs Truro, it's the answer to a prayer.

"I had a miracle," she said later. "I was a golfer; I loved it. Then I had a problem with my heart. I was supposed to have an operation. I got down in front of my crucifix and said, 'God, I can't go through this operation. If you help me, I'll give up my golf and devote my time to helping others.'"

The doctor who advocated the surgery had told her she needed the operation right away. A second doctor told her, soon after her prayer, that there was nothing wrong with her heart. That was two years ago, and she's had no more heart trouble. Instead, she's opened her heart to others.

"When Jane told me about this (kazoo band), I said, 'Yes, I want to do this very much.' I feel uplifted when I come here."

"It's about happiness," Rev. Mr. Hubbell said. "We're called to care for one another."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

Make the right move to finding your dream home. See Chase first... because home ownership matters.

TAILORED MORTGAGE PROGRAMS

- Chase mortgage programs are tailored to fit your individual needs
- Experienced mortgage specialists will personally work with you from application through closing
- A free mortgage affordability estimate can show you how much home you can afford*
- A Chase mortgage preapproval will make you feel more confident knowing you have "cash in hand" when shopping for a home

Make the move to Chase Home Finance—call today.

Paul McClure
(704) 553-1202
Ext. 203

CHASE
THE RIGHT RELATIONSHIP IS EVERYTHING®

*Results of the mortgage affordability estimate are guidelines; the estimate is not an application for credit and results do not guarantee loan approval or denial. A fee for preapproval may be applied. All loans are subject to credit and property approval. Program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. Not all products are available in all states or for all loan amounts. Other restrictions and limitations apply. All loans offered through Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corporation ("CMMC"). Corporate headquarters: 343 Thornall Street, Edison, New Jersey 08837. (732) 205-0600. © 2003 J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. All Rights Reserved. 10/03 6904

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Unit # 27 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS
CHRISTMAS GIFT SPECIALS

OPEN
Monday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

Holiday social

COURTESY PHOTO BY REGINA MILLER

The Altar Society and Knights of Columbus of St. James Church in Hamlet held their annual adult Christmas party in the parish hall Dec. 6. After a 5 p.m. Mass, dinner was served in the candlelit hall and all guests went home with door prizes.

Turning frowns upside down

COURTESY PHOTO BY CHRISTINE HURLEY

St. Leo the Great School students are trying to "Change the World One Smile at a Time" by raising funds for The Smile Train, an international charity dedicated to helping children who suffer from cleft lips and palates through free surgery, free training for doctors and research to find a cure.

St. Leo students hop aboard The Smile Train

BY SUSAN DEGUZMAN
CORRESPONDENT

WINSTON-SALEM — It's said that smiling is contagious. St. Leo the Great School students want to help spread some smiles.

The students dressed up Dec. 12 to raise money for The Smile Train, an international charity dedicated to helping children who suffer from cleft lips and palates through free surgery, free training for doctors and research to find a cure.

The students each brought $1 to school, which, with an enrollment of approximately 250 students, would pay for an operation for one child. Hoping to help even more, the student council decided to also donate funds raised from a pumpkin contest and Christmas stocking contest.

Linda Fatale, reading teacher, heard about the work of The Smile Train from her sister, a fellow teacher in New Jersey.

"In some countries, children are shunned and left on doorsteps and in orphanages because of the disfigurement which accompanies this affliction," said Fatale.

"Some children also suffer from health problems because they are not able to eat properly," she said. "There is no reason in the world that these children should suffer with this. We know how to fix the problem."

The Smile Train is working to help as many children as possible. For $250, the organization can put a smile on a child's face. The organization applies 100 percent of its donations toward its programs. The overhead, which is less than 7 percent, is paid for by their board of trustees.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information about The Smile Train, visit www.smiletrain.org.

A GOLDEN JUBILEE

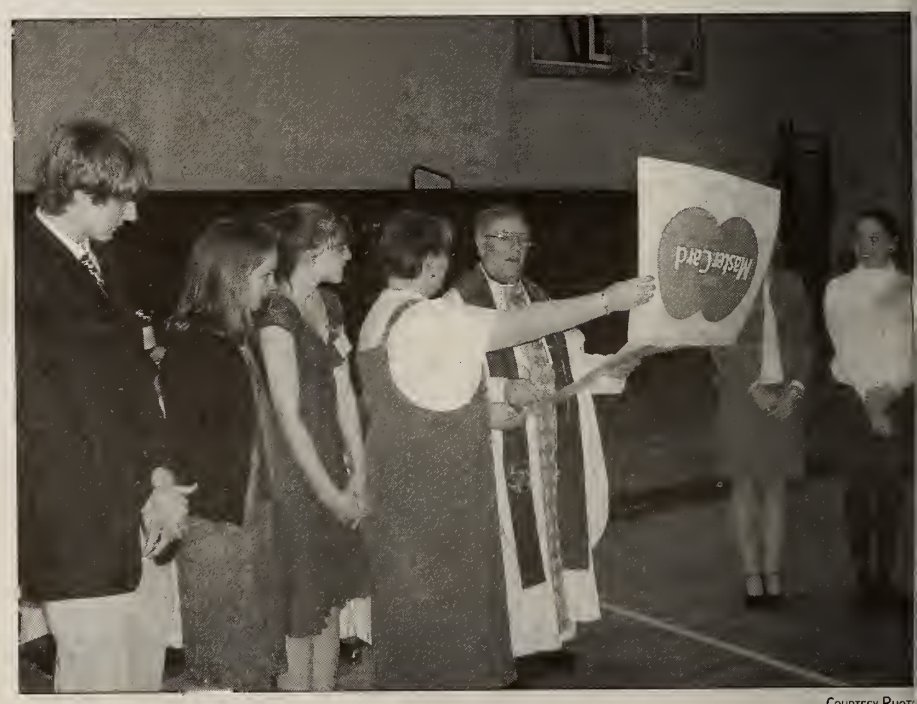
Bishop McGuinness high schoolers says thanks to Father Kelleher

KERNERSVILLE — Father Joseph Kelleher, a retired priest of the Diocese of Charlotte, was recently honored for his 50th anniversary of ordination to the priesthood by the Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School community.

The school held a reception for Father Kelleher following his celebration of the Eucharist for staff and students on the feast of the Immaculate Conception Dec. 8.

Father Kelleher, an Irish immigrant who was ordained Dec. 20, 1953, has a long history with the school beginning in its earliest years, during which he served as the school's priest administrator. Prior to his retirement, Father Kelleher served the school as its chaplain and he remains involved in many aspects of the school. His frequent visits bring a vital priestly presence and enthusiasm to the school, according to George Repass, principal.

The school's Peer Ministry students designed the presentation that included highlights of Father Kelleher's involvement with the school. The students also presented him with a stole in honor of his ordination, a briefcase and soda bread, an Irish delicacy.



COURTESY PHOTO

Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School students and faculty honor Father Joseph Kelleher, a retired priest of the Diocese of Charlotte, for his 50 years to the priesthood Dec. 8.

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

Beautiful Christmas items!

Christmas Cards, Nativity Sets,
Special Christmas Gifts & Books
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road,
Charlotte, NC

We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Ever wonder how to answer kids, relatives or neighbors about Catholic traditions? Do you know if Noah and the Ark is real history, or if your dog will go to heaven? Which came first: the Bible or the Church? If not, then you'll want to read the brand new book

"Not Everyone Calls Me FATHER"

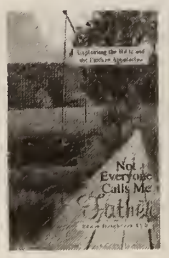
Explaining the Bible and the Faith in Appalachia by Edwin Daschbach SVD



77 topics with photos
copyright 2004

"An interesting, well-written, clear and direct but warm and humorous explanation of Catholic traditions. Father Daschbach, pastor in a mission territory of few Catholics, bases his short essays on the best of Protestant and Catholic Scripture studies. With a photographer's eye, he draws his comparisons from the life he observes in the area. Father Daschbach's pastoral concern and love for the people shine through, making this book a people-friendly resource for answering fundamentalist claims against the Catholic Church."
— Father David Mayer, SVD Professor of American Literature, Japan

"This book is a significant contribution to a more accurate understanding of the Truth of Sacred Scripture among the Christian faithful, and I am happy to endorse it."
— +Bishop Bernard Schmitt Bishop of Wheeling-Charleston

ISBN 0-9664525-1-8
$8.95 (plus $3.95 shipping/handling ) - $12.90 total

Divine Word Missionaries
Appalachian Book Order #2
PO Box 6099
Techny, Illinois 60082-6099

Phone orders: (800) 828-8738 Fax orders: (847) 272-8572 e-mail: info@svdmissions.org

CFCC

Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center

Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity

5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com

Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Harvesting hope

VINEYARD, from page 1

year to obtain abortions, said Shuping. With a total population of 3.9 million, there may be as many as 60,000 Irish women who have had abortions.

Shuping said because abortion is illegal in Ireland, there are very few crisis pregnancy centers or support groups for post-abortive women.

A member of St. Aloysius Church in Hickory, Shuping recently spent three weeks in Ireland leading a Rachel's Vineyard retreat and training a team to lead retreats on a regular basis.

Ireland joins half a dozen other nations with Rachel's Vineyard retreats and the ministry is poised to move into several more countries.

"Pregnancy loss can trigger depression in women," Shuping said. "Because the medical community wouldn't admit there was a problem, it didn't develop ways of helping (women heal mentally)."

However, Shuping said, in the last 18 months there has been a wealth of new studies showing increased occurrences of depression, mental illness and suicide in post-abortive women.

Shuping also said spiritual, rather than medical, counseling is necessary for post-abortive women to heal.

"One of the things that is critical to realize is when these women think of their baby, they're thinking about a dead baby," Shuping said. "But the reality is, as Pope John Paul II said, 'Your baby is now living in the Lord.'"

When women realize that, Shuping said, they have a hope of seeing their baby again and they can go through the grieving that has been suppressed because "nobody wanted to hear about it."

Shuping noted that because of their Christian faith, women have the hope of the resurrection and a reunion with their baby.

"All medicine will give you is a dead baby," said Shuping.

Shuping has already introduced her 16-year-old daughter, Jennie, to the world of abortion and its consequences.

"Jennie has learned compassion for others and would never judge," Shuping said. "She knows about the misinformation and often coercion that can push women into an abortion, as well as the pain that many suffer afterwards."

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

COURTESY PHOTO BY MARTHA SHUPING

Capuchin Father Laurence Kettle, Martha Shuping and Jennie Shuping in Ireland.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more information about Rachel's Vineyard retreats, visit www.rachelsvineyard.org or call Dr. Martha Shuping at (336) 659-1342 or the Respect Life office of Catholic Social Services at (704) 370-3229.

BREAKING GROUND

COURTESY PHOTO

Father Joseph Ayathupadam, Bishop Peter J. Jugis and Rev. Mr. Richard Kauth shovel dirt during the Holy Spirit Church activity center groundbreaking ceremony Dec. 7.

Holy Spirit holds groundbreaking for new activity center

DENVER — Ground was broken for the Holy Spirit Church activity center Dec. 7.

The shovel used during the groundbreaking by Bishop Peter J. Jugis, who was administrator of Holy Spirit Church from November 1998 until June 1999, was signed by him and Father Joseph Ayathupadam, pastor. It will be kept at the church as a memento of the occasion.

Also participating in the ceremony was Rev. Mr. Richard Kauth, permanent deacon; members of the building committee and parish council; Knights of Columbus; and members of the church.

Bishop Jugis gave a brief homily that rendered honor and praise to the parishioners of Holy Spirit.

"This ceremony marks four years of work, which started with the initial survey," he said.

The survey, which began in 1999 as a result of parish growth, was conducted by the pastoral council. It indicated a pressing need for classrooms, youth activities and programs and parish activities. Growth projections were conducted by the diocesan Office of Planning and, based on these projections and the survey results, an in-depth parish profile was authorized that was completed and approved by the Diocese of Charlotte in December 2000.

During the summer of 2001, plans were finalized for the parish activity center and the capital campaign was initiated in September 2002.

The 19,908 square foot steel and brick center will consist of 11 classrooms, three offices, a chapel, a sacristy, a kitchen, a locker room with showers and restrooms and a 7,128 square foot multipurpose room.

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

For more on the history of Holy Spirit Church, please see the Parish Profile on page 16.

Join our Oratorian Congregation to
SERVE GOD AS PRIEST OR BROTHER
As priests and lay men, our community lives without vows and serves God's people numerous ways, including:

Parishes Youth Camps Nursing
Retreats Campus Ministry Hospital Chaplains

Find out more about serving God with us:
Fr. Ed McDevitt, CO The Oratory
P O Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!
Ask about our Stairway lifts.
- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

We beat the banks!
IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE

Songwriter draws inspiration from Mary

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

HAYESVILLE — "If we asked God right now, 'Do we need your mother?' God would say, 'I needed her. She fed me, cared for me and walked the way of the cross with me, and from the cross I gave her to you.'"

Jesus' words from the cross were meant not only for John but for everyone, singer and songwriter Elyse O'Kane told the congregation at Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in Hayesville.

Following an evening Mass to celebrate the feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe on Dec. 12, O'Kane, who is also a reading resource teacher at a Catholic school in Atlanta, told how Mary came into her life.

Growing up in a devoutly Catholic family, O'Kane found Mary everywhere: statues, prayer cards, scapulars, May crownings. Still, Mary seemed so perfect that O'Kane felt she could never measure up.

"Mary was supposed to be my model," she said. "How could I possibly be like her? She was so pure, so holy, and I was a brat. I was raised with Mary all around me, but I was unmoved. I basically did everything by rote."

O'Kane drifted away from the Catholic Church, but after she and husband, John, became parents, her interior life began to change. The O'Kanes realized they needed to attend Mass regularly. Moving to Atlanta, they became involved in activities in their new church. Bible study seemed so much richer than it had been when she was growing up.

"I couldn't believe this was the 'boring' Bible," she said.

Her women's group decided to pray the rosary. That, too, had always been boring for O'Kane, but she agreed to participate. At first, she mouthed the words, her mind on all the things she had to do.

During one rosary session, she saw herself as a child, wearing a tattered old dress and sitting apart from other children. She was ashamed of the way she looked. O'Kane sensed Mary's presence but didn't want to look at her. Still, she felt Mary reaching out "with a mother's love."

"She was not the unapproachable, sinless woman, but a loving mother," O'Kane said. "We had something in common: we were both mothers."

O'Kane realized, just as she loved her own children even when they were rebellious, that was how Mary loved her. From this realization, the rosary took on new meaning, and her spiritual life began to open up.

When she was asked to join a church choir, she agreed, even though she had never sung before. Choir members enjoyed being together and formed a couples' prayer group.

"Community is a powerful tool that God gives us to help us grow," O'Kane said. "Even our Lord needed 12 to walk with him."

As her spirituality grew, O'Kane felt she was being led to devote herself to Jesus through Mary. She had to struggle, though, "with the idea of giving myself totally to God to do with as he pleased."

Finally, realizing how much God had done for her, she made an act of consecration before an image of Our Lady of Guadalupe. A year later, driving her car, she found herself singing a new melody to Mary's canticle, "The Magnificat." It was the first music she had ever created.

"I could almost feel the incredible joy Mary felt as she kept the secret that she was to be the mother of God," O'Kane said. "Like Mary, I wanted to proclaim the greatness of God."

Untrained in music, she needed a friend to help her write the melody. Now, she said, the song is used all over the world in the Magnificat Ministry, a ministry to help women.

"If Mary is the mother of the church, and the church is the bride of Christ, doesn't that make Mary the mother of the bride?" O'Kane asked. "I believe that if we take Mary by the hand, she will help us to become that radiant bride."

Bill Barr of Our Lady of the Mountains Church in Highlands enjoyed hearing about O'Kane's "experience that brought her to know Mary; it was beautiful."

"We have known Elyse for 20 years; I think she's wonderful," said Bob Hauert of Immaculate Heart of Mary, who sang with O'Kane during the Mass. "As a matter of fact, she's the godmother of our youngest daughter, Elisabeth, so we are family."

O'Kane has placed her total trust in Mary.

"I know that if God entrusted his son to her, I must be entrusted to her as well," she said. "The world offers us plenty of difficulties. Maybe our jobs are difficult, maybe an illness in the family, maybe there are addictions....Mary will walk with us and teach us to trust as she did. All we have to do is ask her."

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Elyse O'Kane and Bob Hauert sing during her program at Immaculate Heart of Mary Church on the feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe, Dec. 12.

Honoring Our Lady

PHOTO BY CAROLE MCGROTTY

Father Oscar Gracias from Guatemala and Father Wilbur Thomas, pastor of the Basilica of St. Lawrence in Asheville, celebrated a bilingual Mass at the church celebrating the feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe Dec. 12. The feast day celebrates apparitions of Mary to Juan Diego, a devout Nahua Indian, on Tepeyac Hill in Mexico in December 1531. As a result of the apparitions and the miracles attributed to Mary, 8 million Mexicans converted to Catholicism within a few years.

Happy Holidays from
Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Interest Rate: 3.75%
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

Consolidate High-interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

No Payment until February 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams this holiday season.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

AFRICAN AMERICAN AFFAIRS MINISTRY
OF THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE

INVITES EVERYONE TO THE
ANNUAL MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. CELEBRATION

EMPOWERING OURSELVES FOR LEADERSHIP WITHIN OUR CHURCH AND COMMUNITY

FREE TO ALL BUT ADVANCE REGISTRATION REQUIRED

SATURDAY, JANUARY 10TH — 9 AM - 4 PM

OUR LADY OF CONSOLATION CHURCH
2301 STATESVILLE AVENUE, CHARLOTTE

OUTSTANDING NATIONALLY RECOGNIZED WORKSHOP PRESENTERS!

1. BECOMING ACTIVE IN PARISH LIFE
2. BECOMING ACTIVE IN POLITICAL LIFE

CLOSING LITURGY WITH

FR. MO WEST,
CHANCELLOR AND VICAR GENERAL

AND

FR. JUDE DUFFY,
PASTOR OF
OUR LADY OF CONSOLATION, CHARLOTTE

(PRESENTATIONS GEARED TO AGE 15 AND OLDER)

(LUNCH PROVIDED ONLY FOR THOSE PRE-REGISTERED BY JANUARY 5TH!)

PRE-REGISTRATION FORM: DUE BEFORE JANUARY 5TH!

NO. OF ATTENDANTS: _____

NAME _____

PHONE _____

EMAIL _____

SEND REGISTRATION FORM BY JANUARY 5TH TO: REV. MR. CURTISS TODD, 1123 SOUTH CHURCH STREET, CHARLOTTE, NC 28203 OR CALL: (704) 370-6299, OR EMAIL CPTODD@CHARLOTTEDIOCESE.ORG

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Two guides to the Bible for Catholics

REVIEWED BY MITCH FINLEY
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

"Getting to Know the Bible: An Introduction to Sacred Scripture for Catholics" belongs in the hands of any adult who wants a better, more adult understanding of the Bible. And it belongs in the hands of every Catholic teen, both those in parish youth programs and those in Catholic high schools.

This little book, written by Sulpician Father Melvin L. Farrell and now revised by Joseph McHugh, is an outstanding — and very affordable — introduction to the Bible and how to read it with understanding. Both adults and teens will find considerable light among the pages of "Getting to Know the Bible."

"Getting to Know the Bible: An Introduction to Sacred Scripture for Catholics," by Sulpician Father Melvin L. Farrell; revised by Joseph McHugh. ACTA Publications (Chicago, 2003). 112 pp., $6.95.

"Student Bible With Deuterocanonicals." Notes by Philip Yancey and Tim Stafford. Zondervan (Grand Rapids, Mich., 2003). 1,613 pp., plus maps, $34.99.

Written for Catholic readers, it answers, up front, the questions most crucial to truly understanding the Bible: questions about what the Bible is and is not, how it should and should not be read, and what it means and does not mean to say that the Bible is divinely inspired and the word of God.

Following a brief but informative introduction, it discusses first the Old Testament and then the New. It addresses major Old Testament personages, themes and literary forms, and how the Old Testament we know today came into being.

Next, an excellent overview explains that the New Testament, as a whole, is about the coming of the kingdom or reign of God. It then examines together the Gospels of Mark and Matthew, then the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles, and finally the Gospel of John. It discusses in clear, lively language the unique yet complementary approaches of these documents.

Moving along, the epistles of St. Paul can be difficult to grasp. The section on St. Paul in "Getting to Know the Bible" will clear up considerable misunderstanding of what the apostle was up to. This section alone is worth the price of the book.

Meanwhile, the dust jacket of Zondervan publishing's "Student Bible With Deuterocanonicals" says this edition is for Catholic readers. It is the Good News Translation of the Bible, long known as a clear and easy-to-read version. This new edition adds introductory comments by best-selling Protestant author Philip Yancey and Christianity Today writer Tim Stafford.

The material contributed by Yancey and Stafford is frequently enlightening, but Catholic observers may wonder why a Catholic writer wasn't asked to contribute to a study Bible designed for Catholic students. The perspectives of Yancey and Stafford are, naturally, shaped by the fact that they are Protestants. A Catholic contributor could have commented on the place of Scripture in the Mass, the role of the community of faith in reading and understanding Scripture, and the prominent place of the Bible in the lives of popular saints such as St. Therese of Lisieux and St. Maximilian Kolbe.

The only apparent adaptation of this student Bible to Catholic readers is the addition of a "reading plan tied to the Lectionary." But this is a case of too little, too late. This student Bible is a Bible for Protestant students, regardless of the dust jacket's suggestion that it's for Catholics.

If you're in the market for a good study approach to the Bible for Catholic students, save yourself considerable money. Use "Getting to Know the Bible" along with either the New Revised Standard Version Bible, Catholic Edition, or the New American Bible — both of which are available in relatively inexpensive editions.

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926

McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.

Charlotte 704-334-6421

Pineville 704-544-1412

Mint Hill 704-545-4864

Derita 704-596-3291

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: DEC. 21, 2003

Dec. 21, Fourth Sunday of Advent

Cycle C Readings:
1) Micah 5:1-4a
Psalm 80:2-3, 15-16, 18-19
2) Hebrews 10:5-10
3) Gospel: Luke 1:39-45

BY SHARON K. PERKINS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

I'm a person who was taught from an early age that it is impolite to inconvenience others; far better to inconvenience oneself. Thus, I think twice before asking others to change their schedules or depart from their usual routes or help with a project that is ultimately my responsibility. Even when I do make such a request, I usually look for an opportunity to return the favor as soon as possible or at least to express my profuse gratitude.

On the positive side, this approach can indicate a deeply rooted courtesy toward others. Taken to a scrupulous extreme, however, it can lead to great difficulty in legitimately asking others for help. Thus, when someone truly goes out of his or her way to assist me or offer a kindness, I always am shocked a little.

That's why I find this Gospel story so appealing. Elizabeth is shocked a little that Mary, who is herself with child, would travel "in haste" to the hill country — hardly an easy journey — to pay a visit. Given that this child is the Lord, she is even more surprised, as if the tables had somehow been turned. One would think that Elizabeth would be the one to visit Mary.

Yet, this story says a great deal about the way that Jesus and his mother Mary always go out of their way to visit you and me, even in the most unexpected times and places. In such encounters, the revelation can be so wonderful that our inner selves quicken and "leap for joy."

In 1956, the Christian author C.S. Lewis wrote an autobiography titled "Surprised by Joy." In telling of a spiritual journey that led him from the Christianity of his early youth into professed atheism and then back to Christianity, Lewis relates the surprising paradox of his search for God and the startling realization that God is actually the seeker.

During this Advent season, the Scriptures have urged us to be watchful for the coming of the Lord in our lives. As our hearts wait in expectant faith, let us yet rejoice in the knowledge that God is a God of surprises.

Questions:

When has someone gone out of his or her way and surprised you with an unexpected kindness? How did it make you feel? In what way has God surprised you with joy this Advent?

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 21 - DECEMBER 27

Sunday (Fourth Sunday of Advent), Micah 5:1-4, Hebrews 10:5-10, Luke 1:39-45; Monday (Late Advent Weekday), 1 Samuel 1:24-28, Luke 1:46-56; Tuesday (Late Advent Weekday), Malachi 3:1-4, 23-24, Luke 1:57-66; Wednesday (Late Advent Weekday), 2 Samuel 7:1-5, 8-11, 16, Luke 1:67-79; Thursday (The Nativity of the Lord), Isaiah 52:7-10, Hebrews 1:1-6, John 1:1-18; Friday (St. Stephen), Acts 6:8-10; 7:54-59, Matthew 10:17-22; Saturday (St. John), 1 John 1:1-4, John 20:2-8

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF DECEMBER 28 - JANUARY 3

Sunday (Holy Family of Jesus, Mary, and Joseph), Sirach 3:2-6, 12-14, Colossians 3:12-21, Luke 2:41-52; Monday (St. Thomas Becket), 1 John 2:3-11, Luke 2:22-35; Tuesday, 1 John 2:12-17, Luke 2:36-40; Wednesday (St. Sylvester I), 1 John 2:18-21, John 1:1-18; Thursday (Blessed Virgin Mary, the Mother of God), Numbers 6:22-27, Galatians 4:4-7, Luke 2:16-21; Friday (Sts. Basil and Gregory Nazianzen), 1 John 2:22-28, John 1:19-28; Saturday, 1 John 2:2—3:6, John 1:29-34

HELP!

The Catholic News & Herald is cleaning up the mailing list and we need your help!

If you are receiving more than one copy of this newspaper each week, please help us reduce costs by letting us know.

Call (704) 370-3333 any time
— leave a message and please spell your name.
or email: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org
or write: 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203

THANK YOU! THANK YOU! THANK YOU!

THE DAY AFTER

ACROSS
1 Partner of neither
4 Hitchcock movie
8 Teen's reply
12 Canadian cheese
13 Two-toed sloth
14 Broadway musical
15 Aquatic bird
16 English feast and subject of this puzzle
18 Delibes opera
20 Dryope sister
21 Pitcher handle
24 Babel sight
27 Nativity season
31 City in Paraguay
32 Spanish river
33 Musician ___ Law-Lata
34 Pod type?
35 Co.
36 First Christian martyr
39 Giant perch
41 Dagger handle
42 Spouse
44 Metrical feet
48 Twice a baker's dozen
52 Franken and Sharpton
53 Angel topper
54 Sumerian god
55 Morning star
56 Web addresses
57 Slander
58 "Quiet on the __!"

DOWN
1 Joyeux ___
2 Gumbo ingredient
3 Stature
4 Flemish painter
5 Mrs. Lennon
6 Latin peace
7 Deliver us from ___
8 __ Saxon
9 Align
10 Japanese City
11 Cast member of 50 Down Tina ___
17 Forget-me-___
19 French month
22 Immediately
23 Mennonite sect
25 Raison d' _
26 "He causes ___ to fall on the just and the unjust."
27 Manger, perhaps
28 Photographer
29 American painter
30 Italian city
36 Sieve
37 Potion
38 School organization
40 Greek island
43 "Bette Davis ___"
45 Catholic liturgy
46 Sad color
47 "___ it a Pity"
48 Wed follower
49 Battle
50 Comedy show (abbr)
51 Animator Mohamed ___

LAST WEEK'S ANSWERS

Not anti-Semitic, but too violent?

Vatican officials attend private screening of Gibson's 'The Passion'

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ROME — Just days after Mel Gibson refused to allow his film, "The Passion of Christ," to be shown at a Vatican-sponsored film festival, several Vatican officials were invited to private screenings in Rome and a copy was sent to Pope John Paul II.

It was not known if the pope had watched the film directed by Gibson.

The film was shown Dec. 4 and 6 in a small screening room in Rome to invited guests, including U.S. Archbishop John P. Foley, president of the Pontifical Council for Social Communications, U.S. Dominican Father Augustine DiNoia, undersecretary of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, and Msgr. Kevin C. McCoy, rector of the North American College.

Gibson, whose film is set for a February U.S. release, turned down a request for a private screening of the movie at a Dec. 2 conference that was part of a film festival co-sponsored by the Vatican.

Organizers of the festival said Gibson turned down the request because the film's final version had not been completed.

Father DiNoia told Catholic News Service the version he saw Dec. 4 obviously was not complete, but was nonetheless "powerful."

Asked if he thought the film was anti-Semitic, as some critics complained, he responded, "Absolutely not. On the contrary, in the 'calculus of blame' the Jewish authorities have a part — we all do — but it is the Roman soldiers" who carry the greatest blame in the film.

CNS PHOTO FROM ICON PRODUCTIONS

Jesus (Jim Caviezel) is approached by his mother Mary (Maia Morgenstern) as he carries his cross in "The Passion of Jesus Christ."

"By the end of the film," he said, "the only thing you are thinking about is your soul."

Msgr. McCoy sat through two screenings and said, "It is a very powerful film."

"It is strongly theological in the statement it makes on the sacrifice of Christ for the redemption of all mankind," he told CNS.

The film is violent, he said, but Jesus' crucifixion "was a very violent death."

As for charges that the film blames the Jews for the death of Jesus, the rector said, "When you ask the question, 'What happened here?' the real response is that Christ bore the sins of all of us."

Archbishop Foley was out of town Dec. 9 and unavailable for comment.

Another Vatican official who saw the film, but did not want to be named, said he found it much too violent.

"You cannot use Christ's passion the way other brutal, violent films do to make an impression on an audience," he said. "You cannot use the passion of Christ to provoke a reaction."

KTC Transportation Co. Inc

CALL 704-532-7605

Convention Services
Airport
Hotel
City Tours
Groups
Long & Short Tours
Beach Vacations
Games
Sports
Special Events

Fax 704-532-7661

www.ktctransportation.com

Home for the Holidays

We Can Share The Care!

Visiting Angels® can help put your family together this Holiday Season!

Visiting Angels® provides experienced caregivers to thousands of seniors each and every day across America.

You Select Your Caregiver!

Up to 24 Hour Care
Hygiene Assistance
Meal Preparation
Respite Family Care
Appointments / Errands
Rewarding Companionship
All Caregivers Thoroughly Screened

Bring Your Parents Home For The Holidays!

Call 704-549-4010

Visiting Angels® LIVING ASSISTANCE SERVICES

Learn more at: www.visitingangels.com/charlotte

The Franciscan Center
Catholic Gift & Book Store

CHRISTMAS IDEAS!! Cards, Ornaments, Nativities, Angels...
Plus Bibles, Religious Plaques, Medals, CDs, and over 700 book titles!

Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday

(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Catholic Social Services
Western Regional Office

Is currently seeking an Office Director for the western regional office in Asheville. This position's responsibilities include the supervision of staff and the delivery of programs including immigration services, refugee resettlement, counseling, international and domestic adoption; development and maintenance of relationships with the community and other agencies; identification of community needs and planned agency growth in response to those needs; development of financial and volunteer support in the community and service on the Management Team of Catholic Social Services of the Diocese of Charlotte, Inc. Qualifications include master's degree in social work or a related human service field and three years of experience in supervision and/or administration of social services programs.

Send resume and cover letter by January 5, 2004 to:

CSS/WRO
ATTN: Elizabeth Thurbee
50 Orange Street
Asheville, 28801

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CERTIFIED NURSING ASSISTANTS: Warm and caring for home care assignments. Full-time and part-time. Charlotte and surrounding areas. Call 704-945-7177.

DIOCESAN CAMPUS MINISTRY/ Adjunct Catholic Chaplin: For Davidson College. Graduate theology training required. Send resume, three reference letters, cover letter to: Mary Wright, Director of Campus Ministry, 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203-4003 by January 9.

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Experienced with master's in theology, religious education or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of faith formation to: Faith Formation Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org

YOUTH MINISTER: Experienced with degree or certification in youth ministry, theology or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of youth ministry to: Youth Ministry Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org.

FOR SALE

FSBO - BRICK EXECUTIVE HOME: 2758 Sq Ft., 4 BR, 3 full BR, bonus room, many upgrades inside and out. 30 minutes to uptown Charlotte, NOT using Interstate. Asking $295,000. 5205 Featherstone Ct., Gastonia. 704-824-9099 Nights.

FOR RENT

RETAIL STORE: 800 square foot building in Chimney Rock, NC in the heart of thriving tourist village. $1000/month. Call Peter O'Leary (828) 625-2479.

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Hussein's capture doesn't excuse war, cardinal says

HUSSEIN, from page 1

treated like a cow whose teeth are being examined. They could have spared us those pictures," he said. "I felt compassion for him."

The cardinal described Hussein as "a man of tragedy," with heavy responsibilities for the crimes he committed.

Asked if he thought it would be appropriate for a tribunal to consider imposing the death penalty, the cardinal said, "You know well that the pope has spoken repeatedly against capital punishment. I have spoken against capital punishment. The European Union has abandoned capital punishment; the international tribunals for Rwanda and Yugoslavia do not even consider imposing the death penalty."

He said the Vatican hopes "the trial will take place in an appropriate forum," but he said at least at this point the Vatican could not specify what would constitute an appropriate forum.

In Iraq, bishops and other church leaders said Hussein's detention would help the country "turn the page" in building social peace and order. But they, too, cautioned that violence would probably continue for some time in the country.

Pope John Paul made no official comment on Hussein's capture, but an informed Vatican official, who asked not to be identified, said the Vatican hoped Hussein's arrest would "help contribute to improving the security situation." But there were doubts that would happen, the official said, because Hussein appeared to have been isolated from insurgents.

According to U.S. authorities, Hussein was found in a one-man hole next to a two-room hut where he had been living.

The Vatican official said the Holy See hoped the dictator's capture would help "accelerate the involvement of Iraqis in the governing of their country" and help bring more involvement by the United Nations in postwar Iraq.

Chaldean Bishop Rabban Al-Qas of Amadiyah in northern Iraq said with the capture of Hussein, "the head of the serpent has been crushed."

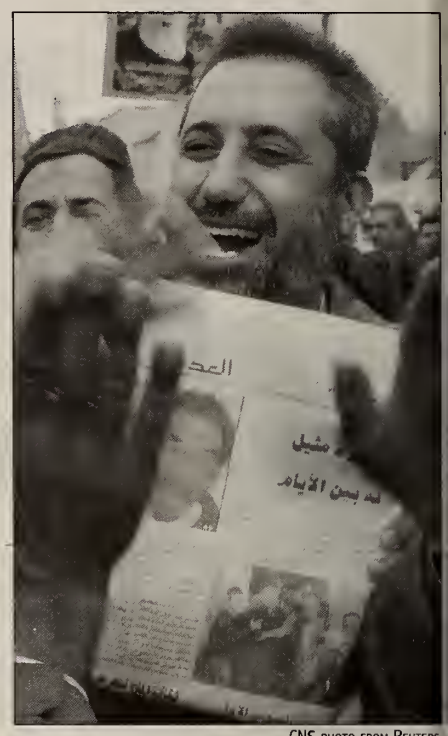
"The arrest of Saddam Hussein is a joy for all Iraqis, and also for us bishops. Finally the fear has been removed ... along with the suspicion that Saddam could reappear," Bishop Al-Qas said.

He said Saddam should now be tried in an Iraqi court.

"Even if he is a wicked man, his dignity should be respected. But he needs to confess his crimes, the millions of people he killed. Even Christian forgiveness supposes confession and expiation," he said.

Syrian-rite Father Nizar Semaan, who works in northern Iraq, said news of Hussein's capture was greeted with great joy among average Iraqis. But most people are aware it won't mean the automatic end to violence and terrorism in the country, he said.

"With the arrest of Saddam Hussein, a chapter of Iraqi history is ending, characterized by crimes against humanity, injustice, poverty, the embargo and emigration of young people in search of a better future," Father Semaan said. "Now we can turn the page."



CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Iraqi men in Baghdad celebrate the capture of Saddam Hussein Dec. 16. U.S. forces found the former Iraqi leader Dec. 13 hiding out at a farmhouse outside his hometown of Tikrit. The Vatican wants Hussein to receive a fair trial for alleged crimes during his long dictatorship, said a top church official.

Get out your pencil.

Choose all of the above.

For the retirement lifestyle of your size, choice, or combination, call today for pre-construction pricing. Reserve now — move later.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN at MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community
1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444
Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Good food and memories

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Mercy Sisters Jean Marie Kienast and Mary Andrew Ray, Msgr. Anthony Kovacic, Father Gabriel Meehan and Mercy Sister Mary John Madden look through photographs during a luncheon at the diocesan pastoral center in Charlotte Dec. 11. They were part of a group invited to help identify unlabeled photographs for diocesan Archives and The Catholic News & Herald.

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News & Herald."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD
CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

St. Patrick Cathedral

The Very Rev. Paul Gary, Rector
Rev. Lawrence LoMonaco, Parochial Vicar
Rev. Mr. Nicholas Fadero, Deacon
Rev. Mr. Carlos Medina, Deacon

CHRISTMAS EVE MASSES
4 p.m. - Children's Mass
6 p.m. - Children's Mass
Midnight - Bishop Peter Jugis

CHRISTMAS DAY MASSES
8 a.m., 9:30 a.m.
11 a.m. - Bishop Peter Jugis

NEW YEAR'S EVE MASS
Midnight Mass
Doors open at 11:00 p.m.
Bishop William Curlin

NEW YEAR'S DAY MASSES
9 a.m.
11 a.m. - Bishop Peter Jugis

1621 Dilworth Road East
Charlotte, NC 28203 (704) 334-2283
Visit our website at www.stpatricks.org

Come celebrate the Birth of Our Savior.

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

The gift of Christ

From the Bishop

MOST REV. PETER J. JUGIS
BISHOP OF CHARLOTTE

Our hearts are filled with joy each year as we celebrate the feast of Christmas.

God our Father showed his great mercy to us when he sent his only-begotten Son to be our Savior. Christ is the Son filled with grace and truth. Despite the passage of time, his birth still causes each succeeding generation to stand in awe of the greatness of the Father, who in his wisdom decreed such an amazing gift for our salvation.

As we receive the sacred Body and Blood of our Savior in communion this Christmas, we recall that the very purpose of Christ's coming was the supreme moment of his death and resurrection, of which the Holy Eucharist is the living memorial. He came into this world to bring about our salvation. We will hear the words spoken at Mass, "Take this all of you and eat it, this is my body. ... Take this all of you and drink from it, this is the cup of my blood..." and once again be in the presence of the living Savior.

In his encyclical on the Holy Eucharist this year, our Holy Father reminded us of the striking words Pope Paul VI once wrote in regard to the Eucharist: "[I]n objective reality, independently of our mind, the bread and wine have ceased to exist after the consecration, so that the adorable body and blood of the Lord Jesus from that moment on are really before us under the sacramental species of bread and wine."1

This fact of our Lord's presence rivets our attention on the most amazing gift which the Father gives us at Christmas — Christ our Lord. When we receive Holy Communion, our union with Christ is increased, the life of grace is preserved, increased, and renewed within us, and our charity is strengthened.2 How marvelous are the blessings the Father bestows upon us.

O Christ, saving Lord, sovereign majesty, gift of the merciful Father, come to our humble hearts again this Christmas.

1 Pope John Paul II, Ecclesia de Eucharistia, n. 15, quoting Pope Paul VI, Solemn Profession of Faith, 30 June 1968.

2 CCC 1391, 1392, 1394.

The story of "Silent Night"

The Bottom Line

ANTOINETTE BOSCO
CNS COLUMNIST

I would wager that everyone reading this column has felt the beauty and peace that shines from "Silent Night, Holy Night," the Christmas carol said to be loved around the world.

Stories of the origins of this beautiful song tell how Franz Xavier Gruber, organist at the Catholic church in Oberndorf, Austria, confronting a broken organ, composed the music for "Silent Night" on an old guitar on Christmas morning 1818. But rarely have we ever heard the whole story. Few know that the words had been written on that Christmas Eve by the 25-year-old priest assigned to that town, Father Joseph Mohr.

This Christmas, as we celebrate the 185th anniversary of "Silent Night," I wanted to tell the story of how I learned about the origins of my forever favorite Christmas carol. Several years ago, I was at a used-book sale, saw a thin, hardcover book, with its original attractive paper cover, titled "Silent Night, Holy Night: The True and Touching Story of the Greatest Christmas Song of All Time," published in 1933.

I grabbed it immediately. It was written by Frederick H. Jaenicken, in Chicago, who explained that the story emerged from his research with several historical societies in Austria. I was impressed with his account of the relationship between Father Mohr and Gruber, then 32 years old.

The priest had a spectacular tenor voice, and the organist was a baritone. They would often get together to sing in the church garden or rectory. Villagers would linger to listen and announce, "The pastor and teacher are singing again."

How they remained forever linked as inspired co-composers of the great Christmas hymn is an amazing story. On Christmas Eve 1818, a tired woman came to Father Mohr's door with a message from a young woodcutter whose wife had just given birth. He was asking if the priest would come and bless them. Father Mohr set out in the snowy night and made it to the cabin where he saw "a scene never to be forgotten — an infant on a bed of pine logs, a young mother, a husband glowing with joy." He said that "a strange radiance filled the room," and he was overwhelmed with the thought, "Jesus the Savior is here."

On the way back, his path lit by glittering snow and stars, he felt he was seeing symbols of everlasting light on this "silent night, holy night." The words stayed with him so powerfully that back at his study he sat at his desk and wrote the words we so well know.

Early in the morning, he brought his manuscript to Gruber, who was "visibly animated" by the beauty in the words he read. Both men knew these should be set to music. Gruber was devastated that the organ was broken. Father Mohr saw the old guitar on the wall and said to his friend, "Let this be your instrument."

Before the afternoon Christmas service, Gruber had composed the music to fit the young priest's words. The people it is said, were "spellbound" as they heard the beautiful voices of their priest and organist singing "Silent Night."

The song might have been lost and forgotten if not for an organ repairman who rediscovered it a year later. This, too, is a great story — perhaps for next year.

Jaenicken ended his lovely book, in those troubled days of the world's history, with his belief that "Silent Night" has an everlasting spiritual mission: "It is a prayer for harmony and better understanding among all nations cries out above the troubled regions of the earth."

Let us sing — and remember this!

Christmas should bring hope, help ease life's burdens

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — In a world that often seems overburdened by problems and conflicts, the celebration of Christmas should bring a sense of hope, Pope John Paul II said.

The coming of Christ should also remind people that there is more to life than material well-being and economic progress, the pope said at his weekly general audience Dec. 17.

The pontiff looked fit as he addressed some 6,000 pilgrims who packed the Vatican audience hall. However, he skipped over half of his prepared speech, and his words were hard to understand.

In his talk, the pope spoke philosophically about the impact of Christmas on people's daily lives. Above all, it should bring encouragement to those who feel dispirited by life's many difficulties, he said.

"Every person dreams of a more just world, where decent living conditions and peaceful coexistence make for harmonious relations between individuals and peoples," he said.

"Often, however, it's not like that. Obstacles, conflicts and problems of various kinds weigh upon our existence and sometimes nearly oppress it. The strength and courage to work for the good risk giving in to evil, which sometimes seems to gain the upper hand," he said.

Especially in moments like this, Christmas should bring a ray of hope, he said. The celebration of Christ's birth should remind people that God does not forget his promises, and is always with us, he said.

Christmas should also prompt people to widen their vision and contemplate the meaning of their own lives, the pope said.

"Not infrequently, one asks oneself: Who are we? Where are we going? What sense is there to what we do on earth, and what awaits us after death?" he said.

The pope said there are certainly worthy earthly goals, including material comfort, social and scientific advances, as well as individual and community projects.

"But are these goals enough to satisfy the most intimate aspirations of our soul?" he said.

The pope said Christmas invites people to "rise above the daily routine" and reflect on God's alliance with man and his generosity in sending his son as savior.

The audience was enlivened by brief performances by choirs and singing groups from many countries. A decorated Christmas tree stood to one side of the papal stage.

Because of the pope's Christmas schedule, it was his last weekly general audience of the year. The Vatican released statistics showing that in 2003 more than 501,700 people attended 48 general audiences. That was more than 90,000 more than the year before.

In his 25-year pontificate, the pope has presided over 1,112 general audiences at the Vatican. At the end of 2003, the total number of people who have attended the audiences was 17,138,200, the Vatican said.

Later on Dec. 17, in a ceremony that combined Christmas songs and short speeches, the Vatican's Christmas tree was lit in St. Peter's Square. The tree, a 110-year-old blue red spruce that stood about 90 feet tall, came from the Valle d'Aosta region in northern Italy where the pope has vacationed several times during the summer.

The pope in 1982 began the practice of having a Christmas tree and a giant Nativity scene erected in St. Peter's Square. Over the years, the pontiff has said he enjoys watching from his apartment as hundreds of families come to view the creche and tree.

A heart to do more

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

Musical star Billy Ray Cyrus was a recent guest on our syndicated television program, Christopher Closeup. When I mentioned to friends that he'd be on our show, people tended to smile and say, "You mean the 'Achy-Breaky Heart' song guy?" Folks seem inclined to think of Cyrus as a one-hit wonder. He is, in fact, much more. His albums have sold over 14 million copies. He's an in-demand actor, having appeared in film director David Lynch's "Mulholland Drive." He stars in the PAX Network's top-rated series, "Doc."

The man I remember from that big hit song was a ladies man not known for settling down. That's all changed. Cyrus says he came to see the fast life was, in the end, vacuous. He was left with an emptiness he couldn't shake. His first marriage ended badly. But he got a second chance to enjoy life and love. He's become a dedicated family man who relishes the role of father of six children. He delights in playing with them and knowing that they see him as a true and loyal friend.

The choice of his TV series is no accident either. Cyrus was enjoying some success in Hollywood, but it wasn't fulfilling. That, he suggested, was because his parts weren't celebrating the greatness of the human spirit. Then along came "Doc," the story of Dr. Clint Cassidy, a country doctor who moves to New York City to practice medicine. Healing the bodies and the hearts of those entrusted to his care, the title role exemplifies the good in humanity. Now, Cyrus feels like he's doing something of value. Who'd expect the "Achy Breaky Heart" man to use the powerful medium of television to affirm the best in our nature? But he does.

Cyrus also told us he knows what its like to be in real need. Some years ago, he had to live out of his car, trying to get by while singing in roadside bars. He hasn't forgotten the experience. And he believes when God blesses you with talent and opportunity, you've got an obligation to remember those in need and to give something back. He's often on the road, not just for concerts, but for charity. He's this year's spokesperson for the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots program. He delights in the notion of bringing Christmas joy to kids who might otherwise experience a bleak holiday. This effort for kids is only the most recent of his charitable efforts. In fact, he has won several humanitarian awards including the first Bob Hope Congressional Medal of Honor Society Entertainer's Award for his dedication to philanthropy.

Cyrus's Christopher Closeup conversation also turned to an open expression of faith. Knowing everything he has is a gift and a blessing, he now recognizes life without a spiritual center misses something vital. While raised in a religious family (in fact, his grandfather was a Pentecostal minister), Cyrus had long ago drifted from the faith. Too much disappointment in life gave him a jaded sense of God.

That's changed. Looking for meaning in his life, Cyrus found it in God and living for others, especially his wife and children. He's just produced "The Other Side," his first album specifically to celebrate the peace that God, family and giving to others have given him.

"I prayed that my music would be heard around the world and that God would give me the vision to use my music to do good things," he said. "So I am going to see and be with as many needful and sick children as I can."

And all this from a public figure I thought I knew. I learned the valuable lesson of never judging a person by a reputation.

Life gives us many choices and chances to prove ourselves. May our hearts guide us well.

Jingle all the way to the mall

Murray's Musings

KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas.

Everywhere you turn, signs of the holiday season are evident — Santa and his elves in every store window, inflatable snowmen atop car dealerships, parking lots with rows of trees for sale, blinking lights and wreaths strung every which way, and so on.

Yep, it's obvious Christmas is a'coming. But where's it going? For many, the holidays are a depressing time of year, a reminder of things they don't have or simply can't afford. For others, Christmas is only equated with bumper-to-bumper traffic around shopping areas and ridiculously long lines at the mall.

A 2000 Gallup poll found eight percent of U.S. adults don't even know Christmas celebrates the birth of Jesus! Then again, Christianity has been all but stripped from the holiday made-for-TV movies; folks are forced to have "holiday parties" at work, not Christmas parties; and it's OK to put up bells and holly at city hall, just don't display the Ten Commandments or a manger scene.

To some, Christmas time is a bargain hunter's delight. Early to bed and early to rise and rejoice — ye may find discounted sale items, so long as supplies last. I'd be curious to ask what Christmas means to the woman recently trampled in Wal-Mart by frantic hordes trying to snatch up $29 DVD players. I just won't ask her to whistle "Jingle Bells."

That same Gallup poll also found 85 percent of U.S. adults believe Christmas has become too commercialized. Forty-two percent said the holiday would be more enjoyable without exchanging gifts.

I couldn't agree more.

Now, I'm no Scrooge, but I do feel as if I'm being coerced into helping drive the commercial machine that has become Christmas. Like many others, I must buy everyone I know gifts simply because it's Christmas and that's what is expected. What will people think if you don't buy a gift for someone?

And in actuality, I have no idea what my distant second cousin's three-year-old wants or needs, no more than ol' Uncle Leo knows what I want or need, but we'll all be at the same party so out we go, braving the holiday shopping madness to buy something, anything, to be unwrapped at Christmas. Sadly, the majority of these gifts will be returned, not appreciated or re-gifted to somebody else.

But it's the thought that counts, they tell me. Just don't tell that to my nieces and nephews after they open their gazillion gifts and ask, "Is that it?"

It's a shame we seem to have lost track of the true meaning of Christmas. But who has time to think about Jesus when there's a shopping list to make?

Well, if it's the thought that counts, then this year I'm going to be truly thoughtful and take a stand. After we've all exchanged gifts 'round the ol' Christmas tree, and everyone notices they didn't get anything from me, I'm going to draw my family in and offer them all a warm, loving hug. Even Uncle Leo, who often smells like an old sock soaked in bourbon. I may end up wearing the eggnog, but at least my gift will be unique — and if this gift is returned, I won't complain!

And, dear readers, I would like to extend a nice Christmas hug to all of you as well. Come now, lean in ... a little further ... there you go. Now enjoy the embrace. Ah. Doesn't that feel nice? Better than any store-bought gift, no?

To all of you, I wish you well in braving the madness that has become the holidays. Most of all, I hope you find a quiet moment to truly revel in what Christmas really means, and that you do so with your loved ones.

As for lil' ol' me? My shirt size is XL, shoe size is 12, I prefer silver over gold jewelry and my complexion goes well with dark or earth tone colors. I also could use a new watch, nothing fancy.

Merry Christmas!

The place for Penance

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. Is it mandatory now to receive the sacrament of penance behind a screen? Many people prefer to go face-to-face, but that is not allowed in our parish.

For years we understood either way is permitted. Has that changed? Can a priest decide only one way is allowed? (Iowa)

A. As of a few years ago, a priest has permission to make that decision for anyone who comes to him for confession.

The 1973 revision of the Roman Ritual for the sacrament of penance provided that conferences of bishops should determine "the place proper for the ordinary celebration of the sacrament of penance" (38). Fixed grates or grills between penitent and confessor should always be provided, however, so those who wish to use them can do so (Canon 964).

Priests, especially pastors, are to "choose a place more suitable for the celebration according to the regulations of the conferences of bishops so the entire celebration may be enriching and effective" (40).

The following year, the conference of bishops decreed for the United States it is desirable that reconciliation rooms be provided in which people might choose to confess either face-to-face or kneel to speak with the priest anonymously through a stationary screen. This is to what most Catholics have become accustomed.

In July 1998, the Pontifical Council for Interpretation of Legislative Texts said priests have the right to refuse face-to-face confessions, even if penitents request it.

For a just reason, said the document, "and excluding cases of necessity (emergencies, in hospitals, when patients are dying at home, etc.) the minister of the sacrament can legitimately decide, even in the event the penitent asks otherwise, that sacramental confession be received in a confessional equipped with a fixed grill."

In 1999, the U.S. bishops reiterated the choice open to people to confess either way, but noted that the 1998 Vatican interpretation is still in force.

Why did the Vatican agency require this change? When the new interpretation was presented, a council official referred to two reasons. Confessing behind a grill is an ancient practice. And it "responds to the need for prudence."

"It is a protection against human weakness both on the part of the priest as well as on the part of the penitent," he said. "The sacrament of confession should not be an occasion of sin for either priest or penitent."

To answer your question, if a priest feels he should hear confessions only with a grill between him and the penitent for these or other "just" reasons, the ritual gives him permission to do so.

Holy Spirit Church a tribute to faithfulness of growing congregation

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

Holy Spirit Church in Denver was once an elementary school considered a landmark in Lincoln County.

DENVER — Church is defined as both the company of Christian faithful and the building in which they worship. The history of Denver's Holy Spirit congregation includes a period of years without a structure to call its own; hence, the two-fold definition indeed applies.

Then-Bishop Michael J. Begley of Charlotte established a mission in Denver during the late 1970s, as the Catholic population in the area had been growing over the years. With no building in which to worship as a Catholic family, Father Carlo Tarasi, then pastor of St. Dorothy Church in Lincolnton, celebrated the mission's first Mass at St. Peter by-the-Lake Episcopal Church in nearby Westport in March 1979.

Father Dennis Fotinos, vicar of St. Peter by the Lake Episcopal Church at the time, had extended an invitation to the Catholic mission to use the Westport facility for worship. Approximately 20 people came together to worship as a Catholic community.

HOLY SPIRIT CHURCH
537 N. Highway 16
Denver, N.C. 28037
(704) 483-6448

Vicariate: Gastonia
Pastor: Father Joseph Ayathupadam
Deacon: Rev. Mr. Richard Kauth
Number of Families: 330

Father Joseph Ayathupadam

That message of welcome marked the beginning of a nine-year stretch in which the mission congregation gathered on Saturday evenings for Mass in the Episcopal church. Pastors from St. Dorothy Church continued their administration of the Denver faithful, with occasional assistance from the Benedictine monks of Belmont Abbey.

With weekly Masses continuing at St. Peter by-the-Lake Episcopal Church — and the local Catholic population growing — the mission family began to yearn for a spiritual home of its own. By 1987, when more than 100 families were worshipping together, Father Charles Rooks moved the mission Mass time from Saturday to Sunday. The switch led to the congregation being moved from St. Peter by-the-Lake Episcopal Church to the East Lincoln Optimist Club building.

Finally, in May 1988, the Diocese of Charlotte purchased from Lincoln County a structure that once housed Triangle School on 6.5 acres of land. The 7,300 square foot building, considered a community landmark, had served as an elementary school from 1925 to 1986.

That development marked a new phase in the mission's history. A renovation project ensued during the summer into the autumn, resulting in a nave, sanctuary, offices, classrooms, living quarters and space for social events. Many excited parishioners were active in the remodeling of the facility.

The new church was ready for Christmas in 1988, and the first Mass was celebrated Dec. 25. Then-Bishop John F. Donoghue blessed the structure in May 1989.

In 1991, the Holy Spirit Church family began its annual Septemberfest, a church carnival whose proceeds have helped reduce church debt.

By 1996, about 265 families worshipped at Holy Spirit Church, which was by then a mission of St. Therese Church in Mooresville. On May 31, 1998, Holy Spirit Church was officially designated as a parish in a ceremony presided by then-Bishop William G. Curlin.

In July of that same year, a new rectory was purchased and furnished.

In early 1999, continued parish growth led the pastoral council to conduct a survey to assist in determining parish needs. With approximately 60 percent of the families participating in the survey, the results indicated a pressing need for classrooms, youth activities and programs and parish-wide activities.

Growth projections were conducted by the diocesan Office of Planning and, based on these projections and the survey results, an in-depth parish profile was authorized that was completed and approved by the Diocese of Charlotte in December 2000. During the summer of 2001, plans were finalized for a parish activities center with the actual campaign initiated in September 2001.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis presided over the activity center's groundbreaking ceremony Dec. 7, 2003, with Father Joseph Ayathupadam, pastor, and Rev. Mr. Richard Kauth participating.

During the ceremony, Bishop Jugis gave a brief homily that rendered honor and praise to the parishioners of Holy Spirit.

A booklet on the history of Holy Spirit Church is available. Contact the church at (704) 483-6448.

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue: 10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection
Drivers wanted.
Lowest Prices
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

JANUARY 2, 2004 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 14

Parish Profile: Our Lady of the Annunciation Church

| PAGE 12

PRIESTS IN THE MAKING

Three seminarians ordained to transitional diaconate

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Three seminarians of the Diocese of Charlotte have taken another step toward the priesthood.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis ordained Rev. Messrs. Timothy Reid, Robert Conway and John Starczewski to the transitional diaconate during a special Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte Dec. 21, 2003.

"God has chosen a special calling for you, and has tenderly formed you," said Bishop Jugis to the candidates. 'How marvelous is the call you have received."

The candidates, whom the bishop called "ministers of the charity of Christ," committed themselves to celibacy and to the obligations of ministry — serving the sick, the poor, the needy.

"Your attention must be riveted on Christ at every moment," said Bishop Jugis.

See DEACONS, page 5

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis and others pray the litany of the saints as Timothy Reid, Robert Conway and John Starczewski lay prostrate during their diaconate ordination Dec. 21.

PEACE, JUSTICE, LUNCH

Just Second Fridays to offer topics on justice, business ethics

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — In the midst of a busy workday, it will soon be possible to add a side of justice to your lunch.

John Carr, secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference of Bishops Department of Social Development and World Peace, will this month kick off the diocesan Office of Justice and Peace's educational luncheon speaker series. "Just Second Fridays," which will be held the second Friday of every month, will cover a variety of topics on justice, peace and business ethics.

"The goal of the program is to develop in the hearts and minds of attendees a rhythm of being engaged on an ongoing basis in theological and ethical

See JUSTICE, page 6

Field of food

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

St. Matthew Church parishioners organize baskets of food and paper products at the Pastoral Center Dec. 22. St. Matthew Food Pantry Ministry collected enough for 150 needy families.

PROTECTING GOD'S CHILDREN

Bishops' child protection charter has numerous mandates for dioceses

Diocese of Charlotte receives two commendations

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — The Diocese of Charlotte was credited for its compliance in following guidelines for the protection of children and youths.

According to Bishop Peter J. Jugis, in August 2003, independent auditors found the Diocese of Charlotte to be compliant with the "Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People."

When the U.S. bishops adopted their charter in 2002, they said, "We pledge ourselves to act in a way that manifests our accountability to God, to his people and to one another in this grave matter" of clergy sexual abuse of minors.

The charter established a National Review Board and an Office for Child and Youth Protection to ensure bishops comply with the policy decisions spelled out in the charter and the legally binding "Essential Norms" accompanying it.

But most of the charter and norms were directed at dioceses themselves, with specific policies and procedures all dioceses were mandated to implement. Last summer and fall, the youth protection office sent independent auditors to every diocese and eparchy — Eastern-rite diocese — to assess their compliance with those mandates.

A detailed national

See AUDIT, page 7

Breaking ground
More room for Holy Angels
| PAGE 4

Priest assignments
New vicars forane, others
| PAGE 5

Perspectives
Columns, Letters to the Editor
| PAGES 10-11

#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
#420836#
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

FAR OUT: SMALL VILLAGE CHURCH ENDURES IN ALASKAN BUSH COUNTRY

CNS PHOTO BY KELLY DUFORT, CATHOLIC ANCHOR

Marita Gardiner and Holy Cross Father LeRoy Clementich stand outside the small St. Peter the Fisherman Church in the Alaskan fishing village of Clark's Point. Gardiner meets the priest at the gravel airstrip in her four-wheel all-terrain vehicle when he visits about twice a month from Anchorage.

Heat being added to church in Alaskan village

CLARK'S POINT, Alaska (CNS) — Although Clark's Point in southwest Alaska has no priest, the Yup'ik fishing village of 65 residents does have a church.

But with no heat or electricity, St. Peter the Fisherman Church has been used only during the summer for about the last 12 years. About eight months out of the year, parishioners worship in living rooms or at the town's only school.

But the 15 or so parishioners in Clark's Point plan to winterize the church with help from members of parishioner Ann Martin's home-town parish, Church of the Assumption in Franklin, La.

The small church is a simple rectangular shape; it has a sloping roof, a rusty gas stove in the corner and the austerity of a one-room schoolhouse.

The church, built in the early 1950s with donated building supplies and help from villagers, sits on stilts to protect it from flooding.

"There was so much love, so much faith, so much fellowship. With every nail that was pounded, every (piece of) wood that was cut — it was community," said Domingo Floresta, who as a young man helped his father build the church.

"The church looks kind of lovely sitting out there on the flats," Holy Cross Father LeRoy Clementich said after a recent visit to the village.

He is the latest in a long line of "supply priests" who have ministered to Clark's Point Catholics for almost 60 years.

Based 350 miles away in Anchorage, Father Clementich flies to the village twice a month in the summer. He comes less often in the winter when bad weather can often prevent flying and the short daylight sharply restricts the time available for landing and taking off from the village's unlighted, gravel landing strip.

Parishioner Marita Gardiner picks up Father Clementich on her four-wheeler, an all-terrain vehicle used extensively in the Alaskan bush.

While there aren't as many people to fill the town or the pews these days, St. Peter the Fisherman Church "has a name and a history; it's important to them," Father Clementich said.

Martin is eager to worship in the church year-round and to find solace within its walls. "When things are down, you need a place to go and just know someone is listening," she said.

Bishops' official decries panel's OK on emergency contraception

WASHINGTON (CNS) — A Dec. 16 recommendation to the Food and Drug Administration to make emergency contraception available without a doctor's prescription was described as a "reckless experiment" by a spokeswoman for the U.S. bishops.

"A drug which destroys human embryos and puts women at greater risk of ectopic pregnancy does not belong on the shelves of a drugstore," said Cathy Ruse, director of planning and information for the pro-life secretariat at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The Nonprescription Drugs Advisory Committee and the Advisory Committee for Reproductive Health Drugs voted 23-4 in favor of a proposal to allow the "Plan B" emergency contraception to be sold over the counter.

The final decision rests with the FDA, which is expected to act in February. The FDA will also decide if customers should request the pills from pharmacists or if the pills would simply be located on drugstore shelves.

Approved on a prescription-only basis in 1999, the petition to make Plan B more widely available was filed by Women's Capital Corporation, Plan B's distributor, a move Ruse described as being "about a drug company that wants to sell more drugs to women."

She also noted the pills, which use a form of the synthetic hormone progestin called levonorgestrel to block ovulation and fertilization of the egg, are being "marketed and advertised as a contraceptive," but they can work before and after conception and women "deserve to know what is being marketed to them."

Ruse said making this drug available without a prescription poses serious health risks to women because the drug is associated with an increased risk of ectopic pregnancy, a potentially fatal complication.

Diocesan planner

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Please call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — A Service of Lessons and Carols will be present on the Epiphany, Jan. 4, at 7 p.m. at St. Vincent de Paul Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd. A reception will follow in the Activity Center. For more information, call the church at (704) 554-1622.

CHARLOTTE — Just Second Fridays is a luncheon speaker series on social justice topics that meets the second Friday of each month, 1-2 p.m. in the Annex Building of St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St. Parking is available in the underground garage next to the church. John Carr will discuss "Faithful Citizenship: A Catholic Call to Social Responsibility" Jan. 9. For details call (704) 370-3225.

CHARLOTTE — St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., will host a Christian Coffeehouse Jan. 10 at 7:30 p.m. Single and married adults are invited for an evening of contemporary Christian music, food and fellowship. For more information, call Kathy Bartlett at (704) 400-2213.

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., is sponsoring a program to welcome back inactive Catholics and/or those who have left the Church but are interested in returning to the practice of the Catholic faith. The Catholics Returning Home series will meet Jan. 11-Feb. 15, 3:30-5 p.m. For more information, call Sue Johnson at (704) 333-8028.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information, call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

CHARLOTTE — The Cancer Support Group for survivors, family and friends meets the first Tuesday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. For more information, call Marilyn Borrelli at (704) 542-2283.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

JANUARY 2, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 14

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published b the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Churc St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except fo Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durin June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishe of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per ye for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserve the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deeme appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-cla postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citie POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 3726 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Vatican clears way for canonization of Italian mother who died to save baby girl

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — An Italian mother who declined medical treatment that might have saved her life but caused the death of the child she was carrying probably will be canonized in 2004.

The miracle needed for the canonization of Blessed Gianna Beretta Molla was recognized formally Dec. 20 during a Vatican ceremony presided over by Pope John Paul II.

Cardinal Jose Saraiva Martins, prefect of the Congregation for Saints' Causes, said Blessed Molla, a pediatrician, "lived her marriage and her maternity with joy, generosity and absolute fidelity to her mission."

"During her fourth pregnancy, she freely decided to sacrifice her life to save the baby that she carried in her womb," he said.

Near the second month of her pregnancy, she was diagnosed with a uterine tumor. Knowing the risk to her own life, she refused medical treatment that would have threatened the life of the baby. She died in 1962, a week after giving birth to a girl.

The miracle recognized by the Vatican also involved a pregnancy at risk. In 2000, in the third month of her fourth pregnancy, Elisabete Arcolino Comparini, a Brazilian, learned the baby she was carrying would die because the amniotic sac had broken; she and her husband prayed for the intercession of Blessed Molla and the fetus' heart continued beating.

The following May, the woman gave birth to a healthy baby girl.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians, Guilford County, Division I, an Irish Catholic social, cultural and charitable inter-parish group will meet Jan. 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Kloster Center of St. Pius X Church, N. Elm St. and Cornwallis Dr. All Catholic women of Irish birth or descent are welcome. RSVP to Elaine McHale, President, (336) 292-1118 to attend meeting.

GREENSBORO — The Adult Faith Formation ministry of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St., will present "A Tale of Faith and Medicine" Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. A physician will share his journey of faith that led him to truly give the gift of life to a young woman. For more information, call the church office at (336) 272-4681.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For more information, call the church office at (828) 327-2341.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

SALISBURY — Sacred Heart Church, 128 N. Fulton St., celebrates a Charismatic and Healing Mass the first Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. Prayer and worship with prayer teams will be available at 3 p.m., and a potluck dinner will follow the Mass. Father John Putnam, pastor, will be the celebrant. For further information, call Bill Owens at (704) 639-1837.

MOORESVILLE — Seniors ages 55 and up are invited to St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., the second Saturday of each month following the 5:30 Mass for Senior Games Night, featuring games and a potluck dinner. Call Barbara Daigler at (704) 662-9752 for details.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

WAYNESVILLE — The Catholic Women's Circle of St. John's Catholic Community meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the church hall. For more information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707.

FRANKLIN — The Women's Guild of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 299 Maple St., meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center. The meetings feature guest speakers and special events periodically. For more information, call Claire Barnable at (828) 369-1565.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Fraternity of St. Clare invites anyone interested in learning about the Secular Franciscan Order, the Third Order founded by St. Francis of Assisi, and the Franciscan way of life to an orientation meeting Jan. 13, 6:00-7:30 p.m. at Our Lady of Fatima Chapel, 211 W. Third Street. For more information, contact Joanne Jacovec at (336) 765-8892 or sfojmj@aol.com.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Pope says his work has only one aim: proclaiming Christ's Gospel

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II said his 25 years of service as pope and the daily efforts of everyone who works in the Vatican have only one aim: "To proclaim the Gospel of Christ for the salvation of the world."

Meeting with cardinals and Vatican officials Dec. 22 to offer his Christmas greetings, the pope said love for Christ and for humanity was the motivation for the trips he made, the documents he wrote, the meetings he held and the ceremonies he celebrated in 2003.

During the audience, the pope also prayed for the gift of peace for the world.

To be witnesses for peace and to educate for peace are urgent "in these our days when risks and threats to peaceful human coexistence still darken the horizon," the pope said.

The pope said Catholics today must have the same optimism Blessed Pope John XXIII showed 40 years ago in his encyclical, "Peace on Earth."

"Peace remains possible today and, if it is possible, it is an obligation," Pope John Paul said.

Europe, he said, needs saints and models of holiness and the beatifications and canonizations he celebrated during the year offered Europe great examples, including Mother Teresa of Calcutta, who was born of Albanian parents.

The pope said Blessed Mother Teresa was an "icon of the good Samaritan who became for all, believers and nonbelievers, a messenger of love and peace."

The 83-year-old pope told the cardinals and Vatican officials, "With the passing of the years, I become ever more deeply aware of this: Jesus asks us to be his witnesses, concerned only with his glory and the good of souls."

The pope said that was why in April he issued his encyclical letter on the Eucharist; it was why he traveled to Spain, Croatia, Bosnia-Herzegovina and Slovakia and why he tried "to intensify ecumenical contacts" with representatives of the Orthodox churches and the Anglican Communion.

Iraqi Christmas

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

U.S. soldiers join Iraqi children in enjoying their presents at an orphanage operated by the Missionaries of Charity in Baghdad Dec. 19. The 18th Military Police Brigade with help from the sisters organized the Christmas party for youngsters from the center and the surrounding neighborhood. The orphanage opened following the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

THIS MONTH IN—1997

CELEBRATING 25 YEARS

Then-Bishop William G. Curlin and other dignitaries gathered to celebrate the Diocese of Charlotte's 25th anniversary and Bishop Emeritus Michael J. Begley's 25th anniversary of his episcopal ordination at St. Matthew Church Jan. 12, 1997. More than 500 people attended the jubilee Mass.

BREAKING GROUND

More room for Holy Angels

Facility breaks ground for fifth group home

BELMONT — The N.C. Division of Facility Services has approved Holy Angels' Certificate of Need to build a fifth Intermediate Care Facility for the Mentally Retarded (ICF/MR) group home on the main campus in Belmont.

The official groundbreaking for the new 15-bed facility was held Dec. 18. The Certificate of Need (CON) for 22 beds also will allow Holy Angels to add an additional seven beds to the current eight-bed Belhaven ICF/MR group home, located on the Holy Angels campus.

Residents who currently live in the Holy Angels Specialized Residential Community Center, or Main Center, will move into the new group home.

"I am pleased about the decision," said Regina Moody, Holy Angels' president and CEO. "I know it means a great deal to the families and friends of those residents who will now be able to continue making their home at Holy Angels."

Holy Angels, founded in 1956 by the Sisters of Mercy, is a private, nonprofit corporation that provides residential services and innovative programs for children and adults with varying degrees of mental retardation and physical disabilities, some of whom are medically fragile.

Programs include the Holy Angels Residential Center, four Community Group Homes, four ICF/MR group homes, Little Angels Child Development Center, Great Adventures, Camp Hope and Cherubs Café & Candy Bouquets in downtown Belmont.

Supporters of the group home asked the state to once again allow construction near the Main Center so those residents who have severe and profound mental retardation, physical disabilities and who have complex medical conditions, can be near medical and healthcare resources.

The four existing ICF/MR group homes are located on the main campus. The residents who live in them benefit from their proximity to the Fisher Health Care Center and other programs and services offered in the Main Center.

"This groundbreaking is truly a wonderful event for Holy Angels," said Moody. "Our commitment to provide programs and services for children and adults with mental retardation and physical disabilities is strong."

"We are ready to take this next step in our history, which began when a young mother brought her infant daughter to the Sisters of Mercy for their help," she said. "The children's families, our staff, volunteers, donors and the community at-large have shown great support for this home and project through their letters of support (over 100) submitted with the CON application.

The new home will include bedrooms, a kitchen, dining room and living room and space for recreation, therapy and day programs. It is projected the new construction will cost an estimated $3.5 million. Funding sources will include grants and private donors.

The current plan is to complete the seven-bed addition to Belhaven by early spring 2005. Construction for the new home should be completed in time to kick-off Holy Angels' 50th anniversary celebration in December 2005.

During the groundbreaking ceremonies Dec. 18, Maria, Holy Angels' first resident, celebrated her 48th birthday.

Sisters of Mercy award grants

BELMONT — Sisters of Mercy of North Carolina Foundation announced Dec. 15 grants totaling $757,567 to 28 nonprofit organizations in 13 N.C. counties.

The funds will be used for a variety of purposes, including children's services, education, food distribution, immigration assistance, job training, literacy skills, elderly services and social services.

The organizations include: Alzheimer's Assocation, Western Carolina Chapter, Asheville; Burke County Literacy Council, Morganton; Central Avenue Bilingual Preschool, Charlotte; Christian Love Ministries, Murphy; Highland Family Resource Center, Gastonia; and Meals on Wheels of Rowan, Salisbury.

For more information, call (704) 366-0087 or go online at www.somncfdn.org.

Playing Christmas

COURTESY PHOTO

Third-graders at St. Ann School in Charlotte perform the school Christmas play each year. This year's cast included (pictured) Gabriel Thamm, Susan Park, Meredith Ferraris, Ashley Francis and Jonathan Nguyen as angels; Kaitlyn Sommer as Mary; Tyler Ross as Joseph; and Donavan Perkins as the eagle.

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News & Herald."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

Carolina Volkswagen

7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte

(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection

Drivers wanted.

Lowest Prices

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction! C'mon in and see why!

Leave a Legacy Through an Endowment

When you establish an endowment with the diocesan foundation, you...

Enable Perpetual Support. Every year, your "legacy" flows with financial aid to the ministry you choose.

Ensure a Strong Future. Allow a parish, school, agency or the diocese to look ahead and plan with confidence.

Enact a Lasting Legacy. Provide your loved ones with a continuing reminder of your values – your faith and the mission of the church.

The Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

For more information contact Gina Rhodes, Director of Planned Giving, 704-370-3320, or Jim Kelley, Director of Development, 704-370-3301, 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203, gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org

Three new deacons in Diocese of Charlotte

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Rev. Mr. Timothy Reid, Rev. Mr. Robert Conway, Bishop Peter J. Jugis, Rev. Mr. John Starczewski and Father Christopher Roux stand at the end of the diaconate ordination Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte Dec. 21.

DEACONS, *from page 1

"Our diocese is especially blessed at Christmas with the ordinations of Timothy, Robert and John to the transitional diaconate," said Father John Allen, diocesan vocations director.

"They bring unique gifts and very generous hearts to the service of God's people," he said. "I'm sure their diverse gifts and professional backgrounds will equip them to be very effective priests."

The road to the priesthood is marked by a series of milestones: lector, acolyte, candidacy, transitional deacon, priestly ordination.

During the rite of ordination of a deacon, the bishop calls the candidates forth to make promises of celibacy and vows of obedience. The candidates lie prostrate on the floor while those in attendance — including the bishop, the priests concelebrating and deacons serving — kneel and pray the litany of the saints.

The bishop lays his hands on their heads and asks the Holy Spirit to descend upon the candidates. The candidates are then vested with the dalmatic and stole and kneel before the bishop, who places in their hands the Book of Gospels. As deacons, they assist during the rest of the Mass.

Deacons may preach, assist priests at the altar during the Liturgy of the Eucharist; officiate at weddings, baptisms and funerals; and administer blessings during certain liturgical rites.

"I've been waiting for this day," said Rev. Mr. Starczewski during the reception afterward. "It's a wonderful gift from God."

Rev. Mr. Starczewski, a native of Utica, N.Y., worked for several years in manufacturing research and development in western North Carolina before preparing for the priesthood at Blessed Pope John XXIII National Seminary in Weston, Mass.

"It feels wonderful. It's hard to express in words," said Rev. Mr. Conway, a native of Moorestown, N.J.

Widowed in 1988, Rev. Mr. Conway worked as a corporate accountant in New Jersey before entering the seminary. He prepared for the priesthood at Mount St. Mary's Seminary in Emmitsburg, Md. and at Blessed Pope John XXIII National Seminary.

"It's very humbling," said Rev. Mr. Reid, a native of Martinsville, Ind., who is concluding his studies at Immaculate Conception Seminary in Huntington, NY.

Rev. Mr. Reid was employed in the Office of Migration and Refugee Services of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops in Washington, D.C. prior to his acceptance as a seminarian for the Diocese of Charlotte.

The three men will return to their seminaries this month to complete their final semesters. They are all eager to return as priests to the Diocese of Charlotte.

"With God's grace, I will continue to the priesthood ... be a parish priest and serve the people of the Diocese of Charlotte," said Rev. Mr. Conway.

"I would like to do what all good clergy are called to do — to bring the compassion of Christ to all people," said Rev. Mr. Starczewski.

"I just want to serve the people of this diocese," said Rev. Mr. Reid, "to live out God's will for my life by serving to the best of my abilities."

Bishop Jugis expressed his hope that God would bring the good work started in the deacons to a conclusion with their ordination to the priesthood. Bishop Jugis plans to ordain the three men to the priesthood in June 2004.

"As Bishop Jugis said, we await their priestly service to this diocese in June," said Father Allen.

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Newly ordained Rev. Mr. Timothy Reid offers the blood of Jesus at the transitional diaconate Mass Dec. 21.

WANT TO GO?

The priestly ordination of Rev. Messrs. Timothy Reid, Robert Conway and John Starczewski will be held at Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Charlotte at 11 a.m., June 5.

PRIEST ASSIGNMENTS

His excellency, Most Rev. Peter J. Jugis, wishes to announce the following appointments:

VICARS FORANE

Albemarle
Right Rev. Patrick Shelton, OSB

Asheville
Very Rev. Wilbur N. Thomas

Boone
Very Rev. John Schneider

Charlotte
Rev. Msgr. Richard Bellow

Gastonia
Very Rev. Eric Houseknecht

Greensboro
Very Rev. Francis O'Rourke

Hickory
Very Rev. Kenneth Whittington

Salisbury
Very Rev. John T. Putnam, JV

Smoky Mountain
Very Rev. George Kloster

Winston-Salem
Very Rev. Michael Buttner

OTHER

Judicial Vicar
Very Rev. John T. Putnam

Vicar General
Rev. Msgr. Mauricio W. West

Rev. Msgr. Mauricio W. West
Vicar General, Chancellor

Create a winning event

Having your meeting or conference at the center makes you a winner every time!

We can help you turn an ordinary conference, meeting, retreat, or banquet into a special event! You plan the event, we'll provide the environment!

1551 Trinity Lane, Hickory, NC
(828) 327-7441 or toll-free at
(888) 536-7441
info@catholicconference.org
www.catholicconference.org

The Catholic Conference Center

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity Affordability Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm
Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas
704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Just Second Fridays coming to Charlotte

JUSTICE, from page 1

exploration, reflection and discussion on a variety of social justice issues and concerns," said Joseph Purello, Office of Justice and Peace director.

Participation will hopefully lead to a greater advocacy on behalf of justice for those who lack justice, and new or renewed direct action and intervention in the lives of those who are marginalized and threatened in society, said Purello.

"If a practice of being regularly engaged in matters of social justice is established, one will hopefully be better able to receive the grace of knowing God's presence in one's own life," said Purello.

The program's concept was inspired by Jesuit Father Fred Krammer's "Doing Faithjustice," a book that discusses the intimate connection between justice and faith as developed in the Judeo-Christian tradition.

Father Krammer states "the single word ('faithjustice') forged of the two concepts undercuts those who would elevate one concept over the other, render one instrumental to the other, separate the two, or otherwise downplay the importance of one," said Purello.

Purello said Just Second Fridays is designed to facilitate the attendance of people of all ages.

"The Office of Justice and Peace has observed the demographic group most often missing at justice and peace events held during evenings and weekends is young adults in their 20s, 30s and 40s who often have non-business hour demands on their time associated with raising and nurturing pre-school and school age children," he said.

But attendance at holy day and regular noon Masses at St. Peter Church demonstrates there is a large Catholic presence in downtown Charlotte during the business day who are interested in enriching its spiritual life.

"Since the primary target audience for these presentations is the downtown working community of Charlotte, we will be recruiting speakers who can address topics related to business ethics, labor issues and economic justice," said Purello. "A variety of other social justice topics will also be offered."

On Jan. 9 at 1 p.m., Carr will discuss "Faithful Citizenship: A Catholic Call to Political Responsibility."

Carr, who has been involved with Catholic social ministry for 25 years, assists the bishops in sharing and applying Catholic social teaching, advocating on the moral dimensions of key domestic and international issues and building the Catholic community's capacity to act on its social mission.

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

John Carr

WANT TO GO?

Just Second Fridays will be held the second Friday of each month in the Annex Building behind St. Peter Church, 507 Tryon Street in Charlotte (in the lower level Atrium Room with entry from The Green). All events run 1-2 p.m. except Good Friday, April 9, which will be 11 a.m.-12p.m.

Limited free parking is available in the garage under The Green next to St. Peter Church.

Bring your own lunch to the programs. Cold drinks are provided. Arabica Coffee House and Mr. Hero, located in the Annex Building food court, offer 10 percent discounts to those attending Just Second Fridays.

For more information, go online at www.cssnc.org/justicepeace.

JUST SECOND FRIDAYS

Here is a list of the upcoming Just Second Friday topics and speakers.

Jan. 9, 1 p.m.
"Faithful Citizenship: A Catholic Call to Political Responsibility"
John Carr, secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference Department of Social Development and World Peace

Feb. 13, 1 p.m.
"Shareholder vs. Stakeholder Value"
Dr. Terry Armstrong, director of Arrupe Program in Social Ethics for Business and Woodstock Business Conference, Woodstock Theological Center at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

March 12, 1 p.m.
"Pope John Paul II's Gospel of Life: Reflections on the Consistent Ethics of Life"
Jesuit Father Joseph Koterski, professor of Philosophy at Fordham University, N.Y.C.; Maggi Nadol, director of Respect Life Office, Catholic Social Services, Diocese of Charlotte

April 9, 11 a.m. (special time)
"Reflections on Death in a Civilized Society: Death Penalty in America"
James Cooney III of Womble, Carlyle, Sandridge & Rice in Charlotte

May 14, 1 p.m.
"How Can Business Ensure All Have a 'Place at the Table' — Reflections on Poverty and Opportunity in Today's Economy"
Joan Rosenhauer, special projects coordinator of the USCCB in Washington, D.C.

Speakers for June 11, July 9, Aug. 11, Sept. 10, Oct. 8, Nov. 12 and Dec. 10 will be announced in May 2004.

Crafting Christmas

COURTESY PHOTO

Students, teachers and parents at Our Lady of Mercy School in Winston-Salem created floats for their Christmas pageant. Pictured: (standing, from left) second-graders Jessica Kleean, Jack Ronan and Sophie D'Agostino; (sitting, from left) Phillip Polselli, Emily Atkins and Brian Mahan.

Do You Need Healing?

Find Hope in Prayer!

If you or someone you care about needs healing, be it physical, emotional, or spiritual, take comfort in the healing power of prayer. Please join the Discalced Carmelites in our devotions for Health and Healing.

We will remember your special intentions in two Novenas of Masses for Health and Healing beginning January 23, our special Mass for Healing on January 27, and our Feast Day Masses honoring Our Lady of Lourdes on February 11 at Holy Hill and in Lourdes, France.

The Lourdes Healing Rosary

This stunning sacramental is perfect for use in your private devotions... or as a great gift for someone special.

- Heart-shaped beads with blue pearl finish.
- Centerpiece medal contains healing waters from the Lourdes Grotto in France.
- Finely etched silver-tone crucifix.
- Blessed by the Discalced Carmelite Friars.

You may request the Lourdes Rosary with your gift of $12 or more in support of Discalced Carmelite ministries.

Please include my intentions in your Health and Healing devotions beginning January 23.
I am enclosing a gift of $ _____ in support of Discalced Carmelite ministries.

❒ My gift is $12 or more. Please send me _____ Blessed Lourdes Healing Rosary(ies).
Please note: the suggested offering is $12 for each Rosary requested. You must check box to receive item.

My Intentions _____

_____

_____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Phone _____ Email _____

We're pleased to accept your offering in the form of cash, check, or money order. Please make your check or money order payable to the Discalced Carmelite Friars.

Please fill out this form completely and mail to:

DISCALCED CARMELITE FRIARS • c/o HEALTH AND HEALING DEVOTIONS
1525 CARMEL ROAD • HUBERTUS, WI 53033-9407 • (262) 628-1838

NATIONAL SHRINE OF MARY, HELP OF CHRISTIANS — HOLY HILL

DC122CNH-04

Charlotte Diocese commended for charter compliance

AUDIT, from page 1

report on those compliance audits is to be published Jan. 6.

Auditors commended the Diocese of Charlotte for early proactive initiatives to ensure the protection of children and youths under its pastoral care, including the establishment of an advisory board. The diocese was also commended for the Comprehensive Safe Environment Program, which includes training programs and background investigations for volunteers, teachers, employees, clergy and contractors who have contact with children.

The auditors also recommended the diocesan policy for reporting allegations of sexual abuse of a minor by clergy be clarified and made more readily available.

In compliance with the "Policy of the Diocese of Charlotte Concerning Ministry-Related Sexual Misconduct by Church Personnel," a review board, the majority of whom are laypersons and not employees of the diocese, was appointed. The policy calls for the board to include at least one priest, a civil lawyer (not the diocesan attorney), an individual having particular expertise in the detection and treatment of the sexual abuse of minors and Catholic and non-Catholic laypersons.

In addition, an investigator competent in sexual misconduct investigative procedures and techniques has also been appointed.

More than 6,800 employees and volunteers have attended one of the 165 "Protecting God's Children" workshops held throughout the Diocese of Charlotte since June 2002. The workshops train participants in the awareness and prevention of child abuse. The program also includes an online continuing educational component.

"Our diocese will continue to comply fully with all requirements of law and the charter promulgated by the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops, and we will respond without delay whenever there is an allegation of sexual abuse," said Bishop Jugis.

Here is an overview of what the charter and norms require all dioceses and eparchies to do in order to respond effectively to allegations of clergy sexual abuse and to prevent such abuse from now on.

For healing and reconciliation of victims, they must:

— reach out to victims and their families with "a sincere commitment to their spiritual and emotional well-being." This outreach is to include "provision of counseling, spiritual assistance, support groups and other social services agreed upon" by the victim and diocese.

— "not enter into confidentiality agreements" unless the victim requests it "for grave and substantial reasons."

— "have mechanisms in place to respond promptly to any allegation where there is reason to believe that sexual abuse of a minor has occurred."

To guarantee an effective response to all allegations, dioceses must:

— "report an allegation of sexual abuse of a person who is a minor to the public authorities."

— "cooperate with public authorities about reporting in cases when the person is no longer a minor."

— "advise victims of their right to make a report to public authorities" and support this right.

To protect children in the future, dioceses must:

— "establish 'safe environment' programs," educating "children, youth, parents, ministers, educators and others about ways to make and maintain a safe environment for children."

— "employ adequate screening and evaluative techniques" on the fitness of candidates for ordination.

— "evaluate the background" of ordination candidates and all diocesan and parish personnel who have regular contact with minors, utilizing "the resources of law enforcement and other community agencies."

The most detailed requirements of the charter and norms concern the way the bishop deals with an accused cleric.

Upon receipt of an allegation, the charter mandates a prompt, objective preliminary investigation, in accord with church laws protecting rights of the accuser and the accused, to determine if there is sufficient evidence to merit further steps.

If the allegation is judged not credible or is proven unfounded — every step possible is to be taken to restore the good name of the accused cleric.

If after the preliminary investigation the allegation is judged credible:

— The bishop "will both notify the (Vatican) Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith and ... relieve the alleged offender promptly of his ministerial duties."

— The alleged offender "may be requested to seek, or urged voluntarily to comply with, an appropriate medical and psychological evaluation, so long as this does not interfere with the investigation by civil authorities."

— If the time of prescription — the statute of limitations for prosecuting a crime or applying a penalty — has already passed, the bishop "shall apply to the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith for a dispensation from the prescription."

— An offending cleric may be laicized at his own request, by a request of a bishop to the doctrinal congregation, or after a church trial and conviction.

— An offender "will be offered professional assistance for his own healing and well-being, as well as for the purpose of prevention."

The charter also mandates in each diocese and eparchy:

— "Clear and well-publicized diocesan/eparchial standards of ministerial behavior and appropriate boundaries" for clergy and other personnel who are in positions of trust with children and youths.

Jerry Filteau of Catholic News Service contributed to this story.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

DIOCESAN CAMPUS MINISTRY/Adjunct Catholic Chaplain: For Davidson College. Graduate theology training required. Send resume, three reference letters, cover letter to: Mary Wright, Director of Campus Ministry, 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203-4003 by January 9.

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Experienced with master's in theology, religious education or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of faith formation to: Faith Formation Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Holy Redeemer Catholic Community in the Outer Banks of North Carolina is seeking an energetic, motivated, spiritual individual to be part of a collaborative pastoral team. Responsibilities will include working to enhance existing adult formation opportunities, including the development of small Christian communities; and working toward whole community catechesis. Candidate should be a practicing Catholic, with a combination of training and/or experience in adult formation. Send resume to: Holy Redeemer Catholic Parish, P.O. Box 510, Kitty Hawk, NC 27949, Attn: Faith Formation Search Committee, or email herrityt@raldioc.org.

YOUTH MINISTER: Experienced with degree or certification in youth ministry, theology or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of youth ministry to: Youth Ministry Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org.

FOR SALE

FSBO - BRICK EXECUTIVE HOME: 2758 Sq Ft., 4 BR, 3 full BR, bonus room, many upgrades inside and out. 30 minutes to uptown Charlotte, NOT using Interstate. Asking $295,000. 5205 Featherstone Ct., Gastonia. 704-824-9099 Nights.

FOR RENT

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:

Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Interest Rate: 3.75%
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

Consolidate High-Interest Debt
100% Financing Programs
Low Interest & Interest-only Programs
No Payment until February 2004!
No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams this holiday season.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Suite # 27 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
866-823-7244
Toll Free
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS

OPEN
Tuesday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

You could be singing too after more than 125,000 readers see YOUR company's ad here!

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Faith, fantasy, friendship of Tolkien and Lewis

REVIEWED BY ANNE LeVEQUE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

With the opening of the third and final installment of the movie version of J.R.R. Tolkien's masterwork, "The Lord of the Rings," interest in Tolkien's life and work is at an all-time high.

A few years ago two polls in the United Kingdom asked people to name the greatest book of the 20th century. When the first poll, in 1997, showed that "The Lord of the Rings" was the overwhelming choice, the results were greeted with disbelief. Surely James Joyce's "Ulysses" or some other equally incomprehensible tome must be the greatest! So the poll was done over, and again Tolkien came out on top. A similar poll conducted by Amazon.com on this side of the Atlantic in 1999 proclaimed it the greatest book of the millennium.

Whether greatness can be determined by popular poll is debatable, but it is clear that Tolkien has touched something in the hearts of the reading public, and now in the moviegoing public as well.

In "The Gospel According to Tolkien," Ralph C. Wood, who has written about Christianity and authors Flannery O'Connor, Walker Percy, John Updike and Peter De Vries, offers a thorough treatment of the underlying theology of Middle-Earth. Unfortunately, Wood relies heavily on Tolkien's "The Silmarillion" for much of his exposition.

"The Simarillion" has been called "the least-read best seller of all time." It is background mythology of Middle-Earth, and was probably not intended for publication (it was published posthumously). It is also agonizingly boring for all but the most dedicated lovers of Middle-Earth. That's not to say that Wood's book is boring — he does a fine job of demonstrating the Christian underpinnings of "The Lord of the Rings," and in a readable fashion — but I would say that this is definitely for the most dedicated Tolkien fans.

"J.R.R. Tolkien: Myth, Morality & Religion" by Richard Purtill was originally published nearly 20 years ago. It is republished by Ignatius Press with a new introduction which references the movies. This book has stood the test of time — it is engaging and informative. I felt like I was rereading the trilogy with a very knowledgeable friend. Purtill looks at the mythological framework of Middle-Earth in the same way that we would look at the mythology of any culture, including our own, and talks about what myth is and the different kinds of myth. He gives examples from the books and discusses them with a narrative fluency that is remarkable.

Tolkien fans are aware of his friendship with fellow writer and Oxford don C.S. Lewis, author of the Narnia stories and many books about Christianity. They, and a handful of other Oxonians, met regularly over the years to discuss their writing, and were known as the Inklings. Tolkien was instrumental in Lewis' conversion to Christianity. Lewis went on to become a great apologist for Christianity. The two friends were estranged for a time but reconciled in later life.

Most of the material in Colin Duriez's book, "Tolkien and C.S. Lewis" can be found in other primary or secondary sources. Duriez claims to be the first to write a kind of joint biography, showing how the lives of these two great men intertwined. Duriez's contribution to the Tolkien/Lewis canon is one of cumulation and synthesis. He offers a very readable result.

"C.S. Lewis and the Catholic Church" is Joseph Pearce's speculation on the question of whether Lewis might have become Catholic had he lived longer than his 64 years. Pearce is well-versed in Lewis and Tolkien — he wrote the new introduction to Purtill's book, above, and in 1998 published the biography "Tolkien: Man and Myth" — but there is so much diatribe in this book that it is difficult to take seriously that which isn't diatribe.

Lewis was raised in Protestant Ulster and absorbed the anti-Catholic bigotry of that culture unquestioningly. Tolkien was a devout Catholic. Their estrangement in the 1950s was over Lewis' marriage to a divorced woman. In his autobiography, Lewis details how he joined the Church of England when he converted to Christianity from atheism. It is clear from his own words that bigotry is one thing that kept him from becoming a Catholic. There were other reasons, though, mostly doctrinal and certainly not trivial.

Pearce selectively conjures up all the modernist outrages he sees in the Church of England since Lewis' death, and declares that Lewis would never have stayed in such a church. Pearce rails against Anglicanism and the Church of England to such an extent that his treatment of the central question can hardly be said to have a shred of objectivity.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: JAN. 11, 2003

Jan. 11, The Baptism of the Lord

Cycle C Readings:
1) Isaiah 42:1-4, 6-7
Psalm 29:1-2, 3-4, 3, 9-10
2) Acts 10:34-38
3) Gospel: Luke 3:15-16,21-22

BY JEAN DENTON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Mike has enjoyed watching his son Brian's confidence and leadership flower during his senior year of high school. How could a parent not be gratified seeing his son direct a 200-member marching band through a season of football half-time performances, concerts and competitions?

Mike was proud that Brian was both attractive and sensitive, that he was especially attentive to the others in the band who were younger and less popular while still holding the esteem of the core group who appreciated his diligence, selflessness and enthusiasm. But Mike positively beamed as he told about a moment when Brian crossed over from talented boy to mature man.

One day the band director, his emotions frayed by grief over the recent death of his mother, also was feeling unsuccessful in his efforts at his job. He tearfully admitted to Brian, "I'm lost." Recovering quickly from his initial surprise, the student gently, deftly became the teacher, explaining to his older friend that he was the reason Brian had become interested in playing music. He reminded him that the band's success in competition wasn't as important as what the students gained in discipline, friendship and the basic joy of making music together.

Brian's father was pleased with his son's wisdom, pleased with his concern for a friend and pleased with his being a source of strength for someone who needed it. But mostly Mike was pleased to see the first manifestation of the man his son will be. There was no longer any doubt where Brian's heart is and whether he will act according to that. What a moment for a father.

In the Gospel story of Jesus' baptism, this is exactly what we witness as Jesus came up out of the water. By choosing, in his humanity, to be baptized, he signified his willingness to cross over and accept the purpose for which he had been born — to be a light for the nations, open the eyes of the blind and release the imprisoned.

His Father was moved to say, "You are my beloved Son; with you I am well pleased." This is how God reacts, as well, when we submit to the call of our own baptism and recommit ourselves to Jesus mission — our mission — to establish justice on earth.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 4- JANUARY 10

Sunday (Epiphany of the Lord), Isaiah 60:1-6, Ephesians 3:2-3, 5-6, Matthew 2:1-12; Monday (St. John Newmann), 1 John 3:22—4:6, Matthew 4:12-17, 23-25; Tuesday (Blessed Andre Bessette), 1 John 4:7-10, Mark 6:34-44; Wednesday (St. Raymond Penafort), 1 John 4:11-18, Mark 6:45-52; Thursday, 1 John 4:19—5:4, Luke 4:14-22; Friday, 1 John 5:5-13, Luke 5:12-16; Saturday, 1 John 5:14-21 , John 3:22-30

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 11- JANUARY 17

Sunday (The Baptism of the Lord), Isaiah 42:1-4, 6-7, Acts 10:34-38, Luke 3:15-16, 21-22; Monday, 1 Samuel 1:1-8, Mark 1:14-20; Tuesday (St. Hilary), 1 Samuel 1:9-20, Mark 1:21-28; Wednesday, 1 Samuel 3:1-10, 19-20, Mark 1:29-39; Thursday, 1 Samuel 4:1-11, Mark 1:40-45; Friday, 1 Samuel 8:4-7, 10-22, Mark 2:1-12; Saturday, 1 Samuel 9:1-4, 17-19; 10:1, Mark 2:13-17

15% off with this coupon
Now at 2 great locations!
The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue:10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

'Cold Mountain' is lukewarm epic

BY DAVID DiCERTO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Star-crossed lovers torn apart by war struggle to reunite in the handsomely carpentered but emotionally unsatisfying Civil War romance "Cold Mountain" (Miramax). In the film, based on Charles Frazier's 1997 novel, director Anthony Minghella chooses an epic historical canvas on which to paint an intimate story about one man's journey through hell and the woman whose love guides him back home.

Set in 1861, in Cold Mountain, a rustic hamlet in the North Carolina Blue Ridge range, the film stars Jude Law as Inman, a reserved young carpenter, and Nicole Kidman as Ada, a refined southern belle from Charleston. On the eve of war, Ada rides into town with her preacher father (Donald Sutherland). From the first glimpse of her porcelain skin, Inman finds Ada entrancing. Their antebellum amour takes root awkwardly, but is pruned before blossoming by the war fever sweeping through the South.

Caught by the undertow of their Dixie delirium, Inman soon marches off to war, buoyed by one life-altering kiss from Ada. Yet hope of a speedy return is dashed along with his innocence in Virginia during the siege of Petersburg, where he experiences the horrors of war firsthand.

Sustaining an injury, he is transported to a makeshift triage hospital where he receives a letter from Ada imploring him to return to her. Exorcised of his idealism, Inman decides to escape, fully aware of the dangerous consequences of desertion, embarking on an American version of "The Odyssey" as he hoofs his way across the war-torn landscape back to Cold Mountain.

Along the way, he endures trials and tribulations, including arrest and confinement in a chain gang, and encounters a confederacy of characters, among them a fornicating minister (Philip Seymour Hoffman) and a distraught war widow (Natalie Portman) whom he saves from a gang rape. Inman and the film take an excursion into backwoods bad taste, culminating in a raunchy orgy scene involving Hoffman's character with a coven of corn-liquored hillbillies.

Meanwhile, back on the farm, Ada is left to fend for herself after her father's death. Though highly educated, her book smarts serve as a poor substitute for basic survival skills and have left her ill-equipped for the back-breaking labor involved in working the land. With her farm in disrepair, Ada is saved from starvation when a concerned neighbor sends help her way in the person of Ruby Thewes (Renee Zellweger), whose pistol personality injects a much needed shot of energy into Ada's side of the narrative equation.

Under Ruby's can-do tutelage, the wilting lily blooms into a formidable Cold Mountain lioness — a change that parallels Inman's own personal transformation. Ray Winstone plays Teague, the thuggish leader of a vigilante Home Guard formed to ferret out deserters, and whose unwelcome advances on Ada set in motion the film's melancholy ending.

Though rapturously shot by John Seale with exquisite production design by Dante Ferretti — with Romania standing in for North Carolina — "Cold Mountain" falls short of a being a wholly satisfying film. Despite fine acting and a Homeric framework, the episodic nature of the narrative and the tenuousness of the central love affair leave viewers less than totally engaged emotionally.

And though it presents a hauntingly poetic picture of the Civil War-era South, "Gone With the Wind" is in little danger of being eclipsed as its greatest saga, though comparisons are inevitable. Law imbues Inman with a convincing blend of grizzled resolve and shell-shock. Kidman, at times too diaphanous, takes a back seat to Zellweger's scene-stealing performance.

Far more effective is the movie's treatment of war. The massive Petersburg sequence is one of the most sobering depictions of warfare ever filmed. It is disturbingly realistic in its raw images of carnage yet impressionistic, as waves of gray and blue crash against each other knee-deep in mud turned crimson with blood — a ballet of brutality played under a burnt sienna sky.

It brings to mind scenes of the damned from Dante's "Inferno," illustrating that war is truly hell. The ugliness of the sequence stands in stark contrast to the romanticized violence often peddled by Hollywood.

Yet apart from that scene, the war serves mainly as a backdrop, a looming shadow, against which the characters' stories play out. Rather than lingering on the battlefield, Minghella signals a retreat in order to explore the loss and inhumanity war engenders in the lives of noncombatants, and to meditate on the rending ripple effects it has on the fabric of life behind the front lines.

More conspicuous is the film's skirting of the issues and politics that drove a country to go to war with itself — though some vague references are made about "the rich man's slaves." Inman's comment that he was "sent off with a flag and a lie" is treated with similar ambiguity.

Sadly, "Cold Mountain" is only lukewarm.

Due to recurring graphic battlefield and associated violence, several explicit sexual situations with partial nudity, an attempted rape, as well as some crude language and humor, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is L — limited adult audience, films whose problematic content many adults would find troubling. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is R — restricted.

DiCerto is on the staff of the Office for Film & Broadcasting of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

'Mona Lisa' has nothing to smile about

CNS PHOTO FROM COLUMBIA PICTURES

Julia Roberts stars in "Mona Lisa Smile, a 1953 drama about a free-spirited teacher locking horns with rigid faculty at a conservative all-girls college while empowering her students to free themselves from the future yoke of domesticity. The film's misguided strain of feminism promotes a view of marriage and motherhood as slave-state stumbling blocks to self-fulfillment. An antagonistic attitude toward traditional morality, an implied sexual encounter, as well as minimal crude language and profanity. The USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is O — morally offensive. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

The Diocese of Charlotte
CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES
1123 South Church St.
Charlotte, NC 28203
www.cssnc.org

Executive Director:
Elizabeth Thurbee (704) 370-3227
Refugee Office:
Cira Ponce (704) 370-6930
Justice & Peace:
Joe Purello (704) 370-3225
Special Ministries:
Gerard A. Carter (704) 370-3250

Charlotte Region: 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203
Area Director: Geri King (704) 370-6155
Western Region: 50 Orange Street, Asheville, NC 28801
Area Director: Sister Marie Frechette (828) 255-0146
Piedmont-Triad: 621 W. Second Street, Winston-Salem, NC 27108
Area Director: David Harold (336) 727-0705
Greensboro Satellite Office: (336) 274-5577
High Point Hispanic Center: (336) 884-5858

For information on specific programs, please call your local office.

SMITH & SMITH, PA
Timothy M. Smith, Attorney Jacquelyn A. Smith, Attorney
Members of St. Mark's Church

NO FEE UNTIL WE WIN ON PI CASES
FREE INITIAL CONSULTATION
convenient free parking

EXPERIENCED - AGGRESSIVE - CARING

| CRIMINAL LAW | PERSONAL INJURY |
|---|---|
| Traffic Tickets (Meck. only) | Auto Accident |
| DWI | Workers' Compensation |
| Expunctions | Wrongful Death |
| Felonies & Misdemeanors | Whiplash - Back, Neck, Head Injuries |

10% off attorney fee—10% of net fee donated to Catholic Social Services Food Pantry
704-331-3092 www.smithandsmithpa.com 900 Baxter St., Suite 109, Charlotte

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

A ministry of presence in Iraq

Parish Diary

FATHER PETER J. DALY
CNS Columnist

It is hard to get people's attention at luncheon meetings. Usually they are more interested in talking to the person next to them or signaling the waiter for another cup of coffee.

But a young Army officer recently reduced a well-fed crowd of Washington "swells" to silence when he got up to speak at the downtown Washington, D.C., chapter of the Serra Club. (Serrans are Catholic lay men and women who promote vocations to the priesthood and religious life by prayer and witness.)

Father Michael Heninger got our attention by telling his story. He is a chaplain in the U.S. Army, just returned from Iraq.

Father Heninger is one of a small cadre of Catholic priests who serve in the U.S. military. Of the 1,200 chaplains in the Army, only 100 are Catholic priests, while 25 percent of the Army's enlisted personnel are Catholics and nearly one-third of the officer corps. In all, there are fewer than 900 Catholic chaplains serving 1.4 million Catholics in uniform.

Father Heninger found his vocation in the military. Just out of high school, he joined the Air Force as an enlisted man and served 12 years.

Like many soldiers, he stopped going to Mass and fell away from the faith. But gradually he sensed he was being called to another duty. God called to him to service.

After leaving the military and going to college, he answered God's call to duty, this time as a priest. He was ordained in 2002 and immediately released by his diocese to serve in the Army.

An Army chaplain has a "ministry of presence," says Father Heninger. He supports the living, comforts the dying and honors the dead. There is no shortage of work.

He is one of only two priests for a whole Army division (10,000 to 15,000 soldiers). His flock is spread out all over central Iraq. His parish is young, many just a few months out of high school. They are away from home for the first time — lonely, tired and afraid.

They also must face the big spiritual questions of life and death in a way most people never confront. Not only do they see their friends die, but at times they are asked to kill. It is a situation made for spiritual anguish.

In such a situation people are looking for faith. They want the sacraments. They want to know that they are not forgotten by God or by their church. The chaplain is an important presence. Father Heninger represents something of home, faith and family, not just to Catholics but to all faiths.

At times he has five Masses in a day. After Mass he opens the religious "gift shop" on the hood of his Humvee, setting out Bibles, rosaries, medals and prayer cards sent by folks back home.

There are a lot of conversions. One young man he baptized proudly showed off his "dog tags" on which he had scratched out the line where it said "no religion" and etched in "Catholic."

Sometimes his work is to try to remind the soldiers of their own call to compassion as Christians. He organized soldiers to visit the orphanages in Baghdad run by the Missionaries of Charity (Mother Teresa's order).

It is transforming for a tough "warrior" in a kevlar vest to pick up a little handicapped baby and start singing a lullaby. Pretty soon the toughness of combat falls away to tenderness.

Father Heninger brought a crowd of talkers to silence and reminded us of the need for the ministry of presence.

Pope says migration can contribute to peace

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Editor's Note: Due to an early publishing schedule, we are unable to print the pope's general audience this week.

VATICAN CITY — Although often a cause of fear and tension, migration can contribute to building peace if newcomers are welcomed as brothers and sisters, Pope John Paul II said.

"If the dream of a peaceful world is shared by many and if the contribution of migrants and refugees is valued, humanity can become increasingly the family of all and our Earth (can become) a real common home," the pope said.

The pope focused on the connection between migration and peace in his message for the 2004 celebrations of the World Day for Migrants and Refugees, marked by Catholics on different days in different countries. In the United States, National Migration Week is Jan. 4-10.

Pope John Paul said the news shows the problems caused "by war and violence, terrorism and oppression, discrimination and injustice."

Peacemaking requires serious efforts to provide every person on the planet with the conditions needed for a dignified life and a hope-filled future, the pope said.

A commitment must be made to "safeguarding the right to not emigrate, that is, to live in peace and dignity in one's own homeland," he said.

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Assisted by the international community, local governments must ensure their citizens freedom of expression and movement as well as food, health, work, housing and education — necessities which, when lacking, make people feel they are forced to emigrate, he said.

The earth and its resources belong to all people, he said, and while governments have a right to regulate migration, people have the right to seek safety and a dignified life for themselves abroad.

While people may fear the impact immigrants will have on their country and economy, overcoming the fear and welcoming newcomers is a contribution to peace all are called to make, he said.

Treating others with the respect they are due and being willing to hear their stories and learn about their cultures is the first step in a dialogue that will create harmony, he said.

When peoples of different races, religions and cultures live side by side and work or study together, the pope said, they have an opportunity to discover "values common to every culture capable of uniting rather than dividing."

Letters to the Editor

Story reveals abortion lies

Karen Evans' "Scars and lies — One woman's journey from abortion to healing" (Dec. 12, 2003) was the best article I've read so far about the true traumas of abortion and how it affects the life of a woman over the years.

What the article points out are the real truths about abortion and how this particular woman over a long time was able to find hope and healing. Thank you for your candidness about Planned Parenthood.

Your article is also a tribute to and expresses the need for an understanding Christian doctor and Catholic Church.

Your article offers many positive images and the necessity for positive responses. Most of all you have advanced the truth about abortion so it will, as you quoted Constance Russo, "change society's view of abortion." This is needed so badly — everyone needs to hear this.

This day you have made God's smile bigger.

— Randal Romie
Greensboro

Infant loss healing available

After reading article "Scars and lies — One woman's journey from abortion to healing," we felt called to respond with information regarding the experience of pregnancy and infant loss though miscarriage, stillbirth or newborn death.

The death of a baby before or after birth is a difficult and often lonely experience. Few may understand the love and longing parents feel for children known only briefly or maybe never held or seen. The resulting uncomfortable and sometimes insensitive responses of others may leave parents feeling as if they are not allowed to grieve, and therefore their sadness should not be expressed or shared.

Feeling unsupported in their grief and with few resources, many struggle privately and are uncertain as to what may be helpful in their healing.

Particularly troublesome is the strain that can arise in a marriage after such losses because of the differences in how men and women grieve.

One of the most difficult aspects of the emotional aftermath of pregnancy or infant loss can be the sense your spouse does not understand, appreciate or share the depth of your grief. Often parents will feel disconnected from each other.

It is important for those grieving the loss of baby to know help is available.

St. Matthew Church in Charlotte and St. Mark Church in Huntersville both offer information, support and understanding through Elizabeth Ministry to those who have lost a baby to miscarriage, stillbirth or newborn death.

Elizabeth Ministry allows parents to share their stories of loss and pain through one-to-one peer support with others who know the sadness of pregnancy or infant loss firsthand.

Thank you for allowing us to share this information with your readers.

— Tracy Webb, Elizabeth Ministry coordinator, St. Matthew Church
(704) 543-4780

— Sandy Buck, Elizabeth Ministry coordinator, St. Mark Church
(704) 948-4587

Through the years

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

My folks met in a Brooklyn park 60 years ago. My dad was playing softball. My mother was with friends. On that sunny afternoon, they struck up a conversation. They began to date and decided to marry. But those plans were postponed by the Second World War. Separated for most of four years, they nonetheless maintained the only lifeline open to people in love back then. They wrote letters.

Happily, those letters survive today and tell a story of long distance love. Not an easy love to maintain, but one they nurtured regardless. Ending the war as a Marine captain, my dad came home and they finally married. He became a New York City police officer and detective. She kept busy with the three of us youngsters. I gather that life was happy, but also a struggle, especially when he decided to go to law school. Through child rearing and tight money, through the move to suburbia and the loss of loved ones, they kept on living out their love.

Now here's the most recent chapter. Mom underwent what should have been fairly routine surgery. Dad was with her, just planning to sit by her side and do his crossword puzzles. Before his eyes, he saw my mother collapse. Doctors and nurses came quickly, thank God. In the middle of their efforts to save her life, I called the hospital room. Imagine my surprise when a nurse asked who I was. "I'm her son," I replied. My dad then came to the phone and told me: "Your mother has collapsed. Come quickly."

I have no recollection of the road that day. By the time I arrived, the doctors had brought her back to a modest stability. But we counted our blessings prematurely. As they moved her to cardiac care, she went back into seizure. A second code red was sounded. Again, that team of experts did what never ceases to amaze. But this time they had one problem they hadn't counted on. It was my dad. After her first attack, my mom had weakly told my father, "Please don't leave me." Well, he took her at her word. No doctors or nurses were going to move him. He parked himself within inches of my mom and stood watch as the doctors did their best. And their best was incredible. They brought her back a second time, got her stable and, in time, sent her home. My father's tenacious loyalty continues. He is her primary caregiver. He's positioned a couch next to her bed so that he can be there in the night. The nurses and therapists they have know they need to work with the person who guards her with tenderness: her partner, her oldest friend. Her husband.

Recently, after tending to her from dawn, Dad fell asleep at the dining room table. So we let him sleep. I mentioned to my mom that Dad was obviously tired. She nodded and then said something that will always stay with me. "You know, Jim, we've been through so much in a lifetime together. The war. The children. The tough years. The loss of our parents and brothers and sisters. But after 56 years of marriage I can honestly say, I've never felt closer to your dad than I do now. He has been so caring, so patient, so good."

Tom Brokaw has written a wonderful book about the generation who fought and won the Second World War. He rightly names them The Greatest Generation. They accomplished amazing things. But I think their greatest feats continue to be lived today. In the faithfulness they share. In the devoted care they offer. In living out promises made so long ago, our folks teach us so much. In their lives, we are so richly blessed.

My dad was a courageous Marine, a dedicated police officer. He was a terrific lawyer and teacher. But, for me, the greatness of his caring at home is a quality that matches or surpasses what we do in our public lives. Loving for the long distance, now that's something to be proud of!

Are angels always male?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. I don't know where I heard this, but somewhere we were told that all angels are men. Is that right? (Louisiana)

A. According to Catholic tradition, and generally for all Christians, angels are believed to be pure spirits. They are creatures of God, intelligent and capable of moral decisions and actions but have no material or physical make-up, therefore no bodies, and therefore no sexual identity. In themselves, they are neither male nor female.

Perhaps you are asking about something else. When angels appear to human beings, in the Bible for example, in what form are they seen? Obviously, they would need some physical appearance to be seen by human eyes. What do they look like?

In earlier Hebrew stories angels rarely appear. God deals with human beings, Adam and Moses for example, face-to-face, as it were, with no angels in between.

Later on, as the Jewish awareness of God's transcendence, or holiness, developed, angels appear in the Old Testament more and more often as intermediaries between God and humans. By New Testament times they became more evident and are mentioned often in the Gospels and other Christian writings after Jesus. In fact the voice of the Father is heard rarely in the New Testament, while angels have a significant role in important events, such as the annunciation and the resurrection.

When angels do appear to human beings it is nearly always in human form, and always when a sex is indicated it is masculine. You can refer to Genesis 18:2, in which three men, obviously angels of God, receive Abraham's hospitality; Joshua 5:13, Ezekiel 9:2, and Zecharia 1:8 are just a few examples in pre-Christian Scriptures.

Instances in the New Testament include Luke 24:4 at the tomb after the resurrection and Acts 1:10 at the ascension of Jesus.

Otherwise, even when gender is not mentioned explicitly, other circumstances seem to point toward males — masculine forms of names; functions for which a woman would not serve in ancient culture, such as the angel Raphael guiding Tobit's journey to find a wife, and so on.

The canonical Scriptures assign names to three angels, all of whom serve in what would usually be seen as masculine roles: Gabriel, who interprets visions in the Book of Daniel and of course plays a central role in the birth stories of Jesus and John the Baptist; Raphael; and Michael, who is a "great prince" (Daniel 12:1), and leader of the host of angels in the book of Revelation (12:7).

Someone once said that in the Bible angels are always male, young and good-looking. That would be difficult to prove, but it may help explain why, nearly without exception, the angels were treated with such deference, graciousness and esteem by the biblical characters and authors.

A free brochure answering questions Catholics ask about receiving the Eucharist is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Father John Dietzen, Box 325, Peoria, IL 61651.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

Beware of Queen Bee

Our Turn

THERESE J. BORCHARD
CNS COLUMNIST

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" is absent in today's classrooms and offices, and is wreaking havoc among women from 10 to 40 years old, stealing the self-esteem and self-confidence they brought to work and school.

The bully is back, but he isn't tall, fat and round-fisted. She is a skinny, popular girl who won the reign of Queen Bee. And whatever she says goes.

This is not new, of course. I still recall the damage of my junior high years when kids befriended me, the acne-faced loser, to get to my popular twin sister. I remember being the last one picked at gym because I was uncoordinated. And I can still name the "character defects" my so-called friends listed in a letter of "constructive criticism" they sent to me.

There were better years to come: nicer friends and clearer skin. But the bully came back in my first job, which is so often the case. I was back to junior high for a year when Queen Bee decided I wasn't suited for the clique, mocking me in staff meetings and posting photos of the party to which I wasn't invited.

The damage to my self-esteem in my young adult years was more severe because I thought I was over this stuff.

Sticks and stones may break your bones, but words can hurt, too. And that's why girls' aggression can be so hurtful.

"Girls very much value intimacy, which makes them excellent friends and terrible enemies," says Marian Underwood, professor of psychology at the University of Texas in Margaret Talbot's "Mean Girls and the Movement to Tame Them" story in The New York Times Magazine. "They share so much information when they are friends that they never run out of ammunition if they turn on one another."

Only in the last decade have psychologists paid attention to the nastiness of girls, conceding although they are less likely to engage in physical fights, girls emerge from their own confrontations — in the form of vicious rumors, venomous e-mails, backstabbing behavior — with as many (maybe more) bruises as their male counterparts.

And the pain hasn't abated with the national headlines, cover stories and Oprah episodes devoted to the topic. Everyone has to chip in for Queen Bee and her cohorts to ease off. No one is immune from the meanness epidemic affecting young girls today.

Everyone has a part in teaching and living by the golden rule today so that youths and adults are able to learn and work instead of defending themselves against the long-term effects of a popularity contest.

Our Lady of the Annunciation Church is spiritual home for Albemarle Catholics

ALBEMARLE — The dedication of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church took place in 1934 with nine Catholic families composing the congregation. However, the first Catholic residents in the area arrived back in 1887, when the Ewing family relocated to Albemarle from Richmond, Va.

Visiting priests sporadically celebrated Mass in the area, or families traveled by train to Salisbury for Sunday services. That changed in 1934, when Father James Cowan, originally from New York, worked to establish a church in the South. Father Cowan celebrated Mass in the living room of the rectory until a gift from Our Lady of the Annunciation Church in New York made construction of a church building in Albemarle possible.

The new structure was dedicated on Sept. 4, 1934.

By the mid-1940s, 35 families made up the parish community, and the textile industry began to yield an even larger Catholic population in the area. A rectory was built in 1941, and Our Lady of the Annunciation Church began to experience its first significant growth. By the time of the parish's 25th anniversary in 1959, some 75 families called the Albemarle church their spiritual home.

Sustained needs for additional space marked the following years. The congregation saw a parish hall constructed in 1966 to provide room for their religious education classes and social events. Father (now Msgr.) Anthony Kovacic, a native of Bijelsko, Yugoslavia, presided as parish administrator at the time — Father Cowan had passed away that year — and became pastor in January 1969.

After the 1967 dedication of the hall, Father Kovacic turned attentions to building a new church, as the parish community grew to more than 100 families by decade's end. A sizable donation from the estate of Father Cowan and his mother led to the construction of a new facility, and on July 31, 1971, Bishop Vincent Waters of Raleigh said the first Mass at the new, 380-seat Our Lady of the Annunciation Church. Msgr. Michael J. Begley, soon to become the Diocese of Charlotte's founding bishop, preached the homily at the celebratory Mass.

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

Our Lady of the Annunciation Church in Albemarle was dedicated on Sept. 4, 1934 for the nine Catholic families comprising the congregation. Today, the church has around 330 registered families.

Several diocesan priests have served the parish since Father Kovacic was appointed pastor to a Charlotte parish in 1973. During this time, the parish enhanced its participation in a number of community and ecclesial projects, such as Meals on Wheels, campus ministry, charismatic prayer and youth ministry.

On March 25, 1984, the parish of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church gathered to celebrate its Golden Jubilee Liturgy. Fathers Kovacic, Joseph Kelleher and Carl T. DelGiudice — all pastors of the Albemarle church at various times — joined Bishop Begley in celebrating the Mass for more than 200 families who were then registered at the parish.

In May 1990, Bishop Begley dedicated a newly built Family Life Center to mark the continued physical expansion in the parish. Spiritual growth has also continued as many parishioners remain active in a host of ministries and community efforts, such as a program for the elderly called OASIS, Knights of Columbus, pregnancy crisis outreach and a morning prayer group.

The church also expanded beyond parish boundaries with the establishment of a mission, Our Lady of the Americas in Biscoe in 1989. In 1999, Father Lawrence Heiney became pastor of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church.

To celebrate Lent last year, the parish held a unique Parish Stations of the Cross on March 21. Fifteen parish groups each wrote and read a reflection based on a particular Station of the Cross. Groups included the parish choir; Bible study; MOMS (Ministry of Mothers Sharing), which includes several non-Catholic members; and sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders involved in faith formation.

The parish population of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church now consists of approximately 330 families. The parish is one of the largest in the Albemarle Vicariate, and by its active stance in church and civic life, it makes a strong statement of devotion in the Stanly County town.

OUR LADY OF THE ANNUNCIATION
416 N. Second Street
Albemarle, N.C. 28001
(704) 982-2910

Vicariate: Albemarle
Pastor: Father Lawrence Heiney
Number of families: 330

Father Lawrence Heiney

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE

1401 Patton Ave.
Asheville, NC
(828) 252-3535

72 Long Shoals Road
Arden, NC
(828) 687-3530

Assuring Absolute Integrity

Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535

Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

FC262
C367c

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Parish Profile: St. Aloysius Church
| PAGE 16

JANUARY 9, 2004 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 15

A GROWING CONCERN

Poverty growing in United States

Diocese of Charlotte working to combat poverty in N.C.

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — If you live in North Carolina, chances are you know someone living in poverty.

As many Americans rang in the New Year, 34.6 million of them — one out of eight — are struggling to afford food, shelter, clothing, childcare and medical care, an increase of 1.4 million people during the past year. Currently, 12.1 million children — one in six — live in poverty.

"The majority of poor people in the United States today are working poor people who struggle to make ends

See POVERTY, page 9

PROTECTING GOD'S CHILDREN

First charter implementation report issued by U.S. bishops

AUDITS FIND MOST DIOCESES NOW COMPLY WITH BISHOPS' SEX ABUSE NORMS

BY JERRY FILTEAU
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — By the end of 2003, the Diocese of Charlotte was among the nearly 90 percent of U.S. dioceses in compliance with the bishops' national policy to protect children and respond to clergy sexual abuse of minors, according to the first national audit report released Jan. 6.

On most elements, the report said 98 percent to 100 percent of audited dioceses were judged to be in compliance with the 17-article "Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People" adopted by the U.S. bishops in June 2002.

There were only two mandates on which compliance was

CNS PHOTO BY NANCY WIECHEC

Bishop Wilton D. Gregory responds to questions about national audit results at a briefing in Washington Jan. 6.

lower than 98 percent: having comprehensive safe environment programs in place throughout the diocese (91 percent), and conducting background checks on all church

See AUDITS, page 8

SACRAMENTAL LIFE

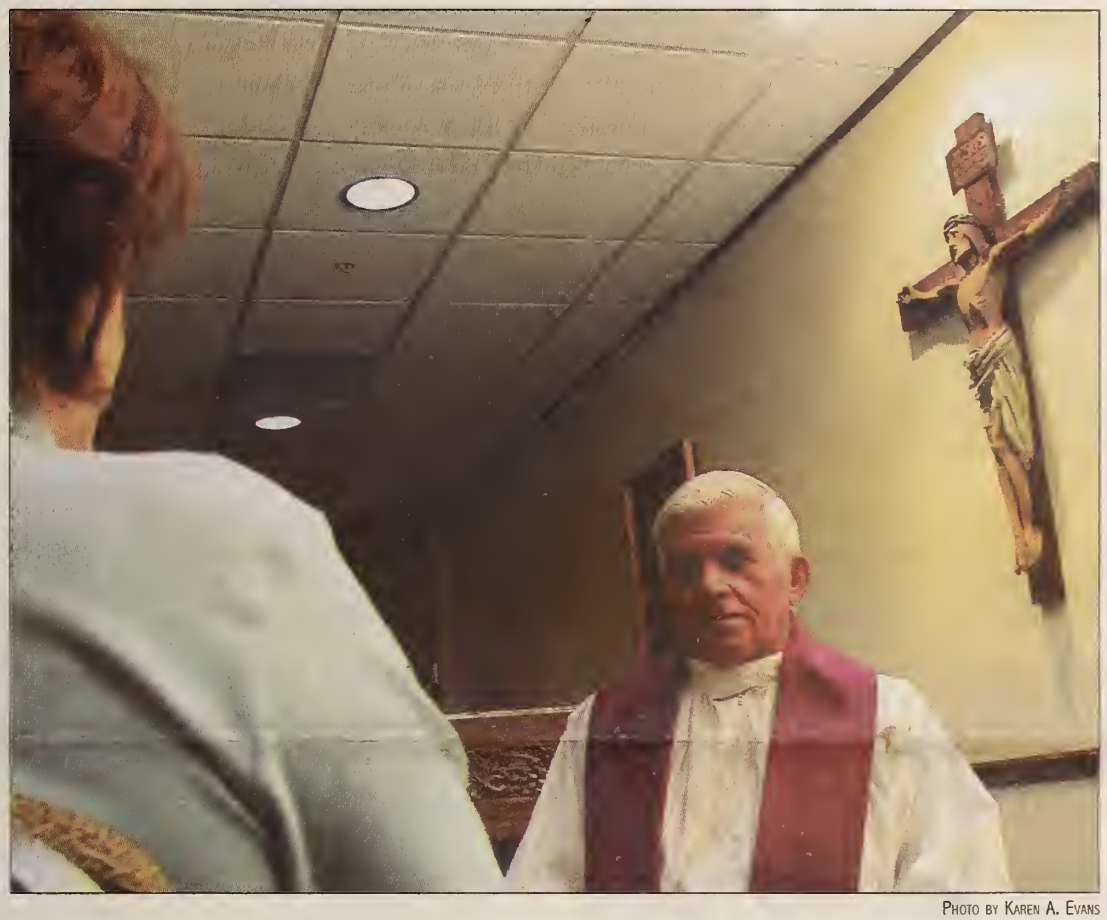

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Father James Hawker offers the sacrament of reconciliation, one of two sacraments of healing. In his July 30, 2003 weekly audience, Pope John Paul II said, "I ask that God gives each of us true penitence and sincere confession of our sins every time we go to the sacrament of penance."

Reconciliation: conversion, confession and celebration

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

Editor's note: This is the fifth story in a series on the seven sacraments.

CHARLOTTE — "God really is like the merciful parent (in the Parable of the Prodigal Son): not out to catch us in our sin but intent on reaching out and hanging on to us in spite of our sin," wrote Servite Sister Sandra DeGidio in "The Sacrament of Reconciliation: Celebrating God's Forgiveness."

"Reconciliation is not just a matter of getting rid of sin," she said. "The important point is what God does in, with and through us."

"If we recognize our own need for the forgiveness and mercy of God and turn to him with a contrite heart, he is ready to wash away our guilt and cleanse us from our sins," Pope John Paul II said at his weekly general audience July 30, 2003.

Reconciliation, often called penance or confession, is one of two sacraments of healing, along with the anointing of the sick. Penance and confession are just two of the parts of the sacrament as

See RECONCILIATION, page 7

#8XNPDVQ*3-DIGIT 275
#420836#
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
5232 P2

Juvenile justice
Southern bishops issue third statement
| PAGE 4

Fighting for life
Annual march rallies support
| PAGE 4

Cultural Watch
Columns, Letters to the Editor
| PAGES 14-15

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

RED PLANET 'SPIRIT'

CNS PHOTO FROM NASA VIA REUTERS

A panoramic view of terrain on the planet Mars is pictured in an image from NASA's robotic probe, Spirit, Jan. 3. The craft, which was to search for evidence of water and possible life, landed on its intended target in the Gusev Crater. The successful deployment of an antenna facilitated transmission of photographs and other data.

Vatican astronomers thrilled at Spirit probe landing on Mars

ROME (CNS) - While NASA engineers celebrated the successful landing of the Spirit on Mars, Vatican astronomers were also overjoyed at the robot's safe touchdown Jan. 3.

Only three exploratory probes have made it successfully onto the red planet: the Viking 1 and 2, which both landed in 1976, and the Mars Pathfinder in 1997. The British-built Beagle 2 landed on Mars Dec. 25, but no radio signal had been received to indicate it survived.

The six-wheeled Spirit robot was to sniff out signs of life or conditions that support life.

"Previous orbital studies of Mars' surface show clearly that there may have been water on Mars," said U.S. Jesuit Father George Coyne, director of the Vatican Observatory. "Now with the Spirit on the ground, the probe will dig underneath the planet's dry surface looking for water or chemical evidence that there may have been water," Father Coyne said.

U.S. Jesuit Brother Guy Brother Consolmagno, an astronomer, planetary scientist and curator of the Vatican meteorite collection, said NASA scientists aimed the probe to land in a large crater that may have been a lake. The robot, he said, will look and test for minerals that would suggest the presence of water, which is needed for life.

"Such a discovery would open up all new questions as to is there life there now or had there been once upon a time," said Brother Consolmagno.

In the early stages of the planets formation, material was exchanged between Mercury, Venus, Mars and Earth, said Father Coyne, so it is conceivable that life may have transported itself in these primordial exchanges.

But scientists may discover life on Mars that has nothing to do with DNA found on Earth,

"If life had two beginnings, one here on Earth and one on Mars, then statistically life could have emerged millions of times elsewhere beyond the solar system," said Father Coyne.

When asked what the theological impact of such a discovery would be, Brother Consolmagno said any discoveries made by the Spirit should augment, not necessarily change, one's religious beliefs.

"Science and religion teach you bits and pieces that are true, but as you learn later on, there is more going on than just that," Brother Consolmagno said.

"The challenge for both science and religion is to put the details into a broader picture, a deeper understanding of who we are and why we're here," he said.

N.J. enacts much-criticized law allowing stem-cell research

WASHINGTON (CNS) — New Jersey Gov. James McGreevey signed into law Jan. 4 a bill the U.S. bishops' spokeswoman on pro-life issues said "is designed to encourage government-sanctioned 'human fetus farms.'"

The bill allows scientific research using stem cells from human embryos to continue in the state and authorizes a system by which people may donate unused human embryos for research.

It does not provide state funds for stem-cell research or legalize practices that previously were prohibited. It criminalizes what it defines as human cloning while permitting other types of embryonic stem-cell research.

But critics including the N.J. Catholic Conference oppose the law, saying it will allow cloned human embryos to develop through the late fetal stages as long as they are used for research purposes.

"We are deeply distressed that a bare majority of the Legislature has passed and Gov. McGreevey has signed the human embryonic stem-cell research bill into law," said the state Catholic conference's Jan. 5 statement. "We believe it is more important than ever to stand for the principle that government must not treat any living human being as research material, as a mere means for benefit to others."

"The only way to obtain embryonic stem cells ... is to kill the living human embryo," said a more detailed statement from the conference last fall. "Embryonic stem cells have not helped a single human patient, while adult stem cells and similar ethically acceptable alternatives have helped hundreds of thousands."

Opponents of the bill within the New Jersey Legislature argued that the bill would create a climate of demand for cloned baby parts and encourage medical abuse and exploitation of women and children.

Diocesan planner

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Thursdays of each month at 1 p.m. or 7 p.m. Please call (336) 372-8846 for specific time.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., will host a Christian Coffeehouse Jan. 10 at 7:30 p.m. Single and married adults are invited for an evening of contemporary Christian music, food and fellowship. For more information, call Kathy Bartlett at (704) 400-2213.

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., is sponsoring a program to welcome back inactive Catholics and/or those who have left the Church but are interested in returning to the practice of the Catholic faith. The Catholics Returning Home series will meet Sundays, Jan. 11-Feb. 15, 3:30-5 p.m. For more information, call Sue Johnson at (704) 333-8028.

CHARLOTTE — St. Patrick Cathedral, 1621 Dilworth Rd. East, will host a Pro-Life Rosary and Benediction Jan. 12 at 7:30 pm. Everyone is invited for a beautiful night of prayer before the Blessed Sacrament in the cathedral. For details, call (704) 846-7361.

CHARLOTTE — All women are invited to join Women in the Word for weekly gatherings for prayer, reflection on Sunday scripture, music and sharing experiences of Christ in daily life. The group meets each Thursday, 9:45-11:45 a.m. in the family room of St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. For details, call Linda Flynn at (704) 366-9889. For childcare reservations, call Jurga Petrikene at 704) 907-0205.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information, call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Transition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Monday of each month 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

HUNTERSVILLE — Natural Family Planning classes are being held the third Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. at St. Mark Catholic Church, 14740 Stumptown Rd., Room 200. Classes are taught by Dr. Matthew Harrison. All are welcome to attend, no registration required. Call (704) 948-0231 for directions and more information.

CHARLOTTE - The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians Division 1 Mecklenburg County-St. Brigid, an Irish-Catholic social and charitable inter-parish group, meet the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Provi

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

JANUARY 9, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 15

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published b the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Churc St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except f Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durir June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishe of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per ye for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserve the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deeme appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-clas postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citie POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 3726 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Vatican says 29 church workers were killed in mission lands in 2003

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Caught in situations of civil conflict, surprised during robberies or specifically targeted for death because of their work, at least 29 Catholic Church workers were killed in mission territories in 2003, the Vatican said.

Fides, the Congregation for the Evangelization of Peoples' news agency, published its annual "martyrology" Dec. 30, listing Catholic clergy, religious and lay people who were killed while serving the church and their neighbors.

The most recent victim listed was Irish Archbishop Michael A. Courtney, the Vatican ambassador to Burundi who died Dec. 29 of gunshot wounds after the car he was riding in was fired on; it is still unclear if he was a target or simply caught in a crossfire.

Six of the 29 church workers who were killed died in Columbia, and another six victims died in Uganda, including three boys who were among a group of students from a minor seminary kidnapped by rebels in May.

Fides listed five victims in the Democratic Republic of Congo, two in El Salvador and one each in Kenya, South Africa, Equatorial Guinea, Pakistan, Brazil, Somalia, India and Guatemala.

Most of the church workers killed in mission territories were natives of the land where they died.

According to Fides, 25 church workers were killed in 2002 and 33 in 2001.

Vatican says pope received more than 4,000 Christmas e-mail greetings

VATICAN CITY — As of noon in Rome Dec. 30, Pope John Paul II had received 4,273 Christmas e-mails sent to one of his six addresses — versions of his name in the six official languages of the Vatican Web site, said U.S. Sister Judith Zoebelein, director of the Vatican's Internet office.

Almost half the e-mails — 2,068 messages — were sent to the English address: john_paul_ii@vatican.va.

Spanish e-mailers were in second place, sending 1,274 messages to: juan_pablo_ii@vatican.va.

The address also exists in Italian, German, French and Portuguese.

Sister Zoebelein, a Franciscan Sister of the Eucharist, said the address was activated Dec. 22 with little fanfare; a link was provided on the Christmas page of the Vatican Web site and removed Jan. 6, the feast of the Epiphany.

The week's cache of Christmas greetings is minimal compared to the approximately 55,000 messages sent by e-mail to the pope for his 25th anniversary in October.

"The number of messages was too massive to print," Sister Zoebelein said, "so we put them on a CD and sent them to the Holy Father."

Officials in the various language sections of the Vatican Secretariat of State read each message, summarizing the batch for the pope and printing out samples.

The Prefecture of the Papal Household said Dec. 30 that more than 2.6 million people saw Pope John Paul in person in 2003.

The prefecture published a month-by-month chart showing attendance at the pope's weekly general audiences, his liturgical celebrations, audiences for particular groups and attendance at the noon recitation of the Angelus on Sundays and feast days.

The biggest block — by far — in 2003 was October's entry for liturgical celebrations. With the Mass for the pope's 25th anniversary, the beatification of Blessed Mother Teresa of Calcutta and the creation of new cardinals, 388,000 prayed with the pope that month.

April came in second with an estimated 145,000 people attending papal liturgies for Palm Sunday, the triduum and Easter.

What you'll see in the Florida Keys

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Diver Spencer Slate dressed in a Santa Claus suit passes the Christ of the Deep statue in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary Dec. 23. The 9-foot-tall bronze statue has rested in the waters about four miles off Key Largo since the mid-1960s.

dence Rd. Anyone interested in their Irish-Catholic roots, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720 for further information.

CHARLOTTE — Thank God It's Friday (TGIF), a weekly support group for separated and divorced women, meets the third Friday of each month at 7 p.m. in the St. Matthew Church parish center, 8015 Ballantyne Pkwy., with a potluck dinner with a guest speaker from the community. TGIF is a healing ministry sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Charlotte Regional Office and St. Matthew Church. For details, call Trish Wilson at (704) 543-4986.

CHARLOTTE — New Creation Monastery invites you to a day of silence and solitude in the presence of Almighty God. The monastery offers private spiritual retreats for lay people. Write to Father John Vianney Hoover at New Creation Monastery, 11517 Spreading Oak Ln. Charlotte, NC 28226, stating why you want to go on retreat and when. For more information, call (704) 541-5026.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

HIGH POINT — Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, Johnson St. and Skeet Club Rd., will offer free basic and intermediate Spanish classes Thursdays, 7-8:30 p.m. Classes begin Jan. 15 and end Feb. 19. To register, call Nancy Skee at (336) 884-0522.

GREENSBORO — The Adult Faith Formation ministry of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St., will present "A Tale of Faith and Medicine" Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. A physician will share his journey of faith that led him to truly give the gift of life to a young woman. For more information, call the church office at (336) 272-4681.

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

NEWTON — Bishop Peter J. Jugis will attend a prayer service at St. Joseph Church, 720 W. 13th St., Jan. 25 at 7:30 p.m. to celebrate the Week of Christian Unity. Members of area churches are also invited, and a light reception will follow the service. For more information, call the church office at (828) 464-9207.

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For more information, call the church office at (828) 327-2341.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — A Support Group for Parents Who Have Lost a Child of any age meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd. We draw strength from others' experience of loss and grief. For more information, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., will host a Cursillo Weekend for Men Feb. 12-15. For more information contact: www.charlottecursillo.org

WINSTON-SALEM — Learn Natural Family Planning taught by the Couple to Couple League. A four-part series of classes will begin Feb. 15 at 1:30 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For registration and information, call Stephanie and Todd Brown at (336) 765-2909.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved which meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

HAVING AN EVENT?

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Bishops of the South issue third criminal justice pastoral statement

Catholic leaders question juvenile justice in the South

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

MARTIN, Ky. — The Catholic Bishops of the South issued a pastoral statement calling for improved juvenile justice in the South.

Approved by the 42 bishop-members of the Catholic Committee of the South, including Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte, "Suffer the Little Children..." is the third of six such statements on the criminal justice process. The document revisits the November 2000 national statement by the U.S. bishops, "Responsibility, Rehabilitation, and Restoration: A Catholic Perspective on Crime and Criminal Justice."

"We bishops cannot support policies that treat young offenders as though they are adults," stated the bishops.

While violent youth should "be removed from society until they are no longer dangerous," the bishops said society "must never respond to children who have committed crimes as though they are somehow equal to adults, fully formed in conscience and fully aware of their actions. Placing children in adult jails is a sign of failure, not a solution."

The bishops were "disturbed by the trend" toward trying children under 18 as adults and placing juveniles in prisons with adults.

"We oppose allowing juvenile inmates to be in contact with adult inmates — such contacts have devastating consequences," said the bishops. "We also oppose efforts to give prosecutors, as opposed to courts, the authority to decide if juveniles should be tried as adults for serious crimes."

The bishops noted with "grave apprehension" the 2000 U.S. Department of Justice report that more than "100,000 children under the age of 18 are held in U.S. juvenile and adult correctional facilities on any given day."

Other reports indicate nearly three quarters of children in jail or prison are African American or Hispanic. African-American youth represent 15 percent of the population, 26 percent of juvenile arrests, 44 percent of youth who are detained, 46 percent who are judicially waived to criminal court and 58 percent admitted to state prisons.

"We must again stress that discrimination and racism are serious contributors to crime," said the bishops. "We join those asking our states to study why there is disproportionate racial prosecution and confinement of juveniles."

The bishops were concerned about child poverty — in Southern states, one out of every five children lives in poverty, according to Children's Defense Fund.

"We have consistently pointed out that extreme poverty is a serious contributor to crime," said the bishops. "Fighting poverty, educating children and supporting families are essential anti-crime strategies and we call on all people of good will to join in these efforts."

In many instances, said the bishops, children turn to crime due to "our own negligence in raising children with a respect for life, providing a nurturing and loving environment, or addressing serious mental or emotional illnesses."

"We encourage people to support programs in the community that engage young people and build their self-esteem," the bishops said.

Children's access to handguns was another concern.

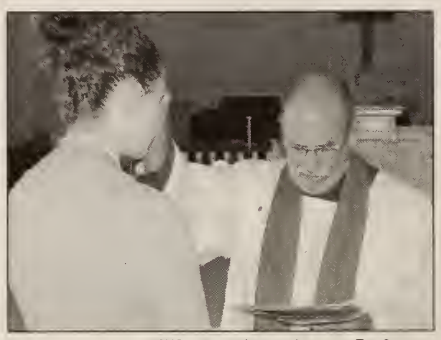
According to a 2002 Harvard School of Public Health study, the South had five states with the highest rate of gun ownership and "children in those states are at increased risk of dying from accidental and intentional firearm injuries."

"We support measures that control the sale and use of firearms and make them safer," said the bishops. "We especially support efforts that prevent the unsupervised use of firearms by children, and we reiterate our call for sensible regulation of handguns. ..."

The bishops believe society must "address the underlying problems that in turn attract people to crime — inadequate education, family disintegration, poverty, poor housing and powerlessness and greed."

The bishops called upon the U.S. government to redirect public resources away from prison construction and toward "better and more effective programs aimed at crime prevention, rehabilitation, education efforts, substance abuse treatment and ... probation, parole and reintegration."

"Young people are our greatest treasure and our hope for the future," said the bishops. "How we treat the children in our communities today will help shape the future for all of us tomorrow."



CNS PHOTO BY JENNIFER LINDBERG, THE CRITERION

Msgr. Harold Knueven anoints a teenager during her baptism at the Indianapolis Juvenile Correctional Facility in Indianapolis in early August. The girl said being imprisoned helped her grow closer to God and embrace the Catholic faith.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Annual march rallies support for life

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — North Carolina Catholics will join thousands of pro-life activists in Washington, D.C. Jan. 21-22 for the 2004 March for Life. The annual rally is held on the anniversary of the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade and Doe vs. Bolton decisions legalizing abortion.

"The March for Life is an opportunity to be a public witness for the sanctity of life. This allows our legislators to hear that we will not compromise when it comes to protecting human life," said Maggi Nadol, diocesan Respect Life coordinator.

WANT TO GO?

Representatives from the Diocese of Charlotte will participate in the following activities:

Jan. 21 — Mass at 8 p.m. at the Basilica Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Jan. 22 — Mass celebrated by Bishop Peter J. Jugis for North Carolinians at 10:30 a.m. at the Basilica Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Jan. 22 — Rally at the Ellipse near the White House at 12 p.m.

Spaces for the March for Life are still available. Bus tickets are $50 and a block of hotel rooms has been reserved. For more information, contact Maggi Nadol, diocesan Respect Life coordinator, at (704) 370-3229.

IGNITED BY TRUTH
CATHOLIC CONFERENCE 2004

Saturday, February 14th, 2004 8:30 am - 6:00 pm
Cardinal Gibbons Catholic High School, 1401 Edwards Mill Road, Raleigh, NC

Come hear seven great Catholic speakers!

Patrick Madrid, Surprised by Truth, Apologetics Author
"Speak the Truth in Love"

Alex Jones, St. Joseph Communications
"No Price Too High"

Dr. Ray Guarendi, Catholic Answers, Clinical Psychologist
"You Are a Better Parent Than You Think"

Annie Scheidler, Generations for Life Director
"Make a Difference for Life"

Dr. Richard Gildersleeve, Graduate of International Theological Institute
"An Invaluable Resource: The Catechism"

Dr. Robert Young, NC State University Professor
"The Catholic Mind in a Modern World"

Elizabeth and Mark Matthews, Author of Precious Treasure: The Story of Patrick
"To Love Without Counting the Cost"

Vigil Mass celebrated by Fr. Philip Marian Tighe.
For complete details and online registration, visit: www.ignitedbytruth.com
Early Registration Discounts are available!

Registration
Admission price includes lunch: $20 adult ($30 after January 25, 2004), $10 college and chaperoned student age 10+ ($15 after January 25, 2004) Donations are welcome and tax deductible!

# of adults: ..... # of students: ..... Optional donation: $..... Total enclosed: $ ☐

If you made a donation, we would like to recognize you as a sponsor in our program. Name to be listed: ..... Please do not list my name ☐

Names(first/last): .....
(for name tag printing)
.....

Address: .....

City/State/Zip: ..... Phone: .....

Parish: ..... E-mail: .....

VISA, MasterCard and Discover accepted online at www.ignitedbytruth.com*. Hotel packages are available.*

Make checks payable and mail to:

St. Anthony of Padua
Catholic Church
c/o Ignited by Truth Conference
424 E. Six Forks Road
Suite 109, PMB 215
Raleigh, NC 27609

Questions? Contact us at:
ignited@ignitedbytruth.com

Camp Lejeune Catholics are getting a few good Knights

COURTESY PHOTO

Knights of Columbus present the charter for the new council at Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base in North Carolina at a ceremony held Dec. 14, 2003. The council is named after Father Aloysius Schmidt, a Navy chaplain who died saving others at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941.

Council to assist, provide stability for parishioners

BY JULIA LEDOUX
NC CATHOLIC

JACKSONVILLE — Catholics who worship at Camp Lejeune now have their own Knights of Columbus council.

The new council's charter was presented at a special Mass and ceremony at the Marine Corps base Dec. 14, 2003. The council was named after a Navy chaplain, Father Aloysius Schmidt, who died saving others at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

Father Aidan Logan, a Navy lieutenant commander and chaplain, said the Knights have recently changed a requirement mandating each local council be connected to a civilian parish.

"They have amended their rules so we can have a council on a military base," said Father Logan.

The change is important for military personnel who serve in places like Okinawa, Japan, where civilian parishes do not exist, he said.

Father Logan has been working to bring a council to the base since he arrived in Onslow County 18 months ago. He contacted existing councils at Infant of Prague Church in Jacksonville and St. Mildred Church in Swansboro, which assisted in getting the council at Camp Lejeune organized.

"We have many people who live on base who belong to those two councils," he said.

Twenty-nine men have already signed up for the Camp Lejeune council, according to Lenny Quemuel of the St. Mildred Knights of Columbus council.

"It brings a new perspective into Camp Lejeune and the religious community," said Quemuel. "Instead of just the young Marines, we have another organization on the base we can rely on. It is going to give Camp Lejeune and other Catholic faith organizations another means to prosper."

The Knights of Columbus is a Catholic fraternal organization founded in the United States in 1882 to render financial aid to members and their families. Social and intellectual fellowship is promoted among members and their families through educational, charitable, religious, social welfare, war relief and public relief works.

Most of the Knights' 1.6 million members are in the United States, but it has councils in Canada, Mexico and several other countries.

Father Logan said the Camp Lejeune council would provide stability for parishioners who worship on the base. Civilian priests normally remain at a parish for six to 12 years while military priests are transferred every two to three years.

He also noted his parish is made up of mostly young families. Approximately 550 children are enrolled in Sunday school at Camp Lejeune. Father Logan said the Knights would be invaluable in assisting adults to have a fuller understanding of the faith.

This story was reprinted with permission from the NC Catholic. Editor Kevin E. Murray contributed to the story.

Celebrating a catechist

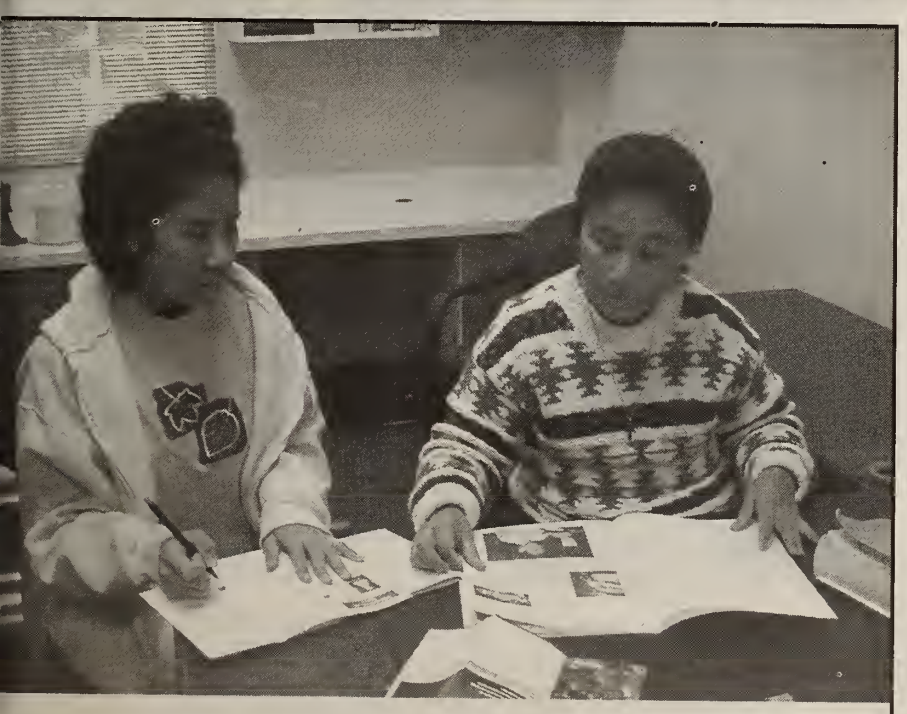
BREVARD — A celebration and recognition reception was given Dec. 7 for Mary Smith, a parishioner of Sacred Heart Church in Brevard, for surpassing 25 years of service as a catechist.

Children and youth of the parish made a musical presentation for Smith, and Dr. Cris Villapando, director of the diocesan faith formation office, presented Smith with the National Catechist Pin, two volumes of the works of Pope John Paul II and a certificate of appreciation signed by Bishop Peter J. Jugis.

A plaque honoring Smith's catechetical service was presented by the Knights of Columbus Jack Driscoll Council and a stained glass cross was presented by the Ladies Guild of the parish.

COURTESY PHOTO

From left: Dr. Cris Villapando, director of diocesan faith formation; Myriam Gonzalez, director of Sacred Heart Church faith formation; Mary Smith, catechist; and Father Carl DelGiudice, pastor of Sacred Heart, at the celebration honoring Smith's 25 years as a catechist Dec. 7.



"Are you a young woman thirsting for more in life? As Sisters of Mercy we're learning as we minister to God's poor, sick & uneducated."

— Sisters Pilansia & Virginia

For more information: Call 1-866-HAV-MERCY

THE ORATORY
434 Charlotte Avenue, P. O. Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586
(803) 327-2097

A DAY WITH THE GOSPEL OF JOHN

Thursday, Feb. 5
OR Saturday, Feb. 7

9 am - 4 pm

Dr. Peter Judge

This study day on the fourth Gospel highlights the New Testament message for Lent and Easter. The day will include prayer and introduction to the Gospel and Eucharist.

Cost: $30 - includes lunch

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926

McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.

Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

COURTESY PHOTO

Shoes left outside the classrooms were filled with St. Nicholas prayer cards and candy canes at St. Gabriel School in Charlotte Dec. 5.

Stealthy 'saint' slips treats in students' shoes

CHARLOTTE — St. Nick was making the rounds at St. Gabriel School in Charlotte.

The school celebrated St. Nicholas Day as students left their shoes outside their classrooms in anticipation of St. Nick's visit Dec. 5. Indeed, "St. Nick" filled the students' shoes with holiday treats.

St. Nicholas, born in Turkey, was a wealthy man who, at midnight, would leave gifts on poor people's doorsteps. This legend is the basis for placing gifts or gold coins in the shoes, stockings or baskets of children during the night before the feast of St. Nicholas celebrated early in the Advent season on Dec. 6.

His feast day is an important festival in many places and nearly universally associated with gift giving, but it is from the Dutch celebration that comes much of the Santa Claus tradition in the United States. Early European immigrants brought cherished St. Nicholas holiday traditions with gift giving and candy canes, which have become symbols of St. Nicholas. The candy canes resemble a bishop's staff, hooked at the top like a shepherd's crook, showing that he was a shepherd who cared for his people. St. Nicholas did his gift giving in secret under cover of darkness. He did not want to be seen and recognized, as he wanted those he helped to give thanks to God.

At St. Gabriel School, St. Nicholas Day reminded students and faculty to be good, be kind to each other, respect people and always try to be the best they can be. It was also a reminder that Christmas Day was coming soon.

Caroling cubs convey Christmas cheer

CHARLOTTE — When the monthly theme called for learning about "good will," the Wolf Cub Scouts of St. Gabriel Church took the challenge to heart.

Den leaders Steve Lothspeich and Marc Settin had their hands full as the boys began their tasks in early December. They used carpenter tools to make a manger, painted a glass votive candleholder as a gift and pledged to complete three acts of good will.

The Scouts' first act was to sing Christmas carols to people shopping for Christmas trees in the lot sponsored by the parish Men's Club outside the church Dec. 7.

Scouts were then responsible for completing their pledged acts of good will on their own during the holidays.

COURTESY PHOT

Wolf Cub Scouts Alex Lothspeich, Zachary Sharp, Marc Settin Jr., Peyton Swancy Brett Heinz, Tyler Martino, Adam Walsh and Matthew McElhaney sing Christma carols to Christmas tree shoppers outside St. Gabriel Church Dec. 7 as fathers Blai McElhaney and Curt Heinz watch.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened. 704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

KTC Transportation Co. Inc

CALL 704-532-7605

Convention Services
Airport
Hotel
City Tours
Groups
Long & Short Tours
Beach Vacations
Games
Sports
Special Events

SUPERSTAR Coach Systems

Fax 704-532-7661

www.ktctransportation.com

Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Interest Rate: 3.75%*
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

Consolidate High-Interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

No Payment until February 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

Reconciliation: a celebration

RECONCILIATION, from page 1

it is celebrated today. Catechism of the Catholic Church lists four key elements: contrition, confession, absolution and satisfaction (penance).

According to the catechism, contrition is "sorrow of the soul and detestation for the sin committed, together with the resolution not to sin again." Confession, or disclosure of sins, "frees us and facilitates our reconciliation with others." By the priest's sacramental absolution, God grants the penitent "pardon and peace." Finally, the satisfaction "must take into account the penitent's personal situation and must seek his spiritual good. It must correspond as far as possible with the gravity and nature of the sins committed."

Confession to a priest

Often-asked questions are "Why do I have to confess to priest?" and "Can't I just tell my sins to God?"

The catechism says confession to a priest is an essential part of the sacrament of penance: "All mortal sins of which penitents after a diligent self-examination are conscious must be recounted by them in confession ... for these sins sometimes wound the soul more grievously and are more dangerous than those which are committed openly."

The ongoing conversion

According to Sister DeGidio, conversion is not a once-in-a-lifetime occurrence — it is a continuous, process that brings Christians ever closer to "the holiness and love of God."

"Moral conversion means making a personal, explicitly responsible decision to turn away from the evil that blinds us to God's love, and to turn toward God who gifts us with love in spite of our sinfulness," she said.

"The need for conversion does not extend only to those who have made a radical choice for evil," said Sister DeGidio. "Most often (conversion) means the small efforts all of us must continually make to respond to the call of God."

Repairing our relationship with God

Many Catholics think of the penance element of reconciliation as punishment for their sins. According to Sister DeGidio, penance is not punishment, but rather repairing or correcting a sinful lifestyle.

"In the past we were told to do penance as temporal punishment for our sins," she said. "Now, however, we understand that our real 'punishment' is the continuing pattern of sin in our lives and the harmful attitudes and actions it creates in us."

"The purpose of doing penance is to help us change that pattern. Penance is for growth, not for punishment," said Sister DeGidio. "'Doing penance' means taking steps in the direction of living a changed life; it means making room for something new."

Foundation in the early church

The origins of the sacrament of reconciliation are found in John 20:22-23: "And when (Jesus) had said this, he breathed on them and said to them, 'Receive the Holy Spirit. Whose sins you forgive are forgiven them, and whose sins you retain are retained.'"

For the next two millennia, reconciliation underwent radical reformation to become the sacrament Catholics celebrate today. For the first 300 years of Christianity, penance was part of baptism. If a baptized person sinned seriously, he was excluded from the eucharistic community.

Toward the end of the third century, church leaders resolved that every sin is forgivable, based on teachings in the gospels and the importance Jesus gave to forgiveness. For the next 300 years, the sacrament was celebrated only once in a person's lifetime and the penance was often long in duration and severe in nature.

In the later Middle Ages, the practice of private reconciliation began to develop, supposedly through the influence of Irish monks. Reconciliation became a private ceremony administered by the priest and the absolution of sin was given before the penance was performed. In this order, Christians were able to receive the sacrament many times.

The 16th-century Council of Trent reemphasized the sacramental character of reconciliation. It also established the principle of yearly confession and allowed the individual priest to be the judge of the penance to be imposed.

A sacrament to celebrate

When Catholics celebrate the sacrament of reconciliation, they should celebrate with joy and thanksgiving, Sister DeGidio said.

"The forgiveness of the Christian community and of God has brought us to this moment — and that is worth celebrating."

Make Sure Your Wedding Day Sparkles As Brightly As Your Diamond

NorthStone Country Club Is The Perfect Setting For Your Wedding Or Reception

An enchanting view. Refined furnishings. Gourmet cuisine. These are all elements of the perfect wedding event held in the classic surroundings of the NorthStone Country Club. From an elegant bridal luncheon, to a grand wedding reception, our staff will provide first-class service down to the finest detail. We offer a private banquet space for up to 230 people (350 standing). Plus, we have flexible scheduling to accommodate afternoon and evening events any day of the week. For a wedding event you can cherish forever, call 704-948-4286, extension 226.

- Bridal Showers
- Luncheons
- Rehearsal Dinners
- Weddings
- Wedding Receptions
- Baby Showers
- Meetings
- Social Events

NORTHSTONE Country Club

15801 NorthStone Dr., Huntersville • 704-948-4286, ext 226 • www.northstoneclub.com

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?*

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!*

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

The Franciscan Center

Catholic Gift & Book Store

Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!

Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday

(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Audit results report

AUDITS, from page 1

employees and volunteers who work with minors (93 percent).

Bishop Wilton D. Gregory, U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops president, said the report indicates "the Catholic dioceses and eparchies (Eastern-rite dioceses) of the United States have put a tremendous effort into making the charter very much a part of the life of the church since the (June 2002) Dallas meeting."

He noted the audit process also uncovered areas not foreseen in Dallas.

"And so the report contains valuable general recommendations for further strengthening the church's response to the sexual abuse crisis in all its dimensions," he said.

The report is based on an independent compliance audit conducted by the Boston-based Gavin Group, headed by William Gavin, a former FBI official, and overseen by Kathleen McChesney, a former top FBI agent and head of the U.S. bishops' Office of Child and Youth Protection.

More than 50 auditors — mostly former FBI agents — conducted the onsite audits of dioceses and eparchies mostly between late June and November 2003.

Of the 191 audited dioceses, 52 dioceses were already in compliance with the charter. Auditors issued instructions — notices of noncompliance on one or more of the 17 articles — to 57 dioceses.

They issued recommendations — notices there was basic compliance but it was incomplete or could be improved in certain areas — to 125 dioceses. The report emphasized that even if dioceses have not fully implemented the recommendations given them, they "may still be compliant with the charter."

Of the 139 dioceses that received instructions and/or recommendations, 105 followed up before the end of the year with evidence they had made the changes to bring them into compliance or to improve their weaknesses.

The remaining 34 did not provide such evidence before the Dec. 12 deadline for inclusion in the first national report on the audit results.

The Catholic News & Herald reported Jan. 2 that the Diocese of Charlotte received two commendations.

The diocese was commended for its early proactive initiatives to ensure the protection of children and youths under its pastoral care. In 1994, the diocese adopted its "Policy of the Diocese of Charlotte Concerning Ministry-Related Sexual Misconduct by Church Personnel," which included the establishment of an advisory board, the majority of whom are laypersons and not diocesan employees.

The diocese also was commended for its comprehensive safe environment program, which includes training programs and background investigations for clergy, volunteers, teachers and contractors who have contact with minors.

Since June 2002, nearly 6,800 people in the Diocese of Charlotte completed training sessions for the awareness and prevention of the sexual abuse of children and young people.

The auditors also recommended the Diocese of Charlotte's policy for reporting allegations of sexual abuse of a minor by clergy be clarified and made more readily available. The diocese complied through regular announcements in church bulletins, The Catholic News & Herald and its Web site: www.charlottediocese.org.

"Our diocese will continue to comply fully with all requirements of law and the charter promulgated by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, and we will respond without delay whenever there is an allegation of sexual abuse," said Bishop Peter J. Jugis.

In a letter mailed Jan. 6 to all registered households, the bishop pledged "the protection of our children and young people will always be a priority in the Diocese of Charlotte. I ask you to join me in prayer for all victims of sexual abuse."

A second study, also commissioned by the bishops, is scheduled to be released Feb. 27. Conducted by the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, the study will report the nature and scope of clergy sexual abuse of minors over the last 50 years.

Gavin said the audit was initially a source of concern to many bishops, but it "turned out to be extremely helpful in demonstrating some deficiencies that were not yet known to them."

Staff Writer Karen A. Evans contributed to this story.

CNS PHOTO BY NANCY WIECHEC

Auditor William Gavin explains the results of a nationwide review of diocesan practices and policies mandated by the U.S. bishops' "Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People." He was among those addressing the Jan. 6 press conference in Washington. Looking on is Kathleen McChesney, executive director of the bishops' Office for Child and Youth Protection.

—This ad also ran in the national edition of The New York Times and USA Today on January 7, 2004.—

Promise to Protect. Pledge to Heal.

"We can't give the victims of abuse back their innocence, but we can assure them that we will do all in our power to see to it that no child is so harmed again."

Bishop Wilton D. Gregory, President, United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

On January 6, 2004, the Office of Child and Youth Protection of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops issued its first report on the compliance of Catholic dioceses and eparchies (dioceses of the Eastern Catholic Churches) in implementing the Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People.

Adopted in June 2002, the Charter established the framework for preventing abuse of minors by clergy and protecting all children and young people in the Church's care.

Protecting young people.
The Charter provides for creating "safe environments" in which young people are secure. It also provides for strict enforcement of codes of conduct for all those, including clergy, who come in contact with children and youth, whether they are full time employees or volunteers.

Healing and reconciliation with victims of abuse.
The Charter calls for dioceses to reach out to victims of sexual abuse, offering healing counsel and services and appointing victims' assistance coordinators.

Effective response to allegations of sexual abuse.
The Charter states that dioceses are to report allegations of abuse of minors, cooperate with civil authorities' investigations, and support the right of every victim to make a report to the authorities. The Catholic Church is fully committed to removing abusers from ministry.

Ensuring bishops' and dioceses' accountability.
The Bishops' Office of Child and Youth Protection has made it possible for the first time to audit the performance of Catholic dioceses to ensure the safety of minors. The Bishops created a National Review Board of prominent lay Catholics to assist and monitor the Office to guarantee that the promise of the Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People is realized.

There is no place in the priesthood or religious life for those who would harm the young.
Pope John Paul II

Please see the "Report on the Implementation of the 'Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People'" at www.usccb.org

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Charlotte Diocese combats poverty

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Thanks to CSS's ABLE (Assets Building Long Equity) Matched Savings Program, available through the Office of Economic Opportunity in Murphy, Clay County farmer Todd Wood saved enough money to buy five heifers and start a business.

POVERTY, *from page 1

meet by working part-time jobs that offer little or no benefits," said Joe Purello, director of the diocesan Office of Justice and Peace.

"We have this image of poor people as homeless or unemployed," said Purello, "and while certainly our nation has far too many homeless men, women and families given our immense wealth, we are far more likely to encounter a poor person ringing up our purchases at the store, providing childcare at a childcare center, or cleaning the hotel rooms in which we stay."

These nearly 35 million U.S. residents live in what the Catholic Campaign for Human Development, the U.S. bishops' anti-poverty arm, calls "Poverty USA," the largest "state" in America. Yet a March 2000 Gallup poll revealed only 5 percent of Americans believe poverty and homelessness are important problems for the country.

"... Some Washington policy 'wonks' were quoted as saying that these statistics were a 'fairly predictable product of the slowing economy' and that 'results of the surveys have been consistent with what one would expect during a down economic period,'" said Father Robert Vitillo, executive director of the Catholic Campaign for Human Development (CCHD), at the Bishop Begley Conference on Appalachia in Lake Junaluska, N.C., Oct. 12.

"Contrast those bland, 'ho-hum' remarks with the concerns about increasing poverty raised by our Holy Father, Pope John Paul II," said Father Vitillo.

In April 2002, the pope said, "Precisely because people have been endowed by ... extraordinary [human] dignity, they should not be reduced to living in sub-human social, economic, cultural or political conditions."

Through a series of documents, the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops has called on others to help end poverty.

In "A Place at the Table: A Catholic Recommitment to Overcome Poverty and to Respect the Dignity of All God's Children," the U.S. bishops stated Catholics "must come together with a common conviction that we can no longer tolerate the moral scandal of poverty in our land. ..."

In "Faithful Citizenship: A Catholic Call to Political Responsibility," the U.S. bishops' Administrative Committee's 8,500-word blueprint for electoral decisions based on Catholic social teaching, it states "building peace, combating poverty and despair, and protecting freedom and human rights are not only moral imperatives; they are wise national priorities."

The CCHD sponsors "Poverty Awareness in America Month" each January to highlight the needs of poor Americans. Television and radio public service announcements have been distributed, and newspaper ads designed, to show the face of American poverty.

But in North Carolina, one doesn't have to look far to see the face of poverty.

Neighboring poverty

According to the North Carolina Budget and Tax Center data for 2001-2002, North Carolina's poverty of 13.4 percent is significantly higher than the national rate of 11.7 percent.

"Poverty is much worse in the state's rural areas, and it especially hits children hard with nearly 17 percent of our state's children living in poverty," said Purello. "More than 20 school districts in rural counties reported poverty rates among school-age children over 25 percent."

"If one looks at how poverty is distributed on a map of the counties of North Carolina, one will find poverty concentrated in the far western counties, the low-lying eastern and southeastern counties and in the mountainous counties bordering Tennessee in the northwest," he said.

Yet in November, The Catholic News & Herald reported a significant increase in the number of first-time clients of the diocesan Catholic Social Services (CSS) Food Pantry.

More than 1,200 people in the Charlotte area turn to the Food Pantry each year to help feed their families. The increase in Food Pantry clients is a commentary on the state of the economy and the effects of Sept. 11, said Geri King, director of the Charlotte Regional Office of CSS.

"Many people have gone into debt, lost their homes," said King. "It's been a tough time for a lot of people."

King said CSS is seeing a wider margin of people who have been affected, including educated and professional people who have lost their jobs. Even though the economy is improving, there are still many families in need of assistance until economic progress affects them in a positive manner, she said.

Making a difference

In 1997, then-Bishop William G. Curlin and Raleigh Bishop F. Joseph Gossman appealed to their dioceses "to reach out to those in dire economic need," and together the bishops issued the pastoral letter "Of One Heart and One Mind."

In 1999, CSS of the Diocese of Charlotte established the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) to serve the far west Appalachian counties of Cherokee, Clay, Graham and Swain "in response to the geographic imbalance of poverty in North Carolina and in desiring to follow concretely the call of the pastoral letter of Bishops Curlin and Gossman," said Purello.

In 1998 and 1999, Msgr. Mauricio W. West, chancellor and vicar general of the Diocese of Charlotte, and Joanne Frazer, then-director of the Office of Justice and Peace, visited the far western counties to convene community meetings and learn of the region's most pressing needs.

"The establishment of the OEO really was a community-based effort," said Purello. "And its many successful works today have at their base the willingness of the diocesan staff — like Msgr. West and Joanne Frazer — to listen first to what the people of the region were saying. The power of partnership, collaboration, and community voice remain the key strength of OEO today."

"Far too many top-down economic development schemes in our country have failed, because the agenda of the designers did not match the needs and available resources of the people who were supposedly being helped," he said.

Each year, the OEO, located in the Bishop Begley Center for Economic Development in Murphy, awards grants to local organizations.

The money for the grants comes from a special diocesan economic development fund established with proceeds from the sale in the mid-1990s of the Good Shepherd Health Care System in Hayesville.

"The decision to keep that money from the sale of Good Shepherd in a reserve fund as an ongoing generator of economic development in far western North Carolina was a wise decision by diocesan leadership," said Purello. "The money has been used by groups that are working at the frontlines of grassroots development."

"After tonight, we will have given out about $90,000 to 38 agencies since the year 2000," said Joan Furst, program director of the OEO at the November grant awards ceremony.

As a result, organizations in far western North Carolina are flourishing after receiving the start-up funds from OEO grants.

Families first

To address the difficulties many people face on the road from welfare to work — such as lack of childcare and adequate education, low pay and few benefits — the OEO instituted in 2002 the Far West Families First (FWFF) Program. The ecumenical program supported by CSS, Glenmary Home Missioners, the Duke Endowment and Clay and Cherokee county Departments of Social Services, trains volunteers from various faith communities and teams them with families transitioning from receiving public assistance to financial independence.

Ecumenical faith teams consisting of Methodists, Catholics, Presbyterians and other faiths — guided by principles of respect, compassion and family empowerment — support and counsel the families.

"OEO's first FWFF coordinator, Maureen Ripper, has skillfully brought together diverse teams that provide encouragement and hope to families in transition and in need," said Purello.

The support provided by the teams is often as varied as the families' situations. Teams have furnished bedding and furniture, shared garden produce, fixed computers, transported children to school, accompanied mothers to housing interviews and readied children for school with clothes and supplies.

One FWFF participant, a mother and full-time student, relies on her support team while working to obtain her computer science degree to become a skilled working mom.

"This group of wonderful, caring, loving people are very dear to me," she said. "When I feel life has gotten the best of me, I know I can make a call, and I will have someone there to talk to and cry on their shoulders. ..."

"The OEO, through its grants and community initiatives like Far West Families First and ABLE Matched Savings Program, seeks to strengthen the western communities of North Carolina by celebrating diversity and recognizing the tremendous resources diverse communities offer," said Furst.

"The bishops of Appalachia have been tireless in teaching about the need to build solidarity with those in need," said Father Vitillo.

"I doubt many of us here could enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner feast if we were aware that our own relatives were hovering outside our door with no food to eat," he said. "Yet many of us do tolerate this very injustice when we quietly ignore the plight of some 34.6 million of our brothers and sisters in the human family who are burdened each day by poverty in this, the richest of nations."

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Questioning what to buy and what to be

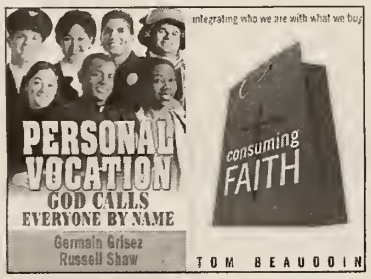
In "Consuming Faith: Integrating Who We Are With What We Buy," Tom Beaudoin focuses on what he calls "economic spirituality."

Beaudoin, who explored "the irreverent spiritual quest of Generation X" in his previous book, "Virtual Faith," put off his doctoral dissertation in theology to embark on a self-reflective study of a branding economy. He wanted to examine how the goods we purchase have a personality all their own that we buy into. The result is a new perspective on a "consuming faith" — one that "integrates who we are with what we buy."



"Consuming Faith: Integrating Who We Are With What We Buy," by Tom Beaudoin. Sheed and Ward (Lanham, Md., and Chicago, 2004). 180 pp., $19.95.

"Personal Vocation: God Calls Everyone by Name," by Germain Grisez and Russell Shaw. Our Sunday Visitor (Huntington, Ind., 2003). 169 pp., $12.95.

Beaudoin says that we all make choices about the things we purchase — the sneakers we wear, the cars we drive. He asks: What do those choices reveal about us? What consequences do those choices have on others?

Beaudoin began his research by asking the producers of the goods he buys to tell him about how those goods are produced. He later writes, "I know that the materials that enable my comfort were forged under the fluorescent lights in a large room of young women half a world away. ... I must open myself to seeing my goods as part of 'one body,' and looking through my goods to their human producers." It is through this connectedness to others that we build up the body of Christ.

While calling people to greater sensitivity and a deeper and more revealing examination of conscience, Beaudoin asks a new and fundamental Catholic question: "What is it about us that cannot be bought, branded, traded away, drugged up or dieted off?" As usual, Beaudoin has captured the experience of young adults well. He brilliantly calls us to see, as St. Ignatius would say, "God in all things," even in a trip to the mall.

In their book, "Personal Vocation: God Calls Everyone by Name," authors Germain Grisez and Russell Shaw make the point that the idea of "vocation" encapsulates all that we choose. Marriage, children, political affiliation and even (like Beaudoin) economic choices are all matters of personal vocation. They are decisions that can reveal who you really are.

Grisez, a professor of Catholic moral theology, and Shaw, a prolific, Washington-based freelance writer on Catholic topics, have authored several books together. In "Personal Vocation" they correct the narrow Catholic view of vocation as simply "a calling to the priesthood or consecrated life." Instead, they say, a personal vocation is the "unique, unrepeatable role God calls each person to carry out the all-embracing divine plan."

The authors take a firm stand on calling young people to vocation, not just to employment. Often young people are pushed into careers that make good economic sense without regard to their own unique God-given talents. They urge individuals, educators, religious and parents to help form personal vocations in this new light.

A great practical section toward the end of the book and quotes and stories from all over the wide-ranging Catholic spectrum (St. Josemaria Escriva de Balaguer, the founder of Opus Dei, is mentioned in the same breath as Dorothy Day) are just two of the book's strengths. This book is a must-read for all those who are caught at the crossroads of major decisions. At times, the book is rather dry (especially in the historical section) and also reeks of anti-intellectualism in parts, but it certainly speaks the truth about the vocation crisis in the world.

Both these books are gems. Reading them will certainly open your eyes to the wonders of discerning where God is calling you personally.

Hayes is the operations and marketing director of BustedHalo.com, the Paulist Fathers' young adult Internet outreach.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: SEPT. 18, 2004

Jan. 18, Second Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle C Readings:

1) Isaiah 62:1-5
   Psalm 96:1-2, 2-3, 7-8, 9-10
2) 1 Corinthians 12:4-11
3) Gospel: John 2:1-11

BY SHARON K. PERKINS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

I don't know too many mothers — Jewish or otherwise — who won't go out on a limb on their children's behalf. Sometimes this might consist of intervening when a child is being bullied. It might mean consulting with a teacher when a test is erroneously graded or a project deadline is unrealistic.

Last Christmas I overcame my usual reticence and bargained with boldness to get a better price on a significant gift for my 14-year-old son. In most cases these actions of confronting authority, persistently challenging the status quo or changing a timeline put the parent at risk of being considered "pushy." Nevertheless, the risk is often worth taking and even necessary to produce the fruit of justice and ensure the best interest of the child.

In the story of the Wedding Feast at Cana, the focus often has been on the miracle of Jesus' changing water to wine. But prior to the miracle, Jesus' "pushy" mother discerned a need, knew that her son was capable of meeting it and persisted until the desired result came to pass — all the while remaining in the background. It was this bold move on her part that set in motion Jesus' ministry.

While the gift of boldness is not one of those mentioned in the passage from 1 Corinthians, it is a gift that must be exercised from time to time so that the other gifts may be made manifest. May the disciples of Jesus follow the example of his persistent, "pushy" Jewish mother!

Questions:

In your experience, is there an injustice that requires more boldness and persistence from you? What step can you take to press for the desired resolution or blessing?

Scripture to Illustrate:

"His mother said to the servers, 'Do whatever he tells you'" (John 2:5).

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 11 - JANUARY 17

Sunday (The Baptism of the Lord), Isaiah 42:1-4, 6-7, Acts 10:34-38, Luke 3:15-16, 21-22; Monday, 1 Samuel 1:1-8, Mark 1:14-20; Tuesday (St. Hilary), 1 Samuel 1:9-20, Mark 1:21-28; Wednesday, 1 Samuel 3:1-10, 19-20, Mark 1:29-39; Thursday, 1 Samuel 4:1-11, Mark 1:40-45; Friday, 1 Samuel 8:4-7, 10-22, Mark 2:1-12; Saturday, 1 Samuel 9:1-4, 17-19; 10:1, Mark 2:13-17;

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 18 - JANUARY 24

Sunday (Second Sunday in Ordinary Time), Isaiah 62:1-5, 1 Corinthians 12:4-11, John 2:1-11; Monday, 1 Samuel 15:16-23, Mark 2:18-22; Tuesday (Sts. Fabian and Sebastian), 1 Samuel 16:1-13, Mark 2:23-28; Wednesday (St. Agnes), 1 Samuel 17:32-33, 37, 40-51, Mark 3:1-6; Thursday (St. Vincent), 1 Samuel 18:6-9; 19:1-7, Mark 3:7-12; Friday, 1 Samuel 24:3-21, Mark 3:13-19; Saturday (St. Francis de Sales), 2 Samuel 1:1-4, 11-12, 19, 23-27, Mark 3:20-21

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue:10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

'Cheaper,' but not short on laughs

CNS PHOTO FROM 20TH CENTURY FOX

Steve Martin and Bonnie Hunt are surrounded by a young cast in their new family comedy film "Cheaper by the Dozen," a fitfully amusing comedy about a family with 12 children veering out of control as Dad tries to hold down the very rebellious fort. The family-first message follows the predictable parade of pranks, pratfalls and parenting problems, including dismay over their 22-year-old daughter moving in with her boyfriend. A discreetly implied affair, occasional toilet humor and brief slapstick violence. The USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-II — adults and adolescents. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG — parental guidance suggested.

DOMINICAN SISTERS OF HAWTHORNE

NEW YORK • OHIO • PENNSYLVANIA • GEORGIA • MINNESOTA

We live in Community and take vows of chastity, poverty and obedience. Daily prayer and our apostolate of caring for incurable cancer patients are integral parts of our offering to God. All care is free. Many who enter our Community have no prior nursing experience.

For more information, contact:

SR. TERESA MARIE, O.P., VOCATION DIRECTOR

Dominican Sisters of Hawthorne, 600 Linda Avenue, Hawthorne, NY 10532

(914) 769-4794 or 769-0114

e-mail: SrTeresaM@aol.com

Visit our WEB site - www.hawthorne-dominicans.org

Name _____ State _____ Zip _____

Address _____

City _____ Home Telephone ( ) _____ - _____ C-NC

SEASON'S END

ACROSS
1 Condo org.
4 Baptizer
8 Protagonist
12 Carter's daughter
13 College VIP
14 More than ajar
15 Java
16 Sacrament
18 Biblical river
22 Glean
23 Olive genus
25 ___ Obstat
28 Follower
32 "Una Cosa ___" (Martin y Soler Opera)
33 Fuss
34 Enamel
36 Persona __ grata
37 Fruitcake containers
39 Auld ___
41 Era
43 Swim alternative
44 New year problem for many
46 Dreamworks animated movie
50 "With ___ host proclaim"
53 Greek measure
54 French fashion designer
55 Horse gear
58 Treebeard, for one
59 MASH actor
60 Bird of peace
61 Compass point

DOWN
1 Muslim pilgrimage
2 Melville novel
3 Spanish yesterday
4 Scotch initials
5 Mantra
6 Goblin type
7 Dogwood st.
8 Balloon filler
9 Manifestation
10 Latin thing
11 P-L connector
17 Cross, for one
19 Dwarf
20 "Um, that looks like ___" (Veggie Tales)
21 Asian country
24 ABC Series
26 Golf club
27 Kent's love
28 Mediterranean fruit
29 "____ my pen in the blackest ink..." Emerson
30 Jesus
31 Texas city
35 African Woman's Organization (abbr)
38 Eye part
40 Glide
42 Sci-fi computer
45 Last name in basketball
47 Deer types
48 Taverns
49 Bewitched boss
50 Medical grp.
51 Nothing
52 Corporate bigshot
56 Hospital instrument
57 State abbreviation

THE DAY AFTER

Kicking up help for others

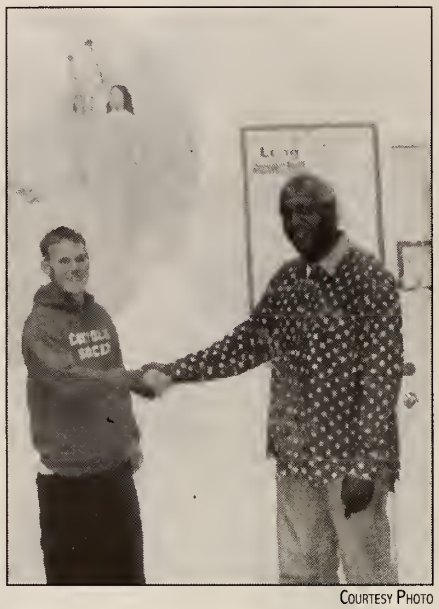
CHARLOTTE — While Charlotte Catholic High School's men's soccer team was on their way to winning the state championship, setting the state's shut-out record, they were also helping their community.

The team, prompted by senior captain Patrick Herford, initiated a project at the start of the season to collect clothes for the poor. Fans were asked to bring socks, gloves, mittens and winter hats to home soccer and football games.

These particular items were preferred by Charlotte Rescue Mission, to which Herford and teammates delivered eight bags worth during Christmas week.

Charlotte Rescue Mission provides food, shelter, clothing, counseling, educational classes, medical care and Christian teaching for individuals seeking help from a drug or alcohol addiction.

"It was truly spectacular to have such a great season and also give back to the community in this manner," said Herford. "I certainly feel that this reflects the character of the team and the spirit of the school."



COURTESY PHOTO

Patrick Herford, senior captain of Charlotte Catholic High School's men's soccer team, shakes hands with Thomas Strouse, a manager at Charlotte Rescue Mission. The team delivered eight bags of needed clothing to the facility Christmas week.

DID YOU KNOW?

Born in Egypt around the year 229,St. Paul the Hermit went into hiding in the desert to escape the persecution of Christians and decided to live as a hermit for the next 90 years. St. Jerome visited an aged Paul and found him to be an exemplar of a holy man, and burried him when he died. He is called Paul the First Hermit to distinguish him from other hermits named Paul. His feast is Jan. 15.

ST. ANNE'S CATHOLIC SCHOOL
Bristol, Virginia

Position Available: Principal

Summary: Full-time position, beginning summer 2004, as principal of a Parish Catholic School with an enrollment of 300+ students, grades Pre-3 through 8. The principal must be a practicing Catholic who is able to articulate the school's mission and vision for the future, and possess the skills necessary for its implementation. Candidates must have a record of effective leadership with experience in educational programs, personnel management, finance, development, public relations, and community service.
Education/Certification: Master's Degree in Education/Administration. VA licensable.
Experience: Minimum ten years teaching/admin. experience in a Catholic School.
Salary: Based on diocesan scale, taking into account education and experience.
Application: Qualified candidates should forward a resume and cover letter to:
St. Anne Catholic Church, Search Committee, 350 Euclid Ave., Bristol, VA 24201
Closing Date: Application materials should be postmarked by February 27, 2004

Principal

Our Lady of Lourdes Parish in Raleigh has an opening for principal of its K-8 school. The search committee seeks a principal with a commitment to quality teaching, community service and excellence - as well as a demonstrated ability to lead and to collaborate with faculty, parents and parish staff.

The search committee seeks candidates who are practicing Catholics, hold a master's degree, have experience in teaching and 5 years in education management, and hold (or are capable of obtaining) NC principal certification. Please submit resume and a one-page statement of vision for Catholic education by Feb 15 to: Search Committee, Our Lady of Lourdes Parish, 2718 Overbrook Dr., Raleigh NC 27608. Or email OLLSPRINCSRCH@aol.com.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Experienced with master's in theology, religious education or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of faith formation to: Faith Formation Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Holy Redeemer Catholic Community in the Outer Banks of North Carolina is seeking an energetic, motivated, spiritual individual to be part of a collaborative pastoral team. Responsibilities will include working to enhance existing adult formation opportunities, including the development of small Christian communities; and working toward whole community catechesis. Candidate should be a practicing Catholic, with a combination of training and/or experience in adult formation. Send resume to: Holy Redeemer Catholic Parish, P.O. Box 510, Kitty Hawk, NC 27949, Attn: Faith Formation Search Committee, or email herrityt@raldioc.org.

DIRECTOR OF MUSIC MINISTRY: Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro, NC seeks a full-time professional with at least a bachelor's degree in music, and an in-depth knowledge of Roman Catholic liturgy. Must be fully competent in both organ and piano, and experienced in directing both adult and children's choirs. Responsible for all music activity in a church with over 2,300 families. Full benefits available. Applicants who meet these requirements should send a resume to: OLG Music Ministry, 201 South Chapman Street, Greensboro, NC 27403, or fax it to (336) 274-7326.

YOUTH MINISTER: Experienced with degree or certification in youth ministry, theology or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of youth ministry to: Youth Ministry Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org.

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704) 845-1416.

FOR RENT

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

VILLA - HILTON HEAD, SC: 2 bedrooms, 2 baths. Sleeps 6. Golf nearby. Tennis. Beach access. February 7-14. Call (704) 366-6507.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

We beat the banks!

IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

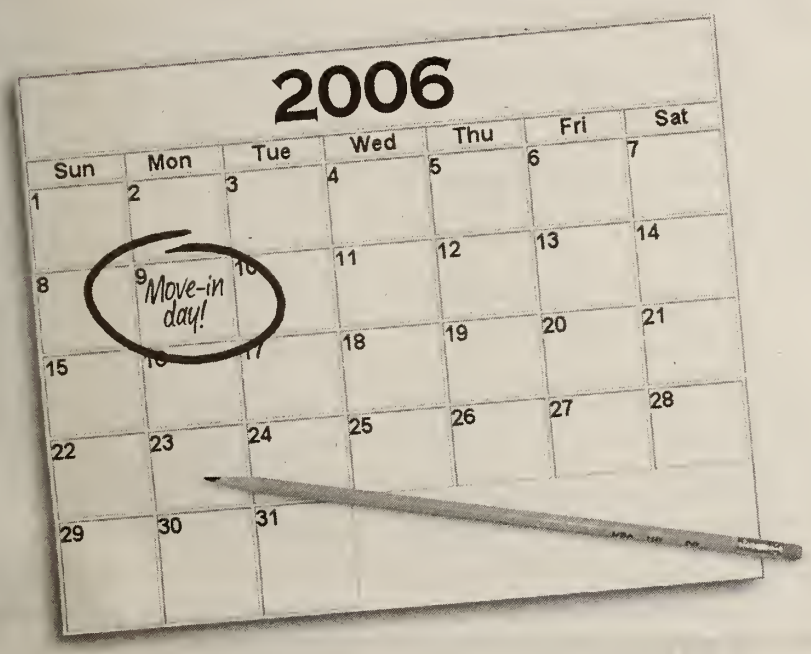
7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

Reserve now.



Move later.

For the retirement lifestyle you're planning now but putting off until later, call today for pre-construction pricing.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN at MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community
1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444
Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Franciscan Sister Miller dies at 95

Former teacher wrote history of Diocese of Charlotte

TIFFIN, Ohio — Franciscan Sister Miriam Miller, who served in North Carolina and wrote the history of the Diocese of Charlotte, died at St. Francis Convent in Tiffin, Ohio Dec. 24. She was 95.

She was buried in St. Francis Convent Cemetery Dec. 29.

A native of Ohio, Sister Miriam was received into the Sisters of St. Francis in 1930, professed her first vows in 1932 and proclaimed her final profession of vows at the motherhouse in Tiffin in 1935.

She taught at schools in the Diocese of Toledo, in Peru and the order's motherhouse. Though most of her long teaching career was spent in secondary education, she had said her best years were her first four — teaching in one-room rural schools in Palmer Township in Ohio.

From 1955 until 1961, she served as superior general of her congregation. She also served as secretary general for three years. In 1964, she was assigned as principal to St. John School in Waynesville, N.C., and during her time the enrollment rose from around 60 students to over 130.

In 1973, Sister Miriam was in a serious automobile accident that left her with some handicaps. Nonetheless, she worked as a librarian in St. Francis High School and then later as director of the occupational activities program at St. Francis Home in Tiffin, a position she served until 1981.

Then, at the invite of then-Bishop Michael J. Begley, she traveled to Franciscan Sister Miriam Miller

Charlotte to write "A History of the Early Years of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte" before returning to St. Francis Convent in 1983.

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection
Drivers wanted.
Lowest Prices
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

ONE LAST KISS OF YOUR LIFETIME
"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley
Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!
"An inspiration! 'Last Kiss' is a powerful novel that explores the human heart and brings to light those in our lives who mean so much. Staley's tender look at life has the power to restore our faith in both God and man."
—Msgr. John J. McSweeney, Pastor, St. Matthew Catholic Church, Charlotte
To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

The ever-evolving job

Our Turn

THERESE J. BORCHARD
CNS COLUMNIST

I'm still not sure what I want to do when I grow up and neither are my friends. Some older generations may accuse Gen-Xers of flitting around from job to job, incapable of commitment, uninterested in hard work. But I think it has more to do with needing to love what we do and with finding meaning in our work. This is especially true for young women.

Last year, the U.S. bishops' Committee on Women in Society and in the Church conducted focus groups in a cross-section of archdioceses and dioceses around the country. The common responses to questions regarding the relationship of faith, work and family don't surprise me.

First, the report asserted that many women have found "workable, creative ways to integrate family, work and spirituality." At times they struggle in balancing the three, but find it easier when they resist the temptation to compartmentalize these priorities.

Moreover, young women successfully bring their spirituality, religious beliefs and values to their workplace and family. Both become places of evangelization.

Second, women need their work to be valuable and fulfilling. They are satisfied when they feel as though they are contributing their gifts and skills to the world. They want to make a difference.

Nowhere was this more obvious than at my 10-year college reunion. Conversations at the tables in the social hall revolved around family and career. After showing off pictures of weddings and children, we moved on to questions of work or other responsibilities (like volunteering) that fulfilled us when the children were asleep or throwing tantrums.

We were all still trying to figure out what we wanted to be when we grew up.

I was shocked to learn that the biggest hippy in our class, dressed right out of the '70s, obtained her MBA and was working for IBM. Another friend, who had had no doubts where she was headed — first toward grad school to get her doctorate in biology, and then to the lab and the classroom to research and teach — dropped out the first year, traveled to Nepal and was changed forever. Now she wants to explore new places for a living and is figuring out how to get paid for that job.

Perhaps peculiar to our generation, young adults haven't stopped asking themselves how they best can contribute to society. By the time we attend our 30th college reunion, we may well have been in school as many hours as in the office. Since we must be fulfilled and satisfied by what we do outside and inside the home, it makes sense that one set track just won't do. As we evolve, our careers evolve with us.

Sometimes I wish I could be content with one job responsibility for the rest of my life. Then I wouldn't have to ask myself so many questions and walk around in seemingly endless circles, but I might feel cheated out of becoming all that I could be and giving all I could give.

And that makes me wonder: If everyone generously shared his or her skills and gifts with the world, would any of us really have to grow up?

U.S. clown performs after pope tells circus workers to live faith

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — To a thumping drumbeat and the steady rhythms of an electric guitar, an oddly dressed American responded to Pope John Paul II's admonition to "always live your faith in Christ with joy."

Andrew Philip, wearing a fair amount of face paint and a big red nose, juggled for the pope at the end of his Jan. 7 weekly general audience.

Philip is the star clown of the Italy-based American Circus; he and about 100 other circus performers, staff members and their children attended the audience and posed for a photograph with the pope at the end of the audience.

The performance was brief and did not include any of the American Circus' elephants, tigers or horses.

In his main audience talk, Pope John Paul focused on Christmas and the divine motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The pope asked people to look at a Nativity scene and think about the attitude and role of Mary.

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

"The same love, the same care which she had for her divine son, she has for us as well," he said. "Therefore, let her guide our steps in the new year that divine providence has given us to live."

The pope said his wish for everyone at the first general audience of 2004 was that "sustained and comforted by her maternal protection we may contemplate with renewed eyes the face of Christ and walk more swiftly on the paths of goodness."

Greeting Polish-speaking visitors, the pope prayed that Mary "would embrace each one of us with the same love with which she embraced the Son of God."

Letters to the Editor

Commending the commendations

It was with gratitude to God that I read of the commendations this diocese received concerning its compliance with the "Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People" ("Bishops' child protection charter has numerous mandates for dioceses," Jan. 2). It is my prayer that as we make our way through the difficult task of facing this real-life nightmare — as it will appear when statistics are released in February — we will face it with the Christian virtues of hope and honesty.

We must be honest enough to realize that we as a whole people, religious and laity alike, allowed such an evil to foment within our midst, but remain hopeful that we are now all more aware of such behavior and will be vigilant in our respective capacities to protect one another, particularly the young. In this way, we can be a light to other congregations and denominations who will deal with this scenario.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis' letter read at Mass this past weekend (Jan. 4) mentioned that the diocese has had a policy in place for the last nine years. My exhortation would be to make sure all elements are in place to follow the policy correctly, expediently and with the utmost compassion. There's no sense in having one if it's not going to be followed.

I firmly believe that once we are through this turmoil, the Catholic Church will be all the stronger. For we do believe in the crucified and resurrected Christ — a God who can take the worst thing in the world and make it the best thing in the world.

— Martin Corts
Valle Crucis, N.C.

Cold words in 'Cold Mountain' review

In regard to the review of "Cold Mountain" ("'Cold Mountain' is lukewarm epic," Jan. 2), this is yet another Southern slam with David DiCerto's wording of "Caught by the undertow of their Dixie delirium ..." Poor choice of words and there should have been no place for this in a Catholic publication.

— Joan Kiser
Boone

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Catholic News & Herald welcomes letters from readers. We ask that letters be originals of 250 words or less.

To be considered for publication, each letter must include the name, address and phone number of the writer for purpose of verification. Letters may be condensed due to space and edited for clarity, style and taste.

Send letters to Letters to the Editor, The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, N.C. 28237, or e-mail catholicnews@charlottediocese.org.

When a helping hand changes a life

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

From refugee to philanthropist in one generation — that's the amazing story of a New York City plastic surgeon who's making a major gift to a Catholic high school that came through for her in her hour of greatest need. The new beginning the school made possible enabled her to make a new beginning of her own, enriching the lives of countless others in the process.

I first read about Dr. Thuy Nguyen in a story written by Kevin Kelly for The Catholic Key, the newspaper of the Kansas City-St. Joseph Diocese in Missouri. It's all about one person making a difference, with a helping hand from some extra-kind folks along the way. Sharing it with you is a great way to start the new year.

Dr. Nguyen was a young girl when she was forced to flee Vietnam in a boat with her family in 1975, after the fall of Saigon. She spent a week on the open sea before a U.S. merchant ship came to the rescue, transporting the family to a camp in the Philippines. Then they came to this country, first to Fort Chaffee, Ark., and eventually to Kansas City.

Once there, they had to start from scratch. The family had been well-to-do in Vietnam, but in Kansas City they were penniless. A priest, Father James Flanagan, gave them some second-hand clothes and set them up in a public housing project, and the father of the family got a job as a night watchman. But school seemed out of the question until Father Flanagan got a commitment from St. Pius X High School. Administrators there agreed to waive the tuition fee — only $700 at the time, Dr. Nguyen would later recall — but it might as well have been a million.

Her education opened all kinds of doors, thanks in great measure to Charity Sister Mary Aquinas, who took a personal interest in the future doctor. She pressed her to do extra work, once she saw the student's potential, and worked with her to improve her English. She even filled out scholarship applications, and surprised the young woman with news that she had won a scholarship to Donnelly College in Kansas City, Kan.

Nguyen's academic achievements soared from that point on. She won a degree from the University of Missouri and eventually graduated from Columbia University Medical School in New York. As a plastic surgeon, she's now accredited to six New York hospitals and has a thriving private practice. But she also cares for the poor and the elderly, treating those whose wounds fail to heal properly.

"We fight for our patients," she said. "Whatever they need, we fight to get it."

In the midst of her success, though, she hasn't forgotten the first big break that came her way. This past fall, she announced she and her husband would donate $25,000 to St. Pius in gratitude for all that the school and Sister Mary Aquinas had done for her. Nguyen said she hopes the gift will make it possible for other students like her to afford a St. Pius education.

"For the small amount of money we donate now, I hope that students who are not as privileged as others will be given a chance in life, just as St. Pius gave to me," she said.

Someone made a true difference, years ago, in Nguyen's life. She's repaying the favor the best way she knows how — by making a difference for others.

To support your parish, Catholic school or Catholic agency in the Diocese of Charlotte, contact your pastor, principal or agency director. Jim Kelley at (704) 370-3301 or Gina Rhodes at (704) 370-3320 from the diocese are available to assist you.

A gluten-free Eucharist

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. Several times in recent years your column has discussed letters from men and women who suffer from celiac sprue disease and therefore cannot tolerate the gluten in wheat Communion hosts. For some of us it is an extremely dangerous condition.

In previous comments you said there is no totally gluten-free host that the church approves for the Eucharist. However, a Catholic periodical one of our group receives reported recently that a new host is now available and approved. Can you tell us what they are and where our parish can obtain them? (Florida)

A. As you note, Catholic authorities have ruled several times in the last two decades or so (most recently July 24, 2003) that totally gluten-free hosts are not valid matter for the Eucharist and thus may not be used at Mass or for Communion. That ruling continues.

However, as I mentioned occasionally in this column, work has continued in the United States and Europe to find a formula that can be received by those who cannot tolerate gluten. Surprisingly there are hundreds of thousands, in our own country alone.

I'm sure the periodical you mention is referring to a formula developed partially under the auspices of the Benedictine Sisters of Perpetual Adoration in Clyde, Mo., longtime manufacturers of Communion hosts.

As Vatican authorities require, the hosts are not entirely without gluten, but the amount is exceedingly lower than any available in the past, about .01 percent, or one part in 10,000. In other ways also these hosts comply with requirements that they be composed of wheat and water only, with no other foreign materials, and no process that would alter the form of bread.

Obviously, only one's physician should determine whether or not a person with celiac sprue should attempt to tolerate even this small amount. From what I have learned, however, it seems that a large number of patients might find the new formula an acceptable alternative.

Local bishops may give permission to use the low-gluten hosts, so if your doctor approves them for you, talk with your pastor about obtaining these hosts for yourself and others who need them.

Of course, the other alternative remains of receiving the Eucharist only under the form of wine, though some patients are equally sensitive to ingredients of certain wines. Also, even the tiny quantity of wheat, which contaminates the wine when a piece of the host is dropped into the cup before Communion, may render the main chalice intolerable.

Most pastors readily try to accommodate these needs, even if it means having a separate small chalice with consecrated wine to be distributed to people with celiac sprue.

The Benedictine Sisters may be reached at 31970 State Highway P, Clyde, Mo. 64432. Phone 800-223-2772. Or e-mail: altarbreads@benedictine sisters.org.

A free brochure answering questions Catholics ask about receiving the Holy Eucharist is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Father John Dietzen, Box 325, Peoria, IL 61651.

Questions may be sent to Father Dietzen at the same address, or e-mail: jjdietzen@aol.com.

You are not alone

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

While sitting in the doctor's waiting room, I felt my blood pressure soar, and it had nothing to do with my health. It was due to the magazine articles I was reading that contained nothing but bad news.

Stories abounded on Iraq, the Middle East conflict, senseless killings, tribal divisions, poor governance; celebrities were being investigated for hideous crimes; concerns about global warming, endangered species and foods with high toxin levels also were discussed. I couldn't find an uplifting article.

I thought to myself most people not only read this news, but also live under a cloud of anxiety in their own back yards. Parents worry about children, and children worry about their aging parents; worries about security forever plague them.

Wouldn't it be great if we had one solid week a year to somehow naturally purify our minds of all our anxieties? Perhaps going to the mountains, sailing the ocean or escaping to some secret island would do the trick.

That's a soothing thought, but escaping our anxieties is not realistic. Very few of us have the luxury of dropping everything and sailing off into a place of bliss.

The news these days may leave us feeling concerned about the welfare of those close to us, about our country and our quality of life. When this happens, the first thing to do is to admit that we are caring individuals.

Caring expresses love and the desire for a better life. We wouldn't be anxious if we didn't love.

Most of us probably view anxiety as something solely negative. We don't get around to seeing it as a sign of love. As a consequence, we don't give our heart the opportunity to take heart. We need to do more than lament bad news. We need to seek opportunities to make life better.

Another step in coping with anxieties is to remember that we aren't the only ones experiencing them.

Often when we are confronted by bad news and the anxiety it generates, we feel alone. Husbands or wives, for example, may go into a shell, not communicating — forgetting that their spouse is as concerned as they are.

When they remember that others are as concerned as they are and share with them their concerns, they frequently begin to regain their power to cope.

The next time you feel your blood pressure rising because of bad news, remember that this is happening at least in part because you care and love. And don't forget, there are others around you who are just as anxious as you are — because they too care and love deeply.

St. Aloysius Church stands as a monument to parish's enterprising spirit

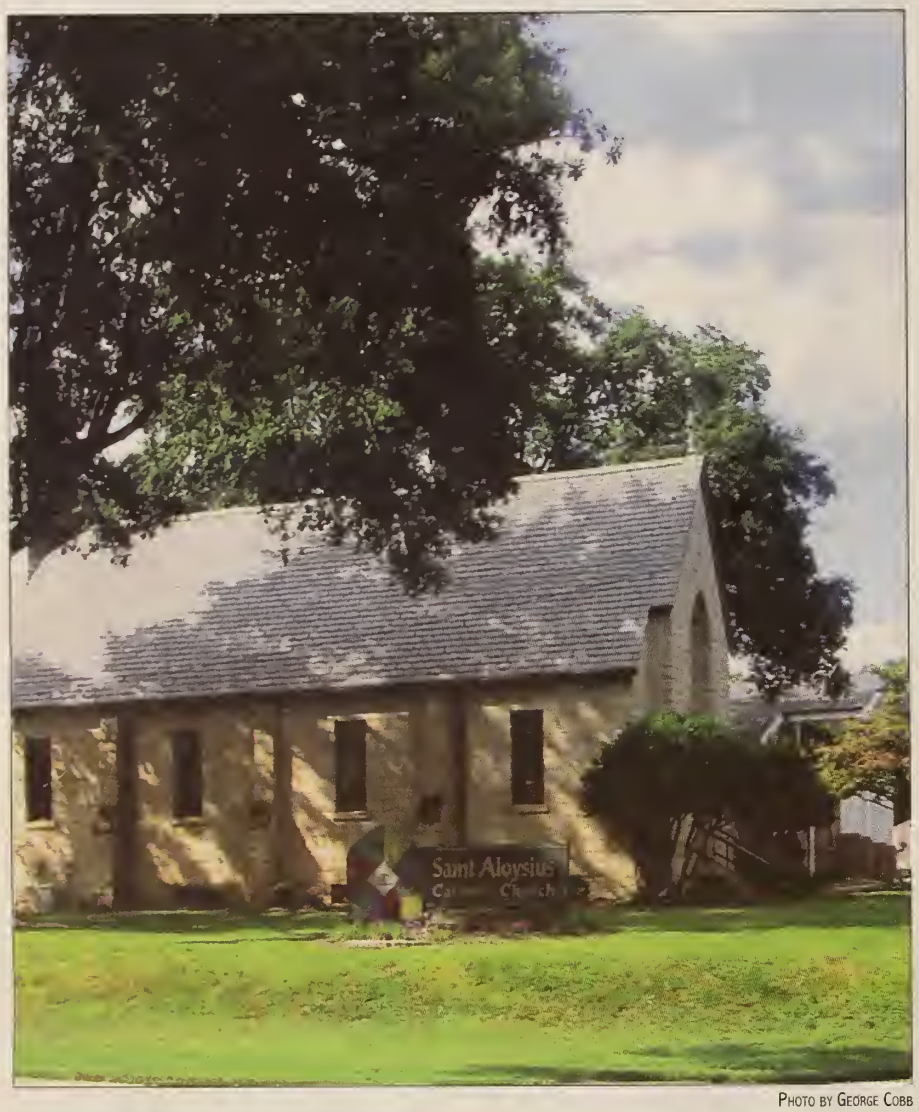

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

The former St. Aloysius Church in Hickory (above) is now used as a chapel for daily Mass. A new complex housing a sanctuary for 750 people was dedicated in 1993.

HICKORY — Although there existed a small Catholic presence in Catawba County during the late 19th century, the first Mass was not celebrated in the area until 1913.

Bishop Leo Haid, abbot ordinary and vicar apostolic of North Carolina, assigned missionary priest Benedictine Father Celestine Bache to confirm the existence of a Catholic population in the region. Father Bach gathered a dozen or so Catholics together in a Hickory home, where Mass was celebrated for the first time Dec. 7, 1913, and celebrated there for almost two years.

On April 18, 1915, Bishop Haid came to Hickory and dedicated a former Seventh Day Adventist Church as the new St. Aloysius Catholic Church. The building and property had been purchased by the Catholic residents the year before. The $1,500 used to purchase and improve the property came from Dr. Joseph Kelly of Philadelphia, who made the grant for the purpose of furthering Catholicism in North Carolina. It was in memory of Dr. Kelly's deceased son, Aloysius Kelly, that St. Aloysius Church was dedicated.

Benedictines from Belmont Abbey visited Hickory to celebrate Mass from that point in time, although the liturgy was said only four times that year. Soon, Masses were said monthly and, in 1928, Benedictine Father Anthony Mayer began celebrating Mass on a weekly basis.

By that time, some 50 Catholics lived in the Hickory area. The congregation looked to expand its facilities, and property on the edge of Hickory city limits was purchased in April 1937. A year later, which marked the silver jubilee of the St. Aloysius community, a new brownstone church was dedicated by Abbot Vincent Taylor of Belmont Abbey Sept. 25, 1938.

The years during World War II saw Masses added for the Naval cadets who were stationed at Lenoir-Rhyne College. Parish growth continued through the next two decades; organizations and programs were developed and a newly constructed rectory enhanced parish life.

In 1944, Hickory was removed from the jurisdiction of Belmont Abbey and was welcomed into the Diocese of Raleigh. The first resident pastor of the new diocesan church, Father William McShea, also began celebrating Mass in Burke County and in Morganton, thereby establishing missions in those areas. In 1947, a rectory was added to the growing church complex.

By the early 1960s, parishioners again saw the need to build a larger church, thanks in part to an increased Catholic population due to expanded industrialization in the area. More than 400 people made up the congregation, and on May 10, 1963, then-Msgr. Michael J. Begley — later to become the founding bishop of the Diocese of Charlotte — preached the sermon at the dedication Mass of the new redbrick St. Aloysius Church.

The St. Aloysius parish continued to thrive. During the 1970s, the parish established a new church in Newton. That church, St. Joseph the Worker, was dedicated on Labor Day, 1978, and remained a mission of St. Aloysius Church until attaining parish status in 1980.

In 1986, Maryvale Sister Mary Norman joined the St. Aloysius Church staff as the faith formation director and confirmation catechist. The Maryvale Sisters, whose pastoral ministry is to assist diocesan priests at the parish level, helped St. Aloysius Church from their motherhouse located nearby in Vale.

In 1987, Father Wilbur Thomas was assigned as pastor, and continued expansion over the years has notably included a new multipurpose, three-story complex that houses a sanctuary with a capacity for 750 people. The complex, dedicated in 1993 by then-Bishop Emeritus Michael J. Begley, also houses classrooms, offices, meeting rooms, a nursery, a music room and a parlor.

This fourth church to be occupied by St. Aloysius seats 520 and is designed for a parish of 800 families. The building was designed to interconnect with other buildings on the site. The old church, now renamed Sebastian Chapel, is being converted to a chapel for daily Mass. The red brick church is a multipurpose parish hall.

St. Aloysius Church proudly serves within Hickory's broader Christian and secular communities. The church provides financial and/or volunteer support to community outreach programs, including Adult Life, Alzheimer's Association, Cooperative Christian Ministry, Family Care Center of Catawba Valley, Habitat for Humanity, House of Mercy, Martin Luther King Jr. Committee, Pregnancy Care Center, Rape Crisis Center, Right to Life, Southmountain Children's Home and Unique World Gifts.

Parish programs include the Christmas Giving Tree, clothing drives, Meals on Wheels, Harvest of Hope Walk, homebound visitation, Red Cross Bloodmobile, Respect Life and visitation of the sick.

Although the beginnings of St. Aloysius Church were meager back in the early years of the century, the parish family has grown to include 1,375 registered families. The church has weekly Masses in Spanish on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, and monthly Masses for the Hmong and Lahu parishioners.

In addition to its former mission, St. Joseph Church, St. Aloysius is also the mother church to St. Charles Borromeo in Morganton, St. Francis in Lenoir and the Holy Trinity mission in Taylorsville.

Father Edward Sullivan, now pastor for almost six years, is assisted by Father Jose Enrique Gonzalez, parochial vicar, and Rev. Messrs. Hugo May and Tom Rasmussen.

Much has occurred in Hickory since that group of 12 celebrated Mass for the first time in 1913, and St. Aloysius Church stands as a monument to the enterprising spirit of its parish community. Enriched by the leadership of dedicated priests and deacons, the assistance of faithful nuns and lay people, St. Aloysius Church prepares for a bountiful harvest of service in its future.

SAINT ALOYSIUS CHURCH
921 Second Street, NE
Hickory, NC 28601
(828) 327-2341

Vicariate: Hickory
Pastor: Father Edward Sheridan
Parochial Vicar: Father Jose Enrique Gonzalez
Deacons: Rev. Mr. Hugo May (retired); Rev. Mr. Thomas Rasmussen
Number of Families: 1,375

Father Edward Sheridan

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

JANUARY 16, 2004

SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE

VOLUME 13 Nº 16

FC222 C36 3c.

Parish Profile: Good Shepherd Church
PAGE 16

Snow much fun

COURTESY PHOTO

Catholic students work in winter wonderland

While other Triad-area schools were closed due to bad weather Jan. 9, third-graders at St. Pius X School in Greensboro "study" the composition of snow crystals during their science class. Principal Mark Akerman reported that only a few students missed school that day.

Despite Iraq war, ambassador says U.S.-Vatican cooperation flourishes

'NEVER, EVER' DID POPE DESCRIBE U.S.-IRAQ WAR AS IMMORAL, SAYS AMBASSADOR

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — With bombs dropping in Baghdad, Iraq, and words flying at the Vatican, 2003 was not an easy year for U.S. ambassador to the Vatican Jim Nicholson.

The war in Iraq created a diplomatic minefield for Nicholson as he pressed Vatican officials for some level of support — or at least understanding — of the U.S. position: that it was time to use armed force against Saddam Hussein.

As the U.S.-led "war on terrorism" advanced in other ways, the Vatican raised questions about the wider legal and political implications. Sometimes it seemed like open season on the world's only superpower, with cardinals, Vatican experts and Catholics scholars weighing in with critical comments.

But despite the perception of tensions U.S.-Vatican rela-

See VATICAN, page 8

LIVING THE LEGACY

Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. honored at memorial celebration

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Martin Luther King Jr.'s life may have ended nearly three decades ago, but his dream and spirit live on.

Almost 100 people gathered for the annual diocesan Martin Luther King Jr. celebration at Our Lady of Consolation Church in Charlotte Jan. 10.

Themed "Empowering Ourselves for Leadership Within Our Church and Community," the event, sponsored by the diocesan African American Affairs Ministry, featured workshops and focused on the life of Rev. King, who challenged and helped foster positive changes to segregation and racial discrimination in the United States in the 1950s and '60s.

After his assassination in 1968, Rev. King became a symbol of protest in the struggle for racial justice.

"Martin Luther King Jr. was not a Catholic, but he was a good Christian ... a speaker of the Gospel who found himself in a situation where he saw an injustice that we today consider to be outrageous," said Joseph Powell, chairman of the Commission for African American Catholic Ministry for the Diocese of Metuchen, N.J.

"He had the gumption and the will to stand up and say 'this is wrong' and 'we need to change this,' which is

See KING, page 7

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Joseph Powell of the Diocese of Metuchen, N.J., discusses involvement in parish life during the annual diocesan Martin Luther King Jr. celebration at Our Lady of Consolation Church in Charlotte Jan. 10.

Serving Triad Hispanics
Hispanic Center welcomes first program director
PAGE 4

A Look Inside
The Catholic News & Herald
PAGE 7

Fighting for Life
'Life principles' theme of March for Life
PAGE 9

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
#4208364
S234 P2
#BXNPDVQ+3-DIGIT 275

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

TO SHARE THEIR HAIR

CNS PHOTO BY SHAWN D. ELLIS, MICHIGAN CATHOLIC

Teacher Sandra Gonzales braids a student's cut hair before sending it off to Locks of Love. Several members of her class at Our Lady of Guadalupe Middle School for Girls in Detroit agreed to donate their hair to the nonprofit organization that makes and donates wigs for children who have lost their hair due to diseases or accidents.

Catholic school students find that haircuts can help others

DETROIT (CNS) — Seven students from Our Lady of Guadalupe Middle School for Girls have learned that, in order to give, sometimes you have to put your heads together.

Or, in this case, your hair.

In December, the students each donated at least 10 inches of their hair to Locks of Love, a nonprofit organization that makes and donates wigs for children who have lost their hair due to diseases or accidents.

"It's important because some kids don't have hair," said Lorena Galvan, a fifth-grader at the middle school, "and I just want to help out."

Locks of Love, based in Florida, takes hair donations by mail. The girls found the organization while trying to find a community service project on the Internet.

Following the directions on the Locks of Love Web site at www.locksoflove.org, the girls had their hair tied into ponytails, clipped and sent to the organization. Donated hair should be at least 10 inches long.

"That's actually how most of our volunteering takes place," said Amy Weeks, volunteer coordinator for Locks of Love. "We don't solicit for any money, salon participation or any ponytails," she told The Michigan Catholic, archdiocesan newspaper of Detroit.

Most of the hair that's donated to Locks of Love goes to help children who lost their hair from alopecia areata, a disease that affects more than 2.2 million children in the United States and causes the body to become allergic to its own hair.

Locks of Love also makes wigs for children who have lost their hair because of other diseases, burns or animal attacks.

Each wig the nonprofit company produces takes six months and costs about $1,000 — money raised through donations. The average hairpiece from a for-profit business costs between $3,500 and $5,000.

"What's really neat is that, once (the wigs are) on the child, it's like having real hair," said Weeks.

Locks of Love has helped 1,100 children since it was founded in 1997.

Lawmakers who back abortion, euthanasia told not to receive Communion

LA CROSSE, Wis. (CNS) — Archbishop Raymond L. Burke formally notified Catholic lawmakers in the La Crosse Diocese they cannot receive Communion if they continue to support procured abortion or euthanasia.

The four-paragraph canonical notification, published in the Jan. 8 issue of the La Crosse diocesan newspaper, called upon Catholic legislators in the diocese "to uphold the natural and divine law regarding the inviolable dignity of all human life."

"To fail to do so is a grave public sin and gives scandal to all the faithful," it said.

Archbishop Burke, who is to be installed Jan. 26 as St. Louis' new archbishop, released the canonical notification along with a 10-page pastoral letter to Catholics in the La Crosse Diocese about their political responsibility to uphold the value of human life.

"Catholic legislators who are members of the faithful of the Diocese of La Crosse and who continue to support procured abortion or euthanasia may not present themselves to receive holy Communion ... until such time as they publicly renounce their support of these most unjust practices," the notification said.

The two documents followed December secular press reports that Archbishop Burke sent private letters to three Catholic legislators in the diocese, warning them of the spiritual dangers of their votes against human life. According to Archbishop Burke, none of the lawmakers accepted his invitation for a private meeting to discuss their voting records, and in letters to the bishop indicated they were not open to changing their positions.

"So the notification became a necessity in order that the faithful in the diocese not be scandalized, thinking that it is acceptable for a devout Catholic to also be pro-abortion," said the archbishop.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

HENDERSONVILLE — The St. Francis of the Hills Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order meets the fourth Sunday of each month 3-5 p.m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. West. Visitors and inquirers are welcome. For more information, call Helen Gillogly, SFO, at (828) 883-9645.

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at 1 p.m. Call (336) 372-8846 for more information.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

HUNTERSVILLE — Boys and girls ages 10 to 14 are invited to participate in the local level of competition for the Knights of Columbus Free Throw Championship. The local competition will be held Jan.19 at 1 p.m. at St. Mark School, 14740 Stumptown Rd. The Knights of Columbus Free Throw Championship is sponsored annually with winners progressing through local, district and state competition. International champions are announced by the K of C international headquarters based on scores from the state-level competitions. Participants are required to furnish proof of age and written parental consent. For entry forms or additional information contact either Dick Christian at (704) 948-7730 or John Bottoms at (704) 957-3915.

MINT HILL — Looking for a way to get closer to God this year? Put your new year's resolution into practice by taking the Alpha Course. Alpha is a video lecture series and supper club that meets Friday nights through March 19. Register by calling (704) 573-7021 or e-mail mcnuccie1@bellsout.net.

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., is sponsoring a program to welcome back inactive Catholics and/or those who have left the Church but are interested in returning to the practice of the Catholic faith. The Catholics Returning Home series will meet Jan. 11-Feb. 15, 3:30-5 p.m. For more information, call Sue Johnson at (704) 333-8028.

CHARLOTTE — All women are invited to join Women in the Word for weekly gatherings for prayer, reflection on Sunday scripture, music and sharing experiences of Christ in daily life. The group meets each Thursday, 9:45-11:45 a.m. in the family room of St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. For details, call Linda Flynn at (704) 366-9889. For childcare reservations, call Jurga Petrikene at 704) 907-0205.

CHARLOTTE — The Charismatic Prayer Group of St. Matthew Church will host a Prayer Service for the Sick at St. Matthew Chapel, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. the third Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. For more information, contact Barbara Gardner at chlt5nc@aol.com.

CHARLOTTE — Christians in Career Tran

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

JANUARY 16, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 16

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published b the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Churc St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except f Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durin June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parish of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per ye for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserv the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deem appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-cla postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citi POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 372 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope asks that Christ's baptism light the way for every Christian

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II asked that Christ's baptism illuminate the way for every Christian and offer fresh light and strength for their journey of faith.

Before praying his Sunday Angelus Jan. 11 from the window of his studio in the Apostolic Palace, the pope reminded the hundreds of people gathered below in St. Peter's Square that the day celebrated the feast of the Baptism of the Lord — when John the Baptist baptized Jesus in the Jordan River as a symbol of repentance from sin.

According to the Gospel of Luke, the pope said, the Holy Spirit descended on Jesus in the form of a dove and a voice from heaven was heard to say, "You are my beloved Son. On you my favor rests."

The pope said this event marked the first public showing of Christ's messianic identity after the adoration of the Magi, who looked upon the newborn Jesus as a messianic king.

Thirty years later at his baptism, "We see him consecrated by the Father in the Holy Spirit," said the pope.

"Jesus comes as the 'lamb of God' to take away the sin of the world," he said. "And as we celebrated the Incarnation of God with Christmas, we are invited to continue contemplating the face of Jesus — the human face of God, the divine face of man."

sition is a ministry of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy., devoted to helping people in career crises. The meetings take place on the first and third Monday of each month 7-9 p.m. in the conference room. For more information, call Rev. Mr. Jim Hamrlik at (704) 576-0456.

HUNTERSVILLE — Natural Family Planning classes are held the third Wednesday of every month at 7 p.m. at St. Mark Catholic Church, 14740 Stumptown Rd., Room 200. Classes are taught by Dr. Matthew Harrison. All are welcome to attend, no registration required. Call (704) 948-0231 for directions and more information.

CHARLOTTE — The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians Division 1 Mecklenburg County-St. Brigid, an Irish-Catholic social and charitable inter-parish group, meet the third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Anyone interested in their Irish-Catholic roots, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720 for further information.

CHARLOTTE — Thank God It's Friday (TGIF), a weekly support group for separated and divorced women, meets the third Friday of each month at 7 p.m. in the St. Matthew Church parish center, 8015 Ballantyne Pkwy., with a potluck dinner with a guest speaker from the community. TGIF is a healing ministry sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Charlotte Regional Office and St. Matthew Church. For details, call Trish Wilson at (704) 543-3986.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

HIGH POINT — Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, Johnson St. and Skeet Club Rd., will offer free basic and intermediate Spanish classes Thursdays. 7-8:30 p.m. Classes begin Jan. 15 and end Feb. 19. To register, call Nancy Skee at (336) 884-9522.

GREENSBORO — The Adult Faith Formation ministry of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St., will present "A Tale of Faith and Medicine" Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. A physician will share his journey of faith that led him to truly give the gift of life to a young woman. For more information, call the church office at (336) 272-4681.

HICKORY VICARIATE

NEWTON — Bishop Peter J. Jugis will attend a prayer service at St. Joseph Church, 720 W. 13th St., Jan. 25 at 7:30 p.m. to celebrate the Week of Christian Unity. Members of area churches are also invited, and a light reception will follow the service. For more information, call the church office at (828) 464-9207.

HICKORY — A Charismatic Mass is celebrated the first Thursday of each month in Sebastian Chapel of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, at 7 p.m. For further information, contact Joan Moran (828)-327-0487.

NEWTON — The Little Flowers Catholic Girls' Group is for all Catholic girls ages five and up. The group meets the fourth Monday of each month at St. Joseph Church, 720 West 13th St., at 4 p.m. in the Holy Family Hall. For more details, call Debbie Vickers at (828) 495-2039.

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For more information, call the church office at (828) 327-2341.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — Learn Natural Family Planning taught by the Couple to Couple League. A four-part series of classes will begin Feb. 15 at 1:30 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For registration and information, call Stephanie and Todd Brown at (336) 765-2909.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

Please submit notices of parish events for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Pope changes Ash Wednesday schedule due to declining health

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope John Paul II will skip a traditional Ash Wednesday liturgy this year in a historic Rome church, the latest schedule cutback caused by the pontiff's declining health.

The Vatican announced that instead of traveling across the city to place ashes on the foreheads of the faithful the pope will do so at the Vatican.

The liturgy in the Paul VI audience hall will take the place of the pope's regular general audience, the Vatican said Jan. 10.

In 1979, the pope revived the practice of leading an Ash Wednesday procession on the Aventine Hill, then distributing ashes to cardinals, bishops and religious at the Basilica of Santa Sabina.

He said he instituted the ceremony because he felt strongly that the Lenten season "cannot pass unnoticed."

The effects of arthritis and a thigh bone operation, along with symptoms of a neurological disease, have made it increasingly difficult for the pope to walk or stand. Several years ago, he gave up participation in the Ash Wednesday procession, but continued to bless and distribute ashes.

This year, the pope's health forced him to cancel two early January liturgies he had instituted at the start of his papacy: Masses featuring the ordination of bishops and the baptism of babies.

Despite his infirmities, Vatican officials said recently the pope has not ruled out future international travel. He reportedly has received invitations to visit Switzerland, Austria, France and Mexico this year.

Heavy metal

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Residents carry scrap metal salvaged from the debris of a fire that gutted a squatter colony in Manila, the capital of the Philippines, Jan. 13. The seven-hour blaze destroyed the residences of more than 20,000 people, who were temporarily sheltered in government centers.

THIS MONTH IN—1996

COVENANT RENEWED

Calling the rift between their churches "a scandal of division," North Carolina's Roman Catholic and Lutheran bishops renewed the five-year-old covenant between the two churches Jan. 14, 1996. The three bishops — then-Bishop William G. Curlin, Bishop F. Joseph Gossman of Raleigh and Bishop Mark Menees of the Synod of North Carolina—Evangelical Lutheran Church in America — signed three copies of the Lutheran-Catholic covenant, originally signed in 1991 by Bishop Gossman, Archbishop John F. Donoghue and Bishop Michael C.D. McDaniel.

SERVING HISPANICS IN THE TRIAD

Hispanic Center welcomes first program director

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

HIGH POINT — Tania Castillero has ambitious goals for the Triad area: she hopes to provide vital services to the growing Hispanic communities in High Point, Winston-Salem and Greensboro.

The Piedmont-Triad Office of Catholic Social Services recently hired Castillero as its first full-time program director of the Hispanic Center of Catholic Social Services.

As director, Castillero will supervise two part-time counselors and work with community and parish leaders, primarily addressing the needs of the Hispanic community.

David Harold, Piedmont-Triad Office director of Catholic Social Services, said Castillero will be an asset to the center for a number of reasons.

. "Tania has a combination of counseling and administrative experience," he said. Also, Castillero, a native of Panama City, Panama, is bilingual in English and Spanish, which is difficult to find in a counselor.

Since earning her master's degree in counseling from Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, Castillero has been working part time as a counselor, primarily with Hispanic clients. She assisted them in a number of areas, including acculturational stress, or stress due to adjusting to the American culture; domestic violence; depression; and behavioral problems in schoolchildren.

As program director, Castillero has a daunting job ahead of her and some ambitious goals. She said she plans to establish stronger connections within the churches and communities of High Point and Greensboro. Her office will also provide referrals to bi-lingual counselors, who are in short supply in the Triad area.

Castillero named several crucial areas of need in the Hispanic community. Medical referrals, immigration services, tutoring and educational workshops are called for in the Triad, in addition to proficient bilingual counselors.

Harold said Castillero already knows the Greensboro and High Point areas well and she will be a part of a collaborative effort to serve Hispanics in those communities.

Tania Castillero is the new program director of the Hispanic Center in High Point, serving Hispanics throughout the Triad area with a variety of services.

In the High Point office, Castillero wants to develop a program for the Hispanic community encouraging Hispanic children to become more involved in school activities. The Hispanic Center will further provide translation services and establish strong connections with other organizations that provide services to Hispanics. She also plans educational workshops for both Anglos and Hispanics.

"As a Catholic, I believe there are so many ways members of the Catholic Church can come together as a community," said Castillero. "The community needs to support more Catholic education and parish involvement."

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

WANT TO VOLUNTEER?

The Hispanic Center in High Point is looking for volunteers. For more information, call (336) 884-5858.

'FIRE' up your faith

Upcoming rally to transform lives, inspire faith

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

FORT MILL, S.C. — The Southeast FIRE Rally, a dynamic, one-day Catholic event for adults, will be held at the Charlotte Bobcats Training Center in Fort Mill March 13.

The event is designed to ignite participants' faith experiences through powerful, challenging talks on Faith, Intercession, Repentance and Evangelism. Speakers will be the nationally recognized FIRE team consisting of Franciscan Father Michael Scanlan, a Third Order Regular Franciscan; Sister Ann Shields, superior of the Servants of God's Love in the Diocese of Lansing, Mich.; Ralph Martin, founding president of Renewal Ministries and founding editor of New Covenant magazine; and Peter Herbeck, director of missions at Renewal Ministries.

"The rally will provide Catholics with an opportunity to surrender their lives more completely to the Lord Jesus, and to allow the living Lord to transform their lives personally," said Michael Coyle, associate coordinator of Good News Ministries, sponsor of the FIRE Rally.

According to Coyle, "Good News Ministries is committed to providing evangelistic events which foster personal conversion to our Lord Jesus Christ, celebrate the blessings of God's reign among us and build up the life of the Catholic Church in the Carolinas."

Coyle further explained that attendees will be impacted by God and empowered to live the Gospel mandate "Go and Tell."

"The FIRE Rally is definitely part of the new evangelization taking place within the Church," he said.

"Through a profound experience of Jesus Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit, the FIRE Rally will undoubtedly awaken an awareness of and instill a greater commitment to the person of Jesus and the mission of the Church," said Coyle.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis of Charlotte and Bishop Robert J. Baker of Charleston, S.C. will celebrate the FIRE Rally's closing liturgy. Bishop Baker will be the homilist of the closing liturgy.

The rally will include vibrant, inspiring music by Hearts of Fire from Durham, a bookstore and a ministry fair.

To welcome Spanish-speaking participants, a limited number of Spanish translation headsets will be available.

WANT TO GO?

The original Southeast FIRE Rally in 1999 sold out several weeks in advance. Register early for this event by calling Good News Ministries at (704) 521-9949 or visit www.fireministry.org/charlotte.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

125,000 people will read these words this week!

Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?

LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!

Call (704) 370-3332 now!

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Carolina Volkswagen

7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte

(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection

Drivers wanted.

Lowest Prices

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction! C'mon in and see why!

Peace, Tranquility

A Place Apart...

You've heard about our attributes, but have you experienced them?

Call the Catholic Conference Center today and get in on what you're missing!

Toll free 888-536-7441
(Hickory residents: 828-327-7441)

The Catholic Conference Center

Check out our website
www.catholicconference.org
info@catholicconference.org

Remembering Rev. King

Annual celebration commemorates activist's life and legacy

KING, from page 1

very consistent with Catholic social teaching," said Powell, who led a workshop on parish involvement.

"There is a lot more to being a good Catholic than just attending Mass on Sundays," he said. "(I tried to) get them thinking about how they can make their parish better, and how they can reach out to a wider community."

"There are a lot of issues around the world that the faithful should be involved in," said Ralph McCloud, director of the justice and peace ministry with the Diocese of Fort Worth, Texas. "The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, in their document 'Faithful Citizenship,' encourages people to get involved."

Leading the workshop on political involvement, McCloud hoped in this election year that "people see the connection between their political responsibility and their faith."

Because people are made in the image and likeness of God, "we are in solidarity with our brothers and sisters around the world," said McCloud. "When we hear of people dying in other places in the world, that should impact us."

"We have a responsibility to be active in the mission of Jesus Christ," said Powell. "Catholic social teaching demands respect and justice for all human beings."

"We have to embrace Catholic social teaching," said McCloud. "We can't be Catholic without it."

Rev. King's call to conversion is one of the great legacies of the civil rights leader, said speakers at a Jan. 17, 2003 prayer breakfast sponsored by the U.S. Bishops' Secretariat for African American Catholics and Secretariat for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs.

Rev. King "spent, and even gave, his life for a call to conversion that's based on Christ," said Msgr. David Malloy, an associate general secretary of the USCCB.

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Approximately 80 people learned about parish and political involvement at the annual diocesan Martin Luther King Jr. celebration at Our Lady of Consolation Church Jan. 10.

Msgr. Malloy said the values Rev. King refers to in his 1964 "Recovering Lost Values" sermon were to "respect each other. Respect life. Respect and worship God."

Yet many of the injustices Rev. King fought against 40 years ago still exist today, said McCloud.

"Rev. King was very big against the war in Vietnam, and now we have similar conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan," he said. "The whole notion of the United States policing the rest of the world was something he spoke out against, as well as the poverty and racism that we still see."

While in Memphis, Tenn., to support striking black workers in 1968, Rev. King was assassinated April 4 by James Earl Ray, an escaped white convict.

"We must realize that the struggle continues. It's not something that has ended with Rev. King's death," he said. "He left a legacy not just for any one individual leader or minister but a legacy for all of us."

"It's important for us to recognize that, to promulgate that and continue to foster his ideas and to pass that on to future generations," said Powell.

"Time has a way of letting us forget," he said. "Many of us have forgotten or don't want to remember how difficult it was for black people in this country, and what sacrifice Rev. King and others made in order for us to reap the benefits of being Americans. It didn't happen by magic. People suffered and some died in order for us to be where we are."

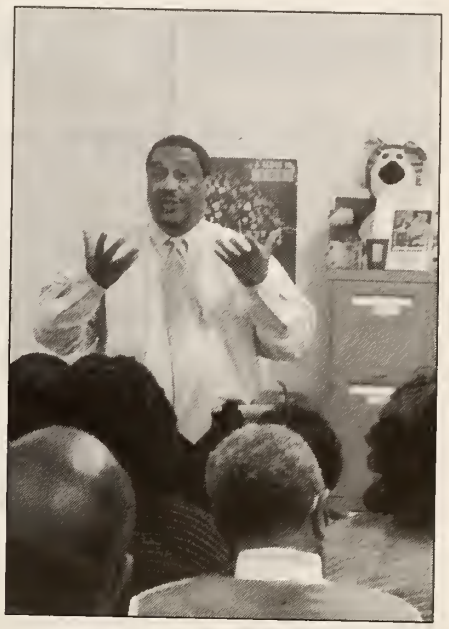

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Ralph McCloud of the Diocese of Fort Worth, Texas, discusses involvement in political life at the annual diocesan Martin Luther King Jr. celebration at Our Lady of Consolation Church Jan. 10.

"We have to be the ones to tell the story, for the generation that lives now knows nothing about the struggle," said McCloud. "We must tell them in a very personal way that is passionate and clear, or they will have no way of knowing the difference between George Washington and Martin Luther King."

McCloud encouraged people to get involved in the education of young people.

"Have a presence in the schools — volunteer, speak to classes. Hold the schools to a higher accountability," he said. "Plant seeds. We may never know what comes of planting those seeds, but we know what will happen if we don't — nothing."

Rev. King was born Jan. 15, 1929, in Atlanta. The federal holiday to mark his birthday comes on the third Monday of January, and this year falls on Jan. 19.

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm
Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas
704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

More than 50 years of summer fun and growth in the Blue Ridge Mountains with outstanding Christian staff!
Please call for a brochure and free video or visit our Web sites.
Camp Merri-Mac for Girls
Merri-Mac for Girls
Timberlake for Boys
1123 Montreat Road
Black Mountain, NC 28711
828-669-8766
www.merri-mac.com
www.camptimberlake.com
CAMP TIMBERLAKE for boys

Charlotte Catholic bets on Panthers

CHARLOTTE — Charlotte Catholic High School and Father Judge Catholic High School in Philadelphia agreed to a friendly wager regarding Jan. 18's championship football game between the Panthers and the Eagles.

The wager: If Carolina wins, Father Joseph Campellone, Father Judge High School's president, will award Gerald Healy, Charlotte Catholic's principal, with an authentic Philadelphia cheese steak sandwich.

If the Eagles win, Healy will offer Father Campellone some legendary local Carolina barbeque, donated by the Ole Smokehouse in Charlotte.

To show their support for the Panthers, Charlotte Catholic students were permitted to break from dress code on Jan. 15 to wear Carolina Panthers attire.

"We wanted the students to be involved in the excitement and this gives them a chance to sport their favorite Panthers wear," said Jennifer Johnson, Charlotte Catholic's director of development. "It's a great way for us to support the Panthers as a school community."

National honor society inducts Belmont Abbey students

Delta Epsilon Sigma welcomes 22 new members

BELMONT — Belmont Abbey College's Gamma Iota chapter of Delta Epsilon Sigma, the national scholastic honor society of Catholic colleges and universities, inducted 22 new members this fall.

To be eligible for membership, students must be full-time juniors or seniors and have a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.4. Rajive Tiwari, a Belmont Abbey associate professor, is the group's faculty advisor.

New inductees include:

— Linda Patrice Belk, Carol Doty Capps, Georgenia Lynne Luckey, Lisa D. Summers and Elizabeth A. Sweeney, all from Charlotte;

— Katherine F. Boswell, Timothy D. Bowling, Thomas S. Caldwell, Carol Horne Crouse, Carol Nicole Garver, Angela D. Sanford and Priscilla L. Smith, all from Gastonia;

— Jaimee D. Hanafin and Thomas Walter Plecnik, both from Belmont;

— Sherri Green of Lincolnton and Amber E. Nichols of Kings Mountain;

— Katherine Suzanne Bogie of Jupiter, Fla.; Emily Susan Charlton of Mount Pleasant, S.C.; Sean Patrick Dunne, of Lighthouse Point, Fla.; Jennifer Helene Gray of Virginia Beach, Va.; Sarah Katrina James of Austell, Ga.; and Matthew Louis Watkins of Longwood, Fla.

Belmont Abbey College, named one of the country's leading private liberal arts colleges by U.S. News and World Report, is located in Belmont, 15 miles west of Charlotte. The 650-acre campus consists of the college, the monastery and the Abbey Basilica.

Nearly a thousand students call the Abbey home. The students, with diverse religious and cultural backgrounds, represent more than 18 countries and 34 states and pursue undergraduate degrees in a number of liberal arts course offerings.

Founded in 1876, the college celebrates its heritage and is inspired by the Benedictine monastic tradition. Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the college and Abbey basilica greet thousands of visitors each year.

Providence Sister Kathleen Marie Cronin dies

Former teacher taught in Winston-Salem

SAINT MARY-OF-THE-WOODS, Ind. — Providence Sister Kathleen Marie Cronin died Saturday, Jan. 3 in Mother Theordore Hall at Saint Mary-of-the-Woods in Indiana.

A Mass of Christian burial was held in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and she was buried in the Cemetery of the Sisters of Providence in Saint Mary-of-the-Woods.

Sister Kathleen was born Mary Irene Cronin in Chelsea, Mass., on Dec. 6, 1916. She entered the Sisters of Providence on Sept. 10, 1936, professed first vows on March 11, 1939 and final vows on Jan. 23, 1945.

She was an educator and taught in schools staffed by the Sisters of Providence in California, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and North Carolina, where she taught at Our Lady of Mercy School in Winston-Salem and St. Therese School in Wilson.

Sister Kathleen is survived by sisters, nieces and nephews.

CORRECTION

Father Edward Sheridan was misidentified in the Parish Profile in our last issue.

DISTANCE-LEARNING OPPORTUNITY!

Earn a Graduate Degree or Certificate in Religious Education or Pastoral Studies

LOYOLA INSTITUTE FOR MINISTRY

The Loyola Institute for Ministry offers a fully accredited graduate education and certificate program through its extension program.

Come to an information session about LIMEX, distance learning in a local setting through Loyola University of New Orleans.

Sunday, January 25: 12:30 pm AND 2:00 pm
St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church
2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro

For more information contact Frank Villaronga, D.Min., at 704-370-3274 or favillaronga@charlottediocese.org.

COME JOIN US FOR

St. Ann's Las Vegas Night

BLACK JACK • POKER
ROULETTE • FOOD
MUSIC • DJ

TICKETS:
$30 SINGLE, $50 PAIR

Mention this ad and receive 25 FREE gaming chips!

Saturday, January 24
7 - 11 pm

St. Ann's Catholic Church
3635 Park Road, Charlotte
(corner of Hillside Avenue)

(704) 523-4641

New Covenant Bookstore

EUCHARISTIC PILGRIMAGE
February 6-7, 2004

Please join us to visit the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament in Hanceville, Alabama.

Friday: tour EWTN studios
Saturday: visit the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament for Adoration, Mass and healing service - then return home late Saturday

Motor coach, hotel, snacks and drinks on the bus are all included for $115.

For information and registration, call Patti Dameron at New Covenant Bookstore in Winston-Salem: (336) 760-1673

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Diocesan newspaper continues mission of evangelization

Editor's Note: This is the first in a new series, "A Look Inside," that will explore the various departments and ministries of the Diocese of Charlotte.

CHARLOTTE — "With this inaugural issue of The Catholic News & Herald, the Diocese of Charlotte embarks on a new, exciting and challenging venture."

Then-Bishop John F. Donoghue wrote those words in a column for the first The Catholic News & Herald Sept. 6, 1991. In the almost-13 years since that issue, the diocesan newspaper has progressed in style and presentation, yet has remained committed to its core mandate — "a voice for evangelization," as Bishop Donoghue wrote.

"It's an honor to be editing an award-winning diocesan newspaper," said Kevin E. Murray, editor. "The newspaper is a great way to unite the faithful in the words and deeds of God and his people across the 46-county Diocese of Charlotte and beyond."

Pope John Paul II has described the Catholic press as a missionary in disseminating the truth and stated that the Catholic Church cannot accomplish its mission without a vigorous Catholic press.

"In a time when the Catholic Church has been under attack, especially in the secular press, the Catholic media — and a strong diocesan publication — are essential to spreading the truth and messages of the Church and diocesan authority, as well as the saving message of Jesus Christ," said Murray.

PHOTO BY TIM FARAGHER

Kevin E. Murray, editor, and Karen A. Evans, staff writer, review proofs of the Jan. 16 issue before sending them to Mullen Publications, the newspaper's printer.

Founding issues

The Catholic News & Herald's creation was the result of months of hard work by dedicated people — specifically, the task force that studied the feasibility of establishing a diocesan newspaper and the original staff who implemented the first issues.

NC Catholic, the newspaper of the Diocese of Raleigh, continued to serve the Diocese of Charlotte long after its founding in 1972.

But by 1991, Bishop Donoghue felt "the Church of Charlotte had grown to the point where it was large enough and mature enough to sever the strings that bound us to our Mother Church" and initiated a newspaper that "could address more directly the needs and concerns of all Catholics in the western part of our state."

"I am deeply indebted to Bishop (F. Joseph) Gossman and the staff of the NC Catholic for the many years of dedication and fruitful services it provided for all of us in the Diocese of Charlotte," he wrote.

As publisher, Bishop Donoghue — by default, a diocese's bishop becomes the publisher of its newspaper — intended The Catholic News & Herald's mission to "share the good news with our brothers and sisters, especially those who have fallen away from the Church, and with the thousands of people who are unchurched and have never had the opportunity to learn about Christ."

Admitting it was a "large order," Bishop Donoghue wrote it was a "reasonable goal, if we all share the responsibility. ... I call upon all our people to support this new initiative in our diocese."

Spreading the news

While some Church events on the national and international scale are important, Murray believes the diocesan newspaper should focus primarily on the Diocese of Charlotte.

"Many readers have indicated this opinion to me," said Murray. "It coincides with research by the Readership Institute at Northwestern University that reveals readers want 'intensely local, people-centered news.'"

The late Bob Gately, who served as the newspaper's first editor until 1995, wrote he intended "heavy emphasis on the activities of our parishes, missions and diocesan agencies and institutions."

"Some readers have felt The Catholic News & Herald strayed a bit from that emphasis in recent years, so we've been persistent in returning to the initial goals," said Murray. "Over the last year, we have doubled our local coverage and restructured the newspaper for a more reader-friendly presentation."

"But effectively covering a 46-county diocese is, as Bishop Donoghue said, a large order, especially for a small staff such as ours," he said.

The current newspaper staff consists of five people — an editor, staff writer, graphic designer, advertising representative and secretary.

"Our editorial staff consists of just two people, but we all work together as a team to put out a quality newspaper," said Murray.

"And as each parish and mission is abundant in stories of people living the life of Christ and making a difference in this world, the newspaper has taken — and continues to take — steps to include them among its pages," he said.

The Catholic News & Herald utilizes a "talented and dedicated group of correspondents who live around the diocese," said Murray. "They often cover the events which we can't attend."

Murray said the "Catholic angle" is the primary consideration in selecting news stories.

"We want to tell good stories that relate to people's lives, but those stories must have a Catholic angle," he said, "because the stories also have to relate to their faith. The stories — and sometimes the photographs — that have the most impact are what we aim to put on page one."

Point of contact

In the past year, Murray has also attempted to establish contacts in each of the 91 parishes and missions across the diocese.

"Normally, the contact person is the pastor, but often pastors have a lot going on and delegate to others, sometimes the deacon, secretary or someone else in the parish," said Murray.

The contacts are people from which The Catholic News & Herald can learn about parish events, ministries, outreach programs, newsworthy parishioners "and anything else we might have missed in their parish bulletins," said Murray.

Many parishes and Catholic schools in the diocese submit news and photographs of their events on a regular basis, said Murray.

"These are the stories that often run without bylines, or photos that run with 'Courtesy Photo' credits," said Murray. "In my Nov. 21 column, I encouraged readers to send in more of these submissions. They often provide coverage of events in the various vicariates, or of parishioners accomplishing noteworthy things."

When taking a photograph for publication, Murray suggests avoiding the typical "grip-n-grins."

"Grip-n-grins are photos of people standing and staring at the camera. They make for the most uninteresting photos," said Karen A. Evans, staff writer. "I would suggest experimenting with different angles."

"I like to either get down on one knee and shoot up, or stand on something and shoot down — these make for more appealing photos," said Murray.

The Catholic News & Herald will also remain proactive in providing readers with the news from the pope and Vatican, the U.S. bishops and other items that relate to their lives and faith, said Murray. Reviewing and evaluating films and books in accordance with Catholic teaching, for example, will remain an important aspect of the newspaper because our readers look those these reviews for guidance.

Ads on stage

The newspaper is currently funded through parish assessments and advertising.

"Parishes have collections and schools have tuition, but both often have fundraisers to help support their operations," said Murray. "Similarly, the newspaper relies on advertising to help support its operation."

"We advertise the 'good news' of many local companies in the Diocese of Charlotte," said Cindi Feerick, advertising representative. "It gives them a stage with credibility to reach their market effectively yet inexpensively."

With over 66 percent of readers reading every issue, it pays to advertise in a diocesan newspaper, according to research gathered by the Simmons Marketing Research. Ads in secular newspapers account for 65-75 percent of the publication's space and are often perceived as hype on the part of the advertiser; Catholic newspapers average only 20-40 percent advertising, making the ads stand out.

In addition, they offer the perception of credible advertisers because they are in "the Church paper," one that has different guidelines for the types of

See CN&H, page 13

U.S.-Vatican relations flourish

CNS PHOTO FROM CATHOLIC PRESS PHOTO

U.S. Ambassador to the Vatican Jim Nicholson listens as Pope John Paul II gives his "state of the world" address to diplomats Jan. 12 at the Vatican. The pope urged the international community to help the Iraqis "retake the reins of their country." Despite the perception of tensions, U.S.-Vatican relations have weathered 2003 with remarkable resilience, said Nicholson.

VATICAN, from page 1

tions have weathered 2003 with remarkable resilience, Nicholson said in an end-of-the-year interview with Catholic News Service Dec. 30.

Cooperation between the U.S. government and the Vatican far outweighed areas of disagreement, the ambassador said, primarily because of a shared interest in promoting human dignity, religious freedom and other basic values around the world.

"U.S.-Vatican relations are very good. Ironically, they remained good throughout that imbroglio of Iraq because we're engaged in so many other ways. I call it our foundation of shared values," Nicholson said.

That context of cooperation is important to keep in mind, he said as the embassy gears up for events in 2004 to mark the 20th anniversary of full diplomatic relations between the United States and the Holy See.

To commemorate the anniversary and to give it added impact, Nicholson and his staff are organizing conferences in Rome on several key themes:

— Religious liberty, with Supreme Court Chief Justice Antonin Scalia expected to be a main speaker.

— Food, starvation and biotechnology — including genetically modified foods, a topic the U.S. Embassy has taken up repeatedly with Vatican officials as a moral issue for the new millennium.

— Slavery in the 21st century, following up an embassy-sponsored and Vatican-supported conference in 2002 on human trafficking.

— The need for "new legal instruments" to deal with stateless terrorist groups.

The last topic is a big one, and Nicholson said it's clearly a concern of Pope John Paul II, who raised it in his recent World Day of Peace message. The ambassador said that among the questions to be addressed would be the type of pre-emptive action that can legitimately be taken against terrorist organizations.

Nicholson, a 65-year-old former Republican National Committee chairman in his first diplomatic post, acknowledged that war and peace issues dominated his talks at the Vatican over the last 12 months.

But he thinks U.S.-Vatican differences over the war in Iraq have been exaggerated — in part, he said, because "peripheral voices" are sometimes taken as Vatican policy.

"Never, ever, did the pope say it would be immoral for the United States to go into Iraq, or that war is immoral," the ambassador said. He said the pope recognized that civil authorities have the ultimate responsibility to make decisions on those questions.

Nicholson said the Iraq war highlighted one of the big challenges of his job: "taking the measure of statements that emanate from different quarters of the Vatican."

A recent example was when Cardinal Renato Martino, president of the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace, complained about televised images of Saddam Hussein after his capture and said U.S. forces had treated him "like a cow" by checking his teeth.

That prompted Nicholson to go straight to the Secretariat of State, where Cardinal Angelo Sodano assured him that Cardinal Martino was speaking for himself and not the Holy See, the ambassador said.

Does the Vatican send mixed signals when it allows cardinals, Roman Curia officials and other church experts to speak their minds on international issues?

"I think it's a problem for the Vatican, because when someone like Cardinal Martino speaks up as he did, it's often interpreted — including by people in my country — as the Vatican speaking," Nicholson said.

Nicholson believes there's more sympathy than generally believed for U.S. actions in Iraq, particularly among Iraqi Catholic leaders. He said that when he recently met with Iraq's newly elected Chaldean Patriarch Emmanuel III, the patriarch's first words were: "Thank you for coming to my country and freeing my people."

Moreover, there's a constant current of collaboration between the United States and the Vatican that doesn't register on the headline news ticker, Nicholson said.

In the field of religious freedom, for example, the Vatican has at times requested that President George Bush apply some pressure in the international arena.

"Twice (the Vatican) has asked the president to intervene in Russia, and twice he has. Twice they've asked him to intervene in China, and twice he has," Nicholson said.

"The president is very well-liked and respected here by the pope and the Curia," he said.

The ambassador doesn't spend all his time meeting with Vatican officials. Recently, he's been lecturing in the motherhouses of some religious orders in Rome, promoting a U.S.-funded training program on human trafficking.

In January, the embassy is sponsoring a two-week course on recognizing and helping human trafficking victims. Most of the students are women religious, who will return to their home countries and train more workers in the field.

Nicholson also helped conceive a Jan. 17 concert at the Vatican by the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. The ambassador sees it as a "reconciliation event" because it features an American orchestra led by a Jewish conductor, accompanied by a Muslim choir from Istanbul, all playing for the pope and other Vatican dignitaries.

At the end of his second full year in what he calls a "fantastic" job, Nicholson said he is increasingly inspired by Pope John Paul's determination in the face of physical frailty. The pope shows an "undaunted spirit" and seems to thrive on the challenges presented by his declining health, the ambassador said.

"He keeps an awful lot of people busy. He continues to think big and strategically, he continues to try to be a force for reconciliation ... and he continues to have great resonance," he said.

Join our Oratorian Congregation to
SERVE GOD AS PRIEST OR BROTHER

As priests and lay men, our community lives without vows and serves God's people numerous ways, including:

Parishes Youth Camps Nursing
Retreats Campus Ministry Hospital Chaplains

Find out more about serving God with us:
Fr. Ed McDevitt, CO The Oratory
P O Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened. 704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

'Life principles' the thrust, theme of 2004 March for Life

Bishop Jugis to celebrate Mass day of rally

BY MARK PATTISON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON (CNS) — To observe the 31st anniversary of the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion virtually on demand, sponsors of the annual March for Life have chosen "Build Unity on the Life Principles" as the theme for the Jan. 22 rally on the Ellipse and march to the U.S. Capitol and Supreme Court buildings in Washington.

"Some people think unity is everybody holding hands, and we all be nice to one another," said Nellie Gray, who has directed each March for Life since the first one in 1974.

"We're not talking about that," she said. "We're talking about unity on the life principles — no exceptions, no compromises."

Gray defines possible exceptions and compromises as "life of the mother, health of the mother, rape, incest, a deformed child and all that."

The March for Life Education & Defense Fund states as the life principles:

— "The life of each human being shall be preserved and protected from that human being's biological beginning when the father's sperm fertilizes the mother's ovum."

— "The unalienable right to life endowed by our Creator vests in each human at fertilization."

— "There must be equal care and protection for each born and preborn human."

— "When in doubt opt for life."

— "When two or more humans are in a situation in which their lives are mutually endangered, all available ordinary means and reasonable efforts shall be used to preserve and to protect the life of each human so endangered."

CNS PHOTO BY DON BLAKE, THE DIALOG

Participants in the 2003 March for Life head toward the U.S. Capitol on their way to the Supreme Court building in Washington Jan. 22. Hundreds of thousands of people are expected for the 31st annual march and accompanying activities this year, which mark the 1973 Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade that legalized abortion on demand.

Gray said the life principles also apply to euthanasia.

North Carolina Catholics, including Bishop Peter J. Jugis, will join the thousands of pro-life activists at the March for Life, the biggest event surrounding the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade and Doe vs. Bolton anniversaries.

"The March for Life is an opportunity to be a public witness for the sanctity of life," said Maggi Nadol, diocesan Respect Life coordinator. "This allows our legislators to hear that we will not compromise when it comes to protecting human life."

The March for Life Education & Defense Fund will sponsor a convention at a Capitol Hill hotel Jan. 20-21 that will include a session on problems facing the pro-life movement. Convention speakers include Gray, Priests for Life founder Father Frank Pavone, Human Life International president Father Thomas Euteneuer, journalist Russell Shaw and two Pennsylvania Republicans in the U.S. House, Reps. Melissa Hart and Patrick J. Toomey.

A capacity crowd is expected to jam the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception for its annual National Prayer Vigil for Life, which begins with a Jan. 21 vigil Mass with Cardinal William H. Keeler of Baltimore as principal celebrant and homilist.

Bishop Jugis will celebrate Mass for North Carolinians at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at 10:30 a.m. Jan. 22.

Marchers are invited to stay in the basilica's lower level to sleep overnight and participate in various services, including a rosary, confessions, hourly holy hours, night prayer and morning prayer, winding up with a morning Mass celebrated by Cardinal Edward M. Egan of New York.

Before the march, a youth rally and Mass will take place at the MCI Center, downtown Washington's pro sports arena. The rally will feature musician Steve Angrisano and Franciscan Father Stan Fortuna, the "rapping priest," followed by Mass celebrated by Washington Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick. Bishop Paul S. Loverde of Arlington, Va., and other bishops will be concelebrants.

Also before the march, the National Pro-Life Religious Council will host the National Memorial for the Pre-Born and Their Mothers and Fathers at an undetermined Senate office building on Capitol Hill. The free ecumenical event will include prayer, praise, music and awards. Guests will include actress-singer Melba Moore and Alveda King Tookes, niece of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

After the march, Priests for Life will host a "Silent No More" vigil on the steps of the Supreme Court. Expected to participate are Moore, Tookes and actress Jennifer O'Neill.

The March for Life's annual Rose Dinner will be held Jan. 22, following the rally and march. The guest speaker will be Pepperdine University constitutional law professor Douglas Kmiec, talking on "Life and the Necessary Relationship Between Law and Morality." Kmiec had been dean of the law school at The Catholic University of America, Washington.

American Collegians for Life will conduct a weekend student leadership conference at Catholic University Jan. 23-25 to which high school juniors and seniors are welcome. The keynote speaker is Dr. Bernard Nathanson, the onetime abortionist who later became an ardent abortion foe and a Catholic.

Staff Writer Karen A. Evans contributed to this story.

WANT TO GO?

Representatives from the Diocese of Charlotte will participate in the following activities:

Jan. 21 — Mass at 8 p.m. at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Jan. 22 — Mass celebrated by Bishop Peter J. Jugis for North Carolinians at 10:30 a.m. at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Jan. 22 — Rally at the Ellipse near the White House at 12 p.m.

For more information, contact Maggi Nadol, diocesan Respect Life Coordinator, at (704) 370-3229.

15% off with this coupon
Now at 2 great locations!
The Catholic™ Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts
South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com
Grand Opening! Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue:10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

A Catholic leader in the struggle to end anti-Judaism

REVIEWED BY EUEGENE FISHER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Like the name of its author, "In Search of the Sacred: Dr. Eva Fleischner, Pioneer Catholic Theologian" is Heavenrich. It chronicles the life and faith of a Catholic, lovingly written by a practicing Jew.

The author, Herbert S. Heavenrich, calls Eva Fleischner "a pioneer Catholic theologian" and a leader in "the ongoing process of ending Catholic-Christian anti-Judaism." He also describes her as "the most spiritually developed person I have ever known." I can only concur, having known and worked with Fleischner for the past three decades through the U.S. Catholic bishops' Secretariat for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs.

"In Search of the Sacred: Dr. Eva Fleischner, Pioneer Catholic Theologian," by Herbert S. Heavenrich. 1st Books (Bloomington, Ind., 2003). 147 pp., $12.50.

Born in Vienna in 1925 to a Catholic mother and a Jewish father who later converted to Catholicism, Fleischner was raised Catholic from birth. In 1938, her happy, upper middle-class childhood ended when Hitler annexed Austria. She was ostracized as a Jew by many of her classmates, including her best friend. The family left for England and, ultimately, America.

After graduating from college, Fleischner met the man she still calls "the love of my life." They became engaged. But while in France on a Fulbright scholarship she became involved in a circle of young Catholic women whose purpose was to attain a more authentic spiritual Christian life. The group was led by Father (later Cardinal) Jean Danielou. "It was only then," Fleischner told Heavenrich, "that I discovered the 'deep nature' of the church and fell in love with it" — and with God.

Calling off her engagement, Fleischner returned to America and joined the Grail, a group of Catholic lay women dedicated to "permeating the world with their joyous Christian spirit." With the Grail, Fleischner was an early leader in the catechetical and lay ministry movements at the time of the Second Vatican Council, work for which she is well remembered in both communities to this day. It is not surprising that in 1965, at the age of 40, she was one of the first laywomen to apply to the doctoral program in the theology department at Marquette University, nor is it surprising that she was accepted.

In her studies, she found "one theme kept cropping up" which shocked her — the theme of anti-Judaism. She found it in the writings of early church fathers as well as in medieval and even modern theologians. She wrote her dissertation on Judaism in German Christian theology since 1945. She has gone on to publish other groundbreaking books and numerous articles in the field of Catholic-Jewish relations and to serve as an adviser to the U.S. bishops and the Holy See.

This biography shows the great debt of gratitude the Catholic Church owes Fleischner for her life of love, self-sacrifice and joyful grace.

A moving autobiographical essay by Fleischner appears in the recently published "Faith Transformed: Christian Encounters With Jews and Judaism." In this collection of essays, edited by John Merkle and published by Liturgical Press, 11 Catholic and Protestant scholars write of how dialogue with Judaism has enriched their Christian faith. I have an essay in it myself, so I cannot presume to review it. But the Christians you will meet there have some marvelous stories to tell! Just ask Eva Fleischner!

SMITH & SMITH, PA
Timothy M. Smith, Attorney  Jacquelyn A. Smith, Attorney
Members of St. Mark's Church

NO FEE UNTIL WE WIN ON PI CASES
FREE INITIAL CONSULTATION
convenient free parking

EXPERIENCED - AGGRESSIVE - CARING

| CRIMINAL LAW | PERSONAL INJURY |
|---|---|
| Traffic Tickets (Meck. only) | Auto Accident |
| DWI | Workers' Compensation |
| Expunctions | Wrongful Death |
| Felonies & Misdemeanors | Whiplash - Back, Neck, Head Injuries |

10% off attorney fee—10% of net fee donated to Catholic Social Services Food Pantry
704-331-3092 www.smithandsmithpa.com 900 Baxter St., Suite 109, Charlotte

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: JAN. 25, 2004

Jan. 25, Third Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle C Readings:
1) Nehemiah 8:2 4a, 5 6, 8 10
Psalm 19:8, 9, 10, 15
2) 1 Corinthians 12:12 30
3) Luke 1:1 4; 4:14 21

BY BEVERLY CORZINE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

When the chapel at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado was in the planning stages, I remember reading about the theological and design concerns that this particular building presented. The challenge of housing worship spaces for Jews, Protestants and Catholics in one magnificent building led to the creation of a chapel that is both an architectural and ecumenical masterpiece with the towering Rocky Mountains as its backdrop.

Since it opened in the 1960s, I have visited the chapel several times. On each of my visits some facet of this building reminds me that the love of God and the love of the word of God can provide a common ground where people from diverse backgrounds can meet and worship.

One of the most unforgettable spots for me resides in the outer wal of the Jewish chapel, a glassed in display space easily viewed by everyone There, behind the glass, rests a copy of the Torah that had been hidden in a wall during World War II and was discovered by a European demolition crew years after the war. As I stood before this sacred artifact, I wondered about faith and the fate of the person who hid it so well. I also wondered what I would hide if I were in the midst of terror and death.

In today's first reading, Ezra the priest reads the law to an assembly o people of all ages. The word of God i something the people need to hear Lives and relationships need mending. Ezra not only reads the word but he explains it in terms the men women, boys and girls can understand and apply to their own lives His message is a message assemblies of worshipers down through the ages have longed to hear: God loves us and wishes to strengthen us.

The truth of the word has the power to change us. It is truly a cause for celebration.

Questions:
How do you work to keep the word of God present in your family and the wider community? What threatens its continuing presence among us?

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 18 - JANUARY 24

Sunday (Second Sunday in Ordinary Time), Isaiah 62:1-5, 1 Corinthians 12:4-11, John 2:1-1 Monday, 1 Samuel 15:16-23, Mark 2:18-22; Tuesday (Sts. Fabian and Sebastian), 1 Samuel 16: 13, Mark 2:23-28; Wednesday (St. Agnes), 1 Samuel 17:32-33, 37 40-51, Mark 3:1-6; Thursda (St. Vincent), 1 Samuel 18:6-9; 19:1-7, Mark 3:7-12; Friday, 1 Samuel 24:3-21, Mark 3:13-1 Saturday (St. Francis de Sales), 2 Samuel 1:1-4, 11-12, 19, 23-27, Mark 3:20-21

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 25 - JANUARY 31

Sunday (Third Sunday in Ordinary Time), Nehemiah 8:2-6, 8-10, 1 Corinthians 12:12-30, Luke 1: 4; 4:14-21; Monday (Sts. Titus and Timothy), 2 Timothy 1:1-8, Mark 3:22-30; Tuesday (St. Ange Merici), 2 Samuel 6:12-15, 17-19, Mark 3:31-35; Wednesday (St. Thomas Aquinas), 2 Samuel 7: 17, Mark 4:1-20; Thursday, 2 Samuel 7:18-19, 24-29, Mark 4:21-25; Friday, 2 Samuel 11:1-4, 5-1 13-17, Mark 4:26-34; Saturday (St. John Bosco), 2 Samuel 12:1-7, 10-17, Mark 4:35-41

'Pearl Earring' is colorful, yet unimpressionable

BY ANNE NAVARRO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK (CNS) — Evocative colors and lighting turn director Peter Webber's "Girl With a Pearl Earring" (Lions Gate) into an atmospheric drama. But its slack narrative and slow pacing prevent this character-driven film from fully resonating with its audience.

Adapted from Tracy Chevalier's best-selling novel, "Girl With a Pearl Earring" provides a fictitious backdrop to the eponymous, famed painting by Dutch artist Johannes Vermeer, played with glowering intensity by Colin Firth. Cinematically, the film is a gem, imitating with keen strength the painter's chosen palette of blues, yellows and sepia-toned hues. Screenwriter Olivia Hetreed, who worked with Chevalier, understood the entrancing power that unconsummated love holds over an audience — and has kept the deeply felt passions simmering just below the boiling point.

Sixteen-year-old Griet (Scarlett Johansson), a good Protestant girl, is forced to support her family after her father, a textile painter, has a terrible accident that leaves him blind and maimed. She finds employment as a servant in the Catholic house of Vermeer (her mother warns her against the "bad influence" Catholicism could have on her), run under the severe eye of the painter's bourgeois mother-in-law, Maria (Judy Parfitt). Maria has what in today's world would be called a head for business, lobbying wealthy patrons such as Master van Ruijven (Tom Wilkinson) to buy Vermeer's work, and thereby keeping her perpetually pregnant daughter, Catharina (Essie Davis), in the luxuriant style to which she has grown accustomed.

When Vermeer forms an attachment to Griet, whose interest in the artist's work allows her entry into his world — carefully mixing colors and cleaning his studio — Catharina grows suspicious, then indignant. But Maria, concerned mainly with the bottom line, sees that Griet-as-muse means money and clandestinely encourages the alliance between painter and servant. Tensions are heightened by van Ruijven's lascivious manner as he senses the growing attraction and arranges to have Griet painted alone by Vermeer, hoping to cause trouble. Meanwhile, Griet entertains a marriage proposal from her lover, the local butcher boy (Cillian Murphy), even as she grapples with her growing feelings for Vermeer.

Despite the friction created, the actual story about a servant girl who inspires a famous portrait by the 17th-century master is less involving. Johansson looks every bit the part with porcelain skin, liquid eyes and full, ripe lips that seem to naturally be pouting. But her character's growing interest in artistic pursuits — despite her entrapment in a class that is destined to serve others — is left by the wayside.

Firth's Vermeer is moody and distant, yet he is made almost laughable by a ridiculous, stringy, long-haired wig placed precariously upon his head. The story's villains are all too conventional with their behind-the-scenes machinations and selfish motives.

"Girl With a Pearl Earring" has moments of true beauty. But it takes more that fine cinematography to create a totally moving film.

Because of a sexual encounter and brief violence, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG-13 — parents are strongly cautioned. Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13.

LAST WEEK'S ANSWERS

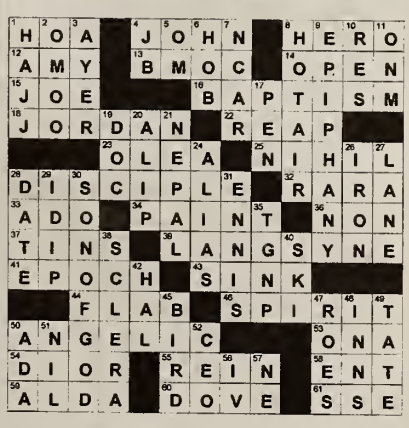
SEASON'S END



Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Consolidate High-Interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

Interest Rate: 3.75%*
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

No Payment until March 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

Life meets Hollywood: Upcoming film on pope draws ire of biographer

BY CAROL GLATZ
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican usually braces itself when the life and times of notable religious figures gets ready to hit the screen. But a fresh maelstrom may be building over an upcoming made-for-TV movie about the life of Pope John Paul II.

This coming October, the film biopic "Karol" is scheduled to debut on Silvio Berlusconi's Channel 5 — one of the Italian prime minister's three channels in his Mediaset empire. The TV "fiction" was meant to be based on the Vatican-approved book, "Stories of Karol: The Unknown Life of John Paul II" written by Gian Franco Svidercoschi.

But Svidercoschi — after reading the film's first treatment — has denounced the direction the screenplay has taken, saying "it invents too much and doesn't present the man as he really was."

In an interview Jan. 8, Svidercoschi said he initially had faith in the endeavor to turn his 2001 book into a fictionalized TV serial. But the early film chapters have changed some details from the book.

Svidercoschi said one scene shows a 19-year-old Karol Wojtyla and his father running down the streets of Krakow trying to escape bullets from Nazi air gunners roaring overhead.

In reality, Svidercoschi said, Karol pushed his father off the road into a field in an attempt to keep the live rounds from hitting him. The screenplay version shows the fictional Karol throwing himself on top of his father in the middle of the street, ready to take the bullets himself.

Svidercoschi said, "Such an alteration tries to turn a 19-year-old young man into someone already pope-like and divine. Changing details that don't need to be changed for dramatic effect takes away from understanding the real boy, the real man that eventually became pope."

By selling the film rights of his book to Taodue production company, Svidercoschi admitted the film writers and producers could do whatever they want to the story.

"A little creativity, a little fantasy is not a bad thing, but it must be done intelligently. But so far, these changes misrepresent Karol Wojtyla and make him into someone he's not. If that's how it's going to be, I don't want to be involved," he said.

Svidercoschi said he would pull his name from the movie and not allow it to say it was based on his book if the film presents too-fictionalized a person from the one he feels is the real Karol Wojtyla.

"My book was read by the pope and read by the Vatican's secretary of state," Svidercoschi said.

"When they heard it may be made into a movie, I received a letter from the secretary saying they were pleased to learn about the prospects of a film version and they added they hoped it would adhere to the content and spirit of my book, 'Stories of Karol,'" he said.

Svidercoschi was vice director of the Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, in 1983-85. He collaborated with Pope John Paul on the pope's autobiography, "Gift and Mystery: On the 50th Anniversary of My Priestly Ordination."

Svidercoschi said his 30 to 40 years of journalistic experience have given him an accurate picture of Poland and its favorite son, Karol Wojtyla.

"I think movie writers are afraid of life," Svidercoschi said.

"Perhaps they think only fiction can be dramatic and captivating. But the pope's life is already so incredible and gripping, there is absolutely no need to invent a thing," he said.

But along with the criticism of trying to make Karol, as a young man, look "divine," Svidercoschi said the film is also trying to politicize Karol as a little boy.

"There's a tendency in the movie business to feel there always has to be an adversary, a nemesis testing the protagonist," Svidercoschi said.

"In this film, they've created a young schoolboy who hates Jews for a variety of reasons," Svidercoschi said.

"Well, we all know the story of Karol being best friends with Jerzy Kluger — a Jewish classmate who shared a classroom desk with Karol. They played soccer together, the two boys' families were good friends," he said.

"When young Karol defended his friend, Jerzy, from taunting school bullies in real life, he did it because Jerzy was his friend," Svidercoschi said.

But the film, he said, presents a Karol who is "politically correct" — protecting Jerzy from abuse solely because he is a Jewish boy in need of defense.

"To politicize the motives of a 9-year-old boy is to misunderstand the real process that happened later on in Karol's life that led him, as an adult, to stick up for and defend Jews in the face of anti-Semitism," Svidercoschi said.

But Svidercoschi's consultations and criticisms may have made a difference. Early attempts at turning a theater actress who worked with Karol from the time they were teens into a longing romantic admirer were scrapped when Svidercoschi insisted such a love story would be a lie.

"I just think these people don't know what they're doing," he said. "We can't fictionalize what has made Karol Wojtyla the man and pope he is now."

'Real World' of faith Catholic families, culture

Former MTV star urges college students to let faith shine

BY JULIE GREENE
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

ORLANDO, Fla. — At times energetic, slightly irreverent and comical and other times serious and contemplative, Matt Smith of "The Real World New Orleans" fame shared the highs and lows of keeping the faith as the closing keynote speaker at the National Catholic Student Coalition's 20th annual leadership conference in Orlando Dec. 31-Jan. 4.

In front of about 400 Catholic college students, alumni and campus ministers, the former cast member of MTV's hit reality show "Real World" and recent Georgia Tech graduate focused on the conference's theme of "Ask Me Why I'm Catholic!"

"I come from a big Catholic family. My dad was a convert. He was baptized Episcopal and met my hot Catholic mama at a Newman Center dance. Then they got married and had six kids," said Smith, who is also a national spokesman for Life Teen.

He described his family as Catholic hippie-types who helped launch a foster home community in North Carolina.

His parents and later he and his siblings were heavily involved in a local parish. "We were the family who always stayed after the church breakfast and put up the tables and chairs," he said.

He recalled awkward times at public school where few people knew he was Catholic. Even so, he maintained his faith.

Smith looks up to "Catholic heroes" and the "communion of saints" who have not been afraid to stand up for what they believe in, people like his campus minister at Georgia Tech, Blessed Mother Teresa of Calcutta and St. Francis of Assisi.

He recalled visiting Assisi, Italy, during World Youth Day 2000 and the impact it had on him in the wake of his "Real World" experience.

"It was awesome to think that only a few hundred years ago, he was here, standing up for his faith," said Smith, reflecting on the life of St. Francis. The saint, whom he called Frank, had gone from riches to rags by choice.

"Frank was a cool dude for his day. He was in a band. He was a street fighter and a member of a gang who got beat up and was kidnapped by a rival gang but the one thing that he feared more than anything else was lepers," he said. "And after he had this vision — what does he do? He goes up and kisses a leper. He faced his greatest fear."

As a Life Teen spokesman, he takes every opportunity to share his faith with young people and encourage them to stand firm in their convictions.

Life Teen groups meet at about 800 Catholic parishes in the United States, Canada and 11 other countries. Following a teen Mass on Sunday evenings, the groups hold "life nights" offering discussion, education and social activities.

"When you live out your faith it does cause trouble," Smith said.

Such an opportunity presented itself recently when he signed on to be part of another MTV reality series called "The Gauntlet," which brought alumni from "The Real World" and "Road Rules" together to compete in 14 physical and mental challenges. Taping for the show was done last September.

In the first episode he spoke about chastity, criticized Playboy magazine, read the Bible and put a crucifix on the wall above his bed in the house "The Gauntlet" competitors shared in Telluride, Colo.

"I almost got voted off the first episode ... one girl said she considered herself a Christian but told the group, 'Matt is so Christian it makes me uncomfortable.' When I heard that, I was cheering, 'Vote me off, vote me off.'"

Instead he was given priest-like status in the house, often lending an ear to cast mates who confided in him, though not everyone liked the personable redhead. One girl challenged him about his promise to remain a virgin until marriage.

"She really put me on the spot — asking me if I dated a girl for three years would I get with her then," he said. "I told her if I dated a girl for three years I should probably be ready to get off the pot and marry her."

At least one cast mate defended him, and before the end of the show, cast members could be seen wearing Life Teen T-shirts. They even prayed over him before he tackled the challenge that eventually led to his elimination. "It was so powerful," he said. "I thought it was so cool that they would do that."

He urged the college students not to be afraid to stand up and cherish their faith. He ended his talk with a quote from St. Francis: "Who you are before Jesus is who you are, nothing more, nothing less."

CNS PHOTO BY GEORGE PUGH, CATHOLIC LIGHT

Matt Smith, former cast member of MTV's "The Real World," talks with teens at a late July youth rally in the Diocese of Scranton, Pa. Smith, a national spokesman for Life Teen ministry, recently shared the highs and lows of keeping the faith as the closing keynote speaker at the National Catholic Student Coalition's 20th annual leadership conference in Orlando.

Mary's Garden
Catholic
Books and GIFTS
3816 South New Hope Rd
( New Hope Small Business Center - Suite # 27 )
Gastonia, NC 28056
5 Miles South of I-85 Exit 20
704-823-7244
866-823-7244
Toll Free
GIFTS for ALL OCCASIONS
OPEN
Tuesday thru Saturday
10 AM to 6 PM

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CAREGIVERS: CAREGiving is a Joy! Join us in making a difference in the lives of the elderly. Non-medical companionship & home care. Flexible, part-time, day, evening & weekend hours available. Car needed. Home Instead Senior Care. Call 704.344.9739

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Experienced with master's in theology, religious education or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of faith formation to: Faith Formation Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Holy Redeemer Catholic Community in the Outer Banks of North Carolina is seeking an energetic, motivated, spiritual individual to be part of a collaborative pastoral team. Responsibilities will include working to enhance existing adult formation opportunities, including the development of small Christian communities; and working toward whole community catechesis. Candidate should be a practicing Catholic, with a combination of training and/or experience in adult formation. Send resume to: Holy Redeemer Catholic Parish, P.O. Box 510, Kitty Hawk, NC 27949, Attn: Faith Formation Search Committee, or email herrityt@raldioc.org

DIRECTOR OF MUSIC MINISTRY: Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro, NC seeks a full-time professional with at least a bachelor's degree in music, and an in-depth knowledge of Roman Catholic liturgy. Must be fully competent in both organ and piano, and experienced in directing both adult and children's choirs. Responsible for all music activity in a church with over 2,300 families. Full benefits available. Applicants who meet these requirements should send a resume to: OLG Music Ministry, 201 South Chapman Street, Greensboro, NC 27403, or fax it to (336) 274-7826.

PC SUPPORT SPECIALIST: The Diocese of Charlotte is accepting applications for a full-time PC Support Specialist. This position is primarily responsible for maintaining and replacing all applicable computer hardware and software when needed. Applicant must have an Associate's Degree in Information Technology, Computer Science, or equivalent. Applicant must have at least one-and-one-half year's experience with pc upgrades and maintenance, and have at least one-and-a- half year's experience within a Networking environment and various Microsoft Operating Systems. EOE. Please forward resume and salary history by Jan. 29, 2004 to klgeter@charlottediocese.org or Director of Information Technology, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203-4003.

YOUTH MINISTER: Experienced with degree or certification in youth ministry, theology or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of youth ministry to: Youth Ministry Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org.

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704) 845-1416.

HOME: Available, that brick 4-bedroom, 2 1/2-bath country dream home with all appliances conveniently located on 17+ acres just south of Charlotte. Rent to own.(704)843-4436.

FOR RENT

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

VILLA - HILTON HEAD, SC: 2 bedrooms, 2 baths. Sleeps 6. Golf nearby. Tennis. Beach access. February 7-14. Call (704) 366-6507.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

GIBSON SPEAKS

EWTN to air second exclusive with director of 'The Passion of The Christ'

IRONDALE, Ala. — EWTN Global Catholic Network will air Raymond Arroyo's second exclusive interview with Academy Award-winning actor and director, Mel Gibson, as part of the international newsmagazine, The World Over Live.

Their complete conversation will air on Friday, Jan. 23 at 8 p.m. EDT; Saturday, Jan. 24 at 1 a.m. EDT; Sunday, Jan. 25 at 5 p.m. EDT; and Monday, Jan. 26 at 10 a.m. EDT and 11 p.m. EDT.

In the interview, Gibson breaks his silence, speaking for the first time about charges that his film, "The Passion of the Christ," is anti-Semitic. He talks about his bold vision for the project and his motivation for making the film.

Gibson tells Arroyo, "It reflects my beliefs — I've never done that before."

He also candidly comments on the controversy surrounding the movie, his resistance to altering the film and his personal commitment to press forward.

"I don't know if I will ever work again," says Gibson in the interview. "I've said that this is a career killer and it could well be, but that doesn't matter because I don't care."

Based on biblical accounts, the movie, "The Passion of the Christ," depicts the last 12 hours of Jesus' life on earth and will be released in the United States on Ash Wednesday, Feb. 25.

Arroyo, EWT news director, was on the film set in Italy during the filming of "The Passion of the Christ" last year, and is the only broadcast journalist to conduct an extended interview with Gibson about the project.

CNS PHOTO BY MARY KNIGHT

Mel Gibson met with USCCB general secretary Msgr. William Fay July 21 to discuss his upcoming movie, "The Passion of the Christ."

THE ORATORY
434 Charlotte Avenue, P. O. Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586
(803) 327-2097

24TH ANNUAL
CARDINAL NEWMAN LECTURE

Saturday, February 28
9:30 am - 4 pm

Bill Huebsch

"GENIUS OF THE HEART: POPE JOHN XXIII"

The Newman Lecture is an annual gift from the Oratory to the regional church to celebrate the life and ministry of Cardinal John Henry Newman. Bill Huebsch is a leader of workshops and teacher with an expertise in catechetics, spirituality and Vatican Council II. No charge or registration.

Make the right move to finding your dream home. See Chase first... because home ownership matters.

TAILORED MORTGAGE PROGRAMS

- Chase mortgage programs are tailored to fit your individual needs
- Experienced mortgage specialists will personally work with you from application through closing
- A free mortgage affordability estimate can show you how much home you can afford*
- A Chase mortgage preapproval will make you feel more confident knowing you have "cash in hand" when shopping for a home

Make the move to Chase Home Finance—call today.

Paul McClure
(704) 553-1202
Ext. 203

CHASE
THE RIGHT RELATIONSHIP IS EVERYTHING®

*Results of the mortgage affordability estimate are guidelines; the estimate is not an application for credit and results do not guarantee loan approval or denial. A fee for preapproval may be applied. All loans are subject to credit and property approval. Program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. Not all products are available in all states or for all loan amounts. Other restrictions and limitations apply. All loans offered through Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corporation ("CMMC"). Corporate headquarters: 343 Thornall Street, Edison, New Jersey 08837. (732) 205-0600. © 2003 J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. All Rights Reserved. 10/03 6504

Member FDIC

Bringing the good news to North Carolina Catholics

CN&H, from page 7

ads that it will accept.

"Research also notes that readers of Catholic newspapers are more loyal and more educated than the average readers of the secular press," said Feerick. "They also finish higher in income, travel, banking, contributions, insurance and many other areas than readers of the secular press."

New look, new attitude

"The newspaper has been blessed with several great editors and a talented staff over the years, all of whom have done wonderful things for the paper," said Murray. "They have helped the newspaper earn many coveted Catholic Press Association awards."

Now, said Murray, the staff is trying to get readers excited again about The Catholic News & Herald.

On August 22, 2002, The Catholic News & Herald premiered its redesigned pages, including a new logo, format and features. Reader response to the new look has been "overwhelmingly positive," said Murray.

"The newspaper has come a long way, and it will continue to progress and evolve over time," said Murray. "I am grateful for the support and encouragement of Bishop Peter J. Jugis, our bishop; Msgr. Mauricio W. West, our chancellor; and Rev. Mr. Curtiss Todd, our vice chancellor."

"I am also grateful for the support and participation of our readers," added Murray. "If readers don't see their parishes in the newspaper often, they should send in submissions or contact their area's correspondent. This is the readers' newspaper and we want them to be a part of it."

"The Catholic News & Herald will continue to be a strong voice for evangelization in the diocese," said Bishop Jugis. "It will disseminate the message of Jesus Christ and I consider it an integral part of furthering the mission of the Church."

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530

Assuring Absolute Integrity

Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535

Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:

" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News & Herald."

— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

Principal

Our Lady of Lourdes Parish in Raleigh has an opening for principal of its K-8 school. The search committee seeks a principal with a commitment to quality teaching, community service and excellence - as well as a demonstrated ability to lead and to collaborate with faculty, parents and parish staff.

The search committee seeks candidates who are practicing Catholics, hold a master's degree, have experience in teaching and 5 years in education management, and hold (or are capable of obtaining) NC principal certification. Please submit resume and a one-page statement of vision for Catholic education by Feb 15 to: Search Committee, Our Lady of Lourdes Parish, 2718 Overbrook Dr., Raleigh NC 27608. Or email OLLSPRINCSRCH@aol.com.

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Letters to the Editor

Another solution to holiday madness

In response to Kevin Murray's Christmas column ("Jingle all the way to the mall," Dec. 19, 2003), one alternative to giving gifts to your relatives and friends at Christmastime would be to have Masses offered for them.

You could send them cards with notes explaining the Mass will be offered for them. The Catechism of the Catholic Church on page 356, 1414 states: "As sacrifice, the Eucharist is also offered in reparation for the sins of the living and the dead and to obtain spiritual or temporal benefits from God."

On a practical level, it is very cost efficient, it doesn't need to be wrapped, it doesn't need to be returned, you don't have to rack your brain figuring out what to get and you don't need to go to the mall. It doesn't even matter if they are male, female or even Catholic. All would benefit.

Even if they do not like or appreciate this gift, it has no bearing on the untold spiritual graces they will still receive, which is why Masses for the living and dead can be offered at any time of the year. And by having Masses offered, you will be supporting the many wonderful priests out there with your stipends. There are many religious orders as well as missions who have Christmas cards for Mass intentions.

Hopefully, this suggestion leads you to have a less stressful and more spiritual Christmas season, allowing you to focus all your time and energy on Our Lord, the Word made flesh.

— Donna Kelly
Rutherfordton, N.C.

Pope says Christ's suffering frees believers from slavery to sin

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Through Christ's suffering and death, believers are freed from slavery to sin and can live in justice, righteousness and holiness, Pope John Paul II said.

At his weekly general audience Jan. 14, the pope said the feast of the baptism of Christ, celebrated Jan. 11, leads to reflection on the fact that, out of love for humanity, he became man and suffered and died for the salvation of all.

Continuing his audience talks about Bible readings used in the church's evening prayer, the pope looked at a brief account of Christ's suffering and death from the First Letter of Peter.

St. Peter, who defines himself as an eyewitness to Christ's suffering, said Christ was the just one who sacrificed himself for the unjust in order to lead them back to God, the pope said.

The passage describes "the attitude of Jesus" as he faced death, he said.

After affirming Christ's absolute innocence of any sin, it recounts his "exemplary behavior inspired by meekness and sweetness," the pope said.

"The patient silence of the Lord" in the face of the insults and suffering he faced "was not only an act of courage and generosity. It also was a gesture of trust in the Father," he said.

"His was a total and perfect trust in divine justice, which guides history toward the triumph of the innocent," the pope said.

Through Christ's suffering and death, he said, believers are freed from slavery to evil and misery and "can live for justice, that is, in holiness."

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

No discount for fallen angels

Murray's Musings

KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

As I was lounging in the diocesan hot tub the other day, I got a page about a visitor to see me. So I teleported down to the lobby of the pastoral center to see who it was.

To my horror and deep chagrin, the devil was waiting on me. He was perusing the latest issue of The Catholic News & Herald.

"Someone actually lets you print this stuff, Kevy-boy?" he asked with a grin.

"What can I do for you, Lu?" I asked. Lucifer often stands out in the parking lot and makes faces at our windows to pester us. By this point, he and I were on a first-name basis.

"I would like to run an ad," he stated.

"An ad?" I was skeptical. "For what?"

"Let's talk in your office, and I'll tell you all about it."

So we teleported back upstairs. The devil's arrival triggered the intruder alert system, and after I assured the diocesan SWAT team that Lu was my guest, we proceeded to my office.

He tossed a mockup of the ad on my desk.

"I can't let you run an ad for an abortion clinic!" I exclaimed.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Abortion is against church teaching," I reminded him. "It's murder."

"Baloney," he huffed. "It's simply the 'termination of pregnancy by the induced removal of an embryo or fetus (that is incapable of survival outside the body of the woman) which results in the death of the embryo/fetus.'"

"You don't actually expect me to believe that," I said.

"Of course not," he replied. "Heck, even I know abortion is murder. Why do you think I'm up here trying to place this ad. I've got to stoke the fires, so to speak. So, what kind of price are we looking at for the ad? Are there any discounts for fallen heavenly creatures?"

"Hold up," I said. "You admit that abortion is murder?"

"Do you think these horns make me stupid?" he asked. "If I recall correctly, it was I who came up with the word 'fetus.' Rather convenient, don't you think?"

"How so?" I asked.

"An unborn baby's heart begins to beat between 18 and 25 days after conception. Its brain begins to function as early as 40 days!" said the devil. "How can a human with a heart beat and brainwave activity not be considered a living being? So 'fetus' is a comfortable word to help people sleep at night."

"Some people say it's still a woman's choice because it's her body," I said.

"I've heard that one," laughed Lucifer. "But when did the government stop telling people what they can do with their bodies? People want to put drugs in their bodies, but lawmakers say no. People want tattoos on their bodies, but that's illegal in some states, especially for minors. I could go on."

"But, have you ever noticed it's only a 'fetus' when it's to be aborted?" he continued. "I mean, does anyone get invited to fetus showers? Does anyone ask a pregnant mother how the little fetus is doing? And, by golly, you'll never hear an expectant mother exclaim: 'I just felt the fetus kick!'"

He leaned back in the chair, plopped his hooves up on my desk and lit one of my cigars.

"What about abortions in cases of rape and incest?" I posed.

"Bah!" said the devil. "Pregnancy from rape is extremely rare. A study of 1,000 rape victims reported no pregnancies. Besides, the circumstance under which the baby was created has no bearing on its value — it's still a human being. The only ones who really benefit from keeping abortion legal are the ones who profit from it. Speaking of which, can we get back to my ad now?"

"So, if you know abortion is the murder of unborn children, how can you support it?" I asked.

He leaned forward. "What? Do I look like 'the Church Lady' to you?"

"No, but you're supposed to corrupt souls, not support the murder of unborn babies," I alleged.

"Four thousand abortions take place in the United States every day. As long it continues in this country, souls are being corrupted, morals are fading and good people are failing," said Lucifer.

"Abortion is barbaric, it's true, but the more people stand up for it, the further they move away from that goody-two-shoes upstairs," he said. "People don't know that, and that works out well in the end for me."

I was troubled. Before I could respond, the Gold Phone rang. It's my direct line to the Vatican.

"Murray!" shouted the pope. "Get that devil out of there! He'll stain the rug!"

Unbeknownst to many, the pope actually monitors all dioceses on view screens in a massive control room. Never one to disobey the Holy Father, I quickly grabbed the devil by the neck and dragged him to the window.

"Sorry, Lu, I've got to get thee behind me," I said, and tossed him out onto the street.

He was none too happy, and began to raise Hell — literally — when the bishop's helicopter swooped in over the horizon, back from a conference.

"We'll continue this another day, Kevy-boy," said Lucifer, waving his fist at me. "Besides, I'm late for brunch with Barbra Streisand."

As he scurried off, I glanced down at his ad, still on my desk. Sadly, abortion is still legal in this country, and 1.6 million women get abortions per year. How, I wondered, could the most advanced nation on Earth still condone the senseless killing of the most precious, the most innocent, especially when even the devil knows it's wrong?

There is no discount for fallen angels. But will there be salvation for a society that doesn't change its sinful ways?

Soaking again in the diocesan hot tub, I envied those who were rallying in Washington for the annual March for Life, for I knew God would be there with them, wearing his hi-tops, marching along, hoping to one day win the good fight.

Resolutions of the spirit

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

Some years are tougher than others. This past year was especially rough for a number of people I know. From financial and health problems to family and work issues, many folks struggled with troubles, large and small, in 2003.

It makes me think this is going to be a big year for New Year's resolutions. After all, it's when we feel most vulnerable that we try to exercise some control over our lives. I applaud people who make an effort to improve their health, whether by losing weight (a perennial resolution favorite) or exercising or quitting smoking or drinking. I respect those men and women with financial problems who want to change careers or start a business. And I particularly take off my hat to the resolution-makers who are trying to improve family or other personal relationships.

None of these goals are easy, though certainly worth the efforts it will take to succeed. The fact is, we do have great power over our lives. Not total power, of course, or the world would be populated by healthy, wealthy, slim and successful people who are respected and beloved by everybody else. The last time I looked, this wasn't the case.

Still, we do have choices to make each day that reflect what we do and who we are. We don't have to be rich to be generous, or healthy to use what strength of body and mind we have to help others. Our attitudes and our decisions shape our lives and our achievements. To that end, I believe we need to pay more attention to the aims of our hearts and the desires of our souls, and to commit ourselves to some spiritual resolutions.

I don't know that the New Year had anything to do with it, but Jonathan Edwards, the famed 18th century New England theologian and preacher, had some ideas on the subject of resolutions for the spirit. Here's how he put it:

"Resolved, to live with all my might while I do live.

"Resolved, never to do anything I should despise or think meanly of in another.

"Resolved, never to do anything out of revenge.

"Resolved, never to do anything which I should be afraid to do if it were the last hour of my life."

These ideas seem to me like a pretty good start. Yet, nurturing any worthwhile habit of the heart, from developing a prayer life to showing greater charity to neighbors, takes time and practice — and being willing to focus on small choices, rather than waiting for the big moment for us to prove ourselves.

Once, I saw a frail, elderly woman in a nursing home. She offered coffee to a guest, and although she was a bit slow and unsteady, the woman managed the courtesy, saying, "My mother used to tell me to look each day for something I could do for another to make that person's day a little easier. I've done it every day of my life."

Without simple, everyday actions, we will never succeed in any resolution. Here's hoping today's choices do good for body and soul — our own and those around us.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "Decide for Yourself," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

Unsung heroes

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

There is an often overlooked group of unsung heroes whose praises need to be sung more often. They're the millions of people devoted to looking after people who no longer can take care of themselves.

They may be a wife or husband attending to a spouse, parents devoted to children with lifelong disabilities, children making a home for aging parents, parishioners providing hospice care or a loving person nursing a friend.

The word "hero" has Greek roots encompassing the notions of "warrior" and "service."

The battlefield of a caregiver may be very limited. They may spend their time in a restricted room with a patient confined to bed or within the four walls of a home. Their service may take the form of driving the same monotonous route daily to and from a closed-in person's residence.

The enemies caregivers encounter have many faces: fear, sorrow, suffocation, anger and self-reproach.

Some caregivers face the constant fear of not having the strength to continue giving ceaseless care. They worry about becoming depressed because of working in a disheartening situation. They fear the financial means needed to maintain quality care will run out. And there is the apprehension from constantly being reminded that they, too, could end up this way.

Our memory can turn into an enemy. Thoughts of when parents or friends were healthy can turn into haunting memories. Suddenly there is the realization that with sorrow comes a heavy heart.

Caregiving many seem noble, but time has a way of wearing down noble endeavors. The close proximity between caregiver and patient morning, noon and night can feel suffocating. Caregivers may literally sacrifice their lives.

In some cases, these restrictions, fears and sorrows play themselves out in anger. Down deep, caregivers realize such anger reflects the frustration of helplessly sitting by and watching a loved one suffer. With the anger, however, come self-reproach and the question: "What could I have done better to prevent this?"

This anatomy of caregiving might make us want to avoid it. But when we look more closely, we find caregiving epitomizes the essence of life, especially our life. Christ came to teach us God's greatest lesson: "No greater love does one have than to give one's life for another."

We don't have to look far to find Christ's love. Millions of the greatest warriors known to humankind live in our midst ennobling our culture with selfless love.

Caregivers, thanks for all you do, and may God give us the grace to imitate you!

Fear of disapproval

Only you should control your life

Spirituality for Today

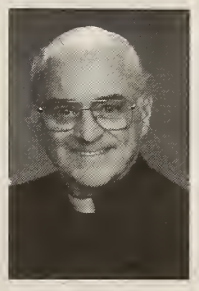
FATHER JOHN CATOIR
CNS Columnist



A woman once came to see me for advice. She was dressed strangely. Draped in neat layers of olive drab material, she looked like a high-class bag lady.

We talked for nearly an hour, and she kept putting herself down. I asked her why she chose to dress in that style, and she answered, "I guess it's because I don't want people to expect too much of me." Wow!

Her fear of disapproval had led her to overcompensate, thereby ensuring the very result she dreaded. Her fear of others' high expectations caused her to dress weirdly and be miserable.

Since no one can control the feelings or opinions of others, why do so many people give the power to control their lives to others?

Only you should control your life. The thoughts you think will in turn create your emotional state of being.

How does one get from fear to freedom? Control your thoughts by accepting yourself. Faith can help you find the inner freedom you need because faith teaches that God loves you, warts and all.

Think positive thoughts instead of fearful thoughts, and you gradually will be able to climb out of the rut. It can be done.

A friend wrote to me recently about how she was too hard on herself. She had read about an attorney who lived in fear of losing a case. If he did, he thought his peers would no longer respect him.

However, he soon discovered that his colleagues liked him better when he occasionally lost because then they saw him as a more human person.

It turns out that being perfect does not always win respect. Having personal integrity is more important. If you slip and fall, so be it. Get up, and begin again.

This same friend mentioned an article by Shel Silverstein called "The Missing Piece." It is a parable about a circle that had a broken section. There was a missing piece in its circumference, and because it was incomplete it could roll along only very slowly. As it did, it chatted with the worms and admired the beautiful flowers. Then one day it found the missing piece, and fit it back. Now the circle was perfect again.

It quickly began rolling along at a rapid speed. How different the world seemed when it went fast. But gradually the circle realized that by being perfect it went too fast and, in the process, lost the advantage of mingling with the beauty all around it.

The lesson is that, in some strange way, we are more whole when we are broken. Being acceptable to the world is not as important as being at peace with who you are.

God doesn't ask us to be perfect. We don't have to win everyone's approval to please him. All we have to do is accept ourselves just as we are and try to hold on to our integrity.

The Lord didn't order us never to make a mistake. What he said was, "Come to me you who are burdened, and I will refresh you."

The writer concluded her letter with these words: "And in the end, if we are brave enough to love, strong enough to forgive, generous enough to rejoice in another's happiness and wise enough to know there is enough love to go around for us all, then we have achieved a fulfillment that no other living creature ever will."

Good Shepherd Church home to growing Catholic communtiy

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Dedicated in November 1989, Good Shepherd Church in King celebrated its expansion with a dedication ceremony April 28, 2003.

Good Shepherd Church
105 Good Shepherd Drive
King, NC 27021
(336) 725-9200

A mission of St. Benedict the Moor Church in Winston-Salem
Vicariate: Winston-Salem
Pastor: Jesuit Father Lawrence J. Hunt
Number of Households: 260

Jesuit Father Lawrence J. Hunt

KING — During the summer of 1981, then-Bishop Michael J. Begley established a Catholic mission in the small Stokes County town of King north of Winston-Salem.

Excited by the prospect of gathering for Masses in town, local Catholics met in the recreational center on Aug. 24, 1981, marking the first official assemblage of the community that would later become known as Good Shepherd Church.

Catholics in King met with Father Edward Sheridan, then pastor of Our Lady of Mercy Church in Winston-Salem, about the practical and spiritual benefits of initiating missionary activity in town. As a result, King became a mission of Our Lady of Mercy Church.

Catholics began filling the pews of King Moravian Church on Sept. 19, 1981 for Father Sheridan's Saturday evening liturgies. Father Sheridan, now pastor of St. Aloysius Church in Hickory, served the King community with Our Lady of Mercy Church's parochial vicar, Father Francis Cancro, who now ministers to St. Eugene Church in Asheville.

In July 1982, Father Carl Del Giudice succeeded Father Cancro in Winston-Salem, and much of his priestly duties involved service to the King mission.

By then, the mission had begun to organize ministries and outreach programs serving the Catholic and local communities. The mission hosted a vacation Bible school that summer, an altar server program was established and a religious education program for children was underway by the fall.

In 1984, the James O'Connell family donated 10 acres from their homestead for the building of a church. The mission community became known as Good Shepherd Church, and the pastors of Our Lady of Mercy Church continued to serve both communities.

Parishioners in King began the formal process of building their church in 1986 by developing a parish mission statement and parish profile. In August 1987, Jesuit Father Thomas Gaunt was named pastor of St. Benedict the Moor Church in Winston-Salem, and Good Shepherd Church has been served by pastors from that parish since that time.

The Catholic community began the first construction phase in 1988, which led to the building of a church facility including reception and classroom areas. In November 1989, then-Bishop John F. Donoghue dedicated the building that could accommodate 95 people.

Jesuit Father Lawrence J. Hunt was named pastor of Our Lady of Mercy and Good Shepherd churches in July 1990. A growing religious education program prompted the need for a small classroom building to be added to the property.

Good Shepherd Church celebrated the elimination of the church debt in November 1997, and in January 1998, the Diocese of Charlotte granted permission to initiate the next phase of development.

By 1998, the Catholic community in King was comprised of parishioners from Stokes, Forsyth, Surry and Yadkin counties. Promoting a hospitable family atmosphere with an emphasis on youth, Good Shepherd Church developed an active religious education program, youth group and participation by youth in the liturgies. Members of all ages became involved in a variety of community outreach programs.

A steady increase in the congregation over the years demanded a larger facility; during the holidays, the mission had to use the local elementary school gymnasium to accommodate everyone for Mass. The capital campaign to expand the church began in 2000 and construction began in 2002. To stay within budget, the church utilized available materials from other churches, such as Stations of the Cross from St. Benedict the Moor Church and pews from Holy Cross Church in Kernersville. The new altar was crafted from lumber of a fallen tree in a parishioner's yard.

Bad weather delayed the original December dedication ceremony, but on April 28, 2003, Bishop Emeritus William G. Curlin presided over the dedication of the expanded Good Shepherd Church.

The old church became the narthex for the new Good Shepherd Church which has four times the space and can accommodate more than 400 people. The facility features two large classrooms that can also function as crying rooms. A balcony area houses the electronic equipment.

Father Hunt, now pastor of St. Benedict the Moor Church in Winston-Salem and Good Shepherd, said Good Shepherd Church now has a regular Sunday Spanish Mass for the Hispanic members of its community. He said the Good Shepherd's English-speaking members are extremely welcoming of the Hispanic members and are eager to get them more involved within the church.

In the future, the Good Shepherd congregation would like to build an education building and social hall. In the meantime, the mission continues to flourish, a testament to the dedication of its many members.

SOUTHEAST FIRE RALLY presented by Good News Ministries

EXPERIENCE THE 'NEW SPRINGTIME' OF THE THIRD CHRISTIAN MILLENNIUM

FAITH
—a challenge to Catholics to renew and deepen their relationship with the Lord.
RALPH MARTIN
Ralph is the founding President of Renewal Ministries, a Catholic mission organization, and hosts a popular weekly television series, The Choices We Face. Ralph is also the founding editor of New Covenant magazine and author of several books. He presently leads The Word of God, an ecumenical Christian community in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

INTERCESSION
—a call to united prayer as our most important spiritual weapon available for renewing the face of the earth.
SR. ANN SHIELDS, SGL
Sr. Ann is the superior of the Servants of God's Love in Lansing, Michigan, and is a regular co-host on the television program, The Choices We Face. She also hosts a radio program, Food for the Journey. She is the author of several books, including Fire in My Heart, and is a frequent conference speaker.

REPENTANCE
—an exhortation to turn away from sin to a Christ-centered, Spirit-filled life.
FR. MICHAEL SCANLAN, TOR
Fr. Michael is the Chancellor and former President of Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio, and was ordained in 1964. In 1990, he was awarded the Cross Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice by Pope John Paul II. He has authored several books including his autobiography, Let the Fire Fall.

EVANGELISM
—an invitation to spread the Good News of salvation and the gift of authentic Catholicism.
PETER HERBECK
Peter is Director of Missions at Renewal Ministries and has served numerous retreats, conferences, rallies, and events around the world. Much of his work has been devoted to helping equip Catholics for ministry through training in the exercise of spiritual gifts. Peter and his wife Debbie have four children and live in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

CLOSING LITURGY
CELEBRANT & HOMILIST
MOST REV. ROBERT J. BAKER, STD
Bishop Baker is shepherd to Catholics throughout the state of South Carolina. He has served as a pastor, counselor, mentor, and professor during his priesthood and was appointed as the 12th Bishop of Charleston in 1999 by Pope John Paul II.

"My hope and prayer is that all who attend the FIRE Rally will experience a deeper conversion, a greater desire for reconciliation, and a willingness to be more fully involved in the New Evangelization to which our Holy Father has called us in the new millennium."
—Most Reverend Robert J. Baker, STD
Bishop of Charleston

FIRE
A CATHOLIC ALLIANCE OF FAITH, INTERCESSION, REPENTANCE, AND EVANGELISM
CHARLOTTE BOBCATS TRAINING CENTER
FORT MILL, SOUTH CAROLINA
(I-77 exit 88)

SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 2004
9:00 am – 6:00 pm
(Doors open at 8:00 am.)
DYNAMIC, INSPIRED MUSIC BY HEARTS OF FIRE
Bookstore & Ministry Fair

FURTHER INFORMATION
Phone: (704) 521-9949
Email: carolinaevents2@aol.com
ONLINE REGISTRATION:
http://www.fireministry.org/charlotte

FC28
C363c

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

JANUARY 23, 2004

SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE

VOLUME 13 Nº 17

Parish Profile: Immaculate Conception Church

| PAGE 12

Victory roar

COURTESY PHOTO

To show support for the Carolina Panthers, Charlotte Catholic High School students were permitted to break from their dress code and wear Panthers attire Jan. 15.

Charlotte Catholic wins wager with Philly school

CHARLOTTE — Panther fans at Charlotte Catholic High School are reveling in victory.

Not only did the Carolina Panthers beat the Philadelphia Eagles in the championship football game Jan. 18, but Charlotte Catholic won its friendly wager with Father Judge High School in Philadelphia.

Because the Panthers won 14-3, Father Joseph Campellone, Father Judge High School's president, must award Gerald Healy, Charlotte Catholic's principal, with an authentic Philadelphia cheese steak.

If the Eagles had won, Healy would have sent Father Campellone Carolina barbecue, donated by the Ole Smokehouse in Charlotte. However, Healy asked Jennifer Johnson, Charlotte Catholic's director of development, to send barbecue to Father Judge High School as a friendly gesture.

To show their support for the Panthers, Charlotte Catholic students broke from their dress code on Jan. 15 to wear Carolina Panthers attire.

"We wanted the students to be involved in the excitement and this gives them a chance to sport their favorite Panthers wear," said Johnson. "It's a great way for us to support the Panthers as a school community."

Bush guest worker proposal raises hopes, leaves questions

Plan will not benefit North Carolina Hispanics, says Hispanic ministry director

BY PATRICIA ZAPOR
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President George W. Bush's new guest worker proposal may address some of the goals of Catholic and other immigrant advocates, but they say they are worried about his plan's lack of details.

Bush on Jan. 7 announced a proposal for allowing temporary workers from other countries to be admitted to the United States to take jobs that employers cannot fill with people already in the country. The plan would include giving at least some of the estimated 8 million or more illegal immigrants already in the United States permission to stay here temporarily, as long as employers demonstrate a need for their labor.

Advocates who work with immigrants raised doubts about whether Bush's proposals will turn into the legislation

See WORKER, page 4

Knights of St. John take up call to serve

FIRST N.C. COMMANDERY ESTABLISHED AT OUR LADY OF CONSOLATION

BY STEPHEN UZZELL
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLOTTE — New defenders of the faith have planted roots in North Carolina.

Twenty men of the Knights of St. John Commandery No. 586 and 20 women of the St. Agatha Ladies Auxiliary No. 497, Knights of St. John International were officially recognized by their fellow parishioners at Mass at Our Lady of Consolation Jan. 18.

The Mass culminated a weekend of preparation and initiation for the first Knights of St. John commandery in North Carolina. Their retreat,

See KNIGHTS, page 6

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

St. Agatha Ladies Auxiliary No. 497, Knights of St. John International lead the opening procession at the installation Mass at Our Lady of Consolation Jan. 18.

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
S235 P2
#4208364
#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275

Pastoral councils
Good counsel stressed in Diocese of Charlotte
| PAGE 5

Culture Watch
Books explore Flannery O'Connor's works
| PAGE 8

Perspectives
Columns, Pope Speaks, Photo meditation
| PAGES 10-11

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

RECONCILING FOR PEACE

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Rabbi Elio Toaff of Rome greets Pope John Paul II following the "Concert of Reconciliation" at the Vatican Jan. 17. Looking on is Imam Abdulawahab Hussein Gomaa of Rome. The pontiff called on Jews, Muslims and Christians — "believers in the one God" — to work for "sincere reconciliation" and peace in the world.

At reconciliation concert, pope urges all faiths to find peace

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Christians, Muslims and Jews "must find within ourselves the courage for peace," Pope John Paul II told religious leaders gathered at the Vatican for a "Concert of Reconciliation."

"Jews, Christians and Muslims cannot accept that the earth be afflicted by hatred, that humanity would remain involved in wars without end," the pope said at the Jan. 17 concert with performers and spectators from the three faiths.

The program began with the world premiere of "Abraham," a motet commissioned for the evening and written by U.S. composer John Harbison.

Pope John Paul said the Abraham motet and Gustav Mahler's "Second Symphony," also called the "Resurrection Symphony," remind people that Christians, Muslims and Jews recognize Abraham as their father in the faith and they believe they will be reunited with God at the end of time.

"The history of relations among Jews, Christians and Muslims is marked by lights and shadows and, unfortunately, it has known painful moments," the pope said. "Today one feels a pressing need for a sincere reconciliation among believers in the one God."

The pope said God's words are addressed to every person, who one day will be called to account for how he or she has lived.

"The hope that we express together is that people will be purified of the hatred and evil that continually threaten peace and that they will learn to reach out to each other with hands that know no violence but are ready to offer aid and comfort to those in need," Pope John Paul said.

Among those present at the concert were Rabbi Yona Metzger, chief Ashkenazi rabbi of Israel, and representatives of the Jewish community and Jewish organizations in Italy, Poland, France, Brazil and the United States.

The Muslim representatives included members of the Muslim community of Rome and representatives of Islamic organizations in Libya and Saudi Arabia.

Abdellah Redouane, general secretary of the Islamic Cultural Center of Italy, said the concert was a "great initiative" for bringing together members of the three monotheistic religions.

"This concert was an occasion to reflect not on that which divides us, but that which unites us, which is more important," Redouane said.

He also said the pope's constant appeals for peace and reconciliation "remind us of the road to follow."

Also attending the concert were Anglican, Orthodox and Protestant representatives and dozens of cardinals and bishops.

Chaldean archbishop says Iraqis not ready for direct elections

ROME (CNS) — While the Iraqi people have a right to control their country's destiny, they are not ready for direct elections, said Chaldean Archbishop Louis Sako of Kirkuk, Iraq.

Thousands of Iraqis marched in Baghdad, Iraq, Jan. 19 to show their support for a call by Shiite leader Ayatollah Ali Sistani for direct elections of a new Iraqi government by May.

The U.S.-appointed administration of Iraq has said direct elections could not be arranged that quickly; the current U.S. plan is for members of the U.S.-appointed governing council to choose members of a national assembly by May 30. The assembly would appoint a transitional government that would take power July 1.

In a Jan. 20 interview, Archbishop Sako said, "the Iraqi people are not yet ready" for direct elections. "They must be prepared; they need to assimilate democracy; they must learn to respect and accept others."

"The people, however, are tired of words," he said. "After 35 years of daily suffering and repression, they now want facts and are not content with promises."

The violence in the country, he said, is partially a sign of frustration.

"Behind these attacks there are some people who do not want to see Iraq progress, some who are against the American presence, foreign forces, the unemployed who have lost all hope, parasites who love to fish in troubled waters, and criminals released from prison," he said.

The archbishop appealed for international help, especially from Iraq's Arab neighbors, in rebuilding the country and creating jobs.

Diocesan planner

ALBEMARLE VICARIATE

ALBEMARLE — The Forever Young Club of Our Lady of the Annunciation Church, 416 N. 2nd St., meets the first Wednesday of each month in the Family Life Center at 10 a.m. For details, call Gerald Maiden (704) 982-5261.

BOONE VICARIATE

SPRUCE PINE — St. Lucien Church, 695 Summit Ave., offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of each month following the 9 a.m. Mass with benediction at 4 p.m.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

MINT HILL — Looking for a way to get closer to God this year? Put your new year's resolution into practice by taking the Alpha Course. Alpha is a video lecture series and supper club that meets Friday nights through March 19. Register by calling (704) 573-7021 or e-mail mcnuccie1@bellsout.net.

CHARLOTTE — All women are invited to join Women in the Word for weekly gatherings for prayer, reflection on Sunday scripture, music and sharing experiences of Christ in daily life. The group meets each Thursday, 9:45-11:45 a.m. in the family room of St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. For details, call Linda Flynn at (704) 366-9889. For childcare reservations, call Jurga Petrikene at 704) 907-0205.

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., is sponsoring a program to welcome back inactive Catholics and/or those who have left the Church but are interested in returning to the practice of the Catholic faith. The Catholics Returning Home series will meet Jan. 11-Feb. 15, 3:30-5 p.m. For more information, call Sue Johnson at (704) 333-8028.

CHARLOTTE — The St. Maximilian Kolbe Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order gathers the first Sunday of each month at 2 p.m. at Our Lady of Consolation Church, 2301 Statesville Ave. Those interested in learning more about the SFO and the Franciscan way of life are invited to attend. For more information, call Skyler Harvey, SFO, at (704) 545-9133.

CHARLOTTE — The Happy Timers of St. Ann Church meet the first Wednesday of each month with a luncheon and program at 1 p.m. in the parish activity center, 3635 Park Rd. All adults age 55 and older are welcome. For more information, call Charles Nesto at (704) 398-0879.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

BELMONT — Father Joe Zuschmidt and Dennis Teall-Fleming will host an Evening of Conversation on the past and present challenges of the sexual abuse crisis the Catholic Church is facing. Topics will include what impact the crises have had on the Catholic Church as a whole, Catholics themselves and how well the Catholic Church is responding to the crises. The conversation will take place Feb. 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Family Center of Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St. For details, call Dennis Teall-Fleming at (704) 825-9600 ext. 26.

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

JANUARY 23, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 17

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except for Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks during June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per year for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserves the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deemed appropriate. We do not recommend, guarantee any product, service or benefit claimed by our advertisers. Second-class postage paid at Charlotte NC and other cities. POSTMASTER: Send address corrections to The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope says feminine genius needed in age of insecurity, confusion

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The mission of every woman is to recognize and live her vocation of feminine genius, especially in an age of insecurity and confusion, said Pope John Paul II.

"Humanity has noticed with growing intensity the need to offer meaning and purpose in a world in which every day new problems crop up that generate insecurity and confusion," said the pope in a speech to participants of a national congress sponsored by the Italian Women's Center.

Given the growing participation of women in civil, economic, religious and family life, the pope said, "This asks of you your constant attention to the problems that emerge and your generous foresight in confronting them."

Citing his 1999 apostolic letter on women, the pope said, "A woman's dignity is closely connected with the love which she receives by the very reason of her femininity; it is likewise connected with the love which she gives in return."

He said it was important women keep alive an awareness of this fundamental vocation of fulfilling oneself through the giving of love.

"This genius ensures a sensitivity for human beings in every circumstance, because they are humans," the pope said.

"The moral and spiritual strength of this vocation springs from the awareness that God entrusts, in a special way, the human being to women," the pope said.

Vatican needs to add security, deal quickly with crime, judge says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The Vatican needs to consider ways to increase its security and deal more quickly with crimes committed on its territory, a Vatican judge said.

The Vatican's status as an independent geographic enclave surrounded by Italy that draws millions of foreign visitors — including a few criminals — means it should consider joining international structures aimed at promoting freedom of movement together with security, said Nicola Picardi, promoter of justice in the Tribunal of Vatican City State.

Picardi presented a summary of the Vatican civic court's activity in 2003 during a Jan. 16 meeting.

"The phenomenon of international terrorism seems, in fact, to require new forms of cooperation aimed at reconciling people's freedom to circulate with perfecting measures to safeguard security," Picardi said.

He suggested the Vatican join the Schengen convention, which not only eliminated the need for passports and visas between some European countries, "but also intensified the exchange of information, operational relationships as well as preventative and repressive initiatives aimed at safeguarding security."

The more information is shared and decisions are implemented quickly, he said, the better the Vatican can "face the question of security, even in times of increased tension."

The report said while Vatican City had 492 residents in 2003, it had some 18 million visitors, particularly drawn to St. Peter's Basilica and the Vatican Museums.

The "vast majority" of the 125 penal cases handled by the court in 2003 involved theft, for which more than 90 percent involved unknown suspects, he said. The remaining penal cases involved "unauthorized appropriations, swindles and insulting a public official."

His report dealt only with the cases brought to the court, not all of those reported to the Vatican police.

The length of time needed to handle penal and civil cases is due largely to most parties involved not living in Vatican City, so notifications must go through Italian authorities or diplomatic channels, said Picardi.

Joining the Schengen convention, he said, could speed up the processing of cases because notifying the parties involved and collecting information would be easier.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — The Adult Faith Formation ministry of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St., will present "A Tale of Faith and Medicine" Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. A physician will share his journey of faith that led him to truly give the gift of life to a young woman. For more information, call the church office at (336) 272-4681.

GREENSBORO — The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians, Guilford County, Division I, an Irish Catholic social, cultural and charitable inter-parish group will attend the 12:15 p.m. Mass at St. Benedict Church, 109 W. Smith St., in honor of St. Brigid Feb. 2. Lunch at Ganache will follow. All Catholic women of Irish birth or descent are welcome. RSVP to Elaine McHale, president, at (336) 292-1118. The regular LAOH meeting will be held Feb. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in the Kloster Center of St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St.

HIGH POINT — Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, Johnson St. and Skeet Club Rd., will offer free basic and intermediate Spanish classes Thursdays, 7-8:30 p.m. Classes begin Jan. 15 and end Feb. 19. To register, call Nancy Skee at (336) 884-0522.

HICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — A Charismatic Mass is celebrated the first Thursday of each month in Sebastian Chapel of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE, at 7 p.m. For further information, contact Joan Moran (828)-327-0487.

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For more information, call the church office at (828) 327-2341.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

SALISBURY — Sacred Heart Church, 128 W. Fulton St., celebrates a Charismatic and Healing Mass the first Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. Prayer and worship with prayer teams will be available at 3 p.m., and a potluck dinner will follow the Mass. Father John Putnam, pastor, will be the celebrant. For further information, call Bill Owens at (704) 639-9837.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

CANTON — Immaculate Conception Church, 42 Newfound Rd., will conduct one-hour sessions for five weeks beginning Jan. 29 on "The Precepts of the Catholic Church." Sessions will start at noon — bring your lunch; drinks will be provided. Discussions are open to anyone who wants to know more about church teachings or to review what you learned many years ago. For more information, call Dot and Chuck Luce at (828) 648-7369.

WAYNESVILLE— St. John the Evangelist Church, 234 Church St., offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Friday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 4:15 p.m. For information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707 or Christine Ryan at (828) 926-1331.

SYLVA — St. Mary Church offers Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament the first Saturday of every month following the 9 a.m. Mass until 3 p.m. For information, call (828) 586-9496.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — St. Leo the Great School, 333 Springdale Ave., will have an Open House Jan. 29, 9 a.m.-1 p.m. For details call Laurie at (336) 748-8252.

WINSTON-SALEM — Learn Natural Family Planning taught by the Couple to Couple League. A four-part series of classes will begin Feb. 15 at 1:30 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For registration and information, call Stephanie and Todd Brown at (336) 765-2909.

CLEMMONS — Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Thursday. Exposition begins at 6 p.m. and benediction is at 9 p.m.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

Is your parish or school having an event? Please submit notices for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

THIS MONTH IN —1996

Five recent college graduates began working in diocesan schools through the University of Notre Dame's Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE) program. ACE is a two-year service program offering college graduates the opportunity to serve as full-time teachers in under-staffed Catholic schools across the southern United States. ACE teachers live in community, which is considered a vital aspect of ACE. Research shows that one out of six first-year teachers leave teaching in their first year. In contrast, ACE boasts a 95 percent or higher retention rate every year, and one important reason for that success is the support ACE teachers receive in community.

Through three pillars — teaching, community and spirituality — ACE seeks to develop lifelong advocates and leaders in education.

"It's an opportunity for young Catholics to give back to their community in a service-type environment," said Jerry Healy, then-principal of Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School, when the ACE program first came to Charlotte. "It also exposes our kids to a unique set of young adults. ... It shows the kids that it's OK to be smart and you can be cool and be involved in education."

There are currently six ACE teachers working for Mecklenburg Area Catholic Schools.

BOY SCOUTS

ON MY HONOR TIMELESS VALUES

OF CHARLOTTE DIOCESE

BOY SCOUTS AND CUBS

Catholic Camporee 2004!

March 26 - 28

Camp Grimes, Dysartsville, NC

Make plans now to attend.

Call George Waddell - 828-437-8049

Guest worker program may prove inhospitable

WORKER, from page 1

necessary to make them happen, and whether anyone besides large employers and their workers would really benefit.

The chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Migration, Coadjutor Bishop Thomas G. Wenski of Orlando, Fla., praised Bush's decision to bring up the issue of immigration again with his proposal and his plans to renew bilateral migration talks with the government of Mexico.

In a Jan. 8 statement, he commended the president for acknowledging the need for worker protections and his call for the government to issue more "green cards," or permanent resident visas.

Bush's proposal, however, "does not provide a solution to the serious problems we experience as the result of continued undocumented migration and an immigration system that is broken."

Bishop Wenski said, "What is needed ... is truly comprehensive immigration reform that will provide opportunities for legalization for the undocumented currently living in the United States, temporary worker programs with full worker protections and a path to permanency, as well as a reform of our family immigration system that will allow immigrant families to reunite in a timely fashion."

"For the majority of the Hispanics in our diocese, the proposed legislation will not be beneficial," said Franciscan Sister Andrea Inkrott, directory of Hispanic ministry for the Diocese of Charlotte.

"It will be a temporary boom to the agricultural workers who want to come to work in our pine trees and tobacco fields, but only temporary," she said.

Migrant workers, many from Mexico, cut Fraser fir trees in North Carolina during the November-December Christmas season. Agricultural workers make more money in North Carolina than in Mexico.

Migrant workers at Barr Evergreens tree farm in Jefferson were part of a government-sponsored guest-worker program and legally qualified to work in the United States.

Rusty Barr, owner of Barr Evergreens, told The Catholic News & Herald he would be out of business if it wasn't for the migrant workers, as there aren't many Americans willing to work the long days for a short time each year.

"We've advertised for workers," said Barr in a Dec. 6, 2002 story. "We've only had one person apply, and when he found out what he had to do, he wasn't interested."

Bush said in a White House speech, "Our laws should allow willing workers to enter our country and fill jobs that Americans are not filling." But current laws make it difficult for immigrants to come into the country, especially for low-wage jobs, he said.

"Instead we see many employers turning to the illegal labor market," Bush said. "We see millions of hard-working men and women condemned to fear and insecurity in a massive undocumented economy."

His proposal would allow immigrants to obtain three-year permits to work in the United States. They would be entitled to bring family members in with them, as long as they can support them. And the immigrants could legally leave the country for visits and return without liability.

Currently, many illegal immigrants hesitate to return to visit their families for fear they will be unable to get back to their homes and jobs in the United States.

Bush's plan would include temporarily legalizing the status of illegal immigrants already here, as long as they are employed, he said, thereby bringing undocumented workers "out of the shadows" and under the protection of labor laws. It also would help the Department of Homeland Security keep track of what immigrants are in the country and where, he said.

If the jobs end or if their three-year permits are not renewed, the immigrants would have to return to their home countries. But Bush said he also would work with immigrants' home countries to give them financial incentives to return when their temporary permits expire.

Ouisa Davis, director of Migration and Refugee Services for the Diocese of El Paso, Texas, praised Bush for reopening immigration dialogue but worried about implications for families of temporary workers, especially children being uprooted after a three-year work permit expires and forced to return to inferior education systems in their home countries.

Davis said major industries are most likely able to meet government requirements for hiring guest workers, while small employers won't want to go through the bureaucracy. Administration officials who further detailed the president's proposal said guest workers would have to have a U.S. job already lined up to receive permission to enter the country.

Davis said the proposal as laid out by Bush would not do much to stop illegal traffic across the U.S.-Mexican border.

"Employers aren't going to hire someone sight unseen," she said. "And there doesn't seem to be a way someone can enter the country legally unless they already have a job."

"I commend the president for attempting to address the immigration issue again, but to really be effective, he and his advisors and Congress need to understand the reasons why people immigrate to the United States, mainly because they cannot survive or support their families in their countries of origin," said Sister Inkrott.

Editor Kevin E. Murray contributed to this story.

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Crews of workers, many from Mexico, cut Fraser trees in Jefferson and load them through a baler, which wraps them in nylon twine before they are shipped to markets throughout the country. President Bush on Jan. 7 announced a proposal for allowing temporary workers from other countries to be admitted to the United States to take jobs that employers cannot fill with people already in the country.

ONE LAST KISS OF YOUR LIFETIME

"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

"'Last Kiss' by Richard Staley is the superbly written story of Patrick, an ordinary man who is always busy...perhaps too busy to give one last kiss to one near and dear to him. Yet an extraordinary angel shows him the importance of never taking people for granted in this often chaotic and ever-changing world. 'Last Kiss' is commended as an especially thoughtful, original, and heartwarming novel."

—James A. Cox, Editor-in-Chief, The Midwest Book Review

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

To order, mail check or money order to: Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

K OF C

Please pray for the following priests who died during the month of February:

| | |
|---|---|
| Rev. Edward Beatty | 1990 |
| Rev. Lawrence Hill | 1985 |
| Bishop Michael J. Begley | 2002 |

Sponsored by the Knights of Columbus

Home is still the BEST place to be.

Our CAREGivers™ provide help at home that includes:

- Alzheimer's care
- Companionship
- Light housekeeping
- Errands & shopping
- Meal preparation
- Medication reminders

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

Call for a FREE, No-Obligation Appointment

704-344-0801 Bonded - Insured - Trained

Each Home Instead Senior Care office is independently owned and operated.

Pastoral councils should offer advice, not orders, pope says

Importance of good counsel stressed in Diocese of Charlotte

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Parish councils and diocesan pastoral councils are to offer advice, not orders, to the pastor and bishop, Pope John Paul II said.

"A balanced relationship between the role of the laity and that which properly belongs to the diocesan ordinary or pastor must be safeguarded," the pope told members of the Congregation for Clergy.

Meeting the congregation members Jan. 10, the pope said lay people must "take an active part in the mission of the church," offering their input and expertise, but without confusing their role with the role of the bishop or pastor.

"In exercising their office, legitimate pastors never are to be considered simply executors of decisions deriving from the majority opinions" of the parish or diocesan pastoral council, he said.

The hierarchical structure of the Catholic Church was willed by Christ, the pope said. While all members of the church have an equal dignity and a role to play, the roles are not the same for everyone.

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

Dr. Mark Fischer presents "Establishing and Renewing Pastoral Councils in the Diocese of Charlotte" at Our Lady of the Highways Church in Thomasville April 1, 2003.

Good advice

"The role of the pastoral council is to give the best advice possible," said Sister Brenda Hermann, a member of the Missionary Servants of the Most Blessed Trinity in Washington, D.C.

Sister Hermann, a consultant and facilitator to church organizations, led meetings at Our Lady of the Annunciation Church in Albemarle in 2003.

"I tried to get the pastoral council to look at what was hanging it up and why they couldn't get going," said Sister Hermann. "Once they were around the table and working together with the pastor, it became clear everyone was concerned about the parish, but they didn't know their roles or how to give counsel to the pastor."

Dr. Mark Fischer, noted expert in the pastoral council field, presented workshops to two gatherings of priests at St. Barnabas Church in Arden March 31, 2003 and at Our Lady of the Highways Church in Thomasville April 1, 2003.

The presentations were designed to help priests re-acquaint themselves in the importance of pastoral councils and their value to their ministry as pastors.

"I clarified a lot of misconceptions of pastoral councils, and shared some of the thinking of experts in the field," said Fischer.

Pastoral councils and pastors, through their interactions with parishioners, both have a sense of what is going on in the lives of parishioners, said Sister Hermann. When the two groups are brought together, progress can be made.

Learning from experience

"Wise leaders consult their wise followers, wise people consult with other wise people — they seek the wisdom of those who are knowledgeable. That goes back to ancient times," said Fischer.

"The whole concept of council as methodology is deep in Catholic tradition. In the New Testament, Peter would call together people for counsel," said Sister Hermann. "And councils are deep in American psyche as how we get consensus and direction."

Recommended by the Second Vatican Council of 1962-1965, the pastoral council is a new concept, said Fischer. Yet "the most recent statistics are that 82 percent of 19,000 Catholic parishes (in the United States) have pastoral councils," he said.

"In the church model, pastoral councils are only operatives of counsel when they are with the pastor, and when they are reflecting, dialoguing and planning the good of the whole," said Sister Hermann.

"I told the pastors having a pastoral council isn't a management trick to win people over, but rather should be motivated by a sincere desire to know the people so you can serve them better," said Fischer.

"The greatest expert in the world can't tell you how to preach to your people, because that expert doesn't know what your people need," he said. "The greatest catechist in the world can tell you about catechism in general, but can't tell you what particular issues face your church."

"People have a right and obligation to speak and pastors have an obligation and right to listen," said Cardinal Adam J. Maida of Detroit, a congregation member, during the Vatican meeting.

"We all have a responsibility to contribute to the life of the church," he said, but the roles people play are distinct based on whether they are lay or ordained.

"I don't know how we can have good parishes without pastoral councils," said Sister Hermann. "They help pastors think through what needs to be done for the overall good of the parish."

When a pastoral council is operating properly, it is using the gifts of the Holy Spirit, she said.

"For me, the format is about people praying together to heard the wisdom of the people," said Sister Hermann. "When that wisdom is gathered, the council becomes operative in assisting the pastor in making prudent decisions."

Editor Kevin E. Murray contributed to this story.

MORE INFORMATION

Please see the commentary on pastoral councils on page 10.

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926
McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.
Charlotte 704-334-6421
Pineville 704-544-1412
Mint Hill 704-545-4864
Derita 704-596-3291

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm
Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe
† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas
704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

More than 50 years of summer fun and growth in the Blue Ridge Mountains with outstanding Christian staff!
Please call for a brochure and free video or visit our Web sites.
Camp Merri-Mac for Girls
Merri-Mac for Girls
Timberlake for Boys
1123 Montreat Road
Black Mountain, NC 28711
828-669-8766
www.merri-mac.com
www.camptimberlake.com
CAMP TIMBERLAKE for boys

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection
Drivers wanted.
Lowest Prices
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

St. John Knights at Our Lady of Consolation

KNIGHTS, from page 1

initiation and installation were guided by Knights of St. John International officers from Cincinnati; Washington, D.C.; and Maryland.

The international fraternal and charitable organization serves in the United States, the United Kingdom, Nigeria, Liberia, Ghana, Trinidad and Tobago, among other countries.

"Organizations such as Knights of St. Paul, Knights of St. George and Knights of St. Louis decided they wanted to combine and form a stronger union," said Daniel Vaske, general and president of the Knights of St. John International. "So they met in Baltimore and Washington in 1884, and they formed the Roman Catholic Union of the Knights of St. John, incorporated in 1886 in the state of New York."

Inspired by the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, the Roman Catholic Union of the Knights of St. John was to be a living tribute to the knights who defended the Catholic Church in the medieval era. On May 6, 1886, the Ancient and Noble Order of the Knights of St. John was established in the United States.

The Knights and Ladies Auxiliary promotes youth participation through the Cadets and Junior Auxiliary for children ages 8-16. The organizations involve entire families and serve the church financially and through charitable works within their parishes and communities.

"The Knights and the Auxiliary support parishes financially, spiritually, and with the youth and the elderly," said Sister Iris J. Turner, a supreme second vice president of the ladies auxiliary.

PHOTO BY STEPHEN UZZELL

The new Knights of St. John International Commandery No. 586 are recognized during an installation Mass at Our Lady of Consolation Church in Charlotte Jan 18.

"We address the charities based on what the pastors ask us to do. We key on the needs of the church and the community around the church."

"Our international charity is St. Vincent de Paul Society," said Vaske. "We do a lot of work to raise funds, help them with providing service hours, and we help them by providing food drives and clothing drives."

Our Lady of Consolation Church's local commandery and ladies auxiliary will be part of the First Regiment of Maryland, reporting through the Baltimore-Washington Grand Commandery. There are seven Grand Commanderies within the United States: Baltimore-Washington Grand; Ohio Grand; Cincinnati Grand; Kentucky Grand; Indiana Grand; Michigan Grand; and Buffalo Grand.

During the installation Mass, the Knights and Ladies Auxiliary sat at the front of the church. The men were dressed in dark uniforms with gold sashes embroidered with Knights of St. John International emblems. The ladies wore white dresses with blue and gold sashes and white hats with the Knights emblems.

When the two groups stood to be recognized, the standing-room-only crowd from floor to balcony responded with resounding applause.

Father Jude Duffy, pastor of Our Lady of Consolation, was appointed spiritual director of the local commandery and ladies auxiliary. He said Msgr. Mauricio W. West, chancellor and vicar general of the Diocese of Charlotte, granted permission to initiate the local commandery.

"They've been great defenders of the church. In some of those countries where there were attacks on the (Catholic) Church, they defended the local Catholic churches even with their lives," said Father Duffy. "They always work for the good of the Catholic Church."

Father Andrew Tulay from St. John the Baptist Church in Columbia, Md., was one of the concelebrants at Sunday's installation Mass. He is also spiritual director of the local Kizito parish in Monrovia, Liberia, and recalled how Knights of St. John rescued a church during civil war hostilities in 1992.

"The rebels saw the church as opposition and thought we were hiding some political prisoners," said Father Tulay. "The members of the Knights of St. John ran to defend the church, to stop looters and to stop the rebels from vandalizing. The valuables of the church (the tabernacle, chalice and records), they took into the homes for safekeeping."

During the attack on the church, rebels set fires and threw a grenade inside where people had taken refuge in the sacristy, explained Father Tulay.

"And one of our commanders (of the Knights of St. John) ran and threw the grenade out, and he lost his arm," he said. "And when they set fire to the school, (the Knights) came up with water to put it out."

"That is what the fraternity is all about — to be there for each other in true Christian solidarity ... and to defend the principles, doctrines and values of the church," said Father Tulay, "... to stand for human rights and justice through the teachings of Jesus Christ ... and to endure, not be complacent, but to serve freely with your heart and .to speak out."

Contact Correspondent Stephen Uzzell, a parishioner at St. Luke Church in Mint Hill, by calling (704) 545-1224 or e-mail hatz@infionline.net.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CAREGIVERS: CAREGiving is a Joy! Join us in making a difference in the lives of the elderly. Non-medical companionship & home care. Flexible, part-time, day, evening & weekend hours available. Car needed. Home Instead Senior Care. Call 704.344.9739

DIRECTOR OF FAITH FORMATION: Experienced with master's in theology, religious education or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of faith formation to: Faith Formation Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Catholic Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org

DIRECTOR OF MUSIC MINISTRY: Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro, NC seeks a full-time professional with at least a bachelor's degree in music, and an in-depth knowledge of Roman Catholic liturgy. Must be fully competent in both organ and piano, and experienced in directing both adult and children's choirs. Responsible for all music activity in a church with over 2,300 families. Full benefits available. Applicants who meet these requirements should send a resume to: OLG Music Ministry, 201 South Chapman Street, Greensboro, NC 27403, or fax it to (336) 274-7326.

PC SUPPORT SPECIALIST: The Diocese of Charlotte is accepting applications for a full-time PC Support Specialist. This position is primarily responsible for maintaining and replacing all applicable computer hardware and software when needed. Applicant must have an Associate's Degree in Information Technology, Computer Science, or equivalent. Applicant must have at least one-and-one-half year's experience with pc upgrades and maintenance, and have at least one-and-a-half year's experience within a Networking environment and various Microsoft Operating Systems. EOE. Please forward resume and salary history by Jan. 29, 2004 to klgeter@charlottediocese.org or Director of Information Technology, 1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203-4003.

YOUTH MINISTER: Experienced with degree or certification in youth ministry, theology or related field. Send resume and statement of your vision of youth ministry to: Youth Ministry Search Committee, St. Paul the Apostle Church, 2715 Horse Pen Creek Road, Greensboro, NC 27410; fax (336)294-6149; email jmalmfelt@stpaulcc.org.

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704) 845-1416.

HOME: Available, that brick 4-bedroom, 2-1/2-bath country dream home with all appliances conveniently located on 17+ acres just south of Charlotte. Rent to own. (704)843-4436.

SENIOR ENTERTAINMENT: Strolling accordion for special theme dinner nights (German, Irish, Italian, etc.) or 1920 to 1950 music/history programs for luncheons. Bob Wilusz - 704-846-5782.

FOR RENT

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

ST. ANNE'S CATHOLIC SCHOOL
Bristol, Virginia

Position Available: Principal

Summary: Full-time position, beginning summer 2004, as principal of a Parish Catholic School with an enrollment of 300+ students, grades Pre-3 through 8. The principal must be a practicing Catholic who is able to articulate the school's mission and vision for the future, and possess the skills necessary for its implementation. Candidates must have a record of effective leadership with experience in educational programs, personnel management, finance, development, public relations, and community service.
Education/Certification: Master's Degree in Education/Administration. VA licensable.
Experience: Minimum ten years teaching/admin. experience in a Catholic School.
Salary: Based on diocesan scale, taking into account education and experience.
Application: Qualified candidates should forward a resume and cover letter to:
St. Anne Catholic Church, Search Committee, 350 Euclid Ave., Bristol, VA 24201
Closing Date: Application materials should be postmarked by February 27, 2004

Put away your apron tonight.

Give your order to the chef.

For the retirement lifestyle of choice, independence and flexibility, call today for pre-construction pricing. Reserve now — move later.

YOU MAKE THE DECISION.

PENNYBYRN
AT MARYFIELD
A Continuing Care Retirement Community

1315 Greensboro Road • High Point, NC 27260
336-886-4103 or 336-886-2444

Sponsored by the Sisters of the Poor Servants of the Mother of God.

Keeping TRACS on track

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Volunteers (from right to left) Anna Rounds, Jean Lawing, Anna Fitch, Anne Tompkins and Catherine Costa help insert pledge cards for the annual Triad Regional Area Catholic Schools campaign at the pastoral center in Charlotte Jan. 15.

DID YOU KNOW?

ST. FRANCIS DE SALES

Francis was a lawyer who became a priest and bishop of Geneva. He drew many back to God by his kindness and understanding. He wrote many books and is the patron of spiritual writers and Catholic journalists. He founded the Visitation order with St. Jane de Chantal. He died in 1622 and was declared a doctor of the church in 1877. His feast is Jan. 24.

KTC Transportation Co. Inc

CALL 704-532-7605

Convention Services
Airport
Hotel
City Tours
Groups
Long & Short Tours
Beach Vacations
Games
Sports
Special Events

Fax 704-532-7661

www.ktctransportation.com

15% off with this coupon

Now at 2 great locations!

The Catholic Company
Fine Catholic Books and Gifts

South Charlotte
The Catholic Company Outlet Store
228 Zimmer Rd
Fort Mill, SC 29715
803-396-5399 ext. 240
Mon-Fri: 10am – 5pm
5 min. south of Ballantyne and I-485
I-485 to Hwy 521 (Johnston Rd).
Go south approx. 5 miles. Shortly after crossing the state line, turn left at the BP station. Go ¾ mile and turn left into Zimmer Business Park - #228.
CatholicCompany.com

Grand Opening!
Lake Norman
The Catholic Company – Lake Norman
19905 W. Catawba Ave., Suite 106
Cornelius, NC 28031
704-655-9090
Mon, Wed, Thu, Fri: 10am – 6pm
Tue:10am – 7pm
Sat: 10am – 3pm
In Johnsbury Square – next to Rosetti's
I77 to Exit 28 Catawba Ave.
Go west for ½ mile.
The store is on the North side of street.
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Culture Watch

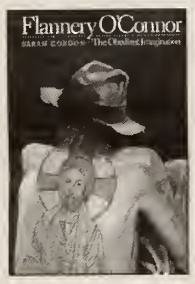
A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Two books explore Flannery O'Connor's works

REVIEWED BY MITCH FINLEY
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Most Catholic readers are probably aware that Flannery O'Connor (1925-1964) was a Catholic who wrote fiction, but many may not realize she was also sharp-as-a-tack in the spirituality department — which means, in the living-everyday-life-as-a-Catholic department.

To our great benefit, editor Robert Ellsberg in "Flannery O'Connor: Spiritual Writings" has gathered into one compact volume excerpts from O'Connor's fiction, letters and essays in which she wrote about religious and spiritual matters. Fordham University professor of English Richard Giannone has written the book's introductory es-



"Flannery O'Connor: Spiritual Writings," edited by Robert Ellsberg. Orbis Books (Maryknoll, N.Y., 2003). 173 pp., $15.00.

"Flannery O'Connor: The Obedient Imagination," by Sarah Gordon. University of Georgia Press (Athens, Ga., 2003). 296 pp., $19.95.

say, "Flannery O'Connor's Dialogue With the Age."

O'Connor would have smiled broadly, then laughed out loud, at the suggestion that she could serve as a spiritual adviser to anyone. But that only serves to put the stamp of authenticity on her words. I think one of the most important characteristics of a healthy Catholic spirituality is the ability and the inclination to laugh — especially at oneself. This is why a rigidly conservative spirituality, and a rigidly liberal spirituality, are both mere ideologies masquerading as piety.

An authentic Catholic spirituality is anything but narrow-minded or rigid. And so in O'Connor's words you will find liberation and joy, plus a no-nonsense honesty and clarity of thought that will sometimes knock your socks off and almost always delight you.

O'Connor avoided all pious platitudes. Reading her, you may find yourself blinking and saying, "What? What?" For example, writing to someone about to become Catholic, O'Connor said: "Having been a Protestant, you may have the feeling that you must feel you believe; perhaps feeling belief is not always an illusion but I imagine it is most of the time; but I can understand the feeling of pain on going to Communion and it seems a more reliable feeling than joy."

In other instances, O'Connor's words will seem like an honest dig in the ribs or a wake-up slap to the chops.

Thus, writing in 1962: "One of the effects of modern liberal Protestantism has been gradually to turn religion into poetry and therapy, to make truth vaguer and vaguer and more and more relative, to banish intellectual distinctions, to depend on feeling instead of thought, and gradually to come to believe that God has no power, that he cannot communicate with us, cannot reveal himself to us, indeed has not done so, and that religion is our own sweet invention." (We'll leave aside for now to what extent these words may apply to popular Catholicism in recent decades.)

"Flannery O'Connor: Spiritual Writings" is one volume that belongs in the hands of every thinking Catholic regardless of age or ideological inclinations. Her wisdom makes the leap from her mid-20th century era to our own with all its flags a-flying.

Meanwhile, "Flannery O'Connor: The Obedient Imagination" is written by Sarah Gordon, an English professor at Georgia College & State University in Milledgeville, Ga., O'Connor's alma mater in her hometown. Gordon has chaired the university's renowned symposia on O'Connor and edited The Flannery O'Connor Bulletin since 1983.

Gordon's book is a fine biographical work of literary criticism. Gordon, who has been teaching courses on Flannery O'Connor for 30-plus years, asks what inner struggles led O'Connor to write fiction that was disturbing, ironic, haunting and sometimes brutal. Much of this, Gordon suggests, came from the natural resistance of O'Connor's imagination to the obedience that was expected by the male-centered church, society and literary background of her time.

Gordon believes O'Connor was a writer whose environment was saturated in male presumption regarding women and creativity. "The Obedient Imagination" offers many new insights into O'Connor's growing up years as a dutiful, upper-class Southern daughter.

She also examines how O'Connor was influenced by her reading of James Thurber, Edgar Allan Poe, T.S. Eliot and others who, Gordon thinks, were negative toward women.

Not all readers will agree with all of Gordon's conclusions, but her book is loaded with thought-provoking material that will be of great interest to anyone serious about a study of Flannery O'Connor.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: FEB. 1, 2004

Feb. 1, Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle C Readings:

1) Jeremiah 1:4-5, 17-19
Psalm 71:1-2, 3-4, 5-6, 15, 17
2) 1 Corinthians 12:31-13:13
3) Gospel: Luke 4:21-30

BY JEAN DENTON
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

It's funny how people go "church shopping" on the premise that people should choose a church community that makes them feel comfortable.

The other day I happened to answer the parish phone after hours. The caller wondered if I could answer "some questions about your church." I thought maybe she was a publisher's representative or someone taking a survey, but it turned out she was a member of a neighboring parish, and there were some liturgical expressions in that church "I just don't like," she explained.

In another church I attended, it was the priest who caused people to go shopping. On numerous occasions, I heard the grousing expressed in almost these exact same words: "He makes me come out of church feeling like I'm a bad person. Going to church is supposed to make you feel good."

Not really. Since the beginning of humankind God's call to unselfishness and mercy has been roundly rejected by people who don't want to believe they aren't perfectly wonderful and who don't want to humble themselves to admit their sinfulness or do the hard work of changing their ways.

God knows this will happen when anyone carries his message into the world. He told Jeremiah as much: I'm appointing you a prophet so gird your loins. "They will fight against you."

Whether it's an individual or an entire faith community trying to insert into society the Christian call to justice and love, one can safely bet that a hew and cry will follow, and people will turn their backs. But for those willing to take on that task, there is good news in both the Old Testament reading and the Gospel for this week: God insists that his message will prevail. People can reject the message and the Christian life, and they can fuss and fight against the prophet, but Jesus remains unharmed as do those who hold to him.

Questions:

When do you recall witnessing rejection of someone speaking on behalf of Christian action? How can you bolster your courage to stand as a prophet of Jesus' message when the occasion presents itself?

Scripture to Illustrate:

"But do you gird your loins; stand up and tell them all that I command you Be not crushed on their account" (Jeremiah 1:17).

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 25 - JANUARY 31

Sunday (Third Sunday in Ordinary Time), Nehemiah 8:2-6, 8-10, 1 Corinthians 12:12-30, Luke 1:1-4; 4:14-21; Monday (Sts. Titus and Timothy), 2 Timothy 1:1-8, Mark 3:22-30; Tuesday (St. Angela Merici), 2 Samuel 6:12-15, 17-19, Mark 3:31-35; Wednesday (St. Thomas Aquinas), 2 Samuel 7:4-17, Mark 4:1-20; Thursday, 2 Samuel 7:18-19, 24-29, Mark 4:21-25; Friday, 2 Samuel 11:1-4, 5-10, 13-17, Mark 4:26-34; Saturday (St. John Bosco), 2 Samuel 12:1-7, 10-17, Mark 4:35-41

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF FEBRUARY 1 - FEBRUARY 7

Sunday (Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Jeremiah 1:4-5, 17-19, 1 Corinthians 12:31—13:13, Luke 4:21-30; Monday (The Presentation of the Lord), Malachi 3:1-4, Hebrews 2:14-18, Luke 2:2-40; Tuesday (St. Blase, St. Ansgar), 2 Samuel 18:9-10, 14, 24-25, 30—19:3, Mark 5:21-43; Wednesday, 2 Samuel 24:2, 9-17, Mark 6:1-6; Thursday (St. Agatha), 1 Kings 2:1-4, 10-12, Mark 6:7-13; Friday (St. Paul Miki and Companions), Sirach 47:2-11, Mark 6:14-29; Saturday, 1 Kings 3:4-13, Mark 6:30-34

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.
800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431
Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

'Teacher's Pet' gets A-plus

CNS PHOTO FROM BUENA VISTA PICTURES

In a scene from "Teacher's Pet," produced by Walt Disney Television Animation, Spot points out the missing link in Dr. Krank's formula for transforming animals into humans. This wacky and witty animated musical, based on the popular TV series about a dog questing to become a real boy, offers something for everyone, peppering it throughout with zany sight gags, whip-smart zingers, classic film references and even an educational musical number, all while smuggling under the cover of laughter a message about friendship and the dangers of science overstepping its boundaries. Brief, mildly crude humor. The USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is A-I — general patronage. The Motion Picture Association of America rating is PG — parental guidance suggested.

Screenwriting seminars for Christians slated for D.C., Hollywood

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — March 1 is the application deadline for a new pair of Christianity-based screenwriting seminars sponsored by Act One.

One seminar, to be held in Washington, will run May 9-June 5. The other, in Hollywood, will run July 5-31.

Faculty for the seminars have written for such films as "Batman Forever" and "Urban Legends" and for such television series as "Matlock" and "The Father Dowling Mysteries."

The seminars will cover the full range of elements for successful scriptwriting, including story choice, script structure, character development, industry access, how to pitch a script, and ethics and spirituality for entertainment professionals.

Each seminar is limited to 30 students. Tuition is $1,195 for each seminar. A limited number of partial scholarships is available in cases of genuine need. Housing is available at an additional cost.

Act One describes itself as an organization that endeavors to create a community of Christian professionals in the entertainment industry who are committed to excellence, artistry and personal holiness.

Application forms are available online at: www.actoneprogram.com, or by e-mailing: actone@fpch.org. Completed forms may be mailed to: Act One, 1763 N. Gower St., Hollywood, CA 90028; or faxed to: (323) 462-2550. More information is available by phone at: (323) 462-1348.

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

The Franciscan Center
Catholic Gift & Book Store
Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!
Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday
(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

DON'T PROCRASTINATE! CALL NOW!!
125,000 people will read these words this week!
Shouldn't they see YOUR COMPANY'S name here?
LOW ad rates - easy for small businesses and individuals, too!
Call (704) 370-3332 now!
THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

La Bella Sposa
the beautiful bride

Couture Wedding Gowns • Bridesmaids • Flower Girls • 1st Communion
130 Matthews Station
Charlotte, NC
phone :704.847.2255
www.labellasposa.net

Central Equity Mortgage
PRIME RATE FOR LIFE
Consolidate High-Interest Debt
100% Financing Programs
Low Interest & Interest-only Programs
Interest Rate: 3.75%*
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)
No Payment until March 2004!
No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs
TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams.
*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486
*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Working together: The role of pastoral councils

Guest Column

GEORGE K. COBB
Guest Columnist

Recently the Holy Father has expressed his concern over the balance between the roles of the pastor and the laity at the parish level. Some people will point to his comments and declare we are going back before Vatican II, and the laity will have no say in matters concerning the Church.

In actuality, we must read the comments in the light of the Scriptures and the traditions of the Universal Church, not in light of our own experience in America.

It has never been the policy in the Diocese of Charlotte that the role of the pastoral council is to make decisions for the pastor. This is neither our history nor our tradition. It has always been the policy, as is echoed by the members of the diocesan synod of 1987, that the pastoral and finance councils have an advisory/consultative role.

It is very clear from the comments made at the Jan. 10 meeting of the Congregation for Clergy that the form of pastoral council used here in the United States is held up as a wonderful example of lay participation in decision making.

So what is the role of the pastoral council? To understand it, we must first understand the role of the pastor. The pastor is charged by the bishop with responsibilities outlined in canon law, which are: liturgy and worship; word; Christian community; and outward mission.

The pastor's charge is for the entire territory (parish) under his charge, Catholic and non-Catholic alike. The pastoral council advises the pastor concerning these pastoral matters just as the finance council advises the pastor concerning financial matters. The laity's role is to use their knowledge of the community to advise the pastor concerning pastoral matters. But it is important for the faithful to recognize that it is the pastor's responsibility alone to make the final decision.

This may sound strange to democratic Americans who feel that a vote is required for every issue. It is not strange in either the Scriptures or the Tradition of the Church. But because it is the pastor's ultimate responsibility to make the final decision, that does not mean the laity have no voice and no role. These same traditions and Scriptures hold that important decisions should not be made by one person alone.

When we look in the Acts of the Apostles, we can see that the Apostles did not make an important decision without going to the community for advice and then praying as a community for guidance. There was never any question on the part of the faithful as to who was to make the final decision. But also there was no question that the Apostles knew that they must also consult with the community of the faithful, since it is in the Church as a whole we best come to an understanding of what the Spirit is trying to do within our lives and our Church.

The Second Vatican Council and Pope Paul VI insisted on the importance of pastoral councils on the local, regional and diocesan level. Pope John Paul II has repeatedly emphasized the same, expanding their scope and importance within the Church. Catholics today live in a time of unprecedented opportunities to be involved in the life of the Church and help guide the Church into a new century.

We as Catholics must now take seriously our role to assist the pastor in his ministry of the entire parish for, as Christians, it is our ministry as well.

Pope says peace of Christ will not be achieved through war

BY JOHN THAVIS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — Highlighting the theme of the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, Pope John Paul II said the peace promised by Jesus will never be won through war.

"The world yearns for peace, it needs peace today as yesterday, but often it seeks peace with improper means, sometimes even with recourse to force or through the balance of opposing powers," the pope said at his general audience Jan. 21.

"In such situations, man lives with a heart disturbed by fear and uncertainty. The peace of Christ, instead, reconciles souls, purifies hearts and converts minds," he said.

The pope pronounced his talk in the Vatican's audience hall before several thousand people, including ecumenical delegations and a choir of Orthodox Christians from Moscow.

The pope, who looked alert as he sat on his mobile throne, presided over prayers for Christian unity in several languages at the end of the audience.

The pope noted that the theme of this year's Christian unity week, "My Peace I Give You," was chosen by an ecumenical group in Aleppo, Syria. He recalled his visit to Syria in 2001 and said his meetings with Orthodox leaders there represented another significant step along the path of ecumenism.

He said that along with gestures from church leaders, however, the movement toward unity needs commitment by all Christians, engaged in a "profound spirituality of peace and pacification."

He acknowledged ecumenical difficulties between various Christian churches, but said the overall picture includes many positive developments, including progress in theological dialogue.

The Pope Speaks

POPE JOHN PAUL II

"Keeping in mind these positive signs, we shouldn't become discouraged in the face of old and new problems, but face them with patience and understanding, always counting on divine help," he said.

The prayers at the end of the audience were offered for the Christian churches in East and West, for the pope and other Christian and world leaders, for peace and for all those suffering from war and injustice in the world.

The brief prayer service had a pair of unusual guests: two lambs that were presented in baskets and blessed by the pope. The blessing is a traditional one that marks the Jan. 21 feast of St. Agnes, a Roman martyr who is often depicted with a lamb.

The lambs were carried up to the pope in separate baskets, their small heads peering over red and white garlands. One of them bleated after the papal blessing, prompting smiles in the audience hall.

The lambs are raised by Trappist monks who live near Rome's Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls. Their wool is shorn before Holy Week, and it is used to help make palliums, the circular bands of cloth presented to archbishops in an annual ceremony at the Vatican June 29.

Along the Good Shepherd's Path

PHOTO AND MEDITATION BY STEPHEN UZZELL

Not within these walls

But inside this heart,

Nor beneath this steeple

But where Jesus beckons.

— Christ-centered devotion

It still matters

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
GUEST COLUMNIST

National holidays are hard to dislike. But some of my friends have a difficulty with the one we celebrate this year on Jan. 19. That's Martin Luther King Day, set aside to remember the nonviolent contributions the Baptist minister and Nobel Peace Prize winner made to the battle for civil rights.

My friends acknowledge he was a great man who made a difference for the good. They are not callous to Rev. King's sacrifices, including his death at the hands of an avowed racist. They simply don't want to rehash history. They see the battle for civil rights as settled and Martin Luther King Day as superfluous. Said one fellow: "That's stuff from the 1960s with no particular meaning any more. Everyone enjoys equal rights today."

I know a man who begs to differ. His name is Gregory Allen Howard. He's a screenwriter and an African American. After winning a Christopher Award for his powerful movie "Remember the Titans," he agreed to be interviewed for our television series, Christopher Closeup.

I mentioned the scenes in the movie that highlighted racial bigotry and asked about his experiences. Howard said he had personally known the sting of prejudice many times. In particular, he recounted the humiliating incidents of being stopped while driving his car in Los Angeles. He'd done nothing wrong, wasn't speeding, hadn't rolled past a stop sign. But he was a black man driving through a wealthy white neighborhood, and that was enough for him to be interrogated. It's the reason he left L.A. and moved to Alexandria, Va., a city he sees as both integrated and harmonious.

It's important to mention that Howard didn't experience this racial harassment back in the '60s. The incidents are recent. Truth told, I had never, until that interview, imagined what it would be like to be stopped for having a different skin color. I've been stopped by police while driving, but it's usually for mistakes I made. Being singled out by race should be beyond imagining. Except that it isn't. It happens every day.

Yet few of us readily admit prejudices. One of my parishioners told me as much. Her name is Edna. She's 85 years old and is white. She was coming out of church recently and looked troubled. I asked her why.

"I saw your show with Gregory Allen Howard the other night."

"That's good," I answered.

"Well, it bothered me," she continued. "That story he told about the many times he was stopped by police officers. It made me uncomfortable and angry."

She went on to admit something she'd avoided saying for the first 85 years of her life: "I'd hate to be given a hard time for no good reason. And someone's color is just no good reason. For the first time, I tried to put myself in that man's place. And, Father Jim, it made me so mad to think that any person could be treated that way. It's just not worthy of us as Americans. It's just not something I imagine God would ever want."

This woman had finally understood that we are all entitled to be treated fairly and equally. And she found in her anger she didn't like an America that wasn't able to realize that. It's an anger she shared with Rev. King and Howard. It's an anger filled with justice. And it's the reason we need to set aside the third Monday in January, if only to remind us that we have not, as yet, truly overcome our bias, our prejudices, our bigotry and our fear of people just because they're different.

This year, let's ask ourselves: Am I a person who sees those of a different color as less significant? Or do I really see every person, equally, as a child of the Creator? Am I willing to uphold God's sense of justice?

Let's follow Edna's footsteps and place ourselves in the shoes of someone who has felt bigotry. That's the first step to purging our hearts of this sin that keeps us from being whole and holy.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "Respect, Understanding, Tolerance," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

What makes for a good parish?

The Human Side

FATHER EUGENE HEMRICK
CNS COLUMNIST

"What makes for a good parish?"

This question comes up with greater frequency. But why?

First and foremost, many parishes no longer have the luxury of several resident priests, and many worry about not having even resident pastors. They are faced with maintaining their quality without one of its main ingredients.

The need today for well-defined religious values is another reason for desiring a good parish. It is the primary place people look to for moral guidance.

Yet another reason is that parish life is essential to the people it serves. Parents seek guidance on parenting. The divorced, separated and singles need the camaraderie and caring, as do the elderly and the sick. Youth, who are in the critical years of their formation, are especially in need of good spiritual formation. Immigrants look to the parish as a new home.

Without sounding simplistic, a good parish is one focusing on the works of mercy. These include: instructing, advising, consoling, forgiving, bearing wrongs patiently, feeding the hungry, sheltering the homeless, clothing the naked, visiting the sick and imprisoned, and burying the dead. Among all these, giving alms to the poor is one of the chief witnesses to fraternal charity: It is also a work of justice pleasing to God.

When we reflect on the needs of parishioners, they boil down to the need for guidance, support and comfort. Families need guidance and support in keeping themselves together. Young people need spiritual guidance to handle the secular and often irreligious environment in which they live. Those whose marriages experience severe difficulties need advice and comfort. They also need to relearn the virtue of truly forgiving those who hurt them — and themselves.

The beauty of the works of corporal mercy is they point a parish toward the needs of its own members and toward the needs of others. The works of mercy encourage a parish to take a global view and not get locked into provincialism.

A parish practicing the works of mercy inspires its youth. Young people are idealistic and more service-oriented than are given credit. When a parish gives young people the opportunity to serve, it is amazing to witness their zest.

Today we have many wonderful parishes that are truly inspirational. When you look more closely at the reasons for this, you will find that they model the works of mercy in action.

Mary Stewart's Prayer

Parish Diary

FATHER PETER J. DALY
CNS Columnist

One of the most important jobs of the parish church is to be a "school of prayer." We teach people how to pray and what to pray for, both by word and by example. The liturgy is the principal school of prayer. There we make the Lord present in word and sacrament. But other "prayer clinics" include devotions such as eucharistic adoration, Stations of the Cross, novenas, retreats, rosary, and meditation and prayer groups. Nothing is more central to our life than prayer.

Among the first things Jesus did with his disciples was teach them to pray. He told them not to rattle on like the pagans who went into endless ecstatic prayer rituals. But he also told them to be persistent in prayer and to pray always without losing heart.

Most important, Jesus taught his followers the words of a prayer so we could pray when we could find no other words. His prayer is a kind of short course in prayer. It is a summation of all our prayers.

There have been many famous teachers of prayer in our Christian tradition — people like St. Teresa of Avila, St. Francis of Assisi and St. Ignatius of Loyola, who taught their followers to pray.

This past Christmas our parish distributed a little prayerbook from Liguori Press as a gift to everyone. It is called a "Treasury of Prayers." It contains all the basic Catholic prayers, plus a few unusual ones I had not seen before.

I particularly liked one prayer titled "Mary Stewart's Prayer." I'm not sure in this instance who Mary Stewart was, but she wrote a good prayer. I read it to our people at Mass a couple of weeks before Christmas, as a prayer for our families. It goes:

"Keep us, O God, from all pettiness.

"Let us be large in thought, word and deed.

"Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off all self-seeking.

"May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face, without self-pity and without prejudice.

"May we never be hasty in judgment and always be generous.

"Let us always take time for all things, and make us grow calm, serene and gentle.

"Teach us to put into action our better impulses, to be straightforward and unafraid.

"Grant that we may realize that it is the little things of life that create the differences, but in the big things of life we are as one.

"And Lord God, let us not forget to be kind! Amen."

When I read that prayer to our parish, I heard a little inward taking of breath at the end when she says, "Let us not forget to be kind." Every family has said unkind words.

Heartfelt prayer brings our real self before God. It expresses our needs, our thanks, our fears, our failings and hopes. Sometimes it even expresses our humor.

One of my favorite prayers makes me laugh. I have it taped to the mirror in my bedroom. It goes:

"Dear Lord, So far today I've done OK. Actually I've been rather good. I haven't gossiped or lost my temper. I haven't been greedy, grumpy, pouty or whiney. Nor have I been selfish, unpleasant or overindulgent.

"Lord I would like to say that I am thankful for all that. But God, in a few minutes I'm going to get out of bed.... From then on, I'm going to need a lot more help. Amen."

Maybe some of our prayers not only make us laugh but make God laugh too.

Immaculate Conception Church prospers in Hendersonville

PHOTO BY GEORGE COBB

Immaculate Conception Church in Hendersonville was dedicated in December 1998 and can accommodate 800 people for Mass.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION CHURCH
208 Seventh Avenue West
Hendersonville, N.C. 28791
(828) 693-6901

Vicariate: Asheville
Pastor: Capuchin Father John Aurilia
Parochial Vicar: Capuchin Father John Salvas
Pastoral Associate: Capuchin Brother Michael Molloy
Hispanic Ministry: Capuchin Brother Francisco Arredondo
Number of Households: 3,500

Capuchin Father John Aurilia

HENDERSONVILLE — Over the past 90 years, Immaculate Conception Church has been blessed with growth, faith and love. From a modest beginning of only 19 people, the church has grown into a thriving community of 3,500 families.

It wasn't until 1869 that a Catholic church appeared in the western North Carolina with the completion of St. Lawrence Church (now Basilica) in Asheville. Catholicism spread in the region and Masses were held in private homes in Hendersonville.

Hendersonville's first Catholic church was built in 1912. The Church of the Immaculate Conception, a small, white clapboard church, featured wooden pews that seated 50 people.

Under the guidance of Father Peter Marion, the first pastor, the small group of Catholics struggled to survive with modest collections. Often, parishioners donated food and other necessities for the rectory.

Immaculata School was built in Hendersonville in 1926 and enlarged in 1944 to accommodate 125 students. Today, the school has around 200 students.

Father Phillip O'Mara came to the congregation numbering less than 100 in 1931. However, summertime visitors gradually increased and in 1936 a new church made of stone was built to accommodate 200 people.

Father Howard Lane served the church as pastor from 1944 until his death in 1967. His management skills helped free Immaculate Conception from its debt by 1966. He also guided the church through the changes established by the Second Vatican Council. The first Mass in English was held at Immaculate Conception on Nov. 29, 1964.

Father Lane often vacationed in Italy and obtained a new altar stone for the church, and had it blessed by Pope Paul VI. This stone has now become a sacred part of Immaculate Conception, remaining in the church to this day.

After Father Lane's death, Father (now Msgr.) Joseph Showfety became pastor and oversaw repairs to the aging church and rectory. But the congregation had grown to 240 families and a larger church was needed

Under Msgr. Showfety's guidance, Immaculate Conception saw the beginning of a larger church and the completion of a new convent and a playground for Immaculata School. The new church, which would seat 520 people, was designed in a modern mountain-chalet style.

The Diocese of Charlotte was approved in 1972 and founding Bishop Michael J. Begley chose Msgr. Showfety as its first chancellor. Father (now Msgr.) William Pharr became pastor in January 1972, the same year the old church was torn down. In April 1974 the new Immaculate Conception Church, built to seat 520 people, was dedicated. In the late 1970s, Immaculate Conception Church was the largest Catholic parish in western North Carolina with more than 1,600 parishioners.

Since that time, Immaculate Conception has been blessed with several priests, including Father Thomas Walsh, Father Paul Wilderotter and Father Dennis Kuhn, a former Episcopalian priest who converted to Catholicism.

Capuchin Father John C. Aurilia, the current pastor and frequent columnist for The Catholic News & Herald, was appointed in June 1995. On April 12, 1997 he oversaw the groundbreaking for a new Immaculate Conception. The two-level facility was designed to seat 800 people and features administrative offices, a family center and a chapel for 100 worshipers. Dedicated in December 1998, the church's exterior roof resembles the soaring rooflines of the 1974 church.

By 1997, parishioners were involved in Hispanic ministry, which provided aid for migrant workers in area camps. Today, parishioners are involved in more than 50 ministries.

Immaculate Conception Church continues to grow in numbers and faith. It is a strength that continues to develop in the face of changes that await in the years to come.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

We beat the banks!

IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

PC282
C363c

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Parish Profile: St. Charles Borromeo Church | PAGE 16

JANUARY 30, 2004 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 18

FIGHTING FOR LIFE

Bishop Jugis, others join March for Life

RALLIES ROUSE MARCHERS FOR ANNUAL PRO-LIFE EVENT

BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY
CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON — Bishop Peter J. Jugis and others of the Diocese of Charlotte were among tens of thousands descending on Washington for the annual March for Life.

At rallies, prayer services and marches held in Washington on the 31st anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade and Doe vs. Bolton decisions legalizing abortion, participants were encouraged to continue their fight against abortion.

See MARCH, page 7

Catholic Schools Week 2004

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

Diocesan Catholic schools celebrate 'Faith-Filled Future'

Students at St. Michael School in Gastonia take notes during class in this photo taken in August 2003. Catholic Schools Week, this year themed "Catholic Schools: A Faith-Filled Future," runs Jan. 25-31. Look for Catholic Schools Week coverage in the next issue of The Catholic News & Herald.

DSA 2004

'And the Greatest of These is Love'

Annual diocesan appeal to bring God's love to many

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — God is love.

And as the people of God, we are charged with bringing his love to those in need.

The annual Diocesan Support Appeal has helped plant and reap many seeds of hope across the Diocese of Charlotte. This year, contributions to the DSA will continue to support those in need through 36 ministries across the diocese, including Catholic Social Services, educational and multicultural ministries and the vocations program.

The goal of this year's DSA that kicksoff Feb. 1, themed "The Greatest of These is Love," is $3,775,000, and it can only be obtained with support from Catholics across the Diocese of Charlotte.

"Expressing the love of Jesus must involve some action," said Barbara Gaddy, associate director of the diocesan development office. "The DSA is a concrete way to express that love in deeds beyond words and feeling. It is also a means of sharing what you have with others."

"Contributing to the DSA gives the Catholics of western North Carolina an opportunity to be a part of something bigger, and to help the church at large in its ministry throughout the western part of the state," said Bill Weldon, chief financial officer of the Diocese of Charlotte.

ILLUSTRATION BY TIM FARAGHER

Above is the poster for the 2004 Diocesan Support Appeal, which kicks off Feb. 1 in the Diocese of Charlotte.

The reach of the DSA is far and wide, said Gaddy, including: providing resources and workshops for parish and school catechists; funding seminarian education and diaconate formation; providing funds toward Catholic Social Service's ministries; and allowing Hispanic coordinators throughout the diocese to assist their pastors in serving Spanish-speaking parishioners.

"All of these diocesan ministries rely heavily on the DSA," said Weldon. "It's certainly important from a finan-

See DSA, page 9

Growing adoration
Bishop dedicates St. Gabriel chapel
PAGE 4

Unified by diversity
Multicultural ministry helps communities
PAGE 5

DSA 2004
Parish targets, ministries budget
PAGES 8-9

#BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
#42083G#  S235 P2
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

VP AND JP2

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Pope John Paul II greets Vice President Dick Cheney during a private audience at the Vatican Jan. 27. It was the pontiff's highest-level audience with a U.S. official following the Iraqi war. The pope emphasized the need for international cooperation in resolving conflicts around the world.

Pope-Cheney meeting comes as U.S. and Vatican rebuild relationship

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Vice President Dick Cheney's first meeting with Pope John Paul II came at a time when U.S.-Vatican relations are in a rebuilding phase following the war in Iraq.

Cheney met privately with the pope Jan. 27 and later with the Vatican secretary of state, Cardinal Angelo Sodano. The discussions dealt primarily with the current situation in Iraq, the Middle East and international terrorism.

The pope and Vatican officials have argued against the U.S. decision to invade Iraq, but recently have focused on the need for cooperative reconstruction rather than on past differences.

The pope said the international community needs to help Iraqis "retake the reins" of Iraq and establish democracy, and emphasized the role of the United Nations in this process and in "collective security" throughout the world.

But differences remain between the Vatican and the United States over preemptive or "preventive" war as a tool against terrorism.

Vatican officials rejected the idea that nations could wage war without responding to a specific act of aggression and without the explicit backing of the United Nations or international treaties, in order to eliminate a potential threat of terrorism.

The Vatican recognizes use of force to prevent acts of terrorism can sometimes be legitimate, as an extension of the principle of self-defense, but the threat must be specific and well-defined.

Failure to find Iraq's weapons of mass destruction has bolstered the Vatican's conviction that this war did not have legitimacy.

The Vatican's reaction to the U.S. military's 2001 actions in Afghanistan was different — a Vatican spokesman and other church officials offered qualified support for U.S. attacks against al-Qaida strongholds in Afghanistan, saying use of force in that situation represented an extension of self-defense against a terrorist organization that could be expected to strike again.

But the same case could not be made for Iraq, and this was underscored by the lack of an international consensus in support of the war, Vatican officials said.

Vatican officials caution that in conducting the "war on terrorism," the United States seems to rely too heavily on short-term military solutions and not enough on political, social and educative steps.

"But there is also understanding that the United States is still probably under the influence of Sept. 11, and that this has resulted in a priority for military action," said one Vatican official.

World community urged to examine failure to stop modern-day genocide

NEW YORK (CNS) — Archbishop Celestino Migliore, Vatican nuncio to the United Nations, called Jan. 27 for the international community to examine why it has failed to prevent the new acts of genocide that have occurred in recent years.

Speaking to the fourth Stockholm International Forum, he said genocide remains "a constant menace," and the world is too interconnected to "plead ignorance" of "what is happening on the other side of the global village."

The nuncio's statement, released by the Vatican's U.N. mission in New York, said the international community had legal instruments to "nip genocides in the bud."

"What we need most now is a greater and more courageous will to implement them," he said.

"Among all forms of large-scale violence, genocide sets itself apart by the evil motivation behind it, namely, its specific intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a nation, a race, an ethnic or religious group, a defenseless or vulnerable group of human beings, simply for being such," he said.

The Stockholm forum was initiated in response to acts of anti-Semitism in Sweden and reports that many young people agreed with those who denied the Holocaust ever happened.

A forum on the Holocaust in 2000 was followed by one in 2001 on combating intolerance and in 2002 on truth, justice and reconciliation.

For this year's event, held Jan. 26-28, Sweden invited representatives of 58 countries and more than a dozen international organizations to address the theme "Preventing Genocide: Threats and Responsibilities."

Diocesan planner

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at 1 p.m. Call (336) 372-8846 for more information.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — A four-part series, "Understanding Your Late Life Choices," will be presented at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., Thursdays Feb. 5-26, 10-11:30 a.m. Topics will include protecting your home and assets, housing and in-home care, Medicare/Medicaid and long-term care. For reservations, call B.J. Dengler at (704) 364-5431, ext. 212.

CHARLOTTE — The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians, St. Brigid's Division, will celebrate the feast day of St. Brigid, patroness of their order, Feb. 8 at a luncheon following the 12:30 p.m. Mass at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. For further information, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720.

CHARLOTTE — "Just Second Fridays" is a luncheon speaker series on social justice topics that meets the second Friday of each month, 1-2 p.m. in the Annex Building of St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St. Dr. Terry Armstrong, director of the Arrupe Program in Social Ethics for Business and Woodstock Business Conference, will present "Shareholder vs. Stakeholder Value" Feb. 13. Parking is available in the underground garage next to the church. For details call (704) 370-3225.

MINT HILL — Looking for a way to get closer to God this year? Put your new year's resolution into practice by taking the Alpha Course. Alpha is a video lecture series and supper club that meets Friday nights through March 19. Register by calling (704) 573-7021 or e-mail mcnuccie1@bellsout.net.

CHARLOTTE — Thank God It's Friday (TGIF), a weekly support group for separated and divorced women, meets every Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the New Life Center building, room 114, of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Pkwy., including a potluck dinner. Divorced men are invited every third Wednesday of the month. TGIF is a healing ministry sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Charlotte Regional Office and St. Matthew Church. For details, call Trish Wilson at (704) 543-8986.

CHARLOTTE — St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St., will offer Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament on the first Friday of every month following the 12:10 p.m. Mass and Benediction at 1:30 p.m.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

GASTONIA VICARIATE

BELMONT — Father Joe Zuschmidt and Dennis Teall-Fleming will host an Evening of Conversation on the past and present chal

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

JANUARY 30, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 18

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published b the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Churc St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except f Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durin June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parishe of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per ye for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserv the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deeme appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-cla postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citie POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 3726 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Pope urges international community to help eradicate leprosy

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope ohn Paul II urged the world commuity to continue its work to wipe out eprosy while the head of the 'atican's office for health care empha-ized the church's need to address the piritual needs of the sick and medical rofessionals.

After praying the Sunday Angelus an. 25, World Day of Leprosy, the ope said his thoughts were "with all hose who still suffer from Hansen's isease," which is another name for eprosy, a chronic infectious disease hat attacks the skin, peripheral erves and mucous membranes of the yes and respiratory tract. Lesions and ensory loss in the affected areas usu-lly begin in the toes and fingertips.

In some advanced cases, gangrene ets in, causing parts of the body to ecome deformed.

"While I invite you to pray for them and the people who care for them, I encourage the international community's efforts to eradicate this disease," said the pope.

In a Jan. 25 message, Cardinal Javier Lozano Barragan, president of the Pontifical Council for Health Care Workers, called for the training of religious and lay workers to prepare them for the "spiritual trials not only of sick people but also of the professional men and women who are directly involved."

According to the Vatican, the church worldwide runs 678 leper hospitals, helping more than 817,000 people in 2002.

The World Health Organization reported more than 620,000 new cases of Hansen's disease across the globe in 2002, but warned the number of infected people was much higher.

enges of the sexual abuse crisis the Catholic hurch is facing. Topics will include what npact the crises have had on the Catholic hurch as a whole, Catholics themselves and ow well the Catholic Church is responding o the crises. The conversation will take lace Feb. 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Family Cen-er of Queen of the Apostles Church, 503 N. Main St. For details, call Dennis Teall-leming at (704) 825-9600, ext. 26.

REENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — Theology on Tap will neet Tuesdays in February. Speakers in-lude Sister Antonette Schmidt, Abbot Placid Solari, Bishop William Curlin nd Terry Aiken of IHM in High Point. Theology on Tap meets at "Anton's" on attleground Ave. 7 p.m. Contact reensborotot@yahoo.com for more nformation.

HIGH POINT — Immaculate Heart of Mary Church, Johnson St. and Skeet Club d., will offer free basic and intermediate panish classes Thursdays. 7-8:30 p.m. lasses begin Jan. 15 and end Feb. 19. o register, call Nancy Skee at (336) 884-522.

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Or-er of Hibernians Guilford County Division, he oldest and largest order of Irish Catho-c men, is looking for more Irish Catholic nen to join them for meetings, educational eminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time nd location.

ICKORY VICARIATE

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets he second and fourth Wednesday of each nonth at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Joysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For nore information, call the church office at 328) 327-2341.

ALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — A Support Group for Parents Who Have Lost a Child of any age neets the second Monday of each month at p.m. at St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley chool Rd. We draw strength from others' xperience of loss and grief. For more infor-nation, call Joy at (704) 664-3992.

MOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

CANTON and WAYNESVILLE — The nnual observance of World Marriage Sun-day will take place Feb. 8. There will be special liturgies at 8:30 a.m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 42 Newfound Rd. in Canton, and at 11 a.m. at St. John Church, 234 Church St. in Waynesville, during which couples will be able to renew their marriage vows. Following the liturgies, there will be receptions for couples in the respective church halls.

CANTON — Immaculate Conception Church, 42 Newfound Rd., will conduct one-hour sessions each Thursday through Feb. 26 on "The Precepts of the Catholic Church." Sessions will start at noon — bring your lunch; drinks will be provided. Discussions are open to anyone who wants to know more about church teachings or to review what you learned many years ago. For more information, call Dot and Chuck Luce at (828) 648-7369.

WAYNESVILLE — The Catholic Women's Circle of St. John's Catholic Community meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the church hall. For more information, call the church office at (828) 456-6707.

FRANKLIN — The Women's Guild of St. Francis of Assisi Church, 299 Maple St., meets the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the Family Life Center. The meetings feature guest speakers and special events periodically. For more information, call Claire Barnable at (828) 369-1565.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — Learn Natural Family Planning taught by the Couple to Couple League. A four-part series of classes will begin Feb. 15 at 1:30 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For registration and information, call Stephanie and Todd Brown at (336) 765-2909.

MT. AIRY — Holy Angels Church, 1208 N. Main St., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Wednesday, 6:30-7:30 p.m., and every Thursday, 10-11 a.m. Adoration concludes with Benediction.

Is your parish or school having an event? Please submit notices for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Pope says media too often hostile to family values, urges changes

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Modern mass media too often encourage negative family trends, uncritically depicting infidelity and giving "positive support" to divorce, abortion and homosexuality, Pope John Paul II said.

The pope called on parents, communicators and public authorities to fight what he termed an agenda "hostile" to family values — but without resorting to censorship.

The pope's message on the theme "The Media in the Family: A Risk and a Richness," released at the Vatican Jan. 24, was designed to prompt reflection ahead of World Communications Day, to be marked in most dioceses May 23.

The pope said today's global reach of mass media offers virtually unlimited opportunities for families in terms of education, cultural expansion and even spiritual growth, and he noted the media sometimes treats the family with intelligence and perception.

On the other hand, he said, "infidelity, sexual activity outside of marriage, and the absence of a moral and spiritual vision of the marriage covenant are depicted uncritically, while positive support is at times given to divorce, contraception, abortion and homosexuality. Such portrayals, by promoting causes inimical to marriage and the family, are detrimental to the common good of society."

The pope called for "practical initiatives" to offset this image of the family.

Professional communicators resist commercial pressures or demands of secular ideologies, he said, and civil authorities should, without resorting to censorship, "set in place regulatory policies and procedures to ensure that the media do not act against the good of the family."

The pope said parents, as their children's primary educators, should teach them not to uncritically accept or imitate is depicted in the media, and also need to regulate media use in the home, including scheduling and strictly limiting media use, putting some media entirely off limits and making media entertainment a family event.

All modern communication should be inspired by respect for the truth and human dignity, he said. Without that, he said, media have the capacity to do "grave harm" by presenting a deformed outlook on life, the family, religion and morality.

Breaking for the pope

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

Pope John Paul II listens to a rap song as a Polish youngster break dances during an audience at the Vatican Jan. 25. Break dancers performed Jan. 25 before the pontiff in the Vatican's sumptuous Clementine Hall, with some spinning on their heads on the marble floor to the pope's apparent delight. They jumped and twisted to the sound of rhythmic music that blared through the hall from a boombox. The pope raised his hands in approval after each dancer finished, and told the group afterward: "I bless you from my heart for this creative and difficult work." He also told the youths that creativity was important in all art and that artistic talent was a gift of God that should be developed and not wasted. "Be faithful to beauty and be faithful to goodness," he said.

CORRECTION

In the Jan. 16 issue, Tania Castillero was incorrectly identified as the Hispanic Center's first full-time program director. She is a full-time Catholic Social Services employee splitting her time between locations in High Point and Greensboro.

GROWING ADORATION

Bishop Jugis dedicates adoration chapel at St. Gabriel Church

COURTESY PHOTO

Bishop Peter J. Jugis dedicates the expanded eucharistic adoration chapel at St. Gabriel Church Jan. 25. The larger chapel was necessary to accommodate growth of the devotion, so the parish expanded the size and seating availability of the previous chapel.

BY KATHY SCHMUGGE
CORRESPONDENT

CHARLOTTE — Parishioners of St. Gabriel Church now have more room for eucharistic adoration.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis dedicated the expanded adoration chapel Jan. 25.

The larger chapel was necessary to accommodate growth of the devotion, so the parish expanded the size and seating availability of the previous chapel. Also added was a picture of the Annunciation, given to the church by an anonymous donor.

"In this chapel, the love of Christ will be present," said Bishop Jugis during the ceremony. "In this chapel, the sweet conversation with our Lord, which we begin in Mass, will continue in personal and private adoration."

Eucharistic adoration, also called perpetual adoration, is a practice in some Catholic parishes and religious communities of exposing the Eucharist 24 hours a day for adoration by members of the community. Communities that establish perpetual adoration are expected to assure there are always some members present in prayer before the exposed Blessed Sacrament.

Bishop Jugis said eucharistic adoration assisted him in his discerning of his call to the priesthood. He recalled the times he spent as a young man before the Eucharist at St. Vincent de Paul Church in Charlotte.

"It is there before the Blessed Sacrament that the Lord speaks to young men about the priesthood," said Bishop Jugis.

The bishop spoke of the relationship between the priesthood and the Eucharist, and said both were instituted at the Last Supper.

"The prayer that is offered here will build up our families in Christ, will build up our homes, will build up this parish and will build up this city," said Bishop Jugis.

"If people let Christ's love and peace abide with them, it will produce great fruit after they leave the chapel and go out into the world," he said.

Young Adult Views

Catholics age 20-39 who consider the following 'essential' or 'very important' aspects of the faith.

| | |
|---|---|
| Following Conscience | 89% |
| Helping Needy | 87% |
| Passing on the Faith | 69% |
| Receiving Eucharist | 63% |
| Following Teachings | 51% |

From a report using data from national random sample telephone surveys of U.S. Catholics 2000 to 2002.

Source: Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate, Georgetown University
© 2003 CNS Graphics

Home is still the BEST place to be.

Our CAREGivers™ provide help at home that includes:

- Alzheimer's care
- Companionship
- Light housekeeping
- Errands & shopping
- Meal preparation
- Medication reminders

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

Call for a FREE, No-Obligation Appointment
704-344-0801 Bonded - Insured - Trained
Each Home Instead Senior Care office is independently owned and operated.

La Bella Sposa
the beautiful bride

Couture Wedding Gowns • Bridesmaids • Flower Girls • 1st Communion
130 Matthews Station
Charlotte, NC
phone :704.847.2255
www.labellasposa.net

Groce
FUNERAL HOME & CREMATION SERVICE
1401 Patton Ave. Asheville, NC (828) 252-3535
72 Long Shoals Road Arden, NC (828) 687-3530
Assuring Absolute Integrity
Asheville's Catholic Funeral Directors
Dale Groce • John Prock
Toll-free (888) 874-3535
Pre-arrangements and obituaries on-line at www.grocefuneralhome.com

Unified by diversity in North Carolina

Multicultural Ministry helps communities thrive in diocese

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

MORGANTON — Tucked away in the mountains of North Carolina, St. Charles Borromeo Church has become a welcoming haven for three diverse ethnic groups — Anglos; Guatemalans from Central America; and Hmong, refugees from the highlands of Vietnam and Laos.

Ministering to three populations separated by language, heritage and even spirituality can prove a challenge, but Father Ken Whittington, pastor of St. Charles Borromeo, and his staff have met that challenge by serving each group's individual needs while integrating them as one community.

St. Charles Borromeo offers three Masses each Sunday — in English, Spanish and Hmong. To bring the cultures together in worship, the church also offers a bilingual Mass. Fittingly, Pentecost is celebrated together by the entire parish community.

The church is aided by the Multicultural Ministry of the Diocese of Charlotte, which encourages Spanish- and Hmong-language Masses and other ministries to reach out to growing populations. As a result, Catholicism is thriving in the Hmong, Hispanic and other communities.

North Carolina's Hmong population is the fourth largest in the United States. About 10 percent of Hmong living in the United States are Catholic, according to the U.S. Catholic Bishops Office of Migration & Refugee Services.

North Carolina also has one of the United States' fastest-growing Spanish-speaking populations, accounting for approximately one-half the Catholics in the Diocese of Charlotte.

Concurrently, a steady increase in the number of individuals from Southeast Asia over the years has led the Diocese of Charlotte to establish Korean and Vietnamese missions in Charlotte in the 1990s. There is a combined 1,000 registered individuals at the missions, St. John Lee Korean Church and St. Joseph Vietnamese Church.

Bishop Peter J. Jugis has expressed a willingness to learn Korean and Vietnamese in a continued effort to shepherd the immigration populations of the diocese.

"What is already beginning to happen in the parishes should be continued," he said. "That is, bilingual Masses and parish celebrations, so that the Catholic Church stays one and united and does not fall along parallel tracks according to diverse ethnic origins."

In "Instruction on the Pastoral Care of People Who Migrate," Pope Paul VI affirmed, "migrating people carry with them their own mentality, their own language, their own culture, and their own religion. All of these things are parts of a certain spiritual heritage of opinions, traditions and culture, which will (continue to exist) outside the homeland."

"The church is for the Catholics who are here now," Father Whittington said. "If tomorrow they are from Mars, then we would minister to them."

Although his parishioners are all Catholic, Father Whittington realizes there are important differences in their spirituality.

"Our Spanish-speaking parishioners are mostly Guatemalans of Mayan descent, and their style of worship is very different from that of other Hispanics," he said. "They are quietly spiritual and naturally contemplative."

In "Encuentro and Mission," the bishops of the United States said, "Because Hispanics are a blessing to the entire church in the United States, and because Hispanic ministry is integral to its mission, appreciating and embracing the contribution this community has made are important."

To encourage the catechesis of its Hmong population, St. Charles Borromeo is served by a full-time Hmong catechist, Pe Lis, who is currently studying to be a member of the permanent diaconate. The Hmong New Year is celebrated in conjunction with the parish's annual festival.

"If we look at people and say 'They're African-American or French or Hmong,' we're missing the most important thing — that they are foremost Catholic," said Sister Andrea Inkrott, director for diocesan Hispanic ministry. She also said the presence of Catholics from other cultures is "a gift that should be celebrated."

"It's more important to appreciate each other and value the gift the other culture has," Father Whittington said.

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Vietnamese dancers helped celebrate the ordination of Bishop Peter J. Jugis at St. Matthew Church in Charlotte Oct. 24. The Vietnamese community is one of several served by the Multicultural Ministry of the diocese. Non-English speaking Catholics make up more than one-half of the total Catholic population in western North Carolina.

Multicultural Ministry is one of 36 ministries funded by contributions to the Diocesan Support Appeal.

Make the right move to finding your dream home. See Chase first... because home ownership matters.

TAILORED MORTGAGE PROGRAMS

- Chase mortgage programs are tailored to fit your individual needs
- Experienced mortgage specialists will personally work with you from application through closing
- A free mortgage affordability estimate can show you how much home you can afford*
- A Chase mortgage preapproval will make you feel more confident knowing you have "cash in hand" when shopping for a home

Make the move to Chase Home Finance—call today.

Paul McClure
(704) 553-1202
Ext. 203

CHASE
THE RIGHT RELATIONSHIP IS EVERYTHING®

*Results of the mortgage affordability estimate are guidelines; the estimate is not an application for credit and results do not guarantee loan approval or denial. A fee for preapproval may be applied. All loans are subject to credit and property approval. Program terms and conditions are subject to change without notice. Not all products are available in all states or for all loan amounts. Other restrictions and limitations apply. All loans offered through Chase Manhattan Mortgage Corporation ("CMMC"), Corporate headquarters: 343 Thornall Street, Edison, New Jersey 08837; (732) 205-0600. © 2003 J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. All Rights Reserved. 10/03 6504

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

More than 50 years of summer fun and growth in the Blue Ridge Mountains with outstanding Christian staff!

Please call for a brochure and free video or visit our Web sites.

Camp Merri-Mac for Girls

Merri-Mac for Girls
Timberlake for Boys
1123 Montreat Road
Black Mountain, NC 28711
828-669-8766
www.merri-mac.com
www.camptimberlake.com

CAMP TIMBERLAKE for boys

President says every person is 'a blessing'

Text of President Bush's remarks to March for Life

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Here is the text of President George W. Bush's remarks made via a telephone call from Roswell, N.M., to Nellie Gray, head of March for Life, and participants at the March for Life rally on the Ellipse Jan. 22 in Washington. The president was in Roswell to address law enforcement officials and others about the war on terrorism.

Well, thank you very much, Nellie. I appreciate your kind introduction, and thank you for including me in this celebration of life. I'm calling you today from Roswell, New Mexico. And it sounds like you've got some people who know where Roswell is here in the audience.

I know that good folks have gathered there on the Mall from every corner of America to take part in the 31st March for Life. And I want you to pass on my best to each one of them in person, please, and tell them how much I appreciate their devotion to such a noble cause.

You believe, as I do, that every person, however frail or vulnerable, is a blessing. Each of us has a special dignity, a place and purpose in this world. And in the Declaration of Independence, our founders stated this self-evident truth: The right to life does not come from government, it comes from the Creator of life.

During the past three years we've made real progress toward building a culture of life in America. As president, I've signed the Born-Alive Infants Protection Act. I have signed legislation supporting maternity group homes. Working with the Congress, we have refused to spend taxpayers' money on international programs that promote abortion overseas. We're opposed to the destruction of embryos for stem-cell research. And last November it was my honor to sign into law a ban on the brutal procedure of partial-birth abortion.

Nellie, I want you to know that our administration is vigorously defending this law against those who would seek to overturn it in the courts. I also want you to know without your hard work and dedication to the cause of life, these achievements would not have been possible.

But we all know there is still more to do. Earlier this week, I proposed that we double federal funding for abstinence education programs. We will continue to support crisis pregnancy centers, adoption, parental notification laws and the vital work of faith-based groups.

I strongly support the Unborn Victims of Violence Act, which the House Judiciary Committee approved yesterday. And now the entire Congress should act on this bill so I can sign it into law.

We'll also work with Congress to pass without delay a comprehensive and effective ban on human cloning. We can push the limits of medical science while maintaining the highest of ethical standards. Human life is a creation, not a commodity, and should not be used as research material for reckless experiments.

Above all, we must continue with civility and respect to remind our fellow citizens that all life is sacred and worthy of protection. I know as you return to your communities you will redouble your efforts to change hearts and minds, one person at a time. And this is the way we will build a lasting culture of life, a compassionate society in which every child is born into a loving family and protected by law.

Gray: We pledge that to you, Mr. President.

Bush: Thank you, Nellie. I appreciate so very much the opportunity to speak to you and the assembled crowd. May God bless you all, and may he continue to bless America.

Thank you very much.

PHOTO BY NANCY WIEC

PHOTO BY JOSEPH PURELLO

Above: Maria Miller embraces daught Devin, 6, during the National Pray Vigil for Life Jan. 21 at the Basilica the National Shrine of the Immacula Conception in Washington. They travel to the nation's capital from Hicko N.C., where they are parishioners of S Aloysius Church.

Left: Bishop Peter J. Jugis celebrat Mass at the Basilica of the Natior Shrine of the Immaculate Conception Washington Jan. 22. Hundreds of Nor Carolinians attended the Mass and t March for Life.

Create a winning event

Having your meeting or conference at the center makes you a winner every time!

We can help you turn an ordinary conference, meeting, retreat, or banquet into a special event! You plan the event, we'll provide the environment!

1551 Trinity Lane, Hickory, NC
(828) 327-7441 or toll-free at
(888) 536-7441
info@catholicconference.org
www.catholicconference.org

The Catholic Conference Center

Where do you want your child?

... in a safe, happy environment for learning and formation of virtue and character ...

Centered on Christ
Focused on Excellence

We offer grades K-5 in a curriculum within the Catholic intellectual and spiritual tradition, emphasizing the Church's teaching authority. It consists of an ordered series of courses in religion, phonics-based reading, grammar, literature, mathematics, social studies, and science. Effective up-to-date materials are used in this college preparatory program.

PRESENT THIS AD FOR $100 OFF REGISTRATION FEE

Open House to meet parents and teachers Fri., Feb. 20, 10 am — 2 pm

WE WELCOME ALL FAMILIES WHO WANT THE BEST FOR THEIR CHILDREN AT A VERY AFFORDABLE COST.

Call us for a private tour today! 704-841-2292

Blessed Sacrament Academy
2024 Sam Newell Road, Matthews, NC 28105-4529
(Behind Windsor Square Shopping Center)
A private academy, indepenent of Charlotte diocesan schools

PHOTO BY REV. MR. GERALD POTKAY

Bishop Peter J. Jugis stands with youth from St. Barnabas Church in Arden prior to the start of the March for Life in Washington Jan. 22.

Marching for life

MARCH, from page 1

Bishop Jugis celebrated Mass at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception the morning of the march, Jan. 22. Sixteen priests concelebrated and four deacons from the Diocese of Charlotte assisted with the Mass at the basilica, which was filled almost to capacity.

"What was most moving for me was the size of the basilica, and a small diocese being able to fill the basilica almost to capacity," said Father Christopher Davis of Holy Infant Church in Reidsville.

"This show how seriously the Catholics of North Carolina take their faith and how strongly they feel about the abortion issue," he said.

At the end of the Mass, Bishop Jugis polled those present to determine how many were from the dioceses of Charlotte and Raleigh — the majority of those in attendance raised their hands.

Concelebrants of the Mass included Father Christopher Roux, parochial vicar of St. Mark Church in Huntersville; Father Matthew Kauth, administrator of St. Francis of Assisi Church in Franklin; Father Christopher Gober, administrator of St. Lucien Church in Spruce Pine; Father Roger Arnsparger, pastor of St. Barnabas Church in Arden; Father Matthew Buettner, parochial vicar of St. Gabriel Church in Charlotte; and Father Kieran Neilson of Belmont Abbey.

Father Jeffrey Ingham and Father JaVan Saxon, both of the Diocese of Raleigh, also concelebrated.

The assisting deacons were Rev. Mr. Arthur Kingsley of St. Barnabas Church; Rev. Mr. Ron Steinkamp of St. Pius X Church in Greensboro; Rev. Mr. Timothy Reid, newly ordained transitional deacon; and Rev. Mr. Gerald Potkay of Holy Infant Church.

Father Jim Collins from St. Joseph Church in Newton, 33 parishioners from Holy Infant Church and 32 from St. Barnabas Church joined parishioners from Catholic churches in Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Hickory, Newton, Charlotte, Salisbury, Huntersville, Reidsville and other areas of the diocese in Washington.

Charlotte Catholic and Bishop McGuinness high schools also sent marchers to Washington.

"The Diocese of Charlotte was well represented in Washington for the March for Life," said Maggi Nadol, director of the diocesan Respect Life Office. "To see so many willing to make a personal sacrifice of their time to be a witness for life is a wonderful example of faith in action."

The diocesan Respect Life Office, which receives funding from the Diocesan Support Appeal, "is a ministry of Catholic Social Services, acting as a liaison with parishes to help build a culture of life," said Nadol. "Through education, sponsored events and resource material, DSA funding keeps the issues on the sanctity of life available for Catholics in western North Carolina."

Bishop Jugis said he was inspired by the number of North Carolinians who "made the sacrifice to come to Washington for the March for Life."

"When I first went to the March for Life with the diocesan Respect Life Office in 1984, we had one or two buses from Charlotte, but this year we were literally hundreds and hundreds of North Carolinians at the Mass and the march," said Bishop Jugis.

"Easily, the greatest numbers of people in attendance were the youth," he said. "This gives us great cause for hope for the future that our young people believe so strongly in this important issue of respecting the dignity of human life."

Executive support

President George W. Bush addressed March for Life participants at a Jan. 22 rally at the Ellipse between the White House and the Washington Monument, telling them by phone from Roswell, N.M., that they must continue "to remind our fellow citizens that all life is sacred and worthy of protection."

He spoke of the abortion-limiting legislation passed during his administration, including the Born-Alive Infants Protection Act; the ban on partial-birth abortion, which is facing a court challenge; and restrictions on use of tax money in international programs that encourage abortion.

He also listed several other pieces of legislation he would support, including increased federal funding for abstinence education and passage of the Unborn Victims of Violence Act, which would allow prosecution under homicide statutes for the death of fetuses killed during the commission of a crime.

The crowd gathered on the Ellipse for the March for Life rally resembled a high school pep rally complete with chaperones. People assembled in small groups to take pictures of themselves, eat a quick lunch or hold aloft banners before the speeches began, and they seemed more relaxed than in previous years, perhaps in part because of warmer temperatures.

After the rally speeches, participants walked along Constitution Avenue to the Supreme Court and then many continued to visit members of Congress and lobby for pro-life legislation.

Before heading back to their buses, hundreds of marchers stopped at Catholic churches for drinks and snacks.

Speaking out

At the end of the day, when most marchers began their trips home, a few hundred remained in front of the Supreme Court for a another rally where at least 50 women held signs that read "I regret my abortion."

The rally was part of the Silent No More Campaign co-sponsored by the Catholic organization Priests for Life and the National Organization of Episcopalians for Life (NOEL).

One of the first speakers was actress Jennifer O'Neill, who told the crowd that all speakers that night had different stories and different reasons for having their abortions, but one common thread was that they all regretted the procedure.

"You can't kill your own young and be well afterward," she said, adding that she had nine miscarriages after her abortion.

She also said that she suffered emotionally after the abortion, but pointed out that her faith in God enabled her to find "healing, hope and restoration."

Alveda King, the niece of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., told the crowd she too felt the emotional pain of having an abortion, but also came to experience God's forgiveness.

"Women who don't admit to the pain of abortion are numb," she said.

Rallies where women speak frankly about the impact of abortion on their lives have expanded the pro-life movement's emphasis, according to Georgette Fourney, executive director of NOEL and co-founder of the Silent No More Awareness Campaign.

During a Jan. 23 panel discussion on abortion and the American woman at The Catholic University of America in Washington, Fourney said that as women begin to speak more openly about the physical and emotional pain they suffered from their abortions they will begin a new grass-roots movement.

Panelist Cathy Cleaver Ruse, director of planning and information for the U.S. bishops' Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities agreed, stating that society as a whole is beginning to understand the concept that abortion kills babies but it "still embraces abortion saying it's good for women."

She described the women who are speaking out as "our new prophets who will bring us to the end of this. These women are the rest of the story."

In a Jan. 22 press conference by the National Right to Life Committee, Wanda Franz, the organization's president, said that "the days of Roe are numbered: The number of abortions is down and the support for abortion rights has eroded."

Across the country, dozens of Masses, pro-life rallies and prayer services took place to mark the Roe anniversary.

Editor Kevin E. Murray and Catholic News Service contributed to this story.

Respect Life Office is one of the 36 ministries funded by contributions to the Diocesan Support Appeal.

DSA SUPPORTED AGENCIES AND MINISTRIES

| | |
|---|---|
| Catholic Social Services Ministries | (704) 370-3262 |
| Diocesan Ministries | (704) 370-3228 |
| Elder Ministries | (704) 370-3220 |
| Family Life | (704) 370-3250 |
| Marriage Preparation | (704) 370-3228 |
| Natural Family Planning | (704) 370-3230 |
| Refugee Resettlement | (704) 370-3277 |
| Respect Life | (704) 370-3229 |
| Office of Justice and Peace | (704) 370-3225 |
| Catholic Campaign for Human Development | (704) 370-3234 |
| Catholic Relief Services | (704) 370-3231 |
| Education - Issue Response | (704) 370-3225 |
| Office of Economic Opportunity | (828) 835-3535 |
| Catholics Social Services — Western Regional OfficeHispanic Social Services, Adoption, Counseling, Crisis Intervention, Foster Care, Pregnancy Support | (828) 255-0146 |
| Catholic Social Services — Charlotte Regional OfficeAdoption, Counseling, Crisis Intervention, Foster Care, Pregnancy Support, Programa Esperanza | (704) 370-3232 |
| Catholic Social Services — Piedmont-Triad Regional OfficeCasa Guadalupe, Adoption, Counseling, Crisis Intervention, Foster Care, Pregnancy Support | (336) 727-0705 |
| Hispanic Center, High Point | (336) 884-5858 |
| Housing Ministry | (704) 370-3250 |
| Multicultural Ministries | |
| African American Ministry | (704) 370-3399 |
| Hispanic Ministry | (704) 335-1281 |
| Hmong & Lahu Ministry | (704) 327-2341 |
| Educational Ministries | |
| Vicar for Education | (704) 370-3210 |
| Campus Ministry | (704) 370-3212 |
| Catholic Schools Administration | (704) 370-3270 |
| Evangelization & Ministry Formation | (704) 370-3274 |
| Faith Formation | (704) 370-3246 |
| Media Resources | (704) 370-3241 |
| RCIA | (704) 370-3246 |
| Young Adult Ministry | (704) 370-3212 |
| Youth Ministry | (704) 370-3211 |
| Vocations | |
| Permanent Diaconate | (704) 370-3344 |
| Prison Ministry | (704) 370-3344 |
| Seminarian Education | (704) 370-3353 |

$5 OFF any purchase of $30 or more

The Catholic Company

Lake Norman Book Store

LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Your COMPLETE Catholic store for

- Clothing
- Videos to rent
- Priests for Life materials
- Unique gifts & cards
- Statues
- Books, rosaries, medals
- Artwork

CALL 704-655-9090

Mon. thru Sat. 10 am - 6 pm

19905 West Catawba Ave., Suite 106, Cornelius
west off I-77 exit 28
(Johnsbury Square - next to Goodwill)

2004 DSA MINISTRIES BUDGET

CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES

DIOCESAN MINISTRIES

Special Ministries $226,167
Natural Family Planning — Respect Life
Elder Ministry
Family Life
Marriage Preparation

Office of Justice and Peace $149,755
Catholic Campaign for Human Development, Catholic Relief Services, Parish Social Ministry, Voices for Justice, Legislative Network

Refugee Resettlement Program $36,704

Catholic Social Service Administration $158,415

REGIONAL SERVICES

Western Regional Office, Asheville $214,487
Hispanic Services, Adoption, Counseling, Crisis Intervention, Foster Care, Pregnancy Support

Charlotte Regional Office $291,443
Adoption, Counseling, Crisis Intervention, Foster Care, Pregnancy Support, Programa Esperanza

Piedmont Triad Office, Winston-Salem $272,298
Casa Guadalupe, Adoption, Counseling, Crisis Intervention, Foster Care, Pregnancy Support

HOUSING MINISTRY $80,000

MULTICULTURAL MINISTRIES

African American $23,735
Hispanic Ministry $446,020
Hmong/Lahu Ministry $40,950

EDUCATIONAL MINISTRIES

Campus Ministry $369,532
Catholic Schools Administration $158,924
Education Office $30,535
Evangelization & Ministry Formation $72,848
Faith Formation $361,784
Media Resources $90,194
Young Adult Ministry $48,660
Youth Ministry $139,929

VOCATIONS

Permanent Diaconate $114,838
Seminarian Education $264,153

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES $183,629

TOTAL $3,775,000

Parish goals for DSA

| PARISH/MISSION | CITY | 2004 GOAL |
|---|---|---|
| Our Lady of the Annunciation Parish | Albemarle | $20,114 |
| Holy Redeemer Parish | Andrews | $4,253 |
| Prince of Peace Mission | Andrews | $2,706 |
| St. Barnabas Parish | Arden | $58,853 |
| St. Joseph Parish | Asheboro | $27,704 |
| Basilica of St. Lawrence Parish | Asheville | $45,817 |
| St. Eugene Parish | Asheville | $83,861 |
| St. Joan of Arc Parish | Asheville | $22,989 |
| Queen of the Apostles Parish | Belmont | $36,275 |
| Our Lady of the Americas Parish | Biscoe | $9,209 |
| St. Elizabeth Parish | Boone | $39,246 |
| Boonville Mission | Boonville | $3,182 |
| Sacred Heart Parish | Brevard | $45,418 |
| Our Lady of Guadalupe Mission | Bryson City | $2,068 |
| St. Joseph Parish | Bryson City | $4,763 |
| St. Jude Mission Parish | Cashiers | $17,573 |
| Our Lady of Consolation Parish | Charlotte | $38,464 |
| Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish | Charlotte | $24,902 |
| Our Lady of the Assumption Parish | Charlotte | $37,301 |
| St. Ann Parish | Charlotte | $63,971 |
| St. Gabriel Parish | Charlotte | $255,057 |
| St. Helen Mission | Charlotte | $3,701 |
| St. John Lee Korean Parish | Charlotte | $12,005 |
| St. John Neumann Parish | Charlotte | $86,124 |
| St. Joseph Vietnamese Parish | Charlotte | $12,692 |
| St. Luke Parish | Charlotte | $57,381 |
| St. Matthew Parish | Charlotte | $338,386 |
| St. Patrick Cathedral Parish | Charlotte | $81,936 |
| St. Peter Parish | Charlotte | $67,355 |
| St. Thomas Aquinas Parish | Charlotte | $107,346 |
| St. Vincent de Paul Parish | Charlotte | $115,016 |
| Holy Family Parish | Clemmons | $89,332 |
| St. James Parish | Concord | $61,305 |
| Holy Spirit Parish | Denver | $20,472 |
| St. Joseph of the Hills Parish | Eden | $8,566 |
| Immaculate Conception Parish | Forest City | $22,838 |
| St. Francis of Assisi Parish | Franklin | $23,220 |
| St. Michael Parish | Gastonia | $69,973 |
| Our Lady of Grace Parish | Greensboro | $105,663 |
| St. Benedict Parish | Greensboro | $22,634 |
| St. Mary Parish | Greensboro | $24,875 |
| St. Paul the Apostle Parish | Greensboro | $137,248 |
| St. Pius Tenth Parish | Greensboro | $94,128 |
| Sacred Heart Mission | Hamlet | $2,014 |
| St. James Parish | Hamlet | $12,008 |
| Immaculate Conception Parish | Hendersonville | $94,826 |
| St. Aloysius Parish | Hickory | $82,389 |
| Christ the King Parish | High Point | $16,720 |
| Immaculate Heart of Mary Parish | High Point | $91,391 |
| Our Lady of the Mountains Parish | Highlands | $16,110 |
| St. Mark Parish | Huntersville | $129,897 |
| St. Francis of Assisi Parish | Jefferson | $10,897 |
| St. Joseph Parish | Kannapolis | $15,966 |
| Holy Cross Parish | Kernersville | $51,241 |
| St. Francis of Assisi Parish | Lenoir | $18,643 |
| Our Lady of the Rosary Parish | Lexington | $13,596 |
| St. Dorothy Parish | Lincolnton | $19,388 |
| St. Margaret Parish | Maggie Valley | $16,630 |
| Our Lady of the Angels Parish | Marion | $5,870 |
| Sacred Heart Mission | Mars Hill | $4,028 |
| St. Andrew the Apostle Parish | Mars Hill | $6,925 |
| St. Francis of Assisi Parish | Mocksville | $11,322 |
| Our Lady of Lourdes Parish | Monroe | $28,486 |
| St. Therese Parish | Mooresville | $97,689 |
| St. Charles Borromeo Parish | Morganton | $34,190 |
| Holy Angels Parish | Mount Airy | $13,952 |
| Immaculate Heart of Mary Mission | Murphy | $12,926 |
| St. William Parish | Murphy | $15,537 |
| St. Joseph Parish | Newton | $18,706 |
| St. John Baptist de La Salle Parish | North Wilkesboro | $12,052 |
| St. Stephen Mission | North Wilkesboro | $6,377 |
| Holy Infant Parish | Reidsville | $16,486 |
| Sacred Heart Parish | Salisbury | $60,541 |
| Christ the King Mission | Shelby | $5,561 |
| St. Mary Parish | Shelby | $27,094 |
| St. Frances of Rome Mission | Sparta | $7,197 |
| St. Bernadette Mission | Spruce Pine | $16,236 |
| St. Lucien Parish | Spruce Pine | $7,281 |
| St. Philip the Apostle Parish | Statesville | $39,969 |
| St. Margaret Mary Parish | Swannanoa | $21,634 |
| St. Mary Parish | Sylva | $15,028 |
| Holy Trinity Parish | Taylorsville | $7,629 |
| Our Lady of the Highways Parish | Thomasville | $11,757 |
| St. John the Baptist Parish | Tryon | $32,503 |
| Immaculate Conception Mission | Waynesville | $4,080 |
| St. John the Evangelist Parish | Waynesville | $17,857 |
| Good Shepherd Mission | Winston-Salem | $9,680 |
| Our Lady of Fatima Parish | Winston-Salem | $17,710 |
| Our Lady of Mercy Parish | Winston-Salem | $53,414 |
| St. Benedict the Moor Parish | Winston-Salem | $10,579 |
| St. Leo Parish | Winston-Salem | $127,015 |

Annual appeal to bring God's love to many

DSA, from page 1

cial perspective, because although there is outside funding for almost all of our ministries, the DSA is the primary funding source for them, with the exception of Catholic Social Services."

"As the people of the diocese entrust us with their gifts, we are then accountable to them for the use of these resources," said Weldon. "We are very conscious of the sacrifices people make; we have a strong sense of responsibility to use the funds as prudently as possible to achieve the goals of the various ministries and agencies."

Dissecting the DSA

"Most of the programs and services offered by the DSA-funded ministries are provided by staff of the diocese," said Weldon. "Consequently, the largest category of these expenses is personnel-related. However, the DSA only provides funding for direct program costs. There is no allocation of indirect costs."

"As an example, accounting and finance costs are general and administrative expenses, not direct program costs," he said. "Therefore, none of the expenses in this category are funded by the DSA."

Planning for this year's DSA began last fall as budgeting for the 2004-2005 fiscal year began. The goal represents an increase of $55,000, or 1.5 percent, over last year's goal, said Weldon.

"This increase is slightly more than the increase in diocesan-wide offertory of 1.3 percent, and less than the increase of 4 percent in our Catholic population," he said. "We have tried very hard to limit cost increases while expanding program services."

Establishing the current goal of $3,775,000 involved account-by-account budgets for each program and ministry that receives DSA funding, said Weldon. "Two components — program changes and cost increases — are examined when establishing the DSA budget. The amount budgeted for each ministry is published in this issue of The Catholic News & Herald (on pages 8-9)."

The diocese has established a monthly reporting process so each program's financial performance can be monitored throughout the year.

"We are committed to the highest standards of fiscal integrity and accountability," said Weldon. "Every fall, we present a financial report in The Catholic News & Herald that presents the previous year's actual DSA funding by ministry."

People power

"While we are grateful for the very large donations to the DSA, the vast majority of them are not large donations, so every contribution counts," said Weldon.

"But the financial picture only tells part of the story," he said. "The real story is told by the people who benefit from the DSA programs and ministries.

"While not the total picture, DSA funding is critical in facilitating our ministry to reach 30,000 children and adults last year," said Dr. Cris Villapando, director of the diocesan Faith Formation Office.

Guided by the cornerstones of prayer, wise planning and financial and human resources, Villapando said DSA funds helped the Faith Formation Office assist 13,934 catechists, 18,239 children in faith formation, 350 adults at the Fire in the Mountains event, 250 adults at the Lighting the Fires of Faith event, 700 adults in Small Christian Community and 700 catechumens and candidates in the RCIA.

With an increase of 4 percent in Catholic population within the Diocese of Charlotte, the 36 ministries funded by the DSA have more people to assist in the coming year.

"The program directors work very hard to stretch every dollar in funding so as to maximize the services rendered," said Weldon. "They also work very hard to generate additional funding for their programs and ministries."

For example, Catholic Social Services generates approximately three-fourths of its total funding from sources other than the DSA, said Weldon.

Each of the 91 parishes and missions within the Diocese of Charlotte is assigned a target — "their share of the overall goal of $3,775,000," said Weldon. "This is accomplished by using a formula established by a task force of lay people, pastors and finance council representatives."

Parish offertory from the last fiscal year is the starting point, said Weldon. Then, 25 percent of parish subsidy to Catholic schools is subtracted from the parish offertory. The resulting number is the basis for a mathematical computation that determines each parish's pro-rata share of the DSA goal.

"If, through parishioner contributions, a particular parish goes over its target, the excess is rebated to the parish," said Weldon. "If a parish falls short of its target, the parish is expected to make up the difference from its own budget."

Making the pledge

In the coming week, registered parishioners will receive pledge cards and letters at their homes from Bishop Peter J. Jugis, asking for their support of the DSA. Parishioners may send in a donation with those cards for all or part of their pledges. Reminder cards will be sent out in May for the amount not yet paid, and that amount may be paid over a period of six months.

"I ask your special consideration for your support of the DSA again this year," said Bishop Jugis. "Each person's contribution makes a difference to the success of the DSA."

"We understand people make sacrifices to support the DSA, their parish and Catholic schools," he said. "We appreciate those sacrifices; it's not something we take for granted."

Contact Editor Kevin E. Murray by calling (704) 370-3334 or e-mail kemurray@charlottediocese.org.

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Book of revelations, essays makes for 'nice handbook'

REVIEWED BY ELIZABETH RACKOVER
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

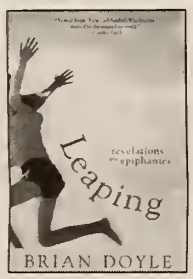
"Leaping: Revelations and Epiphanies" is an apt title for this selection of airy essays by Brian Doyle in which thoughts, ideas and memories spill out one after the other, arriving, as the subtitle says, at revelations and epiphanies.

His essays are connected loosely by a spiritual thread and a pleasing sense of humor. One might imagine many of the stories told over a Sunday brunch, those with the more colorful details coming after the second bottle of champagne is opened.

Doyle, editor of Portland Magazine at the University of Portland, Ore., associated with the Congregation of the Holy Cross, puts a lot of thought into his writings about daily life's mundane and constant proofs of God's hand touching this world. The reader will enjoy Doyle most, I think, if already inclined toward those proofs. This book is not "chicken soup" for a doubtful soul but rather a lovely icing for the choir.



"Leaping: Revelations and Epiphanies," by Brian Doyle. Loyola Press (Chicago, 2003). 194 pp., $13.95.

This choir member, for instance, was charmed by observations on the challenges and triumphs of teaching catechism. I was especially grateful for Doyle's authoritative assertion to his young students that "God forgives Hitler" (during a discussion involving God's infinite love and mercy).

Personally, I teach in constant fear of receiving "the phone call" from the irate parent whose child has said that "teacher says God loves Osama bin Laden and Saddam Hussein and would welcome their heartfelt repentance and remorse." Mr. Doyle, you have given me a vital reassurance! Now, if I get that phone call, I will send your book to that parent.

Doyle's essay "Leap," about victims at the World Trade Center, appears in this book in the section "Grace Under Duress." It is featured on the PBS Frontline Web site "Faith and Doubt at Ground Zero." Doyle has written three earlier collections of essays: "Credo," "Saints Passionate and Peculiar," and, with his father, Jim Doyle, retired Catholic Press Association executive director, "Two Voices." His work has appeared in the best American essays anthologies of 1998, 1999 and 2003.

Doyle's subjects in "Leaping" include the colorful and sharply detailed territory of the pre-Vatican II Catholic childhood. Doyle recalls a church that towered over its young, robed in Latin and veiled in all that glorious incense. He recalls the privacy of the sacristy, the flickering prayerful votive candles, the stunning and sometimes moodily sainted stained-glass windows, and the rhythmic whap! whap! whap! of kneelers being pushed up after the Mass has ended and everyone has gone in peace to love and serve the Lord.

These are all living memories, and, as Doyle relates them, readers will relive their own.

Doyle invites readers to imagine Christ as a boy — a real boy "hauling lumber for his stepfather, and straining to curve planks for chair ... not to mention grumbling through the various physical tasks around the house." He exhorts us to look past the physical Christ of the Bible ("a travelin' man") and to imagine ourselves into the heart and soul of a boy growing up as normal as possible considering the circumstances!

"If we remember only the legend of this man ... we do him disservice and disrespect, for he was once one of us, which is to say he is us. That is his message and genius; that is the song he sings still."

"Leaping" ultimately proclaims that news of all news: Jesus lived, just exactly like us, for a while. He was divine, and he was human. And, as one of his catechism students said one day, "It doesn't matter what his name is really. It just matters that we can still talk to him and that he said love is the boss. Isn't that right?"

Yes. God is love, and love is the boss. And Doyle's essays make a nice handbook.

BARGAINS! FOOD! FUN!
Attic and Bake Sale
Saturday, Feb. 7
8 am - 3 pm
St. Ann Church
3635 Park Road
Charlotte

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: FEB. 8, 2004

Feb. 8, Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle C Readings:
1) Isaiah 6:1-2a, 3-8
Psalm 138:1-2, 2-3, 4-5, 7-8
2) 1 Corinthians 15:1-11
3) Gospel: Luke 5:1-11

BY DAN LUBY
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

The shallows were safe. There, feet planted on the bottom and head well above water, it was easy to imagine yourself an aquatic creature and water a harmless, refreshing alternative to playgrounds.

But the appeal of the shallow end was short-lived. On hot summer days, shallow water grew bathtub warm. Only in the deep end was water cool all day. That's where the action was anyway. That's where you could entertain your friends with slapstick antics off the side, or impress girls with heroic dives from the high board, or indulge pirate fantasies, diving for quarters thrown in when the lifeguards weren't looking.

But the very depth that made it so attractive also made it scary. When a friend dunked you in the deep end, there was no instant pushing off from the bottom to break the surface, no walking to the side to catch your breath. If something went wrong — a side stitch, a foot cramp, water down your windpipe — the deep was unforgiving. It became frighteningly clear in such moments how illusory was our sense of mastery over the water.

In the end, the key to surviving the deep end was trust. For those inevitable moments of struggle, disorientation, panic, you had to trust the lifeguard to see you, to bear you up and bring you to safety.

The life of discipleship, of following a Master who calls us to "put out into the deep water," is full of adventure, but it is full of danger too. We find ourselves, all too often, in over our heads, struggling to stay afloat, in need of rescue.

Sunday's Gospel helps us remember that Jesus' invitation to join his work of transforming the world rests not on our virtue but on his promise to be with us always.

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF FEBRUARY 1 - FEBRUARY 7

Sunday (Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Jeremiah 1:4-5, 17-19, 1 Corinthians 12:31—13:13, Luke 4:21-30; Monday (The Presentation of the Lord), Malachi 3:1-4, Hebrews 2:14-18, Luke 2:2-40; Tuesday (St. Blase, St. Ansgar), 2 Samuel 18:9-10, 14, 24-25, 30—19:3, Mark 5:21-43; Wednesday, 2 Samuel 24:2, 9-17, Mark 6:1-6; Thursday (St. Agatha), 1 Kings 2:1-4, 10-12, Mark 6:7-13; Friday (St. Paul Miki and Companions), Sirach 47:2-11, Mark 6:14-29; Saturday, 1 Kings 3:4-13, Mark 6:30-34

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF FEBRUARY 8 - FEBRUARY 14

Sunday (Fifth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Isaiah 6:1-8, 1 Corinthians 15:1-11, Luke 5:1-11; Monday, 1 Kings 8:1-7, 9-13, Mark 6:53-56; Tuesday (St. Scholastica), 1 Kings 8:22-23, 27-30, Mark 7:1-13; Wednesday (Our Lady of Lourdes), 1 Kings 10:1-10, Mark 7:14-23; Thursday, 1 Kings 11:4-13, Mark 7:24-30; Friday, 1 Kings 11:29-32; 12:19, Mark 7:31-37; Saturday (Sts. Cyril and Methodius), 1 Kings 12:26-32; 13:33-34, Mark 8:1-10

SMITH & SMITH, PA
Timothy M. Smith, Attorney Jacquelyn A. Smith, Attorney
Members of St. Mark's Church
EXPERIENCED - AGGRESSIVE - CARING
NO FEE UNTIL WE WIN ON PI CASES
FREE INITIAL CONSULTATION
convenient free parking
CRIMINAL LAW: Traffic Tickets (Meck. only), DWI, Expunctions, Felonies & Misdemeanors
PERSONAL INJURY: Auto Accident, Workers' Compensation, Wrongful Death, Whiplash - Back, Neck, Head Injuries
10% off attorney fee—10% of net fee donated to Catholic Social Services Food Pantry
704-331-3092 www.smithandsmithpa.com 900 Baxter St., Suite 109, Charlotte

DO ADS WORK? LISTEN TO THIS:
" We have been very pleased with the readers' response to our ad in The Catholic News & Herald. We advertise our caregiver services in a number of publications and none has produced the interest and response we've received from The Catholic News & Herald."
— Jill B. Stewart, Owner, Visiting Angels
THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD
CALL TODAY for low rates to tell over 125, 000 readers every week about YOUR company! 704-370-3332

ALL IN THE FAMILY

ACROSS
1 Aerie
5 Pertaining to (suffix)
8 Africa ethnic group
12 ___ Day Vitamins
13 Glide
14 Son of 1 Down
15 Spanish yesterday
16 Brother of 34 Down
17 Indonesian island
18 Two-wheeled carriage
20 City in Kansas
22 Olympic cheer
23 Fish eggs
24 "Guys and Dolls" composer
28 Type of orange
32 They exist
33 JFK follower
35 Sum
36 Abraham's wife
39 Moon of Saturn
42 Land east of Eden
44 Train system (initials)
45 "Joan of Arcadia" actor Jason ___
48 Cheer
52 European medical education group (abbr.)
53 First lady?
55 Small amount
56 Venerable English historian
57 Scottish oat
58 Glean
59 Husband of 53 Across
60 Cheerleader's exclamation
61 Cain's brother

DOWN
1 Ark builder
2 "Orinoco Flow" singer
3 Visible
4 Saul's birthplace
5 Abraham's son
6 Jamaican music
7 Indian Ocean sea
8 Jacob
9 Marksman
10 Cain's brother
11 French friend
19 Dutch city
21 Tennis stroke
24 Vegas opener
25 ___ et Labora
26 Doer (suffix)
27 Baseball abbreviation
29 Ait
30 Norfolk, VA school (initials)
31 Medical degree
34 Brother of 14 Across
37 Ayn Rand novel
38 Garden tool
40 In favor of
41 Beethoven symphony
43 Desolate
45 First name in Country Music
46 Glazed
47 Magician's exclamation
49 Egyptian measure
50 Tamarisk
51 Entrance room
54 By way of

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare.
You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you.
At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

PASSIONATE PORTRAYAL

CNS PHOTO FROM ICON PRODUCTIONS

In a scene for Mel Gibson's movie "The Passion," Jesus (Jim Caviezel) is approached by his mother, Mary (Maia Morgenstern), as he carries his cross to the crucifixion.

Pope never commented on film Anti-Defamation League calls 'painful to watch'

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — The Anti-Defamation League said Mel Gibson's film, "The Passion of the Christ," has the "potential to promote anti-Semitism" through its "painful" portrayal of Jews as being responsible for the death of Jesus.

"We were saddened and pained to find that 'The Passion of the Christ' continues its unambiguous portrayal of Jews as being responsible for the death of Jesus," said a statement released Jan. 22, a day after ADL officials attended a private screening of the film in Orlando, Fla.

"Its portrayal of Jews is painful to watch," the statement said.

The film is Gibson's interpretation of the last 12 hours of Christ's life and is set for release in the United States Feb. 25, Ash Wednesday.

League officials Abraham H. Foxman, national director, and Rabbi Gary Bretton-Granatoor, interfaith consultant, who attended the screening, said the film "reinforces the notion that the Jewish authorities and the Jewish mob are the ones ultimately responsible" for crucifying Christ.

The statement said the film portrays "the Jews and a group of sadistic Roman soldiers" as evil. But, while the soldiers eventually feel compassion for Jesus, the Jews "never feel compassion for Jesus and his suffering."

The statement said the ADL was concerned that the film could "fuel latent anti-Semitism" in those who hold the Jews responsible for Jesus' crucifixion.

Archbishop Stanislaw Dziwisz, the pope's longtime personal secretary, denied reports that Pope John Paul said "It is as it was" after watching Gibson's film.

"The Holy Father told no one his opinion of this film," the archbishop told Catholic News Service Jan. 18.

Archbishop Dziwisz watched the film in the pope's apartment with Pope John Paul and with the pope's second secretary in early December. The alleged papal quote has appeared in hundreds of newspapers around the world as an unequivocal endorsement of Gibson's controversial film even though papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls refused to confirm the pope said it.

The co-producer of the film, Steve McEveety, was in Rome in early December to host private screenings of a rough cut of the film for Vatican and other Catholic officials. After the pope and Archbishop Dziwisz watched the film, the archbishop met with McEveety and with Jan Michelini, an assistant director of the film.

According to published reports, McEveety and Michelini said Archbishop Dziwisz told them the pope reacted positively to the film and said, "It is as it was."

But, Archbishop Dziwisz told CNS, "That is not true."

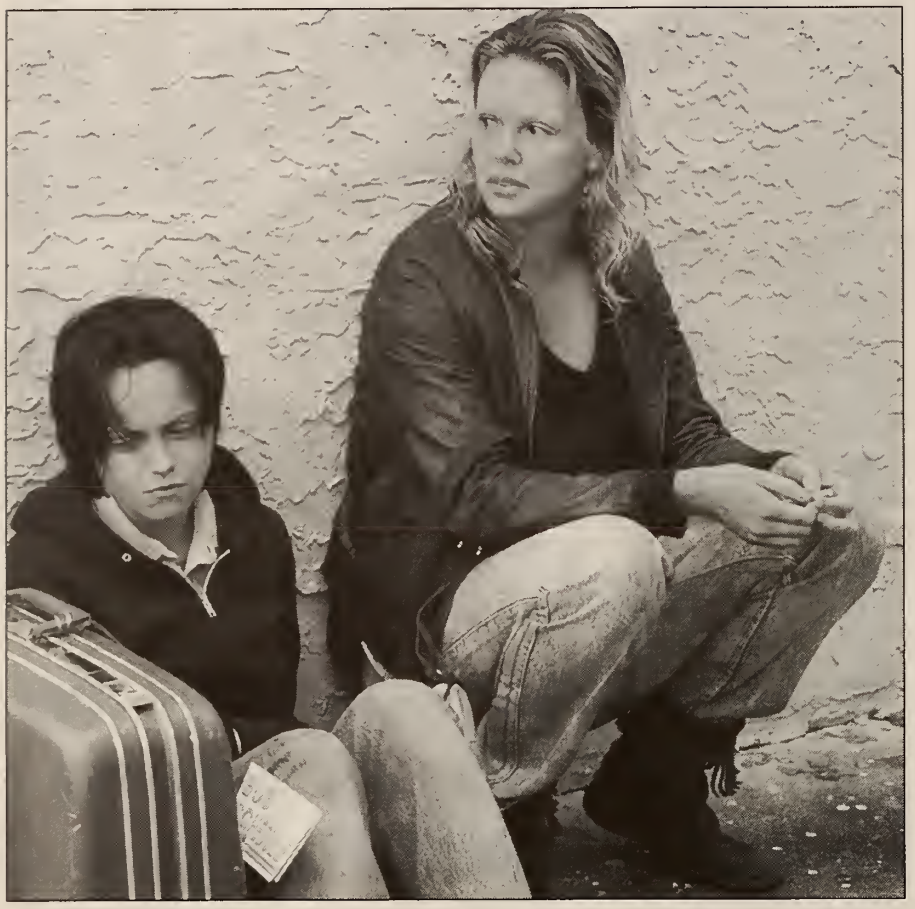
"I said clearly to McEveety and Michelini that the Holy Father made no declaration," the archbishop said.

In a Jan. 22 statement, Navarro-Valls, the papal spokesman, said he had spoken with Archbishop Dziwisz and confirmed that the pope "had the opportunity to watch the film, 'The Passion of the Christ.' The film is a cinematic version of the historic fact of the passion of Jesus Christ according to the Gospel account.

The Anti-Defamation League's statement said "Mel Gibson has every right to say that this is his personal religious vision. But when he says it is historically accurate, that gives us concern, as the film runs contrary to biblical scholarship and the teachings of Vatican II, which absolved the Jewish people of guilt in the death of Jesus."

"We are especially concerned that this telling of the crucifixion narrative is being hawked as a commercial crusade to the church community," the statement said.

'MONSTER' OF A MOVIE



CNS PHOTO FROM NEWMARKET FILMS

Christina Ricci (left) and Charlize Theron in a scene from the fact-based film, "Monster," about serial killer Aileen Wuornos, who was executed in Florida after her conviction in a 1989-90 killing spree.

'Monster' finds humanity among ugliness and depravity

Exceptional performances highlight unexceptional film

BY DAVID DiCERTO
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — "Monster" (Newmarket) — a fictionalized, though fact-based, drama that chronicles the notorious 1989-90 killing spree of serial murderer Aileen Wuornos — is a good example of an exceptional performance wrapped in an unexceptional film.

In examining the woman labeled the "Damsel of Death," first-time writer-director Patty Jenkins walks a fine line, teetering precariously between humanizing Wuornos and justifying her heinous crimes to the point of painting her as a victim.

Charlize Theron plays Wuornos, a roadside prostitute turned killer, arrested and executed by the state of Florida for the murder of six men — only the second female to be put to death in the state's history. The film opens with a montage of dusty memories during which Theron's voiceover recounts Wuornos' bleak past. The painful soliloquy ends on a shot of Wuornos huddled against the rain under an interstate off-ramp cradling a gun in her hands as she contemplates suicide.

Deciding against it, she wanders into a gay bar and is approached by a companionship-starved young woman named Selby Wall (a composite character played by Christina Ricci), a native Midwesterner sent to live with conservative Christian relatives by her parents to "cure her homosexuality." Though Wuornos initially declares her heterosexuality, the two women soon become lovers.

Wall is mesmerized by the older woman's tough-talking bravura — which is really a smokescreen for her depleted sense of confidence and self-esteem. Likewise, Wuornos finds the youthful attention (which she confuses as love) intoxicating, clinging to the minor like a life preserver, afraid to let go lest she succumb to the undertow of utter despair and alienation. The two begin living together in fleabag motels, with Wuornos — after a failed attempt to enter the workforce — resorting again to selling herself as a means of support.

A brutal rape at the hands of a sadistic john — whom Wuornos shoots in self-defense — serves as a psychological trip cord, unleashing her pent-up rage. This sets in motion a murderous 13-month rampage that plays itself out against her ongoing dysfunctional relationship with Wall, culminating in Wuornos' arrest in January 1991.

While the film refrains from sensationalizing her crimes, it fails to shed light on their underlying motivations. Beyond the hurried opening sequence, little time is afforded to her formative years, when she was abandoned by her parents, raped before she was a teen and pregnant before she was old enough to drive. Though no argument can condone her ghastly deeds, a fuller picture of her tragic past would have fostered deeper understanding from viewers, if not sympathy. As a result, Wuornos comes across less as a wounded animal lashing out indiscriminately than as a misogynistic avenging angel.

The narrative also suffers from an absence the victims' families — some of whom were good Samaritans unlucky enough to have offered a ride to the wrong hitchhiker. This decision to focus solely on Wuornos denies viewers a balanced telling of the events and raises questions of the filmmaker's intent. By the midway point, the film loses steam, floundering between a gritty character study and a lesbian soap opera — saved only by Theron's gutsy performance.

Though Theron's portrayal is not without moments of apish mimicking, Theron's eerie metamorphosis is utterly convincing — a disappearing act owing as much to acting ability as to prosthetics.

As a whole, "Monster" attempts to find humanity even among ugliness and depravity and reminds us that — in the words of Florida bishops petitioning a stay of execution for Wuornos — "Aileen Wuornos may not be free of guilt, but her life remains sacred in the eyes of God."

Due to a few lesbian sexual encounters with partial nudity, recurring violence including a rape, stereotyping of conservative Christians, as well as pervasive rough and crude language, the USCCB Office for Film & Broadcasting classification is L — limited adult audience, films whose problematic content many adults would find troubling.

The Motion Picture Association of America rating is R — restricted.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CAREGIVERS: CAREGiving is a Joy! Join us in making a difference in the lives of the elderly. Non-medical companionship & home care. Flexible, part-time, day, evening & weekend hours available. Car needed. Home Instead Senior Care. Call 704.344.9739

DIRECTOR OF MUSIC MINISTRY: Our Lady of Grace Church in Greensboro, NC seeks a full-time professional with at least a bachelor's degree in music, and an in-depth knowledge of Roman Catholic liturgy. Must be fully competent in both organ and piano, and experienced in directing both adult and children's choirs. Responsible for all music activity in a church with over 2,300 families. Full benefits available. Applicants who meet these requirements should send a resume to: OLG Music Ministry, 201 South Chapman Street, Greensboro, NC 27403, or fax it to (336) 274-7326.

OFFICE ASSISTANT: Personal financial planner needs responsible, articulate, detail-oriented person to handle day-to-day office tasks. Responsibilities include: customer service, activity follow-up, filing, scheduling and maintaining contact management database. Planning, investment or insurance experience helpful. Computer skills required. 30 hours per week. Southpark area. Call Cynthia L. Anderson, CFP @ 704- 643-7173 or fax resume to 704-643-7130.

FOR SALE

INSURANCE: Best Health Insurance plans at best rates! Call Mike Wilkinson (704) 845-1416.

SERVICES

SENIOR ENTERTAINMENT: Strolling accordion for special theme dinner nights (German, Irish, Italian, etc.) or 1920 to 1950 music/history programs for luncheons. Bob Wilusz - 704-846-5782.

FOR RENT

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Central Equity Mortgage

PRIME RATE FOR LIFE

Consolidate High-Interest Debt

100% Financing Programs

Low Interest & Interest-only Programs

Interest Rate: 3.75%
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)

No Payment until April 2004!

No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs

TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams.

*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486

*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

The sweet aroma of victory

COURTESY PHOTO

Father Joseph Campellone, president of Father Judge High School in Philadelphia, makes cheese steak for Charlotte Catholic High School. When the Carolina Panthers beat the Philadelphia Eagles in the championship football game Jan. 18, Father Judge High School lost its bet with Charlotte Catholic — as such, Father Campellone must award Gerald Healy, Charlotte Catholic's principal, with an authentic Philadelphia cheese steak. If the Eagles had won, Healy would have sent Father Campellone Carolina barbeque, donated by the Ole Smokehouse in Charlotte. However, Healy sent barbeque to Father Judge High School as a friendly gesture.

Sister Justine Posey, former teacher in Greensboro, dies

Daughter of Charity taught twice at St. Mary School

Daughter of Charity Sister Justice Posey

EMMITSBURG, Md. — Daughter of Charity Sister Justine Posey, who once taught in Greensboro, died at Villa St. Michael in Emmitsburg, where she had been a resident for the past six years. She was 92.

A native of Frederick, Md., she received a bachelor's degree in Latin in 1936 from St. Joseph College in Emmitsburg and a master's degree in social work from Catholic University in 1951.

She entered the Daughters of Charity in 1930 and was a teacher for much of her community life, and taught at St. Mary School in Greensboro from 1941 until 1946, and then again from 1957 until 1961.

She also taught at schools in Albany and Canastota, N.Y.; Baltimore, Md., and Boston, Mass. She served as administrator at St. John's Home in Utica and House of Province in Syracuse, N.Y.

In the later years of her career, Sister Posey worked in health care ministries, serving at hospitals in New York and Pennsylvania.

She is survived by a sister, Daughter of Charity Sister Lauretta Posey, and numerous cousins.

Interment was in the cemetery on the grounds of St. Joseph's Provincial House in Emmitsburg. Memorial contributions may be made to the Daughters of Charity Support Fund for the Elderly and Infirm Sisters, 333 S. Seton Avenue, Emmitsburg, MD 21727.

Mary's Garden
Catholic Books and Gifts

Books and special gifts for ALL occasions!!
704-823-7244
866-823-7244
Tues - Sat: 10 am - 6 pm
3816 South New Hope Rd - Gastonia
(New Hope Small Business Center - Unit #27)
5 miles south of I-85 - Exit 20

IGNITED BY TRUTH
CATHOLIC CONFERENCE 2004

Saturday, February 14th, 2004 8:30 am - 6:00 pm
Cardinal Gibbons Catholic High School, 1401 Edwards Mill Road, Raleigh, NC

Come hear seven great Catholic speakers!

Patrick Madrid, Surprised by Truth, Apologetics Author
"Speak the Truth in Love"

Alex Jones, St. Joseph Communications
"No Price Too High"

Dr. Ray Guarendi, Catholic Answers, Clinical Psychologist
"You Are a Better Parent Than You Think"

Annie Scheidler, Generations for Life Director
"Make a Difference for Life"

Dr. Richard Gildersleeve, Graduate of International Theological Institute
"An Invaluable Resource: The Catechism"

Dr. Robert Young, NC State University Professor
"The Catholic Mind in a Modern World"

Elizabeth and Mark Matthews, Author of Precious Treasure: The Story of Patrick
"To Love Without Counting the Cost"

Vigil Mass celebrated by Fr. Philip Marian Tighe.
For complete details and online registration, visit: www.ignitedbytruth.com Early Registration Discounts are available!

Registration
Admission price includes lunch: $20 adult ($30 after January 25, 2004), $10 college and chaperoned student age 10+ ($15 after January 25, 2004) Donations are welcome and tax deductible!

# of adults: ..... # of students: ..... Optional donation: $..... Total enclosed: $

If you made a donation, we would like to recognize you as a sponsor in our program. Name to be listed: ..... Please do not list my name ☐

Names(first/last): .....
(for name tag printing)
.....
Address: .....
City/State/Zip: ..... Phone: .....
Parish: ..... E-mail: .....

VISA, MasterCard and Discover accepted online at www.ignitedbytruth.com. Hotel packages are available.

Make checks payable and mail to:

St. Anthony of Padua
Catholic Church
c/o Ignited by Truth Conference
424 E. Six Forks Road
Suite 109, PMB 215
Raleigh, NC 27609

Questions? Contact us at:
ignited@ignitedbytruth.com

MOVING?

Take us with you!

Please help us reduce postal fees and give us your NEW address (or cancellation notice) BEFORE you move.

If you have your address label, include that, too.

Name

Old address

Old city zip

NEW address

NEW city/state zip

Date of move/cancellation: .....

Mail changes to:
The Catholic News & Herald
Address Changes
1123 S. Church Street
Charlotte, NC 28203

Or e-mail this info to:
catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

Thank you.

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

Love calls for action

Guest Column

BARBARA GADDY
GUEST COLUMNIST

In his "Contemplation on the Love of God," found in the fourth week of the Spiritual Exercises, St. Ignatius of Loyola makes two important preliminary notes. The first is "love ought to show itself in deeds over and above words; the second is that love consists of a mutual sharing of goods." He goes on to explain "as a lover one gives and shares with the beloved something of one's own personal gifts ... So, too, the beloved shares in a similar way with the lover."

He continues with some specific examples. Someone who has knowledge should share it with someone who does not. If someone has honors or riches, that person should share with someone who has none.

This is really nothing new. St. Luke recalls the preaching of John the Baptist that "the person with two cloaks should share with the person who has none. And whoever has food ought to do likewise." (Luke 3:11)

So what does all of this have to do with the 2004 Diocesan Support Appeal? As someone who directs both the Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius of Loyola and the Diocesan Support Appeal, I found some striking similarities.

The theme of this year's appeal, "The Greatest of These is Love," ought to be a hint. Clearly, love calls for some type of action; it is more than just words or feelings. Newlyweds can't seem to do enough for each other. They send each other love notes, flowers and gifts. They are constantly doing little "acts of kindness" for one another. My love for Jesus must also involve some action. The DSA is one very concrete way to show my love in deeds over and above words or feelings. It is also a means of sharing what I have with others.

Our young people are hungry for knowledge of the faith. Our catechists gladly share their knowledge and understanding with them. The DSA provides resources and workshops for our parish and school catechists to grow in their faith and learn how to teach others. Our parishes need good and holy priests to shepherd them and hard-working deacons to assist. The DSA helps fund seminarian education and diaconate formation.

Throughout the diocese, there are those with no coats and no food, those who are elderly and lonely, families in need of crisis intervention. Catholic Social Services is there to help. The DSA provides funding for approximately one-fourth of the CSS budget. Thousands of Hispanics come to North Carolina each year looking to make a better life for themselves and their families. Once here, they seek a place to worship and pray. Thanks to DSA funding, Hispanic coordinators throughout the diocese are able to help the pastors serve the Spanish-speaking members of their faith communities.

These are just a few of the many ways the DSA is a catalyst for me to put love into action. My contribution to the DSA helps assure that 36 ministries will continue to reach out and bring God's love to others. Just as it is impossible to do something for someone else without being blessed in return. I, too, am blessed beyond measure with God's bountiful grace and love.

Ignatius concludes: "In love, one always wants to give to the other." How can I be a part of the body of Christ and not give to others out of love?

Barbara Gaddy is the associate director of development for the Diocese of Charlotte.

Fire, brimstone demonstrate God's power to defend good

God is on the side of those who strive for good, pope says

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

VATICAN CITY — God's symbolic arsenal of fire and brimstone is not primarily meant to sow fear, but to assure those striving for good that God is on their side, Pope John Paul II said.

"The Lord is not a remote king, closed in his gilded world, but a vigilant presence taking the side of the good and of justice," the pope said Jan. 28 at his weekly general audience.

"He sees and provides, intervening with his word and his action," the pope said.

Focusing his remarks on Psalm 11, the pope said believers draw hope from the psalm's assurance that "the Lord is just; he loves just deeds."

Used in the church's evening prayer, the psalm asserts that God actively takes the side of believers when they "feel alone or powerless in the face of evil," and that God is moved to action when "the just social order" is threatened.

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

The psalm speaks of God raining "upon the wicked fiery coals and brimstone," which the pope described as "symbols of the judgment of God who purifies history, condemning evil."

But the psalm "does not conclude with this tragic picture of punishment and condemnation," he said.

Rather it ends by promising that the upright will see the face of God, "an experience of joyful communion and peaceful trust in the God who frees us from evil," the pope said.

While the pope skipped about a third of his prepared text, his voice was strong, and he spent 25 minutes at the end of the audience greeting individuals, blessing newlyweds dressed in their wedding gowns and suits and posing for photographs with visiting groups.

What is contemplation, and what good is it?

Spirituality for Today

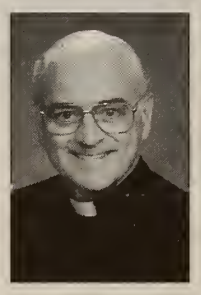
FATHER JOHN CATOIR
CNS Columnist



1. What is contemplation? Contemplation is listening to silence.

2. What good is it to listen to silence? It immediately creates a stillness within you, which frees you from the drudgery of incessant thinking. Besides, the only language God speaks is silence.

3. How does silence equal God? Stillness frees your consciousness from needless worry and useless thought. God is in the silence.

4. Is this stillness a kind of vacuum? No, it is a presence. It is a level of consciousness above thought. It is a way of contacting the real you, the soul, as opposed to the false you, the egoistic self. It is a liberation of sorts.

5. If it is a kind of liberation why aren't more people drawn to it? They are. People are always trying to escape from themselves through sleep, sex, drugs, alcohol and the like. What they don't know is that there is a higher consciousness to which they can ascend. Contemplation enables people to rise above their incessant thinking. By putting yourself down and worrying about the future you become a slave to the tyranny of the mind. Everyone needs a break now and then. Contemplation is a way to escape the inner noise.

6. Contemplation is a form of prayer, isn't it? It is. Pure prayer is found in giving yourself to God. Contemplation is entering the stillness where God lives. At first you simply listen to your own breathing, and then when you are relaxed enough to sense God's presence you simply sit still and enjoy. I wrote a book on this, "Enjoy The Lord" (Alba House). The very act of visiting the Lover within is a way of offering the homage of your being and life to God. The joy of contemplation is prayer of the highest order.

7. How do I know I'm not just imagining God's presence? The indwelling Trinity is always present. You may wish to substitute the name of Jesus for the word presence. "I live, no longer I, but Christ lives in me" (St. Paul). By the grace of God you have become one with him. Even though he is in eternity and you are not, he commingles his life with yours. Even if you don't feel him, he is there.

8. Forgive me, but it feels like I'm just wasting my time when I sit still for too long! Perhaps so, but feelings are not facts. What you actually are doing is shedding your need to do something else. In order to keep up the mad pace of living, you constantly do mindless things. You push yourself endlessly. You don't even know how to stop. But once you let go of all these cravings, you will find peace at the core of your being.

9. What do I really crave? You are seeking fulfillment in external things. You hunger for future fulfillment. But future fulfillment can never bring you joy in the present moment. Craving future happiness takes you immediately out of the present moment, and leaves you always unfulfilled. Give yourself a treat, and return to silence. In the process you will find your true self.

St. Benedict said, "Know yourself." To know yourself you must learn to stop identifying with your ceaseless thinking. You are not your thoughts. You are the observer of your thoughts. Contemplation enables you to observe yourself thinking. In the process you push aside your worries and become one with the Lover within.

February: Month of love

Guest Column

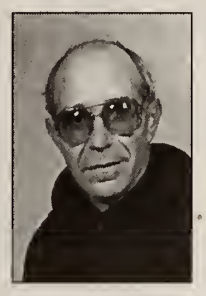
FATHER JOHN AURILIA, OFM Cap



I really like the idea of February as the month of love, because of the Valentine's tradition. Love truly deserves more than a month. For now, let's get what we can!

We all know that life is love, after all, in whatever way it is lived on a day-to-day basis. Anyone can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Anyone can do his or her work, however hard, for one day. Anyone can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly until the sun goes down. This is all that life really means.

Love is a commitment to reach our full potential today, using and not wasting our skills and talents. Great things happen when we build and shape, day after day, our loving and positive attitude.

Physical touch is one of the five love languages of children, including quality time, words of affirmation, gifts and acts of service. St. Matthew relates to us an event that shows the power of touch: "There was a leper ... Jesus stretched out his hand and touched him, saying ... be made clean." (Mt. 8:1-3) That's the touch of love.

The Mayo Clinic Health Letter (June 1994) noted a small but growing group of researchers is finding that touch has the subtle power to calm, nurture and help heal. The letter noted that touch is the first of our senses to develop and usually the last to diminish.

Earlier in this century, pediatricians noticed babies in orphanages and hospitals who were not held and cuddled failed to grow and often died. Studies of long-term nursing home residents showed those who were frequently touched when given their medication, demonstrated a more positive attitude about themselves. Research has shown a caring touch can possibly subdue heart irregularities, relieve depression and lower blood pressure.

We can extend a loving touch through the words we speak. In the case of the leper, mentioned above, Jesus spoke the words, "Be made clean." In the case of the centurion, Jesus spoke the words, "Go; let it be done for you according to your faith."

We too can touch people's lives through the affirming, uplifting, encouraging words that we speak. I often forget the potential power of the spoken word.

We can touch people's lives through love by the way we listen.

American history tells us Abraham Lincoln had a common touch with the stories of his gentle but penetrating wit; the simple and beautiful eloquence of his speeches has assured him a place in our hearts. While George Washington is called the father of our country, Lincoln is called the "savior" of our country. Adamant and unswerving in time of peril, he was a simple man who could find the time to stop and discuss with a small girl whether his appearance might be improved by a beard.

In the rush of affairs of the State, he found time to write to Mrs. Bixby, bereaved by the reported death of her five sons, a letter that is a masterpiece of simplicity, sincerity and sympathy. Lincoln once remarked God must have loved the common people because He made so many of them.

Dear Mr. President, you're right! God said, "Love as I loved you." (Jn. 13:34)

In a world filled with superficial, emotional, shallow, dysfunctional love, Jesus showered his love on us, even though we did not deserve it. We live in a performance-orientated society in which people come to a feeling of personal worth because of their performance. This makes it difficult for us to understand unmerited love. Jesus loved his disciples, not because they were lovely, but because he was loving.

Speaking about love, sometimes the appearance of lack of love or presence of love may be deceiving. The following story may be an example:

Mrs. Smith waited in the outer office while her husband was being seen by a doctor.

The doctor came out of the office and said to his secretary, "Get me a pair of pliers."

She went out of the office, came back with pliers and took them in to him.

Later, he came out asking for a screwdriver. She obtained one and took it in.

The doctor came out again, and Mrs. Smith approached him, "What in the world is wrong with my husband?"

"I don't know yet," said the doctor. "I can't get the door open to my examination room."

Yes, God gave us all the tools to open wide the examination room (our heart). Do not be afraid: today reach out and touch someone.

'The Greatest of These is Love'

From the Bishop

MOST REV. PETER J. JUGIS
BISHOP OF CHARLOTTE

The theme of this year's Diocesan Support Appeal, "The Greatest of These is Love," echoes the motto I chose at the ordination last Oct. 24, "The Love of Christ Impels Us." The word that unites both themes is "love."

We are able to love God because God first loves us. God loves each one of us unconditionally — layperson, religious or clergy; single or married; young or young-at-heart. Our response to the love of Christ is shown in how we love and care for one another. Remember, Jesus said, "Whatever you do for the least of my brothers and sisters, you do for me." We are able to serve our brothers and sisters because of the great love that Jesus has for us. He showed us the way; we are called to respond.

The ministries funded by the DSA give us the opportunity to respond.

I have had the privilege of experiencing the DSA from several vantage points.

First as a parishioner, I recognized the importance of supporting the ministries of the diocese. Then as a pastor, I saw the many ways DSA-funded ministries helped members of the parishes I had been called to serve.

The faith formation directors, catechists, youth ministers and RCIA team members found the Office of Faith Formation to be a valuable resource. I relied heavily on the help from Hispanic coordinators to serve the needs of the growing Hispanic communities. The seniors in my parishes looked forward to programs like the Spring Fling, sponsored by Catholic Social Services Elder Ministry program. Engaged couples planning for a lifetime of marriage found the CSS Marriage Preparation program helped them focus on life beyond the wedding day.

As a pastor, I certainly knew many parishioners who benefited from one or more of the DSA-funded ministries.

Now as your bishop, I realize that I must rely on the expertise of our diocesan ministry leaders to help me respond to the many and diverse needs of all of our brothers and sisters throughout the diocese. I must respond to the needs of all parishes — from the smallest to the largest — across the diocese. All the while, I am confident that it is the love of Christ that impels us to reach out in love to others.

Yes, as St. Paul said, "There are in the end three things that last; faith, hope and love, and the greatest of these is love."

I ask you to consider prayerfully the great love Jesus has for you and to respond with a gift to the Diocesan Support Appeal.

Is cremation a serious sin?

Question Corner

FATHER JOHN DIETZEN
CNS COLUMNIST

Q. My aunt died recently at the age of 92. Her son, in charge of funeral arrangements, had his mother cremated after the funeral Mass and buried her ashes in the cemetery near her family.

Shortly afterward, the same was done for a deceased friend. Another friend told me that it is a serious sin for a Catholic to be cremated. What does the church or the Bible say about cremation? (New York)

A. At one period during the past few hundred years, certain anti-Christian groups promoted cremation as a way of rejecting belief in the resurrection. The Catholic Church, and other Christians, prohibited it for that reason. It's been a long time, however, since that argument was raised, so cremation is no longer forbidden.

Traditional burial is still preferred, but economic, family or other factors sometimes make cremation an understandably practical choice. At present, more than one-fifth of American Catholics choose cremation, and the church's funeral ritual explicitly provides ceremonies for those who have been or will be cremated.

As in the funerals you describe, the body of the deceased person should, if possible, be present for all funeral liturgies — vigil service, Mass and prayers of commendation after Mass.

In this circumstance, cremation takes place later, and the ashes are buried in a cemetery or mausoleum. Ashes should not be scattered over water or land, or kept in one's house or closet, as some people apparently have done. In other words, cremated remains should be treated with the same dignity given to the deceased body.

Inhumation (traditional burial) was almost universal in ancient Jewish Near East culture, so there would be no reason for cremation to be discussed in the Bible. Not to be buried was considered such a great curse that even executed criminals received a decent burial.

Finally, it is good to be reminded that individuals considering cremation should carefully and thoroughly discuss their plans with their family. Many people still find accompanying the body to the grave, and later visiting the site of the burial, a significant part of grieving.

Thus, especially when children are involved, parents, grandparents and others should explain what will happen and be certain the children are psychologically and spiritually prepared.

St. Charles Borromeo Church is tribute to diverse Catholicism

PHOTO BY GEORGE K. COBB

St. Charles Borromeo Church in Morganton was constructed in 1961 to accommodate the growing needs of Catholics in the area.

St. Charles Borromeo Church
728 West Union Street
Morganton, N.C. 28655
(828) 437-3108

Vicariate: Hickory
Pastor: Father Kenneth Whittington
Deacon: Rev. Mr. James R. Johnson
Number of Households: 600

Father Kenneth Whittington

MORGANTON — In his 19th-century book, "Catholicity in the Carolinas and Georgia," Father J.J. O'Connell writes about the missionary region of Burke County, where visiting priests and Bishop (later Cardinal) James Gibbons, vicar apostolic of North Carolina, preached at the close of the Civil War at the county courthouse, located in Morganton.

The description by Father O'Connell, the Benedictine missionary who offered the estate that Belmont Abbey was founded on, serves as an introductory report of the Catholic Church in Morganton, where St. Charles Borromeo Church now exists as a thriving community of faith.

By the end of the 1800s, the sacrament of confirmation had been conferred in Morganton, although there is no further recorded organized activity — beyond sporadic visits from priests — until the 1920s.

The first Mass in town was celebrated in a private residence in November 1929. Eight people attended. By the mid-1940s, Mass was being said on a weekly basis at the courthouse and in a private home.

St. Charles Borromeo Church was established in the fall of 1947, when the Diocese of Raleigh purchased a tract of land on West Union Street in Morganton that would provide the congregation a place to worship.

The first Mass was offered on the newly acquired property in October 1947. The clergy assigned to St. Aloysius Church in Hickory traveled to Morganton to celebrate weekend liturgies.

The parish community grew rapidly in the late 1940s and 1950s, and Father William T. McShea, who served at St. Aloysius Church, was appointed the first resident pastor of St. Charles Borromeo Church in October 1950.

As the number of families worshipping at St. Charles Borromeo Church continued to grow, the existing church space became inadequate. The present church, located at a different site along West Union Street, was constructed in 1961.

By 1980, about 200 families were registered as parishioners of St. Charles Borromeo Church.

Thanks to the leadership of Father John Murray, pastor, the parish welcomed an addition to the existing church building in 1988.

Containing offices, faith formation classrooms, a community hall and a kitchen, the addition now known as Murray Hall — in memory of Father Murray, who died in 1997 — has facilitated new growth as well as spiritual and social life in the parish.

Multicultural ministry is strong at St. Charles Borromeo Church, with Masses being celebrated regularly in English, Spanish and Hmong.

On Nov. 14, 1996, the Hmong parishioners celebrated with a special Mass the Hmong New Year for the first time in the Diocese of Charlotte. They also celebrated the arrival of Pe Lis, the new Hmong catechist for the diocese. Part of Lis' job was to combine Hmong traditions with the traditions of the Catholic Church.

"I see our coming together today as a great gift from God," said Father Kenneth Whittington, the current pastor, at the celebration Mass. "We grow rich from each other's cultures even as we become brothers and sisters in God."

In August 1996, Father Whittington spoke outside the Burke County courthouse to support striking workers from Case Farms poultry processing plant, of whom were many Hispanic parishioners from St. Charles Borromeo Church.

The ethnically diverse parish in Morganton now comprises about 600 households. Father Whittington has served as pastor of St. Charles Borromeo Church since 1992.

Volunteerism is also a highlight of parish life, with many parishioners devoting time at various outreach centers in Morganton, from the local soup kitchen to a prison, a senior center to a health clinic.

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336
Biggest Selection
Drivers wanted.
Lowest Prices
"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel
#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

CFCC
Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center
Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity
5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com
Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

FEBRUARY 6, 2004

SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE

VOLUME 13 № 19

Parish Profile:
ST. JAMES CHURCH
| PAGE 16

Fostering God's love

Photo by Karen A. Evans

se Ferri rocks her foster son in her home in north Charlotte. "There's no greater reward, other being a mother," Ferri said of her experiences as a foster mother.

CSS entrusts precious souls to foster families

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — Louise Ferri is a unique kind of mother, one who touches the lives of many different children.

"I love babies," said Ferri, a foster mother for Catholic Social Services (CSS) for more than 12 years. "When my husband passed away, I said 'What am I going to do with myself? I know — I'll be a foster mother.'"

Ferri is among those who, with the dedication of social workers, help children to be cared for in loving Catholic homes in the Diocese of Charlotte.

When people hear the

See FOSTER CARE, page 9

PEACE, JUSTICE, LUNCH

Just Second Fridays asks purpose of business

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Can faith guide business decisions?

Dr. Terry Armstrong will address that and other business/faith-related concerns during "Shareholder vs. Stakeholder Value: Competing or Complementary Interests?" at the next Just Second Fridays, the educational luncheon speaker series of the diocesan Office of Justice and Peace, sponsored in partnership with St. Peter Church in Charlotte.

Armstrong, director of the Woodstock Business Conference (WBC) and of the Father Pedro Arrupe Program in Social Ethics for Business at Georgetown University in Washington, works with the WBC's 20 chapters in the United States to promote a sense of calling among business leaders, and develops materials to facilitate ethical reflection in business.

Armstrong will to address a number of ethical concerns, including how faith can be incorporated into business and how "shareholder" and "stakeholder" positions relate to beliefs, values, corporate action and social responsibility.

Just Second Fridays, held the second Friday of each month in the Annex Building of St. Peter Church, are designed to cover a variety of topics on justice, peace and business ethics. Joan Rosenhauer of the U.S. Catho-

See JUSTICE, page 8

HOLIC SCHOOLS WEEK 2004

ocesan schools participate in aith-Filled Future'

KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — holic Schools: A Faith- d Future" was the theme ne 30th annual celebration atholic Schools Week Jan. 1.

The purpose of the week to build support and rec- tion for the more than 8,000 Catholic elementary and secondary schools nationwide, including the 17 schools in the Diocese of Charlotte. Bad weather forced several schools to cancel or postpone scheduled events.

"While the weather certainly kept us from getting out

See SCHOOLS, page 6

Photo by Susan deGuzman

Bishop Peter J. Jugis greets a student after celebrating Mass with St. Leo the Great School students for Catholic Schools Week.

Reaching out
Asheville students are God's hands, heart
| PAGE 4

Making a difference
TRACS Foundation helps schools
| PAGE 7

Beating bullying
Immaculata School initiates tolerance program
| PAGE 13

#EXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275
#420836#
NC COLLECTION
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
UNC
CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
S234 P2

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

CHAPLAIN AND COFFEE TO GO

CNS PHOTO COURTESY FATHER HENINGER

Military chaplain Father Michael Heninger and an unidentified soldier from his unit share coffee with an Iraqi man during the priest's tour in Iraq. Father Heninger, a priest of the Atlanta Archdiocese, told the Miami archdiocesan newspaper, The Florida Catholic, that Iraqis were "looking forward to a new Iraq, their Iraq."

Chaplains, letters from home provide support for soldiers

MIAMI — Support for soldiers in the field comes from military chaplains, and two priests who recently returned from the Middle East talked about their experiences with The Florida Catholic, Miami archdiocesan newspaper, during a retreat in Fort Lauderdale.

Father Michael Heninger, a priest of the Atlanta Archdiocese who holds the rank of captain as an Army chaplain, said he adhered to a simple motto in Iraq: "Keep my spirits up and my head down."

Father Heninger, who entered the Iraqi capital of Baghdad with a support battalion of the 1st Brigade Combat Team, said the Iraqi people "were just very grateful to have the terror that had just been over their heads for so long be dissipated. They were looking forward to a new Iraq, their Iraq."

Father Patrick Ratigan, a priest of the Diocese of Odgensburg, N.Y., who holds the rank of major, spent last summer in Fallujah, Iraq, where U.S. soldiers have encountered most of the resistance.

"I never want to see so much violence again," he said. "It's all around you. You're surrounded by violence."

Father Ratigan stressed, however, that U.S. soldiers in Iraq are professionals who know the importance of their mission and are committed to it.

"Almost without exception, they believe in the mission," he said. "They realize they're bringing freedom to these people."

For Catholic Schools Week Jan. 25-31, students at St. Francis Xavier School in Lake Station, Ind., sent drawings and letters to military personnel who, for various reasons, have been forgotten or who are receiving little mail. The school's student council also collected items that soldiers have requested — coloring books, crayons and other treats for Iraqi children.

The project started when Staff Sgt. Brian Crissman, a St. Francis Xavier graduate, sent an e-mail to his former school before Christmas. He provided Carol Brendza, principal at the small school in northwest Indiana, with a list of soldiers serving in the Middle East and some information about each soldier's circumstances.

The principal assigned certain soldiers to different classes. Kindergarteners drew pictures. First-graders drew hearts. Starting with second grade, St. Francis students wrote messages.

Sixteen named to U.S. bishops' National Advisory Council

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Adriana Vlasic of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., will serve for 2004 as chairwoman of the U.S. bishops' National Advisory Council, which recently added 16 new members.

The 63-member council meets semiannually to review documentation and offer recommendations concerning matters before the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Other new officers for 2004 are Mercy Sister Linda Werthman of Farmington Hills, Mich., chairwoman-elect; Rose Hogan of Anna, Ill., secretary; Juan Escobar of Pottstown, Pa., internal affairs; Father William D. Hammer, Louisville, Ky., reactive chairman; and Msgr. Richard Sniezyk, Springfield, Mass., proactive chairman.

Joining the council as a representative from the Council of Major Superiors of Women Religious is Sister M. Maximilia Um, a member of the Siste of St. Francis of the Martyr St. Geor from Washington.

New diocesan priest represent tives, elected to four-year terms, are F ther Kenneth S. Van Haverbek Wichita, Kan.; Father Richard Veg Lompoc, Calif.; and Father James Wall of Phoenix.

New regional lay representativ who also serve four-year terms, i clude: John Deckro of Cape Elizabe Maine; Marie Hilliard of Cant Conn.; Shane Goettle of Woodbrid Va.; Lourdes Travieso-Parker Gloucester, Va.; Patrick Quinn Grand Rapids, Mich.; Leslie Young Columbus, Ohio; Johnnie Dorsey Sr. Austin, Texas; Alicia Alvarez of Lu bock, Texas; Douglas Rodrigues Loma Linda, Calif.; Gwendol Mitsui of Mililani, Hawaii; Freder M. Fisher Jr. of New Bern, N. Rebeca Boudreaux of Plymouth, N.

Diocesan planner

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — The next (Catholic Adult Faith Exploring (CAFE) will be Feb. 9 at 7:30 p.m. in New Life Center, room 204, at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. Father Duc Duong will be facilitating a roundtable discussion about socially responsible investing and consumerism, entitled "Where's Your Piggy Going to Market?" Click on http://home.Catholicweb.com/stmattewff/ for links to the Catholic articles for discussion. Call Sue VanderJeugdt, (704) 541-8362 ext. 4, with questions.

CHARLOTTE — All are invited to Lunch-N-Learn as St. Matthew parishioner Barbara Gardner speaks about deepening prayer life on the journey into Lent, with some hands-on activities Feb. 11 at 12 p.m. in the New Life Center at St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. Call Sue VanderJeugdt, (704) 541-8362 ext. 4, to make a reservation for lunch.

CHARLOTTE — "Just Second Fridays" is a luncheon speaker series on social justice topics that meets the second Friday of each month, 1-2 p.m. in the Annex Building of St. Peter Church, 507 S. Tryon St. Dr. Terry Armstrong, director of the Arrupe Program in Social Ethics for Business and Woodstock Business Conference, will present "Shareholder vs. Stakeholder Value" Feb. 13. Parking is available in the underground garage next to the church. For details call (704) 370-3225.

CHARLOTTE — Catholic Singles of Charlotte will be hosting a Valentine's Day Social Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. All single parishioners are welcome to attend. This is a free event, snacks and sodas will be served. Call Laure (704) 554-0188 for additional information.

CHARLOTTE — In an effort to offer comf hope, support and peace to couples who experiencing or have experienced the Chall of Infertility, the community of St. Matthe offering a special Mass Feb. 17 at 7:30 p.m the Daily Mass Chapel of St Matthew Chu 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy. Those atte ing are invited to a reception that will follo the Narthex for fellowship and support. Pra and resource material will also be available. details, call Aliceann Coon at (704) 540-8 Sponsored by the Family Enrichment Com tee and Elizabeth Ministry.

CHARLOTTE — The next Women's Talk take place at St. Vincent de Paul Church, 6 Old Reid Rd., Feb. 18 at 7 p.m. For n information, contact Peggy Pohlheber at ( 588-7311.

CHARLOTTE — Totty Lee of Hospic Charlotte will present "Children and Grief" 18, 7-9 p.m. in the St. Gabriel Ministry Ce 3016 Providence Rd. All are invited to learn death impacts children. Topics covered wi how children understand death at different how children grieve, what to say and not t to help children and how families can wor gether to heal after a loss. For details, cal Dengler at (704) 704-364-5431 ext. 212.

CHARLOTTE — St. Gabriel Church, Providence Rd., is sponsoring a progra welcome back inactive Catholics and/or those have left the Church but are interested in re ing to the practice of the Catholic faith. Catholics Returning Home series will meet days through Feb. 15, 3:30-5 p.m. For information, call Sue Johnson at (704) 333-

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

FEBRUARY 6, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 19

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is publis the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly exc Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks June; July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in p of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 p for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald re the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason c appropriate. We do not recomm guarantee any product, service or claimed by our advertisers. Secon postage paid at Charlotte NC and othe POSTMASTER: Send address correc The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

At Mass marking feast of Presentation, pope cites role of religious

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The early 1 million members of Catholic eligious orders have a vital role to play modern evangelization, said Pope ohn Paul II.

The pope praised the work of reli- ious men and women at a Mass in St. eter's Basilica Feb. 2 marking the ast of the Presentation of the Lord and ie eighth annual World Day for Con- crated Life.

"In the intimacy of the monastic oister or working next to the poor and arginalized, among youths or inside clesial structures, in the various apos- lic activities or in mission lands, God ants you faithful to his love and com- etely dedicated to the good of others," the pope said in a sermon.

"Continue to dedicate yourselves with passion to announcing and pro- moting (God's) kingdom. This is your mission, necessary today as in the past," he said.

Thousands of religious priests, nuns and brothers held candles at the start of the Mass. The pope blessed the candles during the "liturgy of light," gave the sermon and led a prayer of thanksgiving for the gift of consecrated life.

According to Vatican statistics, the number of men and women members of religious orders totaled about 986,000 at the end of 2001, with 792,300 nuns and 193,600 priests and brothers.

HARLOTTE — Learn why saving sex for mar- ge is loving, life and soul-saving advice in a ecial presentation for parents, pastors, coun- ors, teachers, youth directors and young ults. Jason Evert, Catholic apologist, will eak at St. Vincent de Paul Church, 6828 Old id Rd., Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. For more informa- n, contact Diane Hoefling, St. Vincent de Paul spect Life coordinator/Catholic Schools pro- volunteer at (704) 541-3760 or email @ ef541@aol.com.

HARLOTTE — A four-part series, "Under- nding Your Late Life Choices," will be pre- ted at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence ., Thursdays Feb. 5-26, 10-11:30 a.m. Topics l include protecting your home and assets, sing and in-home care, Medicare/Medicaid l long-term care. For reservations, call B.J. ngler at (704) 364-5431, ext. 212.

EENSBORO VICARIATE

REENSBORO, — St. Pius X Church will nmemorate African American history in the tholic Church Feb. 15 during the 11.30 am ss. Msgr. Mauricio West will be the guest ebrant with Msgr. Anthony Marcaccio, pas- Lunch will be served directly after Mass.

HEBORO — St Joseph Church welcomes nedictine Father David Draim and nedictine Abbot Patrick Shelton to present next program in our Spiritual Pathways se- , "The Benedictines: Work and Prayer" as y share practical monastic values for Chris- is living in the real everyday world. The gram will be held Feb.18 at 7 p.m. at The Salt , Randolph Senior Adults Center, 133 W. inman Ave. For details call the St. Joseph rch office at (336) 629-6221.

EENSBORO — Theology on Tap will meet sdays in February at 7 p.m. at "Anton's" Battleground Ave. Contact ensborotot@yahoo.com for more informa- .

GH POINT — Immaculate Heart of Mary rch, Johnson St. and Skeet Club Rd., will r free basic and intermediate Spanish classes rsdays. 7-8:30 p.m. Classes through Feb. To register, call Nancy Skee at (336) 884- 2.

KORY VICARIATE

CKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the nd and fourth Wednesday of each month at p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, Second St. NE. For more information, call church office at (828) 327-2341.

SALISBURY VICARIATE

MOORESVILLE — Seniors ages 55 and up are invited to St. Therese Church, 217 Brawley School Rd., the second Saturday of each month following the 5:30 Mass for Senior Games Night, featuring games and a pot-luck dinner. Call Barbara Daigler at (704) 662-9752 for details.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

CANTON — Immaculate Conception Church, 42 Newfound Rd., will conduct one-hour sessions each Thursday through Feb. 26 on "The Precepts of the Catholic Church." Sessions will start at noon — bring your lunch; drinks will be provided. Discussions are open to anyone who wants to know more about church teachings or to review what you learned many years ago. For more information, call Dot and Chuck Luce at (828) 648-7369.

WAYNESVILLE — St. John Church, 234 Church St., will hold a Valentine Party Feb. 14 at 7 p.m. in the church hall. Music will be provided by Sound Explosion. For more information, call the church office at 456-6707.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

CLEMMONS — Seekers, an outreach ministry to inactive Catholics, will begin at Holy Family Church, 4820 Kinnamon Rd., Feb. 17 at 7:30 p.m. Join us for these informal listening sessions and an update of the Catholic faith. Contact the church office at (336) 778-0600 x 0 to register. For more information, please contact Carmel Pittaway at (336) 766-0650.

WINSTON-SALEM — Learn Natural Family Planning taught by the Couple to Couple League. A four-part series of classes will begin Feb. 15 at 1:30 p.m. at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For registration and information, call Stephanie and Todd Brown at (336) 765-2909.

Is your parish or school having an event? Please submit notices for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Vatican official defends different roles for men, women

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The Catholic Church's insistence that the differences between men and women are real is not the basis for discrimination but for recognizing the value of each person, said the president of the Pontifical Council for the Laity.

Polish Archbishop Stanislaw Rylko hosted a Jan. 30-31 seminar at the Vatican with about 50 men and women on "Men and Women: Diversity and Reciprocal Complementarity" to discuss changing cultural notions of male and female identity and to look at ways to promote church teaching on the subject.

"The culture of our time is questioning what it means to be human" and is doing so in a way "that goes so far as to contort the understanding of sexual identity and relations between the sexes," said Archbishop Rylko.

Pretending there are no differences between men and women "has repercussions for the future of humankind," he said.

Archbishop Rylko said Catholic Church teaching, particularly under Pope John Paul II, has emphasized the dignity and equality of men and women while upholding the truth about differences between them.

The differences, he said, are not simply physical, but stem from being born male or female, and if one ignores those differences, one is not recognizing the full dignity of each person.

Archbishop Rylko said challenges the church faces in promoting its teaching include:

— Finding ways to support "the role of the family in the difficult task of the formation of the sexual identity of children, which is particularly difficult today because of the profound and widespread crisis of the figure of the father."

— Promoting real collaboration between men and women in the church, including giving more visibility to laymen to counter "the widespread cliche that religion is a 'woman's thing.'"

— Finding ways to communicate the church's teaching "on the dignity of the human person, on human love, marriage and the family."

At all costs

CNS PHOTO BY DECLAN WALSH

Children pack the Rural Focus Uganda shelter in Gulu in December last year. Called "night commuters," the youngsters leave their rural homes in northern Uganda every night for Gulu, an army-protected area, in an effort to escape potential abduction by members of an armed rebel group.

Let stairs be our problem... not yours!

Ask about our Stairway lifts.

- Easily attached to steps (not walls)
- Folds out of the way
- Fits most stairways (straight & curved)
- Very affordable (rent or buy)
- We install

Chair & Equipment Rentals & Sales, Inc.

800 Central Ave. • Charlotte, NC • (800) 333-8431

Member of St. Thomas Aquinas

Asheville students are hands, heart of God

Quilts, outreach ministry highlighted at ceremony

BY CAROLE McGROTTY
CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — Although most Asheville-area schools were closed, Asheville Catholic School students didn't let snow flurries keep them from the opening ceremony for Catholic Schools Week Jan. 28, which had already been postponed two days due to inclement weather.

An assembly of students, faculty and guests in the auditorium emphasized the school's outreach ministry, in which each class focuses on a group or organization to help during the school year.

PHOTO BY CAROLE McGROTTY

Principal Virginia Hutton and students stand by quilts made by students at Asheville Catholic School Jan. 28.

Three quilts made by students under the guidance of visiting artist Norma Bradley formed a colorful backdrop on stage at the gathering as attendees sang, "Be the hands, the heart of God."

Bradley taught sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders the technique for making quilt blocks. The students made the large blocks that form the center of each quilt, and then helped younger students make smaller blocks and trace their hands onto fabric that formed the borders of each quilt.

Sayings written by students form the outer bindings of the quilts.

In addition to making quilts, students brought in family quilts, as did members of the faculty and staff. One great-grandmother drove 105 miles from South Carolina to share her family quilts, some dating back to the 1700s.

Honored guests representing various community organizations received autographed pictures of the students who aided their organizations.

Principal Virginia Hutton accepted a plaque of appreciation on behalf of the school from John Lauderterbach, director of Caring for Children, which helps families in crisis. He said Asheville Catholic students collected hundreds of gifts and gave many children a Christmas they wouldn't have had otherwise.

Other outreach offerings included first-graders who wrote cards to elderly and shut-in parishioners of St. Eugene Church in Asheville.

Second- through fourth-graders visited elderly residents in care facilities — they entertained, made cards, helped with bingo cards and baked cookies for special occasions.

Fifth-graders learned to accept the differences of mentally and physically challenged children by reading, playing games and interacting with them at Estes Elementary School. This emphasis on the spiritual growth of each child continues through eighth grade as they become more involved each year.

Anita Lovejoy of the Emma School in Asheville spoke about the eighth-graders who help each week in the English as a Second Language program, helping younger students learn and i prove their English.

James Bowles of Manna Food Ba praised the sixth-graders who ha logged 800 hours of service in the p two years. Seventh-graders are also volved in food service, helping prep and serve lunch in homeless shelters.

In the afternoon, students enjoye movie and treats for Student Apprec tion Day. Luncheons honoring volu teers and faculty finished the week Thursday and Friday.

PHOTO BY CAROLE McGR

Quilts made by students under the guidance of a visiting artist were display during a Jan. 28 Catholic Schools Week ceremony at Asheville Catholic School.

HAPPY CATHOLIC SCHOOLS WEEK!

ACT
OFFICE CITY
11515 Vanstory Dr. - #110 A
Huntersville Business Park
Huntersville, NC 28078
(704) 875-0432 (800) 345-6392
Fax (704) 875-8128
America's Office Supplier • Serving the Charlotte area since 1970

Celebrate Catholic Schools Week!

J&L SERVICES
655 Pressley Road, Suite L, Charlotte, NC 28217
(704) 523-9032
COFFEE · VENDING · SUPPLIES
J&L SERVICES

More than 50 years of summer fun and growth in the Blue Ridge Mountains with outstanding Christian staff!
Please call for a brochure and free video or visit our Web sites.
Camp Merri-Mac for Girls
Merri-Mac for Girls
Timberlake for Boys
1123 Montreat Road
Black Mountain, NC 28711
828-669-8766
www.merri-mac.com
www.camptimberlake.com
CAMP TIMBERLAKE for boys

Where do you want your child?
... in a safe, happy environment for learning and formation of virtue and character ...

Centered on Christ
Focused on Excellence

We offer grades K-5 in a curriculum within the Catholic intellectual and spiritual tradition, emphasizing the Church's teaching authority It consists of an ordered series of courses in religion, phonics-based reading, grammar, literature, mathematics, social studies, and science. Effective up-to-date materials are used in this college preparatory program.

PRESENT THIS AD FOR $100 OFF REGISTRATION FEE

Open House to meet parents and teachers Fri., Feb. 20, 10 am — 2 pm

WE WELCOME ALL FAMILIES WHO WANT THE BEST FOR THEIR CHILDREN AT A VERY AFFORDABLE COS
Call us for a private tour today! 704-841-229
Blessed Sacrament Academy
2024 Sam Newell Road, Matthews, NC 28105-4529
(Behind Windsor Square Shopping Center)
A private academy, independent of Charlotte diocesan schools

Triad Catholic schools weather winter storm

School Masses, events hindered by chilly climate

BY SUSAN DEGUZMAN
CORRESPONDENT

WINSTON-SALEM — A few riad-area Catholic schools scrambled celebrate Catholic Schools Week nidst snow days and delayed openings n. 26-30.

St. Leo the Great and Our Lady of ercy schools in Winston-Salem were en for only two days. Some schools, ch as Bishop McGuinness Catholic gh School in Kernersville, stayed osed the entire week.

Many events planned for Catholic hools Week at the schools had to be arranged.

A visit from Bishop Peter J. Jugis ghlighted events at St. Leo the Great hool during the shortened week. In his mily, the bishop said this was the only hool Mass not cancelled due to the ather.

"We are so fortunate to have the hop with us today. His presence is a ssing to all our children, and to the t of us," said Principal Georgette nraeder.

Bishop Jugis joined the teachers, ff and parish priests after the Mass in special luncheon prepared by the hool's parent volunteers.

One of the school Masses cancelled was at Bishop McGuinness.

"Our Catholic identity is a primary focus at Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School," said Principal George Repass. "We were looking forward to having the bishop come and be with us. His presence would be truly inspirational and energizing for our high school students."

Repass said the school plans to have Bishop Jugis back in the near future.

Gestures of appreciation to the faculty and students were two activities the school was able to salvage, according to Repass. Parents provided homemade dishes for a teachers' luncheon and the school provided a free lunch for students the following Monday, which coincided with the school's "Spirit Week."

Important aspects of Catholic Schools Week are open house days. Parent volunteers Elen Polselli, Carolee Ronan, Julie McCabe and Scott Saffer were on hand at Our Lady of Mercy School Jan. 29 to provide tours for families interested in Catholic education.

"I am very pleased with our turnout today," said Principal Sandra McMonagle. "We gave about a dozen tours in just a few hours."

Although Our Lady of Mercy School missed its "Hats Off to the Teachers" event on Monday and Student Appreciation Day on Wednesday, McMonagle said the school got in a little something for everyone on Thursday and Friday.

Kindergarteners paraded through the school in their homemade penguin outfits (penguins being a subject of their studies) and all students had the chance to participate in "Silly Sock Day."

Students from both Our Lady of Mercy and St. Leo the Great School were treated to the entertainment of magicians.

Winston-Salem Mayor Allen Joines' visit to St. Leo the Great School was also postponed. Students looked forward to telling the mayor about their community service project, in which the entire student body participated in filling almost 100 "Lift Your Spirit" bags with treats and Bible passages.

The bags will go to the police and firefighters in the community. The students look forward to a postponed date for the mayor's visit, making Catholic Schools Week last just a little bit longer than usual this year.

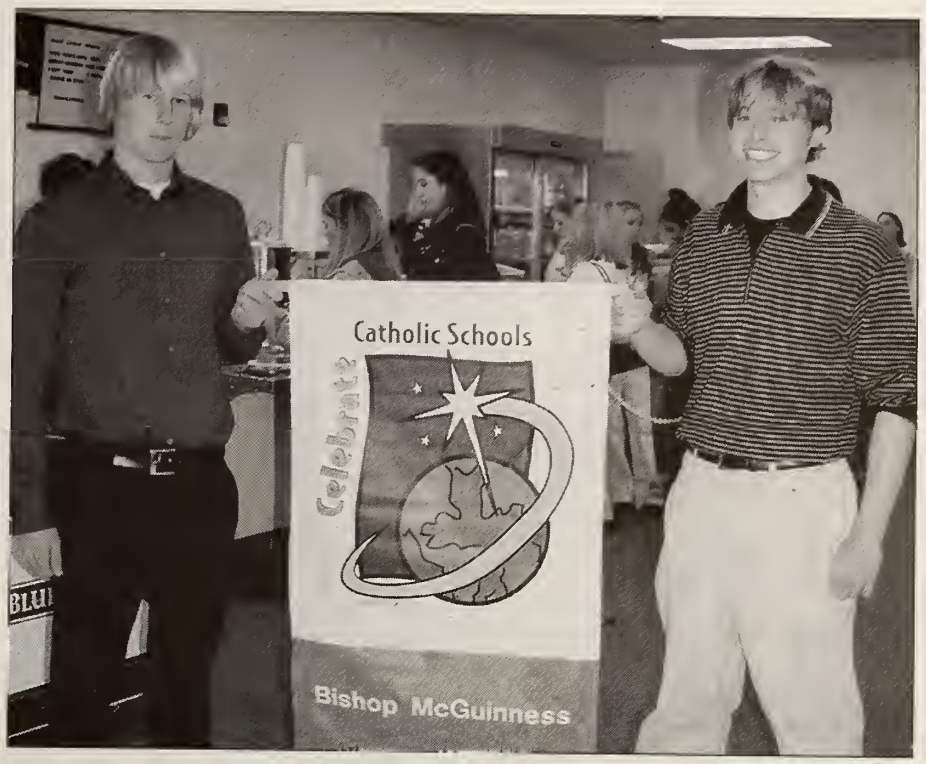

PHOTO BY SUSAN DEGUZMAN

Juniors Kyle Barbour and Matt Pentz, student council vice president and president, respectively, display the Catholic Schools Week banner at Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School in Kernersville.

COMING SOON!!
SPRING OF 2004!

Flynn & O'Hara
School Uniforms

is opening in the Charlotte area

Flynn & O'Hara is the RIGHT CHOICE
for your School Uniform needs!

Proudly serving the Charlotte area for over 30 Years!

Hours of Operation
Year Round
M-T-TH-F-S: 10 am to 5pm
Wednesday: 10 am to 7pm

August thru Sept. 7
M-W-F: 10am to 8pm
T-TH-S:10am to 5pm

www.flynnohara.com
Fax at 1-215-637-6392
Toll Free 1-800-441-4122

Celebrating Catholic schools

COURTESY PHOTO

Students from St. Patrick School in Charlotte help load the Goodwill truck during service day of Catholic Schools Week.

SCHOOLS, from page 1

several days last week, the pride in Catholic schools in the Diocese of Charlotte can't be kept pent up inside," said Superintendent Linda Cherry. "In many of our schools, the canceled programs from last week were moved to this week."

Despite the school's closing Monday through Wednesday, Principal Patricia Murphy of Our Lady of the Assumption School in Charlotte said Catholic Schools Week spirits were high. Students made posters depicting what they liked about the school, and then voted on the best posters.

"The importance of Catholic education comes out in those posters," said Murphy. "The students did well with them."

Dominican Sister Glenn Ann McPhee, secretary for education at the United States Catholic Conference of Bishops (USCCB), said this year's Catholic Schools Week theme underscores faith as an important value at the foundation of a Catholic school curriculum and also gives assurances that Catholic schools foresee a bright future.

"Catholic school leaders are committed to making a difference," said Sister McPhee. "Our goal is to graduate students who have strong moral standards and fine academic skills who will become good citizens and able members of the workforce."

"There are many fine educational programs around the world and in North Carolina, but there's that one feeling you get when you walk into a Catholic school," said Cherry. "In addition to strong academics, there's something that brings everyone together, Catholics and non-Catholics — everyone is treated with the same feeling, loving and caring as they should be."

"We are able to come into school and have the freedom to pray, model Gospel values and worship together," said Murphy.

On Feb. 3, the feast of St. Blase, Father Gregory Littleton, pastor of Our Lady of the Assumption Church, visited the school to bless students' throats.

"The children get to see our priests modeling Christ for them, and this is what we do every day," said Murphy.

Catholic Schools Week is "to display the attributes and faith of the Catholic schools, and unite Catholic schools across the country that have similar missions and promote solidarity among them," said Principal Joe Puceta of St. Michael School in Gastonia.

"It's good for recognition in our communities that Catholic schools are alive and well," he said.

During the week, schools celebrated the parish family, the community, the volunteers and the students, and many dioceses encouraged parents to enroll their children in Catholic schools by offering open houses.

Because of the weather, Sacred Heart School in Salisbury was also closed for three days and had to reschedule its open house and other events.

"It didn't go as well as we had hoped," said Principal Kathleen Miller. But, she said, the school still found ways to celebrate the significance of Catholic schools.

"We celebrated the Catholic history and tradition of our school — we celebrated our graduates and all the good work we do in preparing young people to live their faith here and later in life," said Miller. "We remember our past, celebrate the present and prepare for the future."

Parents visited St. Ann School in Charlotte Jan. 29 and spoke to students about their careers, and how their jobs and lives might change by 2025. On Jan. 30, fourth- and fifth-graders carried the altar gifts and performed an interpretive dance during Mass at St. Ann Church.

"In celebrating all who play a major role in making our schools places where a 'Faith-Filled Future' is the main reason for our existence, we take time to recognize several generations," said Cherry. "We celebrate those from the past, who built the schools and brought the Catholic faith to the diocese; those in the present who support the schools as parishioners and volunteers as well as parents, teachers and staff; and most importantly, we recognize those in the future — all of our students who will carry the Catholic faith into future genera tions."

The first annual Catholic School Week was in 1974, and became part c The National Marketing Campaign fo Catholic Schools in 1991, a joint effor by the National Catholic Educationa Association (NCEA) and the USCCB.

"Catholic education is one of th great and generous works of the churcl Our graduates have become leaders this country, teachers, religious men an women and business entrepreneurs said Michael Guerra, NCEA presiden "Without a doubt, our schools have ha a far-reaching impact on shaping th world."

A delegation of more than 15 Catholic school students, teachers ar parents visited Capitol Hill to meet wi congressional leaders to promote Cath lic schools Jan. 28.

The delegation hand-delivered le ters from chief administrators of Cath lic education to their representatives a provided a background package Catholic schools to every congressior office.

Daniel Curtin, executive director Chief Administrators of Catholic Educ tion at the NCEA, said distributing t letters gave Catholic leaders an opport nity to tell Congress about Catho schools in their localities.

"Many of our superintendents u this initiative as a timely reminder about our priorities for Catholic edu tion," said Curtin.

COURTESY

The Dazzling DiMuzio Brothers, David and Paul, entertain students at Our Lad the Assumption School in Charlotte Jan. 30 as part of Catholic Schools Week.

HAPPY CATHOLIC SCHOOLS WEEK!

P.C. GODFREY INC.

A Complete Service in

PLUMBING — HEATING — AIR CONDITIONING — BOILERS

SERVICE DEPARTMENT
704-334-9715

REPAIRS & REPLACEMENTS
Serving Charlotte Since 1929
Commercial, Industrial, Residential

GENERAL OFFICE
704-334-8604

Attention all YOUTH and YOUNG ADULTS!
Atención Jóvenes!

Join us for
CORPUS CHRISTI CELEBRATION
Saturday, June 12 9:30 am - 6:30 pm
Belmont Abbey College

Celebrate the day with music, prayer, workshops, lunch as well as a keynote address and Eucharistic liturgy with Bishop Peter Jugis.

$10 includes lunch

Register with your parish youth minister or call (704) 370-324
Sponsored by diocesan offices serving youth and young adults

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

TRACS Foundation helps raise funds for Catholic schools

Students' lives enhanced through many contributions

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — The Triad Area Catholic Schools (TRACS) Education Foundation continues its success in raising funds in support of quality faith-based Catholic education in the Triad.

Since the Foundation's inception in 2001, contributions have increased by 230 percent and the Foundation's Annual Giving Campaign for the 2003-2004 school year raised $432,524.01 to date — 135 percent of the $320,000 goal. Two donations were received in late January — one for $15,000 and one for $13,000 — for a total of $28,000 received in one day.

"I am very grateful for the support and dedication of the members of the TRACS Education Foundation Board, contributors and friends of the Triad Area Catholic Schools," said Jen Smith, diocesan development director for Catholic schools.

"To go from zero to over $800,000 in three years is a testament to how important Catholic education is to people in the Triad," said Amy Wicker, vice chairperson for the TRACS Education Foundation.

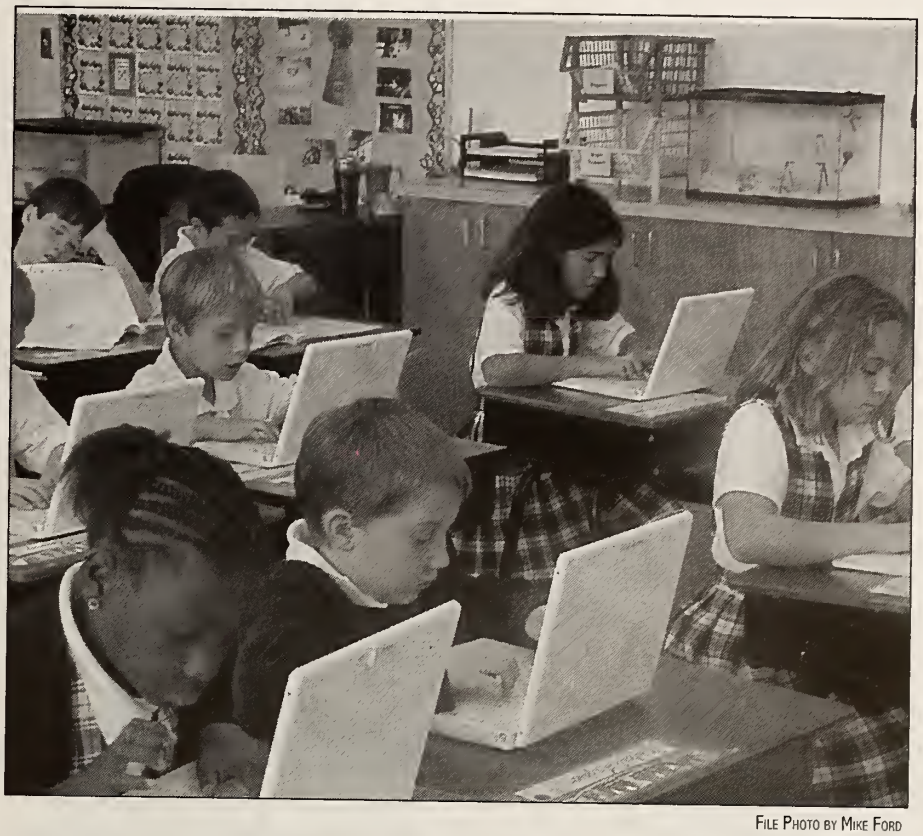
"It's the result of hard work of all the TRACS board members at the various schools in getting the needs out, and the hard work of the volunteers and families," said Wicker.

The Foundation's funded projects for the 2003-2004 school year included: faculty and staff bonuses; technology enhancements; professional development for faculty and staff; curriculum enrichment programs; and school renovations.

"Each school establishes its goals of critical needs and the funding is used to meet those needs," said Wicker.

Another focus of the Foundation is tuition assistance, which, along with individual school fundraising and the Piedmont Triad Scholarship Fund, provided more than $70,000 in the 2003-04 school year.

"Tuition assistance is vitally important to Our Lady of Mercy School families," said Principal Sandra McMonagle in 2003. "Most families plan their budgets to give up 'extras' so that their children can receive a Catholic education. We at OLM are so grateful to the Piedmont Triad Scholarship Fund and to the families at OLM who make tuition assistance possible."



FILE PHOTO BY MIKE FORD

Students work on computers at Our Lady of Mercy School in Winston-Salem in this file photo.

This school year, 22 families at Our Lady of Mercy School in Winston-Salem received tuition assistance -- 13 of them from the Piedmont Triad Scholarship Fund. The fund also helped 22 of the 27 families to receive tuition assistance at nearby St. Leo the Great School.

"The scholarship and TRACS funding enable these families to provide a Catholic education at a Catholic School," said Principal Georgette Schraeder in 2003. "The parents applied for the scholarship because they are convinced of the importance of Catholic education."

Shirley Kinlaw, assistant principal of Our Lady of Grace School in Greensboro, said her school was "blessed" by "angels of grace" who have donated to the TRACS campaign.

"Proceeds from the TRACS funds have been used to enhance our language arts curriculum, to improve our technology, to assist families in need of tuition assistance and to provide much-needed professional development opportunities for our teachers," said Kinslaw.

"Two middle school teachers at Our Lady of Grace benefited directly from TRACS monies to attend conferences that will enable them to further impact our children and their faith lives," she said.

In October 2003, Chris Ostrom, a seventh-grade religion and social studies teacher, attended the University of Notre Dame's Excellence in Teaching Conference, in part due to TRACS donations and a grant from the local Notre Dame University Alumni Club.

"What a great opportunity to attend one of the most prestigious Catholic universities in the nation and learn how to improve the education for our children!" said Ostrom.

Professional development funds provided by TRACS donations enabled sixth-grade teacher Bobbie Gaski to attend the Holocaust Education Conference at Seton Hill University in Pennsylvania in November 2003.

Gaski attended workshops with noted theologians, speakers and other educators who focused on Holocaust education in Catholic schools.

"I teach a unit on Anne Frank in my eighth-grade literature classes, and I plan to implement many of the approaches and ideas from this conference as the year progresses," said Gaski. "I am so grateful for having had the opportunity to attend this gathering."

"The support demonstrated during the Foundation's 2003-2004 Annual Giving Campaign gives strength to our belief in one Catholic community," said Smith. "The vision, dedication and enthusiasm of the board members, donors and friends of the Foundation have been critical to the success of the campaign."

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

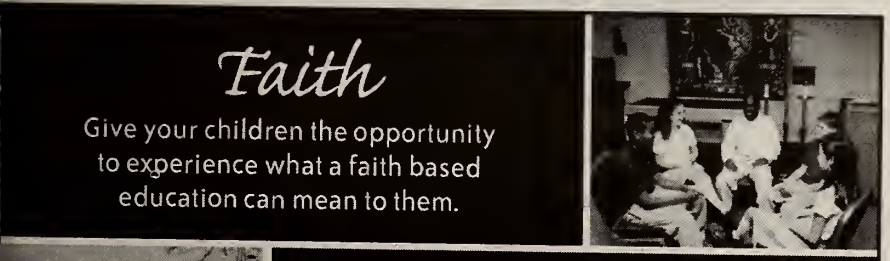
For more information on the TRACS and MACS Education Foundations, contact Jennifer Smith at (704) 370-3303 or e-mail jjsmith@charlottediocese.org.



The Franciscan Center
Catholic Gift & Book Store
Over 700 Book Titles, plus Bibles, Rosaries, Statues, Medals, Tapes, CD, Plaques, & much, much more!
Hours: 9am - 5pm Monday - Friday
(336) 273-2554 fax (336) 273-2441 233 N. Greene St. Greensboro, NC 27401

Peace, justice and lunch

JUSTICE, from page 1

lic Conference of Bishops Department of Social Development and World Peace, kicked off the first luncheon last month with a presentation on faithful citizenship.

Participation will hopefully lead to a greater advocacy on behalf of justice for those who lack justice, and new or renewed direct action and intervention in the lives of those who are marginalized and threatened in society, said Joe Purello, director of the diocesan Office of Justice and Peace.

"If a practice of being regularly engaged in matters of social justice is established, hopefully one will be better able to receive the grace of knowing God's presence in one's own life," said Purello.

Dr. Terry Armstrong

Just Second Fridays is designed to facilitate the attendance of people of all ages, said Purello.

"The Office of Justice and Peace has observed that the demographic group most often missing at justice and peace events held during evenings and weekends is young adults in their 20s, 30s and 40s who often have non-business hour demands on their time associated with raising and nurturing children," he said.

But attendance at holy day and regular noon Masses at St. Peter Church demonstrates there is a large Catholic presence in uptown Charlotte during the business day who are interested in enriching their spiritual lives.

"Since the primary target audience for these presentations is the uptown working community of Charlotte, we will be recruiting speakers who can address topics related to business ethics, labor issues and economic justice," said Purello. "A variety of other social justice topics will also be offered."

WANT TO GO?

Just Second Fridays are held the second Friday of each month in the Annex Building on College Street behind St. Peter Church, 507 Tryon Street in Charlotte (in the lower level Atrium Room with entry from The Green). All events run 1-2 p.m. except Good Friday, April 9, which will be 11 a.m.-12 p.m.

Limited free parking is available in the garage under The Green next to St. Peter Church.

Bring your own lunch to the programs. Cold drinks are provided. Arabica Coffee House and Mr. Hero, located in the Annex Building food court, offer 10 percent discounts to those attending Just Second Fridays.

For more information, go online at www.cssnc.org/justicepeace.

JUST SECOND FRIDAYS

Here is a list of other upcoming Just Second Friday topics and speakers.

March 12, 1 p.m.

"Pope John Paul II's Gospel of Life"

Jesuit Father Joseph Koterski, professor of Philosophy at Fordham University, N.Y.C.

Maggi Nadol, director of Respect Life Office, Catholic Social Services, Diocese of Charlotte

April 9, 11 a.m. (special time)

"Reflections on Death in a Civilized Society: Death Penalty in America"

James Cooney III of Womble, Carlyle, Sandridge & Rice in Charlotte

May 14, 1 p.m.

"How Can Business Ensure All Have a 'Place at the Table' — Reflections on Poverty and Opportunity in Today's Economy"

Joan Rosenhauer, special projects coordinator of the USCCB in Washington, D.C.

Speakers for June 11, July 9, Aug. 13, Sept. 10, Oct. 8, Nov. 12 and Dec. 10 will be announced in May 2004.

Candidates of the Christian kind

Courtesy Photo by Lee Stocker

Thirty-eight confirmation candidates from Holy Spirit Church in Denver, Queen of the Apostles Church in Belmont and St. Mary Church in Shelby participated in a retreat at Queen of the Apostles Jan. 24-25. The group focused on the fruits and gifts of the Holy Spirit and how they are called to Christian service in the world. The retreat ended with a celebration during Mass, and a call to continued conversion for all involved.

Mon-Fri 9:30am-5:30pm
Sat. 9:30am-3:00pm

Carolina Catholic Bookshoppe

† Special Cards
† Religious Articles
† Unique Gift Ideas

704-342-2878
Fax (704) 334-3313
4410-F Monroe Road, Charlotte, NC
www.carolinacatholicbooks.com
We welcome mail orders and special orders!

CFCC

Carolina Funeral & Cremation Center

Dignity
Affordability
Simplicity

5505 Monroe Rd. Charlotte, NC 28212
704-568-0023
www.carolinafuneral.com

Steven Kuzma
Owner/Director
Privately, Locally Owned
Member St. Matthew Church and Knights of Columbus

KTC Transportation Co. Inc
CALL 704-532-7605

Convention Services
Airport
Hotel
City Tours
Groups
Long & Short Tours
Beach Vacations
Games
Sports
Special Events

Fax 704-532-7661
www.ktctransportation.com

La Bella Sposa
the beautiful bride

Couture Wedding Gowns • Bridesmaids • Flower Girls • 1st Communion

130 Matthews Station
Charlotte, NC
phone :704.847.2255
www.labellasposa.net

Foster families nurture tender souls

FOSTER CARE, from page 1

words "foster care," they may think of physically abused, emotionally scarred adolescents and teenagers being moved from foster home to foster home, never finding a family of their own.

For the children placed by CSS in the Diocese of Charlotte, their stories are considerably brighter.

Most of the eight to 10 children in the CSS foster care program each year are newborns who are temporarily entrusted to foster families — usually four weeks or less — until they join their adoptive or biological families

During the foster care period, birth parents continue to receive counseling and support.

Foster families for CSS are carefully screened and go through an assessment process. Also, foster children are not permitted to be placed in daycare. The child must be in the care of a member of the family at all times.

"These foster families are so selfless," said Sharon Davis, a social worker in the Charlotte Regional Office of CSS. "It's a family affair, with everyone involved in the care and nurturing of the child."

"For anyone who needs to fill their life, this is a great way to do it," Ferri said, adding that she always prays for the mothers of the babies who have been in her care.

Ellie and John Collins are foster parents who have cared for seven infants in their Winston-Salem home.

Collins said she has been "tremendously impressed by CSS" employees regarding the care they provide to the birth mother before and after her pregnancy and also to the adoptive parents.

CSS has placed older children under unusual circumstances.

"These children are often frightened and mistrustful," Davis said. "Foster families have the challenge of developing a trusting and loving relationship with them."

Davis also praised the CSS families, who often go above and beyond the call of duty for the children in their care. One family was assigned to an infant born with severe medical problems. Members of the family visited the hospital every day, almost around the clock, to ensure that the infant felt loved and cared for.

There are currently six families in the foster care program, including one in Asheville and one in Winston-Salem.

"The foster families are an integral part of the ministry and commitment of CSS," said Jeannie Beall, supervisor of social work services. "We feel extremely blessed to have them as a part of our team."

"I felt that I wanted to offer these children a positive, nurturing atmosphere," said Ellie Collins. "We wanted to bring Jesus' love to these children."

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

Catholic Social Services is one of 36 ministries funded by contributions to the Diocesan Support Appeal.

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Under the watchful eye of Louise Ferri, Sharon Davis, a social worker with the Charlotte Regional Office of Catholic Social Services, holds Ferri's foster son. There are currently six families in the foster care program — four in Charlotte, one in Asheville and one in Winston-Salem.

The Diocese of Charlotte
CATHOLIC SOCIAL SERVICES
1123 South Church St.
Charlotte, NC 28203
www.cssnc.org

Executive Director:
Elizabeth Thurbee (704) 370-3227
Refugee Office:
Cira Ponce (704) 370-6930
Justice & Peace:
Joe Purello (704) 370-3225
Special Ministries:
Gerard A. Carter (704) 370-3250

Charlotte Region: 1123 South Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203
Area Director: Geri King (704) 370-6155
Western Region: 50 Orange Street, Asheville, NC 28801
Area Director: Sister Marie Frechette (828) 255-0146
Piedmont-Triad: 621 W. Second Street, Winston-Salem, NC 27108
Area Director: David Harold (336) 727-0705
Greensboro Satellite Office: (336) 274-5577
High Point Hispanic Center: (336) 884-5858

For information on specific programs, please call your local office.

Home is still the BEST place to be.

Our CAREGivers™ provide help at home that includes:

- Alzheimer's care
- Light housekeeping
- Meal preparation
- Companionship
- Errands & shopping
- Medication reminders

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

Call for a FREE, No-Obligation Appointment
704-344-0801 Bonded - Insured - Trained
Each Home Instead Senior Care office is independently owned and operated.

ANOTHER BLESSING FROM LOURDES

PGA Golf Pro Ron Garcia, member of Immaculate Conception Church, tells of a religious experience that led to a cure for asthma and year-round allergies. By sharing the story of his spiritual enlightenment, he hopes to help others with similar ailments.

For a copy of his complete manuscript, mail check or money order for $14 (includes handling) to:
Ron Garcia, PO Box 1817, Hendersonville, NC 28793 Visit www.rglourdes.com

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection Lowest Prices
Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

Culture Watch

A roundup of Scripture, readings, films and more

Singing a song of the saints (and near-saints) of God

REVIEWED BY GRAHAM G. YEARLEY
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

As a child, I loved the Anglican hymn "I Sing a Song of the Saints of God," especially its last line: "For the saints of God are folk just like me and, God willing, I'll be one, too."

But one lesson I learned from reading these three volumes on saints and near-saints is that these folks are not like you or me. These men and women are certainly more pious and God-directed than most of us, but also more driven, difficult and, at times, self-destructive.

The importance of saints for most people is the power of example they offer in Christian living. Leo Knowles in "Modern Heroes of the Church" has

"Modern Heroes of the Church," by Leo Knowles. Our Sunday Visitor (Huntington, Ind., 2003). 186 pp., $13.95.

"A Century of Catholic Converts," by Lorene Hanley Duquin. Our Sunday Visitor (Huntington, Ind., 2003). 233 pp., $14.95.

"American Saints: Five Centuries of Heroic Sanctity on the American Continents," by John F. Fink. Alba House (New York, 2001). 157 pp., $9.95.

many of the people one might expect to see: Archbishop Oscar Romero, Father Charles de Foucauld, St. Edith Stein, Pope John Paul I and Dr. Tom Dooley. But he also introduces less familiar figures: Franz Jagerstatter, who refused to serve the Nazis in any capacity and was hanged; John Bradburne, murdered by guerrillas, who lived and worked with African leprosy patients; and Franciscan Father Mychal Judge, who died administering last rites to a fireman at the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, 2001.

In several cases these heroes don't seem quite real because the author plays a biographical trick with us: He mentions an amusing sin (usually from childhood) while omitting or downplaying natural human faults to make his subjects appear more saintly. There is also a great deal of attention given to practices of mortification. In many cases, good spiritual disciplines are taken to grotesque lengths. "Modern Heroes of the Church" ends up being more disturbing than inspiring.

"A Century of Catholic Converts" by Lorene Hanley Duquin is a collection of profiles of converts to Catholicism, grouped by decade, through the 20th century. Many might be surprised to learn that G.K. Chesterton, Thomas Merton and Maria Von Trappe were converts; all three are so closely associated with Catholicism. For others, like Clare Booth Luce, Dorothy Day, Cardinal Avery Dulles and St. Edith Stein, their conversion is a part of their fame.

Although most people in the book made their conversion in young adulthood or middle age, John Wayne converted on his deathbed, spending only a few hours in his new faith. The collection ends with stories of abortion advocates who, in their conversion, became pro-lifers. Perhaps the most famous is Norma McCorvey, the plaintiff "Jane Roe" in the precedent-setting abortion case Roe vs. Wade.

Most converts report that conversion is a process, not a single event, continuing long after one's reception into the church. While reading about celebrities is a guilty pleasure, I longed to hear about anonymous men and women who made the same courageous journey and whose stories will never be told.

"American Saints: Five Centuries of Heroic Sanctity on the American Continents" by John F. Fink profiles many of the 137 men and women who lived in North or South America and who have been sanctified or beatified. It is instructive to learn that the world's only superpower has not proved to be fertile ground in producing saints. Only nine saints or "blesseds" have lived in the United States; by contrast, Mexico has 50 and Brazil 53.

Indeed, as of this book's publication, St. Katharine Drexel was the only native-born U.S. citizen to be canonized — all other U.S. saints were born before the country was formed or were born in other countries. Only nine of the book's 137 were canonized or beatified before the 20th century, among them were St. Rose of Lima and St. Peter Claver. Pope John Paul II is responsible for the recent increase; in his papacy he has canonized 28 men and women of the Americas and beatified 32.

"American Saints" is a quick and lively read, but some of the research is slipshod; I found two factual errors myself. Unintended humor abounds in the book. An alarming number of our saints and blesseds had "poor health," but went on to found orders, build hospitals, churches, schools and missions, and save souls in staggering numbers before collapsing from their labors. It makes one wonder what a healthy saint could do.

WORD TO LIFE

SUNDAY SCRIPTURE READINGS: FEB. 15, 2004

Feb. 15, Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Cycle C Readings:

1) Jeremiah 17:5-8
Psalm 1:1-4, 6
2) 1 Corinthians 15:12, 16-20
3) Luke 6:17, 20-26

BY SHARON K. PERKINS
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Life is full of ironies, and I was reminded of a common irony the other day in a conversation with my daughter, a first-year college student.

She was telling me how anxious she was to finish college, get a job and earn her own money so that she could live a more independent lifestyle. I almost had to laugh, since I was thinking simultaneously that I, an independent, income-earning adult, would love to be back in college when my worries consisted mostly of 8 a.m. classes, cafeteria meals cooked by someone else and studying for exams. Obviously, both of us were failing to appreciate the benefits and challenges of our respective situations.

The Scriptures for this Sunday in Ordinary Time are reminiscent of another irony, or paradox, for Christians — the truth that the kingdom of God is both a future promise and a fulfilled reality. It seems that many believers, finding this paradox difficult to grasp, tend to focus on one or the other side of the equation almost exclusively. St. Paul's Corinthian community seemed to be negating the future resurrection of the dead, limiting their hopes in Christ to present circumstances. Yet many Christians also have taken the opposite approach, directing their gaze to heaven and the afterlife, and forgetting that the life of Christ in all its fullness is theirs today.

For these, salvation is "something that happens to my soul when I die" — a future consolation that has little bearing on one's day-to-day living.

In Luke's Gospel, Jesus models the perfect balance of the "now-but-not-yet" nature of the kingdom of God. Even while he is preaching on future consolation to those who are suffering, he is healing them of their diseases, delivering them from unclean spirits and making his Father's love tangible to them in the present.

To those whose faith primarily is oriented to the afterlife, he says, "See, I am in your midst now!"

And to those whose sight is limited to their present circumstances, he holds out the promise of glories to come.

Questions:

In your faith, have you tended to see Christ's kingdom more as a future promise or a present reality? What is God doing in your midst right now that gives your reassurance for your future?

WEEKLY SCRIPTURE

SCRIPTURE FOR THE WEEK OF FEBRUARY 15 - FEBRUARY 21

Sunday (Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time), Jeremiah 17:5-8, 1 Corinthians 15:12, 16-20, Luke 6:17, 20-26; Monday, James 1:1-11, Mark 8:11-13; Tuesday (Seven Founders of the Servite Order), James 1:12-18, Mark 8:14-21; Wednesday, James 1:19-27, Mark 8:22-26; Thursday, James 2:1-9, Mark 8:27-33; Friday, James 2:14-24, Mark 8:34—9:1; Saturday (St. Peter Damian), James 3:1-10, Mark 9:2-13

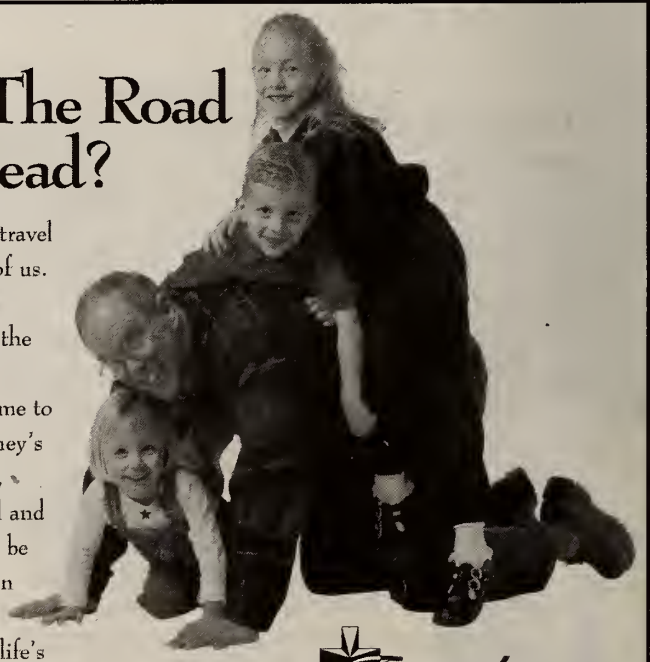
What's The Road Like Ahead?

The road we have to travel is different for each of us. The only certainty is that we all must end the journey some day.

If you take the time to prepare for that journey's end now, your family, favorite parish, school and diocesan ministry will be supported. A will is an essential part of that overall plan for your life's journey.



The Foundation of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

To receive a free booklet "How To Make A Will That Works" contact Gina Rhodes, Director of Planned Giving, 704-370-3320, 1123 S. Church Street, Charlotte, NC 28203, gmrhodes@charlottediocese.org

COURTESY PHOTO

Richard Valitutto, a junior at Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School in Kernersville, was one of three winners of the Winston-Salem Youth Symphony concerto competition in mid-January.

SCALING MUSICAL HEIGHTS

Bishop McGuinness students showcase skills

KERNERSVILLE — The sounds of success are echoing from Bishop McGuinness Catholic High School.

Richard Valitutto, a junior at Bishop McGuinness, was one of three winners of the Winston-Salem Youth Symphony concerto competition held at Wake Forest University in mid-January.

Valitutto was one of four Bishop McGuinness music students — Beth Hurley; and Konnstantin Heppner and David Wehner, both exchange students from Germany attending Bishop for the 2003-04 school year — and numerous other students from the Triad area to contend in the concerto competition.

As one of the winners, Valitutto now has the honor of performing as the soloist in the Mozart Piano D Minor concerto to be held at the Scales Fine Arts Center at Wake Forest University in December 2004.

In addition, four Bishop McGuinness music students participated in the Virginia Tech Honor Band in Blacksburg, Va., the weekend of Jan. 23. Participating students were Riley Morgan, Nate Osborne, Beth Hurley and Patrick Nolan.

MAKING MUSIC IN MACS

Students selected for festivals, membership

CHARLOTTE — MACS band students are making their marks.

Nineteen MACS band members were accepted into membership of the South Central All-District Concert Band Festival held in Mooresville Jan. 29-30.

The students — nine from Charlotte Catholic High School and 10 from Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School — prepared designated solos and were judged by high school band directors for membership in this elite group of student musicians. Students from a six-county area comprising high school and middle school bands auditioned for membership, which is limited according to instrumentation and musical abilities.

Students have represented the MACS band program in the festival for the past four years. The number of students participating rose from two students in 2000 to 19 students in 2004, and the MACS band program has one of the highest student representations of any school in the six-county area.

New members from Charlotte Catholic are Deanna Becker, Jenna Harper, Emily Sharp, Kris Bahar, Mark Binetti, Alexandra Reinhart and Megan Hermance. Kaitlin Gilbride and Emily Freeman were designated as alternates for membership.

Students from Holy Trinity are Evan Peleaux, Hilary Sharp, John Luttrell, Ryan Brennan, Keagan Maryman, Eric Gleeson, Alexandra Boss, Carianne Schlie and Becca Mack. Maggie Luttrell was chosen as an alternate for membership.

In the All-District Jazz Band Festival's inaugural year, three students from Charlotte Catholic were chosen for membership through auditions. The students are Chelsey Conrad, Andrew Randazzo and Andrew Mack.

The students will rehearse and present a concert at Lenoir-Rhyne College in Hickory on Feb. 28.

SOUTHEAST FIRE RALLY presented by Good News Ministries

SAVE $5!
REGISTER NOW

SATURDAY, MARCH 13
9 am - 6 pm (doors open at 8 am)

CHARLOTTE BOBCATS TRAINING CENTER
FORT MILL, SC (I-77 Exit 88)

MAKE THIS YOUR LENTEN RETREAT! RECONCILIATION WILL BE AVAILABLE.

FAITH
– a challenge to Catholics to renew and deepen their relationship with the Lord

RALPH MARTIN
Ralph is the founding President of Renewal Ministries, a Catholic mission organization, and hosts a popular weekly television series, The Choices We Face. Ralph is also the founding editor of New Covenant magazine and author of several books. He presently leads The Word of God, an ecumenical Christian community in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

INTERCESSION
– a call to united prayer as our most important spiritual weapon availuble for renewing the face of the earth

SR. ANN SHIELDS, SGL
Sr. Ann is the superior of the Servants of God's Love in Lansing, Michigan, and is a regular co-host on the television program, The Choices We Face. She also hosts a radio program, Food for the Journey. She is the author of several books, including Fire in My Heart, and is a frequent conference speaker.

REPENTANCE
– an exhortation to turn away from sin to a Christ-centered, Spirit-filled life

FR. MICHAEL SCANLAN, TOR
Fr. Michael is the Chancellor and former President of Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio, and was ordained in 1964. In 1990, he was awarded the Cross Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice by Pope John II. He has authored several books including his autobiography, Let the Fire Fall.

EVANGELISM
– an invitation to spread the Good News of salvation and the gift of authentic Catholicism

PETER HERBECK
Peter is Director of Missions at Renewal Ministries and has served numerous retreats, conferences, rallies, and events around the world. Much of his work has been devoted to helping equip Catholics for ministry through training in the exercise of spiritual gifts.

FIRE
A CATHOLIC ALLIANCE OF FAITH, INTERCESSION, REPENTANCE, AND EVANGELISM

Further Information 704-521-9949
Email: carolinaevents2@aol.com
Online Registration: www.fireministry.org/charlotte

MOST REV. PETER J. JUGIS, JCD
"Come to experience with me an occasion of grace and deepen your commitment to Christ, his Gospel, and the Church. This will be a moving demonstration of faith as we respond to the call by Pope John Paul II for a new evangelization."
–Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis, Bishop of Charlotte

MOST REV. ROBERT J. BAKER, STD
HOMILIST
"My hope and prayer is that all who attend the FIRE Rally will experience a deeper conversion, a greater desire for reconciliation, and a willingness to be more fully involved in the new evangelization to which our Holy Father has called us."
– Most Reverend Robert J. Baker, Bishop of Charleston

WILLIAM G. CURLIN, DD, BISHOP EMERITUS OF CHARLOTTE
"The Fire Rally is needed more today than ever when the teachings of the Church are under attack."

DYNAMIC, INSPIRED MUSIC BY HEARTS OF FIRE
BOOKSTORE AND MINISTRY FAIR

REGISTRATION FORM

Name(s)
Address
City State Zip
Phone
Email address
Parish
City State
Diocese

Rally Tickets:
Adult: @ $20 = $ ($25 @ the door if available)
Clergy & Religious: @ NO CHARGE

Total Amount Enclosed: $

Number of disability seats needed:

Send form BY FEB. 28th with check payable to:
Good News Ministries
5121 Baker Drive
Charlotte NC 28210

Visa/MC accepted only by phone M-F (704) 527-7616

LAST WEEK'S ANSWERS

ALL IN THE FAMILY

| | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| N | E | S | T | ■ | I | S | T | ■ | I | S | S | A |
| O | N | E | A | ■ | S | K | I | ■ | S | H | E | M |
| A | Y | E | R | ■ | H | A | M | ■ | R | O | T | I |
| H | A | N | S | O | M | ■ | O | L | A | T | H | E |
| ■ | ■ | ■ | U | S | A | ■ | R | O | E | ■ | ■ | ■ |
| L | O | E | S | S | E | R | ■ | B | L | O | O | D |
| A | R | E | ■ | ■ | L | B | J | ■ | ■ | A | D | D |
| S | A | R | A | H | ■ | I | A | P | E | T | U | S |
| ■ | ■ | ■ | N | O | D | ■ | P | R | R | ■ | ■ | ■ |
| R | I | T | T | E | R | ■ | H | O | O | R | A | H |
| E | C | A | H | ■ | E | V | E | ■ | I | O | T | A |
| B | E | D | E | ■ | A | I | T | ■ | C | U | L | L |
| A | D | A | M | ■ | R | A | H | ■ | A | B | E | L |

Another step toward healing

PHOTO BY KEVIN E. MURRAY

David Hains, acting spokesman for the Diocese of Charlotte, responds to media questions regarding a letter delivered to the pastoral center Feb. 3 by David Fortwengler (right), head of the Charlotte-based chapter of Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests. Fortwengler, abused by a priest in Maryland, said his letter offered suggestions to the diocese on dealing with cases of child sexual abuse by clergy.

The Abbey celebrates Black History Month

Community invited for Harambè Mass on campus

BELMONT — In celebration of Black History Month, Belmont Abbey College will host a Harambè Mass in the Abbey Basilica Feb. 8. The public is invited to attend.

American slaves were forbidden to worship, so they practiced their Christian faith in secret by stealing away into the woods.

Harambè is an African word, meaning "togetherness" or "unity."

Msgr. Mauricio W. West, chancellor and vicar general of the Diocese of Charlotte, will serve as celebrant. He will be joined by the Perpetual Hope Gospel Choir and the Kabaka Dancers for this special Mass.

WANT TO GO?

The Harambè Mass will take place in the Abbey Basilica 7 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 8. Belmont Abbey College is located 15 miles west of Charlotte. For more information, call the Belmont Abbey Campus Ministry at (704) 829-7196.

Classifieds

EMPLOYMENT

CAREGIVERS: CAREGiving is a Joy! Join us in making a difference in the lives of the elderly. Non-medical companionship & home care. Flexible, part-time, day, evening & weekend hours available. Car needed. Home Instead Senior Care. Call 704.344.9739

OFFICE ASSISTANT: Personal financial planner needs responsible, articulate, detail-oriented person to handle day-to-day office tasks. Responsibilities include: customer service, activity follow-up, filing, scheduling and maintaining contact management database. Planning, investment or insurance experience helpful. Computer skills required. 30 hours per week. Southpark area. Call Cynthia L. Anderson, CFP @ 704- 643-7173 or fax resume to 704-643-7130.

PASTORAL ADMINISTRATOR: The Diocese of Raleigh, North Carolina is seeking candidates for the position of pastoral administrator. This leadership position requires experience in pastoral services, worship and administration. Bi-lingual skills and pastoral experience in North Carolina are desirable. College degree, Master's degree or equivalent is preferred. Background check is required. Send resume to Sister Marie Therese Buggé, OSU, 2120 Rhonda Road, Hillsborough, NC 27278.

PRINCIPAL: St. Anthony of Padua Catholic grade school located in Southern Pines, NC, is now accepting curriculum vitae for the position of principal. The school's curriculum is faithful to the Magesterium of the Church. Applicants must have a Master's degree and be state certified in education. Salary will be commensurate with experience. Since the school is expanding, an applicant should be a visionary and have fund-raising capabilities. Curriculum vitae will be received through 3/31/04. The Very Reverend Jeffrey Ingham, V.F., St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church, 175 E. Connecticut Avenue, Southern Pines, NC 28387.

FOR RENT

OFFICE SPACE: Crown Point Office Building. 2101 Sardis Road North, Charlotte. 450 square feet. $550 per month. Call Paul Johansen 704-375-1918.

SERVICES

SENIOR ENTERTAINMENT: Strolling accordion for special theme dinner nights (German, Irish, Italian, etc.) or 1920 to 1950 music/history programs for luncheons. Bob Wilusz - 704-846-5782.

PRAYERS & PETITIONS

Thank you, St. Jude, for prayers answered. EKT

Classified ads bring results! Over 125,000 readers! Over 49,000 homes!
Rates: $.60/word per issue ($12 minimum per issue)
Deadline: 12 noon Wednesday, 9 days before publication
How to order: Ads may be E-mailed to ckfeerick@charlottediocese.org, faxed to (704) 370-3382 or mailed to:
Cindi Feerick, The Catholic News & Herald, 1123 S. Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203.
Payment: For information, call (704) 370-3332.

Now Your Parents Can Live At Home!

We Build Friendships With Families

We know it isn't easy to invite someone into your home to provide homecare. You'll interview and select any caregiver who we refer to you. At Visiting Angels, character matters in caregivers!

Up to 24 hour care. Hygiene assistance, meals, light housework, companionship.

Our caregivers are thoroughly screened.

704-549-4010

Visiting Angels

E-mail us at Jill.Stewart@VisitingAngels.com

RENEW YOUR Romance

Has squeezing the toothpaste tube from the middle doused the flames of romance in your marriage? A Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekend can rekindle the sparks you felt on your wedding day! Marriage Encounter is 44 hours where married couples can get away from jobs, kids, chores, and phones—and focus only on each other. If you'd like greater depth, growth, and enrichment in your relationship, you'll like the difference a Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekend can make! Join millions of couples worldwide who have learned how to keep their marriages vibrant and alive.

Next Weekend Dates:

February 13-15 — Avila Retreat Center, Durham
March 5-7 — Airport Holiday Inn, Charlotte

Call Tom and Emilie Sandin (336) 274-4424 for info
A weekend of discovery... a lifetime of love
Visit our website at www.triadneighbors.com

LEARN ROSARY MAKING

Call for catalog & introductory offer or visit
www.rosaryparts.com

LEWIS & COMPANY

800-342-2400

P.O. Box 268-K, Troy, NY 12181

Caring for Charlotte Area Catholic Families in Their Hour of Need Since 1926

McEWEN FUNERAL SERVICE, INC.

Charlotte 704-334-6421

Pineville 704-544-1412

Mint Hill 704-545-4864

Derita 704-596-3291

Beating bullying and teaching tolerance

Immaculata School initiates peer power for peace

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

HENDERSONVILLE — Students at Immaculata School spent the four days following Martin Luther King Jr. holiday learning how to live out the message of peace and tolerance King and Jesus Christ promoted.

"Peer Power for Peace" is a program designed by the school's counselor, Veronica Doty, and a volunteer co-chair, Diane Salkewicz. It consists of a variety of activities designed to help the students of Immaculata School recognize different types of bullying and learn how to prevent such incidents.

Bullying isn't a major problem in the pre-kindergarten through eighth-grade school, said Doty. Most of it comes during the middle-school years in subtle forms such as exclusion from social groups. In a school with only 190 students, feeling left out of a class of 15-20 peers can be upsetting, Doty said.

Doty's intention for Peer Power for Peace was to use a holistic approach — to teach teachers, parents and kids about tolerance. To prepare the teachers for the program, Doty arranged for a speaker on "bully prevention" to raise their awareness as to what bullying is and what it is not.

The eighth-graders took a survey of the third- through eighth-grade students about their own experiences, and almost half the students said they had experienced some form of being bullied.

Immaculata students then spent one period each day of the week of Jan. 20-23 learning about preventing bullying and focusing on all aspects of tolerance.

Each teacher was free to emphasize whatever aspect was most relevant to his or her class, using bulletin boards, writing assignments, poster contests and videos about cliques and bullying to teach the lessons of kindness and universal tolerance.

As part of the program, each class conceived its own plan for peace. During the Mass Jan. 23, which was celebrated as a children's Mass, a representative of each class read aloud their plan for peace.

Immaculata School asked a disadvantaged neighboring school to join in some of the week's activities. Every student at both schools received a T-shirt with the Peer Power for Peace logo as a keepsake.

Doty said she has already had positive feedback about the program from Immaculata parents.

"Hopefully, we gave the students some tools they can use," Doty said.

Contact Staff Writer Karen A. Evans by calling (704) 370-3354 or e-mail kaevans@charlottediocese.org.

Panther pride

PHOTO BY KAREN A. EVANS

Father Conrad Hoover, pastor of St. Ann Church in Charlotte, and parishioners Anna and Bebe Troppoli show their support of the Carolina Panthers after Mass Feb. 1. Father Hoover made sure everyone who drives along Park Road saw his Panther pride — the church's sign read "Go Panthers" and "Vamos Panteras." Following the Panthers' 32-29 loss to the New England Patriots, the sign was changed to "Thanks Panthers."

THE ORATORY
434 Charlotte Avenue, P. O. Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586
(803) 327-2097

24TH ANNUAL
CARDINAL NEWMAN LECTURE

Saturday, February 28
9:30 am - 4 pm

Bill Huebsch

"GENIUS OF THE HEART: POPE JOHN XXIII"

The Newman Lecture is an annual gift from the Oratory to the regional church to celebrate the life and ministry of Cardinal John Henry Newman. Bill Huebsch is a leader of workshops and teacher with an expertise in catechetics, spirituality and Vatican Council II. No charge or registration.

ONE LAST KISS OF YOUR LIFETIME
"LAST KISS" by Rich Staley

Curl up on the couch and get ready to laugh, cry and think about your own mortality as you travel with "Patrick" on the journey to discover faith, love and how to appreciate each day as if it were your last!

"A rare gift for writing that is so graceful, so natural... an ability that is both remarkable and unique."
—Billie Marie Zal, Author of The Fabric of Our Lives

To order, mail check or money order (no credit cards) to:
Pilgrim Publishing, P O Box 49544, Charlotte, NC 28277

$13.95
plus $2.50 shipping

Create a winning event

Having your meeting or conference at the center makes you a winner every time!

We can help you turn an ordinary conference, meeting, retreat, or banquet into a special event! You plan the event, we'll provide the environment!

1551 Trinity Lane, Hickory, NC
(828) 327-7441 or toll-free at
(888) 536-7441
info@catholicconference.org
www.catholicconference.org

The Catholic Conference Center

We beat the banks!

IMS prides itself on customer service. We're a local lender and all we want is a chance to quote your mortgage. Try us, you'll be happy you did. IMS has all the answers and the loan programs to fit your needs.

Apply on-line 24 hours a day
www.lendinglocal.com

Call Me! Kim Geter 704-759-3176
or kmgeter@internationalmortgage.net

7631 Sharon Lakes Rd., Ste.D
Charlotte, NC 28210

IMS Mortgage Service

Perspectives

A collection of columns, editorials and viewpoints

The guest-worker proposal

Parish Diary

FATHER PETER J. DALY
CNS COLUMNIST

Having written two columns about immigration, I realize that this is a hot-button topic. I have received more letters and e-mails on this than on any other topic.

In September 2003, I wrote about our society's schizophrenia on the issue of illegal workers. We employ them in large numbers, but we say we don't want them. This puts both illegal employees and employers in an impossible situation.

In October 2003, I ventured four suggestions on what might be done about the problem of illegal migrant workers. My first recommendation was for a "guest-worker" visa program to legalize the status of undocumented workers. This would allow millions of illegal workers to regularize their status in the United States and would allow employers to bring people here to work for an extended length of time.

In January 2004, President Bush proposed a guest-worker program. This shows the idea is in the wind. President Bush merely accepted economic and geographic reality.

Economically the reality is that there are about 7 million illegal immigrants in the United States. If they all were sent home tomorrow, some industries here would come to a halt.

Geographically, the reality is that most of the illegal workers in the United States come from Mexico. Our southern border is too long and too easily crossed to effectively seal it. As long as there is grinding poverty there and jobs here, people will migrate.

Under President Bush's program, guest workers could get a three-year visa if they have employment lined up before they come. If they are already here, workers could get a visa if they are employed and pay a fine. These visas could be renewed for a second three-year term. After that workers are supposed to go home, though it is anybody's guess how this could be enforced. Employers are permitted to bring in guest workers if they show that Americans could not be found for these jobs.

The president's plan solves some problems. It gives legal status to workers from Mexico. It makes them taxpayers and Social Security participants. It allows law enforcement to concentrate on real criminals at the border (like drug smugglers). It might end the illegal traffic in human beings. It would allow migrants to go home for visits. (Some of my parishioners have not been able to go home for funerals of parents.)

But the president's idea does not address the reason people want to leave Mexico and come here: poverty.

We need to do what the European Union did for its poor neighbors. We need a 20-year economic development program to build infrastructure and raise wages and living standards in Mexico. Then there would be less pressure to come here. A more prosperous Mexico is in our self-interest.

President Bush promotes globalization of the economy. But we need to "globalize" in ways conservatives never consider, especially in regard to fair-labor standards.

Every free-trade agreement should have basic labor standards. This should include a right to organize workers freely and to bargain collectively. Unions should be allowed to organize across borders so that employers could not move jobs from Michigan to Monterey to exploit vulnerable workers. There should also be a global push for a living wage.

If countries want to sell products in the United States, they should have fair-labor standards to put all workers on a more level playing field.

President Bush's guest-worker proposal is a good first step. But it chiefly answers the demands of large employers here for cheap labor. It does not address the long-term causes of this migration.

Pope says Christians prepare for prayer through moral living

BY CINDY WOODEN
CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

The Pope Speaks

BY POPE JOHN PAUL II

VATICAN CITY — Preparations for prayer and liturgical celebrations in the Judeo-Christian tradition are not focused on special gestures and dress, but on moral integrity in one's personal life and in society, Pope John Paul II said.

"To be admitted into the presence of the divine, many religious cultures ask for exterior ritual purity with special ablutions, gestures and dress," he said Feb. 4 at his general audience.

But Psalm 15 explains that in the Judeo-Christian tradition ritual purity implies a clean conscience and "choices inspired by love for justice and for one's neighbor," the pope said.

Pope John Paul said the psalm, recited in the church's evening prayer, echoes the calls of the prophets "to join faith and life, prayer and commitment, adoration and social justice."

The psalm's requirements for entering the Lord's presence, the pope said, can serve as "the basis for a personal examination of conscience every time we prepare to confess our sins in order to be admitted into communion with the Lord in the liturgical celebration."

The first three requirements, he said, express a general ethical choice: to follow the path of moral integrity, practice justice and be sincere when speaking.

The pope said the believer is then called to a just relationship with others, marked by a commitment not to slander another or harm another, to defend those who are threatened, to avoid those who do evil and to honor those who fear the Lord.

The psalm also calls believers to keep promises they have made, even when it becomes difficult, he said.

Pope John Paul underscored the text's condemnation of usury, "a plague which is still an awful reality in our day and which can strangle the lives of many people," and of corruption in public life, also an ongoing problem.

Letters to the Editor

High praise for publication

You are doing a wonderful job with The Catholic News & Herald. It is more faith-filled than in the last 15 years I have lived in North Carolina.

It is a breath of fresh air to read the paper. In a part of the country where Catholics are the minority and so often misunderstood, it is a pleasure to pick up your newspaper and hear it like it is without the secular bias of a regional newspaper.

God bless you and your staff, and keep up the good work!

— Grace Narus
Charlotte

'Fallen angels' gets word out

I enjoyed Kevin Murray's "No discounts for fallen angels" column (Jan. 16). I hope more people read it. I will try to get the word out to my Knights of Columbus council at St. Matthew Church.

I am ashamed that so many "Catholics" support abortion and bend the Church's rules to suit their own wants and needs. I pray daily for the end to abortion and pray that Congress, the legislature and the judiciary realize that we need an end to this horrific epidemic.

— Gene Fitzpatrick
Charlotte

Kevin Murray's "No discount for fallen angels" column was just sensational. This anecdote should be read at every Mass.

— Joe Massi
Charlotte

WRITE A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Catholic News & Herald welcomes letters from readers. We ask that letters be originals of 250 words or less.

To be considered for publication, each letter must include the name, address and phone number of the writer for purpose of verification. Letters may be condensed due to space and edited for clarity, style and taste.

Send letters to Letters to the Editor, The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, N.C. 28237, or e-mail catholicnews@charlottediocese.org.

A 'Faith-Filled Future'

Guest Column

FATHER JAMES HAWKER
Guest Columnist

I remember so vividly celebrating Mass on one occasion with a fifth-grade class at Sacred Heart School in Quincy, Mass. Although that blessed event took place more than 20 years ago, the experience is etched in my memory.

The theme of the celebration was faith. In preparation for the gathering, the little ones had crafted a beautiful banner that they displayed proudly behind the altar. The multicolored mosaic, capturing in brilliant hues in the image of a rainbow, was accompanied by the simple statement, "I believe in God because of rainbows."

Time and again over the intervening years, I have reflected upon the significance of the picture and the accompanying message. I am convinced that the wisdom contained therein is worthy of every believer's consideration, regardless of his or her age or state in life.

It is essential for us to understand and appreciate that faith is a gift from God. Faith is neither inherited nor earned. However, as people who are the beneficiaries of the Lord's loving presence, each of us is invited again and again to respond to that gift by performing acts of faith.

During my enviable stint as a student at a Cathedral grammar and Cathedral high school in Boston, I was blessed beyond measure. Gradually, I came to realize that the Catholic school is primarily a faith-filled environment, within which the participant is formed in the vision and values of Jesus Christ. It is a setting in which the gift of faith is lived, exemplified, interpreted and shared. It is a place in which the primary curriculum is the atmosphere in which the person and message of Jesus are proclaimed and explained so that maturing believers might be enabled to respond personally and communally to the God-given gift of faith.

During my formative years, the Sisters of St. Joseph, who staffed the schools I attended, portrayed so powerfully the virtues proclaimed in the Gospel. They were a caring, compassionate and challenging community of women. They enabled us to cultivate our intellects, to sharpen our skills, to employ the values essential to maturing believers.

In addition to reading, writing and arithmetic, they taught the three Rs: religion, respect and responsibility. By their exemplary witness, they called us to be all that we could be as followers of Jesus. In truth, each Sister was a unique component of a rainbow-mosaic guiding us to respond to the gift of faith, to grow in faith.

As the vicar for education here in the Diocese of Charlotte since 1995, I have been and am impressed deeply by the care, commitment and competency of the educational leaders on the diocesan and local levels, by the devotion and dedication of the teachers in each of the 18 Catholic schools. It is abundantly clear that the children and youth who participate in these educational environments within the diocese are being informed and formed, instructed and inspired each and every day.

Good and generous parents who entrust their children to the custody and care of the Catholic schools are well aware that their sons or daughters will move today toward a faith-filled future, even as the youngsters believe in God because of rainbows.

Father Hawker is vicar for education and pastor of St. Luke Church in Mint Hill.

Two who make a difference

Light One Candle

MSGR. JIM LISANTE
Guest Columnist

The name of Tom Franklin might not ring a bell with you, but I can all but guarantee you're familiar with his work. Thomas E. Franklin is senior photographer with The Record, a leading northern New Jersey daily newspaper, and on Sept. 11, 2001, he took the photo that became the iconographic symbol of that terrible day: three New York City firefighters raising an American flag amidst the devastation of the World Trade Center.

For Americans everywhere, it was a graphic reminder of this country's resolve in the face of tragedy. The year's most honored single photo, it was later reproduced on a U.S. postage stamp, and in that way still reminds us of the desolate day that nonetheless united us.

More recently, the first page of the second section of The Record each Monday has featured a single large Franklin photo and a short story, also written by him, which focuses, as often as not, on a man or woman doing something for the community in an outstanding or unique fashion.

And that's how I became acquainted with Paul Burns, an advocate for the homeless who was the subject of a Franklin profile last December. What caught my eye at first, in addition to Franklin's arresting photo, was a line in the story that noted Burns' reception, in 1998, of the Russ Berrie Making a Difference Award (named for a late North Jersey toy executive and philanthropist). As you know, The Christophers are all about "making a difference" and encouraging others to do the same, and I immediately wanted to find out more about this man.

I'm glad I did. Franklin's lead paragraph essentially tells the story: "Paul Burns calls himself an advocate for the homeless, the last line of defense for those who live on the streets of northern New Jersey. He brings them food and clothes, but most of all he gives them his love. And for those who have nothing, this is what Burns believes they need the most."

In somewhat sparing fashion, Franklin fills in some of the details. Burns is an ordained Pentecostal minister, but he has no church, no parish. The people on the streets are his congregation, and he goes to them every night in a van. He makes sure they have what they need: a bed in a shelter, a sleeping bag, a pair of socks.

"I have a special calling," Burns told Franklin. "God said, 'When you help the least of my people, that's when you help me'. There's so much helplessness in their life, prayer will allow them to sleep tonight."

He thinks he'll be at it for a long time to come, maybe forever, because, as he puts it, compassion is being downsized and merchandising has taken over for mercy.

Still, he does what he can, and that means the world to the people he helps. That's what "making a difference" is all about.

On one unforgettable day in September, 2001, Tom Franklin made a difference on his own, lifting the spirit of a wounded people. It's nice to see he's still doing the same thing.

For a free copy of the Christopher News Note, "From Fear & Anxiety to Trust & Hope," write: The Christophers, 12 East 48th Street, New York, NY 10017; or e-mail: mail@christophers.org.

Is war useless?

Spirituality for Today

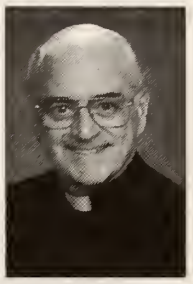
FATHER JOHN CATOIR
CNS Columnist



War is hell. We should strive for peace at all costs. However, to say that war is useless or that it accomplishes nothing is to raise some serious questions.

Here is a story by the late Father Vytautas Picturna, a Lithuanian priest who was a prisoner at Dachau during World War II, told in his own words.

The Nazi regime built concentration camps to instill fear in people and squeeze out their physical energy. In these camps, over 7 million people of all nationalities were killed, including the 6 million Jews. Some 3,500 priests of 14 nationalities passed through one camp alone at Dachau, north of Munich. Only 1,182 of us survived.

When we arrived at Dachau, they shaved our heads and gave us uniforms, which were too thin to protect against the cold. The head of the camp screamed at us, "Leave behind all dreams that someday you will be free." Pointing to the smokestack nearby he said, "There is the crematorium whose chimney will leave you as smoke, you bandits."

We had to stand in the cold rain until morning roll call. Those who fell down were beaten mercilessly.

In the mess hall, the beatings continued. An SS guard would yell at someone, "Did you wipe your bowl clean?" Finding a drop in it, he would start beating him.

Every day we were beaten. Years went by. How we survived was a miracle. How many times a guard would throw a piece of bread out of a prisoner's reach. The starving man would go after it, and the guard would shoot him, claiming the man was trying to escape.

How many times the SS, returning drunk at night, would wake us up, exhausted from work, and force us out into the cold. They would order us to fall to the ground, then to get up. Those who remained exhausted on the ground would have cold water poured on them. Many victims died of pneumonia.

As our hopes withered, we heard the Americans were coming. On April 29, 1945, we ran to see the white flag raised over our camp. It was a beautiful Sunday morning.

The Americans drove up and all eight SS guards came down with their arms raised. There was an outburst of unspeakable joy among the prisoners. Everyone was cheering for the Americans — our saviors. We were free at last.

In the real world, there are times when war is a necessary evil. There is such a thing as a war of liberation. The only thing necessary for evil to triumph worldwide is for good men to stand by and do nothing.

St. James Church serves spiritual needs of Hamlet-area Catholics

HAMLET — In the early years of the 20th century, visiting priests from Southern Pines, Fayetteville and Wilmington ministered to the few Catholics in Richmond and Scotland counties in their homes. In 1910, one priest led the effort to build the church in Hamlet that came to be known as St. James Church, the parish that lies in the southeasternmost corner of the Diocese of Charlotte.

Father William B. Hannon traveled north in search of donations for the Richmond County church. He was successful not only in attaining funds for construction, but he also helped acquire the stained glass windows that still adorn the present church.

Construction began, and in July 1910, Bishop Leo Haid, vicar apostolic of North Carolina and Benedictine abbot, dedicated the new church, placing it under the patronage of St. James.

By the mid-1910s, the church had already experienced its first major renovation — it was moved a half-block after the town of Hamlet decided to extend its Main Street. The church property lay directly in the path of the proposed extension, and thus the church building was relocated.

Father Paul Termer became Hamlet's first resident Catholic pastor in 1919, the same year a rectory was built alongside the church. His pastorate lasted for 12 years.

The parish grew through the years, albeit slowly, and the need for priests in the area became more widespread. Less than 20 miles to the northeast of Hamlet, Camp Mackall was established in the town of Hoffman during World War II. In addition to the regular Hamlet parishioners, priests celebrated Mass for the servicemen, not only in St. James Church but also in local movie houses and a funeral home chapel.

An increase in seating capacity and the addition of a choir loft highlighted remodeling work in later years. In 1967, the Oblates of Mary Immaculate arrived in Hamlet to begin a pastorate that extended into the 1980s.

Parish and community ministries have been established and developed during the past few decades, including volunteering at the local soup kitchen and assisting the elderly in the area.

SAINT JAMES CHURCH
1018 West Hamlet Avenue
Hamlet, N.C. 28345
(910) 582-0207

Vicariate: Albemarle
Pastor: Benedictine Right Rev. Patrick Shelton
Parochial Vicar: Benedictine Father David Draim
Number of Households: 110

Benedictine Right Rev. Patrick Shelton

In 1983, the parish purchased a house located behind the church and began utilizing it as a parish hall and for religious education classes. The hall was dedicated to Oblate Father Fred Gilbert, who served St. James Church from 1972 until 1986. Father Gilbert played a key role in establishing a building fund that would serve the St. James Church community in the years to come.

Another expansion for the parish came in 1985. With the help of Father Gilbert and the hope of building a new church, the parish purchased just over eight acres next to Richmond County Community College on Highway 74. Plans became reality in November 1989, when Bishop (later Archbishop) John F. Donoghue of Charlotte dedicated the newly constructed St. James Church during the pastorate of Father Myles Quail.

That same year, the original church building on Main Street was sold to a Hamlet area resident, who remodeled the sanctuary and rectory into a restaurant.

Father William Evans assumed the pastorate of St. James Church in July 1997, by which year the parish had established a Knights of Columbus council, Altar Society, Over 50 Club and choir, in addition to the parish and finance councils that assist the operations of the parish.

PHOTO BY GEORGE N. COBB

St. James Church in Hamlet was dedicated by then-Bishop John F. Donoghue of Charlotte in November 1989.

Since July 1998, Benedictine Right Rev. Patrick Shelton has served as pastor, and Benedictine Father David Draim has served as parochial vicar.

Like so many churches throughout the diocese today, St. James has an ever-growing Hispanic population — the majority of whom came from Mexico. Under the leadership of Father Draim, Spanish-language Masses began in 1998 and continue to serve the more than 150 Hispanic households regularly attending St. James Church.

In September 2002, the parish celebrated Mexican Independence Day with a bilingual Mass and a fiesta.

With the generous donations and hard work of parishioners, the church's mortgage was burned in January 2003. In November 2003, more than 180 people attended St. James Church's annual fall education fundraiser, that year titled "Ancestral Festival" and designed to bring together all of the parish's nationalities.

Today, St. James Church is an active parish, with 110 households and approximately 100 children attending faith formation classes. The parish annual pork and chicken barbecue, held on Feb. 6 this year, has become a popular event enjoyed by both parishioners and the Richmond County community.

$5 OFF any purchase of $30 or more
The Catholic Company
Lake Norman Book Store
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Your COMPLETE Catholic store for
• Clothing • Videos to rent • Priests for Life materials
• Unique gifts & cards • Statues
• Books, rosaries, medals • Artwork
CALL 704-655-9090
Mon. thru Sat. 10 am - 6 pm
19905 West Catawba Ave., Suite 106, Cornelius
west off I-77 exit 28
(Johnsbury Square - next to Goodwill)

Central Equity Mortgage
PRIME RATE FOR LIFE
Consolidate High-Interest Debt
100% Financing Programs
Low Interest & Interest-only Programs
Interest Rate: 3.75%*
No Mortgage Insurance! (PMI)
No Payment until April 2004!
No Out-of-Pocket Closing Costs
TYPICAL COMPARISON:

| Mortgage | Rate | Current Payment |
|---|---|---|
| $200,000 | 6.50% | $ 1,264.14 |
| Mortgage | Rate | NEW PAYMENT |
| $200,000 | 3.75% | $625 !!!! |

I'll help you realize your home ownership dreams.
*Call Andrew Smith (704) 965-7486
*Interest rate shown is Prime (4%), minus 1/4%, based on 80% or less LTV. Subject to underwriting conditions.

www.charlottediocese.org

Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte

Established Jan. 12, 1972 by Pope Paul VI

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

Parish Profile: St. Margaret Church
| PAGE 16

FEBRUARY 13, 2004 | SERVING CATHOLICS IN WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA IN THE DIOCESE OF CHARLOTTE | VOLUME 13 Nº 20

A MATTER OF MARRIAGE

Archbishop of Boston finds expanded ruling on gay marriage 'troubling'

BY CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

BOSTON — Boston Archbishop Sean P. O'Malley said the Supreme Judicial Court's expanded ruling on gay marriage is "more troubling" than its initial decision.

The court's Nov. 18 decision struck down Massachusetts' opposite-sex-only marriage laws, but the new ruling, issued Feb. 4, declared that same-sex couples have the right to get married.

The 4-3 ruling, delivered in an advisory opinion sought by the state Senate, "clearly demonstrates the overly activist stance of the four-judge majority," said the archbishop in a Feb. 5 statement. He also said the justices who issued the opinion "seem determined to blur the constitutional separation of powers and to usurp the rightful role of the Legislature."

After the November ruling, the state Senate was considering a bill that would have given same-sex couples all the "protections, benefits and obligations of civil marriage" but would have called the unions something else. But, before voting on the measure, the Senate asked the court if the bill would comply with its Nov. 18 ruling. In its Feb. 4 opinion, the court said no.

"This court's majority answer deserves a commensurately strong response," added Archbishop O'Malley.

See MARRIAGE, page 13

KEEPING OUR SCHOOLS SAFE

MACS trains staff to save lives

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

CHARLOTTE — For most children, a bee sting leads to a few tears and pain for an hour or so. But for some, insect bites or exposure to certain plants and foods can lead to an allergic reaction characterized by anxiety, hives, difficulty breathing, vomiting or worse.

For the past year, teachers and faculty members of Mecklenburg Area Catholic Schools (MACS) have been trained to be first responders in just such a case. Each school is required to have five trained adults, but most have seven or eight responders.

The first step in forming the MACS First Responder Team was to change state legislation, allowing non-medical personnel to treat people suffering an allergic reaction.

Paula Knish, a registered nurse for MACS and Kathie Holder, RN, MSN and MACS health director, worked with

See MACS, page 8

A CONVICTION TO SERVICE

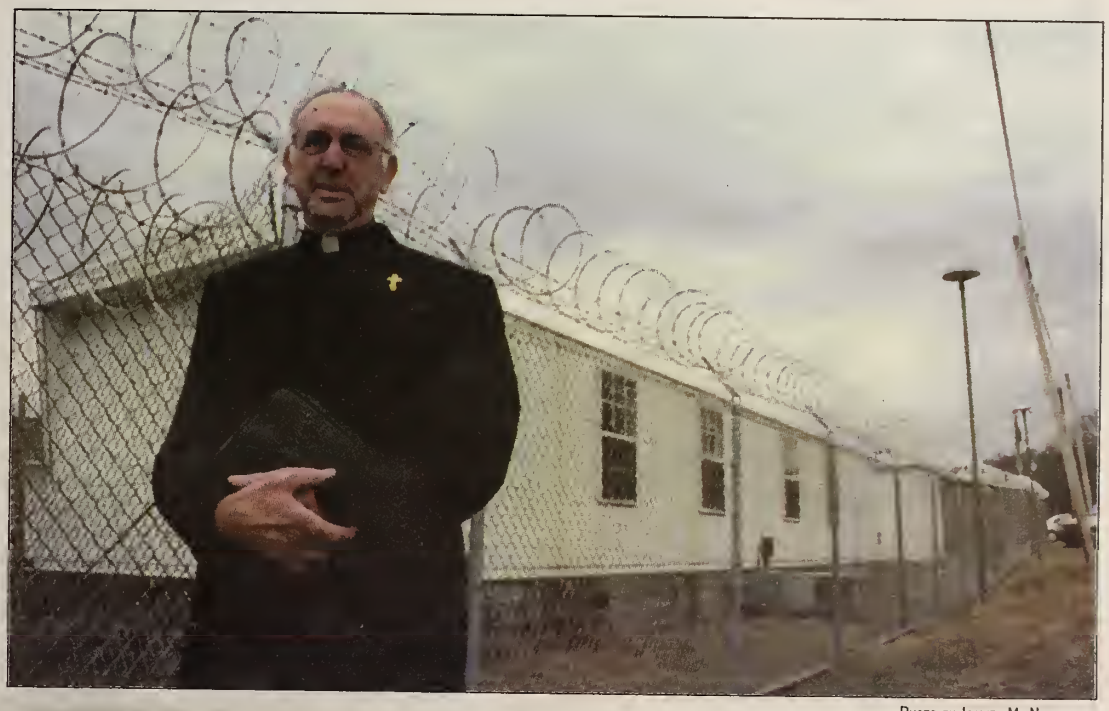

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Rev. Mr. Gerard LaPointe stands outside the Carolina Department of Correction's minimum-security facility in Waynesville. The permanent diaconate now spearheads the prison ministry for the Diocese of Charlotte.

To be the hands of Christ

Permanent deacons fill vital roles in parishes and diocese

BY KAREN A. EVANS
STAFF WRITER

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series, "A Look Inside," that explores the various departments and ministries of the Diocese of Charlotte.

CHARLOTTE — For almost 20 years, permanent deacons have provided vital extra pairs of hands for churches in the Diocese of Charlotte.

"The permanent diaconate is an 'enabling ministry,'" said Rev. Mr. Andrew Cilone, the permanent deacon at Immaculate Conception Church in Forest City and the Hickory region vicar for the permanent diaconate.

"Permanent deacons ease the burden of the parish priest by taking on some of the work he can't handle," he said.

These servants of the Catholic Church may be found performing baptisms, marriages, assisting at the altar at Mass, serving as RCIA and marriage preparation teachers, serving on parish councils and in various other parish and diocesan duties. The Diocese of Charlotte has 74 permanent deacons in service the Catholic Church.

Rev. Mr. Ben Wenning, permanent deacon at St. Gabriel Church in Charlotte, is also the coordinator of the diocesan permanent diaconate.

"I never looked at myself in a leadership role for the diaconate," he said. "However, the Holy Spirit had his way and that is why I am here now. I find it very rewarding."

A deacon is an ordained minister in the Catholic Church and is one of the three forms of the sacrament of Holy Orders, the origins of which can be found in the Acts of the Apostles.

Both permanent and transitional deacons are ordained into the one order of deacon. A transitional deacon is a man who is to be ordained a priest and is referred to as a transitional deacon, because he is in the

See DIACONATE, page 9

CHAPEL HILL NC 27599-0001
UNC
WILSON LIBRARY CB 3930
NC COLLECTION
S235 P2
#420836#
$BXNPDVQ3-DIGIT 275

Cardiac care
Knights donate emergency equipment
| PAGE 4

Making strides
MACS students collect shoes
| PAGE 5

Culture Watch
'Passion' controversy continues to grow
| PAGE 11

In Brief

Current and upcoming topics from around the world to your own backyard

NOT JUST FOR THE BIRDS

CNS PHOTO FROM REUTERS

A 2-year-old Vietnamese boy, suspected of having contracted bird flu, breathes through a respirator at the National Pediatric Hospital in Hanoi Feb. 5. Vietnam has seen the highest number of human deaths — 11 as of Feb. 5 — from one strain of bird flu. Millions of poultry in several Asian countries have caught the disease.

Vatican official says human life, not profit, top goal of health care

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Modern medical crises like AIDS and a new strain of Asian bird flu challenge the health care community to set aside the profit motive and show new forms of solidarity with the suffering, a top Vatican cardinal said.

Cardinal Javier Lozano Barragan, president of the Pontifical Council for Health Care Workers, said patent rights over anti-AIDS drugs, for example, may not be legitimate in places like Africa, where millions of people face death.

"Patents (on medicines) are legitimate, for reasons of scientific research and for a just profit margin. But, like all private property, there is a social mortgage on these patents," Cardinal Lozano said at a Vatican press conference Feb. 5.

"Where human life is at stake, the right of private property ends," he said.

Cardinal Lozano noted the annual cost of effective AIDS medicines already has gone down drastically, from some $15,000 to about $350 per patient. That is important progress, but it is still too high a price for many Africans to pay, he said.

The cardinal said governments should work with international commerce officials and others to find new solutions, so that in the worst situations AIDS medicines can be provided free of charge. In some African countries, he said, the rate of AIDS infection approaches 40 percent.

Commenting on the recent emergence of a deadly avian flu in Asia, Cardinal Lozano said it was another sign that modern globalization should include health care strategies and not simply economic agreements.

International cooperation and solidarity are needed because "microbes and viruses know no borders," he said.

"This avian flu demonstrates once again that we're all in the same boat, we're all in the same world, and what strikes in Vietnam can strike in Argentina, Mexico, Italy or Poland," he said.

That's all the more reason, he said, that the actions of the health and drug industry should be driven "not only by profits, but also by the real possibility of serving humanity."

He said the bird flu also illustrated the need for effective global health monitoring and, when needed, controls on human migration — but without eroding the natural right of people to migrate.

The Vatican press conference highlighted the program for the World Day of the Sick, celebrated in Lourdes, France, Feb. 9-11. Various church experts addressed topics related to European health care and bioethics issues.

Catholic leaders say passage of foreign aid funding a victory

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The U.S. bishops' conference and Catholic Relief Services called the amount of foreign aid funding included in an omnibus appropriations bill signed into law Jan. 23 a significant victory.

The $328 billion measure to fund federal agencies included close to $17.6 billion for foreign aid. Of that, $2.4 billion was designated for programs to fight AIDS and other infectious diseases, and $1 billion was targeted for the Millennium Challenge Account, a new development program focused on helping poor countries fight poverty.

The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops and Catholic Relief Services had been pushing for higher levels of funding than were included in appropriations bills approved by the House. The final version passed by the Senate Jan. 22 and signed by President Bush the next day was closer to the higher amounts in the Senate's original bill than the lower amounts in the House version.

A statement issued by the two church entities said the foreign aid appropriation "marks a significant victory for our development assistance priorities and contains the largest increase in developmental and civilian foreign aid programs in four decades."

In a November letter to members of Congress, Bishop John H. Ricard of Pensacola-Tallahassee, Fla., chairman of the bishops' Committee on International Policy, and Ken Hackett, CRS president, said "meeting these national commitments to the poor in our world is not just a matter of dollars, but one of moral responsibility."

The appropriations bill was finalized nearly four months after the start of the 2004 fiscal year.

Diocesan planner

ASHEVILLE VICARIATE

HENDERSONVILLE — The St. Francis of the Hills Fraternity of the Secular Franciscan Order meets the fourth Sunday of each month 3-5 p.m. at Immaculate Conception Church, 208 7th Ave. West. Visitors and inquirers are welcome. For more information, call Helen Gillogly, SFO, at (828) 883-9645.

BOONE VICARIATE

SPARTA — St. Frances of Rome Church, Hendrix and Highlands Rds., sponsors the Oratory of Divine Love Prayer Group in the parish house the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at 1 p.m. Call (336) 372-8846 for more information.

CHARLOTTE VICARIATE

CHARLOTTE — A four-part series, "Understanding Your Late Life Choices," will be presented at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd., Thursdays Feb. 5-26, 10-11:30 a.m. Topics will include protecting your home and assets, housing and in-home care, Medicare/Medicaid and long-term care. For reservations, call B.J. Dengler at (704) 364-5431, ext. 212.

CHARLOTTE — Totty Lee of Hospice of Charlotte will present "Children and Grief" Feb. 18, 7-9 p.m. in the St. Gabriel Ministry Center, 3016 Providence Rd. All are invited to learn how death impacts children. Topics covered will be how children understand death at different ages, how children grieve, what to say and not to say to help children and how families can work together to heal after a loss. For more information, call B.J. Dengler at (704) 704-364-5431 ext. 212.

CHARLOTTE — Learn why saving sex for marriage is loving, life- and soul-saving advice in a special presentation for parents, pastors, counselors, teachers, youth directors and young adults. Jason Evert, Catholic apologist, will present "Romance without Regret" at St. Vincent de Paul Church, 6828 Old Reid Rd., Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. For more information, contact Diane Hoefling, St. Vincent de Paul Respect Life coordinator/Catholic Schools pro-life volunteer at (704) 541-3760 or email @ rhoef541@aol.com.

HUNTERSVILLE — The Life Teen program of St. Mark Church, 14740 Stumptown Rd., will sponsor a free seminar, "Let's Talk Money" Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. The seminar will address what parents and teens need to know about financial stewardship, including establishing good credit, avoiding financial pitfalls and financial independence. For more information, contact Debra Lemmon at (704) 948-1306.

CHARLOTTE — All women are invited to join Women in the Word for weekly gatherings for prayer, reflection on Sunday Scripture, music and sharing experiences of Christ in daily life. The group meets each Thursday, 9:45-11:45 a.m. in the family room of St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. For details, call Linda Flynn at (704) 366-9889. For childcare reservations, call Jurga Petrikene at 704) 907-0205.

CHARLOTTE — The Charismatic Prayer Group of St. Matthew Church will host Prayer Service for the Sick at St. Matthew Chapel, 8015 Ballantyne Commons Pkwy the third Monday of each month at 7:3

THE CATHOLIC NEWS & HERALD

PUBLISHER: Most Reverend Peter J. Jugis
EDITOR: Kevin E. Murray
STAFF WRITER: Karen A. Evans
GRAPHIC DESIGNER: Tim Faragher
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE: Cindi Feerick
SECRETARY: Sherill Beason

1123 South Church St., Charlotte, NC 28203
MAIL: P.O. Box 37267, Charlotte, NC 28237
PHONE: (704) 370-3333 FAX: (704) 370-3382
E-mail: catholicnews@charlottediocese.org

FEBRUARY 13, 2004
VOLUME 13 • NUMBER 20

The Catholic News & Herald, USPC 007-393, is published l the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, 1123 South Chur St., Charlotte, NC 28203, 44 times a year, weekly except f Christmas week and Easter week and every two weeks durir June, July and August for $15 per year for enrollees in parish of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte and $23 per ye for all other subscribers. The Catholic News & Herald reserv the right to reject or cancel advertising for any reason deem appropriate. We do not recommend guarantee any product, service or bene claimed by our advertisers. Second-cla postage paid at Charlotte NC and other citie POSTMASTER: Send address corrections The Catholic News & Herald, P.O. Box 372 Charlotte, NC 28237.

FROM THE VATICAN

Vatican sends draft of minicatechism to cardinals for review

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The Vatican has completed a draft of a 150-page minicatechism and is sending the text to cardinals and bishops' conferences for review, a Vatican source said.

Pope John Paul II commissioned the shorter, simpler version of the 865-page "Catechism of the Catholic Church" last year, and a 10-member commission has been working on the text since March.

Over the next few months, the commission will consider the input of cardinals and bishops' conferences, and a final draft is expected later this year.

The minicatechism outlines church teachings in four parts, under the headings of profession of faith, sacraments, commandments and prayer, the source said.

The pope asked for the minicatechism at the suggestion of several bishops. One of them, Cardinal Christoph Schonborn of Vienna, Austria, who helped write the longer catechism more than a decade ago, said the current volume of more than 2,800 articles of church teaching was too ponderous for many Catholics.

In constituting the commission last year, the pope said there seemed to be a widespread desire for "a brief compendium containing all the fundamental elements of Catholic faith and morals, formulated in a simple and clear manner."

The pope said the new, shorter text would "faithfully mirror" the "Catechism of the Catholic Church" and would be "an authoritative, sure and complete synthesis."

p.m. For more information, contact Barbara Gardner at chlt5nc@aol.com.

CHARLOTTE — The 50+ Club of St. John Neumann Church, 8451 Idlewild Rd., meets the second Wednesday of each month at 11 a.m. with a program and lunch in the parish center. For more information, call Lucille Kroboth at (704) 537-2189.

CHARLOTTE — The Ladies Ancient Order of Hibernians Division 1 Mecklenburg County-St. Brigid, an Irish-Catholic social and charitable inter-parish group, meets the third Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at St. Gabriel Church, 3016 Providence Rd. Anyone interested in their Irish-Catholic roots, call Jeanmarie Schuler at (704) 554-0720 for more information.

CHARLOTTE — Thank God It's Friday (TGIF), a weekly support group for separated and divorced women, meets every Wednesday, 6:30-8:30 p.m. in the New Life Center building, room 114, of St. Matthew Church, 8015 Ballantyne Pkwy., including a potluck dinner. Divorced men are invited every third Wednesday of the month. TGIF is a healing ministry sponsored by Catholic Social Services, Charlotte Regional Office and St. Matthew Church. For details, call Karen Wepasnick at (704) 541-1891 after 3 p.m.

GREENSBORO VICARIATE

GREENSBORO — St. Pius X Church, 2210 N. Elm St., will host a Lenten reflection series, "The Purpose-Driven Life," Wednesday evenings, 6:30-8 p.m. Feb. 18 and March 3-April 7. This series is based on Rick Warren's book, which is a journey to answer life's most important question: "What on earth am I here for?" To register, call the parish office at (336) 272-4681.

GREENSBORO — Theology on Tap will meet Tuesdays in February. Speakers include Sister Antonette Schmidt, Abbot Placid Solari, Bishop William Curlin and Terry Aiken of Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in High Point. Theology on Tap meets at "Anton's" on Battleground Ave. 7 p.m. Contact greensborotot@yahoo.com for more information.

GUILFORD COUNTY — The Ancient Order of Hibernians Guilford County Division, the oldest and largest order of Irish Catholic men, is looking for more Irish Catholic men to join them for meetings, educational seminars and social events. Contact Michael Slane at (336) 665-9264 for time and location.

HICKORY VICARIATE

NEWTON — The Little Flowers Catholic Girls' Group is for all Catholic girls ages five and up. The group meets the fourth Monday of each month at St. Joseph Church, 720 West 13th St., at 4 p.m. in the Holy Family Hall. For more details, call Debbie Vickers at (828) 495-2039.

HICKORY — A Grief Support Group meets the second and fourth Wednesday of each month at 6:30 p.m. in the parlor of St. Aloysius Church, 921 Second St. NE. For more information, call the church office at (828) 327-2341.

SMOKY MOUNTAIN VICARIATE

CANTON — Immaculate Conception Church, 42 Newfound Rd., will conduct one-hour sessions each Thursday through Feb. 26 on "The Precepts of the Catholic Church." Sessions will start at noon — bring your lunch; drinks will be provided. Discussions are open to anyone who wants to know more about church teachings or to review what you learned many years ago. For more information, call Dot and Chuck Luce at (828) 648-7369.

WINSTON-SALEM VICARIATE

WINSTON-SALEM — Learn Natural Family Planning taught by the Couple to Couple League. This four-part series will meet Sundays at 1:30 p.m., Feb. 15-March 7, at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For registration and information, call Stephanie and Todd Brown at (336) 765-2909.

MT. AIRY — Holy Angels Church, 1208 N. Main St., offers Eucharistic Adoration every Wednesday, 6:30-7:30 p.m., and every Thursday, 10-11 a.m. Adoration concludes with Benediction.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Healing Companions is a grief support group for the bereaved that meets the first and third Thursdays of the month in conference room B at St. Leo the Great Church, 335 Springdale Ave. For further details, call Joanne Parcel at (336) 924-9478.

Is your parish or school having an event? Please submit notices for the Diocesan Planner at least 15 days prior to the event date in writing to Karen A. Evans at kaevans@charlottediocese.org or fax to (704) 370-3382.

Vatican yearbook reflects appointments, statistics from 2003

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — In addition to naming 30 new cardinals in 2003, Pope John Paul II named 175 new bishops around the world and created 19 new dioceses.

The new titles, names, addresses and local statistics are listed in the Vatican's 2004 yearbook, the Annuario Pontificio.

Cardinal Angelo Sodano, Vatican secretary of state, and personnel from the Vatican's Central Office of Church Statistics presented the first copy of the 2004 volume to Pope John Paul Feb. 3.

The book, which runs more than 2,000 pages, usually goes on sale in late February.

The names of the world's cardinals and bishops in the new volume reflect the situation as of Dec. 31, 2003, while the statistics on the number of Catholics, priests, religious, seminarians and parishes refer to data solicited Dec. 31, 2002, from every diocese in the world.

According to the Vatican, at the end of 2002 there were more than 1.07 billion Catholics in the world, an increase of 11 million over the previous year.

Out of a world population of more than 6.2 billion people, it said, Catholics account for 17.2 percent.

The Vatican said 50 percent of the world's Catholics live in the Americas; 26.1 percent are in Europe; 12.8 percent are in Africa; 10.3 percent live in Asia; and 0.8 percent live in Oceania.

Comparing the number of Catholics to the general population in each region, the Vatican said Catholics make up 62.4 percent of the population in the Americas, 40.5 percent of the European population, 26.8 percent of the population in Oceania, 16.5 percent of the African population and 3 percent of the Asian population.

At the end of 2002, there were 405,058 Catholics priests in the world, only nine fewer than at the end of 2001, the Vatican said.

The number of diocesan priests rose from 266,448 in 2001 to 267,334 in 2002, while the number of priests in religious orders declined from 138,619 in 2001 to 137,724 in 2002.

The Vatican also reported there were 4,695 Catholic bishops, 30,097 permanent deacons, 54,828 religious brothers and 782,932 religious women at the end of 2002.

The Vatican reported the number of major seminarians rose from 112,244 in 2001 to 112,982 in 2002. In the Americas, seminary enrollment increased by 1.4 percent.

Together in faith

CNS PHOTO BY GREGORY A. SHEMITZ, LONG ISLAND CATHOLIC

Missionary Sisters of St. Benedict pray at St. Agnes Cathedral in Rockville Centre, N.Y., on World Day for Consecrated Life Feb. 8. The observance celebrates the way of life chosen by religious priests, sisters and brothers working in parishes, schools, hospitals, shelters and other areas.

Corrections

Father Joseph Kelleher, who served Immaculate Conception Church in Hendersonville, was unintentionally not included in the Jan. 23 Parish Profile of the church. We apologize for the oversight.

Principal Virginia Hutton of Asheville Catholic School was misidentified in Feb. 6 photo caption. The correct individual was artist Norma Bradley.

Knights contribute cardiac care

Council donates emergency equipment to parish

BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH
CORRESPONDENT

MAGGIE VALLEY — The parishioner went as white as the proverbial sheet and keeled over. Was it a fainting spell or sudden cardiac death?

An emergency medical crew arrived within a few minutes and the person went home from the hospital the same day. It was one of several such incidents in the past few years, and parishioners at St. Margaret Church wondered if there was some way to help an unconscious person before an ambulance arrives.

Turns out that there is.

The church's Father William M. Murphy Council of the Knights of Columbus has donated $2,600 worth of emergency equipment — a Powerheart AED (automated external defibrillator) and an oxygen and suction kit.

"If we'd had this (during the fainting spell), I'd have made a beeline for it," said Jasay Ketchum, the council's deputy grand knight. "It could be anybody (who would need it). As a service organization of the church, we just decided to do it."

The knights hold fundraising events such as parish suppers throughout the year and are setting aside 40 percent of the proceeds to pay for the equipment. So, in effect, parishioners are helping to pay for equipment that might save their lives one day.

"If someone has an abnormal heart rhythm, if you can use this in the first couple of minutes, they have a much better chance of survival; this is better than CPR," said Dr. David Peterson, a cardiologist and St. Margaret parishioner.

The AED is used, he said, when a person collapses, is unresponsive, has no pulse and is not breathing.

PHOTO BY JOANITA M. NELLENBACH

Cardiologist Dr. David Peterson (second from left) points out features of the Powerheart AED to fellow parishioners Nick D'Anna (left), Joan Mulligan and dentist Dr. Joe Yurko.

Sudden cardiac death (SCD), also known as sudden cardiac arrest, can happen to anyone. A February 2002 article from the Centers for Disease Control stated that in North Carolina in 1999, of the 19,299 people who died of cardiac disease, 117 were SCD-related for ages 0-34; 2,459 for ages 35-64; and 9,189 for those 65 and older.

"Coronary artery disease is the No. 1 killer of both men and women in this country; 40 percent of all deaths of men and women in this country are caused by cardiovascular disease," Peterson said. "That's why you'll be finding these AEDs. Some airlines have them."

Peterson explained the AED's features at a briefing in the church hall, but anyone, with or without medical training, can use the equipment.

The bright yellow AED weighs about 10 pounds. Open the lid and an automated voice instructs, "Place electrodes on patient's bare chest."

A picture inside the lid shows where the two electrodes should go: one on the right upper chest, the other on the left lower chest. The electrodes should not be placed over a pacemaker, but most pacemakers are in the upper left chest, away from the electrodes.

Even with those electrodes in place, the patient won't get the shock if he or she doesn't need it. The manufacturer says on its Web site that the AED "automatically monitors the patient's cardiac rhythm and determines if the patient requires a defibrillation shock. ... The noncommitted feature will not allow shock delivery if the rhythm changes to nonshockable."

If defibrillation is indicated, the AED leads the rescuer, step by step, through the procedure.

The unit is powered by a nonrechargeable battery that lasts about five years, tests itself daily and sounds an alarm if it needs to be replaced.

"When you have groups of people together, at some point you're going to need it," Peterson said. "It's your best chance of survival."

"I think it's an excellent idea that we have it," said parishioner Joan Mulligan, who attended the briefing. "All churches should have it. These things save lives, and sometimes you only have a few minutes to do that."

Contact Correspondent Joanita M. Nellenbach by calling (828) 627-9209 or e-mail jnell@dnet.net.

Join our Oratorian Congregation to
SERVE GOD AS PRIEST OR BROTHER

As priests and lay men, our community lives without vows and serves God's people numerous ways, including:

Parishes Youth Camps Nursing
Retreats Campus Ministry Hospital Chaplains

Find out more about serving God with us:
Fr. Ed McDevitt, CO The Oratory
P O Box 11586
Rock Hill, SC 29731-1586

$5 OFF any purchase of $30 or more

The Catholic Company

Lake Norman Book Store
LakeNorman.CatholicCompany.com

Your COMPLETE Catholic store for

- Clothing
- Videos to rent
- Priests for Life materials
- Unique gifts & cards
- Statues
- Books, rosaries, medals
- Artwork

CALL 704-655-9090

Mon. thru Sat.
10 am - 6 pm

19905 West Catawba Ave., Suite 106, Cornelius
west off I-77 exit 28
(Johnsbury Square - next to Goodwill)

advertisement

DEPART JULY 4, OR JULY 25, 2004

Canadian Rockies Tour Offers 'Cool' Vacation

Join other Catholic newspaper readers for the most "heavenly" sightseeing in the most pristine and beautiful countryside in North America.

There's more than just the Canadian Rockies on this popular Your Man Tours vacation. You'll spend a week in the Canadian Rockies and another week across the border in the American Northwest. First fly into Sioux Falls, South Dakota for a scenic three-day drive to Calgary, Alberta. In route you'll visit Fargo and Bismarck, North Dakota; then north to Saskatchewan where you'll visit the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Academy. Your time in the Canadian Rockies will include daily sightseeing. Highlights include Lake Louise; Banff Nat'l. Park; Hoodoos; Bow Falls and Cascade Gardens; a SnoCoach ride over the Columbia Ice Fields; Canmore, Alberta; Kananaskis Country; & Waterton Lakes National Park and more!

Back in the U.S. you'll visit Helena and Billings Montana; Custer's battlefield at the Little Big Horn; Black Hills National Forest; Wild Bill Hickock and Calamity Jane's Deadwood; Mt. Rushmore and Crazy Horse National Memorial; legendary Badlands National Park; and more! We include round trip airfare, motor-coach transportation, 13 night's hotel accommodations; we'll meet you upon arrival, handle your luggage, and take you on some of the most beautiful sightseeing with unsurpassed scenery in North America. Prices start at only $1648 per person, double occupy. including taxes and airfare from Charlotte or Greensboro. Space is limited. $50 deposits are now due.

For a brochure, information, and reservations call 7 days a week:

'YOUR MAN' TOURS 1-800-736-7300

Providing Carefree Vacations Since 1967!

Making strides, one foot at a time

MACS students kick off shoe drive to help needy families

BY KEVIN E. MURRAY
EDITOR

CHARLOTTE — Catholic students are joining forces to bring soles to souls.

The eight Mecklenburg Area Catholic Schools (MACS) kicked off their "Shoe of Hope" collection drives Feb. 2. Samaritan's Feet is sponsoring the drives in the Catholic schools in celebration of Black History Month this month.

"We are very excited for the opportunity to help needy families through this shoe collection drive," said Linda Cherry, superintendent of diocesan Catholic schools.

"We often encourage our students to become involved in community service, and through Samaritan's Feet 'Shoe of Hope' collection drive, our students will not only participate by giving, but many of them will benefit from the experience of leading and organizing the shoe drive at their respective schools," she said.

Samaritan's Feet barrels have been set up in the MACS schools to receive donated shoes through Feb. 25.

"We are very excited about our partnership with the Mecklenburg Area Catholic School system and their willingness to help us put shoes on the feet of impoverished people," said Emmanuel Ohonme, founder and president of Samaritan's Feet. "Together, we can change lives right here in Charlotte as well as around the world."

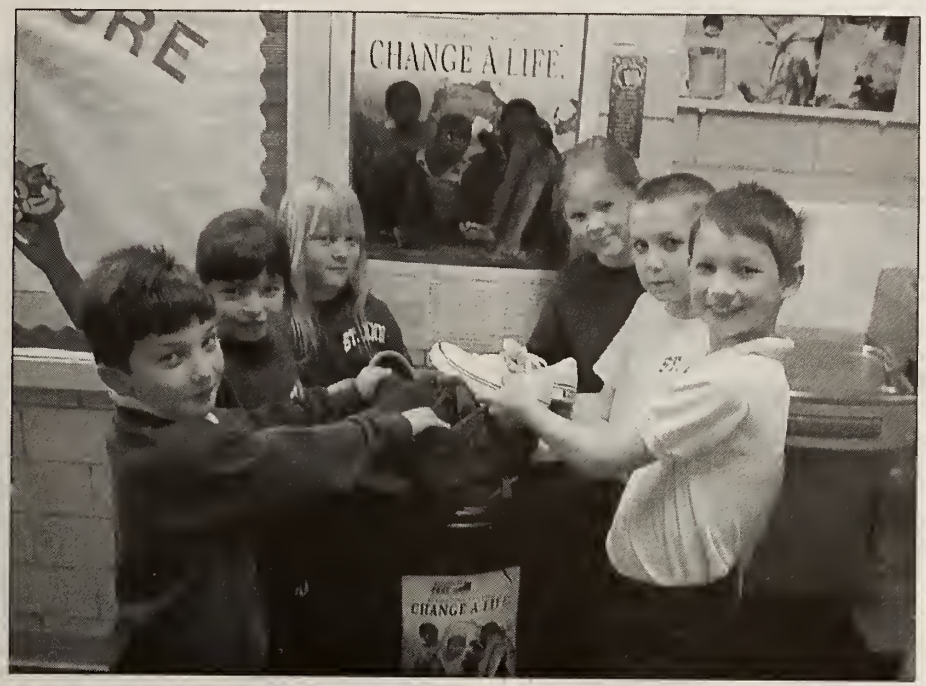

PHOTO BY MIKE FORD

Students at St. Ann School sort shoes donated to the school's Samaritan's Feet "Shoe of Hope" collection drive.

Samaritan's Feet is a Charlotte-based humanitarian and interfaith evangelical organization dedicated to providing shoes for the feet of impoverished families in the United States and the world.

"Many children around the world lack the basic necessities and conveniences we take for granted as part of growing up," said Ohonme. "Something as simple as a pair of shoes to us is a gift that will speak volumes to them and possibly change their lives forever."

Ohonme, a Nigerian native, conceived the idea for Samaritan's Feet more than four years ago. His life was changed when, at the age of nine, he received his first pair of shoes from a "Good Samaritan" from Wisconsin who visited Ohonme's hometown of Lagos. Ohonme went on to participate in sports and eventually earned a full sports scholarship to attend the University of North Dakota.

In November and December 2003, Samaritan's Feet shoe drives in Charlotte and Concord collected several hundred pairs of shoes that were sent to benefit needy families in Guyuna, South America and the Ukraine.

When the shoes reach the families, the missionaries wash the feet of the recipients, just as Jesus did with his disciples, and then pray with them.

"Our mission is to progressively touch the lives of people with a message of hope, while meeting their physical needs," said Ohonme. "Partnering with organizations like MACS will help us to accomplish that mission."

At St. Ann School in Charlotte, the two barrels filled up the first week and "they're almost full again," said Sister Helene Nagle, a Sister of St. Joseph and school principal. "And the shoes coming in are nice."

"Students are crawling around their closets for shoes to donate, and adults are bringing in shoes," she said. "There are as many adult pairs as there are children's."

When Ohonme visited St. Ann School to tell the students about Samaritan's Feet, he found that most students owned six to seven pairs of shoes, said Sister Nagle.

"There are thousands of children in Africa who have never owned shoes, and many adults who don't have them," she said. "That impacted the students."

In correlation with the shoe collection drives in Charlotte and Black History Month, a Harambee Mass was celebrated at Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Charlotte Feb. 5, with Msgr. Mauricio W. West, diocesan vicar general and chancellor, as celebrant. Ohonme and students from Our Lady of the Assumption School and Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School in Charlotte attended the Mass.

In April, the Diocese of Charlotte will support the Samaritan's Mile run to begin at Memorial Stadium in Charlotte Easter Saturday, April 10.

WANT TO DONATE?

New or gently used shoes, sneakers or tennis shoes can be donated in Samaritan's Feet barrels available in all MACS schools until Feb. 25. For more information, call (704) 370-3361.

DOMINICAN SISTERS OF HAWTHORNE
NEW YORK • OHIO • PENNSYLVANIA • GEORGIA • MINNESOTA

We live in Community and take vows of chastity, poverty and obedience. Daily prayer and our apostolate of caring for incurable cancer patients are integral parts of our offering to God. All care is free. Many who enter our Community have no prior nursing experience.

For more information, contact:
SR. TERESA MARIE, O.P., VOCATION DIRECTOR
Dominican Sisters of Hawthorne, 600 Linda Avenue, Hawthorne, NY 10532
(914) 769-4794 or 769-0114
e-mail: SrTeresaM@aol.com
Visit our WEB site - www.hawthorne-dominicans.org

Name _____ State _____ Zip _____
Address _____
City _____ Home Telephone ( ) _____ - _____ C-NC

Carolina Volkswagen
7800 E. Independence Blvd., Charlotte
(704) 537-2336 • (800) 489-2336

Biggest Selection Lowest Prices
Drivers wanted.

"Nothing Could Be Finer" Members of St. Gabriel

#1 Volkswagen Dealer in Charlotte and all the Carolinas for customer sales and service satisfaction!
C'mon in and see why!

Volunteer honored for exceptional service

Annual award named after St. Gabriel parishioner

CHARLOTTE — Genevieve Keller was honored for making a difference.

Keller, an active parishioner at St. Gabriel Church, was named the 2003 recipient of the Mary Catherine Kearney Volunteer Emeritus Award by Crisis Assistance Ministry.

"Genevieve has single-handedly kept the file room at Crisis Assistance Ministry in tiptop shape for the past 12 years, and was responsible for recruiting many Crisis Assistance Ministry volunteers from St. Gabriel Church," said Melissa Raphael, congregation liaison for Crisis Assistance Ministry.

Established in 1975, Crisis Assistance Ministry is a nonprofit agency that provides eviction prevention, basic household necessities and counseling to individuals and families in Mecklenburg County. Its mission is to provide assistance and advocacy for people in financial crisis, helping them move toward self-sufficiency.

"Her indomitable spirit, devotion to St. Gabriel and love of Crisis Assistance Ministry kept her coming every week until physical ailments prohibited her from making the trip uptown," said Raphael.

Keller, president of the St. Gabriel Women's Club, has taught Bible class for 14 years and is a past member of the parish Altar Society, the Church Mice and the Parish Evaluation Commission.

Crisis Assistance Ministry named the annual award for Mary Catherine Kearney after her death to honor volunteers for exemplary service and extraordinary commitment during their years as active volunteers.

Kearney, a St. Gabriel Church parishioner, volunteered at Crisis Assistance Ministry every week for 25 years. The agency estimates Kearney helped prevent home eviction and utility disconnection for more than 3,600 families.

"Mary Catherine Kearney was a great person," said Caroline Love Myers, past director and founder of Crisis Assistance Ministry. "Clients responded to her beautifully. She had a real feeling for the people she cared for."

An active member of many parish ministries, Kearney attended daily Mass at St. Gabriel Church and was treasurer of the St. Vincent de Paul Association for 15 years.

"These two women donated their time and passion for those less fortunate in uncountable ways," said Raphael. "Their devotion to God, their church and humankind is a testament to their basic goodness and to the many lives they have touched."

WANT MORE INFORMATION?

More information about Crisis Assistance Ministry is available online at www.crisisassistance.org.

'Hearts for the Community'

Parishioners raise fellowship, funds for others

GREENSBORO — More than 260 parishioners of St. Paul the Apostle Church in Greensboro attended the "Hearts for the Community" dinner and auction at a local restaurant Feb. 7.

The fellowship event helped raise $25,000, with all proceeds going to area community agencies that were already receiving funds through regular parish budget allocations. Parishioners wanted to increase the parish donations due to concerns the economy was resulting in fewer financial donations to these agencies.

"A group of parishioners came together to accept the challenge and they in turn sought out other parishioners to help them attain their specific part of the challenge," said Joan Lauterbach, co-chairperson of the Hearts of the Community event.

"I am delighted at the tremendous response to this endeavor," said Oblate Father Tom Murphy, pastor of St. Paul the Apostle Church. "It enables St. Paul the Apostle to continue to be an active participant in the life of our civic community."

"In doing this, we live the Gospel imperative to give to others and also experience the Gospel reality of what an individual receives when he or she gives of themselves to others," he said.

Donated auction items included time at vacation homes; jewelry; artwork; professional services of accountants and financial planners; swimming lessons; a catered meal by a local chef; and an airplane flight over Greensboro.

